
Constructive Trust

[15] Heinold's argument concerning money damages and the imposition of a constructive trust warrants little discussion. There is no doubt that a breach of fiduciary duty claim seeking the imposition of a constructive trust on funds on account is an equitable claim, triable without the right to a jury. "A constructive trust is solely the creature of a court of chancery and is established upon *756 465 purely equitable grounds." (Miller v. Miller (1915), 266 Ill. 522, 531, 107 N.E. 821.) A constructive trust "is imposed by a court of equity to prevent a person from holding for his own benefit an advantage which he has gained by reason of a fiduciary relationship or by fraud." (Anderson v. Lybeck (1958), 15 Ill.2d 227, 232, 154 N.E.2d 259.) While plaintiffs sought the return of money, the remedy wasnot money damages, but restitution in the form of Heinold's unjust enrichment. Plaintiffs sought to impose a constructive trust on a specific fund, plaintiffs' accounts with Heinold. While Heinold believes any suit in which money is recovered constitutes an action at law, triable to a jury as a matter of right, this has never been the law in Illinois.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Accounting

[16] We next note that an action for an accounting for breach of fiduciary duty is also an equitable action, with no right to a jury trial. This court has previously noted that "jurisdiction in equity exists * * * where a fiduciary relation exists and a duty rests upon the respondent to render an account." (Miller v. Russell (1906), 224 Ill. 68, 72, 79 N.E. 434.) It has been further held that " '[c]ourts of equity have jurisdiction to compel an accounting, although the complainant has an adequate remedy at law, where fiduciary 79 relations exist * * *. [Citations.]' " (Mayr v. Nelson Chesman & Co. (1915), 195 Ill.App. 587, 602.) This is due to the fact that "[e]quity [has traditionally] recognized and enforced fiduciary duties, so it naturally [gives] an accounting remedy against fiduciaries." 1 D. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 2.6(3), at 158 (2d ed. 1993); see also Eichengrun, Remedying the Remedy of Accounting, 60 Ind.L.J. 463 (1985).

Heinold argues, however, that the fact that it stipulated to the amount of money at issue makes this an action for money damages, and thus an action at law. Without addressing this argument, we note that not only were plaintiffs entitled to an accounting as to how much money Heinold was unjustly enriched by their deception, plaintiffs were also entitled to an accounting to determine what Heinold actually did with the foreign service fee.

We do note that plaintiffs asked for their full investment losses under the accounting action, which is the measure of legal damages. However, in their complaint, at the trial court, and on appeal, plaintiffs have argued for an accounting based on the breach of fiduciary duties. Plaintiffs' failure to request the proper amount of recovery for an accounting in their complaint does not affect their right to pursue an equitable accounting. Section 2--603(c) of the Civil Practice Law provides that pleadings are to be liberally construed. 735 ILCS 5/2--603 (West 1992).

PLAINTIFFS' CROSS-RELIEF
V.
Punitive Damages

[17] Plaintiffs argue that the appellate court erred in reversing the trial court's award of punitive damages. We agree and reinstate the trial court's award of punitive damages.

80 The trial court awarded punitive damages under both counts in the amount of $500,000. In doing so, the court stated:

"Mindful of the bad faith and intentionally misleading and deceptive nature of Heinold's conduct in this matter, and mindful of the need to deter others conducting business in Illinois affecting a vital aspect of our nation's commerce, the Court concludes that an award of $500,000 in exemplary and punitive damages shall be assessed against Defendant, such amount to be divided among class members on a pro rata basis in proportion to the amount that any individual class member's losses bear to the total losses awarded the class."

The appellate court reversed the award of punitive damages and stated:

"Punitive damages are clearly disfavored at law and will be awarded only for conduct that is outrageous either because the acts are done with malice, an evil motive or because they are performed with a reckless indifference toward the rights of others. [Citations.] While the record supports the trial court's finding that defendant's conduct was intentionally misleading *757 466 and deceptive, we cannot say that it rises to the level of malice or reckless indifference towards the rights of others so as to justify an award of punitive damages." 240 Ill.App.3d at 545-46, 181 Ill.Dec. 376, 608 N.E.2d 449.

Plaintiffs argue that the appellate court erred because the decision to award punitive damages is within the discretion of the trial court and such decision will not be disturbed on appeal unless it is against the manifest weight of the evidence. (See Black v. Iovino (1991), 219 Ill.App.3d 378, 162 Ill.Dec. 513, 580 N.E.2d 139.) Heinold replies that the correct standard of review is whether the evidence supports the award of punitive damages (Loitz v. Remington Arms Co. (1990), 138 Ill.2d 404, 150 Ill.Dec. 510, 563 N.E.2d 397), which is a question of law. See Parsons v. Winter (1986), 142 Ill.App.3d 354, 96 Ill.Dec. 776, 491 N.E.2d 1236.

In Kelsay v. Motorola, Inc. (1978), 74 Ill.2d 172, 23 Ill.Dec. 559, 384 N.E.2d 353, this court stated: "It has long been established in this State that punitive 81 or exemplary damages may be awarded when torts are committed with fraud, actual malice, deliberate violence or oppression, or when the defendant acts willfully, or with such gross negligence as to indicate a wanton disregard of the rights of others. [Citation.] Where punitive damages may be assessed, they are allowed in the nature of punishment and as a warning and example to deter the defendant and others from committing like offenses in the future. [Citation.] And, while the measurement of punitive damages is a jury question, the preliminary question of whether the facts of a particular case justify the imposition of punitive damages is properly one of law. [Citation.]" (Kelsay, 74 Ill.2d at 186, 23 Ill.Dec. 559, 384 N.E.2d 353.)

This court has also noted:

"Punitive damages are permissible where a duty based on a relationship of trust is violated, the fraud is gross, or malice or willfulness are shown; such an award is not automatic." (Emphasis in original.) In re Marriage of Pagano (1992), 154 Ill.2d 174, 190, 180 Ill.Dec. 729, 607 N.E.2d 1242.

Plaintiffs' suit alleged intentional breaches of fiduciary duty and willful violations of the Consumer Fraud Act. The trial court found Heinold breached its fiduciary duties to plaintiffs and that its conduct was intentional and deceptive. The appellate court agreed. As in Pagano, punitive damages are permissible where a duty based on a relationship of trust is violated and where the violation has been willful. We find that the facts of this case justify a claim for punitive damages.

We next find the trial court's award of punitive damages was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. Heinold intentionally misled the plaintiff class, a group to which it owed a fiduciary duty, in order to obtain higher commissions. The trial court found that Heinold acted "with malice," that Heinold "cheated, defrauded and deceived the class," and that Heinold's breaches were "intentional and in bad faith." The trial court noted that its findings were based on the evidence presented in addition to the demeanor of the witnesses at trial. The purpose of punitive damages is to punish 82 the wrongdoer. A fiduciary such as Heinold would have little reason not to conduct its business in a fraudulent manner if the most it would be required to pay to plaintiffs would be Heinold's gains, as is the case here.

Heinold argues, however, that "[t]here is no evidence in this case to support a finding of 'conduct involving some element of outrage similar to that usually found in crime,' which is the legal standard that must be met to support a punitive damages award," citing Loitz v. Remington Arms Co. (1990), 138 Ill.2d 404, 150 Ill.Dec. 510, 563 N.E.2d 397. Heinold also notes the great lengths to which it went in order to ensure that the summary disclosure statement was complete and that the statement complied with the applicable Commission regulations. As noted previously, however, we do not agree that Heinold's deception complied with Commission regulations. Heinold's intentional deception, which the trial court found was done with malice, did involve an element of outrage similar to that usually found in crime.

Prejudgment Interest

Plaintiffs next argue that the appellate court erred in reversing the trial court's award of compounded prejudgment interest under the Consumer Fraud Act. However, because the trial court also awarded prejudgment interest on the breach of fiduciary duty count, which award has not been appealed, we need not discuss this issue.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the appellate court is affirmed in part and reversed in part. The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed in part and reversed in part, and the cause is remanded to the 83 circuit court for entry of judgment in accordance with this opinion.

Appellate court affirmed in part and reversed in part; circuit court affirmed in part and reversed in part; cause remanded.

I disagree with that part of today's decision which holds no right to a jury trial exists under this State's constitution for Consumer Fraud Act claims for legal damages. (163 Ill.2d at 71-77, 205 Ill.Dec. at 461-464, 643 N.E.2d at 752-755.) The holding owes much to a perceived difference between article I, section 13, of our constitution and the seventh amendment of the Federal Constitution. (163 Ill.2d at 71-74, 205 Ill.Dec. at 461-463, 643 N.E.2d at 752-754. The holding is also grounded on the view that Consumer Fraud Act claims are singular in nature. 163 Ill.2d at 74-77, 205 Ill.Dec. at 462- 464, 643 N.E.2d at 753-755.

The majority is wrong in both respects. The expression of the right to a jury trial in this State's constitution is the same as that of the seventh amendment. No basis exists to construe the clauses' respective scopes differently. Thus, the conclusion that the seventh amendment right operates in statutory actions applies for article I, section 13, as well. The concern for any particular statutory claim is whether the right remedied resembles one for which the common law also afforded recovery.

The jury trial right operates for a Consumer Fraud Act claim because similar recovery was recognized at common law. The Consumer Fraud Act merely expands rights previously enforceable; it does not create entirely new ones. Rights now statutorily actionable are similar to ones protected at common law under a theory of fraud.

84 For those reasons, as explained more fully below, I dissent.

The Illinois Constitutional Jury Trial Right and the Seventh Amendment

This State's Constitution of 1970 guarantees that "[t]he right of trial by jury as heretofore enjoyed shall remain inviolate." (Ill. Const.1970, art. I, § 13.) The majority notes that similar clauses found in each of this State's earlier constitutions have been construed the same in substance. (163 Ill.2d at 72, 205 Ill.Dec. at 461, 643 N.E.2d at 752, citing George v. People (1897), 167 Ill. 447, 455, 47 N.E. 741.) True enough. But different phraseology has been used by the respective drafters over time in expressing the right. As the clauses are construed to express the same right, the different phraseology reveals much about the right's scope.

The phrase "shall remain inviolate" pertaining to preservation of a jury trial right is found in all four of this State's constitutions. However, the clauses of the 1818 and 1848 constitutions did not also contain the phrase "as heretofore enjoyed" pertaining to what exactly was preserved. (Ill. Const.1818, art. VIII, § 6; Ill. Const.1848, art. XIII, § 6.) What jury trial right "remain[ed] inviolate" was first defined as one "heretofore enjoyed" in the 1870 constitution. (Ill. Const.1870, art. II, § 5; see generally G. Braden & R. Cohn, The Illinois Constitution: An Annotated and Comparative Analysis 24-27 (1969).) Our present constitution retains the phrase "as heretofore enjoyed" as a reference point.

The phrase "as heretofore enjoyed" precludes an expansive construction of what jury trial right exists under this State's constitution. It was not intended that the constitutional expression of the right would change the scope or nature of it. That is, what 468 759 "remain[s] inviolate" under article I, section 13, is a jury trial right as was enjoyed at English common law during the 18th century. See Grace v. Howlett (1972), 51 Ill.2d 478, 509, 283 N.E.2d 474.

85 The phraseology of the jury trial right clause of the 1848 constitution provides a second reference point. That clause defined the jury trial right as one which "shall extend to all cases at law." (Ill. Const.1848, art. XIII, § 6.) The jury trial right was thus also limited to claims for legal, or money, damages as distinguished from equitable relief.

That is significant, again, because the substance of the right expressed has been held to be "the same under one constitution as under the other." (See George, 167 Ill. at 455, 47 N.E. 741.) Our present constitution, too, must distinguish between common law legal damage claims--for which the right operates--and common law claims for equitablerelief--for which it does not.

Article I, section 13, thus must operate to provide a jury trial right as existed for actions at common law for legal damages. The majority here seems to understand the point. It observes that this State's jury trial right does not operate for any claim "nonexistent" at or "unknown" to the common law even if legal damages are sought. (163 Ill.2d at 71-73, 205 Ill.Dec. at 461-462, 643 N.E.2d at 752-753.) What the majority ignores, however, is that, by virtue of the Supreme Court's construction, the seventh amendment's scope is identical.

The seventh amendment, unlike the expressions of the jury trial right clauses of this State's constitutions, directs its operation to "suits at common law." (U.S. Const., amend. VII.) But the phrase "suits at common law" has long been interpreted to mean more than the body of English decisional law predating the amendment's adoption. The phrase is read to mean suits at common law "in which legal rights were to be ascertained and determined, in contradistinction to those where equitable rights * * * were administered." (Emphasis added.) Parsons v. Bedford (1830), 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) 433, 446-47, 7 L.Ed. 732, 737.

86 Both article I, section 13, and the seventh amendment therefore preserve only such a jury trial right as existed at common law for legal damage claims. The central question is whether that includes claims for legal damages based on a statute.

That the seventh amendment's scope includes statutory claims is considered by the Supreme Court a point " 'too obvious to be doubted.' " (Curtis v. Loether (1974), 415 U.S. 189, 193, 94 S.Ct. 1005, 1008, 39 L.Ed.2d 260, 266, quoting Rogers v. Loether (7th Cir.1972), 467 F.2d 1110, 1114 (listing an "unbroken line of cases" in which the Court has so acknowledged the seventh amendment's operation).) But, though the majority seems to see that, like the seventh amendment, article I, section 13, preserves a jury trial right as existed at common law for legal damage claims, it finds the same conclusion does not apply here. It cites, as reasons to more narrowly construe article I, section 13, two of this court's passing observations about the jury trial right. The observations merely beg the central question.

The first observation is that this State's jury trial right was not intended to operate " ' "in special or statutory proceedings unknown to the common law." ' " (163 Ill.2d at 73, 205 Ill.Dec. at 462, 643 N.E.2d at 753, quoting People ex rel. Keith v. Keith (1967), 38 Ill.2d 405, 408, 231 N.E.2d 387, quoting People v. Niesman (1934), 356 Ill. 322, 327, 190 N.E. 668.) I agree with that. The point, however, has no meaning here. Actions "nonexistent" at or "unknown" to the common law plainly fall outside the reach of the constitutionally expressed right.

The second observation is that nothing in that constitutional expression " 'prohibit[s] the legislature from creating new rights unknown to the common law and provide for their determination without a jury.' " (163 Ill.2d at 73, 205 Ill.Dec. at 462, 643 N.E.2d at 753; Standidge v. Chicago Rys. Co. (1912), 254 Ill. 524, 532, 98 N.E. 963.) The point is no less evident than the first. New rights--those truly nonexistent at or unknown 87 to the common law--are beyond the express protections of the constitutional expression. Given such a new right, a jury trial could only be *760 469 guaranteed as a matter of legislative prerogative.

Ironically, the majority misses what aid the second observation provides on the issue. The quoted statement refers, quite accurately, to rights--not actions--nonexistent at or unknown to the common law. The type of action is immaterial in determining what could be said to be nonexistent at or unknown to the common law. (See Parsons, 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) at 445-46, 7 L.Ed. at 737 (noting that the Federal right extends to all suits "whatever may be the peculiar form which they may assume to settle legal rights").) Statutory actions, of course, did not exist at common law in any literal sense. The concern is simply whether the substantive right giving rise to legal recovery resembles one for which recovery could be had at common law. That a right formerly actionable or enforceable at common law is now the subject of codification is immaterial. See Rogers, 467 F.2d at 1117.

Beyond misapprehending what has been noted in the past about this State's constitutional jury trial right, the majority does not explain why article I, section 13, and the seventh amendment should not be similarly construed. The analysis regarding the seventh amendment was first expounded in Curtis v. Loether (1974), 415 U.S. 189, 94 S.Ct. 1005, 39 L.Ed.2d 260, which involved an action under the Civil Rights Act of 1968. But the basic principle had actually been established in Parsons, 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) at 446- 47, 7 L.Ed. at 737. There, Justice Story had concluded that the amendment " 'embrace[d] all suits * * * not of equity and admiralty jurisdiction, whatever might be the peculiar form which they may assume to settle legal rights.' " (Curtis, 415 U.S. at 193, 94 S.Ct. at 1008, 39 L.Ed.2d at 266, citing 88 Parsons, 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) at 446-47, 7 L.Ed. at 732.) The seventh amendment right therefore operated even for a statutory claim so long as the "statute create[d] legal rights and remedies[ ] enforceable in an action for damages in the ordinary courts of law." (Curtis, 415 U.S. at 194, 94 S.Ct. at 1008, 39 L.Ed.2d at 266.) In that sense, the Court had remarked, the seventh amendment "extends beyond the common law forms of action." Curtis, 415 U.S. at 193, 94 S.Ct. at 1007, 39 L.Ed.2d at 265.

The majority here finds, in that last quoted remark, reason to believe allusion was being made to a more expansive scope for the seventh amendment than that of article I, section 13. (See 163 Ill.2d at 73, 205 Ill.Dec. at 462, 643 N.E.2d at 753.) That reading is inaccurate. The Court's holding makes plain that the seventh amendment "extends beyond common law forms of action" only to the extent it operates in statutory actions at all. As Justice Brennan has explained:

"The * * * test * * * expounded in Curtis v. Loether [citation] requires a court to compare the right at issue to 18th-century English forms of action to determine whether the historically analogous right was vindicated in an action at law or in equity, and to examine whether the remedy sought is legal or equitable in nature." (Chauffeurs, Teamsters & Helpers, Local No. 391 v. Terry (1990), 494 U.S. 558, 574, 110 S.Ct. 1339, 1349-50, 108 L.Ed.2d 519, 534 (Brennan, J., concurring in part and concurring in the judgment).)

The seventh amendment does not go beyond the common law in any other respect. Eighteenth-century English forms of action remain the basis for operation of the right--just as they do for article I, section 13. See Howlett, 51 Ill.2d at 509, 283 N.E.2d 474.

Let there be no doubt, the majority's decision today limits this State's constitutional jury trial right in a way never envisioned by its drafters. By failing to apply the same analysis given the seventh amendment, the 89 majority precludes the operation of article I, section 13, in every statutory claim. Its misreading of case law reduces the concerns about what actions existed at or were known to the common law to a literal exercise; only actions of a type which, in fact, existed at or were known to the common law would come within reach of the scope of article I, section 13. Abandoned is any notion of the constitutional jury trial right as "an object of deep interest and solicitude" about which every encroachment has been "watched with great jealousy." (Parsons, 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) at 446, 7 L.Ed. at 736.) It is too obvious to me that, like the seventh amendment, statutory claims *761 470 for legal damages involving rights enforceable at common law come within the protection of article I, section 13, of this State's constitution.

The Consumer Fraud Act

Whether article I, section 13, affords a jury trial right specifically for Consumer Fraud Act claims is a matter of two considerations: the claim must seek legal, not equitable, damages; and the claim must be based on a right similar to one enforceable at common law. The second of those concerns is the more important here. That concern directs a comparison of Consumer Fraud Act claims to 18th-century actions brought in the courts of England prior to the merger of the courts of law and equity. (See Chauffeurs, Teamsters & Helpers, Local No. 391, 494 U.S. at 565, 110 S.Ct. at 1345, 108 L.Ed.2d at 528; see also Flaherty v. Murphy (1920), 291 Ill. 595, 598, 126 N.E. 553 (stating that the claim must be at least "analogous" to one "provided for under the laws of this State prior to the adoption of [this State's constitution]").) Again, material to the analysis is not simply the type of action, but whether it involves "rights and remedies of [a] sort typically enforced in an action at [common] law." Curtis, 415 U.S. at 195, 94 S.Ct. at 1009, 39 L.Ed.2d at 267.

90 The majority rejects the argument here that a claim under the Consumer Fraud Act is analogous to one at common law for fraud. That conclusion is based on adaptation of the appellate court's analysis in Richard/Allen/Winter, Ltd. v. Waldorf (1987), 156 Ill.App.3d 717, 109 Ill.Dec. 239, 509 N.E.2d 1078. (163 Ill.2d at 75, 205 Ill.Dec. at 463, 643 N.E.2d at 754.) The analysis in that case makes much of the Consumer Fraud Act's purpose in affording consumers protection broader than that afforded at common law. 163 Ill.2d at 75, 205 Ill.Dec. at 463, 643 N.E.2d at 754; see Richard/Allen/Winter, Ltd., 156 Ill.App.3d at 721-22, 109 Ill.Dec. 239, 509 N.E.2d 1078.

There is no question about the broad protection afforded under the Consumer Fraud Act. Not only are claims satisfying the elements of common law fraud subsumed by it, the act relaxes those elements to reach other types of related claims. (Siegel v. Levy Organization Development Co. (1992), 153 Ill.2d 534, 543, 180 Ill.Dec. 300, 607 N.E.2d 194.) Neither a showing of an intent to deceive nor a scheme to defraud is required under the Act. It is therefore possible to recover for innocent misrepresentations. (Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 121 1/2 , par. 262; see B. McDonald, The Applicability of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act to Private Wrongs, 39 DePaul L.Rev. 95, 96 (1989); see also 163 Ill.2d at 75-76, 205 Ill.Dec. at 463-464, 643 N.E.2d at 754-755.) It is not even necessary to prove actionable reliance. (Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 121 1/2 , par. 262; see 163 Ill.2d at 75-76, 205 Ill.Dec. at 463-464, 643 N.E.2d at 754-755.) Remedies, too, are extended under the Act. Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 121 1/2 , par. 270a(c) (providing for the recovery of attorney fees).

In so eliminating various hurdles met in pursuing common law fraud actions, the majority is satisfied that the Consumer Fraud Act creates rights "unknown to the common law." (163 Ill.2d at 76, 205 Ill.Dec. at 464, 643 N.E.2d at 755.) I am not. I do not believe the mere broadening of a right for which legal recovery may be had makes the right new.

Instructive on the point is the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals' analysis in Rogers, adopted by the Supreme 91 Court in Curtis, 415 U.S. at 195, 94 S.Ct. at 1009, 39 L.Ed.2d at 267. The jury trial right issue arose there, as noted earlier, pursuant to a statutory Federal civil rights action. The claim specifically alleged racial discrimination against a landlord for refusing to let an apartment. The nature of the right protected, the court concluded, was analogous to ones protected at common law. Rogers, 467 F.2d at 1117.

Those actions, however, were hardly identical to the breadth of protections afforded under section 812 of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, the section allegedly violated. The actions cited included ones against innkeepers for refusing room to travellers without justification and a species of defamation available against landlords who refused to let rooms citing a tenant's unfitness when race was the reason. (Rogers, 467 F.2d at 1117.) The comparison to common law actions was *762 471 stretched even further. The court noted common law claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress reflected possible aspects of a Civil Rights Act claim. (Rogers, 467 F.2d at 1117.) The point is simple: statutory claims for legal damages do not have to be identical to common law actions for the jury trial right to attach, they need only be similar.

Given its view of our Consumer Fraud Act, the majority, I am certain, would view the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1968 to provide new rights and remedies beyond those which existed at or were known to the common law. That act expanded, in no small way, the manner and type of actionable discrimination. Citing the court of appeals analysis, the Supreme Court determined statutory claims pursuant to the Federal Civil Rights Act were analogous to common law actions. (Curtis, 415 U.S. at 193, 94 S.Ct. at 1008, 39 L.Ed.2d at 266.) Unfortunately, the majority fails to appreciate the import of that analysis.

92 The same logic applied by the Supreme Court applies here to show that the Consumer Fraud Act is analogous to actions based on fraud at common law. The requisite elements of a Consumer Fraud Act claim are irrelevant. A claim under the Act is analogous to one at common law simply if the underlying right protected, not what is necessary to its enforcement, is new.

