1989 would have been substantial. The budget for fiscal 1991, attached herewith, was prepared internally by Harold O'Connell and other Museum personnel. My own analysis of their 1991 budget is that it is overly optimist because, I believe the deficit will be in the $1.5 million range rather tha $1.2 million level shown.

How the Museum is going to be supported in the future while I am active and o it will be supported after I am gone have become a growing concern and should given proper attention at this meeting.

At this point, it might be well to analize the present book value of the Museum and its potential unrealized gains from its owned properties, namely its rea estate and its art, both of which have increased in value since they were acquired. The approximate book value of the Museum at this time is $50 million and current debt is about $2,000,000.

It seems reasonable to assume that the real estate has a current value of at least $20 million more than the present book value since we have had an unsolicited oral offer of $40 million and the paintings in the collection, wich were acquired primarily in the past three years, have a value of possibly $20 million greater than the book value on the Balance Sheet. This means, of course, that if one wants to think in terms of true market value, the book value could well be in the general range of $90 million.

An important part of the total picture that I believe Directors should be acquainted with is my own personal circumstances and I will try to outline, in general terms, an analysis of current worth.

My present Will calls for a total of approximately $50 million of the total for my wife, son and grandson and other non-museum philanthropic projects. Based o values outlined above, the Museum would get the Daniel J. Terra collection and the remainder of the liquid portion less the $50 million outlined above.

Now that the Museum has been in existance at both locations for ten years, it seems to be a good time to take stock of the future prospects for this institution. The first item that seems bothersome is the amount of money that is tied up in this institution be it while I am alive or at my demise. If one were to assume that the Museum would have 60,000 visitors next year, the assets utilized would be in excess of$5,000 per visitor in fiscal 1991. Another factor with which we should be familiar is that the two major Museums of American Art, namely the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York with a budget of approximately $16 million, and the Pennsylvania Academy of Philadelphia (the oldest Museum of American Art, 1805) with a budget of about $11 million, are both having trouble making ends meet. The Whitney is running deficits three out of four years and has, for the past four years, had much publicized trouble raising funds for a needed addition at Madison Avenue. At the Pennsylvania

Academy in Philadelphia which comprises an important art school and a fine Museum of historical American art is having even greater financial problems as has, in recent years, been using up part of their endowments to make ends meet. This has given me cause for concern about the whole concept of a Museum of American art which, though tremendously important to our nation's future, might be reexamined from the standpoint of future viability.

Another factor that has become increasingly important in the past ten years has been the trend of younger Americans having less interest in historical American art and a great deal more interest in contemporary art, be it American or otherwise. We even see this trend in our own way on North Michigan Avenue. The shows which draw the best are modern and contemporary exhibitions. All of those factors, together with the fact that there will probably be a growing need for increasing the budget of the Museum and to improve its outreach and hence its interest and attendance.

Another problem is one of the difficulty a museum of this size and character has in attracting visiting/traveling exhibitions. It is a fact that the Art Institute of Chicago, a world class general museum, would always be the first choice of sponsors of American art exhibitions because of its greater constituency and reputation. In the contemporary area, the Museum of Contemporary Art, if it should some day solve its financial problems, would also give us stiff competition for exhibitions in the modern American field.

The questions seems to me that in light of this 6-year record and based upon t years of experience, is this, a good time to re-examine our goals and what, if any, might be alternative options.

These options come to mind.

Option #1: We could embark upon a campaign to raise a certain amount of money perhaps $20 million for an endowment. This might be very difficul particularly since there is not yet a well established constituenc and the hostility of the press has not helped our chances to achie such a goal.

Option #2: We could deaccession one or several of the important paintings owne by the Museum. The Mary Cassatt oil, "Summertime", is being considered at a net price to the Museum of $10 to $15 million. Thi is a decision that should probably be considered at this meeting. The deal would be private and we would try to avoid adverse publicity. Incidentally, the proceeds, if this could be consummated, would be 50% of the total amount paid by the Museum fo the fifty-nine paintings now owned by the Museum. We have not made a commitment to sell this painting, but it should be noted that an important expert, Warren Adelson, thinks it would bring a price in this range.

Option #3: DJT could, while alive, continue to make contributions to c[illegible] deficits. In the current fiscal year, this contribution would amount to about $2.2 million.

Option #4: Increase the budget by $300,000 in fiscal 1991 which would be [illegible] e to encourage the organization of important American exhibitions, grants to be given to historians from such a fund and approved [illegible] y small blue ribbon committee of renowned historians and professo s. The Terra Museum itself would not be given priority in the decisio process but the idea might be helpful.

Option #5: Sell the North Michigan Avenue real estate and move the Museum to the original Evanston location or to a new, centrally locate [illegible] s t The move back to Evanston would make available proceeds from the sale of the North Michigan Avenue real estate of perhaps $40 milli which would become ~~to~~ an endowment. The move to another central less visible and less valuable location would probably cost an estimated $30 million, leaving a potential endowment of $10 mill on

All the above options should be considered in light of the present circumstances, amounts to acceptance of an annual budget deficit f between $1.5 million and $2.5 million.

Option #6: Close the North Michigan Avenue Museum, sell the real estate and u the foundation with assets in the $70 million range (assumes that paintings owned by the Museum would be retained) for undergraduate scholarships and graduate fellowships for American Art, help fund much needed archives of American art, and support national and international exhibitions of American art.

All these options should be considered in the context of future receipt of $20 to $50 million from DJT's estate.

Now, we would like to take up the subject of the French Project at Giverny, nea Vernon.

This village is 50 miles from Paris and is one hour away by train, bus or car. It is the home of the now restored Monet Garden and his home converted to a Museum and the three ateliers which Monet built in the 39 years he lived and worked at Giverny. He was there from 1887 until he died in 1926.

The Monet complex was restored by Gerard and Florence VanderKamp, who had previously restored Versailles. American money was used in both cases. The Monet restoration was completed in 1983 at a cost of $21 million.

It is open from April 1st to October 31st (seven months) and last year drew 310,000 visitors from over one hundred countries around the world. This year, it is expected to draw in excess of 350,000 visitors or 50,000 per month.

In September 1986, 20 months before the opening of the Museum on Nort. Michi g Avenue, we had been advised by a Smithsonian scholar who had just been there that he saw them put up a "for sale" sign at the Perry House, ateliers and garden. Lilla Cabot Perry lived there with her husband and three children f o 1887 til 1899. She was a noteworthy American artist from Boston, although h r greatest achievements were that she played a strong hand in helping Monet plan his garden and was probably his closest American friend. Being socially prominent, and having been inspired by the great new French art movement called "Impressionism", she influenced some of her friends to buy these great works an today, 90% of the great French Impressionist paintings at the Art Institute (m to two major Chicago families thru Mrs. Perry's urging. The important French collection at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the Philadelphia Museum a_s were brought to the States by friends who were influenced by Mrs. Perry ar i some cases, especially in Philadelphia, by Mary Cassatt.

The price was the equivalent of $135,000 for the house, the garden and the fo r ateliers where American artists worked for many years. It was an absolute bargain bought by the Museum and it was thought a small museum of American ar could be built on this three-quarter acre piece of land. The house and garden could be restored as a wonderful showcase of American art for the hundreds of thousands of people from all over the world, an excellent critical captive audience. The Perry property is contiguous to the Monet property. Its address is 82 rue Claude Monet.

The project was rejected for lack of parking, so the Museum later bought three acres of land across the street (some historians have written that Monet did hi 30 grain stack pictures in 1891 on this, now our Museum site. The Museum's present total investment in Giverny is $1,100,000.

In the three and one-half years since the purchase of the Perry property, we have had to combat one road block after another, until a new mayor, more sympathetic to the project, was elected. The Council of Giverny and the Mayor approved the project finally in December, 1989. The Department approved it in February, sent it tc Paris, and it was there approved a few days later by Jacque Lang, the Minister of Culture under Mitterand. Lang was reappointed in 1988 after losing out two years earlier. It is known that both Mitterand and Lang are quite enthusiastic about this project. They have both been there, as has Barbara Bush, who is also enthusiastic about the project, and who would like to come and help dedicate the finished product as she did the Museum on North Michigan. President Reagan and President Bush also know of the project.

DJT is slated to have meetings during May 2nd to May 6th with the French architect, Philippe Robert, who has developed a plan very much to everyone's liking. The building nestles into the hill, is half underground and is surrounded by shubbery and flowers as is the entire roof of the building. From a helicopter, it will seem as another beautiful Giverny garden.

I would like to show you some of the plans and drawings of this little masterpiece of a building.

(Explain.)

The cost is estimated at $8.75 million and DJT, under this plan, would contribute a total of $10 million (to allow for over-runs) in accordance with the following schedule as shown below and on Page 16. (If DJT should not survive its completion, provision will have been made to make the remaining needed funds available from the DJT estate.)

This museum will support itself from the day it opens.

It would not work except for the captive audience. There are about 110 paintings in the collection done by Americans in France. These are the nucle is of the French collection; of these, about 60 are in the DJT estate and about 50 are owned by the Museum.

The operating budget for this project is $800,000 per year including maintenance and security. Total annual revenue is estimated at $1,200,000 in the first ye r after paying a small percentage fee to the Village for extra costs incurred by virtue of the presence of the museum. In the first three years, any "profit" is taxable in France at regular corporate rates and the museum would pay real estate taxes to the Department. After three years, taxes to the French Government would no longer be required and the museum would become a non-ta, entity.

There has been tremendous effort to get this project going. All in the art world, both in the U.S. and abroad who learn of it, become excited about it.

We hope to have your questions on any phase of this entire report and hope that you will support this magnificent project in Giverny.

Terra Foundation
Strategic Planning Committee
Minutes
August 7, 2000

In attendance:
Mr. Dean Buntrock
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall
Dr. Paul Tucker

By Phone: Mr. Ron Gidwitz, Chair
Mrs. Margaret Daley
Dr. Theodore Stebbins
Mrs. Judith Terra

Staff: Mr. Donald Ratner

By Invitation:
Mr. Mark Heatwole
Mr. Ralph Lerner
Dr. John Neff

The meeting was called to order at 10:10 AM on August 7, 2000. Mr. Ratner is to send out to each Board member the four proposals we received. These include:

- The Art Institute of Chicago
- The Corcoran
- Museum of Fine Arts (MFA) in Boston
- National Gallery

Dr. Tucker indicated that the purchase of today's meeting was therefore:

- To make sure we are all conceptually on the same page
- To move us along on the matrix/criteria for making decisions
- To have a construct within which to make decisions

Dr. Tucker revisited prior discussions with the Strategic Planning Committee and discussed the following:

- The cost of maintaining the Chicago museum
- The assets of the Chicago museum
- The importance of Giverny as central to the Foundation's educational mission.
- The need for an alliance because the lack of depth of the collection would not support two museums

TFA SP 01596
CONFIDENTIAL

- That there has been a clear consensus of the Strategic Planning Committee on the above points

Mr. Buntrock asked why Giverny is more of a focus in education than education in the U.S. There was consensus and agreement that education in the U.S. is as important as in Giverny.

Dr. Stebbins asked the question, "Does education follow the collection?". There was discussion and consensus that the art is the centerpiece.

Mr. Gidwitz asked, "What is the most efficacious way to promote/propagate the collection and/or Giverny in order to propagate American art. In other words how do we maximize/leverage the collection?

Mr. Lerner indicated that one way to leverage the collection is to have an "affiliate" institution. In exchange for the loan of the Terra Collection, they would mount a certain number of collections per year at Giverny. Mr. Lerner suggested that we would never want to give up the autonomy of Giverny or the collection. Mr. Gidwitz asked how we measure success in the propagation of American art. There was discussion that the affiliation should be with someone who could support a major American art showing in Giverny and also someone who could help "travel" the exhibit.

Dr. Tucker indicated that we need a partner with major clout both in the U.S. and abroad and, hopefully, one who also has a history of doing this. Dr. Stebbins indicated that we should probably look for an institution deeply interested in education.

Mr. Gidwitz suggested that we should probably look for an institution that has mechanisms set up that we could "piggyback" on without having to recreate the wheel.

Dr. Tucker said that this would probably include exhibitions, a web-site, educational programs, etc., but that it is unlikely that any one institution could do everything we want them to do in education. Therefore, this would give us the ability to remain somewhat independent.

Dr. Marshall suggested what we needed to decide with everyone at the table. She suggested that in order to move forward expeditiously, we should have a sufficient conversation to be able to draft the contract criteria and to be able to respond to Mr. Gidwitz's question, "what does success look like?". Discussion ensued and indicated that the criteria would be the following:

- Propagating American art
- Showcasing art

TFA SP 01597
CONFIDENTIAL

- Showcasing Giverny

Mr. Hearwole suggested that the Board needs to be consistent and have a clear vision statement of what they want the Foundation to be. He then asked what the assets of the Foundation were.

Dr. Tucker responded that the assets included the following:

- Good Collection
- Significant financial assets not related to the collection
- Real Estate
- Board connectiveness and Board intelligence
- Excellent staff

Dr. Stebbins noted that if we decided to concentrate on only one of our museum locations, we do have an adequate collection and have adequate financial assets.

Dr. Tucker replied that he wouldn't want Giverny to be isolated and, therefore, since Giverny is the center focus, we needed a partner to help to Giverny.

Discussion then arose about where the center of education should be set; whether it should be in Giverny or in the U.S.

Dr. Marshall noted that aligning with an art museum does not negate aligning with an educational institution in addition.

Dr. Tucker restated that Giverny is central, that we can not stand alone with our collection, that we need to be part of an alliance for institutional stature, and therefore, the Foundation needs to be in a partnership to achieve this. He also indicated that we want Giverny to be "an arts center". Dr. Tucker suggested that we need an analysis of costs of "small learning centers". He asked that we do a comparative cost study with other centers including The American Academy, Yaddo, and Skowhegan. He envisions that we would have a learning center for approximately ten people at one time. He than asked if such a learning center plus our exhibits might maximize the propagation of American art.

Mrs. Daley indicated we need to stop reacting and need to decide at the September meeting which direction to go. Mr. Gidwitz reiterated that the purpose of our focus was to propagate American Art through leveraging of the collection.

Dr. Marshall suggested we need to hone down our decision categories and decide what would be the "non negotiables".

Dr. Tucker suggested that certainly there would be cost issues. Mr. Lerner suggested that we need to decide what we want and then we can figure out how to get it. Discussion ensued and included that what we want is support of American art, support of Giverny and name recognition.
A question was asked what the impact of adding our collection to the other museums would be. Response was as follows:

Museum	Effect Would Be
The Met	The Best
The Corcoran	Equal to the Met, MFA, National Gallery
MFA	The Best
Art Institute	Respectable
National Gallery	The Best

Note that the three museums, the Met, the MFA and the National Gallery are all at the forefront of American Art and that, with the addition of the Terra collection, any one would clearly have "the Best" collection.

It was then asked what institution would help us have most accessibility to the whole country. It was discussed that optimizing our collection is really a very important thing.

Mr. Gidwitz asked if we should take Philadelphia off the list (that was agreed to) and the National Gallery off the list (hat was not agreed to).

To summarize the issues and try to determine what was negotiable versus non-negotiable, the current positions are as follows:

NON-NEGOTIABLE

- Support for the expanded vision of Giverny
- Propagate American art through:
  - Exhibitions
  - Education
- Preserve/enhance the Terra name
- Retain control of principle of the Endowment Fund
  - A1
  - D4

OTHER ITEMS (Negotiable)

- Collection should stay as a collection
- The arrangement will probably have to be revenue neutral for both institutions

Dr. Marshall indicated that we needed to move into the detail and the criteria.

Mr. Ratner was then given the assignment of gathering the detail information for the proposing museums. Mr. Lerner reiterated that we were not going to be stand alone in Chicago, that we need to support American art and that we want to support Giverny. Dr. Tucker indicated that he would send out the conclusions that appeared to be drawn from this meeting with the four proposals and the relevant material.

A poll was then taken of the members as to whether we should be a stand-alone museum in Chicago. All voted no except for Mr. Dean Bumrock who said we should be stand alone in Chicago.

The next step will be that Mr. Ratner will send out the packages to the entire Board of the proposals and criteria as well as the data collected from the four museums. Mr. Lerner will put a draft together of a "proposed contract". Dr. Tucker should be in touch with all four "suitors" to keep the door open and will tell Philadelphia that we are not interested.

Mr. Bumrock indicated that we need to focus on our educational needs.

In September after a full day of a Strategic Planning meeting, we hope to present a preferred institution. At that time, we hope that they will be able to make a Board decision to authorize Dr. Tucker to negotiate.

We'll schedule one more meeting of this committee before September and at that time all members of the Board will be invited to participate. Dr. Marshall suggested that we call this a regular Board meeting with one agenda item.

The meeting was adjourned at 2:00pm.

Respectively submitted,

Terra (deceased) ("Dan Terra") to preserve and exhibit collections of American Art, to expand the artistic horizons of the Illinois art public through educational programs, and to operate museums in Chicago and France.

10 Because of Dan Terra's extraordinarily generous gifts to Terra Foundation in his lifetime, and his bequest to Terra Foundation of most of his estate, Terra Foundation's assets now total approximately $450 million, including investments, real estate, and a priceless collection of American art.

11 Terra Foundation owns and operates the Terra Museum of American Art (the "Terra Museum") located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

12 Terra Foundation currently has eleven directors, the maximum number allowed under the by-laws of Terra Foundation. The Board includes Margaret Daley, a well-known benefactor of education and the arts and the wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley, and Arthur A. Hartman, the former United States Ambassador to France. The Board also includes Helene Ahrweiler, Jacques Andreani, Stephanie Marshall and Theodore Stebbins. Catherine A. Stevens, the wife of United States Senator Ted Stevens, was the Executive Director of Terra Foundation from August of 1996 through April, 2000 until terminated by Tucker.

13 Dan Terra established Terra Foundation in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. It was Dan Terra's intent and purpose to provide a Museum in the Chicago area that would exhibit collections of American art and educate the public generally on issues of American art. As set forth in the original Articles of Incorporation, the purpose of Terra Foundation was:

> to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings, sculpture, graphic arts, architecture, and design representing American art; expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses and other subjects relating thereto; build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate a museum and all component parts deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions; engage in any and all other activities and exhibitions.

14 To ensure that the primary mission and purpose of Terra Foundation was carried out, the Terra Museum was opened in 1982 in Evanston, Illinois. In 1987, the Museum relocated to 66 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and remains at that location until today.

15 Throughout the 1980s and early to mid-1990s, Dan Terra contributed cash, stock and art for the continued growth and viability of the Terra Foundation and the Terra Museum in Chicago. To ensure that his contributions would further the goals and mission of Terra Foundation for the benefit of the public, Dan Terra created two restricted endowments, the "B2 Endowment," restricted to the acquisition of art for Terra Foundation, and the D4 Endowment restricted to education endeavors relating to American art.

16 In the early 1990s, Terra Foundation constructed and developed the Musee d'Art Americain Giverny ("Giverny Museum"), an art museum in Giverny, France dedicated to the exhibition of American art and American art education.

17 Primarily because of Dan Terra's gifts and bequests, the value of Terra Foundation has grown substantially since its creation. Currently, Terra Foundation holds net assets worth approximately $450 million. The value of the art alone located at the Terra Museum in Chicago exceeds $100 million, with the overall value of Terra's Foundation's art collection exceeding $173 million.

18 Pursuant to its by-laws, the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation is required to hold an annual meeting during the month of September of each year for the purpose of electing directors and officers and for the transacting of other business. If the election of the directors and officers is not held at such meeting, the Board of Directors may cause the election to be held at a meeting of the Board of Directors as soon thereafter as may be convenient. The Board of Directors may only elect officers and directors by a majority vote.

19 In periods of time between the quarterly Board of Director Meetings, the by-laws provide that as Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has the authority to take action on behalf of Terra Foundation, except on specific issues delegated to the Board of Directors pursuant to the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. Since October, 1999, Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has consisted of plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, defendants Edith Terra and Mr. Tucker, and director Stephanie Marshall.

Dan Terra's Dedication To Chicago

20 Dan Terra was a successful entrepreneur and businessman who resided predomin in the Chicago area. A large portion of his wealth enured through investments in companies locatec in and around Chicago. As result, Dan Terra made the decision to start the Terra Foundation with the intent to benefit of the citizens of Illinois and the Chicago area. Terra Foundation became Terra's principal charitable endeavor.

21 Dan Terra described his decision to establish Terra Foundation in Illinois and to open Terra Museum in the Chicago area for the people of Illinois as follows:

> [W]hat's exciting is that it's a deep commitment. There's not another museum of American art within 400 miles of Chicago, and we have a real educational job to do.

(See Grace Glueck, American-Art Museum Opening in Chicago, N.Y. Times, April 19, 1987 at B14, attached hereto as Exhibit 2). On many occasions, Dan Terra articulated his intent to benefit the people of Illinois through the creation of Terra Foundation in Illinois and the opening of Terra Museum as " major institution in Chicago." (See, e.g., Dodie Kazanjian, Daniel J. Terra, America's First Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs Pursues the Best in American Painting for His New Museum in Chicago, House & Garden, May 1987, at 52, attached hereto as Exhibit 3).

22 Shortly after the creation of Terra Foundation, Dan Terra's first wife, Adeline died. In 1986, Dan Terra married Judith Terra. Judith Terra acknowledged in a prenuptial agreement that she fully understood that the bulk of Dan Terra's estate would go to the Terra Foundation, and she unequivocally promised that after his death she would not seek any assets of his Estate other than those given to her under the prenuptial agreement. Under the prenuptial agreement, Judith Terra agreed she would receive only a fixed amount of money and assets upon Dan Terra's death. Judith Terra became a member of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation.

23 On information and belief, after Judith Terra became a member of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation, she suggested to Dan Terra that the Terra Museum be closed and Terra Foundation be moved out of Chicago. This was never done during Dan Terra's lifetime.

Terra's Death And The Will Contest

24 On June 28, 1996, Dan Terra died after suffering a stroke. As the sole residuary beneficiary under his will, Terra Foundation was to receive $125 million.

25 As the first step in a plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra immediately attempted to transfer Dan Terra's probate proceedings from the Circuit Court of Cook County to Washington, D.C. After a five-day trial, the Chief Judge of the Probate Division denied the motion to transfer, finding that the motion was without merit in law or fact.

26 Judith Terra next embarked on a scheme to seize tens of millions of dollars that Dan Terra intended for Terra Foundation.

27 Under the prenuptial agreement between Dan Terra and Judith Terra, Judith Terra was to receive $4.5 million in cash plus approximately $2.6 million in other assets, for a total of $7.1 million.

28 Contrary to her promise in the prenuptial agreement, after Dan's death, Judith Terra immediately filed an action challenging the prenuptial agreement and contesting Dan Terra's will. Judith Terra sought for herself $43 million of the $125 million bequest to Terra Foundation.

29 Judith Terra's attempt to seize $43 million of Dan Terra's bequest to Terra Foundation put her in irreconcilable conflict with the interests of Terra Foundation and, therefore, with the people of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust created by Dan Terra. As a result, Judith Terra was forced to take a leave of absence as a director of T a Foundation.

30 The Terra Foundation hired Tyrone Fahner, former Attorney General of Illinois, an Howard McCue III of Mayer, Brown & Platt as special counsel with respect to Judith Terra's attempt to seize the $43 million bequest. Both Terra Foundation's special counsel and the counsel for Dan Terra's estate found that Judith Terra's claims lacked substantial merit. However, to avoi protracted litigation, the estate and Terra Foundation entered into a settlement with Judith Terr whereby she received approximately $1 million more than she was entitled to under the prenuptial agreement. This allowed Terra Foundation to receive virtually all of Dan Terra's $125 million bequest as intended under Dan Terra's will.

Mismanagement of Terra Museum After Dan Terra's Death

31 Following the settlement of her claims against the Dan Terra's Estate, Judith Terra sought reinstatement to her position as director of Terra Foundation. Thereafter, changes were made within Terra Foundation and the Museum that were contrary to the best interests of Terra Foundation and therefore contrary to the public interest that was intended to benefit from Terra Foundation.

32 Beginning in mid-1998, Judith Terra launched a scheme to gain control of Terra Foundation to carry out her own agenda of closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. Judith Terra owns a home in Washington, D.C. and desires to move the Foundation there to obtain a prominent place in the social circles of Washington, D.C. Judith Terra believes that if she is able to move a foundation as large as Terra Foundation to

Washington, D.C., she would be able to establish herself in Washington, D.C. as a large benefactor of the arts, thereby placing herself in the elite social circles of Washington, D.C.

33 To accomplish her scheme of seizing control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra began stacking Terra Foundation's Board with persons loyal to her alone. For example, Judith Terra recommended and sought the election of her friend Sen. Simpson to the Board. Sen. Simpson became a director in mid-1999. At his first Board of Directors meeting in October 1999, Sen. Simpson announced to the Board that his purpose for being on Terra Foundation's Board of Directors was "to protect Mrs. Terra's interests."

34 Prior to October 1999, Judith Terra orchestrated a plan to replace Arthur Hartman as Terra Foundation's president and chairman with her loyalist, Mr. Tucker. Although Terra Foundation had been searching for a new president for more than two years from outside the Board of Directors, Judith Terra and her new allies on the Board replaced Arthur Hartman as president and chairman with Mr. Tucker. As was later discovered, the decision to place Mr. Tucker in the position of president and chairman was made to further Judith Terra's attempt to gain control of Terra Foundation and to further her own agenda contrary to the mission and intent of Dan Terra in creating Terra Foundation.

35 Mr. Tucker and Judith Terra further entrenched their power through the hiring of Donald Ratner and the unauthorized expansion of his authority within Terra Foundation. Mr. Ratner was originally retained as a consultant to the Foundation on an interim basis. During the January 25, 2000 meeting of the Board of Directors a motion was made to give Mr. Ratner the title of vice president of finance and administration. The Board members present at the meeting voted in favor of the motion. However, because not all Board Members were present, the motion was made subject to the ratification by each of the absent Board members. In a subsequent poll of Board memb the motion failed to receive unanimous approval as required by the vote at the January 25, 2000 meeting. Nonetheless, pursuant to Mr. Tucker's dictate, Mr. Ratner has continued to serve as a purported officer of Terra Foundation, and has taken direction from Board members loyal to Judith Terra.

36 Judith Terra also furthered her scheme to gain control of Terra Foundation by causing the removal of the attorneys that had counseled and represented Terra Foundation since its inception. In 1982, Dan Terra asked James Collins, an attorney at the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd, to act as both general counsel and an officer of Terra Foundation. Collins served in the capacity of general counsel and secretary of Terra Foundation from 1978 until his removal in October 1999. He also served as treasurer from August 1996 through October 1999. During this time, Collins had represented the interests of Terra Foundation through many difficult issues, including Judith Terra's attempt to confiscate $43 million of Dan Terra's bequest to Terra Foundation.

37 Defendants next forced the resignation of Terra Foundation's special counsel, Ty Fahner and Howard McCue III of Mayer, Brown & Platt. Terra Foundation hired Mayer, Brown & Platt as special counsel when Judith Terra sued Dan Terra's estate for the $43 million residual bequest to Terra Foundation. Mayer, Brown & Platt also represented Terra Foundation in connection with its interests in the now defunct Mercury Finance Company.

38 Specifically, on or about August 11, 2000, Mr. Ratner, acting in his ultra vires capacity at the direction of defendants, told Mayer, Brown & Platt that Terra Foundation would not pay its fees for any time incurred in dealing with or responding to any issues not specifically requested by either Mr. Tucker or Mr. Ratner. Mayer, Brown & Platt rejected this arrangement recognizing that it would be contrary to its duties and obligations as special counsel to Terra Foundation and its directors. In resigning its position as special counsel to Terra Foundation, Mayer, Brown & Platt stated in a letter to Mr. Tucker:

> In our original engagement letter of December 11, 1996, sent by Ms. Ahrweiler and ourselves, the Foundation requested that we act as special counsel to the Foundation. It was clear that the client was the foundation, not merely its President and Chairman. That letter also made clear that we were to provide legal advice and representation to the Board of the Foundation. As special counsel, we have worked with three different Chairmen, a number of board members, staff and counsel. We owe professional obligations to the institution and all of its directors. It would not be consistent with our professional obligations to decline to respond to the concerns of directors.

39 In furtherance of her plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson have ignored the requirements of Terra Foundation's by-laws regarding management of Terra Foundation. Article III, Section 11 of the by-laws provides that the executive committee is to operate Terra Foundation between the quarterly Board of Director meetings. (See By-laws of Terra Foundation, attached hereto as Exhibit 5, at Article IV, Section 9). With few exceptions relating to bringing in new counsel for Terra Foundation, issues were not brought before the executive committee. By not having meetings of the executive committee, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson were able to control the operations of Terra Foundation for their own benefit, contrary to the provisions of the by-laws.

40 Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson have also consulted with and taken advice from Mr. Michaeli. Mr. Michaeli has been making decisions for Terra Foundation even though he is not an officer or director of Terra Foundation, or even an employee. Mr. Michaeli's only connection to Terra Museum is his relationship with Judith Terra.

41 Judith Terra also began treating the art collection of Terra Foundation as if it re her own personal property. Judith Terra ordered that art from the collection held by Terr Foundation be transported from the Giverny Museum to her personal residence. The curator of th Giverny Museum objected to any piece of the collection leaving the Giverny Museum. However at Judith Terra's direction, Mr. Tucker ordered the curator of the Giverny Museum to transport the art to Judith Terra's residence for her personal use.

42 Under the control of Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Michael substantial waste and mismanagement has occurred which jeopardizes the continued viability of Terra Museum. This waste and mismanagement includes, but is not limited to, the following:

a. Grossly mismanaging Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the los or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons responsible for Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success;

b. Causing the primary individuals in charge of security at Terra Museum to quit resulting in an inexperienced and understaffed security staff, anc jeopardizing the security of the $100 million of art displayed and collected at Terra Museum;

c. Permitting a director of Terra Foundation to engage in a conflict of interest in representing Terra Foundation at art auctions while, on information anc belief, representing the interests of private clients at the same auction;

d. Expending significant monies on the purchases of art without obtaining the input or approval of the Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art acquisition;

e. Attempting to invade the D4 Endowment restricted to educational purposes for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

f. Bypassing the lawfully elected Executive Committee operating Terra Foundation and Terra Museum;

g. Wastefully incurring excessive legal fees by retaining inexperienced counsel in replacement of Terra Foundation's long-standing counsel;

h. Misusing the art collection of Terra Foundation for Judith Terra's own personal use and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy; and

i. Allowing Mr. Michaeli to participate the management, control and operation of Terra Foundation and Terra Museum.

43 Members of the Board of Directors have repeatedly questioned the manner in which Mr. Tucker, Judith Terra and Sen. Simpson have been operating Terra Foundation in the past year. For example, on March 2, 2000, Margaret Daley wrote to John Neff, Director of Terra Museum, regarding the significant problem occurring at Terra Museum as a result of the high turnover of key employees. Specifically, Mrs. Daley stated:

> Having just returned from out of town, I am disheartened about the news concerning Ginny Spindler. John, Ginny worked tirelessly on the School Resource Guide. I was very impressed with her work and Rachel's as well. In fact, without their herculean efforts, it would not have been a worthwhile publication. In fact, it would have been an embarrassment to the Foundation. Your letter to Ginny was, from my point of view, unkind and uncalled for. It distressed me to see people treated in such a manner. In my working with her on education issues, I believe she has always gone "above and beyond" her duties .... I couldn't leave without letting you and the Board know my feelings and deep concerns.

44 Other members of the Board of Directors, including Buntrock, as well employees of both Terra Foundation and Terra Museum have repeatedly and vigorously challenged the manner and lack of direction in which Terra Foundation has been operated and managed under the direction of Mr. Tucker. (See Arthur A. Hartman letter dated November 7, 1999, attached hereto as Exhibit 7).

45 On information and belief, the pattern of mismanagement and waste occurring at Terra Museum is a conscious effort on the part of Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to cause the failure of Terra Museum in Chicago to justify closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation from Chicago to Washington, D.C. for their own purposes and in u disregard for the people of Illinois intended to benefit from Dan Terra's museum and foundation.

Judith Terra's Plan To Move Terra Museum From Chicago To Washington

46 Despite the fact that Terra during his life had rejected any suggestion of moving Terra Museum from Chicago and therefore depriving the people of the State of Illinois of the charitable trust that he had created, Judith Terra has never abandoned her personal scheme to close Terra Museum in Chicago and move Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. In the last year, after Mr. Tucker obtained the position of president and chairman, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Mr. Michaeli have been actively seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago.

47 To this end, and in breach of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois, Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker have engaged in negotiations relating to a merger - affiliation between Terra Foundation and The Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. ("the Corcoran"). As part of the proposed merger of affiliation, certain positions on the Board of The Corcoran would be filled by individuals on the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation. Also, the proposal provides that the president and chairman of Terra Foundation, Mr. Tucker, would assume the position of vice-chairman of The Corcoran.

48 The overall plan and method whereby Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker would secure their mission of obtaining prominent positions in Washington, D.C., in breach of their fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois, was clearly evidenced at the recent Board of Directors meeting held on August 24, 2000. There, Mr. Tucker made clear that it was his intention to close Terra Museum in Chicago. Mr. Tucker stated that under his thinking, there were potential problems with the continued operation of the museum in Chicago. Mr. Tucker went to state clearly and unambiguously, > the best way to maximize our resources and fulfill our mission is to align with another institution, close the Chicago museum and focus on Giverny and educational initiatives of the Foundation.

(Emphasis added) (See Minutes of August 24, 2000 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit 8, p. 2). In fact, many of the "problems" with the Chicago museum were of the defendants' own making.

49 Buntrock objected to Mr. Tucker's improper interpretation of the mission of Terra Foundation and stated that the closing of Terra Museum in Chicago had never been discussed or considered by the full Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker agreed that this critical issue had never been discussed by the full Board of Directors, but stated that a decision had already been reached to close Terra Museum in Chicago. According to Mr. Tucker, the Strategic Planning Committee was prepared to make a recommendation on this issue to the Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker stated that the Board of directors "definitely" must make a decision on the closing of the Chicago museum during the annual Board of Directors meeting in September 2000.

50 In conjunction with their overall plan, Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker have attempted to create the impression that Terra Museum in Chicago needs to be abandoned as a mission of Terra Foundation.

Defendants' Plan To Remove Buntrock
From Board Of Directors To Further Their Goals

51 Notice was mailed to the directors informing them that the annual Board of Directors meeting of Terra Foundation was scheduled for Tuesday, September 26, 2000 in France. Although various events and committee meetings were scheduled to occur between September 23, 2000 and September 26, 2000, the annual meeting of the Board of Directors was scheduled for Septembe , 2000.

52 As set forth in the agenda for the annual Board meeting that was distributed to each Board member, the election of officers and directors for the upcoming year was to be held during the September 26, 2000 meeting. (See Agenda for September 26, 2000 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit 9). As set forth in the agenda, the elections were to occur and then the chairman of each committee would make a presentation to the Board. (Id.) As indicated in the agenda, Mr. Buntrock was scheduled to give a presentation to the Board as the chairman of the finance and investment committee immediately subsequent to the election of the directors and officers.

53 The defendants have now contrived a plan to ensure that the directors are elected with the exception of Buntrock. Defendants intend to see that Buntrock is not retained as a director in order to allow them to more easily accomplish their unlawful personal objective of closing the museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. Buntrock has recognized defendants' efforts and has continued to question the Board's authority to move the charitable assets of the people of the State of Illinois to Washington, D.C. in contravention of the Board's fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois.

54 Plaintiffs have just recently learned of the defendants' improper plan to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Directors. Subsequent to the dissemination of the agenda for the September 26, 2000 meeting of the Board of Directors, and only days prior to the directors leaving for France, Mr. Ratner was directed to send a letter to all directors, without any consultation, informing them that a 30-minute Board of Directors meeting was scheduled for September 24, 2000, two days prior to the properly noticed and scheduled meeting of the Board of Directors. (See September 15, 2000 Letter, attached hereto as Exhibit 10). This improperly noticed meeting has been scheduled because defendants will not have a sufficient number of directors available on September 26, 2000 to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Terra Foundation.

55 Defendants' attempt to hold the elections for directors and/or officers at a Special Meeting of the Board of Directors on September 24, 2000, is violative of the by-laws of Terra Foundation for at least two reasons. First, Ratner does not have the authority to provide notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors as he is not the secretary of Terra Foundation, nor is he even a duly elected officer or director. Pursuant to the by-laws of Terra Foundation, only the secretary of Terra Foundation is empowered to provide notices required under the by-laws. (Exhibit 5, Article IV, Section 9). Any attempt by Ratner to send notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors constitutes an ultra vires act.

56 Second, under the by-laws an election of the officers and directors may occur only at one of two occasions. First, the election may take place at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors. Second, if the election is not held at the scheduled annual meeting, a special meeting may be held subsequent to the annual meeting. (Id. at Article III, Section 3). The by-laws provide no authority for the holding of elections of officers or directors prior to the scheduled annual meeting. For this additional reason, defendants' attempt to hold the elections of directors and officers at the improperly noticed meeting on September 24, 2000 constitutes and ultra vires act, as well as a clear breach of their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois.

57 Without relief from this Court, defendants will carry out their improper plan to ensure that Buntrock does not remain as a director and officer, to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and to undermine the effort of the other directors to ensure that fiduciary duties to the Terra Founda n, and its beneficiaries -- the people of the State of Illinois -- are followed. The Defendants' plan i motivated by their own self-interests and desires, and inconsistent with their fiduciary obligation as directors of a charitable trust intended to benefit the people of Illinois.

58 Moreover, if defendants are permitted to carry out their plan to remove Buntrock there is a real and serious danger that other members of the Board of Directors will resign thei positions thereby leaving the Terra Foundation in great jeopardy, and leaving the people of Illinoi without protection on the Board. Once Buntrock and other similar "obstructionist" directors are removed or resign, defendants will have no opposition to carrying out their plan of depriving the people of Illinois of the public trust created over twenty years ago by Dan Terra for their benefit

(Declaratory Relief)

59 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 58 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 59.

60 By and through the creation Terra Foundation as a not-for-profit Illinois corporation, Dan Terra intended that a museum of American art be operated in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois.

61 At various times after the creation of Terra Foundation, Terra reaffirmed his mission of operating a museum in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois through the collection of American art and the education generally of the public on the issue of American art.

62 The Board of Directors of Terra Foundation are the trustees of the charitable st created by Dan Terra responsible to the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the public trust.

63 As directors of Terra Foundation, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, as well as many others, have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the goals and mission started over twenty years ago by Terra.

64 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to protect Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement caused by defendants.

65 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to see that Terra Foundation continues to carry out the mission for which it was started for the benefit of the people of Illinois.

66 By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois to protect the charitable assets of Terra Foundation and to act in their interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Terra more than twenty years ago.

67 Notwithstanding their fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois to further the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker used their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation to intentionally mismanage Terra Museum in Chicago to further their own self interests in closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C.

68 The foregoing improper conduct of Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker has caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, and irreparable harm to the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the public trust established for Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

69 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

70 An actual controversy exists between the parties hereto concerning Terra Foundation's obligation and purpose to maintain a museum in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois as originally intended by Dan Terra at the time of the creation of Terra Foundation.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created Terra Foundation as a public trust for the benefit of the people of Illinois on or before December 13, 1978;

(2) The intent of Dan Terra in creating Terra Foundation was to operate the museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois;

(3) Defendants are precluded from closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving the Foundation to a location outside of the Chicago area;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of the Chicago area would violate the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

C. For such additional relief as the Court deems fair and just.

COUNT II
(Statutory Ultra Vires Acts)

71 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 70 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 71.

72 The above acts and conduct of defendants have been taken without lawful authority, capacity, or power and will continue unless enjoined.

73 Section 103.15 of the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986 allows this Court to enjoin defendants' unlawful acts.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

COUNT III
(Breach of Fiduciary Duty)

74 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 73 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 74.

75 By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois to act in their interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago.

76 Defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further their own personal interests to the detriment of the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust. Defendants improper conduct included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago to create the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer the art to some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to defeat Buntrock's re-election as director to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois contrary to Illinois law;

d. Contrary to the by-laws of Terra Foundation, attempting to improperly reschedule the vote for the election of directors to ensure that defendants have enough votes to defeat Buntrock's nomination and therefore further their personal agenda to the detriment of the intended beneficiaries of Terra Foundation.

77 The foregoing breaches of fiduciary duty of Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker have caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, i irreparable harm to the people of Illinois, as the beneficiaries of the public trust by endangering the future of Terra Foundation and the continued viability of Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

78 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created Terra Foundation for the benefit of the people of Illinois on or before December 13, 1978;

(2) The intent of Terra in creating Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois;

(3) Defendants have no authority to close Terra Museum in Chicago or transfer the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois would violate the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

(5) Defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker have breached their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation if defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties;

(7) Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duties by seeking to defeat Mr. Buntrock's re-election as director in order to further their own agenda;

(8) The letter sent by Ratner to the members of the Board of Directors dated September 15, 2000 is a nullity and does not comply with the by-laws of Terra Foundation for scheduling a meeting of the Board of Directors for the election of directors and/or officers.

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

COUNT IV
(Inducing A Breach of Fiduciary Duty)

79 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 78 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 79.

80 As set forth more fully above, defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further their own personal interests to the detriment of the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust established by Dan Terra. Defendants improper conduct included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Intentionally mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago to create the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

16di-002114

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer or re-establish the museum to Washington, D.C. or some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to defeat Buntrock's re-election as director to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois;

d. Attempting to improperly reschedule the vote for the election of directors to ensure that defendants have enough votes to defeat Buntrock's nomination and therefore further their personal agenda to the detriment of the intended beneficiaries of Terra Foundation

81 Defendant Mr. Michaeli colluded with Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker in committing breaches of fiduciary duty, or otherwise induced or participated in their breaches of duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the various ways, including, but not limited to the following:

a. Knowingly providing advice to Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson that was contrary to the fiduciary duties owed by them as directors of Terra Foundation;

b. Acting with Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to make decisions for Terra Foundation in contravention of the by-laws of Terra Foundation;

c. Advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to take action relating to Terra Foundation that constituted waste and mismanagement in an attempt to justify the closure of Terra Museum in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

d. Colluding with or advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson in the decision to replace Jim Collins and the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd in order to gain control over the operations of Terra Foundation for their own improper purpose in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

e. Colluding with, advising or participating in the plan to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Directors in order to remove opposition to their plan to close Terra Museum in Chicago and move Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

82 The conduct of Mr. Michaeli has caused, and will continue to cause, damage to T -a Foundation and the people of Illinois. If the conduct of Mr. Michaeli is not stopped, the public trus created by Dan Terra may be destroyed to the detriment of the people of Illinois.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining Mr. Michaeli, his agents or assigns from colluding with, inducing or participating in any further breaches of fiduciar duty with Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker.

Telephone Conference

Wednesday, August 1, 2001

10:00 a.m.

Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC

1615 M Street, N.W.

Washington, D.C. 20036

In attendance: Judith Terra

Emily Murphy

Larry Levinson, Esq.

David Ross, Esq.

PROCEEDINGS

MS. TERRA: This is Judith.

MR. SIMPSON: How are you? Good morning.

MALE SPEAKER: We are waiting for about three people we are trying to get a hold of. We have some callers. We are waiting for Ted, Don.

MS. TERRA: That's fine, Don. I would like to make one comment as everybody is getting settled, and that is I do have present with me a court reporter who will be recording this discussion. And my attorneys from Verner, Liipfert and Kellogg, Huber.

MALE SPEAKER: Judith, I think that's inappropriate. This meeting is being recorded by the operator. Conference call operator and regular counsel. They have their counsel present and so I do not believe that it's appropriate for you to have your attorney present. Mr. Levinson asked to come to this meeting and was told he could not by me.

MS. TERRA: Okay. I will have the attorneys leave, but I will continue to have the meeting transcribed.

MALE SPEAKER: That's fine, Judith. That's no problem. Good morning, Dean.

MR. BUNTROCK: Good morning, Dean.

(Whereupon, the attorneys departed the conference room.)

MALE SPEAKER: Dr. Forster, I just want to apologize for the misspelling of your name in the agenda. I missed it when I was proofreading this thing so I hope you accept the apologies.

MS. FORSTER: I'm sorry. I haven't seen the agenda. I think this material was faxed to my office and I am at home.

MALE SPEAKER: It was Federal Expressed -- it was faxed yesterday.

MS. FORSTER: It came in after I left the building so I didn't know about it until this morning.

MALE SPEAKER: Is there a fax number at home where I can fax it to you?

MS. FORSTER: No. I'm sorry.

MALE SPEAKER: It was not Don's fault. I actually put the names in that section of the agenda and I missed it.

MS. FORSTER: It's quite all right.

MALE SPEAKER: Blame it on the lawyers.

MS. FORSTER: That is generous of you.

MR. FIELD: Kathy, this is Marshall Field. We are a part of the new crowd.

MS. FORSTER: All right. We are both catching up here.

MALE SPEAKER: What do we need for a quorum?

MALE SPEAKER: Did somebody come on?

THE OPERATOR: This is the conference operator. I am going to dial Helene Arhweiler. It will be just one moment.

MS. FORSTER: This is Kathy Forster here. I am wondering if anyone can send me this material by e-mail. I can print it out at home.

MALE SPEAKER: The attachments?

MALE SPEAKER: Kathy, we don't have the attachments on e-mail. I can tell you that. Give me your e-mail address.

MALE SPEAKER: I will call Diane.

MS. FORSTER: I will have to hang up and pull the document up and call in again because I only have one single telephone line for my modem. I am trying to catch Helene.

THE OPERATOR: This is the conference operator. A Madam Arhweiler will be joining you in one moment.

MS. FORSTER: Just give me the high sign when you have sent that off.

Helene, how are you? Bonjour.

MS. ARHWEILER: Bonjour.

MALE SPEAKER: Hi, Helene. How do you do?

MS. ARHWEILER: I am well.

MS. TERRA: Hi, Helene. This is Judith.

MS. ARHWEILER: Yes, hello.

MS. DALEY: Hello. It's Maggie.
MS. ARHWEILER: I am waiting for a reply.
FEMALE SPEAKER: I am so sorry. They told me they faxed it to you.
MS. ARHWEILER: Okay. I shall find it.
MS. SIMPSON: Alan Simpson. How are you?
MS. ARHWEILER: How are you, Alan?
MR. SIMPSON: I am fine. Thank you.
FEMALE SPEAKER: We were unable to locate him from what I was told.
FEMALE SPEAKER: I am told that he was unable to be reached.
MS. ARHWEILER: You will not come.
FEMALE SPEAKER: Rich had to give a speech in California.
FEMALE SPEAKER: Okay. He confirmed that months ago. That letter should have gotten to you last week by fax. I'm sorry.
FEMALE SPEAKER: It is necessary for

FEMALE SPEAKER: I will be sure it gets to you today.
MS. ARHWEILER: Okay. Okay. Let me say that I haven't received the settlement. I just -- I just received the settlement in the hands of Paul, but I haven't received it, let's say, essentially efficiently. I haven't yet received the settlement agreement.
MR. FIELD: We will have to send you one. This is Marshall Field and I am one of the newcomers.
MALE SPEAKER: Helene, I don't think that Don had faxed it out to everybody, but we will be happy to do that for you so it can come directly.
MS. ARHWEILER: I am not in France. I have no faxes here where I am.
MS. FORSTER: Do you want us to send it to your place in Athens?
MS. ARHWEILER: No. I am in the islands now and it's quite impossible even to call you. I don't think I am able to still have this call for a long time.

MS. FORSTER: We understand, Helene.
MS. ARHWEILER: Anyhow, I am waiting. I know I must have all of the articles of the settlement but I don't know the expiration.
MS. FORSTER: We will make sure you get it. I am waiting. I am going to leave as soon as I know there is something for me to pick up.
MALE SPEAKER: Why don't you hang up and see if you get it?
MS. FORSTER: Okay. I will talk to you in a minute.
MALE SPEAKER: Hello. This is Fred again. We were disconnected.
MALE SPEAKER: Hello.
MS. ARHWEILER: Hello.
MS. DALEY: Don, it's Maggie.
MR. FIELD: Hi, Maggie. How are you? This is Marshall. We are waiting for Kathleen Forster to get an agenda. We sent it by e-mail.

When she gets back on we will have almost everybody. The only one missing is Stephanie and she may be late.
FEMALE SPEAKER: Helene, how are you?
MS. ARHWEILER: Thank you. It's very cold where I am.
MALE SPEAKER: Helene, when will you be back in France?
MS. ARHWEILER: I shall be back in a few days, but only for one day. I have to go there for a seminar because it is a very bad situation and he will go special and I happen to be there for two days only. I mean the beginning of the next week.
MALE SPEAKER: Right. We will try to call you while you are there.
MS. ARHWEILER: You can call me also in the number you have here? I shall give you another number also, and you have my -- I shall give you my mobile number.
MALE SPEAKER: Okay.
MS. ARHWEILER: Just a moment because

I don't know that by heart. But I shall give you my mobile and you will find me everywhere. Well, the mobile is the Greek mobile 0030937073596. With this mobile you can find me all over Europe.
MALE SPEAKER: Okay. Thank you.
MALE SPEAKER: Is Kathy on?
MALE SPEAKER: She is not going to be on the call. Absent are Professor Hamada, Jim Donnelley. Stephanie we are expecting. That should be shortly after 10:00.
MS. ARHWEILER: I don't think that Jack is in France. I think that he is -- MALE SPEAKER: We haven't been able to reach him so we have been calling and leaving messages. We have not been able to reach him at all.
MALE SPEAKER: I will call him when I am back in France.
MS. ARHWEILER: You can call me on this phone.
MALE SPEAKER: I will.
MS. ARHWEILER: You better. You will find me if I am not in Paris.

MS. FORSTER: This is Kathy Forster. It hasn't come so I decided it was wasting time and I got back on line.
MR. TUCKER: Thank you all. Before we begin this gathering tonight we want to make a statement that is to say that my presence at this meeting or this gathering along with that of Judith and Alan is especially and solely to object to the transaction of any business because this meeting has not been properly called and convened.
I ask that the record reflect that our presence today is not a waiver of our objection as is our right under the bylaws. Notice of this meeting was under the bylaws and at this time I would move that this group be adjourned for the reasons set forth in the letter of July 30, 2001, as well as for the reasons reflected in the complaint which was filed on July 1, 2001 to July 31 of 2001 to avoid adding to the significant problems that unfortunately already exist.

I make a motion and ask for a second made.
MR. SIMPSON: This is Al Simpson. I will second the motion. I am here to object to the transaction of any business that the meeting was not lawfully called and convened and would second the motion for adjournment.
MS. TERRA: This is Judith, and I would add my response to the former two statements. I certainly am here solely to object to the transaction of any business at this meeting. The lawyers are no longer with me. But I did have them with me at the beginning because I am very concerned that issues exist regarding conflict of interest on the part of the attorneys for the foundation which have been raised but have not yet been resolved.
MR. STEBBINS: This is Ted. What was wrong with the notice of the meeting?
MALE SPEAKER: Don indicated as to who had actually called the meeting and it was regarding specifically the demand by the court vis-a-vis the settlement.

MS. TERRA: We have a motion, Paul.
MALE SPEAKER: Does Paul have legal assistance, sir?
MALE SPEAKER: No, I do not.
MALE SPEAKER: I think a motion to adjourn is undebatable.
MS. TERRA: That's correct.
MALE SPEAKER: Let's vote on that.
MALE SPEAKER: Do you have the --
MALE SPEAKER: I think we ought to take a vote under the motion that has been moved and seconded.
MALE SPEAKER: Okay. I vote no.
MALE SPEAKER: I vote no.
MR. BUNTROCK: I vote no.
MALE SPEAKER: Votes no.
MALE SPEAKER: Votes no.
MR. FIELD: Marshall Field votes no.
MALE VOICE: Votes no.
MS. TERRA: Judith Terra votes yes.
MR. SIMPSON: Alan Simpson votes yes.

Page 14

MS. FORSTER: This is Kathy Forster. I hope that I am allowed to abstain from this vote.
MALE SPEAKER: You are.
MALE SPEAKER: Is that everybody? I did not hear Dean.
MR. BUNTROCK: Yes. I voted no.
MALE SPEAKER: I voted no.
MS. TERRA: I would like to raise an objection to the proposed new board members being allowed to vote in this particular issue.
MALE SPEAKER: Who is speaking?
MS. TERRA: This is Judith.
MALE SPEAKER: It seems to me if you actively stated your objection then the business at hand is not for you to engage in.
MALE SPEAKER: There is a motion before the body that is undebatable and I think you ought to call the vote.
MALE SPEAKER: The motion was defeated by a vote of seven to three with one abstention and Helene apparently dropped off the line and we did not here her call.

MALE SPEAKER: Clearly if Paul and Judith and Alan are not going to participate in this meeting, we need to have another chairman for this meeting and I would like to nominate Dean.
MALE SPEAKER: I will step away and I will see you in another forum. Good-bye.
MALE SPEAKER: All right. I am to remain and I will not participate in a meeting, but I am not waiving any objections to the defects of the notice or my rights later on.
MS. TERRA: While this unlawful meeting continues I am going to also remain present for the meeting, although I will not participate in the meeting. But I am not going to waive my objections to the defects in the notice either.
MALE SPEAKER: Is there a second for my motion?
MALE SPEAKER: Second.
MR. FIELD: Second.

Page 16

MALE SPEAKER: Let's make sure that Marshall is seconded as well in case there is some argument with respect to Marshall.
All in favor? A discussion on the motion?
MALE SPEAKER: I'm sorry. You faded out. Could you repeat the motion?
MALE SPEAKER: My motion is for Dean to preside as president. Chairman Buntrock.
MALE SPEAKER: I seconded it.
MALE SPEAKER: I second it.
MALE SPEAKER: Discussion?
Call the vote.
MALE SPEAKER: I vote Aye.
MALE SPEAKER: Votes Aye.
MR. BUNTROCK: Dean Buntrock votes Aye.
FEMALE SPEAKER: Votes Aye.
MR. FIELD: Marshall Field Aye.
MR. STEBBINS: Ted Stebbins votes yes.
MS. FORSTER: Kathy Forster votes yes.
MALE SPEAKER: Votes yes.

Page 17

MALE SPEAKER: We have not been able to get back. Has anyone not voted? So that motion carried by my count eight to zero.
MALE SPEAKER: Congratulations, Dean.
MALE SPEAKER: With several people not voting.
MR. BUNTROCK: Okay. I will act as chairman to get the meeting started. I assume that we duly called it to order, and, Mark, do you need any further role call or has that been established?
MALE SPEAKER: We did a role call with people on the phone, but let me read what my record shows.
The meeting commenced with Alan Simpson, Marshall Field, Maggie Daley, Paul Tucker, Arthur Hartman, Fred Krehbiel, Kathy Forster, Judith Terra, Dean Buntrock, Helene Arhweiler and Ron Gidwitz all participating at the outset.
MALE SPEAKER: Thank you, Mark.
First of all, I would like to

recognize the new directors and we all appreciate them coming on board and taking on this new challenge.

The first order of business will be to select a new chair for the foundation. I would like to make a motion that we elect Marshall Field to that position. Is there a second?

MALE SPEAKER: I second.

MALE SPEAKER: Dean, actually the first item on the agenda that sets out --

THE OPERATOR: Conference operator. I will try to get Madam Arhweiler back on the line.

MR. STEBBINS: Dean, the first item on the agenda was the removal of the existing officers. This is Ted Stebbins. I would like to move for the removal of the executive officers.

MR. HARTMAN: I second that.

MALE SPEAKER: Ted has made the motion. Arthur has seconded that.

Is there any discussion on the motion?

MALE SPEAKER: It's required under the consent order.

All in favor signify by saying Aye.

SPEAKERS: Aye.

MALE SPEAKER: Are there any no's?

Motion is unanimously carried.

Thank you.

MALE SPEAKER: Dean, do we need to recognize, just for the sake of housekeeping, the new directors officially or are we satisfied that the votes will be before the mediation session as well as the vote that was taken that was signed by the judge is sufficient?

MALE SPEAKER: We can officially recognize those that are at the meeting and I guess those that are not. Jim Donnelley is not on the phone.

MALE SPEAKER: I am suggesting -- Mark, do we need another vote?

MALE SPEAKER: We have looked at this-- and we also talked to Billy Austin about their opinion. And we have both concluded that the resolution that was passed at the last board meeting was very clear that the new board members were elected effective as of the date the judge entered the court order. It was felt it was a self-propelling resolution. So we believe that the five new board members became board members on July 26 when the judge entered her order.

The same thing is true with respect to the amendments to the bylaws that were passed by those same resolutions which put in the modifications to those bylaws that were mandated under the settlement agreement. As of that same date were the effective bylaws and the decision under which we are attempting to offer. There is no need to reconfirm those actions in the judgment of either.

MALE SPEAKER: Okay.

MALE SPEAKER: Okay. Thank you. We can take up the next order of business to elect a new chairman.

MALE SPEAKER: I believe that would be the correct procedure, Dean.

MR. STEBBINS: Dean, I would like to nominate Marshall Field. This is Ted.

MALE SPEAKER: I would like to second that motion.

MALE SPEAKER: Okay. Marshall Field has been nominated for the new position and it has been seconded by Arthur. We can take a vote on that.

All in favor of this motion signify by saying Aye.

SPEAKERS: Aye.

MALE SPEAKER: Are there any no's?

MALE SPEAKER: Okay, Dean. Before we take the vote let's ask if there are any other nominations for chairman. That's the protocol you would go through.

MR. BUNTROCK: Thank you. Thank you, Mark. Are there any other nominations for chairman?

MALE SPEAKER: If not, I think you can ask for the vote.

MR. BUNTROCK: Thank you, Mark.

We will take the vote for the position of chairman. Marshall Field has been nominated-- duly nominated -- and seconded. We will take a voice vote.

All in favor say Aye.
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MALE SPEAKER: Are there any no's?
That motion is carried.
Congratulations, Marshall. You are our new chairman and I will turn the meeting over to you.
MR. FIELD: Thank you, Dean. I thought I would just pick up where Dean left off and nominate some officers. And I think it would be wise to have a vice chairman and I would like to nominate Arthur Hartman to be my vice chairman if that is okay with him.
MALE SPEAKER: I would second the motion.
MALE SPEAKER: Fine with me.
MR. FIELD: Are there any discussions?
MALE SPEAKER: Second that.
MR. FIELD: And any discussion on that? I am assuming, Arthur, you are saying okay.

So let's have a vote.
All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Anyone opposed?
Okay. At the moment until we know more where we are going we have a president and vice president -- or had -- and I think we should just leave that blank for now.
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to move that, Marshall, you carry both positions until we fill the office of president. If there is any discussion I would like to hear it. Otherwise, I would like to move that you also be elected to the office of president.
MALE SPEAKER: I second that.
MALE SPEAKER: Yes.
MR. FIELD: All right. I guess it's in the bylaws so we have to do something.
MALE SPEAKER: We need to have a president, yes.
MALE SPEAKER: I think you should assume that just the way -- that you have both titles until we later fill that other position of president with a professional. You carry both titles.

MR. FIELD: All in favor.
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Anyone opposed to that?
Okay. Secretary.
MALE SPEAKER: Marshall, I would like to nominate Stephanie Marshall. Unfortunately Stephanie is not here.
MALE SPEAKER: I talked to her last night and she would accept that.
FEMALE SPEAKER: I second that.
MS. ARHWEILER: Okay. Okay.
MR. FIELD: All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Anyone opposed?
All right.
Now treasurer. And I would like to nominate Jim Donnelley for chairman if the chairman is allowed to do that.
MR. BUNTROCK: I will second that.

MR. FIELD: Any discussion on that?
I know that Jim has been talking so I would like to call a vote.
All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Any opposed?
Anybody have anything else they would like to add about the slate of officers before I move on? Okay.
Our next job is to vote for new committee heads.
MR. STEBBINS: Marshall, I would like to suggest that you be head of the executive committee. This is Ted.
MR. FIELD: All right.
MALE SPEAKER: I second that.
MR. FIELD: Any discussion?
MALE SPEAKER: Yes. Actually, if I may break in. Under the terms of the judge's order, the officers of the corporation and the committee heads of the corporation are automatically members of the executive committee.

Page 26

So with that in mind the officers that we just elected consisting of Marshall Field, Stephanie Marshall and Jim Donnelley and Arthur Hartman will be on the executive committee.
MALE SPEAKER: Right.
MALE SPEAKER: And I don't know how large -- the consideration I am raising to you -- how large your executive committee should be to be a workable group size, and that plays into, I think, to a certain extent the people that are put in as a chairperson or committee heads for various committees. I don't have any recommendations. I just wanted people to be aware of that aspect of the judge's order.
MALE SPEAKER: Is that pretty consistent?
MALE SPEAKER: I think that's right, Ron.
MALE SPEAKER: Mark, does the judge's order say anything about the chairman of the executive committee to which it should be?
MALE SPEAKER: I don't think that the judge's order says anything except we are to elect a committee head.

MALE SPEAKER: We need to elect somebody and I made a motion.
MALE SPEAKER: And I second it.
MALE SPEAKER: I believe that's correct. The resolution -- either the order nor the resolution dictates who the chair of the committee is. It has been the chairman of the board.
MALE SPEAKER: I think that's right.
MALE SPEAKER: We move that the chairman take -- MALE SPEAKER: Ted, we are trying to keep notes here. Did you move that Marshall be head of the executive committee?
MR. STEBBINS: Yes, I did.
MALE SPEAKER: And I seconded it.
MR. FIELD: All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MALE SPEAKER: Opposed?
Okay. So ordered.

Page 28

Election committee we need a chairman.
MR. GIDWITZ: I would like to nominate Ted.
MR. HARTMAN: I will second that.
MR. FIELD: Chairman of the election committee. Anybody want to second that? Ron made the nomination. Arthur Hartman seconded.
Ted, will you do it?
MR. STEBBINS: I will be glad to.
MR. FIELD: Any discussion on that?
MR. STEBBINS: I will insist on excellent new members.
MR. FIELD: I think that -- FEMALE SPEAKER: I volunteer.
MR. FIELD: I think Ted -- I will ask when this is done the chairmen talk with whoever they want and at the next meeting make their proposal of who the members will be. We can fill it out. I will try to get another meeting called not too far out because I think we have a lot of business to do. And I'm not sure where all the court proceedings are, but until the court's final adjudication I believe we should run it as the present judge ordered. So if I can I will assist as chairman and then you will have to figure out what to do.

I will call a vote on Ted.
All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: All right.
Next is the education committee. Currently Maggie Daley was the chairman.
FEMALE SPEAKER: I think --
MALE SPEAKER: I can't hear you.
MS. DALEY: I was thinking about this. And we have a number of people who I know do a remarkable job, but I would suggest and I would like to nominate Bob Hamada. Bob has resigned from being the dean of the graduate school in Chicago and he has done a remarkable job, and I think he has a lot of time to give to this. Which I think this is what this chairmanship needs so I would like to nominate Bob.
MR. STEBBINS: This is Ted. It's a question whether he would have time to do -- do you think he has time to chair two committees?

MALE SPEAKER: I don't think he is a chairman.
MALE SPEAKER: I was going to nominate him as chair of the strategic planning committee. So it's a preliminary -- but I would like to ask whether you think he has time for both.
MS. DALEY: Well, I'm not sure about that. But I think one of the things we have all been talking about is thinking out of the box on this committee, and I think because of his experience in education he will come into it with a national and international thinking about the possibilities and bringing that to us. So I think it's -- he would be good.
MALE SPEAKER: I think he would be excellent, but we have other educators but I'm not sure if we have another strategic planner of his ability and experience.
MS. DALEY: I think we do.
MALE SPEAKER: I think if you want to go that route why don't we put it off? We will discuss the strategic planning committee and see where that comes back, and depending on that, we will choose on the education committee last.

MALE SPEAKER: Okay. Perfect.
MALE SPEAKER: Maggie, you may want to withdraw your motion and make it later.
MS. DALEY: All right. I withdraw.
MALE SPEAKER: Maggie has withdrawn the motion.
Marshall, you will step down?
MALE SPEAKER: I will step down from the finance and investment committee.
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to nominate Jim Donnelley.
MR. BUNTROCK: I will second that. This is Dean Buntrock.
MR. FIELD: All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Opposed?
Okay. So ordered.
Strategic planning committee

nominations. Anyone have a statement?
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to nominate Fred. You had a nomination for Bob Hamada.
MR. FIELD: Is there any -- Fred Krehbiel and Bob Hamada. Is there any discussion on this?
MR. KREHBIEL: This is Fred Krehbiel. I think Bob Hamada would be terrific. He is not there or Jim or Stephanie. He is treasurer. He should do it. I am kidding.
MR. FIELD: Fred, are you saying you would like to see Bob do it?
MR. KREHBIEL: Maggie, you were very nice to think of me, but I think Bob would be terrific.
MR. FIELD: All right. It appears we have one candidate and we need to have the second on Bob Hamada.
MALE SPEAKER: I second.
MR. FIELD: All in favor?
MALE SPEAKER: Who said second?

Page 33

MR. KREHBIEL: Fred Krehbiel.
MALE SPEAKER: Maggie, do you want to withdraw your nomination for Fred?
MS. DALEY: Sure.
MALE SPEAKER: All in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: No opposition. All right. All right.
Now the question is we have down here -- excuse me. I forgot education. Bob is now running strategic planning.
MALE SPEAKER: Would Maggie agree to continue to do that temporarily to give it some continuity?
MS. DALEY: I would rather not. I think that what I would do is I will certainly help whoever and do what I can.
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to nominate Stephanie Marshall then for education committee.
Do you think she is willing to do it?
MALE SPEAKER: I do.

Page 34

MALE SPEAKER: Okay. I will second that.
MALE SPEAKER: I will second that. I think that's good.
MR. FIELD: All right. Then I will -- does anyone else have anything else they want to add? I will ask for all in favor?
SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: Anyone opposed to that?
Okay. On the agenda I was given is for additional directors on the committee.
MALE SPEAKER: That was an item new directors.
MALE SPEAKER: Marshall, why don't we suggest putting that off and give us an opportunity to express the various committee heads.
MR. FIELD: That will be greet.
MALE SPEAKER: Do you want to move that?
MALE SPEAKER: Second.
MR. FIELD: All in favor?

SPEAKERS: Aye.
MR. FIELD: And, again, as I say, we are going to try to have another meeting in less than a month some time in August. Depending on what is going on.
MALE SPEAKER: Marshall, I know that it has been our past practice to have one meeting a year in Giverny, and you might want to give that some thought possibly for some subsequent meeting.
MR. FIELD: What I would like to do at a subsequent meeting -- I think it's a great idea. In keeping with the conversations I heard I don't think anyone at the moment is for killing Giverny. I would like to get a couple of meetings under our belt and get the final court business out of the way so when we go to France we are either with Paul's group, but we are not all in limbo. So I have that in mind. And my goal would be to have one meeting a year in Giverny, but I'm not sure we want to do it right off.

MALE SPEAKER: That sounds very wise.
MALE SPEAKER: I think you should just get the staff to kind of find out when people are free so we can get tentative dates for that.
MR. FIELD: I will do that. I think what we have to do on that is to -- I think I will ask you to call around.
The other thing I want to bring up today -- because I am uncomfortable with it myself -- at least it is my understanding that the board here is paid a salary. And there may be some people -- call it what you want. There may be some people who feel they really need that. I would like between now and the next meeting to put that stipend on hold and have a discussion on it at our next meeting, but I know-- I for one don't want anything. I do think that we should probably pay people's direct expenses if it is things like flying to France, but I would like a discussion on the whole subject if that's all right with this group.
MALE SPEAKER: Fine with me.

MR. FIELD: During the next week or two if people have issues they would like to get on the agenda I think we should just tell him.
MALE SPEAKER: Marshall, do we need to have -- you elected all the officers that would include an assistant treasurer and an assistant secretary.
MALE SPEAKER: Ron, I think you need an assistant secretary to help out.
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to make a motion that we appoint Don rather. Don, you are assistant treasurer?
MALE SPEAKER: No, I am not.
MALE SPEAKER: Ron, we didn't specifically unelect Don, but if you want to re-elect him.
MALE SPEAKER: I thought we elected the officers.
MALE SPEAKER: Only the specific ones on the agenda that were by name -- the board member officers -- but if you want to do that also that's fine.

MR. FIELD: I think it is worth doing to show our support because of everything I hear he is doing a good job. I would be happy to keep him.

MALE SPEAKER: I will second.

MR. FIELD: All in favor?

SPEAKERS: Aye.

MALE SPEAKER: My only concern if someone checks is that we have somebody from the auditors in terms of a check and balance, so to speak, so you get with Mark to make sure we are protected.

MALE SPEAKER: They already looked at that.

MALE SPEAKER: I, for one, don't know what the system is for the moment. I would like to suggest we have the attorneys work with you to make sure we have an approved auditor to make sure that we have the appropriate checks and balances.

MALE SPEAKER: We have a letter which Stephanie has with -- at the media review and the company changed that and said they were comfortable with the checks and balances.

MALE SPEAKER: That's fine. I want to make sure that's consistent. That's all.

MALE SPEAKER: Mr. Chairman, did we elect a treasurer? Was Jim Donnelley elected treasurer?

MALE SPEAKER: Yes, he was.

MALE SPEAKER: As I understand, the motion that was made was to re-elect Don as assistant secretary. We have done that. The motion, as I understand it, was not to elect him to the additional position of the assistant treasurer. What I would like to do -- based on your comments -- is sit down with Don -- and if you recall at a prior meeting, I believe it was perhaps in the finance committee, the question of the appropriateness of having the finance administrative head also be the assistant treasurer was put to the auditors and they have responded to that. I would like to see their response about who should be assistant treasurer.

MALE SPEAKER: That sounds fine. If we finish discussing this one.

MS. MARSHALL: Good morning. This is Stephanie. I am just joining the call.

MR. FIELD: It's Marshall Field. We elected new officers. You will be glad to know.

MS. MARSHALL: All right.

MR. FIELD: And Stephanie --

MALE SPEAKER: You were elected secretary and chairman of the education committee.

MS. MARSHALL: All right. I will accept both of those. Thank you.

MALE SPEAKER: Ron moved and Maggie seconded your election as secretary. And Dean moved and Ted seconded that. It was both unanimous in the election for you to be head of the election committee as well.

MALE SPEAKER: Why don't you run through the other positions?

MALE SPEAKER: Stephanie, I should also tell you, Stephanie, that at the beginning of the meeting Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Tucker, who is in the room with us, attended the meeting for the purpose of objecting to the meeting. And did not participate after that. Alan hung up. Judith and Paul are on the phone.

In addition to them we have with us Marshall Field, Maggie Daley, Arthur Hartman, Fred Krehbiel, Kathy Forster, Ted Stebbins, Dean Buntrock, Helene Arhweiler and Ronald Gidwitz.

MS. MARSHALL: Good morning everybody.

MALE SPEAKER: As far as the officers' slate was concerned, Marshall Field was elected to the post of chairman. Arthur Hartman was elected vice chairman. Marshall Field was elected to serve as the president. You were elected secretary, and Jim Donnelley elected treasurer.

Moving to the committee heads, Marshall was elected chairman of the executive committee.

Ted Stebbins was elected the committee head for the elections committee.

Donnelley was elected to head the finance committee.
Bob Hamada to head the strategic committee.
And you were elected to chair the -- or head the education committee.
MS. MARSHALL: Okay. Thank you.
MALE SPEAKER: You are now up to speed. We are talking about planning for the --
MR. HARTMAN: Before we get to the plans, I would like to raise the question of giving some support from this board for the work that Elizabeth Glassman has been doing in holding things together in this difficult period. I don't think any of us are ready to say what we want to do in a permanent way, but I think she deserves the support to be able to carry that support to the staff in both museums from us as a new board.
MALE SPEAKER: I couldn't agree more, Arthur, and I hope Marshall will at his first duty sit down with Don to express our support.

And sit down with Elizabeth because she has done an -- as far as I can tell -- a superb job. And is a very good people person, and a good art person and is doing a good job keeping the thing together. They need a sense of continuity.
MR. FIELD: I am hoping -- this is Marshall. I am hoping to call and get a half a day or something with everyone. So we will do that the first opportunity.
MALE SPEAKER: Good.
MR. FIELD: And then I can assume, Arthur, you would like the minutes to show that we said that she is doing a great job and we have no intention of changing the role in the foreseeable future.
MR. HARTMAN: I think that we need -- all of that has to be thought through, but I think it's important to give support for what she has been doing and hope that she will carry on.
MR. FIELD: I do, too, but I would like to show it in the minutes.
FEMALE SPEAKER: I want to add another thank you to Paul for you bringing Elizabeth to us. I know you looked for someone to head both museums during this period and I think she is there because you asked her to be here. I just want to thank you for that.

MALE SPEAKER: Thank you, Stephanie.
MR. FIELD: If we can let's have minutes to show that, too.
MS. MARSHALL: That would be very nice, Marshall.
MR. FIELD: I have other issues I want to aim for at the next meeting. That is -- I think we have to sign off on a budget. And since this meeting already started it seems the sooner the better. And Don said he can have that ready. So that will be an item. If it's readily available I ask we send it out to everybody.
The second thing I would like to put on that meeting is a review and discussion of the mission and with that I am out of gas. I think if we can look at those things in the meeting -- we may not solve them all right away.

MALE SPEAKER: The mission will be a short discussion, Marshall.
MR. FIELD: Anyone with anything else to add to that get a hold of Don. He can talk to me and I will be more than happy.
Does anyone else have anything else they would like to bring up?
MALE SPEAKER: I would like to express our appreciation for you taking on the task.
MR. FIELD: I am looking forward to it. I majored in American Art. History of American Art. So here is a great chance to use it. And I was an admirer of what Dan did and this collection will be a fabulous treasure for Chicago. I am honored to have this.
MALE SPEAKER: Great. I make a motion to adjourn.
MR. FIELD: One question as Don suggested. Is there a time of day that is better for everybody? Do people like mornings or afternoon or lunch hour? What have you been doing?

MALE SPEAKER: If it's in the next little while I prefer morning since I will be in France.

MR. FIELD: All right. That will make a difference.

FEMALE SPEAKER: I think it would be helpful, Marshall, when you start working with staff -- my assumption is that within the year the board will meet in Giverny because I agree with you wholeheartedly that this is a wonderful treasure for Chicago and a wonderful opportunity for the Terra Foundation in its international vision. And I think the way that it can be exemplified in some way is for this new board to be physically present in Giverny to hear the impact of the Terra Foundation internationally as well as within Illinois and Chicago. So I hope at some point we will schedule a board meeting in France.

MR. FIELD: The answer is yes. I am hopeful we will have one a year -- a meeting in France -- because it will be one of the most important things. You don't want to have the next meeting now --

FEMALE SPEAKER: I agree.

MR. FIELD: -- until we have our feet under us. And I would like to know as soon as possible where the legal matters are so people aren't looking around saying what is going on? I think we have to wait for the dust to settle. The eye is on the agenda.

MALE SPEAKER: I want to ask the question. We had quarterly board meetings and they lasted a day. A whole day. Is that what you will tender? We do it in France, but I would like everyone on the phone.

MR. FIELD: I like to do the meetings in person. Whether we need a whole day I think that has to be reviewed between Don and myself, and any of the officers who want to get things in and let's see what is the most effective thing. All right.

Unless anyone else has anything they want to add.

MS. MARSHALL: I have a question on the committees. Did the member stay intact or did we add some folks? I apologize for not being on the call earlier.

MR. FIELD: What I imagine between now and the next meeting is that every chair think through who they would like and bring that with them to the next meeting.

FEMALE SPEAKER: Okay. Thank you.

MR. FIELD: Anyone want to bring up anything else? You have anything else?

Meeting adjourned.

(Whereupon, the meeting was adjourned at 11:31 a.m.)

TERRA MUSUEM OF AMERICAN ART

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING

April 25, 1990

By Daniel J. Terra

While this is an Annual Meeting of the Board of Terra Museum of American Art, it is my suggestion that, in addition to recent analyses, we try to assess the present circumstances in relation to the full period of the existence of the Museum, now ending its 10th year; seven of those years the Museum was in Evanston and the last three years in Chicago.

Before doing this, in order to acquaint Directors with as much historical perspective as possible, I would like to present events which eventually led to the opening of the Museum in Evanston, going back to the earliest collecting periods of Daniel and Adeline Terra.

The first phase covers the period when Daniel and Adeline were independent collectors. The first painting, an English landscape by Benjamin Leader, was purchased in May 1937 at Marshall Fields for $35.00. We were engaged at that time and were buying pieces of furniture for an apartment where we would live after our marriage which took place August 7, 1937. Adeline was an Art History Major at Northwestern University, then attended the Art Institute and had one of the finest "eyes for fine art" I have known.

made it possible to acquire many of the fine masterpieces which are now in the collection. The funding of these acquisitions really was made possible because our means was improving rapidly because Lawter was doing well as a public Company and I personally sold stock of Lawter through five underwritings at multiples of 23 to 55 times earnings. These registrations were successful because of the guidance of two marvelously professional investment bankers. The first three were done by Winfield Ellis and the next two by Ronald Melvin, both with the then named firm - Blunt, Ellis & Simmons.

By 1975, we had accumulated quite a good collection of American paintings which since their acquisition had risen in value far more than we could have imagined. These paintings were not bought for profit but merely because we liked them. At this point, it was suggested by counsel that we examine our estates which were growing but losing liquidity. It was estimated that the worth of the paintings had become a very large portion of DJT's and to some degree ART's estate, as well.

This led us to examine the concept of orderly giving works of art to museums of American art or to colleges with American art collections, all located along the Eastern Seaboard. All of the American paintings were in DJT's estate and all the English paintings were in ART's estate. The thought was to start an orderly disposition of the paintings to the artistically logical recipients during our life time. During this time, there were twenty odd small musuems of American art, part of liberal arts colleges, along the East Coast and the two major American Museums, also on the East Coast, the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia and the Whitney Museum in New York.

this day, it was probably the only time, (I believe we have photos of this incident) that people were scalping tickets for an art lecture. Later, the following year, we had to move into much larger Northwestern quarters and at a peak meeting, we had 2,100 people come to hear Tom Armstrong, Director of the Whitney Museum which was, and still is, the ranking musuem of American art in the nation. The success of these jointly sponsored symposia continued to be successful until 1983 when the Administration at Northwestern was critized by faculty groups for a wide variety of projects, one of which was the arrangement the University had with the Museum. President Strotz had no choice but to bow out of the arrangement and from then on, it was not the same, although the meetings still drew 500 to 700 people, far more than any art lectures in the country. By 1984, despite a difficult location in Northwest Evanston, attendance and financial support was making headway and we were encouraged that interest in historical American art was growing in the Chicago Area and in the Middle West in general.

When thinking of a Chicago location, it was decided that North Michigan Avenue would be our best for visibility and attendance. The first property, the Southwest corner of Michigan and Erie, was acquired in late 1984 and the other three properties in the next block were acquired in 1985. As you all know, the original Southwest corner of Erie and Michigan was sold in 1988 to both raise cash and because a careful study had revealed that it could not be used in the future as part of the Museum because it was not in the same block as the other three properties. Further, the three properties in the same block, which were then and are still owned by the Museum, were considered to be adequate for any future needs of the Museum.

An important part of the total picture that I believe Directors should be acquainted with is my own personal circumstances and I will try to outline, in general terms, an analysis of current worth.

My present Will calls for a total of approximately $50 million of the total for my wife, son and grandson and other non-museum philanthropic projects. Based on values outlined above, the Museum would get the Daniel J. Terra collection and the remainder of the liquid portion less the $50 million outlined above.

Now that the Museum has been in existance at both locations for ten years, it seems to be a good time to take stock of the future prospects for this institution. The first item that seems bothersome is the amount of money that is tied up in this institution be it while I am alive or at my demise. If one were to assume that the Museum would have 60,000 visitors next year, the assets utilized would be in excess of$5,000 per visitor in fiscal 1991. Another factor with which we should be familiar is that the two major Museums of American Art, namely the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York with a budget of approximately $16 million, and the Pennsylvania Academy of Philadelphia (the oldest Museum of American Art, 1805) with a budget of about $11 million, are both having trouble making ends meet. The Whitney is running deficits three out of four years and has, for the past four years, had much publicized trouble raising funds for a needed addition at Madison Avenue. At the Pennsylvania

The questions seems to me that in light of this 6-year record and based upon ten years of experience, is this, a good time to re-examine our goals and what, if any, might be alternative options.

These options come to mind.

Option #1: We could embark upon a campaign to raise a certain amount of money, perhaps $20 million for an endowment. This might be very difficult, particularly since there is not yet a well established constituency, and the hostility of the press has not helped our chances to achieve such a goal.

Option #2: We could deaccession one or several of the important paintings owned by the Museum. The Mary Cassatt oil, "Summertime", is being considered at a net price to the Museum of $10 to $15 million. This is a decision that should probably be considered at this meeting. The deal would be private and we would try to avoid adverse publicity. Incidentally, the proceeds, if this could be consummated, would be 50% of the total amount paid by the Museum for the fifty-nine paintings now owned by the Museum. We have not made a commitment to sell this painting, but it should be noted that an important expert, Warren Adelson, thinks it would bring a price in this range.

Option #6: Close the North Michigan Avenue Museum, sell the real estate and use the foundation with assets in the $70 million range (assumes that paintings owned by the Museum would be retained) for undergraduate scholarships and graduate fellowships for American Art, help fund much needed archives of American art, and support national and international exhibitions of American art.

All these options should be considered in the context of future receipt of $20 to $50 million from DJT's estate.

Now, we would like to take up the subject of the French Project at Giverny, near Vernon.

This village is 50 miles from Paris and is one hour away by train, bus or car. It is the home of the now restored Monet Garden and his home converted to a Museum and the three ateliers which Monet built in the 39 years he lived and worked at Giverny. He was there from 1887 until he died in 1926.

The Monet complex was restored by Gerard and Florence VanderKamp, who had previously restored Versailles. American money was used in both cases. The Monet restoration was completed in 1983 at a cost of $21 million.

It is open from April 1st to October 31st (seven months) and last year drew 310,000 visitors from over one hundred countries around the world. This year, it is expected to draw in excess of 350,000 visitors or 50,000 per month.

The project was rejected for lack of parking, so the Museum later bought three acres of land across the street (some historians have written that Monet did his 30 grain stack pictures in 1891 on this, now our Museum site. The Museum's present total investment in Giverny is $1,100,000.

In the three and one-half years since the purchase of the Perry property, we have had to combat one road block after another, until a new mayor, more sympathetic to the project, was elected. The Council of Giverny and the Mayor approved the project finally in December, 1989. The Department approved it in February, sent it to Paris, and it was there approved a few days later by Jacque Lang, the Minister of Culture under Mitterand. Lang was reappointed in 1988 after losing out two years earlier. It is known that both Mitterand and Lang are quite enthusiastic about this project. They have both been there, as has Barbara Bush, who is also enthusiastic about the project, and who would like to come and help dedicate the finished product as she did the Museum on North Michigan. President Reagan and President Bush also know of the project.

DJT is slated to have meetings during May 2nd to May 6th with the French architect, Philippe Robert, who has developed a plan very much to everyone's liking. The building nestles into the hill, is half underground and is surrounded by shubbery and flowers as is the entire roof of the building. From a helicopter, it will seem as another beautiful Giverny garden.

I would like to show you some of the plans and drawings of this little masterpiece of a building.

Terra Foundation
Strategic Planning Committee
Minutes
August 7, 2000

In attendance:
Mr. Dean Bumrock
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall
Dr. Paul Tucker

By Phone: Mr. Ron Gidwitz, Chair
Mrs. Margaret Daley
Dr. Theodore Stebbins
Mrs. Judith Terra

Staff: Mr. Donald Ratner

By Invitation:
Mr. Mark Heatwole
Mr. Ralph Lerner
Dr. John Neff

The meeting was called to order at 10:10 AM on August 7, 2000. Mr. Ratner is to send out to each Board member the four proposals we received. These include:

- The Art Institute of Chicago
- The Corcoran
- Museum of Fine Arts (MFA) in Boston
- National Gallery

Dr. Tucker indicated that the purchase of today's meeting was therefore:

- To make sure we are all conceptually on the same page
- To move us along on the matrix/criteria for making decisions
- To have a construct within which to make decisions

Dr. Tucker revisited prior discussions with the Strategic Planning Committee and discussed the following:

- The cost of maintaining the Chicago museum
- The assets of the Chicago museum
- The importance of Giverny as central to the Foundation's educational mission.
- The need for an alliance because the lack of depth of the collection would not support two museums

TFA SP 01596
CONFIDENTIAL

- Showcasing Giverny

Mr. Hearwole suggested that the Board needs to be consistent and have a clear vision statement of what they want the Foundation to be. He then asked what the assets of the Foundation were.

Dr. Tucker responded that the assets included the following:

- Good Collection
- Significant financial assets not related to the collection
- Real Estate
- Board connectiveness and Board intelligence
- Excellent staff

Dr. Stebbins noted that if we decided to concentrate on only one of our museum locations, we do have an adequate collection and have adequate financial assets.

Dr. Tucker replied that he wouldn't want Giverny to be isolated and, therefore, since Giverny is the center focus, we needed a partner to help to Giverny.

Discussion then arose about where the center of education should be set; whether it should be in Giverny or in the U.S.

Dr. Marshall noted that aligning with an art museum does not negate aligning with an educational institution in addition.

Dr. Tucker restated that Giverny is central, that we can not stand alone with our collection, that we need to be part of an alliance for institutional stature, and therefore, the Foundation needs to be is a partnership to achieve this. He also indicated that we want Giverny to be "an arts center". Dr. Tucker suggested that we need an analysis of costs of "small learning centers". He asked that we do a comparative cost study with other centers including The American Academy, Yaddo, and Skowhegan. He envisions that we would have a learning center for approximately ten people at one time. He than asked if such a learning center plus our exhibits might maximize the propagation of American art.

Mrs. Daley indicated we need to stop reacting and need to decide at the September meeting which direction to go. Mr. Gidwitz reiterated that the purpose of our focus was to propagate American Art through leveraging of the collection.

Dr. Marshall suggested we need to hone down our decision categories and decide what would be the "non negotiables".

TFA SP 01598
CONFIDENTIAL

- Collection should stay as a collection
- The arrangement will probably have to be revenue neutral for both institutions

Dr. Marshall indicated that we needed to move into the detail and the criteria.

Mr. Ratner was then given the assignment of gathering the detail information for the proposing museums. Mr. Lerner reiterated that we were not going to be stand alone in Chicago, that we need to support American art and that we want to support Giverny. Dr. Tucker indicated that he would send out the conclusions that appeared to be drawn from this meeting with the four proposals and the relevant material.

A poll was then taken of the members as to whether we should be a stand-alone museum in Chicago. All voted no except for Mr. Dean Bumrock who said we should be stand alone in Chicago.

The next step will be that Mr. Ratner will send out the packages to the entire Board of the proposals and criteria as well as the data collected from the four museums. Mr. Lerner will put a draft together of a "proposed contract". Dr. Tucker should be in touch with all four "suitors" to keep the door open and will tell Philadelphia that we are not interested.

Mr. Bumrock indicated that we need to focus on our educational needs.

In September after a full day of a Strategic Planning meeting, we hope to present a preferred institution. At that time, we hope that they will be able to make a Board decision to authorize Dr. Tucker to negotiate.

We'll schedule one more meeting of this committee before September and at that time all members of the Board will be invited to participate. Dr. Marshall suggested that we call this a regular Board meeting with one agenda item.

The meeting was adjourned at 2:00pm.

Respectively submitted,

VERIFIED COMPLAINT
FOR DECLARATORY, INJUNCTIVE AND OTHER RELIEF

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock ("Buntrock") and Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), Directors of Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, for their Complaint against the Defendants, state as follows:

Nature of this Action

1 This is an action for declaratory, injunctive and other relief seeking to enjoin defendants' illegal and wasteful conduct in connection with the management and operations of Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation ("Terra Foundation").

2 In this action Plaintiffs seek to enjoin defendants from (1) holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws; (2) taking any action

8 Defendant Naftali Michaeli ("Mr. Michaeli") is an Israeli citizen and a resident of Washington, D.C. Mr. Michaeli is a close personal friend of Judith Terra, and has no official position with Terra Foundation.

9 Defendant Terra Foundation is an Illinois not-for-profit charitable corporation established in 1978 by Daniel J. Terra (deceased) ("Dan Terra") to preserve and exhibit collections of American Art, to expand the artistic horizons of the Illinois art public through educational programs, and to operate museums in Chicago and France.

10 Because of Dan Terra's extraordinarily generous gifts to Terra Foundation in his lifetime, and his bequest to Terra Foundation of most of his estate, Terra Foundation's assets now total approximately $450 million, including investments, real estate, and a priceless collection of American art.

11 Terra Foundation owns and operates the Terra Museum of American Art (the "Terra Museum") located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

12 Terra Foundation currently has eleven directors, the maximum number allowed under the by-laws of Terra Foundation. The Board includes Margaret Daley, a well-known benefactor of education and the arts and the wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley, and Arthur A. Hartman, the former United States Ambassador to France. The Board also includes Helene Ahrweiler, Jacques Andreani, Stephanie Marshall and Theodore Stebbins. Catherine A. Stevens, the wife of United States Senator Ted Stevens, was the Executive Director of Terra Foundation from August of 1996 through April, 2000 until terminated by Tucker.

16 In the early 1990s, Terra Foundation constructed and developed the Musee d'Art Americain Giverny ("Giverny Museum"), an art museum in Giverny, France dedicated to the exhibition of American art and American art education.

17 Primarily because of Dan Terra's gifts and bequests, the value of Terra Foundation has grown substantially since its creation. Currently, Terra Foundation holds net assets worth approximately $450 million. The value of the art alone located at the Terra Museum in Chicago exceeds $100 million, with the overall value of Terra's Foundation's art collection exceeding $173 million.

18 Pursuant to its by-laws, the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation is required to hold an annual meeting during the month of September of each year for the purpose of electing directors and officers and for the transacting of other business. If the election of the directors and officers is not held at such meeting, the Board of Directors may cause the election to be held at a meeting of the Board of Directors as soon thereafter as may be convenient. The Board of Directors may only elect officers and directors by a majority vote.

19 In periods of time between the quarterly Board of Director Meetings, the by-laws provide that as Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has the authority to take action on behalf of Terra Foundation, except on specific issues delegated to the Board of Directors pursuant to the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. Since October, 1999, Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has consisted of plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, defendants Edith Terra and Mr. Tucker, and director Stephanie Marshall.

Dan Terra's Dedication To Chicago

23 On information and belief, after Judith Terra became a member of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation, she suggested to Dan Terra that the Terra Museum be closed and Terra Foundation be moved out of Chicago. This was never done during Dan Terra's lifetime.

Terra's Death And The Will Contest

24 On June 28, 1996, Dan Terra died after suffering a stroke. As the sole residuary beneficiary under his will, Terra Foundation was to receive $125 million.

25 As the first step in a plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra immediately attempted to transfer Dan Terra's probate proceedings from the Circuit Court of Cook County to Washington, D.C. After a five-day trial, the Chief Judge of the Probate Division denied the motion to transfer, finding that the motion was without merit in law or fact.

26 Judith Terra next embarked on a scheme to seize tens of millions of dollars that Dan Terra intended for Terra Foundation.

27 Under the prenuptial agreement between Dan Terra and Judith Terra, Judith Terra was to receive $4.5 million in cash plus approximately $2.6 million in other assets, for a total of $7.1 million.

28 Contrary to her promise in the prenuptial agreement, after Dan's death, Judith Terra immediately filed an action challenging the prenuptial agreement and contesting Dan Terra's will. Judith Terra sought for herself $43 million of the $125 million bequest to Terra Foundation.

29 Judith Terra's attempt to seize $43 million of Dan Terra's bequest to Terra Foundation put her in irreconcilable conflict with the interests of Terra Foundation and, therefore, with the people of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust created by Dan

Washington, D.C., she would be able to establish herself in Washington, D.C. as a large benefactor of the arts, thereby placing herself in the elite social circles of Washington, D.C.

33 To accomplish her scheme of seizing control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra began stacking Terra Foundation's Board with persons loyal to her alone. For example, Judith Terra recommended and sought the election of her friend Sen. Simpson to the Board. Sen. Simpson became a director in mid-1999. At his first Board of Directors meeting in October 1999, Sen. Simpson announced to the Board that his purpose for being on Terra Foundation's Board of Directors was "to protect Mrs. Terra's interests."

34 Prior to October 1999, Judith Terra orchestrated a plan to replace Arthur Hartman as Terra Foundation's president and chairman with her loyalist, Mr. Tucker. Although Terra Foundation had been searching for a new president for more than two years from outside the Board of Directors, Judith Terra and her new allies on the Board replaced Arthur Hartman as president and chairman with Mr. Tucker. As was later discovered, the decision to place Mr. Tucker in the position of president and chairman was made to further Judith Terra's attempt to gain control of Terra Foundation and to further her own agenda contrary to the mission and intent of Dan Terra in creating Terra Foundation.

35 Mr. Tucker and Judith Terra further entrenched their power through the hiring of Donald Ratner and the unauthorized expansion of his authority within Terra Foundation. Mr. Ratner was originally retained as a consultant to the Foundation on an interim basis. During the January 25, 2000 meeting of the Board of Directors a motion was made to give Mr. Ratner the title of vice president of finance and administration. The Board members present at the meeting voted in favor of the motion. However, because not all Board Members were present, the motion was made subject recognizing that it would be contrary to its duties and obligations as special counsel to Terra Foundation and its directors. In resigning its position as special counsel to Terra Foundation, Mayer, Brown & Platt stated in a letter to Mr. Tucker:

> In our original engagement letter of December 11, 1996, sent by Ms. Ahrweiler and ourselves, the Foundation requested that we act as special counsel to the Foundation. It was clear that the client was the foundation, not merely its President and Chairman. That letter also made clear that we were to provide legal advice and representation to the Board of the Foundation. As special counsel, we have worked with three different Chairmen, a number of board members, staff and counsel. We owe professional obligations to the institution and all of its directors. It would not be consistent with our professional obligations to decline to respond to the concerns of directors.

39 In furtherance of her plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson have ignored the requirements of Terra Foundation's by-laws regarding management of Terra Foundation. Article III, Section 11 of the by-laws provides that the executive committee is to operate Terra Foundation between the quarterly Board of Director meetings. (See By-laws of Terra Foundation, attached hereto as Exhibit 5, at Article IV, Section 9). With few exceptions relating to bringing in new counsel for Terra Foundation, issues were not brought before the executive committee. By not having meetings of the executive committee, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson were able to control the operations of Terra Foundation for their own benefit, contrary to the provisions of the by-laws.

40 Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson have also consulted with and taken advice from Mr. Michaeli. Mr. Michaeli has been making decisions for Terra Foundation even though he is not an officer or director of Terra Foundation, or even an employee. Mr. Michaeli's only connection to Terra Museum is his relationship with Judith Terra.

h. Misusing the art collection of Terra Foundation for Judith Terra's own personal use and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy; and

i. Allowing Mr. Michaeli to participate the management, control and operation of Terra Foundation and Terra Museum.

43 Members of the Board of Directors have repeatedly questioned the manner in which Mr. Tucker, Judith Terra and Sen. Simpson have been operating Terra Foundation in the past year. For example, on March 2, 2000, Margaret Daley wrote to John Neff, Director of Terra Museum, regarding the significant problem occurring at Terra Museum as a result of the high turnover of key employees. Specifically, Mrs. Daley stated:

> Having just returned from out of town, I am disheartened about the news concerning Ginny Spindler. John, Ginny worked tirelessly on the School Resource Guide. I was very impressed with her work and Rachel's as well. In fact, without their herculean efforts, it would not have been a worthwhile publication. In fact, it would have been an embarrassment to the Foundation. Your letter to Ginny was, from my point of view, unkind and uncalled for. It distressed me to see people treated in such a manner. In my working with her on education issues, I believe she has always gone "above and beyond" her duties .... I couldn't leave without letting you and the Board know my feelings and deep concerns.

44 Other members of the Board of Directors, including Buntrock, as well employees of both Terra Foundation and Terra Museum have repeatedly and vigorously challenged the manner and lack of direction in which Terra Foundation has been operated and managed under the direction of Mr. Tucker. (See Arthur A. Hartman letter dated November 7, 1999, attached hereto as Exhibit 7).

45 On information and belief, the pattern of mismanagement and waste occurring at Terra Museum is a conscious effort on the part of Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to cause the failure of Terra Museum in Chicago to justify closing Terra Museum in Chicago and continued operation of the museum in Chicago. Mr. Tucker went to state clearly and unambiguously, > the best way to maximize our resources and fulfill our mission is to align with another institution, close the Chicago museum and focus on Giverny and educational initiatives of the Foundation.

(Emphasis added) (See Minutes of August 24, 2000 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit 8, p. 2). In fact, many of the "problems" with the Chicago museum were of the defendants' own making.

49 Buntrock objected to Mr. Tucker's improper interpretation of the mission of Terra Foundation and stated that the closing of Terra Museum in Chicago had never been discussed or considered by the full Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker agreed that this critical issue had never been discussed by the full Board of Directors, but stated that a decision had already been reached to close Terra Museum in Chicago. According to Mr. Tucker, the Strategic Planning Committee was prepared to make a recommendation on this issue to the Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker stated that the Board of directors "definitely" must make a decision on the closing of the Chicago museum during the annual Board of Directors meeting in September 2000.

50 In conjunction with their overall plan, Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker have attempted to create the impression that Terra Museum in Chicago needs to be abandoned as a mission of Terra Foundation.

Defendants' Plan To Remove Buntrock From Board Of Directors To Further Their Goals

51 Notice was mailed to the directors informing them that the annual Board of Directors meeting of Terra Foundation was scheduled for Tuesday, September 26, 2000 in France. Although various events and committee meetings were scheduled to occur between September 23, 2000 and

55 Defendants' attempt to hold the elections for directors and/or officers at a Special Meeting of the Board of Directors on September 24, 2000, is violative of the by-laws of Terra Foundation for at least two reasons. First, Ratner does not have the authority to provide notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors as he is not the secretary of Terra Foundation, nor is he even a duly elected officer or director. Pursuant to the by-laws of Terra Foundation, only the secretary of Terra Foundation is empowered to provide notices required under the by-laws. (Exhibit 5, Article IV, Section 9). Any attempt by Ratner to send notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors constitutes an ultra vires act.

56 Second, under the by-laws an election of the officers and directors may occur only at one of two occasions. First, the election may take place at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors. Second, if the election is not held at the scheduled annual meeting, a special meeting may be held subsequent to the annual meeting. (Id. at Article III, Section 3). The by-laws provide no authority for the holding of elections of officers or directors prior to the scheduled annual meeting. For this additional reason, defendants' attempt to hold the elections of directors and officers at the improperly noticed meeting on September 24, 2000 constitutes and ultra vires act, as well as a clear breach of their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois.

57 Without relief from this Court, defendants will carry out their improper plan to ensure that Buntrock does not remain as a director and officer, to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and

63 As directors of Terra Foundation, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, as well as many others, have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the goals and mission started over twenty years ago by Terra.

64 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to protect Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement caused by defendants.

65 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to see that Terra Foundation continues to carry out the mission for which it was started for the benefit of the people of Illinois.

66 By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois to protect the charitable assets of Terra Foundation and to act in their interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Terra more than twenty years ago.

67 Notwithstanding their fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois to further the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker used their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation to intentionally mismanage Terra Museum in Chicago to further their own self interests in closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C.

68 The foregoing improper conduct of Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker has caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, and irreparable harm to the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the public trust established for Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

69 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

72 The above acts and conduct of defendants have been taken without lawful authority, capacity, or power and will continue unless enjoined.

73 Section 103.15 of the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986 allows this Court to enjoin defendants' unlawful acts.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation.

B. The appointment of a receiver to operate and maintain Terra Foundation pursuant to the Court's equitable powers and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

C. An accounting of all assets of the Terra Museum and Terra Foundation.

D. For such additional relief as the Court deems fair and just.

future of Terra Foundation and the continued viability of Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

78 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created Terra Foundation for the benefit of the people of Illinois on or before December 13, 1978;

(2) The intent of Terra in creating Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois;

(3) Defendants have no authority to close Terra Museum in Chicago or transfer the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois would violate the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

(5) Defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker have breached their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation if defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties;

(7) Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duties by seeking to defeat Mr. Buntrock's re-election as director in order to further their own agenda;

(8) The letter sent by Ratner to the members of the Board of Directors dated September 15, 2000 is a nullity and does not comply with the by-laws of Terra Foundation for scheduling a meeting of the Board of Directors for the election of directors and/or officers.

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer or re-establish the museum to Washington, D.C. or some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to defeat Buntrock's re-election as director to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois;

d. Attempting to improperly reschedule the vote for the election of directors to ensure that defendants have enough votes to defeat Buntrock's nomination and therefore further their personal agenda to the detriment of the intended beneficiaries of Terra Foundation

81 Defendant Mr. Michaeli colluded with Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker in committing breaches of fiduciary duty, or otherwise induced or participated in their breaches of duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the various ways, including, but not limited to the following:

a. Knowingly providing advice to Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson that was contrary to the fiduciary duties owed by them as directors of Terra Foundation;

b. Acting with Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to make decisions for Terra Foundation in contravention of the by-laws of Terra Foundation;

c. Advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to take action relating to Terra Foundation that constituted waste and mismanagement in an attempt to justify the closure of Terra Museum in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

d. Colluding with or advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson in the decision to replace Jim Collins and the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd in order to gain control over the operations of Terra Foundation for their own improper purpose in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

e. Colluding with, advising or participating in the plan to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Directors in order to remove opposition to their plan to close Terra Museum in Chicago and move Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT, INJUNCTION, BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY, REMOVAL, ACCOUNTING, RECEIVER AND APPOINTMENT OF NEW DIRECTORS for Temporary Restraining Order on that date.

5. Defendant the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation (hereinafter "the FOUNDATION"), was incorporated on December 13, 1978, and was created specifically as an Illinois charitable trust with certain obligations and commitments to the ultimate beneficiaries, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Group Exhibit "A" is a copy of the FOUNDATION's original Articles of Incorporation). Said FOUNDATION currently holds net assets worth approximately $450 million, and is registered and reports to the Illinois Attorney General under the Illinois Charitable Trust Act.

6. The FOUNDATION's specific charitable purpose is to preserve, promote and exhibit collections of American art, and to expand the artistic horizons of the public through educational art programs.