The Consumer Fraud Act does not create fundamentally new rights not previously enforceable. Instead, it continues to protect consumers' interests in the marketplace. Those same interests found similar protection at common law under a theory of fraud. The Act may more comprehensively protect those interests by expanding, similar to the Civil Rights Act, the manner and type of actionable conduct. But the underlying interests protected by the Consumer Fraud Act are not dissimilar to those long protected at common law. Those rights, now statutorily enforceable, are no less analogous to common law fraud actions than are Federal Civil Rights Act claims to the common law actions noted above.

The majority also notes that the Consumer Fraud Act nowhere provides for jury trials. (163 Ill.2d at 76, 205 Ill.Dec. at 464, 643 N.E.2d at 755.) It again is persuaded by the appellate court's reasoning in Richard/Allen/Winter, Ltd. The appellate court there noted that the Consumer Fraud Act provides only that a "court" may provide damages "in its discretion." (Richard/Allen/Winter, Ltd., 156 Ill.App.3d at 724-25, 109 Ill.Dec. 239, 509 N.E.2d 1078.) Noting "court" to be synonymous with "judge" or "judges," it was determined that the General Assembly envisioned no participation by a "jury" in a Consumer Fraud Act claim. Richard/Allen/Winter, Ltd., 156 Ill.App.3d at 724-25, 109 Ill.Dec. 239, 509 N.E.2d 1078.

Even if that conclusion is correct, and I have serious doubt as to it, the point is of no consequence. The jury trial right at issue here is a matter of constitutional grace. The legislature has no legitimate authority to 93 encroach upon it. Given that Consumer Fraud Act claims for legal damages create no new rights, the General Assembly could not, even if it so intended, preclude the operation of article I, section 13.

METROPOLITAN SANITARY DISTRICT OF GREATER CHICAGO ex rel, William F. O'KEEFFE, Appellee,
v.
INGRAM CORPORATION et al., Appellees (The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago, Appellee; the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago ex rel. Aram A. Hartunian, Appellant).

No. 53799.

Rehearing Denied Oct. 19, 1981.

Taxpayer appealed from order of the Circuit Court, Cook County, James H. Felt, J., which made award of attorney fees to another taxpayer who had brought a taxpayer's action under the Purchasing Act which had been settled. The Appellate Court held that taxpayer lacked standing to appeal and Supreme Court granted leave to appeal. The Supreme Court, Clark, J., held that: (1) provision of settlement whereby the relevant agency agreed not to appeal the award of attorney fees would not be enforced as a matter of public policy; (2) decision not to appeal was presumptively wrongful where the taxpayers' interests were not being represented by any of the parties on the attorney fees issue; and (3) trial court erred in using a multiplier of two in determining the award of attorney fees.

Reversed and remanded.

CLARK, Justice:

On April 18, 1979, the Cook County circuit court awarded petitioner A. Denison Weaver "the sum of $900,000.00 as and for attorney's fees" and "$16,842.30 for the expenses incurred" on behalf of "the taxpayer William F. O'Keeffe," and awarded petitioner George J. Cullen "$60,000.00 for services rendered on behalf of the taxpayer as co-counsel." Taxpayer O'Keeffe had instituted a derivative suit on behalf of the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago (MSD) against the Ingram Corporation and various related persons and entities (Ingram), in December 1975. The suit was brought under sections 11.18 and 11.22 of the Purchasing Act for the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago (the Purchasing Act or the Act) (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 42, pars. 331.18, 331.22). This suit and related actions filed by the MSD in Federal and State courts were settled. On May 17, 1979, Aram A. Hartunian, pro se, attempted to appeal the attorney fee award derivatively on behalf of the MSD. 463 As part of the settlement, the MSD had agreed not to appeal the fee award, and it refused Hartunian's demand to appeal. The appellate court held that Hartunian lacked standing to appeal (85 Ill.App.3d 859, 41 Ill.Dec. 129, 407 N.E.2d 627), and we granted leave to appeal. We reverse.

A contract to haul sludge, negotiated by the purchasing agent of the MSD on a noncompetitive-bid basis, was awarded to Ingram on May 12, 1971. In 1974, a Federal grand jury began investigating the circumstances under which the contract was awarded. The MSD's records were subpoenaed. Trustees, officers, and employees of the MSD appeared before the grand jury and testified. In late 1975, William F. O'Keeffe, a lawyer and MSD taxpayer, heard "(r)umors on the street" to the effect that the contract was let illegally, and published reports of the grand jury investigation appeared soon thereafter. He retained counsel and filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois and in the circuit court of Cook County. The gravamen of the complaint was that the contract to haul sludge had been awarded in violation of section 11.18 of the Purchasing Act, which read, in pertinent part:

> "All officers and employees (of the MSD) are expressly prohibited from accepting, directly or indirectly, from any person, association or corporation to which any purchase order, lease or contract may be awarded, any rebate, gift, money, or anything of value." (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 42, par. 331.18.)

Section 11.22 of the Act provides that "(a)ny purchase order or contract executed in violation of this Act shall be null and void." (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 42, par. 331.22.) The complaint averred that plaintiff was an MSD taxpayer and sought the return of all money Ingram had been paid pursuant to the contract. That sum was approximately $24 million.

The complaint was defective in several respects. The MSD was not made a party defendant. The complaint did 464 not aver that the MSD was unwilling to sue Ingram *862 537 for this violation. Nor did the complaint aver that O'Keeffe had asked the MSD to sue or why O'Keeffe had not asked the MSD to sue. Copies of the complaint, however, were sent to the MSD on December 29, 1975.

Proceedings were begun by the Illinois Commerce Commission on December 30, 1975, related to Ingram's alleged tariff overcharges on the same contract, and the MSD hired special counsel, Aram A. Hartunian, in January 1976, to secure an adjustment on the tariff charged by Ingram. The MSD, represented by Hartunian, filed suit in March 1976 in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois (Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago v. Ingram Corp. et al., No. 76 C 1009). The gist of this action was that Ingram overcharged the MSD, breaching the contract.

The grand jury, in that same month, returned a 39-count, 66-page indictment against, variously, the president and the chairman of the board of Ingram Corporation, E. Bronson Ingram and Frederic B. Ingram, respectively, MSD trustees Valentine J. Janicki and Chester P. Majewski, the general superintendent of the MSD, Bart T. Lynam, and other individuals, the names and positions of whom are irrelevant. If convictions were had on the indictments, a violation of section 11.18 would have been established.

Ingram had originally assigned the contract to an Illinois Ingram subsidiary corporation. The assertion of Federal jurisdiction, accordingly, was problematic, and O'Keeffe nonsuited the Federal case on August 3, 1976. Repeated difficulties in obtaining jurisdiction over the Ingram individual defendants and obtaining discovery against them occupied O'Keeffe for the rest of the year.

O'Keeffe and the MSD had an arrangement whereby O'Keeffe would keep the MSD apprised of the status of his suit. One such letter was sent to the MSD on March 5, 1976. On January 17, 1977, however, the MSD, in responding 465 to another O'Keeffe letter, advised him that it regarded "the O'Keeffe suit as being neither authorized by us nor necessary at this time. The (MSD) has this situation under review and will, at the appropriate time, enforce any rights which we may have under (the Purchasing Act) * * *." The letter continued, however, stating that the MSD intended "to be cooperative in responding to any request by you (O'Keeffe) for assistance. We hope that you will keep us informed of the status of the case. * * * " O'Keeffe's counsel argued in a responsive letter that the MSD's position was inconsistent with his position, for the MSD's actions in Federal court were predicated on the validity of the contract, and noted that he never requested authorization for the suit in part because the chief administrative officer and chairman of the judiciary committee of the MSD were under indictment.

Hartunian, on March 1, 1977, filed a motion to quash deposition subpoenas directed to the MSD's attorney by O'Keeffe and Ingram. The deposition was ordered to be taken, however, and two days after it was taken, Hartunian resigned as the MSD's special counsel, citing adverse media publicity. A new firm, Jerome H. Torshen, Ltd., was engaged one week later.

For the next several months, problems of discovery occupied the parties. After the Ingram individuals, one MSD trustee, and others not relevant here, were convicted in the Federal criminal case in November 1977, the MSD amended its Federal-court complaint to include a count based on Ingram's alleged Purchasing Act violations. A separate suit in the same cause of action was filed by the MSD in circuit court (Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago v. Ingram Corp. et al., No. 77 L 24930).

On January 3, 1978, the MSD moved to appear as amicus curiae in the O'Keeffe suit, for the purpose of suggesting O'Keeffe's lack of standing. This motion was denied. On January 20, 1978, the MSD's motion to intervene 466 in the O'Keeffe suit pursuant to section 26.1 of the Civil Practice Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1975, ch. 110, par. 26.1) was granted.

*863 538 In February 1978 the Federal district court denied O'Keeffe's petition to intervene under Federal Rule 24 (Fed.R.Civ.P. 24). The court found that the MSD's suit was being "vigorously prosecuted." This ruling was affirmed from the bench by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

In March 1978 O'Keeffe amended his complaint, setting forth reasons why he could maintain his action despite his failure to demand that the MSD sue Ingram. On May 12, 1978, the trial court, after an extensive hearing on the issue of O'Keeffe's standing, ruled that a demand upon the MSD to sue would have been useless, and held that O'Keeffe had standing. The MSD unsuccessfully sought review of this ruling in the appellate court and in this court.

On May 17, 1978, the MSD filed a motion for summary judgment in Federal court on the Purchasing Act count of its complaint. In October 1978 O'Keeffe also moved for summary judgment in the circuit court. In March 1979 O'Keeffe was given leave to withdraw this motion and the case was set for trial in May. On April 4, 1979, however, O'Keeffe petitioned the court to approve a settlement. In pertinent part this verified petition stated:

"That during the pendency of this litigation and at the suggestion of this Honorable Court, the parties hereto engaged in negotiations for the purpose of determining whether a common ground existed upon which a settlement of all disputes between MSD and Ingram relating to MSD's sludge removal program could be resolved. That pursuant to said negotiations, on March 30, 1979, an agreement was reached to settle this and all other litigation between the MSD and Ingram, subject to the approval of this Court, on the terms and conditions as stated in the form of Settlement Agreement attached hereto whereby:

(a) Ingram will pay to MSD the sum of 467 $8,250,000. In addition, Ingram will relinquish any claims which it might have to recover any sum of money from MSD, said claims being in the approximate amount of $3,500,000.

(b) MSD has agreed to pay your Petitioner's attorneys' fees and expenses out of the funds recovered in such sum as awarded by this Court upon a petition to be filed by Petitioner's counsel and after hearing in open court. MSD reserves the right to contest said petition at said hearing, but both your Petitioner and MSD have agreed to waive their respective rights of appeal from any order entered pursuant to said fee petition. MSD has further agreed not to contest Petitioner's standing. Petitioner has agreed with MSD that MSD's net cash recovery after the payment of Petitioner's attorneys' fees and expenses shall not be less than $7,250,000.

(c) All parties agree that upon the approval of this petition, they will execute a Release in the form attached hereto.

The foregoing settlement proposal has been duly considered by Ingram, MSD's Board of Commissioners and your Petitioner, all of whom have accepted said proposal, subject to this Court's approval."

The circuit court approved the settlement and established a schedule for the filing and a hearing on the fee petition. Jurisdiction was retained to fix the amount of attorney fees, but subject to that, the cause was dismissed with prejudice. On April 5 and 6, 1979, the Federal district court case and the MSD's circuit court action were dismissed with prejudice. Ingram delivered a cashier's check for $8,250,000 to the MSD. On April 9, 1979, the circuit court dismissed O'Keeffe's cause of action against defendants with prejudice. On April 18, 1979, the trial court, after an evidentiary hearing, awarded $960,000 in fees and $16,842.30 in costs to be paid by the MSD. On April 19, 1979, the MSD approved this fee award and directed that it be paid.

Hartunian subsequently informed the MSD that he was disturbed by the fee award and stated his intention to appeal 468 the award in the absence of such action by the MSD. The MSD refused to appeal and *864 539 Hartunian filed his derivative notice of appeal on May 17, 1979. The MSD has refused to issue a check for the fees until this matter is resolved on appeal. There was some confusion among the parties, originally, regarding the scope of the purported appeal, but it is now clear that Hartunian is challenging only the fee award, and that part of the settlement agreement related to it. For that reason, Ingram has moved that it be dismissed from the action. Ingram has also filed a brief on the merits.

(1) Taxpayer Hartunian initially argues that the award of attorney fees to O'Keeffe's counsel was unauthorized because O'Keeffe had no standing to sue. Taxpayer O'Keeffe argues that taxpayer Hartunian has no standing to appeal. We consider first the status of taxpayer O'Keeffe.

Section 11.22 of the Purchasing Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 42, par. 331.22) authorizes taxpayer suits: "Public funds which have been expended * * * (in violation of the Act), may be recovered in the name of the sanitary district in any court of competent jurisdiction." This provision allows citizen access to judicial forums to enforce causes of action when public-official fiduciaries neglect or refuse to do so. No other remedy is as "direct, speedy and efficacious." Colton v. Hanchett (1852), 13 Ill. 615, quoted in Droste v. Kerner (1966), 34 Ill.2d 495, 506, 217 N.E.2d 73 (Schaefer, J., dissenting); see also People v. Holten (1919), 287 Ill. 225, 122 N.E. 540; City of Chicago ex rel. Cohen v. Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(2) The crux of Hartunian's argument, however, is that O'Keeffe neither asked the MSD to sue Ingram nor demonstrated that such a request would have been futile. (A 469 secondary argument that O'Keeffe did not, as required, join the MSD as a party defendant we need not address, because the MSD did ultimately intervene and become a party.) This requirement is a precondition of taxpayer actions. (People ex rel. City of Chicago v. Schreiber (1944), 322 Ill.App. 452, 483, 54 N.E.2d 862; see 74 Am.Jur.2d Taxpayers' Actions sec. 31 (1974).) Hartunian has cited cases in which corporation motions to dismiss shareholder derivative actions were granted for failure to demonstrate, in the complaint, that a majority of corporate directors would fail to enforce the corporate cause of action, if called upon. (See, e. g., Brooks v. American Export Industries, Inc. (S.D.N.Y.1975), 68 F.R.D. 506; Abrams v. Mayflower Investors, Inc. (N.D.Ill.1974), 62 F.R.D. 361; see Annot., 99 A.L.R.3d 1034 (1980).) The analogy is urged because only two of the nine MSD trustees were indicted.

(3) We find those cases inapplicable, for the MSD here, knowing of the O'Keeffe suit, did not seek to intervene and dismiss his action for more than two years, and, meanwhile, had requested O'Keeffe to periodically apprise them of the suit's status. The private letter to O'Keeffe in January 1977 advising him that his suit was "unauthorized" cannot, for obvious reasons, substitute for appropriate action in court. When the MSD finally filed a motion to intervene and dismiss O'Keeffe, the trial court appropriately held a hearing (cf. DePinto v. Provident Security Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 1963), 323 F.2d 826, cert. denied (1964) 376 U.S. 950, 84 S.Ct. 965, 11 L.Ed.2d 969) and appropriately decided on the basis of the whole record not to eliminate the taxpayer from the suit. Green v. Jones (1924), 164 Ark. 118, 124, 261 S.W. 43, 45. Cf. Palmer v. Morris (5th Cir. 1965), 341 F.2d 577 (per curiam).

Hartunian argues that the MSD "prudently" decided to await the outcome of the Federal criminal case before suing Ingram. The short answer is that this argument 470 admits that an original demand upon the MSD to sue would have been futile. Neither section 11.22 of the Act nor prior case law required O'Keeffe to wait until the conclusion of the criminal case to ascertain whether the MSD would follow through in accordance with its belated and ambiguous *865 540 private assurances. If the MSD was willing to sue Ingram, that willingness should have been promptly brought to the attention of the trial court.

The two years prior to the conclusion of the criminal case were not wasted years. Motions, pleadings, and discovery, however time-consuming, are integral parts of litigation. O'Keeffe cannot be faulted on account of, in Hartunian's words, procedural squabbles occurring during this time, for many of those squabbles were initiated by Ingram, obviously interested in fully litigating a lawsuit with a potential liability of many millions of dollars. Some of the squabbles, moreover, were initiated by the MSD, for reasons not fully or adequately explained. We therefore defer to the trial court's determination that keeping O'Keeffe in the case helped assure that the public interest in the case was fully represented. We also wonder, as did the trial court, what the obstacle was to the MSD and O'Keeffe jointly litigating the case against Ingram, once the MSD decided that it, too, was interested in pursuing Ingram for the alleged Purchasing Act violations.

(4) A necessary predicate to the trial court's conclusion, which we have now approved, that O'Keeffe had standing, was that there were grounds to believe that the MSD was inadequately protecting the public interest. It is puzzling, therefore, that O'Keeffe suggests, as one reason for dismissing Hartunian's appeal, that the MSD validly bound all taxpayers by its agreement, in advance of the determination, not to appeal the fee award. Nevertheless, it is true that courts favor settlements. Agreements and consent decrees generally are enforced according to their terms. A long-standing exception has existed, however, for agreements 471 which are contrary to public policy. Massell v. Daley (1949), 404 Ill. 479, 89 N.E.2d 361.

Several sources of public policy persuade us that the agreement to forgo an appeal should not be enforced here. First, the protections afforded in two similar areas of the law, class actions and shareholder derivative actions, were absent in this proceeding. Second, the taxpayers were not adequately represented at the fee-determination proceeding. Third, this court has a policy of refusing to enforce the terms of settlement agreements which disadvantage unincluded parties.

Although class actions represent the aggregation of private causes of action (in contrast to a derivative suit), the representative character of the suit and the fiduciary nature of the relationship between the class representative and absent parties who will be bound by the outcome provide a clear analogy to taxpayer actions. Settlements in Federal and State courts generally are preceded by notice to the class of the settlement's terms. (Fed.R.Civ.P. 23; Ill.Rev.Stat.1977, ch. 110, par. 57.7.) Those opting in to a settlement agreement are permitted to appeal on the question of its adequacy whether or not they have signed waiver forms giving up that right as a condition to opting in. (Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (5th Cir. 1978), 576 F.2d 1157, cert. denied (1979), 439 U.S. 1115, 99 S.Ct. 1020, 59 L.Ed.2d 74; see also Ace Heating & Plumbing Co., Inc. v. Crane Co. (3d Cir. 1971), 453 F.2d 30.) Some Federal courts have appointed guardians ad litem to protect the interests of absent class members at a fee-determination proceeding. (Haas v. Pittsburgh National Bank (W.D.Pa.1977), 77 F.R.D. 382, and case therein cited.) It has been held that courts should insist on the settlement of the damage aspect of the case prior to any attorney fees determination. Prandini v. National Tea Co. (3d Cir. 1977), 557 F.2d 1015.

The analogy between shareholder and taxpayer derivative *472 suits, though imperfect, was recognized as early as 1871 in this State and has been maintained since then. (Sherlock v. Village of Winnetka (1871), 59 Ill. 389, 398; City of Chicago ex rel. Cohen v. Keane (1976), 64 Ill.2d 559, 568, 2 Ill.Dec. 285, 357 N.E.2d 452.) The actions are similar in that they each are based upon a combination of two causes of action: one against the directors or public officials for failing to sue and the other based upon the cause of action belonging to the corporation 866 541 or governmental body. Recovery runs in favor of the corporation or governmental entity, which is why they are necessary parties to these suits. The suing taxpayer or shareholder represents absent members of his class, who are bound by final judgment or decree. A fiduciary duty is owed by the representative to these absent parties. See Ross v. Bernhard (1970), 396 U.S. 531, 90 S.Ct. 733, 24 L.Ed.2d 729; Cohen v. Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp. (1949), 337 U.S. 541, 549, 69 S.Ct. 1221, 1227, 93 L.Ed. 1528, 1538; Clayton v. Mimms & Co. (1979), 68 Ill.App.3d 443, 25 Ill.Dec. 181, 386 N.E.2d 452; Prunty, The Shareholders' Derivative Suit: Notes on Its Derivation, 32 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 980 (1957); Comment, Taxpayers' Suits: A Survey and Summary, 69 Yale L.J. 895 (1960) (noting also the analogy's imperfections).

Shareholder derivative suits are litigated frequently in Federal court, and several principles applied there are worthy of note. Notice of proposed settlements is sent to all shareholders. (Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1; compare C. W. Murdock, The Illinois Business Corporation Act Annotated sec. 45(a) (3d ed. 1975).) Objectors, summoned by the trial court's notice to state their case, are allowed reasonable discovery (Girsh v. Jepson (3 Cir., 1975), 521 F.2d 153, 156-57) and are allowed to contest the reasonableness of the settlement on appeal (In re Pittsburgh & Lake Erie R. R. Co. Securities & Antitrust Litigation (3d Cir. 1976), 543 F.2d 1058). These provisions are a clear outgrowth of the fears prompted by the uncertain positions of settling*473 parties in a derivative suit regarding attorney fees. McLaughlin, Capacity of Plaintiff-Stockholder to Terminate a Stockholder's Suit, 46 Yale L.J. 421 (1936); C. W. Murdock, The Illinois Business Corporation Act Annotated sec. 45(a) (3d ed. 1975).

Conflicting loyalties were present in the instant case. O'Keeffe was allowed to sue because the MSD inadequately represented the interests of the taxpayers. No change in the MSD occurred between the time its motion to dismiss O'Keeffe was denied and the time of the settlement to persuade us that we should defer to the MSD's judgment on behalf of the taxpayers, regarding the decision not to appeal the attorney fees award. O'Keeffe's counsel, perhaps more significantly, could not validly represent the taxpayers regarding his own fee. See Barliant v. Follett Corp. (1978), 74 Ill.2d 226, 23 Ill.Dec. 522, 384 N.E.2d 316.

Public policy is traditionally found primarily in the Constitution and statutes and only secondarily in case law. Nevertheless, in Popovich v. Ram Pipe & Supply Co. (1980), 82 Ill.2d 203, 45 Ill.Dec. 167, 412 N.E.2d 518, this court declined to enforce a settlement agreement according to its terms where such enforcement would have violated the long-standing policy against double recoveries. The prohibition against double recovery is one found in our case law. The companion case, Palmer v. Avco Distributing Corp. (1980), 82 Ill.2d 211, 45 Ill.Dec. 377, 412 N.E.2d 959, noted, in addition, the problem with settlement agreements that prejudice unincluded parties.

Here, the advance agreement not to appeal the attorney fees award was made by parties inadequately representing absent taxpayers. It was intended, nevertheless, for the taxpayers to have been bound by the judgment entered. They had no advance notice of what the settlement entailed or how they could register a protest. (It is not clear that, and we do not decide whether, Hartunian could have intervened after the entry of the decree (see Lenhart v. Miller (1940), 375 Ill. 346, 31 N.E.2d 781; Annot., 69 *474 A.L.R.2d 562 (1960).) There is no justifiable reliance on O'Keeffe's part, upon the agreement not to appeal his fee, for his conclusion that the settlement's damage figure was reasonable and that the litigation should cease could not depend upon the amount of his fee.

In the Pettway class action case (Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (5th Cir. 1978), 576 F.2d 1157, cert. denied (1979), 439 U.S. 1115, 99 S.Ct. 1020, 59 L.Ed.2d 74) previously cited, the court held that "(r)equiring claimants to opt into a back pay subclass before they have an opportunity to seek appellate review of the settlement 867 542 would be inconsistent with the design of Rule 23(e), which bounds the court's discretion in approving proposed settlements. Subclass members have an interest in ensuring that a settlement is reviewed by the district court in conformity with settled legal standards, and we will not allow subversion of the protections afforded by Rule 23(e) by requiring claimants to opt-out of a settlement in order to obtain appellate review." (576 F.2d 1157, 1182.) The instant agreement not to appeal affects taxpayers in the same way, for to gain the benefits of a settlement, they were required to give up their interest in having the award of attorney fees decided "in conformity with settled legal standards." As the court in Pettway would not permit the subversion of Rule 23(e), we will not allow the subversion of our prior cases in which the appropriate standards for fee awards were articulated.

For the foregoing reasons, we decline to enforce the agreement not to appeal.

(5) O'Keeffe argues that the MSD through Hartunian, is estopped from challenging the fee award under the settlement because it has accepted payment from Ingram. The fee award is severable, however, and O'Keeffe's counsel have not been prejudiced, for reasons we have just explained. This principle, therefore, is inapplicable. Layfer v. Tucker (1979), 71 Ill.App.3d 333, 337, 27 Ill.Dec. 440, 389 N.E.2d 252; Reinken v. *475 Reinken (1933), 351 Ill. 409, 184 N.E. 639; compare County of Cook v. Malysa (1968), 39 Ill.2d 376, 235 N.E.2d 598, see generally, Morton Grove Park District v. American National Bank & Trust Co. (1980), 78 Ill.2d 353, 359, 35 Ill.Dec. 767, 399 N.E.2d 1295.

Ingram and O'Keeffe contend, however, that Hartunian's failure to seek such intervention leaves the record barren as to the merits of his petition. Of course, had Hartunian been denied leave to intervene, we would be considering exactly the same issue on this appeal, for in that case, as in this one, the adequacy of the representation afforded the taxpayers and the validity of the agreement would have been the points in dispute. Ill.Rev.Stat.1977, ch. 110, par. 26.1(1)(b).

Hartunian's motive in entering this suit is irrelevant. (Turkovich v. Board of Trustees (1957), 11 Ill.2d 460, 464, 143 N.E.2d 229; 74 Am.Jur.2d Taxpayers' Actions sec. 32 (1974).) There is no conflict of interest, as contended, for his actions can only benefit the MSD. No one else has indicated an intention to appeal on its behalf and in behalf of the inadequately represented taxpayers.

In a related argument, it is said that Hartunian's failure to seek intervention at trial has resulted in an undeveloped record with respect to arguments about the hours O'Keeffe's counsel charged on particular days. Ingram concludes that Hartunian's brief represents undocumented charges of an appellate brief writer. In the sense just related, this is true. But that conclusion is equally applicable to other briefs filed in this court by parties fully represented in the trial court. We can deal with this problem here in the same way we always have dealt with it: by refusing to consider arguments on appeal to which evidence could have been presented in the trial court had the issues been raised there. Hux v. Raben (1967), 38 Ill.2d 223, 230 N.E.2d 831.

The appellate court held, however, that Hartunian, as a nonparty lacked standing to appeal because he was only "indirectly aggrieved in some indefinite manner in *476 common with taxpayers generally." (85 Ill.App.3d 859, 866, 41 Ill.Dec. 129, 407 N.E.2d 627.) This holding, resting upon the nature of the taxpayers' interest in the controversy, contravenes our holding in Paepcke v. Public Building Com. (1970), 46 Ill.2d 330, 263 N.E.2d 11, adopting, on the standing issue, the dissent filed in Droste v. Kerner (1966), 34 Ill.2d 495, 217 N.E.2d 73. In that dissent it was stated that a taxpayer's interest in the litigation was grounded "upon his status as a taxpayer, and it is his equitable interest as a taxpayer, in the public property which is being illegally disposed of that determines his standing to maintain the action." (34 Ill.2d 495, 511, 217 N.E.2d 73 (Schaefer, J., dissenting).) In this case, the taxpayers have an equitable interest in *868 543 the monetary recovery from Ingram, which was diminished by the award of attorney fees to counsel.

(6) Our decision in White Brass Castings Co. v. Union Metal Manufacturing Co. (1907), 232 Ill. 165, 83 N.E. 540, and the appellant court's decision in Chicago & South Side Rapid Transit R. R. Co. v. Northern Trust Co. (1900), 90 Ill.App. 460, aff'd on other grounds (1902), 195 Ill. 288, 63 N.E. 136, are also urged as reasons for denying Hartunian derivative appellate standing. These cases, involving the denial of such standing to corporate shareholders, rest upon the failure of the shareholders to establish that their corporation's decision to forgo an appeal was wrongful. The dual nature of the derivative action was previously referred to. In shareholder derivative actions there must be a wrongful refusal of the shareholder's demand to take action. (Compare Dodge v. Woolsey (1855), 59 U.S. (18 How.) 331, 15 L.Ed. 401, and Hill v. Wallace (1922), 259 U.S. 44, 42 S.Ct. 453, 66 L.Ed. 822, with Hawes v. Oakland (1882), 104 U.S. 450, 26 L.Ed. 827, and In re Cutting (1877), 94 U.S. 14, 24 L.Ed. 49. See the opinion of the court and the concurring opinion in Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Authority (1936), 297 U.S. 288, 56 S.Ct. 466, 80 L.Ed. 688.) (Compare Maldonado v. Flynn (Del.Ch.1980), 413 477 A.2d 1251 (the shareholder was not precluded from suing corporate directors for breach of fiduciary duty despite an independent, "disinterested" committee of directors' business judgment that such a suit was not in the best interests of the corporation) with Maldonado v. Flynn (S.D.N.Y.1980), 485 F.Supp. 274 (applying Delaware law, reaching an opposite conclusion).) As this is written, both Maldonado cases are now on appeal. (Maldonado v. Flynn (Del.Ch.1980), 417 A.2d 378 (res judicata issue); see also Burks v. Lasker (1979), 441 U.S. 471, 99 S.Ct. 1831, 60 L.Ed.2d 404.) Thus the decisions cited by Ingram and O'Keeffe are inapposite because the record fully establishes here that neither the MSD nor O'Keeffe was adequately taking into account the interests of the taxpayers on the attorney fees issue. (See Henry v. Jeanes (1890), 47 Ohio St. 116, 24 N.E. 1077 (Per curiam).) Accordingly, we do not have to reach the question whether, due to the imperfections in the derivative shareholder/derivative taxpayer analogy (see Comment, Taxpayers' Suits: A Survey and Summary, 69 Yale L.J. 895, 903 (1960)), taxpayers must establish a wrongful refusal to appeal because the refusal here was presumptively wrongful.

It has been argued that nonparties should be granted appellate standing in those few cases in which the public interest is adversely affected. Judicial review would thereby be permitted in situations where it is needed. Significantly, it has been contended that allowing such appeals would help prevent "public interest strike suit(s)." It has been urged that such appeals be granted even in the absence of trial court intervention, because intervention may have been neglected because it was thought that the public interest was already protected. Rotunda, The Public Interest Appellant: Limitations on the Right of Competent Parties to Settle Litigation Out of Court, 66 Nw.U.L.Rev. 199 (1971).

478 Research reveals that this court has on several occasions, where equitable, granted derivative appellate standing to non-trial-court parties. In Iago v. Iago (1897), 168 Ill. 339, 48 Ill.Dec. 30, the wife of an insane husband instituted an action for divorce and the trial court appointed a guardian ad litem for defendant. A judgment in favor of the wife was rendered, and the guardian ad litem took no further action. A writ of error was sued out by the husband's next friend, a nonparty in the trial court. This court stated:

> "The power possessed by courts of equity to provide that such defense shall be made is not exhausted by the appointment of a conservator ad litem or next friend to defend in the trial court, but may be exercised in courts of review, and further defense of the action for divorce prosecuted by any remedy provided by law whereby reversal of a decree of the trial court may be obtained. * * *. *869 544 It is not essential the same person who represented the insane party as guardian ad litem in the circuit court should appear as next friend in a writ of error." 168 Ill. 339, 342-43, 48 Ill.Dec. 30.

In In re Estate of Tomlinson (1976), 65 Ill.2d 382, 3 Ill.Dec. 699, 359 N.E.2d 109, a will was admitted to probate in the circuit court of Peoria County. The appellate court reversed the circuit court, finding no evidence that the decedent intended to grant the remainder of her estate to the American Cancer Society. The Attorney General had received no notice of the proceedings and was not a party in the trial or appellate courts. This court permitted him to appeal nevertheless:

"He has the authority to protect a charitable trust either defensively, where an attack is made on its validity, or by an action as plaintiff, by securing the construction of the trust instrument. In a suit by others where the validity or the enforcement of *479 a charitable trust may come into question, the Attorney General should be made a party defendant. (Citations.)

* * * If an outright gift of property to a charitable corporation without restrictions on its use or disposition is involved, the corporation is under a duty to apply the property to one or more of the charitable purposes for which it was organized. This duty is ordinarily enforceable by the Attorney General. (Citations.) The Charitable Trust Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1973, ch. 14, par. 51 et seq.) vests in the Attorney General authority to enforce and supervise charitable trusts. For these reasons we hold that the Attorney General is a proper party to this appeal." (65 Ill.2d 382, 387-88, 3 Ill.Dec. 699, 359 N.E.2d 109.)

See also People ex rel. Pollastrini v. Whealan (1933), 353 Ill. 500, 187 N.E. 491; Layfer v. Tucker (1979), 71 Ill.App.3d 333, 337, 27 Ill.Dec. 440, 389 N.E.2d 252.

In Tomlinson it was demonstrated that the Attorney General, the guardian of the public interest, had an array of powers normally exercisable in trial court. He should have been, but was not, made a party defendant, yet this court did not confine his ability to represent the public interest to actions available in courts of original jurisdiction. The interest in judicial economy supports that decision.

Here the taxpayers must guard their own equitable interest in the disposition of the monetary recovery from Ingram, and as private attorneys general are permitted to intervene where their interests require additional representation (Dowsett v. City of Moline (1956), 8 Ill.2d 560, 566, 134 N.E.2d 793). Here, as in Tomlinson, those able to protect the public interest received no effective notice of the proceeding. The judicial-economy interest, present in Tomlinson, also supports resolving the attorney fee issue on appeal in the instant case. And, as we have noted, the inadequate taxpayer representation, a fact not required in Iago, supports *480 granting Hartunian derivative appellate standing. Accordingly, this case is within the narrow holding of the Indiana Supreme Court that taxpayers may "sometimes take up and carry forward a pending litigation which the officers wrongfully abandon * * *." (Pipe Creek School Township v. Wagler (1924), 194 Ind. 496, 498, 143 N.E. 514.) Hartunian, therefore, has derivative appellate standing.

We turn then to the remaining issue whether the attorney fees were excessive. The settlement petition included a schedule of services for A. Denison Weaver, O'Keeffe's counsel, and listed expenses. On April 17, 1979, Weaver introduced in evidence his original diary entries for the years 1975 to 1977. Witnesses for Weaver testified that an hourly rate of $125 was justified due to the nature of the case. Attorney Torshen, for the MSD, called witnesses who testified that rates customarily charged to the public bodies like the MSD approximated $75 per hour. (The MSD paid Hartunian $100 per hour and Torshen $85 per hour; a lesser rate was charged for work of their associates.) The witnesses recognized that a higher rate was charged by privately retained attorneys in cases like this one.

870 545 The court ordered the hearing continued for one day to allow the MSD time to examine Weaver's time records. The next day, in a morning session, the court and counsel reviewed purported discrepancies pointed out by the MSD. The MSD had not been able to review all of the records, but did not object to the trial court rendering its decision in the afternoon.

In the afternoon session, the court found that the issues involved "substantial questions of law and fact with numerous complex legal issues," that the attorney fees "were entirely contingent on success until the case was settled," that "the litigation by the taxpayer was vigorously contested by the Ingram Group and (the MSD)," *481 that the MSD "benefitted substantially by the suit," and that "Mr. Weaver and Mr. Cullen (O'Keeffe's cocounsel) were very well qualified to prosecute this litigation and did so in an outstanding manner." The trial court, however, disallowed 421/2 hours from Weaver's petition and 31 hours from Cullen's petition. (Cullen's petition had been submitted on April 17.) Weaver had earlier agreed to strike another 40 hours from his petition, as it was time spent collecting his time records. Nor was 250 hours of law clerk time included. The trial court had spot-checked the records for accuracy. It was found, therefore, that Weaver had spent 3,600 hours and that Cullen had spent 60 hours on this litigation. The court compared these hours to the 1,262 hours spent on the case for the MSD by Hartunian and his associates and 3,056 hours of time spent by Torshen, his associates, and his law clerk son this litigation. The total billings of Hartunian and Torshen, amounting to $273,413.75, were also used as a benchmark. The court expressed its belief that Weaver had spent more than 3,600 hours on this litigation, although no documentation was available, and noted that "I have personal knowledge of the hours that were spent before me because I have spent at least 100 days of my court time and office time on this case in the last year and a half."

In setting an hourly rate, the court explicitly found that since Weaver and Cullen were not retained by the MSD, they should be paid at the "going rate" for counsel privately retained for complex civil litigation. The court found $125 per hour for Weaver and $100 per hour for Cullen reasonable under that standard.

The court held that the principles enunciated in Fiorito v. Jones (1978), 72 Ill.2d 73, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019, applied and, therefore, multiplied this hourly rate by two. The court reasoned that the case was very contingent, asserting that section 11.18 of the Purchasing Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 482 42, par. 331.18), if interpreted literally to result in total forfeiture, was of doubtful constitutionality. The court noted that a multiplier of three undoubtedly would have been applied if the case had been tried.

(7) We agree with the trial court that the principles of Fiorito v. Jones (1978), 72 Ill.2d 73, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019, Leader v. Cullerton (1976), 62 Ill.2d 483, and Flynn v. Kucharski (1974), 59 Ill.2d 61, 319 N.E.2d 1, apply here. (Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society (1975), 421 U.S. 240, 257, 95 S.Ct. 1612, 1621, 44 L.Ed.2d 141, 153; Sprague v. Ticonic National Bank (1939), 307 U.S. 161, 59 S.Ct. 777, 83 L.Ed. 1184; Trustees of International Improvement Fund v. Greenough (1882), 105 U.S. (15 Otto.) 527, 26 L.Ed. 1157.) On this record we cannot say that the trial court erred in its determination that Weaver spent 3,600 hours and that Cullen spent 300 hours on this litigation. (We cannot validly rule on several challenges to the hours charged on particular days because evidence could have been produced in the trial court on these issues.) We do not reach the issue of whether Weaver and Cullen should be compensated at a rate comparable to other privately retained attorneys because they were hired by O'Keeffe, because that issue was not argued here. We note, however, the conceptual difficulty in allowing that rate in a derivative action, in which the client is a public entity and customarily pays less than the going rate for privately retained counsel.

*871 546 (8) We disagree with the trial court, however, regarding the multiplier of two. This litigation was complex and bitterly contested, and the fee was contingent to be sure. However, the Federal prosecution provided the facts necessary to establish the violation (Fiorito v. Jones (1978), 72 Ill.2d 73, 91, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019). No case has been presented, moreover, which would demonstrate that an action under section 11.18 of the Purchasing Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1971, ch. 42, par. 483 331.18) would result in an insubstantial recovery. It is also significant, again in contrast to Saltiel, that the MSD filed its motion for summary judgment in Federal court prior to the time O'Keeffe filed his motion in the circuit court. The filing of that motion certainly aided O'Keeffe.

The problem of excessive attorney fees is at least a century old. (See Trustees of International Improvement Fund v. Greenough (1882), 105 U.S. 527, 26 L.Ed. 1157.) We have now allowed for the first time derivative appellate standing to a taxpayer to challenge an attorney fees award. This holding is new but not unforeshadowed by prior cases. Taxpayer suits significantly supplement the public's remedial arsenal for combatting official wrongdoing, and we will not permit excessive fee awards to undermine their value.

Accordingly, we reverse the judgments of the circuit and appellate courts, eliminate the multiplier, and remand the cause to the circuit court of Cook County for entry of the appropriate fee award, amounting to $450,000 for Weaver, and $30,000 for Cullen, plus costs, and to dismiss Ingram from the cause.

Reversed and remanded, with directions.

NEW YORK HOTEL AND MOTEL TRADES COUNCIL, AFL-CIO, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
HOTEL ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK CITY, INC., et al., Defendants.

Nos. 85 Civ. 0216, 85 Civ. 0222, 85 Civ. 0223, 85 Civ. 0225-85 Civ. 0231, 85 Civ. 1020 and 85 Civ. 9925.

Oct. 4, 1990.

Union brought class actions on behalf of its members against hotel association and member hotels, alleging violations of the Equal Pay Act, and the Civil Rights Act. On petition to approve settlement, the District Court, Edelstein, J., held that settlement agreement was fair, adequate and reasonable, notwithstanding objection by hotel based on insufficient notice and attorney conflict of interest.

Petition granted.

In approving settlement of an action, court should determine whether the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate.

89k70

Presumption in favor of settlement exists where settlement was reached after arms-length negotiations; proponents are counsel experienced in similar cases; there has been sufficient discovery to enable counsel to act intelligently; and the number of objectants or their relative interest is small.

89k70

Presumption in favor of settlement of labor dispute between union and hotels existed, where settlement negotiations were conducted at arms-length, counsel for plaintiffs and defendants were experienced labor lawyers who had represented their respective parties for years, cases had been litigated for years with extensive discovery, and not one plaintiff in any of the consolidated class actions objected to single term of settlement.

[4] Compromise and Settlement ⚿62

Settlement agreement in consolidated class actions brought by union against hotels was fair, adequate and reasonable, notwithstanding objection of hotel based on insufficient notice and attorney conflict of interest; hotel should have raised its notice of objection earlier and any conflict arose after determination of settlement terms.

Defendant Marriott Essex House objects to a settlement reached by the parties in the above-captioned consolidated class actions. I. Background

On January 9, 1985, plaintiff New York Hotel and Motel Trades Council, AFL- CIO (the "union") brought all the instant consolidated class actions except 85 Civ. 9925 on behalf of its members against defendants Hotel Association of New York City (the "association") and certain member hotels:

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

the Dorset Hotel, New York Helmsley Hotel, Helmsley Palace Hotel, Essex House Hotel or Marriott's Essex House Hotel (the "Essex House"), New York Hilton Hotel, Helmsley Park Lane Hotel, Sheraton Centre Hotel, St. Moritz Hotel, St. Regis Hotel, Waldorf- Astoria Hotel, and the Helmsley Windsor Hotel (the "hotels") alleging violations of the Equal Pay Act, 29 U.S.C. § 206(d). Plaintiffs filed separate suits against each listed hotel. The firms of Solomon & Rosenbaum, Dreschler & Leff, and Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather & Geraldson represented all of the defendants ("defendants' counsel").

On December 18, 1985, plaintiffs instituted the class action lawsuit 85 Civ. 9925 against the association and all the hotels alleging violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 by virtue of the greater compensation paid housekeeping attendants. On September 10, 1986, this Court approved the stipulation of class certification for all the suits. In sum, the suits sought (1) to equalize the pay rate between housekeeping attendants and day or night room and bath attendants, (2) back pay, (3) a permanent injunction enjoining the hotels from requiring room attendants to clean up to three additional rooms per week above pre-established quotas without compensation, and (4) attorney's fees.

After years of litigation, possible settlement of the instant suits arose in connection with extending the then-existing industry-wide collective bargaining agreement between the union and the association on behalf of its member hotels (the "existing collective bargaining agreement"). The existing collective bargaining agreement, entered into on June 28, 1985, was due to expire on June 26, 1990, and the union sought an early opening of the new contract negotiations. At a meeting held on September 26, 1989, the association informed the union that settlement of the instant suits was a condition precedent to any such contract negotiations.

After negotiations during the fall and winter of 1989, the parties agreed on an extension and modification of the existing collective bargaining agreement (the "extended collective bargaining agreement"). The provisions of the extended collective bargaining agreement were detailed in a memorandum of understanding between the association and the union, executed on January 30, 1990 (the "memorandum of understanding"). Among its other provisions, the memorandum of understanding incorporated the terms of settlement of the instant actions. These terms are in substance and effect the settlement presented to this Court, which provide (1) that all employees supervised by the housekeeping department whose base wage is the same as the housekeeping attendants shall continue at that equal base wage rate; (2) that effective August 1, 1990, the base wage rates of night room attendants and bath attendants shall be the same base wage rate as housekeeping attendants; (3) that effective August 1, 1990, room attendants shall no longer be assigned to make up extra rooms above pre- established quotas without being compensated at specified extra room rates. The settlement does not award back pay to the class; rather, all its terms are prospective. The parties further agreed to pay their own attorney's fees.

On November 12, 1985, Marriott Corporation ("Marriott") sold the Essex House to 1076 Hotel Nikko of New York, Inc. ("Nikko"). On December 31, 1989, Nikko closed Essex House for renovations and withdrew from the association. As a result, a dispute arose between the union and the association as to whether Essex House would be covered by the settlement set out in the memorandum of understanding.

The gist of this disagreement was that since Essex House was no longer a member of the association and would not sign the collective bargaining agreement, Essex House was not legally bound to adhere to the prospective terms of the settlement. Marriott and the association argued that Essex House was covered by the settlement; the union disagreed.

On March 28, 1990, parties submitted this dispute over the status of the settlement with respect to Essex House to arbitration. At the arbitration hearing held on May 3, 1990, defendants' counsel represented the association, and Marriott was also represented by separate counsel, Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Mendelsohn. The association and Marriott's positions were both the same. The arbitrator's decision indicates that defendants' counsel argued that the memorandum of understanding contemplated settlement of all of the litigation, including the actions involving Essex House. On May 10, 1990, the arbitrator ruled that the settlement as set out in the memorandum of understanding did not cover the Essex House.

The arbitrator reasoned that the settlement specified in the memorandum of understanding provided for

CLERK OF CIRCUIT COURT

No. 00 CH 13859

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT, INJUNCTION, BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY, REMOVAL, ACCOUNTING, RECEIVER AND APPOINTMENT OF NEW DIRECTORS

D.O.D.

NOW COMES the Plaintiff-Intervenor, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, and complains of Defendants JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, ALAN K. SIMPSON, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, and states as follows:

1. This cause is brought for and on behalf of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS by and through the Attorney General of Illinois pursuant to the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997), and his common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts.

2. Plaintiff-Intervenor is filing this complaint as an intervening party plaintiff, having received a Verified Complaint filed herein by Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, which set forth in verified facts allegation that they are directors of Terra Foundation, and that the Terra Foundation has been subjected to fiduciary breach and abuse by certain of its directors; that the assets of Terra Foundation have been misused:, that the assets of Terra Foundation are in jeopardy and danger; that certain directors have acted to cause the closing of the Terra Foundation facilities here in Illinois.

3. Plaintiff-Intervenor the PEOPLE OF STATE OF ILLINOIS, as the ultimate beneficiaries of all charitable trusts, brings this action to protect the Terra Foundation For The Arts (the "Terra Foundation") an Illinois charitable not for profit corporation located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

4. The Attorney General was given notice of the instant proceedings on September 22, 2000, and was served with a copy of the Plaintiffs' Verified Complaint and Motion for Temporary Restraining Order on that date.

5. Defendant the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation (hereinafter "the FOUNDATION"), was incorporated on December 13, 1978, and was created specifically as an Illinois charitable trust with certain obligations and commitments to the ultimate beneficiaries, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Group Exhibit "A" is a copy of the FOUNDATION's original Articles of Incorporation). Said FOUNDATION currently holds net assets worth approximately $450 million, and is registered and reports to the Illinois Attorney General under the Illinois Charitable Trust Act.

6. The FOUNDATION's specific charitable purpose is to preserve, promote and exhibit collections of American art, and to expand the artistic horizons of the public through educational art programs.

7. In furtherance of its charitable purpose and obligations to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, the FOUNDATION owns and operates the Terra Museum of American Art (the "Terra Museum") located at 664 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

7. Defendant JUDITH TERRA is a Director of the FOUNDATION, and is the widow of Daniel Terra, one of the founding Trustees of the FOUNDATION, who at all relevant times, is a resident of Washington D.C., and is a member of the FOUNDATION's Executive Committee.

8. Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER is the Chairman and President of the FOUNDATION.

9. Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER and Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON are each Directors of the FOUNDATION, and are each members of the FOUNDATION's Executive Committee.

10. Defendants, by serving as Directors of the FOUNDATION, have each become a trustee and fiduciary at common law over the charitable assets held by the FOUNDATION and, as such, each owes a fiduciary duty to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS to deal fairly, faithfully and loyally with said assets, to devote them to the proper charitable purposes without waste or self-dealing.

11. At all relevant times, there was in existence and effect an Illinois statute governing the holding of charitable assets in the State of Illinois, namely the Charitable Trust Act, 760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997) (hereinafter the "Trust Act").

12. Defendants JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN K. SIMPSON, and the FOUNDATION are each a charitable "trustee" as that term is defined in Section 3 of the Trust Act, which Section provides:

> "Sec. 3. "Trustee" means any person, individual, group of individuals, association, corporation, not-for-profit corporation, estate representative, or other legal entity holding property for or solicited for any charitable purpose; or any chief operating officer, director, executive director or owner of a corporation soliciting or holding property for a charitable purpose."

(760 ILCS 55/3 (1997).)

13. As charitable trustees, Defendants JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN K. SIMPSON, and the FOUNDATION each owe fiduciary duties to the charitable trust beneficiaries, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

14. Sec 15 of the Trust Act recites fiduciary duties and responsibilities imposed upon persons collecting and holding assets for charitable purposes and states as follows:

> "Sec. 15. (a) Charitable trustees are subject to certain duties otherwise defined in Illinois statutes and case law, which include but are not limited to the following:

(1) To avoid "self-dealing" and conflicts of interests;
(2) To avoid wasting charitable assets;
(3) To avoid incurring penalties, fines, and unnecessary taxes;
(4) To adhere and conform the charitable organization to its charitable purpose;
(5) To not make non-program loans, gifts, or advances to any person, except as allowed by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.];
(6) To utilize the trust in conformity with its purposes for the best interest of the beneficiaries;
(7) To timely file registration and financial reports required by this Act; and
(8) To comply and to cause the charitable organization to comply with this Act and, if incorporated, the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.].

(760 ILCS 55/15(a) (1997).)

15. Daniel Terra, a successful Chicago area businessman established the FOUNDATION in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. The FOUNDATION's first board was Daniel Terra, his son James Terra and Robert Sugrue.

16. From the time of its inception the FOUNDATION has had as its central and core purpose the establishment of an art museum in the Chicagoland area, specializing in bringing American art to the public and the People of the State of Illinois. It was Daniel Terra's intent and purpose to provide a Museum in the Chicago area that would exhibit collections of American art and educate the public generally on issues of American art and, Daniel Terra publicly stated that the FOUNDATION was committed to building and operating a world class museum in the Chicagoland area.

17. From its inception the FOUNDATION was substantially funded by Daniel Terra who contributed hundreds of millions of dollars to and for the Terra Museum.

18. As a result of the foregoing others became supportive of said charitable purpose and made contributions to the Terra Museum and the FOUNDATION.

19. Daniel Terra died on June 28, 1996.

20. The FOUNDATION is an Illinois not for profit corporation, which under its by-laws is governed and controlled by a board of directors, each of whom are elected to serve a term of one year, and chosen and elected by the sitting directors in office at the time of election. The board of directors is the ultimate corporate authority controlling the FOUNDATION.

21. From the time of the FOUNDATION's inception through Daniel Terra's death on June 28, 1996, the FOUNDATION had been controlled by a small board of directors of no more than six, whose members were substantially influenced by Daniel Terra.

22. Subsequent to Daniel Terra's death, the Board of Directors of the FOUNDATION substantially changed, and the FOUNDATION currently has eleven directors which includes JUDITH TERRA, RONALD GIDWITZ, DEAN BUNTROCK, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN L. SIMPSON, Margaret Daley, Arthur A. Hartman, Helene Ahrweiler, Jacques Andreani, Stephanie Marshall and Theodore Stebbins. Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "B" is a schedule showing the names of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation from 1993 through the present.

23. Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, who are current directors of the FOUNDATION, have alleged and verified that certain and several directors of the board of directors of the FOUNDATION, including Defendants JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, and ALAN L. SIMPSON, have and are engaging in actions ultra vires and against the interest and purposes of the FOUNDATION, alleging said Directors are:

a) Attempting to cause the closing of the FOUNDATION's operations in Illinois contrary to the long standing promise of its founder that such would be an institution for the public here in Illinois.

b) Attempting to gain position and self recognition in a Washington DC charitable organization in exchange for the delivery of the assets of the FOUNDATION, the termination of operations in Chicago and the end of a Terra museum in the United States.

c) Attempting to cause the closing of the FOUNDATION's operations in Illinois contrary to Dan Terra's intentions and suggesting a use of its assets contrary to the use Dan Terra intended.

d) Grossly mismanaging Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons responsible for Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success;

e) Caused the primary individuals in charge of security at Terra Museum to quit resulting in an inexperienced and understaffed security staff, which jeopardizes the security of the $100 million of art displayed and collected at Terra Museum;

f) Permitted a director of Terra Foundation to engage in a conflict of interest in representing Terra Foundation at art auctions while, on information and belief, representing the interests of private clients at the same auction;

g) Expending significant monies on the purchases of art without obtaining the input or approval of the Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art acquisition;

h) Attempting to invade endowment funds restricted to public art educational purposes for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

i) Bypassing the lawful authority of the Board and the Executive Committee in operating Terra Foundation.

j) Wastefully incurring excessive legal fees by retaining duplicative counsel in replacement of Terra Foundation's long-standing counsel; and

k) Misusing the art collection of Terra Foundation and allowing Judith Terra to personally possess and use museum art items and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy.

25. Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK have verified the allegations of their complaint filed of record here, as summarized in Paragraph 24 herein, and Plaintiff-Intervenor, the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS, now incorporates by reference, as though fully set forth herein, the factual allegations made and verified by Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK.

26. The allegations set forth in Plaintiff GIDWITZ's and Plaintiff BUNTROCK's Verified Complaint, and incorporated herein by reference as though fully set forth herein, show that the Defendant members of the Board of Directors of the FOUNDATION have been acting towards, or have been otherwise distracted by, self interest matters and have ignored and/or have permitted the Terra Museum in Chicago to lose its key staff and to jeopardize its charitable purposes and to place the organization in jeopardy without proper security for the collection and without sufficient historical institutional knowledge to assure the assets are safe and accounted for.

DEFENDANT JUDITH TERRA

27. Shortly after the creation of the FOUNDATION in 1978 as aforesaid, Daniel Terra's first wife, Adeline, died. Daniel Terra subsequently married Defendant JUDITH TERRA on June 28, 1986.

28. In a prenuptial agreement signed by Defendant JUDITH TERRA prior to her marriage to Daniel Terra, Defendant JUDITH TERRA acknowledged that she fully understood that the bulk of Daniel Terra's estate would go to the FOUNDATION in the event of his predeceasing her, and she unequivocally promised that after his death she would not seek any assets of his Estate other than those given to her under the said prenuptial agreement. (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "C" is a copy of the said prenuptial agreement entered into between Daniel Terra and Defendant JUDITH TERRA.)

29. Under the aforesaid prenuptial agreement, Defendant JUDITH TERRA agreed she would receive only a fixed amount of money and assets upon Daniel Terra's death, and that the bulk of his estate would go to the FOUNDATION. The said prenuptial agreement provided that if the parties remained married, JUDITH TERRA would receive $1.5 million from Daniel Terra's estate if he died prior to the 5th anniversary date of their marriage; or $ 3 million if his death was between the 5th and 10th date of their marriage; or $4.5 million if his death occurred after the 10th anniversary date of their marriage. (See Exhibit "C", prenuptial agreement page 6.)

30. Several days prior to his death on June 28, 1996, Daniel Terra was confined to a hospital, his life being sustained by the use of life supporting devices. Shortly after midnight on June 28, 1996, the tenth anniversary date of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, the life supporting devices employed to keep Daniel Terra alive were ceased. Technically Daniel Terra lived past the ten year anniversary of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, and Defendant JUDITH TERRA sought and received from Dan Terra's estate $4.5 million pursuant to the terms of the aforesaid prenuptial agreement.

31. The Prenuptial agreement also provided that while Daniel Terra was alive, JUDITH TERRA would not agree to be a member of the board of directors of the FOUNDATION.

32. Defendant Judith Terra was not a member of the FOUNDATION's Board of Directors until Daniel Terra's aforesaid illness and death in 1996.

33. In January 1997, Defendant JUDITH TERRA filed four further and additional claims against Dan Terra's estate despite the express terms of her Prenuptial agreement with Daniel Terra, and amounts paid thereunder, and in said claims, Defendant JUDITH TERRA sought certain art work and cash in excess of $42 million, which art work and cash would otherwise pass as a bequest to the FOUNDATION.

34. James Terra, Daniel Terra's son, and a founding Director of the FOUNDATION, was named as the Executor of the Daniel Terra Estate. James Terra was represented by Bell, Boyd and Lloyd as counsel to the Executor, and in that capacity both James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd denied JUDITH TERRA's claims against the Estate and defended and litigated her $ 42 million in claims, asserting that none of her claims had any merit. At the time of said litigation, James Terra was a Director of the FOUNDATION, and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd was the FOUNDATION's regular counsel and had been so for many years prior.

35. The Daniel Terra Estate, at date of Daniel Terra's death was valued in excess of $450 million, but in early 1997 Mercury Finance Co. lost most of its value and the Terra estate suffered a devaluation of $150 million. The Estate owed in excess of $90 million in debts and the lenders were uncertain of renewal given the stock devaluation. This caused the Estate certain jeopardy and a settlement amount of $ 1 million was paid to JUDITH TERRA to resolve her $42 million in claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra.

36. The funds paid to JUDITH TERRA under the prenuptial and the $1 million to settle her claimed amount of $42 million would otherwise have passed to the FOUNDATION.

37. JUDITH TERRA's actions in filing $42 million in claims was against the interest of the FOUNDATION.

38. After resolving her claims against the estate of Dan Terra, Judith Terra became a director again, and subsequent thereto the law firm of Bell, Boyd and Lloyd after 20 years of service to the FOUNDATION has been terminated as regular counsel to the FOUNDATION.

39. The final accounting of the Daniel Terra Estate has been presented by James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd , it has been reviewed and approved by the FOUNDATION's special counsel Mayer, Brown and Platt and the Illinois Attorney General's office, both of whom participated in the many aspects of the estate matters. Despite Mayer, Brown & Platt's approval the FOUNDATION now has undertaken to hire yet another set of attorneys to review the actions of James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd, and the FOUNDATION is bearing the cost of such.

40. Upon information and belief, the aforesaid termination of Bell. Boyd and Lloyd and review of the actions of James Terra and Bell, Boyd and Lloyd were done at the behest of Defendants out of retaliation for the adverse position James Terra and Bell Boyd and Lloyd took against Defendant JUDITH TERRA in the aforesaid litigation of the $42 million in claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra.

41. In addition to the foregoing, based on the verified allegations set forth in Director GIDWITZ's and Director BUNTROCK's Verified Complaint, and incorporated herein by reference as though fully set forth herein, Defendant JUDITH TERRA with the aid of Defendant Tucker has caused works of art of the FOUNDATION to be brought to her home, over objection from Museum staff.

42. Furthermore, Defendant Judith Terra has engaged in discussions with defendant Director PAUL HAYES TUCKER to have the FOUNDATION close the Terra Museum in Chicago and move its operation to Washington D.C., where JUDITH TERRA resides, and /or to cause the FOUNDATION to merge with another institution in Washington D.C., which intended acts are contrary to Daniel Terra's intent and the mission to maintain a museum in Chicago.

DEFENDANT PAUL HAYES TUCKER

43. Defendant Tucker has sent the attached " A Vision for The Future" white paper to the FOUNDATION's Board of Directors, a copy attached as exhibit "D", which contains his vision for the future of the FOUNDATION. Defendant Tucker's vision is not that of Daniel Terra. Defendant TUCKER vision statement shows he seeks to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and to move the FOUNDATION and its art collection to Washington D.C., give its collections to the National Gallery and set up an educational facility in Washington D.C., or as Defendants GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK state in their verified Complaint, Defendants TUCKER and JUDITH TERRA seek to merge the FOUNDATION into the "Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington".

44. The FOUNDATION Board of Directors met on August 24, 2000 and at that meeting Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER made remarks suggesting that the FOUNDATION move to Washington D.C. and that it should close down the Terra Museum in Chicago, a copy of the August 24, 2000 FOUNDATION's Board meeting minutes is attached as Exhibit "E".

45. Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER, is the Chairman and President of the FOUNDATION, and is responsible for its safety, yet he has allowed and/or caused the FOUNDATION's staff to be depleted of long term staff, has allowed and/or caused the FOUNDATION's long term security personnel to quit, has allowed and/or caused its executive director to quit, and according to the verified allegations of Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, incorporated in this Complaint, Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER directed that art belonging to the FOUNDATION be delivered from France to Defendant JUDITH TERRA's home.

DEFENDANT ALAN K. SIMPSON

46. Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, in their Verified Complaint, establish that Defendant JUDITH TERRA set upon a course of conduct and convinced other directors to join her in her efforts to promote her self interests, close the Terra Museum in Chicago, and move the FOUNDATION to Washington D.C. where she lives to effect self interests. In addition certain acts of the board now appear to be designed to punish those that had opposed her acts of self interest as aforesaid.

47. As related by directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in their verified statements, Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON announced when he joined the FOUNDATION Board of Directors that he was there only "to protect Judith Terra.." As a consequence, Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON, by his own admission was not there to do the acts required of an independent Director. Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON's comment to the board is most significant in light of the fact that Director ALAN K. SIMPSON joined the Board of the FOUNDATION in fiscal year end 1999, at a time when the only issues concerning JUDITH TERRA was her personal need to seek revenge upon those that had opposed her before.

48. The totality of the issues presented here in this Complaint establish that the FOUNDATION is a charitable trust in jeopardy, whose long term institutional employees have quit, whose controlling number of Board members are more interested in their own vision, self interest, and/or personal goals of promoting their status in society, than in properly safeguarding the FOUNDATIONS mission. A small group of Directors, loyal to the announced purposes of the organizations principal benefactor, Daniel Terra, are being subjected to retaliation, removal or neutralization.

49. There is no doubt that Daniel Terra expected the Terra Museum to remain in Chicago and there is no doubt that the other donors over the years relied upon the institutional nature of the FOUNDATION as an Illinois-based charity, expecting it to be rooted here and to remain in Chicago, Illinois. (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "F" is the 1994 list of donors who have contributed to the FOUNDATION.)

50. A charitable trust is a precious gift that belongs to the PEOPLE, which is not the property of the fiduciaries that are privileged to the stewardship of such, and the Defendant members of the Board of Directors of the FOUNDATION are for the most part relatively new and acting in a manner that in endangering the trust's assets.

51. The totality of the equities here show that new fiduciaries are needed here to protect this trust from the self interest and improper action of the aforesaid Defendant Board members of the FOUNDATION.

52. An interim receiver is needed to take swift action to secure the assets and make an accounting to determine if assets are missing or if some are in private homes or in private hands.

53. The permanent appointment and addition of seven to nine additional board members, chosen from the ranks of retired judges, current local museum fiduciaries and respected members of our business community is needed to effect, install and provide the necessary impartial stewardship that such an institution as the FOUNDATION requires, and which the current Board under the aforesaid circumstances can not provide.

54. By way of the foregoing, Defendants JUDITH TERRA, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, ALAN L. SIMPSON, and the FOUNDATION have breached their fiduciary duties to the FOUNDATION as aforesaid, and as a consequence, the FOUNDATION is in need of protection from Defendants.

55. Section 16(b) of the Trust Act provides:

"Sec. 16 (b) Upon application to a court of competent jurisdiction, in which the Attorney General alleges that a charitable trust needs to be protected or the trustees of a charitable organization or trust have engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty toward the organization, and he seeks injunctive relief and removal of such trustees, the Court may, as part of the injunctive relief, and after a hearing where such trustees shall have an opportunity to be heard, appoint temporarily or permanently a receiver or additional trustees to protect and operate the organization and may temporarily, or as ultimate relief for breach of duty or to protect the trust, permanently remove any charitable organization's trustees, corporate officers, directors and members from office and appoint replacements to protect the public interest."

(760 ILCS 55/16(b) (1997).)

56. As alleged by directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK , the defendants opposed the election and actions of GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK to further their improper actions as aforesaid.

57. By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the People of Illinois to act in the Peoples interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago and supported and funded by him and others through his death in 1996.

58. Defendants Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Mr. Tucker by the foregoing breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further personal interests to the detriment of the People of the State of Illinois, the ultimate beneficiaries of each and every charitable trust within the state.

59. As aforesaid, improper conduct here included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago to create the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer the art to some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to remove employees and directors of the Museum that opposed the self interested acts aforesaid and to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois contrary to Illinois law;

d. Endangering the assets of the Terra Foundation

60. The foregoing breaches of fiduciary duty have caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, and irreparable harm to the People of the State of Illinois, as the beneficiaries of said trust , for which no remedy at law is sufficient.

61. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created the Terra Foundation for the benefit of the People of the State of Illinois;

(2) The intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the FOUNDATION intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland;

(3) Defendants have no authority to close Terra Museum in Chicago or transfer the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to any location outside of Illinois would violate the charitable trust establish by the operation of the Terra Foundation to date , the intent of Dan Terra, the common law, the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

(5) Defendants Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Paul Tucker have breached their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the People of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to Terra Foundation and the People of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation if defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties and permitted to remain in control of the subject Foundation;

(7) Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duty and the equities require that the court exercise supervisory authority over the charitable trust at issue here and appoint receivers and additional fiduciaries and directors to protect the Terra Foundation;

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding any further meetings of the Foundation's Board of Directors, until a new board is constituted by this court;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment or governing instruments;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation.

(5) Transferring, moving, disbursing, selling or exchanging any assets of the Terra Foundation.

C. The appointment of a receiver to operate and maintain Terra Foundation pursuant to: the Court's equitable powers, the common law, the Charitable Trust Act and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

D. Appoint a Receiver to conduct an accounting of all assets of the Terra Museum and Terra Foundation and determine and locate all assets of the Foundation

E Remove Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and Paul Tucker as directors and officers of the Terra Foundation.

F Appoint and add to the directors of the board of directors of the Terra Foundation at least nine additional directors to protect said Foundation to effect necessary stewardship and fiduciary oversight.

G.. And such additional relief as the Court deems just and equitable.

Respectfully submitted,

ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENT

This ANTENUPTIAL AGREEMENT made and entered into this 24th day of June, 1986, by and between DANIEL J. TERRA, of Kenilworth, Illinois, hereinafter called the "first party", and JUDITH F. BANKS, of Washington, D.C., hereinafter called the "second party".

WHEREAS, the parties hereto intend to be married to each other in the near future; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties has heretofore been married, but not to each other, and DANIEL J. TERRA has one child from his former marriage and JUDITH F. BANKS has no children; and each of the parties has property and an estate and they desire, in contemplation of entering into said marriage, to settle and adjust all property rights that each may have or claim in the property and estate of the other and to determine and declare what rights, if any, each of them shall have in the property and estate of the other upon their entering into such marriage; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties desires to retain and reserve full and complete right, power and authority, to the extent permitted by law, to manage, control, use, sell, lease, mortgage, pledge, encumber and otherwise dispose of his or her respective property and estate in any and every manner or way, including gifts, in trust or otherwise of his or her respective property and estate in any and every manner or way, including gifts, in trust or otherwise, during his or her lifetime and by will or other testamentary disposition upon his or her death or to have his or her property and estate pass to and be distributed to his or her descendants, relatives or other beneficiaries, as he or she sees fit, all as if such marriage had not taken place; and each party respects the wishes and desires of the other party with regard to the foregoing matters and is agreeable thereof; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties desires to maintain their respective properties for the benefit of themselves and families and for their individual well-being and for the benefit of TERRA MUSEUM OF AMERICAN ART; an Illinois not-for-profit corporation; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire that such marriage shall not in any way change their existing or future legal rights or the existing or future legal rights of their respective heirs, beneficiaries, executors, administrators, or assigns, in the property and estate of each of them, except as herein otherwise provided; and

WHEREAS, each of the parties hereto has been fully advised and informed of the property and estate of the other as well as the prospects of the other, and the parties hereto have been fully advised and informed of all rights and interests which, except for the execution and delivery of this Agreement, would be conferred upon or vested in each of them by law with respect to the property and estate of the other upon entering into said marriage; and

WHEREAS, both parties hereto have been advised by legal counsel concerning this Agreement, their respective rights hereunder and their prospective rights and obligations as husband and wife under the laws of the State of Illinois;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises, and the covenants and agreements hereinafter set forth, and in further consideration of the sum of ONE DOLLAR ($1.00), each to the other in hand paid, receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, it is covenanted and agreed by and between the parties as follows:

FIRST: Each of the parties hereto has made to the other party a complete statement of such party's present assets and liabilities, which has been fully examined and investigated by the other party and their respective legal counsel, and each party nereby acknowledges, certifies, and declares that he or she has been fully informed and knows the nature, extent, and value of the property and estate, both real, personal, and mixed, of the other party. Each of the parties covenants and agrees that this Antenuptial Agreement shall, when properly signed by the parties and upon the consummation of the marriage between the parties, become equally binding upon them and shall be valid in all respects.

SECOND: The first party hereby covenants and agrees that he will, upon the consummation of the marriage between the parties hereto, assume from his own personal estate the necessary expense of the support and maintenance of the second party during the period of marriage to each other.

THIRD: The first party hereby covenants and agrees to pay, to the second party during their marriage, in addition to ordinary support and maintenance provided for in ARTICLE SECOND of this Agreement, the following sums for her sole and individual use including for all of her clothing and otherwise as she may see fit:

16di-000958

(a) $5,000 per month prior to the first anniversary date of their marriage;

(b) $7,500 per month thereafter prior to the second anniversary date of their marriage;

(c) $10,000 per month thereafter prior to the third anniversary date of their marriage;

(d) $12,500 per month thereafter prior to the fourth anniversary date of their marriage; and

(e) $15,000 per month thereafter during the course of their marriage.

It is understood between the parties that upon (1) the filing by either party for a Decree of Dissolution of Marriage or Separate Maintenance, or (2) the parties living apart in excess of four months, payments otherwise due hereunder shall thereupon cease.

FOURTH: The first party hereby covenants and agrees to release, waive, and disclaim all right, title, and interest in and to any and all of the real and personal property owned or possessed by the second party, at the time of their marriage, or any property owned or possessed by the second party during her lifetime, or on her death (except the household furniture and fixtures) should such death occur before his. The first party further covenants and agrees that he will not take, claim, demand or receive any right whatsoever in any property which the second party might own, but that she, the second party, shall retain her property free and clear of any right of the first party to dower, curtesy, homestead, or any rights of surviving spouse, heir-at-law, or distributee, with her full power and authority to sell, encumber, convey, or dispose of her property, by will or otherwise, as she may deem proper.

FIFTH: If the second party is alive at the death of the first party and at the time of his death the parties were married to each other without either having filed for a Decree of Dissolution of Marriage or Separate Maintenance, the second party agrees that her claim upon the estate of the first party shall be limited to (1) sole exclusive legal title to the parties' principal marital residence and to all furniture, antiques, and other household personal property located there, specifically excluding, however, works of art whether foreign or American; and (2) a monetary amount determined as follows:

(a) One and one half Million Dollars ($1,500,000) if the first party dies prior to the fifth anniversary date of their marriage;

(b) Three Million Dollars ($3,000,000) if the first party dies after the fifth anniversary date, but prior to the tenth anniversary date, of their marriage; and

(c) Four and one half Million Dollars ($4,500,000) if the first party dies after the tenth anniversary date of their marriage.