7. In furtherance of its charitable purpose and obligations to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, the FOUNDATION owns and operates the Terra Museum of American Art (the "Terra Museum") located at 664 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

7. Defendant JUDITH TERRA is a Director of the FOUNDATION, and is the widow of Daniel Terra, one of the founding Trustees of the FOUNDATION, who at all relevant times, is a resident of Washington D.C., and is a member of the FOUNDATION's Executive Committee.

8. Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER is the Chairman and President of the FOUNDATION.

9. Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER and Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON are each Directors of the FOUNDATION, and are each members of the FOUNDATION's Executive

(1) To avoid "self-dealing" and conflicts of interests;
(2) To avoid wasting charitable assets;
(3) To avoid incurring penalties, fines, and unnecessary taxes;
(4) To adhere and conform the charitable organization to its charitable purpose;
(5) To not make non-program loans, gifts, or advances to any person, except as allowed by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.];
(6) To utilize the trust in conformity with its purposes for the best interest of the beneficiaries;
(7) To timely file registration and financial reports required by this Act; and
(8) To comply and to cause the charitable organization to comply with this Act and, if incorporated, the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.].

(760 ILCS 55/15(a) (1997).)

15. Daniel Terra, a successful Chicago area businessman established the FOUNDATION in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. The FOUNDATION's first board was Daniel Terra, his son James Terra and Robert Sugrue.

16. From the time of its inception the FOUNDATION has had as its central and core purpose the establishment of an art museum in the Chicagoland area, specializing in bringing American art to the public and the People of the State of Illinois. It was Daniel Terra's intent and purpose to provide a Museum in the Chicago area that would exhibit collections of American art and educate the public generally on issues of American art and, Daniel Terra publicly stated that the FOUNDATION was committed to building and operating a world class museum in the Chicagoland area.

17. From its inception the FOUNDATION was substantially funded by Daniel Terra who contributed hundreds of millions of dollars to and for the Terra Museum.

18. As a result of the foregoing others became supportive of said charitable purpose and made contributions to the Terra Museum and the FOUNDATION.

19. Daniel Terra died on June 28, 1996.

b) Attempting to gain position and self recognition in a Washington DC charitable organization in exchange for the delivery of the assets of the FOUNDATION, the termination of operations in Chicago and the end of a Terra museum in the United States.

c) Attempting to cause the closing of the FOUNDATION's operations in Illinois contrary to Dan Terra's intentions and suggesting a use of its assets contrary to the use Dan Terra intended.

d) Grossly mismanaging Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons responsible for Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success;

e) Caused the primary individuals in charge of security at Terra Museum to quit resulting in an inexperienced and understaffed security staff, which jeopardizes the security of the $100 million of art displayed and collected at Terra Museum;

f) Permitted a director of Terra Foundation to engage in a conflict of interest in representing Terra Foundation at art auctions while, on information and belief, representing the interests of private clients at the same auction;

g) Expending significant monies on the purchases of art without obtaining the input or approval of the Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art acquisition;

h) Attempting to invade endowment funds restricted to public art educational purposes for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

i) Bypassing the lawful authority of the Board and the Executive Committee in operating Terra Foundation.

her, and she unequivocally promised that after his death she would not seek any assets of his Estate other than those given to her under the said prenuptial agreement. (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "C" is a copy of the said prenuptial agreement entered into between Daniel Terra and Defendant JUDITH TERRA.)

29. Under the aforesaid prenuptial agreement, Defendant JUDITH TERRA agreed she would receive only a fixed amount of money and assets upon Daniel Terra's death, and that the bulk of his estate would go to the FOUNDATION. The said prenuptial agreement provided that if the parties remained married, JUDITH TERRA would receive $1.5 million from Daniel Terra's estate if he died prior to the 5th anniversary date of their marriage; or $ 3 million if his death was between the 5th and 10th date of their marriage; or $4.5 million if his death occurred after the 10th anniversary date of their marriage. (See Exhibit "C", prenuptial agreement page 6.)

30. Several days prior to his death on June 28, 1996, Daniel Terra was confined to a hospital, his life being sustained by the use of life supporting devices. Shortly after midnight on June 28, 1996, the tenth anniversary date of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, the life supporting devices employed to keep Daniel Terra alive were ceased. Technically Daniel Terra lived past the ten year anniversary of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, and Defendant JUDITH TERRA sought and received from Dan Terra's estate $4.5 million pursuant to the terms of the aforesaid prenuptial agreement.

31. The Prenuptial agreement also provided that while Daniel Terra was alive, JUDITH TERRA would not agree to be a member of the board of directors of the FOUNDATION.

32. Defendant Judith Terra was not a member of the FOUNDATION's Board of Directors until Daniel Terra's aforesaid illness and death in 1996.

33. In January 1997, Defendant JUDITH TERRA filed four further and of service to the FOUNDATION has been terminated as regular counsel to the FOUNDATION.

39. The final accounting of the Daniel Terra Estate has been presented by James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd , it has been reviewed and approved by the FOUNDATION's special counsel Mayer, Brown and Platt and the Illinois Attorney General's office, both of whom participated in the many aspects of the estate matters. Despite Mayer, Brown & Platt's approval the FOUNDATION now has undertaken to hire yet another set of attorneys to review the actions of James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd, and the FOUNDATION is bearing the cost of such.

40. Upon information and belief, the aforesaid termination of Bell. Boyd and Lloyd and review of the actions of James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd were done at the behest of Defendants out of retaliation for the adverse position James Terra and Bell Boyd and Lloyd took against Defendant JUDITH TERRA in the aforesaid litigation of the $42 million in claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra.

41. In addition to the foregoing, based on the verified allegations set forth in Director GIDWITZ's and Director BUNTROCK's Verified Complaint, and incorporated herein by reference as though fully set forth herein, Defendant JUDITH TERRA with the aid of Defendant Tucker has caused works of art of the FOUNDATION to be brought to her home, over objection from Museum staff.

42. Furthermore, Defendant Judith Terra has engaged in discussions with defendant Director PAUL HAYES TUCKER to have the FOUNDATION close the Terra Museum in Chicago and move its operation to Washington D.C., where JUDITH TERRA resides, and /or to cause the FOUNDATION to merge with another institution in Washington D.C., which intended acts are contrary to Daniel Terra's intent and the mission to maintain a museum in Chicago.

that Defendant JUDITH TERRA set upon a course of conduct and convinced other directors to join her in her efforts to promote her self interests, close the Terra Museum in Chicago, and move the FOUNDATION to Washington D.C. where she lives to effect self interests. In addition certain acts of the board now appear to be designed to punish those that had opposed her acts of self interest as aforesaid.

47. As related by directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in their verified statements, Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON announced when he joined the FOUNDATION Board of Directors that he was there only "to protect Judith Terra.." As a consequence, Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON, by his own admission was not there to do the acts required of an independent Director. Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON's comment to the board is most significant in light of the fact that Director ALAN K. SIMPSON joined the Board of the FOUNDATION in fiscal year end 1999, at a time when the only issues concerning JUDITH TERRA was her personal need to seek revenge upon those that had opposed her before.

48. The totality of the issues presented here in this Complaint establish that the FOUNDATION is a charitable trust in jeopardy, whose long term institutional employees have quit, whose controlling number of Board members are more interested in their own vision, self interest, and/or personal goals of promoting their status in society, than in properly safeguarding the FOUNDATIONS mission. A small group of Directors, loyal to the announced purposes of the organizations principal benefactor, Daniel Terra, are being subjected to retaliation, removal or neutralization.

49. There is no doubt that Daniel Terra expected the Terra Museum to remain in Chicago and there is no doubt that the other donors over the years relied upon the institutional nature of the FOUNDATION as an Illinois-based charity, expecting it to be rooted here and to remain in General alleges that a charitable trust needs to be protected or the trustees of a charitable organization or trust have engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty toward the organization, and he seeks injunctive relief and removal of such trustees, the Court may, as part of the injunctive relief, and after a hearing where such trustees shall have an opportunity to be heard, appoint temporarily or permanently a receiver or additional trustees to protect and operate the organization and may temporarily, or as ultimate relief for breach of duty or to protect the trust, permanently remove any charitable organization's trustees, corporate officers, directors and members from office and appoint replacements to protect the public interest."

56. As alleged by directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK , the defendants opposed the election and actions of GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK to further their improper actions as aforesaid.

57. By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the People of Illinois to act in the Peoples interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago and supported and funded by him and others through his death in 1996.

58. Defendants Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Mr. Tucker by the foregoing breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further personal interests to the detriment of the People of the State of Illinois, the ultimate beneficiaries of each and every charitable trust within the state.

59. As aforesaid, improper conduct here included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to any location outside of Illinois would violate the charitable trust establish by the operation of the Terra Foundation to date , the intent of Dan Terra, the common law, the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

(5) Defendants Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Paul Tucker have breached their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the People of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to Terra Foundation and the People of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation if defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties and permitted to remain in control of the subject Foundation;

(7) Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duty and the equities require that the court exercise supervisory authority over the charitable trust at issue here and appoint receivers and additional fiduciaries and directors to protect the Terra Foundation;

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding any further meetings of the Foundation's Board of Directors, until a new board is constituted by this court;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment or governing instruments;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation.

(5) Transferring, moving, disbursing, selling or exchanging any assets of the Terra Foundation.

ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENT

This ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENT made and entered into this 24th day of June, 1986, by and between DANIEL J. TERRA, of Kenilworth, Illinois, hereinafter called the "first party", and JUDITH F. BANKS, of Washington, D.C., hereinafter called the "second party".

WHEREAS, the parties hereto intend to be married to each other in the near future; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties has heretofore been married, but not to each other, and DANIEL J. TERRA has one child from his former marriage and JUDITH F. BANKS has no children; and each of the parties has property and an estate and they desire, in contemplation of entering into said marriage, to settle and adjust all property rights that each may have or claim in the property and estate of the other and to determine and declare what rights, if any, each of them shall have in the property and estate of the other upon their entering into such marriage; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties desires to retain and reserve full and complete right, power and authority, to the extent permitted by law, to manage, control, use, sell, lease, mortgage, pledge, encumber and otherwise dispose of his or her respective property and estate in any and every manner or way, including gifts, in trust or otherwise of his or her respective property and estate in any and every manner or way, including gifts, in trust or otherwise, during his or her lifetime and by will or other testamentary disposition

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises, and the covenants and agreements hereinafter set forth, and in further consideration of the sum of ONE DOLLAR ($1.00), each to the other in hand paid, receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, it is covenanted and agreed by and between the parties as follows:

FIRST: Each of the parties hereto has made to the other party a complete statement of such party's present assets and liabilities, which has been fully examined and investigated by the other party and their respective legal counsel, and each party hereby acknowledges, certifies, and declares that he or she has been fully informed and knows the nature, extent, and value of the property and estate, both real, personal, and mixed, of the other party. Each of the parties covenants and agrees that this Antenuptial Agreement shall, when properly signed by the parties and upon the consummation of the marriage between the parties, become equally binding upon them and shall be valid in all respects.

SECOND: The first party hereby covenants and agrees that he will, upon the consummation of the marriage between the parties hereto, assume from his own personal estate the necessary expense of the support and maintenance of the second party during the period of marriage to each other.

THIRD: The first party hereby covenants and agrees to pay, to the second party during their marriage, in addition to ordinary support and maintenance provided for in ARTICLE SECOND of this Agreement, the following sums for her sole and individual use including for all of her clothing and otherwise as she may see fit:

FIFTH: If the second party is alive at the death of the first party and at the time of his death the parties were married to each other without either having filed for a Decree of Dissolution of Marriage or Separate Maintenance, the second party agrees that her claim upon the estate of the first party shall be limited to (1) sole exclusive legal title to the parties' principal marital residence and to all furniture, antiques, and other household personal property located there, specifically excluding, however, works of art whether foreign or American; and (2) a monetary amount determined as follows:

(a) One and one half Million Dollars ($1,500,000) if the first party dies prior to the fifth anniversary date of their marriage;

(b) Three Million Dollars ($3,000,000) if the first party dies after the fifth anniversary date, but prior to the tenth anniversary date, of their marriage; and

(c) Four and one half Million Dollars ($4,500,000) if the first party dies after the tenth anniversary date of their marriage.

SIXTH: The rights granted to second party pursuant to ARTICLE FIFTH of this Agreement shall be in full satisfaction of any and all claims and demands of every kind and character which the second party may have against the estate of the first party, and in consideration of such rights granted to her the second party hereby covenants and agrees to release, waive, and disclaim all other right, title, and interest in and to any and all of the real and personal property owned or possessed by the first party, at the time of their marriage, or any property owned or possessed by the first

EIGHTH: It is further understood and agreed by the parties that, at the request of either party, the other party shall execute, sign, seal, acknowledge, and deliver any deed or deeds or other documents thought necessary by counsel to convey property of the other, or to extinguish any right of dower, curtesy, homestead, or of inheritance in each other's estate.

NINTH: The purpose of this agreement is to define and limit the claims and demands which each of the parties shall have against the estate of the other and to promote marital harmony and to discourage either party from seeking a monetary benefit by instituting divorce proceedings.

Should either party die during the pendency of this contract the claims herein stipulated and defined shall be the limit which either party may have against his or her estate. It is understood that the first party is a widower and has one child surviving that marriage. The second party is fully aware that under the present laws of the State of Illinois she would be entitled to one-half (1/2) of the net estate by intestacy if the first party died before second party while married or one-third (1/3) of the net estate by exercising her right of renunciation of his will, if it were not for this agreement. First party is fully aware that he would have similar rights in that he would be entitled to all of the second party's net estate if she died while married by intestacy or one-half (1/2) by exercising his rights by renunciation since she has no descendants.

THIRTEENTH: No amendment or waiver of any of the provisions of this Agreement shall be valid unless in writing and executed with the same formality as this Agreement. No waiver of any breach or default hereunder shall be deemed a waiver of subsequent breach of the same or similar nature.

FOURTEENTH: All matters affecting the interpretation of this Agreement and the rights of the respective parties hereunder shall be governed by the laws of the State of Illinois.

This Agreement may be executed simultaneously in counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the said parties have hereunto interchangably set their hands and seals at Chicago, Illinois, the day and year first above written.

A Vision for the Future

From the lengthy strategic planning discussions that we have had as a Board over the last ten months, I believe we have all come to recognize that we are at a critical point in the history of the Foundation. I also believe that we will have the opportunity at our Board meeting in Giverny to make some of the most important decisions about our future since Dan Terra began his quest to establish American art as one of the preeminent achievements of Western culture.

From my conversations with you, I know that we all understand the weight of our responsibilities and the concurrent seriousness of our deliberations. We occupy a position of enormous privilege that will probably not be reclaimed in our lifetime, at least not within the art world. The art world also recognizes how significant our decisions will be, which should encourage us to sharpen our focus and enhance our sense of purpose. I believe, as I have from the beginning, that we are poised for greatness and that the decisions we are about to take will have lasting impact.

Given these unique circumstances, and several recent developments that I will review in greater detail in Giverny, I thought I should share with you my sense of how we should proceed. I do so having spent many hours with each of our potential suitors and an equal amount of time mulling over the possibilities that lie in front of us. I also have the added advantage of having curated exhibitions for each of the institutions, which has afforded me an insider's understanding of their operations. I know the collections of each institution well, am friends with the directors and their staffs, and count many of the curators, conservators, exhibition planners, and educators as some of my closest colleagues. In addition, I have a sense of the culture of each institution and how we would fit, or not fit, as the case may be.

That said, let me begin this white paper by sketching my vision for Giverny. I then will speak about the future of the Foundation and end with a suggestion for a strategic alliance.

I think it would be inappropriate to try to make Giverny into an academic center linked to a college or university and awarding academic credit. First and foremost, such an initiative would be frightfully expensive. It would also be an administrative nightmare. I think we should be engaged in various educational initiatives in Giverny. We might consider having the director or the curator of MAAG teach in one of the programs in Paris, for example. We also should encourage those institutions to come to Giverny for lectures, symposia, and workshops. But I do not believe we should convert Giverny into an academic outpost. (The American Academy in Rome spends $500,000 a year just on its library.)

This is not to say that we should not have a core library in Giverny for the use of our fellows and museum personnel. But once again, I do not think we should try to imitate or equal collections available elsewhere. (To jump start the process of building a library, I think we should purchase the libraries of two recently retired art historians of American art--Elizabeth [illegible]hns and William Gerts--both of whom had extensive holdings.)

By having a wide range of fellows at Giverny, we could provide a rich supplement to MAAG'S educational programs. And we could distinguish ourselves as the only such program in Europe. I believe it would be highly sought after and a significant contribution to our mission of propagating American art in the broadest possible terms.

TERRA FOUNDATION CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF AMERICAN ART

I believe we should establish a center for the study and propagation of American art here in the United States. This center should be completely independent of any other institution, should bear the Terra name, and should be located in a city that would have the best resources for the understanding and advancement of American art. While several cities could make a claim to being the most appropriate site for this center, I believe there is really only one that would serve the center's needs in the fullest, most effective manner. That is Washington, D.C.

Washington is home to the richest trove of material that would support this center: the Library of Congress, the National Archives, the Archives of American Art, the National Museum of [illegible]ican Art, the Center for Advanced Study of the Visual Arts at the National Gallery, and the Smithsonian, to name only the most prominent. No other city can imitate this concentration of resources. No other city is also such a center of political

The Pharmaceutical Building could also be a place to stage small exhibitions of the Terra Collection or boutique shows related to works in the collection that would draw on other collections in Washington or beyond. Being adjacent to the State Department, the building would afford the Foundation ample opportunity to extend its influence and activities outside the Mall and the Beltway.

THE FUTURE OF THE TERRA FOUNDATION COLLECTION

I am completely convinced that the Terra Foundation collection should be in the same city as the Foundation itself. It would be foolish to have it any other way, especially if the Foundation is to be more than a grant-making organization. It therefore follows that the collection should be housed in Washington, with a sizable part of the collection designated to be exhibited in Giverny.

I believe that it would be wisest to strike a strategic partnership with the National Gallery. The Gallery is the preeminent museum in the city, and the most respected in the art world internationally. It has the most fire power when it comes to loans from museums here and abroad, it has the most secure financing, and it has the strongest educational component of any of our present suitors.

The Terra Collection would join some of the most important and historically heralded collections ever formed by Americans, the two most notable being the Samuel Kress Collection and the Chester Dale. The Terra Collection would also be a superb complement to the Gallery's rich holdings of American art, while the Gallery's larger collection would be an undeniable asset to exhibitions that we would want to mount in Giverny and perhaps send to other European venues.

The Kress and the Chester Dale collections were not outright gifts to the Gallery. They remained on long-term loan for up to twenty years. The Gallery is therefore accustomed to a prolonged engagement period and would not be pressuring us to make a commitment at any time soon.

The Terra Foundation would also not have to make any financial contribution to the Gallery for this relationship.

Terra Foundation
Board Meeting Minutes
August 24, 2000

In attendance by Conference Call:

Dr. Paul Tucker, Chair
Hon. Jacques Andreani
Mr. Dean Buntrock
Mrs. Margaret Daley
Senator Alan Simpson
Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Jr.
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall
Mrs. Judith Terra

By Invitation:
Mr. Mark Heatwole
Mr. Ralph Lerner

Staff:

Mr. Donald Ratner

By Invitation:

Dr. Derrick Cartwright
Dr. John Hallmark Neff

The meeting was called to order at 1:08 PM. Dr. Tucker indicated that the purpose was to review the four proposals and detailed data we had received from our four potential partners allow us to be better prepared for the September meeting. The minutes from the August 7, 2000 Strategic Plan meeting were reviewed and unanimously approved by the Strategic Planning Committee.

There were significant discussions around whether Giverny was "central" to the focus of the Foundation's mission. A decision was made to examine this question at the Board meeting in September.

Dr. Stebbins suggested that we had already decided on the central importance of Giverny.

Dr. Tucker reviewed the background that resulted in the decision of making Giverny central. Mr. Buntrock indicated that he saw that there is a difference between the importance of Giverny and making it central. Dr. Marshall discussed alternatives at this point:

1. Agree that there are unresolved issues and put them aside and then look at the proposals in front of us; or
2. Focus on the issues and then refer them back to a small group to make a presentation at the next meeting and end the call now.

[redacted]

Mr. Lerner walked the Board through each part of the draft contract. From that review there emerged the following items:

1. Ownership of the collection. Would it be donated and who holds title.
2. Where the collection would be housed, how much would be exhibited and for how long.
3. The question of a study center.
4. The question of office space.
5. Whether we should contribute money for construction or a naming opportunity.
6. Who would curate the collection and who that person would work for.
7. On what subjects the aligned institution would have to consult with the Terra Board.
8. What works should never be sold.
9. Issues regarding exhibitions, publications, etc. resulting from the possible alliance.
10. How the acquisition fund should be handled and who should maintain control of it.
11. Educational issues.
12. The status of the art at Giverny and what needs to stay there permanently versus what might rotate.

The Board concluded that it will have to address the above 12 issues as well as the issue of determining a strategic partner.

Mr. Ratner was asked to finalize the above list and send it out with the minutes by the end of next week.

At the September meeting, we need to be prepared to discuss what qualities of the educational programs we want to have included in this plan.

Dr. Marshall asked if we should send out an RFP to all four suitors on education. Senator Simpson suggested that we need to decide what we want as opposed to what they're going to give us.

Dr. Tucker suggested that the next step should be the following:

1. Get proposals on education from the four institutions as to how they would see working with the Foundation.
2. Equalize the general portion of the proposals on affiliation from all four institutions.

1. I, John H. Longwell, am an associate at the law firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC. The firm represents defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson in Buntrock v. Terra, Case No. 00 CH 13859.

2. On July 16, 2001, I attended an interview of Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, chief, Bureau of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations, at the Office of the Attorney General on West Randolph Street in Chicago, Illinois. The interview was scheduled at the suggestion of the Court and upon request of our firm. Mr. Perkins declined our initial request to conduct the interview under oath and on the record. We asked Mr. Perkins to reconsider recording the interview, dispensing with the oath, and he again declined. Therefore, K. Chris Todd, a partner in our firm who conducted the interview, asked me to accompany him to take notes. During the interview, I attempted to record questions and answers in as much detail as possible. Upon my return to Washington, D.C., I typed these notes to create an informal record of the interview in question and answer format. However, I was not able to produce a verbatim record.

3. The statements in this affidavit are based on my notes and recollections of the interview. The full text of my notes is attached at Exhibit A to this affidavit.

4. Mr. Perkins stated that he believes it is his job to ensure that not-for-profit and other charitable institutions based in Illinois utilize their assets in Illinois. Whenever possible, Mr. Perkins attempts to ensure that fiduciary vacancies at such institutions are KCT: Did you do anything in addition to relying on the Gidwitz and Buntrock complaint?

TI: There was a time to litigate these issues.

FP: If you have charges against me, bring them on. If you don't know anything about the facts, try to figure it out.

LB: We can't figure them out because you say this is none of our business.

FP: This is none of your business.

7. Mr. Perkins also stated that he possessed discretion in determining the target, subject matter and timing of any investigations.

8. In response to questions about Stephanie Pace Marshall, Mr. Perkins stated that after a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins acknowledged that he was aware of a letter dated May 20, 2001, in which Dr. Marshall criticized the attorney general's role in mediation and rejected Mr. Perkins proposals. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been "snookered" into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. Mr. Perkins stated that he was concerned about the management of the finances of the Foundation and the fact that there were too many "part-time officers." He began to investigate Stephanie Pace Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He became aware of these issues and considered them for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr.

KCT: We have asked that you reconsider our request to conduct this interview under oath and on the record. Do you still decline?

FP: Yes, at the advice of my lawyer.

TI: This is not a deposition, not an interrogation.

KCT: Will you reconsider at least putting this on the record?

FP: No.

KCT: What is your job title?

would accept, how it would be governed. Everybody had various pieces of evidence. If there were things that your side had, they should have presented them during mediation. Your side lost their position in mediation.

KCT: (Repeating question whether FP knew of evidence reflected in Exhibits FP 2-7 regarding donor intent when filed complaint.)

FP: I'm not getting into that. This was a 4 month process. These affidavits did not exist in September 2000. Some of these affidavits are from people I never heard of. If there was evidence, where was it? That part of the case is resolved. I'm not going to spend time trying to convince you.

KCT: Were there any terms that the AG required as preconditions to entering mediation?

JK: The parties entered an agreement that the mediation remain confidential. I object to this line of questioning.

KCT: Does your objection include premediation documents?

JK: It would include any positions and assertions of the parties during mediation.

LB: Does the parties' agreement extend beyond the judge's order?

JK: The agreement was among the parties and provided that no statements made by the parties could be used. It goes beyond the order.

FP: We did sit down with counsel at the beginning of mediation, and said we could not imagine a scenario where we would agree to any settlement in which the Foundation would leave Illinois. This was no secret because it came up in meetings in chambers. We started mediation with that in mind.

KCT: So the AG's position was that mediation would begin from the point that the Foundation would not leave Illinois?

FP: Yes. And the defendants wanted a global release.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-14. What was the date of this filing?

FP: Late December.

KCT: And when were these conversations about mediation?

FP: The end of January, beginning of February.

KCT: Did you talk to the Attorney General, James Ryan?

TI: That is irrelevant.

FP: I'm not going to get into it. But no, I did not talk to Jim Ryan.

KCT: If I went down a list of all the people you might have talked to, you wouldn't answer any of those questions?

FP: No.

KCT: Did you talk to any members of the Board of Directors before filing?

FP: No.

KCT: Describe generally what you did in order to prepare and file your complaint.

TI: That is protected by the work product privilege.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-9. (KCT read passage in ¶ 49, "There is no doubt that Dan Terra expected the Terra Museum to remain in Chicago.") Showing EXHIBIT 24. Were you aware of this amendment to the Articles of Incorporation at the time you filed the complaint.

FP: I don't recall. Probably not. We attached the original Articles to the complaint, so if we were aware of the amendment we probably would have attached it.

KCT: Did you have any discussions with Jim Collins between September 2000 and the present?

FP: I have spoken to him several times, about this case and other matters.

KCT: Did you have conversations that would touch upon the allegations in your complaint?

JK: Objection. This is beyond the proper scope of questioning and protected by the work product privilege.

KCT: Is Mr. Kennedy representing you?

TI: I agree that this irrelevant and work product. What your getting at now is not going to lead to any sort of relevant evidence.

KCT: Are you instructing him not to answer?

TI: No, Floyd can take care of himself.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-21. (Referring to Ted Stebbins statement on page 42, that he "aborr[ed]" the AG's threatening tactics.) Have you seen this?

FP: I listened to the tape.

KCT: Dr. Stebbins said he dislike the AG's threatening tactics. Do you agree that Dr. Stebbins believed that he had been threatened or intimidated?

SZ: I object. We know that despite his reservations, Mr. Stebbins voted for the settlement. There is probably some other way you can ask about this, but I object to the question as phrased.

TI: He also said he was voting his own conscience.

KCT: Did you employ any threatening tactics?

FP: No.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-14. Attached to this motion are notes from Mr. Neff. How did you get those notes?

TI: This question does not go to threatening or intimidating tactics.

FP: Someone gave them to us.

KCT: Who? What were the circumstances?

FP: I don't recall. They probably came from someone in the case. I don't see how this is relevant.

KCT: Was there any discovery going on at that time?

FP: Probably not.

KCT: When you filed your original complaint, FP-9, Dr. Stebbins was not a defendant. Why was he named as a defendant in the draft complaint you circulated in March 2001?

FP: We drafted the amended complaint to bring the pleadings in line with the proof. Documents that were filed in December and January contained new issues that we brought up as we became aware of them.

KCT: In the original complaint, there is an allegation in ¶ 23(f) that a director had a conflict of interest from representing multiple parties at art auctions. That director was Dr. Stebbins, correct? Was there any reason you did not name Dr. Stebbins at that time?

FP: No.

KCT: Did you know IMSA was 95% funded by the State of Illinois.

FP: I read that somewhere in your materials. I knew it was a state school. I don't know whether it comes directly from the state.

KCT: You sent a notice of your investigation to IMSA on May 25?

FP: We wouldn't call it an investigation. When we are involved in making these inquiries, pursuant to an administrative subpoena, we are careful in how we characterize it because we don't want to damage anyone.

KCT: So it's not an investigation. What do you call it?

FP: An inquiry and review.

KCT: Do you have discretion as an assistant AG as to which cases to investigate, and when?

FP: The office enjoys some discretion in that regard.

KCT: Who decided to write to IMSA regarding your inquiry?

FP: I did.

KCT: Did you talk to anybody before you did this?

FP: Some staff members, but nobody above me.

KCT: Who?

FP: Some people in the office on the staff. Ms. Harris for example. But I made the decision. I did all of the sending.

KCT: Are there any writings which memorialize your thinking as to why you were inquiring of IMSA?

FP: I don't think so, no. Except for the subpoena.

KCT: May I request a copy of that?

TI: I don't see how that is relevant.

SS: Has anybody consulted with Marshall or IMSA about this? They may have privacy interests. I know I don't really have standing to be raising objections

(After brief recess, SZ stated that in further discussion, Mr. Perkins had stated that it was his impression that Mr. Roberts had realized that the investigation had been resolved with the discussion of the two issues. KCT asked Mr. Perkins whether he agreed with the statement that a US Atty is not a US Psychiatrist.)

KCT: Did Roberts say anything [indicating that he knew investigation was over]?

FP: Roberts left the meeting thinking that we had resolved the issues. We pretty much communicated that to him.

LB: I want to tie down dates. What was the date of the administrative subpoena?

FP: May 25, 2001. It went out in the mail to the Academy that day.

LB: How long had you had the information?

FP: A couple of days. After the May 11 mediation session, there was a lot of discussion that people were dissatisfied. I figured the mediation was over. And I feld that we had been snookered into not being ready to proceed with the litigation. We wanted to file an amended complaint and we were going to make it more focused. We wanted to put it in different shape. And we had become concerned that there were a lot of part-time managers of the Foundation. We focused on who the officers were and started looking at Stephanie Marshall, because she was the treasurer and we had some concerns about the financial dealings of the Foundation, like travel expenses. We were looking to see what we could allege about part-time officers of the Foundation. We knew that Marshall was on the Board of the Frye Foundation, we learned that from Scott McHue, who used to be counsel for the Foundation. So Marshall was a director of Frye and Terra; we were looking at what she was paid, to see if she was capable of doing both jobs [in addition to IMSA]. We were working with public records and filings from charities. We came across things that caused us to make inquiry of her Math Academy.

KCT: What is the Illinois practice -- is it permissible to have ex parte communications with the court?

FP/TI: No.

FP: With respect to the Math Academy, we have administrative subpoena power, there is no court proceeding involved at all. The judge would not have known about it.

JL: Did you have meetings with the mediator where counsel for other parties were not present?

DECLARATION OF PAUL HAYES TUCKER IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Paul H. Tucker swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), a plaintiff in the above-captioned action. I was elected to the Board of Directors of the Foundation ("Board") in October 1998 and became Chairman of the Board and President in 1999. I make this affidavit in support of plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order.

2. I hold a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and am a chaired professor of Art History at the University of Massachusetts Boston. My primary area of study has been the life and work of Claude Monet. I first met Ambassador Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) in 1990 in connection with my work on an exhibition of Monet's works held in Boston, Chicago and London.

3. The Foundation is a private Illinois not-for-profit corporation organized in 1978 by Mr. Terra to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Mr. Terra served as the Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation from the date of its incorporation until his death in 1996. During this period the Foundation, in keeping with Mr. Terra's vision, took an extremely aggressive and committed view of its mission, as stated in the Articles of Incorporation, to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public." Indeed, this broad focus was made clear by the amendment of D.C., where he then resided. However, in June 1996, Mr. Terra suffered a stroke in his Washington residence and died. He bequeathed to the Foundation most of its current assets.

8. After Mr. Terra's death, the position of Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation fell first to Helene Arhweiler, former president of the Center Georges Pompidou in Paris. She was succeeded by Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia, and then, in 1999, by myself. Other current members of the Board include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French ambassador to the United States; Theodore Stebbins, curator of American Art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive officer of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis.

9. I joined the Board in 1998 because I believed strongly in the Foundation's fundamental purpose, as expressed to me by Mr. Terra and others -- to propagate American art in the United States and abroad through public education. The establishment of a museum in France, among other things, convinced me of the broad scope of the Foundation's efforts. I viewed participation in the Foundation as an excellent opportunity to further the goals of my life's work in promoting public education in the arts on a national and international scale. Since becoming a Board member, I have supported its continued efforts to advance arts education inside and outside the Chicago area. Examples of major non-Chicago projects include the recent award of a $500,000 grant to a New York production company for a documentary on American

13. I was then asked by various Board members to stand for election. I did so after giving due notice to Mr. Hartman and despite his objections was elected by a majority of the Board. Mr. Hartman expressed anger over his ouster. He eventually joined forces with Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock and Mrs. Daley in opposition to efforts by the Foundation to maintain its independence and chart its own course for the future.

14. Despite the maneuvers of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, the majority of the Board remained committed to the Foundation's broader purpose and interests. Like most other Board members, I believed that the Foundation needed to conduct a thorough reassessment of its assets and endeavors and to explore all possible options to arrive at a strategic plan for the future. As part of this effort, at my insistence in early 2000 the Foundation began to consider various opportunities including offers of cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. I believed that consideration of all possible options -- in effect, a fully competitive bidding process -- was clearly in the best interests of the Foundation.

15. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 meeting in Giverny, I asked members to focus on long-term planning options. I proposed that each member should circulate a position paper, setting out his or her ideas and proposals. Thereafter I circulated a memorandum, entitled "A Vision for the Future," in which I argued, among other things, that a collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C., would be in the best interests of the Foundation. My paper was designed to stimulate debate and further deliberation. In addition, I discussed with several Board members whether Buntrock, who had repeatedly expressed impatience with the work of the Board, should choose not to stand for reelection at the upcoming threats to peel away layers of resistance to their takeover of the Foundation. They had already garnered the support of Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. On an 11-member Board, they needed two additional votes to gain control. They targeted Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

19. In March 2001, the Attorney General drafted a complaint seeking appointment of a receiver for the Foundation and removal of several directors, including myself and Dr. Stebbins. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time in the litigation. It included exaggerated and false allegations of impropriety against Dr. Stebbins, including alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions. The Attorney General successfully used this complaint to cause Dr. Stebbins to threaten to resign and eventually align with Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock.

20. Meanwhile, as the litigation proceeded to mediation, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock and the Attorney General sought a settlement proposal that would achieve their objectives of anchoring the Foundation to Chicago and ensuring local control. By May of 2001, a draft "settlement" was presented for consideration by the parties. The "settlement" forces the Foundation to "maintain and exhibit" its collection in Illinois for 50 years and to negotiate a relationship with another Chicago institution with the goal of ceasing operations as a stand-alone museum. Most tellingly, the "settlement" radically changes the Foundation's corporate governance structure to make the State of Illinois the dominant force. The size of the Board will be increased to 15 members, with no less than eight of the directors to be Illinois residents.

21. In late May of 2001, the Attorney General's office informed Dr. Marshall that it was considering an investigation of the Illinois Academy of Mathematics and Science. Dr. Marshall has now reportedly decided to support the substance of the "settlement," with serious

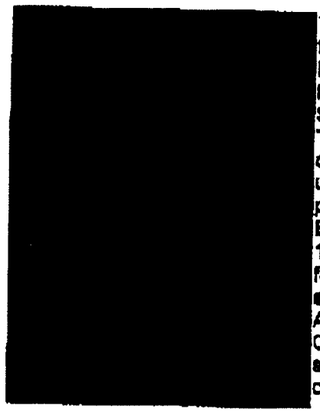
TERRA

About Daniel J. Terra

Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was an energetic blend of scientist, businessman, and art lover. With a chemical engineering degree from Pennsylvania State University, the child of Italian immigrants founded Lawter Chemicals in Chicago in 1940. The success of Terra's globally-based enterprise gave him the means to further his interest in culture by collecting works of art and by becoming involved in several Chicago arts institutions. When President Ronald Reagan appointed Terra to the post of Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, an appointment he held from 1980 to 1988, Terra's enthusiasm for promoting American art expanded to a national and international audience. At one time, President Reagan lauded Terra for "doing more for American art than any other man in the history of the country." The entrepreneurial scientist's irrepressible desire to share his ardor for American art resulted in the founding of two new American art museums. Initiating an American art museum in Evanston, Illinois in 1980--the only one in a 400-mile radius of Chicago at that time--was a notable accomplishment. Its later relocation in 1987 to Chicago's Magnificent Mile with a collection that was increased ten times was even bolder. Establishing a museum of American art in France was courageous. Terra's desire to share with diverse audiences his enthusiasm for American art not only introduced a significant collection to America's heartland and to Europe but also realized his vision of establishing a forum celebrating the cultural and patriotic value of American art. The critical mission for Terra's museums is arts education with a focus on both public instruction and scholarly research.



Terra's personal collection was first exhibited at the Palmer Museum of Art on the campus of his alma mater, Pennsylvania State University in 1977. When Terra Museum of American Art officially opened in Evanston, the uniquely American theme of a prized painting, George Caleb Bingham's The Jolly Flatboatmen, 1877-78, represented the founder's idea of art as an expression of national identity. After relocating the museum to Chicago, Terra unabashedly stated, "We read so much about our industrial and economic

DECLARATION OF DAVID LEVY IN SUPPORT OF
PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

David Levy swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am President, Director and Chief Executive Officer of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the oldest museum of art in Washington, D.C.

2. In 1991 Daniel Terra contacted me and sought my advice on his plan to share his collection, housed in Chicago, and his estate (via his foundation) with independent art museums across the nation, both to provide greater exposure to his collection of historical American art and to support museums with an interest in this subject through the distribution of his wealth through his foundation. Mr. Terra told me he was concerned about the viability of the Chicago Museum.

3. Subsequently, in 1991 and 1992, we discussed an alternative approach, which would involve the creation of a Terra Museum Trust to be guided by an independent Board of Trustees drawn from the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York, the Corcoran Museum in Washington and the museums operated by Terra in Chicago and Giverny. Mr. Terra approved the proposal and he, I, and Robin Martin, then Chairman of the Corcoran Board of Trustees, thereafter engaged in discussions with Leonard Lauder and David Ross, respectively the Chairman of the Board and the Director of the Whitney Museum. These discussions centered on placing the American collections of these museums under a common curatorial management arrangement so as to provide national and international exposure to the combined collections. After extended discussions with the Whitney, the proposal did not materialize because issues of control of the collection, raised by the Whitney, could not be satisfactorily resolved.

DECLARATION OF PETER SOLMSSEN IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Peter Solmssen swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am president emeritus of the University of the Arts, located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

2. Daniel Terra and I were close friends and colleagues dating back to the early 1980's, when he was appointed ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs by President Reagan.

3. Starting around 1990, Daniel Terra and I had a number of conversations in which he told me that he expected that the Terra Foundation would close the Terra Museum in Chicago and sell the real estate. Among other proposals, we discussed the possibility of moving the art collection to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and establishing a different kind of charitable activity in Chicago.

4. I introduced Ambassador Terra to the leaders of the Pennsylvania Academy and he entered into lengthy conversations with them about bringing the collection housed at the museum in Chicago to Philadelphia. In his negotiations with the Pennsylvania Academy, Ambassador Terra was prepared to provide significant funds in addition to his collection, but because he believed that the Terra Foundation should have ownership of his collection as well as the Academy's collection, negotiations with the Academy did not result in an agreement.

5. Ambassador Terra was particularly interested in Philadelphia because he had grown up there. He told me how he had walked past the Academy every day on his way to high school.

6. Ambassador Terra and I also engaged in discussions about a collaboration between the Terra Foundation and the University of the Arts, of which he was a trustee. We discussed

DECLARATION OF JOSEPH ZORC IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Joseph Zorc swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am a real estate agent with the firm Pardoe real estate ERA in Washington D.C. specializing in commercial real estate.

2. In the Spring of 1996, Daniel Terra came to me and said he wanted to locate and buy property for the purpose of moving the headquarters of the Terra Foundation from Chicago to Washington D.C. .

3. During 1996, I showed him a number of properties, and assisted him in his purchase of 1072 Thomas Jefferson, in the Georgetown area of Washington, D.C. to be used to house the temporary headquarters of the Terra Foundation. Copies of documentation regarding 1072 Thomas Jefferson are attached as Exhibit B to this declaration.

4. At one time I had listed a piece of property on Connecticut Avenue, at Calvert Street that Mr. Terra had initially intended to sell. However, after six months, Mr. Terra rescinded our listing agreement and told me that he wished to use the property as a museum.

5. Mr. Terra told me that his intention was to create an institute of American Art and expressed the desire to look at additional properties that would be suitable for a building of a minimum of one million square feet. Based on his intentions, we had discussed a helicopter tour of a number of larger spaces offered by the Department of the Interior about which Mr. Terra had express strong interest.

2. Sometime during the spring of 1996, I was commissioned by Daniel Terra to draw plans for a building in Washington, D.C. at what is now 2519 Connecticut Avenue, at the corner of Calvert Street.

4. He told me that he intended to use the facility for elaborate events and fundraising for the Terra Foundation.

5. In May of 1996, I completed the schematic plans for the building and presented them to Mr. Terra. Copies of the plans that I drew for Daniel Terra are attached as Exhibit A to this declaration.

Dear Jim,

I am pleased to enclose the report which the trustees of the Terra Foundation for the Arts have asked Charles Moffett, John Wilmerding, and myself to prepare. We are glad to be of help, and we hope that our report will be found both thoughtful and useful. Needless to say, each of us stands ready to elaborate on the report at a meeting with the trustees, and we are ready also to work with trustees if we can be helpful in the future in implementing some of our suggestions.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Ted

rank, along with such venerable institutions as the Clark Art Institute, the National Museum of American Art, and the museums at Saint Louis, Cincinnati, and Worchester (see attached list). The Terra Collection is a specialized one, with impressive, deep holdings in the works of the American Impressionists. In the American Impressionist field alone, it would rank among the top three or four holdings in the nation. Both major and minor figures are richly represented (with the caveat that several minor figures are too richly represented), and there is great depth and strength in the works of Chase, Cassatt, Sargent, Whistler, Prendergast, Tarbell, Hassam, Theodore Robinson, and Twachtman, as well as excellent related works by Curran, Bunker, Metcalf, Wendel, Frieseke, Miller, and other American painters who went to Giverny. There are, however, two weaknesses in the Impressionist collection: first, while there are extensive holdings in Whistler and Sargent, there are no major works by either painter; once the Foundation has been stabilized and program developed, at least one major work by each painter should be sought. Secondly, many of the works in the Impressionist collection are on paper (prints, drawings, and watercolors), and these must not be on view for more than a short period in any given year, for conservation reasons; as a result, much of the collection must necessarily remain in storage much of the time.

The remainder of the collection includes many outstanding works, but lacks enough strength or balance to make the collection as a whole a fine, or even satisfactory survey of American painting from Colonial times to 1940.

1.) The holdings in American Modernism would rank next in terms of quality; there are fine works by Bellows, Hopper, Stuart Davis, Dove, Sheeler, O'Keeffe, and Hartley. This area is sufficiently good for survey purposes.

2.) However, the work of The Eight, the American Realists who followed Impressionism and preceded Modernism (roughly speaking) is not well represented, except for works by John Sloan and Robert Henri. This is a gap which should be filled.

3.) Hudson River School. This part of the collection is fairly good with fine examples by Church (a tiny work), Fitz Hugh Lane, Sanford Gifford, Thomas Cole, William Bradford, George Inness, and others by Whittredge, Silva, and Britcher. With some weeding out and some additions, this could become a distinguished part of the collection. Major works are needed by Church, Bierstadt, Durand, and others.

II.) THE TWO BUILDINGS AND THEIR PROGRAMS

A.) Chicago. We feel strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. Although is has been effectively retrofitted, and though many fine exhibitions have been seen in it, it will never be a wholly satisfactory museum space, and its location in a retail area seems not the best use of the real estate. The building should be sold, and the collection moved to a more appropriate space.

The program in Chicago up to this time has had good and bad features. The education program, with good professional leadership and effective use of volunteers, has been successful. The exhibition and publication programs, on the other hand, have suffered from being understaffed professionally and have not reached the level of consistent quality that one would expect from an institution with the Terra's financial and artistic resources. There have been a number of beautiful exhibitions, some organized by the Terra and some taken on a touring basis, but there has rarely been a Terra publication of outstanding scholarly quality or importance. In general, however, visitors to the Terra Museum in Chicago have been treated to well installed, pleasing, educational exhibitions of American art, drawn both from the permanent collection and borrowed from other institutions.

B.) Giverny. The Terra Foundation has built a handsome, unobtrusive structure in the town of Giverny, one that is well designed and well suited for its function as a small gallery or museum. However, there are some major problems with the Giverny program, in our opinion. If this museum is to be "dedicated to the understanding of the interrelationship of French art with American art," as suggested by the mission statement, it is accomplishing only a fraction of what it might. One problem is that Giverny has only a seasonal (April - October) audience, one that consists largely of American, Japanese, and European tourists. Monet's gardens draw around 500,000 visitors annually, but the Museum of American Art has so far been able to draw only a fifth of this number at best. We feel strongly that a better program in Giverny, with broader efforts to promote it, could result in a considerably larger audience for the Terra program.

The collection in Giverny, consisting largely of works by Americans who worked in France, is of very mixed quality, and seems an inappropriate vehicle for persuading the French or European audience that America produced good art. The fact is that many of the American painters in Giverny were mediocre painters, many of 3.) Emphasize the Terra Collection as a complete, excellent survey of American art in the United States. Under this option the trustees would build and weed the collection in order to make it a free-standing museum of American paintings, with appropriately high quality exhibitions, publications, and educational programs. They would consider keeping the collection in Chicago (while perhaps considering a merger with the Art Institute or Northwestern), or moving it to another city with a complimentary collection with whom either a merger or a cooperative relationship could be considered (the Corcoran or the National Museum of American Art in Washington, the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia, or the like). Alternatively, they might also consider moving the Foundation to a city with a fine museum that lacks American art, such as Denver, Seattle, or Los Angeles.

IV.) RECOMMENDATIONS

1.) We strongly recommend that the Foundation trustees immediately begin a search for a highly qualified executive director or president of the Foundation. The ideal founding director would be a nationally recognized senior figure, whose appointment could lend much needed credibility to the Terra program as it evolves. Ideally, the executive director would be both a senior expert and scholar in American art and someone with extensive museum and administrative experience. If such a person could be found, even for a one or two year term, he or she could work with the trustees to plan the program and the future of the Foundation, and would set both the direction and the standards for future excellence. The Foundation would have to be prepared to pay competitively in terms of salary and support, as the right candidate would have to be lured from another position or from retirement, and the salary of $200,000 to $250,000 would have to be paid. A distinguished appointment could help enormously to win credibility for the Foundation and its program.

The new executive director or president would then hire a curator and other such positions as are deemed necessary.

2.) The board should be expanded and strengthened, with the addition of four or five outstanding representatives of the museum, academic, and foundation professions. The Amon Carter Museum in Ft. Worth, Texas, for example, has profited from such representation on its board.

COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

AFFIDAVIT OF PAUL HAYES TUCKER IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The undersigned, upon oath, does hereby depose and state as follows:

2. On June 29, 2001, six members of the Board purported to approve a proposed settlement that would destroy the vision of Daniel Terra by crippling his Foundation in its mission to propagate American art in the United States and abroad. I voted against the settlement because that was the only action I could take consistent with my fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

3. The provisions of the settlement that restrict the Terra Collection to Chicago for 50 years and install an Illinois majority on the Board of the Foundation are plainly antithetical to the purposes of the Foundation. The charter, the By-Laws, and the well-documented evidence of Daniel Terra's intent to propagate American art worldwide render preposterous any claim that the Illinois-centric provisions adhere to the Foundation's purpose. Just days before Daniel Terra opened the Terra Museum in Chicago, he was in Giverny, France, negotiating the purchase of a piece of property with the intention of establishing a foreign outpost.

6. The tactics of Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins throughout the course of this litigation have been repugnant in many respects. First, it has been clear to me that Mr. Perkins does not respect the mission of the Foundation, as set forth in its charter and By-Laws, to propagate American art in the United States and abroad. His only desire has been to capture the Foundation's assets in the State of Illinois and to make the Foundation "parochial," as he himself has stated.

7. Second, it is obvious that Mr. Perkins has been willing to use the power of his office to intimidate Board members and make personal attacks that inhibit their ability to act in the best interests of the Foundation. This was particularly evident in the cases of Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins.

8. Dr. Stebbins has long been a supporter of considering all options, within and without Chicago, that will best achieve the Foundation's goals for the future. Starting with his first report to the Board as an advisor in 1997, through strategic planning sessions in 2000, Dr. Stebbins encouraged review of both in-state and out-of-state options. He has been an especially strong advocate of maintaining a stand-alone museum. However, when the plaintiffs and Mr. Perkins turned the focus of the litigation upon him and threatened to sully his well-deserved reputation with exaggerated and unfounded charges of impropriety, Dr. Stebbins was pressured to avoid further litigation. He therefore spearheaded the idea of mediation and—after Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant—urged acceptance of a settlement that is in serious tension with his long-stated views about the Foundation's best interests.

9. Dr. Marshall was also the subject of a highly inappropriate use of prosecutorial power that resulted in a clear conflict of interest. I believe that it was inappropriate

The meeting was called to order at 11:15 AM at Floor, 664 N. Michigan, TFA Offices.

Paul Tucker introduced Steve Weil, a consultant from the Hershhorn.

Steve began by indicating that the 1st question that need to be answered was "who is it that TFA intends to benefit, i.e., who is the primary beneficiary. He asked if there was consensus on this question. The discussion indicated the following:

- National and International Art Scholars (scholarship)
- General Public, national and international (US and Europe)
  - All ages from kindergarten to the grave
- Publics' awareness of American art, including understanding and appreciation

Is the status quo doing that? Paul Tucker suggested that the museums are not attracting large enough numbers and that the education is not at a high enough level.

Stephanie Pace Marshall indicated that we needed more leverage, power to influence and visibility.

Paul Tucker noted that:

- We don't have a premiere collection which could attract the numbers needed
- We don't have the "chits" with other museums to attract exhibits
- We don't have the clout with other museums to attract exhibits

Ted Stebbins asked that we flesh out two models: non partnership and partnership.

Paul Tucker said we could generate national and international shows.

Steve reminded us that there were issues of collection maintenance. He further suggested that art needs to be accessible, we need to maximize accessibility, and other programs need to be responsive to public needs.

Margaret Daley asked if the French taxes (which tax us if the art is permanently residing in France) was a consideration.

Steve Weil said that when the collection is in Giverny, it is in "exile". Therefore, this would lead us to the conclusion that the collection needs to be housed somewhere else, if we are responsive to the needs of the art.

A "non-partnership" model would not work if we used Giverny as the only location.

Judith Terra suggested that we have not really gotten to a way to make American Art more accessible. Discussion then ensued around the Chicago property.

The committee asked Donald Ratner to summarize the multiple options and issues that need to be addressed. They then discussed what needs to be reviewed at the June board meeting. Steve Weil said that if we reached consensus that Paul Tucker should go to the Board and indicate what the consensus position was and see if the Board concurs.

Paul Tucker said that we agreed on the following:

- Mission Statement
- Status quo is not acceptable
- Non partnership with the collection going to Giverny is not acceptable
- Partnership seems the only way to go

Paul Tucker suggested that the partnership issues need to be explored. He also said we need to review how well Giverny is used. He then asked if we need to consider the question of opening up our collection to more contemporary art.

The concept of a decision matrix arose again. The committee discussed the need to decide which partnership gives Giverny the best access to shows. We need to evaluate all suitors and need to do a review to rank the suitors.

Margaret Daley asked how we would do a SWOT analysis. Steve Weil suggested that with only one museum, we would not have the clout to generate significant exhibits on its own, but that it needed a partner. At 12:30 Stephanie Pace Marshall had to leave the call. Ted Stebbins again asked which partner would be better to help Terra fulfil its mission

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S MOTION TO ENJOIN THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S USE OF THE CURRENT SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND FOR APPOINTMENT OF A RECEIVER TO CONDUCT THE INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

NOW COMES the People of the State of Illinois by the Attorney General pursuant to §16(b) of the Charitable Trust Act and for reasons set forth herein, move the court to enjoin Defendant Terra Foundation from using the current Special Litigation Committee to direct severely limited in his ability to assist in directing the independent investigation. Thus, it appears the hands on direction will be left to Director Stebbins.

4) Most problematic, however, is the service of Director Stebbins on this special litigation committee. Certain allegations in the complaint concern his purported conflict of interest conduct in auction bidding on behalf of the Terra Foundation. The ability of the Attorney General to ascertain facts and make allegations has been limited because no discovery has yet been conducted. There are matters concerning Director Stebbins' conflicts which come directly from the Foundation's own records.

5) Attached hereto as Group Exhibit A are recent 1999 memos written by the Terra Museum's Chicago Director and curator John Neff, who raises concerns about conflicts concerning Director Ted Stebbins. Neff's memos disclose that Director Stebbins was representing others in reviewing, evaluating and bidding for art at auction, while at the same time doing such for the Terra Museum. In his memos, curator Neff explains that he was to control the bidding, yet Director Stebbins on more than one occasion acted for the Terra contrary to Neff's direction and in circumstances in conflict with his fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation. The memos show that Neff shared these concerns with individual Defendant Director Tucker. These are curator Neff's contemporaneous notes as a record made as an employee of the Foundation The Attorney General has been unable to interview him or depose him, but his statements in Foundation records must be explored in an independent investigation. Clearly Director Stebbins cannot do so.

6) These matters are raised in the complaint without Stebbins being named, but he accepted the appointment to the special litigation committee knowing that these concerns were directed to his conduct and thus he has forced the details herein being set forth.

7) Defendant Tucker is the person who nominated Director Stebbins to the board. As the facts herein show, there are serious concerns about Stebbins' conduct, and it appears that after being informed of such, Tucker aided or allowed the conduct to continue. In these circumstances, it is unacceptable to allow Stebbins to control or serve upon the independent special litigation committee. Courts have found it

11) The factual allegations of the Plaintiffs against individual Directors named as Defendants require the special litigation committee to conduct an investigation. In addition to the issues regarding Director Stebbins presented by the Neff memos, Judith Terra did in fact have museum art taken from the Giverney museum and placed on display in her home in France. A film exists confirming such. Clearly even the temporary appropriation of the Foundation's property by an individual Director is a serious breach of fiduciary duty and must be independently investigated.

12) The case also involves the significant public policy concern that certain members of the Board of Directors are attempting to cause the Foundation to move its museum from Chicago. (See : attachments to the People's complaint, the August 2000 board minutes and Tucker's September 2000 white paper). Those seeking to move the museum now claim that the Terra museum is just not effective at its location. However, in a October 22, 1999 Report to the Board of Terra Foundation made by Terra Museum art Director John Neff, he observes " the Terra finished FY-99 with record attendance,... membership doubled ... and (there is) a growing awareness of and interest in the museum and its programs." This October 1999 report by John Neff explains expansive program development, commitments to Chicago based educational programs and a dedicated staff at the Terra. A copy of John Neff's October 22, 1999 Report to the Board is attached as Exhibit C.

13) Plaintiffs have alleged that those currently controlling the Foundation have mis-managed the operations causing a loss of staff in year 2000 and thus caused the current declines in the Terra museums attendance and function. Defendant Tucker was elected Chairman just last October 1999, just after the aforesaid Neff Report. In less than a year under his management many of the museum technical and professional staff are gone and he and certain board members are now claiming the museum is ineffective at its current location. The Plaintiffs' contentions regarding mis-management clearly require substantial independent investigation.

b) order a limited hearing on this matter;

c) allow limited discovery on these matters;

d) appoint a receiver to conduct the independent investigation and litigation on behalf of the Foundation.

e) enter such further relief that the court deems necessary and equitable under the circumstances.

Respectfully submitted,

RONALD GIDWITZ: Hello?

MALE VOICE: Hello.

RONALD GIDWITZ: Hello?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, who's – is that Ron?

RON GIDWITZ: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron, good afternoon. Stephanie.

RON GIDWITZ: Hi, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is there anyone else on the line?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yes, Art Hartman is on.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Good afternoon, Arthur. Where are you?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I'm just in from Moscow and France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So you're home?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: In France, yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, you're in France. Okay. Okay. Well, we're just – just gathering.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Where are you, Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I'm at my office.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah, that's better.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay. Arthur is very clear. Where are you, Arthur?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I'm in France.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Good. Who else have we got here?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron is in his office and that's all of us so far.

RON GIDWITZ: Yeah, Ted, I'm here.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay, Ron, hi.

RON GIDWITZ: Hi. Are you out on the Cape? Ted?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: No, I'm at home in Brooklyn.

RON GIDWITZ: Ah, there you go.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Welcome, whoever has joined us. Who has joined us? Hello? Anyone join us? Ted, are you still there?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'm here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: All right. Everybody still there?

RON GIDWITZ: Yep.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. Hello, has anyone just joined us? Hm, okay.

FEMALE VOICE: There are people on.

MALE VOICE: Don't tie up this line.

FEMALE VOICE: Okay.

MARGARET DALEY: Yes, nice to talk to you, Stephanie. Have you walked past the Taste of Chicago yet?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, but I've been waiting in traffic. (Laughing)

ARTHUR HARTMAN: What's that?

MARGARET DALEY: Oh, the Taste of Chicago?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yeah.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: It's a huge gastronomical extravaganza where all the restaurants in Chicago, or at least the better ones, sort of lay out their wares along the Lake. It's terrific.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Ah-ha.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And you sample your way to high cholesterol levels.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: (Laughing)

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I understand they will have Lipitor salesmen standing by.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: (Laughing) I can tell you that Mevacor works.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: (Laughing) Don, have you heard from anyone? We know Helene will not be on the call, but have you heard from Judith or Paul or Alan?

DON RATNER: Expected to be on the call, so we're just sort of waiting for them all to –

RON GIDWITZ: And we're expecting Jacques?

DON RATNER: Yes.

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Judith, good afternoon.

JUDITH TERRA: Hi, I've been on the line a minute. I just didn't want to interrupt. Ah, have you started things?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, not at all. We're still waiting for – well, we were waiting for you and for Paul and for Alan, and Jacques. Everyone else is here, except Helene who was not going to be on the call.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So, no, we've not started anything.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay. So who is "we" – who is –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We have just – we have just – ah, the question was asked who are the legal counsel present, and we have Mark Heatwall, who is in Chicago at the Foundation office, as the regular Foundation counsel. And we have Susan Stone and John Sabl, who are here with me in Aurora, and Steve Carlson who is in the Foundation office, all representing Sidley Austin. I was just asking every other Board member on the line are there any other legal counsel present.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Not here in France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Anyone else? Ron?

RON GIDWITZ: No, I'm all by myself.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith?

MALE VOICE: Susan Stone and who?

FEMALE VOICE: So right now, who's missing? Jacques, Helene –

MALE VOICE: Jacques, Helene and Paul – and Alan.

MALE VOICE: Have you tried to call them?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, is there any way we might call people to see if – if they are available? Were you able to get the faxes to everyone, as far as you know?

DON RATNER: I talked to everybody. Everybody said they were going to be on the call. If you've heard from Helene since, fine. I talked to Jacques, and he said Helene was going to be on the call.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh.

DON RATNER: I've talked to Andréani, I've talked to Paul, I've talked to Alan. Everybody –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, okay. Has anyone joined us now?

MALE VOICE: It sounds like Don did a good job reaching everyone.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes. I mean, we do have a quorum now, but I think in fairness, we'll wait just a few more moments. Hello, has anyone joined us? Arthur, are there challenges when you call in from Russia?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, okay. I know that's where Alan –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Well, I'm calling from France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I know you are, but Alan is in Russia, so I was just curious.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No, the same system applies there.

RON GIDWITZ: Could someone please share with me what happened – while we're waiting – in court today? What's all that about?

STEVE CARLSON: I guess I can. This is Steve Carlson from Sidley Austin.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Steve, could you speak up a little bit, please?

STEVE CARLSON: I'm speaking pretty loud for this room.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, okay, I'm sorry.

STEVE CARLSON: (Inaudible) if I don't blow everybody out I'll keep speaking up. There was a motion filed by Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson for a temporary restraining order to try to stop this meeting from going ahead. I –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: What court was this in, Steve?

STEVE CARLSON: It was in the state court, in front of Judge Kinaird, who we've been in front of in the litigation (inaudible).

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Right.

RON GIDWITZ: Who were they representing? I mean, who – they filed it themselves, or was it – because yesterday, apparently, they filed on behalf of the Foundation. Were they doing that again today?

STEVE CARLSON: They had Joel Bellows from the firm of Bellows & Bellows, and Laurel Bellows was there as well. Leonard Garment, who's he –

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible)

STEVE CARLSON: (Inaudible) Todd. Basically the same people from yesterday in the Federal court, but today they were representing only the individual defendant directors in this main lawsuit. And they sought a TRO to block this meeting from going ARTHUR HARTMAN: Thank you.

RON GIDWITZ: Thank you.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is there anyone else on the call? Jacques? Helene? Judith, you are on the call. Paul and Alan?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Judith is that you?

JUDITH TERRA: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes. Yes, go ahead, Judith.

JUDITH TERRA: No, I was just responding. I had to step out. Emma came to get me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, yeah, we're still waiting for Jacques, Helene, Alan and Paul.

JUDITH TERRA: Right. There was a call on my other line.

MALE VOICE: Jacques, how are you? Tally?

MALE VOICE: You've got Tally, too? I'm sorry, I didn't hear an answer to that. Tally is on the call as well? That's a question.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Uh, it's not appropriate for anybody to be on the call other than the Directors and the legal counsel that we have so noted already.

MALE VOICE: Is Don there?

FEMALE VOICE: Why is Tally talking to Don?

MALE VOICE: Tally called Don. He left.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, then I think, uh – I think we will begin. As you all know, this is Stephanie, and I hereby call this meeting to order. Could we please have a roll call of all present? Jacques Andréani. Helene Arweiler. Dean Buntrock.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Maggie Daley.

MARGARET DALEY: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron Gidwitz.

RON GIDWITZ: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur Hartman.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Stephanie Marshall. Present. Alan Simpson. Ted Stebbins.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith Terra.

JUDITH TERRA: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul Tucker. As we know, also present are Don Ratner, Susan Stone, Steven Carlson, John Sabl, and Mark Heatwall..

MARK HEATWALL: Stephanie, Scott Sbla from my office, who was in court this morning observing the proceedings, has joined us. That's Scott S-B-L-A.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Scott is from Winston, Mark?

MARK HEATWALL: Yes, ma'am.

or on behalf of Ms. Montrock and Gidwitz, and the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, and" – and from there on, I would suggest that we take out "any other document they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation." So consider that part of my resolution – amending that phrase.

FEMALE VOICE: What paragraph are you –

DON RATNER: We can't find it. Could you – this is on the first page of the resolution, or is it page 10 of your –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Paragraph 4 –

DON RATNER: Wait a minute. Let me get my – page 10 of your fax.

PAUL TUCKER: Sorry, everyone, I've just finally made it through the Terrace Vidley to be here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, hi, Paul.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: That's all.

PAUL TUCKER: Hi, Steph. Hi, Ted.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul, Ted is – we have called the meeting to order and Ted is – Ted has almost concluded his resolution, and Don is helping people find the appropriate section.

DON RATNER: Page 10, first paragraph, Ted, I think it starts out "Further resolved."

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Further resolved.

DON RATNER: Okay. Now what do you want to change?

set up to be sued. And this strikes me, the way that this has been drafted, that it – it doesn't release the defendants and therefore is permissive in terms of having them sue me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I think –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: And I want protection.

MALE VOICE: Well, I'd like to –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I think, Ted, I think –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Stephanie, why don't we ask legal counsel their opinion, because I'm –

MALE VOICE: Can you speak to as why you want to include this?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I want to be accommodative –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: May I – let me take the privilege of the Chair one moment. We are in the middle of a proposed resolution. I recommend that – or proposed motion. I recommend that Ted make his motion. I will see if there is a second. If there is not a second, the motion fails. There may be a second, and then we have discussion. In my view, it is not appropriate to argue the language or the merits of a motion until the motion is duly put on the table.

RON GIDWITZ: Absolutely. I will –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So, let's – Ted, it may be useful –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay, my motion includes the slight change to the resoltuions. It includes in the Consent Order making it, "The parties, including plaintiffs and defendants, hereto desire." And it includes, under Section 7 of the same Consent would like legal counsel to address one of the changes that Ted referred to, because I – although I want to be able to vote for this motion, I would not be able to do so with one of the changes that he's – he's suggested, because it's my understanding that it is simply not possible for the Foundation to make this judgment. So I would really like legal counsel, so that we're all clear, on exactly where we are and – where we are at this point in time. I personally don't have any problem with the other modifications that, Ted, you made. But I would not be able to support the motion as it presently.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Let's try to let the lawyers lead us through this problem here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes.

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible; whispering)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, I've asked legal counsel to do that.

MALE VOICE: Do you have any preference as to who addresses it? Do you want Susan to address it, or John, or –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Susan can address it.

SUSAN STONE: I can address it. This is Susan Stone from Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood. I understand, Stephanie, you would like guidance with respect to whether paragraph 2 of the proposed Consent Judgment and Order could be amended to change the description of the parties giving the relief to be a more general description, which would include all of the parties, including the plaintiffs and the individual defendant Directors. Is that correct?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: That's correct.

SUSAN STONE: From Ron. Ron, even if you purport to have the Foundation require the individual defendant Directors to release rights, that requirement may not be binding. In other words, it might not be a valid release, because –

RON GIDWITZ: I understand, but there's no damage done.

SUSAN STONE: Well, I do not believe that the Foundation can do this. I do not believe the Foundation can take away the legal rights of another party.

RON GIDWITZ: I understand that. But we have – what my concern is, Susan, is that we have a document that was written and agreed to by six Directors wherein if it doesn't materially affect the execution of the document, why are we making changes?

SUSAN STONE: No. The question is, what can the Foundation counsel put in front of the Board as a document which the Board could pass that has a possibility of standing up to judicial scrutiny, if the Board decides it wants to pass it. And I'm telling you that whatever six individual members of the Board might have done in the last mediation session, that was not an act of the Foundation. The Foundation is a corporation. It can only act through a majority vote of the Board of Directors at a duly called meeting. That has not happened until today. And so the question is, what can the Board do at this point in time. The Board of the Foundation, which is one party to this litigation, cannot unilaterally take away the rights of other parties to the litigation.

RON GIDWITZ: I keep hearing that, and frankly my counsel has also reported to me on numerous occasions that you have made the case that, unless we have a duly called meeting, there's a difference of opinion. And the real issue here, it seems to me, is we'd like to get – we'd like to get this litigation settled, and therefore we'd like to have a MALE VOICE: That's fine, Mark. Ron's point is, which I agree, then it doesn't have to be taken out because the matter can be decided by the courts.

MARK HEATWALL: But if you vote in favor of it and Ron votes in favor of it, what I'm telling you is it would work to your detriment. And I'm not your lawyer –

MALE VOICE: No, I understand.

MARK HEATWALL: – but – but you've got a situation where the – everything I know about this situation tells me – force Paul, Judith and Alan to settle a case that they don't want to settle. And that means that this is a one-way – potentially a one-way settlement by you and Ron against them, and their not waiving rights against you.

MALE VOICE: Fine.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I – I have to say, just to weigh in on this personally, that I mean it's no secret that – that this motion and any changes in bylaws require the vote of at least Directors. And I cannot support the motion as it is currently stated with this amendment to number two. I can certainly support and will support the other changes, Ted, that you made, in both the resolution and the Consent Judgment Order. They seem reasonable. But I cannot and will not support this motion which frankly means you do not have six votes. So I came prepared, I read the motions, I read the Consent Judgment – I mean, I read the resolution, I read the Consent Judgment, I am prepared to support this, but this is a last-minute, 11th-hour change, and I cannot be more clear than I'm being right now. I cannot and will not support this change as it is currently stated.

MALE VOICE: Which change is that, Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: That's fine.

MALE VOICE: Who's this speaking?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: This is Dean.

MALE VOICE: Hi, Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Hey. First of all, I'd like you to respond. You made your position very, very clear, but when counsel for the Foundation and counsel on the lawsuit have both said, as Susan has said, that you can't do it, what difference does it mean to leave the language in there? I cannot see why you take such a strong position.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I guess I take –

DEAN BUNTROCK: (Inaudible) out. Can you respond to that?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah. It is my understanding – well, based on what legal counsel is saying, Dean, I would be voting for something which is – which is judged not to be legal and/or appropriate. I will not vote –

MALE VOICE: But no one – no one has said –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I will not vote to force anyone into a position that – that four attorneys are saying is inappropriate. The Foundation I don't think, or certainly I do not want to approve a settlement that contemplates a release that – that doesn't exist.

MALE VOICE: Stephanie, they haven't. All they've said is that you legally can't do that, so –

MALE VOICE: I appreciate the fact that –

MALE VOICE: If you can't do it, you can't do it. And I think changing – unnecessary.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And I really – I think, frankly, that, Dean, to your question, and Ron, that if you wanted a release from the defendants, then I think it was essential at the time we were in mediation that there was – there was another line or sentence or something that would have induced the individuals to settle. But that was not part of the mediated agreement. And as I said, at this point, I feel it's a highly significant 11-hour change, and I'll stand with what I said before. I came to this meeting as I trust we all did, in good faith. There were six people that signed off on an intention to ratify. There were some things we had to work out since the last mediated agreement, especially the slate of officers. And I think we were prepared, and I hope still are prepared to reach agreement. But if we hold – if some hold fast to this, then that is not going to be possible.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'm persuaded that I was in error, and that I think the attorneys' comments are appropriate and we need an agreement that will stand up under scrutiny.

RON GIDWITZ: Stephanie, I will back off – excuse me, I've got a little food in my mouth. But I will back off my objection, but I will just state for the record that the language that plaintiffs and defendants originally, that the Sidley & Austin attorneys had been moving to change it, I believe – – distributed version.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. Thank you, Ron.

PAUL TUCKER: This is Paul. This is Paul. Am I coming though?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes you are, Paul. Go ahead.

1, paragraph 4, the last two sentences were eliminated. So in that paragraph, it ended "the Attorney General of the State of Illinois." And then we had also a minor revision on the Consent Agenda, paragraph or number 7, which added, after the 2002 annual meeting, "or until 12-31-02," since the date was not clear. So it was Ted's motion to approve the resolution, and then those two minor changes, one to the resolution and one to the Consent Judgment.

MALE VOICE: Right.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So unless there is further discussion, I guess the question is, are we –

DON RATNER: Just a second, Steph. I'm just going over with Mrs. Daley. This is where (inaudible)

ARTHUR HARTMAN: This is Arthur. I'm prepared to vote.

DON RATNER: Stephanie, one second. I'm going over this with Mrs. Daley.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, and I want to – I left out one part, as Ted was talking. It was "until 12-31-02 or whichever comes first."

DON RATNER: I'm just going over that all with Mrs. Daley. So just want to (inaudible)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

DEAN BUNTROCK: So the only changes are to paragraph 2 and paragraph 7, right?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, Judith, I'm sorry. I can't hear you very well. Hello?

MALE VOICE: Just get closer to the phone.

JUDITH TERRA: Can you hear me now? Pardon?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Hello?

MALE VOICE: Closer to the phone.

JUDITH TERRA: I can't. I've got it right in my ear. Can you hear now?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, we can. Not very well, but we can.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay. I just want to say that I am definitely going to object to any waiver of my legal action, and I think I would like to express a strong objection to the fact that Alan Simpson, Helene Ahrweiler, and Jacques Andréani are not on this – at this meeting. Not on this call.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah, we will –

MALE VOICE: I couldn't hear a word of that, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: She said that she would not agree to anything that waived her rights, and that she is voicing strong objection to the fact that Jacques and Helene and Alan were not on the call. And as Chair, I can just simply duly note that, but they were given every opportunity to be on the call. Don talked with –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I had no trouble getting in from France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And they said that they would be. So it is absolutely most unfortunate, but we really could not wait. So, Judith, we will note that for the

MARK HEATWALL: So if there was anything else that was required, we would have to come back to the Board and get approval to –

JOHN SABL: I don't think so. I think it would only be if it was something substantive, and, Ron, maybe you want to speak to what your concern was, since I heard this indirectly from Ted. This language was not intended to make – you know, to file, you know substantive changes. And we thought it was helpful from a catch-all. But what – what was your concern, Ron?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron, are you there?

RON GIDWITZ: I was knocked off somehow. I'm just coming back on.

JOHN SABL: Okay, Ron, the question was asked by – it's John Sabl. The question was asked by Mark Heatwall why we were taking out the catch-all language in the resolution, the one change that Ted made to the resolution that I understood he made at your request. And Mark said, "Isn't that sort of a catch-all if other things need to be filed, and would it be better to leave it in?"

RON GIDWITZ: And that's just the point where I – I heard that, and then I was knocked off the –

JOHN SABL: Okay, and I said that I think this – I thought this language was fine; as we drafted it, it was appropriate and the catch-all was just meant to be if other things needed to be – other things needed to be filed, that it might be better to specifically recognize that. I had understood, or I maybe theorized, that your concern was that language somehow was too broad.

RON GIDWITZ: That is correct.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, have you – have you been able to clarify for Maggie and Dean exactly where the changes are? And then if so, everyone fully understanding what we – what they will be voting on, then I would then call for a vote on the question.

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith?

JUDITH TERRA: Yes. I would like to say a few words before the vote is taken.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, please.

JUDITH TERRA: Can you hear me okay?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, we can.

JUDITH TERRA: I'm on a different phone. I don't know what's –

DON RATNER: Let me just respond to Stephanie's question. I think Ms. Daley and Mr. Buntrock can respond to that better than I. I think I described it. And they're nodding that they understand all the –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, fine. Thank you. Judith, go ahead.

JUDITH TERRA: Well, I just want to say before we take a vote on this motion that the outset, with all due respect to each of my fellow Board members, I think that the mediation result that we are being asked to endorse, and for which we really had high hopes in the beginning, has turned out to be something very different than what we anticipated. For me, it's a process which is distorted the consensual nature of what mediation really should be all about, as reflected in this document. And I think, as Paul Tucker, our Chairman, has already observed, the mediation proposal before us cannot be think it's – I object strongly to the fact that Helene and Jacques Andréani and Alan Simpson were not on this call. Thank you.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: This is Arthur Hartman. We'll be taking a vote which will indicate what all of our views are. I couldn't disagree more with what Judith has said. I think the good of this Foundation has been found in this mediation, and it will carry on the kinds of things that Dan Terra was interested in. And that is my own personal position. Thank you.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I would just like to make a personal comment, too. And I also regret that Jacques and Alan and Helene are not on the call, because I think it would have been important for everyone to have had the opportunity to hear the conversation and to make a statement, if in fact they wished to do so. I sent a letter to David Hilliard dated June 17, where I was responding to the mediated settlement. And in that letter, I raised several concerns which were pretty consistent with concerns I had raised in the past. And then I did say in the letter, having said this, and verbalizing these concerns, that I could live with the substance of the settlement albeit with a heavy heart, and that I was prepared to ratify it at an authorized Board meeting. I also said in that letter that I believe in my heart that it does preserve the most fundamental dimensions of the Foundation's independence in determining the course of its own destiny, which I believe to be stated in the mediated agreement, although I do believe that unprecedented restrictions have been imposed on the Foundation as well. But I believe that a settlement, and not continued litigation, is in fact in the best interests of the Foundation. And I would hope that the 16 Board members for this year, and the 15 Board members in the future

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

MARK HEATWALL: But in a general way to everyone, because you do have fiduciary obligations to this institution, which transcend your obligations to other – other things. And each one of you should examine that. I think Judith brought that to the fore. Stephanie, you echoed it. But since the – the allegations have been made, I think it's important to be on the record. And if anyone feels that they can't vote that way, I think they should abstain. So, having said that, if you vote, I assume that means you are not doing so – so freely.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Well, I – let me just make a personal comment, just in response to what you just said, Mark. I – I have felt in the past that despite the desire of some Board members over the last year or so to try to peg me into an alleged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice, to represent the integrity of my own convictions. I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. It is true that the Attorney General's office has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation. Ted, I don't know if you want to make a comment as well.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is there anyone else who has a statement to make? Otherwise, I will – I think it's appropriate that we now call the question.

PAUL TUCKER: I'd like to make a statement, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul, is that you?

PAUL TUCKER: It's me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

PAUL TUCKER: It's painful to hear the comments that have been made in many quarters, although I admire the honesty about it all. I think it's very difficult to be able to predict the future in any form or fashion. None of us could have – thought we'd be at this particular juncture when we all joined the Board. Maybe some did, I don't know, but I certainly didn't, and I don't think Ted did, or Stephanie did. And I applaud their effort to try to be able to find the right way to act in these difficult causes. But what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview. The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by a public domain, i.e, the hand of the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive. I find it also counter to the very foundations on which foundations – and America as a whole – is supposed to be founded, which is why I protested this mediation, and will continue to do so. I also find it disturbing that the resolution calls for the continued presence of the Illinois factions, not that there are not wonderful people in Illinois, certainly more than enough to handle all of this. But I think that that should have been our choice, not somebody else's choice, and that compromise of our independence is something which I think, again, goes right to the heart of the STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Stephanie, yes. Alan. Ted.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith.

JUDITH TERRA: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul.

PAUL TUCKER: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul?

PAUL TUCKER: No, Steph.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, I'm sorry. I didn't hear you, Paul.

PAUL TUCKER: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: The motion has been passed by six Board members. We now need a motion for adjourn.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I move to adjourn.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, I'm sorry. Is there – the Agenda did say any new business. Is there any new business which needs to come before this Board at this time? Hearing none, we need a motion to adjourn.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: So moved.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is that Ted?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Second.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Second, I'm sorry, Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: No, that was Arthur.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur.

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. REPORTED BY: KAY A. LEVINE, M.A., C.S.R., R.P.R.
Certificate No. 84-3654.

The public policy of the state, the public policy of the United States, the public policy of the United States expressed in the Arbitration Act are that these things are to be encouraged, not discouraged. That's exactly what they would have here. If they want to complain about this agreement, and if they want to complain about this process, they can say it was fraud, they can say it was duress. They can say those things, but they need evidence of proof that's clear and convincing.

There is nothing proffered anywhere here that even offers a scintilla of evidence that nobody agreed to this or it wasn't properly agreed to. In fact, the people that they allege that were somehow coerced are not here. They were not in the federal court. They don't file an affidavit. The very people who supposedly were intimidated or hurt not only do not file an affidavit or appear; in fact, they make a statement that their vote has nothing to do with it. That they were not coerced into making this vote. They make their vote because it's a hard question. And we think on a better analysis here, about.

And if they want to say this was a coerced type of thing, it requires clear and convincing evidence. And that's after they admit there's an agreement; you must have to set it aside. There is no evidence of that at all. At all. All they have is affidavits of third parties, affidavits of an individual, Mr. Tucker, who himself can't testify to what these people feel or don't feel.

He said, I think they were coerced. They just told us they weren't. And in fact the federal court couldn't see any basis to this. Nothing's new. They filed the same things in the federal court. So there's nothing here in front of your Honor to warrant any kind of allowing them to file these matters or to be heard.

These are things that they are just dissatisfied with. Well, they're dissatisfied with a lot of things. Frankly, we're dissatisfied with a lot of things.

THE COURT: Do you believe that it would be different if they came forward with a motion that was seeking to have the Court not approve the settlement because it was not a settlement, not agreed to, something wrong?

MR. QUINLAN: They showed that it had not been agreed or not settled to, and there was substantial evidence -- that is what the Illinois law requires is substantial evidence. It might require a hearing. But there's no substantial evidence of this. In fact, it's admitted.

THE COURT: What about an argument that perhaps there's something illegal about this settlement? I know there were some statements made about that the other day, but I don't really see that necessarily here in terms of something -- cases that are cited that says that there's some provision of this agreement that is contrary to Illinois law.

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you notice in their pleading that they have filed -- actually it's a pleading, there's no complaint on file. There's actually nothing in front of your Honor other than a request to file a motion. So that there's no request to file a pleading. There's nothing that brings this case in front of the Court other than their motion.

MR. BELLOWS: 21 days.

THE COURT: 21? I leave on July 27th. And I would like to have a chance to decide whether or not there's going to be any kind of discovery or evidentiary proceeding here because I would expect that you would do that while -- perhaps while I was gone.

This consent decree provides for the new board to take over and for everything to be done by August 1st. And I'm willing to expedite this as much as I need to in order to get this done.

MR. BELLOWS: Are you ordering the Attorney General to submit himself -- or the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, to submit himself to interrogation by us.

THE COURT: I am not ordering the Attorney General, based on what I have in front of me, to do anything. But he has indicated to you that he is willing to talk to you, and I think a good starting point is to talk to him first. He is a public official. He will not compromise any ongoing investigation, but I would expect that he

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO APPOINT AN INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COUNSEL FOR THE TERRA FOUNDATION, AND/OR RECEIVER

Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra Foundation"), an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Plaintiffs") respectfully move this Court to appoint an independent litigation committee and independent litigation counsel, and/or receiver for the Terra Foundation to represent its interests in this matter. In support of this motion, Plaintiffs state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

The defendants do not take seriously this Court's TRO and the tenor of this Court's ruling. Within 24 hours of the hearing before this Court and entry of the TRO on September 25, independence will be further assured through the appointment of a provisional receiver to implement the Court's order.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND.

Both the plaintiffs and the Illinois Attorney General's office have presented a verified complaint to this Court that the defendants, Paul Tucker, Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and others have caused, and intend to cause, irreparable harm to the Terra Foundation. Rather than safeguarding the Terra Foundation on behalf of the people of the State of Illinois, the defendants have embarked upon a scheme to close the Museum in Chicago and usurp the Art Work and assets of the Terra Foundation (valued in excess of $400 million) for their own purposes, in violation of the charitable trust established by Daniel Terra for the people of the State of Illinois.

A. Tucker, Terra, and Simpson Have Breached Their Fiduciary Duties to the Terra Foundation and Threaten to Destroy the Terra Foundation.

The evidence before this Court established that the Terra Foundation is a public trust, created for the benefit of the people of Illinois by Daniel Terra. The Terra Foundation is comprised of the Terra Museum in Chicago, substantial cash and real estate holdings, a multimillion dollar collection of American art, and a museum in Giverny, France. (See Plaintiffs' Verified Complaint and Illinois Attorney General's Complaint).

The plaintiffs and the Illinois Attorney General have submitted verified allegations that Tucker, Judith Terra, Simpson and others have engaged in serious waste and mismanagement of the Terra Foundation, and threaten imminent harm to the Terra Foundation, including the following:

- Grossly mismanaging the Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons or Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.; and (4) set up an educational facility in Washington, D.C.

- The Terra Foundation's Board of Directors met on August 24, 2000. At that meeting Tucker pronounced that the Terra Foundation should move to Washington, D.C. and close the Terra Museum in Chicago.

- Tucker is both Chairman and President of the Terra Foundation and is responsible for its safety, yet he has allowed and/or caused the Terra Foundation to be depleted of long term staff, has allowed and/or caused the Terra Foundation's long term security personnel to quit, has allowed and/or caused its executive director to quit, and directed that art belonging to the Terra Foundation be delivered from France to Defendant Judith Terra's home.

Because Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan Simpson have displayed an utter disregard for the best interests of the of the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries, the people of Illinois, the defendants should ultimately be removed as directors of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation.

B. This Court Found That a Fair Question Exists That Tucker, Terra and Simpson Threaten Irreparable Harm to the Terra Foundation.

On September 25, 2000, this Court conducted a hearing on the plaintiffs' and the Illinois Attorney General's Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. After the hearing, this Court found that Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan Simpson posed a genuine and immediate threat to the Terra Foundation and that an injunction was necessary to protect the Foundation and the public. This Court enjoined Tucker, Judith Terra, Simpson and others from removing plaintiffs from the board of directors and executive committee of the Terra Foundation, closing the Terra Museum, or relocating the Artwork outside of Illinois. A copy of the Order is attached as Exhibit A.[1] The tenor of the Court's ruling was to preserve the status quo and avoid actions by the was obligated under the Rules of Professional Conduct as "corporate" counsel to advise the Foundation of the conflicts and the impropriety of such an arrangement. See R.P.C 1.7 and 1.13.

The conflict of interest is obvious and irreconcilable. As this Court found, Tucker's misconduct threatens to cause imminent and irreparable harm to the Terra Foundation. Tucker, therefore, cannot be the director of litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation involving litigation against himself. See R.P.C. 1.7; Lower v. Lanark Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 114 Ill. App.3d 462, 448 N.E.2d 940 (2d Dist. 1983). The best interest of the Terra Foundation is to investigate the allegations against Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson. Moreover, Tucker has already demonstrated that his self interest is directly adverse to the best interests of the Terra Foundation. Thus, by unilaterally appointing Tucker as litigation director, the defendants have revealed their intention to use Sidley & Austin as their own counsel. No attorney has filed an appearance for any of the individual defendants in this case. Each of the defendants must have their own counsel to represent them in this case and not the Foundation's counsel. R.P.C. 1.7.

Under Illinois law, as well as authority from other jurisdictions, Tucker must be replaced as "litigation director" and an independent litigation committee and/or receiver must be appointed for the Terra Foundation to manage the litigation. Consequently, Sidley & Austin must be replaced and the independent litigation committee and/or receiver needs to select independent litigation counsel for the Terra Foundation to protect the trust established by Daniel Terra.

It is well settled that a special litigation committee must be comprised of disinterested members. The selection of independent and disinterested members of a litigation committee is of paramount importance to ensure that the best interests of the entity, the Foundation, are served. See Jerold S. Solovy, Barry Levenstam, & Daniel S. Goldman, The Role of Special Litigation Committees In Shareholder Derivative Litigation, Tort & Insurance Law Journal 864, 875. As Mr. Solovy notes, factors that require the disqualification of a board member from service on a special litigation committee include whether it is alleged the director is subject to personal liability and therefore "interested" or whether the director authorized, approved, or benefitted from the transaction underlying the lawsuit. Id. at 875-76. Moreover, counsel chosen must be counsel not previously retained by the corporation and truly independent so as to ensure proper legal advice is provided. Id. ("Consultation with independent counsel has been considered very significant evidence of the special committee's independence.").

The structural bias inherent in the litigation committee context requires that interested directors be disqualified from serving on a litigation committee. See Meg Shevach, Deciding Who Should Decide To Dismiss Derivative Suits, 39 Emory L. J. 937, 958 (1990) (The independent litigation committee must be beyond reproach.)

An interested director must be disqualified from serving on a litigation committee, and as many courts have concluded, directors who are defendants in the litigation should also not be permitted to select the litigation committee's members. See, e.g., Miller v. Register and Tribune Syndicate, Inc., 336 N.W.2d 709 (1983) (interested directors should not vote for the selection of the members of the independent litigation committee.) Here, Tucker, as the litigation director is vested with the authority to make decisions that control Terra's role in the litigation. Tucker's that this Court appoint a receiver and/or order that a special litigation committee be established to retain independent litigation counsel and direct the litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation. This special litigation committee must be composed of independent and disinterested persons, possibly other members of the board of directors. See Zapata, 430 A.2d 788-89 (board of directors can appoint a special litigation committee to oversee litigation, but that committee must be independent); Auerbach v. Bennett, 393 N.E.2d at 1001 (directors selected for special litigation committee must be disinterested).

Who selects the independent board members, and how can the court and the parties be assured of true independence? In this case, resolving such an issue can result in costly collateral litigation. To avoid such collateral litigation and to ensure independent representation of the Terra Foundation, this Court should appoint a provisional receiver under the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/112.55) and the Court's inherent authority. See e.g. People ex rel., Fahner v. Community Hospital of Evanston (1st Dist. 1982). As requested in the verified pleadings of the Illinois Attorney General and plaintiffs, the receiver will be ideally equipped to investigate this matter and recommend to the Court the appropriate independent representation of the Foundation. There is no prejudice to any of the defendants, and the Foundation's best interests will be protected.

II. THE TERRA FOUNDATION MUST BE REPRESENTED BY INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COUNSEL.

It is equally clear that Sidley & Austin cannot represent the Terra Foundation under these circumstances. Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson have compromised Sidley & Austin, and Sidley & Austin has violated Rule 1.7 of the Rules of Professional Conduct by accepting Tucker

(a) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another client, unless:

(1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client; and
(2) each client consents after disclosure.

(b) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client or to a third person, or by the lawyer's own interests, unless:

(1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not be adversely affected; and
(2) the client consents after disclosure.

(c) When representation of multiple clients in a single matter is undertaken, the disclosure shall include explanation of the implications of the common representation and the advantages and risks involved.

Ill. R. P.C. 1.7. Here, Sidley & Austin cannot reasonably believe that its representation of the Terra Foundation under these circumstances will not constitute a violation of its responsibilities under Rule 1.7. Even the Terra Foundation's consent to the representation would not permit Sidley & Austin to continue its representation of the Terra Foundation because Sidley & Austin cannot establish that it would be "reasonable" to believe that it could represent the Terra Foundation without any adverse effect from its relationship with Paul Tucker. In addition, Sidley & Austin cannot undo the harm.

Similarly, Winston and Strawn cannot continue to represent the Foundation under Rule 1.7 because they have a direct conflict with a current client, plaintiff Gidwitz, and have not demonstrated the lack of independence necessary to represent the Foundation. When Tucker was appointed litigation director to direct Sidley & Austin, the Terra Foundation's attorney from

DECLARATION OF PROFESSOR EVELYN BRODY

1. My name is Evelyn Brody. My business address is Chicago-Kent College of Law, Illinois Institute of Technology, 565 West Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois 60661.

2. I am Professor of Law at the Chicago-Kent College of Law at the Illinois Institute of Technology, where I have been a faculty member since 1992. In the Fall semester 2001, I will be a visiting professor at Duke University School of Law. My research interests

6. The settlement agreement would "pack" the Foundation's board with Illinois residents for at least 25 years, and handicap the business judgment of the board with geographic restrictions for the next 50 years, without any support in the existing articles of incorporation or bylaws. The Attorney General cannot, under the law, compel this outcome. Only the courts can preserve the flexibility of this Foundation to operate as originally envisioned.

7. In this Declaration, I will discuss two issues: (I) the significance of the absence of a geographic restriction in the Foundation's organic documents; and (II) the proper role of the State attorney general in the oversight of charities.

I. THE ABSENCE OF A GEOGRAPHIC RESTRICTION IS AN IMPORTANT PART OF THE PURPOSES OF THE FOUNDATION

8. Private philanthropy and the nonprofit sector rest on the fundamental Constitutional guarantees of private property protected by due process, liberty of contract, and freedom of worship and expression. As long as the trust or corporation qualifies as charitable, no legislature, attorney general, or court may mandate a departure from its privately-determined purposes no matter how confident are the parties that a better social use could be made of the funds.

8. The inherent conservative nature of this legal structure has permitted numerous charitable trusts notorious for their founder's idiosyncracies. A donor might dictate a general geographic restriction – such as Buck Trust's limitation of the funds for the benefit of Marin County, California (one of the wealthiest counties in the country). A donor might dictate an even more specific use – such as the prohibition on moving displayed works of art under the trusts establishing the Barnes Foundation (outside Philadelphia), the Isabelle Stuart Gardner Museum (Boston), and the Frick Collection (New York City).

10. Yet just as honored under the law is a purpose clause unrestricted as to geographic use. Indeed, a donor or founder might draw upon the lessons of the Buck Trust and the museum foundations just described – that no mortal can predict the future, and the narrower the purpose, the sooner the charity is likely to outlive its usefulness. Thus, an enlightened founder could recognize that tying the hands of the trustees only invites wasteful benign neglect or wasteful resort to the courts for approval of a cy pres petition. Nor is there any guarantee of a trustee's success in a cy pres proceeding to reform a charitable trust, because relief will be granted only if the original restriction is impossible to carry out. The Buck Trust was prohibited from expending its resources to benefit those in the larger San Francisco area; and a Pennsylvania court recently rejected a thoughtful cy pres petition from the Hershey Trust, whose income from Hershey stock far exceeds its ability to spend, as designated, on students at the Hershey School. Even approval takes time and effort: A Pennsylvania court held a 3-day hearing prior to approving a one-time tour of the art collection of the Barnes Foundation, and the badly needed renovation articles of incorporation impose no geographic restriction. In the case of the Foundation, there has been no failure of its original purpose and so no amendment to the articles of incorporation would be necessary for the board to redeploy assets out of the State of Illinois.

15. State attorneys general have no necessary expertise, much less the resources, to address the myriad concerns of the hundreds of thousands of charities that function in the United States today. In particular, an attorney general is not equipped to set the policies and make the hard decisions required to operate a museum. The museum world of today is a complex web of block-buster tours; collaborations (such as this summer's first-time joint exhibit and marketing campaign in New York by the Whitney and the Museum of Modern Art); and cross-border allliances (the Tate Gallery in London and the Museum of Modern Art, while continuing plans collaborating on painting exhibitions, recently terminated their plans for a joint commercial website). Like the Terra Foundation, the Guggenheim operates or plans to operate museums at more than one location – eight, to be precise (two in New York City and one more on the way, plus Venice, Bilbao, Berlin, and sites planned for Las Vegas and Brazil). Among more traditional concerns, museum boards must worry about such issues as the tax consequences of corporate sponsorship arrangements; the intellectual property value of reproductions; and the price to charge for admission, given the competition for museum-goers' educational and entertainment budget.

16. A State attorney general has the obligation to provide oversight of the charitable sector. To this end, an attorney general is vested with the authority to seek to correct breaches of fiduciary duty that have not otherwise been remedied by the board. However, the attorney general is not a "super" member of the board. Where, as here, suit was brought against the board by a minority of the directors, the attorney general's involvement does not tip the weight of the vote in an area committed to the discretion of a majority of the board. Nor, as described above, does the attorney general have authority to impose changes in the purposes of a charity – in particular, a geographic restriction.

17. A regulator's enforcement activities always have policy implications, even if unintended. For example, when Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morganthau seized paintings loaned by a Viennese collector for an exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art – out of concern that they might have an illegal Nazi provenance – museums throughout New York feared for their ability to put together exhibitions requiring loans from nonresidents. See In the Matter of the Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum Served on the Museum of Modern Art, 719 N.E.2d 897, 901 (N.Y. 1999) (referring to the statute then in effect as intended, in part, "to protect State cultural institutions that depend upon the free flow of art for the benefit of the people of the State of New York").

18. Even charity regulators, understandably, have specific goals and priorities. An elected fiduciaries as much as of the attorney general. Reform rather than punishment is generally the goal of the charity regulator, and board members as well prefer a chance to improve their behavior while avoiding embarrassment and personal liability. Closing agreements or settlements between the regulator and the charity to end an enforcement action can be quite detailed, often spelling out specific terms dealing with future structure and governance. Under these circumstances, however, the board of a charity is vulnerable to being strong-armed into assenting to an attorney general's demands.

23. Only a court decision stands between the Foundation's purpose and governance structure as they existed prior to the Attorney General's involvement, and a radical alteration of purpose and governance structure as described in the Consent Judgment and Order.

CONCLUSION

24. For all the reasons outlined above, the Attorney General's participation in and procurement of the Proposed Settlement – and anticipated future half-century involvement – are inconsistent with the legal framework for the operation of charitable not-for-profit corporations. The Attorney General's actions create an enormous disincentive for charities to locate or seek incorporation in the state of Illinois.

Foundation truce a boon for charities

J Linn Allen, Tribune staff reporter

A squabble in a wealthy and philanthropic family ended with a court settlement Friday that will likely mean a generous and speedy windfall for a number of major Chicago cultural institutions, hospitals and other charities.

Cook County Judge Robert Boharic approved the agreement, which provides that $50 million will be distributed this year from the Regenstein Foundation to a number of recipients, including the Lincoln Park Zoo, the Art Institute, the University of Chicago and Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

It also stipulates that 90 percent of all money donated in the future by the $125 million fund will go to charities and institutions in the Chicago area.

The pact ended more than half a year of wrangling among members of the Regenstein clan on how to distribute money from the Chicago-based foundation, one of the city's major benefactors for more than 50 years.

The conflict began late last summer when Betty Regenstein Hartman, daughter of fund founders Joseph and Helen Regenstein, proposed to give away $82 million to various charities in a single year, which would cut foundation funds by two-thirds. Typically the fund gives out only about 5 to 7 percent of its assets a year.

The fund's director, Robert Mecca, blocked the plan, expressing fears that it was a prelude to shutting the fund down. He was supported by Susan Regenstein Frank, a daughter of Hartman's brother, Joseph Regenstein Jr., who ran the fund for many years before his death last year.

Art on Michigan Avenue from moving out of town.

'I'm glad it's over'

Susan Frank, who lives outside Philadelphia, said she and her brother were happy about the settlement, and added that she had long wanted to be a member of the foundation board. "I'm glad it's over," she said.

Last fall, when the family conflict became public, Frank said closing down the foundation would be contrary to the wishes of her father, Joseph Regenstein Jr., who had long been a fixture in Chicago philanthropic circles as head of the foundation.

Frank also said at the time that Hartman didn't have the "energy, care or education to be bothered" with the foundation.

Among the factors holding up settlement of the case, whose terms had been worked out in principle months ago, were some $750,000 in fees being billed to the foundation by attorneys representing the warring parties. A side letter to the pact said the lawyers would reduce their billings to the foundation by 15 percent.

Lincoln Park Zoo president Kevin Bell said he was glad the foundation would continue to be a major giver in Chicago over the long term.

Bell said that the foundation has pledged $9 million for a project to transform the large mammal house to the Regenstein African Journey, and that funds for the project had been coming in regularly despite the conflict.

Joseph Regenstein, who made his fortune in the paper-making and chemical business, and his wife, Helen, set up the foundation in 1950.

Re: Interview of Floyd D. Perkins Regarding Terra Foundation Litigation

Dear Mr. Ioppollo:

Thank you for responding by telephone to our request to interview Mr. Perkins. While the circumstances compel us to accept your limitation of the interview (as you put it, to an informal "chit-chat"), we are disappointed that Mr. Perkins has refused to discuss his role in the Terra case on the record and under oath.

Nevertheless, due to the tight briefing schedule set by the Court, we feel we must proceed with the interview. Of course I am sure you understand that we do so without waiving our right to depose Mr. Perkins or any other discovery rights to which our clients are entitled under well settled law.

We ask that you reconsider, at least, conducting the interview on the record. This will serve all parties' interests in avoiding confusion about the content of the conversation. A transcript will make clear the questions put to Mr. Perkins and his answers without the need to rely on note taking. This is in everyone's interest.

Dear Mr Levinson.

Dr. Stebbins is on vacation He learned yesterday of your desire to interview him "on the record and under oath" on Tuesday, July 17 "concerning [his] involvement in the Terra Foundation litigation "

Dr Stebbins has already stated on the record at the June 29, 2001 Board Meeting the reasons why he joined a majority of the Board in voting in favor of the results of the Court-ordered mediation. We believe you already have a copy of the tape of that meeting. We have prepared a transcript of the meeting of which you could have a copy if you like Dr Stebbins would not say anything to you inconsistent with what he already said on the record at the June 29 Board Meeting.

Re: Interview of Dr. Stephanie Marshall

Dear Mr. Roberts:

I represent Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker in the Buntrock v. Terra litigation and am writing to request your assistance in scheduling an interview of Dr. Stephanie Marshall in connection with the upcoming hearing on the proposed settlement of that dispute.

I understand that you represent Dr. Marshall in connection with the Illinois Attorney General's investigation concerning the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. We have been seeking to interview Dr. Marshall regarding the settlement of the Buntrock v. Terra litigation. Last week Laurel Bellows, my co-counsel, called Dr. Marshall's office and spoke with her assistant; Ms. Bellows left a message explaining that she would like to interview Dr. Marshall concerning the settlement and requested that Dr. Marshall return her call. Dr. Marshall did not return Ms. Bellows' call.

While I do not understand you to represent Dr. Marshall in connection with this specific dispute, I am requesting your assistance in scheduling the interview given your representation of her in a closely-related matter. We would like to interview Dr. Marshall under oath and have a transcript made of the interview. Due to the schedule set by the Court, we would like to conduct the interview tomorrow or Wednesday, although we also may be able to do it Thursday morning.

I appreciate your assistance in this matter and look forward to hearing from you.

Very truly yours,

David E. Ross

AFFIDAVIT OF BRIAN L. CROWE IN SUPPORT OF SHEFSKY & FROELICH LTD.'S PETITION FOR FEES AND COSTS

I, Brian L. Crowe, under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-109 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, certify that the statements set forth in this Affidavit are true and correct.

1. I have knowledge of the facts contained in this Affidavit and if called as a witness could testify competently thereto.

2. I am a shareholder in the law firm of Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. ("Shefsky"). I am the attorney who was responsible for supervising the litigation work performed by this law firm during the period it represented the Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson ("Director Defendants") in this matter, October 2000 to June 29, 2001. I have been licensed to practice law in the State of Illinois since 1964 and have overseen and conducted numerous lawsuits.

3. For nearly twelve years, from 1975 to 1987, I served as a Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, and in that capacity I had occasion from time to time to review, and rule on, the reasonableness of attorneys fees awarded in various matters in which fees were an appropriate award.

4. From 1997 to 1999, I served as Corporation Counsel for the City of Chicago, and in that capacity I had occasion from time to time to review attorneys fees charged to the City of Chicago by outside counsel.

5. I have also, from time to time, been called and qualified to testify as an expert witness regarding the reasonableness of attorneys fees.

6. Each of the foregoing experiences has provided me with an informed basis to state my opinion that the fees and costs billed by Shefsky for its representation of the Director Defendants are reasonable.

7. Exhibit A to this Affidavit is a detailed explanation of the work performed by members and employees of Shefsky in connection with the above matter and the charges for that work. The explanation includes the date of the service rendered, the identity of the person rendering the service, a detailed narrative of the service rendered, and the amount of time spent providing that service. For those persons who provided services both before and after November 1, 2000, two hourly rates are given because Shefsky's hourly rates increased on that date.

9. As is correctly reported on Exhibit A, the attorneys' fees the Director Defendants incurred in connection with this matter through June 29, 2001 total $450,800.00.

10. In addition, the attached Exhibit A shows the costs incurred and disbursements made by Shefsky on behalf of the Director Defendants in relation to this matter.

11. As is correctly reported on Exhibit A, the costs incurred and disbursements made by Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. in connection with this matter through June 29, 2001, total $17,576.17.

12. The total of these amounts equals $468,376.17.

13. Based upon my experience, the amount charged in this matter for the services rendered and costs disbursed was reasonable and necessary. SHEFSKY & FROELICH LTD.'S PETITION FOR FEES AND COSTS

Movant, the law firm of Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. ("Shefsky"), by its undersigned counsel, pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order entered in this matter on July 26, 2001, hereby petitions this Court to enter an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts to pay to the attorneys' fees and costs due it in its representation of the Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson ("Director Defendants") in connection with this matter. In support hereof, Shefsky submits the accompanying Affidavit of Brian L. Crowe (the "Crowe Affidavit"), and in further support, states as follows:

1. In October 2000, the Director Defendants, each a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, engaged Shefsky to represent each of their interests in connection with this matter.

2. As this Court is aware, Shefsky accepted that engagement and from October 2000 through to its withdrawal of representation on June 29, 2001, diligently represented each of the Director Defendants in this matter.

3. On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order ("Order") pursuant to which some of the parties resolved the disputes among them. Under Paragraph 12 of that Order, "[r]easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation."

4. As Foundation Directors who incurred attorneys fees in connection with this lawsuit, the Director Defendants' reasonable attorneys fees, as determined by this Court, "shall be paid by the Foundation."

5. Moreover, under Section 108.75(d) of the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act, 805 ILCS 105/108.75(d), the Court may enter an order directing a not for profit corporation to pay a party director's fees and costs.

6. The determination of what are reasonable attorneys fees is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Anderson v. Anchor Org. for Health Maintenance, 274 Ill. App. 3d 1001, 1007, 654 N.E.2d 675, 681 (1st Dist. 1995). The factors a Court should consider when exercising that discretion include > the services performed, the time expended thereon, the attorney's hourly rate, the skill and standing of the attorney, the nature of the case, the difficulty of the issues involved, the importance of the matter, the degree of responsibility required, the usual and customary charges for comparable services, and the benefit resulting to the client.

Id. at 1008, 654 N.E.2d at 682. In considering each of those factors, the Court is not limited solely to the evidence of reasonableness presented, such as provided in the Crowe Affidavit, but may also apply its own general knowledge of the practice of law, and its specific knowledge of the case at hand, in arriving at the reasonable value of professional services. Id.

7. Here, given the regular and lengthy court appearances of all counsel in this case, and the many legal memoranda submitted to the Court by all counsel on a multiplicity of issues, the Court has had an extraordinary opportunity to assess each of the above factors as applicable to each of the attorneys for each of the Foundation's Directors.

8. In addition, as to the Director Defendants, the Court also has the evidence provided in the Crowe Affidavit to determine the reasonableness of Shefsky's fees.

9. As attested by the Crowe Affidavit, supported by a detailed description of each of the services provided, the reasonable value of the services rendered and costs disbursed by Shefsky in its representation of the Director Defendants is $468,376.17.

WHEREFORE, movant Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. respectfully request this Court enter an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts to remit to Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. the sum of $468,376.17, which sum represents the reasonable value of legal services rendered, and costs charged, in its representation in this matter of Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson, as Foundation Directors.

Respectfully submitted,
Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., Movant,

Case No. 01 L 009112

Hon. Timothy C. Evans

DEFENDANT TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' MOTION TO TRANSFER THIS MATTER TO THE PRESIDING JUDGE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, CHANCERY DIVISION, FOR REASSIGNMENT TO JUDGE DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD

Defendant the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, by its attorneys, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, hereby moves this Court to enter an order transferring this matter to the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Chancery Division, pursuant to General Orders 1.2 and 1.3 of the Circuit Court of Cook County. In support of this motion, the Foundation states as follows:

1. Having failed in their multiple attempts before the Chancery Court to upset an agreed settlement that they do not personally support, Plaintiffs' current action in Law Division represents nothing more than their attempt to seek out another judge in another division who they think may be more sympathetic to their claims. On three separate occasions over the past month and a half, the Plaintiffs have been given the opportunity to present their arguments to block the settlement and resulting Consent Judgment (which was entered on July 26, 2001 after extensive consideration of the same matters alleged here by Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird on June 29, July 2 and July 24). Yet, on each occasion, Judge Kinnaird, who has presided over the Buntrock v. Terra litigation, Case No. 00 CH 13859 (Circuit Court, Cook County, Illinois), since its inception over 10 months ago, has found that the Plaintiffs' allegations lacked merit. In a blatant attempt to shop for a new judge, Plaintiffs then presented precisely the same allegations that they raised in front of Judge Kinnaird in their current Complaint in the Law Division in the guise of a new case, Case No. 01 L 009112.

2. On August 13, 2001, at a hearing on Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion for the Entry of a Temporary Restraining Order," Judge Sheldon Gardner, to whom the case had been assigned, sua sponte and upon oral motion of the Foundation transferred the case to the Presiding Judge of the Law Division for consideration of whether this matter should be transferred to the Chancery Court, indicating on the record that he believed that this matter should be before Judge Kinnaird. Given that Plaintiffs seek relief that is most appropriately granted by the Chancery Court, and that Plaintiffs' claims in this Court mirror those already presented to Judge Kinnaird, this Court should transfer Plaintiffs' claims to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for subsequent reassignment to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

I. Plaintiffs' Suit Must be Transferred because it Seeks Remedies Properly Considered by the Chancery Division.

3. Transfer to the Chancery Division is mandated by the remedies Plaintiffs seek and the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County. In seeking to undo the settlement agreement embodied in the Consent Judgment, Plaintiffs ask this Court for declaratory and injunctive relief. Yet, General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) of the Circuit Court of Cook County expressly provides that:

> The General Chancery Section hears actions and proceedings, regardless of the amount of the claim, concerning ... injunctions, temporary restraining orders ... declaratory judgments, ... and all other actions or proceedings formerly cognizable in courts of Chancery not otherwise provided for.

See General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) (emphasis added); see also Baal v. McDonald's Corp., 97 Ill. App. 3d 495, 501, 422 N.E.2d 1166, 1172 (1st Dist. 1981) ("In general, injunctions rest on the authority of courts of equity to restrain persons within their limits of jurisdiction from doing inequitable acts to the wrong and injury of others.")(emphasis added); Brooks v. LaSalle National Bank, 11 Ill. App. 3d 791, 801, 298 N.E.2d 262, 269 (1st Dist. 1973) (the granting of injunctive relief "resides in the sound discretion of the chancellor.")(emphasis added).

4. Given this mandate of the General Orders regarding the types of cases properly presented to the Chancery Division, it is clear that Plaintiffs have filed this action in the wrong division. Under General Order 1.3(c):

> Any action assigned to a judge that is determined by that judge, whether by the suggestion of the parties or otherwise, to have been filed or to be pending in the wrong department, division, district or section of the Circuit Court of Cook County, shall be transferred to the Presiding Judge of the division or district in which it is pending for the purpose of transferring the action to the Presiding Judge of the proper division or district, or for reassignment to the proper section.

See General Order 1.3(c) (emphasis added). Judge Gardner clearly recognized the requirements of General Order 1.3(c), and immediately transferred this matter to this Court for consideration of reassignment. Because Plaintiffs' filing of this action in the Law Division completely ignores the mandate of General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1), this cause must be transferred to the Chancery Division under the requirements of General Orders 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) and 1.3(c).[1]

II. Transfer of this Case to the Chancery Division would allow for Reassignment of the Matter to Judge Kinnaird, Whose Lengthy Involvement with and Consideration of the Legal and Factual Claims Made by the Plaintiffs Would Foster the Most Efficient Disposition of this Litigation.

Transfer of this matter to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division would also allow for subsequent reassignment of this case to Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division. In addition to the mandatory transfer rules of General Order 1.3(c), General Order 1.3(d) provides for transfer of matters to other divisions when such an action would further "the more efficient disposition of litigation." See General Order 1.3(d). Here, Judge Kinnaird's extensive involvement with the case giving rise to the Consent Judgment and her exhaustive consideration of the exact claims Plaintiffs now present necessitate transfer of this matter to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird.

5. Since Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz, two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, filed a lawsuit against the Foundation, the three Plaintiffs in this case, and an unrelated third party in September 2000, Judge Kinnaird has presided over all aspects of that litigation. Over the past 10 months, Judge Kinnaird has become intimately familiar with both the law and the facts related to this case, having first presided over four months of contentious motion practice followed by five months of mediation sessions aimed at reaching an agreement that would result in the dismissal of the Buntrock lawsuit. These mediation sessions eventually led to the entry of a Consent Judgment and Order on July 26, 2001.

[1] Any attempt by Plaintiffs to point to their "jury demand" as a reason for this Court to deny transfer to the Chancery Division is unavailing. The Supreme Court of Illinois has recently noted, "Conferring

6. In the process of entering this Consent Judgment, Judge Kinnaird also became intimately familiar with the claims Plaintiffs have made in the lawsuit they now seek to present in the Law Division. Plaintiffs first sought to block the settlement through presentation of a Motion for Temporary Restraining Order on June 29. After hearing argument on this matter at a hearing on the same day, Judge Kinnaird rejected Plaintiffs' motion for TRO and permitted the Foundation to hold its properly noticed and convened Board meeting at which the settlement was approved.

7. Three days later, on July 2, Judge Kinnaird again heard argument from the Plaintiffs that the settlement should be blocked, at which time the Plaintiffs filed a Motion for Leave to File Written Objections and for an Evidentiary Hearing on the Proposed Settlement. However, the Judge again rejected Plaintiffs' attempts to upset the settlement based upon their personal dislike for its terms. In denying Plaintiffs' motion, Judge Kinnaird noted that "You know, you've come into court and you've filed a number of things, and they sound very, very dramatic. But I don't see anything here supported by affidavit. I don't see anything here supportive of any substance." Tr. of Proceedings, 7/2/01, p.85. However, Judge Kinnaird did permit any party to file a written objection supported by affidavits after a motion for entry of the Consent Judgment was formally presented.

8. Plaintiffs then got their third "bite of the apple" in late July after the Foundation filed its Motion for Entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. On July 19th and July jurisdiction in chancery is not excluding trial by jury." Martin v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 163 Ill. 2d 20th, the Plaintiffs filed exhaustive pleadings objecting to the settlement, and seeking not only to state various counterclaims against the individuals they have now sued in this action, but also seeking to conduct limited discovery. After having reviewed all of the pleadings, exhibits, and cases submitted by the Plaintiffs, as well as the responses to these pleadings – a process that required the judge to "devote her whole weekend" to reviewing the literally hundreds of pages of documents – Judge Kinnaird then heard five hours of argument on July 24, 2001 concerning the very matters Plaintiffs now attempt to place before this Court. At the end of that hearing, Judge Kinnaird rejected Plaintiffs' unfounded attacks on the settlement for a third time and entered the Consent Judgment embodying the terms of the settlement.

9. Now, having had their exhaustive arguments repeatedly rejected in the Chancery Court, Plaintiffs seek to present these same claims and arguments in a new division. An examination of the Complaint Plaintiffs filed in the Law Division makes clear that all of the allegations and underlying facts are nothing more than matters that have been previously alleged and argued, and are an integral part of the proceedings before Judge Kinnaird in Chancery. See, e.g., ¶ 1 of Plaintiffs' Complaint (stating that the directors who voted for the settlement had engaged in "a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation"), ¶ 6 (alleging a "tainted mediation process"), ¶ 43 (attacking the Attorney General's role in the mediation process), ¶ 70 (alleging that each director who voted in favor of the settlement breached their fiduciary duty to the Foundation), ¶ 80 (seeking "a declaration that the settlement is unlawful"), ¶83 (stating that the court "should enjoin" the directors' approval of the settlement as ultra vires). Given Judge Kinnaird's extensive knowledge of and dealings with these claims and the facts surrounding them, that the Court-ordered mediation took place in the case pending in front of her, and that the Consent Judgment embodying the settlement was entered by her, judicial economy and fundamental fairness require transfer of this case to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Court for subsequent transfer to Judge Kinnaird under General Order 1.3(d).

CONCLUSION

10. The fact that Plaintiffs are now attempting to present their thoroughly considered and repeatedly rejected claims in another division and to suggest that they are somehow presenting a Law Division case is further proof that their present suit is nothing more than a transparent attempt to shop for a division and a judge that they think might be more amenable to their claims. Having failed in their numerous and exhaustive attempts to present their claims to the judge most intimately involved with the Buntrock litigation and designated under the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County as the proper forum in which to present their claims for equitable relief, Plaintiffs now attempt to breath new life into their tired and groundless arguments in the Law Division. Given the Chancery Division's designation as the proper forum in which to seek injunctive and declaratory relief, Judge Kinnaird's understanding of and experience with the facts and law surrounding Plaintiffs' claims, and the fact that the "claims" are an attack upon the settlement reached in the case in front of her and embodied in an Order entered by her, this case should be immediately transferred to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird .

WHEREFORE, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts respectfully requests that this Court enter an order transferring this cause to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT - CHANCERY DIVISION

BUNTROCK, Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. 00 CH 13859
TERRA, Defendant.	)

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS had in the above-entitled cause, before the Honorable DOROTHY K. KINNAIRD, one of the Judges of said Division, had on the 29th day of August, 2001.

PRESENT:

MR. ROBERT CUMMINS
MR. DAVID NOVOSELSKY
MS. SUSAN STONE
MR. WILLIAM R. QUINLAN
MR. BRIAN CROWE
MR. JAMES WILSON
MR. WILLIAM SCHUMAN
MR. FLOYD PERKINS
MR. JAMES CARROLL

Ruby L. Prince
Official Court Reporter
69 W. Washington St., Rm 900
Chicago, Illinois 60602

THE CLERK: Buntrock -v- Terra, 00 CH 18359.

MS. STONE: Good morning, your Honor.

THE COURT: Is it? I'm sorry, I don't mean to be facetious. Let's start at the far right with some plaintiffs over here.

MR. CARROLL: Good morning, your Honor. James Carroll on behalf of Buntrock and Biglets.

MR. QUINLAN: Good morning, your Honor. William R. Quinlan on behalf of Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Biglets.

MR. PERKINS: Good morning, your Honor. Floyd Perkins on behalf of the People.

MS. STONE: Good morning, your Honor. Susan Stone on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. SCHUMAN: Good morning, your Honor. William Schuman from McDermott, Will & Emery, on behalf of Dr. Stephens.

THE COURT: Is Dr. Stephens a party in my case?

MR. SCHUMAN: He is not, but what I understand to be up today has to do with fee petitions to be submitted to your Honor. And as I understand, the terms of the settlement agreement that would include Dr. Stephens, we have been counseling him since February.

And so when we saw the papers here provided to us by the Foundation, we thought it was appropriate to be here.

THE COURT: And that's McDermott, Will & Emery?

MR. SCHUMAN: Yes.

THE COURT: Good morning. I haven't seen you in a long time.

MR. CROWE: Yes, Judge, I'm Brian Crowe on behalf of the fee petition of Shefsky & Froelich.

MR. WILSON: James Wilson on behalf of the fee petitioner.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, you're kind of separating yourself from the defendant. What's going on?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, we're not parties to a consent decree, but I do represent Miss Terra, Dr. Tucker and the Senator.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: What I suggested to Mr. Wilson, because clearly there was a misunderstanding in his communication with Mr. Cronin, which I thought we had clarified on Friday, that all of this be continued to the 17th of September.

At that time some related issues that are before Judge Evans may clear the air on some of the issues pertinent to this business of fee petitions as well.

So, our position is that, of course, people can file whatever they want to file, but with respect to Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson, their clients, my clients, our clients, were not, never have been and are not currently the subject of any aspect of that consent decree.

And, therefore, it is inappropriate and inconsistent in terms of their representation or continued obligation to those folks not to be pursuing fee petitions at this time.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. I didn't understand that last sentence. Does that mean that your clients are not going to be submitting a fee petition or they are going to be submitting --

MR. CUMMINS: Not pursuant to any consent decree, Judge. Whether or not the Foundation is obligated to pay Shefsky & Froelich or Tom, Dick and Harry, is a matter that we will address with the Foundation and should be addressed with the Foundation, but it's not pursuant to this consent decree.

THE COURT: Well, it sounds to me like there's probably the need for me to adjudicate this fee petition here because that's all that was left in my case. And I don't know what's happened since I signed my order on July 26th, except that I was advised by Judge Gardner that a matter came in and that he sent it to Judge Evans.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: And I don't know what he did and what was done and I haven't seen any orders, and I did not get -- I had briefed all of the people in our division who were handling my call in my absence about all of my cases that I thought something might come in on, and I did not hear from any of them that the motion to stay had come in. I did not hear anything about a notice of appeal. I don't know what's gone on.

MR. CUMMINS: The case has been appealed, your Honor.

MS. STONE: May I address the Court?

THE COURT: Tell the reporter, your name.

MS. STONE: Susan Stone.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I don't want to be rude to Miss Stone, but before she addresses the Court, you should be advised Sidley & Austin is a defendant in a lawsuit. We have indicated that they should not be appearing on behalf of the Terra Foundation. That's a matter that's currently pending before Judge Evans.

So, Miss Stone may speak, but I just want the record to reflect that she's not speaking on behalf of the Terra Foundation as far as we're concerned.

THE COURT: Okay, but in this case she's counsel and Sidley & Austin is counsel for Terra Foundation. And there have been numerous rulings of this Court and I think a couple of the Appellate Court that have said that Sidley & Austin may represent the Foundation, and I don't know that any other judge has entered an order that says they may not.

So, on behalf of the Terra Foundation, what is it that you would like to say?

MS. STONE: Okay. Your Honor several things, first just to bring your Honor up to date on the history of what's gone on since we are last in front of you and the consent judgment.

Once you entered the consent judgment, by the terms of the consent judgment and the resolution, a new board was formulated. The new directors became directors effective with the entry of the consent judgment.

There has been a meeting of the board, the new officers elected, the committee chairs, the Foundation's business is proceeding.

There were several things that have been happened judicially. Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson, have done several things. They have filed a Notice of Appeal in Federal Court of the dismissal of their 1983 suit against the Attorney General.

In addition, they filed an appeal of your Honor's entry of the consent judgment. In addition, they have done really what amounts to a sort of a sideways appeal for forum shopping attempts to file a separate lawsuit in Law Division to again challenge or appeal your Honor's entry of the consent judgment.

That was what was filed originally in front of Judge Gardner. Judge Gardner said I believe the case should be sent back to Judge Kinnaird and you can quote me on that, but what he did was send it, as appropriate under the rules, to Judge Evans as head of Law Division to do the reassignment.

THE COURT: And has Judge Evans done anything yet?

MS. STONE: No. That will be up on the 13th. I believe it's the 13th.

THE COURT: Of September?

MS. STONE: Yes. That is up for the consideration of the reassignment and the consolidation back to you.

Also up at that time, your Honor, is the motion by Attorney Cummins on behalf of Mrs. Terra, Mr.

Tucker and Senator Simpson to challenge Sidley & Austin to strike the pleadings that we filed on behalf of the Foundation.

They have also sought to file an amended complaint. Leave has not yet been granted. That is the complaint that makes reference to Sidley & Austin and Winston in which they, in essence, seek to disqualify us. It is yet another attack on us.

THE COURT: Okay, well let's not attack whatever it is they're doing. I just want to know where it is.

MS. STONE: In terms of what is up today as I understand it, the issue of fee petitions are up in front of your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay, let's just stop one moment. Has there been any emergency motion or anything filed, motions to stay, anything involving my case in the entry of a consent decree?

MR. CUMMINS: Other than the appeal.

THE COURT: Just a notice of appeal. There hasn't been -- a docketing statement hasn't been done, no emergency motions, no relief asked up there and, no relief asked of any of the people in my division, sitting in my stead about that consent decree?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, not quite, but I want to be careful that I don't mischaracterize something.

What took place contrary to what Miss Stone suggests is that there was an attempted blessing of the socalled new board members.

Unfortunately, they were apparently and providentially advised that somehow, pursuant to your order, they automatically became something. So, we moved for a temporary restraining order before Judge Gardner.

THE COURT: Is that before Judge Gardner? Okay, did he deny that?

MR. CUMMINS: No, ma'am. What he did do was when all of the defendants in the newly initiated litigation said, hey, we're not going to do anything, the board won't take any action, that became moot.

When we appeared before Judge Evans last Friday, Thursday or Friday, it was again agreed that things would remain status quo until Judge Evans had a chance to consider all of these issues on September 13th.

THE COURT: Was there ever an order entered either by Judge Gardner or Judge Evans, preserving the status quo and preventing the Foundation from going ahead and doing its business?

MS. STONE: No.

MR. CUMMINS: Oh, yes. Miss Stone may say, no, but at the hearing, and we've got a transcript, at the hearing everyone said the board will -- they were going to have a meeting, Judge, on -- they proposed to have a meeting on August 14th. The basis for the temporary restraining order was to stop that from taking place.

The meeting was cancelled and it was agreed and understood that no further action would be taken and that's what has been the status since then.

THE COURT: But there was no -- my question was really had there been an order entered? Was there an order that said status quo, everybody's agreed?

MR. CUMMINS: No, there's a transcript that reflects --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, for the record, I need to correct a misimpression that's being left here. I think that's an inaccurate portrayal of what happened. There was an initial board meeting held with the new board.

THE COURT: When was that?

MS. STONE: That was August 1st.

THE COURT: And that's when the new board was elected?

MR. CUMMINS: The new directors --

MS. STONE: Pardon me, if I may respond to the Judge's question because I believe she addressed it to me.

The new directors became directors, became directors automatically upon your entry of the consent judgment on the 26th of July.

A meeting was held with all of the new directors. Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson opposed the holding of that meeting. The meeting nevertheless progressed.

At that meeting there were election of new officers, new committee chairs. There were discussions of other aspects of Foundation business. There were discussions about future meetings that would be held, et cetera.

Another meeting was then scheduled to take place on August, Tuesday, August 14th. On Monday August 13th, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson went in, in front of the Law Division judge, Judge, I believe was it Gardner or Evans, to try to stop that meeting.

Because it is the Foundation's position that this case does not belong in Law Division, this is really just another bite at the apple to try to get another judge --

THE COURT: Let's not characterize it. Go ahead.

MS. STONE: We believed it was not appropriate for him to exercise jurisdiction. We voluntarily agreed to cancel that meeting.

There was no agreement that the Foundation would come to a grinding halt and would stop conducting business whatsoever.

To the contrary there was actually discussion at that meeting that with proper notice, with five days proper notice, you would be back and any future TROs they wanted to bring would be brought in front of you.

So, there was no agreement to chill everything --

THE COURT: So, there have been no other board meetings since the August 1st board meeting?

MS. STONE: That is correct.

THE COURT: And we have new officers, people are signing things, going along, operating the business, and the Foundation is going under the direction of new officers?

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And the staff and the Foundation is taking its direction from the new officers?

MS. STONE: That is correct.

THE COURT: And there's been no motion or order or anything entered by anyone stopping any of that from happening?

MS. STONE: That is correct.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, excuse me just one second. You asked a very simple question. At the August 1st meeting, were the new board members elected?

THE COURT: I meant the officers. How about the officers. They were elected, right?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, excuse me, may I just make this observation, nobody was elected. Nobody was elected at that board meeting.

What they did do at that board meeting was attempt to vest Mr. Marshall Field with some authority, who had not been elected a board member, and that's one of the problems.

But all of this, most respectfully, will get sorted out in the litigation that's currently pending before Judge Evans.

All I'm suggesting, since Judge Evans is going to be ruling on these matters on the 13th of September, he's holding a hearing both with respect to the Sidley problems that we've addressed and with respect to this transfer motion that is before Judge Evans, which we are vigorously opposing, all I'm suggesting is there's no fire here. Let's wait until September 17th. That's why I suggested you just continue this.

No one has contacted, for example, Miss Bellows about fee petitions, assuming arguendo, that's a more appropriate matter before you, we suggest it isn't, but no one's contacted them. No one conferred with the lawyers in Washington on this subject.

I got word about this, yes, and I said let's hold our horses. There's no rush, no need to rush this given the complicated nature of these proceedings.

THE COURT: Well, some of these lawyers have been involved in this case since it started back in September of 2000 and haven't gotten paid any money yet.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, none of these lawyers are starving. I mean, you can take judicial notice of that. I mean, my goodness.

THE COURT: How can I take judicial notice that they're not starving?

MR. CROWE: I have been talking about my family eating tuna fish and now it's cat food --

THE COURT: I think he said something about a cloth coat and a whole bunch of other stuff in the cast.

MR. CUMMINS: He may still be. I'm not even sure he's not still on the public dole in some way.

THE COURT: I don't think so. In any event, why is it a really big deal for everybody who wants to get a fee petition on file before the Court to get it on file?

MR. CUMMINS: Can I suggest one.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CUMMINS: Let's assume I'm correct that your consent decree has no effect whatsoever with respect to our folk. Let's assume also that's there are other problems with that consent decree.

My position, with respect to my respected colleagues, Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson, who I would like to see make as much money as they can, and I'll tell you this when I look around and see how many lawyers are showing up on a routine motion like this, two or three lawyers from law firms, that raises a question to me about who is going to be deciding what fees are reasonable under the circumstances.

THE COURT: Well, I think unfortunately the consent decree says I have to do it, and in order to do it, I have to have the fee petitions.

MR. CUMMINS: If the consent decree affects those -- we are not parties. Their clients are not parties to this consent decree. Your consent decree cannot affect parties that are not parties to that decree. It's a settlement, Judge. It's nothing more.

THE COURT: I don't really understand why Mrs. Terra, Senator Simpson and Dr. Tucker would be objecting to anything that their former attorneys are submitting as far as have the Foundation pay the fees, whether there's a consent decree or whether there is not a consent decree. Their position has been from day one, that the Foundation should pay the fees. Everybody else is now agreeing the Foundation should pay the fees.

And now their attorneys, their former attorneys, maybe not their second attorneys and maybe not their third attorneys, but their original attorneys are saying let us get paid.

MR. CUMMINS: All right, Judge, that's not a problem. Let's address that with the Foundation. We don't address that with your Honor most respectfully.

You -- in our judgment, and I say this with the utmost respect for this Court, you have nothing to say about what Miss Terra, Mr. Tucker or Senator Simpson do vis-a-vis their lawyers or how their lawyers get paid if they're entitled to get paid by the Foundation. Let's address that to the foundation.

THE COURT: So, you want Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson to submit their fee petition to the board of the directors of the Foundation and have the Foundation staff or whatever review it and pay it or not pay it?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, what I suggest that I think makes better sense to do it this way, is that Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson and I confer with our clients and discussion the appropriate way to deal with this issue given the complex procedural issues that are currently before Judge Evans and before the Appellate Court. That's what I suggest.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, may I be heard?

THE COURT: Well, I really don't have any problem with anybody being heard. I do have a problem with my whole call being ruin for this morning because I need to kind of be on time here.

I don't have a motion to stay my decision. I don't have anything from the Appellate Court that stays it. I have an order that I entered that was shown as this case is done. The only thing that's left in this case is for the fee petition.

MS. STONE: And you also retained jurisdiction for the purposes of enforcing the consent judgment. That's important to note. That's Paragraph 13.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I just want to proffer that I surely have questions about Mr. Cummins standing. He himself, by his own admission here, has nothing to do with this consent decree.

He has filed an objection to it and your Honor has ruled on that and he has appealed that decision. He now stands before your court, I don't know on what basis, and he complains about a fee petition of counsel of which is no longer party to anything he has to do with it and by his own admission.

So, I don't know what he's talking about, about his objection and frankly his suggestion about the board hearing this, et cetera, is contrary to the very order that your Honor has entered that he has objected to that is now a final order, which you have retained jurisdiction to enforce.

As far as Judge Evans, I was at the hearing in front of Judge Gardner and Judge Gardner took no action whatsoever. His only concern was to preserve this for you when you came back so that he would not in any way interfere with your case.

He found this to be the same case, if not the related case, if not the same case. The only thing he transferred it to Judge Evans for was for reassignment.

They have filed a number of motions, but the only motion that's pending that will be heard on the 13th is the reassignment back here to the Chancery Division and to your Honor. That's what's at issue.

THE COURT: Is this thing before Judge Evans totally argued? I mean are we --

MR. CUMMINS: Here's where that stands --

THE COURT: And he's suppose to give a ruling on the 13th?

MR. QUINLAN: He has asked for briefs to be filed and briefs are being filed and he will then hear argument on the 13th.

THE COURT: What day are the briefs due?

MR. QUINLAN: Our briefs were filed on Monday and their reply is due Friday?

THE COURT: The only reason I'm asking on timing as to whether anything is really going to happen on the 13th, you all know we have a chief judge election the night of the 12th and it has been set over for day two to the 13th, and we're either going to be in the middle of that election, he's either going to be chief judge that morning or somebody else is going to be, and I'm just wondering are you actually going to have an answer on the 13th. Is that's what's expected?

MR. QUINLAN: The way it would if we got a judge to come in from Peoria. I assume your Honor is correct.

THE COURT: I'm wondering if you think you're really going to get a ruling that day on this whole issue?

MR. CUMMINS: I do. Yes, I do.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: Let me suggest something, first of all, Mr. Quinlan has made a number of inaccurate statements. I won't try to clarify all of those, but he's made a couple of inaccurate statements.

Why am I here? I'm here because I represent Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson. I'm here because their lawyers are, at least indirectly or tacitly giving some credence to this consent decree that's not in the clients interest. That's why I want this continued.

With respect to the briefing schedule before Judge Evans, I'll tell you precisely where that stands. The final reply brief on the motion to transfer was filed yesterday, on Monday. What is today? On Monday.

And on Friday of this week, Sidley & Austin will respond to our motion to have their pleadings stricken and their appearance stricken.

We will file a reply brief to that a week from Friday, which I guess is the 8th of September.

THE COURT: So, I just want to know if it's set for ruling or argument?

MR. CUMMINS: It's set for ruling on September 13th at 2:00 o'clock. Judge Evans has already had a preliminary hearing on this when he set up this briefing schedule. I expect there's going to be a ruling that day.

THE COURT: Let's me have Mr. Novoselsky introduce himself and then I need to move on with what I've got today.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Good morning, your Honor. David Novoselsky. I apologize for being late, but my co-counsel has ably argued, I'm sure.

THE COURT: He certainly has and you're not rushing in with any kind of order from the Appellate Court right now, are you? I mean, there's nothing new?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I wasn't anticipating one, your Honor, but if you want I can go get one.

THE COURT: No, I had to deal with what I have.

MR. CROWE: Judge since it's my motion --

THE COURT: Your motion is to set a deadline for the filing.

MR. CROWE: It's for hearing.

THE COURT: It's for hearing, okay. Well, I anticipate that the fee petitions in this case are going to be in the multiples, hundreds of thousands of dollars, maybe even pass a million.

They are not going to be fee petitions that are going to be quickly reviewed. I need to have the fee petitions of all counsels at the same time to show that I can check and see if one person is charging three hours for a very quick court appearance and somebody else is charging 23 minutes or whatever, and if one person brought over 4 lawyers on a routine matter and another person only brought over one.

And I keep really good notes of who comes to court and who is here and whether I thought that more lawyers came than were necessary to come on a particular day.

And, so, I'm going to be spending a long time going through whatever the fee petitions are in this case.

MR. CUMMINS: I hope you made that note today, Judge.

THE COURT: Yes, I've noted that Mr. Novoselsky has come to and we've one, two current lawyers for at least for -- well no, we only have one for the Foundation.

MS. STONE: We always have one.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I'm just here to watch and learn, Judge. I wasn't here to bill for it.

THE COURT: I understand. So, I'll be looking at all the bills eventually, but the earliest that this happens -- I mean, my case is done. I haven't stayed anything. The Appellate Court hasn't stayed anything. Nothing else has been consolidated with this case. As far as I'm concerned, my case is over except if my orders are not being followed or a fee petition has to be adjudicated.

And I think it's totally reasonable to require any lawyer who thinks that they are entitled to fees under the consent decree to give them a period of time to get those fee petitions on file.

MR. CROWE: Under it or outside of it? We've got a motion to advance pending before you and you reserved ruling.

THE COURT: And your motion says, Mr. Crowe, that you want it done by tomorrow, the 31st, Friday.

MR. CROWE: I hope you prioritize ours, Judge, because our petition has been before you for a long, long time.

THE COURT: Let me ask everybody else, when's the Foundation ready to get its on file?

MS. STONE: First of all, the foundation wants the right to respond to the fee petitions presented by the other counsels.

THE COURT: Of course, everybody's going to have a chance to do that.

MS. STONE: Because it is the Foundation ultimately which is responsible for this, and it is the foundation which has agreed to pay reasonable fees and only reasonable fees of the directors who are involved in this lawsuit.

If you read the language carefully, the Foundation did not obligate Sidley & Austin to present its fees, your Honor, for review.

Sidley & Austin has been presenting its fees to the Foundation. Those have been reviewed by the ILC throughout the pendency of this litigation. Those fees have been discussed and resolved. So, we are not coming to you with a fee petition.

THE COURT: So, you're being paid by the Foundation now and you do not intend to submit a fee petition?

MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor. We're not obligated to do that --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: So, we're clear, your Honor, we intend on behalf of our clients to vigorously object to the sweetheart deal as it sounds like -- you know, our people have hired us. They think our fees are just wonderful coming out of somebody else's pocket, the Foundation. We don't think it's cash cow.

So, we, of course, want to make it clear on the record that we vigorously intend, wherever the forum is, to ask if all fees be reviewed by somebody responsible rather than somebody with an inherent interest in paying or not paying certain --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, I object to the characterization of the sweetheart deal.

THE COURT: I understand --

MS. STONE: If I may just make one statement, the Foundation who has hired counsel, has had to pay for counsel, and has a way to settle this entire dispute and agreed to pay for other peoples legal fees, including people who have sued the Foundation.

THE COURT: Anybody who's not otherwise being paid, who believes that by virtue of the filing of this lawsuit or by virtue of the consent decree, they are entitled to fees, which are not being paid and otherwise are not going to be paid, unless a court order comes ordering them to be paid, has until September 11th to get those fee petitions on file.

And I will set this matter for status right after the 13th, like maybe the 15th. Let me look at calendar to make sure there aren't any holidays I'm interfering with or anything, and set it for right after that so that anybody who, any fee petition that's filed, gets sent to all counsel of records in this case.

And anybody who feels they're in a petition, definitely the Foundation, but anybody else where they're going to want to say something about them, I don't know that the consent decree provides objections to each other fee petitions, but I don't think it does, but I think I'm going set this for a period of time for the Foundation to read these and tell me how long you really need to respond. I'm not adjudicating these fee petitions. I'm not setting the hearing date right now, but I think that it's reasonable to say, get them on file by the 10th.

Anybody who thinks they're entitled to be paid, and I'm going to set this in the afternoon at 1:00 on the 14th, which is the day after -- is that the day something is suppose to happen?

MR. CUMMINS: Would you mind doing that on Monday the 17th? I'm going to be tied up in court in DuPage all day on 14th.

THE COURT: I won't do it. Rosh Hashana begins at sundown the 17th. If I do it at 1:00 o'clock, is that going to affect anybody going off early? Just want to make sure.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I believe Mr. Crowe will be leaving earlier so he can go to the synagogue.

THE COURT: I just want to make sure. Maybe somebody from Sidley, maybe somebody from McDermott. I just want to make sure.

MS. STONE: Is there any way we can do it earlier that day?

THE COURT: Well, I just want to make sure. I'm fully booked in the morning. In fact, I'm fully booked in the afternoon. I was giving you the lunch hour.

MS. STONE: You anticipate this to be a long hearing with argument or merely a short status hearing to see where we stand?

THE COURT: Why don't I do it at 10:00 o'clock in the morning?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I'm in a hearing before Judge Shader in Federal Court on the morning of the 17th. That's why I suggested the afternoon. If you want to push it later in the week, that's fine with me. I don't care.

THE COURT: The next two days, some people take two days for the holiday. I want to make sure I'm not doing anything that's interfering with anybody's holiday.

MR. CUMMINS: How about the 20th?

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Judge, the 20th I'm in Baltimore.

MR. CROWE: Should we take your noon hour, Judge --

THE COURT: What was the problem with the 14th? Why don't we just have some people come in on the 14th?

MR. CUMMINS: Because I'm in hearing before Judge Duncan in DuPage County.

THE COURT: And what time is that hearing?

MR. CUMMINS: It's probably going to last most of day because it's the cross-examination of a witness.

THE COURT: Can Mr. Novoselsky come in and tell what the position of --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: If it's just a status, your Honor.

THE COURT: It's just a status to see what the response time is going to be for the fee petition and somebody to tell me what happened the day before.

MR. CUMMINS: Right. Just a minor footnote, your Honor, I was --

THE COURT: A quick minor footnote. I really destroyed my call.

MR. CUMMINS: I was otherwise engaged at the time of the proceedings before Judge Gardner, but Mr. Novoselsky presented the temporary restraining order, and there have been a couple representations to the Court this morning that there was no agreement, that there would be a, essentially a status quo and that no action would be taken by the Foundation's board without appropriate notice to everybody.

And to the extent that anybody wants to persist in that position, I think Mr. Novoselsky can set the record straight on that.

THE COURT: I don't really need to have it set straight. I have nothing in front of me. My question was a very simple one; was a court order entered that memorialized the keeping of the status quo, and the answer was no court order was entered. So, that's all I wanted to know.

MS. STONE: 1:00 o'clock, your Honor?

THE COURT: 1:00 o'clock on September 14th. You have until the close of business September 10th. Any attorneys who believe that by virtue of the filing of this case and/or the entry of the consent decree, they're entitled to payment, which payment must be approved by a court order, needs to file a fee petition by the close of business that day.

MR. CROWE: And all objections to those petitions will be filed by the 14th.

MS. STONE: No.

THE COURT: No. On the 14th, we will set the schedule for -- because we'll see what we have.

MS. STONE: The Foundation is entitled -- pardon me I want to clarify because I hear colloquy between counsels.

The Foundation does have the right at the appropriate time to file written objections to any of the fee petitions, we just haven't set the date for it.

THE COURT: I'm not putting that in an order. I'm going to take a look at the consent decree. I assumed that the Foundation --

MR. QUINLAN: Paragraph 12, your Honor --

THE COURT: would be filing objections, but that's wrong?

MR. QUINLAN: That is not correct. May I speak? Your Honor, it provides in Paragraph 12, reasonable attorney fees incurred by the Foundation's directors in connection with this lawsuit as determined by the Court shall be paid by the Foundation.

The very reason it was not to go to the Foundation is that they were part of the litigation, and there was an adversarial position by everybody.

THE COURT: Well, the Foundation does know -- the Foundation right now doesn't know what it's position is, okay?

Miss Stone is not going to be able say right now what the position is until she has the fee petitions. Let's her get the fees petitions --

MR. QUINLAN: That may all be true, your Honor, but the Court's order specifically so provides. There's another issue about protocol and the filing of any documents relating -- of the fee.

This is an ongoing case, as your Honor obviously can see here. There is a very great concerned about revealing documents and information that involve attorney/client privilege, work product, strategies and that kind of thing.

There has to be some protected order and, frankly, it should be presented solely to the Court for the Court's consideration.

The amount of the fees may be disclosed. The affidavit supporting it maybe disclosed, but any other information seems to be most appropriate under these circumstances that they should be submitted to your Honor for your Honor's consideration, and it's not an objection process here. No objection process is provided for. Second of all, we have an ongoing case --

THE COURT: Are you suggesting that anybody who has a fee petition that wants to submit it, should be doing it under seal?

MR. QUINLAN: Insofar as any of the backup document is concern, which involves discussions with clients, which discovers strategy, which discovers all those types of things, those have to be protected.

THE COURT: Do you put those in your bills?

MR. QUINLAN: Of course, those are concomitants, you're meeting with people, you're discussing things.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We're not bound by the consent decree. We didn't agree to it. For them to say now we can't object because they agreed to conceal --

MR. QUINLAN: They are bound by the consent decree

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You are we --

THE COURT: I'm going to ask you all to sit down. I'm going to finish my call. You might get recalled around 12:00 o'clock at the rate things are going or later, except that I have a meeting at the offices of the Supreme Court at 12:00 and I'm going to be there. So, I don't know when you're going to get recalled.

If you all persist in talking at the same time, it's just going to be a really long day here. I don't know how many times I can say and say it over again, and I don't know if I have a communication problem and you're not hearing me well, but you're going to come back on a status. And the status is going to be on Friday the 14th of September at 1:00 o'clock.

By that time these fee petitions will be filed. I'm not going to order that anything be filed under seal in this case, and I trust that if there is highly confidential information in bills, that everybody will have the good sense not to file that with the Clerk of the Court, and there may be a procedure where you file something and then you say, you come in on a motion and you say, I'm going to file a more full copy with the Court or whatever and this is the reason.

But your fee petitions, if anybody wants to file them, they're due the 10th. I will see you on the 14th, and that will be for scheduling the hearing date on the fee petition.

And at that time, at 1:00 o'clock on the 14th, we will find out if any party in this case feels that they are in a position or they have a right to object to any fee petition and why and how that objection shall be done.

MS. STONE: But they should be served on counsel, is that correct?

THE COURT: Yes. Anything you're going to file, anything you file with the Clerk of the Court and with me, obviously gets served on everybody else.

MR. CROWE: I hear you, your Honor. We understand.

THE COURT: Draw me up an order.

MR. CUMMINS: One final point, do I understand that we will receive the bills that Sidley & Austin has submitted to the Foundation? My clients, as board members, would like to see those.

THE COURT: Well, your clients as board members can exercise their rights as boards members with the board to receive whatever, but you don't need to do that request in front of the Court. Thank you.

MR. CUMMINS: I hope you have a nice holiday.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, I got to let you go because you've got a big call. I just want to make certain that people will be filing fee petitions in enough detail that we will have the opportunity to make any intelligent objections --

THE COURT: If you don't believe that there's sufficient detail, you can certainly raise that issue when I see you again.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And we will object to Sidley's fees if they're not submitted at the same time as everyone else, your Honor.

THE COURT: Would you please call the next matter?

CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS CHANCERY DIV.
CLERK BROWN

No. 00 CH 10859
Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

DEFENDANTS' AGREED EMERGENCY MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME

Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson move this Honorable Court for an extension of time to and including Monday, September 17, 2001, within which to address this Court's order of August 29, 2001.

* * * *

Because defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson are not parties to the consent judgment/settlement which is the subject of this Court's order of July 26, 2001, these parties and their counsel must yet address the presentation of billing statements to the Foundation for prompt payment pursuant to the indemnification provisions of the Foundation's by-laws.

Inasmuch as the Foundation is a party to the settlement/consent judgment, the Foundation may deem it necessary to submit the Terra/Tucker/Simpson reimbursement demands and related bills to this Court for approval pursuant to the July 26, 2001 order.

The movants, on the other hand, have sought appellate review of the July 26, 2001 order and have initiated independent proceedings (i.e., Civil Action 01 L 009112) seeking to resolve, inter alia, important public policy issues. Such appellate review and movants' other independent causes of action create a circumstance such that Terra, Tucker and Simpson require an additional several days to implement a demand for payment without compromising their position or claims as asserted or to be asserted in such other proceedings.

While the matter of payment of attorneys' fees is of critical importance to Terra, Tucker and Simpson who have already invested substantial sums in defending themselves, they and their counsel require the additional time to prudently and appropriately pursue their reimbursement remedies.

The undersigned has consulted with Mr. Perkins, Mr. Carlson of the Sidley firm, Mr. Carroll of the Quinlan firm, and Mr. Schuman of the McDermott firm, and they have agreed to our request.

Wherefore, defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson respectfully request they be granted to and including September 17, 2001 within which to address this Court's order of August 29, 2001.

Respectfully submitted,

JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER
and ALAN K. SIMPSON

BUNTROCK and GIDWITZ, Plaintiffs, vs. TERRA, et al., Defendants.	)	No. 00 CH 13859
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, Plaintiff-Intervenor, vs. TERRA, et al., Defendants.	)

MOTION FOR ENTRY OF PROTECTIVE ORDER

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., hereby move this Honorable Court for the entry of a protective order protecting the confidentiality of attorney invoices being submitted in this case. In further support of their motion, plaintiffs state as follows:

1. On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order ("Consent Order") settling this matter. That Consent Order provides inter alia for the reimbursement of reasonable attorneys fees and costs incurred by the Plaintiffs as determined by the Court. (Consent Order, ¶ 12.)

2. On August 29, 2001, this Court ordered the petitions for fees and costs to be submitted pursuant to the Consent Order and filed with the Court by September 11, 2001.

16di-002521

Subsequently on September 7, 2001, this Court modified its order allowing parties additional time to file any petitions.

3. Concurrently with this motion, Plaintiffs are submitting to the Court a petition for attorneys fees and costs pursuant to the Consent Order entered July 26, 2001.

4. The specific provisions of the Consent Order provides that the reasonableness of the fees and costs claimed will be determined by this Court. The Court has already recognized that highly confidential information should not be filed with the Clerk of the Court and that the parties could file a motion with the Court to protect such information. See Transcript of Proceedings from August 29, 2001, p. 33 attached as Exhibit B.

5. The information communicated to a client in an attorney invoice is highly confidential and protected by the attorney-client and work product privileges. Indeed, this confidentiality is incorporated into the federal rules governing the submission of fee petitions. See, Local Rule, Northern District of Illinois, 54.3(d)(1) ("These records may be redacted to prevent disclosure of material protected by the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine.").

6. This litigation is ongoing, despite the settlement, as is evidenced by the director defendants' several collateral attacks on the consent judgment and order. Indeed, a notice of appeal has been filed in this matter challenging the Consent Order. Additionally, defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson have filed an action in the Law Division, Tucker et al. v. Buntrock, et al., 01 L 009112, which challenges this Court's entry of Consent Order. Several motions to transfer and/or consolidate the Law Division action have been filed. Those motions to transfer are fully briefed and are scheduled to be heard on September 17, 2001 by Judge Evans. If the motions are successful, the Law Division action may be consolidated with this case.

7. For these and other reasons, it is clear that this matter is ongoing and Tucker, Terra and Simpson intend to continue to attack the entry and terms of the Consent Order.

8. The sensitive attorney client, work product and confidential information contained in the attorney invoices submitted by the Plaintiffs must be protected. See, e.g., People ex rel. Ulrich v. Stukel, 294 Ill. App. 3d 193, 201, 689 N.E.2d 319, 325 (1st Dist. 1997) (recognizing that attorney billing records may be privileged). Protection of the confidentiality of these invoices would be appropriate under any circumstances, however, considering the ongoing nature of this dispute, it is all the more imperative that a protective order be entered by this Court.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz respectfully request that this Court enter a protective order protecting the confidentiality of the attorney invoices submitted by the Plaintiffs in connection with their petition for fees and costs, and for such other and further relief that this Court deems just.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You are we --

THE COURT: I'm going to ask you all to sit down. I'm going to finish my call. You might get recalled around 12:00 o'clock at the rate things are going or later, except that I have a meeting at the offices of the Supreme Court at 12:00 and I'm going to be there. So, I don't know when you're going to get recalled.

If you all persist in talking at the same time, it's just going to be a really long day here. I don't know how many times I can say and say it over again, and I don't know if I have a communication problem and you're not hearing me well, but you're going to come back on a status. And the status is going to be on Friday the 14th of September at 1:00 o'clock.

By that time these fee petitions will be filed. I'm not going to order that anything be filed under seal in this case, and I trust that if there is highly confidential information in bills, that everybody will have the good sense not to file that with the Clerk of the Court, and there may be a procedure where you file something and then you say, you come in on a motion and you say, I'm going to file a more full copy with the Court or whatever and this is the reason.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff-Intervenor, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	No. 00 CH 13859 Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS OF DEFENDANTS ALAN SIMPSON, JUDITH TERRA, AND PAUL HAYES TUCKER

Defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (collectively, "Defendants") respectfully move the Court for an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra Foundation") to pay their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to the Restated Bylaws of Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Bylaws") and the Court's order of August 29, 2001.[1] In support hereof, Defendants submit the Declaration of Leonard Garment. Defendants further incorporate by reference all pleadings, files and records in this action; material that may be judicially noticed by this Court; the presentations and arguments of counsel, if any; and other such matters that the Court may properly consider, and in further support state as follows:[2]

1. Since May 18, 2001, Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand ("Verner Liipfert"), has represented the Defendants – each of whom is a director of the Terra Foundation – individually in the above-captioned matter.

2. Verner Liipfert is a full service national law firm with a trial court and administrative law practice consisting of general litigation as well as specialized litigation in the fields of corporate transactional, international trade, white collar crime, energy, environmental and employment law. Over half the attorneys at Verner Liipfert are currently practicing before regulatory agencies and State and Federal trial and appellate courts across the country. In addition, the firm's corporate law group advises major U.S. companies and foundations on litigation and related corporate governance issues. The Terra matter at Verner Liipfert is under the supervision of two senior members of the firm - - Leonard Garment and Lawrence Levinson.

[1] Defendants' substantive and procedural objections to the Consent Judgment and Order of July 26, 2001 ("Consent Judgment and Order") are well-documented. During the August 29, 2001 hearing, however, the Court invited all parties to file petitions for attorneys fees if they are entitled to payment either (1) "by virtue of the consent decree" or (2) by "the filing of this lawsuit." Aug. 29, 2001 Tr. at 26. Defendants are entitled to payment of their attorneys fees by "the filing of this lawsuit," see generally Terra Bylaws Art. X § a, and thus are submitting this petition pursuant to that instruction, without prejudice to their objections regarding the substantive and procedural propriety of the Consent Judgment and Order."

[2] The fees sought in this Motion do not include fees and expenses for performed but as-yet unbilled work. It also does not include fees and expenses associated with future work on post-trial motions or any appeal. Accordingly, Defendants anticipate filing a supplemental motion for additional fees and costs at a later date.

3. Leonard Garment is an experienced trial lawyer who has been long active in complex litigation in Federal and State courts. A graduate of Brooklyn Law School (1949), Mr. Garment was Chairman of the Litigation Department for more than a decade at the New York law firm of Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander. Mr. Garment served as an Assistant and Counsel to President Richard Nixon (1969 – 1974), Assistant to President Gerald Ford (1975), Counselor to Ambassador and Senator Daniel P. Moynihan and to U.N. Ambassador and Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton. He was Counselor to the United Nations Delegation (1975 – 1976) and U.S. representative to the U.N. Human Rights Commission (1975-76). He served as Chairman, Commission on the Federal Judiciary of Senator Moynihan (1976 – 1988), Vice Chairman of the Second Circuit Nominating Commission (1979 – 1980), and was a member of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Judicial Conference of the United States. Before joining Verner Liipfert in 1998, Mr. Garment was a partner at Dechert, Price and Rhoads and at Dickstein, Shapiro & Morin, where he specialized in all aspects of Federal and State litigation.

4. Lawrence Levinson received his LLB from Harvard Law School and upon graduation served in the U.S. Army's Judge Advocate's Division. From 1957 to 1965, Mr. Levinson was Special Counsel at the Pentagon where he dealt with various national security litigation issues affecting the Defense Department. From 1965 to 1969, Mr. Levinson was the Deputy Special Counsel to President Lyndon Johnson and prepared various legislative proposals involving the operations of the U.S. Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission. After leaving Washington in 1969, Mr. Levinson became a senior executive at Paramount Communications where his duties included supervising the company's legal department and focusing on issues involving the corporation's charitable foundation and pension funds. During this period, Mr. Levinson also served on the Board of Directors of the predecessor company to Paramount (Gulf & Western) where he was responsible for Management Information Systems and Government Affairs. In 1995 Mr. Levinson joined Verner Liipfert where he has been active in a variety of litigation matters before various federal and appellate courts in the District of Columbia.

5. Harry McPherson, a graduate of Suwanee College and The University of Texas Law School, served as Counsel to President Lyndon Johnson and in his 30 years of private practice has counseled a number of major U.S. corporations and non-profit organizations and foundations on a variety of matters, including issues of corporate governance. Currently, he is a member of the Board of Directors and Chairman of the Independent Audit Committee of a corporation listed on the NASDAQ.

6. The Bylaws of the Terra Foundation provide that the Foundation "shall indemnify any and all of its directors...against expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they, or any of them, are made parties...by reason of being or having been" a director, unless that person is found "liable for willful misconduct in the performance of duty and to such matters as shall be settled by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Bylaws Art.X § a. None of the Defendants was found liable for any misconduct in his or her service as a director, and the matter was not settled "by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Instead, plaintiffs dismissed their claims against Defendants.

7. Consistent with the Bylaws and the Court's order of August 29, 2001, "[r]easonable attorneys fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." (See introduction on p. 1 and ftn. 1 on p. 2 supra.)

8. During this period, Mrs. Judith Terra and Naftali Michael (a non-director defendant and long-time friend of Mrs. Terra) advanced $105,000 from their own funds to defray on-going legal expenses and have pledged to supply additional funds. We believe that no other party to this litigation has taken similar action.

9. Attached as Exhibit A is the affidavit of Leonard Garment which explains that the rates for each attorney and support personnel working on the case are based on Verner Liipfert's standard hourly billing charges and expenses. These rates were established by the firm's management committee as the customary and appropriate prevailing market rates taking into account experience, skill levels and educational background of those working in the Terra litigation. Once a sealing order is entered, Defendants will submit detailed billing statements evidencing the actual time expended by individuals working on the case each day, the identity of the individuals performing the work, the legal tasks performed, and the applicable hourly rate.

10. These billing records reflect the scope, intensity and depth of the legal work performed by Verner Liipfert. Since the firm's involvement in the case on behalf of Mrs. Judith Terra, Dr. Paul Tucker and Senator Alan Simpson, it has acted as coordinating counsel to Kellogg Huber, Cummins & Cronin, and to Bellows & Bellows, as well as advising its clients on a day-to-day basis concerning the strategic and legal issues at issue in the various matters pending before the Illinois courts. In so doing, the firm helped to develop, research and prepare emergency motions and supporting legal memoranda, and appeared and argued cases before this court and the Federal District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

11. In addition to the services performed, the time expended, the attorney involved, and the hourly rate, the reasonableness of a petition for attorneys fees under Illinois law depends upon "the skill and standing of the attorney involved, the difficulty of the work, the novelty or difficulty of the issues, the importance of the matter, the benefit obtained by the client, and the usual and customary charge for such services." Cabrera v. First National Bank of Wheaton, No. 2-00-0781, 2001 WL 845979 *12 (Ill. App. July 28, 2001). All of these factors further support the award of attorneys fees sought by this Motion.

12. With respect to the "skill and standing of the attorney[s] involved," each lawyer involved in this case is qualified with respect to a matter of this complexity. Mr. Garment brought over three decades of complex litigation experience to the case. He is supported by other lawyers with exceptional educational background and significant litigation and corporate experience. See ¶ 3,4 and 5 supra.

13. This heavily contested case continues to present major procedural and substantive challenges. Because of the rapid sequence of unfolding events, emergency petitions and temporary restraining orders had to be prepared under severe time pressures. Verner Liipfert did not become fully engaged in the matter until June 2001 when it was asked by its clients to commit fully its resources to the defense of the litigation, to design a comprehensive strategy to vindicate the rights of its three client Board members and to protect the long-term interests of the Terra Foundation in upholding Mr. Terra's intent and the Foundation's right of self-governance. Given these circumstances the firm was required, in the exercise of its professional responsibilities, to become familiar with the course of this complex litigation which began in late September 2000. During the initial period, the firm reviewed the extensive record of the case and its procedural and factual background. In addition, the firm was required to contend with two law firms on the other side of the case - - Sidley & Austin and Quinlan & Crisham - - as well as the Illinois Attorney General. Each of these firms and the Illinois Attorney General continued to file extensive pleadings which required timely and effective responses. As an example, Verner

Liipfert and Kellogg Huber were required to respond in less than 24 hours to three separate briefs totaling over 80 pages in opposition to the Defendants' objections to the proposed settlement.

14. Beyond the complex array of procedural issues, the case to date presents novel substantive legal issues. These include the scope of fiduciary duties of independent not-for-profit foundation directors including their duties of care, disinterestedness, loyalty and obedience, and the relationship of these duties to the intent of the founder of a not-for-profit foundation. At stake are complex issues relating to the legal significance of Foundation directors who "opted-out" of a mediation arrangement and their independent legal rights to assert counterclaims and appeals. The litigation also involves serious questions relating to constitutional rights of the firm's clients including the protection of art as speech under the 1st Amendment and the taking or diminution of property rights by state action without due process of law. Moreover, the case raises significant legal issues relating to the role of the Illinois State Attorney General in this litigation and its effect on not-for-profit Foundation governance. The novelty and uniqueness of the issues required in-depth research into the relevant case law on decisions which have a direct bearing on the case as well as those decisions which contain analogous factual patterns to assist the court's understanding of the unusual legal issues involved. For these reasons alone, the "difficulty of the work" and the "novelty [and] difficulty of the issues" favor awarding the attorney's fees sought by this motion.

15. Finally, this matter raises significant public interest issues bearing directly on the status, duties and obligations of directors of not-for-profit foundations in Illinois and elsewhere. It also undertakes to illuminate the role of State Attorneys General with regard to the scope of their authority over independent not-for-profit institutions. Not surprisingly, given the magnitude and importance of the litigation, the case has generated extensive commentary in the nation's press further attesting to the public importance of the case[3] (see, for example, Wall Street Journal, July 26, 2001 @ p. B-5). It has also attracted the views of recognized experts on Foundation law and governance (see the declaration of Professor Evelyn Brody).

For all of the reasons set forth herein, as well as in the accompanying affidavit, Defendants respectfully request that the Court direct the Foundation to pay Verner Liipfert $178,793.49, which represents the reasonable value of the services rendered and costs disbursed by Verner Liipfert through August 2001 in its representation of the Defendants.

A proposed order is attached.

Respectfully submitted,

[3] Neither "the benefit obtained by the client" nor "the usual and customary charge for such services" is applicable here. As to the former, fee petitions are often filed after a case is completed. Nevertheless, while defendants' efforts to date have not always resulted in favorable rulings, those adverse decisions are being appealed and new actions have been initiated. "[T]he benefit obtained by the client" will not be capable of final determination until those various issues are resolved. As to the latter, given the unique nature of the proceedings in this case and the time in which Verner Liipfert became involved, it is not possible to determine a "usual and customary charge." Nonetheless, Verner Liipfert charged its standard rates and handled the case as it would in any litigation matter of this pace and complexity. (See generally Affidavit of Leonard Garment (September 14, 2001).

Moynihan (1976-1988), Vice Chairman, Second Circuit Nominating Commission (1979-1980), and Member of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Judicial Conference of the United States. Prior to becoming Counsel to Verner Liipfert, I was a partner in the law firms of Mudge, Rose, Guthrie & Alexander (1955-1968; 1993-1996), Dickstein, Shapiro & Morin,(1980-1993); and Dechert, Price & Rhoads (1996-1998).

3. I am a member of the bars of the District of Columbia and the State of New York.

4. I am responsible for supervising the work performed by Verner Liipfert during its representation of Judith Terra, Alan Simpson, and Paul Hayes Tucker in this matter. The following attorneys at my firm, among others, also represented Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker in this matter: Lawrence Levinson, partner and Harry C. McPherson, partner.

5. The aforementioned Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand attorneys, including myself, among other attorneys and legal assistants, spent a total of 514.9 hours representing Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson and Dr. Tucker in this matter.

6. My firm typically bills clients for time spent on their matters at hourly rates. Our hourly partner rates – during this engagement – ranged from $400 to $465; hourly legal assistant rates ranged from $85 to $160. These rates are comparable to, if not significantly below, the rates charged by other firms in analogous cases, and were established by the firm's Management Committee as the market rates for individuals based upon their skills and education. Mr. Levinson's hourly rate is $465 as is Mr. McPherson's. My hourly rate is $400.

7. At the firm's standard rates, multiplied by the hours expended by each of the professionals who worked on the matter, plus expenses actually incurred and the total fee request for Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand to date is $178,793.49. I regularly reviewed the time and expense records for this matter, which were provided to the client on a monthly basis, and attest that the hours of service provided were reasonable and necessary in support of the claims of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker.

8. Once a sealing order is entered, Defendants will submit detailed statements of the services rendered and out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand on behalf of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker since May 18, 2001.

9. The statements to be submitted once a sealing order is entered include the date of service rendered, the person rendering the service, a detailed statement of the service rendered, and the amount of time spent providing the service.

10. During this period, Mrs. Judith Terra and Naftali Michael (a non-director defendant and long-time friend of Mrs. Terra) advanced $105,000 from their own funds to defray on-going legal expenses and have pledged to supply additional funds. We believe that no other party to this litigation has taken similar action.

11. I declare under penalty of perjury the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS OF DEFENDANTS ALAN K. SIMPSON, JUDITH TERRA, AND PAUL HAYES TUCKER

Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (collectively, "Defendants") respectfully move the Court for an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra") to pay their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to the Restated Bylaws of Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Bylaws") and this Court's order of August 29, 2001.[1] In support

hereof, Defendants submit the Declaration of K. Chris Todd. Defendants further incorporate by reference all pleadings, files, and records in this action; material that may be judicially noticed by this Court; the presentations and arguments of counsel, if any; and other such matters that the Court may properly consider, and in further support state as follows:[2]

1. Since June 22, 2001, Kellogg Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. ("Kellogg Huber"), has represented the Defendants — each of whom is a director of the Foundation — in the above-captioned matter.

2. Kellogg Huber is a law firm with extensive litigation and telecommunications practices. Eighteen of its attorneys are engaged in an active litigation practice in both state and federal trial and appellate courts across the country. This case was handled at Kellogg Huber primarily by Chris Todd, Neil Gorsuch, David Ross, and John Longwell.

3. Chris Todd has substantial public and private sector litigation experience. For over a decade he served as a federal prosecutor in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, and as an Associate Counsel to the Office of Independent Counsel for the Iran/Contra matter. For the last ten years, Mr. Todd's practice has concentrated of "the filing of this lawsuit," not pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order. Moreover, the Foundation's Bylaws require the Foundation to indemnify directors for "expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they . . . are made parties . . . by reason of being" directors. Terra Bylaws Art. X § a. Defendants thus are submitting this petition on that basis, without prejudice to their objections regarding the substantive and procedural propriety of the Consent Judgment and Order.

on litigation matters in state and federal courts. Before joining Kellogg Huber, Mr. Todd was head of the litigation section of the Washington office of Johnson & Gibbs, which was a three-hundred person law firm. Neil Gorsuch, a Marshall Scholar and Truman Scholar, received his juris doctor cum laude from Harvard University Law School in 1991, and clerked for the Honorable David Sentelle (United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit) and for Justice Byron R. White (United States Supreme Court). David Ross graduated from the Columbia University School of Law in 1995. John Longwell graduated magna cum laude from the University of Georgia School of Law in 1999, where he was Order of the Coif and an editor of the University of Georgia Law Review. Before entering private practice, Mr. Longwell clerked for the Honorable Vaughn R. Walker (United States District Court for the Northern District of California).

4. The Bylaws provide that the Foundation "shall indemnify any and all of its directors . . . against expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they, or any of them, are made parties . . . by reason of being or having been" a director, unless that person is found "liable for willful misconduct in the performance of duty and to such matters as shall be settled by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Bylaws Art. X § a. None of the Defendants was found liable for any misconduct in his or her service as a director, and the matter was not settled "by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Instead, plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed their claims against Defendants.

5. Attached hereto as Exhibit A is the Declaration of K. Chris Todd, which explains that the rates for each individual that worked on the case are Kellogg Huber's standard hourly billing rates, which were established as the market rates for individuals based upon their skills and education. Concurrent herewith, Defendants have filed a Motion for Leave to Submit Fee Statements Under Seal for In Camera Review; once a sealing order is entered, Defendants will submit detailed billing statements evidencing the actual time expended by individuals working on the case each day, the identity of the individuals performing the work, the legal tasks performed, and the applicable hourly rate.

6. The detailed billing statements that will be submitted to the Court reflect that Kellogg Huber performed a large number of significant tasks since becoming involved in the case. In addition to several court appearances, Kellogg Huber has prepared numerous pleadings. Kellogg Huber also handled several related projects, including interviewing Assistant Attorney General Perkins, meeting with clients, interviewing potential witnesses, and learning the extensive file and background information regarding this case.

7. In addition to the services performed, the time expended, the attorneys involved, and the hourly rate, the reasonableness of a petition for attorneys fees depends upon "the skill and standing of the attorney involved, the difficulty of the work, the novelty or difficulty of the issues, the importance of the matter, the benefit obtained by the client, and the usual and customary charge for such services." Cabrera v. First National Bank of Wheaton, No. 2-00-0781, 2001 WL 845979 *12 (Ill. App. July 18, 2001) (affirming award of $70,000 for securing dismissal of complaint). These factors further support the award of attorneys fees sought by this Motion.

8. With respect to the "skill and standing of the attorney[s] involved," each lawyer involved in this case is highly qualified to have worked on a matter of this complexity. Mr. Todd brought over two decades of complex litigation experience to this matter, and he was supported by lawyers with exceptional educations and significant litigation experience. See ¶ 3, supra.

9. This case also presented significant procedural and substantive difficulties. Most significantly from a procedural prospective, Kellogg Huber did not become involved in the case until June 22, 2001. This required Kellogg Huber to familiarize itself quickly with the history of the Foundation and the case. Moreover, Kellogg Huber was required to deal with three opposing counsel — Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, Quinlan & Crisham, and the Illinois Attorney General — each of whom generally prepared its own papers in response to filings by Kellogg Huber. For example, Kellogg Huber was required to respond in less than one day to three briefs totaling over 80 pages in opposition to the Defendants' objections to the proposed settlement.

10. Substantively, this case has presented complex novel legal issues, including the fiduciary duties of not-for-profit foundation directors, the proper role of Attorneys General in such cases, and the proper role for the courts in settlements of such cases. This required counsel to expend significant time and resources researching these areas of law, and searching decisions from across the country for analogous cases. For this reason alone, both the "the difficulty of the work" and the "novelty [and] difficulty of the issues" favor awarding the attorneys fees sought by this motion.

11. Finally, this matter is one of significant public interest. The Attorney General intervened in the case purportedly "to protect the interests of the People of Illinois." See Attorney General's Complaint for Declaratory Judgment, Injunction, Breach of Fiduciary Duty, Removal, Accounting, Receiver and Appointment of New Directors ¶ 1 (Sept. 25, 2000). And the efforts of Kellogg Huber have generated significant public interest. See Exhibit B (collecting examples of such materials).[3]

For all of the reasons set forth herein, as well as in the accompanying declaration, Defendants respectfully request that the Court direct the Foundation to pay Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., $392,106.06, which represents the reasonable value of the services rendered and costs disbursed by Kellogg Huber to date in its representation of Defendants.

A proposed order is attached.

[3]Neither the "the benefit obtained by the client" nor "the usual and customary charge for such services" is applicable here. As to the former, fee petitions are often filed after a case is completed. Nevertheless, while Defendants' efforts to date have not always resulted in favorable rulings, those adverse decisions are being appealed; "[t]he benefit obtained by the client" will not be capable of complete determination until those appeals are resolved. As to the latter, given the unique nature of the proceedings in this case and the time at which Kellogg Huber became involved, it is not possible to determine a "usual and customary charge." Significantly, however, Kellogg Huber charged its standard rates and handled the case as it would any other dispute of this nature. See generally Declaration of K. Chris Todd (September 14, 2001).

BUNTROCK and GIDWITZ, Plaintiffs, vs. TERRA, et al., Defendants.	)	No. 00 CH 13859
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, Plaintiff-Intervenor, vs. TERRA, et al. Defendants.	)

PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS PURSUANT TO CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER ENTERED JULY 26, 2001

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., respectfully petition this Court for an award of attorneys fees and costs pursuant to the terms of the July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order submitted by the parties and entered by this Court. In support of their petition, Plaintiffs state as follows:

1. In September 2000, the plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz filed the original complaint in this matter in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division. The Attorney General of the State of Illinois intervened immediately as a party plaintiff to protect the interests of the people of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust established by Daniel J. Terra in 1978.

2. Throughout the pendency of this case, from September 2000 to almost August 2001, an extraordinary number of substantive motions were filed, responded to and decided in this matter. This Court heard no less than 30 motions, including 10 motions for injunctive relief.

3. The volatility of this case and complexity of the issues motivated the parties to agree to participate in what was a lengthy and difficult, yet successful mediation process.

4. On June 29, 2001, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), by resolution (the "Resolution"), voted to approve and adopt a Consent Judgment and Order ("Consent Order") settling this matter. A copy of the June 29, 2001 Resolution is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

5. Pursuant to the terms of the Resolution, the Consent Order was submitted to the Court and, on July 26, 2001, this Court approved and entered that Consent Order. A copy of the July 26, 2001 Order is attached hereto as Exhibit B.

6. One of the terms of the Consent Order, as agreed to by the parties, provides: "[R]easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." Ex. B., ¶12. The determination of what are reasonable attorneys fees is, of course, within the sound discretion of the trial court. Anderson v. Anchor Organization for Health Maintenance, 274 Ill. App. 3d 1001, 1007-08, 654 N.E.2d 675, 681-82 (1st Dist. 1995). The factors, however, to be considered by the court in mkaing it's determination are:

> the services performed, the time expended thereon, the attorney's hourly rate, the skill and standing of the attorney, the nature of the case, the difficulty of the issues involved, the importance of the matter, the degree of responsibility required, the usual and customary charges for comparable services, and the benefit resulting to the client.

Anderson, 274 Ill. App. 3d at 1007, 654 N.E.2d at 682.

7. On August 29, 2001, this Court ordered that all petitions for attorneys fees and costs sought pursuant to the Consent Order were to be submitted to the Court by September 11, 2001. A copy of the August 29, 2001 Order is attached hereto as Exhibit C. The court later entered an agreed order providing additional time for submission of petitions. See Order of September 7, 2001, attached as Exhibit D.

8. Pursuant to the July 26, 2001 Consent Order and pursuant to this Court's orders of August 29, 2001, and September 7, 2001, the Plaintiffs hereby petition this Court for approval of attorneys fees and costs incurred in connection with this matter as reasonable.

9. The total amount of attorneys fees and costs incurred by Plaintiffs is $ 1,852,400.18. In further support of their petition, Plaintiffs submit the affidavit of William R. Quinlan, attached as Exhibit E.

10. The attorneys fees and costs are fair and reasonable considering the number of hours worked, the hourly rates charged by the attorneys, and particularly in light of the complexity of the issues presented and the benefit received by the clients.

11. The Plaintiffs also contemporaneously seek a protective order from this Court. Upon entry of that protective order, copies of redacted invoices will be submitted to the parties. The invoice entries include narrative descriptions of the services performed by each attorney. These narrative descriptions will be redacted in order to protect the attorney-client and work product privilege. To the extent that this Court would seek additional narrative explanation for any entry, those descriptions would be presented in camera to the Court.

WHERFORE, Plaintiffs ask that this Court order the Terra Foundation for the Arts to reimburse Plaintiffs for attorneys fees in the amount of $ 1,852,400.18 and grant any further relief this Court deems fair and just.

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the new Strategic Planning Committee, once elected, shall be authorized and directed to seek to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago, it being understood that the terms of any such partnership shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Directors; and

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the officers of the Corporation are authorized, in the name and on behalf of the Foundation, to execute such additional agreements, certificates or other documents, and to take such further actions (including, without limitation, the payment of expenses or other expenditures of money) as may be necessary or advisable to carry out the preceding resolutions.

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. Exhibit E

AFFIDAVIT OF WILLIAM R. QUINLAN

I, William R. Quinlan, on oath, depose and state as follows:

1. I am an attorney at law and a partner of the law firm of Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd. (formerly Quinlan & Crisham, Ltd.), 30 North LaSalle Street, Suite 2900, Chicago, Illinois 60602. I attest that this affidavit is submitted in connection with the petition for attorneys fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order entered July 26, 2001 in the case captioned Dean L. Buntrock et al. v. Judith Terra et al., No. 00 CH 13859 (Circuit Court of Cook County). I am the attorney responsible for supervising the legal work performed by this firm on behalf of the plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. I make this affidavit on personal knowledge and if called as a witness I could competently testify to the following matters.

2. I have been licensed to practice law in the State of Illinois since 1964 after graduation from the Loyola School of Law. I received a Master of Laws degree from the University of Virginia School of Law in May 1988.

3. I have also been admitted as a member of the bar of the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Military Appeals, the United States Court of Claims, the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit and the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

4. From 1985 to 1989, I served as a Justice of the Illinois Appellate Court, First District. From 1980 to 1985, I served as a Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois. My legal experience includes serving as General Counsel, Chicago Urban Transportation District and General Counsel for the Chicago Building Commission. From 1975 to 1980, I also served as Corporation Counsel for the City of Chicago.

5. During my service as a Circuit Court Judge, I presided over numerous jury trials and matters in complex commercial and class-action lawsuits, including the asbestos litigation in Cook County, the Jewel salmonella litigation, and the Union Oil explosion. I have drafted rules on behalf of the Illinois Supreme Court Rules Committee, many regarding complex commercial litigation. I have taught complex litigation at the National Judicial College and DePaul Law School. In addition, I am an Adviser to the Illinois Supreme Court's Study on Complex Litigation after having served previously on this committee for numerous years, including a period as vice-chair of the Committee.

6. I have been in private practice since 1989, when I retired as a Justice of the Illinois Appellate Court. I then became a member of the Chicago law firm Phelan, Pope & John, Ltd., later Phelan, Cahill & Quinlan, Ltd. In February 1996, I started my own firm, which is currently named Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd. Since entering private practice in 1989, I have represented many clients in complex contractual, commercial, and corporate disputes in the trial-level and appellate-level courts of the State of Illinois, and the United States federal courts.

7. From time to time, I have also served as an expert witness for other counsel regarding the reasonableness of attorneys fees and costs.

8. In September 2000, we were retained by Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz to represent them as members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation with regard to the litigation matters before this Court. The highly contested nature of the litigation resulted in extensive and complicated negotiations as part of a mediated settlement, which was approved by this Court in the Consent Judgment and Order of July 26, 2001.

9. I attest that as of July 31, 2001, the plaintiffs have incurred attorneys fees and costs in the total amount of $1,852,400.18, including $1,596,789.50 in fees and $255,610.68 in costs. I further attest that this amount accurately represents the fees and costs incurred by Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz.

10. In determining whether the attorneys fees are reasonable in this matter, I considered a number of factors, including the services performed, time expended, the hourly rate, skill and standing of the attorney, the nature of the case, the difficulty of the issues, the usual and customary charges for comparable services and the benefit to the client. See Anderson v. Anchor Org. for Health Maintenance, 274 Ill.App.3d 1001, 1007 , 654 N.E.2d 675, 681 (1st Dist. 1995).

11. I have reviewed all invoices and in light of my experience considered all the relevant factors involved in this litigation. Under the circumstances of this case, considering the experience and standing of the attorneys involved, the complexity of the issues and the benefit achieved for the clients, I believe that the number of hours worked and the hourly rates ranging from $100.00 to $495.00 per hour are fair and reasonable. These charges are also consistent with the usual and customary rates charged by this firm to its clients for similar representation. Further, the attorneys fees and costs are commensurate with and comparable to charges by other law firms with similar experience and background in this kind of matter.

FURTHER, affiant sayeth not.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

DEAN L. BUNTROCK, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, and RONALD GIDWITZ, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, Plaintiffs, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, ALAN K. SIMPSON, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, NAFTALI MICHAELI and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, Defendants.	Case No. 00 CH 13859 Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO VARIOUS PARTIES' MOTIONS AND ATTEMPTS TO FILE DOCUMENTATION SUPPORTING THEIR ATTORNEYS' FEE PETITIONS IN CAMERA

Defendant the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), an Illinois not for-profit corporation, by its attorneys, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, hereby presents its Opposition to Various Parties' Motions and Attempts to File Documentation Supporting Their Fee Petitions In Camera.

1. On September 22, 2000, plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock ("Buntrock") and Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, filed a lawsuit against the Foundation and three other members of the Board, Judith Terra, Dr. Paul Hayes Tucker and Senator Alan K. Simpson (collectively the "individual defendants") and another unrelated third party, Naftali Michaeli. After over four months of contentious motion practice, on February 5, 2001, the Court ordered the parties to submit to mediation and stayed all further proceedings. (See 2/5/01 Order).

2. Over almost a five month period, the parties engaged in mediation sessions in order to attempt to reach an agreement which would result in the dismissal of this lawsuit. On June 29, 2001, the Foundation's Board of Directors passed certain Resolutions authorizing the Foundation to enter into a Consent Judgment and Order which would settle this litigation. On July 26, 2001, the Court entered the Consent Judgement and Order.

3. As one of the conditions of the Consent Judgment, the Foundation agreed that "Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." (See 7/26/01 Consent Judgment and Order, ¶ 12).

4. On August 29, 2001, the Court ordered that "any and all petitions for attorneys' fees and costs that require a court order for payment shall be filed on or before September 11, 2001." (See 8/29/01 Order). That deadline was later extended to September 14, 2001 for plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz and September 17, 2001 for the individual defendants. (See 9/7/01 Order).

5. Since that time, various attorneys representing individual Directors have filed a variety of motions, on behalf of their clients, all of which in essence would prohibit the Foundation from reviewing the actual fee statements which are sought to be paid by the Foundation. Specifically, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, filed their Petition for Attorneys Fees and Costs along with a Motion for Entry of a Protective Order in which they agree only to provide the Foundation with "redacted" descriptions of their attorneys' time spent supposedly incurring $1,852,400.18 in legal fees and expenses. Similarly, Bellows & Bellows, who represented the individual defendant Directors for only approximately one month are seeking $70,321.74 in attorneys fees and costs. Yet, they too apparently refuse to allow the Foundation to review their bills, and without first seeking leave of Court, Bellows & Bellows filed their Petition for Fees and Costs under seal and the "detail supporting that Petition" in camera. Additionally, three other law firms[1] on behalf of the individual defendant Directors have filed fee petitions. These filings are highly ironic given these very lawyers have consistently and emphatically argued that the individual defendant Directors are not bound by the Consent Judgment, yet they are apparently more than willing to accept payment pursuant to the terms of that Consent Judgment. The individual defendant Directors too have requested that the Court permit them to file their fee statements (totaling $679,664.70) under seal for in camera review. Although strangely, contrary to their own motion, the Cummins & Cronin law firm did, in fact, attach its bills to its fee petition, the individual defendant Directors' two other law firms refused to do so. (McDermott, Will & Emery, attorneys for Directors Marshall and Stebbins, and Shefsky & Froelich, Ltd., the individual defendant Directors' former attorneys, also filed their fee petitions attaching detailed descriptions of their fees and costs incurred for review by the Court as well as the Foundation. Presumably, these two well respected law firms did not find there to be any breach of client confidences by doing so.)

6. As this Court stated in response to the Foundation's insistence that it be given an opportunity to respond to the fee petitions presented by the various counsel, "Of course, everybody's going to have a chance to do that." (8/29/01 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 24, attached hereto as Exhibit A). The Court further recognized the need for the Foundation to have adequate information upon which to assess and determine whether it believes the fees are reasonable, "Miss Stone is not going to be able to say right now what the [Foundation's] position is until she has the fee petitions. Let's [let] her get the fee petitions." (Id. at p. 31).

[1] The following law firms currently represent the individual defendant Directions: Cummins & Cronin, LLC; Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; and Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand.

7. The Foundation is a not-for-profit corporation whose funds are to be used to support its purpose of promulgating American art and "expand[ing] the artistic horizons of a growing art public." The only thing the Foundation agreed to pay under the Consent Judgment was "reasonable attorneys' fees" – not all attorneys' fees. Directors who seek to use the assets of the Foundation to cover some or all of the attorneys' fees they have incurred bear the burden of proving that their fee requests are reasonable. The Foundation, whose resources are being sought to cover these attorneys' fees, which already amount to over $2 million, certainly has the right to review the fee requests and provide the Court with its comments.

8. Nowhere in the Consent Judgment did the Foundation give up its right to review any fee claims presented by individual directors and to address the reasonableness of the requests. While both the plaintiffs and the individual defendant Directors would rather that this Court review the fee petitions without giving the Foundation any real opportunity to provide any substantive or meaningful response, this is clearly inappropriate. None of the fee-seeking Directors can direct the Court to any authority for denying the Foundation the right to review and comment meaningfully on these proposed expenditures of its funds.

9. No vendor who seeks to have the Foundation pay for his services has any right to simply submit blanket claims not subject to the Foundation's detailed review. If plaintiffs and the individual defendant Directors seek to have their counsel paid by the Foundation, they too should be required to make such a submission to the corporation that will ultimately be paying their bills. To force a not-for-profit corporation to pay these attorneys' fee claims without even being given the opportunity to review the bills is not only unheard of, but simply unjust.

Respectfully submitted,

you want it done by tomorrow, the 31st, Friday.

MR. CROWE: I hope you prioritize ours, Judge, because our petition has been before you for a long, long time.

THE COURT: Let me ask everybody else, when's the Foundation ready to get its on file?

MS. STONE: First of all, the foundation wants the right to respond to the fee petitions presented by the other counsels.

THE COURT: Of course, everybody's going to have a chance to do that.

MS. STONE: Because it is the Foundation ultimately which is responsible for this, and it is the foundation which has agreed to pay reasonable fees and only reasonable fees of the directors who are involved in this lawsuit.

If you read the language carefully, the Foundation did not obligate Sidley & Austin to present its fees, your Honor, for review.

Sidley & Austin has been presenting its fees to the Foundation. Those have been reviewed by the ILC throughout the pendency of this litigation. Those fees have been discussed and resolved. So, we are not coming to you with a fee petition.

wrong?

MR. QUINLAN: That is not correct. May I speak? Your Honor, it provides in Paragraph 12, reasonable attorney fees incurred by the Foundation's directors in connection with this lawsuit as determined by the Court shall be paid by the Foundation.

The very reason it was not to go to the Foundation is that they were part of the litigation, and there was an adversarial position by everybody.

THE COURT: Well, the Foundation does know -- the Foundation right now doesn't know what it's position is, okay?

Miss Stone is not going to be able say right now what the position is until she has the fee petitions. Let's her get the fees petitions --

MR. QUINLAN: That may all be true, your Honor, but the Court's order specifically so provides. There's another issue about protocol and the filing of any documents relating -- of the fee.

This is an ongoing case, as your Honor obviously can see here. There is a very great concerned about revealing documents and information that involve attorney/client privilege, work product, strategies and that kind of thing.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held in court.)

THE COURT: Would you please call both cases? I need this back. The 00 first, please.

THE CLERK: 00 CH 13859, Buntrock versus Terra.

And 01 L 9112.

THE COURT: Good morning. I'm sorry to keep you waiting. I wanted to glance at the thing that was delivered this morning, the document. And I also received a call from another judge during this break who needed some help, and I had to take that call.

If you could please identify yourselves for the record.

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins for Terra, Tucker, and Simpson, Your Honor.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky, here to assist Mr. Cummins.

16di-002611

MR. CARROLL: Good morning, Your Honor. James Carroll and Cheryl Niro on behalf of Plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris on behalf of the People.

MR. IOPPOLO: Thomas Ioppolo. I'm representing Mr. Perkins and Attorney General Ryan in the Law Division case.

MS. STONE: Susan Stone. Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood on behalf of the Foundation.

MR. BELLOWS: Joel Bellows for a petitioner here, Bellows and Bellows.

MR. SCHUMAN: William Schumann on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

MR. CROWE: Brian Crowe with my partner, Jim Wilson. We're here on the petition of Shefsky & Froelich.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, you just announced that the 01 was here. I looked at the order. It says the matter was transferred to Judge Foreman for further reassignment to you. I haven't seen an order from Judge Foreman. I don't know if the Court has received it. Technically, if you haven't received the order, I don't know if we're properly here.

THE COURT: I don't know if you're properly here. I received a Notice of Motion from you all --

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: -- about a Motion for Substitution. And that's why I gave you the courtesy of having it called. I would assume you wouldn't motion up a case in front of me that isn't on my call.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, the reason we did that, Your Honor, Judge Foreman wasn't initially, nor was I, here on Tuesday because of the religious holiday. I checked with his clerk, and the clerk wasn't aware of whether the order had or hadn't been entered.

THE COURT: Well, let me just find out from my clerk. Do you have anything on 01 having been assigned and sent over here by Judge Foreman yet?

MR. CUMMINS: Our motion actually read, Judge, that it was in anticipation that the reassignment would be effective. But I don't know that it has.

THE CLERK: Not under Chancery.

THE COURT: See if it's under Law.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: It would have been in the Law case.

MR. CARROLL: It would have been transferred to

16di-002613

Chancery in the Law case.

THE CLERK: The last order entered in the Law Division was on September 17. Order case transferred for trial to Chancery Division.

THE COURT: Okay. So he probably hasn't signed the order yet.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: So I'm going to still tell you all everything that I've received and looked at in these cases because a lot of papers have come in.

As you know, you were here the last time in front of me -- the last time of some substance in front of me when -- I believe it was September -- I'm sorry, August 29.

MR. CARROLL: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: When the parties came in and said that it's now time to deal with the attorneys' fees issue in my case, which is 00 CH 13859. And I gave the parties time to file their fee petitions, and that time was extended. I believe it was an order of September 7 that extended that time.

Since the last time, I've received the following documents. And they are the following, in the order that I received them. On September 14, filed under seal, Bellows and Bellows' Petition for Attorneys' Fees and an Affidavit of Mrs. Bellows in Support.

16di-002614

September 14, the Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees and the Motion for an Entry of a Protective Order.

On September 17, a Motion for Leave to Submit Fee Statements In Camera filed by Defendants Simpson, Terra, and Tucker and -- the actual motion itself and a petition for fees and costs of three different lawfirms there. You've all received that? Those were the Verner, V-e-r-n-e-r, lawfirm, the Kellogg lawfirm, and Cummins & Cronin lawfirms. You've received those?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Ours was filed -- excuse me, Your Honor, our firm filed one. Although I was told this morning it went in the mail. I don't know if everybody got it. I'd have to check.

THE COURT: I don't have anything from you, Mr. Novoselsky.

MR. CARROLL: We haven't received it.

MS. STONE: We haven't received it.

THE COURT: That's why I'm just going through. I'm letting you know what I have.

16di-002615

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I saw it stamp filed in the office. We had a little -- we're a small office, and part of us were out for the holiday. So I assume it went out. I'll have to check.

THE COURT: And then I received in Case Number 01 L 9112 a motion that was to be motioned up today at 11:00 for Substitution of Judge in the L case. And I assume it meant only the L case.

And Dr. Stebbins -- and then I got -- I'm just doing this in order of receipt. Then on the 19th I got Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs. Also on the 19th I got from the plaintiff their Opposition to the Motion for Substitution together with all of their cases.

And then this morning I've received the Terra Foundation's Opposition on the Motion for Substitution.

Now I'm going to take all this substitution stuff and put it aside and only deal with the case that I have because that's what I have. And --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, you should have also received this morning as well the Terra Foundation's Opposition to the Motions to File the Fee Petitions

16di-002616

In Camera. It may be clipped to the other document that was sent over.

THE COURT: It's not referenced in the cover letter, so let me just -- you know, is, as a matter of fact. Things came in pretty fast. You're right. The Terra Foundation's Opposition to File Certain Documents In Camera.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, if I may make one inquiry, and it will be very brief, and I think it will resolve at least a portion of what we're doing today.

It's, my understanding, because I don't want to have any claim made of waiver, that the Court today only has before it the Chancery lawsuit. Anything it's doing today is only in the Chancery action. Nothing you plan on doing today would impact on --

THE COURT: Well, I guess I don't have the other lawsuit in front of me.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That would be our position, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I don't want anyone to say that we stood here and acquiesced anything in the Law

16di-002617

Division case.

THE COURT: That's why I'm setting aside all this stuff about the substitution because it's not in front of me right now.

MR. WILSON: Your Honor, if I may. In August -- I think we were really the ones who started this back in August when we filed our petition. And there was a courtesy copy sent at the time that the petition was filed in August. If Your Honor does not have that, we would be happy to supply another copy of it. But, in fact, there was a petition filed and I believe everybody has received it some time ago based upon our August filing.

THE COURT: Okay. This is a good time to take a short recess. And I have a reason that I need to do that with the court reporter but outside the presence of the court.

Do I have a conference room available on this floor? Is Judge Gardner in session?

THE DEPUTY: I think he may be, but I'll look.

THE COURT: Could you just again for one moment, please?

I don't want to take everyone out, so I want you to just simply designate one counsel for each party, please. And in that regard, I realize that we have multiple counsels here on the fee petition issues. And since we have multiple attorneys here for the defendant, so if I could either get Mr. Cummins or Mr. Novoselsky and either Mr. Wilson or Mr. Crow. And Mr. Bellows, you're more than welcome to join us. And I need one person from the Foundation. Why don't we just go with Mr. Perkins, if that's okay. No offense. And -- even though he's a party, I guess, in the other case. And I may or may not have the other case now. I have to go with the case that I have in front of me.

16di-002618

Do I have a place?

THE DEPUTY: Yes. Judge Dooling's Conference Room is open.

THE COURT: Okay. Is the Court in session?

THE DEPUTY: It's not. They're in chambers.

THE COURT: We just need to step out and bring the court reporter.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CUMMINS: One matter. And I just want this for the record. We continue our objection that Sidley & Austin attempts to represent the Terra

16di-002619

Foundation in any further -- in any proceedings, including the Chancery case.

But I just want to have that on the record.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Whereupon, a discussion was held in a Conference Room between Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird and the following counsel: Ms. Susan A. Stone; Mr. Joel J. Bellows; Mr. William P. Schuman; Mr. James D. Wilson; Mr. James R. Carroll; Mr. Floyd D. Perkins; and Mr. Robert P. Cummins. Said discussion was reported but not transcribed at this time.)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held in court.)

THE COURT: Let's pick up, if we can, where we left off.

Mr. Wilson, you're going to be sending me your fee petition. Has there been anything filed in response? I assume not, right?

MR. WILSON: There has not, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. I need to deal with the fee petitions that I have. Does anybody believe -- and we're only talking 00 CH, the chancery case. Does anybody want to address another issue before we talk about the response times on those?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, Your Honor. Some lawyers involved in the case, obviously we don't -- having looked at our billing statements -- believe that it applies to our billing statements. Some lawyers involved in the case believe that the narrative portions of their billing statements reflect or embody material that is arguably privileged or immune from discovery as constituting attorney work product.

With respect to those matters, and while it is probably generally true that billing statements are not sacrosanct from discovery, it is -- there is a motion, or at least two motions before you, to allow the billing statements, one, to be filed in the first instance, subject to further order of Court, under seal, to be considered by the Court in camera under seal. Secondly, to allow certain lawyers who believe and respect the fact that they may be dealing with confidential or privileged information that certain of those billing records, to the extent that they are part of the file, be redacted, although copies would be provided in some way so that the Court would be fully advised of all of the matters for which fees are sought.

So those -- I may not have properly characterized my colleagues' motions. But the essence of it is that, and stated simply, folks want to be able to submit these to you in camera for your at least preliminary review, subject to further order of Court, have you review them in that context, and allow whatever has to be filed ultimately to be filed in a way that doesn't compromise anybody's interest.

I make that point, too, because we must recognize that this isn't the end of the road for this litigation. Before the Appellate Court, and heaven knows where that's going to go, there also is an independent action in which the parties who are submitting fee petitions, or lawyers who are representing parties who are submitting fee petitions, are adverse to one another. And to the extent that any of the billing statements that are being submitted would, perhaps, reflect strategy, that would be pertinent to ongoing disputes between the parties. And there may be more litigation coming. Gosh only knows.

Anyway, that's the other issue. And I understand that --

16di-002622

THE COURT: Are you coming in with a recommendation? Are you asking for something?

MR. CUMMINS: I think -- here's what I -- however the motions are articulated, I would hope that you would enter an order today allowing those lawfirms who, in good faith, consistent with their obligations to the Court, believe that their billing statements contain privileged information or information immune as work product, to file with you complete billing statements, without redaction, for your approval or review, as necessary. Remembering, of course, that we object to all of this, but -- and then allow, after you've made that determination, other documents to be filed as you deem appropriate, having considered these things on that basis.

THE COURT: Now, is there any party in this case that believes that certain parts of these should not be filed sealed?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, on behalf of the Foundation, we are not concerned, necessarily, as to whether or not they're filed under seal and therefore shielded from the public at large.

What we are concerned about, as we made clear to you last time, and as I thought Your Honor had indicated last time that you agreed with our position, the Foundation cannot be put in a position of being asked to write a blank check. It is clear that under the Consent Judgment, Your Honor is the one who is going to determine what is reasonable. Not the Foundation. We understand that. We respect that.

Nevertheless, the Foundation would like to be heard on this matter, just as it likes to be heard on any motion that's brought in front of Your Honor. In order to be heard, we have to have the opportunity to make an intelligent objection or even recommendation that certain fees, indeed, are reasonable. And it's the Foundation's judgment that the Court should pay those -- or should order that those be paid. But in order --

THE COURT: So your suggestion is what?

MS. STONE: In order for us to make that sort of reasonable showing or statement in front of Your Honor, we need to have access to the fees. As it currently stands, Your Honor, we have not seen the fees, the actual underlying fees, that people are submitting to Your Honor for approval.

THE COURT: I haven't gotten the underlying either, yet.

MR. CARROLL: That's correct.

MS. STONE: Well, from some -- I believe from -- well, from Shefsky & Froelich you did, Your Honor. And I believe that also from McDermott you have seen fees. And I believe even Mr. Cummins has submitted some detailed fees.

THE COURT: Right. I'm talking about plaintiff.

MS. STONE: Okay. Your Honor, currently before you you have fee requests in the amount of $3 million, roughly, if my calculation is correct. The Foundation cannot be muzzled, cannot be silenced. We have to have an opportunity to weigh in as to whether or not we believe some, all, or some other portion of these fees are appropriate or inappropriate.

And so what we are requesting, Your Honor, or what we are suggesting, is that if Your Honor wants these filed under seal, that is fine. But whatever is shown to Your Honor should be shown to us.

Now, if there is some limited circumstance where people believe that there's a particular detailed time entry that somehow gives away an attorney-client privileged communication. For example, if there would be a narrative about a phone call, discussion with Mr. Buntrock about X, Y, Z. If they feel the Re: line is somehow giving away work product or attorney-client privilege, that Re: line could be redacted. But the detailed time narratives have to be presented both to Your Honor and to us in order for us to have any opportunity to submit a meaningful statement to Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let me give an example. And maybe Mr. Carroll can respond to this one.

MR. CARROLL: Thank you.

THE COURT: There have been very few court appearances in this case where we haven't had multiple attorneys come in.

MR. CARROLL: That's correct.

THE COURT: For the simplest of issues involving things like, you know, putting it over. Setting the schedule. Some emergency motion which wasn't going to be heard at 9:15, and everybody knew it wasn't going to be heard at 9:15 because we had another hearing the next day or later that day, that we had a large crowd show up.

Now, it may -- I don't know what the

Sidley & Austin bills were in this case. And I presume that it is the position of the Foundation that I should never see those bills or know what they've charged and what the Foundation has already paid Sidley. But it's going to be difficult, without having that, for this Court to even make a comparison. There are going to be days when I'm looking at an entry and hopefully I will remember or recollect from taking a look at the orders in the Court file what exactly happened on that day and whether or not I really needed to have, you know, 15 attorneys standing in front of me.

Would it not be helpful for them to be able to say something about, look, the Quinlan firm sent five people. They billed for three of them. And they said that that court appearance took two and a half hours. What we did, Judge, is we sent one person and we billed for one hour. Now, we don't have to necessarily -- you don't necessarily have to give them anything more than, court appearance, such and such a date, who was there.

Are you saying they're not entitled to that?

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, first of all, I believe there -- and I think that it's borne out by the history of this case, that there isn't and hasn't been an easy motion in anything that we've done in this case. That every court appearance has involved lengthy court appearances and difficult issues where there have been a possibility of a number of other issues that could have been raised and that were being raised during it. So first I'd like to make that observation.

Secondly, I'd like to agree with this Court's position that in order for this Court to determine what is reasonable in terms of attorneys' fees, it is very relevant for both parties, the plaintiffs, and for the Court to see what Sidley's bills are to see what is reasonable under the circumstances and how they responded and what they did in terms of how many lawyers they had in Court, et cetera, Your Honor.

And in that vein, they filed an objection, and we would like to respond to that objection. So I don't think we're quite at Ms. Stone's position yet.

MS. STONE: Call me Sharon.

THE COURT: No. I'm not that informal.

MR. CARROLL: In order to respond and in order to have a ruling because we would like to file a response and we believe she is inaccurate and, in fact, contrary to what the agreement calls for and certainly contrary to what was negotiated during the Settlement Decree.

16di-002628

MR. CUMMINS: Could I --

THE COURT: Do you believe that it was negotiated in the settlement that nobody was going to have an opportunity to object to anybody else's fees?

MR. CARROLL: We believe it was part of the negotiating settlement, Your Honor, that the bills would be submitted to the Court for determination of reasonableness. In fact, we bargained for that with the mediator.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CARROLL: And that was specifically discussed. And that's the way the agreement was written. So that's exactly right, Your Honor. It was the Court's -- going to be the Court's determination. Especially under the circumstances, Your Honor. God forbid this case went up on appeal and it was reversed for whatever reason. We would be back down in front of this Court on a Consent Decree that's now been vacated with Sidley facing us as our opposition again and have all the history of everything that we put forth in this case.

In that vein, Your Honor, it was our intent to do very similarly to what you've been talking about when, in fact, if we, in fact, do submit redacted bills to other parties.

If you'll see, we followed the Court's procedure, I think of the August 29 date, that "if there's highly confidential information in the bills that everybody will have the good sense not to file it with the Court and there may be a procedure where you will file something."

In fact, we did that, Your Honor. We filed a protective order. And in our Motion for Protective Order, we indicated to the Court that we would provide the parties with our redacted bills. And the procedure that we had intended to file was very similar to what we're talking about today. But I guess what's good for the goose is good for the gander. If we're going to determine what's reasonable, everybody has to know what all the bills are.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, may I --

MR. CUMMINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I need to have the plaintiff's position clarified. You are not objecting to filing, for everyone to see, redacted bills?

16di-002630

MR. CARROLL: That is correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: And, Your Honor, there's actually not that much disagreement. If, indeed, these are good faith redactions where people are really taking out the precise legal issue that they researched, that may be appropriate.

Nevertheless, if people are off on a frolic and detour. If they are, for example, raising a disqualification motion of Sidley & Austin for the sixth time to the Illinois Supreme Court, after it's been rejected by you on numerous occasions and by the Appellate Court, the Foundation may take the position that the Foundation doesn't believe that was a reasonable expenditure of fees. You have to --

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor --

MS. STONE: Pardon me. Pardon me.

THE COURT: That's not going to be redacted. That's going to be in there.

MS. STONE: Well, I'm not sure what he means by redacted. And unfortunately, we may just be buying ourselves a fight for the future. What we do need are detailed time entries. We need an opportunity to see it. The Foundation agreed to pay reasonable attorneys' fees. Not all attorneys' fees. Not any attorneys' fees that could be submitted. But reasonable fees, and only reasonable fees. And we agreed to do it only in connection with this lawsuit.

So, for example, time that might have been spent by the Bellows firm -- and I'm sorry to pick you out in particular -- but that may have been spent in preparation for a Federal lawsuit, a wholly separate Federal lawsuit against the Attorney General, would not be fees that the Foundation ever agreed to pay in connection with this lawsuit. That's why we need to see the detailed time entries.

I'm not saying no redactions ever, Your Honor. I understand that we have to be pragmatic and reasonable here. But the Foundation, being confronted with about $3 million in fee requests, has to understand what those fee requests are comprised of. How many attorneys?

THE COURT: That's $3 million not including you.

MS. STONE: Correct.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, let me make a comment. If I may.

16di-002632

MS. STONE: It's an awesome amount.

MR. CUMMINS: I think there's a very practical approach to this. And if I may most respectfully suggest the following: That all the folks who are going to submit billing statements for your review do so completely, unredacted. Afford you an appropriate period of time within which to review those. And having done that, then set the matter for another status hearing at which time you, having had the benefit of an opportunity to look at these things, can pass on the issue of whether and to what extent the next step goes forward. In other words, what's going to be filed.

And let me suggest something with respect to not only the bills of Sidley & Austin, but also the bills of Winston & Strawn. Those have to be before you if there's going to be any fair play here. And let me explain why. For someone to suggest that the alpha and omega of the fees that ought to be paid to -- or the scope of the indemnification for fees, to which these Directors are entitled, including my clients, is governed by an agreement to which we were not a party, that's folly.

Moreover, there are Bylaws of this

16di-002633

Foundation that mandate indemnification of Directors. And this statement in this Consent Judgment to which we are not a party is not consistent, necessarily, with the Foundation's obligation.

That's precisely why I said on previous occasions that what I intended to do, and I was persuaded to do it the other way because people thought we might get into a procedural trap -- I don't believe that this Court would allow that to happen, but some folks said we better do it that way -- our bills are going to go to the Foundation. And the Foundation ought to see them. But the Foundation is going to see them with lawyers counseling them who are going to be unaffected and untainted by conflicts of interest which have not been resolved, never raised before in this case, in the nature that currently exists.

Now I'm not going to get into that now because that's not before you. But here's what -- in order to avoid that fistfight at this time, what I'd like to suggest you do is accept and receive all of the billing statements relating to this controversy beginning in September of 2000, have bills submitted by Sidley and Winston as well, to the extent that those billing statements relate to their participation, allegedly on behalf of the Foundation, so you have those for what comparative analysis purpose you may need. And then, after you've had a chance to review and digest those matters, have another status hearing and then talk about the procedural steps that should then follow.

Everybody's interest is protected. You'll have the whole story in front of you. And people can then deal with the issue with all the cards on the table.

MS. STONE: Everyone's interests will not be protected. What the Foundation agreed to do, as part of a settlement, was to pay not just its own attorneys -- which it was doing in the ordinary course -- but to pay the attorneys for people that had sued it. People that had dragged its name through the mud. People that had caused it to incur a great deal of expense this past year. It agreed to do that as a way to settle this very drawn out, hard fought litigation.

THE COURT: Including defendants. Individual defendants.

MS. STONE: Exactly.

16di-002635

THE COURT: We're talking paragraph 12.

MS. STONE: Exactly. The Foundation's Directors.

THE COURT: The Foundation's Directors.

MS. STONE: Not even the named individual defendants. That's why you see Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall coming in with a fee petition. It was all Directors in connection with this lawsuit. Not ancillary litigation in Federal Court, but this lawsuit.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: But reasonable fees, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: Again, Your Honor, that is subject to the Court's determination. And we specifically bargained for that language in the agreement.