SIXTH: The rights granted to second party pursuant to ARTICLE FIFTH of this Agreement shall be in full satisfaction of any and all claims and demands of every kind and character which the second party may have against the estate of the first party, and in consideration of such rights granted to her the second party hereby covenants and agrees to release, waive, and disclaim all other right, title, and interest in and to any and all of the real and personal property owned or possessed by the first party, at the time of their marriage, or any property owned or possessed by the first party during his lifetime, or on his death should such death occur before hers. The second party further covenants and agrees that she will not take, claim, demand or receive any right whatsoever in any property which the first party might own, other than her rights pursuant to ARTICLE FIFTH of this Agreement, and that except as herein set forth, the first party shall retain his property free and clear of any right of the second party to dower, curtesy, or homestead, or any rights of surviving spouse, heir-at-law, or distributee, with his full power and authority to sell, encumber, convey, or dispose of his property, by will or otherwise, as he may deem proper.

SEVENTH: It is understood and agreed by the parties that in the event that a filing for a Decree of Dissolution of Marriage or Separate Maintenance shall be made, then upon entry of such a Decree in a proceeding between them, the first party may have an obligation to pay reasonable maintenance or support to second party and to grant to second party certain property rights in marital property. In the event a Decree so provides, or after such a filing if the first party shall die prior to entry of such a Decree, it is agreed that the first party shall pay to second party as and for an equitable settlement of her rights, if any, of dower, homestead, inheritance and all and every other such right which may have arisen as a result of their marriage, an amount equal to One Million Dollars ($1,000,000), payable in five (5) equal annual installments, without interest.

EIGHTH: It is further understood and agreed by the parties that, at the request of either party, the other party shall execute, sign, seal, acknowledge, and deliver any deed or deeds or other documents thought necessary by counsel to convey property of the other, or to extinguish any right of dower, curtesy, homestead, or of inheritance in each other's estate.

NINTH: The purpose of this agreement is to define and limit the claims and demands which each of the parties shall have against the estate of the other and to promote marital harmony and to discourage either party from seeking a monetary benefit by instituting divorce proceedings.

Should either party die during the pendency of this contract the claims herein stipulated and defined shall be the limit which either party may have against his or her estate. It is understood that the first party is a widower and has one child surviving that marriage. The second party is fully aware that under the present laws of the State of Illinois she would be entitled to one-half (1/2) of the net estate by intestacy if the first party died before second party while married or one-third (1/3) of the net estate by exercising her right of renunciation of his will, if it were not for this agreement. First party is fully aware that he would have similar rights in that he would be entitled to all of the second party's net estate if she died while married by intestacy or one-half (1/2) by exercising his rights by renunciation since she has no descendants.

The parties fully understand and are aware of the rights and obligations of the parties in the event a Decree of Dissolution of Marriage or Separate Maintenance is entered by a court in the State of Illinois. Second party is aware that a court may grant her additional rights and entitlements. However, she expressly waives and releases any rights, entitlements and interest in the event of a dissolution of marriage or the entry of an order granting separate maintenance it being her express purpose pursuant to this Agreement to limit her rights to those set forth in ARTICLE SEVENTH of this Agreement.

TENTH: The second party understands and ackwowledges that the bulk of the estate of first party has been bequeathed to Terra Museum of American Art. The second party also fully understands that Terra Museum of American Art is a tax-exempt organization governed and managed by an independent Board of Directors, which may or may not select her as a Director, as the Board in its discretion shall determine; provided, however, that while first party is alive she will not agree to be a member of the Board of Directors.

ELEVENTH: This Agreement shall be binding on the parties hereto, and their respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns.

TWELFTH: This Agreement shall become effective only if the contemplated marriage between the parties is actually solemnized. If the marriage is not solemnized, this Agreement shall be and become wholly null and void.

16di-000963

THIRTEENTH: No amendment or waiver of any of the provisions of this Agreement shall be valid unless in writing and executed with the same formality as this Agreement. No waiver of any breach or default hereunder shall be deemed a waiver of subsequent breach of the same or similar nature.

FOURTEENTH: All matters affecting the interpretation of this Agreement and the rights of the respective parties hereunder shall be governed by the laws of the State of Illinois.

This Agreement may be executed simultaneously in counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the said parties have hereunto interchangably set their hands and seals at Chicago, Illinois, the day and year first above written.

A Vision for the Future

From the lengthy strategic planning discussions that we have had as a Board over the last ten months, I believe we have all come to recognize that we are at a critical point in the history of the Foundation. I also believe that we will have the opportunity at our Board meeting in Giverny to make some of the most important decisions about our future since Dan Terra began his quest to establish American art as one of the preeminent achievements of Western culture.

From my conversations with you, I know that we all understand the weight of our responsibilities and the concurrent seriousness of our deliberations. We occupy a position of enormous privilege that will probably not be reclaimed in our lifetime, at least not within the art world. The art world also recognizes how significant our decisions will be, which should encourage us to sharpen our focus and enhance our sense of purpose. I believe, as I have from the beginning, that we are poised for greatness and that the decisions we are about to take will have lasting impact.

Given these unique circumstances, and several recent developments that I will review in greater detail in Giverny, I thought I should share with you my sense of how we should proceed. I do so having spent many hours with each of our potential suitors and an equal amount of time mulling over the possibilities that lie in front of us. I also have the added advantage of having curated exhibitions for each of the institutions, which has afforded me an insider's understanding of their operations. I know the collections of each institution well, am friends with the directors and their staffs, and count many of the curators, conservators, exhibition planners, and educators as some of my closest colleagues. In addition, I have a sense of the culture of each institution and how we would fit, or not fit, as the case may be.

That said, let me begin this white paper by sketching my vision for Giverny. I then will speak about the future of the Foundation and end with a suggestion for a strategic alliance.

[redacted]

GIVERNY AS AN ARTISTS' COLONY

As Monet and his American counterparts understood, Giverny is fundamentally a retreat, a place of great beauty and repose, where one can recover a sense of one's self and emerge renewed. I do not see the town and our property there as an extension of Paris or as a satellite of any specific institution, regardless of our eventual strategic partnership. Unlike what the Monet house and gardens initiated a number of years ago, I likewise do not see Giverny as a place where artists would come to recover lost vestiges of the American Impressionists' past. Instead, I envision it as a site that would welcome a diverse group of people--painters, poets, musicians, writers, landscape architects etc.--who would come and work there as modern practitioners of their craft.

The closest model for this vision is Yaddo, the "artists'" retreat in Saratoga Springs, founded one hundred years ago. Yaddo consists of a large, stately mansion that sits on beautiful grounds with various outbuildings that are used for studios and housing. (The estate was the property of the Trask family.) Individuals apply for "fellowships" which tend to be for anywhere from two weeks to two months throughout the year. They are given housing and three meals a day. They are not given a stipend and only occasionally are awarded travel funds or monies for equipment. According to the present director, the operating budget for this program is approximately $2,000,000, with expenses for each fellow running about $5,000 per month. (Leonard Bernstein, Truman Capote, Saul Bellows, Sylvia Plath, and George Rickey some of the more celebrated people who have worked at Yaddo.)

There are other models for Giverny that I considered but rejected--the American Academy in Rome, for example, which gives fellowships to thirty individuals, half artists, half academics. According to the present director, each fellow costs the Academy approximately $80,000. The Getty has a study center, as does the Clark Art Institute and the National Gallery. Although they vary slightly, these three centers are strictly academic. Scholars come from around the world to be in residence, do research, give lectures, and conduct symposia. Another model is Skowhegan, an artists' colony in Maine. This is expressly for art students who come during the summer to work and take classes from leading contemporary artists.

I think Yaddo is the best model for us because it maximizes what Giverny offers, it takes advantage of our housing stock and acreage, and it is both different from and yet related to what goes on at the museum. Equally important, it keeps costs down as I envision it to be a relatively inexpensive program, with perhaps no more than ten fellows.

I think it would be inappropriate to try to make Giverny into an academic center linked to a college or university and awarding academic credit. First and foremost, such an initiative would be frightfully expensive. It would also be an administrative nightmare. I think we should be engaged in various educational initiatives in Giverny. We might consider having the director or the curator of MAAG teach in one of the programs in Paris, for example. We also should encourage those institutions to come to Giverny for lectures, symposia, and workshops. But I do not believe we should convert Giverny into an academic outpost. (The American Academy in Rome spends $500,000 a year just on its library.)

This is not to say that we should not have a core library in Giverny for the use of our fellows and museum personnel. But once again, I do not think we should try to imitate or equal collections available elsewhere. (To jump start the process of building a library, I think we should purchase the libraries of two recently retired art historians of American art--Elizabeth [illegible]hns and William Gerts--both of whom had extensive holdings.)

By having a wide range of fellows at Giverny, we could provide a rich supplement to MAAG'S educational programs. And we could distinguish ourselves as the only such program in Europe. I believe it would be highly sought after and a significant contribution to our mission of propagating American art in the broadest possible terms.

TERRA FOUNDATION CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF AMERICAN ART

I believe we should establish a center for the study and propagation of American art here in the United States. This center should be completely independent of any other institution, should bear the Terra name, and should be located in a city that would have the best resources for the understanding and advancement of American art. While several cities could make a claim to being the most appropriate site for this center, I believe there is really only one that would serve the center's needs in the fullest, most effective manner. That is Washington, D.C.

Washington is home to the richest trove of material that would support this center: the Library of Congress, the National Archives, the Archives of American Art, the National Museum of [illegible]rican Art, the Center for Advanced Study of the Visual Arts at the National Gallery, and the Smithsonian, to name only the most prominent. No other city can imitate this concentration of resources. No other city is also such a center of political power. There is no reason why we should not be able to obtain support for our center and its programs from the Federal government. To do that most effectivaly, we would need to be in Washington.

To maximize our presence there and to draw attention to our programs, I think that we should establish this center in the American Pharmaceutical Building presently for sale on the Mall. It is a building of enormous distinction, in the very heart of the capital. It would be a magnet for scholarship and education, and the hub for the study of American art here and abroad.

I envision the building housing a host of scholars, curators, and other educators who would be Terra Fellows and who would be selected to come to the center by a panel of their peers (on which Terra Board members would serve), much like the Luce or College Art Association reviews. They would conduct their own research or writings on American art, but they would also contribute to the intellectual life of the center by delivering public lectures, participating in symposia, and being engaged with group activities that the center would initiate.

I think that this center should concentrate on issues or problems relevant to the propagation of American art at all levels of education--elementary through university, and that it be home to scholars who could advance this mission in the most creative ways possible. That means it would attract art historians who work in fields beyond American art when their expertise enhanced our mission. It also would appeal to American historians, film historian, cultural anthropologists, architects, and landscape designers interested in pursuing intellectual activities. (The practical arm of the Foundation's support for these fields would be in Giverny.) I also see individuals engaged in the development of curriculum and the writing of textbooks as Fellows at the center, just as museum educators would find it a haven for personal and professional development.

The Pharmaceutical Building would be an ideal site for these varied activities for several reasons. In addition to being able to draw on the resources of the capital, it already has a space, on the ground floor, devoted to a library. There are rooms that could be converted into lecture or symposia rooms, and there is plenty of office space. In fact, there is presently more office space than we could use at the moment, which would allow us to rent out space to other scholarly organizations, such as the Center for Advanced Visual Studies at the National Gallery and the Smithsonian. That would permit an even greater fertilization of the site and the opportunity for unprecedented contact among the occupants.

The Pharmaceutical Building could also be a place to stage small exhibitions of the Terra Collection or boutique shows related to works in the collection that would draw on other collections in Washington or beyond. Being adjacent to the State Department, the building would afford the Foundation ample opportunity to extend its influence and activities outside the Mall and the Beltway.

THE FUTURE OF THE TERRA FOUNDATION COLLECTION

I am completely convinced that the Terra Foundation collection should be in the same city as the Foundation itself. It would be foolish to have it any other way, especially if the Foundation is to be more than a grant-making organization. It therefore follows that the collection should be housed in Washington, with a sizable part of the collection designated to be exhibited in Giverny.

I believe that it would be wisest to strike a strategic partnership with the National Gallery. The Gallery is the preeminent museum in the city, and the most respected in the art world internationally. It has the most fire power when it comes to loans from museums here and abroad, it has the most secure financing, and it has the strongest educational component of any of our present suitors.

The Terra Collection would join some of the most important and historically heralded collections ever formed by Americans, the two most notable being the Samuel Kress Collection and the Chester Dale. The Terra Collection would also be a superb complement to the Gallery's rich holdings of American art, while the Gallery's larger collection would be an undeniable asset to exhibitions that we would want to mount in Giverny and perhaps send to other European venues.

The Kress and the Chester Dale collections were not outright gifts to the Gallery. They remained on long-term loan for up to twenty years. The Gallery is therefore accustomed to a prolonged engagement period and would not be pressuring us to make a commitment at any time soon.

The Terra Foundation would also not have to make any financial contribution to the Gallery for this relationship.

PAGE SIX

Finally, as Rusty Powell from the National Gallery points out in his letter to me, Dan Terra had represented the State Department on the Board of the National Gallery for many years. For his collection to hang in its original West wing, designed by the same John Pope who designed the Pharmaceutical Building would be an honor that I suspect Dan would find more than fitting. It is an opportunity that I believe we should seize and celebrate.

I look forward to reviewing all of this with you in Giverny.

Terra Foundation Board Meeting Minutes
August 24, 2000

In attendance by Conference Call:

Dr. Paul Tucker, Chair
Hon. Jacques Andreani
Mr. Dean Buntrock
Mrs. Margaret Daley
Senator Alan Simpson
Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Jr.
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall
Mrs. Judith Terra

By Invitation:
Mr. Mark Heatwole
Mr. Ralph Lerner

Staff:

Mr. Donald Ratner

By Invitation:

Dr. Derrick Cartwright
Dr. John Hallmark Neff

The meeting was called to order at 1:08 PM. Dr. Tucker indicated that the purpose was to review the four proposals and detailed data we had received from our four potential partners allow us to be better prepared for the September meeting. The minutes from the August 7, 2000 Strategic Plan meeting were reviewed and unanimously approved by the Strategic Planning Committee.

There were significant discussions around whether Giverny was "central" to the focus of the Foundation's mission. A decision was made to examine this question at the Board meeting in September.

Dr. Stebbins suggested that we had already decided on the central importance of Giverny.

Dr. Tucker reviewed the background that resulted in the decision of making Giverny central. Mr. Buntrock indicated that he saw that there is a difference between the importance of Giverny and making it central. Dr. Marshall discussed alternatives at this point:

1. Agree that there are unresolved issues and put them aside and then look at the proposals in front of us; or
2. Focus on the issues and then refer them back to a small group to make a presentation at the next meeting and end the call now.

[redacted]

Dr. Marshall agreed that we had not discussed the centrality of Giverny as a Board but had discussed it in Strategic Plan Committee meetings and that Committee has come to the conclusion of Giverny as being central.

Dr. Marshall also suggested we ask Helene to write "her perception of Dan's vision of Giverny". In other words, what is the purpose of Giverny?

Dr. Cartwright indicated that he has Helene's paper and will send it out as soon as Helene reviews it.

The Board asked Dr. Cartwright to write his view of Giverny's future relating to education.

Mrs. Daly said that she did not recall that we had discussed "abandoning" Chicago.

Dr. Tucker indicated that the thinking had gone along these lines:

- The Chicago facility needs a great deal of money to be brought up to par with other museums;
- There are problems with the Chicago museum's configuration;
- We have a problem attracting attendance in Chicago;
- There is considerable cost involved in supporting the Chicago museum;
- The collection is not adequate to be split between two institutions;
- Therefore, the best way to maximize our resources and fulfill our mission is to align with another institution, close the Chicago museum and focus on Giverny and educational initiatives of the Foundation.

Mr. Buntrock said that we had never discussed this at the Board level.

Dr. Tucker agreed but noted that it was a conclusion of the Strategic Planning Committee and that they were going to make a recommendation to the Board.

Dr. Marshall said that we could make a decision on this call if we so chose. She further indicated that we should make sure that there are two issues on the agenda at the September meeting:

- Giverny as being central;
- Closing Chicago

Dr. Tucker suggested that we definitely make a decision in September.

Dr. Marshall suggested we change the order of the agenda to go through Ralph's contract. Mr. Andreani indicated that two of the proposals need more detail. Mr. Lerner then discussed the strategic alliance contract. One premise of his draft was that there would be no museum in the U.S. and that would relieve us of the administrative burden of running that museum. He also indicated that the education portion had not yet been sufficiently developed. And the final premise was that we would ultimately turn the works of art over to the new/aligned institution.

Mr. Lerner walked the Board through each part of the draft contract. From that review there emerged the following items:

1. Ownership of the collection. Would it be donated and who holds title.
2. Where the collection would be housed, how much would be exhibited and for how long.
3. The question of a study center.
4. The question of office space.
5. Whether we should contribute money for construction or a naming opportunity.
6. Who would curate the collection and who that person would work for.
7. On what subjects the aligned institution would have to consult with the Terra Board.
8. What works should never be sold.
9. Issues regarding exhibitions, publications, etc. resulting from the possible alliance.
10. How the acquisition fund should be handled and who should maintain control of it.
11. Educational issues.
12. The status of the art at Giverny and what needs to stay there permanently versus what might rotate.

The Board concluded that it will have to address the above 12 issues as well as the issue of determining a strategic partner.

Mr. Ratner was asked to finalize the above list and send it out with the minutes by the end of next week.

At the September meeting, we need to be prepared to discuss what qualities of the educational programs we want to have included in this plan.

Dr. Marshall asked if we should send out an RFP to all four suitors on education. Senator Simpson suggested that we need to decide what we want as opposed to what they're going to give us.

Dr. Tucker suggested that the next step should be the following:

1. Get proposals on education from the four institutions as to how they would see working with the Foundation.
2. Equalize the general portion of the proposals on affiliation from all four institutions.

3. Get more information on the existing educational programs of the four institutions.

4. Reduce the four institutions to two or three and then focus on those and discuss.

In September we will need:

1. White papers on education from any Board member who would like to prepare one.

2. Educational information.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00 PM.

Respectively submitted,

Donald H. Ratner

If this corporation is in any one year a private foundation, as defined in Section 509(a), it shall be required to distribute its income for such taxable year at such time and in such manner as not to subject the foundation to tax under Section 4942, and shall be prohibited from engaging in any act of self-dealing, as defined in Section 4941(d), from retaining any excess business holdings, as defined in Section 4943(c), from making any investments in such manner as to

Upon dissolution of the corporation, the Board of Directors shall, after paying or making provision for the payment of all the liabilities of the corporation, dispose of all of the assets of the corporation exclusively for the purposes of the corporation in such manner, or to such organization or organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational, literary, religious or scientific purposes as shall at the time qualify as an exempt organization or organizations under Section 501(c)(3) of the Code, as the Board of Directors shall determine.

The corporation also has such powers as are now or may hereafter be granted by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of the State of Illinois.

ARTICLE II

Offices

The corporation shall have and continuously maintain in this state a registered office and a registered agent whose office is identical with such registered office, and may have such other offices within or without the State of Illinois as the Board of Directors may from time to time determine.

ARTICLE III

Board of Directors

Section 1. General Powers. The affairs of the corporation shall be managed by its Board of Directors.

Section 2. Number, Tenure, and Qualifications.

(a) The number of directors elected by the Board of Directors shall be no less than seven and no more than eleven. The number of directors may be fixed or changed from time to time, within this minimum and maximum, without further amendment to these bylaws. Each elected director shall hold office until the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors or until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

(b) Directors need not be residents of Illinois.

Section 3. Regular Meetings. A regular annual meeting shall be held during the month of September of each year, for the purposes of electing directors and officers and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. If the election of directors and officers shall not be held at such meeting, the board of directors shall cause the election to be held at a meeting of the board of directors as soon thereafter as conveniently may be. The Board of Directors shall provide by resolution the time and place, either within or without the State of Illinois, for the holding of the regular annual meeting and additional regular meetings of the Board without other notice than such resolution.

Section 4. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the Board of Directors may be called by or at the request of the president or any two directors. The person or persons authorized to call special meetings of the board may fix any reasonable place, either within or without the State of Illinois, as the place for holding any special meeting of the Board called by them.

Section 5. Notice. Notice of any meeting of the Board of Directors shall be given at least five days previously thereto by written notice delivered personally or sent by mail or telegram to each director at his address as shown by the records of the corporation. If mailed, such notice shall be deemed to be delivered when deposited in the United States mail in a sealed envelope so addressed, with postage thereon prepaid. If notice be given by telegram, such notice shall be deemed to be delivered when the telegram is delivered to the telegraph company. Any director may waive notice of any meeting. The attendance of a director at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a director attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting to the transaction of any business because the meeting is not lawfully called or convened. Neither the business to be transacted at, nor the purpose of, any regular or special meeting of the board need be specified in the notice of waiver of notice of such meeting, unless specifically required by law or by these Bylaws.

Section 6. Quorum. A majority of the Board of Directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting of the board, except that if less than a majority of the directors are present at such meeting, a majority of the directors present may adjourn the meeting from time to time without further notice.

Section 7. Manner of Acting. The act of a majority of the directors present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be the act of the Board of Directors, except where otherwise provided by law or by these Bylaws.

Section 8. Vacancies. Any vacancy occurring in the Board of Directors, or any directorship to be filled by reason of an increase in the number of directors, shall be filled by the Board of Directors. A director elected to fill a vacancy shall be elected for the unexpired term of his predecessor in office, and a director elected by reason of an increase in the number of directors shall be elected for a term expiring on the date of the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors.

Section 9. Informal Action by Directors. Unless specifically prohibited by the articles of incorporation or bylaws, any action required to be taken at a meeting of the board of directors, or any other action which may be taken at a meeting of the board of directors or any committee thereof, may be taken without a meeting if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all the directors entitled to vote with respect to the subject matter thereof, or by all the members of such committee, as the case may be. Any such consent signed by all the directors or all the members of the committee shall have the same effect as a unanimous vote, and may be stated as such in any document filed with the Secretary of State.

Section 10. Participation by Telecommunications Equipment. Directors or nondirector committee members may participate in and act at any meeting of the board or committee through the use of a conference telephone or other communications equipment by means of which all persons participating in the meeting can communicate with each other. Participation in such meeting shall constitute attendance and presence in person at the meeting of the person or persons so participating.

Section 11. Executive Committee. The board of directors may, by resolution passed by a majority of the whole board, designate an executive committee consisting of two or more of the directors of the corporation. The executive committee shall have and may exercise all the authority of the board of directors in the management of the corporation between meetings of the board of directors, provided the committee shall not have the authority of the board of directors in reference to (a) amending the articles of incorporation, (b) adopting a plan of merger or adopting a plan of consolidation with another corporation or corporations, (c) authorizing the sale, lease, exchange or mortgage of all or substantially all of the property and assets of the corporation, (d) authorizing the voluntary dissolution of the corporation or revoking proceedings therefor, (e) adopting a plan for the distribution of the assets of the corporation, (f) amending, altering or repealing the bylaws of the corporation, (g) electing, appointing or removing any director or officer of the corporation or any member of the executive committee or (h) amending, altering or repealing any resolution of the board of directors which by its terms provides that it shall not be amended, altered or repealed by the executive committee. Section 12. Other Committees. The board of directors may from time to time establish other committees and specify the scope of their authority.

Section 13. Compensation. Directors as such shall not receive any stated salaries for their services, but by resolution of the Board of Directors, a fixed sum may, and expenses of attendance, if any, shall be allowed for attendance at each regular or special meeting of the Board or committee thereof; except that nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude any director from serving the corporation in any other capacity and receiving compensation therefor.