MS. STONE: And we're not arguing that.

MR. CARROLL: And I would suggest that before we even get to this issue, that we make a determination of whose fees, and respond to the pleadings and make a determination of whose bills are even going to be submitted to the Court.

MR. SZALA: Your Honor, may I --

THE COURT: One moment. Does anybody believe that this Consent Decree requires the Foundation's bills to be approved by the Court?

16di-002636

MR. CUMMINS: Absolutely. Absolutely. It has to.

THE COURT: Does anybody who entered into the Consent Decree believe that this Consent Decree requires that the Foundation's bills be approved by the Court?

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, the language is silent as to that. But I would suggest that in order to make a determination of what are reasonable fees, under the circumstances, and given the lengthy nature of this litigation, that in order for this Court to make that determination, that it would have to -- it doesn't necessarily have to approve, but it would certainly have to make the determination of what those fees are to make a determination of whether the other fees are reasonable.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Szala, do you want to say something here?

MR. SZALA: Yes, Your Honor. On behalf of Winston & Strawn and being a bystander here --

THE COURT: Were you ever a party in this case?

MR. SZALA: We initially represented the Foundation.

16di-002637

THE COURT: Like the first day? And then you went away.

MR. SZALA: We went away, Your Honor. We're the general counsel for the Foundation itself. We're also a proposed defendant in the Law Division action, but leave has not been granted to add us.

But in light of what has been said here by Mr. Cummins, we would respectfully submit that we don't think that the agreement requires a disclosure of Winston & Strawn's legal fees. We don't think that was part of the agreement. The omission there that is silent, we believe that that was the intention of the parties involved not to go over those particular issues.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, let me tell you why, if I may. Let me tell you why --

MS. STONE: Please.

MR. CUMMINS: -- those fees ought to be considered by Your Honor. First of all, it is correct. And I've labored in this vineyard a little bit. It is correct that it's appropriate for a judicial officer to consider the other parties' fee statements in making a comparative analysis of reasonableness. And we can cite the authority to support that.

Secondly, for example, incident to this Consent Judgment, incident to the resolution of issues by way of this Consent Judgment, a settlement of this case, we have minutes of meetings. There are documents, that have already been made part of the public record, where Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn were commenting and taking positions with respect to what were the implications of this settlement to other parties who were not parties to the settlement? For example, whether or not in any way, shape, or form they could bind Ms. Terra, Mr. Tucker, or Senator Simpson. And the answer, of course, was no, that that could not take place. So while Winston may have been in the background, Winston was concurrently representing the Terra Foundation and Buntrock and Gidwitz, clients of Winston.

THE COURT: They were never representing --

MR. CUMMINS: Excuse me.

THE COURT: -- the individuals.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, there was concurrent adverse representation. It was never resolved by Your Honor because you said Winston stepped out of the case now. And to the extent that they're conflicted, that's something that somebody can whistle over to the ARDC, but they're not before me as counsel in this case and so I'm not going to rule on any disqualification. That all took place before I got into this case.

My only point is, and Mr. Szala may be quite correct that they didn't have a significant part in the litigation, but they had some part in the litigation, albeit they didn't have an appearance on file, or withdrew their appearance, and it's only appropriate and necessary for this Court to consider all of these billing statements to determine any level of reasonableness under either this Consent Decree or any other test you want to apply.

But let me say this. You cannot, I don't think, most respectfully, ignore the mandate of the Bylaws. I think you have to consider the Bylaws when you implement this provision.

And for somebody like Sidley & Austin, who we believe shouldn't be speaking for the Foundation, to stand up and say, we'll be the arbiters. This is the way it ought to be. And we're not going to -- we're not going to show you our cards, that's dead wrong.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, may I be heard on three specific points?

THE COURT: Please.

MS. STONE: Number one, you asked the ILC to retain counsel and to deal with all matters relating to the Foundation during the litigation. The ILC did that.

As part of the ILC's job, the ILC, on a monthly basis, received, reviewed, questioned, and authorized payment of Sidley & Austin's legal fees. Sidley & Austin was the only litigation counsel. Winston & Strawn was not litigation counsel. So our fees have been reviewed and have been vetoed and have been approved by the ILC. That has gone on up to the present point in time.

What is happening here is not the creation of some sort of joint fund where all of the settling parties are agreeing to pay all of the attorneys' fees. If that was happening, if Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz were actually going to be paying part of this, it would indeed be appropriate for them to see and review Sidley's fees. That's not what's happening here. The Foundation is paying its own attorneys, and has done so. And in addition, has agreed, as part of settlement, to pay reasonable fees of other parties, the parties that sued it. Now, we --

MR. BELLOWS: In connection with this case.

MR. CARROLL: As determined by the Court. But what the --

MS. STONE: But pardon me. Pardon me. Pardon me. There is no quarrel here. I do not quarrel with Mr. Carroll. I even do not quarrel with Mr. Cummins, as surprising as that is. I certainly do not quarrel with Your Honor. You are the determiner, the arbitrator, of what is reasonable.

THE COURT: Excuse me. Gentlemen, I'm having some trouble hearing Ms. Stone. I don't remember her talking when you all were talking.

Go ahead.

MS. STONE: We do not quarrel with the fact that you will decide what is reasonable. Not the Foundation. We agreed as part of settlement to make you the decision maker on that. But we never agreed to sit by idly and not even put in a response or not even to be heard on this. You can take our papers for what they're worth. You can say, yes, Sidley &

16di-002642

Austin is right when it points out that at a particular hearing it had one lawyer and Quinlan & Crisham brought five. Or you can discount that and say, you know, maybe Quinlan was right to staff up that much. It was a complicated hearing and, you know, Ms. Stone, you alone were not up to the task and you shouldn't have come over by yourself. You should have brought over, you know, five other people. You can make that determination. We merely want to be heard. In order to be heard, we have to have the raw material with which to make intelligent observations. We may, in fact, agree with a great deal of the fees that are presented to you. We don't know yet because we don't have the raw goods.

THE COURT: Anybody who wants to give me their complete billing statements, may do so. Anybody in good faith who wants to give me redacted billing statements, redacted because of attorney-client privilege or some other kind of strategy privilege or whatever that you think is an important privilege that gives rise to a reason why it shouldn't be disclosed, may give me redacted bills. I'm only going to adjudicate reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with the lawsuit. The Directors being Buntrock. Gidwitz. To the extent that they desire to have me do it, Terra, Tucker, and Simpson. And any other Directors who incurred attorneys' fees privately. And I will certainly be glad to do that. In connection with this litigation. This court, in here, this courtroom, and this Court only.

In order to make an intelligent decision in that regard, we do need to have a protective order so that all of these billing statements, the ones that are unredacted or whatever, if you all believe -- and I don't know if there's a request that they all be filed under seal? Does anybody have any problem with their billing and their statements just being simply filed with the Court with no seal?

MR. SCHUMAN: Your Honor, we already did that without.

MR. WILSON: As well as we did, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Anybody else?

MR. CARROLL: As long as there's a protective order, Your Honor, we agree.

MR. CUMMINS: I don't understand. Were you suggesting that they would be covered by a protective order?

16di-002644

MR. CARROLL: As long as they're protected by a protective order, Judge, consistent with your wishes, we're not looking for it to be filed under seal.

THE COURT: What does that mean?

MR. CARROLL: The protective order as to who can see the files.

THE COURT: Well then that means filed under seal. That's the same thing. Okay? So I take it you all -- and by that I mean Mr. Wilson and Mr. Crow and your firm, Shefsky & Froelich, they -- you're just going to file it. Anybody can see it who wants to see it the whole time?

MR. WILSON: It's been filed for the last two months.

THE COURT: And your motion is the same?

MR. SCHUMAN: It's the same for McDermott, Will & Emery.

THE COURT: Bellows and Bellows, what do you want?

MR. BELLOWS: We have filed, Your Honor, under seal. And of course --

THE COURT: If you want to make it public, you're welcome to. If you don't want to, redact the portions that you think are confidential just like everybody else is going to do.

16di-002645

MR. BELLOWS: Fair enough.

THE COURT: So I'm just going to hold these and you're going to have to advise me with copies to everybody what you're doing.

MR. CUMMINS: I'll look at ours. But may I ask --

THE COURT: One moment. And I do not need to see anything from Winston & Strawn.

I can't adjudicate the attorneys' fees in this case without seeing the bills of Sidley & Austin. They will be seen by me and me only.

MS. STONE: That's fine, Judge.

THE COURT: And I need to take a look at those and I need to make some comparisons and they need to definitely be filed under seal. And I will look at those, I'll compare what everybody else was doing on those days, and I'll determine what the Consent Decree says I'm supposed to do, the fees of the individual Directors.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, two things. You made the comment to the extent that Buntrock -- excuse me, to the extent that Terra, Tucker, and Simpson wish to have you look at those. Now, do I understand by saying that that you recognize that it may simply be appropriate, without prejudice to any position they may take before the Foundation, that it's simply something that they --

THE COURT: Excuse me one moment.

(Colloquy between the Court and deputy.)

THE COURT: I'm sorry, go ahead.

MR. CUMMINS: Sure. That we could simply have the Foundation pass on those as normally would be the case in a circumstance of indemnification?

THE COURT: Well, let me put it this way. I am certain that Shefsky & Froelich wants the Court to do this under the Consent Decree. Is that correct?

MR. CROWE: No, Your Honor. We argued this and I argued this very hard before Your Honor under the indemnification statute. I think the Court should have paid us under the indemnification statute. The Court can do whatever it wants. The Court certainly has a lot of arguments before it under the indemnification statute, but I think that requires a review also.

MR. BELLOWS: We're going to be responding, Your Honor. We're going to be responding with additional -- if I may say so, with additional litigation. We believe that we are entitled, vis-a-vis the Federal lawsuit, to bring an action in a different court in aid of this litigation and in aid of the rights of the parties that are involved in this litigation. And we believe that we're entitled not only under the indemnification statute, but also under the Charter, to have the Foundation reimburse our clients for those fees.

Now, if the Court just says, well, I think that this should be just this matter in this courtroom just before me, then we'd like to address that. Or to have the Court consider the possibility that fees spent in connection with this suit that was brought the day before we filed a motion here in which we filed many of the same papers, should be within the purview of your review. Notwithstanding the fact that it was brought five blocks away.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, the indemnification provision people are talking to was never intended to be a blank check from the Foundation to have people sue the Foundation. To the contrary.

THE COURT: If somebody wants to submit bills to the Foundation under indemnification, they can do so.

MS. STONE: Right.

16di-002648

THE COURT: There is apparently an indemnification provision. And apparently if the Foundation isn't doing what they're supposed to do in that regard, fight it out with the Foundation.

MS. STONE: Right.

THE COURT: I've got to deal with the fees in this case. And "this case" means everything up until the time this case was over. And if you've got fees in this case, you think you're entitled to them under the indemnification.

MR. CROWE: I do. But you --

THE COURT: But you're also entitled to them under here.

MR. CROWE: Right.

THE COURT: If you submit them under here, great. I'll deal with it. (Indicating.) If you submit them under here, great. I'll deal with it. (Indicating.) But I'm not dealing with them under indemnification. I'm dealing with it under the Consent Decree.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, given the way you -- you might parse our bills, because some of it related to what we considered to be protecting our clients' interests, but might not have been directly involved, you know, when the case -- after the case was over, as you put it. So I may have to parse those bills and resubmit them to you, that's all. I just don't want you looking at stuff and then having to reject it. Because I've heard what you said today, and I can take that stuff out. So what I may want to do by next Monday is give you a new set of bills, that's all.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, clarification?

MR. CROWE: Your Honor, all I'm saying is Your Honor has to pass on reasonableness of our bills. Your Honor has already ruled on the fact that Terra, Simpson, and Tucker have their fees paid under the Consent Decree that it does not in any way affect their rights to contest a Consent Decree. And so if Your Honor wants that vehicle to pay the Shefsky & Froelich fees, fine.

You also have taken under reservation the arguments that Mr. Kennedy and I made against each other for a long time, for an hour, about the ability to be paid under the indemnification section. So Your Honor has a lot of roads to get to paying Shefsky & Froelich's fees, but all of them dictate that you decide the reasonableness of our fees.

THE COURT: And I'm going to.

16di-002650

MR. CROWE: Okay.

THE COURT: And I'm going to decide yours under the Consent Decree. And if they want me to decide theirs under the Consent Decree, the Consent Decree says I'm supposed to do all the Directors. Their Directors are the same ones as you, but they're the Directors, and I'll look at theirs.

MR. CUMMINS: There's one other point, Judge, and then I'll try to shut up.

My clients have demanded to see billing statements submitted to the Foundation. They're Directors. They're entitled to see those billing statements.

THE COURT: Bring it up with the Foundation at a Foundation Board meeting.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, I've done that, I've done that, and Sidley & Austin, apparently, has directed people at the Foundation not to turn over those bills.

THE COURT: I don't know what Sidley is doing. I don't know who's representing the Foundation. I don't know what the Foundation is doing. But I assume they're running a couple of art museums right now.

16di-002651

MR. CUMMINS: Well, I know this. I know our clients --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, I have a point of clarification.

MR. CUMMINS: -- I know our clients aren't getting those billing statements. They're entitled to them, and I raise it with you. Maybe you can give somebody some guidance on that to avoid another lawsuit, but maybe that's what it takes.

THE COURT: I don't think courts are supposed to give guidance to avoid lawsuits. I think courts are supposed to deal with what they have in front of them. And what I have in front of me is a requirement that I'm supposed to adjudicate attorneys' fees in this lawsuit.

Now, Counsel, unfortunately we need to recess because I'm supposed to be, at 12:00, over at the Administrative Office for a meeting and I am now going to be 45 minutes late for it, and I need to recess.

If you want to continue to argue, I can see you back here at 2:15. Otherwise, I can give you a schedule for doing these fees. What do you want?

MR. BELLOWS: Can you give us a schedule?

16di-002652

MS. STONE: Can I ask a clarification question?

THE COURT: What's your clarification?

MS. STONE: When you said that other firms may submit their petitions under seal, does that mean and not serve Sidley & Austin? Is that what you're saying? And not share those with us? Just with the Court? I didn't understand.

THE COURT: Anybody that wants to redact anything, you have to give the redacted version to everybody. I mean, you -- anything you're filing, if you're filing it totally under seal because you think the -- I can't imagine anybody's filing anything totally under seal.

MS. STONE: They are.

THE COURT: The only one who should be filing anything totally under seal is Sidley because I'm not adjudicating your fees in this case.

MR. BELLOWS: How long will you give us to resubmit our petition?

THE COURT: The rest are going to be either all redacted or all public. And anything that's redacted has to be given to everybody else. Anything that's public, has to be given to everybody else.

MR. CUMMINS: Okay.

16di-002653

THE COURT: Can you all put this together in a week?

MR. BELLOWS: A week is fine, Judge.

THE COURT: A week?

MR. WILSON: No problem, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Why don't I see you in about a week and we will know at that time whether I have one case or two cases to deal with.

MR. SZALA: Your Honor, may I --

MS. STONE: May we have time to respond, though, Your Honor? We'd like to file some things in response to the fee petitions.

THE COURT: I want to make sure I have the fee petition.

MS. STONE: That's fine.

THE COURT: I want to make sure I have everything that I'm supposed to have.

MS. STONE: That's fine.

THE COURT: And that you all have copies of everything and that we have a protective order.

MS. STONE: Fine.

THE COURT: And you're going to have to negotiate the protective order. You haven't done that, right?

MR. CUMMINS: No.

16di-002654

MR. CARROLL: No, Your Honor.

MR. SZALA: Your Honor, just one thing, if I could.

Winston & Strawn takes offense to Mr. Cummins' statement previously where he linked the ARDC to Winston & Strawn.

THE COURT: I understand. Anybody would. And your silence should not be read in any way as agreeing that Winston & Strawn has done anything that should lead anybody to do anything with the ARDC.

MR. CUMMINS: Nor did Mr. Cummins. I just repeated what was on the record stated by the Court.

THE COURT: Okay. Today is the 20th, and there is a holiday next week. I'm not going to require anybody to file anything on the 27th. Rather than going ahead and filing it and maybe perhaps to make it cleaner, do you want to all just bring your filings to Court on a certain day at a certain time?

MS. STONE: Sure.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Sounds salubrious, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Why don't we do this on the 28th, which is a week from tomorrow, at 11:00. Would that work? And present your petitions on that day. Make sure that you give copies to the other side in advance.

MR. CARROLL: Do you want us to refile the petitions in addition to the detail, Your Honor? Is that what you're suggesting? We have filed a petition, but we haven't filed --

THE COURT: No, you don't have to refile anything. If you're leaving what you have the same, you don't need to refile. And I've read off today what I have. I need to leave. Leave me an order. Thank you.

SUPPLEMENTAL PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS
PURSUANT TO CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER ENTERED JULY 26, 2001

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., respectfully submit this supplemental petition for an award of attorneys fees and costs pursuant to the terms of the July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order ("Consent Decree") previously submitted to this Court. In support of their petition, Plaintiffs state as follows:

1. On September 14, 2001, the plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz submitted a petition for an award of attorneys fees and costs pursuant to the terms of the July 26, 2001 Consent Decree entered in this matter. That petition is hereby incorporated by reference.

16di-002659

2. Since the submission of that petition to this Court, plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz have incurred additional attorneys fees in connection with the original lawsuit. Accordingly, this amended petition is being submitted in order to incorporate those additional fees and costs incurred by the plaintiffs during the month of August, 2001.

3. Pursuant to this Court's order of September 20, 2001, the plaintiffs will submit redacted copies of the attorneys invoices in support of the amounts claimed in this amended petition for fees and costs.

4. Pursuant to the July 26, 2001 Consent Decree and this Court's orders of August 29, 2001, September 7, 2001 and September 20, 2001, the plaintiffs hereby petition that in addition to the amount claimed in the September 14, 2001 petition for fees and costs submitted by plaintiffs, this Court also approval these additional attorneys fees and costs incurred in connection with this matter as reasonable.

5. The total additional amount of attorneys fees and costs incurred by Plaintiffs is $21,419.12.

6. For the reasons in their petition for award of attorneys fees and costs, the total attorneys fees and costs are fair and reasonable considering the number of hours worked, the hourly rates charged by the attorneys, and particularly in light of the complexity of the issues presented and the benefit received by the clients.

7. As noted in the original petition for fees and costs and in plaintiffs' motion for entry of a protective order, the Plaintiffs have sought entry of a protective order from this Court. (See Draft Protective Order attached as Exhibit A.) Upon entry of that protective order, copies of redacted invoices will be submitted to the parties. Of course, to the extent that this Court may need additional narrative explanation for any entry, those descriptions would be presented in camera to the Court.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs ask that this Court order the Terra Foundation for the Arts to reimburse Plaintiffs for attorneys fees as sought in the original petition for fees and costs and pursuant to this supplemental petition, and grant any further relief this Court deems fair and just.

1. In support of the foregoing, on October 10, 2001 in Civil Action No. 01 L 009112, Terra, Tucker and Simpson filed their motion to disqualify Sidley Austin Brown & Wood. A copy of that motion along with the affidavit of Judith Terra is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

16di-002683

2. Incident to proceedings before Judge Nowicki in connection with the Tucker, et al. motion to disqualify, a motion was made to examine Sidley attorneys Stone and Carlson (see attached Exhibit B). The basis for that motion was the conflicting affidavit testimony of Terra, Stone & Carlson.

3. In response to a briefing schedule established by Judge Nowicki, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood determined that it would withdraw from any further representation of the Terra Foundation in the proceeding before Judge Nowicki. A copy of Sidley's filing is attached hereto as Exhibit C.

4. In light of the sworn allegations of conflict coupled with the disparate affidavit testimony of Terra, Stone and Carlson, we believe Sidley's withdrawal was effected in recognition of its conflicted status.

5. In view of the foregoing, we ask the Court to reconsider its earlier ruling that Sidley Austin Brown & Wood act in any capacity with respect to the pending fee petitions.

Respectfully submitted,

JUDITH TERRA, ALAN K. SIMPSON and PAUL HAYES TUCKER

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S MOTION FOR ADDITIONAL TIME TO FILE HIS RESPONSE TO PETITIONS FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES

Plaintiff-Intervenors, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, moves this Honorable Court for additional time to file his response to the multiple Fee Petitions filed in this matter.

1. As the Court is aware substantial multiple fee petitions have been filed seeking millions of dollars from the Foundation for attorney fees.

2. The staff of the Attorney General has made significant effort to review these petitions. The Attorney General's staff have made several charts for comparison and have undertaken to examine and list the various activities it was aware of outside of the court case so as to supply such to the court for review. In addition a comprehensive list of pleadings and other court filings has been assembled, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit "A" which lists the filings made.

3. Unfortunately, the Attorney General's staff members Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris assigned to this fee matter have been required to devote significant time to a dozen or more other matters since the end of September 2001 and have not been able to complete the review of all of the fee petitions at issue and/or complete and file a response on or before November 5, 2001.

WHEREFORE the Attorney General prays for an additional 14 days to complete and file responses to the several attorney fee petitions pending before this court.

Respectfully submitted,

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS,
ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN,
Attorney General of Illinois

TERRA FOUNDATION'S MOTION TO REJECT ANY FEE PETITIONS SEEKING ATTORNEYS' FEES NOT INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH THIS LAWSUIT

Now comes defendant TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, by its attorneys, MULROY, SCANDAGLIA, MARRINSON, RYAN, and moves this Court to reject any fee petition or portion thereof seeking attorneys' fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit (00 CH 13859) as beyond the jurisdiction of this Court under the July 24, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order. In support thereof, defendant states as follows:

1. On July 24, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving the above-captioned litigation, which is attached hereto as Exhibit A. The Court's Order was the result of a settlement agreement between plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock, Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") and the Illinois Attorney General, which was reached pursuant to the Mediation ordered by this Court.

2. As part of the Consent Judgment, the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "[r]easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." (Ex. A ¶ 12.) Thus, the Directors are entitled to seek reimbursement from the Foundation only for reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in connection with this lawsuit: Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859.

3. Prior to and since the Court's entry of the Consent Judgment, defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson have mounted various collateral attacks against the settlement agreement and the Court's order, including but not limited to a now-dismissed action filed in federal court ("the Second Lawsuit") and an action originally filed on July 31, 2001 in the Law Division of this Court, Tucker, et al. v. Buntrock et al., No. 01 L 009112 ("the Third Lawsuit"). The Third Lawsuit is now pending before Judge Nowicki.

4. Attorneys for several of the Foundation's Directors have now submitted fee petitions pursuant to paragraph 12 of the Consent Judgment. Currently, there are at least eight such fee petitions before the Court. However, upon information and belief, several of the fee petitions seek reimbursement for attorneys' fees not incurred "in connection with this lawsuit" but incurred in connection with the Second and Third Lawsuits or other collateral attacks on the Consent Judgment.

5. The Consent Judgment -- the sole basis under which the Directors seek fees -- states that the Foundation shall pay only those attorneys' fees incurred by its Directors "in connection with this lawsuit." (Ex. A ¶ 12.) "A consent judgment is generally regarded as one entered by the court reciting a settlement agreement reached by the parties . . . ." People ex. rel. Fahner v. Colorado City Lot Owners and Taxpayers Ass'n, 108 Ill. App. 3d 266, 276 (1st Dist. 1982). Thus, "like any other agreement, the law of contract controls its interpretation and its meaning should be determined by the language chosen by the parties." Id. See also In re Marriage of Hilliard,178 Ill. App. 3d 620, 623 (3rd Dist. 1989) ("The rules regarding settlement agreements are the same as those which apply to contracts generally, and the primary objective is to give the agreement its plain and ordinary meaning according to the intent of the parties.")

6. Here, the Consent Judgment does not authorize the Court to award – nor require the Foundation to pay – attorneys' fees incurred by the Directors in different – albeit collateral – lawsuits. Accordingly, because the Consent Judgment provides the sole basis under which petitioners' seek fees, any petition for fees incurred not in connection with this lawsuit (OO CH 13859) is beyond the jurisdiction of this Court and must be rejected.

7. Moreover, if the Court grants petitioners fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit, certain Directors undoubtedly will continue in serial litigation involving the Foundation and will return to this Court for reimbursement of their attorneys' fees thereby involving this Court and the Foundation in a morass of continuing litigation with no end in sight. Such a result would deprive the Court and the Foundation of one of the significant benefits of the settlement agreement and Consent Order – an end to this lawsuit.

WHEREFORE, defendant TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order:

(1) rejecting any fee petition or portion thereof seeking attorneys' fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit (No. 00 CH 13859) as beyond the jurisdiction of this Court under the July 24, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order;

(2) ordering any of the parties' with fee petitions currently before the Court to withdraw or to amend their petitions to the extent they seek fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit (No. 00 CH 13859); and

(3) granting the Foundation leave to file an objection to those fee petitions seeking fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit (No. 00 CH 13859).

Respectfully Submitted,

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

1. This Court has personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of these actions.

2. Plaintiffs Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, the Illinois Attorney General and the defendant Foundation now desire to resolve these disputes amicably and without the necessity of further proceedings in these actions. To that end, the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois hereby release and discharge the Terra Foundation for the Arts, its officers, directors, agents and employees, and the Foundation hereby releases and discharges the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois from any and all claims and obligations of any kind or nature raised in or related to the matters raised in this lawsuit, whether in pleadings, motions or argument, other than those obligations set forth herein.

3. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall also maintain its books and records in Illinois, which shall be available to the Attorney General of Illinois for inspection during normal business hours upon reasonable advance notice to the Foundation.

4. The Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws (including promoting American art and culture in the U.S. and abroad) and the laws of the State of Illinois and act consistently with these undertakings. The Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants.

5. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. b. institute initial staggered terms of one, two, three and four years for all Directors with subsequent terms of four years each, and each of the fifteen Board members shall be elected to a term of one, two, three or four years as the Board determines appropriate for each Director elected, subject to the requirement that each of the five new Directors serve an initial term of four years; and

c. establish term limits for all Directors, with no member serving more than eight years after entry of this Order.

7. The Foundation shall reserve and require that, for at least twenty-five years from entry of this Order, a majority of the Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois, with the exception that until the 2002 Annual Meeting or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, fifty per cent of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents.

8. All current members of the Board of Directors will serve only until the 2002 Annual Meeting and will not be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter.

9. The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term:

a. James R. Donnelley

b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

16di-002732

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and nmittee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

12. Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation.

13. These actions are hereby dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its Directors, each of whom specifically denies any wrongdoing or liability. The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.

14. The Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General, and the Foundation agree to the mutually-acceptable press release attached as Exhibit A, and agree that no other public statement shall be made by the Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General or the Foundation or any of their attorneys, agents or employees on their behalf regarding the Litigation, the mediation or the settlement.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S MOTION TO FILE BRIEFS IN EXCESS OF 15 PAGES IN RESPONSE TO THE SEVERAL FEE PETITIONS

Plaintiff-Intervenors, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, moves this Honorable Court for leave to file briefs in excess of 15 pages in response to the several fee petitions and states :

1. As the Court is aware substantial and multiple fee petitions have been filed seeking millions of dollars from the Foundation for attorney fees.

2. The staff of the Attorney General has made significant effort to review these petitions. The Attorney General's staff have made several charts for comparison and have undertaken to examine and list the various activities of which they were aware, which occurred outside of the court matters so as to supply such to the court for review.

16di-002738

3. These efforts were made so as to set forth in writing the recollections of the Attorney General's staff of some, but clearly not all, matters that were brought before this court as well as the many other activities that were undertaken in the furtherance of this litigation. Unfortunately, this effort required more than 15 pages to complete.

WHEREFORE, the Attorney General prays for leave to file in excess of 15 pages in response to the several fee petitions.

EMERGENCY MOTION TO ADVANCE HEARING

NOW COMES Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., former attorneys for JUDITH TERRA, PAUL

HAYES TUCKER and ALAN K. SIMPSON, and respectfully requests this Honorable Court advance the date for hearing Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition for fees. In support thereof, petitioner states:

1. On or about October 8, 2000 Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. was retained to provide representation to Judith Terra, Alan K. Simpson and Paul Hayes Tucker as directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation").

2. Pursuant to the by-laws of the Foundation, the Illinois Not-for-Profit Corporation Act and the Indemnification Agreements between the defendants and the Foundation, advancements and indemnification for the costs and fees expended in this litigation were to have been paid by the Foundation.

3. On or about January 26, 2001, defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson moved to compel the advancement of fees for their defense in this matter ("January Fee Motion"). From time to time, including on March 21, 2001, April 3, 2001, May 16, 2001 and May 18, 2001, this Court continued the ruling on the January Fee Motion because of a concern that a ruling might impact the progress of mediation. On each of these occasions, the Court assured counsel that it would promptly rule on the January Fee Motion once the mediation was complete.

4. In June, 2001, the mediation was completed. As part of the mediated agreement, provisions were made for the fees of counsel to be paid by the Foundation.

5. On or about July 2, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. was allowed to withdraw from the representation of the director defendants without prejudice to its right to pursue the January Fee Motion or to file an additional petition pursuant to the mediated settlement agreement.

6. On July 26, 2001, a Consent Decree and Judgment was entered by this Court.

7. On or about August 6, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. filed a renewed petition for fees and costs ("Renewed Petition") with the supporting affidavit of Brian L. Crowe attesting to the reasonableness of such fees. Attached thereto were copies of the daily time entries for each lawyer assigned to this matter for the period between October 8, 2000 and the Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s withdrawal in July, 2001.

8. From time to time since August 6, 2001, the Renewed Petition has been continued while the Foundation, through its lawyers Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood and Mulroy, Scandaglia, Marrinson, Ryan, the plaintiffs, through their lawyers, Quinlan & Carroll, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and this Court have had an opportunity to review and comment upon the fee requests.

9. The Attorney General and the Foundation have now both filed responses to Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition. Significantly, neither the Foundation nor the Attorney General has made any objection whatsoever to either the fees or costs incurred or the request for reimbursement in the Renewed Petition.

10. It has now been almost fourteen months since Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. began representing the Foundation's directors. A review of the various petitions and responses reveals that Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. is the only firm that has represented any party since the beginning of this litigation that has not been paid. Similarly, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. has not been paid for any of the out of pocket expenses incurred in this matter for a period of almost 14 months. On numerous occasions since January 26, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s right to timely payment has been made subordinated to this Court's and the parties' desires to resolve this case through the mediation process. Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s fiscal year closes on December 31, 2001. Given these circumstances: (i) petitions for fees have been pending for almost 10 months; (ii) detailed time records have been on file and available for review for almost four months; (iii) strict review by the plaintiffs, the Foundation and the Attorney General has not produced a single objection to Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition; and (iv) Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. is the only firm that has not been paid for almost 14 months, it is reasonable for this Court to exercise its equitable power and rule on Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Renewed Petition on or before December 19, 2001.

WHEREFORE, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. respectfully prays that this Court exercise its equitable power and rule on Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Renewed Petition on or before December 19, 2001.

No. 00 CH 13859

EMERGENCY MOTION TO ADVANCE HEARING

NOW COMES Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., former attorneys for JUDITH TERRA, PAUL

HAYES TUCKER and ALAN K. SIMPSON, and respectfully requests this Honorable Court advance the date for hearing Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition for fees. In support thereof, petitioner states:

1. On or about October 8, 2000 Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. was retained to provide representation to Judith Terra, Alan K. Simpson and Paul Hayes Tucker as directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation").

2. Pursuant to the by-laws of the Foundation, the Illinois Not-for-Profit Corporation Act and the Indemnification Agreements between the defendants and the Foundation, advancements and indemnification for the costs and fees expended in this litigation were to have been paid by the Foundation.

3. On or about January 26, 2001, defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson moved to compel the advancement of fees for their defense in this matter ("January Fee Motion"). From time to time, including on March 21, 2001, April 3, 2001, May 16, 2001 and May 18, 2001, this Court continued the ruling on the January Fee Motion because of a concern that a ruling might impact the progress of mediation. On each of these occasions, the Court assured counsel that it would promptly rule on the January Fee Motion once the mediation was complete.

4. In June, 2001, the mediation was completed. As part of the mediated agreement, provisions were made for the fees of counsel to be paid by the Foundation.

5. On or about July 2, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. was allowed to withdraw from the representation of the director defendants without prejudice to its right to pursue the January Fee Motion or to file an additional petition pursuant to the mediated settlement agreement.

6. On July 26, 2001, a Consent Decree and Judgment was entered by this Court.

7. On or about August 6, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. filed a renewed petition for fees and costs ("Renewed Petition") with the supporting affidavit of Brian L. Crowe attesting to the reasonableness of such fees. Attached thereto were copies of the daily time entries for each lawyer assigned to this matter for the period between October 8, 2000 and the Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s withdrawal in July, 2001.

8. From time to time since August 6, 2001, the Renewed Petition has been continued while the Foundation, through its lawyers Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood and Mulroy, Scandaglia, Marrinson, Ryan, the plaintiffs, through their lawyers, Quinlan & Carroll, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and this Court have had an opportunity to review and comment upon the fee requests.

9. The Attorney General and the Foundation have now both filed responses to Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition. Significantly, neither the Foundation nor the Attorney General has made any objection whatsoever to either the fees or costs incurred or the request for reimbursement in the Renewed Petition.

10. It has now been almost fourteen months since Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. began representing the Foundation's directors. A review of the various petitions and responses reveals that Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. is the only firm that has represented any party since the beginning of this litigation that has not been paid. Similarly, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. has not been paid for any of the out of pocket expenses incurred in this matter for a period of almost 14 months. On numerous occasions since January 26, 2001, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s right to timely payment has been made subordinated to this Court's and the parties' desires to resolve this case through the mediation process. Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s fiscal year closes on December 31, 2001. Given these circumstances: (i) petitions for fees have been pending for almost 10 months; (ii) detailed time records have been on file and available for review for almost four months; (iii) strict review by the plaintiffs, the Foundation and the Attorney General has not produced a single objection to Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s petition; and (iv) Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. is the only firm that has not been paid for almost 14 months, it is reasonable for this Court to exercise its equitable power and rule on Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Renewed Petition on or before December 19, 2001.

WHEREFORE, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. respectfully prays that this Court exercise its equitable power and rule on Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Renewed Petition on or before December 19, 2001.

Respectfully submitted,

CLERK OF CIRCUIT COURT

BELLOWS AND BELLOWS' REPLY IN FURTHER SUPPORT OF ITS AMENDED PETITION FOR FEES AND COSTS

Bellows and Bellows, P.C., by its undersigned attorney, hereby submits its Reply in Further Support of its Amended Petition for Fees and Costs. For the reasons stated below and in Bellows and Bellows' Petition for Fees and Costs, its Amended Petition for Fees and Costs and their supporting Affidavits and the exhibits thereto, the Amended Petition should be granted and the Terra Foundation should be ordered to pay the fee and cost items incurred by Directors Judith Terra ("Terra"), Paul Hayes Tucker ("Tucker") and Alan Simpson ("Simpson") as set forth in the Amended Petition.

Should this Court grant some of the fees incurred as being "in connection with" this litigation and reject others (other than for reasonableness), this Court would commit error. Respectfully, it is not for this Court to decide that fees it may now disallow may be recovered at another time in a different action. Were that the case, all fees in connection with this litigation should be decided elsewhere. Petitioner must be allowed to have its fees measured against the fees of all other participants.

I.

THE FOUNDATION'S OBJECTIONS CANNOT APPLY TO ANY PORTION OF BELLOWS AND BELLOWS' WORK PRODUCT

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered an Order ("the Order") stating in part that "Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." In the Amended Petition, Bellows and Bellows submitted billings for $67,012.75 in fees and $5,305.65 in costs. Of these totals, at most, costs of $400.00 and fees of $5,972.50 would not have been incurred if the case Terra Foundation for the Arts et al. v. Floyd Perkins, No. 01 C 4976 ("the Federal Action") had not been filed.

After the Federal Action was dismissed, Bellows and Bellows' previous work product was replicated in filings before this Court seeking injunctive relief. The fee and cost items for such work product relate equally to the instant matter and the Federal Action. Those fee and cost items undoubtedly were incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Therefore, those fee and cost items fall within the right of Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson to be indemnified pursuant to the Foundation's bylaws and the Not for Profit Corporations Act.

Indeed, it would be an abuse of discretion for this Court to find otherwise. To draw a distinction between work performed in preparing a request for relief (regardless of where it was initially presented) and the work in presenting that request subsequently would be arbitrary and unwarranted.

The Terra Foundation for the Arts' ("Foundation's") objection, stated in its Motion dated November 16, 2001 must be limited to $5,972.50 in fees and $400.00 in costs in the Amended Petition. Even then, the Foundation's objections should be disregarded with respect to such items.[1]

II.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OVERLOOKS THE RELEVANT PORTIONS OF THE NOT FOR PROFIT CORPORATIONS ACT

The numerous objections of the People of the State of Illinois ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois ("Attorney General"), to the Amended Petition are without merit. In its Response to the fee petitions, the Attorney General omits to consider the relevant portions of the Illinois Not for Profit Corporations Act and of the Foundation's bylaws.

805 ILCS 105/108.75(a) states that any director of a not-for-profit corporation may be indemnified in connection with "any threatened, pending or completed action, suit or proceeding" (emphasis supplied) for attorneys fees "actually and reasonably incurred ... if such person acted in good faith and in a manner he or she reasonably believed to be in, or not opposed to, the best interests of the corporation...." Section 108.75(a) extends to any suit so long as the directors believe themselves to be acting in the best interests of the corporation. This statutory provision is not limited to cases in which the directors are named as defendants. If directors believe the best interests of the corporation require them to take affirmative action and file suit, Section 108.75(a) provides a

[1]The objections to the less than $64,000 in remaining fee and cost items are without merit for the reasons stated at page 6, footnote 3 hereinafter.

statutory basis for their indemnification, regardless of whether the directors take an offensive or defensive litigation posture. The Attorney General's suggestion, that Section 108.75(c)[2] of the Not for Profit Corporations Act is the only statutory basis on which this Court can enter an Order awarding fees, is incorrect.

In the case at bar, Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson did not agree to the Consent Judgment that preceded the Order. Instead, these Directors believed that their duty to the Foundation required them to take action in the best interests of the Foundation. They reasonably believed that the Attorney General's advocacy in alliance with the faction of Directors opposed to the vision of the Foundation's founder, Daniel Terra, arguably led some Directors to change their positions because of concern over actions that could have been taken against them by interests that wanted the Foundation's museum to remain in the City of Chicago. Setting forth facts tending to show that: Daniel Terra had a vision to alleviate the Foundation's precarious financial position by joining it with another cultural institution in Washington D.C. or through relocation of the Foundation's art collection to Washington; that a majority of directors had been supportive of Daniel Terra's vision; that certain elected public officials in Chicago were opposed to that vision; that the Attorney General intervened in the instant dispute for such reasons apart from the best interests of the Foundation; that certain of the Foundation's Directors changed their position to abandon the vision of Daniel Terra; that those same Directors were vulnerable to personal attack by the Attorney General; and that the ultra vires action of persons in the Attorney General's office caused such Directors to change their positions in such manner, Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson filed the Federal Action, and then filed a request for injunctive belief before this Court based on the same factual allegations.

[2]Section 108.75(c) provides that a director shall be indemnified to the extent he or she has been successful in the defense of any action.

It matters not that this Court disagreed with Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson in ruling that the relatively high burden of proof for obtaining preliminary injunctive relief had not been met. All that matters is that these Directors were acting in furtherance of what they reasonably believed was in the Foundations' best interests.

The mere fact of the Consent Judgment did not relieve the Directors of all exposure to future claims. Although the Attorney General intervened in this suit, that is not to say that members of the public could not have attempted to intervene in their own capacities in the future. Members of the public also could have attempted to bring separate actions against Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson, accusing them of dereliction in their duties by failing to take all possible steps to protect the Foundation. Therefore, the Attorney General's settlement of its claim did not relieve Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson of all potential liability they may have had. The Attorney General's arguments to the contrary are without merit and proceed under the false premise that every citizen of the State of Illinois would be motivated by the same set of concerns that drove the Attorney General to action here.

III.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OVERLOOKS THE RELEVANT PORTIONS OF THE FOUNDATION'S BYLAWS

Article X, section (a) of the Foundation's bylaws states that the Foundation "shall indemnify any and all of its directors ... against expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding ..." The operation of the bylaw is mandatory; the Foundation "shall" indemnify. The only relevant criterion under the bylaw is whether the actions taken by Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson were "in connection with" the Consent Judgment that the Attorney General was able to convince a majority of the Foundation's Directors to accept.

Without question, the request for preliminary injunctive relief to postpone the Foundation's formal vote on the Consent Judgment until the disinterested status of all Directors could be determined and the claim that the Foundation's federal civil rights were violated by ultra vires actions taken by persons in the Attorney General's office in obtaining that Consent Judgment are a request and claim "in connection with" that Consent Judgment. And, the Consent Judgment is the embodiment of the settlement of Plaintiffs' and the Attorney General's claims in this suit. Therefore, the claims filed by Bellows and Bellows, initially in federal court and then before this Court, are "in connection with" the settlement of Plaintiffs' and the Attorney General's claims. Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson therefore have a clear and unequivocal right to be indemnified for the cost and expense of those claims, pursuant to the Foundation's bylaws, even if this Court determines that there should be no indemnification pursuant to the Not for Profit Corporations Act.[3]

The Attorney General's reference to the bylaw as applying only to the "defense of an action," Attorney General's Response at 7, misquotes the bylaw and should be disregarded. Moreover, the Attorney General's reliance on International Insurance Co. v. Rollprint Packaging Products, Inc., 312

[3]This clear legal right to be indemnified gives the Circuit Court of Cook County, as a court of general jurisdiction, the legal power (and indeed the legal duty) to grant indemnification to Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson for all of the fees and costs in Bellows and Bellows' Amended Petition incurred on their behalf, including time spent appearing before the United States District Court in the Federal Action. Therefore, the objections to fees and costs incurred in the Federal Action are without merit, even as to those minor fee and cost items of Bellows and Bellows that were incurred solely in furtherance of the Federal Action. The Federal Action was clearly brought "in connection with" the Consent Judgment and therefore "in connection with" the settlement of the Attorney General's claims and the Plaintiffs' claims in the instant action.

Ill.App.3d 998, 1014-15 (1st Dist. 2000), is misplaced because International Insurance dealt with construction of an insurance contract, not a corporate bylaw, and by the Attorney General's own acknowledgment, dealt with an obligation to "defend," not an obligation to indemnify.

IV.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S REMAINING OBJECTIONS ARE WITHOUT MERIT

No objections are stated as to the reasonableness of the hourly rates charged by Bellows and Bellows which are comparable to, if not lower than, the hourly rates of other firms involved in this matter. Instead, the Attorney General objects only to the amount of time spent and therefore the amount of fees and costs generated by Bellows and Bellows.

However, Bellows and Bellows and its co-counsel were working against the combined forces of Quinlan & Carroll and the Attorney General's office. Bellows and Bellows and its co-counsel, predecessor counsel and successor counsel submitted petitions for fees totalling $1,224,554. Quinlan & Carroll alone submitted a fee petition of over $1,800,000, to which the Attorney General has stated no objection[4]. However, since the Attorney General concedes that a key factor in the reasonableness of a fee petition are the fees charged by opposing counsel, it cannot avoid the conclusion that the fees of Quinlan & Carroll are proof of the reasonableness of the fees submitted by counsel for Terra, Tucker and Simpson.[5] [4]Arguably, some of those fees included time spent in monitoring the Federal Action. If so, the Attorney General's lack of consistency brings into question its good faith in attacking those items of Petitioner's fees.

[5]That counsel for Terra, Tucker and Simpson may have been busier during certain specific time periods than counsel for Plaintiffs is testament only to the ebb and flow of litigation. Indeed, when one party is in the process of preparing a request for injunctive relief, that party, other things being equal, will understandably be busier than its opponent. And, there are no time records for the

This comparison, though, does not even factor in the enormous resources of the Attorney General's office, against which counsel for Terra, Tucker and Simpson also had to contend. Of course, the Attorney General has not shared the amount of time its attorneys spent on this matter, for which taxpayers must foot the bill. By failing to provide time records concerning what Bellows and Bellows was litigating against, the Attorney General cannot be heard to complain that Bellows and Bellows and other counsel fought too long or too hard.

Nor does the Attorney General provide any evidence to support its conclusory arguments that the fees of Bellows and Bellows are unreasonable. By contrast, Bellows and Bellows supported its Amended Petition with the Affidavits of Joel J. Bellows and Laurel G. Bellows, stating facts to show that the fees set forth in the Amended Petition were actually incurred by Terra, Tucker and Simpson as well as their reasonableness. The Attorney General submits no evidence to contradict any part of the Affidavits of Joel J. Bellows or Laurel G. Bellows. And, the Attorney General offers no authority for its argument that Defendants themselves must aver the actual and reasonable nature of the fees, nor does it explain how or why Defendants themselves would be competent to make averments about matters of trust and confidence such as the details of the legal services a law firm provides on behalf of its clients. Since the evidence of the actual and reasonable nature of Bellows and Bellows' fees is unrebutted, the Amended Petition should be granted.

Bellows and Bellows' act of conferring with its lead counsel regarding the claims to be filed on behalf of their shared clients was not only reasonable; it was necessary. Bellows and Bellows was

Attorney General, against whom counsel for Terra, Tucker and Simpson were also litigating. Moreover, the quickness with which a court dispatches an argument is no indication of the time or care reasonably spent in crafting that argument. The Attorney General's arguments to the contrary are without merit.

retained to assert claims that, as this Court is aware, were not asserted by its predecessor counsel. Therefore, no reason exists why this Court should limit Bellows and Bellows to what law and facts Shefsky & Froelich had learned. Moreover, Bellows and Bellows' independent assessment of factual and legal matters was crucial to its ability to provide representation to its clients. A successor counsel cannot willfully limit its knowledge of the case to whatever summary of facts or law is provided by its predecessor counsel without risk of running afoul of its own ethical obligations. Such a course of action would clearly be unreasonable. Since successor counsel's act of obtaining its own appraisal of the governing law and facts must then be reasonable, the fees and costs reflecting such an effort must likewise be reasonably incurred and therefore within the clients' right to be indemnified.

Next, it is immaterial whether the Attorney General, the Plaintiffs and the Directors turned by the Attorney General contemplated the actions taken by Terra, Tucker and Simpson after the Consent Judgment was agreed upon. Terra, Tucker and Simpson are not parties to that Consent Judgment. And, the Order reserves to the Court, not the Attorney General, the power to determine the reasonableness of fees incurred. Reasonableness can only be determined by the standard already employed by the Not for Profit Corporations Act, which is whether the director acted in good faith and in a manner he or she reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the Foundation. 805 ILCS 105/108.75(a). Moreover, although the Attorney General learned about the filing of the Federal Action soon after entering into the Consent Judgment, it failed to obtain any modification of the language it drafted before the Court entered the Order.

Finally, the Attorney General argues, in entirely conclusory fashion and without any legal support, that the fees must be denied because Bellows and Bellows failed to obtain the preliminary injunctive relief it sought and therefore failed to provide "worthwhile legal product." Attorney General's Response, at 19. This argument is unsound because it presumes incorrectly that success is a precondition to the right of indemnification. As set forth above, Section 108.75(c) of the Not for Profit Corporation Act is not the only legal basis under which indemnification can be granted. Rather, Section 108.75(a) and the Foundation's bylaws provide additional bases for indemnification which do not require success on the merits. This Court cannot and should not lay a requirement of success on the merits on top of the statute and the bylaws, when the Illinois State Legislature and the Foundation's Directors made the conscious choice not to impose such a requirement.

V.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the objections to the Amended Petition are without merit and should be overruled, and Bellows and Bellows' Amended Petition for Fees and Costs should be granted.

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE ITS REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO REJECT ANY FEE PETITIONS SEEKING ATTORNEYS' FEES NOT INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH THIS LAWSUIT

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") hereby moves this Court for leave to file the attached five-page reply memorandum in support of its motion to reject any fee petitions seeking attorneys' fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit, which was filed on November 16, 2001. In support thereof, the Foundation states as follows:

1. In this proceeding, the Foundation has raised only one concern regarding the several fee petitions before this Court: that no director be awarded attorneys' fees in this proceeding for work done in connection with different – albeit related – lawsuits. For the most part, the directors with fee petitions before the Court have not opposed the Foundation's request that this Court – consistent with the plain meaning and intent of the Consent Judgment Order – reject any fee petitions seeking attorneys' fees not incurred "in connection with this lawsuit."

2. However, in their response to the Foundation's motion, counsel for defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan Simpson ("the dissenting directors") admit that their fee petitions in this lawsuit seek reimbursement for fees incurred in connection with different lawsuits, but nonetheless assert that they are entitled to such fees under the Consent Judgment and Order. In support of this contention, the dissenting directors rely on certain arguments and authorities for the first time.

3. The Foundation therefore seeks leave to file a five-page reply brief in support of its motion to answer the contentions raised in the dissenting directors' response brief. The Foundation believes its reply brief will assist the Court in determining the appropriate award of fees in this action.

16di-002792

WHEREFORE, the Foundation respectfully requests this Court grant its motion for leave to file its reply brief in support of its motion to reject any fee petition (or portion thereof) seeking attorneys' fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit.

Respectfully submitted,

THE TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO REJECT ANY FEE PETITIONS SEEKING ATTORNEYS' FEES NOT INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH THIS LAWSUIT

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") has raised only one concern regarding the several fee petitions before this Court: that no director be awarded attorneys' fees in this proceeding for work done in connection with different – albeit related – lawsuits. For the most part, the directors with fee petitions before the Court have not opposed the Foundation's request that this Court – consistent with the plain meaning and intent of the Consent Judgment and Order entered by this Court on July 26, 2001 – reject any fee petitions seeking attorneys' fees not incurred "in connection with this lawsuit." However, counsel for defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan Simpson ("the dissenting directors") admit that their fee petitions in this lawsuit seek reimbursement for fees incurred in connection with different lawsuits, but nonetheless assert that they are entitled to such fees under the Consent Judgment and Order. The dissenting directors are wrong for three reasons.

First, the Consent Judgment and Order – read to effectuate the parties' intent – clearly allows for reimbursement of only attorneys' fee incurred in connection with this lawsuit and does not require the Foundation to reimburse the directors for fees incurred in connection with different lawsuits. Nonetheless, relying on inapposite case law, the dissenting directors focus narrowly on the phrase "in connection with" and stretch that phrase to encompass fees incurred in different lawsuits that "touch on matters" raised in this case.[1] That broad, ambiguous standard is simply not consistent with the purpose and plain meaning of the Consent Judgment and Order. Indeed, by focusing narrowly on the "in connection with" language, the dissenting directors ignore the next two words in that clause: "this lawsuit." The Consent Judgment does not provide for reimbursement of all fees incurred "in connection with this dispute" or "in connection with the facts raised in plaintiffs' complaint." Instead, the Consent Judgment

[1] Specifically, the defendants ignore the obvious intent of the parties to this agreement and rely on plainly inapposite case-law discussing "in connection with" as that term is used in (1) the United States Sentencing Guidelines; (2) arbitration clauses governed by the Federal Arbitration Act; (3) the United States Bankruptcy Code; and (4) insurance policies. (See Dissenting Directors Br. at 4.) Far from venturing into these divergent and irrelevant areas of the law, the Court need go no further than the four-corners of the Consent Judgment and Order to determine the proper scope and meaning of "in connection with this lawsuit" as that phrase used in this case.

and Order expressly limits fees by reference to this lawsuit (00 CH 13859). Fees incurred in connection with other lawsuits – with different docket numbers and before different judges – were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit and thus are not reimbursable under the Consent Judgment and Order.[2]

Moreover, the plain meaning of the Consent Judgment and Order is bolstered here by the well-established maxim that "[c]ourts construe contracts so as to avoid absurd results." Rubin v. Laser, 301 Ill. App. 3d 60, 68 (1st Dist. 1998); Foxfield Realty, Inc. v. Kubala, 287 Ill. App. 3d 519, 524 (2d Dist. 1997) (same) (citation omitted). Indeed, under the dissenting directors' interpretation, the Foundation would be forever required to bankroll any lawsuit brought by its directors so long as it merely "touches on" matters raised in this lawsuit. Given that one of the primary benefits of the Consent Judgment and Order was to put an end to litigation concerning the Foundation's future and, as this Court eloquently stated, to allow the Foundation to return to the business of art as opposed to the business of litigation, it is simply absurd to suggest an interpretation of the Order that would allow feuding directors to continuously re-litigate the matters resolved by the Consent Judgment so long as there is money left to pay their attorneys. Yet, that is precisely the interpretation offered by the dissenting directors here. For this reason too, this Court should reject all fee petitions for work done in connection with different lawsuits.

Second, even if the words "in connection with this lawsuit" can be stretched to cover fees incurred in different lawsuits, the Consent Judgment and Order provides only for the reimbursement of "reasonable" attorneys' fees. Here, the dissenting directors' request for fees incurred while launching collateral attacks on this Court's Consent Judgment and Order is downright "unreasonable." The dissenting directors had the opportunity to argue and to vote against the proposed settlement of this litigation at the Board Meeting on June 29, 2001; they did so and lost. They also had the opportunity to raise their objections before this Court (on the Foundation's dime); again, they did so and lost. To now raise those same objections in different lawsuits is anything but reasonable. On this ground too, the dissenting directors' request for fees incurred in different lawsuit should be rejected.

Third, public policy weighs heavily against requiring the Foundation -- a not-for-profit corporation -- to cannibalize its finite resources by funding repeated attempts by feuding directors to re-litigate the matters determined by this Court's Consent Judgment and Order. Yet, that is exactly what the dissenting directors ask this Court to do. The Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation. Public policy therefore supports the Foundation's efforts to preserve its resources for the promotion of American art by limiting reimbursement of attorneys' fees in this proceeding to only those fees actually incurred in connection with this lawsuit. For this reason as well, this Court should reject all fee petitions seeking reimbursement of fees incurred in connection with different lawsuits.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, and as originally set forth in the Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit, filed November 16, 2001, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court reject any fee petition or portion thereof seeking attorneys' fees not incurred in connection with this lawsuit: Buntrock et al. v. Terra et al., No. 00 CH 13859.

EMANUEL S. LOZOFF, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. SHORE HEIGHTS, LTD., et al., Defendants-Appellants

No. 74-18

Appellate Court of Illinois, Second District, First Division

35 Ill. App. 3d 697; 342 N.E.2d 475; 1976 Ill. App. LEXIS 1914

February 6, 1976, Filed

PRIOR HISTORY:
[*1]

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of Kane County; the Hon. PAUL W. SCHNAKE, Judge, presiding.

DISPOSITION:
Reversed.

COUNSEL:
David P. Peskind and Gail L. Erschen, both of Tyler, Peskind & Solomon, of Aurora, for appellants.

Albert Brooks Friedman, of Chicago, for appellee.

JUDGES:
Mr. Justice Guild delivered the opinion of the court. Seidenfeld, P.J., and HALLETT, J., concur.

OPINIONBY:
GUILD

[*698] [477] In 1971 the defendant corporation, Shore Heights, Ltd., (Shore Heights), was the beneficiary of a land trust holding title to 209 lots in Kendall County. Flintlock Investments of Aurora, Illinois (Flintlock) was negotiating with Shore Heights for the purchase of these lots and was also negotiating with Aldridge Construction Company (Aldridge) for the sale of the same lots. Plaintiff, Emanuel S. Lozoff, was employed by Flintlock at this time. Plaintiff was licensed to practice law in Wisconsin but was not licensed to practice law in Illinois until March 2, 1972, almost three months after the complaint herein was filed.

A contract was entered into between Shore Heights and Flintlock but the sale was not consummated. Thereafter, plaintiff discussed with Aldridge's attorneys the possibility [2] of their negotiating directly with Shore Heights. Plaintiff also proposed to Shore Heights' attorney, Norman Lawrence, that plaintiff be employed by Shore Heights to put together a sale of the lots to Aldridge.

On July 20, 1971, a meeting was held between Shore Heights' attorney, plaintiff and the defendant Charles Greene, who was general manager of Shore Heights. At this meeting a letter agreement was dictated by plaintiff and later signed by the defendant, Delores Greene, president of Shore Heights, for Shore Heights. In pertinent part, this agreement provided as follows:
"Dear Mr. Lozoff:

This is to serve as a memorandum of our agreement in which you will be paid the sum of $ 65,000 as attorney's fees for the legal services rendered by you in the Aldridge Construction Company -- Shore Heights land agreement for properties located in Kendall County, Illinois." (Emphasis added.)

On August 6, 1971, a contract was entered into between Shore Heights and Aldridge but later Aldridge served notice on Shore Heights that they were not going to proceed with the contract.

On December 9, 1971, plaintiff, represented by counsel, filed the instant complaint alleging that he was [3] due S 65,000 from defendants for having rendered legal services to them as described in the July 20, 1971, letter agreement. The complaint also alleged that plaintiff dealt with the defendants Charles and Delores Greene individually as well as on [*699] behalf of the defendant Shore Heights and that the Shore Heights-Aldridge contract was not consummated due to defendants' "refusal, failure or inability" to comply therewith. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and against the individual and corporate defendants in the amount of $ 65,000, and answered in the affirmative the special interrogatory, "Did the Plaintiff perform all of the services, which were required by him by the contract?" Following entry of judgment based upon the jury's verdict and the denial of relief prayed for in their post-trial motion, defendants appeal.

The sole question presented in this case is whether an attorney who is licensed to practice law in Wisconsin but not in Illinois may recover attorney's fees for legal services rendered in Illinois.

Although defendants raise several allegations of error, we find that we need only consider the question of whether an attorney who is not [4] licensed to practice law in Illinois can recover on a contract to perform legal services in Illinois. Prior to a discussion of that issue, we note plaintiff's argument that defendants have not properly preserved this issue for review [478] due to their failure to raise it in their post-trial motion. We find, however, that in their post-trial motion defendants specifically asserted that the court erred in denying their motion for judgment on the pleadings and motion in limine, both of which were based exclusively upon plaintiff's lack of an Illinois license to practice law. Such a specification of error satisfies the specificity requirement of section 68.1(2) of the Civil Practice Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1973, ch. 110, par. 68.1(2)) by indicating the grounds upon which the defendants rely " with sufficient particularity to afford the trial court identity of the error relied upon." Osborne v. Leonard (1968), 99 Ill. App. 2d 391, 396, 240 N.E.2d 769, 771.

We turn, then, to a consideration of the effect of plaintiff's not being licensed to practice law in the State of Illinois. Section 1 of the Attorneys and Counselors Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1973, ch. 13, par. 1) in part [5] states:

"No person shall be permitted to practice as an attorney or counselor at law within this State without having previously obtained a license for that purpose from the Supreme Court of this State.

No person shall receive any compensation directly or indirectly for any legal services other than a regularly licensed attorney."

Plaintiff argues that the plain meaning of this statute has no application to the instant case because: (1) he acted merely as a "finder" and not as a lawyer, or (2) Supreme Court Rule 707 (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1973, ch. 110A, par. 707) controls the instant case.

[*700] As to plaintiff's first argument, we find that the fact that the Lozoff-Shore Heights contract, which was drafted by plaintiff, provided that plaintiff was to be paid $ 65,000 "as attorney's fees for  legal services" and the fact that the complaint sought recovery for legal services precludes plaintiff from now contending that he merely acted as a broker or "finder." As to plaintiff's second contention, we find Supreme Court Rule 707 inapplicable to the case at bar. That Rule provides:

"Anything in these rules to the contrary notwithstanding, an attorney and counselor-at-law [6] from any other jurisdiction in the United States, or foreign country, may in the discretion of any court of this State be permitted to participate before the court in the trial or argument of any particular cause in which, for the time being, he is employed."

This Rule, in the discretion of the court, allows a foreign attorney "to participate before the court in the trial or argument of any particular cause in which, for the time being, he is employed." Plaintiff herein is attempting to recover for legal services performed outside of the courts of this State. Rule 707, therefore, has no application to the instant case.

The courts of the State of Illinois have the sole and exclusive power to determine who may practice law in the State. (Chicago Bar Association v. Kellogg (1949), 338 Ill. App. 618, 88 N.E.2d 519.) The practice of law is not limited to court appearances, (People ex rel. Illinois State Bar Association v. Schafer (1949), 404 Ill. 45, 87 N.E.2d 773), but includes the giving of advice or the rendition of any service requiring the use of any degree of legal knowledge or skill. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Association v. Barasch (1950), 406 Ill. 253, 94 [7] N.E.2d 148.

In City of East St. Louis v. Freels (1885), 17 Ill. App. 339, 343, in considering the claim of a nonlawyer for legal services the court stated the following with reference to a predecessor of the statute involved in the instant case:

"From this statute it would seem that the policy of the law is, that no person without being duly licensed as an attorney [479] at law can recover for services performed as such in a court of record."

In Sellers v. Phillips (1890), 37 Ill. App. 74, an attorney who was licensed to practice law in Michigan but not in Illinois sued to recover on a contract for attorney's fees for prosecuting an appeal in the Illinois Supreme Court. The appellate court noted first that the contract,

" is in conflict with Sec. 1, Chap. 13, R.S., which prohibits any person from practicing as an attorney or counselor at [*701] law, or conducting any action or suit in which he is not a party concerned in any court of record in this State without having previously obtained a license for that purpose * * *." (37 Ill. App. 74, 75.)

The court then went on to hold,

"We think the terms of the statute warrant us in going further, [8] [than did the court in Freels, supra] and in saying, positively, that the contract was unlawful and compensation therefore can not be recovered." (37 Ill. App. 74, 75.)

We also note the following statement found in Annot., 11 A.L.R. 3d 907, 908, (1967), relying in part upon Freels and Sellers:

"Most courts take the view that in the absence of some extenuating circumstance, an out-of-state attorney who renders services locally falls within the prohibition against illegally practicing law and cannot recover compensation from his client for the local services."

See also 4 Ill. L.&Pr. Attorneys and Counselors § § 12 and 125 (1971) and Spivak v. Sachs (1965), 16 N.Y.2d 163, 263

N.Y.S.2d 953, 211 N.E.2d 329.

In arriving at the above decision we are not unmindful of the decisions of Mock v. Higgins (1954), 3 Ill. App. 2d 281, 121 N.E.2d 865, and Dorf v. Relles (7th Cir. 1966), 355 F.2d 488.

In Mock v. Higgins, the appellate court in substance held that under section 12 of the Attorneys and Counselors Act, a Missouri lawyer could, in fact, practice in Illinois. Section 12 reads as follows:

"When any counselor or attorney at law, residing [9] in any other state or territory, may desire to practice law in this state, such counselor or attorney shall be allowed to practice in the several courts of law and equity in this state upon the same terms and in the same manner that counselors and attorneys at law residing in this state now are or hereafter may be admitted to practice law in such other state or territory."

It is to be noted that this provision provides that an attorney residing outside of the State shall be allowed to practice in the several courts of law and equity in this State upon the same terms and in the same manner an Illinois lawyer is admitted to practice law in such other State or territory. It is conceded that this section of the statute is somewhat difficult to analyze. It would appear the provision, using the words "admitted to practice law" doubtless means "allowed to practice law." However, if section 12 is read in conjunction with Supreme Court Rule 707, there appears at first blush to be a conflict. This may not necessarily be so. Rule 707 specifically provides that an attorney from [*702] outside the State of Illinois, from another jurisdiction of the United States or foreign country, [10] may be permitted to participate before the court in a trial of a particular case for the time being he is expressly employed. It would appear that section 12 must be read in conjunction with Supreme Court Rule 707. In other words, a foreign attorney, in the discretion of the court, may be allowed to appear in the courts of this State on specific cases for which he is then presently employed. The difficulty arises, however, in such case as the one before us where appearance in court is not an issue but the rendition of legal services by a foreign attorney in the State of Illinois is the problem.

[480] In Mock v. Higgins, the plaintiff, Mock, had entered into a contract with attorney Leahy who was an attorney licensed to practice law in Missouri but not in Illinois. The contract entered into was signed by Leahy, the St. Louis attorney, together with the plaintiff Constance Mock and George F. Higgins, the public administrator of Du Page County, Illinois. Under the provisions of the contract both Leahy, the St. Louis attorney, Higgins, the public administrator, Farthing, an Illinois attorney and Joseph Sam Perry, an Illinois attorney, were to receive for their services [11] the sum of 10% of the amount collected by Constance Mock in a certain probate claim or the sum of $ 250,000, whichever was the larger. They were successful in their efforts and Constance Mock was decreed to be entitled to one-third of the estate, which was in the neighborhood of $ 3,500,000. After Constance Mock had received the money, she became dissatisfied with the contract and sued Higgins, the administrator, Leahy, the St. Louis attorney, Farthing, the Illinois attorney and Joseph Sam Perry, the Illinois attorney, alleging that Leahy was not admitted to practice law in the State of Illinois and that the entire contract was therefore void. In passing upon this issue, as indicated above, the court specifically held that it was common knowledge that Missouri lawyers practice in the State of Illinois and, although Leahy was not admitted to practice law in the State of Illinois, the contract involving Mr. Leahy, the St. Louis attorney, was not void. The court in Mock at no time considered the provisions of Supreme Court Rule 707 or its predecessor, if any.

In Dorf v. Relles, the Federal court cited with approval the above finding in Mock. We do not adhere to Mock [12] insofar as it relates to the case at bar, nor do we adhere to Dorf insofar as it follows Mock. We find that section 12, relative to nonresident lawyers practicing law in Illinois, must be read in conjunction with Supreme Court Rule 707. In other words, the Missouri lawyer, or as here a Wisconsin lawyer, may, in certain instances, in the discretion of the trial court, be allowed or [*703] admitted to practice law before the courts of this State. Insofar as Mock holds to the contrary, we disagree.

We therefore find that plaintiff is precluded from recovering for legal services rendered in Illinois when he was not licensed to practice law in Illinois.

The judgment appealed from is hereby reversed and judgment is entered in favor of the defendants.

Reversed.

OPINION:

[*595] [625] JUSTICE McLAREN delivered the opinion of the court:

Robert Z. Blue, a nonlawyer proceeding pro se, filed a "Complaint for an Order of Habeas Corpus" (complaint) in the name of his minor 'child, [2] plaintiff Aaron J. Blue, with the circuit court of Lake County. The complaint alleged that plaintiff was being held in custody without due process of law by his mother, Susan Fisher, as the result of certain visitation orders entered by the circuit court of Cook County in Robert and Susan's pending dissolution of marriage suit. The trial court dismissed the complaint pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3) of the Code of Civil Procedure (section 2-619(a)(3)) (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1989, ch. 110, par. 2-619(a)(3)), which provides for involuntary dismissal where there is another action pending between the same parties for the same cause. On appeal, plaintiff argues that the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action for habeas corpus.

[626] We strike plaintiff's briefs, dismiss the appeal, and hold that the proceedings below were void and must be vacated. As a nonlawyer [*596] who is not a party to this suit, Robert Blue may not represent plaintiff in this court and had no authority to do so at the trial level.

Robert Blue filed the complaint pro se. After the trial court dismissed the complaint under section 2-619(a)(3), Blue filed a notice of appeal, an appellant's brief and [3] a reply brief, all "pro se" as "Father of Appellant." Approximately three weeks after the reply brief was filed, William L. Barr, Jr., an attorney, filed his motion for leave to appear as attorney for plaintiff. This court allowed the motion, and Barr entered his "additional appearance" for plaintiff.

One not duly authorized to practice law may not represent another in a court of law. (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1989, ch. 13, par. 1; National Bank v. First Wisconsin National Bank (1977), 53 Ill. App. 3d 482, 488-89.) Lay people may appear only in their "proper persons" (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1989, ch. 13, par. 11), i.e., only on their own behalf. (National Bank, 53 Ill. App. 3d at 489.) A pleading signed by a person who is not licensed to practice law in this State is a nullity even if a duly licensed attorney subsequently appears in court. (Fruin v. Northwestern Medical Faculty Foundation, Inc. (1990), 194 Ill. App. 3d 1061, 1063.) Where one not licensed to practice law has instituted legal proceedings 'on behalf of another, the suit should be dismissed; if the suit has proceeded to judgment, the judgment is void and will be reversed. [4] Leonard v. Walsh (1966), 73 Ill. App. 2d 45, 47.

That Robert Blue has labeled himself "pro se" does not bring this case within the right of a party to represent himself. Robert Blue is at most the "next friend" of the minor plaintiff. A next friend is not a party to a suit but represents the real party, who, as a minor, lacks the capacity to sue in his own name. Severs v. Country Mutual Insurance Co. (1982), 89 Ill. 2d 515, 520; Clarke v. Chicago Title & Trust Co. (1946), 393 Ill. 419, 430-31; Hoare v. Harris (1849), 11 Ill. 24, 25; 27 Ill. L. & Prac. Minors § 71, at 54; § 74, at 57 (1956).

Although we have found no published opinion from this State addressing this particular set of circumstances, we believe that the authority set out above compels the conclusion that one not authorized to practice law may not represent a minor in a court of record. We note that several Federal courts have addressed this precise issue and have held that the Federal right to self-representation does not allow a nonlawyer next friend to represent a minor. (See Cheung v. Youth Orchestra Foundation of Buffalo, Inc. (2d Cir. 1990), 906 F.2d 59.; [5] Meeker v. Kercher (10th Cir. 1986), 782 F.2d 153, 154; Lawson v. Edwardsburg Public School (W.D. Mich. 1990), 751 F. Supp. 1257, 1258-59.) The Cheung court explained that allowing a nonlawyer parent to sue in the name of his minor child without obtaining counsel [*597] does not promote the interest in free choice that underlies the right of a party to self-representation. Furthermore, allowing those without proper legal training to represent minors undermines the full protection of the minors' legal rights and "also invites abuse, as the present case may demonstrate." (Emphasis added.) (Cheung, 906 F.2d at 61.) We agree fully with this reasoning.

As Robert Blue was neither authorized to bring this action "pro se" nor to file the briefs that he filed in connection with this appeal, we strike the briefs on appeal and hold that the proceedings below are void and of no effect. We therefore dismiss the appeal and vacate the judgment of the circuit court.

The appeal is dismissed, and the judgment of the circuit court of Lake County is vacated.

Appeal dismissed; judgment vacated.

OPINION:

[*623] [844]

JUSTICE McBRIDE delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal arises from the dismissal of plaintiff's complaint for failure to file a physician's report as required by 735 ILCS 5/2-622 (West 1998). Plaintiff's complaint alleged numerous acts of medical negligence committed by defendants that resulted in the death of Irma Ratcliffe ("Decedent"). Plaintiff-Appellants are Sherry and Glen Ratcliffe who are husband and wife (collectively referred to as "Ratcliffe"). Decedent was Sherry Ratcliffe's mother. Sherry Ratcliffe filed this action on behalf of Decedent and was later appointed Special Administrator of Decedent's Estate by the trial judge. Ratcliffe has not retained counsel and is representing Decedent's interests in the matter pro se as she did below.

The Defendants-Appellees are Dr. Frank Apantaku ("Apantaku"); [2] Trinity Hospital ("Trinity"); University of Chicago Hospital ("UCH"); and Illinois Home Health Care, Inc. ("Home") (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Defendants"). We state only those facts necessary for disposition of this appeal. Ratcliffe's complaint alleges that Apantaku's negligent treatment of Decedent resulted in her death due to urosepsis. According to Ratcliffe, the urosepsis developed because of an unchecked urinary tract infection which both Apantaku and Trinity negligently failed to detect and promptly treat. Ratcliffe also alleges that Trinity and Home failed to acknowledge and respond to complaints made by Ratcliffe concerning the negligent care administered to Decedent by Apantaku. Because of Apantaku and Trinity's alleged negligence concerning Decedent's care, Ratcliffe brought Decedent into the emergency room at UCH. Ratcliffe further asserts that UCH was also negligent in failing to administer proper care and effectively hastened the death of Decedent. Based on the above allegations, Ratcliffe, on behalf of Decedent's estate, sought monetary damages in [845] excess of fifty-thousand dollars against each Defendant

Ratcliffe filed her complaint in the circuit court [3] on April 10, 1998. On July 6, 1998, Trinity filed a motion to dismiss Ratcliffe's complaint and UCH was granted leave by the trial court to join in that motion. Apantaku also filed a motion to dismiss the complaint on August 13, 1998. One of the grounds alleged in the Defendants' motion to dismiss was Ratcliffe's failure to file a physician's report as required by 735 ILCS 5/2-622.

Section 2-622 states in relevant part:

"(a) In any action,  in tort  in which the plaintiff seeks damages for injuries or death by reason of medical, hospital or an [*624] other healing art malpractice, the plaintiff's attorney or the plaintiff, if the plaintiff is proceeding [pro se], shall file an affidavit, attached to the original and all copies of the complaint, declaring one of the following:

1. That the affiant has consulted and reviewed the facts of the case with a health professional who the affiant reasonably believes: (i) is knowledgeable in the relevant issues involved in the particular action; (ii) practices or has practiced within the last 6 years or teaches or has taught within the last 6 years in the same area of health care or medicine [4] that is at issue in the particular action; and (iii) is qualified by experience or demonstrated competence in the subject of the case; that the reviewing health professional has determined in a written report, after a review of the medical record and other relevant material involved in the particular action that there is a reasonable and meritorious cause for filing such action; and that the affiant has concluded on the basis of the reviewing health professional's review and consultation that there is a reasonable and meritorious cause for filing such action.

(g) The failure to file a certificate required by this section shall be grounds for dismissal under Section 2-619." 735 ILCS 5/2-622 (West 1998).

On September 18, 1998, the trial court granted Ratcliffe until November 9, 1998, to file a physicians report pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-622. On November 9, 1998, Ratcliffe was appointed special Administrator of Decedent's estate and she complained that she had yet to receive medical records from Trinity and, thus, could not file her physician's report as required under the above statute.

In a variety of different [5] orders, the trial court instructed the Defendants to produce copies of Decedent's records to Ratcliffe. Based upon a review of the orders and Defendants' allegations, it appears that Ratcliffe received UCH's records on October 7, 1998; Trinity's records on November 30, 1998; and Home's records on February 17, 1999. Additionally, Apantaku represented to the court on September 28, 1998, that he possessed no independent office letters concerning the Decedent and would indicate so in a letter to Ratcliffe, Ratcliffe admits receiving all of Defendants' records by February 18, 1999.

Despite having UCH and Trinity's records for months, Ratcliffe did not file a physician's report pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-622. On February 16, 1999, prior to hearing Defendants' motions to dismiss, the trial court ordered Ratcliffe to [*625] produce a physician's report by March 22, 1999, or the case would be dismissed in accordance with the statute. On March 22, 1999, Ratcliffe had not filed the physician's report and the trial court dismissed Ratcliffe's complaint with prejudice. Ratcliffe appeals from the order dismissing the complaint.

The two main questions raised by this appeal [6] are: (1) whether the trial court abused its discretion in granting Defendants' motions to dismiss pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-622; and (2) whether the trial [846] court's dismissal of the complaint was justified based on the fact that it was improper for Ratcliffe, a pro se litigant, to represent Decedent's estate in a wrongful death or survivor action.

We apply an abuse of discretion standard of review concerning the trial court's dismissal of a complaint based on failure to comply with section 2-622. Mueller v. North Suburban Clinic, Ltd., 299 Ill. App. 3d 568, 572, 701 N.E.2d 246, 233 Ill. Dec. 603 (1998). As the second question involves a question of law, our standard of review will be de novo. Daley v. American Drug Stores, Inc., 294 Ill. App. 3d 1024, 1026, 691 N.E.2d 846, 229 Ill. Dec. 373 (1998).

Because we conclude that it was improper for Ratcliffe, a pro se litigant, to represent the legal interests of Decedent's estate in the action below and because we find this fact is dispositive of the appeal, we will only address this issue. At a court hearing on September 18, 1998, in the instant case the trial judge [7] advised Ratcliffe that under Blue v. People of the State of Illinois, 223 Ill. App. 3d 594, 585 N.E.2d 625, 165 Ill. Dec. 894 (1992), he did not believe Ratcliffe could represent Decedent's estate in a pro se capacity. The trial judge however did not dismiss the action at that time and on a subsequent court date appointed Ratcliffe as special administrator of Decedent's estate.

In Blue, a pro se plaintiff filed a complaint for an order of habeas corpus in the name of his minor child alleging that the plaintiff was being held in his mother's custody in violation of due process of law. The trial court dismissed the complaint based on the fact that another action was pending between the same parties for the same cause under section 2-619(a)(3) of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure. Plaintiff appealed the trial court's dismissal. The appellate court dismissed plaintiff's appeal and vacated the circuit court's judgment. Blue, 223 Ill. App. 3d at 597.

In Blue, the appellate court noted that under "Ill. Rev. Stat. 1989, ch. 13, par. 1 [now codified as 705 ILCS 205/1]," "One not duly authorized to practice [8] law may not represent another in a court of law." Blue, 223 Ill. App. 3d at 596. Further, the court held that:
[*626]

"Lay people may appear only in their 'proper persons'  only on their own behalf. [Citation omitted.]  A pleading signed by a person who is not licensed to practice law in this State is a nullity even if a duly licensed attorney subsequently appears in court. [Citation omitted.] Where one not licensed to practice law has instituted legal proceedings on behalf of another, the suit should be dismissed; if the suit has proceeded to judgment, the judgment is void and will be reversed. [Citation omitted]."

Blue, 223 Ill. App. 3d at 596.

The court then held that plaintiff could not represent the interests of another, his son, without being authorized to practice law, Thus, although a pro se litigant is entitled to represent his or her own personal interest, a non-attorney cannot represent another's legal interests on behalf of that individual. Part of the rationale behind the court's ruling was that an individual (a minor) who lacks the capacity to represent himself is entitled to the protection and expertise of [9] an attorney.

In further support of their position that the trial court's order dismissing this complaint should be affirmed, defendants also rely upon a decision by the Court of Appeals of Nebraska entitled Waite v. Carpenter, 1 Neb. App. 321, 496 N.W.2d 1 (1992). In Waite, a pro se litigant filed several claims against defendants as personal representative of Harriet Waite's estate. The complaints did not state plaintiff's relationship with Harriet Waite but indicated the plaintiff was acting as personal representative of the estate. The court found that:

[847] "As wrongful death actions, [these cases] are of the type which may only be maintained by a personal representative, and  a non-lawyer may represent himself or herself, but may not act as the legal representative for anyone else. This rule includes a non-attorney personal representative acting for an estate. Obviously, the personal representative who brings a wrongful death suit is bringing it for the benefit of the other heirs and those persons are entitled to have their legal interests represented by one who is trained and licensed to do so. This is not to say that personal representatives [10] must be attorneys, but rather, that one who seeks to represent the legal interests of the personal representative must be an attorney. This rule protects the estate, its heirs, and its creditors." Waite, 1 Neb. App. at 328.

We have reviewed Ratcliffe's complaint and although entitled a "Complaint Of Professional Negligence," it is styled more in the nature of a wrongful death or survival action. We also note that during the proceedings below the trial judge appointed Ratcliffe as the Special Administrator of Decedent's estate and Ratcliffe's complaint seeks money damages.

Because claims for both wrongful death and survival actions [*627] are brought in a representative capacity we find that they may not be brought pro se. The Wrongful Death Act provides: "Every such action shall be brought by and in the names of the personal representatives of such deceased person." 740 ILCS 180/2 (West 1998). The Illinois Survival Statute likewise provides that such a cause of action shall be brought in a representative capacity. 755 ILCS 5/27-6 (West 1998).

Thus, we agree with the Waite reasoning and hold that Ratcliffe [11] cannot represent the legal interests of Decedent's estate in a pro se capacity because she is not an attorney licensed to practice law. As Waite points out, medical malpractice and wrongful death actions are complex cases that require the expertise of an attorney and the dismissal of Ratcliffe's complaint under section 2-622 only reinforces this proposition. Waite, 1 Neb. App. at 330. As a result of our reading of both Blue and Waite, we believe this appeal should be dismissed.

Although we have determined this appeal should be dismissed because Ratcliffe could not represent the legal interests of Decedent's estate as she is not a licensed attorney, we address Ratcliffe's claim that the trial court erred in not appointing counsel to represent her in the lawsuit that she filed in violation of 705 ILCS 205/1 (West 1998).

Ratcliffe contends that the trial court's failure to appoint counsel on her behalf was erroneous and was also abusive is some fashion. We disagree. First, an individual in a civil action has no right to counsel under the Illinois Constitution. In re Marriage of Schmidt, 241 Ill. App. 3d 47, 48, 609 N.E.2d 345, 182 Ill. Dec. 42 (1993). [12] Ratcliffe provides us with no authority to the contrary. Moreover, we fail to see how, under these facts, Ratcliffe, as personal representative of Decedent's estate, has a right to counsel. Ratcliffe as much as concedes so in her amended brief.

Further, we are not persuaded by any of the cases cited by Ratcliffe in support of her alleged entitlement to counsel. In Zarnes v. Rhodes, 64 F.3d 285, 288 (1995), the court affirmatively stated that "civil litigants do not have a right, either constitutional or statutory, to counsel [Citation.]" Further, the court determined that the district court did not abuse its discretion in denying Zarnes' request for counsel. Zarnes, 64 F.3d at 288. Thus, the express language of Zarnes defeats Ratcliffe's argument on this question.

Ratcliffe also relies on Thomas v. Pate, 493 F.2d 151, 156 (1974). In Thomas, a federal discrimination case, the court also stated that, "A plaintiff in a civil action  has no sixth amendment right to competent counsel." Thomas, 493 F.2d at 157. [848] Thus, Thomas merely reiterates the same proposition expressed in Zarnes. As earlier noted, [13] [*628] In re Marriage of Schmidt, Zarnes and Thomas defeat Ratcliffe's position on this question.

The final case cited by Ratcliffe on this point exclusively concerns a plaintiff's right to self-representation and not the right to appointment of counsel. See O'Reilly v. New York Times Company, 692 F.2d 863

(1982). Therefore, the case is not germane to the question at issue. Accordingly, we dismiss this appeal because Ratcliffe, a pro se litigant, could not represent the legal interest of Decedent's estate in the action below.

The appeal is dismissed and the judgment of the circuit court is vacated.

Appeal dismissed, judgment vacated.

OPINION:

[*399] [1047] The plaintiff, Emanuel S. Lozoff, an attorney, filed an action in the circuit court of Kane County alleging that he "rendered legal services to the defendants, for which the defendants agreed to pay" him $ 65,000 and that he had not been paid. Lozoff was licensed to practice law in Wisconsin but not in Illinois at the times involved. A jury returned a verdict in the plaintiff's favor and awarded him $ 65,000. The appellate court reversed, holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover legal fees because he was not licensed to practice in this State when he performed the services. (35 Ill. App. 3d 697.) We granted the plaintiff's petition [2] for leave to appeal. 58 Ill. 2d R. 315.

[*400] [1048] The defendants are Shore Heights, Ltd., Delores Greene, its president, and Charles Greene, its general manager. Shore Heights is the beneficiary of a land trust holding title to a tract in Kendall County. In the spring of 1971 Shore Heights contracted to sell the land to Flintlock Investments of Aurora (Flintlock), but the agreement was rescinded. Flintlock had intended to resell the property to Aldridge Construction Company (Aldridge).

The plaintiff was a member of the group that engaged in negotiations for Flintlock with both Shore Heights and Aldridge. After the Shore Heights - Flintlock agreement was rescinded, the plaintiff persuaded Aldridge's representatives to negotiate directly with Shore Heights for the sale of the property. At the same time the plaintiff approached Norman Lawrence, the Shore Heights attorney, and told him that he probably could effect an agreement between Shore Heights and Aldridge for a conveyance. The plaintiff suggested to Lawrence that Shore Heights retain the plaintiff to arrange the sale. To discuss this there was a meeting on July 20, 1971, in Lawrence's office, [3] attended by the plaintiff, Charles Greene and Lawrence. Greene agreed to employ the plaintiff in the negotiations with Aldridge, and the plaintiff prepared a statement that was later signed by Mrs. Greene as president of Shore Heights. It provided:

"This letter is to serve as a memorandum of our agreement in which you will be paid the sum of $ 65,000.00 as attorneys fee for the legal services rendered by you in the Aldridge Construction Company - Shore Heights land agreement * * *."

Thereafter on August 6, 1971, Shore Heights entered into a contract with Aldridge for the sale of the tract. On November 21, 1971, the parties met to close the sale, but during the meeting differences arose and Aldridge stated that it would not complete the transaction. Shortly thereafter the plaintiff brought the suit to collect fees.

The plaintiff does not deny that he was only licensed [*401] to practice law in Wisconsin at the time the contract between Shore Heights and Aldridge was made. He contends, however, that if an attorney who is licensed in another State, though not in Illinois, collaborates with an Illinois attorney in providing legal services in this State, he can recover [4] compensation for his services.

The evidence shows that the plaintiff approached Lawrence and the defendants and offered his professional services regarding the proposed conveyance of land in Illinois. It appears that all of the parties involved, excepting the plaintiff, were from Illinois. The evidence further shows that the plaintiff actively participated in the negotiations leading to the Shore Heights - Aldridge contract and that he gave legal advice to the defendants. It seems clear that the plaintiff engaged in the practice of law in Illinois.

It is for this court to determine who shall be permitted to practice law in Illinois. (In re Anastaplo (1954), 3 Ill. 2d 471; People ex rel. Chicago Bar Association v. Goodman (1937), 366 Ill. 346; People ex rel. Illinois State Bar Association v. Peoples Stock Yards State Bank (1931), 344 Ill. 462.) At the time the plaintiff was retained by the defendants our Rule 707 made it possible for an attorney not admitted to practice in Illinois to take part in court proceedings. The rule provided:

"Anything in these rules to the contrary notwithstanding, an attorney from any other jurisdiction in the United States, or foreign [5] country, may in the discretion of any court of this state be permitted to participate before the court in the trial or argument of any particular cause in which, for the time being, he is employed." (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1969, ch. 110A, par. 707.)

There was no litigation here, and the plaintiff, of course, did not come within the rule. It is clear, however, that the plaintiff did engage in the unauthorized practice of law, and he cannot recover attorney fees. There is a statutory prohibition, too, against the allowance of legal fees for persons other [1049] than licensed attorneys. Section 1 of "An [*402] Act to revise the law in relation to attorneys and counselors" (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1969, ch. 13, par. 1) provided:

"No person shall be permitted to practice as an attorney or counselor at law within this State without having previously obtained a license for that purpose from the Supreme Court of this State.

No person shall receive any compensation directly or indirectly for any legal services other than a regularly licensed attorney."

Legislation such as this is not to be considered antagonistic to the judicial authority to govern the practice [6] of law. We noted in People ex rel. Chicago Bar Association v. Goodman (1937), 366 Ill. 346, 349:

"The power to regulate and define the practice of law is a prerogative of the judicial department as one of the three divisions of the government created by article 3 of our constitution. The legislative department may pass acts declaring the unauthorized practice of law illegal and punishable. Such statutes are merely in aid of, and do not supersede or detract from, the power of the judicial department to control the practice of law."

The plaintiff cites Mock v. Higgins (1954), 3 Ill. App. 2d 281, and Dorf v. Relles (7th Cir. 1966), 355 F.2d 488, to support his position. Both of these decisions are distinguishable, for they involve matters that were before trial courts and the participation by out-of-State attorneys was within Rule 707. We would observe that the dictum in Mock to the apparent effect that an attorney licensed in one jurisdiction may, without more, practice in another (3 Ill. App. 2d 281, 293), as can be seen from what we have said here, is erroneously overbroad.

We do not mean in our holding today to have it understood that there can never [7] be circumstances that will allow an out-of-State attorney who is not within Rule 707 to recover for legal services. We recognize there are [*403] transactions involving parties and attorneys from more than one State which would require a result different from today's holding.

In Spivak v. Sachs (1965), 16 N.Y.2d 163, 211 N.E.2d 329, 263 N.Y.S.2d 953, the plaintiff, an attorney who was licensed in California, spent 14 days in New York during which he advised the defendant, a New York resident, concerning her pending divorce. The New York Court of Appeals, in affirming the dismissal of the plaintiff's complaint for fees, observed:

"The statute [prohibiting the practice of law by unlicensed persons] aims to protect our citizens against the dangers of legal representation and advice given by persons not trained, examined and licensed for such work, whether they be laymen or lawyers from other jurisdictions.
***

There is, of course, a danger that section 270 could under other circumstances be stretched to outlaw customary and innocuous practices. We agree with the Supreme Court of New Jersey (Appell v. Reiner, 43 N.J. 313, [204 A.2d 146]) that, recognizing [8] the numerous multi-State transactions and relationships of modern times, we cannot penalize every instance in which an attorney from another State comes into our State for conferences or negotiations relating to a New York client and a transaction somehow tied to New York. We can decide those cases when we get them but they are entirely unlike the present one." 16 N.Y.2d 163, 168, 211 N.E.2d 329, 331, 263 N.Y.S. 2d 953, 956. See generally Annot., 11 A.L.R.3d 907 (1967).

For the reasons given, the judgment of the appellate court is affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

OPINION:

[*1062] [1010] Plaintiff, Lisa Fruin, appeals from the order of the circuit court of Cook County dismissing with prejudice her complaint against defendants, Arthur DeBoer, M.D., S.C., Arthur DeBoer, M.D., and Robert A. Miller, M.D. The basis of the dismissal [1011] was that the complaint was signed and filed by an attorney who was not licensed to practice in Illinois.

Plaintiff's appeal arises from the following undisputed facts. On January 11, 1984, plaintiff underwent a surgical procedure for the implantation of a prosthetic aortic valve. The surgery [2] was performed by Dr. DeBoer, and plaintiff was seen and treated by both Drs. DeBoer and Miller for post-operative care and examinations from January 21, 1984, through March 5, 1984. On March 27, 1985, plaintiff underwent emergency open-heart surgery.

On March 27, 1987, plaintiff filed a complaint alleging medical malpractice against Drs. DeBoer, Miller, and the Northwestern Medical Faculty Foundation. (Northwestern Medical has also been dismissed from the case but is not involved in this appeal.) Plaintiff's complaint alleged that Drs. DeBoer and Miller failed to prescribe an appropriate anticoagulation regime for plaintiff, and that this failure led to medical problems resulting in the required emergency open-heart surgery. Plaintiff further alleged that the first time she knew or should have known that she should have maintained an anticoagulation regime was on or about April 1, 1985. Thus, her complaint was filed four days before the expiration of the applicable statute of limitations. See Ill. Rev. Stat. 1985, ch. 110, par. 13-212.

The complaint was signed and filed by Michael J. Colgan, an attorney licensed in Wisconsin, but not in Illinois. Colgan consulted with an Illinois [3] law firm, and that firm prepared the initial pleadings. On August 17, 1987, after the statute of limitations had run, a supplemental appearance was filed on plaintiff's behalf by Kenneth C. [*1063] Chessick, a licensed Illinois attorney. On January 6, 1988, Drs. DeBoer and Miller were served by alias summons. They filed a motion to dismiss, and on February 6, 1989, the trial court granted the motion to dismiss with prejudice.

Plaintiff alleges that the unique circumstances of her case require this court to reverse the trial court's order of dismissal. Plaintiff notes that she did not know that Colgan was not licensed to practice in Illinois. Further, she points out that Colgan made reasonable and diligent efforts to secure the participation of Illinois counsel, and that she secured such participation by the entry of the supplemental appearance of licensed Illinois counsel. Finally, she observes that defendants have not suffered any prejudice as a result of the filing of the complaint by an attorney not licensed to practice in Illinois.

. 1 Absent leave of court pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 707, an attorney licensed to practice law in another State may not practice law in [4] Illinois. (Lozoff v. Shore Heights, Ltd. (1976), 35 Ill. App. 3d 697, 342 N.E.2d 475; 107 Ill. 2d R. 707.) Generally, a pleading signed by a person not licensed to practice in Illinois is a nullity. (Marken Real Estate & Management Corp. v. Adams (1977), 56 Ill. App. 3d 426, 371 N.E.2d 1192; National Bank v. First Wisconsin National Bank (1977), 53 Ill. App. 3d 482, 368 N.E.2d 119; Leonard v. Walsh (1966), 73 Ill. App. 2d 45, 220 N.E.2d 57.) This rule applies even when subsequent court appearances are made by a duly licensed attorney. Housing Authority v. Tonsul (1983), 115 Ill. App. 3d 739, 450 N.E.2d 1248; Marken Real Estate & Management Corp. v. Adams, 56 Ill. App. 3d 426, 371 N.E.2d 1192.

Plaintiff notes, however, that this court fashioned an exception to the general rule in Janiczek v. Dover Management Co. (1985), 134 Ill. App. 3d 543, 481 N.E.2d 25. Plaintiff urges this court to extend its holding in Janiczek to encompass the situation here. In Janiczek, the plaintiff retained an Illinois licensed attorney to handle a workers' compensation action and a personal injury claim. The attorney settled the workers' compensation action and subsequently [5] was disbarred. He then filed the plaintiff's personal injury action, under the name of another attorney, without authorization to do so. This court held that the plaintiff's case should not have been dismissed because plaintiff initially had retained an Illinois licensed attorney, and unbeknownst to plaintiff, that attorney was later disbarred. Significantly, [1012] the court did not question the reasoning or the results of those cases holding that proceedings instituted by nonattorneys or nonlicensed attorneys are void. Rather, the Janiczek court relied upon the unique circumstances of that case in deviating from the rule voiding proceedings [*1064] instituted by nonattorneys.

. 2 In our view, this case does not present unique circumstances which would justify a similar deviation from the rule. Unlike the plaintiff in Janiczek, who hired an Illinois attorney, with offices in Illinois, plaintiff here hired a Wisconsin attorney, with offices in Wisconsin. Accordingly, plaintiff should have inquired into his ability to practice law in Illinois. Her failure to do so, while unfortunate, is not reason enough to permit a relaxation of the rules regarding the unauthorized practice [6] of law. Similarly, Colgan's failure to ensure that he obtained the necessary authorization to practice in another State cannot justify a deviation from that State's rules.

Accordingly, we find that the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's complaint with prejudice. The court correctly concluded that the complaint was a nullity and, therefore, that no subsequent complaint could satisfy the applicable statute of limitations.

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the circuit court of Cook County is affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S EMERGENCY MOTION TO STRIKE AND DENY THE LETTER/MOTION OF DEFENDANT DIRECTORS TO STRIKE PROPOSED FINDING OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW AND FILE AN ADDITIONAL BRIEF

Now comes the People of the State of Illinois by the Attorney General James Ryan through his assistant attorney generals and moves the court to strike and deny the attached January 31, 2002 letter/motion of the defendant directors which seeks to have the court disregard and otherwise strike the Attorney General Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law Relative To The Fee Petitions of Defendant Terra, Tucker and Simpson and deny the defendant director's leave to file another additional brief as they request in said letter/motion to this court and moves and states:

1) The Defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson by their attorneys Cummins & Cronin, LLC have sent the court the attached January 31, 2002 letter which is in sum a motion to strike the Attorney General Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law Relative To The Fee Petitions of Defendant Terra, Tucker and Simpson and the defendant directors argue that the proposed Findings/Conclusions of the Attorney General are a brief, which it is not , and that they seek that such be stricken and otherwise that the defendant directors be given leave to file a brief, a copy of the January 31, 2002 letter is attached as Exhibit A.

2) The Attorney General's proposed Findings and Conclusions is merely proposed Findings and Conclusions consistent entirely with the arguments previously made and set forth in the Attorney General's Response. It submits only modest Findings and Conclusions interspersed with facts and accompanied by a number of paragraphs of undisputed facts and case law that fleshes out the Findings/Conclusions. The proposals do not bring any new issues to the court , they track the issues as made in the filed Response, they do not make new argument and it is not a brief.

3) The proposed Findings/Conclusions are consistent with the previous arguments of the Attorney General which sought that the court's determination of the reasonable services and fees awarded here for work in this case be binding on these defendant directors for the services rendered in this case in any future fee requests. The Findings/Conclusions are proposed to establish which services were rendered in this case, and those not rendered in this case; and of those rendered in this case, which are reasonable or compensable, and those services rendered in this case which are not.

4) It is the fact that the defendant directors submitted services in other cases with the services rendered in this case and did not separate the services by the several cases, which makes some Findings/Conclusions on that matter necessary to resolve which services were rendered in this case and which were rendered in other cases, as well as, those that are reasonable and compensable in this case, and those services in this case which are unreasonable and/or not compensable by the Terra Foundation.

5) The Attorney General by his proposed Findings/Conclusions is totally consistent with his previously filed Response and arguments already made, and provides to this court for its benefit a framework of Findings and Conclusions that would allow this court to state in its judgment order Findings/Conclusions which would clarify the services which it adjudges were rendered in this case and which it adjudges were rendered in other cases; as well as, which it adjudges were reasonable services in this case and those services rendered in this case that it adjudge were unreasonable and/or not compensable by the Foundation .

6) The court order entered January 15, 2002 is typical and routine, and it allowed the parties to submit proposed orders. It is well understood that this court will not hesitate to enter the Findings it independently determines. Clearly this court will not be persuaded in the least by the content of the Attorney General's proposed Findings/Conclusions where it disagrees. Certainly such will not be utilized by the court to the extent the court is ruling otherwise. Clearly where not consistent with the court's intent they will be ignored or easily modified by slight insertions to effect the court's decision. They are proposed as the Attorney General would hope they would be found and entered, but that is the nature of a party submitting its proposed Findings/Conclusions. The defendant directors could have submitted.some, but they chose not to do so. A copy of the Attorney General Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law Relative To The Fee Petitions of Defendant Terra, Tucker and Simpson is attached as Exhibit B.

7) One half of proposed Findings/Conclusions are undisputed facts or case law as actually cited in the Response. The undisputed facts flesh out the background for the Findings and Conclusions in the proposal. Much of what is submitted in the original Response and arguments and now covered by the proposals was made necessary by the actions of the defendant directors when they filed fee petitions herein seeking fees under the bylaws and statute.

8) The defendant directors seek $1.2 million for their attorney fees and have already received $450,000. This court has indicated it is looking at fees pursuant to the Consent Decree for services rendered in work regarding this case only. The defendant directors' fee petitions at issue seek fees for five additional law firms for work on a federal case, this case and a separate new state action. The fee petitions do not segregate the work between those cases. The defendant directors have stated they do not accept the Consent Decree and while they have submitted fee petitions herein seeking fees, they stated in open court that they do not accept the Consent Decree and the fee petitions state they seek the fees under the bylaws, statute and contract.

9) The Attorney General sought by his previously filed Response and arguments, a ruling that the court find that fees for services awarded by this court on the Consent Decree would be at least if not more than fees owed under the bylaws and statute. The court finding of reasonable fees should be a binding collateral estoppel finding relative to compensable services in this case. Finding which services and fees were rendered in this case and those rendered in other matters is necessary. Finding the portion of services and fees rendered in this case which is deemed reasonable and the portion not deemed reasonable is necessary. Findings that the amount due the defendant directors for services in this case for these five firms fee petitions under the bylaws is not more than the amount determined under the Consent Decree is necessary. The proposed Findings/Conclusions were submitted to effect such. In fact, by the position taken by the defendant directors in their fee petitions they can not dispute the need for Findings on the issue of their right to fees under the bylaws and statute.

10) There had been a pending fee request before this court by the defendant directors filed months ago by the Shefsky firm that sought fees under the by-laws and statute which this court had stated it was poised to resolve when the settlement was reached. The fee petitions here on their face are a continuation of such. The Attorney General's proposal seek to address such and to provide a consistency between the Findings on the Consent Decree and the fee petitions as brought.

11) The Defendant directors do not agree the Consent Decree binds them, the petitions y seek their fees by virtue of the by-laws , statute and contract. The Attorney General's Response shows that under the by-law/statute standard, the fees due these defendant directors for work in this case is the same or less than the fees under the Consent Decree requirement of merely reasonable fees in this case and the proposed Findings/Conclusions set forth such to obtained Findings/Conclusions inclusive of such.

12) The Proposed Findings/Conclusions track the Response and arguments made by the Attorney General adding nothing new. The topics and issues addressed in the Findings is what was in the Response, it is not a new brief. The Response and Findings both deal with the fact the petitions seek fees under the bylaws and statutes and address the bylaw / statute element of "defense of an action". Both address that the Consent Decree standard for awarding fees is broader but still has a reasonableness standard and thus a determination under the Consent Decree would include all fees due these defendants from the Foundation under the bylaws and statute relative to attorney services rendered these defendants in this case . Also the Response and the Findings deal with fees and services rendered for the federal case and the post Consent Decree new state case filed by the defendants. Both address what was contemplated by the parties relative to placing the fee paying provision in the settlement agreement now a part of the Consent Decree. Both address segregating the services between the three separate matters and the fact of duplication in the subject state case between the five law firms themselves, as well as , in not meeting with the original law firm and its earlier work. Both the Response and the proposed Findings also deal with the contention the services were not worth $600,000 and that certain services were rendered by out of state lawyers. Both the Response and the proposed Findings deal with the Findings relative to the Stebbins matters pre-dating mediation. The proposed Findings raise nothing new in the fee hearing they cover the arguments previously made.

13) The Proposed finding/Conclusions are 50% composed of undisputed fact or merely copied law from the Response specifically :

a) Paragraphs one through six are undisputed fact, except for the last sentence of paragraph six. .
b) Paragraph seven is Findings and Conclusions.
c) Paragraphs eight and nine are undisputed facts.
d) Paragraph ten is Findings and Conclusions.
e) Paragraphs eleven and twelve are undisputed facts.
f) Paragraph thirteen is mixed undisputed fact and Findings and Conclusions.
g) Paragraph fourteen is undisputed fact.
h) Paragraph fifteen is Findings and Conclusions.
i) Paragraph sixteen is not new but copied case law as set forth in the Attorney General's Response.
j) Paragraph seventeen is Findings and Conclusions.
k) Paragraph eighteen is undisputed fact.
l) Paragraphs nineteen and twenty-four is Findings and Conclusions.
m) Paragraphs twenty-five and twenty-six is not new but copied case law as set forth in the Attorney General's Response.
n) Paragraphs twenty-seven through thirty-eight is mixed fact with Findings and Conclusions.

o) Paragraph thirty -nine is not new but copied case law as set forth in the Attorney General's Response.

p) Paragraphs forty through forty-five is mixed fact with Findings and Conclusions.

14) Perhaps these Findings/Conclusions could have left out some of the fact and could have been more concise. But they make no new argument to the court. The Findings and Conclusions sought were argued for in the Response and before the court at hearing , in sum, the present nothing new to this court. The Findings/ Conclusions are straightforward proposed Findings/Conclusions which with the facts submitted provide a busy court with facts and one possible format for Findings/Conclusions in a complicated fact scenario , which this court will clearly reject when such is inconsistent with what it intends to determine and find.

15) The defendant directors counsel's January 31, 2002 letter to the court is outside the record but involves the matters before this court regarding the proposed Findings/Conclusions. These proposed Findings were circulated among the parties and the court , but not filed of record. Given the acerbic nature of the remarks in the Cummin's letter of January 31, 2002, the contentions and the fact the matter is before the court , these matters now need to be made upon the record and hence this motion is filed to spread such of record and resolve the contention raised by Mr. Cummins.

16) Mr. Cummins requests in his letter/ motion that the Attorney General's Proposed Findings and Conclusions be stricken because such is an additional brief by the Attorney General. The Proposed Findings/Conclusions is not a brief, it does not raise new arguments, it will not be followed by the court to the extent it differs from the court's independent decision , it is not a sinister additional attempt at arguing to this court and the defendant directors' request to ignore and strike such, should be denied for the reasons set forth above.

17) If Mr. Cummins and the Defendant directors are seeking yet additional time to submit their own form of Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law to the court , we would suggest that such might be a fair resolution of his concerns. While we believe ours to be the appropriate Findings and Conclusions we do not believe his filing such would work an unfairness upon the Attorney General , however, assuming that such be limited to the arguments already made in these fee hearings and subject to not delaying the ruling on fees for the other parties before this court.

WHEREFORE the People of the State of Illinois by the Attorney General move to strike the letter/motion request of defendant directors to strike the Attorney General Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law and to otherwise deny the defendant directors leave to file an additional brief, but subject to allowing the defendant directors to submit Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law without delay to other parties in this case .

Re: Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al.
No. 00 CH 13859

Dear Judge Kinnaird:

We write on behalf of our clients Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

We just received a copy of Mr. Perkins' letter of January 29 along with a document captioned "Attorney General's Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law Relative to the Fee Petitions of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson."

In an effort wholly unbecoming a representative of the state's chief legal officer, Mr. Perkins has – contrary to the Court's direction – submitted yet another brief on the fee issue incorrectly characterized as an "order." The submission is both untimely and unfair; however, we are prepared to file a brief response if the Court intends to consider this improvident submission.

I respectfully request that Your Honor advise us if the Court will entertain a response in the event that Mr. Perkins' brief is to be considered.

Respectfully,

Robert P. Cummins

DEAN L. BUNTROCK, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al. Plaintiffs, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	)	FEB 01 2002 No. 00 CH 13859
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff- Intervenor, vs. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	)

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S PROPOSED FINDING OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW RELATIVE TO THE FEE PETITIONS OF DEFENDANTS TERRA, TUCKER AND SIMPSON

NOW COMES the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, and submits the following proposed finding of fact and conclusions of law relative to the Fee Petitions of the individual Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson stating and suggesting the following:

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

1 In February 2001 the parties agreed, pursuant to a court order, to conduct mediation. On June 19, 2001 the parties, the plaintiffs and six of the eleven directors of the board of directors agreed to a settlement of the case herein, and as a part thereof a Board of Directors meeting was scheduled for June 29, 2001 to vote on the settlement. The settlement was accepted in principle by the board in its vote of June 29, 2001 and after resolution of Objections filed by the defendant directors the Consent Decree was entered herein on July 26, 2001 and embodied the settlement. The terms of settlement from the date of June 19, 2001 when a mediated agreement was reached , through entry of the Consent Decree on July 26, 2001, provided for a release for each director defendant and a dismissal of the action with prejudice. It also provided for this court to determine reasonable fees for the Foundation directors.

2 The Foundation agreed in the settlement agreement incorporated in the July 26, 2001 Consent Decree to pay and reimburse Terra Foundation directors for reasonable attorney fees incurred by them in this matter as determined by this court.

3 The Defendant-Petitioners Terra, Tucker and Simpson's thereafter filed several fee petitions herein and seek $1,224,552 from the Terra Foundation to pay their several law firm fees and costs. The fees of these defendants original law firm Shefsky and Froelich in the amount of $450,834 have already been approved and paid in full by this court, with no objection by any party or person. The balance of attorney fees and costs sought by defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson of $773,718 are sought for the services of the following law firms in the following amounts:

Bellows & Bellows	$ 67,012
Cummins and Cronin	$ 103,750
Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd and Evans	$ 355,282
Novoselsky Law Offices	$ 45,132
Verner, Lipfert, Bernhard	$ 202,542

4 The Defendant's in filing the several fee petition have stated on the record and contend they do not accept the Consent Decree and the several defendant director fee petitions filed herein seeking the remaining unpaid $ 773,000 of defendant director attorney fees seek said fees under the Terra Foundation by-laws , the statute and contract obligations owed the directors by the Foundation. The defendant directors originally and pre-dating mediation and settlement also sought an award of their attorney fees relative to the fees of Shefsky & Froelich under said by-laws, statute and contract.

5 The Foundation's statutory , by-law and contract obligation to pay fees all limit fee reimbursement to reasonable fees incurred "to the extent a (Foundation) director... has been successful, on the merits or otherwise, in the defense of any action... such person shall be indemnified against expenses (including attorney fees) actually and reasonably incurred by such person in connection therewith." (Emphasis added) 805 ILCS 108.75 (c), for purposes hereof the by-laws and contract obligations are in relevant part the same as the statute all require the fees to rendered in defense of an action brought against the director and only reasonable fees will be paid.

6 The Defendant-Petitioners were named Defendants in this action, and technically were successful in the defense of the subject chancery action and incurred expenses and as a result. The parties reached a mediated settlement agreement on June 19, 2001 and as a part thereof the parties contemplated and agreed the Foundation would pay the reasonable attorney fees of all directors incurred in the matter herein. At June 19, 2001 the only attorneys of record for the defendant directors was Shefsky & Froelich, and the services of the subject five new law firms of the defendant directors were not known or then specifically contemplated by the parties when the parties entered into a mediated agreement on June 19, 2001.

7 The Defendants did not like other terms and provisions of the settlement as it related to the governance of the Terra Foundation, and while they no longer had claims or actions to defend against, they initiated their own charges and attacks on others. The Defendants determined and acted to prevent the settlement, not because it left them vulnerable as defendants or required anything of them , but because parts of its provisions affected the Terra Foundation in a manner with which they did not agree. The Defendant-Petitioners engaged the several new firms and made filings charging that others had engaged in wrongful conduct filing pleadings herein and in federal court.

8 The new additional law firms for which Defendant directors seek reimbursement herein did not participate in mediation and were employed to prevent the settlement. The Defendant-Petitioners filed a separate federal suit on June 28, 2001. Three of the new firms time sheets, the Bellows firm, the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm all indicate that they worked on and filed the federal lawsuits against assistant attorney general Floyd Perkins on June 28, 2001, which was dismissed that day by the federal court.

9 None of the five new firms appear before this court until June 29, 2001 the date the Board was meeting to vote on the settlement. On June 29, 2001 the Defendant directors by the Bellows firm, the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm brought an "offensive" motion for a TRO in this court seeking to stop the settlement by seeking to restrain the Terra Foundation Board from meeting to approve the settlement. The June 29 motion for TRO was not granted.

10 The June 29 six page motion for TRO was not a part of a defensive action services incurred defending the defendant directors from the claims made in the action made by plaintiffs, but rather was an offensive action charging others with wrongdoing.

11 The Defendant directors by the three new firms Bellows, Verner and Kellogg thereafter filed on July 2 , 2001 an eleven page motion seeking to file Objections to the settlement agreement. On July 19, 2001 defendant directors filed their 28 page Objections to the Settlement. By then the fourth new firm , Cummins & Cronin , had started to render services and thereafter the services of attorney David Novoselsky were further added in the last weeks of July 2001.

12 The Defendant directors Objections and several related filings charged that others, assistant attorney general Perkins, board members Marshall and Stebbins , had engaged in wrongdoing. The defendant directors were seeking to reject the Consent decree including releases for themselves and dismissal of the action with prejudice and the defendant directors also sought leave to initiate their own counter-claims to prosecute charges they were now making against others.

13 The record here contains a copy of the Defendants' June 28, 2001 federal law suit naming each of the Defendants as plaintiffs along with the Foundation, and naming Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins as Defendant. The services for bringing that federal matter were rendered by the petitioning law firms and appears to constitute most, if not all, of the ($210,000) in fee cost listed in the fee petitions for June 2001. Thus the majority if not all of the time of Bellows & Bellows; Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd and Evans; and Verner, Lipfert, Bernhard in June 2001 relates to services for Terra, Simpson and Tucker in preparing that federal case. While some of the June 2001 time clearly is for the TRO motion presented June 29 , that TRO motion was premised upon the federal lawsuit which was filed in this record and was itself an "offensive" pleading not defensive in nature. The federal case (and TRO motion) appears to be the service efforts of the new firms rendered in May and June 2001 which constitute over $210,000 of the costs sought by Defendants in the five new firms fee petitions.

14 The time sheets for Shefsky & Froelich for June 2000 totaled only $28, 134, the defendant directors five new firms show billing in June 2000 of $210,000 and shows extraordinary service time on the days prior to the filing in federal court on June 28 and the motion for TRO on June 29, the time sheets of Bellows firm, Verner firm and the Kellogg firm showing charges as follows :

On June 22 over $11,900 ;

On June 25 over $19,000 ;

On June 26 over $29,400 ;

On June 27 over $39,800 ;

On June 28 over $46,800 ;

On June 29 over $25,900 ;

See Exhibits A and B attached hereto.

15 These directors did not incur these fees merely in "defend[ing]" against the Plaintiffs' action herein. The defendant directors brought their own non-defensive "offensive" actions of their own herein after the settlement was made and they engaged in actions outside of this case including services in a federal court action.

16 In shifting the payment of attorney fees the terms must be strictly construed (See, e.g., Carson Pirie Scott & Co. v. State of Illinois Dept. of Employment Security, 131 Ill. 2d 23, 37-38 (1989); Navarro v. Edgar, 145 Ill. App. 3d 413, 415-16 (1st Dist. 1986); Gonzales-Blanco v. Clayton, 120 Ill. App. 3d 848, 850 (1st Dist. 1983).) Medcom Holding Co. v. Baxter Travenol Laboratories, Inc., 200 F. 3d 518, 521 (7th Cir. 1999). In International Insurance Co. v. Rollprint Packaging Products, Inc., 312 Ill. App. 3d 998, 1014-15 (1st Dist. 2000) the contractual terms in an insurance policy authorizing the recovery of attorney fees for an insurer's failure to "defend" the insured did not extend to aspects of the litigation which did not strictly constitute "defen[se]" of actions covered by the policy but were in the nature of separate actions and not defense of actions covered by the policy. The Rollprint court ruled that, however sound the practice of combining new matters with the defensive matters, the insured's counterclaim to enjoin that plaintiff from using or revealing trade secrets was not covered by the insurance policy because it sought affirmative relief apart from the negation or limitation of the insured's civil-rights liability.

17 The settlement agreement made between the Foundation and the Plaintiffs herein by its terms eliminated any need for the Defendants to take any action to defend themselves in the case. On June 19, 2001 six members of the board and the plaintiffs reached an agreement to settle the case herein, and a board meeting to approve that settlement was scheduled for June 29, 2001. From June 19, 2001 onward the Defendants were aware that the settlement agreement provided for a dismissal with prejudice and a complete release by plaintiffs for all Defendants and that the settlement made no findings about the Defendants and placed no requirements upon the Defendants. The settlement approved at mediation June 19, 2001, by the Board on June 29, 2001 and as entered by the court on July 26, 2001 eliminated any need for the Defendants to defend themselves any further.

18 The petitions for these five firms (not including the Shefsky firm) claim over $210,000 for services in May-June 2001 and over $390,000 for services in July 2001. The fee petitions of the five new law firms also seek over $165,000 for services after July 2001.

19 The filing of the federal lawsuit was done as plaintiffs against a non-party to this matter, and the TRO motion was a similar "offensive" action relying on the federal complaint filed herein and made against other board members. The Objections filed in mid-July 2001 were in substantial part the same contentions previously made in the federal lawsuit. The court finds the majority of time spent on these constituted services and costs incurred by Terra, Tucker and Simpson not in the "defense of any action". The $210,000 in fee services and costs of these five law firms incurred in May and June 2001 by Defendants to bring the federal case and June 29 TRO motion were not in defense of an action and have no basis for indemnification under the statute, by-laws or contract. The vast majority of the time spent in July 2001 with a cost of $390,000 was also spent not in defense of an action and has no basis for indemnification. A modest amount of these services might be considered for the protection of the defendant directors through entry of the Consent Decree, that amount is not defined by the defendant directors in their filings. This court however, is aware of the court matters in late June and July 2001 and the court awards $30,000 for the services of said five new firms of defendant directors in protecting the interest of defendant director from the date of mediated settlement through the entry of the Consent Decree.

20 In addition, it is clear from the record that most of the $165,000 of services rendered by Defendants' five law firms after July 2001 involve services in another case, a law division case which was briefly before this court and then transferred, in which these Defendants are plaintiffs and not defendants. In that action Terra, Tucker and Simpson are charging numerous defendants with a myriad of wrongful acts. These services post-July 2001 involve a separate law division action brought by Terra , Simpson and Tucker as plaintiffs and are not related to the "defense of any action", and the $165,000 in attorney fee costs incurred after July 2001 by Defendants to bring a new law division action have no basis for indemnification under the statute, by-laws or the consent settlement herein.

21 Thus the court finds that the fee petitions of defendant directors for these five new law firms brought by the defendant directors seeking fees on the basis of the bylaws, statute and contract do not show services rendered in defense of an action as that terms is intended in the subject statute contract and by-laws and therefore no more than $30,000 in attorney fees and costs can be awarded to the defendant directors five new law firms for the services of the subject five firms on the basis of right to fees on statute, by-laws or contract.

FEES PER THE TERMS OF THE CONSENT DECREE

22 The court does find that the parties did agree that this court would decide the reasonable attorney fees incurred by the defendant directors in this action and that the Foundation would pay for such as found by the court. The defendant directors have stated they did not accept the terms of the Consent Decree but submitted fee petitions to this court, and the defendant directors have argued the fees and services were reasonable. Under the Consent Decree this court is to determine reimbursement and award of attorney fees determining whether the fees and services are reasonable, whether they were incurred in this action and whether they are within the contemplation of the parties agreement. The defendant directors in submitting their fee petitions for the five additional new law firms have submitted the services and fees for review and award by this court. Thus the matter proceeded upon a basis agreed by the parties and the court has considered the filings and submissions of the parties and heard argument from the parties and can decide the reasonableness of the services and fees , whether they were incurred in this matter and whether they were within the contemplation of the settlement agreement.

23 The mediated agreement and the agreement approved by the board to have the Foundation pay the attorney fees of the directors did include the reasonable fees needed to finalize and complete the board meeting and to reasonably complete the entry of the Consent Decree. However, the court finds that the parties did not agree or contemplate when reaching the subject settlement agreement that subsequent to the agreement on June 19, 2001 that the agreement provision therein was an agreement to pay any and all attorney fees of a director or directors to hire new and several law firms to prevent and challenge entry of the settlement and Consent Decree.

24 The agreement imposed as a factor of reasonableness the parties' intent that the matter be settled and over with, with no more fees payable by the Foundation. The agreement by its terms called for a termination of the action and shows that the intent of the parties was not to pay open-ended attorney fees for any and all new litigation or charges a director decided to bring, but was to end all controversy and pay the fees incurred up to that point. The six hundred thousands dollars in legal services by five new law firms for services in June and July 2001, was never what the parties or the Foundation agreed to pay and reimburse when the settlement was made. The fee costs of the Defendants' five new firms are not reasonable fees of the directors as contemplated under the terms of the parties settlement agreement and the Consent Settlement. The court finds that the fee petitions of defendant directors for these five new law firms do not show services rendered as contemplated by the settlement agreement and therefore the reasonable fee amount to protect the interest of the defendant directors from date of mediated settlement to Consent Decree entry is no more than $30,000 in attorney fees and costs.

REASONABLENESS AND DUPLICATION

25 When determining the reasonableness of attorneys fees, in addition to its duty to inquire as to the total hours expended by an attorney which benefit the clients, a trial court has a duty to inquire into precise manner in which that time was expended and by whom. (Fiorito v. Jones (1978) 72 Ill.2d 73, 89, 377 N.E.2d 1019, 1026.) The court is obliged, also, to carefully weigh, according to its own knowledge, experience and expertise, whether the hours claimed and the tasks performed are reasonable in relation to the time required by other attorneys to complete similar activities. (Fiorito v. Jones 72 Ill.2d at 89, 377 N.E.2d at 1026.) Wasted time or needless duplications in work effort cannot be used to enhance the fees. (Leader v. Cullerton (1976) 62 Ill.2d 483, 491, 343 N.E.2d 897, 901.) In the event the court finds the hours claimed are the result of unnecessary, duplicative work efforts or inefficiency, it must reduce the excessive hours claimed. (Fiorito v. Jones, 72 Ill.2d at 89, 377 N.E.2d at 1026; Leader v. Cullerton, 62 Ill. 2d at 490-91, 343 N.E.2d 897, 901.)

26 The law is clear that a party seeking an award of attorney fees is not necessarily entitled to recover all fees for all of the time and tasks documented; rather, the court must examine whether and to what extent any of the tasks performed or time spent were duplicative of other effort or were unnecessary to achieve the goal of the litigation. Duplicative services will not be compensable (In re Estate of Halas, 159 Ill. App. 3d 818, 832-33 (1st Dist. 1987)), nor will services that are not necessary to the object of the litigation for which the law permits the recovery of fees. (Lasday v. Weiner, 273 Ill. App. 3d 461, 467-68 (1st Dist. 1995).) "Duplication" is usually found by a court as a result of its own experience and judgment. The touchstone is whether the services were reasonable. Substantively, one warning flag of duplication is a multiplicity of law firms — or a multiplicity of personnel from the same law firm — billing for the same general task. (In re Estate of Halas, 159 Ill. App. 3d 818, 832-33 (1st Dist. 1987); see also Kaiser v. MEPC American Properties, Inc., 164 Ill. App. 3d 978, 988-89 (1st Dist. 1987); In re Telesphere International Securities Litigation, 753 F. Supp. 716, 717-18 (N.D. Ill. 1990); David P. Pasulka, An Illinois Attorney's Guide to Fee Dispute Cases, 1996 Ill. B.J. 622, 625.)

27 The Defendant directors' fee petitions and submissions seek to pay from Terra Foundation funds six separate law firms who appear by the time records to have engaged in duplication of efforts, in several different ways.

28 The fee petitions of the five new law firms show that each of those firms often had several persons from each firm charging to meet with and communicate with several lawyers in each of the other defendant directors law firms. The fee petitions of the five new law firms show many days of charges in July 2001 totaling $10,000 or more each day for lawyers talking to one another. The petitions and submissions fail to satisfactorially explain the services and details of how over $390,000 of service time was incurred in July 2001 by these five firms. The time in late June 2001, while rendered on a different matter the federal court case shows the same sort of duplicative service, those fee petition entries show multiple separate individual lawyers billing 10, 15 and even 19 hour each days, with billing in excess of $29,000, $39,000 and $46,000 on June 26, 27 and 28th respectively.

29 The fee petition and proofs here show the defendant directors brought on five new law firms in June and July 2001 and replaced the original law firm of Shefsky & Froelich. There is no statement or suggestion of dissatisfaction with the original counsel. The defendant directors approved and endorsed the work of Shefsky & Froelich and sought and obtained $450,000 herein for Shefsky & Froelich without objection.

30 The record shows that the Verner firm, Bellows firm and the Kellogg firm began intensive legal efforts around June 22, 2001. From June 22 to June 29 these firms rendered over $ 172,000. The service entries in those fee petitions of those firms and the fee petition of the Shefsy & Froelich firm show that there was virtually no consultation between the Shefsky firm and any of the these three firms or any of the new five law firms.

31 Here, it is clear the new replacement firms spent considerable time learning the facts and law that had been developed through the first nine months of the proceedings. The five new law firms filed the federal lawsuit and motion for TRO therein (which was denied and the suit dismissed), a June 29 motion for TRO to prevent the Foundation's Board from meeting to approve the settlement (which was denied on presentation on June 29, 2001); a motion and first set of Objections to the settlement (which the Defendants withdrew at presentation on July 2, 2001); a new set of Objections to the Settlement in mid-July 2001 (which was denied on July 24, 2001); and a motion to file an accompanying answer and counter-claims and conduct discovery (the answer to a complaint which was by the settlement to be dismissed was allowed to be filed. Leave to file the counter-claims was denied). The record, shows the several new law firms spent considerable time in June and July 2001, re-learning what prior counsel had learned. The Defendants' new five law firms' time sheets assert charges of over $600,000 in June and July (not counting the $28,000 sought by Shefsky & Froelich), and clearly the vast majority of that $600,000, at least $500,000 out of the $600,000, was for duplicative services of learning the law and facts developed and learned first by Shefsky & Froelich and or were duplicative services from the multiple attorneys working between the five law firms hired by the defendant directors.

32 Further the fact the time sheets show that virtually no communication occurred between the new firms and the Shefsky & Froelich lawyers shows that the defendant directors and their agents the lawyers herein determined that they would not meet with Shefsky & Froelich and benefit from their knowledge. This was wasteful.

33 The record clearly shows that the fees sought are for a series of succeeding law firms learning anew what prior counsel and their predecessors all charged to learn. It also shows the Defendants engaged and brought on new law firms without any concern for cost, efficiency or duplication of effort, specifically by failing to have the new firms meet with, elicit and develop the facts from Shefsky & Froelich. The services of the defendant directors five new law firms were a duplication of effort and the reasonable fees owed for those firms for the time in May, June and July 2001 is no more than $ 30,000.

THE SERVICES RENDERED DO NOT JUSTIFY THE FEES SOUGHT

34 The Defendant directors five new law firms in not meeting with the Shefsky & Froelich law firm misunderstood the facts and circumstances of mediation and the record herein and made arguments that were negated by the prior actions of the very same defendant directors through the services of Shefsky & Froelich. The contention of the five new law firms in the several charging filings they have made was that mediation should not have started, that director Dr. Stebbins had a conflict that prevented him from participating in mediation and in his participation in the settlement vote.

35 Mediation here had been requested by the defendants, including the defendant directors. The defendants and defendant directors requested and started into mediation in late January/ February 2001 when the issues of Dr. Stebbins conflict were already well spread of record in filings in the court record and were set for a preliminary hearing. Mediation began and postponed the hearing on those charges. Mediation began with these defendant directors suggesting and endorsing mediation and with a mediator chosen by the court. The court determined from all parties prior to mediation and during its course that the parties agreed that mediation was possible for all issue and all agreed they all thought mediation for all matters was possible. The Foundation had an interest to protect in getting releases for all directors, specifically ending its potential responsibility for indemnification of each and every director, including the defendant directors and Stebbins.

The five new law firms in their charges misunderstood the history of events in the case and the circumstances of the mediation and having not met with Shefsky & Froelich brought the erroneous allegations about the Stebbins conflict which were before this court and of record.

36 The Defendants have not supplied any justification or explanation for why they chose to hire a succession of law firms incurring duplication of time and effort, nor for why they failed to have the Shefsky firm supply information to the new firms to limit the costs. Thus the efforts themselves were inaccurate , unnecessary and brought about because of the failure to meet with and learn the facts from the Shefsky & Froelich firm. Not only were the services of these five law firms rendered, so to were the Foundation lawyers services expended , as the services of Quinlan & Crisham. All paid for by the Foundation.

37 A comparison of the $600,000 sought by the Defendants' new firms and the filings made, shows that what the Defendants new firms presented in June and July was not based upon fact or sound legal argument, but was merely the product of the Defendants' desire to prevent a settlement they did not agree with but the majority of the Board had voted to accept, resulting in costs to these Defendants, to the Foundation and to other parties. Such services are not reasonable.

38 The five new law firms, in charging $600,000 for services in June and July 2001, were mistaken on the many matters they pursued. The basis of their actions and their attempts to bring actions and charges against others and stop the settlement was fundamentally flawed. The reasonable value of service here is limited by the lack of success achieved thereby, duplication of services , and the fact that services were rendered because of failure to gather all the relevant information. Thus the court finds the reasonable value of the defendant directors five new law firms is no more than $30,000.

39 The Illinois Supreme Court has stated that the practice of law involves not only appearances in court in connection with litigation, but also services rendered out of court. (People v. People's Stock Yards State Bank, 344 Ill. 462, 476 (1931).) This includes the preparing of documents and rendering of other services involving use of legal knowledge and skill and charging for such services. (People v. People's Stock Yards State Bank, 344 Ill. 462, 477 (1931).) Courts have listed what constitutes unauthorized practices of law. In Chicago Bar Association v. Kellogg, for instance, an out-of-state attorney, who was licenced to practice before the United States Patent Office, engaged in the practice of law regarding Patents in Illinois. There, the attorney was not licensed to practice in Illinois. The court held that an attorney, who is not licenced to practice in Illinois, but who acts in a manner that would lead any layman who viewed him to conclude that he is vested with all the capabilities and privileges of an Illinois Attorney At Law, threatens the public welfare. (Chicago Bar Ass'n v. Kellogg, 338 Ill. App.618, 632 (1949).) The court in Chicago Bar Assoc case considered, and enjoined the following actions finding that they constitute the practice of law. (1) Giving legal advice; (2) Preparing, drafting and construing legal documents, contracts, including patent licenses and deeds, assignments and other evidences of transfer of title to or interests in patent and other property; (3) Rendering legal opinions, including legal opinions relating to title to, and validity, infringement and enforcement of, patents and trademarks, and rights therein and thereto; (4) Preparing, drafting and filing pleadings, and other legal documents and papers in suits at law and in equity, in courts of record and before administrative tribunals, other than the patent office; (5) Participating as an attorney, in legal proceedings; (6) In behalf of persons represented by him, threatening to bring suit against other parties; (7) Preparing and serving notice of and asserting attorney's lien; and (8) Charging and collecting fees for legal services rendered by him and rendered by him and others. (Chicago Bar Ass'n v. Kellogg, 338 Ill. App.618, 636 (1949).) In Lozoff v. Shore Heights, Ltd., the Supreme Court of Illinois held that an attorney engaged in the unauthorized practice of law in Illinois, is barred from claiming attorneys fees. (Lozoff v. Shore Heights, Ltd., 66 Ill.2d 398, 401 (1977).)

40 The record and fee petitions shows that the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm were rendered in May 2001 and in June 2001, prior to being admitted pro hac vice herein on June 29, 2001. The services of the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm prior to June 29, 2001 are not payable as services in this case because those firms did not have Illinois law licenses and prior to being admitted pro hac vice they were not permitted to practice law in Illinois without a license nor allowed to be paid for services rendered practicing law in Illinois. If the services were rendered in the federal case those services are not compensable under the Consent decree which limits fees to those incurred for services herein.

41 To the extent the Bellows firm, the Kellogg firm and Verner firm's services prior to June 29 relate to preparing for the federal lawsuit, those fee costs are not related to the case herein and not compensable under the Consent Decree which limits fees to fees incurred in this matter. The time in June and July 2001 which the defendant directors five new law firms rendered to reasonable assist the defendant directors in this case should be no more than $30,000.

42 The following alternative is only provided if the court rejects the foregoing findings and conclusions and determines that none of the foregoing should set the limit.

ALTERNATIVE FINDING AND CONCLUSION

43 The service costs of Quinlan and Crisham of $285,000 during June and July is a factor to set the upper limit of fees for these defendant directors legal services for these five new firms. The Quinlan firm service provides guidance because it removes the issue of duplication. Its use as a guide directs how to compare and ascertain what amount of legal service costs were required to address all of the issues raised in June and July 2001 irrespective of whether the objections and claims of defendant directors were contemplated as part of the agreement or were well conceived.

44 The firm of Quinlan & Crisham rendered $285,000 in June and July 2001. The firm of Shefsky & Froelich were paid $28,000 in June 2001. For the period of June and July 2001 the reasonable amount of fees payable to the defendant directors as reimbursed for their five new law firms should not exceed more than $260,000. From that amount the amount spent working on the federal case requires a reduction of at least one half , as that service had no relation to this case and under the Consent Decree this court can only award fees regarding this matter.

45 It is clear from the record that the $165,000 of services rendered by Defendants' five law firms after July 2001 involve services in another case, a law division case which was briefly before this court and then transferred, in which these Defendants are plaintiffs and not defendants. In that action Terra, Tucker and Simpson are charging numerous defendants with a myriad of wrongful acts. These services post-July 2001 involve a separate law division action brought by Terra , Simpson and Tucker as plaintiffs and are not related to the "defense of any action", and the $165,000 in attorney fee costs incurred after July 2001 by Defendants to bring a new law division action have no basis for indemnification under the statute, by-laws or the consent settlement herein.

Wherefore the court finds:

A) That the reasonable amount payable by the Terra Foundation for the services rendered by the defendant directors five additional law firms from May to end of July 2001 was $30,000 and the Terra Foundation is order to pay $30,000 to the defendant directors.

B) That the amounts incurred by the defendant directors after July 2001 were not within the subject of the courts Consent Decree.

Respectfully submitted,

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the fee petitions of various Directors of the Terra Foundation. Those Directors are plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, non-party Directors Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, and defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. In total, fees in excess of $2,400,000 and costs in excess of $315,000 are sought herein.

03/20/2002 11:36 312-603-6787 PRES JUDGE CHANCERY PAGE 01/07

These figures do not include fees and costs of counsel for the Terra Foundation and they do not include the fees and costs in the amount of $468,376.17 which were previously awarded to counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Court has received and reviewed Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz's Petition for Attorneys Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order Entered July 26, 2001, the Supplemental Petition filed by those plaintiffs, the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, and the plaintiffs' Reply. Unredacted billing statements covering the period from September 18, 2000 through August 31, 2001 have also been reviewed.

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall have filed their Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs together with unredacted billing statements covering the period from January 26, 2001 through September 10, 2001. That Petition together with the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been reviewed by the Court.

On behalf of defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker five additional fee petitions have been filed and reviewed. They are: 1) the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs filed by Verner Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered; 2) an Amended Petition for Fees and Costs filed by Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; 3) the Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs filed by Kellogg, Huber, Hanson, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; 4) the Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses; and 5) the Petition for Fees and Expenses filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. The unredacted billing statements filed in support of these petitions cover the period from May 18, 2001 through August 31, 2001.

In connection with the defendant Directors' fee petitions, the Court has also received and the reviewed the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not in Connection with this Lawsuit, the Reply Memorandum of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and the Terra Foundation's Reply Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Reject. For the period from May 18, 2001 through June 29, 2001, the Court re-reviewed Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Petition for Fees and Costs regarding communications between the departing Shefsky firm and the appearance of the Verner, Bellows and Kellogg firms.

In reviewing all of the pending fee petitions, the Court has reviewed all affidavits and exhibits submitted. The Court compared the fee requests herein with the Billing Statements Submitted to the Terra Foundation by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, covering the period from September 21, 2000 through July 31, 2001, and with the Shefsky and Froelich bills covering the period October 8, 2000 through June 21, 2001. The Court also reviewed its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file. The Court entertained oral argument on the fee petitions on January 15, 2002, and reviewed and considered the proposed orders and/or proposed findings of fact submitted by parties.

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving all issues in this case with the exception of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. As part of the mediated settlement of this case the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." This Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees which were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions

This was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. There was extensive motion practice and multiple appeals. Over thirty court sessions, many of them lengthy, were held prior to the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. The more complex of the issues involved related to special litigation committees, attorney ethics and disqualification, museum ethics, breaches of fiduciary duties, and the Attorney General's responsibilities in regard to charitable trusts and not-for-profit corporations. Many experts were retained and their opinions differed. Much out-of-state law was supplied and argued.

In reviewing the fee petitions this Court has considered, among other things, the magnitude and complexity of the case, the novelty and importance of the legal issues involved, the benefits conferred, the number of hours expended, the manner and tasks in which the time was expended, by whom the time was expended, the hourly rate charged by each person for a given task, the time required by other attorneys in the community to perform tasks of a comparable nature, the hourly fee charged for similar services by other attorneys with similar skills and qualifications, the degree to which the tasks performed contributed to the result obtained, and whether the fees have been paid by the clients. The Court has taken note that in regard to the Quinlan & Carroll bills and the McDermott, Will & Emery bills, the Attorney General has not objected to the requested fees and costs. The Court has also noted that the fee petitions of those firms are not inconsistent with the bills of Sidley and Austin submitted to, and presumably paid by, the Foundation. (This Court has not approved the bills of the Foundation's counsel).

Notwithstanding the lack of an objection from the Attorney General, this Court believes that certain of the fees and costs submitted by the Quinlan and McDermott firms should not be approved, particularly considering that charitable funds are involved here. [The Court agrees with current counsel for the Foundation that "(t)he Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation."] As to attorneys' time entries in the Quinlan & Carroll petition, these include multiple entries for duplicative and excessive billing for four partners (at their respective hourly rates) and for one associate (at a blended rate of $180), totaling $421,200. That figure includes a reduction of $4,700 in fees incurred after the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order which were reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice. Finally, the Court has determined that $10,166.25 was billed in connection with the federal court litigation and that that amount should be excluded. As to costs, the Court has granted all costs with the exception of an expert witness fee reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice and with the exception of all costs incurred for the public relations firm of Kemper Lesnik.

The McDermott Will & Emery fees are approved herein, eliminating the fees and costs for "Terra II" and $1,980.00 in fees for the federal action. The costs relating to "Terra I" are approved.

This Court is not able to adjudicate at this time the five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In order to do so, this Court needs to receive revised fee petitions from any of the five firms who may wish to provide them. The revised fee petitions should eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). The revised fee petitions should be supported by affidavits of counsel and/or the defendant Directors which should include the following: 1) the dates counsel was retained; 2) the reason for the retention of the additional counsel; 3) if applicable, the dates counsel was discharged or withdrew and the reason for the discharge or withdrawal; 4) the dates and manner in which any counsel of record in this case was advised that additional counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson had been retained; 5) the dates and manner of first communication with the firm of Shefsky and Froelich about additional representation for defendant Directors in this case; 6) the dates on which any parties to the mediated settlement were first advised that defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson would be seeking fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order for fees for any firm other than Shefsky and Froelich; 7) all attempts to avoid duplication of effort between former and new counsel; and 8) a statement as to when and how much of the attorneys' fees and costs set forth in the revised fee petitions have been paid to date. In regard to the Verner Liipfert firm, an explanation should be given of the $35,000 notation regarding Bellows and Bellows which appears on the summary of invoices and the $25,000 cost entry to Bellows and Bellows for professional services which appears in Invoice No. 183977.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit is granted.

2. Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $1,172,182.00 and costs in the amount of $162,768.65, for a total award of $1,334,950.65 .

3. Directors Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $35,026.25 and costs in the amount of $768.16, for a total award of $35,794.41.

03/20/2002 11:36 312-603-6787 PRES JUDGE CHANCERY PAGE 06/07

4. Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson have 28 days to file revised fee petitions and supporting affidavits as set forth above. No additional briefing will be entertained.

5. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

PETITIONER STEBBINS' AGREED MOTION TO MODIFY MARCH 13, 2002 ORDER

Petitioner Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins"), by his attorneys, respectfully moves this Court for an Order modifying the Court's Order of March 13, 2002 in respect to Professor Mnookin's invoice of $1,980.00. In support of this Motion, Dr. Stebbins states the following:

1. In this Court's Order of March 13, 2002, the Court stated that it believed Professor Mnookin's invoice for $1,980.00 was for work rendered on behalf of Dr. Stebbins in the federal court action. The Court stated that it was not approving the reimbursement by the Terra Foundation ("the Foundation") of Professor Mnookin's fees solely on this basis. See Opinion, p. 5 (attached hereto as Exhibit A).

2. In so stating, the Court overlooked the information provided by Dr. Stebbins on this subject in his Fee Petition. As we explained at page 6 of Dr. Stebbins' Fee Petition, Professor Mnookin's work for Dr. Stebbins was initiated in response to the Attorney General's original attack on Dr. Stebbins as an elected member of the Independent Litigation Committee appointed pursuant to Court Order in this case, before this Court. As the Court may recall, Professor Mnookin was hired by Dr. Stebbins when this Court suggested that Dr. Stebbins may need independent counsel to deal with the issues raised by the Attorney General. Professor Mnookin assisted Dr. Stebbins in preparing an affidavit which was submitted by Dr. Stebbins in response to the Attorney General's motions. Copies of Dr. Stebbins' original Fee Petition (without most of the exhibits) and Professor Mnookin's invoice (which was included as Exhibit D to Dr. Stebbins' original Fee Petition) are attached hereto as Exhibit B.

3. As Professor Mnookin's invoice shows, his work was performed from December 30, 2000 through January 8, 2001, during the course of this case, and many months prior to the initiation by Terra, Tucker and Simpson of the federal court action.

4. No parties in this case have claimed that Professor Mnookin's work was rendered in the federal case, or that his fees should not be approved for reimbursement by the Foundation.

5. The Foundation, through its Counsel, has advised counsel for Dr. Stebbins that the Foundation is in complete agreement with this motion, and that the Foundation believes that Professor Mnookin's services are properly reimbursable by the Foundation as having been rendered during the pendency of, and in connection with, Dr. Stebbins' role as a member of the Independent Litigation Committee appointed pursuant to Court Order in this action before this Court.

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, Petitioner Dr. Stebbins respectfully requests that the Court grant this motion and issue an order modifying the March 13, 2002 Order by providing that the Court approves, and directs the Foundation to reimburse Dr. Stebbins for, Professor Mnookin's fees in the amount of $1,980.00.

ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the fee petitions of various Directors of the Terra Foundation. Those Directors are plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, non-party Directors Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, and defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. In total, fees in excess of $2,400,000 and costs in excess of $315,000 are sought herein.

These figures do not include fees and costs of counsel for the Terra Foundation and they do not include the fees and costs in the amount of $468,376.17 which were previously awarded to counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Court has received and reviewed Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz's Petition for Attorneys Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order Entered July 26, 2001, the Supplemental Petition filed by those plaintiffs, the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, and the plaintiffs' Reply. Unredacted billing statements covering the period from September 18, 2000 through August 31, 2001 have also been reviewed.

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall have filed their Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs together with unredacted billing statements covering the period from January 26, 2001 through September 10, 2001. That Petition together with the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been reviewed by the Court.

On behalf of defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker five additional fee petitions have been filed and reviewed. They are: 1) the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs filed by Verner Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered; 2) an Amended Petition for Fees and Costs filed by Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; 3) the Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs filed by Kellogg, Huber, Hanson, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; 4) the Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses; and 5) the Petition for Fees and Expenses filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. The unredacted billing statements filed in support of these petitions cover the period from May 18, 2001 through August 31, 2001.

In connection with the defendant Directors' fee petitions, the Court has also received and the reviewed the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not in Connection with this Lawsuit, the Reply Memorandum of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and the Terra Foundation's Reply Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Reject. For the period from May 18, 2001 through June 29, 2001, the Court re-reviewed Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Petition for Fees and Costs regarding communications between the departing Shefsky firm and the appearance of the Verner, Bellows and Kellogg firms.

In reviewing all of the pending fee petitions, the Court has reviewed all affidavits and exhibits submitted. The Court compared the fee requests herein with the Billing Statements Submitted to the Terra Foundation by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, covering the period from September 21, 2000 through July 31, 2001, and with the Shefsky and Froelich bills covering the period October 8, 2000 through June 21, 2001. The Court also reviewed its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file. The Court entertained oral argument on the fee petitions on January 15, 2002, and reviewed and considered the proposed orders and/or proposed findings of fact submitted by parties.

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving all issues in this case with the exception of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. As part of the mediated settlement of this case the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." This Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees which were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to the Quinlan and Carroll invoices and the McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

This was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. There was extensive motion practice and multiple appeals. Over thirty court sessions, many of them lengthy, were held prior to the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. The more complex of the issues involved related to special litigation committees, attorney ethics and disqualification, museum ethics, breaches of fiduciary duties, and the Attorney General's responsibilities in regard to charitable trusts and not-for-profit corporations. Many experts were retained and their opinions differed. Much out-of-state law was supplied and argued.

In reviewing the fee petitions this Court has considered, among other things, the magnitude and complexity of the case, the novelty and importance of the legal issues involved, the benefits conferred, the number of hours expended, the manner and tasks in which the time was expended, by whom the time was expended, the hourly rate charged by each person for a given task, the time required by other attorneys in the community to perform tasks of a comparable nature, the hourly fee charged for similar services by other attorneys with similar skills and qualifications, the degree to which the tasks performed contributed to the result obtained, and whether the fees have been paid by the clients. The Court has taken note that in regard to the Quinlan & Carroll bills and the McDermott, Will & Emery bills, the Attorney General has not objected to the requested fees and costs. The Court has also noted that the fee petitions of those firms are not inconsistent with the bills of Sidley and Austin submitted to, and presumably paid by, the Foundation. (This Court has not approved the bills of the Foundation's counsel).

Notwithstanding the lack of an objection from the Attorney General, this Court believes that certain of the fees and costs submitted by the Quinlan and McDermott firms should not be approved, particularly considering that charitable funds are involved here. [The Court agrees with current counsel for the Foundation that "(t)he Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation."] As to attorneys' time entries in the Quinlan & Carroll petition, these include multiple entries for duplicative and excessive billing for four partners (at their respective hourly rates) and for one associate (at a blended rate of $180), totaling $421,200. That figure includes a reduction of $4,700 in fees incurred after the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order which were reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice. Finally, the Court has determined that $10,166.25 was billed in connection with the federal court litigation and that that amount should be excluded. As to costs, the Court has granted all costs with the exception of an expert witness fee reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice and with the exception of all costs incurred for the public relations firm of Kemper Lesnik.

The McDermott Will & Emery fees are approved herein, eliminating the fees and costs for "Terra II" and $1,980.00 in fees for the federal action. The costs relating to "Terra I" are approved.

This Court is not able to adjudicate at this time the five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In order to do so, this Court needs to receive revised fee petitions from any of the five firms who may wish to provide them. The revised fee petitions should eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). The revised fee petitions should be supported by affidavits of counsel and/or the defendant Directors which should include the following: 1) the dates counsel was retained; 2) the reason for the retention of the additional counsel; 3) if applicable, the dates counsel was discharged or withdrew and the reason for the discharge or withdrawal; 4) the dates and manner in which any counsel of record in this case was advised that additional counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson had been retained; 5) the dates and manner of first communication with the firm of Shefsky and Froelich about additional representation for defendant Directors in this case; 6) the dates on which any parties to the mediated settlement were first advised that defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson would be seeking fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order for fees for any firm other than Shefsky and Froelich; 7) all attempts to avoid duplication of effort between former and new counsel; and 8) a statement as to when and how much of the attorneys' fees and costs set forth in the revised fee petitions have been paid to date. In regard to the Verner Liipfert firm, an explanation should be given of the $35,000 notation regarding Bellows and Bellows which appears on the summary of invoices and the $25,000 cost entry to Bellows and Bellows for professional services which appears in Invoice No. 183977.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit is granted.

2. Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $1,172,182.00 and costs in the amount of $162,768.65, for a total award of $1,334,950.65 .

3. Directors Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $35,026.25 and costs in the amount of $768.16, for a total award of $35,794.41.

4. Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson have 28 days to file revised fee petitions and supporting affidavits as set forth above. No additional briefing will be entertained.

5. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS

DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S
PETITION FOR REIMBURSEMENT OF FEES AND COSTS

Petitioners, Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall"), hereby petition this Court, pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order entered in this matter on July 26, 2001, to enter an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") to pay the attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall as a result of their involvement in this litigation and closely related cases. As the Court will see, most of this Petition deals with Dr. Stebbins, because Dr. Marshall did not incur outside attorneys' fees and costs until recently. In support of their Petition, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall state as follows:

1. On September 22, 2000, two of the Directors of the Foundation filed this action against the Foundation and three of its Directors. Shortly thereafter, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois filed a similar, companion intervenor action ("the Attorney General Action") against most of the same defendants named in the original lawsuit. Together these two lawsuits are hereafter referred to as "Terra I".

2. Dr. Stebbins served as a Director of the Foundation, but was not named as a defendant in Terra I. Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins was eligible to serve as a member of the Independent Litigation Committee ("the ILC") for the Foundation and was subsequently elected to the ILC by the Foundation's Board of Directors on November 30, 2000.

3. In December, 2000, after Dr. Stebbins became an ILC member, the Plaintiffs and the Attorney General in Terra I asserted that Dr. Stebbins had a conflict of interest and had breached his fiduciary duties as a Director of the Foundation. According to the Plaintiffs and the Attorney General, this disqualified Dr. Stebbins from serving on the ILC. Based on these allegations, the Plaintiffs and the Attorney General filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins as a member of the ILC and to take discovery of Dr. Stebbins on these issues. The motion to take discovery was granted. Thereafter, the Attorney General threatened to add Dr. Stebbins as a defendant in Terra I and prepared a draft amended complaint purporting to add Dr. Stebbins as a defendant. The draft complaint was provided to the Foundation, but was never filed.

4. As a result of the Plaintiffs' and the Attorney General's allegations against Dr. Stebbins, the Foundation's lawyers, Sidley & Austin, recommended that Dr. Stebbins obtain independent counsel to advise and represent Dr. Stebbins in connection with these threats and all other aspects of the Terra litigation as they affected Dr. Stebbins individually.

5. Accordingly, in January, 2001, Dr. Stebbins retained McDermott, Will & Emery ("MW&E") to represent him in the Terra litigation. See Schuman Affidavit at ¶ 2, attached hereto as Exhibit A.

6. Independent counsel for Dr. Stebbins was necessary because the claims that the Attorney General and the Plaintiffs asserted against Dr. Stebbins were distinct from the claims that were asserted against the Foundation, and because the Attorney General and the Plaintiffs were claiming that Dr. Stebbins' purported conduct had been contrary to the interests of the Foundation. Once the Attorney General and the Plaintiffs began attacking Dr. Stebbins' conduct, the interests of Dr. Stebbins and the Foundation had the potential of being divergent. While the record plainly shows that the Attorney General's and the Plaintiffs' assertions against Dr. Stebbins were utterly without merit, the need for independent counsel arose upon the assertion of such claims. Id. at ¶ 3.

7. As detailed more fully in the Schuman Affidavit, MW&E provided counsel to Dr. Stebbins in connection with Dr. Stebbins' duties and responsibilities as a member of the Terra Board and the ILC and concerning the purported claims that the Attorney General and the Plaintiffs were threatening to assert against him. Accordingly, while MW&E did not file a formal appearance for Dr. Stebbins in Terra I (because Dr. Stebbins was never named as a defendant), counsel for Dr. Stebbins kept abreast of all important developments, reviewed and analyzed the important and pertinent pleadings and correspondence, regularly consulted with Dr. Stebbins, and regularly consulted with the Foundation's attorneys. At the same time, counsel for Dr. Stebbins' was careful not to duplicate efforts by the Foundation's lawyers. Rather, Dr. Stebbins' counsel focused their efforts on providing advice on the issues pertinent to Dr. Stebbins. Id. at ¶4.

8. After extensive, complicated negotiations, a mediated settlement of Terra I was approved by the Court. As a result, this Court entered the Consent Judgment and Order on July 26, 2001. Id. at ¶5.

9. In an effort to prevent the consummation of a mediated settlement, three of the Foundation's Directors who were defendants in Terra I (collectively referred to hereinafter as "the Tucker Plaintiffs") filed an injunction action in federal court. Their emergency motion for a temporary restraining order and their complaint were predicated in large part on the contention that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall (also a Terra director) changed their position as to the adequacy of the proposed settlement as a result of improper coercion by the Attorney General. As a consequence, MW&E continued to provide counsel to Dr. Stebbins (Dr. Marshall had not yet retained MW&E) in connection with the federal case. The TRO motion was denied, the Tucker Plaintiff's federal court complaint was dismissed, and the Tucker Plaintiffs thereafter filed a Notice of Appeal to the Seventh Circuit. Id. at ¶6.

10. On July 31, 2001, the Tucker Plaintiffs filed another action ("Terra II") in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois County Department, Law Division. The Tucker Plaintiffs raised the same issues in Terra II that already had been resolved in Terra I. Id. at ¶7.

11. In Terra II, the Tucker Plaintiffs asserted claims against the Foundation, against Dr. Stebbins, individually, Dr. Marshall, individually, and each of the Foundation's other Directors, individually, and against the Illinois Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General. Among other things, the Tucker Plaintiffs claimed in Terra II that Dr. Stebbins breached his fiduciary duties by voting in favor of the mediated settlement of Terra I. The Tucker Plaintiffs asserted a similar claim against Dr. Marshall. Id. at ¶8.

12. Accordingly, MW&E continued to represent Dr. Stebbins in connection with Terra II. In addition, on approximately August 22, 2001, MW&E began representing Dr. Marshall in Terra II and the related Terra litigation. Id. at ¶9.

13. The Court's July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order provided that "[r]easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation."

14. The determination of what are reasonable attorneys' fees is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Anderson v. Anchor Org. for Health Maintenance, 274 Ill. App. 3d 1001, 1007, 654 N.E.2d 675, 681 (1st Dist. 1995). The factors that a court should consider when exercising that discretion include:

> [T]he services performed, the time expended thereon, the attorney's hourly rate, the skill and standing of the attorney, the nature of the case, the difficulty of the issues involved, the importance of the matter, the degree of responsibility > required, the usual and customary charges for comparable services, and the benefit resulting to the client.

Id. at 1008, 654 N.E.2d at 682. In considering each of these factors, a court is not limited solely to the evidence of reasonableness presented, but may also apply its own general knowledge of the practice of law, and its specific knowledge of the case at hand, in arriving at the reasonable value of professional services. Id.

15. In addition, at the time Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall joined the Terra Board, they had each received a contractual commitment from the Foundation as an inducement for joining Terra's Board that the Foundation would fully reimburse them for litigation fees and expenses such as those at issue here. Copies of this commitment are attached hereto as Exhibit C. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall relied on this commitment.

16. MW&E's fees and costs for representing Dr. Stebbins in Terra I and the federal court action from the inception of its representation through September 10, 2001 are $37,006.25 and $768.16 respectively, for a total of $37,774.41. MW&E's fees and costs for representing Dr. Stebbins in Terra II through September 10, 2001 are $10,133.75 and $194.14 respectively, for a total of $10,327.89. Accordingly, MWE's fees and costs for its representation of Dr. Stebbins total $48,102.30. Schuman Affidavit at ¶¶10-11.

17. In addition, prior to MW&E's retention, Dr. Stebbins hired Professor Robert H. Mnookin of the Harvard Law School, a renowned legal scholar and attorney, to provide independent legal counsel to Dr. Stebbins in connection with the preparation of an affidavit by Dr. Stebbins and related work in response to the Attorney General's original attack on Dr. Stebbins. Professor Mnookin's fees and expenses were $1,980.00. A copy of professor Mnookin's invoice is attached hereto as Exhibit D. Id. at ¶12.

18. Accordingly, the total fees and costs incurred by Dr. Stebbins in connection with this litigation through September 10, 2001 are $49,120 and $962.30 for a grand total of $50,082.30. Id. at ¶¶10-12.

19. Upon being engaged by Dr. Marshall, MW&E has met and conferred with Dr. Marshall and has begun to review materials pertinent to her circumstances. In an effort to reduce fees and costs and eliminate duplication, MW&E is allocating the fees and costs that equally benefit both Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall evenly between Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Id. at ¶13.

20. Dr. Marshall has incurred fees and costs in connection with Terra II and the related matters through September 10, 2001 in the amount of $5,990 and $107.20 respectively for a total of $6,097.20. Id. at ¶14.

21. As for the future, the Tucker Plaintiffs have caused this litigation to multiply on several fronts. Terra I is on appeal. Terra II is now underway. The federal case is also being pursued on appeal. Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall seek leave to supplement this Petition at future dates to seek reimbursement for the additional fees and costs that they incur in responding to and defending these actions, unless the Court finds that the provision in the Consent Judgement requiring court approval of directors' attorneys' fees and costs includes only Terra I and that the Foundation may reimburse directors' fees and costs in connection with the related litigation without court approval.

22. Considering all of the relevant factors, MW&E's fees and costs are reasonable. The need for independent representation of Dr. Stebbins arose approximately three months after Terra I began. See Schuman Aff. at ¶¶2-3. Accordingly, MW&E had to study the prior history of the case to effectively represent Dr. Stebbins. Id. at ¶4. This involved reviewing voluminous pleadings, transcripts and other documents. In addition, much necessary time was spent in consultation with Dr. Stebbins. Moreover, consultations with the Foundation's counsel facilitated review of appropriate matters on behalf of Dr. Stebbins, and later Dr. Marshall, and provided the ability to avoid duplication of efforts. Id. at ¶¶4, 15-16.

23. MW&E's fees for representing Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are reasonable given the tasks and the issues involved. The parties in the various proceedings raised numerous complex issues of corporate governance and conflicts of interest, and those who attacked Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall did so aggressively, and in several forums. As a result, this matter required a great deal of attention, analysis and skill. Id. at ¶¶3-9, 15-16. The mediated settlement of Terra I was complex, and many difficult issues relating directly to Dr. Stebbins arose from it. The attack on the settlement has been even more contentious and complicated. Id.

24. In addition, MW&E's fees are reasonable considering the skill and standing of the MW&E attorney, Mr. William Schuman, who was primarily responsible for representing Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Mr. Schuman is a Harvard Law School graduate, a member of the bars of the Supreme Court of the United States, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, the U.S. District Courts for the Northern District of Illinois (trial bar) and the Central District of Illinois, and the Supreme Court of Illinois. He is also a member of the American, Illinois State and Chicago bar associations. Mr. Schuman has over twenty-two years of experience in representing clients in commercial litigation. Mr. Schuman has vast experience in providing counseling concerning, and litigating, breach of fiduciary duty and conflict of interest issues. Among other things, Mr. Schuman has chaired MW&E's Professional Responsibility Committee for more than seven years and in that role deals with complicated conflicts of interest issues on a regular basis. Id. at ¶1. Mr. Schuman's hourly rate of $440.00 is usual and customary in the marketplace for an attorney of his skill and expertise on this kind of matter. Other clients of Mr. Schuman are charged, and regularly pay, this hourly rate. Id. at ¶¶1, 16-17.

25. Professor Mnookin's fees are also reasonable, given the professor's substantial credentials and experience and the complexity of the matter. Professor Mnookin's hourly rate of $495.00 is also usual and customary in the marketplace for an attorney of such credentials and skill on this kind of matter. Id. at ¶18.

26. MW&E's fees (and those of Professor Mnookin) are reasonable considering the benefit that Dr. Stebbins received from MW&E's representation. The litigation has been bitterly fought and the risks to Dr. Stebbins have been substantial. The benefits to Dr. Marshall have been similar and commensurate, albeit on a smaller scale, with the short time that MW&E has represented Dr. Marshall. Id. at ¶19.

WHEREFORE, Petitioners Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr., and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall respectfully request that this Court enter an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts to remit to Dr. Stebbins the sum of $50,082.30, for payment to McDermott, Will & Emery the sum of $48,102.30 and to Professor Mnookin the sum of $1,980.00, and to remit to Dr. Marshall, for payment to McDermott, Will & Emery the sum of $6,097.20, which sums represent the reasonable value of the legal services rendered and costs incurred to date for the representation of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall through September 10, 2001, and further providing leave to Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to file Supplemental Petitions for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs as they are incurred.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff-Intervenor, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	No. 00 CH 13859 Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

REVISED MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS OF KELLOGG, HUBER, HANSEN, TODD & EVANS, PLLC, BY DEFENDANTS ALAN K. SIMPSON, JUDITH TERRA, AND PAUL HAYES TUCKER IN RESPONSE TO ORDER OF MARCH 13, 2002

1. Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (collectively, "Defendant Directors") respectfully submit this revised motion for an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra") to pay their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to the Restated Bylaws of Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Bylaws") and this Court's Orders of March 13, 2002 and August 29, 2001.

2. In support hereof, Defendant Directors incorporate by reference their original motion for attorneys' fees of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, filed Sept. 14, 2001, including the declaration of K. Chris Todd in support thereof and the detailed billing statements submitted to the Court in conjunction therewith, and all subsequent briefing on the matter.

3. In its Order of March 13, 2002, the Court directed that any revised fee petition be supported by affidavits of counsel, Defendant Directors, or both, addressing various circumstances of the retention and representation. The declaration of Leonard Garment is submitted in conjunction with this revised petition in response to the Court's order. See Exh A. Also attached to this application are confirmations signed by each Defendant Director of the accuracy of statements in this petition and the declaration, and the reasonableness of the fees and expenses of counsel.

4. The Court also directed the Defendant Directors to eliminate billing entries relating to certain actions in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois and the Law Division of this Court. Defendant Directors reiterate their position that all Kellogg, Huber fees and expenses sought in the original petition ($392,106.66) were incurred in connection with this lawsuit. In response to the Court's order, however, Defendant Directors have calculated the amount that Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, billed for preparation, travel to Chicago and appearances in federal court on June 28, 2001, as $25,939.59. Defendants have also calculated the amount billed by Kellogg Huber from July 27, 2001, to August 31, 2001, as $37,299.40. If it is the Court's intention to decline to consider fees for any work in the federal court or law division actions, Defendant Directors submit, without waiving their objections to this approach, that the above amounts should be subtracted from the total originally requested. Accordingly, for the Court's convenience, Defendant Directors have recalculated fees and expenses for Kellogg Huber as $328,867.67.

5. This application is without prejudice to Defendant Directors' substantive and procedural objections to the Consent Judgment and Order entered by the Court in this matter on July 26, 2001, and without prejudice to Defendant Directors' right to indemnification from the Foundation.

Respectfully submitted,

MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS OF DEFENDANTS ALAN K. SIMPSON, JUDITH TERRA, AND PAUL HAYES TUCKER

Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (collectively, "Defendants") respectfully move the Court for an order directing the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra") to pay their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to the Restated Bylaws of Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Bylaws") and this Court's order of August 29, 2001.[1] In support

[1]To be clear, Defendants again assert their substantive and procedural objections to the Consent Judgment and Order of July 26, 2001 ("Consent Judgment and Order"). During the August 29, 2001 hearing, however, the Court invited all parties to file petitions for attorneys fees if they are entitled to payment by virtue of either (1) "the filing of this lawsuit" or (2) "the consent decree." Aug. 29, 2001 Tr. at 26. Defendants petition the Court for their fees by virtue

hereof, Defendants submit the Declaration of K. Chris Todd. Defendants further incorporate by reference all pleadings, files, and records in this action; material that may be judicially noticed by this Court; the presentations and arguments of counsel, if any; and other such matters that the Court may properly consider, and in further support state as follows:[2]

1. Since June 22, 2001, Kellogg Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. ("Kellogg Huber"), has represented the Defendants — each of whom is a director of the Foundation — in the above-captioned matter.

2. Kellogg Huber is a law firm with extensive litigation and telecommunications practices. Eighteen of its attorneys are engaged in an active litigation practice in both state and federal trial and appellate courts across the country. This case was handled at Kellogg Huber primarily by Chris Todd, Neil Gorsuch, David Ross, and John Longwell.

3. Chris Todd has substantial public and private sector litigation experience. For over a decade he served as a federal prosecutor in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, and as an Associate Counsel to the Office of Independent Counsel for the Iran/Contra matter. For the last ten years, Mr. Todd's practice has concentrated of "the filing of this lawsuit," not pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order. Moreover, the Foundation's Bylaws require the Foundation to indemnify directors for "expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they . . . are made parties . . . by reason of being" directors. Terra Bylaws Art. X § a. Defendants thus are submitting this petition on that basis, without prejudice to their objections regarding the substantive and procedural propriety of the Consent Judgment and Order.

on litigation matters in state and federal courts. Before joining Kellogg Huber, Mr. Todd was head of the litigation section of the Washington office of Johnson & Gibbs, which was a three-hundred person law firm. Neil Gorsuch, a Marshall Scholar and Truman Scholar, received his juris doctor cum laude from Harvard University Law School in 1991, and clerked for the Honorable David Sentelle (United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit) and for Justice Byron R. White (United States Supreme Court). David Ross graduated from the Columbia University School of Law in 1995. John Longwell graduated magna cum laude from the University of Georgia School of Law in 1999, where he was Order of the Coif and an editor of the University of Georgia Law Review. Before entering private practice, Mr. Longwell clerked for the Honorable Vaughn R. Walker (United States District Court for the Northern District of California).

4. The Bylaws provide that the Foundation "shall indemnify any and all of its directors . . . against expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they, or any of them, are made parties . . . by reason of being or having been" a director, unless that person is found "liable for willful misconduct in the performance of duty and to such matters as shall be settled by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Bylaws Art. X § a. None of the Defendants was found liable for any misconduct in his or her service as a director, and the matter was not settled "by agreement predicated on the existence of such liability." Instead, plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed their claims against Defendants.

5. Attached hereto as Exhibit A is the Declaration of K. Chris Todd, which explains that the rates for each individual that worked on the case are Kellogg Huber's standard hourly billing rates, which were established as the market rates for individuals based upon their skills and education. Concurrent herewith, Defendants have filed a Motion for Leave to Submit Fee Statements Under Seal for In Camera Review; once a sealing order is entered, Defendants will submit detailed billing statements evidencing the actual time expended by individuals working on the case each day, the identity of the individuals performing the work, the legal tasks performed, and the applicable hourly rate.

6. The detailed billing statements that will be submitted to the Court reflect that Kellogg Huber performed a large number of significant tasks since becoming involved in the case. In addition to several court appearances, Kellogg Huber has prepared numerous pleadings. Kellogg Huber also handled several related projects, including interviewing Assistant Attorney General Perkins, meeting with clients, interviewing potential witnesses, and learning the extensive file and background information regarding this case.

7. In addition to the services performed, the time expended, the attorneys involved, and the hourly rate, the reasonableness of a petition for attorneys fees depends upon "the skill and standing of the attorney involved, the difficulty of the work, the novelty or difficulty of the issues, the importance of the matter, the benefit obtained by the client, and the usual and customary charge for such services." Cabrera v. First National Bank of Wheaton, No. 2-00-0781, 2001 WL 845979 *12 (Ill. App. July 18, 2001) (affirming award of $70,000 for securing dismissal of complaint). These factors further support the award of attorneys fees sought by this Motion.

8. With respect to the "skill and standing of the attorney[s] involved," each lawyer involved in this case is highly qualified to have worked on a matter of this complexity. Mr. Todd brought over two decades of complex litigation experience to this matter, and he was supported by lawyers with exceptional educations and significant litigation experience. See ¶ 3, supra.

9. This case also presented significant procedural and substantive difficulties. Most significantly from a procedural prospective, Kellogg Huber did not become involved in the case until June 22, 2001. This required Kellogg Huber to familiarize itself quickly with the history of the Foundation and the case. Moreover, Kellogg Huber was required to deal with three opposing counsel — Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, Quinlan & Crisham, and the Illinois Attorney General — each of whom generally prepared its own papers in response to filings by Kellogg Huber. For example, Kellogg Huber was required to respond in less than one day to three briefs totaling over 80 pages in opposition to the Defendants' objections to the proposed settlement.

10. Substantively, this case has presented complex novel legal issues, including the fiduciary duties of not-for-profit foundation directors, the proper role of Attorneys General in such cases, and the proper role for the courts in settlements of such cases. This required counsel to expend significant time and resources researching these areas of law, and searching decisions from across the country for analogous cases. For this reason alone, both the "the difficulty of the work" and the "novelty [and] difficulty of the issues" favor awarding the attorneys fees sought by this motion.

11. Finally, this matter is one of significant public interest. The Attorney General intervened in the case purportedly "to protect the interests of the People of Illinois." See Attorney General's Complaint for Declaratory Judgment, Injunction, Breach of Fiduciary Duty, Removal, Accounting, Receiver and Appointment of New Directors ¶ 1 (Sept. 25, 2000). And the efforts of Kellogg Huber have generated significant public interest. See Exhibit B (collecting examples of such materials).[3]

For all of the reasons set forth herein, as well as in the accompanying declaration, Defendants respectfully request that the Court direct the Foundation to pay Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., $392,106.06, which represents the reasonable value of the services rendered and costs disbursed by Kellogg Huber to date in its representation of Defendants.

A proposed order is attached.

[3]Neither the "the benefit obtained by the client" nor "the usual and customary charge for such services" is applicable here. As to the former, fee petitions are often filed after a case is completed. Nevertheless, while Defendants' efforts to date have not always resulted in favorable rulings, those adverse decisions are being appealed; "[t]he benefit obtained by the client" will not be capable of complete determination until those appeals are resolved. As to the latter, given the unique nature of the proceedings in this case and the time at which Kellogg Huber became involved, it is not possible to determine a "usual and customary charge." Significantly, however, Kellogg Huber charged its standard rates and handled the case as it would any other dispute of this nature. See generally Declaration of K. Chris Todd (September 14, 2001).

DECLARATION OF K. CHRIS TODD

I, K. Chris Todd, declare as follows in support of the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker:

1. I am a member of the firm Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C. I am also a member in good standing of the bars of New York, Texas, and the District of Columbia. I served as a law clerk for the Honorable William M. Taylor, Jr., United States District Court, Northern District of Texas (1972-73), as a trial attorney in the United States Department of Justice, Tax Division, Criminal Section (1975-78), and as an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York (1978-87). I also served as Associate Counsel in the Office of Independent Counsel for the Iran/Contra Matter, as head of the White House/National Security Council group (1987-89).

2. I have been lead or co-lead counsel in numerous matters in federal and state courts, including complex antitrust, commercial, RICO, securities, contract and tort cases. I served as head of the litigation section of the Washington office of Johnson & Gibbs, which was a three-hundred person law firm.

3. I am responsible for supervising the work performed by Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans during its representation of Judith Terra, Alan K. Simpson, and Paul Hayes Tucker in this matter. The following attorneys at my firm, among others, also represented Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker in this matter: Neil M. Gorsuch, partner, David E. Ross, partner, and John H. Longwell, associate.

4. The aforementioned Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans attorneys, among other attorneys and legal assistants, spent a total of 1,241.5 hours representing Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson and Dr. Tucker in this matter.

5. My firm typically bills clients for time spent on their matters at hourly rates. Our partner rates — during this engagement — ranged from $325 to $450; associate rates ranged from $235 to $285; and legal assistant rates ranged from $75 to $145. These rates are comparable to, if not significantly below, the rates charged by other firms in analogous cases, and were established as the market rates for individuals based upon their skills and education.

6. At the firm's standard rates, multiplied by the hours expended by each of the professionals who worked on the matter, the total fee request for the services provided by

Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans to date is $355,282.50. I regularly reviewed the time records for this matter, which were provided to the client on a monthly basis, and attest that the hours of service provided were reasonable and necessary in support of the work on behalf of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker.

7. In addition, Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans incurred expenses in the amount of $36,823.56. I reviewed these expenses and attest that the expenses incurred were reasonable and necessary in support of the work on behalf of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker.

8. The total request for fees and related expenses for Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans on behalf of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker in this matter is $392,106.06.

9. Once Defendants' Motion for Leave to Submit Fee Statements Under Seal for In Camera Review is entered, Defendants will submit detailed billing statements of the services rendered and out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans on behalf of Ms. Terra, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker since June 22, 2001.

10. The statements to be submitted once a sealing order is entered include the date of service rendered, the person rendering the service, a detailed statement of the service rendered, and the amount of time spent providing the service.

I declare under penalty of perjury the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

DEAN L. BUNTROCK, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Plaintiffs, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff-Intervenor, v. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	No. 00 CH 13859 Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

DECLARATION OF LEONARD GARMENT
IN SUPPORT OF REVISED MOTION FOR FEES

1. I am a member in good standing of the bars of the District of Columbia and the State of New York. I am of counsel to the Washington, D.C. law firm of Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered. My firm is counsel to defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker, directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Defendant Directors;" the "Foundation"), in this matter. The Foundation is a private nonprofit corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois. It owns and manages two museums, one in Chicago, Illinois, and one in

Giverny, France. The value of the Foundation's art collection, real estate, and cash assets is approximately $450 million.

2. In addition to my law firm, the following firms and solo practitioners have performed legal services for the Defendant Directors in connection with the present case: Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; Cummins & Cronin, L.L.C.; Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; David A. Novoselsky; and Shefsky & Froelich, Ltd. Pursuant to the Court's order dated August 29, 2001, all of the above practitioners filed petitions for reimbursement of fees.

3. By order dated December 14, 2001, the Court awarded Shefsky & Froelich $468,376.17 for legal services rendered from October 8, 2000, through June 21, 2001. By order dated March 13, 2002, the Court conditioned its award of reimbursement of fees to the remaining firms and practitioners upon their provision of the following information: (a) the dates on which counsel were retained; (b) the reasons for retention; (c) the dates, if any, of discharge; (d) when and how notice of retention was given to any counsel of record; (e) when and how such notice was given to, and other communications conducted with, Shefsky & Froelich; (f) when "parties to the mediated settlement" were notified of the intention of the above firms and practitioners, with the exception of Shefsky & Froelich, to seek reimbursement of fees; (g) what attempts have been made to avoid duplication of effort; and (h) how much of the fees for which reimbursement is sought has been paid.

4. The Court's questions appear directed towards the legitimate issue of why, given the expenditure of large sums of Court-approved money to reimburse previous counsel for the Defendant Directors, these same directors were compelled to retain new counsel in order to secure proper representation of their interests. I provide answers to Court's specific questions below, but the answer to the general question may be summarized as follows. When this litigation began, the Defendant Directors had an interest in the well-being of the Foundation and an interest in avoiding personal liability. At that time, the Defendant Directors were in the majority of the board; their interest in the well-being of the Foundation appeared to have been adequately represented by the Foundation's counsel, Sidley & Austin. The Defendant Directors retained their own counsel, Shefsky & Froelich, to protect their personal interests.

However, during the Court-ordered mediation, the Assistant Attorney General, by unlawful and otherwise improper acts, took control of the board majority in the service of plans that were, in the view of the Defendant Directors, inimical to the well-being of the Foundation. Sidley & Austin, representing the Attorney General's majority, no longer represented the Defendant Directors' interest in the well-being of the Foundation. Shefsky & Froelich had secured agreement to releases of personal liability for the Defendant Directors. The recovery of Shefsky & Froelich's fees was bound up with the successful termination of the mediation process. Shefsky & Froelich declined to expand the scope of their representation so as to fill the void left by the change in Sidley's role.

Thus if the Defendant Directors were to pursue their interest in the well-being of the Foundation, they had to act quickly to secure new counsel. The new counsel, in turn, were forced to act quickly to try to stop the process.

5. On May 18, 2001, an adviser to Judith Terra visited Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand to meet with me and my colleagues Harry McPherson and Lawrence Levinson. I had briefly represented Mrs. Terra several years before, on another matter. I was told that Mrs. Terra was facing a crisis and had lost confidence in her existing counsel.

6. Mrs. Terra was seeking legal help in connection with a lawsuit filed in late September 2000 against her, Senator Simpson, and Dr. Tucker by two dissident directors of the Foundation, Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz. The two plaintiff directors alleged various acts of waste and mismanagement of Foundation resources. The Defendant Directors viewed these charges as "contrived" and wholly false.

7. The Attorney General of Illinois had joined in the complaint almost as soon as it was filed, further alleging that the Directors of the Foundation could not move the Foundation or its art collection outside the State of Illinois. The Attorney General's position, as it was described to me, was much the same as the position he took before the Court on the first day of this proceeding, September 25, 2000.

> The Court: [L]et's assume there is a museum in town that is simply not making it. There is not attendance, it is not doing well. It is just not supporting its efforts, it is not growing and, for whatever reason, it has to close. It is your position that even if that were the case, the assets would ultimately remain in the State of Illinois or the collection would be sold for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois.
>
> Mr. Perkins: Yes, Judge, absolutely.
>
> The Court: And that is really what it comes down to. They can't ever move these assets elsewhere.
>
> Mr. Perkins: Your Honor, I have been on many cases and that is our position in every case.

See Exh B (Excerpt from 9/25/00 Transcript of Proceedings).

8. I was told that the Assistant Attorney General, in support of the above position, had asserted that Dan Terra, Mrs. Terra's late husband and the founder of the Terra Foundation, intended that the Foundation stay in the Chicago area. But, we were told at the meeting, the contrary was true. The Foundation's governing documents placed no restriction on the Board's discretion to move Foundation assets. In fact, Dan Terra had been planning and taking steps, right up until his sudden death in June 1996, to move the headquarters of the Foundation and the bulk of his art collection to Washington, D.C. in order to expand the Foundation's artistic and educational reach beyond Chicago and Illinois.

9. At this initial meeting we learned that the parties to the dispute had entered into mediation under unusual circumstances. The head of the Foundation's independent litigation committee in the months leading up to the mediation was board member Theodore Stebbins, who was at that time in general agreement with the views of the Defendant Directors. The Assistant Attorney General, a strong proponent of mediation, had challenged Mr. Stebbins' role on the independent litigation committee and aired charges of conflicts of interest on Mr. Stebbins' part. Mr. Stebbins became a strong proponent of mediation. When the case moved into mediation, the proceedings and papers were "sealed" and Mr. Stebbins was able to avoid a public trial of the Attorney General's allegations.

10. Sidley & Austin believed that the Foundation's position on the key issue of Mr. Terra's intent was extremely strong. See Exh. C (Feb. 14, 2001, Mediation Statement). Nevertheless, Sidley & Austin agreed that the Foundation should participate in the mediation. Shefsky & Froelich advised the Defendant Directors to participate, explaining that mediation offered a potentially simple way to secure releases of personal liability.

11. At the meeting, we were also told that the Defendant Directors had agreed to enter into mediation in the mistaken belief that, since the charges against them were groundless, the process would produce a fair result. They were further reassured by the advice of Foundation counsel that a mediated settlement would require the agreement of the parties to the dispute. See Exh. D (Memorandum to Directors from Sidley & Austin). As the mediation progressed, however, the Assistant Attorney General played an increasingly dominant role, asserting non-negotiable positions and insisting not only that the Foundation had to be confined to Chicago, with a majority of its board composed of Illinois residents, but also that Senator Simpson, in particular, had to be dismissed from office as a director of the Foundation. See, e.g., Exh. E (correspondence representative of Attorney General's requirements, which varied in detail during the mediation, but maintained insistence on Illinois control). As of the time of our initial meeting with Mrs. Terra's advisor, the Foundation board was divided over the Attorney General's proposals, though it appeared that there were enough votes to enable the board to refuse his demands for control in the mediation process or otherwise.

12. The Defendant Directors felt they needed alternative legal representation because Shefsky & Froelich had declined, despite repeated requests, to mount a major attack on the mediation process, even as pressures by the Attorney General became more intense. Counsel had also declined Mrs. Terra's request that they bring to the Court's attention the "true facts" concerning Dan Terra's intent with regard to the Foundation. See Exh. F (May 19, 2001, Memorandum from Judith Terra to James Wilson) (one of many communications in which Mrs. Terra expressed dissatisfaction with the course of mediation and her representation by Shefsky & Froelich).

13. Most disturbing to the Defendant Directors, we were told, was the fact that one of the Shefsky & Froelich attorneys had written a letter to Mrs. Terra in which he complained about not having been paid and said that the firm would not allow him to continue the representation if its fees were not paid. See Exh. G (Letter of April 17, 2001, from James D. Wilson to Defendant Directors). The Defendant Directors, particularly Mrs. Terra, had come to the conclusion that they must withdraw from the mediation. They feared that Shefsky & Froelich, because of its expressed anxiety over fees, had an interest, contrary to the interests of the Defendant Directors, in continuing to participate in the mediation in order to bring it to a rapid conclusion, thereby expediting court action on their fee petition.

14. In sum, the Defendant Directors felt that they were, for all intents and purposes, without representation in their concern for the welfare of the Foundation. Indeed, Defendant Directors often felt compelled to take it upon themselves to communicate independently with the mediator. See, e.g., Exh. H (Letter of May 24, 2001, from Paul H. Tucker to David Hilliard).

15. After the initial meeting, we undertook, beginning on May 18, 2001, a preliminary inquiry into Illinois law on the governance of private corporate charitable foundations. We thought that if the Attorney General claimed a right to confine an Illinois foundation within the state, there must be some feature of Illinois law that supported his claim. On the contrary, we found that Illinois law, like the laws of most states, construes the purposes and powers of a foundation by reference to the founder's intent and the instruments of incorporation embodying that intent and requires of foundation directors the normal exercise of care and loyalty within this framework.

16. On May 23, we obtained a copy of the lengthy court docket in the case and used it as a starting point for our efforts to understand its procedural aspects. Our firm continued to review the legal and procedural background until June 7, when we discussed the case in more detail with Mrs. Terra. After this discussion, Mrs. Terra supplied us with additional documents and materials related to the case, including pleadings, trial transcripts, and communications between Mrs. Terra and the Court-appointed mediator. Our preliminary conclusion after the foregoing reviews and discussions was that the Assistant Attorney General had interfered, without any discernible justification, in the governance of a private foundation.

17. On June 8, the day after our meeting with Mrs. Terra, it was our understanding that a majority of the Foundation directors continued to oppose the Assistant Attorney General's demands. This majority consisted of Judith Terra, Senator Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker, Helene Ahrweiler, Ambassador Jacques Andreani, and Stephanie Marshall. We also understood that as of that date, Mr. Stebbins's support for the majority had become uncertain; we later learned that the Attorney General had continued applying pressure on Mr. Stebbins through circulation of a draft amended complaint, to be filed if the mediation was unsuccessful, naming Mr. Stebbins as a defendant and accusing him of serious professional misconduct. See Exh. I (March 21, 2001, Letter from James D. Wilson of Shefsy & Froelich to the Defendant Directors) ("[W]e had an agreement with the Attorney General that the copies [of the proposed amended complaint] would be marked 'confidential' so that Ted Stebbins need not endure these as public charges if the matter was settled.") The other likely supporters of the Attorney General were the plaintiffs in the suit, Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz, as well as Ambassador Arthur Hartman and Margaret Daley.

18. Also on June 8, in order to verify aspects of the Defendant Directors' account and to initiate communication with their counsel, Shefsky & Froelich, Mr. Levinson contacted the respected Chicago litigator Lee Freeman, of Freeman, Freeman & Salzman, P.C. Mr. Freeman said he was generally familiar with the case from newspaper accounts. He agreed to contact Shefsky & Froelich in order to discuss the possibility of our entering the case as co-counsel to their firm.

19. On June 13, Mr. Freeman reported to Mr. Levinson. Shefsky & Froelich had told Mr. Freeman that their firm was owed $500,000. Shefsky & Froelich also told Mr. Freeman that it would withdraw from the case if any co-counsel, or any new local counsel, were retained to help represent the Defendant Directors.

20. On June 14, Mr. Levinson and I placed a conference call to Steven Carlson, a partner at Sidley & Austin and counsel to the Terra Foundation, to advise him that our firm was considering formal involvement in the case on behalf of the Defendant Directors; we asked for information about the case, particularly about the role of the Assistant Attorney General. In a conversation of an hour and a half, Mr. Carlson discussed with us the background of the case and of the mediation process. He told us that Sidley & Austin, in a motion made the previous January for judgment on the pleadings, had argued that the Attorney General had exceeded his authority in entering the case and was impermissibly interfering with the governance of a private foundation. Also, Mr. Carlson said that Sidley & Austin had presented the Court and the mediator with substantial evidence that Dan Terra, before his death, had actively planned to move the Foundation to Washington. See Exh. C (Feb. 14, 2001, Mediation Statement) at 3.

21. At some point after our telephone conversation of June 14 with Mr. Carlson, the Assistant Attorney General issued an administrative subpoena to the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy ("IMSA"), a largely state-supported institution. IMSA was headed by Foundation director Stephanie Marshall, who had until that time opposed the Assistant Attorney General's proposals. The subpoena initiated an official state inquiry into the possibility of improper financial dealings by Ms. Marshall as treasurer of the Foundation and president of IMSA. The Assistant Attorney General had informed Ms. Marshall of his plans to issue the administrative subpoena and thereafter, in a closed meeting, discussed the matter with her counsel, whom she had retained to represent her in the official inquiry.

22. On or about June 19, Mrs. Terra told us that in a "straw vote" of Foundation directors, taken on June 18 in anticipation of the June 29 meeting at which the directors would vote on the Assistant Attorney General's proposals, Ms. Marshall had joined Mr. Stebbins in voting to accede to the Assistant Attorney General's demands. The Assistant Attorney General now appeared to command a majority of the board.

23. On June 21, the firm sent a letter to Mrs. Terra to "confirm our agreement" that the firm "has been engaged to provide you with services with respect to issues affecting the Terra Foundation."

24. On June 22, I presided over a day-long meeting attended by Mrs. Terra, Mr. Naftali Michaeli (a close friend and adviser of Mrs. Terra, who had also been named as a defendant in the lawsuit), Mr. Levinson, and Donald Ratner, the Foundation's vice president for administration. Dr. Tucker joined us by telephone for the morning session. The purpose of the meeting was to determine the next legal steps to be taken, in light of the extremely short time before the Foundation board meeting on June 29 and the possible approval of a settlement by the Court soon thereafter.

25. As the meeting began, we focused on issues of corporate governance. I stated that if the directors were to vote to accede to the Assistant Attorney General, I believed the Foundation would sail away from its Terra moorings to be entirely controlled by the State of Illinois and the City of Chicago.

26. As the June 22 meeting proceeded, the issue of coercion by the Attorney General became at least as important in the discussion as the issue of the proper role of the Attorney General in corporate governance. Both issues were raised by the question of whether the Foundation board was capable any longer of voting in a voluntary, independent and disinterested manner on issues vital to the future of the Foundation. As Dr. Tucker put it, the coercion issue was critical, because if Stephanie Marshall removed herself from the action of the Board, the next meeting would result in a tie vote. Without a majority, no Court action could take place. The moment of truth, I added, occurred when Stephanie Marshall became the subject of an investigation by the Assistant Attorney General. The crux of the case, the participants agreed, was that individuals trying to get control of a private foundation had managed to engage the coercive power of the State to implement their plan. We believed that we had a prima facie case of coercion and that, if allowed the normal means of discovery, we would produce sufficient evidence to prove this assertion.

27. At the conclusion of the meeting, I was authorized by the Defendant Directors to begin preparing documents to attempt to restrain the Foundation board from its June 29 meeting and vote. The grounds for such restraint would be the improper nature of the Attorney General's original intervention, the coercion of Theodore Stebbins and Stephanie Marshall and the complete absence of an opportunity, to that point, for the Defendant Directors to adduce the evidence of Dan Terra's actual intent with respect to the Foundation. Senator Simpson was notified and agreed with our plan of action. Senator Simpson said that he was looking forward to the chance to raise his hand in court for the first time to tell the truth about Dan Terra's intent and the usurping of the Terra Foundation's ability to govern itself.

28. It was now our job to take immediate action to protect the expressed and objective interests of our clients. Because the issues in the case now encompassed not only corporate governance but illegal State action, we sought help from a firm that, unlike our own, had general litigation depth and substantial experience in Constitutional law. I contacted K. Chris Todd of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, with whom I had worked previously, to ask whether his firm would join our legal team. On the evening of June 22, we supplied him with background on the case, forwarded a copy of the initial complaint, outlined the involvement of the Assistant Attorney General, and discussed the various issues that the case raised. Kellogg, Huber agreed to begin immediately drafting a motion to be filed in Chicago for a temporary restraining order.

29. It was also our job to retain new Chicago counsel. We contacted the firm of Bellows and Bellows on June 22. We outlined the case to Laurel Bellows, as we had done to Chris Todd, and sent the Bellows firm documents they needed in order to begin the local admission of the Washington attorneys, advise Shefsky & Froelich of the entry of the Bellows firm into the case, and prepare to provide the logistical support that would allow us to file and argue our motions in Chicago.

30. On Saturday, June 23, and Sunday, June 24, we worked on the drafting of the motion for a temporary restraining order and on the accompanying affidavits. Kellogg, Huber did the bulk of the drafting, with support from the Bellows firm; we did overall editing and were in charge of clearances. By Monday, June 25, we had rough drafts of the papers and proceeded to clear them with our clients.

31. On June 25 we collected detailed affidavits from parties with first-hand knowledge of Dan Terra's 1996 preparations to move the Foundation and the bulk of the Terra art collection to Washington, D.C. We did so because such affidavits, appended to the motion papers, would rebut any claim by the Attorney General that Mr. Terra had wished to keep his collection in Chicago. We learned that Dan Terra's plans for the move had proceeded to an advanced stage: He had rented Washington office space for the Foundation, hired an architect who had completed designs for a new Washington museum, and printed change-of-address cards. On the new Washington, D.C., letterhead of the Foundation, Dan Terra, just days before his death, sent handwritten instructions to the then-president of the Foundation, directing that "All Terra and Terra Foundation mail should be directed to" the Terra Foundation for the Arts, 1072 Thomas Jefferson Street, Washington, D.C.

32. On June 26 and 27, we began the final drafting of motions for the temporary restraining order. We wanted to be prepared to file in state or federal court, as tactical considerations dictated; but the facts adduced and the law argued would be substantially the same in either case. The core of our case was a demonstration that the evidence of misconduct by the Assistant Attorney General was serious and credible enough to warrant a court's blocking a board meeting that had been called for the purpose of acceding to the Assistant Attorney General's demands. We rested our case on the additional ground that the evidence of the Assistant Attorney General's traducing of Dan Terra's intent was clear and irrefutable.

33. On June 28, with the board meeting scheduled for the next day, we chose to go first into federal court because of the prospect of faster injunctive relief there. We filed a motion in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois and flew to Chicago to argue it. On the evening of June 28, Judge Bucklo denied our motion on grounds of federal abstention doctrine and on the assumption that we could bring our Constitutional claims before the Chancery Court.

34. By the time we filed the above motion on June 28, all counsel for the parties to the mediated settlement were aware that the Defendant Directors had retained new counsel.

35. On the evening of June 28, we completed final papers for filing in the Chancery Court. On June 29, we filed our motion in the Chancery Court and participated in argument, asking for a suspension of the Foundation board meeting "until this Court can take steps [so] that a free, untainted vote can occur . . . without the corrupting influence [of] a state official." After that hearing, the Court denied our motion. The Court set a schedule by which our clients' objections to any settlement order could be filed on or before July 14; a hearing on the settlement was scheduled for the end of July.

36. On June 29, the Foundation board met. Our firm assisted Mrs. Terra in the preparation of a statement which she delivered to the board, urging her fellow directors to reject the Assistant Attorney General's proposal as the tainted product of illegal state action. By the time of the meeting, however, the outcome of the vote was foreordained. On June 19, the mediator had announced that the Foundation directors had declared themselves and that the vote would be 6 to 5 in favor of the Attorney General's terms. Three of the five minority directors—Senator Simpson, Ambassador Andreani and Mrs. Ahrweiler—anticipating the outcome did not join the June 29 meeting. As a result of their absence, the vote of the board was 6-2 to approve the settlement, with Ms. Marshall and Mr. Stebbins now providing the two essential votes for the new majority. After voting, both Ms. Marshall and Mr. Stebbins voiced their complaints about the Assistant Attorney General's conduct.

37. On July 2, in response to the Court's request for a status conference, I appeared before this Court together with Chris Todd of Kellogg Huber and Joel and Laura Bellows of Bellows and Bellows. In connection with this hearing we filed a motion for leave to file written objections and for an evidentiary hearing on the proposed settlement. In support of that motion, I stated that we would seek the Court's permission to offer evidence and seek the opportunity to examine witnesses to demonstrate the improper means by which the Attorney General's actions had caused directors Stebbins and Marshall to shift their votes. The Court instructed us to file our objections to the proposed settlement by July 19; a hearing was scheduled for July 24.

38. Because of a potential conflict of interest, and by agreement of counsel, the firm of Bellows & Bellows withdrew as local counsel, and the Chicago firm of Cummins & Cronin took its place on July 18, 2001.

39. Over the next three weeks, we continued to research the relevant case law, collected additional affidavits, further investigated the standards applicable to the fiduciary duties of directors, and obtained additional factual information to accompany our motions. Throughout this period, we continually discussed our litigation strategies with Mrs. Terra, Senator Simpson and Dr. Tucker, who fully supported our efforts.

40. On July 19, pursuant to the Court's order, we filed a 28-page memorandum, together with a number of exhibits, objecting to the proposed settlement. One of these exhibits was an affidavit prepared by John Longwell, a Kellogg Huber attorney, who reported the content of a voluntary interview of Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins. Mr. Longwell had been present at the interview, which was conducted on July 12 by counsel for the Defendant Directors. Mr. Perkins declined to testify under oath.

41. Our memorandum of July 19 brought the following issues to the Court's attention: (a) without the votes of the two conflicted directors, Stebbins and Marshall, the proposed settlement was a legal nullity and could not be approved by the Court; (b) the Court could not approve the settlement without countenancing a breach of fiduciary duty owed by directors Stebbins and Marshall to the Foundation; (c) the mediation process was fatally infected by improper governmental action; (d) by permitting a seizure of the Foundation's property and powers by the Attorney General, approval of the settlement would set a precedent that would strongly discourage not-for-profit corporations from locating in Illinois; and (e) the Defendant Directors should be permitted reasonable discovery and an evidentiary hearing to allow an airing of relevant facts.

42. On July 24, we filed an eight-page reply brief in support of the Defendant Directors' objections to the purported settlement agreement and the proposed Consent Judgment. Prior to lodging these objections, we also filed with the Court, on July 20, a 61-page "Consolidated Verified Answer, Affirmative Defenses and Counterclaims" to the complaint of Buntrock and Gidwitz. In our papers, the Defendant Directors, now Counterclaim Plaintiffs, asked the Court to enter a judgment declaring that the proposed settlement of the litigation was unlawful because it was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law, that the proposed settlement was the product of breaches of directors' fiduciary duties and unlawful interference on the part of the Attorney General, and that the proposed settlement was incompatible with the Foundation's charter, its bylaws, and the intent of the donor, Daniel J. Terra.

43. On July 24, together with co-counsel, I appeared before the Court to urge that the settlement agreement be disapproved, that an evidentiary hearing be scheduled and discovery allowed, and that the counterclaims embodied in our July 20, motion be allowed. At the conclusion of the hearing, the Court denied permission to conduct discovery, rejected the motion for the filing of a counterclaim, and stated that the Court would proceed to sign the order approving the settlement. The Court also stated that the remaining issue was the various attorneys' petitions for fees.

44. On the morning of July 26, the Court entered the Consent Judgment and Order in the case. On August 22, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson filed a notice of appeal to the Appellate Court of Illinois for the First Judicial District from the Circuit Court of Cook County, County Department, Chancery Division, in case number 00CH13859.

45. There was no duplication of effort in our representation, because the work that we conducted for the Defendant Directors was different, in both critical facts and legal theories, from the case prepared for them by Shefsky & Froelich. Shefsky & Froelich represented the interests of the Defendant Directors in avoiding personal liability; Shefsky & Froelich did not represent the interests of the Defendant Directors, as they conceived them, to serve the well-being of the Foundation. Nor were those interests represented by Sidley & Austin because of the shift of support by Mr. Stebbins and Mrs. Marshall.

46. As I explained to the Court in some detail during the hearing of January 15 of this year, new counsel were retained to take on new efforts rather than to continue the ongoing work of Shefsky & Froelich. See Exh J (Excerpts of 1/15/02 Transcript of Proceedings). Therefore, there was only limited benefit to be gained from an extended transition. Nevertheless, new counsel sought to make use of work that had been done before. Counsel requested and received copies of key pleadings and other documents from Shefsky & Froelich and conferred on several occasions with both Shefsky & Froelich and counsel for the Foundation. The fact that the Defendant Directors agreed to retain common counsel, rather than availing themselves of their right under the Terra Foundation bylaws to retain separate counsel to defend against the charges against them, at the inception of this litigation or at any time thereafter, was another sign of the general consciousness of the need to avoid unnecessary duplication of effort.

47. Of the fees for which reimbursement is sought, $412,750.00 has been paid by the Defendant Directors. See Exh. K (chart detailing amounts paid by Defendant Directors). The payment of these fees strongly evidences the bona fides of the Defendant Directors' belief in the merit and public policy importance of their claims.

48. We entered this case at the request of clients who believed that their interests were not being adequately pursued by their existing counsel. We did not seek to supplant existing counsel. As the Court has recognized, this case is "extremely complex and fiercely litigated" and rife with "novel issues." Order of March 13, 2002, at 4. To deny the Defendant Directors reimbursement of fees for the attorneys they have chosen would be, under these circumstances, to deny them fair access to proper representation. Just as important, in a hotly contested lawsuit such as this one, the purpose of reimbursement of attorneys' fees is not to reward the victors; it is to insure that competing positions have appropriate resources for effective representation. And in a case as significant for the future of foundations as this one is, the Court should not be seen to deny reasonable awards to attorneys who have raised legal and policy issues of the utmost seriousness.

I declare under penalty of perjury the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

BELLOWS AND BELLOWS'
SECOND AMENDED PETITION FOR FEES AND COSTS

Now Comes Bellows and Bellows, P.C., and as its Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs states:

1. Bellows and Bellows, P.C., submits this Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs pursuant to the direction and order of the Court, the inherent supervisory power of the Court over attorneys fees, the obligation of the Terra Foundation for the Arts to pay such fees and costs, and pursuant to all other applicable law. Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson ("Clients") have filed objections to the "Consent Judgment" and reassert those objections. The filing of this Amended Petition is not intended to, nor does it in any way, waive those objections.

2. Attached is the Affidavit of Laurel G. Bellows, including as its Exhibit 1, an explanation of the fees and costs requested by the firm of Bellows and Bellows, P.C.

3. This Amended Petition is filed under terms of a protective order, specifically reserving to Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson all privileges each has and they jointly may have of confidentiality, attorney work product, and any other matter accruing to them by statute, in law or in equity.

4. Bellows and Bellows was employed by Clients from June 22 through July 31, 2001 in connection with the defense of their interests as Directors of the Terra Foundation arising out of the two lawsuits consolidated herein and thereafter in connection with the recovery of fees herein. Bellows and Bellows' representation necessarily included (in general terms): familiarizing itself with the facts and circumstances giving rise to Clients becoming Defendants herein; involvement in an action (in aid of Clients' position in this action) filed in the United States District Court, entitled The Terra Foundation For The Arts, et al. v. Floyd Perkins, Case No. 01 C 4976 (the "federal action"); restatement of the allegations in the federal action so as to incorporate them to seek relief in the instant action; representation of Clients in the instant action (as more fully elaborated in Exhibit 1 to the Affidavit of Laurel G. Bellows); the response of Bellows and Bellows to the claim of R. Gidwitz, a named Plaintiff, that Bellows and Bellows' representation of Clients in the instant action was improper and presented a conflict of interest with its ongoing representation of the Foundation in another matter (in connection with which claim the undersigned retained a noted ethicist for assistance); and, presentation of the various Petitions for Fees and Costs (including the original, first and the instant Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs), all as specified in the attached Affidavit and Exhibit 1 attached to it.

5. In connection with the representation specified in paragraph 4, above, Clients became indebted to Bellows and Bellows for $68,373.50 in fees and $5,201.95 in costs that were incurred in relation to this case (but excluding the fees and costs associated solely with the federal action); and, Clients will become indebted to Bellows and Bellows for costs and fees in connection with all proceedings as may hereafter occur in connection with this Second Amended Petition and the subject matter hereof.

WHEREFORE, Bellows and Bellows, P.C. requests that this Court approve payment pursuant to its Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs, together with such additional costs and fees as Clients incur to Bellows and Bellows by virtue of the proceedings hereafter in aid of this Second Amended Petition.

Attached to this Affidavit as Exhibit 1 is a detailed explanation of the work performed by members of Bellows and Bellows in connection with the subject litigation and the charges for those services. (Exhibit 1 consists of the time report that was attached to Bellows and Bellows' Amended Petition For Fees And Costs, a time report for the subsequent time spent, and the report of all costs expended.)

4. As set forth in Bellows and Bellows's previously-submitted Amended Petition, the fee and cost items contained in Exhibit 1 that relate solely to the case filed in the United States District Court, entitled The Terra Foundation For The Arts, et al. v. Floyd Perkins, No. 01 C 4976, are no more than $400.00 in costs and $5,972.50 in fees. Therefore, Bellows and Bellows' Second Amended Petition is reduced by $6,372.00 to the current amounts of $68,373.50 in fees and

$5,201.95 in costs. Affiant is of the opinion that all work done and amounts paid as represented on Exhibit 1 were necessary for the proper representation of the Clients, that they are reasonable in rate and total, and that none duplicate any service performed by any other firm.

5. Clients retained Bellows and Bellows on June 22, 2001.

6. Affiant was informed that the reason for the retention of Bellows and Bellows as additional (local) counsel was (in substance) that: Shefsky & Froelich had not been paid by the Foundation or this Court; it was owed in excess of $400,000; it was understandably anxious to withdraw and would be unwilling to undertake the major commitment that would be necessitated by opposing what was obviously an illegal State action; and, the Clients were not being well served by a continuation of that firm's representation and more particularly that the Shefsky firm was not representing them adequately or independently. (The foregoing was confirmed by subsequent events and information.) In consequence, Bellows and Bellows agreed to Clients' request that Bellows and Bellows serve as local counsel.

7. Bellows and Bellows withdrew from its representation on July 31, 2001 because the posture of the case had changed since it was retained, and the firm was concerned that a potential conflict would arise. More particularly, on and for a brief period after June 29, 2001, the Clients' interests and those of the Foundation were closely aligned; nevertheless, after a series of rulings by this Court, it appeared that that alignment might separate. Consequently, and although the firm's withdrawal was not granted until July 31, 2001, the Clients were timely advised that the firm wished to withdraw and that Clients would be afforded an opportunity to obtain new local counsel.

8. On June 28, 2001, all counsel of record in this case (other than the Shefsky firm) were advised that Bellows and Bellows had been retained by Clients when Affiant or another member of the firm called and subsequently served them with a copy of the Petition for Temporary Restraining Order in the federal action. The Shefsky firm had not been advised that the federal action was contemplated because of concern with its independence. (In fact, on June 28 when it learned of the federal aciton, that firm did not call Affiant. Instead, its time records indicate that it called David Hilliard and Steve Carlson.)

9. On June 29, 2001, Affiant advised James Wilson of Shefsky & Froelich of the fact that Clients had additionally retained counsel, including Bellows and Bellows, that a motion seeking to enjoin the Foundation's Board meeting that afternoon would be sought, and that he would be receiving a copy of the motion. Messrs. Wilson and Crowe appeared at the hearing; Mr. Crowe indicated his desire to withdraw (without recriminating over not being invited to the previous days' proceedings), and offered to turn over his file. Affiant accepted that offer.

10. During the time that Bellows and Bellows was counsel of record, the matter of fee petitions was discussed often on the record. Affiant cannot now recall the date of the first such discussion; however, she believes that Bellows and Bellows would have been a participant in any such discussion inasmuch as Clients were and are entitled to reimbursement for the (now) $60,000 advanced against fees and Bellows and Bellows is entitled to be paid the difference.

11. Since the first draft of all substantive pleadings were prepared by other counsel, Bellows and Bellows would not have taken any action to avoid duplication of effort between Shefsky & Froelich and itself. That said, at no time during the period in which Bellows and Bellows was an attorney of record up to and including on or about July 8, 2001 (the date on which Shefsky and Froelich's file was received), was any service performed on behalf of the Clients by her firm, or to her knowledge, by any of the other firms representing Clients, that would have benefitted from any information or work that had been performed by Shefsky & Froelich. (Indeed, Clients' fear of the lack of independence in work, thought and action is why that firm was replaced.) Going further, Bellows and Bellows was involved in the review of the material received from Shefsky and Froelich, and Affiant is of the belief that none of the material received from that firm would have diminished the work required to be performed by Clients' other counsel before Bellows and Bellows withdrew.

12. Of the total sum set forth on Exhibit 1, Bellows and Bellows received $60,000 ($25,000 on or about June 28, 2001 and $35,000 on or about July 11, 2001).

FURTHER AFFIANT SAYETH NAUGHT.

ORDER MODIFYING ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This cause coming to be heard on Petitioner Stebbins' Agreed Motion to Modify March 13, 2002 Order, due notice having been given, counsel for Petitioner Stebbins and for the defendant Terra Foundation before the Court, counsel for the Terra Foundation having agreed to the entry of this Order, and the Court being otherwise fully advised in the premises;

THE COURT FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

1. In adjudicating the Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs filed by Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall this Court deducted fees and costs for Terra II and fees for the federal action. The amount awarded included only fees and costs for Terra I. The amount deducted for the federal action was all the time spent on 6/28/01 and one hour spent on 6/29/01, or 4.5 hours at $440 an hour, for a total deduction of $1,980.

2. In adjudicating the Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs this Court erroneously failed to include the fee of Professor Mnookin for the preparation and review of Dr. Stebbins' affidavit. That fee represented 4.0 hours at $495 an hour, for a total amount of $1,980.

3. This Court correctly deducted $1,980 for the federal action, but incorrectly failed to include $1,980 for Professor Mnookin's fees.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED THAT the Agreed Motion to Modify is granted and the Order of this Court of March 13, 2002 is amended to provide that an additional $1,980 is awarded to Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins for the services rendered by Professor Mnookin. It is further ordered that the Terra Foundation shall pay the aforestated fee within thirty days of this Order.

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE ITS OBJECTIONS TO THE AMENDED FEE PETITIONS

The Terra Foundation, by its attorneys, hereby moves this Court for leave to file its Objections to the Amended Fee Petitions filed by the various attorneys for Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In support thereof, the Foundation states as follows:

1. In the initial proceedings before this Court regarding the award of attorneys' fees, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") raised only one concern regarding the several fee petitions before this Court: that no director be awarded attorneys' fees in this proceeding for work done in connection with different – albeit related – lawsuits. The Court agreed with the Foundation stating:

> The Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees that were not incurred in this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook County Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to Quinlan and Carroll invoices and McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' (Tucker, Terra and Simpson) attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

(Exh. A, Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, 3/13/02, at 3-4.)

2. Accordingly, the Court ordered the attorneys for the Defendant Directors to submit revised fee petitions "eliminat[ing] all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112)." (Exh. A at 5.)

3. Furthermore, in an understandable effort to put an end to this fee litigation, the Court stated that it would not entertain any "additional briefing" on this issue of attorneys' fees. (Exh. A at 7.)

4. On April 24, 2002, the various attorneys for the Defendant Directors submitted their revised fee petitions. After careful review, the Foundation has concluded that the revised fee petitions do not comply with the Court's express directive "to eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) . . . ." (Exh. A at 5.) In fact, one of the petitioner law firms (Verner, Liipert Bernard McPherson & Hand) failed to make any reduction in its request for fees related to the federal action. Two other fee petitions (Kellogg, Huber et al. and Bellows & Bellows) made some adjustment to their fee petitions, but still seek significant amounts of fees related to that lawsuit in clear contravention of this Court's Order.