The Board of Directors may appoint such other officers, including one or more assistant secretaries and one or more assistant treasurers as it shall deem desirable, such appointed officers to have the authority to perform the duties prescribed from time to time by the Board of Directors. Each elected officer shall hold office until the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors or until his successor shall have been duly elected and shall have qualified. Election or appointment of an officer or agent shall not of itself create contract rights.

Section 3. Removal. Any officer or agent elected or appointed by the Board of Directors may be removed by the Board of Directors whenever in its judgment the best interests of the corporation would be served thereby, but such removal shall be without prejudice to the contract rights, if any, of the person removed.

KCT: We have asked that you reconsider our request to conduct this interview under oath and on the record. Do you still decline?

FP: Yes, at the advice of my lawyer.

TI: This is not a deposition, not an interrogation.

KCT: Will you reconsider at least putting this on the record?

FP: No.

KCT: What is your job title?

FP: Assistant Attorney General, Chief of Charitable Trust Bureau.

KCT: How long have you held that position.

FP: 10 years.

KCT: You seem young. Do you mind if I ask how old you are?

FP: Almost 50.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-11. (The witness indicated that he was at the hearing of which the exhibit is a transcript. KCT read from page 19, line 1 of the exhibit regarding founder's intent to keep the Terra Foundation in Illinois. FP acknowledged that he said that. KCT read from page 20, line 14, regarding Terra's intent. FP acknowledged that intent is an important consideration in evaluating whether Atty Gen should intervene.)

Showing EXHIBIT FP-9. (KCT read from ¶ 42 of the complaint regarding founder's intent.)

TH: The judge has said donor's intent is not going to be an issue.

KCT: Showing EXHIBITS FP 2-7. At the time of the filing of your complaint, were you aware of the facts [regarding Mr. Terra's intent] contained in these exhibits?

FP: We have a case here that we've settled. The issues of intent are resolved. We spent thousands of hours dealing with this matter. The case has settled, so we are not going to spend time educating you on it. It doesn't matter at all.

KCT: I respectfully disagree. But under the circumstances, all I can do is ask these questions and you can answer them or, as you have, politely refuse to answer.

FP: This litigation has settled. The case is over and now you have made charges. We are here to talk about the validity of those charges. The facts of the case, why we took certain positions, is irrelevant. This case is over. Your clients had an opportunity to raise these issues, they should have dealt with it before. They suggested and urged mediation. They were the ones who said let's mediate; we were preparing to go to trial. We're not going to spend time answering questions for new counsel. Your clients were represented through this litigation. Go ask their counsel.

TH: (Reiterated concern that donor's intent is not in issue.)

FP: Let's be realistic. There were lawyers for your clients participating from Day One. The only issues in mediation were what restrictions, if any, the Foundation would accept, how it would be governed. Everybody had various pieces of evidence. If there were things that your side had, they should have presented them during mediation. Your side lost their position in mediation.

KCT: (Repeating question whether FP knew of evidence reflected in Exhibits FP 2-7 regarding donor intent when filed complaint.)

FP: I'm not getting into that. This was a 4 month process. These affidavits did not exist in September 2000. Some of these affidavits are from people I never heard of. If there was evidence, where was it? That part of the case is resolved. I'm not going to spend time trying to convince you.

KCT: Were there any terms that the AG required as preconditions to entering mediation?

JK: The parties entered an agreement that the mediation remain confidential. I object to this line of questioning.

KCT: Does your objection include premediation documents?

JK: It would include any positions and assertions of the parties during mediation.

LB: Does the parties' agreement extend beyond the judge's order?

JK: The agreement was among the parties and provided that no statements made by the parties could be used. It goes beyond the order.

FP: We did sit down with counsel at the beginning of mediation, and said we could not imagine a scenario where we would agree to any settlement in which the Foundation would leave Illinois. This was no secret because it came up in meetings in chambers. We started mediation with that in mind.

KCT: So the AG's position was that mediation would begin from the point that the Foundation would not leave Illinois?

FP: Yes. And the defendants wanted a global release.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-14. What was the date of this filing?

FP: Late December.

KCT: And when were these conversations about mediation?

FP: The end of January, beginning of February.

KCT: In September 2000, when you appeared, had did you know this litigation had begun? You received notice of certain documents. But in addition, before you received copies of the pleadings, had you spoken with anyone?

FP: The first we knew of it was when we received copies of the filed pleadings.

KCT: You didn't speak to anyone prior to that?

FP: No. We were involved in the litigation over Dan Terra's estate, however. So we knew about the Foundation, but not this particular aspect.

KCT: What was your role in the litigation over Dan Terra's estate?

FP: The estate was left to the Terra Foundation. Jim Terra was executor. Judith Terra asserted claims against the estate. They were both directors of the Foundation at the time. The lawyers for the Foundation notified our office and identified directors taking positions. We were apprised as protectors of the People's interest.

KCT: Can you expand on that?

FP: There were inherent natural conflicts given the interrelations of various parties.

KCT: In the original complaint and subsequent complaint, there are allegations .... Was Ted Stebbins discussed initially during the AG's investigation?

FP: We didn't know anything of these matters or of Stebbins. We never heard of him before we got the plaintiffs' complaint.

KCT: So the first you heard of these allegations was when you got the complaint which was filed on September 22. You filed your complaint three days later. That's a lot of work in a short period of time.

FP: Yes it was.

KCT: Who did you talk to over the weekend. Did you talk to counsel for the plaintiffs?

FP: I do not believe we talked to plaintiffs lawyers or anyone at the Quinlan firm.

KCT: Between September 22 and 25, can you identify all the people you talked to regarding the allegations in the complaint?

FP: What does this have to do with the charges against me about intimidating people. How we did our investigation, why we did it is not relevant. Why don't we get into what we're here about? I'm not going to waste time. Your clients had lawyers from October 8 or 9 on.

KCT: Did you talk to the Attorney General, James Ryan?

TI: That is irrelevant.

FP: I'm not going to get into it. But no, I did not talk to Jim Ryan.

KCT: If I went down a list of all the people you might have talked to, you wouldn't answer any of those questions?

FP: No.

KCT: Did you talk to any members of the Board of Directors before filing?

FP: No.

KCT: Describe generally what you did in order to prepare and file your complaint.

TI: That is protected by the work product privilege.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-9. (KCT read passage in ¶ 49, "There is no doubt that Dan Terra expected the Terra Museum to remain in Chicago.") Showing EXHIBIT 24. Were you aware of this amendment to the Articles of Incorporation at the time you filed the complaint.

FP: I don't recall. Probably not. We attached the original Articles to the complaint, so if we were aware of the amendment we probably would have attached it.

KCT: Did you have any discussions with Jim Collins between September 2000 and the present?

FP: I have spoken to him several times, about this case and other matters.

KCT: Did you have conversations that would touch upon the allegations in your complaint?

JK: Objection. This is beyond the proper scope of questioning and protected by the work product privilege.

KCT: Is Mr. Kennedy representing you?

TI: I agree that this irrelevant and work product. What your getting at now is not going to lead to any sort of relevant evidence.

KCT: Are you instructing him not to answer?

TI: No, Floyd can take care of himself.

KCT: Did you talk to Jim Collins about the allegations in the two complaints?

FP: I'm not going to answer that. This is beyond the scope of the charges against me.

KCT: When dealing with counsel for Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson, who were you talking to?

FP: Brian Crowe and Jim Wilson.

KCT: And they communicated to you that mediation was acceptable.

FP: Brian Crowe suggested mediation.

KCT: And they knew that the starting point was that the Foundation's assets would remain in Illinois?

FP: I remember we had a meeting on Lincoln's Birthday. It was a holiday for us, our office was closed but we worked. This was in early February, the mediation had just started.

KCT: And the AG position that the assets would have to remain in Illinois came up?

FP: Yes. And they wanted to make sure their client would get releases.

KCT: Are you under any time constraints today?

FP: No.

SS: I realize that I have no standing to say anything here. I am here because Floyd Perkins was kind enough to let me know this was going on. But the court limited this interview to the subject of duress and coercion, and that was the point of inquiry to be focused upon. I am concerned about questions going to the mediation because of the confidentiality agreement. I agree that the information cannot be used in litigation. The mediation was intended to be off the record and not used in subsequent litigation.

KCT: Why don't you ask him the questions you want me to ask, and we'll get the obvious answer -- no -- and then we can move on. You want me to ask him whether he intimidated anyone, and whether he's sure he didn't intimidate anyone.

SS: No, obviously you can go beyond that.

LB: It's difficult to determine the manner in which Mr. Perkins conducted the investigation if we can't learn what he relied upon in making his allegations.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-21. (Referring to Ted Stebbins statement on page 42, that he "aborr[ed]" the AG's threatening tactics.) Have you seen this?

FP: I listened to the tape.

KCT: Dr. Stebbins said he dislike the AG's threatening tactics. Do you agree that Dr. Stebbins believed that he had been threatened or intimidated?

SZ: I object. We know that despite his reservations, Mr. Stebbins voted for the settlement. There is probably some other way you can ask about this, but I object to the question as phrased.

TI: He also said he was voting his own conscience.

KCT: Did you employ any threatening tactics?

FP: No.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-14. Attached to this motion are notes from Mr. Neff. How did you get those notes?

TI: This question does not go to threatening or intimidating tactics.

FP: Someone gave them to us.

KCT: Who? What were the circumstances?

FP: I don't recall. They probably came from someone in the case. I don't see how this is relevant.

KCT: Was there any discovery going on at that time?

FP: Probably not.

KCT: When you filed your original complaint, FP-9, Dr. Stebbins was not a defendant. Why was he named as a defendant in the draft complaint you circulated in March 2001?

FP: We drafted the amended complaint to bring the pleadings in line with the proof. Documents that were filed in December and January contained new issues that we brought up as we became aware of them.

KCT: In the original complaint, there is an allegation in ¶ 23(f) that a director had a conflict of interest from representing multiple parties at art auctions. That director was Dr. Stebbins, correct? Was there any reason you did not name Dr. Stebbins at that time?

FP: As you will see at the beginning of the paragraph, those allegations were from the Gidwitz and Buntrock complaint. We were just repeating what they had alleged.

KCT: Do you remember why you didn't name Dr. Stebbins as a defendant in the original complaint?

FP: I don't remember. We probably didn't know. We filed our complaint based on what Gidwitz and Buntrock alleged.

KCT: What were the additional facts you learned about Dr. Stebbins?

FP: Those are set forth in our motion (FP-14).

KCT: You have the notes from Dr. Neff.

FP: We were just bringing our pleadings into conformity with what we had alleged in our motions.

KCT: Would you provide any internal documents and memoranda concerning the decision to add Stebbins as a defendant?

FP: No.

TI: Internal working papers are work product.

FP: We had two directors of the Foundation who had made allegations, verified, they were fiduciaries of the charity.

KCT: Did you do anything in addition to relying on the Gidwitz and Buntrock complaint?

TI: There was a time to litigate these issues.

FP: If you have charges against me, bring them on. If you don't know anything about the facts, try to figure it out.

LB: We can't figure them out because you say this is none of our business.

FP: This is none of your business.

KCT: Showing EXHIBIT FP-20. (FP acknowledged that he had seen Stephanie Marshall's letter sometime close to May 20, 2001.) Showing EXHIBIT FP-21. KCT read Marshall statement that AG was conducting fact-finding investigation. Did you know about these allegations on May 20-21.

FP: No.

KCT: Did you know IMSA was 95% funded by the State of Illinois.

FP: I read that somewhere in your materials. I knew it was a state school. I don't know whether it comes directly from the state.

KCT: You sent a notice of your investigation to IMSA on May 25?

FP: We wouldn't call it an investigation. When we are involved in making these inquiries, pursuant to an administrative subpoena, we are careful in how we characterize it because we don't want to damage anyone.

KCT: So it's not an investigation. What do you call it?

FP: An inquiry and review.

KCT: Do you have discretion as an assistant AG as to which cases to investigate, and when?

FP: The office enjoys some discretion in that regard.

KCT: Who decided to write to IMSA regarding your inquiry?

FP: I did.

KCT: Did you talk to anybody before you did this?

FP: Some staff members, but nobody above me.

KCT: Who?

FP: Some people in the office on the staff. Ms. Harris for example. But I made the decision. I did all of the sending.

KCT: Are there any writings which memorialize your thinking as to why you were inquiring of IMSA?

FP: I don't think so, no. Except for the subpoena.

KCT: May I request a copy of that?

TI: I don't see how that is relevant.

SS: Has anybody consulted with Marshall or IMSA about this? They may have privacy interests. I know I don't really have standing to be raising objections about it. But they may have concerns about the content of the subpoena being revealed.

KCT: I understand that, and we don't want to do anything to harm IMSA. We will talk to their counsel before revealing any of the content.

FP: We don't have any secret with regard to it, except I don't know if we can release the document.

(KCT asked that he be allowed to request the subpoena after speaking with counsel for Ms. Marshall).

TI: I can't guarantee that we will have any more discussions about this.

KCT: Has your inquiry [of IMSA] been concluded.?

FP: Yes, long before June 19, 2001.

KCT: Were Dr. Marshall and IMSA informed that the inquiry had been concluded?

FP: The inquiry had two pieces. First, there was a statement on their website, which said she was president of the school, and had dual roles. This was an error. It was not true. That resolved that issue. The other issue was resolved by looking at one document.

KCT: Was this resolution communicated to Marshall before June 29, 2001?

FP: Probably not. In this case it was pretty self-evident that it was a narrowly-tailored inquiry that was resolved by looking at the document.

KCT: Is it a fair inference that you knew Marshall was associated with the Academy before June 29.

FP: We had learned about [the issues that were the subject of the inquiry] on May 23, 24, 25. We had met with IMSA's counsel around June 12-13 and he was able to inform us about the issues and they were resolved.

KCT: Despite this meeting, it's not your policy to say OK, everything's over with. It's resolved. So did the investigation remain open in this sense?

FP: We don't always send letters.

KCT: Who was the attorney for IMSA.

(General discussion among the group that attorney was Bill Roberts, of Henshaw & Culbertson's Springfield office, former US Atty for CD Ill).

(After brief recess, SZ stated that in further discussion, Mr. Perkins had stated that it was his impression that Mr. Roberts had realized that the investigation had been resolved with the discussion of the two issues. KCT asked Mr. Perkins whether he agreed with the statement that a US Atty is not a US Psychiatrist.)

KCT: Did Roberts say anything [indicating that he knew investigation was over]?

FP: Roberts left the meeting thinking that we had resolved the issues. We pretty much communicated that to him.

LB: I want to tie down dates. What was the date of the administrative subpoena?

FP: May 25, 2001. It went out in the mail to the Academy that day.

LB: How long had you had the information?

FP: A couple of days. After the May 11 mediation session, there was a lot of discussion that people were dissatisfied. I figured the mediation was over. And I feld that we had been snookered into not being ready to proceed with the litigation. We wanted to file an amended complaint and we were going to make it more focused. We wanted to put it in different shape. And we had become concerned that there were a lot of part-time managers of the Foundation. We focused on who the officers were and started looking at Stephanie Marshall, because she was the treasurer and we had some concerns about the financial dealings of the Foundation, like travel expenses. We were looking to see what we could allege about part-time officers of the Foundation. We knew that Marshall was on the Board of the Frye Foundation, we learned that from Scott McHue, who used to be counsel for the Foundation. So Marshall was a director of Frye and Terra; we were looking at what she was paid, to see if she was capable of doing both jobs [in addition to IMSA]. We were working with public records and filings from charities. We came across things that caused us to make inquiry of her Math Academy.

KCT: What is the Illinois practice -- is it permissible to have ex parte communications with the court?

FP/TI: No.

FP: With respect to the Math Academy, we have administrative subpoena power, there is no court proceeding involved at all. The judge would not have known about it.

JL: Did you have meetings with the mediator where counsel for other parties were not present?

FP: [Participated in the May 11 mediation at the request of the parties. JC noted that the court had instructed other counsel not to attend.]

SS asked a series of questions, which included the following responses:

FP stated that the primary thrust of the amended complaint was to restate the ultra vires claims, to plead around issues that had been raised in the motions for judgment on the pleadings.

FP stated that he was not oblivious to the impact that the IMSA subpoena would have on Dr. Marshall: "I knew she would get it. I knew she was going to be aggravated by it." FP stated that he had a job to do and could not help the timing.

LB: Are there other Illinois foundations about which the AG has filed to take the position that a majority of board members should be Illinois residents?

FP: Whenever there is a vacancy in a fiduciary role it is my recommendation that it be filled with an Illinois resident, because we have a lot more control, more authority over resident directors. It is helpful to us from that point of view. [FP explained that Illinois residents are more likely to direct charitable spending and grants to Illinois]

FP further explained that although he tries to keep Foundation assets in Illinois, this is only possible when the donor has provided that the charity shall not be moved from Illinois. Where founder expressed desire for money to go elsewhere, this is permissible.

DECLARATION OF PAUL HAYES TUCKER IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Paul H. Tucker swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), a plaintiff in the above-captioned action. I was elected to the Board of Directors of the Foundation ("Board") in October 1998 and became Chairman of the Board and President in 1999. I make this affidavit in support of plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order.

2. I hold a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and am a chaired professor of Art History at the University of Massachusetts Boston. My primary area of study has been the life and work of Claude Monet. I first met Ambassador Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) in 1990 in connection with my work on an exhibition of Monet's works held in Boston, Chicago and London.

3. The Foundation is a private Illinois not-for-profit corporation organized in 1978 by Mr. Terra to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Mr. Terra served as the Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation from the date of its incorporation until his death in 1996. During this period the Foundation, in keeping with Mr. Terra's vision, took an extremely aggressive and committed view of its mission, as stated in the Articles of Incorporation, to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public." Indeed, this broad focus was made clear by the amendment of Article V of the By-Laws in 1994 by Mr. Terra to emphasize that the Foundation's efforts should be prevalent "in the United States and abroad." The history of Mr. Terra's involvement with the Foundation is summarized in the attached reproduction of pertinent portions of the Foundation's website. Exh. A.

4. The Foundation's signature asset is the Terra Collection of American Art, one of the most important collections of American art in the world. The collection consists of roughly 900 paintings and other works from 1750 to 1950. It includes major works by some of the most significant artists in American art history, including John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe. The estimated market value of the Foundation's art holdings is around $100 million. It is unlikely, however, that a collection of comparable size and importance could be compiled in today's art market.

5. The Foundation's other assets include an investment portfolio worth approximately $220 million and real estate holdings of approximately $35 million.

6. In 1987, Mr. Terra built a multi-million dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue in Chicago to house the collection. Bolstered by a belief that American art and culture is underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters offered something new to the international art scene. Accordingly, he moved a substantial portion of his collection to Giverny every year from April to October.

7. By the mid-1990s, Mr. Terra contemplated another move. Disappointed by the attendance at the Chicago museum, he considered transferring his collection to Washington, D.C., where he then resided. However, in June 1996, Mr. Terra suffered a stroke in his Washington residence and died. He bequeathed to the Foundation most of its current assets.

8. After Mr. Terra's death, the position of Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation fell first to Helene Arhweiler, former president of the Center Georges Pompidou in Paris. She was succeeded by Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia, and then, in 1999, by myself. Other current members of the Board include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French ambassador to the United States; Theodore Stebbins, curator of American Art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive officer of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis.

9. I joined the Board in 1998 because I believed strongly in the Foundation's fundamental purpose, as expressed to me by Mr. Terra and others -- to propagate American art in the United States and abroad through public education. The establishment of a museum in France, among other things, convinced me of the broad scope of the Foundation's efforts. I viewed participation in the Foundation as an excellent opportunity to further the goals of my life's work in promoting public education in the arts on a national and international scale. Since becoming a Board member, I have supported its continued efforts to advance arts education inside and outside the Chicago area. Examples of major non-Chicago projects include the recent award of a $500,000 grant to a New York production company for a documentary on American art and the sponsorship of a researcher for the Huntington Museum and Gardens in Pasadena, California.

10. In 1999, controversy arose among members of the Board as to how best to continue the efforts of the Foundation and preserve its founder's legacy which subsequently led two Board members, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, to engage in a campaign to gain control of the Foundation.

11. Under the chairmanship of Arthur Hartman, the Board twice sought a full-time president of the Foundation. The position was advertised at an annual salary of $250,000. However, the search efforts were unsuccessful. This experience led the Board to seek new leadership. It was proposed that Board member Stephanie Pace Marshall should become President. Dr. Marshall has been a member of the Board since prior to my election. She became involved in public education through her leadership of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. She has an outstanding record of service and dedication to public education and is a person of the highest moral character. I believed that Dr. Marshall was an excellent choice for President of the Foundation. A majority of the Board supported her candidacy.

12. Mr. Gidwitz, however, did not share this view. He wrote a terse opposition to Dr. Marshall's candidacy, claiming that she could not conduct the business of the Foundation while maintaining her position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He suggested that if she were to accept the presidency of the Foundation she would have to resign from the Academy. At the time Mr. Gidwitz made these objections, he was chairman of the Illinois State Board of Education. Exh. B. Dr. Marshall withdrew her name from consideration, to the dismay of her admiring colleagues on the Board.

13. I was then asked by various Board members to stand for election. I did so after giving due notice to Mr. Hartman and despite his objections was elected by a majority of the Board. Mr. Hartman expressed anger over his ouster. He eventually joined forces with Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock and Mrs. Daley in opposition to efforts by the Foundation to maintain its independence and chart its own course for the future.

14. Despite the maneuvers of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, the majority of the Board remained committed to the Foundation's broader purpose and interests. Like most other Board members, I believed that the Foundation needed to conduct a thorough reassessment of its assets and endeavors and to explore all possible options to arrive at a strategic plan for the future. As part of this effort, at my insistence in early 2000 the Foundation began to consider various opportunities including offers of cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. I believed that consideration of all possible options -- in effect, a fully competitive bidding process -- was clearly in the best interests of the Foundation.

15. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 meeting in Giverny, I asked members to focus on long-term planning options. I proposed that each member should circulate a position paper, setting out his or her ideas and proposals. Thereafter I circulated a memorandum, entitled "A Vision for the Future," in which I argued, among other things, that a collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C., would be in the best interests of the Foundation. My paper was designed to stimulate debate and further deliberation. In addition, I discussed with several Board members whether Buntrock, who had repeatedly expressed impatience with the work of the Board, should choose not to stand for reelection at the upcoming meeting. I expected that these issues would be the subject of full and frank discussion by the Board, which would take action only in accordance with its Articles and By-Laws.

16. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock were unwilling to engage in the ordinary advocacy of competing ideas within the framework of Board deliberations that are the hallmark of institutional management. In order to abort the strategic planning process, they filed suit in the Chancery Division of the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Buntrock v. Terra, No. 00 CH 13859, charging me and other directors with mismanagement of the Foundation. The complaint alleges a conspiracy among the Board to relocate the collection to Washington, D.C., in violation of alleged fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois. The complaint asserts, without support from the Foundation's governing instruments, that Mr. Terra intended "to provide a Museum in the Chicago area." It also misleadingly characterizes the Foundation as a repository of "the charitable assets of the people of the State of Illinois." In order to prevent further debate and decisions by the Board that Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock feared might be adverse, they sought and received a temporary restraining order barring regularly scheduled meetings of the Board.

17. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock convinced James E. Ryan, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, to intervene in the litigation on a theory of the Foundation as a charitable trust for the benefit of the people of Illinois, rather than the public at large. This was crucial to the efforts of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, because through their alliance with the Attorney General they were able to exert pressure on Board members through threats of investigation and potential legal action.

18. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, now acting in concert with the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, used a combination of the litigation and illegal threats to peel away layers of resistance to their takeover of the Foundation. They had already garnered the support of Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. On an 11-member Board, they needed two additional votes to gain control. They targeted Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

19. In March 2001, the Attorney General drafted a complaint seeking appointment of a receiver for the Foundation and removal of several directors, including myself and Dr. Stebbins. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time in the litigation. It included exaggerated and false allegations of impropriety against Dr. Stebbins, including alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions. The Attorney General successfully used this complaint to cause Dr. Stebbins to threaten to resign and eventually align with Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock.

20. Meanwhile, as the litigation proceeded to mediation, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock and the Attorney General sought a settlement proposal that would achieve their objectives of anchoring the Foundation to Chicago and ensuring local control. By May of 2001, a draft "settlement" was presented for consideration by the parties. The "settlement" forces the Foundation to "maintain and exhibit" its collection in Illinois for 50 years and to negotiate a relationship with another Chicago institution with the goal of ceasing operations as a stand-alone museum. Most tellingly, the "settlement" radically changes the Foundation's corporate governance structure to make the State of Illinois the dominant force. The size of the Board will be increased to 15 members, with no less than eight of the directors to be Illinois residents.

21. In late May of 2001, the Attorney General's office informed Dr. Marshall that it was considering an investigation of the Illinois Academy of Mathematics and Science. Dr. Marshall has now reportedly decided to support the substance of the "settlement," with serious reservations about certain provisions.

22. I believe this "settlement" represents a usurpation of the role of an independent Board and a patently unreasonable restriction on the right of the Foundation to exhibit its works when and where it deems it most appropriate and effective. If indeed it is approved by the Board, such majority approval will have been achieved through improper means by a minority of the Board acting in concert with the Attorney General.

16di-001019

23. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

TERRA

About Daniel J. Terra

Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was an energetic blend of scientist, businessman, and art lover. With a chemical engineering degree from Pennsylvania State University, the child of Italian immigrants founded Lawter Chemicals in Chicago in 1940. The success of Terra's globally-based enterprise gave him the means to further his interest in culture by collecting works of art and by becoming involved in several Chicago arts institutions. When President Ronald Reagan appointed Terra to the post of Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, an appointment he held from 1980 to 1988, Terra's enthusiasm for promoting American art expanded to a national and international audience. At one time, President Reagan lauded Terra for "doing more for American art than any other man in the history of the country." The entrepreneurial scientist's irrepressible desire to share his ardor for American art resulted in the founding of two new American art museums. Initiating an American art museum in Evanston, Illinois in 1980--the only one in a 400-mile radius of Chicago at that time--was a notable accomplishment. Its later relocation in 1987 to Chicago's Magnificent Mile with a collection that was increased ten times was even bolder. Establishing a museum of American art in France was courageous. Terra's desire to share with diverse audiences his enthusiasm for American art not only introduced a significant collection to America's heartland and to Europe but also realized his vision of establishing a forum celebrating the cultural and patriotic value of American art. The critical mission for Terra's museums is arts education with a focus on both public instruction and scholarly research.

About Daniel J. Terra

Visiting the Museum

The Library

Terra's personal collection was first exhibited at the Palmer Museum of Art on the campus of his alma mater, Pennsylvania State University in 1977. When Terra Museum of American Art officially opened in Evanston, the uniquely American theme of a prized painting, George Caleb Bingham's The Jolly Flatboatmen, 1877-78, represented the founder's idea of art as an expression of national identity. After relocating the museum to Chicago, Terra unabashedly stated, "We read so much about our industrial and economic [redacted] development over the last 150 years, but I think our cultural development is just as great." Bolstered by this belief, Terra founded a second museum of American art, Musée d'Art Américain, Giverny. Giverny is famous as the rural home of the nineteenth-century French artist Claude Monet and the location of an artists' colony where many American Impressionists, such as Theodore Robinson, Lilla Cabot Perry and Theodore Earl Butler, found inspiration. Terra's celebratory vision of America's artistic heritage is also a complement to his neighbors. He congratulated the French for their influence on American art. Yet, Terra subtly insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene.

DECLARATION OF DAVID LEVY IN SUPPORT OF
PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

David Levy swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am President, Director and Chief Executive Officer of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the oldest museum of art in Washington, D.C.

2. In 1991 Daniel Terra contacted me and sought my advice on his plan to share his collection, housed in Chicago, and his estate (via his foundation) with independent art museums across the nation, both to provide greater exposure to his collection of historical American art and to support museums with an interest in this subject through the distribution of his wealth through his foundation. Mr. Terra told me he was concerned about the viability of the Chicago Museum.

3. Subsequently, in 1991 and 1992, we discussed an alternative approach, which would involve the creation of a Terra Museum Trust to be guided by an independent Board of Trustees drawn from the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York, the Corcoran Museum in Washington and the museums operated by Terra in Chicago and Giverny. Mr. Terra approved the proposal and he, I, and Robin Martin, then Chairman of the Corcoran Board of Trustees, thereafter engaged in discussions with Leonard Lauder and David Ross, respectively the Chairman of the Board and the Director of the Whitney Museum. These discussions centered on placing the American collections of these museums under a common curatorial management arrangement so as to provide national and international exposure to the combined collections. After extended discussions with the Whitney, the proposal did not materialize because issues of control of the collection, raised by the Whitney, could not be satisfactorily resolved.

DECLARATION OF PETER SOLMSSEN IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Peter Solmssen swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am president emeritus of the University of the Arts, located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

2. Daniel Terra and I were close friends and colleagues dating back to the early 1980's, when he was appointed ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs by President Reagan.

3. Starting around 1990, Daniel Terra and I had a number of conversations in which he told me that he expected that the Terra Foundation would close the Terra Museum in Chicago and sell the real estate. Among other proposals, we discussed the possibility of moving the art collection to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and establishing a different kind of charitable activity in Chicago.

4. I introduced Ambassador Terra to the leaders of the Pennsylvania Academy and he entered into lengthy conversations with them about bringing the collection housed at the museum in Chicago to Philadelphia. In his negotiations with the Pennsylvania Academy, Ambassador Terra was prepared to provide significant funds in addition to his collection, but because he believed that the Terra Foundation should have ownership of his collection as well as the Academy's collection, negotiations with the Academy did not result in an agreement.

5. Ambassador Terra was particularly interested in Philadelphia because he had grown up there. He told me how he had walked past the Academy every day on his way to high school.

6. Ambassador Terra and I also engaged in discussions about a collaboration between the Terra Foundation and the University of the Arts, of which he was a trustee. We discussed the possibility that the Terra Foundation would purchase all of the real estate belonging to the University and lease it back in perpetuity, but this proposal was never finalized. In 1995, the Terra Foundation and the University of the Arts entered into a preliminary agreement, under which the Foundation made grants to the University of $3 million and provided for matching grants potentially totaling $22 million.

7. During 1996, Ambassador Terra and I talked at length about his desire to move the Foundation to Washington, D.C., where he had purchased two properties for that purpose. He said that he intended to relocate the headquarters of the Foundation in one of the buildings and conduct activities or possibly house part of the collection in the other.

8. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF JOSEPH ZORC IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Joseph Zorc swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am a real estate agent with the firm Pardoe real estate ERA in Washington D.C. specializing in commercial real estate.

2. In the Spring of 1996, Daniel Terra came to me and said he wanted to locate and buy property for the purpose of moving the headquarters of the Terra Foundation from Chicago to Washington D.C. .

3. During 1996, I showed him a number of properties, and assisted him in his purchase of 1072 Thomas Jefferson, in the Georgetown area of Washington, D.C. to be used to house the temporary headquarters of the Terra Foundation. Copies of documentation regarding 1072 Thomas Jefferson are attached as Exhibit B to this declaration.

4. At one time I had listed a piece of property on Connecticut Avenue, at Calvert Street that Mr. Terra had initially intended to sell. However, after six months, Mr. Terra rescinded our listing agreement and told me that he wished to use the property as a museum.

5. Mr. Terra told me that his intention was to create an institute of American Art and expressed the desire to look at additional properties that would be suitable for a building of a minimum of one million square feet. Based on his intentions, we had discussed a helicopter tour of a number of larger spaces offered by the Department of the Interior about which Mr. Terra had express strong interest.

6. We also looked at several other commercial sites including a site directly adjacent to George Washington University, owned by the University, a second site just east of Washington Harbor on the waterfront, and a third site on the 1700 block of Eye Street. However, we were not able to complete these plans because of Mr. Terra's death in June of 1996.

Re: Pending Issues

Dear Dan:

Over the past year, I have given alot of thought to a number of issues which I believe have to be addressed regarding Terra Museum of American Art. Perhaps the Sun-Times article caused me to crystalize my thinking further. I hope the following is helpful to you in contemplation of the various upcoming Board of Trustees meetings. I believe it will help you focus on a number of issues that will or should be raised at the board meetings in connection with decisions regarding the future operations of the Museum in the United States and the decision to build a museum in France. In that regard, I will address each of the issues, including consideration of various options and possible solutions thereto.

I. Terra Museum/Chicago

The Museum is now completing its third year of operation on Michigan Avenue. Obviously, considerable expense was incurred in rehabilitating the space for use as a museum. The former director incurred considerable unanticipated expenses in staffing and other costs, which Harold O'Connell has finally brought under control. The reality is that we are sitting on a piece of property having a value of at least $42 million. At present, the Museum is drawing approximately 125,000 people per year. The Art Institute draws around one million. In New York, the Metropolitan draws approximately six million; MOMA draws around three million; and the Whitney draws around 600,000. To place it all in perspective, our ratio of attendance to the Art Institute is about the same as the Whitney is to the Metropolitan. The reality is, however, that Chicago does not seem to support museums such as Terra to the extent it should. There are probably better markets to showcase American Art, namely, New York, Washington, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Boston, Philadelphia, and perhaps even Atlanta. We are well aware of the strengths of our present institution. Its collection, coupled with the Daniel J. Terra Collection, represents perhaps the finest collection of 19th Century American impressionist art; yet, economic reality is in the forefront of what we can do in the future and that reality is that the bulk of the support for this institution is from the Terra family now and for the future. Thus, a number of issues:

A. Is it time to enlarge the size and change the composition of Terra Museum's board?

B. Should there be in writing a long-range plan regarding the Museum's future and its direction? That report should address a number of issues, including:

1. Does the Museum stay in Chicago? If it stays in Chicago, does it stay on Michigan Avenue? And if it stays on Michigan Avenue, should it have a different overall physical makeup; namely, should the process begin of putting the site to its highest and best use, including development of the site for maximum commercial use including space for the Museum?

2. Should the Museum leave Michigan Avenue and move to a new site? In so doing, the Michigan Avenue property would produce an estimated sale proceeds of approximately $42 million, thus placing the Foundation in a strong financial position to consider and implement a number of other options. If the Museum is to remain in the Chicagoland area, the possible sites include:

a) The Chicago Cultural Center, Randolph and Michigan — This option is viable; it is estimated that the cost to rehab the South 42% of the building would be in the neighborhood of $8-1 million. In that regard, we would then be, in essence, in a joint venture with the City of Chicago, negotiating a long-term lease with the City and working out a joint use agreement for certain other parts of the Cultural Center which, from time to time, would be needed. Obviously, in occupying the Cultural Center, the Museum would take on a more public stature, and it would be clearly necessary to change the composition of the Board.

b) Evanston, Central Street -- Does the Museum move back to Evanston having in hand a healthy endowment and permitting the Museum to continue selected exhibitions; continue attracting a core of contributors and permitting enlargement of the collection; and enlargement of our educational programs and implementation of a scholarship program?

c) Other Possible Sites — Do we attempt to find other sites in Chicago? Some that come to mind are the Playboy Mansion. There are a number of other sites near Michigan Avenue, as well as on South Michigan Avenue, which we can consider and discuss.

d) Other Options —

i) Whitney Museum — One option that should be given serious consideration is the possibility of merging Terra Museum with the Whitney in New York. At the present time, the Whitney is experiencing some financial strain. It has a very strong 20th Century collection, but does not have a 19th Century collection. If Terra Museum, along with the Daniel J. Terra Collection, were to be merged into the Whitney, together with an endowment of $50-60 million, this would permit both institutions to thrive and would give the Whitney a truly significant status as one of the fine museums in the United States. Hopefully, it would increase its attendance record to at least one million per year.

ii) Art Institute — Does Terra Museum negotiate with the Art Institute for transfer of the Museum's collection, together with its operating funds, to the Art Institute to buttress up the newly constructed American wing? The down side to this, of course, is that we would not be in a position to direct and control the use of those funds.

iii) Washington, D.C. — Do we consider moving to Washington or merging with an institution in Washington?

e) Additional options — Do we close down the operation of the physical facilities in Chicago and not relocate to another site; rather, we take the Museum's collection, together with the Daniel J. Terra Collection, and place them into the Foundation supported by $50-75 million in funds, and permit those collections to be shown throughout the world, implemented together with scholarship programs and the operation of a Museum in Giverny? The reality is that, with the exception of the Smithsonian and perhaps the Whitney, it is very difficult for a museum devoted exclusively to American Art to be viable and attractive in the United States without a considerable expenditure of funds and a very large endowment.

II. Terra Museum/France

I believe that Terra Museum/France is interwoven with whatever decisions are made regarding Terra Museum/Chicago. I sincerely believe that we have to give consideration to the short and long-range plan for Terra Museum/Chicago before we finalize Terra Museum/France. In any event, with regard to Terra Museum/France, a number of isues come to the forefront. They are:

A. What is the status with the officials in Giverny?

1. Has the citizenry reviewed and accepted the plan for the facility?

2. What is the attitude of the Monet Museum?

3. Does the Museum have the full cooperation and blessing of Giverny and Monet?

B. What is the attitude of the French government?

1. Do we have its support?

2. Do we have the support of the French Governing Board regarding the creation and operation of the Museum?

C. What will be the attitude of the French and American artistic community regarding this venture?

D. What are the programs to be instituted at the Museum when it commences operation? Do we have a schedule for at least the next three years? We should have available for review at a board meeting in the near future, in writing, an outline containing programs, costs, funding and staffing.

E. Have we prepared a financial proforma for operating the Museum for at least three years? Included in that proforma should be an outline of income sources and a listing of expenses, including staff, operations, and if there is a deficit, what is the source of contributions to make up that deficit?

F. Have we prepared a detailed construction budget?

G. What is the commitment of Ambassador Terra and the members of the Terra family to this venture?

H. Finally, is it better to restore the gardens and the attendant buildings first, announcing scholarships for a select group of United States students to study and have smaller exhibitions to begin the process?

III. Terra Museum 1990–1993

Irrespective of which of the above options are implemented, it is clear that, at least in the near future, the Museum will be operating out of its present Michigan Avenue site. In that regard, the Board should be presented as soon as possible with an operating budget for the years 1990 and 1991. I think it is extremely important that positive public relations b continued, that we attempt to get as much media and other focus on the Museum and its programs, and that we attempt, if at all possible, to enlarge our teacher programs and our educational programs.

IV. Status of Audit; Attorney General Inquiry/IRS Inquiry

The audit will be ready on or about December 20, 1989. Ernst & Young is in the process of working on it. The tax return will be prepared immediately thereafter. In addition, amended returns will be filed for the excess holding issues for 1986-87 regarding First Illinois, as well as the so-called "self-dealing" regarding the art shown in Washington in an effort to raise contributions to the Museum in the United States and the possible museum in France.

Dan, I could go on with a number of other thoughts, but I think this is kind of a thumbnail sketch which will assist all of us in focusing on these issues. If you want, I can sit down with you and we can plan to enlarge a presentation. I await your instructions.

Very truly yours,

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN H. LONGWELL IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The undersigned, upon oath, does hereby depose and state as follows:

1. I, John H. Longwell, am an associate at the law firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, PLLC. The firm represents defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson in Buntrock v. Terra, Case No. 00 CH 13859.

2. On July 16, 2001, I attended an interview of Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, chief, Bureau of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations, at the Office of the Attorney General on West Randolph Street in Chicago, Illinois. The interview was scheduled at the suggestion of the Court and upon request of our firm. Mr. Perkins declined our initial request to conduct the interview under oath and on the record. We asked Mr. Perkins to reconsider recording the interview, dispensing with the oath, and he again declined. Therefore, K. Chris Todd, a partner in our firm who conducted the interview, asked me to accompany him to take notes. During the interview, I attempted to record questions and answers in as much detail as possible. Upon my return to Washington, D.C., I typed these notes to create an informal record of the interview in question and answer format. However, I was not able to produce a verbatim record.

3. The statements in this affidavit are based on my notes and recollections of the interview. The full text of my notes is attached at Exhibit A to this affidavit.

4. Mr. Perkins stated that he believes it is his job to ensure that not-for-profit and other charitable institutions based in Illinois utilize their assets in Illinois. Whenever possible, Mr. Perkins attempts to ensure that fiduciary vacancies at such institutions are filled with Illinois residents. Mr. Perkins accomplishes this through court proceedings. Mr. Perkins acknowledged that his authority to intervene is circumscribed by the mission of the institution and the donor's intent. For example, Mr. Perkins stated that would not have the authority to seek Illinois restrictions on an institution organized for national or international charity.

5. Mr. Perkins generally refused to discuss matters concerning his conduct of the Terra litigation, including his sources of information and the scope of his investigation. In particular, Mr. Perkins would not discuss the basis for his assertions of Mr. Terra's intent, nor whether at the time Mr. Perkins filed his original complaint he knew of evidence showing that Mr. Terra did not intend the Foundation to remain in Chicago. Mr. Perkins stated that at the time of his original complaint, he probably did not know that Mr. Terra had amended the Articles of Incorporation of the Foundation in 1994 to include the phrase "in the United States and abroad."

6. Mr. Perkins also refused to provide a detailed explanation or produce documents regarding the circumstances surrounding his allegations against Theodore Stebbins. On this subject, my notes reflect the following exchange among Mr. Perkins, Mr. Todd, Tom Ioppolo of the Attorney General's office and Laurel Bellows, an attorney for the defendants:

KCT: Would you provide any internal documents and memoranda concerning the decision to add Stebbins as a defendant?

FP: No.

TI: Internal working papers are work product.

FP: We had two directors of the Foundation who had made allegations, verified, they were fiduciaries of the charity.

KCT: Did you do anything in addition to relying on the Gidwitz and Buntrock complaint?

TI: There was a time to litigate these issues.

FP: If you have charges against me, bring them on. If you don't know anything about the facts, try to figure it out.

LB: We can't figure them out because you say this is none of our business.

FP: This is none of your business.

7. Mr. Perkins also stated that he possessed discretion in determining the target, subject matter and timing of any investigations.

8. In response to questions about Stephanie Pace Marshall, Mr. Perkins stated that after a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins acknowledged that he was aware of a letter dated May 20, 2001, in which Dr. Marshall criticized the attorney general's role in mediation and rejected Mr. Perkins proposals. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been "snookered" into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. Mr. Perkins stated that he was concerned about the management of the finances of the Foundation and the fact that there were too many "part-time officers." He began to investigate Stephanie Pace Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He became aware of these issues and considered them for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr.

Perkins stated that he knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

9. Mr. Perkins stated the issues relating to the administrative subpoena had been resolved at a meeting with counsel for the Academy on June 12-13. Mr. Perkins never communicated this to Dr. Marshall or her counsel, but he surmised that they understood that the investigation was closed.

10. Under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-108 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, I certify that the statements set forth in this affidavit are true and correct.

Executed by me this 18th day of July, 2001.

DECLARATION OF ALAN K. SIMPSON IN SUPPORT OF THE PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Alan K. Simpson swears under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am a plaintiff in this cause of action and I am a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. From 1979 until 1997, I served in the United States Senate from the State of Wyoming. Among other numerous activities, I have served as a member of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, a member of the Folger Shakespeare Library Committee, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Kennedy Center, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, Chairman of the Capital Campaign for Distinction of the University of Wyoming and as Director of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University. I currently serve as a member of the Independent Board of Directors of the IDS

American Express Company. On a part time basis I serve as a visiting professor at the University of Wyoming. I make this declaration in full support of the plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order.

2. I first met Daniel J. Terra, the founder of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, when President Ronald Reagan appointed Mr. Terra to the post of Ambassador-at-large for the Arts. Until his untimely death in about 1996, Dan Terra and I were friendly and had many conversations. Toward the end of his life, Dan Terra informed me that he had become disenchanted with the lack of support that the public had given the Terra Museum located on N. Michigan Avenue in Chicago. He was frustrated at the poor attendance at the Terra Museum. Indeed, he often confided to me that he felt that the Chicago Museum was simply under appreciated by the people of Chicagoland. For these reasons and others, Dan Terra talked about relocating his art collection.

3. Dan Terra never expressed to me any intent or desire to isolate his art collection in any one state or location. To the contrary, Dan Terra was a true man of the world and wished that his art would serve to educate people throughout the world. The by-laws of the Terra Foundation drafted while Dan Terra was living, state that the Terra Foundation is to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Indeed, a substantial part of Dan Terra's art collection was and is located in France in a museum he founded and constructed (The Museé Americain at Giverny).

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

This is the Attorney General's second modified redlined version of the Settlement Proposal circulated by the mediator. This is a settlement document, it is intended for settlement discussion purposes only and can not be used for any other purpose. We have attempted to correct and or fill in details where we thought the draft was lacking. In addition, as was stated at the mediation discussions this office would not agree to a settlement until the identity of the new directors was in cement and the directors were acceptable to this Office. The changes we suggested also attempt to use the framework suggested by the mediator and which would allow a settlement to be reached prior to an actual election taking place.

Dear Jim,

I am pleased to enclose the report which the trustees of the Terra Foundation for the Arts have asked Charles Moffett, John Wilmerding, and myself to prepare. We are glad to be of help, and we hope that our report will be found both thoughtful and useful. Needless to say, each of us stands ready to elaborate on the report at a meeting with the trustees, and we are ready also to work with trustees if we can be helpful in the future in implementing some of our suggestions.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Report to the Trustees of the Terra Foundation for the Arts

INTRODUCTION

The death of Daniel J. Terra in 1996 left the Trustees of the Terra Foundation for the Arts with the enormous responsibility of determining the future of the Foundation, whose assets include (a) a large, important collection of American art, (b) financial assets in excess of several hundred million dollars, (c) a building now devoted to the Terra Museum of American Art, Chicago and adjoining properties, and (d) the Museum of American Art of Giverny, as well extensive properties in the Giverny area.

It is clear that the Terra Foundation is to be devoted to American art. In the words of the mission statement, this includes the "acquisition, preservation, exhibition, interpretation, and research and scholarship of original works of American art." It is clear from the mission statement that the Foundation has the obligation not only to hold and exhibit excellent works of art, but also aims to make its collection broadly accessible, both through educational outreach and through distinguished scholarship.

At this time the Foundation implements its program through maintaining the collection in two museum buildings, one in Chicago and one in France, at Giverny. The latter site is dedicated to the "understanding of the interrelationship of French art with American art", and to strengthening the bonds of friendship and understanding between France and America.

The Trustees of the Foundation have asked the undersigned Advisory Committee to evaluate the collection and both museum buildings in light of their suitability in implementing the Foundation's mission. We have also been asked to suggest possible routes for the Foundation to take in the near future and over a longer term. Therefore, after analyzing the collection and the two museum buildings, we have suggested three possible long-term strategies for the Foundation. We believe that the future success of the Terra Foundation will depend on thoughtfully developing and defining its mission, and then implementing it with an excellent professional staff.