5. Thus, although it is respectful of the Court's desire for no additional briefing, the Foundation – as the entity paying the funds – believes that it would appropriate for the Court to consider the attached Terra Foundation's Objections To the Amended Fee Petitions, a copy of which is attached. Indeed, the Illinois Appellate Court has warned courts against making decisions regarding attorneys' fees "in a vacuum" and has stated that "[u]nder our system of justice, the party seeking recovery, whether in damages or attorneys fees, must always be willing to put his proofs to the test of adversarial scrutiny." LaHood v. Couri, 236 Ill. App. 3d 641, 649 (3rd Dist. 1992).

6. As the Court can see, the Foundation has made every effort to be as concise as possible in presenting its objections to the amended fee petitions to the Court.

WHEREFORE, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court grant it leave to file the attached Terra Foundation's Objections to the Amended Fee Petitions and that the Court consider those objections when ruling on the amended petitions.

Respectfully submitted,

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S
OBJECTIONS TO THE AMENDED FEE PETITIONS

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") respectfully submits its objections to the amended fee petitions submitted by certain of the attorneys for defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

BACKGROUND

In the initial proceedings before this Court regarding the award of attorneys' fees, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") raised only one concern regarding the several fee petitions before this Court: that no director be awarded attorneys' fees in this proceeding for work done in connection with different – albeit related – lawsuits. The Court agreed with the Foundation stating:

> The Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees that were not incurred in this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook County Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to Quinlan and Carroll invoices and McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' (Tucker, Terra and Simpson) attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

(Exh. A, Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, 3/13/02, at 3-4.) Accordingly, the Court ordered the attorneys for the defendant directors to submit revised fee petitions "eliminat[ing] all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112)." (Exh. A at 5.)

However, in their revised fee petitions, filed on April 24, 2002, certain of the attorneys for the defendant directors failed to comply with the Court's express directive "to eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) . . . ." (Exh. A at 5.) Incredibly, one of the petitioner law firms (Verner, Liipert Bernard McPherson & Hand) failed to take make any reduction in its fee request for fees related to the federal action. Two other fee petitions (Kellogg, Huber et al. and Bellows & Bellows) made some adjustment to their fee petitions, but still seek significant amounts of fees related to that lawsuit in clear contravention of this Court's Order.

16di-003096

ARGUMENT

I. THIS COURT SHOULD DENY THE PETITIONERS' CONTINUED REQUEST FOR REIMBURSEMENT FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES RELATED TO THE FEDERAL ACTION.

"It is well established that a party seeking to recover attorneys' fees from another party bears the burden of presenting sufficient evidence from which the trial court can render a decision as to their reasonableness." Prior Plumbing and Heating Co. v. Hagins, 258 Ill. App. 3d 683, 630 N.E.2d 1208 (1st Dist. 1994). Accordingly, under this Court's March 13th order, each of the petitioner law firms bears the burden of demonstrating that the fees sought in their amended fee petitions were not incurred in connection with either the federal action (No. 01 C 4976) or the Law Division action (01 L 9112) now pending before Judge Nowicki. (Exh. A at 5.) However, certain of the petitioner law firms (Verner et al., Kellogg et al., and Bellows & Bellows, collectively "the petitioner law firms") fall well short of sustaining that burden with respect to a substantial amount of the fees and costs sought in the revised fee petitions. In fact, those firms' own submissions clearly indicate that a substantial portion of the fees and costs sought in the amended petitions relate to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976).

Indeed, the record is clear that on June 22, 2001, the three petitioner law firms began work on a Complaint and a Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to halt a scheduled meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors to vote on the proposed settlement agreement. (Garment Aff. ¶ 28.[1]) On June 28, 2001, the three petitioner law firms, on behalf of defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson, filed their complaint and motion for TRO in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. (Id. ¶ 33.) The motion was denied and the complaint was dismissed that same day. At that point (June 29, 2001), the defendant directors sought emergency relief in this lawsuit.

[1] The Garment Affidavit is attached to the revised fee petitions of both the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm as Exhibit A.

Given this record, the only reasonable inference is that all fees and costs incurred by the petitioner law firms between the dates of June 22 and June 28, 2001 were related to the federal action. Indeed, at a minimum, the three petitioner law firms – in clear contravention of this Court's order -- have made little, if any, effort to segregate and disclaim fees incurred during that time period that were related to the federal action. Because it is the petitioners' burden to prove that those fees were not related to the federal action and because they have not – and indeed cannot – do(ne) so, this Court should reject the three petitioner law firms' request for all fees and costs related to the federal action.[2]

First, despite this Court's express instructions, the Verner firm made no adjustment to its fee petition to account for work on the federal action and instead continues to seek all $27,939.50 in fees incurred by that firm from June 22 to June 28 (including, presumably, the time Mr. Garment spent in federal court on June 28).

[2] Although it is not entirely clear from the papers, the petitioner firms appear to be arguing that they are entitled to compensation for most of the work performed on the federal case because they did not decide until the filing date whether they were going to file their motion for TRO in this case or as part of a separate federal action. (Garment Aff. ¶ 33.) Even if this were true, given the defendant directors' ultimate decision to file their papers first in the federal case, all fees incurred in preparing those papers can only be construed as incurred in connection with the federal lawsuit and thus outside of this Court's March 13th Order. Moreover, this assertion is belied by the petitioner firms' own submissions. Specifically, the Bellows firm time entries reveal that on June 22, 2001 the focus was already on a federal cause of action (42 U.S.C. § 1983). The Bellows entries further indicate that the decision to file in federal court was – at the latest – made by June 25, 2001.

Moreover, the Verner firm also seeks reimbursement of $12,950.41 in costs without providing the Court or the Foundation any way to determine which of those costs relate to the federal action. Accordingly, this Court should reject the Verner's firm request for at least the foregoing $40,889.91 in fees and costs.[3]

Second, the Kellogg firm deducted only $25,939.59 from its original fee petition to account for fees and costs related to the federal action. However, as stated above, the Kellogg firm began work on the federal complaint and TRO on June 22 and continued such work through the date of the federal court hearing (June 28) and during that time incurred much more that $25,939.59 in fees and costs. (See Kellogg Invoices, attached to revised fee petitions.) In fact, between June 22 and June 28, the Kellogg firm incurred $90,095 in attorneys' fees and $10,060.39 in costs (a total of $100,155.39).[4] Accordingly, this Court should reject the Kellogg's firm request for the $100,155.39 of fees and costs it seeks related to the federal action.[5]

Finally, like the Kellogg firm, Bellows & Bellows still seeks fees related to the federal action. Specifically, the Bellows firm asserts that only $5,972.50 in fees and $400 in costs sought in it original fee petition related to the federal action. However, between June 22 and June 28, the Bellows firm incurred $24,736 in fees and $726.25 in costs. In fact, on June 27 and 28 (the day of the federal hearing) alone, the Bellows firm incurred over $10,000 in fees. Accordingly, taking into account the $6,372.50 reduction already made by the Bellows firm, this Court should reject the additional $19,089.75

[3] Assuming that the Court determines the remainder of the fees sought by the Verner firm to be reasonable, this reduction would result in a total award to the Verner firm of $109,475.

[4] Certain costs incurred by the Kellogg firm on June 28, 2001 and included in the above number are found on the July 2001 invoice.

[5] Assuming the Court determines that the remainder of the Kellogg firm's fee request is reasonable, this reduction ($100,155.39) and the reduction for fees the Kellogg firm admits were incurred in the second state court action ($37,299.40) would result in a total award to the Kellogg firm of $254,651.87.

((24,736 + 726.25) - 6,372.50) in fees and costs that firm continues to seek for work related to the federal action.[6]

II. THIS COURT SHOULD REJECT PETITIONERS' REQUEST FOR FEES INCURRED IN PREPARING THEIR FEE PETITIONS.

The Foundation further requests that the Court rule that the petitioner law firms are not entitled to reimbursement for fees incurred in preparing their fee petitions. At this juncture, only the Bellows firm is seeking fees for work on their original and revised fee petitions; however, the other petitioner law firms have indicated that they plan to return to the Court at a later date to such seek fees.

In Illinois, the general rule is that where attorneys' fees are authorized pursuant to a fee-shifting statute, the party seeking fees may recover its fees and costs incurred in preparing and prosecuting its fee petition. However, in "common fund" cases, the party seeking fees is not entitled to reimbursement for the services performed in pursuing its fees. See Baksinski v. Northwestern Univ., 231 Ill. App. 3d 7, 18 (1st Dist. 1992). The rationale for this rule is that the services performed in pursuit of fees were not performed for the benefit of the fund. Id. at 14.

This case is neither a fee-shifting case nor a "common fund" case. However, given that this case involves charitable funds, the rule applying to "common fund" cases should be applied here. Indeed, just as public policy dictates that a "common fund" should not be depleted due to fee litigation, it also dictates that the charitable assets of the Terra Foundation should not be further depleted due to fee litigation.

[6] Assuming that the Court determines the remainder of the fees sought by the Bellows firm to be reasonable, this reduction would result in a total fee award of $49,283.75. As discussed infra, the Foundation also objects to the Bellows firm's request for reimbursement of fees related to its fee petitions; in the event the Court agrees with the Foundation's positions, the Bellows firm's total awarded will be reduced further. See infra note 7.

Accordingly, the Foundation respectfully requests that the Court disallow all requests for fees sought by the petitioner law firms (now or in the future) for work related to the fee petitions as it cannot reasonably be argued that such work was done for the benefit of the Foundation.

Specifically, the Bellows firm seeks $8,992.75 in fees and $393.53 in costs for work done after July 31, 2001, all of which related to its original and revised fee petitions. Accordingly, in addition to the reduction sought above to account for fees relating to the federal case, the Foundation requests that this Court also reject the additional $9386.28 in fees in costs sought by the Bellows firm for work on its fee petitions.[7]

[7] This adjustment would reduce the Bellows firm's total award to $39,897.47.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court disallow the petitioner law firms' requests for (1) fees and costs related to the federal action and (2) fees and costs incurred in preparing and prosecuting their original and revised fee petitions.

ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the fee petitions of various Directors of the Terra Foundation. Those Directors are plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, non-party Directors Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, and defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. In total, fees in excess of $2,400,000 and costs in excess of $315,000 are sought herein.

These figures do not include fees and costs of counsel for the Terra Foundation and they do not include the fees and costs in the amount of $468,376.17 which were previously awarded to counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Court has received and reviewed Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz's Petition for Attorneys' Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order Entered July 26, 2001, the Supplemental Petition filed by those plaintiffs, the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, and the plaintiffs' Reply. Unredacted billing statements covering the period from September 18, 2000 through August 31, 2001 have also been reviewed.

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall have filed their Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs together with unredacted billing statements covering the period from January 26, 2001 through September 10, 2001. That Petition together with the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been reviewed by the Court.

On behalf of defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker five additional fee petitions have been filed and reviewed. They are: 1) the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs filed by Verner Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered; 2) an Amended Petition for Fees and Costs filed by Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; 3) the Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs filed by Kellogg, Huber, Hanson, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; 4) the Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses; and 5) the Petition for Fees and Expenses filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. The unredacted billing statements filed in support of these petitions cover the period from May 18, 2001 through August 31, 2001.

In connection with the defendant Directors' fee petitions, the Court has also received and the reviewed the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not in Connection with this Lawsuit, the Reply Memorandum of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and the Terra Foundation's Reply Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Reject. For the period from May 18, 2001 through June 29, 2001, the Court re-reviewed Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Petition for Fees and Costs regarding communications between the departing Shefsky firm and the appearance of the Verner, Bellows and Kellogg firms.

In reviewing all of the pending fee petitions, the Court has reviewed all affidavits and exhibits submitted. The Court compared the fee requests herein with the Billing Statements Submitted to the Terra Foundation by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, covering the period from September 21, 2000 through July 31, 2001, and with the Shefsky and Froelich bills covering the period October 8, 2000 through June 21, 2001. The Court also reviewed its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file. The Court entertained oral argument on the fee petitions on January 15, 2002, and reviewed and considered the proposed orders and/or proposed findings of fact submitted by parties.

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving all issues in this case with the exception of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. As part of the mediated settlement of this case the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." This Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees which were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to the Quinlan and Carroll invoices and the McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

This was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. There was extensive motion practice and multiple appeals. Over thirty court sessions, many of them lengthy, were held prior to the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. The more complex of the issues involved related to special litigation committees, attorney ethics and disqualification, museum ethics, breaches of fiduciary duties, and the Attorney General's responsibilities in regard to charitable trusts and not-for-profit corporations. Many experts were retained and their opinions differed. Much out-of-state law was supplied and argued.

In reviewing the fee petitions this Court has considered, among other things, the magnitude and complexity of the case, the novelty and importance of the legal issues involved, the benefits conferred, the number of hours expended, the manner and tasks in which the time was expended, by whom the time was expended, the hourly rate charged by each person for a given task, the time required by other attorneys in the community to perform tasks of a comparable nature, the hourly fee charged for similar services by other attorneys with similar skills and qualifications, the degree to which the tasks performed contributed to the result obtained, and whether the fees have been paid by the clients. The Court has taken note that in regard to the Quinlan & Carroll bills and the McDermott, Will & Emery bills, the Attorney General has not objected to the requested fees and costs. The Court has also noted that the fee petitions of those firms are not inconsistent with the bills of Sidley and Austin submitted to, and presumably paid by, the Foundation. (This Court has not approved the bills of the Foundation's counsel).

Notwithstanding the lack of an objection from the Attorney General, this Court believes that certain of the fees and costs submitted by the Quinlan and McDermott firms should not be approved, particularly considering that charitable funds are involved here. [The Court agrees with current counsel for the Foundation that "(t)he Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation."] As to attorneys' time entries in the Quinlan & Carroll petition, these include multiple entries for duplicative and excessive billing for four partners (at their respective hourly rates) and for one associate (at a blended rate of $180), totaling $421,200. That figure includes a reduction of $4,700 in fees incurred after the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order which were reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice. Finally, the Court has determined that $10,166.25 was billed in connection with the federal court litigation and that that amount should be excluded. As to costs, the Court has granted all costs with the exception of an expert witness fee reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice and with the exception of all costs incurred for the public relations firm of Kemper Lesnik.

The McDermott Will & Emery fees are approved herein, eliminating the fees and costs for "Terra II" and $1,980.00 in fees for the federal action. The costs relating to "Terra I" are approved.

This Court is not able to adjudicate at this time the five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In order to do so, this Court needs to receive revised fee petitions from any of the five firms who may wish to provide them. The revised fee petitions should eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). The revised fee petitions should be supported by affidavits of counsel and/or the defendant Directors which should include the following: 1) the dates counsel was retained; 2) the reason for the retention of the additional counsel; 3) if applicable, the dates counsel was discharged or withdrew and the reason for the discharge or withdrawal; 4) the dates and manner in which any counsel of record in this case was advised that additional counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson had been retained; 5) the dates and manner of first communication with the firm of Shefsky and Froelich about additional representation for defendant Directors in this case; 6) the dates on which any parties to the mediated settlement were first advised that defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson would be seeking fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order for fees for any firm other than Shefsky and Froelich; 7) all attempts to avoid duplication of effort between former and new counsel; and 8) a statement as to when and how much of the attorneys' fees and costs set forth in the revised fee petitions have been paid to date. In regard to the Verner Liipfert firm, an explanation should be given of the $35,000 notation regarding Bellows and Bellows which appears on the summary of invoices and the $25,000 cost entry to Bellows and Bellows for professional services which appears in Invoice No. 183977.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit is granted.

2. Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $1,172,182.00 and costs in the amount of $162,768.65, for a total award of $1,334,950.65 .

3. Directors Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $35,026.25 and costs in the amount of $768.16, for a total award of $35,794.41.

4. Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson have 28 days to file revised fee petitions and supporting affidavits as set forth above. No additional briefing will be entertained.

5. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

No. 00CH 13859

Judge D.K. Kinnaird

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S
OBJECTIONS TO THE AMENDED FEE PETITIONS

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") respectfully submits its objections to the amended fee petitions submitted by certain of the attorneys for defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

BACKGROUND

In the initial proceedings before this Court regarding the award of attorneys' fees, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") raised only one concern regarding the several fee petitions before this Court: that no director be awarded attorneys' fees in this proceeding for work done in connection with different – albeit related – lawsuits. The Court agreed with the Foundation stating:

> The Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees that were not incurred in this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook County Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to Quinlan and Carroll invoices and McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' (Tucker, Terra and Simpson) attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

(Exh. A, Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, 3/13/02, at 3-4.) Accordingly, the Court ordered the attorneys for the defendant directors to submit revised fee petitions "eliminat[ing] all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112)." (Exh. A at 5.)

However, in their revised fee petitions, filed on April 24, 2002, certain of the attorneys for the defendant directors failed to comply with the Court's express directive "to eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) . . . ." (Exh. A at 5.) Incredibly, one of the petitioner law firms (Verner, Liipert Bernard McPherson & Hand) failed to take make any reduction in its fee request for fees related to the federal action. Two other fee petitions (Kellogg, Huber et al. and Bellows & Bellows) made some adjustment to their fee petitions, but still seek significant amounts of fees related to that lawsuit in clear contravention of this Court's Order.

16di-003123

ARGUMENT

I. THIS COURT SHOULD DENY THE PETITIONERS' CONTINUED REQUEST FOR REIMBURSEMENT FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES RELATED TO THE FEDERAL ACTION.

"It is well established that a party seeking to recover attorneys' fees from another party bears the burden of presenting sufficient evidence from which the trial court can render a decision as to their reasonableness." Prior Plumbing and Heating Co. v. Hagins, 258 Ill. App. 3d 683, 630 N.E.2d 1208 (1st Dist. 1994). Accordingly, under this Court's March 13th order, each of the petitioner law firms bears the burden of demonstrating that the fees sought in their amended fee petitions were not incurred in connection with either the federal action (No. 01 C 4976) or the Law Division action (01 L 9112) now pending before Judge Nowicki. (Exh. A at 5.) However, certain of the petitioner law firms (Verner et al., Kellogg et al., and Bellows & Bellows, collectively "the petitioner law firms") fall well short of sustaining that burden with respect to a substantial amount of the fees and costs sought in the revised fee petitions. In fact, those firms' own submissions clearly indicate that a substantial portion of the fees and costs sought in the amended petitions relate to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976).

Indeed, the record is clear that on June 22, 2001, the three petitioner law firms began work on a Complaint and a Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to halt a scheduled meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors to vote on the proposed settlement agreement. (Garment Aff. ¶ 28.[1]) On June 28, 2001, the three petitioner law firms, on behalf of defendant directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson, filed their complaint and motion for TRO in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. (Id. ¶ 33.) The motion was denied and the complaint was dismissed that same day. At that point (June 29, 2001), the defendant directors sought emergency relief in this lawsuit.

[1] The Garment Affidavit is attached to the revised fee petitions of both the Verner firm and the Kellogg firm as Exhibit A.

16di-003124

Given this record, the only reasonable inference is that all fees and costs incurred by the petitioner law firms between the dates of June 22 and June 28, 2001 were related to the federal action. Indeed, at a minimum, the three petitioner law firms – in clear contravention of this Court's order -- have made little, if any, effort to segregate and disclaim fees incurred during that time period that were related to the federal action. Because it is the petitioners' burden to prove that those fees were not related to the federal action and because they have not – and indeed cannot – do(ne) so, this Court should reject the three petitioner law firms' request for all fees and costs related to the federal action.[2]

First, despite this Court's express instructions, the Verner firm made no adjustment to its fee petition to account for work on the federal action and instead continues to seek all $27,939.50 in fees incurred by that firm from June 22 to June 28 (including, presumably, the time Mr. Garment spent in federal court on June 28).

[2] Although it is not entirely clear from the papers, the petitioner firms appear to be arguing that they are entitled to compensation for most of the work performed on the federal case because they did not decide until the filing date whether they were going to file their motion for TRO in this case or as part of a separate federal action. (Garment Aff. ¶ 33.) Even if this were true, given the defendant directors' ultimate decision to file their papers first in the federal case, all fees incurred in preparing those papers can only be construed as incurred in connection with the federal lawsuit and thus outside of this Court's March 13th Order. Moreover, this assertion is belied by the petitioner firms' own submissions. Specifically, the Bellows firm time entries reveal that on June 22, 2001 the focus was already on a federal cause of action (42 U.S.C. § 1983). The Bellows entries further indicate that the decision to file in federal court was – at the latest – made by June 25, 2001.

Moreover, the Verner firm also seeks reimbursement of $12,950.41 in costs without providing the Court or the Foundation any way to determine which of those costs relate to the federal action. Accordingly, this Court should reject the Verner's firm request for at least the foregoing $40,889.91 in fees and costs.[3]

Second, the Kellogg firm deducted only $25,939.59 from its original fee petition to account for fees and costs related to the federal action. However, as stated above, the Kellogg firm began work on the federal complaint and TRO on June 22 and continued such work through the date of the federal court hearing (June 28) and during that time incurred much more that $25,939.59 in fees and costs. (See Kellogg Invoices, attached to revised fee petitions.) In fact, between June 22 and June 28, the Kellogg firm incurred $90,095 in attorneys' fees and $10,060.39 in costs (a total of $100,155.39).[4] Accordingly, this Court should reject the Kellogg's firm request for the $100,155.39 of fees and costs it seeks related to the federal action.[5]

Finally, like the Kellogg firm, Bellows & Bellows still seeks fees related to the federal action. Specifically, the Bellows firm asserts that only $5,972.50 in fees and $400 in costs sought in it original fee petition related to the federal action. However, between June 22 and June 28, the Bellows firm incurred $24,736 in fees and $726.25 in costs. In fact, on June 27 and 28 (the day of the federal hearing) alone, the Bellows firm incurred over $10,000 in fees. Accordingly, taking into account the $6,372.50 reduction already made by the Bellows firm, this Court should reject the additional $19,089.75

[3] Assuming that the Court determines the remainder of the fees sought by the Verner firm to be reasonable, this reduction would result in a total award to the Verner firm of $109,475.

[4] Certain costs incurred by the Kellogg firm on June 28, 2001 and included in the above number are found on the July 2001 invoice.

[5] Assuming the Court determines that the remainder of the Kellogg firm's fee request is reasonable, this reduction ($100,155.39) and the reduction for fees the Kellogg firm admits were incurred in the second state court action ($37,299.40) would result in a total award to the Kellogg firm of $254,651.87.

((24,736 + 726.25) - 6,372.50) in fees and costs that firm continues to seek for work related to the federal action.[6]

II. THIS COURT SHOULD REJECT PETITIONERS' REQUEST FOR FEES INCURRED IN PREPARING THEIR FEE PETITIONS.

The Foundation further requests that the Court rule that the petitioner law firms are not entitled to reimbursement for fees incurred in preparing their fee petitions. At this juncture, only the Bellows firm is seeking fees for work on their original and revised fee petitions; however, the other petitioner law firms have indicated that they plan to return to the Court at a later date to such seek fees.

In Illinois, the general rule is that where attorneys' fees are authorized pursuant to a fee-shifting statute, the party seeking fees may recover its fees and costs incurred in preparing and prosecuting its fee petition. However, in "common fund" cases, the party seeking fees is not entitled to reimbursement for the services performed in pursuing its fees. See Baksinski v. Northwestern Univ., 231 Ill. App. 3d 7, 18 (1st Dist. 1992). The rationale for this rule is that the services performed in pursuit of fees were not performed for the benefit of the fund. Id. at 14.

This case is neither a fee-shifting case nor a "common fund" case. However, given that this case involves charitable funds, the rule applying to "common fund" cases should be applied here. Indeed, just as public policy dictates that a "common fund" should not be depleted due to fee litigation, it also dictates that the charitable assets of the Terra Foundation should not be further depleted due to fee litigation.

[6] Assuming that the Court determines the remainder of the fees sought by the Bellows firm to be reasonable, this reduction would result in a total fee award of $49,283.75. As discussed infra, the Foundation also objects to the Bellows firm's request for reimbursement of fees related to its fee petitions; in the event the Court agrees with the Foundation's positions, the Bellows firm's total awarded will be reduced further. See infra note 7.

Accordingly, the Foundation respectfully requests that the Court disallow all requests for fees sought by the petitioner law firms (now or in the future) for work related to the fee petitions as it cannot reasonably be argued that such work was done for the benefit of the Foundation.

Specifically, the Bellows firm seeks $8,992.75 in fees and $393.53 in costs for work done after July 31, 2001, all of which related to its original and revised fee petitions. Accordingly, in addition to the reduction sought above to account for fees relating to the federal case, the Foundation requests that this Court also reject the additional $9386.28 in fees in costs sought by the Bellows firm for work on its fee petitions.[7]

[7] This adjustment would reduce the Bellows firm's total award to $39,897.47.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court disallow the petitioner law firms' requests for (1) fees and costs related to the federal action and (2) fees and costs incurred in preparing and prosecuting their original and revised fee petitions.

Respectfully submitted,

THE TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex. rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff-Intervenor, v. JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN K. SIMPSON, Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts; and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, Defendants.	Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the fee petitions of various Directors of the Terra Foundation. Those Directors are plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, non-party Directors Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, and defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. In total, fees in excess of $2,400,000 and costs in excess of $315,000 are sought herein.

These figures do not include fees and costs of counsel for the Terra Foundation and they do not include the fees and costs in the amount of $468,376.17 which were previously awarded to counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Court has received and reviewed Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz's Petition for Attorneys' Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order Entered July 26, 2001, the Supplemental Petition filed by those plaintiffs, the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, and the plaintiffs' Reply. Unredacted billing statements covering the period from September 18, 2000 through August 31, 2001 have also been reviewed.

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall have filed their Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs together with unredacted billing statements covering the period from January 26, 2001 through September 10, 2001. That Petition together with the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been reviewed by the Court.

On behalf of defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker five additional fee petitions have been filed and reviewed. They are: 1) the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs filed by Verner Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered; 2) an Amended Petition for Fees and Costs filed by Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; 3) the Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs filed by Kellogg, Huber, Hanson, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; 4) the Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses; and 5) the Petition for Fees and Expenses filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. The unredacted billing statements filed in support of these petitions cover the period from May 18, 2001 through August 31, 2001.

In connection with the defendant Directors' fee petitions, the Court has also received and the reviewed the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not in Connection with this Lawsuit, the Reply Memorandum of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and the Terra Foundation's Reply Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Reject. For the period from May 18, 2001 through June 29, 2001, the Court re-reviewed Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Petition for Fees and Costs regarding communications between the departing Shefsky firm and the appearance of the Verner, Bellows and Kellogg firms.

In reviewing all of the pending fee petitions, the Court has reviewed all affidavits and exhibits submitted. The Court compared the fee requests herein with the Billing Statements Submitted to the Terra Foundation by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, covering the period from September 21, 2000 through July 31, 2001, and with the Shefsky and Froelich bills covering the period October 8, 2000 through June 21, 2001. The Court also reviewed its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file. The Court entertained oral argument on the fee petitions on January 15, 2002, and reviewed and considered the proposed orders and/or proposed findings of fact submitted by parties.

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving all issues in this case with the exception of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. As part of the mediated settlement of this case the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." This Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees which were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to the Quinlan and Carroll invoices and the McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

This was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. There was extensive motion practice and multiple appeals. Over thirty court sessions, many of them lengthy, were held prior to the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. The more complex of the issues involved related to special litigation committees, attorney ethics and disqualification, museum ethics, breaches of fiduciary duties, and the Attorney General's responsibilities in regard to charitable trusts and not-for-profit corporations. Many experts were retained and their opinions differed. Much out-of-state law was supplied and argued.

In reviewing the fee petitions this Court has considered, among other things, the magnitude and complexity of the case, the novelty and importance of the legal issues involved, the benefits conferred, the number of hours expended, the manner and tasks in which the time was expended, by whom the time was expended, the hourly rate charged by each person for a given task, the time required by other attorneys in the community to perform tasks of a comparable nature, the hourly fee charged for similar services by other attorneys with similar skills and qualifications, the degree to which the tasks performed contributed to the result obtained, and whether the fees have been paid by the clients. The Court has taken note that in regard to the Quinlan & Carroll bills and the McDermott, Will & Emery bills, the Attorney General has not objected to the requested fees and costs. The Court has also noted that the fee petitions of those firms are not inconsistent with the bills of Sidley and Austin submitted to, and presumably paid by, the Foundation. (This Court has not approved the bills of the Foundation's counsel).

Notwithstanding the lack of an objection from the Attorney General, this Court believes that certain of the fees and costs submitted by the Quinlan and McDermott firms should not be approved, particularly considering that charitable funds are involved here. [The Court agrees with current counsel for the Foundation that "(t)he Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation."] As to attorneys' time entries in the Quinlan & Carroll petition, these include multiple entries for duplicative and excessive billing for four partners (at their respective hourly rates) and for one associate (at a blended rate of $180), totaling $421,200. That figure includes a reduction of $4,700 in fees incurred after the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order which were reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice. Finally, the Court has determined that $10,166.25 was billed in connection with the federal court litigation and that that amount should be excluded. As to costs, the Court has granted all costs with the exception of an expert witness fee reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice and with the exception of all costs incurred for the public relations firm of Kemper Lesnik.

The McDermott Will & Emery fees are approved herein, eliminating the fees and costs for "Terra II" and $1,980.00 in fees for the federal action. The costs relating to "Terra I" are approved.

This Court is not able to adjudicate at this time the five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In order to do so, this Court needs to receive revised fee petitions from any of the five firms who may wish to provide them. The revised fee petitions should eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). The revised fee petitions should be supported by affidavits of counsel and/or the defendant Directors which should include the following: 1) the dates counsel was retained; 2) the reason for the retention of the additional counsel; 3) if applicable, the dates counsel was discharged or withdrew and the reason for the discharge or withdrawal; 4) the dates and manner in which any counsel of record in this case was advised that additional counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson had been retained; 5) the dates and manner of first communication with the firm of Shefsky and Froelich about additional representation for defendant Directors in this case; 6) the dates on which any parties to the mediated settlement were first advised that defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson would be seeking fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order for fees for any firm other than Shefsky and Froelich; 7) all attempts to avoid duplication of effort between former and new counsel; and 8) a statement as to when and how much of the attorneys' fees and costs set forth in the revised fee petitions have been paid to date. In regard to the Verner Liipfert firm, an explanation should be given of the $35,000 notation regarding Bellows and Bellows which appears on the summary of invoices and the $25,000 cost entry to Bellows and Bellows for professional services which appears in Invoice No. 183977.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit is granted.

2. Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $1,172,182.00 and costs in the amount of $162,768.65, for a total award of $1,334,950.65 .

3. Directors Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $35,026.25 and costs in the amount of $768.16, for a total award of $35,794.41.

16di-003136

4. Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson have 28 days to file revised fee petitions and supporting affidavits as set forth above. No additional briefing will be entertained.

5. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE RECORD ON APPEAL

Plaintiffs-Appellants, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, ("Plaintiffs") by their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll Ltd., hereby move this Court for a 60-day extension of time, through and including August 13, 2002, within which to file the record on appeal in connection with this appeal. In support of their motion, Plaintiffs submit the attached affidavit of William R. Quinlan (Exhibit A) and state as follows:

1. On March 13, 2002, the circuit court entered an order denying a portion of the attorneys fees and costs sought by the Plaintiffs in connection with the Consent Judgment and Order entered in this matter.

2. On April 12, 2002, the Plaintiffs filed their notice of appeal, appealing the portion of the March 13, 2002 order which denied those attorneys fees and costs.

3. The Record on Appeal in connection with Plaintiffs' appeal is presently due to be filed on June 14, 2002. However, as set forth in the attached affidavit of William R. Quinlan (Exhibit A), despite the diligent efforts of counsel, the Plaintiffs will require an additional 60 days, through and including August 13, 2002, in which to have the record on appeal prepared and filed with the Court. The office of the Official Court Reporter has not completed preparation of the transcripts in this matter and the record on appeal has not yet been prepared by the Clerk of the Circuit Court.

4. This is the Plaintiffs' first request for an extension of time, and this request is made in good faith and not for the purpose of delay.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs-Appellants, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, hereby request a 60-day extension of time in which to file their record on appeal, through and including August 13, 2002.

AFFIDAVIT OF WILLIAM R. QUINLAN

William R. Quinlan, being duly sworn, states as follows:

1. I am one of the attorneys of record for Plaintiffs-Appellants Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz. I am lead counsel responsible for this appeal on behalf of the Plaintiffs-Appellants.

2. This affidavit is submitted in connection with Plaintiffs-Appellants' Motion for Extension of Time to File Record on Appeal.

3. Despite diligent efforts of counsel, the record on appeal in this matter is not yet prepared and ready to be filed. The Plaintiffs-Appellants' have ordered transcripts and have requested that the record be prepared by the circuit court clerk. At present, several of the transcripts are still outstanding and the record cannot be prepared without those transcripts.

4. In addition, an independent appeal has been filed by the director defendants challenging the entry of the Consent Judgement and Order entered in this case. That appeal is No. 1-01-3152. The various appellants are making efforts to cooperate with regard to the preparation of the record and to avoid duplicative records on appeal. Because of this additional element, namely the multiple appeals pending, preparation of the record may take additional time.

5. The Plaintiffs-Appellants are seeking an additional 60 days within which to have the record on appeal prepared and filed. The Office of the Official Court Reporter at this time could not provide us with a date by which the transcripts will be completed. For that reason, we have asked for 60 days in which to provide sufficient time for the Official Court Reporter to complete those transcripts.

6. This request for an extension of time is made in good faith and not for the purpose of delay.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OBJECTION TO THE POST TRIAL FURTHER SUBMISSIONS AND FILINGS OF DEFENDANT DIRECTORS AND MOTION TO STRIKE AND HOLD THE POST TRIAL FILINGS AND AFFIDAVITS SUBMITTED BY DEFENDANTS TERRA, TUCKER AND SIMPSON VOID AND A NULLITY

NOW COMES the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, and objects to the post trial admission of further evidence contained in the several further submissions and filings by the defendant directors relative to their fee petitions and the Attorney General further moves to strike and hold as a nullity said filings and submissions and specifically the affidavit of Leonard Garment which was filed herein after the close of the evidence and argument on the fee petitions , and in support states as follows:

1) After the close of the evidence and trial herein , the defendant directors have now made several filings as purported supplements and proofs relative to their Petition for Attorney Fees. The Plaintiff People object to such post trial submission made by defendant directors after the proofs closed and the parties had concluded argument. The Attorney General further moves to strike said submissions and seeks that they be held as a nullity as such is untimely, inadmissible conjecture, hearsay and not properly considered as evidence herein .

2) Six separate attorney fee petitions were filed by the individual defendant directors seeking an award of attorney fees from the Terra Foundation which on their face claim fees from the Terra Foundation under both the court's order herein and under the not for profit corporation act and the Foundation's bylaws. These several fee petitions were filed last September 2001, and those petitions were joined at issue by filings of the Attorney General. The process for resolution of said fees, acquiesced to by all parties , was a trial on the facts contained in the papers , the facts of record and the argument of parties from those papers.

3) The submission of facts, argument and hearing on all of the defendant directors' fee petitions occurred and concluded on January 15, 2002. The defendant directors had every opportunity to submit affidavits and evidence then if they so saw fit. After the close of argument the Court issued its order ruling on certain fees on March 13, 2002.

4) In relevant part the Court also stated in its March 13,2002 order that the five additional fee petitions and the evidence relative thereto that had been submitted by the defendant directors seeking fees for the five new law firms were insufficient to allow the court to reach an adjudication on the additional five fee petitions submitted by the defendant directors. The court in sum states that after a full hearing the defendants had failed to submit proper and complete proofs to establish or show any entitlement to fees for the services of those five additional firms.

5) . The court had previously awarded $500,000 in fees on the defendant directors fee petition for fees payable to Shefsky & Froelich . The court in the March 13, 2002 order , however, provided that the defendant directors could amend the fee petitions and proofs to provide specific additional information. The Court explained these additional materials might allow the court to further consider and rule upon said fee requests. The Court , however, also stated in said order that no additional briefing by other parties will be entertained. A copy of the court's March 13, 2002 order is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

6) Since March 13, 2002 the defendant directors filed amended fee petitions for the fees sought for the firms of : Cummins & Cronin LLC, Bellows & Bellows, Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, and Verner, Liipert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered. Said filings were accompanied by what is entitled an affidavit of Laurel Bellows and also an affidavit of Declaration of Leonard Garment, which attaches his exhibits B through K . On May 21, 2002 a further and yet additional supplement was made by the defendant directors.

7) These filings are post trial after the close of proofs and while the court invited a limited further explanation of facts, these additional filings are far beyond what the court order provided and are an attempt by defendants to unfairly submit additional purported evidence inappropriately after the proofs have closed. In addition , the purported facts are substantially inadmissible hearsay and in significant part erroneous and certainly disputed. Specifically, the Declaration of Leonard Garment in the main misrepresents the facts and events in this case and it is substantially inadmissible inappropriate hearsay which exceeds this court's permitted additions. Defendant directors have taken excessive liberty with the court's very limited order and their submissions are unfair and inappropriate.

8) The additional information supplied by these defendants is erroneous and works an unfair advantage upon the People of the State of Illinois and the People object to the defendant directors conduct and state it is not right that such be filed after the proofs were closed.

9) Plaintiff People hereby move to strike and bar all of said additional materials filed by defendant directors and state that the proofs were closed and the matter went to hearing and was completed and that the People have not had an opportunity to dispute the incorrect facts set forth by the defendants, and that the process intended by the Court for a straightforward simple answer to several questions was abused by the defendant directors in these submissions.

10) The People would not and do not object to simple answers to the straight forward questions poised by the court in its March 13, 2002 order, except the People do object and do not believe it fair or appropriate for the defendants to be able to call into question the propriety of any Shefsky & Froelich services or in any way suggest that those services were not fully and properly performed. The defendant directors are estopped from raising issue with those fees, they submitted those services for payment and did not raise issue with a single hour for which fees were sought , and took the funds for those services from charity. The People specifically raised the issue in it filings herein relative to the fees, raising the issue in light in the change of counsel and the lack of time of record relative to new counsel debriefing former counsel. The People raised and urged that the defendants be required to explain any dissatisfaction with any services before any payments were made. The defendant directors stood silent and received full fees for the Shefsky firm payable from charity funds. As a matter of law the defendant directors have vouched for said services of Shefsky & Froelich and can not now suggest otherwise and such stricken.

11) The courts order of March 13, 2002 which allowed a further supplement of a few facts after the close of the hearing and argument, expressly denies the parties the right to further briefing, but these defendant directors have gone too far and have abused the court's limited opening of proofs.

In what the defendant directors filed, they take new positions, submit inaccurate facts, call into question the services of Shefsky & Froelich (now after those fees have been paid) and allows the defendant directors to distort this record with these inaccurate supplements. Moreover these defendants have filed a motion in the appellate court seeking more time, stating they plan to add these additional filings to the record on appeal, a copy of said motion is attached as Exhibit B.

12) The Court's order of March 13, 2002, ordered no further briefing , but given the actions of the defendant directors, the Plaintiff People respectfully assert a right to respond and protect the record, what was filed by the defendant directors exceeds what the court order allowed, and to allow it to go unchallenged would work an unfairness upon the People.

13) In, Exchange National Bank of Chicago v. Eugene Heller et al.(1st. Dist.,1975) 26 Ill. App. 3d 675; 325 N.E.2d 328, 334; 1975 Ill. App. LEXIS 1949 the Illinois Appellate Court sets forth the well established legal principles applicable hereto stating:

" Once a case has been closed the decision as to whether a party may reopen the proceeding to introduce further testimony is within the sound discretion of the trial court. This decision will not be upset by a reviewing court unless it appears that discretion was clearly abused and that [*683] failure to reopen proofs resulted in substantial [334] injustice. Department of Public Works v. First National Bank, 61 Ill.App.2d 78, 209 N.E.2d 21; Country Life Insurance Co. v. Goffinet, 117 Ill.App.2d 338, 254 N.E.2d 281.) While such discretion should be exercised liberally where evidence was not accessible or was inadvertently overlooked, it should never be exercised to promote or countenance unfairness in the conduct of a trial. (Herricks v. Chicago & E.I.R.R. Co., 257 Ill. 264, 100 N.E. 897.) Thus, if the proof offered is of such a character that it could have been produced at [15] an earlier time, a court will not be deemed to have abused its discretion in denying its introduction into evidence."

14) This court's order allowing limited further proofs was a proper exercise of discretion, however, as the facts argued herein show the defendant directors have abused the court's order and have unfairly attempted to insert inaccurate untested hearsay into the record. This court has the clear authority and obligation to assure the opening of the proofs is not abused. In, Rosehill Cemetery

Co. v. City of Chicago, 352 Ill 11, 185 NE 170, (1933) the Illinois Supreme Court sets forth guiding parameters of opening up a case for additional evidence stating:

" The matter of the order of proof and allowing a case to be opened up for taking further evidence rests in the sound judicial discretion of the court and should not be interfered with except for clear abuse, as where its effect is to countenance or aid trickery or unfairness on the part of counsel in the trial of a case. (People v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Co. 278 Ill. 25; Brelsford v. Community High School District, 328 id. 27.)"

15) This court's order of March 13, 2002 sought simple direct responses and the defendant directors have abused the court's order. The Plaintiff People of the State of Illinois therefore have responded objecting and fear to not respond and move to strike would serve as a waiver.

16) The most serious violation comes from the affidavit of Leonard Garment, who makes erroneous hearsay statements about facts taking place before he was in the case and about matters of which he has no personal knowledge. Declarant Leonard Garment submits his Declaration containing inadmissible hearsay, misstatements of facts, and distortions of the record, accompanied by select documents taken out of context and untested in foundation or accuracy. These matters being submitted after the close of the proofs left unrebutted is an unfairness.

17) The Declaration of Leonard Garment is not only an impermissible post-trial submission of purported further facts, but it fails to meet the requirements for submitting facts upon affidavit (See Supreme Court Rule 191). Said Declaration should be stricken in its entirety because the affidavit is not stated on personal knowledge, much of it is hearsay, it purports to relate facts which were done by others outside the presence of the declarant , it lacks foundation for its numerous claims of fact, it is clearly inaccurate speculation in many regards, and it misstate facts. Some of the misstatements are known to this Court and involve matters in the presence of this Court, but are not documented in this record. Without dwelling on all of such, the following are some, but not all, of the deficiencies and errors of said submission.

18) In paragraph 4, on page 3, Garment's Declaration states facts of which he has no personal knowledge, provides a list of inaccurate thoughts, and makes the untrue statement that the defendant directors' interim petition for "the Shefsky (firms) fees was bound up with the successful termination of the mediation process". Also in paragraph 4 the declarant uses the words "unlawful" and "improper acts", to ascribe conduct, but fails to supply any bases in fact or law for those conclusions and claims, and uses such throughout to invent the argument the settlement was wrongful, when in fact it was the will of the majority of board members and nothing has been shown that shows otherwise.

19) Paragraph 5 appears to provide a date in mid-May when declarant undertook to represent Mrs. Terra. The fact that any of the new firms were rendering service came to the notice of plaintiff when the federal lawsuit was filed end of June with the tender of the federal lawsuit.

20) Paragraph 8, on page 5, contains hearsay and purported facts without foundation and runs to contentions that are clearly disputed and substantially denied by the plaintiffs, but are no longer at issue, and the People believe are submitted for the inappropriate purpose of using such in the upcoming appeal.

21) In paragraph 9 and 10 the declarant simply manufactures and misstates facts . Declarant Garment was not present or involved when the parties entered into mediation nor during the many months it was conducted. It was the declarant's clients the individual defendants and not the Attorney General who sought the agreements of the parties and the Court to enter into court ordered mediation. As the record shows the Declarant chose not to debrief the Shefsky firm, which firm had represented his clients through the litigation during mediation, had he done so he would have known what actually occurred.. Clearly the Declarant Garment has no first hand knowledge of what the Shefsky firm advised or did. Also contrary to Garment's claim no papers were sealed in mediation except mediation proposals. Also there were no secrets hidden as he suggests. Moreover, it was his clients that sought mediation. Claiming the process of mediation was wrongful conduct by others is simply, unfair and inaccurate. Declarant Garment is correct that it was his clients the individual defendants that made the requirement of releases for all the directors a part of any mediation discussion , his use of such as a claim that others sought such as a self serving benefit is erroneous and contrary to the terms all agreed to in starting mediation, and as set forth in the mediation order, that mediation efforts would not be used against anyone. In addition, the declaration also purports to argue that what was stated in mediation by Sidley & Austin is fact , it is not. B oth are hearsay, and not admissible.

22) The defendant directors claim in their filings that the People engaged in a wrongful act in maintaining a firm position in mediation asserting that to be a wrongful act. Interestingly in paragraph 10 Garment shows and admits by such that the defendants' counsel Sidley & Austin took a hard line negotiation position in mediation in opposition to that of the People of the State of Illinois, seeking that the plaintiffs simply dismiss their case. The defendant directors in theses filings tell a story , that in mediation, the plaintiffs and the Attorney General took aggressive positions and stuck with those positions. The defendant directors are complaining the plaintiffs did not agree in mediation simply to dismiss their complaints and the defendant directors thought they should prevail, but none of which makes any legal sense when placed in full context, Garment's statements are inaccurate and incomplete.

23) In paragraph 11 , 12 , 13 and 14, the declarant Garment asserts inaccurate hearsay about facts of which he does not have personal knowledge and the statements are made without foundation. Garment was not involved in the mediation process, and he is misstating the process and events. The Attorney General as a plaintiff in the matter clearly had a right to have a role, once mediation was started. The declaration in general and at paragraph 12 is made to manufacture a story in the record that the Shefsky firm did not act as directed by the defendants and were effected by non-payment of fees. That story is not present in the facts of record, and the proofs are closed. Indeed the defendant directors vouched for all of the Shefsky firms services and fees. If these issues existed relative to the Shefsky services they were required to be raised in the case when that firms fees were presented to the court. These defendant directors owed fiduciary duties to question inappropriate services. They did not raise questions. The idea that the Shefsky firm compromised their representation, would surely be adamantly denied by the Shefsky firm, and was not observed by the People. The entire idea of the unpaid fees being an issue is belied by the defendant directors admission that while they apparently would not pay the Shefsky firm, they have purportedly paid current counsel $400,000 (See Garments Declaration at page 19), therefore any anxiety created in not paying the Shefsky firm was of defendant directors doing or did not exist at all. In the end, the only proper presumption flowing from the defendant directors conduct and actions prior to the proofs closing is that all of the Shefsky services were properly rendered.

24) In paragraph 17 the declarant Garment begins with a date of June 8 and makes hearsay statements about a number of people thoughts at that time. Declarant then mis-states facts by implying that thereafter the Attorney General circulated a document about Mr. Stebbins. In fact that is erroneous, as the record from July 2001 shows. The record shows the case was in litigation in January 2001, and certain issues were about to be subject to a hearing , when the individual defendants asked that the matter go to mediation. Weeks after mediation began the parties were far apart, the Sidley & Austin settlement demands referenced by Garment were not accepted by the plaintiffs and mediation seemed unlikely. As the Sidley firm had circulated materials urging its position, so to did the plaintiffs. At one point the Attorney General argued it had counter - arguments to much of the defendants claims stated by Sidley & Austin materials. The defendants asked the obvious, to explain. The further position of the People, was set forth in a draft amended complaint being prepared by the Attorney General. At the request of the parties the draft was confidentially shared with the parties in March 2001 not June 2001 as Garment suggests. It was shared at the request of the parties including his own clients' counsel. Indeed as everyone then involved knows, by March 2001 the matters about Stebbins were of record in prior filings. The matters in the draft amended complaint in discussion in mediation were the issue of settlor intent and the conduct of Dan Terra, which was set forth in that draft amended complaint. Moreover after the defendants received the draft amended complaint mediation continued.

25) In paragraphs 18 and 19 the declarant states hearsay and explains that on June 13 , 2001 some information was given to the Shefsky firm about other counsel wishing to join the case . What the declarant does not provide is when the Shefsky law firm learned of these purported concerns and activity by three new law firms. The declarant does not explain why he did not ask the Shefsky firm to explain these purported matters and concerns, or to meet and discuss the case. Instead the new law firms rendered hundreds of thousands of dollars of time , trying to learn what the Shefsky firm already knew. What the declaration shows is that the involvement of the new attorneys was not disclosed to the plaintiffs until the filing of the federal lawsuit and that the new attorneys guessed at or worked with inaccurate facts without gaining the information from the Shefsky firm.

26) In paragraph 20 and 21 the declarant provides hearsay contentions and then inaccurately states an administrative subpoena was issued after June 14, 2001. The record herein shows the administrative subpoena was issued at the end of May 2001 and was complied with by June 15 , 2001. Moreover the declarant overstates the scope and effect of such a subpoena and misstates its manner of delivery. Moreover such a subpoena is a lawful and legal activity, the declarant provides no bases to suggest it was unlawful. That subpoena concerned Ms. Marshall and as this records shows most importantly at no time was Ms. Marshall advised that she would receive any consideration for a change of her position. Nor was there consideration to be given to her.

27) In paragraph 22 the declarant provides hearsay and misstates that the parties were acceding to the Attorney General. What in fact occurred was that the majority of the board reached compromised terms with the plaintiffs. Garment was not present at any mediation matter, he is merely speculating and is misstating what occurred.

28) In paragraph 27 the declarant provides self serving contentions and misstatements. The declarant erroneously states that through end of June 2001 that the defendant directors had experienced a "complete absence of opportunity ... to adduce the evidence of Dan Terra's actual intent with respect to the Foundation". By June 2001 the defendant directors had spent almost $500,000 in legal fees, if there were such facts to gather and present the prior nine months was clearly the time during which these defendant directors had every opportunity to gather them. Declarants claims of this evidence is disputed, and his statement his client had no opportunity to gather such is simply a misrepresentation to this court.

29) In paragraph 27 through 34 the declarant admits that either all of the attorney time through June 28, 2001 was done in this matter or in federal court matter and all either prior to being admitted pro hac vice. In addition, the declarant explains that the federal case was dismissed, and the matter was never refiled in state court (the newest lawsuit was filed after the consent decree was entered) . The fact is the only services by the five new law firms were the unsuccessful federal case, the unsuccessful motion for restraining order on June 29 and the unsuccessful Objections to the settlement. The record shows the actual filings in this court prior to the consent decree by the five new law firms, who now seek in excess of $600,000 is less than 50 pages, and involved no formal discovery activities.

30) In paragraph 36 the declarant makes hearsay statements and suggests facts not within his knowledge and not of record, and he misstates the settlement as entered to be the Attorney

General's proposal. Mr. Garment was not involved in those matters and clearly is unaware of what took place. The actual settlement was a compromise settlement far from the original proposal of the Attorney General. In fact in many respects it models a settlement proposed by Ms. Marshall in May 2001 before she had been served with the administrative subpoena.

31) In paragraph 40 the declarant makes the specious statement that Mr. Perkins declined to testify under oath. The declarant fails to explain he had no right at that time to take that deposition. Garment's clients had no pleadings on file, no answer , no cause of action , the case was the subject of a motion to enter an agreed settlement. The record shows there was no lawful basis to then be seeking to take depositions of opposing counsel. However, out of courtesy a meeting to discuss the facts was held attended by Mr. Perkins, although by then both Ms. Marshall and Mr. Stebbins had explained they acted of free will , received no promises and had not been coerced. (While Mr. Garment makes reference to his co-counsel Mr. Longwell being at that meeting , as the record reflects from filings made in July 2001 , Mr. Longwell attempted to report the statements made at that meeting, but in several instances he misstated what had been stated by Mr. Perkins and all of that is disputed hearsay).

32) In paragraphs 45 -48 declarant seeks to introduce hearsay and to argue new matters. It appears to be an admission that the defendant directors were not directing Shefsky & Froelich and implies by hearsay that when the directors did not agree with the decisions and advice of Shefsky & Froelich, the defendant directors rather than discuss the issues with the Shefsky firm, and redirect the efforts of their counsels, the defendant directors instead, simply decided to talk to new counsel and at new counsel's assessment replaced the old counsel and set upon a new approach in the matter and incurred large attorney fees learning what the Shefsky firm already knew.

33) These amended filings do make several key admissions of fact. The Declaration does show and admit that much of the new firms services were done relative to matters in litigation in Illinois by attorneys without Illinois law licenses, critiquing efforts of Illinois counsel on Illinois litigation all prior to any of the several out of state law firms being admitted pro hac vice.

34) It has been explained in detail in this record that in doing trial preparation, an unrelated matter concerning Ms. Marshall was discovered and examined by the Attorney General. That matter was quickly resolved , no releases were needed , none were discussed or promised , and none were given. The attached Exhibit C , Bellows & Bellows time sheets which show and admit that the Bellows firm had several conversations with director Marshall on June 26 and June 27, 2001 and all prior to going to court on June 28, 2001 and all prior to the June 29, 2001 board meeting. The record does not contain the text of those discussions by Ms. Marshall with Bellows & Bellows counsel. The record made in July 2001 does contain the emphatic denial by Ms. Marshall which were taped and recorded at the June 29, 2002 board meeting, statements in which Ms. Marshall states that she was not intimidated, that she did not compromise her board duties for personal benefit or as part of settlement and that she was acting in the best interest of the Foundation.

35) Given that to date there is no detail in this record of the statements Ms. Marshall made to Bellows & Bellows in June 2001, common sense would suggest that those statements made by Ms. Marshall to the Bellows law firm counsel are not in conflict with what she stated on June 29, 2001. Indeed , if they had been in conflict, it would be completely frivolous for such to have remained undisclosed and not submitted in the filings made by the defendant directors as those filings have cost charity tens of thousands of dollars.

36) These most recent filings of defendant directors shows and admits that the defendant directors new law firms had interviewed Stephanie Marshall in June 2001 before the federal lawsuit was filed , and knowing her denial of self interest and intimidation still persisted in stating Ms. Marshall voted to protect her own interest and that she received consideration in exchange for her vote, when they had no evidence of such.

37) The claims that the pressures on Stebbins were unlawful are by the real facts complete fabrication and the Garment declaration spin is based upon hearsay and inaccuracies. These most recent filings show and admit that this new counsel erroneously failed to know that it was the defendant directors who sought mediation and sought the releases for all directors. The most recent filings show that the new counsel erroneously thought the Stebbins issues were raised after mediation started , when in fact they were fully of record when the defendant directors suggested mediation and when they sought the releases for all directors, including releases for themselves.

38) By filing the declaration of Garment the defendant directors attempt to take advantage of the court's limited order and also hope that due to time and the complexity of this matter they can shade and confuse the truth. All these filings can be used for is to show admissions that the defendant directors hired new counsel without basis and without the slightest concern for costs.

39) The gist of what is stated in these recent filings is that the defendant directors did not like the outcome of the mediation they requested and hired new counsel to litigate and try to derail settlement they initiated once they were not getting their way. To support the excessive fees the defendant directors now want to claim that they disagreed with the position their original attorneys took. The defendant directors secretly hired new counsel during mediation to explore and prepare for trial, but object that while they prepared for trial, the plaintiff People likewise continued to prepare for trial. The defendants chose to change counsel and did not supervise an exchange of information. Defendant allowed new counsel to proceed without the facts or details known by the Shefsky firm. As Garment's declaration shows and admits, he did not understand that it was his clients that sought mediation and releases for all directors. As the record reflects the Stebbins matters were all of record prior to mediation, there was nothing for Dr. Stebbins to hide by a settlement. The defendant directors' materials show they spoke with Ms. Marshall before any filings, and yet they proceeded with the filings claiming she had been coerced, when she stated freely and openly at the board meeting that she had not been coerced , that she chose to act of a free will and presumably so told Bellows & Bellows when they interviewed her before filing the lawsuits. (See Bellows time sheet June 26-27, 2001 , showing conversations with Ms. Marshall).

40) What these filings also shows is that the defendant directors sought mediation but had no intentions of compromise and though they recognized the Attorney General's position from the start of mediation was something they did not wish to agree to, they chose to keep discovery stayed and the parties in mediation for months , apparently while the defendants prepared their case without regard to cost. The defendant directors are trying to supplement this record with these impermissible filing and that is unfair and such must be stricken.

WHEREFORE the Plaintiff the People object and move to strike the post trial excessive additional filings of the defendant directors and specifically and including the affidavit of declarant Garment and the attachments thereto in their entirety for all of the foregoing reasons.

COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

DEAN L. BUNTROCK, and RONALD GIDWITZ, Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, Plaintiffs, v. JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN K. SIMPSON, Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts; NAFTALI MICHAELI, and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, Defendants.	No. 00 CH 13859

ORDER AWARDING ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the fee petitions of various Directors of the Terra Foundation. Those Directors are plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, non-party Directors Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, and defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. In total, fees in excess of $2,400,000 and costs in excess of $315,000 are sought herein.

EXHIBIT A

These figures do not include fees and costs of counsel for the Terra Foundation and they do not include the fees and costs in the amount of $468,376.17 which were previously awarded to counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Court has received and reviewed Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz's Petition for Attorneys' Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order Entered July 26, 2001, the Supplemental Petition filed by those plaintiffs, the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, and the plaintiffs' Reply. Unredacted billing statements covering the period from September 18, 2000 through August 31, 2001 have also been reviewed.

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall have filed their Petition for Reimbursement of Fees and Costs together with unredacted billing statements covering the period from January 26, 2001 through September 10, 2001. That Petition together with the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been reviewed by the Court.

On behalf of defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker five additional fee petitions have been filed and reviewed. They are: 1) the Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs filed by Verner Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered; 2) an Amended Petition for Fees and Costs filed by Bellows and Bellows, P.C.; 3) the Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs filed by Kellogg, Huber, Hanson, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.; 4) the Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses; and 5) the Petition for Fees and Expenses filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. The unredacted billing statements filed in support of these petitions cover the period from May 18, 2001 through August 31, 2001.

In connection with the defendant Directors' fee petitions, the Court has also received and the reviewed the Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not in Connection with this Lawsuit, the Reply Memorandum of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and the Terra Foundation's Reply Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Reject. For the period from May 18, 2001 through June 29, 2001, the Court re-reviewed Shefsky & Froelich Ltd.'s Petition for Fees and Costs regarding communications between the departing Shefsky firm and the appearance of the Verner, Bellows and Kellogg firms.

In reviewing all of the pending fee petitions, the Court has reviewed all affidavits and exhibits submitted. The Court compared the fee requests herein with the Billing Statements Submitted to the Terra Foundation by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, covering the period from September 21, 2000 through July 31, 2001, and with the Shefsky and Froelich bills covering the period October 8, 2000 through June 21, 2001. The Court also reviewed its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file. The Court entertained oral argument on the fee petitions on January 15, 2002, and reviewed and considered the proposed orders and/or proposed findings of fact submitted by parties.

On July 26, 2001, this Court entered a Consent Judgment and Order resolving all issues in this case with the exception of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. As part of the mediated settlement of this case the parties agreed and the Court ordered that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." This Court has determined that all of the petitions before the Court include requests for fees which were not incurred in connection with this lawsuit. Specifically, certain of the petitions contain entries relating to a separate case filed in the U.S. District Court and to a Circuit Court of Cook Law Division case filed after this case was concluded. This Court has determined that it is not appropriate to award fees relating to those cases under the Consent Judgment and Order in this case. In regard to the Quinlan and Carroll invoices and the McDermott, Will & Emery invoices, this Court has been able to determine an amount to deduct for those related cases. In regard to the defendant Directors' attorneys' invoices, it is not possible to make such a determination.

This was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. There was extensive motion practice and multiple appeals. Over thirty court sessions, many of them lengthy, were held prior to the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. The more complex of the issues involved related to special litigation committees, attorney ethics and disqualification, museum ethics, breaches of fiduciary duties, and the Attorney General's responsibilities in regard to charitable trusts and not-for-profit corporations. Many experts were retained and their opinions differed. Much out-of-state law was supplied and argued.

In reviewing the fee petitions this Court has considered, among other things, the magnitude and complexity of the case, the novelty and importance of the legal issues involved, the benefits conferred, the number of hours expended, the manner and tasks in which the time was expended, by whom the time was expended, the hourly rate charged by each person for a given task, the time required by other attorneys in the community to perform tasks of a comparable nature, the hourly fee charged for similar services by other attorneys with similar skills and qualifications, the degree to which the tasks performed contributed to the result obtained, and whether the fees have been paid by the clients. The Court has taken note that in regard to the Quinlan & Carroll bills and the McDermott, Will & Emery bills, the Attorney General has not objected to the requested fees and costs. The Court has also noted that the fee petitions of those firms are not inconsistent with the bills of Sidley and Austin submitted to, and presumably paid by, the Foundation. (This Court has not approved the bills of the Foundation's counsel).

Notwithstanding the lack of an objection from the Attorney General, this Court believes that certain of the fees and costs submitted by the Quinlan and McDermott firms should not be approved, particularly considering that charitable funds are involved here. [The Court agrees with current counsel for the Foundation that "(t)he Foundation exists to promote American art, not to fund litigation."] As to attorneys' time entries in the Quinlan & Carroll petition, these include multiple entries for duplicative and excessive billing for four partners (at their respective hourly rates) and for one associate (at a blended rate of $180), totaling $421,200. That figure includes a reduction of $4,700 in fees incurred after the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order which were reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice. Finally, the Court has determined that $10,166.25 was billed in connection with the federal court litigation and that that amount should be excluded. As to costs, the Court has granted all costs with the exception of an expert witness fee reflected in the September 25, 2001 invoice and with the exception of all costs incurred for the public relations firm of Kemper Lesnik.

The McDermott Will & Emery fees are approved herein, eliminating the fees and costs for "Terra II" and $1,980.00 in fees for the federal action. The costs relating to "Terra I" are approved.

This Court is not able to adjudicate at this time the five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. In order to do so, this Court needs to receive revised fee petitions from any of the five firms who may wish to provide them. The revised fee petitions should eliminate all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). The revised fee petitions should be supported by affidavits of counsel and/or the defendant Directors which should include the following: 1) the dates counsel was retained; 2) the reason for the retention of the additional counsel; 3) if applicable, the dates counsel was discharged or withdrew and the reason for the discharge or withdrawal; 4) the dates and manner in which any counsel of record in this case was advised that additional counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson had been retained; 5) the dates and manner of first communication with the firm of Shefsky and Froelich about additional representation for defendant Directors in this case; 6) the dates on which any parties to the mediated settlement were first advised that defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson would be seeking fees pursuant to the Consent Judgment and Order for fees for any firm other than Shefsky and Froelich; 7) all attempts to avoid duplication of effort between former and new counsel; and 8) a statement as to when and how much of the attorneys' fees and costs set forth in the revised fee petitions have been paid to date. In regard to the Verner Liipfert firm, an explanation should be given of the $35,000 notation regarding Bellows and Bellows which appears on the summary of invoices and the $25,000 cost entry to Bellows and Bellows for professional services which appears in Invoice No. 183977.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit is granted.

2. Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $1,172,182.00 and costs in the amount of $162,768.65, for a total award of $1,334,950.65 .

3. Directors Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall are awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $35,026.25 and costs in the amount of $768.16, for a total award of $35,794.41.

4. Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson have 28 days to file revised fee petitions and supporting affidavits as set forth above. No additional briefing will be entertained.

5. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

BUNTROCK and GIDWITZ, Plaintiffs, vs. TERRA, et al., Defendants.	)	No. 00 CH 13859 Honorable Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, Plaintiff-Intervenor, vs. TERRA, et al. Defendants.	)

FILED
DEC 19 2002
DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD
CLERK OF CIRCUIT COURT

MOTION TO AUTHORIZE RELEASE OF DOCUMENTS FILED UNDER SEAL FOR INCLUSION IN RECORD ON APPEAL, TO DESIGNATE PREPARATION OF RECORD OF SEALED DOCUMENTS IN SEPARATE VOLUMES, AND TO SUPPLEMENT RECORD

Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz (collectively "Plaintiffs"), by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., hereby request that this Court enter an order that authorizes the release of documents filed under seal for inclusion in the record on appeal, designates that the sealed documents be prepared in separate volumes, and supplements the record to include documents not currently in the circuit court record. In further support of their motion, Plaintiffs state as follows:

1. Plaintiffs filed a notice of appeal from the Order of March 13, 2002 that relates to Plaintiffs' petition for fees and expenses. In accordance with the Illinois Supreme Court Rules, Plaintiffs requested that the circuit court prepare the record on appeal in this matter.

2. On or around September 12, 2002, Plaintiffs were notified that the circuit court clerk had completed the preparation of the record on appeal in this matter. Shortly thereafter, Plaintiffs obtained the record from the circuit court in preparation for filing it with the appellate court. After having the opportunity to review the record, Plaintiffs became aware that certain pleadings had not been included in the record.

3. In addition, Plaintiffs contacted the appellate court clerk with regard to the proper procedure for including documents in the record that were filed under seal in the circuit court. Specifically, the pleadings related to the petitions for attorneys' fees and expenses involved the filing under seal of various attorneys' invoices for fees and costs. In addition to filing the invoices under seal, this Court entered an order that provided that only certain parties were to be served with another party's redacted invoices. Copies of this Court's orders are attached as Exhibit 1.

4. The various invoices and petitions that were filed with the Court are all properly part of the record and to the extent that the documents were filed under seal, the circuit court clerk has advised Plaintiffs that an order from this Court is required to include the sealed documents in the record. In addition, because access to sealed documents was limited to only certain parties, the parties involved in this appeal should only have access to the sealed documents that they were properly served with and allowed access to in the circuit court. Thus, the circuit court clerk has advised that an order from this Court is necessary to designate the preparation of the record in separate volumes or in such a manner that will allow the appellate court to limit access to certain documents to only those parties that had access to the documents in the circuit court. Specifically, upon an order from this Court, the circuit court will prepare different volumes of sealed documents and each party will only have access to those volumes containing documents that the parties had access to in the circuit court.

5. The following pleadings were filed under seal in the circuit court and are currently in the circuit court file in this matter:

a. Bellows and Bellows' Petition for Fees and Costs; and

b. Motion for Leave to Submit Fee Statements Under Seal for in camera Review of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker and Petition of Fees and Expenses submitted by Cummins & Cronin.

Although these documents were filed under seal, access to these documents was limited to the party filing the document, the circuit court, and the Attorney General. As to these documents, Plaintiffs request that these documents be released for inclusion in the record, designated as filed under seal, and prepared in a separate volume so that access to this volume may be limited to the Attorney General.[1]

6. The following document that was filed under seal under seal by counsel for the Terra Foundation is currently in the circuit court record and was made only available to the circuit court:

a. Billing statements submitted to the Terra Foundation for the Arts by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood.

[1] Although counsel for Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson had access to these documents before this Court, those parties are neither appellants nor appellees in Plaintiff's appeal.

As to that document, Plaintiffs request that it be released so that it may be included in the appellate court record, designated as filed under seal, and that it be prepared in a separate volume so that access to the document will be limited to counsel for the Terra Foundation.

7. In addition, certain documents were filed under seal but are currently not part of the circuit court file. Since these documents were initially filed under seal, a copy of these documents will be submitted for this Court's review in camera. Although these documents were filed under seal, all parties were served with these documents. Thus, as to the following documents, Plaintiffs request that the Court enter an order certifying that the following documents are true and correct, releasing these documents to be included in the record on appeal, and ordering that these documents be prepared in a separate volume:

a. Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petition Submitted by Attorneys for Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock (filed November 20, 2001);

b. Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall (filed November 20, 2001);

c. Attorney General's Response to the Fee Petitions Submitted by Attorneys for Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson (filed November 20, 2001); and

d. Reply Memorandum of Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson In Support of Their Petitions for Attorneys' Fees (filed December 10, 2001).

The Attorney General, the Terra Foundation, and Plaintiffs should be allowed access to the volume of the record containing the above documents.

8. In addition, Plaintiffs' invoices and statements submitted in support of their Petition and Supplemental Petitions for Attorneys' Fees and Costs Pursuant to Consent Judgment and Order entered July 26, 2001, are currently not included in the circuit court file and were filed under seal.

Plaintiffs hereby submit an unredacted copy of their invoices and a redacted copy of their invoices for this Court's in camera review. Plaintiffs request that this Court enter an order allowing the unredacted invoices to be added to the record on appeal, designating that the invoices are under seal, and specifically providing that the unredacted invoices be prepared in a separate volume with access to these invoices limited to the appellate court. As to the redacted invoices, Plaintiffs request that they also be added to the record on appeal, prepared in a separate volume, designated as filed under seal, and that access to the redacted invoices be limited to the Attorney General.

9. Finally, certain documents filed in the circuit court are currently not part of the circuit court file. Plaintiffs have submitted a copy of these documents for this Court's review in camera. Plaintiffs request that this Court enter an order certifying that the following documents are true and correct and ordering that such documents be included in the record on appeal:

a. Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (filed by: Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand on September 14, 2001);

b. Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker (filed by Kellogg Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans on September 14, 2001);

c. Affidavit of David A. Novoselsky in Support of Petition for Fees and Expenses filed on September 17, 2001;

d. Circuit Court Order dated December 4, 2001;

e. Circuit Court Order dated December 14, 2001;

f. Circuit Court Order dated January 15, 2002;

g. Response of Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson to Submission of Cases By the Attorney General Regarding Attorney's Fees (filed February 1, 2002);

h. Attorney General's Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law Relative to the Fee Petitions of Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson; and

i. Attorney General's Emergency Motion to Strike and Deny the Letter/Motion of Defendant Directors to Strike, Proposed Finding of Fact and Conclusions of Law and File an Additional Brief.

10. Plaintiffs have attached a proposed order as Exhibit 2.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court enter an order: (1) authorizing the release of sealed documents in the record on appeal; (2) authorizing the preparation of sealed documents in separate volumes; (3) limiting access of the volumes of sealed documents to parties who had access to the documents in the circuit court; (4) certifying that certain documents are true and accurate for inclusion in the record on appeal; and (5) entering any other relief that this Court deems fair and just.

Respectfully submitted,

ORDER AWARDING SUPPLEMENTAL ATTORNEYS' FEES

This case is before the Court on the revised fee petitions filed by four law firms on behalf of defendant Directors Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. The revised fee petitions were filed after this Court determined in its March 13, 2002 Order Awarding Attorneys Fees that it could not adjudicate five additional fee petitions filed on behalf of the defendant

Directors without additional information. (A copy of the March 13, 2002 Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees is attached hereto as Exhibit A.)

The four law firms which are seeking attorneys' fees are the Washington, D.C. firm of Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, Chartered, the Washington, D.C. firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., the Chicago firm of Bellows and Bellows, P.C., and the Chicago firm of Cummins and Cronin, LLC. No revised fee petition has been filed on behalf of the Novoselsky Law Offices, another Chicago firm which initially petitioned for fees herein.

The award of attorneys' fees in this case is being made pursuant to Paragraph 12 of the Consent Judgment and Order entered by this Court on July 26, 2001. That paragraph provides that "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation." In the Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees entered on March 13, 2002, this Court granted the Terra Foundation's Motion to Reject Any Fee Petitions Seeking Attorneys' Fees Not Incurred in Connection with this Lawsuit and directed counsel for the defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson to file revised fee petitions which eliminated all billing entries and costs relating to the federal court case (No. 01 C 4976) and the Law Division action (01 L 9112). Each of the four law firms submitting revised fee petitions have recalculated their fees and expenses.

Counsel were also directed to provide the Court with affidavits covering eight categories of information needed by the Court to adjudicate the revised fee petitions. The Affidavit of Laurel G. Bellows in Support of the Bellows and Bellows' Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs complies with that directive. The revised fee petitions of the Verner, Kellogg and Cummins firms rely in part upon the Declaration of Leonard Garment in Support of Revised Motion for Fees. The Attorney General has filed a Motion to Strike which is primarily directed to the Garment Declaration.

This Court has carefully reviewed the Garment Declaration, the attachments thereto, and the Attorney General's Motion to Strike. The Court has determined that much of the Garment Declaration consists of hearsay statements and improper argument. The Declaration contains irrelevant assertions which are not responsive to this Court's inquiries relating to the fees sought herein. The Declaration is not an affidavit of counsel as specified in this Court's Order of March 13, 2002, and it complies with neither the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure nor the Supreme Court Rules. It is in large part an additional brief and argument, which was specifically prohibited in the Order of March 13, 2002. Accordingly, this Court is granting in part the Attorney General's Motion to Strike. Designated portions of the Garment Declaration, together with certain of the exhibits referred to therein, are stricken as hereinafter set forth.

Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson were originally represented in this case by the Chicago firm of Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. The two attorneys from that firm primarily responsible for the case were Brian C. Crowe and James D. Wilson. Their representation commenced on October 8, 2000 and concluded abruptly on June 29, 2001. For the work performed during that time period this Court previously awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $450,800.00 and costs in the amount of $17,576.17, for a total award of $468,376.17.

The original counsel for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson requested that this Court refer all issues involved in this case to mediation. After this Court on February 5, 2001 appointed David C. Hilliard to mediate the dispute, it was understood that the primary focus of the parties and their counsel would be the mediation process. The Petition for Fees and Costs filed by

Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., as well as the time records of Sidley and Austin (counsel for the Terra Foundation), reflect that the individual Directors participated actively in the mediation process.

Most noteworthy, for purposes of the issues now before this Court, are the time entries from the months of May and June of 2001, which show numerous conferences between the Shefsky attorneys and the defendant Directors, particularly Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker. Of particular note is a May 14, 2001 time entry of Mr. Wilson which shows telephone conversations with Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker in which the words "tentative settlement agreement" are first used. Additional telephone conversations between Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker are reflected in the time entries for each of the next four days, May 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th.

It is at that time, May 18, 2001, that the time records of the Verner firm show that Mr. Levinson of the Verner firm first met with defendant Naftali Michaeli and Mr. McPherson of the Verner firm first spoke with defendant Senator Simpson. (It is unclear to this Court whether Mr. Michaeli or Senator Simpson is the "advisor to Judith Terra" referred to in Paragraph 5 of Mr. Garment's Declaration.) Mrs. Terra first spoke with Mr. Garment of the Verner firm on June 7, 2001.

As the mediation process proceeded in Chicago with Shefsky & Froelich representing defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, and with Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker in regular contact with the Shefsky attorneys, the Verner firm in Washington commenced extensive work on the case. They contacted various local counsel, including an attorney by the name of Lee Freeman on June 8, 2001. Mr. Freeman, from the Chicago firm of Freeman, Freeman & Salzman P.C., spoke with Mr. Crowe of the Shefsky firm on June 12, 2001, according to the Shefsky Petition for Fees. Mr. Freeman apparently had no further involvement with the case, except to report back to

Mr. Levinson that Shefsky and Froelich was owed $500,000 and "would withdraw from the case if any co-counsel, or any new local counsel, were retained to help represent the Defendant Directors." (Garment Declaration, Paragraph 19)

No one from the Verner firm, however, made any attempt to contact the Shefsky firm about the work in Washington which was underway. The Shefsky firm continued to represent the defendant Directors in multiple court appearances before this Court in May and June of 2001 and in the extensive mediation proceedings. From May 20, 2001 (the first Shefsky billing date after Mr. Michaeli's and Senator Simpson's May 18, 2001 initial contact with the Verner firm) through June 29, 2001, the Shefsky firm recorded and was paid for $42,922.00 in attorneys' fees.

It appears from the Verner time records that it was not until June 14, 2001, that the Verner firm first made any contact with the Foundation's attorneys Sidley & Austin. By that time almost $10,000 in attorneys fees had been recorded by the Verner firm. (The time records of the Sidley attorneys, however, do not reflect any contacts by Mr. Garment and Mr. Levinson of the Verner firm in mid-June of 2001. Mr. Garment states in his Declaration that on June 14, 2001, he had an hour and a half conversation with Steven (sic) Carlson about the background of the case and the mediation process. Stephen Carlson's time entry for that day combines fifteen tasks for a total of 5.75 hours. No mention of Mr. Garment or the Verner firm is made. There is, however, one task that reads "t/c with consultant.")

Prior June 29, 2001, defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson made no motion before this Court to substitute attorneys or to bring to this Court's attention any dissatisfaction which they may have had with their attorneys at the Shefsky firm. They continued in the mediation process while their attorneys in Washington continued doing work which was, for the most part, unrelated to the mediation process. On June 22, 2001, the Verner firm in Washington enlisted the assistance of the Kellogg firm in Washington and the Bellows firm in Chicago. The fact that these three firms had been retained was not disclosed to the Shefsky firm or to this Court.

By the time the Verner firm was first contacted on May 18, 2001, it had been tentatively agreed in the mediation process that attorneys' fees in connection with this lawsuit would be paid by the Foundation. There is no indication in any of the materials before this Court that there was any discussion in the mediation proceedings that those fees would include fees for any counsel working behind the scenes and not of record in this case.

The fact that the Verner, Kellogg and Bellows firms were representing the defendant Directors first became known to all counsel of record in this case on June 28, 2001, when those firms went into the United District Court in Chicago in an attempt to obtain a restraining order to stop approval of the mediated settlement. It appears that it was not until the morning of the June 29th, the day a similar motion was made before this Court, that the Shefsky attorneys learned that they were being discharged and would be replaced by counsel who had been working for the defendant Directors for well over a month. The Bellows firm filed its appearance on June 29, 2001, and the Shefsky firm was granted leave to withdraw on July 2, 2001. On July 2, 2001, Leonard Garment of the Verner firm and K. Chris Todd and Neil M. Gorsuch of the Kellogg firm were admitted pro hac vice. The Bellows firm withdrew from this case on July 20, 2001, at which time the Cummins firm was granted leave to appear for defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson.

The Verner firm is now seeking attorneys' fees and costs for the period of time commencing May 18, 2001 and ending July 27, 2001, the day after this Court entered the Consent

16di-003250

Judgment and Order. The Kellogg firm is seeking fees and costs for the period of time commencing June 22, 2001 and ending August 31,2001. The Bellows firm is seeking fees and costs for the period June 22, 2001 and ending April 19, 2002. (Most of the Bellows time billed after July of 2001 relates to preparation of the firm's fee petitions.) The Cummins firm is seeking fees and costs for the period of time commencing July 18, 2001 and ending July 26, 2001. The fees and costs now sought by law firms representing defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson (in addition to the $458,376.17 already paid to the Shefsky firm) are as follows:

Firm	Amount of Fees	Amount of Costs	Total
Verner Liipfert	$134,224.50	$9,643.05	$143,867.55
Kellogg Huber	(not broken out)		$328,867.67
Bellows & Bellows	$68,373.50	$5,201.95	$73,575.45
Cummins & Cronin	$46,310.00	$4,103.31	$50,413.31
			$596,723.98

The Court has received and reviewed four amended fee petitions for Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson. They are: 1) the Revised Petition for Fees and Expenses Pursuant to Court Order of March 13, 2002 filed by Cummins & Cronin; 2) the Revised Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, by Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker in Response to Order of March 13, 2002; 3) the Revised Motion of Verner Liipfert Bernhard McPherson & Hand, Chartered, for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker in Response to Order of March 13, 2002 with the Supplement to Revised Motion of Verner Liipfert Bernhard McPherson & Hand, Chartered, for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker in Response to Order of March 13, 2002 and; 4) Bellows and Bellows' Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs.

In connection with the Defendant Directors' amended fee petitions, the Court has also received and reviewed the Terra Foundation's Objections to the Amended Fee Petitions; the Attorney General's Objection to the Post Trial Further Submissions and Filings of Defendant Directors and Motion to Strike and Hold the Post Trial Filings and Affidavits Submitted by Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson Void and a Nullity; and the Defendants' Objections to Motion by the Attorney General to Strike Defendants' Post-Trial Filings and Affidavits.

In its Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees entered on March 13, 2002, this Court noted that this was an extremely complex and fiercely litigated case involving some novel issues. On Page 4 of that Order, this Court identified some of those issues and further set forth the factors which the Court considered in awarding fees to plaintiffs' counsel and to counsel for Directors Stebbins and Marshall. The complexity of the issues in this case as well as the factors set forth on Page 4 were similarly considered by this Court in reviewing the fee petitions of the additional attorneys for Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. (See copy of the March 13, 2002 Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees attached hereto as Exhibit A.)

In reviewing the fee petitions which are the subject of this Order Awarding Supplemental Attorneys Fees, this Court has also reviewed, and made comparisons with, the Quinlan and Carroll billing statements, the Shefsky and Froelich billing statements, the Sidley and Austin billing statements, and the McDermott, Will & Emery billing statements. The Court has also considered its notes on the history of this case, as well as pertinent documents from the court file.

Finally, the Court has taken into account the contributions which the various counsel made to the litigation, their knowledge about the history of the case and the accuracy of their statements in court, and the amount of duplicative and excessive billing among counsel for the Defendant Directors as they and their associates conferred within their respective firms and among the respective firms.

The Court has also considered that the original counsel for Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson, the firm of Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., has already been awarded $468,376.17 in fees and costs from the Foundations's funds and that the Defendant Directors did not object to that fee award. Instead they secretly hired three additional firms, two from Washington, D.C., and one from Chicago, while the Shefsky firm continued to participate in the mediation process, which th Defendant Directors originally requested. (Defendant Directors elected during the course of case to pay $412,750.00 in fees to their additional counsel and not to pay the Shefsky firm

At no time prior to June 29, 2001, did the Defendant Directors either fire their bring to the Court's attention any dissatisfaction with their counsel. And they ap revealed to anyone during the mediation process that they would ultimately b fees for behind-the-scenes counsel.

It is with those considerations in mind that this Court herein a fee petitions. The Court is convinced that Defendants Terra, Tuck reasonable attorneys' fees for local counsel who were of recor including July 26, 2001, the date of the entry of the Conser the Bellows firm, the Court is awarding fees commenc retained, since the Court considers that one week is a reasonable period of time for original and replacement counsel both to be involved in a case (even though they were not working together). In regard to the Cummins firm, the Court is awarding fees commencing on July 18, 2001, as requested, which is two days prior to that firm's appearance in the case.

The bulk of the time of the Bellows firm after July 26, 2001 relates to fee petition issues and is not awarded herein. The Court is awarding fees for the Bellows firm through July 20, 2001, the date of that firm's withdrawal. The Cummins firm is not seeking fees for any time after July 26, 2001.

The law firms of Bellows and Bellows, P.C., and Cummins & Cronin, LLC, are well known to this Court. The Court is familiar with the quality of their attorneys and their work product. Both firms enjoy excellent reputations. This Court is not questioning the affidavits of counsel from those firms and has not noted instances of the excessive and duplicative billing such as that referred to in this Court's Order of March 13, 2002. The billing rates of these two firms, while high, are not disproportionate to those of other counsel in this complex litigation.

Accordingly, the Bellows firm is being awarded all of its requested fees and costs from June 22, 2001 through and including July 20, 2001, with deletions made for entries relating to the federal court litigation. Those deletions are $5,972.50 in fees and $400.00 in costs in accordance with the Affidavit of Laurel G. Bellows.

In regard to the Revised Petition of the Cummins firm, the Court is awarding all of the requested fees and all of the costs with the exception of $538.50 in "filing fees". Under the "Disbursements" category the Cummins firm lists $770.50 in "filing fees". The electronic docket of the Clerk of the Court, however, shows that the only filing fees paid by the Cummins firm were two counterclaim fees of $116.00 each, for a total of $232.00. Absent proof of payment of the higher amount, the Court has awarded that $232.00 in filing fees only.

Adjudication of the fees requested by counsel from Washington, D.C. has been much more problematic. This Court believes that such counsel, upon their retention by the Defendant Directors, should have promptly taken steps to communicate with local counsel, Shefsky and Froelich. This would have avoided counsel for the Defendant Directors working at cross purposes during the period of time prior to June 29, 2002. And it might have avoided certain misconceptions about the history of this case which Washington counsel expressed before this Court, some of which were included in the stricken portions of the Garment Declaration.

This Court cannot sanction such lack of communication among learned and experienced counsel. The time records of the Shefsky, Verner and Kellogg firms indicate that the Defendant Directors, particularly Mrs. Terra, were regularly communicating with attorneys at the respective firms while the Washington attorneys and the Shefsky firms worked for the Defendant Directors with different goals and objectives in mind. Washington counsel had to have known that their clients were continuing to communicate and work with the attorneys from Shefsky and Froelich. (In the days leading up to the June 28, 2001 motion made in the U.S. District Court, there were multiple conferences between the Shefsky attorneys and Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.) Yet the Washington attorneys made no effort to bring to this Court's attention the dissatisfaction of the Defendant Directors with their local counsel and they made no effort to bring to the Court's attention their clients' desire to withdraw from the mediation process.

Adjudication of the fee petition filed by the Kellogg firm has been especially problematic. Contrary to this Court's Order of October 1, 2001, which required unredacted bills to be submitted to the Court, the time records submitted in support of the Revised Motion of the Kellogg firm include redacted bills only. (No unredacted bills were submitted even after this Court discussed the issue with the Defendant Directors' new local counsel during the proceedings earlier this year relating to the entry of the Order to Supplement Record.) Furthermore, the Kellogg bills do not contain a recapitulation or summary page. This necessitated the creation of such a recapitulation in order for the Court to ascertain both the number of hours worked and the amount of fees billed by each of the attorneys for the Kellogg firm.

This Court is awarding no fees and costs for any time prior to the first appearance of Washington counsel before this Court on June 29, 2001, the day the Shefsky firm apparently learned that it was being discharged by the Defendant Directors. The fees and costs being awarded herein for the Washington firms cover the period of time from June 29, 2001 (even though the pro hac vice motions were not presented and granted until July 2, 2001) through July 26, 2001, the date of the Consent Judgment and Order.

In ascertaining what this Court considers to be "(r)easonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit" the Court took into account that at all times between June 29, 2001 and July 26, 2001, the Defendant Directors had at least three different law firms simultaneously representing them in this case. The time records of the various firms reflect many entries of lawyers within firms communicating with each other, lawyers between firms communicating, and lawyers reviewing each other's work. The Court has also noted the numerous instances where individual lawyers in the Washington firms billed an excessive number of hours in a day. For instance, there are twenty-six (26) entries in the Kellogg bills between June 29, 2001 and July 26, 2001 where individual Kellogg lawyers billed in excess of twelve (12) hours in a single day. In some instances the billings for a single lawyer in a single day were far in excess of twelve (12) hours a day.

The calculation of the fees for the Verner and Kellogg firms has been determined by the Court as follows: 1) All fees and costs from June 29, 2001 through and including July 26, 2001 were totaled; 2) All Kellogg entries and related costs which were redacted or partially redacted were subtracted; 3) 35.8 hours were deducted from the Verner totals at a blended rate of $425.00 an hour; and 4) 232.75 hours were deducted from the Kellogg totals at a blended rate of $400.00 an hour. This has resulted in a total award for a period of time of less than a month of $72,641.05 for the Verner firm and $86,197.45 for the Kellogg firm. The total additional fees and costs awarded to Defendant Directors for the four law firms which represented them during that month amounts to $267,709.97. When added to the $468,376.17 already awarded to the Shefsky firm for their services rendered during almost nine (9) months, the total attorneys' fees and costs awarded to Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson in this litigation comes to $736,086.14.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Attorney General's Motion to Strike and Hold the Post Trial Filings and Affidavits Submitted by Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson Void and a Nullity is granted in part. Those sections of the Declaration of Leonard Garment (Exhibit A to the Revised Motion of the Verner firm), which sections are stricken on the attached copy of the Declaration, Exhibit B to this Order, were not considered by this Court and are hereby stricken, together with Exhibits C, D, E, F, H, and I, which are attached thereto and referenced therein.

16di-003257

2. Bellows and Bellows' Second Amended Petition for Fees and Costs is granted in part and denied in part and Bellows and Bellows, P.C., is awarded attorneys fees in the amount of $57,273.25 and costs in the amount of $1,723.41, for a total amount of $58,996.66.

3. The Revised Petition for Fees and Expenses Pursuant to Court Order of March 13, 2002, filed by Cummins & Cronin, LLC, is granted in part and denied in part and Cummins and Cronin, LLC, is awarded attorneys fees in the amount of $46,310.00 and costs in the amount of $3,564.81, for a total amount of $49,874.81.

4. The Revised Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker in Response to Order of March 13, 2002, filed by the Verner firm is granted in part and denied in part and Verner Liipfert Bernhard McPherson & Hand, Chartered, is awarded attorneys fees in the amount of $62,998.00 and costs in the amount of $9,643.05, for a total amount of $72,641.05.

5. The Revised Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs by Defendants Alan K. Simpson, Judith Terra, and Paul Hayes Tucker in Response to Order of March 13, 2002, filed by the Kellogg firm is granted in part and denied in part and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC, is awarded attorneys fees in the amount of $75,082.50 and costs in the amount of $11,114.95, for a total amount of $86,197.45.

6. To the extent that there remains pending a Petition for Attorneys Fees on behalf of the Novoselsky Law Offices, that Petition is denied, no revised petition having been filed in compliance with this Court's Order of March 13, 2002.

7. The Terra Foundation for the Arts shall pay the aforestated fees and costs within 30 days of the date of this Order.

COMPLAINT AT LAW

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson complain of the Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, James E. Ryan, Floyd D. Perkins, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, and the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation") as follows:

16di-003290

Preliminary Statement

1. Through this action, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson seek to vindicate both the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder Daniel J. Terra. The plaintiffs complain that certain directors of the Foundation are irreconcilably conflicted and have willfully and wantonly breached their fiduciary obligations by pursuing a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation and inconsistent with both the purpose of the Foundation and the clearly expressed intentions of its founder. These breaches of fiduciary duty were aided by – and even induced by – the illegal conduct of the Illinois Attorney General and his assistant. Indeed, as we set out more fully below, the improvident conduct of the Attorney General not only induced breaches of fiduciary duty but constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law and an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech. The Foundation's interests have been further compromised by the conflicted interests of several Directors and various counsel who purported to, but did not, represent and counsel the Foundation free of improper influence

2. The plaintiffs have been unlawfully denied the opportunity to bring these claims in other litigation. As a result, this case is filed to secure relief – a declaratory judgment, injunctive relief and damages – in order to halt the perversion of the Foundation's mission which has been the direct result of the defendants' conduct.

Nature of the Case

3. On June 29, 2001, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, by a conflicted majority, voted to accept a settlement of this litigation that would chain the Foundation to Chicago for 50 years and install a majority of Illinois residents on its

16di-003291

Board. As the dissenting board members stated before the vote, this acquiescence to the extraordinary intrusions by the State of Illinois into the Foundation's affairs was ultra vires and an utter abdication of the Board's fiduciary responsibilities. Yet six board members, some with personal conflicts, none acting in the best interests of the Foundation, chose to vote in favor of a proposal that—if allowed to stand—will do violence to the clear vision of an American philanthropist and set a chilling precedent for all not-for-profit corporations.

4. The Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Yet six Board members voted to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the Foundation's charter and its founder's demonstrated intentions.

5. Earlier litigation and a mediation process compromised by conflicts of interest became a vehicle for a power grab by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws. Through threats of investigation and legal action—including the threat of suing pivotal board members - Perkins has used his official powers to compromise and conflict certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors such that the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech have been effectively nullified. The Attorney General's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens further to deprive Plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (3) rights under the commerce and contracts clauses of the Constitution. Through this unlawful conduct, Mr. Perkins has also induced certain Board members to violate their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

6. In approving a tainted mediation process, a conflicted a majority of the Board of Directors of the Foundation have violated their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and caused the Foundation to act ultra vires. Despite irreconcilable conflicts of interest and their consequent disqualification, directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins have acted against the interest of the Foundations. By taking action incompatible with the Foundation's charter and wasting valuable assets and opportunities for the Foundation to carry out its mission, the Board members who approved the proposed settlement violated duties of obedience to the Foundation's purpose and best interests.

The History of the Terra Foundation

18. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. Born and educated in Philadelphia and a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Terra maintained residences in Chicago and Washington, D.C. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to 1950. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

19. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Its purposes, according to its original Articles of Incorporation, were > to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation (as filed Dec. 13, 1978).

16di-003295

20. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He created a multimillion dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art. Today, the Foundation owns substantial property in the Village of Giverny.

21. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the North Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

22. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

16di-003296

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson and his long-time friend Peter Solmsson of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

23. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Terra negotiated with the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City to form a strategic alliance that would pool the Foundation's collection with those of the other two institutions and move the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington. Discussions broke down over issues relating to the Whitney Museum's control over the collection.

24. Between 1993 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized.

25. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans and obtain zoning permits for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Phone lines, name plates, furniture and other items were purchased for the new property. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with his own handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

26. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable North Michigan Avenue museum site. Between 1996 and 1998, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to Mr. Terra's estate.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

27. Upon settlement of Mr. Terra's estate, the Board returned to consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation. At a November 1998 meeting, Mr. Buntrock recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider options for the future of the Foundation. Mr. Gidwitz was elected chairman of this committee.

28. Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard

University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris; Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis Corporation.

29. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation continued active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. The Strategic Planning Committee met several times to consider options, with Mr. Gidwitz himself raising suggestions of building a new museum facility on a different site, affiliation with other museums, and closing the museum to focus on education efforts and building the collection.

30. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 annual meeting in France, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

31. Dr. Tucker circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

32. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

The Ploy to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

33. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit alleging that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

34. In their lawsuit, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock claimed, contrary to fact, that Mr. Terra intended that the Foundation would always remain in the Chicago area. The complaint quoted news reports from 1987, the time of the move from Evanston to North Michigan Avenue, in which Mr. Terra described his enthusiasm for the new location. The complaint did not refer to Mr. Terra's 1990 statement to the Board of Directors or to any of his subsequent discussions and plans relating to relocation of the Foundation to another city. It also did not mention the 1994 amendment to the charter which permitted the Foundation to operate museums and schools "both in the United States and abroad." Based on this misleading statement of Mr. Terra's intent, the defendants alleged that the Foundation's mission was to operate a "museum of American art . . . in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois."

35. Attorney General James Ryan and Floyd Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General, seized upon the turmoil of the Terra Foundation Board as an opportunity to assert State control over its assets. At the inception of the lawsuit, the Attorney General filed an intervenor complaint that simply borrowed the allegations of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. The complaint also reiterated the faulty premise -- based upon a demonstrably incorrect statement of Mr. Terra's intent -- that the Board of Directors were without authority to relocate the Foundation. The complaint sought a declaration, among other things, that "[t]he intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the Foundation intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland."

36. The Attorney General intervened expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an ultra vires act. As Assistant Attorney General Perkins has stated in an interview for that case, he believes it is his role as assistant attorney general to see that Illinois-based charitable institutions utilize their assets in Illinois. Mr. Perkins attempts to accomplish this by seeking installment of Illinois directors on the boards of such institutions and through other restrictions. He has employed this tactic successfully in other cases, for example, that of the Regenstein Foundation. Mr. Perkins acknowledges, however, that he does not have the authority to impose Illinois-related restrictions on institutions which were created to serve broader interests, such as national and international aid organizations, even though such institutions may be based in Illinois and subject to reporting and other statutory requirements of Illinois law.

37. As authority for his intervention in that lawsuit, Mr. Perkins relied on the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997)) and his "common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts." Whatever authority these sources of law may provide to the Attorney General, they do not permit any action to force a charitable trustee or Board member of a not-for-profit corporation to change the institution's fundamental purpose in a manner inconsistent with its charter or founder's intent. Nor do these authorities mandate that any charitable trust or not-for-profit corporation that is established in the State of Illinois must remain in Illinois, regardless of its purposes and founder's intent.

38. The propriety of the Attorney General's intervention and sole basis for authority in that case depended upon his claim that the Terra Foundation's purpose was to serve the people of Illinois, rather than a broader population. Like the other defendants, the Attorney General based this claim on selected statements of Mr. Terra to the press. A reasonable investigation of the facts would have revealed, however, that Mr. Terra did not intend that any of the assets of the Terra Foundation should be restricted geographically. Mr. Perkins did not conduct such an investigation before filing his initial complaint. For example, Mr. Perkins has admitted that when he filed that complaint he was unaware of Mr. Terra's 1994 amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the Foundation expressly stating that the Foundation's efforts shall include museums "both in the United States and abroad."

39. In January 2001, the Terra Foundation filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad.

40. Although the true facts of Mr. Terra's intent were revealed early in litigation, and at the latest by the Foundation's motion for judgment on the pleadings, defendants and the Attorney General persisted in their efforts to capture the Foundation in Illinois. They were able to do so through a barrage of motions designed to delay the proceedings and deflect attention from the core issue of Mr. Terra's intent. Mr. Perkins and the other defendants first challenged the Board's choice of counsel and early decisions about directing and funding the litigation. Then, once the Board had selected an independent litigation committee of Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Andreani, Mr. Perkins and the other derfendants challenged Dr. Stebbins' ability to serve on this committee. These tactics had the desired effect of paralyzing the Board and placing Mr. Perkins and the other defendants in a strong position to make demands upon the Foundation, without regard to the merits of their lawsuits.

41. As the case proceeded to mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins insinuated themselves into the process in an attempt to railroad its result. Mr. Perkins pursued the goal of capturing the Foundation's assets in Illinois despite the fact that he had no basis to assert that he was seeking to preserve Mr. Terra's intent.

42. In mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins took several extraordinary positions that evidenced their recognition that Mr. Terra's intent was not to constrain the Foundation to Chicago. The Attorney General disagreed that the Board of Directors was governed in the use of the Foundation's funds solely by the Articles of Incorporation. He argued that those Articles were too broad to provide any meaningful purpose to the Foundation. Most strikingly, the Attorney General maintained that a not-for-profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply by virtue of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population.

43. Without legal authority and in disregard of the facts regarding Mr. Terra's intent. Assistant Attorney General Perkins demanded throughout the mediation that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with the Art Institute of Chicago in which the Foundation would sell the North Michigan Avenue property to fund a new wing at the Art Institute.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois in perpetuity.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection in the Chicago metropolitan area in perpetuity.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois.

44. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

45. Frustrated by the Board's resistance to his demands, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation. These tactics were directed in particular at two key swing directors, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall.

Attacks on Dr. Stebbins

46. Since his earliest involvement with the Terra Foundation, Dr. Stebbins had supported a comprehensive approach to strategic planning that included consideration of options outside of Illinois. In 1997, before Dr. Stebbins joined the Board, he headed an advisory committee that conducted a review and analysis of the collection and reported recommendations to the Board for the future. The committee consisted of Dr. Stebbins, then curator of American paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Professor John Wilmerding, former chairman of the art department at Princeton, and Charles Moffett, former deputy director of the National Gallery and director of the Phillips Collection in Washington. In its report to the Board in February 1997, the advisory committee concluded strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. The committee envisioned three alternative scenarios for the future, two of which involved discontinuing the Chicago presence by: (1) concentrating on French operations, with the establishment of a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris, or (2) improving the collection and housing it another American city.

47. Dr. Stebbins joined the Board in April 1998. In Strategic Planning Committee meetings until the outbreak of litigation, he continued to advocate consideration of options within and without Illinois. He was an especially strong advocate for the idea of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

48. When litigation began, Dr. Stebbins became a key figure in its conduct. Upon defendants' demand for an independent litigation committee, Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Jacques Andreani were chosen from among the non-party directors to oversee the litigation on behalf of the Foundation. Because Amb. Andreani was in France at the time, Dr. Stebbins effectively controlled the litigation committee.

49. Within three weeks of Dr. Stebbins' election to the litigation committee on November 30, 2000, Mr. Perkins filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the committee on the grounds of conflict of interest. On January 22, 2001, Mr. Perkins obtained a Court order to conduct special discovery focusing on Dr. Stebbins' conduct as a director. Within two weeks of that order — and less than two weeks before a scheduled evidentiary hearing focusing upon Dr. Stebbins' conduct — the Foundation entered into mediation. With challenges to his reputation and integrity having become the central focus of the litigation, Dr. Stebbins strongly advocated directing the Foundation into mediation.

50. On March 21, 2001, Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time. In a cover letter, Mr. Perkins stated that the document was a draft and was not being filed, but rather supplied to set forth issues to be discussed at settlement. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a new defendant and included specific charges of impropriety against him. The allegations included alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions.

The amended complaint also charged Stebbins with breaching the Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums. The amended complaint was never filed.

51. Dr. Stebbins now knew that, if settlement was not reached, the litigation would resume, with his reputation and integrity once again the central focus, and he would become a defendant in the case.

52. On the same day that the draft complaint was distributed to counsel, the mediator circulated to the Board a revised mediation proposal, which had been formulated after reviewing the amended complaint and discussing this matter with the Attorney General. The proposal contained a requirement that the Foundation would maintain and exhibit its collection in perpetuity at the Art Institute of Chicago. According to the mediator, this provision resulted from the position of the Attorney General. Mr. Perkins had not participated in mediation sessions on March 5 and 6, but worked behind the scenes with the mediator to influence the course of mediation.

53. Dr. Stebbins, facing the threat of becoming a defendant in the lawsuit, now expressed his support for settlement. On April 2, 2001, he and Amb. Andreani prepared a letter to the mediator stating that "in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago." They enclosed a settlement proposal "follow[ing] the outline" of the March 21, 2001, proposal reflecting the Attorney General's positions.

Attacks on Dr. Marshall

54. Dr. Marshall joined the Board in 1998. Like Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall held the view that the Terra Foundation was established for the broadest possible dissemination of American art. For example, at a May 10, 2000, meeting of the Strategic Planning

16di-003307

Committee that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall attended, consensus was reached that the beneficiaries of the Foundation included the national and international public.

55. Late into the mediation process, Dr. Marshall remained a strong critic of the Attorney General's methods and proposals. In a May 20, 2001, letter to counsel for the Foundation and her fellow Board members she reported:

> [W]ith respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

56. In addition to serving on the Board, Dr. Marshall serves full-time as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, a highly-regarded education institution that depends on public funding for the bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

57. After a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been tricked into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. He began to investigate Dr. Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He considered these issues for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr. Perkins knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

58. Mr. Perkins never informed Dr. Marshall or her counsel that the investigation had been concluded.

The Proposed Settlement and Board Approval

59. On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed settlement of this litigation. The settlement called for entry of a consent judgment and order implementing the Attorney General's goal of locking the Foundation in to the State of Illinois. In this regard, the proposed judgment requires:

a. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois;

b. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago metropolitan area;

c. For at least 25 years, the Foundation will require that a majority of its Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois;

d. The Foundation shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

60. Dr. Marshall, the Foundation's Treasurer and Secretary, presided at the special meeting. Other directors present were: Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.

61. Immediately prior to the vote, several Board members made personal statements. Mrs. Terra objected that "the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees."

> Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art . . . . [W]e will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of > Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation . . . telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most . . . outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation.

62. Dr. Tucker echoed Mrs. Terra's concerns. He stated that > what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview. The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by . . . the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive.

63. At the recommendation of the Foundation's attorney, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall each addressed the issue of conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's conduct in the case. Dr. Marshall confirmed that "the Attorney General has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation," but insisted that the investigation "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation."

64. Dr. Stebbins first defended his "reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity," and maintained that he had served on the Board "without any iota of a conflict of interest." He then stated that he "abhor[ed] the threatening tactics of the Attorney General." Dr. Stebbins also insisted that he was voting his "own conscience."

65. Upon the motion of Dr. Stebbins, the Board voted on whether to approve the proposed resolutions to amend the By-Laws and accept the settlement. Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor. Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against.

66. Members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation have statutory and common law fiduciary duties to the Foundation. These duties include, but are not limited to, the duty of loyalty, which encompasses the duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to act in the best interests of the Foundation; the duty of obedience to purpose, which prohibits action contrary to the purposes for which Foundation was established; and the duty to use the Foundation's assets productively and not to waste Foundation assets.

67. At least two members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement were faced with a conflict of interest. Dr. Marshall expressly acknowledged that the Attorney General, the primary beneficiary of the settlement transaction, was conducting an investigation of the publicly-funded institution of which Dr. Marshall is president. Dr. Marshall reasonably could expect her vote on the settlement to influence the outcome of that investigation, either positively or negatively.

68. Dr. Stebbins also had strong personal incentives to support the settlement to the detriment of the Foundation. During the course of the litigation and corresponding public scrutiny of the Foundation's operations, he had faced charges of serious lapses of professional responsibility. In acknowledging his abhorrence of the Attorney General's tactics and vociferously defending his reputation and integrity immediately prior to the vote, Dr. Stebbins plainly identified his conflict of interest. If the mediation was unsuccessful, Dr. Stebbins would become a defendant in the case and face personal liability. Only through settlement could Dr. Stebbins hope to avoid more scrutiny which carried the threat of a potentially devastating effect on his career.

69. The Foundation's bylaws can be amended only "by a majority of the directors then in office and present" at the meeting at which the vote is taken. Because eight members of the Board were present at the June 29, 2001 meeting, the affirmative vote of five directors was required to approve the Proposed Settlement's many bylaw changes. Without the votes of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the Proposed Settlement garnered only four votes.

70. Each Board member who voted in favor of the settlement did so in violation of their fiduciary duty of obedience to the Foundation's purpose. Restricting the Foundation's art collection to isolation in Chicago for 50 years and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board is directly contrary to the Foundation's stated purpose in its Articles of Incorporation to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added).

71. The Foundation's mission is meant to be world-wide and its board members equally diverse, not given over specially to Illinois and its citizenry. Indeed, the problems of the 50-year lock-in and Illinois-majority provisions were identified by Dr. Marshall prior to her conflict of interest arising. In her letter of May 20, 2001, she stated that because of the Foundation's "intentional national and international outreach and presence," she did "not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority." Dr. Marshall acknowledged that a 50-year lock-in would be a relinquishment of the Board's power to govern the Foundation when she stated that "[a]fter the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future."

72. Each Board member who voted in favor of the proposed settlement also violated a duty not to waste the Foundation's assets. By eliminating the possibility of merger or partnership with a non-Chicago institution, the Board accepted a undue limitation on its negotiating power. By limiting the field of competitors for the Terra relationship, the Board would waste all the benefits that would flow from that competition, and in particular the ability to secure the most attractive possible terms for the future and for the collection to have the greatest possible impact on the art world and public education.

73. The Foundation has benefited tremendously from the participation of art experts worldwide on its board of directors -- including, among others, the curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum; a leading expert on Claude Monet; and the president of a major Parisian art museum. Yet the Board majority voted in favor of a settlement under which the Foundation would forfeit the benefit of such experts in favor of a board packed with individuals whose chief virtue is that they are residents of Illinois. By limiting the pool of talent from which the Board can recruit directors, the Board would waste its opportunity to secure the best and most experienced leadership.

74. Locking the Foundation into Chicago for 50 years or any other length of time and stacking the Board with Illinois residents dangerously compromises the Foundation's flexibility to fulfill its charter. There is absolutely no guarantee that the Chicago community will provide adequate support to the Foundation over such a long period of time. If the Foundation is to remain viable it must have the flexibility to consider other venues where its collection may attract the maximum possible interest.

MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, I am Steve Carlson from Sidley & Austin. I got these papers about two minutes before --

THE COURT: Let me ask you, can we stay off the record just a minute?

MR. CARLSON: Sure, absolutely.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan and James Carroll on behalf of certain defendants.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson from Sidley, Austin I believe on behalf of The Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: And pro se, aren't you a party now?

MR. CARLSON: Maybe.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You granted us leave to file.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. SZOLA: Your Honor, Scott Szola of Winston & Strawn technically hasn't been served either yet, so we will be in the same position as Sidley & Austin.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins. I am a defendant pro se and Assistant Attorney General on behalf of the Attorney General of Illinois.

MR. HEATWOLE: Mark Heatwole, Winston & Strawn.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Judge.

THE COURT: He assumes everybody knows him, but give them your name.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky and Tom Cronin for plaintiffs.

These are our motions. And I guess the first I would only ask Mr. Quinlan, certain defendants which one, Bill, so there is no question?

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you want me to go through, I am representing Mr. Hartman, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz. And we are not at the moment representing Miss Marshall or Mr. Stebbins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, your Honor, we have --

THE COURT: Let me before we start indicate that this case having been set for 2:00 o'clock, as the parties came in, we have had informal discussions which precluded in opening we had as a remaining defendants' attorney came in since the shortage of notice, nobody was essentially late because everything was pretty much of emergency. And that's what we have talked.

A moment ago the attorneys, half a dozen attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Judge, we object to venue here so anything -- if there is any kind of prejudice --

THE COURT: What are you worried about? I am sending it out sua spontae.

MR. PERKINS: I understand, Judge. I am just -- I don't want any rulings by the court --

THE COURT: Where do you want the venue, in Springfield?

MR. PERKINS: I just don't want any rulings by the court to be used as some prejudice.

THE COURT: Well, I thought everybody heard me since I raised it sua spontae. And I only did you for an afterthought; didn't I?

MR. CARLSON: You sure did, your Honor.

THE COURT: It doesn't make sense to be here. So if you want to argue, I can end up disagreeing. But I totally agree with you. Okay?

MR. PERKINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I think the whole principle of judicial economy and good sense is you put it all in one place. And I have always done that.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Which, your Honor, we may find ourselves going back to square one in front of Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not going to call it which I could do. I could do it. I just don't. I have the right to call it, and it is not ex parte. But I wouldn't do it.

If he has a problem with having this go, that's his problem. I don't see any problem in having it go there. And you would be a delight in my life. I would grow older with you all. But it would be the delight of my life. Sometime when all of you can get a new case from the beginning, it would be my pleasure to have you all here.

(Whereupon, further proceedings in said cause were adjourned sine die.)

9. From paying, setting or agreeing to set any stipends for Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

ARGUMENT

In order to obtain a Temporary Restraining Order, the moving party must show this Court that there is no adequate remedy available at law, that in the absence of the order restraining certain actions, the moving party will suffer irreparable harm, and that the moving party can demonstrate that there is a reasonable likelihood of a success on the merits of the underlying cause of action. See Citizens Utilities Board v. O'Connor, 116 Ill. App. 3d 369, 378, 451 N.E.2d 946 (2nd Dist. 1983). Plaintiffs respectfully submit that not only can they satisfy each and every one of these requirements, but further submit that the entry of an order enforcing the status quo ante is required in the interests of justice, in order to ensure the continuing viability of the Plaintiff Foundation which is presently not being adequately protected by any non-partisan representative, and that the entry of such an order is necessary to preserve the jurisdiction of this Court and the Constitutional rights of the Plaintiffs.

16di-003348

Background

Defendants' illegal 'takeover' of the Terra Foundation for the Arts had its genesis in a lawsuit filed by certain of the Defendant-Directors last year seeking to block the efforts of the majority of the Board of Directors to move ahead with the mission of the Foundation. These Defendants were later aided and abetted in their efforts by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, who filed suit to assist them in frustrating and perverting the Foundation's mission.

The goal of these lawsuits was to transform the Terra Foundation from an institution intended by its Founder as a means to bring American Art to the attention of the citizens of the United States and the world into a purely local museum, serving Defendants' vision of confining the collection and the benefits of the Foundation to Illinois and "Chicagoland." In order to do so, they planned to remove the existing Board, drawn from the best possible sources throughout the United States and the rest of the world, and replace it with one controlled by Illinois residents and subject to the rigorous control of the Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

The true mission of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, which Defendants determined to thrust aside by their actions, may be found in its Articles of Incorporation:

> "Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions. (Articles of Incorporation, August 26, 1994, emphasis supplied.)

Defendants' newly-formulated mission was the antithesis of the true mission of the Foundation as set out above. The fact that the mission and purpose of the Foundation were never intended to be limited to a purely 'local' venue was overwhelmingly evident in the history of the Foundation and its collection.[1] Over the years that the Foundation had maintained its headquarters in Chicago, it also maintained substantial portions of its collection in other parts of the world including France. However, throughout its existence, public attendance at the principal location of the collection of American Art here in Chicago had been very poor. Indeed, it was estimated that the cost to the Foundation of maintaining the collection at the Michigan Avenue was $5,000 per visitor.

This concern had been expressed on numerous occasions by Ambassador Terra, the Founder and guiding spirit of the Foundation, before his death in 1996. Beginning in 1992, he moved a substantial portion of the collection that had been maintained at the original museum site in Evanston and later on Michigan Avenue in Chicago to a site in

---

[1]While the collection of American Art is perhaps the best known component of the Terra Foundation, it compromises 'only' $100 million in an endowment that also comprised $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property, including the Michigan Avenue museum site, all left to the Foundation upon Ambassador Terra's death in 1996.

16di-003350

Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. In 1996, he purchased a building in Washington, D.C. to serve as an interim corporate headquarters for the Foundation and commissioned an architect to draw up plans and obtain a zoning permit for a new facility to house the collection and the Foundation headquarters in Washington. Only his sudden death in 1996 prevented him from completing his plans to move the Foundation and its collection to Washington.

The Foundation was consumed with resolving various issues relating to Ambassador Terra's estate between 1996 and 1998. Upon settlement of the Terra Estate issues in late 1998, the Board turned to consideration of a strategic plan for the future of the Foundation. Various options to deal with the continuing poor attendance and other issues were considered by the Board. Moving the Foundation was merely one idea out of many under consideration.

None of these proposals had passed the stage of suggestions when Defendants Gidwitz and Buntrock decided to file a lawsuit claiming that the other members of the Board had breached their fiduciary obligations to the Foundation merely by considering moving the collection from Chicago. Once these minority directors filed their lawsuit, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois intervened to assist them.

The thrust of these consolidated lawsuits was to prevent the Foundation from carrying out its mission as set forth above, and to change what had heretofore been a private foundation serving its mission throughout "the United States and abroad" to one which would restrict the Foundation to maintaining the collection (at the expense of the Foundation but without public funds) within Illinois and subject to the control and direction of the Attorney General of the State of Illinois. This new mission – and indeed what would be an entirely new Foundation – was to be created out of whole cloth by the actions filed by the dissident directors and the Attorney General.

To further this new mission and set up this new Foundation, Defendants needed time to gain control of the Board by coercing a majority of the remaining members of the Foundation's board into accepting the dissidents' goals. Thus, after they filed these lawsuits, and realizing that the existing Board did not intend to go along with their assault on the true mission of the Foundation, Defendants decided to avoid a prompt and just resolution of the case. They sought instead non-binding mediation of the claims raised in these lawsuits, convincing the Judge hearing those consolidated actions to stay the time in which any answers, cross or counterclaims were to be filed pending the resolution of that mediation. Defendants then engaged in a campaign to harass and intimidate the majority of the then-sitting Board that opposed their assault on the true mission of the Foundation.

As will be set forth in the evidence to be presented in the case now pending before this Court, the Defendants and their ally, the Attorney General, were successful in this outrageous campaign. They managed to create a series of conflicts and launched a barrage of threats and official "investigations"; and the Board was asked to vote on 'accepting' a settlement of the lawsuits only after a majority of the Board members were unable to carry out their fiduciary obligations as a result of this campaign of intimidation. The issue of settlement was also considered by the Board at a time when the Foundation itself was not represented by independent counsel nor a representative other than one disqualified by various conflicts from acting in the best interest of the Foundation.

16di-003352

Having thus achieved their goal, Defendants asked the Court to enter a "Consent Decree" and dismiss the case.

The Consent Decree

The "Consent Judgment and Order" (attached as an Exhibit to this Emergency Motion) was entered on July 26, 2001. It was entered over the vigorous objections of Plaintiffs, who were not permitted to file their counterclaims, and, most importantly, was ostensibly entered as a "Consent Decree" without the consent of these Plaintiffs or a lawfully qualified quorum of the Board. The order was entered by the Court only after it specifically assured these Plaintiffs that nothing in the Order barred Plaintiffs from filing a separate lawsuit in place of the proposed cross and counterclaims or filing suit against anyone else for the actions that now give rise to the present litigation. (See Buntrock v. Terra Foundation, No. 00 CH 13859, Transcript of Proceedings Beginning at 4:30 p.m., July 24, 2001 at 133 ("The Court: You [to counsel for Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson] are free to file whatever lawsuit you want against whoever and raise whatever allegations you want about that."))

The Meeting of August 1, 2001

On August 1, 2001, the Foundation's Board of Directors convened purportedly to implement the directives of the so-called "Consent Judgment and Order" entered by the Court on July 26, 2001. Even though the notice for this August 1, 2001 meeting was both procedurally and substantively defective and failed to comply with the requirements of the Foundation's bylaws, some members of the Foundation's Board – namely, directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Arhweiler, Daley, Stebbins and Hartman – attempted to conduct business. Plaintiffs, directors Tucker, Terra and Simpson, objected to the transaction of any business at the August 1, 2001 meeting because of the procedural and substantive defects in the notice. The plaintiffs moved to adjourn the meeting. That motion was defeated.

During this improper August 1, 2001 Board meeting, the so-called "new board members" – defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Dr. Kathleen A. Forster, Robert S. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel – were summarily "welcomed" to the Board of the Foundation, although the Record of that meeting establishes that they were not elected and no election of new members was held. Indeed, to date, the so-called new directors have never been elected to the Board.

The Agenda for the August 1, 2001 meeting states that these "new board members" were "elected June 29, 2001, effective as of July 26, 2001." However, despite the clear requirements of the "Consent Judgment and Order" no such election ever took place.

The "Consent Judgment and Order," entered by the Court on July 26, 2001, does not explicitly nor implicitly "validate" any action taken on June 29, 2001. It does not acknowledge that any election of these "new" Board members had already taken place. In fact, the order provides to the contrary:

> "The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term."(Emphasis supplied.)

On August 1, 2001, misinterpreting the limited scope of the "Consent Judgment and Order" entered by the Court on July 26, 2001, Defendants began to act as if they constituted a lawful majority of the Board of the Foundation and as if they had been given control of the Foundation by the Court. All that was entered on July 26, 2001 was a "Consent Judgment and Order." Plaintiffs did not consent to the entry of that order and are not bound by its terms.

At the conclusion of the mediation, certain of the parties decided to agree to "consent" to a "resolution" of the case which favored their position, and asked the Court to enter a Consent Decree and dismiss that case. That order was entered over the vigorous objections of these Plaintiffs, who pointed out, inter alia, that they had not "consented" to the "Consent Decree," and had been barred from filing the counterclaims and cross-claims that would have allowed that Court to protect the individual Plaintiffs and the Terra Foundation, its mission, and its considerable assets. The Court specifically assured these Plaintiffs that nothing in the Order barred Plaintiffs from filing a separate lawsuit in place of the proposed cross and counterclaims or filing suit against anyone else for the actions that now give rise to the present litigation. ((See Buntrock v. Terra Foundation, No. 00 CH 13859, Transcript of Proceedings Beginning at 4:30 p.m., July 24, 2001 at 133 ("The Court: You [to counsel for Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson] are free to file whatever lawsuit you want against whoever and raise whatever allegations you want about that.")).

In short, the Court recognized that its order was not to be construed as binding on Plaintiffs nor barring them from filing this or any related lawsuit to vindicate their position and protect themselves and the Foundation. The so-called "Consent Judgment and Order" merely acknowledged the rights of the plaintiff-directors and the Attorney General to resolve their own "dispute" and to consent to drop their lawsuit against these Plaintiffs. Accordingly, the order is binding only as to the parties that consented.

The Court in the prior case recognized that it had not "resolved" any issue of law or fact then before it, nor could it do so as part of a "Consent Decree" to which the defendants in the case before it had not only failed to consent to, but where they had not been allowed to file any responsive pleadings or cross and counter actions. Moreover, the Court declined to make any findings of law or fact when invited to do so, and simply dismissed the then pending lawsuit with a virtual invitation to these Plaintiffs to file this cause of action to resolve the issues that had been raised – but never addressed – in that case.

The Proposed August 14, 2001 Meeting

Defendants' recognition of this fatal flaw in their ongoing conduct is clear from the Agenda for the August 14th meeting. (See the Agenda for the August 14th meeting, attached as an Exhibit to this Motion.) This meeting was scheduled only after Plaintiffs filed the present cause of action and pointed out all of the defects in the actions of Defendants, both before and following the entry of the "Consent Judgement and Order" of July 26, 2001. Defendants hurriedly scheduled the August 14th meeting to attempt to correct their misconduct as reflected in the complaint.

The first item on the Agenda is "Ratification of Actions taken by the Board at August 1, 2001 Board Meeting. (Resolution Attached.)" The next item is the "Ratification of Actions taken by the Board, officers and agents of the Foundation pursuant to Resolutions adopted and authorizations given at August 1, 2001 Board Meeting. (Resolution Attached.)"

In other words, recognizing that there had been no election of Directors and/or Officers at the August 1, 2001 meeting of the Board, and as this failure was now the subject of the present lawsuit, the Board (in a notice sent out by the non-elected "Chairman," Mr. Field) is attempting to retroactively "ratify" its actions carried out on a prior date by persons who were never elected to the Board. These individuals were never in a position to vote for or accept an office on the Board based on their non-election on August 1, 2001 or at any time before or after that date. They cannot be retroactively "elected." Neither may the Board now conduct business nor vote through the fiat of the very "non-elected" directors who have been acting without lawful authority since the non-election of Directors and Officers on August 1, 2001.

Of course, as neither Mr. Field nor any of the other "new" Directors were ever elected as a director or officer of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, all of the other actions taken on August 1, 2001 through their "votes" were ineffective. These actions surely cannot now be "ratified" by the votes of those individuals who are still neither officers nor directors of the Foundation.

Stated simply, Defendants cannot now attempt to "ratify" their prior actions in the absence of a valid election – or any election at all – on or before August 1, 2001. They cannot "amend" or adopt by-laws for a foundation through the votes of non-elected directors. Indeed, they cannot take any action whatsoever nor purport to act as the Board of the Foundation based on this rather fundamental – but just as fundamentally flawed – "oversight." Since they were never elected, they cannot "retroactively" attempt to "ratify" anything – they lack the power and authority to do anything for, on behalf of, or in the name of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

Why Injunctive Relief Is Required

What is presently before this Court reflects that there was no election of Directors or Officers of the Terra Foundation for the Arts on August 1, 2001. Plaintiffs have filed suit before this Court attacking the right of Defendants to serve in this capacity now or in the future, based on the issues raised in these pleadings. They have pointed out to this Court that the Plaintiffs and the Foundation are in danger of substantial harm if Defendants are permitted to act to frustrate the mission of the Foundation, and fear that Defendants continued and illegal "control" of the Foundation threatens its mission and its assets, both financial and the priceless works of American Art that Ambassador Terra labored to build and preserve for the world, not simply for the City of Chicago and the State of Illinois.

Facing this lawsuit, and realizing that they have miscarried their efforts to seize control of the Foundation, Defendants are now scrambling to try to correct the errors they committed before and, most significantly, after July 26, 2001. Having failed to hold a valid election of Directors and Officers on August 1, 2001, and as "new" directors have no standing to act absent such an election, they have scheduled the August 14th meeting to "ratify" their misconduct.

This Court must intervene and stop this imminent and grave threat of harm to the Plaintiffs, the Foundation, and its priceless and irreplaceable assets. Defendants propose to "ratify" their non-election by voting to retroactively correct these fatal defects. They propose to rewrite minutes of August 14, 2001, and to transform their non-election by this means. Once they do so, they will continue to act as if they were the duly-elected Board, enter into contracts, dispose of the property of this Foundation, and alter its mission, all without ever having been elected as Directors nor validly-selected as Officers!

This Court must restrain the August 14th meeting and restrain Defendants from taking the actions they propose as set forth in the Agenda. There is no adequate remedy at law that will suffice to protect Plaintiffs and the Foundation. If Defendants are allowed to meet, "ratify" their non-election, and then dispose of the assets of the Foundation and run its affairs as if they had been properly elected and were properly pursuing the proper mission of the Foundation, no amount of monetary damages will suffice to replace the irreplaceable core of American Art that is the heart of the Terra Foundation.

The irreparable harm that Plaintiffs and the Foundation will suffer if Defendants are allowed to "ratify" their existing misconduct and perpetuate their usurpation of the Foundation is equally evident. In addition to potential loss to the core collection, Defendants decisions regarding "contracts" and agreements to "loan" out the collection or to merge or otherwise dilute the value of the collection, without regard for the potential of a nationwide or worldwide venue for its display, would cause irreparable damage to the Foundation and its mission. Absent their lawful election and the opportunity for this Court to determine if Defendants conduct and intentions are consistent with the mission and governing documents of the Foundation, the potential for such harm cannot be calculated.

And, the fact that Plaintiffs have a likelihood of success on the merits is self-evident from the actions taken by Defendants in response to the filing of this lawsuit. Defendants were never elected to the Board of the Terra Foundation. They now propose to retroactively "ratify" their non-election by a vote of these same non-elected Directors. They also propose to continue to act as if they were the duly-elected Board of the Foundation, and dispose of its assets and its funds despite their clear lack of the power and authority to do so because of the fatal flaw that underlies their position.

Finally, it should be noted that this Court can, and must, act to protect its own jurisdiction. Plaintiffs have filed a complaint seeking, inter alia, injunctive relief. Alerted to the illegality of their prior conduct, Defendants propose to hold a meeting to retroactively "ratify" that conduct. Plaintiffs respectfully submit that this Court must act to preserve the status quo, and restrain Defendants from acting to deny this Court the chance to consider the issues presented in this case and, after it has heard evidence to resolve this case on the merits.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra, Alan K. Simpson, and the Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois Not-For-Profit corporation ("Foundation"), respectfully request that this Honorable Court enter a Temporary Restraining Order enjoining Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Forster, Robert S. Hamada, Frederick A. Krehbiel, individually and as Directors or purported Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin from doing any of the following acts or otherwise acting as follows for a period of ten days or until further order of this Court:

6. From retaining, consulting with, or otherwise working with Defendants Sidley& Austin and Winston & Strawn as counsel for the Foundation or any other party in the present case, and from otherwise advancing or paying any further funds of the Terra Foundation for the Arts to said law firms;

7. From making or purporting to make any Committee Appointments, adopting any Banking Resolutions or otherwise acting to amend or modify any existing monetary or banking arrangements of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, cancelling any contracts, or approving any new contracts;

9. From paying, setting or agreeing to set any stipends for Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

Plaintiffs also request such other relief as this Court shall deem just and appropriate.

The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT AT LAW

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson complain of the

16di-003381

Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, James R. Donnelley, Marshalll Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada, Frederick A. Krehbiel, James E. Ryan, Floyd D. Perkins, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin as follows:

Preliminary Statement

1. Through this action, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson seek to vindicate both the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder Daniel J. Terra. The plaintiffs complain that certain directors of the Foundation are irreconcilably conflicted and have willfully and wantonly breached their fiduciary obligations by pursuing a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation and inconsistent with both the purpose of the Foundation and the clearly expressed intentions of its founder. These breaches of fiduciary duty were aided by – and even induced by – the illegal conduct of the Illinois Attorney General and his assistant. Indeed, as we set out more fully below, the improvident conduct of the Attorney General not only induced breaches of fiduciary duty but constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law and an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech. The Foundation's interests have been further compromised by the conflicted interests of several Directors and various counsel who purported to, but did not, represent and counsel the Foundation free of improper influence

2. The plaintiffs have been unlawfully denied the opportunity to bring these claims in other litigation. As a result, this case is filed to secure relief – a declaratory judgment, injunctive relief and damages – in order to halt the perversion of the Foundation's mission which has been the direct result of the defendants' conduct.

Nature of the Case

3. On June 29, 2001, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, by a conflicted majority, voted to accept a settlement of this litigation that would chain the Foundation to Chicago for 50 years and install a majority of Illinois residents on its Board. As the dissenting board members stated before the vote, this acquiescence to the extraordinary intrusions by the State of Illinois into the Foundation's affairs was ultra vires and an utter abdication of the Board's fiduciary responsibilities. Yet six board members, some with personal conflicts, none acting in the best interests of the Foundation, chose to vote in favor of a proposal that—if allowed to stand—will do violence to the clear vision of an American philanthropist and set a chilling precedent for all not-for-profit corporations.

4. The Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Yet six Board members voted to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the Foundation's charter and its founder's demonstrated intentions.

5. Earlier litigation and a mediation process compromised by conflicts of interest became a vehicle for a power grab by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and

16di-003383

Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws. Through threats of investigation and legal action—including the threat of suing pivotal board members - Perkins has used his official powers to compromise and conflict certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors such that the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech have been effectively nullified. The Attorney General's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens further to deprive Plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (3) rights under the commerce and contracts clauses of the Constitution. Through this unlawful conduct, Mr. Perkins has also induced certain Board members to violate their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

6. In approving a tainted mediation process, a conflicted majority of the Board of Directors of the Foundation have violated their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and caused the Foundation to act ultra vires. Despite irreconcilable conflicts of interest and their consequent disqualification, directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins have acted against the interest of the Foundations. By taking action incompatible with the Foundation's charter and wasting valuable assets and opportunities for the Foundation to carry out its mission, the Board members who approved the proposed settlement violated duties of obedience to the Foundation's purpose and best interests.

The History of the Terra Foundation

26. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. Born and educated in Philadelphia and a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Terra maintained residences in Chicago and Washington, D.C. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to 1950. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

27. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Its purposes, according to its original Articles of Incorporation, were > to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation (as filed Dec. 13, 1978).

28. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He created a multimillion dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art. Today, the Foundation owns substantial property in the Village of Giverny.

29. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the North Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

30. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson and his long-time friend Peter Solmsson of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

31. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Terra negotiated with the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City to form a strategic alliance that would pool the Foundation's collection with those of the other two institutions and move the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington. Discussions broke down over issues relating to the Whitney Museum's control over the collection.

32. Between 1993 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized.

33. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans and obtain zoning permits for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Phone lines, name plates, furniture and other items were purchased for the new property. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with his own handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

34. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable North Michigan Avenue museum site. Between 1996 and 1998, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to Mr. Terra's estate.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

35. Upon settlement of Mr. Terra's estate, the Board returned to consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation. At a November 1998 meeting, Mr. Buntrock recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider options for the future of the Foundation. Mr. Gidwitz was elected chairman of this committee.

36. Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris;

Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis Corporation.

37. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation continued active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. The Strategic Planning Committee met several times to consider options, with Mr. Gidwitz himself raising suggestions of building a new museum facility on a different site, affiliation with other museums, and closing the museum to focus on education efforts and building the collection.

38. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 annual meeting in France, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

39. Dr. Tucker circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly,

Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

40. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

The Ploy to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

41. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit alleging that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

42. In their lawsuit, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock claimed, contrary to fact, that Mr. Terra intended that the Foundation would always remain in the Chicago area. The complaint quoted news reports from 1987, the time of the move from Evanston to North Michigan Avenue, in which Mr. Terra described his enthusiasm for the new location. The complaint did not refer to Mr. Terra's 1990 statement to the Board of Directors or to any of his subsequent discussions and plans relating to relocation of the Foundation to another city. It also did not mention the 1994 amendment to the charter which permitted the Foundation to operate museums and schools "both in the United States and abroad." Based on this misleading statement of Mr. Terra's intent, the defendants alleged that the Foundation's mission was to operate a "museum of American art . . . in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois."

43. Attorney General James Ryan and Floyd Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General, seized upon the turmoil of the Terra Foundation Board as an opportunity to assert State control over its assets. At the inception of the lawsuit, the Attorney General filed an intervenor complaint that simply borrowed the allegations of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. The complaint also reiterated the faulty premise -- based upon a demonstrably incorrect statement of Mr. Terra's intent -- that the Board of Directors were without authority to relocate the Foundation. The complaint sought a declaration, among other things, that "[t]he intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the Foundation intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland."

44. The Attorney General intervened expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an ultra vires act. As Assistant Attorney General Perkins has stated in an interview, he believes it is his role as assistant attorney general to see that Illinois-based charitable institutions utilize their assets in Illinois. Mr. Perkins attempts to accomplish this by seeking installment of Illinois directors on the boards of such institutions and through other restrictions. He has employed this tactic successfully in other cases, for example, that of the Regenstein Foundation. Mr. Perkins acknowledges, however, that he does not have the authority to impose Illinois-related restrictions on institutions which were created to serve broader interests, such as national and international aid organizations, even though such institutions may be based in Illinois and subject to reporting and other statutory requirements of Illinois law.

45. As authority for his intervention in that lawsuit, Mr. Perkins relied on the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997)) and his "common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts." Whatever authority these sources of law may provide to the Attorney General, they do not permit any action to force a charitable trustee or Board member of a not-for-profit corporation to change the institution's fundamental purpose in a manner inconsistent with its charter or founder's intent. Nor do these authorities mandate that any charitable trust or not-for-profit corporation that is established in the State of Illinois must remain in Illinois, regardless of its purposes and founder's intent.

46. The propriety of the Attorney General's intervention and sole basis for authority in that case depended upon his claim that the Terra Foundation's purpose was to serve the people of Illinois, rather than a broader population. Like the other defendants, the Attorney General based this claim on selected statements of Mr. Terra to the press. A reasonable investigation of the facts would have revealed, however, that Mr. Terra did not intend that any of the assets of the Terra Foundation should be restricted geographically. Mr. Perkins did not conduct such an investigation before filing his initial complaint. For example, Mr. Perkins has admitted that when he filed that complaint he was unaware of Mr. Terra's 1994 amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the Foundation expressly stating that the Foundation's efforts shall include museums "both in the United States and abroad."

47. In January 2001, the Terra Foundation filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad.

48. Although the true facts of Mr. Terra's intent were revealed early in litigation, and at the latest by the Foundation's motion for judgment on the pleadings, defendants and the Attorney General persisted in their efforts to capture the Foundation in Illinois. They were able to do so through a barrage of motions designed to delay the proceedings and deflect attention from the core issue of Mr. Terra's intent. Mr. Perkins and the other defendants first challenged the Board's choice of counsel and early decisions about directing and funding the litigation. Then, once the Board had selected an independent litigation committee of Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Andreani, Mr. Perkins and the other derfendants challenged Dr. Stebbins' ability to serve on this committee. These tactics had the desired effect of paralyzing the Board and placing Mr. Perkins and the other defendants in a strong position to make demands upon the Foundation, without regard to the merits of their lawsuits.

49. As the case proceeded to mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins insinuated themselves into the process in an attempt to railroad its result. Mr. Perkins pursued the goal of capturing the Foundation's assets in Illinois despite the fact that he had no basis to assert that he was seeking to preserve Mr. Terra's intent.

50. In mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins took several extraordinary positions that evidenced their recognition that Mr. Terra's intent was not to constrain the Foundation to Chicago. The Attorney General disagreed that the Board of Directors was governed in the use of the Foundation's funds solely by the Articles of Incorporation. He argued that those Articles were too broad to provide any meaningful purpose to the Foundation. Most strikingly, the Attorney General maintained that a not-for-profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply by virtue of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population.

51. Without legal authority and in disregard of the facts regarding Mr. Terra's intent, Assistant Attorney General Perkins demanded throughout the mediation that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with the Art Institute of Chicago in which the Foundation would sell the North Michigan Avenue property to fund a new wing at the Art Institute.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois in perpetuity.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection in the Chicago metropolitan area in perpetuity.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois.

52. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

53. Frustrated by the Board's resistance to his demands, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation.

These tactics were directed in particular at two key swing directors, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall.

Attacks on Dr. Stebbins

54. Since his earliest involvement with the Terra Foundation, Dr. Stebbins had supported a comprehensive approach to strategic planning that included consideration of options outside of Illinois. In 1997, before Dr. Stebbins joined the Board, he headed an advisory committee that conducted a review and analysis of the collection and reported recommendations to the Board for the future. The committee consisted of Dr. Stebbins, then curator of American paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Professor John Wilmerding, former chairman of the art department at Princeton, and Charles Moffett, former deputy director of the National Gallery and director of the Phillips Collection in Washington. In its report to the Board in February 1997, the advisory committee concluded strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. The committee envisioned three alternative scenarios for the future, two of which involved discontinuing the Chicago presence by: (1) concentrating on French operations, with the establishment of a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris, or (2) improving the collection and housing it another American city.

55. Dr. Stebbins joined the Board in April 1998. In Strategic Planning Committee meetings until the outbreak of litigation, he continued to advocate consideration of options within and without Illinois. He was an especially strong advocate for the idea of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

56. When litigation began, Dr. Stebbins became a key figure in its conduct. Upon defendants' demand for an independent litigation committee, Dr. Stebbins and Amb.

16di-003397

Jacques Andreani were chosen from among the non-party directors to oversee the litigation on behalf of the Foundation. Because Amb. Andreani was in France at the time, Dr. Stebbins effectively controlled the litigation committee.

57. Within three weeks of Dr. Stebbins' election to the litigation committee on November 30, 2000, Mr. Perkins filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the committee on the grounds of conflict of interest. On January 22, 2001, Mr. Perkins obtained a Court order to conduct special discovery focusing on Dr. Stebbins' conduct as a director. Within two weeks of that order — and less than two weeks before a scheduled evidentiary hearing focusing upon Dr. Stebbins' conduct — the Foundation entered into mediation. With challenges to his reputation and integrity having become the central focus of the litigation, Dr. Stebbins strongly advocated directing the Foundation into mediation.

58. On March 21, 2001, Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time. In a cover letter, Mr. Perkins stated that the document was a draft and was not being filed, but rather supplied to set forth issues to be discussed at settlement. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a new defendant and included specific charges of impropriety against him. The allegations included alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions. The amended complaint also charged Stebbins with breaching the Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums. The amended complaint was never filed.

59. Dr. Stebbins now knew that, if settlement was not reached, the litigation would resume, with his reputation and integrity once again the central focus, and he would become a defendant in the case.

60. On the same day that the draft complaint was distributed to counsel, the mediator circulated to the Board a revised mediation proposal, which had been formulated after reviewing the amended complaint and discussing this matter with the Attorney General. The proposal contained a requirement that the Foundation would maintain and exhibit its collection in perpetuity at the Art Institute of Chicago. According to the mediator, this provision resulted from the position of the Attorney General. Mr. Perkins had not participated in mediation sessions on March 5 and 6, but worked behind the scenes with the mediator to influence the course of mediation.

61. Dr. Stebbins, facing the threat of becoming a defendant in the lawsuit, now expressed his support for settlement. On April 2, 2001, he and Amb. Andreani prepared a letter to the mediator stating that "in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago." They enclosed a settlement proposal "follow[ing] the outline" of the March 21, 2001, proposal reflecting the Attorney General's positions.

Attacks on Dr. Marshall

62. Dr. Marshall joined the Board in 1998. Like Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall held the view that the Terra Foundation was established for the broadest possible dissemination of American art. For example, at a May 10, 2000, meeting of the Strategic Planning Committee that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall attended, consensus was reached that the beneficiaries of the Foundation included the national and international public.

63. Late into the mediation process, Dr. Marshall remained a strong critic of the Attorney General's methods and proposals. In a May 20, 2001, letter to counsel for the Foundation and her fellow Board members she reported:

16di-003399

> [W]ith respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

64. In addition to serving on the Board, Dr. Marshall serves full-time as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, a highly-regarded education institution that depends on public funding for the bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

65. After a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been tricked into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. He began to investigate Dr. Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins purportedly developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He considered these issues for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr. Perkins knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

66. Mr. Perkins never informed Dr. Marshall or her counsel that the investigation had been concluded.

The Proposed Settlement and Board Approval

67. On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed settlement of this litigation. The settlement called for entry of a consent judgment and order implementing the Attorney General's goal of locking the Foundation in to the State of Illinois. In this regard, the proposed judgment requires:

16di-003400

a. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois;

b. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago metropolitan area;

c. For at least 25 years, the Foundation will require that a majority of its Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois;

d. The Foundation shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

68. Dr. Marshall, the Foundation's Treasurer and Secretary, presided at the special meeting. Other directors present were: Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.

69. Immediately prior to the vote, several Board members made personal statements. Mrs. Terra objected that "the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees."

> Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art . . . . [W]e will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation . . . telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most . . . outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation.

70. Dr. Tucker echoed Mrs. Terra's concerns. He stated that > what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview.

16di-003401

> The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by ... the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive.

71. At the recommendation of the Foundation's attorney, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall each addressed the issue of conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's conduct in the case. Dr. Marshall confirmed that "the Attorney General has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation," but insisted that the investigation "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation."

72. Dr. Stebbins first defended his "reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity," and maintained that he had served on the Board "without any iota of a conflict of interest." He then stated that he "abhor[ed] the threatening tactics of the Attorney General." Dr. Stebbins also insisted that he was voting his "own conscience."

73. Upon the motion of Dr. Stebbins, the Board voted on whether to approve the proposed resolutions to amend the By-Laws and accept the settlement. Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor. Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against.

74. Members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation have statutory and common law fiduciary duties to the Foundation. These duties include, but are not limited to, the duty of loyalty, which encompasses the duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to act in the best interests of the Foundation; the duty of obedience to purpose, which prohibits action contrary to the purposes for which Foundation was established; and the duty to use the Foundation's assets productively and not to waste Foundation assets.

75. At least two members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement were faced with a conflict of interest. Dr. Marshall expressly acknowledged that the

16di-003402

Attorney General, the primary beneficiary of the settlement transaction, was conducting an investigation of the publicly-funded institution of which Dr. Marshall is president. Dr. Marshall reasonably could expect her vote on the settlement to influence the outcome of that investigation, either positively or negatively.

76. Dr. Stebbins also had strong personal incentives to support the settlement to the detriment of the Foundation. During the course of the litigation and corresponding public scrutiny of the Foundation's operations, he had faced charges of serious lapses of professional responsibility. In acknowledging his abhorrence of the Attorney General's tactics and vociferously defending his reputation and integrity immediately prior to the vote, Dr. Stebbins plainly identified his conflict of interest. If the mediation was unsuccessful, Dr. Stebbins would become a defendant in the case and face personal liability. Only through settlement could Dr. Stebbins hope to avoid more scrutiny which carried the threat of a potentially devastating effect on his career.

77. The Foundation's bylaws can be amended only "by a majority of the directors then in office and present" at the meeting at which the vote is taken. Because eight members of the Board were present at the June 29, 2001 meeting, the affirmative vote of five directors was required to approve the Proposed Settlement's many bylaw changes. Without the votes of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the Proposed Settlement garnered only four votes.

78. Each Board member who voted in favor of the settlement did so in violation of their fiduciary duty of obedience to the Foundation's purpose. Restricting the Foundation's art collection to isolation in Chicago for 50 years and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board is directly contrary to the Foundation's stated purpose in its Articles of Incorporation to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added).

79. The Foundation's mission is meant to be world-wide and its board members equally diverse, not given over specially to Illinois and its citizenry. Indeed, the problems of the 50-year lock-in and Illinois-majority provisions were identified by Dr. Marshall prior to her conflict of interest arising. In her letter of May 20, 2001, she stated that because of the Foundation's "intentional national and international outreach and presence," she did "not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority." Dr. Marshall acknowledged that a 50-year lock-in would be a relinquishment of the Board's power to govern the Foundation when she stated that "[a]fter the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future."

80. Each Board member who voted in favor of the proposed settlement also violated a duty not to waste the Foundation's assets. By eliminating the possibility of merger or partnership with a non-Chicago institution, the Board accepted a undue limitation on its negotiating power. By limiting the field of competitors for the Terra relationship, the Board would waste all the benefits that would flow from that competition, and in particular the ability to secure the most attractive possible terms for the future and for the collection to have the greatest possible impact on the art world and public education.

81. The Foundation has benefited tremendously from the participation of art experts worldwide on its board of directors -- including, among others, the curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum; a leading expert on Claude Monet; and the president of a major Parisian art museum. Yet the Board majority voted in favor of a settlement under which the Foundation would forfeit the benefit of such experts in favor of a board packed with individuals whose chief virtue is that they are residents of Illinois. By limiting the pool of talent from which the Board can recruit directors, the Board would waste its opportunity to secure the best and most experienced leadership.

82. Locking the Foundation into Chicago for 50 years or any other length of time and stacking the Board with Illinois residents dangerously compromises the Foundation's flexibility to fulfill its charter. There is absolutely no guarantee that the Chicago community will provide adequate support to the Foundation over such a long period of time. If the Foundation is to remain viable it must have the flexibility to consider other venues where its collection may attract the maximum possible interest.

The August 1, 2001 Board Meeting and the So-Called "New Board Members"

83. On August 1, 2001, the Foundation's Board of Directors convened a meeting purportedly to implement the directives of the so-called "Consent Judgment and Order" erroneously entered by the Court on July 26, 2001. Even though the notice for this August 1, 2001 was both procedurally and substantively defective and failed to comply with the requirements of the Foundation's bylaws, members of the Foundation's Board – namely, directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Arhweiler, Daley, Stebbins and Hartman – attempted to conduct business. The plaintiffs, directors Tucker, Terra and Simpson, objected to the transaction of any business at the August 1, 2001 because of the procedural and substantive defects in the notice. The plaintiffs moved to adjourn the meeting. That motion was defeated. As hereinafter alleged, the law firms representing the Foundation allowed this improper meeting to be conducted despite serious and ongoing conflicts of interest.

84. During this improper August 1, 2001 Board meeting, the so-called "new board members" – defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Dr. Kathleen A. Foster, Robert s. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel – were summarily "welcomed" to the Board of the Foundation. Indeed, these purportedly "new directors" were never properly elected to the Board. The Agenda for the August 1, 2001 meeting states that these "new board members" were "elected June 29, 2001, effective as of July 26, 2001." No such election ever took place. Even the "Consent Judgment and Order," entered by the Court on July 26, 2001, states, "The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term."

85. Because defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel were not properly elected to the Board in compliance with the Consent Judgment and Order and the Foundation's bylaws, these individuals are not, in fact, directors and should therefore exercise none of the duties and obligations of directors. At least two these "new" directors have even been elected officers of the Foundation. Such election is without effect when these purported officers were not even properly elected directors in the first place.[1] Indeed, the performance of duties reserved solely for directors by these five individuals constitutes illegal and ultra vires conduct on the part of both the Foundation and the defendant directors who improperly convened and continued the August 1, 2001 meeting.

86. The failure of the Board and its directors to properly elect the so-called "new [1] As a result, any action taken by these "officers" – including the issuance of a notice for a Board meeting – is also void and without effect.

16di-003406

directors" renders all action taken by the Board at its August 1, 2001 void. Declaratory relief setting forth the failure of the Board and the defendant directors to properly elect the so-called "new directors" is therefore appropriate. In addition, the Foundation and the plaintiff directors have been injured and continue to be injured by the improper exercise of authority by the so-called "new" directors. By these "new directors" exercising authority and casting votes on the Foundation's board without having been properly elected, the Foundation acts without any legitimate authority while the plaintiffs' lawful participation as directors and/or officers of the Foundation's board has been improperly restricted.

The Debilitating Conflicts of the Foundation's Law Firms

87. Throughout this fight over the future of Daniel Terra's vision, the Foundation has been represented by two law firms, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin. Despite the obligations imposed by the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct regarding conflicts, these two firms have engaged in the Foundation's representation – and have continued with that representation – despite obvious and foreseeable actual and potential conflicts of interest.

88. Specifically, Winston & Strawn continues to engage in the concurrent, adverse representation of the Foundation and at least one of the defendant directors. Winston & Strawn has continued this hopelessly conflicted representation under the misguided theory that it acts only as "corporate" counsel for the Foundation and has played no role in the litigation between the Foundation and its director client. Such a theory is belied by the facts which plainly demonstrate that Winston & Strawn has provided – and continues to provide – substantive legal counsel to the Foundation on matters directly related to litigation tactics and outcomes. As a result, Winston & Strawn has breached its fiduciary obligations to the Foundation and its directors and has violated the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct.

89. Sidley & Austin has engaged in similar conduct. Specifically, Sidley & Austin has been accused – by two defendant directors in this litigation – of breaching its responsibilities to the Foundation throughout the underlying fight over the Foundation's future. Indeed, the defendant directors have even submitted an expert affidavit that concludes that Sidley & Austin is unable to provide the Foundation with independent professional advice given its conflicts of interest. Sidley & Austin has even undertook the representation of one of the directors – defendant Stebbins – just after Floyd Perkins and the Attorney General circulated allegations against that director making it perfectly clear that the Foundation and Stebbins were directly adverse. Despite such an obvious and foreseeable conflict, Sidley & Austin represented director Stebbins, provided him with counsel and, on his behalf, informed the other parties that director Stebbins would not submit for an interview regarding the allegations of Perkins and the Attorney General. At the time Sidley & Austin refused to submit Stebbins for an interview, Sidley & Austin knew that submitting for such an interview was in the best interests of the Foundation.

90. Both Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have compounded their breaches of fiduciary duty and violations of applicable ethical rules by continuing to represent the Foundation despite unresolved conflicts of interest. Indeed, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have pursued their own interests at the expense of the Foundation by failing to challenge the other firm's representation of the Foundation in the face of such obvious and debilitating conflicts. On at least two occasions, counsel for the plaintiffs has written to Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn requesting information regarding the law firms' adverse, concurrent representation of the both the Foundation and one or more of its directors. Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn have refused to provide any information.

91. In seeking to represent the Foundation, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin were obligated to competently pursue the Foundation's interests free of any conflicts as mandated by their fiduciary obligations and applicable provisions of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct. Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have breached their fiduciary duties and obligations and violated the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct in at least the following respects:

a. By Engaging in Conflicts of Interest in Violation of Rule 1.7

Winston & Strawn's and Sidley & Austin's concurrent representation of individual board members whose conduct was alleged to be in conflict with the interests of the Foundation place these firms in a position whereby their representation of the Foundation was materially limited by the obligations to such board members and by their own interests in seeking to maintain their relationship as counsel to both the Foundation and the individual board members; and

b. By Failing to Competently and Diligently Represent the Foundation's Interests in Violation of Rules 1.1, 1.3 and 1.4

Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that serious allegations of breaches of fiduciary duty were asserted against one or more board members; Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that allegations of their own conflicts had not been fully developed, investigated and resolved; Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that at a critical stage in the mediation process potential conflicted interests of the designated mediator warranted evaluation, discussion and, as necessary, appropriate remedial action; and Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that each of the above circumstances as well as the improvident intervention of the Attorney General warranted competent, diligent and thorough discussion and evaluation by independent counsel. Nonetheless, both Winston and Sidley failed to advise the Foundation to seek such independent advice.

92. The inaction and conduct of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have compromised the interests of the Foundation as well as the interests of the plaintiffs and have directly and proximately caused damage and injury including but not limited to the imposition of legal fees and expenses all of which could have been avoided had the Foundation had the benefit of unconflicted independent counsel.

93. The actions and conduct of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin continue to cause damage and injury to the plaintiffs in that they are aiding and abetting further and continuing actions of the defendant directors as herein alleged.

Count IV - Ultra Vires Acts (805 ILCS 105/103.15)

108. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

109. The resolutions approved by six members of the Board of the Foundation on June 29, 2001, constitute acts of the Foundation taken in contravention of its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thus taken without lawful authority, capacity or power.

110. The court should enjoin the doing of such acts in this proceeding pursuant to the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a).

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment as follows:

(a) An Order enjoining the defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation;

(b) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(c) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(d) Punitive damages;

(e) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count V - Breach of Fiduciary Duty

111. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

112. A fiduciary relationship exists between the Foundation and the members of its

Board of Directors. The Board's fiduciary duties include, without limitation, the duties of acting in good faith and with due regard for the Foundation's interest, of refraining from acting in a manner adverse to the Foundation's interest, of making full disclosure of all material information in their possession, of obedience to the Foundation's purposes as established by its Articles of Incorporation, of making productive use of the Foundation's assets and opportunities, and the duties of care, loyalty, fair dealing, and honesty.

113. The Defendant Board Members who voted in favor of the proposed settlement willfully and wantonly breached some or all of these fiduciary duties because the settlement is not in the best interests of the Foundation, is inconsistent with the Foundation's charter and by-laws, and wastes assets and opportunities of the Foundation.

114. In addition, board members Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins breached their duties of loyalty to the Foundation by voting in favor of a settlement which offered personal benefits having nothing to do with the interests of the Foundation.

115. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of fiduciary duty, the plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count VI - Inducing Breach of Fiduciary Duty

116. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

16di-003415

117. As set forth above, the Defendant members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement of this litigation did so in violation of their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

118. Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins colluded with these Board members in committing breach of their fiduciary duties, or otherwise induced or participated in such breach.

119. As a direct and proximate result of this conduct, Plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Punitive damages;

(d) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count VII - Deprivation Under Color of Law of Constitutional Rights (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

120. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

121. At all relevant times, Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins acted under color of law as Assistant Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

122. Mr. Perkins' conduct constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

123. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech under the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

16di-003416

124. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful restraint by the State of Illinois on interstate commerce in violation of Art. I, § 8 of the Constitution of the United States.

125. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful impairment of the Foundation's contractual obligations in violation of Art. I, § 9 of the Constitution of the United States.

126. The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General engaged in such illegal conduct to the injury of Plaintiffs and the Foundation.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Jury Trial Requested

127. Plaintiffs request trial by jury.

On behalf of the Defendants

MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, I am Steve Carlson from Sidley & Austin. I got these papers about two minutes before --

THE COURT: Let me ask you, can we stay off the record just a minute?

MR. CARLSON: Sure, absolutely.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan and James Carroll on behalf of certain defendants.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson from Sidley, Austin I believe on behalf of The Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: And pro se, aren't you a party now?

MR. CARLSON: Maybe.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You granted us leave to file.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. SZOLA: Your Honor, Scott Szola of Winston & Strawn technically hasn't been served either yet, so we will be in the same position as Sidley & Austin.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins. I am a defendant pro se and Assistant Attorney General on behalf of the Attorney General of Illinois.

MR. HEATWOLE: Mark Heatwole, Winston & Strawn.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Judge.

THE COURT: He assumes everybody knows him, but give them your name.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky and Tom Cronin for plaintiffs.

These are our motions. And I guess the first I would only ask Mr. Quinlan, certain defendants which one, Bill, so there is no question?

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you want me to go through, I am representing Mr. Hartman, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz. And we are not at the moment representing Miss Marshall or Mr. Stebbins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, your Honor, we have --

THE COURT: Let me before we start indicate that this case having been set for 2:00 o'clock, as the parties came in, we have had informal discussions which precluded in opening we had as a remaining defendants' attorney came in since the shortage of notice, nobody was essentially late because everything was pretty much of emergency. And that's what we have talked.

A moment ago the attorneys, half a dozen attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Judge, we object to venue here so anything -- if there is any kind of prejudice --

THE COURT: What are you worried about? I am sending it out sua spontae.

MR. PERKINS: I understand, Judge. I am just -- I don't want any rulings by the court --

THE COURT: Where do you want the venue, in Springfield?

MR. PERKINS: I just don't want any rulings by the court to be used as some prejudice.

THE COURT: Well, I thought everybody heard me since I raised it sua spontae. And I only did you for an afterthought; didn't I?

MR. CARLSON: You sure did, your Honor.

THE COURT: It doesn't make sense to be here. So if you want to argue, I can end up disagreeing. But I totally agree with you. Okay?

MR. PERKINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I think the whole principle of judicial economy and good sense is you put it all in one place. And I have always done that.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Which, your Honor, we may find ourselves going back to square one in front of Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not going to call it which I could do. I could do it. I just don't. I have the right to call it, and it is not ex parte. But I wouldn't do it.

If he has a problem with having this go, that's his problem. I don't see any problem in having it go there. And you would be a delight in my life. I would grow older with you all. But it would be the delight of my life. Sometime when all of you can get a new case from the beginning, it would be my pleasure to have you all here.

(Whereupon, further proceedings in said cause were adjourned sine die.)

MOTION FOR TRANSFER BASED ON CASE FILED IN THE WRONG DIVISION AND ON RELATEDNESS

Defendants Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Crisham, Ltd., and Theodore Stebbins, by and through his attorneys, McDermott Will & Emery, hereby move that this action, which was improperly filed in the Law Division, be transferred to the Chancery Division for reassignment. In further support of their motion Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, Hartman, and Stebbins, state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. As set forth in detail below, the current case Tucker, et al. v. Buntrock, et al., 01 L 9112 ("Terra II"), filed in the Law Division, is simply an attempt by three former defendants who are unhappy with the settlement reached in Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., 00 CH 13859, ("Terra I"), to challenge that settlement agreement in another forum. However, it cannot be reasonably disputed that the issues raised by Terra II has been fully considered and decided in Terra I. Because Terra II is based on the settlement reached in Terra I – a settlement that Judge Kinnaird expressly reserved jurisdiction to enforce — this case should be transferred to the Chancery Division and to Judge Kinnaird. Moreover, Judge Kinnaird is familiar with the issues involved, as well as the likely applicability of res judicata and/or collateral estoppel, so that it is appropriate to transfer this matter to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird.

2. General Order 1.3(c) of the Cook County Circuit Court General Orders establishes that upon a determination by a judge assigned to an action that such action has been filed in the wrong division, that action shall be transferred to this Court for the purpose of transferring the action to the Presiding Judge of the proper division. Indeed, Judge Sheldon Gardner has already determined that Terra II should be transferred to this Court for transfer to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird. (See Order of August 13, 2001, attached hereto as Exhibit A.) Accordingly, defendants respectfully request that this Court, pursuant to Cook County Circuit Court General Order 1.3(c), transfer Terra II to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird.

3. In addition, General Order 1.3(d) provides that a judge assigned to an action may transfer that action to this Court for purpose of transfer to another division to further the "convenience of the parties and witnesses and for the more efficient disposition of litigation." See General Order 1.3(d). Here, Judge Gardner, recognizing the complexity and relatedness of the issues involved in Terra I and Terra II and Judge Kinnaird's familiarity with such issues, has clearly indicated that transfer to the Chancery Division and reassignment to Judge Kinnaird will promote judicial economy. (See August 13, 2001 Transcript of Proceedings attached hereto as Exhibit B.) Thus, transfer to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird is consistent with General Order 1.3(d).

Terra I

4. In September, 2000 Buntrock and Gidwitz (the "Original Plaintiffs") filed an action in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division, captioned Buntrock and Gidwitz v. Terra, et al., 00 CH 13859. That case was assigned to the Honorable Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

5. The Original Plaintiffs from Terra I are directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra" or the "Foundation"), an Illinois not-for-profit corporation. The Original Plaintiffs brought an action seeking declaratory, injunctive and other relief to protect the Foundation from, inter alia, breaches of fiduciary duties by certain directors of the Foundation, namely, Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson. Significantly, the individual defendants from Terra I are now the plaintiffs in the current matter, Terra II.

6. Within days of the filing of Terra I, the Illinois Attorney General intervened as a party plaintiff to protect the interests of the People of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the Foundation.

7. The Foundation was established in 1978 by Daniel J. Terra (deceased) ("Dan Terra") to preserve and exhibit an extensive collection of American Art, to expand the artistic horizons of the Illinois art public through educational programs, and to operate a museum in the Chicago area . The Foundation's assets now total approximately $450 million, including investments, real estate, and a priceless collection of American art. At issue in Terra I was the attempt by Simpson, Tucker, and Terra to close the museum in Chicago and move the Foundation, an Illinois charitable trust, out of Illinois.

8. Throughout the pendency of Terra I before Judge Kinnaird, from September, 2000 to July 2001, an extraordinary number of substantive motions were filed and decided in this matter. Judge Kinnaird heard no less than 30 motions, including 10 motions for injunctive relief. Accordingly, Judge Kinnaird became familiar with the numerous legal and factual issues raised in Terra I and now raised in Terra II.

9. After months of litigation, the complexity and volatility of the case motivated all the parties, particularly the current Terra II plaintiffs, to agree to participate in mediation. On February 5, 2001, Judge Kinnaird entered an agreed order submitting this case to mediation. The mediation process continued for over four months and resulted in a mediated settlement on June 29, 2001.

Settlement of Terra I

10. The settlement agreement was presented to Judge Kinnaird and, on July 26, 2001, Judge Kinnaird signed and entered a Consent Decree dismissing the original action pursuant to settlement. A copy of the July 26, 2001 Consent Decree is attached hereto as Exhibit C.)

Significantly, the defendants in Terra I — now the plaintiffs in Terra II — disagreed with the settlement reached by the majority of the Board of the Foundation and, as discussed below, undertook various measures, such as filing a new action and objecting to the Consent Decree, to prevent the approval of the settlement by the Foundation and entry of the Consent Decree by Judge Kinnaird. It is the dissatisfaction of these three Board members with the settlement that prompted the filing of Terra II. Indeed, Terra II is simply an effort to "undo" the valid settlement reached by the Foundation and approved by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I.

11. Specifically, on June 28, 2001, Terra, Tucker and Simpson attempted to prevent a vote by the Foundation's Board of Directors on the settlement by filing an action in Federal Court, captioned Terra, et al. v. Floyd Perkins, 01 CV 4976. Notably, the federal action was filed on the eve of the board meeting at which the settlement was scheduled to be approved. The Federal Court, Judge Elaine E. Bucklo presiding, dismissed that action the same day. In a twelve- page opinion, Judge Bucklo held that, inter alia, the Federal Court lacked jurisdiction to hear Terra, Tucker and Simpson's claims and that they lacked standing to bring these claims. (A copy of Judge Bucklo's Opinion is attached as Exhibit D.)

12. After their first attempt to block the settlement failed, on June 29, 2001, Terra, Tucker and Simpson renewed their efforts before Judge Kinnaird. This second attempt — seeking an injunction to stop the June 29 meeting — was likewise to no avail. Judge Kinnaird denied their motion for TRO and allowed the June 29, 2001 meeting to proceed. Later, on July 29, 2001, the Board voted by a vote of 6 - 2 to adopt the settlement. The lone dissenters were Tucker and Terra — the plaintiffs in Terra II.

13. In an abundance of caution and fairness to Terra, Tucker and Simpson, Judge Kinnaird allowed the filing of Objections, by the Terra II plaintiffs, to the proposed Consent Decree and set the matter for hearing on July 24, 2001. The matter was extensively briefed and, in addition, on July 24, 2001, Judge Kinnaird heard over 5 hours of argument from the parties.

14. After thoroughly considering all arguments, on July 26, 2001, Judge Kinnaird signed and entered the Consent Decree dismissing this case in its entirety. (Exhibit C.)

Jurisdiction to Enforce Settlement Reserved by Judge Kinnaird

15. As part of the Consent Decree, Judge Kinnaird expressly reserved jurisdiction to enforce the Consent Decree and to award attorneys' fees. The issue of attorneys' fees remains pending before the Court. Indeed, Terra, Tucker and Simpson's former counsel have submitted a fee petition to the Court, which is set for presentment on September 20, 2001. Thus, Terra I is still ongoing until that issue is resolved.

16. The present complaint in Terra II (and proposed first amended complaint at law) seeks declaratory and injunctive relief as well as damages and fees. The present allegations brought by Terra, Tucker and Simpson begin and end with the original litigation. The allegations relate to defendants' conduct during the original litigation, Terra I, and the terms of the Consent Decree approved by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I. They also allege that Judge Kinnaird has "unlawfully denied" them the opportunity to bring their claims in the original litigation. (Complaint at Law at p.2 and proposed First Amended Complaint, p.2.)

17. The parties to the present litigation are exactly the same as those in the original litigation, with the addition of all the members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, including the five newly-elected directors of the Foundation (elected pursuant to the Settlement) as defendants, as well as the addition of two law firms as defendants that represented the Foundation during the Terra I.[1] Thus, the claims asserted in this lawsuit are inextricably intertwined with the claims over which Judge Kinnaird has expressly reserved jurisdiction. In fact, Terra II is not only related to Terra I, it is in fact and substance the same case.

ARGUMENT

18. Cook County Circuit Court General Order No. 1.3(c) provides for the procedure to be followed when an action has been filed in the wrong division. General Order No. 1.3(c) requires:

> Any action assigned to a judge that is determined by that judge, whether by suggestion of the parties or otherwise, to have been filed or to be pending in the wrong department, division, district or section of the Circuit Court of Cook County, shall be transferred to the Presiding Judge of the division or district in which it is pending for the purpose of transferring the action to the Presiding Judge of the proper division or district or for reassignment to the proper section.

Here, the Court assigned to hear Terra II has already determined that this matter be transferred to this Court for reassignment. (See Judge Gardner's Order, Exhibit A.)

19. On August 13, 2001, — two weeks after the filing of Terra II — plaintiffs attempted to bring an emergency motion for temporary restraining order before Judge Gardner. That plaintiffs sought injunctive relief (which further illustrated that this matter should have been filed in Chancery and should now be transferred to the Chancery Division, the appropriate forum for such injunctive actions) is yet another factor that supports defendants' motion for transfer. In fact, Judge Gardner expressly found that the action should be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division, inviting the parties to quote him on that point. (See Exhibit B, p.13.) Therefore, pursuant to General Order No. 1.3(c), where a judge assigned to a case, as here, Judge Gardner, has determined that the case has been filed in the wrong division, the matter shall be transferred to this Court for reassignment to the Chief Judge of the Chancery Division.

[1] In fact, even the addition of the two law firms as defendants is based on issues already decided by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court, First District. Specifically, in Terra I the Original Plaintiffs alleged a conflict of interest on behalf of the law firm representing the Foundation. Judge Kinnaird, after substantial briefing and argument, found that there was no conflict of interest that prevented one of the law firms from representing the Foundation. The Appellate Court denied the Original Plaintiff's appeal and the Supreme Court denied the petition for leave to appeal filed by the Original Plaintiffs. Here, the plaintiffs of Terra II are attempting to use the conflict already rejected by Judge Kinnaird, the Appellate Court, and the Supreme Court, to state a cause of action against the law firms.

20. Additionally, however, in light of the clear relatedness between Terra I and Terra II, transfer to the Chancery Division is warranted. Cook County Circuit Court General Order No. 1.3(d) also provides that:

> For the convenience of parties and witnesses and for the more efficient disposition of litigation, a judge, upon motion of any party may transfer any action pending before that judge to the Presiding Judge of the division or district for the purpose of transferring the action to any other department, division or district.

As recognized by Judge Gardner, it would be totally inefficient for any new judge to undertake the monumental task of gaining familiarity with the record from the original litigation. (Exhibit B, e.g., p.12.) The present claims are so intertwined with the original litigation that it would not be possible for a judge to consider the current claims without reviewing and considering the entire history of the litigation before Judge Kinnaird. Thus, transfer to the Chancery Division for reassignment will further promote judicial economy.

21. Moreover, the claims presently being couched as a "Complaint at Law" are really nothing more than a reiteration of the various motions and arguments presented and rejected by the Federal Court, as well as the chancery claims presented to Judge Kinnaird. Judge Kinnaird is the judge best able to address these claims as she has already considered these arguments and is intimately familiar with the facts leading up to these claims. For these additional reasons, this matter should be transferred and reassigned to Judge Kinnaird.

22. Finally, notwithstanding the relatedness between Terra I and Terra II, the allegations at issue in Terra II are more appropriate for a chancellor sitting in equity. The complaint filed in Terra II consist of five counts. The proposed first amended complaint consists of seven counts. Those counts seek declaratory and injunctive relief. Even the causes of action which do not expressly request injunctive relief are directed at stopping allegedly wrongful behavior. Moreover, the TRO filed by the plaintiffs before Judge Gardner demonstrates that the plaintiffs' real aim is equitable relief. Cook County Court General Order No. 1.2(b)(1) describes the types of cases heard by the Chancery Court as follows:

> . . . class actions, mortgage foreclosures, arbitration, injunctions, temporary restraining orders . . . declaratory judgments . . . declarations concerning or construction of wills (other than during the period of an estate administration), the appointment of trustees . . . receiverships . . . or other proceedings under the Corporations and Partnership Act . . .

(emphasis added). Clearly, the relief sought in plaintiffs' complaint are encompassed by the Chancery Court's purview under General Order No. 1.2(b)(1).

CONCLUSION

For all of these reasons, the Original Plaintiffs and Defendants Daley, Hartman, and Stebbins respectfully request that this Court transfer this case to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment.

MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, I am Steve Carlson from Sidley & Austin. I got these papers about two minutes before --

THE COURT: Let me ask you, can we stay off the record just a minute?

MR. CARLSON: Sure, absolutely.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan and James Carroll on behalf of certain defendants.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson from Sidley, Austin I believe on behalf of The Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: And pro se, aren't you a party now?

MR. CARLSON: Maybe.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You granted us leave to file.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. SZOLA: Your Honor, Scott Szola of Winston & Strawn technically hasn't been served either yet, so we will be in the same position as Sidley & Austin.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins. I am a defendant pro se and Assistant Attorney General on behalf of the Attorney General of Illinois.

MR. HEATWOLE: Mark Heatwole, Winston & Strawn.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Judge.

THE COURT: He assumes everybody knows him, but give them your name.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky and Tom Cronin for plaintiffs.

These are our motions. And I guess the first I would only ask Mr. Quinlan, certain defendants which one, Bill, so there is no question?

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you want me to go through, I am representing Mr. Hartman, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz. And we are not at the moment representing Miss Marshall or Mr. Stebbins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, your Honor, we have --

THE COURT: Let me before we start indicate that this case having been set for 2:00 o'clock, as the parties came in, we have had informal discussions which precluded in opening we had as a remaining defendants' attorney came in since the shortage of notice, nobody was essentially late because everything was pretty much of emergency. And that's what we have talked.

A moment ago the attorneys, half a dozen attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

16di-003468

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Judge, we object to venue here so anything -- if there is any kind of prejudice --

THE COURT: What are you worried about? I am sending it out sua spontae.

MR. PERKINS: I understand, Judge. I am just -- I don't want any rulings by the court --

THE COURT: Where do you want the venue, in Springfield?

MR. PERKINS: I just don't want any rulings by the court to be used as some prejudice.

THE COURT: Well, I thought everybody heard me since I raised it sua spontae. And I only did you for an afterthought; didn't I?

MR. CARLSON: You sure did, your Honor.

THE COURT: It doesn't make sense to be here. So if you want to argue, I can end up disagreeing. But I totally agree with you. Okay?

MR. PERKINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I think the whole principle of judicial economy and good sense is you put it all in one place. And I have always done that.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Which, your Honor, we may find ourselves going back to square one in front of Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not going to call it which I could do. I could do it. I just don't. I have the right to call it, and it is not ex parte. But I wouldn't do it.

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

5. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and

8. All current members of the Board of Directors will serve only until the 2002 Annual Meeting and will not be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter.

9. The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term:

b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and committee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. D

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS
EASTERN DIVISION

THE TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-for-Profit Corporation, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, Director, Chairman, and President, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, ALAN K. SIMPSON, Director, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, and JUDITH TERRA, Director, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, Plaintiffs, vs.

FLOYD D. PERKINS, in his official capacity as Assistant Attorney General, State of Illinois, Defendant.

No. 01 C 4976

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiffs, The Terra Foundation for the Arts, Paul Hayes Tucker, Alan K. Simpson, and Judith Terra, the latter three all directors of the Terra Foundation, have sued Floyd D. Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Illinois who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws, alleging that Mr. Perkins violated their federal constitutional rights to due process and freedom of speech by intimidating two other Terra Foundation directors who, as a result of the intimidation,[1] are

[1] Dr. Stephanie Marshall is head of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, an elite but public high school in Illinois. The other director in question, Dr. Theodore Stebbins, is curator of the Fogg Museum at Harvard University and has no ties to public institutions in Illinois but was allegedly intimidated by proposed about to vote to substantially change the by-laws of the Terra Foundation and take other acts that will force the Terra Foundation to keep its valuable art collection in Illinois for many years. Plaintiffs seek a temporary restraining order that would prevent either the vote that is expected to take place tomorrow, June 29, 2001, from taking place, or would prevent the two allegedly intimidated directors from taking part in that vote. Plaintiffs have not sued the two directors.[3] Plaintiffs nevertheless say that an injunction against the Attorney General will prevent either any vote from taking place or the two directors' participation in that vote on the ground that because of the intimidation the two directors have become de facto agents of the Attorney General. They argue therefore that an injunction against the defendant will be binding on the directors.

There are at least two problems with plaintiffs' attempted resolution of their conflict in this court. First, there is an ongoing lawsuit (two actually) presently pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County in which the present plaintiffs are defendants charges of conflict of interest in an amended complaint drafted but never filed by the State of Illinois in related state litigation.

[3] Plaintiffs did offer to add them as defendants but the addition of Dr. Marshall would almost certainly prevent diversity jurisdiction, alleged presently, and unless they are state actors, could not form a basis for subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3), the second basis on which plaintiffs allege subject matter jurisdiction. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Whether they can plausibly be considered to be acting under color of state law is discussed further in this opinion.

and involving the same subject matter raised in their federal court complaint. It is actually a proposed resolution of those lawsuits through a settlement which is expected to be voted on tomorrow that plaintiffs seek to stop. Plaintiffs say that neither the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, see Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923); District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983), nor the Anti-Injunction Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2283, prohibit this court from acting so long as it acts before the anticipated consent decree is entered in state court, but assuming that is so, principles of comity and federalism call for abstention where the issues raised can be litigated in the ongoing state action and where action by the federal court would interfere in the state proceeding.

The State of Illinois, representing Mr. Perkins, invokes Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971), in support of abstention. Younger holds that federal courts cannot enjoin ongoing state criminal proceedings unless extraordinary circumstances are present. In a companion case, Samuels v. Mackell, 401 U.S. 66 (1971), the Court applied a similar result to actions for declaratory judgment because they would also interfere with state prosecutions. Younger has been extended widely, including to civil contexts. For example, the State of Illinois likens this case to Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1 (1987) (Younger abstention appropriate when the relief sought by the federal plaintiff was an injunction against the party that had prevailed in state court to prevent it from executing its judgment prior to an appeal to a state appellate court). That case is not precisely on point because there, judgment had been entered, whereas in the case before me the goal is to prevent judgment from being entered. However, judgment need not have been entered for Younger abstention to be appropriate.

The Seventh Circuit states that abstention is appropriate "if the impacted state proceedings satisfy the following requirements: (1) the judicial or judicial-in-nature state proceedings are ongoing; (2) the proceedings implicate important state interests; and (3) there is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise constitutional challenges." AFSCME v. Tristano, 898 F.2d 1302, 1305 (7th Cir. 1990). These requirements are satisfied here. The state court proceedings are obviously judicial. The State of Illinois has set forth what it believes to be, and what I agree are, important state interests in its ability to regulate charitable institutions. It is not necessary that I endorse the policy adopted by the state to recognize that the interests it invokes are important. Finally, there was - and as far as I know still is - ample opportunity to raise any constitutional challenges in the state court proceedings.

The plaintiffs respond that section 1983 provides an exception to the usual application of Younger because federal protection is needed in such cases to vindicate plaintiffs' rights against state abuses. This is not in general true. For example, in Simpson v. Rowan, 73 F.3d 134, 138 (7th Cir. 1995), the court affirmed the use of Younger abstention in a § 1983 case seeking civil relief for constitutional violations of a man convicted of a crime; accord State of Indiana v. Haws, 131 F.3d 1205, 1210 (7th Cir. 1997)(quoting from Barichello v. McDonald, 98 F.3d 948, 954 (7th Cir. 1996): "Younger has 'come to mean that absent unusual circumstances, a federal court must refrain from entertaining injunctive relief which might interfere with the ... judicial process of state courts ....'"). Section 1983 is not a magic key into federal court, especially when, as here, there is ample opportunity to litigate the constitutional issues in state court. Moreover, there is no reason to think that the plaintiffs require the special protections of federal court even though the state is a party to the state court action. The only basis that the plaintiffs give for thinking there may be a problem with the state court is that the very able state court judge is elected. That is not a reason to think that she cannot fairly resolve charges of misconduct made against the state and its officers, such as Mr. Perkins.

Even if I were not to abstain, however, I could not grant the temporary restraining order sought by the plaintiffs. In the first place, plaintiffs do not appear to have standing. In order for a party to bring suit in federal court, three constitutional requirements under Article III must be met: "(1) the party must have personally suffered an actual or threatened injury caused by the defendant's illegal conduct; (2) the injury must be fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury must be one that is likely to be redressed by a favorable decision." United Transp. v. Surface Transp. Board, 183 F.3d 606, 611 n.2 (7th Cir. 1999). In this case, the last requirement is missing.

The only defendant named is Mr. Perkins. It would do no good to enjoin him from interfering in Board business or intimidating the directors with respect to the meeting at question. The State of Illinois says that he is in Canada, and does not even know that he has been sued. As the State says, with respect to his involvement, tomorrow is the best time to hold the meeting.

The plaintiffs really want me to enjoin Drs. Marshall and Crabbins from voting or coming to the meeting, but they are not defendants. If they were named, however, they could not be sued under section 1983, the basis for my jurisdiction. The plaintiffs suggest that they can be enjoined as persons acting "in consort" with the defendant, or as his agents. But they offer no authority that persons who have been intimidated or influenced by a state actor are acting in consort with them or as agents of those who intimidate them, or indeed that they could be named as section 1983 defendants at all. That section requires state action. And that is hard to show.

The Supreme Court has articulated several tests for when private action is state action: the "public function" test, the "state compulsion" test, the "nexus" test, and the "joint action" test. Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 939 (1982). Of these, only the "joint action" and "state compulsion" tests are worth considering. The tests are fact-specific. "Only by sifting facts and weighing circumstances can the nonobvious involvement of the State in private conduct be attributed its true significance." Burton v. Wilmington Parking Auth., 365 U.S. 715, 722 (1961); Dunham v. Frank's Nursery & Crafts, Inc., 919 F.2d 1281, 1284 (7th Cir. 1990).

The "joint action" theory, articulated in cases like Dennis v. Sparks, 449 U.S. 24, 27 (1980), says that a private defendant acts under color of state law when he is "a willful participant in joint action with the State or its agents." A charge of joint action amounts to alleging "some agreement between private and public actors to violate plaintiff's constitutional rights." Cunningham v. Southlake Center for Mental Health, Inc., 924 F.2d 106, 107 (7th Cir. 1991) (citing Fonda v. Gray, 707 F.2d 435, 438 (9th Cir. 1983) ("To prove a conspiracy between private parties and the government under § 1983, an agreement or 'meeting of the minds' to violate constitutional rights must be shown."]). "A requirement of the joint action charge therefore is that both public and private actors share a common, unconstitutional goal." Id. If the directors in question are unwillingly intimidated, however, they are not willful joint actors who share Mr. Perkin's hypothetically unconstitutional goals. See Moore v. Marketplace Restaurant, Inc., 754 F.2d 1336, 1352 (7th Cir. 1985).

I suppose one could be an unwilling co-conspirator, but what is alleged here is not that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins share any unconstitutional goals or have conspired, however unwillingly, to deprive the plaintiffs of their rights, but that they were somehow coerced into changing their votes on the settlement, basically to get Mr. Perkins off their backs, which change will have the effect of furthering Mr. Perkin's unconstitutional goals. That is not what is required.

But the situation for the plaintiffs is worse than this analysis suggests. "To state a § 1983 claim against a private actor, plaintiffs must show that the defendant invoked state authority in such a way that the defendant should be considered a state actor." Davis v. Union National Bank, 46 F.3d 24, 25 (7th Cir. 1994). For example in Del's Big Saver Foods, Inc. v. Carpenter Cook, Inc., 795 F.2d 1344 (7th Cir. 1986), the court held that a private person became a state actor for purposes of the state action requirement when he repossessed collateral on the strength of an ex parte order issued by a court. The ex parte order instructed the sheriff to assist the private person if need be to carry out the order. In that case it was not necessary to call the sheriff. The court held that "[t]he fact that the sheriff remained in the background and hence could not be joined as a defendant does not deprive Carpenter Cook's action in enforcing a judicial order of its character as state action." Id. at 1346. Here, it would not be possible to say that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins invoked the power of the Illinois Attorney General's office, which remains in the background: they are not argued to invoke any power; they have no court or administrative order to carry out, and they could not call in Mr. Perkins to back them up if they wanted to, which, the plaintiffs argue, they do not.

The plaintiffs' best shot is the "state compulsion" test, under which a § 1983 claim may be stated "when the state has so implicated itself in the defendant's action that the state has in effect compelled the action." Starnes v. Capital Cities Media, Inc., 39 F.3d 1394, 1396 (7th Cir. 1994). This test originated in Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 170 (1970). There the Court held that a "state is responsible for the [unconstitutional] act of a private party when the state, by its law, has compelled the act." 'When the State has commanded a particular result, it has saved to itself the power to determine that result and thereby 'to a significant extent' has 'become involved' in it.'" Id. (citation omitted). However the command has to involve action under color of some "statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of a

State," in the language of § 1983 itself. Id.

The actions challenged here are not analogous to the facts in Adickes, where a white woman was denied restaurant service (and subsequently arrested for vagrancy) because she was in the company of African-Americans. The Supreme Court held that it would satisfy state action if she showed that she was refused service by the defendant restaurant as the result of a state enforced custom compelling segregation of the races in Mississippi restaurants. Adickes, 398 U.S. at 171. In this case, there are two actions alleged to force the directors to change their votes. One is proposing to name Dr. Stebbins as a defendant in a lawsuit. The other is investigating Dr. Marshall's school. These are both official practices, but in the first place, neither of these involve a "command." They do not require the conduct they are supposed to induce - that these directors change their votes. The difference between inducement and requirement is a matter of degree, but not every incentive and disincentive is coercive. For example, in Mendoza v. United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, 497 F.2d 311, 312 (9th Cir. 1974) (per curiam), the court rejected the idea that a union shop agreement that grows out of the "normal give and take of collective bargaining and labor-management relations," is coercive, although anyone must recognize that it involves various threats and unwelcome inducements. It might be different if Mr. Perkins had held a gun to the heads of Drs.

Marshall and Stebbins, but all he did was to name one in a proposed amendment to a lawsuit and allegedly investigate the school of another.

Moreover, the conduct being induced (a changed vote) is not itself unlawful, unlike the racial discrimination involved in Adickes. Essentially the plaintiffs argue that Mr. Perkins used his undoubtedly legitimate authority to name Dr. Stebbins in a complaint and to investigate Dr. Marshall's school in order to get them to do something lawful, which the plaintiffs argue will have unfortunate effects. If the directors had just changed their minds, the plaintiffs would just have to live with it. What difference, as far as their status as potential § 1983 defendants goes, does it make if they changed their votes because of the inducements by Mr. Perkins? Even if Mr. Perkin's intentions were to violate the plaintiffs' constitutional rights by getting these directors to vote to approve the settlement, the plaintiffs do not explain, either with authority or with logic, how the directors can be charged with violating the plaintiffs' rights even under compulsion if they do what they had a lawful right to do in any event.

Since enjoining Mr. Perkins would be pointless, and Drs. Marshall and Stebbins are not state actors and cannot be sued under Section 1983, there is no relief that I can give that would redress plaintiffs' complaint. They lack standing. I abstain in any event. The plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order must therefore be denied. The action is dismissed.

Case No. 01 L 009112

Hon. Timothy C. Evans

DEFENDANT TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' MOTION TO TRANSFER THIS MATTER TO THE PRESIDING JUDGE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, CHANCERY DIVISION, FOR REASSIGNMENT TO JUDGE DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD

Defendant the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, by its attorneys, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, hereby moves this Court to enter an order transferring this matter to the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Chancery Division, pursuant to General Orders 1.2 and 1.3 of the Circuit Court of Cook County. In support of this motion, the Foundation states as follows:

1. Having failed in their multiple attempts before the Chancery Court to upset an agreed settlement that they do not personally support, Plaintiffs' current action in Law Division represents nothing more than their attempt to seek out another judge in another division who they think may be more sympathetic to their claims. On three separate occasions over the past month and a half, the Plaintiffs have been given the opportunity to present their arguments to block the settlement and resulting Consent Judgment (which was entered on July 26, 2001 after extensive consideration of the same matters alleged here by Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird on June 29, July 2 and July 24). Yet, on each occasion, Judge Kinnaird, who has presided over the Buntrock v. Terra litigation, Case No. 00 CH 13859 (Circuit Court, Cook County, Illinois), since its inception over 10 months ago, has found that the Plaintiffs' allegations lacked merit. In a blatant attempt to shop for a new judge, Plaintiffs then presented precisely the same allegations that they raised in front of Judge Kinnaird in their current Complaint in the Law Division in the guise of a new case, Case No. 01 L 009112.

2. On August 13, 2001, at a hearing on Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion for the Entry of a Temporary Restraining Order," Judge Sheldon Gardner, to whom the case had been assigned, sua sponte and upon oral motion of the Foundation transferred the case to the Presiding Judge of the Law Division for consideration of whether this matter should be transferred to the Chancery Court, indicating on the record that he believed that this matter should be before Judge Kinnaird. Given that Plaintiffs seek relief that is most appropriately granted by the Chancery Court, and that Plaintiffs' claims in this Court mirror those already presented to Judge Kinnaird, this Court should transfer Plaintiffs' claims to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for subsequent reassignment to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

I. Plaintiffs' Suit Must be Transferred because it Seeks Remedies Properly Considered by the Chancery Division.

3. Transfer to the Chancery Division is mandated by the remedies Plaintiffs seek and the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County. In seeking to undo the settlement agreement embodied in the Consent Judgment, Plaintiffs ask this Court for declaratory and injunctive relief. Yet, General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) of the Circuit Court of Cook County expressly provides that:

> The General Chancery Section hears actions and proceedings, regardless of the amount of the claim, concerning ... injunctions, temporary restraining orders . . . declaratory judgments, . . . and all other actions or proceedings formerly cognizable in courts of Chancery not otherwise provided for.

See General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) (emphasis added); see also Baal v. McDonald's Corp., 97 Ill. App. 3d 495, 501, 422 N.E.2d 1166, 1172 (1st Dist. 1981) ("In general, injunctions rest on the authority of courts of equity to restrain persons within their limits of jurisdiction from doing inequitable acts to the wrong and injury of others.")(emphasis added); Brooks v. LaSalle National Bank, 11 Ill. App. 3d 791, 801, 298 N.E.2d 262, 269 (1st Dist. 1973) (the granting of injunctive relief "resides in the sound discretion of the chancellor.")(emphasis added).

4. Given this mandate of the General Orders regarding the types of cases properly presented to the Chancery Division, it is clear that Plaintiffs have filed this action in the wrong division. Under General Order 1.3(c):

> Any action assigned to a judge that is determined by that judge, whether by the suggestion of the parties or otherwise, to have been filed or to be pending in the wrong department, division, district or section of the Circuit Court of Cook County, shall be transferred to the Presiding Judge of the division or district in which it is pending for the purpose of transferring the action to the Presiding Judge of the proper division or district, or for reassignment to the proper section.

See General Order 1.3(c) (emphasis added). Judge Gardner clearly recognized the requirements of General Order 1.3(c), and immediately transferred this matter to this Court for consideration of reassignment. Because Plaintiffs' filing of this action in the Law Division completely ignores the mandate of General Order 1.2(2.1)(b)(1), this cause must be transferred to the Chancery Division under the requirements of General Orders 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) and 1.3(c).[1]

II. Transfer of this Case to the Chancery Division would allow for Reassignment of the Matter to Judge Kinnaird, Whose Lengthy Involvement with and Consideration of the Legal and Factual Claims Made by the Plaintiffs Would Foster the Most Efficient Disposition of this Litigation.

Transfer of this matter to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division would also allow for subsequent reassignment of this case to Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division. In addition to the mandatory transfer rules of General Order 1.3(c), General Order 1.3(d) provides for transfer of matters to other divisions when such an action would further "the more efficient disposition of litigation." See General Order 1.3(d). Here, Judge Kinnaird's extensive involvement with the case giving rise to the Consent Judgment and her exhaustive consideration of the exact claims Plaintiffs now present necessitate transfer of this matter to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird.

5. Since Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz, two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, filed a lawsuit against the Foundation, the three Plaintiffs in this case, and an unrelated third party in September 2000, Judge Kinnaird has presided over all aspects of that litigation. Over the past 10 months, Judge Kinnaird has become intimately familiar with both the law and the facts related to this case, having first presided over four months of contentious motion practice followed by five months of mediation sessions aimed at reaching an agreement

[1] Any attempt by Plaintiffs to point to their "jury demand" as a reason for this Court to deny transfer to the Chancery Division is unavailing. The Supreme Court of Illinois has recently noted, "Conferring that would result in the dismissal of the Buntrock lawsuit. These mediation sessions eventually led to the entry of a Consent Judgment and Order on July 26, 2001.

6. In the process of entering this Consent Judgment, Judge Kinnaird also became intimately familiar with the claims Plaintiffs have made in the lawsuit they now seek to present in the Law Division. Plaintiffs first sought to block the settlement through presentation of a Motion for Temporary Restraining Order on June 29. After hearing argument on this matter at a hearing on the same day, Judge Kinnaird rejected Plaintiffs' motion for TRO and permitted the Foundation to hold its properly noticed and convened Board meeting at which the settlement was approved.

7. Three days later, on July 2, Judge Kinnaird again heard argument from the Plaintiffs that the settlement should be blocked, at which time the Plaintiffs filed a Motion for Leave to File Written Objections and for an Evidentiary Hearing on the Proposed Settlement. However, the Judge again rejected Plaintiffs' attempts to upset the settlement based upon their personal dislike for its terms. In denying Plaintiffs' motion, Judge Kinnaird noted that "You know, you've come into court and you've filed a number of things, and they sound very, very dramatic. But I don't see anything here supported by affidavit. I don't see anything here supportive of any substance." Tr. of Proceedings, 7/2/01, p.85. However, Judge Kinnaird did permit any party to file a written objection supported by affidavits after a motion for entry of the Consent Judgment was formally presented.

8. Plaintiffs then got their third "bite of the apple" in late July after the Foundation filed its Motion for Entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. On July 19th and July jurisdiction in chancery is not excluding trial by jury." Martin v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 163 Ill. 2d

16di-003511

20th, the Plaintiffs filed exhaustive pleadings objecting to the settlement, and seeking not only to state various counterclaims against the individuals they have now sued in this action, but also seeking to conduct limited discovery. After having reviewed all of the pleadings, exhibits, and cases submitted by the Plaintiffs, as well as the responses to these pleadings – a process that required the judge to "devote her whole weekend" to reviewing the literally hundreds of pages of documents – Judge Kinnaird then heard five hours of argument on July 24, 2001 concerning the very matters Plaintiffs now attempt to place before this Court. At the end of that hearing, Judge Kinnaird rejected Plaintiffs' unfounded attacks on the settlement for a third time and entered the Consent Judgment embodying the terms of the settlement.

9. Now, having had their exhaustive arguments repeatedly rejected in the Chancery Court, Plaintiffs seek to present these same claims and arguments in a new division. An examination of the Complaint Plaintiffs filed in the Law Division makes clear that all of the allegations and underlying facts are nothing more than matters that have been previously alleged and argued, and are an integral part of the proceedings before Judge Kinnaird in Chancery. See, e.g., ¶ 1 of Plaintiffs' Complaint (stating that the directors who voted for the settlement had engaged in "a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation"), ¶ 6 (alleging a "tainted mediation process"), ¶ 43 (attacking the Attorney General's role in the mediation process), ¶ 70 (alleging that each director who voted in favor of the settlement breached their fiduciary duty to the Foundation), ¶ 80 (seeking "a declaration that the settlement is unlawful"), ¶83 (stating that the court "should enjoin" the directors' approval of the settlement as ultra vires). Given Judge Kinnaird's extensive knowledge of and dealings with these claims and the facts surrounding them, that the Court-ordered mediation took place in the case pending in front of her, and that the Consent Judgment embodying the settlement was entered by her, judicial economy and fundamental fairness require transfer of this case to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Court for subsequent transfer to Judge Kinnaird under General Order 1.3(d).

CONCLUSION

10. The fact that Plaintiffs are now attempting to present their thoroughly considered and repeatedly rejected claims in another division and to suggest that they are somehow presenting a Law Division case is further proof that their present suit is nothing more than a transparent attempt to shop for a division and a judge that they think might be more amenable to their claims. Having failed in their numerous and exhaustive attempts to present their claims to the judge most intimately involved with the Buntrock litigation and designated under the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County as the proper forum in which to present their claims for equitable relief, Plaintiffs now attempt to breath new life into their tired and groundless arguments in the Law Division. Given the Chancery Division's designation as the proper forum in which to seek injunctive and declaratory relief, Judge Kinnaird's understanding of and experience with the facts and law surrounding Plaintiffs' claims, and the fact that the "claims" are an attack upon the settlement reached in the case in front of her and embodied in an Order entered by her, this case should be immediately transferred to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird .

WHEREFORE, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts respectfully requests that this Court enter an order transferring this cause to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S MOTION TO TRANSFER THIS MATTER TO THE CHANCERY DIVISION AND TO MOVE TO CONSOLIDATE THIS CASE WITH A RELATED PRIOR PENDING MATTER PENDING IN THE CHANCERY DIVISION

NOW COMES the Defendant JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois in his official capacity only on behalf of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS by his undersigned Assistants and moves that this matter be transferred out of the Law Division and to the Chancery Division of this Circuit Court, and that this matter be transferred , assigned and consolidated with a prior pending related matter there in Chancery now pending before Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird and in support states:

1) The Plaintiffs Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson and Judith Tucker on July 31, 2001 filed the original complaint in this matter and on August 13, 2001 filed an amended complaint. The differences between said complaints have no impact upon this motion.

2) The complaints themselves are lengthy meandering diatribes devoid of fact and replete with unsupported conclusions. While both complaints repeatedly state intimidation and unlawful acts occurred, the complaints are devoid of requisite specificity and simply lack facts sufficient to support said conclusions. The linchpin contention upon which all of Plaintiffs' claims are based is plaintiffs' repeated unsubstantiated assertion that Assistant Attorney

General Floyd Perkins acted "unlawfully" in another action which purportedly caused certain of the Defendants to enter into a court mediated settlement under purported intimidation (duress). Plaintiffs' multiple claims and counts relying thereon state that such makes a Chancery Court Consent Decree recently entered in another matter, which considered these very same claims by the Plaintiffs , an "unlawful" Consent Decree subject to being declared null and void.

3) In fact, the complaints show no facts to support claims of duress, coercion or unlawful acts. Plaintiffs complaint in sum absurdly claims that Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins acted unlawfully, by filing a lawsuit which plaintiff agreed to attempt to resolve in mediation; by engaging in an agreed court ordered mediation process by and with the express agreement of these Plaintiffs that mediation take place; by taking a bottom line legal position in mediation; and by investigating and preparing the case he was litigating.

4) The plaintiff by hyperbolic reasoning without legal basis declare these lawful acts by Perkins to be "unlawful", and then lifting themselves up upon their own bootstraps, imagine and assert others were intimidated into the settlement, despite the fact that those purportedly intimidated denied they had been coerced. A review of the complaints show no facts are plead showing "unlawful" conduct , intimidation, coercion or duress occurred. The multiple counts in the complaints are all premised upon these erroneous contentions and thus no cause of action is stated. However, both the original and amended complaint seek Declaratory and Injunctive Relief . General Order No. 1.2 of the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County provides that matters seeking Injunctive Relief and Declaratory Relief are to be filed in the Chancery Division and not the Law Division. While it is clear the complaints fail to state causes of action, they are styled seeking equitable relief and declaratory relief and they are to be filed and heard in the Chancery Division under General Order 1.2.

5) Illinois Supreme Court Rule 21 establishes the authority for the Circuit Court's General Orders. General Order 1.2 is an established and well understood rule in the Circuit Court of Cook County that matters seeking Declaratory and Injunctive must be heard in Chancery. The process is well established, it provides an orderly method for the presiding judge to administer the assignment of cases, there is no basis for this matter not to be so assigned , and there is no basis to allow it to remain anywhere else. Moreover it is a rule of court. Instructive as to the force of law to be afforded the Court's rules is the Illinois Supreme Court's holding in Bright v. Dicke 166 Ill. 2d 204; 652 N.E.2d 275, 278 (1995) in which the Illinois Supreme court states: "The rules of court we have promulgated are not aspirational. They are not suggestions. They have the force of law, and the presumption must be that they will be obeyed and enforced as written."

6) The Plaintiffs complaints tenders erroneous conclusions while failing to plead facts, but it also fails to follow the rules of court requiring the attachment of documents upon which a claim is founded. The complaints fail to conform to Illinois Code of Civil Procedure rule 5/2-606 (735 ILCS 5/2-606), which requires a pleader to attach as an Exhibit each and every document a claim or defense is founded upon. Plaintiffs' complaints are founded upon many documents , but none are attached. The complaints raise issues as to corporate by-laws, corporate articles of incorporation, settlement agreements, consent decree, complaints in other lawsuits, draft complaints , and various other documents . Contrary to rule 5/2-606 plaintiffs failed to attach any of these documents as Exhibits to the complaints.

7) Had plaintiffs attached the exhibits required by Rule 5/2-606, they would show that the matter filed herein, is related to two earlier filed cases now pending in the Chancery Division before the Honorable Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. Those cases being People v Judith Terra et. al. And Buntrock vs. Terra , et. al. Case No. 00CH 13859 pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division before the Honorable Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. Indeed, these very Plaintiffs' former legal counsel in that matter have just filed in the past two weeks an attorney fee petition in the matter before Judge Kinnaird seeking over $460,000 from the Defendant Terra Foundation to pay the Plaintiffs' legal bills for services rendered to them in those matters and specifically related to their participation in the agreed mediation which they complained of herein .

8) Moreover, the Plaintiffs' filed the very same matters /claims found in these complaints in Objections in the case before Judge Kinnaird. Judge Kinnaird denied the Objections and entered the mediation settlement Consent Decree which plaintiffs herein call unlawful and seek to have declared null and void..

9) It is a well established principle of judicial economy that related matters be consolidated , and by tradition the later filed matter is consolidated before the judge hearing the earlier dated case. Plaintiffs failure to comply with Procedural Rule 5/2-606 and make the needed document exhibits to the complaints herein , along with Plaintiffs' unusual filing of the subject complaints in the Law Division when such is clearly a Chancery matter was no innocent slip or mistake. Rather it was a transparent attempt to avoid having this matter transferred to and consolidated with the above Chancery matter still pending before Judge Kinnaird. Matters Judge Kinnaird has been dealing with for almost a year, from which she knows the falsity of the plaintiffs' contentions and has already ruled that the plaintiffs' contentions herein are without merit. A copy of plaintiffs' Objection filed in the case being heard by Judge Kinnaird is attached as Exhibit A. A comparison of the Objections to the allegations of the complaints herein shows they are the same.

10) The matter now pending before Judge Kinnaird involves her review of the services and resulting attorney fees for many parties including the plaintiffs, and the legal services of Defendant Sidley & Austin to the Terra Foundation, as well as, services of counsel to several of the other Defendant directors, all of which will be paid by the Illinois charity the Defendant Terra Foundation herein. The review of those fees by Judge Kinnaird would of necessity require that the issue raised herein be factored into determining the results obtained by those services and the proper fee amount. Indeed, were the Plaintiffs' claims true, which they are not, they would likely impact all further determinations on the proper amount of fees to be paid by the Terra Foundation, which is a matter before Judge Kinnaird, and all of which concerns services and conduct in the litigation and mediation Plaintiffs reference in the instant action. In fact, under the Consent Decree which Plaintiffs failed to attach, the fees are being reviewed by the court and all will be paid by the Terra Foundation, said fees are reported to exceed $ 3 million in total. Therefore this matter as a matter of judicial economy and in keeping with well established judicial administrative principles ought to be heard by Judge Kinnaird combined with her review of those fees. A true copy of the Consent Decree is attached hereto as Exhibit B.

11) Millions of dollars of public charitable funds are being sought in legal fees relative to the litigation settled in the matter before Judge Kinnaird. Significant fees were incurred in an agreed mediation process, that these Plaintiffs requested and agreed to, and only after other board members did not fully agree with their position did they assert the Objections and claims as related in the complaints. The Plaintiffs and their claims are best and properly judged by the court that participated and ordered the mediation .

Wherefore the Attorney General moves and prays that the court enter an order transferring the subject matter to the Chancery Division and that said matter be order and consolidated with the actions now still pending before Judge Kinnaird as set forth above.

FILED-2
2001 AUG 23 PM 1:25
CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS LAW DIVISION
CLERK
DOROTHY BROWN

EMERGENCY MOTION TO STRIKE APPEARANCE AND TO STRIKE UNAUTHORIZED PLEADING

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson, duly elected members of the Board of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, move this Honorable Court for the entry of an order 1) striking the attempted appearance of the defendant law firm Sidley Austin Brown & Wood on behalf of the Terra Foundation and 2) striking an unauthorized pleading allegedly presented on behalf of the Terra Foundation by the defendant law firm Sidley Austin Brown & Wood.

* * *

In support of the foregoing motion, plaintiffs assert as follows:

1. On August 13, 2001 incident to proceedings before the Honorable Sheldon Gardner, plaintiffs presented their emergency motion for the entry of a temporary restraining order. (See Exhibit A.)

2. Incident to the hearing before Judge Gardner on August 13, plaintiffs filed their First Amended Complaint at Law. (See Exhibit B.)[1]

3. On August 17 the defendant law firm Sidley Austin Brown & Wood presented what purports to be a motion of the Terra Foundation to transfer. (See attached as Exhibit D.)

---

[1]See transcript of proceedings (attached as Exhibit C) at page 5, lines 10-16.

4. On August 20 the defendant Sidley Austin Brown & Wood filed and served a purported appearance of that defendant law firm on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. (See Exhibit E.)

5. The defendant Sidley Austin Brown & Wood is not authorized to represent the Terra Foundation for the Arts and that matter is addressed in the attached correspondence. (See Group Exhibit F.)

6. Notwithstanding their status as a defendant; notwithstanding the fact that neither the Terra Foundation nor any other person, firm or entity can lawfully retain the defendant Sidley Austin Brown & Wood to represent the Terra Foundation; and notwithstanding that law firm's manifestly conflicted position; it has attempted to usurp the role of counsel for the Foundation.

Summary of Argument

Based upon the foregoing and as reflected by the attached exhibits, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood's filing should be stricken and their attempted appearance on behalf of the Foundation should be rejected as both unauthorized and in derogation of applicable Illinois Supreme Court Rules of Professional Conduct. Beyond that, Sidley's suggestion that it has been properly retained by Marshall Field (who has no authority to do so) is a direct repudiation of counsel's representation to Judge Gardner at the August 13, 2001 Emergency Hearing. (See Exhibit C.)

Sidley's attempt to represent the Foundation violates the understanding reached with Judge Gardner on August 13, 2001 and is precluded by their conflicted role, including inter alia, their rule as a defendant in this litigation.

Incident to the August 13 filing of the amended complaint which names Sidley as a defendant and outlines their conflicted posture (Exhibit B, see paragraphs 87-93, pages 27-30), plaintiffs pursued their emergency motion for temporary restraining order (Exhibit A).

The catalyst for the emergency hearing on the temporary restraining order was the notice of a proposed board meeting on August 14 as reflected by the proposed agenda for that meeting (Exhibit G). It was contemplated that the Board would ratify certain earlier actions taken at a meeting on August 1, 2001 (Exhibit G, item IV.A) and would also consider "Approval of Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood as counsel for the Foundation in the Tucker Litigation and authorization of Mr. Field to execute engagement letter." (Exhibit G, item IV.D)

The specific relief sought by our motion for temporary restraining order included the following prohibition:

> From retaining, consulting with, or otherwise working with Defendants Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn as counsel for the Foundation or any other party in the present case, and from otherwise advancing or paying any further funds of the Terra Foundation for the Arts to said law firms; (Exhibit A, paragraph 6, pages 16 and 17.)

At the hearing before Judge Gardner, defendants' counsel, including representatives of Sidley & Austin, told the Court that the proposed August 14 meeting would be cancelled and that no action would be taken by the Foundation's board without proper and lawful notice. Plaintiffs reserved their right to pursue their temporary restraining order. It was because of the specific representations to Judge Gardner that plaintiffs did not press the motion for temporary restraining order on August 13 and the matter was deemed moot.

We respectfully submit that the undisputed facts demonstrate that Sidley's attempted usurpation of the role as counsel for the Terra Foundation is a manifest violation of the applicable Rules of Professional Conduct. More critically, the fact that Mr. Marshall Field and Sidley have now circumvented the representations made to Judge Gardner on August 13 is nothing less than contumacious conduct warranting the requested relief, i.e., striking their appearance and striking their unauthorized pleading allegedly filed on behalf of the Foundation.

August 23, 2001

Respectfully submitted,

PAUL HAYES TUCKER, JUDITH TERRA and ALAN K. SIMPSON

THE COURT: Tucker versus Terra Foundation.

MR. CUMMINS: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good afternoon. Let me ask all of you to identify yourselves for the record. Let me start to my left with Mr. Novoselsky and we'll swing right across.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Good afternoon, Your Honor. David Novoselsky on behalf of the plaintiffs.

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins on behalf of the plaintiffs, Your Honor.

MR. GRAY: Jeffery Gray, Assistant Attorney General, on behalf of Floyd Perkins and James Ryan.

MR. CONLON: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Bill Conlon on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. SZALA: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Scott Szala on behalf of the proposed named defendant Winston & Strawn.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCHUMAN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. William Schuman on behalf of two of the individual defendants, Dr. Theodore Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall.

MR. CARROLL: Good afternoon, Your Honor. James Carroll and Cheryl Niro on behalf of four of the individual defendants, Buntrock, Gidwitz, Hartman, and Daley.

MS. NIRO: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good afternoon. Ms. Niro, it's good to see you.

Well, Counsels, I have several matters before us. Let's start first I have a matter which has been entitled "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and Strike Unauthorized Pleading."

Is there a response to that?

MR. CONLON: There is not, Your Honor. We just got that late yesterday evening. So I'm prepared to respond orally, although if Your Honor wants to take the matter under advisement, I would ask for some time to submit a written response.

THE COURT: Let's address first what the emergency is. Brother lawyer indicated that he has not filed a written response and I take it from his comments he'd like to have an opportunity to file a written response.

Is there any objection to counsel having an opportunity to file a written response to the emergency motion?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge, as long as it's done on some timely basis.

I would find it -- I do find it somewhat anomalous that Mr. Conlon would suggest that he's here on behalf of the Terra Foundation, which is precisely the issue that is presented. The representations that were made to Judge Gardner, as reflected in our papers, and Mr. Novoselsky was in attendance -- I was out of town at the time -- the representations made to Judge Sheldon Gardner presented to our Emergency Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order was to the effect that the Board would take no action, which we sought to enjoin, including, but not limited to, the authorization for Mr. Field, who we respectfully submit is not an appropriately designated Board member, to proceed with the hiring of Sidley & Austin, a defendant in this litigation, to represent the Terra Foundation. So those representations were made.

THE COURT: I need to interrupt you just one second.

MR. CUMMINS: Sure.

THE COURT: I'm just trying to make it possible for you to make your presentation all at one time rather than twice.

MR. CUMMINS: All right, Judge. You know, it was probably unnecessary to make that pitch.

THE COURT: It was a nice try.

MR. CONLON: Your Honor, could I respond to that pitch, though, for just a moment?

THE COURT: Before you do, let me just ask you to tell me how much time would you need to respond in writing to the motion itself?

MR. CONLON: Your Honor, we'd like seven days.

Your Honor, let me add to that. I'm happy to have some argument before Your Honor because I think Your Honor could simply decide that this is premature because I think it very much is. I would like to respond as to what the representations were that were made before Judge Gardner and, indeed, invite Your Honor to read the transcript that Mr. Cummins and Mr. Novoselsky have attached to their pleadings. I'm happy to visit with the Court this afternoon. I think you could dispose of this. But if Your Honor has any --

THE COURT: It's nice of you to offer, but I've had a chance to review some of these pleadings and I must say that my colleagues who have had a chance to review some of this have not found that it was all that crystal clear.

MR. CONLON: That's fine.

THE COURT: So I'll give you the seven days that you are asking for and I'll give opposing counsel seven days to reply if they choose to.

I note that apparently the 13th has already been a date set for another aspect of this case.

MR. CONLON: It's the transfer motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The transfer motion. We could set all of this on the same date, if you'd like.

MR. CUMMINS: That would be great, Judge.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I'd only ask --

THE COURT: Is it at 2:00 that day or is it at 10:00?

MR. CONLON: I don't recall, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: I believe it's at 2:00.

MS. NIRO: I thought so, too.

THE COURT: I'd rather set it for the afternoon when we have more time to deal with it.

MR. SCHUMAN: It is 2:00.

MR. CARROLL: 2:00, Your Honor. That's what I have down.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, so we're clear, and while

I'm the last person to object to collegiality, if you look at the transcript, and I was present. Counsel wasn't.

MR. CONLON: That's correct.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We had a TRO. Mr. Quinlan suggested, with the agreement of other counsel, that it was moot because the meeting would not proceed and no action would be taken. I don't want to find myself agreeing on behalf of my clients to give them the opportunity to file something in writing and then come back here some days later to find out that still more has been done ostensibly by the Foundation on behalf of the Foundation while these matters are pending.

Nor do I want our acquiescence to what I consider a courtesy to other counsel to be taken as a green light to continue to do what we believe happened here. Which is after we were specifically told that this meeting would not go forward, and that we were not waiving a position, we now find ourself in a position where Mr. Field has taken it upon himself to act as if he is a Board member and that he is empowered apparently with or without a meeting of the Board to hire this firm which was an agenda item which we tried to block before it happened.

Now we're in a position of where I guess one of the arguments is going to be the TRO is moot because it's already happened.

So, again, I don't want to be rude, but I don't want to find myself in a position of saying, well, they agreed to give us seven days to respond and in the interim, something takes place.

THE COURT: Well, let me just say to all of you, I have had an opportunity to take a look at Judge Gardner's transfer order and I took a look at a portion of what he had to say which was attached to one of these documents. I was just looking.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, sir.

MR. CONLON: I think it's Exhibit C, Your Honor, if I recall correctly. I think that's it.

MR. CUMMINS: It is, indeed, Exhibit C.

THE COURT: And so I want to assure you I've had a chance to read what was attached under Exhibit C. So there's no reason to repeat all that. I've seen it. But I do think it's best to argue this once.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Rather than having you do it many times.

MR. CARROLL: Just quickly in response to Mr. Novoselsky, Your Honor. At the time we were in front of Judge Gardner, they were represented by -- Sidley & Austin was representing the Foundation at that point in time and there was no objection in court at that time to Sidley and Austin's representation.

MR. CUMMINS: Not in this litigation, Judge.

MR. CARROLL: So it's somewhat vague, I guess, at this point to when they should have made the objection. They didn't at that time.

THE COURT: Well, it must be altogether obvious that there are different points of view here.

MR. CARROLL: Exactly.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As I said, Your Honor, that's what happens when collegiality rears its head. We did object. Judge Gardner, if you look -- if you look, went off the record. So I guess in the future we won't go off the record anymore.

THE COURT: I have no doubt that all of you will govern yourselves as your reputations have been long established, above board, and you will carry out your responsibilities as officers of this Court. I don't expect anybody to take advantage of the intervening time. This time is set aside just for pleadings so that everybody knows exactly what everybody else's position is. That's all.

MR. CUMMINS: We'll file our reply by the 7th, Judge, and it's going to be set then -- all of this will be set for hearing at 2:00 on the 13th?

THE COURT: The 13th at 2:00.

MR. CONLON: Your Honor, I will respond in writing, if I may, to comments made by Mr. Novoselsky and Mr. Cummins at that time.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. CONLON: Thank you.

THE COURT: Let me ask you to do this, one of you. Can I call on one of you to give me a copy of everything that's filed by --

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, sir. I'll do that.

THE COURT: -- whatever the last day was. Was it the 7th?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay. The 7th is a Friday. If I could get it by that day, then I could have a chance to read everything before we convene.

MR. CUMMINS: We'll make sure you get it, Judge.

MR. CONLON: You're talking about the motions that out of this proceeding today?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CONLON: Yes. We're happy to do that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let me wish everybody a wonderful weekend. I look forward to hearing more about this great case.

(Whereupon, the further proceedings in this cause were continued to 2:00 o'clock p.m. on the 13th day of September, A.D. 2001.)

DEFENDANT TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO TRANSFER THIS MATTER TO THE PRESIDING JUDGE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, CHANCERY DIVISION, FOR REASSIGNMENT TO JUDGE DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD

Defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, by its attorneys, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, respectfully submits its reply in further support of its motion to transfer this matter to the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Chancery Division, pursuant to General Orders 1.2 and 1.3 of the Circuit Court of Cook County.

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs' "objection" to transfer of this case fundamentally misstates the law and facts of this case. While supposedly asking this Court to examine the substance, and not simply the appearance of the matter, it is the Plaintiffs who attempt to divert this Court's attention from the true nature of their claim and the legal principles and factual realities governing this action. Despite their assertions to the contrary, Plaintiffs' current action in Law Division represents nothing more than a transparent repackaging of precisely the same claims and allegations they presented to (and which were repeatedly rejected by) Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division. In addition, while the Plaintiffs point to their appeal of the Consent Judgment, the terms of that document, and the authority of the Law and Chancery courts as reasons why this case should not be transferred, none of these arguments can overcome the express terms of General Orders 1.2 and 1.3 of the Circuit Court of Cook County and the intimate familiarity that Judge Kinnaird has with the legal and factual claims Plaintiffs seek to present in this action. For all of these reasons, and the further reasons set forth below, this Court should immediately transfer this action to the Presiding Judge of Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird for consolidation with Chancery Case No. 00 CH 13859 over which she has presided for almost a year.

I. Transfer is Required by the Remedies Plaintiffs Seek.

Plaintiffs have not and cannot present this Court with any reason to ignore the fact that their suit seeks remedies most properly considered by the Chancery Division, and their argument concerning the authority of Law and Chancery Division courts in no way demonstrates that this case should not be transferred. While pointing to some general language concerning judicial authority in the Circuit Courts, Plaintiffs' lawsuit and Plaintiffs' subsequent arguments against transfer ignore the fact that the General Orders of the Circuit Court of Cook County expressly establish a distinction between the types of actions generally heard in the different divisions of the Circuit Court of Cook County. In this case, the declaratory judgment and injunctive remedies that Plaintiffs seek are the types of claims properly presented in the Chancery Court, thereby necessitating a transfer of this action under the requirements of General Order 1.3(c). See General Orders 1.2(2.1)(b)(1) and 1.3(c).

Nothing in Plaintiffs' opposition brief suggests a contrary result. Indeed, the weakness of Plaintiffs' argument is revealed by what they resort to citing as legal authority – potential future rule changes and a civil cover sheet. (Plaintffs' Brief, p. 10-11). Obviously, these are a far cry from binding legal precedent. Moreover, despite Plaintiffs' suggestions to the contrary, Chancery Courts possess jurisdiction to hear law claims and hold jury trials. See Martin v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 163 Ill. 2d 33, 71, 643 N.E.2d 734, 752 (1994) ("Conferring jurisdiction in chancery is not excluding trial by jury.") (citation omitted). However, the fact remains that no jury trial or new court ruling are needed here, given that Plaintiffs' claims have already been ruled on by Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division. Plaintiffs' present action represents nothing more than an attempt to get another bite at the apple before a different trier of fact.

In recognizing the true nature of Plaintiffs' claims and the requirements of these General Orders, Judge Gardner noted that "this case [should] go back [to Judge Kinnaird]. And you can quote me." See 8/13/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p.13, attached hereto as Exhibit A. In light of these General Orders and Judge Gardner's appropriate assessment of this action, this cause must be transferred to the Chancery Division.

II. Transfer is Required by the Principles of Judicial Economy and Efficient Disposition of Litigation.

Plaintiffs' objection to transfer also intentionally mischaracterizes the proceedings before Judge Kinnaird in an attempt to ignore the extensive involvement that Judge Kinnaird has had with the Buntrock v. Terra litigation (Case No. 00 CH 13859 (Circuit Court, Cook County, Illinois)) that gave rise to their current suit and her exhaustive consideration of the exact claims Plaintiffs now seek to present in Law Division.

A. Judge Kinnaird Considered and Resolved the Same Arguments Plaintiffs are Trying to Recycle in this Lawsuit.

It is Plaintiffs who are being disingenuous when they state that Judge Kinnaird did not consider or resolve any of the issues they seek to present in this case. While Plaintiffs correctly note that they are not parties to the Consent Judgment, this fact in no way minimizes Judge Kinnaird's involvement with and exhaustive consideration of the precise claims which Plaintiffs allege in their Complaint. Plaintiffs here were defendants in the proceedings before Judge Kinnaird, requested that that matter be mediated, and actively participated in the mediation which culminated in the entry of the Consent Judgment. Plaintiffs now seek to challenge the Consent Judgment entered by Judge Kinnaird merely because they do not happen to like the fact that they were outvoted by a majority of the Board of Directors in determining whether the Terra Foundation should agree to the entry of the Consent Judgment.

In the month leading up to entry of the Consent Judgment, Plaintiffs repeatedly tried (and failed) to undermine an agreed settlement reached by a majority of the Foundation's Board of Directors. On June 29, July 2 and July 26, Plaintiffs presented their arguments to Judge Kinnaird for why this settlement should not be approved. At each hearing, Judge Kinnaird rejected Plaintiffs' baseless and unfounded attacks upon the settlement. Judge Kinnaird considered hundreds of pages of pleadings and exhibits filed by Plaintiffs and devoted approximately eight hours of court time over three separate court hearings to Plaintiffs' objections. Judge Kinnaird was not a "mere scrivener" mechanically and unthinkingly "recording the private agreement of the parties," as Plaintiffs suggest. (Plaintiffs' Brief at p. 5). To the contrary, Judge Kinnaird exhaustively examined and ruled on the very challenges to the Consent Judgment which Plaintiffs now recycle in their Law Division Complaint.

Indeed, for Plaintiffs to contend that Judge Kinnaird "resolved nothing" and that she made no findings with respect to their objections to the Consent Judgment (Plaintiffs' Brief at p. 9, fn. 18) is disingenuous to the extreme. As Plaintiffs are well aware, Judge Kinnaird indicated that she spent an entire weekend reading the Plaintiffs' pleadings, attachments, and cases. (See 6/24/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p. 123, attached hereto as Exhibit B). After a five hour hearing, Judge Kinnaird indicated "I have found nothing in these papers that have been cited by the objectors that should cause me not to approve this settlement. I really don't see it as a close call . . ." (6/24/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p. 124). With respect to Plaintiffs' claim that two Board members had been intimidated into agreeing to the settlement, Judge Kinnaird ruled with regard to Dr. Marshall that "this was not a lady who was being intimidated by anybody," and further ruled with regard to Dr. Stebbins that "I also did not feel that there was intimidation of Dr. Stebbins in this case. And I just simply don't see it." (6/24/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p. 126-27). With respect to the Plaintiffs' claims that the settlement somehow violated or interfered with the Foundation's mission, Judge Kinnaird stated "I do not see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical . . . to the Foundation's purposes. . . This Foundation is going to be able to pretty much operate the way that it has. It will be able to conduct its mission of providing education and art throughout the world . . ." (6/24/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p. 127). In short,

16di-003561

Judge Kinnaird made detailed and explicit findings, which Plaintiffs are now trying to get overturned in their Law Division lawsuit. It is not the case, as Plaintiffs suggest, that Judge Kinnaird failed to resolve these issues – rather, Judge Kinnaird resolved them against the Plaintiffs.

B. The fact that Plaintiffs have Filed an Appeal does not give them the Right to Further Multiply Proceedings by Filing a "Sideways Appeal" in Law Division.

Plaintiffs' claim that their appeal of Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment now prevents this case from being transferred back to the judge who is most intimately familiar with both the facts and law underlying their claim is similarly incorrect. The mere fact that an appeal has been filed does not give Plaintiffs carte blanche to bring duplicative proceedings in Law Division. As Plaintiffs themselves admit in their objection to transfer, "the filing of a notice of appeal . . . does not deprive the trial court of all jurisdiction over a case. The notice of appeal only restrains the trial court from changing or modifying the injunction order, or from taking any other action which would interfere with appellate review of that order." (Plaintiffs' Brief at p. 4, fn. 6, quoting In re Parentage of Melton, 321 Ill. App. 3d 823, 827 (1st Dist. 2001)). In this case, Judge Kinnaird has specifically retained jurisdiction to address matters related to fees and to enforce the Consent Judgment. See Consent Judgement at p. 4 ("The Court retains jurisdiction over the action and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the consideration and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.")

Even more tellingly, Plaintiffs admit that the proper place to have their objections to the entry of the Consent Judgment heard is before the Appellate Court. As Plaintiffs themselves state, "Until such time as that appeal has been disposed of, the case 'pends' before that Court and that Court only." (Plaintiffs' Brief at p. 4). Accordingly, Plaintiffs cannot now re-litigate the same issues in front of another trial court judge at the Circuit Court level. Plaintiffs are in essence trying to take two appeals at once: one appeal to the Appellate Court and one "sideways" appeal to a Law Division judge. Indeed, at the same time they are appealing Judge Kinnaird's ruling to the Illinois Appellate Court seeking to vacate the entry of the Consent Judgment, Plaintiffs are also attempting to prosecute a Law Division suit seeking precisely the same remedy – i.e. vacating the entry of the Consent Judgment. Such gamesmanship should not be tolerated.[1]

C. Judge Kinnaird Did Not Authorize, and Defendants Did Not Acquiesce In, Plaintiffs' Attempt to Recycle the Same Arguments Rejected by Judge Kinnaird.

In a last-gasp attempt to avoid having this case transferred back to Judge Kinnaird, Plaintiffs attempt to argue that Judge Kinnaird somehow authorized their forum-shopping in Law Division, and that the Defendants somehow "acquiesced" to this. Nothing could be further from the truth. Judge Kinnaird denied Plaintiffs the right to file a counterclaim, and ruled that that denial was without prejudice to their trying to state, if they could, any valid causes of action in a separate lawsuit.[2] However, at the same time Judge Kinnaird stated that the proposed counterclaim attacking the Consent Judgment had "a lot of defects to it" and explicitly "question[ed] whether valid causes of action . . . are . . . alleged in these counterclaim." (6/24/01 Tr. of Proceedings, p. 129). At no time did Judge Kinnaird ever endorse the notion of Plaintiffs filing the exact same rejected attacks on the Consent Judgment as a new lawsuit in front of a different judge, and at no time did the Defendants ever "acquiesce" in this. In short, the

[1] Given this strategy, it is ironic that the Plaintiffs would attempt to claim that it is the Defendants who seek to "have their cake and eat it too."

[2] At the time Judge Kinnaird made her ruling, she was aware that the Plaintiffs were trying to assert a Section 1983 claim against the Attorney General in federal court.

multiplying of proceedings and the "sideways appeal" which Plaintiffs are now pursuing is gamesmanship of their own devising, without any judicial approval or acquiescence by other parties.[3]

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs' attempt to portray their Law Division case as an "independent" action that cannot be transferred back to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird fails legally, factually and logically. Plaintiffs' Law Division suit is nothing more than a transparent attempt to seek out another judge in another division who they feel may be more sympathetic to the claims that were previously rejected by Judge Kinnaird. Despite their arguments to the contrary, Plaintiffs cannot avoid the express requirements of General Orders 1.2 and 1.3. The Chancery Division is the appropriate forum in which to seek the injunctive and declaratory remedies Plaintiffs desire, Judge Kinnaird has an intimate familiarity with the facts and law governing Plaintiffs' claims that will lead to the most efficient disposition of their claims, and all of these claims involve the validity of the Consent Judgment Judge Kinnaird herself entered. All of these factors mandate immediate transfer of this action to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird for consolidation with Case No. 00 CH 13859.

[3] Moreover, the notion of "acquiescence" is a red herring. If the Plaintiffs disagreed with Judge Kinnaird's ruling, their only option was to appeal the matter to the Illinois Appellate Court. Plaintiffs cannot ignore Illinois rules of appellate procedure even if another party acquiesced in such an action (which, in this case, the Defendants did not do).

MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, I am Steve Carlson from Sidley & Austin. I got these papers about two minutes before --

THE COURT: Let me ask you, can we stay off the record just a minute?

MR. CARLSON: Sure, absolutely.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan and James Carroll on behalf of certain defendants.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson from Sidley, Austin I believe on behalf of The Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: And pro se, aren't you a party now?

MR. CARLSON: Maybe.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You granted us leave to file.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. SZOLA: Your Honor, Scott Szola of Winston & Strawn technically hasn't been served either yet, so we will be in the same position as Sidley & Austin.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins. I am a defendant pro se and Assistant Attorney General on behalf of the Attorney General of Illinois.

MR. HEATWOLE: Mark Heatwole, Winston & Strawn.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Judge.

THE COURT: He assumes everybody knows him, but give them your name.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky and Tom Cronin for plaintiffs.

These are our motions. And I guess the first I would only ask Mr. Quinlan, certain defendants which one, Bill, so there is no question?

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you want me to go through, I am representing Mr. Hartman, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz. And we are not at the moment representing Miss Marshall or Mr. Stebbins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, your Honor, we have --

THE COURT: Let me before we start indicate that this case having been set for 2:00 o'clock, as the parties came in, we have had informal discussions which precluded in opening we had as a remaining defendants' attorney came in since the shortage of notice, nobody was essentially late because everything was pretty much of emergency. And that's what we have talked.

A moment ago the attorneys, half a dozen attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Judge, we object to venue here so anything -- if there is any kind of prejudice --

THE COURT: What are you worried about? I am sending it out sua spontae.

MR. PERKINS: I understand, Judge. I am just -- I don't want any rulings by the court --

THE COURT: Where do you want the venue, in Springfield?

MR. PERKINS: I just don't want any rulings by the court to be used as some prejudice.

THE COURT: Well, I thought everybody heard me since I raised it sua spontae. And I only did you for an afterthought; didn't I?

MR. CARLSON: You sure did, your Honor.

THE COURT: It doesn't make sense to be here. So if you want to argue, I can end up disagreeing. But I totally agree with you. Okay?

MR. PERKINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I think the whole principle of judicial economy and good sense is you put it all in one place. And I have always done that.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Which, your Honor, we may find ourselves going back to square one in front of Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not going to call it which I could do. I could do it. I just don't. I have the right to call it, and it is not ex parte. But I wouldn't do it.

If he has a problem with having this go, that's his problem. I don't see any problem in having it go there. And you would be a delight in my life. I would grow older with you all. But it would be the delight of my life. Sometime when all of you can get a new case from the beginning, it would be my pleasure to have you all here.

(Whereupon, further proceedings in said cause were adjourned sine die.)

THE CLERK: Buntrock versus Terra, 00 CH 13859.

THE COURT: The attorneys planning to address the Court, please step up. Identify yourselves for the court reporter. I'd like to start first with plaintiff's counsel.

MR. CARROLL: Good afternoon, your Honor. James Carroll on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. KENNEDY: Good afternoon. John F. Kennedy on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. QUINLAN: Good afternoon, your Honor. William R. Quinlan on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. IOPPOLO: On behalf of the State of Illinois Thomas Ioppolo from the Attorney General's office. And Mr. Perkins will be here momentarily.

MISS STONE: Good afternoon, your Honor. Susan Stone, S-T-O-N-E, from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins and Chris Todd for the defendants, your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm certain this is going to be a long afternoon. I don't want everybody to be uncomfortable. So you are welcome to sit at counsel table.

I have pretty much an order of proceeding I'd like to go through today. I want to go through, first of all, the pleadings that I have received to make sure that I have everything. And I am also going to want to go through the proposed consent decree. I have a lot of questions. I was just presented with the decree just a few minutes before you were here the last time. I didn't have the opportunity to analyze it, but I would have liked to before July 2nd. So I have many of my own questions.

And then we have to get to the issues that are up today which are issues that are presented by the objectors.

If you can find yourselves comfortable places at counsel table. If you want to take a few moments to unshuffle and set up the way you want. It's going to be really long and you're going to be really tired very soon.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, I do have one preliminary matter once we get through what you wanted to go through in terms of housekeeping, I'd like to address that. It may shorten the proceedings.

THE COURT: What kind of matter?

MR. CUMMINS: Well your Honor, we believe in the interest of justice and consistent with the record that is now before the Court, that particularly given our pending motion for discovery, that this hearing ought to be adjourned until we get that discovery accomplished.

THE COURT: I understand what you're about to say, but you're miles ahead of me. That's down here at the bottom of the pile. And I've got to do it in order or I'm going to lose track of it.

MR. CUMMINS: If I may though I'd be happy to explain in short terms how we might get there.

MISS STONE: Another housekeeping matter, your Honor. When you're done making it clear for the record what you've received, and after you' ve asked whatever questions you want to ask about the proposed consent judgment, I do believe it would be appropriate at that time to allow the Foundation to go first, since it is our motion.

THE COURT: Everybody just make yourselves comfortable. I'd like main counsel at counsel table. I'm sorry we don't have a large enough courtoom. I'm sorry we don't have enough chairs. There may be some in the conference, if anybody wants to pull one out.

16di-003586

MR. IOPPOLO: Mr. Perkins is here now.

THE COURT: Mr. Perkins, it's going to be a long afternoon. They may be pulling some chairs out of the conference room. I'm sure you don't want to stand.

When this case was last in front of me, July 2nd, it was in front of me for status to find out whether or not the mediation that had been progressing for approximately four months had concluded.

About twenty five minutes before court was to open I received the one page letter from Mr. Hilliard saying that there had been a mediated agreement. And just a couple of moments before court was to start I received from the Foundation a proposed consent judgment and order. And at that time it was not signed by anybody. There was no indication that it was in final form. And there was no motion being made to approve it.

We had an extended proceeding because there were objections that were being raised before the court. And those objections were being presented by counsel from Washington as well as the law firm of Bellows and Bellows.

16di-003587

The Court heard those objections and at the end of the day determined that the orderly way to go about this was a formal motion from someone, which turned out to be the Foundation, to approve a settlement agreement, and an opportunity to respond to those objections.

I set a briefing schedule. And this matter was then set for today for me to determine whether or not there needs to be any kind of an evidentiary hearing, or whether we can go ahead and consider the approval of the proposed consent decree.

Since you were all here the last time I have received a number of things. And many of those documents have either been presented to the Court in sealed envelopes or filed with the clerk under seal. And we need to clear that up before we start and do anything here.

I want to go document by document and talk about unsealing as much as we possibly can because I'm not quite sure what's filed under seal and what the exhibits under seal. But after you ruled the brief was not treated under seal. And your Honor, our position is none of this should be under seal.

THE COURT: I understand. We're going to try to unseal everything that can possibly be unsealed today.

The objections of Judity Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson have been filed with the clerk. They're public?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Now we've got the 35 exhibits to the objections. I'd like to go through them one by one. Does everybody have them with them? That's the second document that I got.

The Board minutes from April 25th of 1990. That's some of the most interesting reading I've ever had. Any reason why we can't have that in the court record?

MR. CUMMINS: No.

THE COURT: As far as the Foundation is concerned?

MISS STONE: No, your Honor, there is no reason why it cannot be.

THE COURT: The Planning Committee meeting of

16di-003589

MR. PERKINS: Except for the accuracy, no problem Judge.

THE COURT: And number 8 I have a little problem with. It's a letter from James Collins who had been the attorney of the Foundation from Bell Boyd to Dan Terra. That is a December 6th, 1989 letter. It's kind of old and everything. But is this attorney client privilege, is this something we should be concerned about here? On behalf of the Foundation, Miss Stone?

MISS STONE: It obviously raises an issue, your Honor, of attorney client privilege, which of course the Foundation does not waive.

I am not precisely clear how it was that the individual defendants came in possession of this. They may indeed have come into possession of this by virtually their role as directors of the Foundation. I don't believe any particular individual director can however waive a right of privilege which the Foundation as a corporate entity possesses.

THE COURT: This says confidential in big letters up on the top. And it looks like it was written by the attorney for the Foundation to the chairman of the Foundation in his capacity as chairman. It really doesn't have a lot of exciting stuff. A lot of this stuff is old or whatever, but still I think we probably should keep this sealed under attorney client privilege, unless Mr. Cummins you want to convince me otherwise.

MR. CUMMINS: I don't know that anyone can assert that it's been protected as privilege. I do see it says confidential, but the subject matter and the substance in this letter has been argued back and forth in all kinds of papers well before I arrived at the scene of this accident.

So I don't see any reason that it ought to be kept confidential. And I don't think that there is any serious compromise of any interest as a result of its publication.

It clearly reflects the intention of Mr. Terra is clearly inconsistent with the position of the AGA and the Foundation at the present time.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I have to object.

MR. CUMMINS: Well the AGA doesn't have any position to object.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, again on behalf of the

16di-003591

Foundation the Foundation does assert attorney client privilege over any communications going either way from an attorney for the Foundation, which Mr. Collins was at this point in time, to Mr. Terra who was then chairman of the Terra Museum.

THE COURT: I don't want to get hung up on this letter forever. Mr. Cummins, how did you all get this?

MR. CUMMINS: I can't answer that question, Judge. I'll find out. One of the preliminary things I was going to address, and I am relying largely on papers that were previously filed by Mr. Quinlan on behalf of his clients Buntrock and Gidwitz. I'm going to object to anything Sidley and Austin does in this case today because based upon the assertions of Mr. Quinlan and his clients they are conflicted in this proceeding. That is one of the reasons we want to adjourn it. We believe Winston and Strawn is conflicted, We believe Sidley is conflicted. And we think that these are serious issues that have to be addressed by the Court as a premise to this entire proceeding.

I just want to make that of record.

THE COURT: It's on the record. And to the extent it's an objection, it's going to be overruled.

16di-003592

We have been through the Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it. The Appellate Court reviewed it. I know that Mr. Quinlan probably totally agrees with you generally on the whole subject matter, but maybe today he disagrees.

But Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation and they have not been removed and I don't see a conflict so let's just move on.

I'm going to keep this letter, it really doesn't do much. I've read it all, I'm going to keep it sealed for now. If you want to come in later and have it unsealed. If you concede that this was somehow in the public domain, attached to a pleading, that somewhere along the line the attorney client privilege got waived we'll open it up. For those of you who have not seen this letter, it's really nothing heavy anyway.

The next thing, Exhibits 9, 10,11, 12, 13 are all documents that relate to Dan Terra: intent. They were declarations filed in Federal Court. They should all be unsealed.

Fourteen I want to unseal. That's a mailing address announcement. The Simpson declaration in Federal Court is 15. That should be unsealed.

16di-003593

Now we have the documents in mediation. And I want to keep those sealed at this point. They are the Attorney General's draft terms, that's number 16. The modification, I've read all of these by the way. Number 17, the second modified red line version. That should stay sealed.

Number 18, that's the letter from Mr. Stebbins to Collins. I don't see any reason not to have that one unsealed. Does anybody think that that one should stay sealed? Okay, that one is unsealed.

Mr. Tucker's affidavit in Chancery, which is number 19, is unsealed.

Strategic planning minutes of May 10th, with the same caveat, I don't think those have ever been approved, but I think they should be unsealed.

Number 21 Miss Marshall's correspondence about mediation, her position, I think that should remain sealed.

Twenty two, unseal.

Twenty three, AG's first amended complaint in Chancery. I want to keep that one sealed. That was never filed. And there is no issue that it was circulated. We're going to unseal the fax transmission, 24, but not the document itself. I don't see that it's going to serve any purpose.

Number 25 is going to stay sealed. Once again, that's a document from mediation.

MISS STONE: I believe it's also attorney client privilege. It's from Mr. Stebbins to Mr. Carlson and myself in our capacity as Foundation counsel.

THE COURT: Thank you.Number 26, a transcript of the Board meeting conference call. Now that's the one that I got first. That's the one that I read. I just want to clear up one other thing here. I got this transcript and I read it over this weekend. I marked it all up. Then yesterday I got the tape and so I listened to the tape with the transcript. And I caught at least one big thing that kind of jumped out at me.

And so I had my paralegal call Miss Stone today to verify that was not Mr. Stebbins talking. I'm on the version of the transcript that was attached to the objectors' exhibits. I'm on the version of the transcript that was pages 18 and 19. Where it says male voice and it's Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Stebbins again and the part where he presumably said I want protection. Well when I read it that wasn't Mr. Stebbins's voice at all. And I went back and compared voices and spent a lot of time with the tape and realized that was Mr. Gidwitz talking.

Again I realize after I had done all of this and after a telephone call had been made to Sidley that there was another version of this whole thing. Remember Sidley was supposed to give me at the time you gave me the motion to approve the settlement agreement you were suppoed to give me the transcript. I never got that transcript.

MISS STONE: It is attached to the brief we filed yesterday. We apologize we did not get it to you sooner. I have an additional copy.

THE COURT: I saw it just within the last half hour attached to your thing yesterday. And I didn't realize the two versions were different.

MISS STONE: We made it available to all counsel.

THE COURT: Does everybody agree that the version that is attached to the Sidley papers is the correct version?

16di-003596

MR. CUMMINS: I know it's different in that respect. I noticed that myself. I haven't heard the tape, Judge. I'll take your word for it.

THE COURT: It's definately different. And I figured out without knowing about the other transcript it's Mr. Gidwitz.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, that portion of it you're absolutely correct.

THE COURT: So I don't see any reason why that can't be unsealed. We are dealing with Exhibit 26 now, the transcript.

Moving on down, the motion for--number 27 unsealed.

Twenty eight unsealed.

Twenty nine unsealed.

Thirty unsealed.

Mr. Perkin's letter, 31, is sealed. That relates to the mediation.

The Tribune article on the Ragenstein Settlement, unsealed.

And the last three letters, 33, 34 and 35, unsealed.

The objector has leave at the close of today to file the unsealed exhibits with the clerk as a separate document.

16di-003597

The next thing that I received were documents that came in yesterday. And they are the Terra Foundation's objections. And I should mention for the record that the original objections that were filed in this case were 28 pages long. And I thank the counsel for the Terra Foundation. You are the only counsel that complied with this Court's standing order of the15 page limit on all filings.

MISS STONE: If you're right, you can be brief, your Honor.

THE COURT: And I appreciate that very much. There were no separate set of exhibits from the Terra Foundation.

MISS STONE: That is correct, your Honor. We did submit under seal, and I presume you would have one unsealed, the transcript of the Board meeting, the correct version.

THE COURT: I didn't get that. It should be unsealed. There is no reason for it to be sealed.

MISS STONE: And we did attach a few pages of the transcript from the last hearing.

16di-003598

THE COURT: Right, and that wasn't sealed So your documents were not sealed, is that correct?

MISS STONE: Our brief was not sealed. We have now, today, filed an unsealed version of the transcript of the Board meeting on June 29th.

THE COURT: All right, because what I got was this sealed document here.

MISS STONE: That is the transcript.

THE COURT: That is the transcript. Okay, I thought that was an extra copy of your reply. It doesn't say it on the outside. It says on the outside--now I'm reading it correct, it is the transcript. So there is no reason to file this with the clerk.

MISS STONE: We did file it in an unsealed version with the clerk of the court.

THE COURT: Diane, this is not to be sealed. Take it out of the envelope and refile it. Consider it filed.

MISS STONE: Thank you.

THE COURT: The Quinlan documents that came in yesterday from the plaintiff, in that regard we have a motion for leave to file in excess of 15 pages. And they have a document which is 25 pages long with exhibits. And attached thereto are Exhibits (a) through (L), and I'd like to go through them one by one.

16di-003599

The first set of them are the documents we spoke about the other day, relate to the documents, about appointing a mediator and those names. I have no problem if you unseal that provided that you take out all the other names with the exception of Mr. Hilliard in that last paragraph. I just don't want to have all these other names about proposed mediators out there.

The letter from Mr. Crow, which is Exhibit (b) unsealed taking out the other three names and leave Mr. Hilliard's name in. That's the important thing there.

MISS STONE: I'm sorry, your Honor, just for clarification, the previous indication about what could be unsealed with the deletion of other names would be Exhibit (b)?

THE COURT: No, the first one is Exhibit (a) unseal that, but in the last paragraph take out all the other names with the exception of Mr. Hilliard. Does that make sense?

16di-003600

MISS STONE: Yes. Would that also be true with (b)?

THE COURT: (B) we're going to take off all the names except Mr. Hilliard.

Exhibit (c) can be unsealed. Exhibit (d) is unsealed. (e) is unsealed. (f) is unsealed, (g) unsealed.

(H) that's the correct transcript, or the correct transcript that was filed already. That's unsealed..

The proposed consent judgment (i) is unsealed. (j) is unsealed, (k) is unsealed. And as far as I'm concerned (L) should be unsealed.

So the only thing in this whole group of stuff that should be sealed are the other mediators names, proposed mediators names. The rest of it is all open.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, may I just have one moment to closely study (L) which is the communication from the Foundation's attorney to members of the Board?

THE COURT: It's the conflict policy.

MISS STONE: I understand the conflict policy itself is probably an appropriate matter of open communication. I'm just merely pausing a moment to read the memorandum itself.

16di-003601

THE COURT: Sure. Take your time.

MISS STONE: Just as long as it appears, your Honor, the Foundation is in no way generally waiving the attorney client privilege, we will not object.

THE COURT: Fine, Leave that one unsealed. Now I have the People's response. Mr. Perkins outdid everybody with 45 pages coming in yesterday. And we don't have, I think, a leave to file, separate motion for leave to file on Mr. Perkins' one. And I have the various exhibits to Mr. Perkins. And a couple of these I am really looking for some guidance here as to what to do.

So let's go from the beginning. As far as I'm concerned the tapes can be a public record. I don't have a problem with the tapes. Does anyone have a problem with the tape?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge.

THE COURT: Well right now it's back in my tape machine and I will be giving it to the clerk. And it will go down to the clerk's office today. But we will unseal that.

The defendant's counsel's letters regarding the mediators I would just simply say the same thing. I would say, and once again this is Mr. Perkins, so you're going to be in charge of your own exhibits. Did you file this all under seal?

MR. PERKINS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay, well most of it is going to come unsealed. The letters, take out all the other names and take out all the resumes of the other people. And that's on your Exhibit (b).

I've gone ahead and tabbed all of these. And I realize your versions, counsel, are probably like mine and they are not tabbed. So if I'm going too fast and you're trying to find these just tell me to slow down.

James Terra's affidavit, unsealed. James Terra's lawsuit, unsealed. Daniel Terra's Will, I assume that's public because it's been filed. That's unsealed.

Okay, what are we going to do with this tax return?

MISS STONE: Could you give me a moment, your Honor.

THE COURT: That's Exhibit (f).

MISS STONE: Your Honor, we obviously as counsel for the Foundation did not represent the deceased, Daniel Terra, nor do we represent his estate, nor do we represent his executor James Terra. However, none of those individuals are in court today. I imagine that if they were here they would argue that indeed there is some confidentiality which adheres to the IRS tax return.

THE COURT: How did they get it?

MISS STONE: I'm not sure, your Honor. I believe it was the AG that filed this.

THE COURT: Oh the AG got it, I'm sorry. How did you get it?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, we have been participating in the estate of Dan Terra since it initially started. This is part of the closing report of the estate.

THE COURT: Is it filed with the clerk of the court?

MR. PERKINS: I don't believe it is, Judge.

THE COURT: Does anybody think this should even be in our record as far as the public record?

16di-003604

MR. PERKINS: There's no privilege attached to it, but it should remain sealed.

THE COURT: Anybody want this public? Okay, I'm going to leave it sealed unless there is some reason to make it public.

What about the balance sheet of the Terra Foundation as of June 30th, 2000? Is that a secret?

MR. PERKINS: It's a public record in our files, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay, it's unsealed. Professor Broday's article is unsealed, the statement of trust, if anybody really wants to read it, is unsealed. Dr. Tucker's May 24th letter, let me get to that one. That's a mediation letter, is it not, we're going to keep that one sealed.

(K) keep that one sealed. That's the letter, that's the thing from the mediator, is it not, his draft after the first settlement. So keep that one sealed.

(L) Dr. Marshall's May 20th letter.

MISS STONE: Mediation.

THE COURT: Keep that one sealed. (M) the June 19th settlement agreement. That one was already

16di-003605

(M) The Foundation's financial records. Are those also you got from your file, Mr. Perkins, that's a public record? Anybody can go to your office and find out?

MR. PERKINS: All but one page.

THE COURT: Which one page can the public not find out?

MR. PERKINS: I believe it says draft on this.

THE COURT: Endowment income?

MR. PERKINS: Endowment income.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, on behalf of the Foundation I have not had a chance to consult with any representative of the Foundation to verify what the Attorney General is saying with respect to the public nature of these documents.

They were initially filed under seal. I didn't realize that today we would be engaging in this unsealing process. If we could with respect just to this document and also the other document.

THE COURT: The June 30th balance sheet?

MISS STONE: If I could have a moment to consult with the client and report back to your Honor within a day or two.

16di-003606

THE COURT: I don't have any problem. Just make it before Thursday if we're going to unseal it. I assume that there is not going to be a problem about unsealing them. I hope you give me an order saying they're going to be unsealed. If they are going to remain sealed, you better give them notice and tell them why.

That is exhibit (M) we were just talking about. Dr. Marshall's June 5th letter remains sealed. Exhibit (P) remains sealed.

And what do we do with the 1989 Foundation letter to Mr. Perkins? Have you all looked at that thing? That's got all kinds of stuff in it.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, it was a confidential communication between the Foundation and Mr. Perkins. At the time, it was drafted back in 1989, the draftor of the letter comtemplated that it would be used for litigation purposes.

I think that it is stamped confidential. Quite frankly I have not gone through it on a line by line basis to find out what would be objectionable from an unsealing point of view because it was under seal. And again I wasn't aware that your Honor was going to engage in this analysis today. I would also like leave to consider this and report back by Thursday.

THE COURT: Okay I don't have a problem with that. But this one I think probably should be unsealed. But I don't know. I mean there's a lot of stuff in here. Mr. Cummins, what about this letter?

MR. CUMMINS: We think it ought to be a part of the public record, Judge. In fact with respect to some of the other exhibits that you tentatively identified as remaining under seal we would like to address those. Because we're going to ask you to reconsider on some of them, particularly given the narration of facts that is set forth in Mr. Perkins' submission. He lays all kinds of stuff out about who said what to whom in these proceedings that were supposed to be confidential.

I think the whole question of confidentiality has been rendered moot.

THE COURT: Well Mr. Perkins' brief is not being filed under seal, is it?

MR. PERKINS: It was originally, Judge, because of the nature of what we put in there in light of mentioning things that occurred in mediation. We took the safe road and filed it under seal. We would like to have it released. We are not asking that it remain under seal, but that's to be decided.

16di-003608

THE COURT: Let me just check from everybody. Plaintiffs, how do you feel about the Attorney General's brief being under seal or not under seal?

MR. QUINLAN: I guess our position would be it's pretty hard to have a brief that's under seal.

MISS STONE: I would agree with that as a general proposition. I would note that at points in his brief the Attorney General sees fit to describe some of the details of his inquiry into the Illinois Math and Science Academy. Again, I don't represent that Academy. I don't represent Dr. Marshall in his capacity of president of that academy.

I would note it would not be at all surprising if the Academy feels there is some privacy concerns or confidentiality concerns which are raised by that filing. I don't have any standing to raise those, but I bring that to your attention as an officer of the Court.

16di-003609

THE COURT: Okay and I know you all want everything unsealed.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, your Honor. One other thing maybe I should fall on my sword for this one. I did not perceive that the objections fell technically within the purview of your 15 page limitation.

I would like leave to file the extended documents nunc pro tunc.

THE COURT: Okay, you have leave to do that. I am concerned and I was concerned about the Illinois Math and Science Adademy allegations and the things that are in the Attorney General document. I'm going to keep the Attorney General's brief sealed for now. And maybe most if not all of it can be released. It was hard enough getting through it, because when I say 45 pages it's not even the normal type and the normal spacing. It's much much longer. It will take us much much longer here to identify what should come out and what should not. And I don't think we should take that time today. Leave that one under seal. That is all of the documents that I want to talk about as being sealed or not sealed. Do you want to be heard on objections to those?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, we will, for example the first amended complaint of the Attorney General was circulated to a lot of folks. It is not subject to any consept of confidentiality that I'm aware of. And that is an example of one of the documents that should not be subject to any protection.

Let me say this, I want to argue strenuously why this document in particular is the predicate for our, among other things, request for discovery and our predicate for suggesting that there are conflicts that have not been addressed with this Court as yet.

So there is just no legitimate bases for contending that this document should be protected and confidential.

THE COURT: Miss Stone, do you want to be heard on that one? I'm concerned about Dr. Stebbins. I'm concerned that there are allegations that the Attorney General decided to put on paper but decided not to file. And they have never been filed.

16di-003611

And what purpose would there be to have this public now?

MISS STONE: I couldn't say it any better, your Honor. This is a matter involving a Board member. This pleading, proposed pleading, was not actually filed. We don't know if it would meet the strictures of Rule 137.

The Attorney General, for whatever reason, chose not to file it. It's really a question of whether at this late date, this 11th hour we are in the process of trying to get the Court to enter an agreed settlement, whether something which has once been contemplated by one party in the thick of litigation should now be made part of the official record.

THE COURT: Does the plaintiff have any position on the filing of that document?

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, our position would be similar in that generally that document would probably be public. In this instance Miss Stone makes a good point, there are allegations in there that may not be --if this proceeds we can revisit the issue at that time. I do agree there are some interests that perhaps don't need to be invaded.

MR. PERKINS: Your Honor, your February 5th order said that communication with regard to mediation purposes remain private, private among the parties. That was the document that was sent to the lawyers. It is a transmittal letter. It makes clear it is in regards to settlement. It was transmitted in mediation. To suggest there are certain theories,set forth in our response, is thoughtless.

In addition the reason it wasn't filed we were in the middle of mediation, your Honor. We were not allowed to file any additional pleadings. It was the hope of the parties it would be settled and not be employed in litigation. So it was sent in the communicated position with regard to what we were alleging with regard to certain issues. And it was part of the settlement.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, I just need to understand this. There have been a lot of reputations of prominent people in this case, not the least of which is your client, that have been brought shall we say brought into question, perhaps wrongfully, in this case.

16di-003613

And is there any reason to add more to that? It is stipulated that, it's an agreement here that while the case was in mediation the Illinois Attorney General prepared the document and circulated it among counsel. And that document contained some allegations about one of the other directors on this Foundation. And sought to add him as a party defendant, it was not done. Isn't that enough?

You've all seen it. I've seen it. You can argue from it all you want to argue from it, but do we have anything else put out there?

MR. CUMMINS: Here's theproblem. Number 1) it is our position that was nothing but a litigation ploy to force Dr. Stebbins to take a position that he didn't intend to take, or want to take. And that remains subject to him being cross examined I would respectfully suggest.

Let me make one other point, Judge. Those allegations go right to the issue of his disinterestedness or lack thereof. That's the conflict, putting aside coersion and all this other stuff. That's right at the heart of why this gentleman could not legitimately vote on this proposed settlement.

16di-003614

And what we have here is another problem. When you directed that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins and Mr. Perkins might be available to be interviewed after these issues came up. it was at your suggestion. When my colleagues attempted to pursue that Sidley and Austin stepped in on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and said he ain't going to be interviewed.

THE COURT: I requested that Mr. Perkins meet with you all. I don't think I said anything about the other two.

MR. CUMMINS: Okay. If I've overstated it, I apologize. The point is this, we now have Sidley and Austin wearing the hat of the Terra Foundation. We have Sidley and Austin wearing the hat of Dr. Stebbins' lawyer with respect to these issues of conflict. This is among the issues, we think, are critical to your fair and adequate review of this proceeding.

So it's important for us, and we're going to argue, you know the essence of the allegations involving Stebbins was the following. He used confidential information, this is the allegation, I assume the Attorney General didn't do this in bad faith. He alleges that Dr. Stebbins used confidential information of the Terra Foundation to the advantage of some other foundation incident to other--

MISS STONE: I'm sorry, I don't--

MR. CUMMINS: Excuse me, Miss Stone, may I finish? May I finish, Judge?

THE COURT: To ahead.

MR. CUMMINS: The allegation is, and I'm not buying into this stuff necessarily.

THE COURT: Then why are you saying it?

MR. CUMMINS: Because, Judge--

THE COURT: We have had it here before in a little bit more oblique nature on the motion to disqualify Dr. Stebbins from the special litigation. And none of that has been presented. If you look at the complaint the Attorney General wants to file, the complaint seeks Dr. Stebbins removal, that's what it does. Nothing else. It seeks the removal of Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, the amended complaint. It seeks his removal as a Board member.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, I--

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I object to any discussion whatsoever. If there's going to be any discussion, this ought to be in chambers, your Honor.

16di003616

MR. CUMMINS: Well your Honor, here's the problem. According to the Attorney General there is a significant public interest here. Now we want to say don't let the public know about what the attorney general has done, but what they allege.

THE COURT: They have not filed it, and it is not a public pleading. I don't know whether or not it was in final form. I don't know whether or not Mr. Perkins has decided to file it. I don't know whether at the end of the day Mr. Perkins thought there was any merit to it.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, your Honor--

MISS STONE: I don't mean to interrupt counsel I'm just curious, are we arguing about whether or not this document should be unsealed?

THE COURT: He would like to have it unsealed. I'll let you argue about that issue. But at this point I am going to keep the documents sealed.

MISS STONE: With respect to Sidley and Austin's role, your Honor, we are here, as we've always been, representing the Foundation. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins personally, we do not represent Dr. Marshall personally. We represent the directors of the Foundation.

THE COURT: Let's get to the proposed consent decree, because I have quite a few questions about that. Do you want me to sign my name to the piece of paper that is entitled consent judgment and order, is that correct?

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: And attached thereto the resolutions, or would it just be the consent judgment?

MISS STONE: I do not believe the resolutions are themselves part of the consent judgment order. I believe only Exhibit (a) which is the press release.

THE COURT: Okay, I am going to retain jurisdiction to enforce this. And one of the reasons that I'm asking all these questions is because I need to have a clear understanding of what this consent judgment does and doesn't do. In the event that I sign it I need to know how to interpret it in the future. And I have recently gotten a consent judgment back from 1975 that was done by four to five predecessors ago who was handeling this calendar.

And sometimes these transcripts of these proceedings and what the parties were thinking about at the time these consent judgments were entered into is very important for future people in order to interpret any problems that may come up.

Now I know that when this case was sent to mediation by agreement of the parties there were some motions pending, not the least of which was a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the special litigation committee. There was a motion to appoint a receiver for the foundation. I believe that there was also a motion for judgment on the pleadings pending, but I'm not certain, from the Foundation.

So in the preamble here you have the Terra Foundation having moved to dismiss those counts. Did I not rule on those two? Didn't I deny that motion to dismiss?

MISS STONE: You did, your Honor, that's an accurate representation of the history of the case.

THE COURT: It sounds like that's the pending motion and it hasn't been decided and there was a pending motion to dismiss those two counts.

16di-003619

MISS STONE: I believe, your Honor, if you feel it's more appropriate, more accurate to say the Terra Foundation for the Arts having moved for judgment on the pleadings, we can simply keep a list of all those suggested changes or revisions, and if necessary we believe as a matter of corporate law we need to take that back to the Board and resecure a vote, we can do that.

I believe that that sort of administrative modification would fall within the purview of what the Court authorized Miss Marshall to do when they authorized her to sign it.

THE COURT: When I read that it sounded like an unresolved motion to dismiss, that's the one that I did resolve. It's the motion for judgment on the pleadings that I didn't. I went back to my pleadings file and I'm pretty sure that one was done.

MR. CUMMINS: Simpson filed a 2-619 motion.

MR. CARROLL: There was a motion pending besides the Foundation's motion.

THE COURT: So I'm going to ask counsel, counsel is going to have to make that paragraph accurate as to what exactly was pending at the time we went into mediation.

16di-003620

MR. CUMMINS: And of course we filed an answer and--

THE COURT: You filed a motion for leave to file.

MR. CUMMINS: I did that, your Honor, in deference to your direction. We don't think the motion is appropriate.

THE COURT: Okay.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, that does not accurately reflect what the state of the record was at the time the Board voted on. The motion for leave to file a counterclaim had not been made at that point.

THE COURT: Okay. This may open a whole new hornet's nest, but is there any problem with the defendants filing their answer, just their answer, not the counterclaim?

MR.QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: What?

MR. QUINLAN: First of all you have a motion on file, which is a motion for judgment on the pleadings and several defendants have joined that. They have to withdraw that motion before--

MR. CUMMINS: Withdrawn.

16di-003621

MR. QUINLAN: Well, you have to ask leave to do that, sir. And first of all we're not there.

THE COURT: So are you saying there was a formal joinder by the defendants in the Foundations' motion for judgment on the pleadings?

MR. KENNEDY: Correct. And there is a motion to dismiss by defendant Simpson.

THE COURT: My problem with the intro paragraph was that it reflected a motion that had already been adjudicated and did not reflect it was pending at the time you went into mediation.

MR. QUINLAN: There is another issue here too, the motion to accept the consent decree and accept the agreement. That's the first issue you have to address, if you address that and you rule in our favor there is nothing left to consider.

THE COURT: That's what I'm getting to next. Let's just assume I just decided I was going to sign this piece of paper and you have your consent judgment, I'm not quite sure what you have because this does not do anything with the cause of action against Mr. Michaeli. Mr. Michaeli was sued in the plaintiff's case. This releases officers, directors, agents or employees of the Foundation. Plaintiffs plead that he was a friend of Mrs. Terra and had no fficial position. This doesn't release him.

MR. QUINLAN: It does because it would dismiss our cause of action. He is only answering as a defendant, your Honor. Paragraph 13 dismisses these actions with prejudice. So that action would be dismissed against him. He suffers no harm. He is released. There is nothing that he stands in jeopardy of so that there is no interest that he has.

THE COURT: So it's dismissing everything you have, it's gone as of the date I sign this, including Mr. Michaeli's cause of action.'

MR. QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay, how can I say in the first paragraph, parties having reached an agreement? You don't define the parties. And as I understand the parties to this case they include Judith Terra and Alan Simpson and Dr. Tucker and they haven't agreed to anything.

MISS STONE: That is an important issue, your Honor. I think parties here refers to parties to this agreement not the totality of all the parties.

THE COURT: You need to say that. If you listen to that tape, do you remember that motion that Miss Marshall wouldn't vote for on the tape that went on and on and on? That was all about this issue too. This document as it's written doesn't even reflect what happened in that meeting.

16di-003623

MISS STONE: That's not correct, your Honor. The attempt to change, articulated by Mr. Stebbins which Dr. Marshall did not support was the idea of somehow forcing the individual defendants to release their right. Well the individual defendants have chosen not to join in the settlement agreement, that's their legal right. They cannot be forced to relinquish whatever legal rights they may have.

So the language that was not added was to say that the Plaintiff Directors hreby release everybody and the Foundation and the individual defendants hereby releast everybody.

That was the change Dr. Stebbins was suggesting. It was denied. I do believe for clarification purposes though, your Honor, it would be helpful to amend this to say the parties rather than hereto, it would be wise to say the parties to this agreement.

THE COURT: Could you say the plaintiffs, the Attorney General and the Foundation having reached an agreement. And then in paragraph 2 where it says the parties desire, and it says the parties hereto, make it clear who they are that's desiring to settle it.

16di-003624

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, can I just raise a question. I think that these matters that you are addressing are substantive in nature. It cannot be that this Board dealt with these issues in arriving, even assuming arguendo, you give any credence to that vote, this Board didn't have these things in mind, and I'm sure there's more questions.

THE COURT: I don't think that's a substantive thing. I did it for clarification.

MISS STONE: It is clarification. And it was particularly and vigorously debated at the meeting. And there was not a consensus by six directors to force somehow, even if they could, the individuals to give up any rights.

THE COURT: I do have a substantive one coming up. This one I don't consider substantive. There is one that may cause a little bit more problem.

Paragraph 3 of the consent decree the last phrase where it says which shall be available to the

16di-003625

Attorney General. They're available for the Attorney General anyway, aren't they? It's not changing anything is it, Mr. Perkins or Miss Stone?

MISS STONE: I think you have to read the sentence in its totality. They're saying for 50 years the Foundation shall also maintain not only its principal office, but its books and records.

THE COURT: Which shall be available to the Attorney General, that was the which part that I just wanted to ask. Are there books and records available to the Attorney General anyway?

MISS STONE: There are right now. What this in effect does is precludes the Foundation from moving books and records to let's say Washington, D.C. for 50 years.

MR. CUMMINS: I don't know, Judge. The folks contemplated when they drafted this was what if this Foundation runs out of money. What kind of an order is this? What kind of a decree is this that some entity has to be in existence for 50 years. God forbid if something untoward happens. This provision doesn't make any sense to me.

MISS STONE: I think it's safe to say we can leave that argument for another day, your Honor. I understand your Honor is seeking clarification for certain paragraphs.

THE COURT: Paragraph 14. I don't have any problem with the first sentence. But why should I sign my name to that second sentence? If you all agree that the only thing you're going to say is this release, Exhibit (a), the directors all agree that that's what they're going to do and they're not going to talk to anybody, that's fine. But why should I order that? Is there any reason that one can't be changed to say that the plaintiff Directors, Attorney General and Foundation have agreed that no other public statement?

Here's my problem. You're setting me up for contempt proceedings if you all talk to people. And I don't want to sign an order that says you can't talk to people.

MISS STONE: I appreciate the Court's perspective on that. I think there are two points that have to be made. First we are here merely trying to communicate to you what the will of the majority of the Board is. I do believe that a majority of the Board believes as do the other settling parties, that it would be in the interest of everyone to finally put this to an end.

As you know, the reputation of this Foundation as well as the reputation of certain individuals, has been tarnished in this litigation. I dare say there are reporters in the courtroom today, as there have been in prior instances, and so I believe that the people who entered into this agreement were trying to get to put some teeth into this.

The second point. This is really not very different from what your Honor has done in the past. In the past you have entered orders saying there should be no public statements made about mediation.

THE COURT: That's all, period. You all went into mediation. I talked to all counsel. You all came up with that idea, let's keep the mediation confidential. And you all gave me an order by agreement of everybody to keep the mediation confidential.

But this, you don't want the agents, the employees of the Foundation to talk even about the litigation?

MISS STONE: I think the sentiment here, your Honor, and again it was shared by the various people who are advocates of this agreement, is that enough is enough. It was time to put this litigation behind the Foundation and allow the Foundation to get back to the business of art appreciation rather than the slings and arrows of litigations and PR battles.

And I believe that that was something that the Board members desired. Do I know to what degree of intensity they would want to adhere to that? I don't. I don't think there was extensive debate about this particular sentence at the Board meeting, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: As a matter of fact it was not extensive debate it wasn't discussed. Read the transcript.

THE COURT: I have.

MR. CUMMINS: Well Judge, this is a provision that no Board has passed on. And quite aside from the fact that I just want it clear that our defendants intend to say whatever they have to say to protect their interests.

THE COURT: I understand, your defendants are going to say whatever they have to say and we have a First Amendment and they can do that. This is really directed to them. They made an agreement. This document was circulated well in advance of the Board meeting. They all had it in front of them. Everybody was talking at the Board meeting about they had the right copy, the documents were in front of them.

Everybody had that. And I assume that was all part of what everybody anticipated was going to be approved.

MISS STONE: It was circulated to all of the directors. Your Honor, I would think if anything the individual defendants would revel in the fact that the Foundation is agreeing to be quiet on this and the settling parties are agreeing to be quiet on this. The individual defendants can speak at length to the press about this if they so chose. They are not in any way bound by this or gagged by this.

Again your Honor, I think this is really not too different from what parties do from time to time at the culmination of litigatinn where they say let's let bygones be bygones. We'll agree to keep this confidential and not talk about this ad nausaem with the press. Let's move on.

If your Honor is uncomfortable with this provision, we can communicate that back to the Board and the Board will pass it without that sentence being included.

THE COURT: You can all agree not to say something if you want to. That's all up to you. I have a problem ordering that no other public statement should be made by any of you, including the Attorney General. He might agree not to say anything, but why should I order him?

MR. QUINLAN: We find ourselves in a difficult position. I think that is what everybody agreed on. I do think if there is a problem with your Honor siging this order. But the intent is not to say anything about this lawsuit now. Whether it's 20 years from now or 15 years from now that's up to them. It's an agreement.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, you will do what you abviously think is advisable. I do believe as a corporate law matter it would be necessary for us, as Foundation's counsel, to go back to the Board with whatever revisions your Honor would insist on. I don't think I can unilaterally say oh, yes the Board is in favor of this settlement agreement modified. That would have to be put back to a Board vote.

16di-003631

I'm not saying that's impossible. I'm just pointing out a practicality.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, the only thing I disagree on is Miss Stone's indication she thinks she has to go back to the Board. This is an interpretation of the law. I don't think it has anything to do with going back to the Board. Everybody has agreed. We still agree. That has not changed.

But the point is I don't think we need to go any further. Your Honor has expressed your opinion. I frankly have, I think everybody has a problem with how you would enforce in the future. What we're saying is at least for ten years we'd have a mutual agreement that this is going to be our press statement. This is going to be our statement and that's it.

16di-003632

THE COURT: Then why can't that last two sentences be changed to a combined sentence that says the plaintiff directors, the Attorney General and the Foundation agree to the mutually accepted press release attached as Exhibit (a). And agree that no other public statement shall be made. I mean that's real simple. Think about it.

MISS STONE: I think that's a good solution, your Honor. I don't think that will require further Board action.

THE COURT: Okay, those were the first set of questions I have. I have a lot of questions about what this consent decree means, about what the Foundation can do and not do world wide, United States wide, or whatever. But my goal is also not to wipe out my court reporter. So I'm going to ask if you want to take a break right now or do you want to go for about another fifteen minutes?

THE COURT REPORTER: Another fifteen minutes is okay.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, in making your comments is it correct for me to assume that you have not made any determination as to whether or not the underlying vote is valid?

16di-003633

THE COURT: No. I've read everything that you've written. In fact I've read every exhibit. I can't say that I have read absolutely every word of everything they have given. But I have read everything that you have done.

MR. CUMMINS: That's all that's necessary.

THE COURT: And I am willing to hear whatever argument you want to make. And I have not made up my mind. But I do have a lot of questions. And the answers to these questions have to do with whether or not I am going to sign my name or not. So I need to get the answers to some of these questions.

MR. CUMMINS: Thank you.

THE COURT: The directors, Section 2 (b) of the resolution, if you look at the Board resolution. Section 2 (b) says that the class one directors may not stand for reelection at any time. And they use the word there may not stand for election at any time.

The consent decree, paragaph 8, says will not stand for reelection. I'm signing my name to the consent decree, if I approve your motion. So I'm siging it it says will not stand for reelection. Is that clear that that means election at any time? As opposed to reelection at the end of their term? Boards have people go off. They go off for six years or whatever and they come back.

16di-003634

And is the idea that the entirety of the 11 people that are on this Board will never come back for election at any time?

MISS STONE: I believe that is the intent of the majority of the directors of the Foundation.

THE COURT: So you don't see that as inconsistent with the resolution. Should we make paragraph 8, if it needs to be signed, consistent with the resolution? Which says may not stand for election at any time.

MISS STONE: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. That one is changed. That will clear things up. Who is in the best position to give me a little bit of information about the issues of the five proposed new directors? Would that be Miss Stone? Would that be Mr. Quinlan? Who knows something, just tell me something about each one of these five individuals?

16di-003635

MR. CUMMINS: Would this include their political affiliation?

THE COURT: No. I don't want to tell you which ones I don't know who they are because it sounds like I don't know a lot of people. But I just want to know who these people are. Tell me who they all are.

MISS STONE: Sure. Your Honor, on behalf of the Foundation it probably is appropriate for us to give you a quick overview of these various individuals. This was a very much compromised slate. I do not claim to know any of these individuals' backround in great detail.

My partner Mr. Sabel, corporate law partner is with us today especially assisting us with corporate law matters. I think he is more intimately familiary. With the Court's indulgence I would like to ask him give that.

THE COURT: Sure. Would you just state you name and spell your last name for the court reporter.

MR. SABL : Sure it's Charlie Sabl.

THE COURT: Tell me who each of these five are.

16di-003636

MR. SABL: Mr. James Donnelley is a retired executive of the R.R. Donnelley Company. He is active currently in personal investing and has been active in a number of charitable activies in the Chicago area.

Again I would point out that resumes for these individuals were circulated to the Board members in advance of the meeting.

Marshall Field, V has been active in a number of charitable organizations. He used to be the chairman of Field Enterprises and Communications had a media firm headquarters in Chicago, which was subsequently sold. He also has been active in quite a number of charitable organizations in the Chicago area, past chairman of the Board of the Art Institute of Chicago.

Dr. Kathleen Foster is a professor at Indiana University in Bloomington in art. My understanding is she is or has great familiarity with the Foundation.

THE COURT: She's a resident of Indiana?

MR. SABL: Yes, she is. And she has consulted with the Foundation on art matters in the past. And has a good knowledge with respect to the collection of the collection the Foundation has.

16di-003637

Professor Robert Hamada is the outgoing Dean of the University of Chicago graduate school of business.

Frederick Krehbiel, I believe his title is president, I think he's chairman and chief executive officer of Molex, which is an electrical components company, headquarters in Chicago area. And he also has been very active in arts organizations and other charitable activities in the Chicago area and elsewhere.

THE COURT: Dr. Foster is the only one not from Illinois?

MR. SABL: That is correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. If you would go please to page 2 of the resolution the Board passed. The Board has passed a resolution that has changed Article 3 of its by-laws, sections 2 and 8. And those have to do with the Board and their tenure and their terms and vacancies.

Now do I understand correctly that these five we just talked about are going to be called class 2 directors. And they are going to hold office, if this is approved, starting August 1st of this year until September of next year. And then they each get one four-year term more, is that correct?

MR. SABL: Your Honor, they would be elected now for a four-year term so they would serve without coming up for reelection until the annual meeting of 2005.

THE COURT: So they're on until 2005. And then we have some class 1 Board members. This gets a little confusing because we have the pre 2002 class 1 members and the post ones. So I'm talking about the post 2002 class 1 and class 3 members. They're going to get staggered terms. There's going to be one term that ends in 02, one in 04, one in 05 and one in 06.

And my question is on the post 2002 class 1 members and class 3 directors, how long do they get to sit? Do they get two full terms after they're, like the class 1 people, end in the year 2003. Do they get two full terms after that, or are they only eligible for one full term?

MR. SABL: They're eligible for 8 years, your Honor, which means they might be elected for a term which is of a class that goes longer but would have to agree to resign before that to comply with this agreement. To stagger the Board you actually have to divide the directors and the class.

And I believe that the mediation contemplated that there would be a limit on any director serving for more than 8 years. For that reason you would have to have either some directors leave before the end of the terms.

So if a director was elected for 3 years and and director elected for three and could be elected for another 4 year term and at that point would only serve one year thereafter.

THE COURT: I just want to make it clear because believe it or not this issue comes up in the future. The provision of this decree that says the limit, the term limit is 8 years, that supercedes anything else as far as class. I just want to make sure that's clear, and that's it.

MISS STONE: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Now there were no amendments made to Article 1 of the by-laws, am I correct? You only amended Article 111. And it might help if you look at the objections that have been filed by the objectors. And you have the restated by-laws in there. That's Exhibit 6. And you've got Article 1. The purposes of the Foundation. That has not changed, has it?

16di-003640

MISS STONE: That's correct. It remains the broadly stated, general purpose that brings it within the 501 (c) 3 characterization. And includes for illustrative purposes only the various purposes that are set forth there.

THE COURT: So it is still the purpose of this Foundation to operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad?

MISS STONE: Correct, your Honor. That is still the purpose and that is precisely why with explicit clarity the Attorney General acknowledges this proposed consent decree, consent judgment, that the Foundation has the right to conduct all of its activities in Giverny, France.

That is also why it is specifically spelled out in the proposed consent decree thatthe Terra Foundation gets to loan its works of art, or exhibit, or for scholarly use, not limited to the United States, not limited to Chicago.

16di-003641

THE COURT: Originally, when the original complaints were filed these restated by-laws I don't believe were referred to in the original complaint. It was the original by-laws that were referred to, is that correct?

MR. SABL: That is correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: And we all can agree that the original Articles of Incorporation and the original by-laws of this Foundation never mentioned where the museum was going to be, is that correct? There is no where in there. Can everybody agree to that? Or do we have to pull those out? I couldn't find it anywhere. It doesn't say Chicago, it doesn't say Chicagoland, it doesn't say the world, it doesn't say the United States. It doesn't say.

We have a separate lawsuit pending in another calendar in this court where we have James Terra saying as one of the incorporators they meant to put the phrase in in the Chicagoland area or in the State of Illinois. That was never put in there.

Then in 1994 when Mr. Terra, Dan Terra, was still alive the by-laws were amended and the Articles of Incorporation were amended and the words were added, among other things, operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad. Can we all agree to that? Those have been the two changes.

MR. PERKINS: Just so that we can be very clear if one were to look at that, that was changed to provide for illustrative purposes only. If one looks at the difference between the original by-laws and the 1994 version, after the very first sentence the new version says for illustrative purposes only and it goes on and explains. I'm not sure what it all means in the sense that both of them start out with the very same first sentence, and both of them say it's exclusively charitable. The first one has a whole bunch of specific remarks, the original has specific remarks about what it can do.

The 1994 one says illustrative purposes only. I'm not sure we're saying there is a big difference there but there is a difference.

THE COURT: But at no time has there been anything in the by-laws or articles of incorporation that specifically Illinois, Chicago, anything like that. The only thing that has ever been put in is operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad. And that is not changing by this consent decree.

16di-003643

So now I need to figure out what this means. If you could please turn to Exhibit 9 of the objectors' exhibits, which is the declaration of Dr. Tucker in regard to the Temporary Restraining Order.

Please turn to page 3, the last sentence: Examples of major, non Chicago projects include the recent award of a $500,000.00 grant to a New York production company for a documentry on American Art. Now I'm going to the top of page 4 and the sponsership for the research for the Huntington Museum and Gardens in Pasadena, California.

Is there anything in this consent decree, or this proposed judgment that would prevent the Foundation from continuing to do that? That kine of activity.

MISS STONE: Absolutely not, your Honor.

16di-003644

That's a very important point. The consent decree, consent judgment states that the Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its articles and by-laws, including promoting American Art in the U.S. and Abroad.

It further states it is the Foundation, not the Attorney General, the Foundation who remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals including where and to whom to make grants.

THE COURT: So the answer is there is nothing--just for the record I want to make sure in the future if this consent decree is approved that there aren't going to be a whole bunch of issues, that this Board can pretty much continue to operate the way it has operated as far as its charitable grants and its activities.

MISS STONE: I'd like to state for the record the Foundation has retained through this proposed consent judgment a broad aray of rights. It is the broad awray of rights, and now with the force of a court order, if you approve it, and it has the Attorney General's specific adherence and acknowledgment of. In may ways it garners freedom or confirmation of the freedon and independence of this Foundation. It says the Foundation can make grants wherever it wants, conduct operations wherever it wants, although for 50 years it must of course keep its main headquarter books and records, principal office here in the Chicagoland area..

It says it may acquire works of art. It may exhibit and loan anywhere its works of art, including but not limited to Giverny.

It particularly enshrines the protection of the museum in Giverny. This Foundation has preserved for itself a very broad power and freedom, through this proposed consent judgment.

THE COURT: Let's go to the declaration of Peter Solmssen, Exhibit 10. There were some discussions Mr. Somnssen had with Dan Terra the year before Mr. Terra died. There was discussion about the Foundation and the University of Arts doing some things together and making a three million dollar grant to the university.

Is that the kind of thing that could still be done with other universities outside the Chicago area? I'm on the objection 11. It starts at the bottom of the page, paragraph 6 going on to the next page.

MISS STONE: The Foundation can engage in the purchase of real estate outside of the Chicagoland area. The Foundation can make grants outside of the Chicagoland area.

Your Honor, for the record, it might be helpful not only to have me as Foundation counsel attest to this, I think it would be very worthwhile to have the Attorney General stand up and also signify his agreement to this as well.

THE COURT: Well Mr. Perkins is being very silent. And when Mr. Perkins is silent I'm taking that as he's agreeing because if he doesn't agree he always tells us.

MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.

MISS STONE: For the purposes of the record, for the purposes of conflicts which may arise in the next decade or two decades, would we have Mr. Perkins stand up and say that he agrees that this Foundation may make grants outside of Chicago.

THE COURT: I think he's saying that. He'll tell us if he disagrees.

16di-003647

I have one last, and this one really intrigues me, it is Exhibit 19 of the affidavit of Dr. Tucker in support of the objections. He's talking on the bottom of the second page, these pages are not numbered, paragraph 5, he's talking about the way the Guggenheim Museum had some exhibit space in Berlin and it supplied members a limited amount of its collection to other mussums.

I'm sorry, where is Bilbao?

MISS STONE: Spain, your Honor.

THE COURT: Can this Foundation purchase real estate elsewhere, loan its collection elsewhere, portions of it, as long as the main portion of the collection is based here?

There could be many museums. Everyone keeps throwing out the four hundred fifty million dollar figure that's been in the pleadings here. If funds are available, can the museums in Chicago and France need not be the only museums in this Foundation?

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. And the consent judgment specifically states, while stating that the Foundation shall for fifty years retain and exhibit the Terra collection of American

16di-003648

Arts either by itself or through partnership arrangements with other institutions in the Chicago metropolitan area, the document also goes on to say that the Foundation shall continue to be able to carry out the act of promoting American art in the U.S. and Abroad and it remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals. That it can manage the collection as it deems appropriate, including providing art for display in Giverny and for special exhibits, programs and scholarly use, to make loans from the collection. So it can indeed loan its art work to other institutions.

THE COURT: I'm going to give the court reporter a break. I'm willing to go as late as you want to go to hear whatever it is that anybody wants to hear. I have to let the court reporter leave at 4:30. So during this break I would appreciate it if someone makes arrangements for a late court reporter.

My next set of questions is going to be talking about the role of the directors that are currently on this Board and what their role can be and not be in the future.

Then I'm pretty much done with my list. I'm going to also just take a look at this to make sure I hit all the things that were of most concern to me. And then I want to hear about the objections after I talk a little bit about these directors when I come back.

16di-003649

I'm going to give the court reporter a break. Is ten minutes enough? Who's going to take the responsibility to try to get a late reporter? Mr. Kennedy?

(At which time in the Proceedings a short recess was had.)

THE COURT: I understand we will have a court reporter here at four thirty.

MR. KENNEDY: Yes, Judge.

THE COURT: So we will take a brief break at four thirty to make that switch.

One of the things that disturbed me about the consent decree is the loss of some of these very very fine people to this Board. And I know that Miss Stone will be the first to jump up and say what I think about it or don't think about it isn't important, it's the business judgment of the Board and they all mediated and they decided that this is the way it's going to be.

We have some individuals on this Board who have served a very-very long time, the longest being Arthur Hartman, former Ambassador to France and Helene Ahrweiler. I am disturbed about the loss of all of what we have referred to here as the independent Board members in particular to this Foundation. In addition to Ambassador Hartman and Ahriweiler, Mrs. Daley , Stephanie Pace Marshall, Dr. Stebbins and Ambassador Andreani.

Apparently the Board decided in the mediation process that everybody was going to have to go. And that would be at the end of one year, Everybody would serve and then at the end of one year they would all go.

I want to pursue this issue a little more based on the wording here. May Foundations and corporations and not for profit organizations as we know invite people to come back and participate in other capacities. Some Boards have things like Fellows Boards, they have individuals that help raise money. They invite non board members to serve on the committees or to serve as advisors.

16di-003651

And I want to make sure there isn't anyone that this consent decree that is being tendered to the Court who is saying this consent decree precludes any of these fine eleven individuals from participating in the future in the activities of the Foundation provided that they do not participate as a member of the Board of Directors.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, you are absolutely right that these eleven individuals have worked long and hard for this Foundation, some of them for a number of years. And it is a loss that they have decided collectively to leave the Board after one year.

Your Honor has correctly predicted what at least some of my argument would be. This is a matter particularly within the purview of the Board. This is an exercise of the business judgment of directors which should not be second guessed by me, by the objectors, by your Honor.

This was, without in any way delving into the mediation process, because I don't think it is appropriate that individuals are now seeking to use a confidential mediation process to further litigation ends. So I don't want to delve into the intricacies of this, but suffice it to say in mediation the composition of the Board was an issue that was discussed at length.

There were various proposals floated. This finally was a proposal that would allow the Board to enter into a resolution which would put an end to protracted, devisive, distractive litigation.

Your Honor is absolutely right that there is no prohibition whatsoever on any of these fine individuals from coming back and being affiliated with the Terra Foundation in some other way, either as an interested patron, as an honorary, non voting Board member, as a member of some sort of advisory committee, there is no prohibition on that.

Indeed it would be my hope that once the dust is settled and once emotions cool and with the passage of time that the newly constituted Board might indeed see fit to see if it could interest some of these fine individuals to once again devote some of their energies in a non voting capacity to the Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: There is also one other capacity that I was thinking about also. In all the materials that I've read there have been discussions over the years about partnering with other institutions. Some of the proposals in the materials have talked about institutions such as a university or the Art Institute, or the Museum of Contempory Art that might be partners with, in the future, here in this area.

And that if such a partnership were established it might be that certain representatives of the Foundation would also be asked to sit on the Boards of Directors of that organization that you're partnering with.

My question is does anything preclude any of these individuals from being the designated representative of the Foundation in that kind of a partnership arrangement, as long as they're not Board members?

MISS STONE: I don't think anything would prevent any of these fine individuals from being emmisaries to any other institution, to be ambassadors of good will for the Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: To be the Foundation's representative on a partnership Board.

16di-003654

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. May I also add, your Honor, when I make the point that we should not engage now in second guessing, it is important to recognize that this was an unusual mediation. This was not a mediation where it was only counsel for the parties that were involved. The individual directors themselves actively participated in a myriad of mediation sessions. So they all had the right to weigh in on this issue. They all did. The issue was vigorously debated and this was the final consensus resolution of those parties that were free to enter into this proposed settlement.

THE COURT: Anybody else want to be heard? Is there any disagreement that all of the eleven Board members who will be leaving the Board in the year 2002 continue to be active participants in the activities of this Foundation, with the exception that they cannot hold seats on the Board of directors, but they can do almost anything else that the Board would direct them to do.

MR. QUINLAN: There is no prohibition of them doing any of those things.

16di-003655

THE COURT: Okay, now we have a multitude of objections. And I spent my whole weekend going through them. I've read them, even the back sides of all your 35 exhibits.

So Mr. Cummins, I don't know how you intend to proceed today. I want to hold off your counter-claim business until the end. I would assume the first thing you need to talk about, or you want to talk about, is discovery. You can't do anything without discovery. Is that correct?

MISS STONE: Again, just as an order of procedure I do think it's more appropriate , since we are moving for the entry of a consent judgment here to be heard on the issue.

THE COURT: Just one second. You wanted to talk about discovery, and you also want to talk about, or do you not, about the burden of proof?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: And you believe that the burden of proof is on them, right?

MR. CUMMINS: Manifestly.

THE COURT: Without any question.

MR. CUMMINS: Not a doubt at all.

16di-003656

THE COURT: It sounds like they should go first. What do you think?

MR. CUMMINS: Yeah, absolutely. There seems to be a suggestion in the record that we consider to be a grossly inappropriate statement, that it somehow gives this Foundation all of the rights and privileges it once maintained.

Well, that's clearly not the case. As a matter of fact if you take a look at this consent judgment and decree, Terra's collection of American Art will never exhibited for fifty years any place other than Chicago.

That means concepts that were discussed that would really give some value and benefit, not only to the collection, but to those who are interested in the collection, things like common territorial management, that can't be done.

To suggest on the record, oh gee, this is just great and just like apple pie and motherhood and the Foundation can proceed without any limitation is just simply dead wrong, Judge.

THE COURT: I'm trying to figure out what--I went through all of your objections, if what you want to talk about is one portion of your objections, I'll be glad to. But if you want to talk about response to my questions about what they can do and what they can't do. Identify certain things, other than picking up and moving the entire collection out of Illinois, what is it that you are saying they are not going to be able to do?

16di-003657

MR. CUMMINS: If you can tell me what paragraph 5 means, I'd like to be enlightened. It states for at least 50 years from the entry of the order the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago Metropolitan area. That means it ain't going to be exhibited any place else.

And if that's not a major inhibition on the value of this collection and on the goals and intentions of Mr. Terra when he created this Foundation, nothing could be more inconsistent with his intentions. Nothing could be more inconsistent.

THE COURT: Let me just ask them to answer that, as to what you believe that that means. Shall we define the Terra Collection of American Art and what that means?

16di-003658

MISS STONE: Your Honor, I would be happy to answer the question, and I will do so. I think I need to clarify at the beginning that we certainly disagree over the burden of proof.

It is clear here, under Illinois law, there is a presumptively valid settlement agreement. They are now seeking to upset the settlement agreement which they don't agree with, arguing that it should be set aside for some sort of supposed duress or coersion.

The law makes it quite clear that they have to meet a very high burden of proof and they must show by clear and convincing evidence that there was some sort of wrongful or illegal act which completely destroyed the free will of the individuals who are alleged to have been coerced, Dr. Stebbins and Mrs. Marshall.

And we would submit, your Honor, they simply cannot or have not met this very high showing.

There is a reason why the law requires such a high showing. First of all the law favors compromise and resolution and it gives presumptive validity when parties are able to finally resolve their differences and come to a meeting of the minds.

16di-003659

In addition, allegations of these sorts, coercion, intimindation, selling out your vote, are very serious, very pernicious accusations. And if you're going to make these allegations the law says you better have the goods to back them up. That is why the burden is so high.

And your Honor, we think it's quite telling that they are trying in essence shirk their burden rather than embraceing it, rather than saying yes, we recognize we have a very high standard and by golly we can meet it, they are trying to divert this Court by citing to a clearly inapplicable class action cases, which have no bearing here.

We are not in a class action context, your Honor. We are not in a fairness hearing where we have to protect absentee class members.

We have a situation where eleven Board members have come together and debated this for months and months. And the collective will of the Board is to have this agreement approved.

Now to answer counsel's question more specifically. Your Honor, you cannot pick out bits and pieces of

16di-003660

of this consent judgment and read them in isolation. To do so really violates the entire spirit, meaning and language of the consent judgment.

Reading the consent judgment in its totality what does it do? First of all it does obligate the Foundation to maintain its principle office and books and records in Illinois for fifty year. It does require that a majority of the directors be residents of Illinois for 25 years, with an exception for the first year, or it does need to be a majority, it could be fifty fifty.

What else this consent decree does, it preserves and formally recognizes essential freedoms for the Foundation. I would like to enumerate those. And they are contained in paragraph 5 and in other places in the proposed consent judgment.

Number 1) it states the Foundation has the right to conduct its affairs in accordance with its articles and by-laws, including promoting American Arts through the U.S. and Abroad.

Number 2) it states that the Foundation, not a regulator, not disgruntled Board members of whatever stripe, but the Foundation has the right to determine for itself how to best achieve its goals.

16di-003661

3) it preserves for the Foundation the freedom to make grants wherever and to whomever it so chooses.

4) it give the Foundation the right to manage its own collection as it pleases. Again, without interference from outside forces.

Number 5) it give the Foundation the right to make loans, to acquire works and to deassess works as it sees fit.

Number 6) it specifically give the Foundation the right ti display art in Giverny and elsewhere in the world in connection with special exhibits or loans for scholarly use.

Number 7) it give the Foundation the right and freedom to conduct its activities at its museum in Giverny. And that freedom the AG is specifically acknowledging and agreeing to in this consent judgment.

Your Honor, I think you have to put the individual defendant's challenge in perspective. These individual defendants have determined that it is not, in their judgment, in their best judgment to enter into this agreement.

As named parties to this lawsuit they have every right to say this agreement is not for us and we don't want to participate. They have also exercised their rights as directors to say in their judgment this agreement is not in the best interest of the Foundation. They have every right to do that, your Honor. There may be others in this courtroom who agree with them personally, that this is not a good deal for the Foundation.

16di-003662

The point, your Honor, is that these individual directors cannot now come in and try to run rough shot over the considered judgment, an exercise of business judgment by other directors of the Foundation. That is not their right.

THE COURT: The Terra Collection, can you define it.

MISS STONE: It is a collection of arts that is now currently in existence at both the Terra Museum here in Chicago and the museum in Giverny. And it is that collection as it ebbs and flows over the years.

THE COURT: And this consent decree allows the Foundation to set up museums worldwide if it wants to and display portions--portions, what about all of the collection? Can they move the whole thing to Giverny?

16di-003663

MISS STONE: No, I don't think that would be appropriate for the first 50 years. They cannot leave, take everything lot stock and barrel and move it outside of Chicago. But it can conduct freely its activities in Giverny, France and that includes a very big risk loan program from the collection, which is predominately displayed in Chicago, but which is also displayed in Giverny.

THE COURT: How big is the collection right now. I know it's a fluid thing. I know it is somewhere in these papers and I remember reading it. It's hundreds of paintings, is it not?

MISS STONE: It is hundreds. I believe it is roughly in the neighborhood of 800, though I am seeking guidance from an officer of the Foundation, who is not in this agreement.

THE COURT: So about 800 or so pieces of art.

MISS STONE: That is correct.

THE COURT: And as long as there is a place to house it and take care of it here in the State of Illinois and bring it back to, could it loan fifty percent of the collection to other museums at certain times as long as everybody new at the Foundation stays here? The Foundation is a lot more than just the art collection. So as long as it stays here fifty percent of it could be elsewhere.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, it's very difficult to get into a finely calibrated parsing of how many can cross the state border and how many cannot. I think the spirit and intent of this agreement is that for 50 years the collection, the bulk of the collection should remain, should be made available for viewing here.

But at the same time works of art from that collection can be shown elsewhere, they can be housed elsewhere, can be exhibited elsewhere and can be loaned elsewhere, but the bulk of the collection should remain here.

As your Honor points out, it is not just art that this Foundation is about. It is also about education, educational programs can take place elsewhere. This Foundation is also about grant making to encourage scholarships in American art.

16di-003665

THE COURT: So I take it that this means, as I read it, means a large portion of the collection could go like, you know we get the Monet exhibition here or Renior or something here, a large portion of it could be a moving collection and go to museums all over the world. And I would assume even as much as a half as long as its coming back here.

There is nothing in this one way or the other. I mean this is open to interpretation in the future, is it not?

MR. PERKINS: From the Attorney General's standpoint we think of it as based here. Based here doesn't mean it's always here. It means it's loaned out from here. It could be on the road for years.

Many times museums trade pieces. Terra might be exhibiting pieces from other Museums. The Attorney General of Illinois recognizes that. There may be at some times only a little bit will physically be in Illinois at a point in time, the Board deciding that it had five exhibits across the world.

We are not saying that it is prohibited from doing that. We are saying however it's based here. It's under the control of the Board here. And we leave it to the Board to work under that direction. These remarks are here. I can't speak for what a Board will do down the road. It is our hope that they will make appropriate decisions.

The whole agreement was premised on the idea that this Board will go forth and do what it thinks it can under the articles and under the terms of this agreement to act pretty freely without much interference from the State.

THE COURT: Leave it to the Board to make that decision is that you're saying, Mr. Perkins. So it's really up to the Board to make those decisions. And I would assume that this matter would only come back to this Court or some future Court sitting here, if something really outrageous happened.

In other words, if 80 percent of the collection got put under some kind of agreement for 40 years outside of the State of Illinois, something that was clearly a violation of this agreement. Other than that we're not doing things very much different than what was done before. The Foundation can pretty much run its affairs the way it has.

MISS STONE: That's true. It's a very important and I think it t's up one of the main arguments that the objectors are making. They are arguing that this consent decree is, to use their word, antithetical to the mission of the Foundation.

What is the mission of the Foundation? The mission of the Foundation is very broadly stated charitable and educational purposes, including illustrative purposes such things as promoting appreciation of American art to the growing art public, running museums and schools both in the U.S. and Abroad.

Entering into this consent decree is not antithetical to that. This consent decree allows the museum in Giverny, it allows the loaning of art through the U.S. and abroad.

What would be antithetical is if we came in with a consent decree saying we are going to burn the paintings. This is not antithetical. This is something under the descretion and the purview of the Board of Directors in its exercise and use of business judgment.

THE COURT: What about the argument that has been made by the defendants that by not being free to partner, and I assume that means like a permanent patnership, with out of state organizations, that the Foundation has lost its bidding position, lost its bargaining chips. It's essentially saying we are stuck here in Illinois so we didn't get the best deal.

MISS STONE: That is certainly a consideration for this Board. That was certainly a consideration that prompted this Board during this litigation to vigorously oppose what the Foundation perceived what the Attorney General was trying to do. However that is one consideration that the Board members have struggled with.

Another consideration the Board members have struggled with is the hemorrhaging of money to pay lawyers in this case. You merely need to look around this courtroom today to get some sort of idea of what this litigation is costing this Foundation.

Another consideration is the tarnishing of the Foundation's reputation from being in the newspaper every day.

16di-003669

Another consideration is the distraction of the folks from matters of art to matters of litigation. These are all matters which the Board of Directors have weighed. And each of them have weighed them in different manners, and each of them assessed different values to these considerations. I may come out differently on that question, Judge. You may come out differently. We are not elected directors of this Board.

And what the individual defendants fail to recognize is that it doesn't have to be coercion, it doesn't have to be fraud, it doesn't have to be someone selling out their vote to come out in a different place, to come to an alternative conclusion at the end of the day.

It could be that individual directors acted honestly, acting legitmately, acting in good faith simply come to a different conclusion, just as Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Mr. Simpson did.

It doesn't have to be that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall sold out their soul to get this deal done.

THE COURT: Does the Foundation want to say anything else in support of the approval.

16di-003670

MISS STONE: Yes, we would, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, there has been a long soliloquy here. May I just observe something?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. CUMMINS: What has just been discussed is absolutely contradicted by the plain language. I asked a simple question. I said this language says the Terra Collection of American Art shall be exhibited in the Chicago Metropolitan area.

And if you don't think, Judge, that two years from now if we get another Attorney General who decides that sending fifty percent of the art to Courtney for two years violates this agreement then you're going to have people coming in here.

They better change the language of paragraph 5.

THE COURT: I don't think sending fifty percent of this collection violates this agreement.

MR. CUMMINS: Well then let's say that.

THE COURT: Attorney General, do you think sending fifty percent of the collection to Courtney for two years, knowing it's going to come back here violates this agreement?

16di-003671

MR. PERKINS: I don't think so, Judge.

MR. CUMMINS: How many permeations do we have to go through to clarify this agreement?

THE COURT: That's what you have--that's why I'm having this on-the-record discussion to interpret some of these issues today. I don't see this as a oppresive seeking or keeping of this art as set forth in the objections.

MR. CUMMINS: If you don't interpret the language literally I guess that's right, Judge. But the language ought to be clarified, in the consent judgment.

THE COURT: The parties have agreed to this. Tell me if I'm wrong, the Attorney General, the plaintiffs and the Foundation, the ones that have agreed to this are saying on the record that this doesn't mean that even the bulk of the collection has to at all times stay in the State of Illinois physically for the next 50 years.

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. That's why it says we can manage the collection, loan the collection, exhibit the collection.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we believe it has to be based in Chicago, the books and records here. It is an Illinois Corporation, subject to the laws in Illinois. That means it can't close the foundation here. It can't close the exhibit here. Can't close the museum and have nothing of the art to be shown. So when you say exhibits the art must be exhibited here.

16di-003672

But it is clear that every museum that operates here in the State of Illinois sends their art around the world to different places on a variety of different occasions. We surely are not suggesting that doesn't happen. It is not our agenda to prohibit that.

THE COURT: Is there another example, Mr. Cummins, you're concerned about.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I wasn't in the room with these folks, but I would have given them Miranda warnings not to execute the document that has this kind of literal, express prohibition because we can sit here all day and suggest well they can do this and they can do that.

But you asked a pointed question, what about moving the whole exhibit to France for a period of time. Oh, can't do that, that wouldn't be right. You suggested, well there is this inhibition with respect to partnering with outstanding museums, the Courtney and the Whitney. Oh, can't do that.

16di-003673

Now I can't believe that somebody is going to stand up here and try to defend this language and say its literal meaning is meaningless. And that's exactly what we're hearing.

THE COURT: I believe that what was agreed to here, maybe I'm wrong, but I'm interpreting this as if I'm being asked to sign it is that this pretty much means that this collection can be operated in the way it always has been with the exception that the entirety of the collection cannot permanently be moved out of the state and housed out of the state.

MR. CUMMINS: Why don't we say that then?

MISS STONE: That is correct, your Honor. And in addition there is the residency requirement as well.

Your Honor, the objectors keep saying why don't we day this, why don't we say this. What I would say in response is why don't they read the entire document. They like to focus again only on one sentence in the top of paragraph 5. I would say read the entirety of paragraph 5. I would say read paragraph 4. I would ssy read the other paragraphs in this document, which do indeed preserve the fundamental freedoms and independence for this Foundation and for the Terra Museum.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I will say we are the parties who participated in this very hearing that took place at the time that this was adopted. They never raised any questions. They never suggested there was anything wrong with the terms. They never suggested they didn't understand the terms. They voted no. But they participated. They were there. That's all you're entitled to get.

They participated. They didn't have a problem with what was said and they voted no, never suggesting anything else.

THE COURT: These questions were not raised at the Board meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: Not by them. Nobody had any kind of disagreement as to what was intended. Surely we all have given you our consensus here. Everybody is in agreement on our side in terms of what we believes this means. It reads as it reads. It's a clear document.

16di-003675

That's the reason you retain jurisdiction. It's this Court who makes those interpretations. It is this Court that consistently rules in a way that furthers the interest of the parties in the sense of what was intended and what was meant.

Sure we can read this in a lot of different ways, we can rewrite it in suggested different ways. Their people never suggested that. Their people did not do any of those kind of things and merely chose to go against it. They chose not to participate in the agreement.

THE COURT: Let me hear from Mr. Perkins on this and then we can move on and Miss Stone can finish and then we can hear from the objectors.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, with regard to everything that has been said about this equitably will be handled, how this collection will be managed, how it will be based here, I think the Court has made remarks that reflect our belief of what is going to happen in the future. It will be based it. It will move around. The majority of the collection could be gone at one point in time based on what what would be reasonable accomodations as to how the art world deals with this kind of art.

In addition these terms didn't come about in a vacuum, even though they weren't discussed at a particular Board meeting. There have been long mediation sessions. There have been discussions among counsel as to issues with regard to whether about the language, what was going to be the restrictions, whether it was going to be in perpetuity or fifty years issue, the very language that we're looking at.

This doesn't come about in one day. This has been discussed over several months time period with people working on that language to try to make it clear that the Foundation would be free to operate as it had operated in the past with its collection with the least restrictions, but for what we placed here that basically it's based here in Chicago for fifty years, hopefully forever.

That was the spirit on which this was put together. It's an equitable consideration. This Court retains jurisdiction. If it comes back before this Court your Honor, or those who come after your Honor, and we have this record now.

16di-003677

That makes clear what the Attorney General believes it to mean, what the plaintiffs believe it to mean, what the Foundation expects it to mean.

But at this point we are pretty clear that this Foundation is free to do what it's been doing up to this point in time.

THE COURT: And you're not going to be looking over its shoulder and second guessing its decision about loaning its collection around the world, unless you see shuttered its museum here and there is no place for it to come back to, right?

MR. PERKINS: Your Honor, there are 25,000 charities in Illinois and we're very busy. We're hoping the new Board will take care of this. We don't have any intention of monitering this.

THE COURT: Miss Stone, did you have anything else you want to say in support? I know you said you don't think it's your burden.

MISS STONE: Yes. I understand, but in light of the objections I do feel we need to have the opportunity to make a few statements for the record.

First, your Honor, it is important to acknowledge what is not in dispute here. It is not disputed that corporate formalities were adhered to, that notice was given, that the meeting was properly conducted, a forum was present, debate was held the proposed langague was distributed to all directors beforehand. Any director who wanted to make him or herself available to participate in the meeting was there and had an opportunity to vote. A vote was held.

16di-003678

And six to two, the majority of the Board said they wanted to do this. Now in light of this actual presumtively valid agreement, between the Foundation the Attorney General and the plaintiffs, the defendants are now trying to upset the agreement by mounting a variety of scattershot or arguments. And I would like to have the opportunity to address each of these because they're serious charges which have been made against some individual directors that require response.

I know your Honor has read her papers, I know you're very diligent about that. But I do need to address this.

First, with regard to the coercion argument. What the objectors would have to prove by clear and convincing evidence is that the Attorney General took took some unlawful action, which as a matter of fact caused Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to lose their free will, to become mere handmaidens of the Attorney General, to vote his bidding.

16di-003679

They have not come up with anything near the required evidence to meet this burden. Not even close.

As a general proposition, your Honor, there is nothing wrong in and of itself with any party, that would include the Attorney General, deciding to add additional parties to their pleadings.

Now the Foundation has always denied that there was any merit whatsoever to any proposed claim against Dr. Stebbins. The Foundation would have moved to dismiss it or Dr. Stebbins' own attorney would have done that. But in and of itself that was not an action by the Attorney General.

The defendants would have to show that that action in and of itself was done to intimidate rather than for some other reason.

Also as a general proposition there is nothing in and of itself wrong with the Attorney General deciding to issue an administrative subpoena to some entity . Again the Attorney General decided there is no basis for any further investigation into the Illinois Academy. But again it's the defendants that would have to show that there was no good faith basis for Mr. Perkins' actions and that he was doing this just to intimidate Dr. Marshall.

16di-003680

That is not all they would have to show. Here is where they really fall down on the task. They have to show that in fact Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall's will was overcome. And there is just no there there to paraphrase Yogi Berra. They just don't have the goods.

First of all, they point to the fact that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor of the settlement. That in and of itself is not illegal, it's not unlawful. The objectors don't challenge the votes of Mrs. Daley or Hartman. There is nothing in and of itself wrong with voting yes instead of no. And there could be many reasons why a director would decide it makes sense to resolve this litigation and get back to the business of promoting art appreciation.

THE COURT: Excuse me one moment. You keep saying that they haven't shown. Well part of what they want to be able to do is be able to show . And part of what they want to be able to do is get discovery. And you have said they haven't shown that the Attorney General didn't have a good faith basis for looking into Illinois Science and Math Academy. They haven't shown anything else. Well, how can they show, if they don't get discovery?

16di-003681

MISS STONE: Well I think there are really two questions you have to ask yourself , your Honor. Have they even made the threshhold showing necessary to reopen this case at this point in the face of an agreed settlement and take us off on another whirlwind of discovery.

And the second question you have to ask is what would the possible outcome of that be? What could they possibly hope to achieve by that?

You have the Attorney General who sat for an interview for two and a half hours answering questions. You have Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall who gave testimony who made statements at the Board meeting that specifically addresses that issue. They said we voted our conscience. We were not coerced. They addressed this question.

16di-003682

We indicated to counsel , that although your Honor had not ordered Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to sit for depositions yet, counsel should be aware that Dr. Stebbins would give the same testimony at a deposition that he gave at the Board meeting. So what would you end up with at the end of the day?

We go through this discovery and once again you have a situation where you have Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall saying we vehemently deny that we sold out the Foundation. We're insulted by that accusation. We voted our conscience. And you have Dr. Tucker saying well I don't really believe them. That's not enough to meet a clear and convincing burden.

So what are we doing? It would be an exercise in futility.

THE COURT: During the mediation process the six independent Board members, and by that I mean everybody but the two plaintiffs and the three main defendants, were represented by counsel?

MISS STONE: By the Foundation's counsel.

THE COURT: Okay. They all had an opportunity to talk to at any time, to write letters to you, to send proposals, to discuss with you any problems or any reservations that they had?

16di-003683

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And at the time of the meeting, if I remember correctly from listening to the tape and reading it, you were present with Miss Marshall in the room throughout the whole meeting which she chaired?

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: Who was with Dr. Stebbins?

MISS STONE: Dr. Stebbins was calling in, I believe.

THE COURT: He was calling in from Boston and he was by himself?

MISS STONE: I can't recall, but I believe that's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: But I take it that--

MISS STONE: Mr. Carlson was present at the Foundation headquarters and several of the directors were persent there.

THE COURT: You had plenty of opportunity to discuss with Dr. Stebbins before and after the entire issue of he didn't need to vote for this?

16di-003684

MISS STONE: You're right. Your Honor, without in any way waiving attorney client privilege, your Honor should assume that all of the directors when represented were advised of their fiduciary duties.

THE COURT: I know that they were advised at the meeting. I know that they were specifically told by Mr. Heatwall (phonetic spelling) if I remember that one correctly, that even though they had made this agreement at the mediation session, if they didn't feel that they could vote it freely and in light of everything else, they should abstain or vote no.

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, I interrupted you, You were talking about --

MISS STONE: I was talking about what they would need to prove and what they're pointing to to try to support their coercion case, or their speculative coercion case.

They try to make the argument that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall flipped, as they so ineloquently phrase it. Your Honor, that ignores the fact the reality that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have always been on the Board. Both sides of this battle of the Foundation have tried at certain times to adopt, in particular Dr. Marshall. And she has resisted those efforts.

16di-003685

At the Board meeting Dr. Stebbins in particular talked about how there were many matters he disagreed with Dr. Tucker about, including the location of the museum.

THE COURT: Isn't he the one who said when he got to the meeting on September 25th that he thought that everybody should resign?

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And that he always believed that the collection and the Foundation should stay im Chicago?

MISS STONE: Yes. And he is an art historian who has reasons to believe it would be most advantageous for the collection to be coupled with the collection here in Chicago.

In addition Dr. Marshall has always been neutral. in fact your Honor at one hearing you yourself remarked that after reading the minutes you thought she was the most neutral of anyone.

16di-003686

THE COURT: I wanted her on the special litigation committee.

MISS STONE: I understand.

THE COURT: She didn't want to be on it.

MISS STONE: That is correct. So what are they left with in the face of these, this history of neutrality and independence by those two directors?

On the face of their statements, which we read to you last time, which everybody quoted in the briefs, and I'll not read them again to you, but which you know where they said we're voting our conscience, we're voting freely, we are not voting for any extraneous reasons, we are not selling out to this Foundation. We are adhering to our fiduciary duty and this is how we vote.

What are they left with in the face of that? They are left with one or two affidavits from Dr. Tucker. He says you know I don't have a good feeling about that. I just don't really believe them. And he doesn't even really come out and say they sold out. They sold this Foundation down the river. He doesn't go that far. He talks about how it was inconsistent with prior positions. But even if he believes that, that is still only his subjective belief. And that comes no where near clear and convincing evidence, affirmative concrete evidence, that they have to present.

And I think it bears saying, your Honor, fundamentally what is being portrayed by the objectors, this notion that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall could somehow be brow beaten, intimidated, cowed, cowerd to use their word, by the Attorney General. These people are, as your Honor as remarked in the past, very intelligent, well educated, sophisicated people who had the benefit of counsel throughout this process. Dr. Stebbins is a Harvard educated lawyer, not that that means anything in and of itself, who is affiliated with the --Dr. Marshall is a PHD, president of an academy. To think that they would somehow be brow beaten by some assistant attorney general is really--with all due respect to Mr. Perkins, but it's really an insult to their integrity and to their reputation in the community to indicate that they could so easily be bought.

And your Honor, I think in essence what it boils down to is you've got Dr. Tucker and Mrs. Terra and

16di-003688

Senator Simpson saying, don't believe them, they sold out, they're lying, they're trying to cover up, believe us. That's not enough. Further discovery will not help them prove their case. And I think we should put an end to it.

Let me address a few other allegations they they're making as a way to try to upset this settlement agreement. They use this notion of conflict of interest, which is really I think an inappropriate notion here.

THE COURT: Did you get their latest filing? It came about a half hour before, it's a seven page document and they address the conflict again in that. And I didn't mention that I received that. And I did review that.

MISS STONE: I don't believe they had leave to file that brief. We weren't expecting that brief. We did try to review it quickly and I will try to respond to that as well.