I. THE COLLECTION

Through his extraordinary energy and his great passion for American art, Daniel J. Terra was able to form a collection of American paintings in less than twenty years time that now ranks among the top twenty-five museum collections of this material. The collection does not rank in the top tier of museum holdings, but it does fall comfortably into the second rank, along with such venerable institutions as the Clark Art Institute, the National Museum of American Art, and the museums at Saint Louis, Cincinnati, and Worchester (see attached list). The Terra Collection is a specialized one, with impressive, deep holdings in the works of the American Impressionists. In the American Impressionist field alone, it would rank among the top three or four holdings in the nation. Both major and minor figures are richly represented (with the caveat that several minor figures are too richly represented), and there is great depth and strength in the works of Chase, Cassatt, Sargent, Whistler, Prendergast, Tarbell, Hassam, Theodore Robinson, and Twachtman, as well as excellent related works by Curran, Bunker, Metcalf, Wendel, Frieseke, Miller, and other American painters who went to Giverny. There are, however, two weaknesses in the Impressionist collection: first, while there are extensive holdings in Whistler and Sargent, there are no major works by either painter; once the Foundation has been stabilized and program developed, at least one major work by each painter should be sought. Secondly, many of the works in the Impressionist collection are on paper (prints, drawings, and watercolors), and these must not be on view for more than a short period in any given year, for conservation reasons; as a result, much of the collection must necessarily remain in storage much of the time.

The remainder of the collection includes many outstanding works, but lacks enough strength or balance to make the collection as a whole a fine, or even satisfactory survey of American painting from Colonial times to 1940.

1.) The holdings in American Modernism would rank next in terms of quality; there are fine works by Bellows, Hopper, Stuart Davis, Dove, Sheeler, O'Keeffe, and Hartley. This area is sufficiently good for survey purposes.

2.) However, the work of The Eight, the American Realists who followed Impressionism and preceded Modernism (roughly speaking) is not well represented, except for works by John Sloan and Robert Henri. This is a gap which should be filled.

3.) Hudson River School. This part of the collection is fairly good with fine examples by Church (a tiny work), Fitz Hugh Lane, Sanford Gifford, Thomas Cole, William Bradford, George Inness, and others by Whittredge, Silva, and Britcher. With some weeding out and some additions, this could become a distinguished part of the collection. Major works are needed by Church, Bierstadt, Durand, and others.

4.) Genre Painting. Overall, a weak area, though distinguished by a fine group of works by Winslow Homer (albeit without a major late work of the kind which would now be very difficult to obtain), and good paintings by Bingham, Mount, J.G. Brown, and others.

5.) Folk Painting. There is a beginning of a nice collection here, with a good Peaceable Kingdom, by Edward Hicks, two fine works by Ammi Phillips, and a handful of others.

6.) 18th-century and Federal. Here, there is one great, landmark painting, The Gallery of the Louvre by Samuel F.B. Morse, but it is surrounded by very little of the supporting material which one would want in order for the collection to be an adequate survey. There is a good Rembrandt Peale Washington, a poor Copley, and virtually nothing by Washington Allston, Gilbert Stuart, John Vanderlyn, John Trumbull, Benjamin West, and the like.

7.) Still-life. Another weak area, with nothing at all by most of the major masters of American still-life painting, including Harnett, Peto, the Peale family, John F. Francis, Martin J. Heade, or the like. There are good examples by Joseph Decker, Dunning, and W.S. Mount. This is an area where very fine examples can still be purchased, and consideration should be given to building this part of the collection.

SUMMARY

The Terra Collection is outstanding in one area, that of American Impressionism. The addition of several major works in this field could make it an even more distinguished holding.

In other fields of American art, there is a mixture of strong and weak paintings. In order to make the collection a truly fine survey of American painting from Colonial times to 1940, an aggressive program of purchases and weeding out would need to occur under expert guidance. Significant results could be accomplished with a budget of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 over a three year period. However, it should be noted that truly fine American paintings are becoming more and more difficult to obtain, and major works by some of the most important American painters (such as Eakins or Homer) are virtually impossible to obtain.

Finally, it should be noted that virtually nothing should be done in terms of building or refining the collection until the Foundation's mission, purpose, and location have been agreed upon.

II.) THE TWO BUILDINGS AND THEIR PROGRAMS

A.) Chicago. We feel strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. Although is has been effectively retrofitted, and though many fine exhibitions have been seen in it, it will never be a wholly satisfactory museum space, and its location in a retail area seems not the best use of the real estate. The building should be sold, and the collection moved to a more appropriate space.

The program in Chicago up to this time has had good and bad features. The education program, with good professional leadership and effective use of volunteers, has been successful. The exhibition and publication programs, on the other hand, have suffered from being understaffed professionally and have not reached the level of consistent quality that one would expect from an institution with the Terra's financial and artistic resources. There have been a number of beautiful exhibitions, some organized by the Terra and some taken on a touring basis, but there has rarely been a Terra publication of outstanding scholarly quality or importance. In general, however, visitors to the Terra Museum in Chicago have been treated to well installed, pleasing, educational exhibitions of American art, drawn both from the permanent collection and borrowed from other institutions.

B.) Giverny. The Terra Foundation has built a handsome, unobtrusive structure in the town of Giverny, one that is well designed and well suited for its function as a small gallery or museum. However, there are some major problems with the Giverny program, in our opinion. If this museum is to be "dedicated to the understanding of the interrelationship of French art with American art," as suggested by the mission statement, it is accomplishing only a fraction of what it might. One problem is that Giverny has only a seasonal (April - October) audience, one that consists largely of American, Japanese, and European tourists. Monet's gardens draw around 500,000 visitors annually, but the Museum of American Art has so far been able to draw only a fifth of this number at best. We feel strongly that a better program in Giverny, with broader efforts to promote it, could result in a considerably larger audience for the Terra program.

The collection in Giverny, consisting largely of works by Americans who worked in France, is of very mixed quality, and seems an inappropriate vehicle for persuading the French or European audience that America produced good art. The fact is that many of the American painters in Giverny were mediocre painters, many of whose works are boring and derivative. Overall, the part of the Terra Collection presently in Giverny, though it includes a number of fine works, seems less than ideal as a means of presenting, promoting, and encouraging the study of American art.

III.) DEFINING THE MISSION

The highest priority for the Foundation is for the trustees, together with professional staff of high quality, to define the mission of the Foundation. There are a number of possible alternative scenarios:

1.) Continue to maintain free-standing museums in both Chicago and Giverny. We believe that that collection as it is now constituted is inadequate to serve both the Chicago and Giverny audiences well. The collection is simply not large enough or strong enough to be able to fill two separate museums with works of superior quality. If the trustees wish to continue to have a museum in Chicago and one in Giverny, consideration should be given to merging the Terra Collection into either the Art Institute of Chicago (whose collection of American paintings would be highly complimentary to the Terra, and which would together combine to make an American collection of first rank) or with Northwestern University (in which case the Terra would become a scholarly university museum, along the lines of the Harvard Museums or the Yale University Art Gallery). As part of either the Art Institute or Northwestern, the Terra staff could administer the Giverny program, sending better works from the permanent collection along with improved annual summer exhibitions there.

2.) Concentrate on the French/American connection. If this is the Foundation's primary aim, then it would follow that an important exhibition and study program be based in Paris, given Giverny's seasonal, tourist audience. The Foundation could acquire a hotel de ville of the size of the Picasso Museum in Paris, to house a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris. Such a center could mount exhibitions, while also perhaps providing works on loan to French museums, granting fellowships for French and American artists, graduate students, and scholars to study in each other's countries, presenting courses for the study of American art in Paris, and giving scholarly consideration to American and French culture and their interrelationships. Given the assets of the Terra Foundation, this could be a truly significant and successful undertaking. The best American art from the collection would be shown in Paris, and temporary shows could still be sent to the adjunct museum in Giverny. Under this plan, the Chicago museum would be eliminated.

3.) Emphasize the Terra Collection as a complete, excellent survey of American art in the United States. Under this option the trustees would build and weed the collection in order to make it a free-standing museum of American paintings, with appropriately high quality exhibitions, publications, and educational programs. They would consider keeping the collection in Chicago (while perhaps considering a merger with the Art Institute or Northwestern), or moving it to another city with a complimentary collection with whom either a merger or a cooperative relationship could be considered (the Corcoran or the National Museum of American Art in Washington, the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia, or the like). Alternatively, they might also consider moving the Foundation to a city with a fine museum that lacks American art, such as Denver, Seattle, or Los Angeles.

IV.) RECOMMENDATIONS

1.) We strongly recommend that the Foundation trustees immediately begin a search for a highly qualified executive director or president of the Foundation. The ideal founding director would be a nationally recognized senior figure, whose appointment could lend much needed credibility to the Terra program as it evolves. Ideally, the executive director would be both a senior expert and scholar in American art and someone with extensive museum and administrative experience. If such a person could be found, even for a one or two year term, he or she could work with the trustees to plan the program and the future of the Foundation, and would set both the direction and the standards for future excellence. The Foundation would have to be prepared to pay competitively in terms of salary and support, as the right candidate would have to be lured from another position or from retirement, and the salary of $200,000 to $250,000 would have to be paid. A distinguished appointment could help enormously to win credibility for the Foundation and its program.

The new executive director or president would then hire a curator and other such positions as are deemed necessary.

2.) The board should be expanded and strengthened, with the addition of four or five outstanding representatives of the museum, academic, and foundation professions. The Amon Carter Museum in Ft. Worth, Texas, for example, has profited from such representation on its board.

3.) In the meantime, the collection must not be allowed to languish. We understand that at the moment letters are not being answered, no loans are being made, and credibility is being lost. We recommend that a curatorial advisor or a part-time curator be hired immediately in order to oversee the rudiments of collection care, as well as loans and the current educational and exhibition program. There are several free-lance curators who might take this on on a short-term basis.

CONCLUSION

The Terra Foundation for the Arts is an institution with enormous wealth, both in terms of its financial assets and its art collection. It has the potential for contributing very significantly to the understanding of American art, both in the US and in Europe. Given the recent death of its founder, it is essentially a brand new organization, one that must define itself and its mission in a realistic way, and which must then proceed to find highly qualified staff who will produce a program of true excellence.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

AFFIDAVIT OF PAUL HAYES TUCKER IN SUPPORT OF

The undersigned, upon oath, does hereby depose and state as follows:

2. On June 29, 2001, six members of the Board purported to approve a proposed settlement that would destroy the vision of Daniel Terra by crippling his Foundation in its mission to propagate American art in the United States and abroad. I voted against the settlement because that was the only action I could take consistent with my fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

3. The provisions of the settlement that restrict the Terra Collection to Chicago for 50 years and install an Illinois majority on the Board of the Foundation are plainly antithetical to the purposes of the Foundation. The charter, the By-Laws, and the well-documented evidence of Daniel Terra's intent to propagate American art worldwide render preposterous any claim that the Illinois-centric provisions adhere to the Foundation's purpose. Just days before Daniel Terra opened the Terra Museum in Chicago, he was in Giverny, France, negotiating the purchase of a piece of property with the intention of establishing a foreign outpost.

4. The proposed settlement wastes what is perhaps the Foundation's most valuable intangible asset – its bargaining power. Since the Board began its strategic planning, which included among other options partnership with another art institution, interest from other institutions has been intense. The Terra Collection would vault any one of several highly competitive art museums into sole possession of the undisputed best American art collection. This heated competition was a great boon to the Foundation, which could play its suitors off one another and hold out for the best partnership terms. The proposed settlement sacrifices this and all but hands the collection meekly to the Art Institute of Chicago.

5. The settlement also constitutes a waste of Foundation assets by squandering the Foundation's best and most creative opportunity to enhance its visibility worldwide. Such international visibility was central to Mr. Terra's mission, as the Giverny museum illustrates. But because of the size of the Terra Collection and the Foundation's resources, it is not feasible for the Foundation to finance, supply and operate new museums abroad while maintaining a significant United States presence. However, as several pioneering institutions have shown, it is possible—with a very limited investment—to establish permanent exhibition spaces in far-reaching locations by taking advantage of corporate and government sponsorship. For example, the Guggenheim's museum in Bilbao and its exhibition space in Berlin were largely financed by entities in the host countries. By supplying a limited number of works from its collection, the Guggenheim reaps tremendous rewards in name recognition and exposure in Europe as well as here in the United States. Other museums, such as Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, have followed this model with great success. Similar relationships were a promising option for the Terra Foundation in pursuing its quest to enhance appreciation of American art. The proposed settlement wastes this important opportunity.

6. The tactics of Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins throughout the course of this litigation have been repugnant in many respects. First, it has been clear to me that Mr. Perkins does not respect the mission of the Foundation, as set forth in its charter and By-Laws, to propagate American art in the United States and abroad. His only desire has been to capture the Foundation's assets in the State of Illinois and to make the Foundation "parochial," as he himself has stated.

7. Second, it is obvious that Mr. Perkins has been willing to use the power of his office to intimidate Board members and make personal attacks that inhibit their ability to act in the best interests of the Foundation. This was particularly evident in the cases of Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins.

8. Dr. Stebbins has long been a supporter of considering all options, within and without Chicago, that will best achieve the Foundation's goals for the future. Starting with his first report to the Board as an advisor in 1997, through strategic planning sessions in 2000, Dr. Stebbins encouraged review of both in-state and out-of-state options. He has been an especially strong advocate of maintaining a stand-alone museum. However, when the plaintiffs and Mr. Perkins turned the focus of the litigation upon him and threatened to sully his well-deserved reputation with exaggerated and unfounded charges of impropriety, Dr. Stebbins was pressured to avoid further litigation. He therefore spearheaded the idea of mediation and—after Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant—urged acceptance of a settlement that is in serious tension with his long-stated views about the Foundation's best interests.

9. Dr. Marshall was also the subject of a highly inappropriate use of prosecutorial power that resulted in a clear conflict of interest. I believe that it was inappropriate for Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins to vote on the proposed settlement under the circumstances.

10. Under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-108 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, I certify that the statements set forth in this affidavit are true and correct.

By Invitation

S. Weil

The meeting was called to order at 11:15 AM at Floor, 664 N. Michigan, TFA Offices.

Paul Tucker introduced Steve Weil, a consultant from the Hershhorn.

Steve began by indicating that the 1st question that need to be answered was "who is it that TFA intends to benefit, i.e., who is the primary beneficiary. He asked if there was consensus on this question. The discussion indicated the following:

- National and International Art Scholars (scholarship)
- General Public, national and international (US and Europe)
  - All ages from kindergarten to the grave
- Publics' awareness of American art, including understanding and appreciation

Is the status quo doing that? Paul Tucker suggested that the museums are not attracting large enough numbers and that the education is not at a high enough level.

Stephanie Pace Marshall indicated that we needed more leverage, power to influence and visibility.

Paul Tucker noted that:

- We don't have a premiere collection which could attract the numbers needed
- We don't have the "chits" with other museums to attract exhibits
- We don't have the clout with other museums to attract exhibits

Ted Stebbins asked if we could maximize the status quo. Steve Weil noted that we seemed to have good public programming but nothing has been happening. He asked, Why? And suggested that we just don't have enough "weight".

Stephanie Pace Marshall asked if we could align with another institution that could give us the weight we require.

Steve asked the cost of running TMAA. Donald Ratner indicated this as follows:

- Annual net cost of $3 million
- $30 million value of Chicago property
- The endowment tied up to finance the Chicago property could be calculated by capitalizing the $3 million at, say, 5% which amounts to $60 million.
- Therefore the dollar amount of assets "tied up" in Chicago is $90 million ($30 million property + $60 million endowment)

Ted Stebbins suggested that we could affect people in other ways than a museum.

Stephanie Pace Marshall asked if the primary beneficiary is the general public, do we need a museum?

Ted Stebbins noted that scholarship tends to filter down and does benefit the general public.

Paul Tucker noted that we could sell the collection and generate an additional $200 million; not that he was suggesting that, but just pointing out that there are limits on how to get additional funds. He further noted, however, that we do have continuing responsibilities for the collection. He mentioned that one alternative would be to put all the major art in Giverny, sell the Chicago building and use the money to enhance programs.

Steve Weil indicated that the collection has a greater value as a "group" than as individual paintings.

Paul Tucker noted that we're in the secondary group for exhibits, so we would probably need to align with bigger players to get the better exhibits.

There are two ways of looking at Giverny:

1. Use Chicago money to maintain independence
2. Become a branch of another institution

Paul Tucker agreed that our collection cannot support two museums and that Giverny should be central

Ted Stebbins asked that we flesh out two models: non partnership and partnership.

Paul Tucker said we could generate national and international shows.

Steve reminded us that there were issues of collection maintenance. He further suggested that art needs to be accessible, we need to maximize accessibility, and other programs need to be responsive to public needs.

Margaret Daley asked if the French taxes (which tax us if the art is permanently residing in France) was a consideration.

Steve Weil said that when the collection is in Giverny, it is in "exile". Therefore, this would lead us to the conclusion that the collection needs to be housed somewhere else, if we are responsive to the needs of the art.

A "non-partnership" model would not work if we used Giverny as the only location.

Judith Terra suggested that we have not really gotten to a way to make American Art more accessible. Discussion then ensued around the Chicago property.

The committee asked Donald Ratner to summarize the multiple options and issues that need to be addressed. They then discussed what needs to be reviewed at the June board meeting. Steve Weil said that if we reached consensus that Paul Tucker should go to the Board and indicate what the consensus position was and see if the Board concurs.

Paul Tucker said that we agreed on the following:

- Mission Statement
- Status quo is not acceptable
- Non partnership with the collection going to Giverny is not acceptable
- Partnership seems the only way to go

Paul Tucker suggested that the partnership issues need to be explored. He also said we need to review how well Giverny is used. He then asked if we need to consider the question of opening up our collection to more contemporary art.

The concept of a decision matrix arose again. The committee discussed the need to decide which partnership gives Giverny the best access to shows. We need to evaluate all suitors and need to do a review to rank the suitors.

Margaret Daley asked how we would do a SWOT analysis. Steve Weil suggested that with only one museum, we would not have the clout to generate significant exhibits on its own, but that it needed a partner. At 12:30 Stephanie Pace Marshall had to leave the call. Ted Stebbins again asked which partner would be better to help Terra fulfil its mission and which could best support a loan program in Giverny. Ted Stebbins also does not agree with including decorative arts in our collection.

Matrix issues include the following:

- Available art to loan
- Recognition for Dan Terra
- Reputation for exhibitions and leverage
- Dedication and scholarly commitment to American art (need to quantify the number of exhibits they have had)
- How much exhibition space they have and seriousness of intent
- Price
- Stability of Institution
- Timing

The Committee decided that a partnership is the way to proceed and now have to decide among them.

John Neff entered the meeting at this point. He asked if we had considered looking a multiple partners instead of just one.

Ted Stebbins suggested we might be able to "trade" some grants (say $250,000 each) for options to borrow from Institutions. He then suggested we might be able to do a combination with one museum housing and maintaining the collection and then doing grants to other museums for loans and traveling exhibitions.

There was agreement that we need to do a matrix giving the pros and cons for each potential partner and then need to quantify them.

Ted Stebbins asked who would own the collection. Donald Ratner was asked to look into the legal issue of who actually owns the art.

Paul Tucker suggested that after the June Board meeting, we need to begin our detail discussion of who to negotiate with. The list includes the Art Institute, the Whitney, the Corcoran, San Francisco, Brooklyn and Addison.

The meeting was adjourned at 1:15 PM.

To: Steve Carlson
From: Stephanie Pace Marshall
Subject: Response to your May 16, 2001 FAX
Date: May 20, 2001

As you requested, I have reviewed each of the two drafts of the mediated settlement agreement -- the 5-15-01 draft submitted by David Hilliard (which was in his words "based on notes taken during last Friday's session") and the "modified 5-15-01 version" submitted by the Attorney General's office (which is referred to as the "AG's modified version of the settlement proposal circulated by the mediator").

You requested that each director review the documents and inform you in writing if either of the documents is acceptable. You also requested that each director forward any comments he/she may have. My comments follow:

First, with respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

Second, with respect to the draft proposal prepared by David Hilliard, ("based on notes") there are several issues that must be revisited and/or clarified in writing before I can accept the agreement. (David's 5-15-01 memo to the Board underscored that the draft had not been "finalized").

It is my perception, that prior to receiving the AG's version of the proposed settlement, several Board members seemed to accept the principles of maintaining and exhibiting the Terra collection in Chicago for a significant period of time, changing Board composition, and maintaining a principal office in Illinois. Despite my desire for a just and timely resolution to the lawsuit, I cannot in good conscience, accept David's draft as it is currently written; therefore, using the outline of David's draft I have enumerated those issues that for me require written clarification, addition or deletion.

A. THE FOUNDATION

2. It is important that Giverny be named in the document. The current omission of the Terra Museum and other Terra properties and programs in Giverny, France, could be construed as a veiled intention to alter our commitment or presence there. While I believe the vast majority of Board members are committed to Giverny as an integral component of the Foundation's mission, it needs to be made explicit. In a previous iteration, dated May 11, 2001, the following statement was made: "the Foundation remains free to provide art for display in Giverny, and for special exhibits at approximately the same historical level." I suggest that this statement be added to the current draft.

In addition, in previous iterations of the agreement, the Foundation's freedom to continue to own, control and use its artistic, financial and real estate assets as it saw fit to achieve its goals, was explicitly stated (see 5-11-01 document, section B-1). Does the phrase in the Hilliard draft, "the Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals..." include our freedom to deploy our material and financial resources as the Board believes appropriate?

3. I could accept fifty years in the first sentence. I do not accept the second sentence, -- that the Foundation's freedom after fifty years is conditional on the authorization of the AG's office. After the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future.

B. THE BOARD AND OFFICERS

1-a. I could accept the current scenario of B-1-a, however, I do not support the last sentence -- that it is the Board chairman acting as a sole agent who can affect an immediate resignation of Board members upon his/her request. Vesting this power in any one individual is both dangerous and irresponsible. The entire sentence should be struck or amended to state that is the majority of the Board and not the Chairman who can act.

1-b. (iii) Because of the Terra Foundation's intentional national and international outreach and presence (i.e. The Contested Ground project), I would like to reconsider the stipulation that a majority of the Board be reserved for Illinois residents. I do not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority. Also, the word disinterested should be struck. I do not consider any of the current Illinois directors as "disinterested."

1-c. I cannot support the timeline of the submission of nominees by May 25, 2001 (and I am personally having difficulty contacting potential candidates.) A decision of this magnitude and importance to the future of the Foundation requires ample time for all Board members to submit nominations. I am also most concerned about the lack of clarity with respect to the implementation of this provision. What does "coordination with the AG's office and the directors" mean? Within the parameters of any settlement agreement, the decision regarding new Board members must be a Board decision.

1-d. I do not accept the sentence regarding the strategic planning committee. It does not belong in the agreement for several reasons: we should not single out a specific committee and designate partial membership; it is premature and it is a Board decision once the new Board is constituted; we should not stipulate a specific charge and a required outcome to a committee. This totally erodes the Board's authority and fiduciary duty of diligence. Whether or not the Terra wishes to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago institution and whether or not the Terra wishes to "cease to operate a stand alone museum" is a Board decision.

For any agreement to usurp the Board's authority by stipulating the actions of a specific committee which would affect the entire future of the Foundation, is astounding. Surely, a newly constituted fifteen member Board with the kind of intellect, vision and savvy we envision, can be trusted to make responsible strategic decisions in the best interests of the Foundation.

Steve, I hope you, the other attorneys, David and Brett, can now, at the eleventh hour, bring reason, fairness, good faith and wisdom to these negotiations.

Personally, I am committed to maintaining and exhibiting the Terra Foundation's collection in Chicago and Giverny for a significant period of time. I also recognize and support the need for the Board to alter its composition. It appears that with the exception of the AG, the parties have moved closer to a possible agreement for settlement. However, I am concerned that the AG's position fractures an already fragile process. I am willing to continue to participate in the mediation process, if it is conducted in good faith. If you need to contact me, I will be in my office on Monday and Tuesday and early Wednesday morning of this week.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S MOTION TO ENJOIN THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S USE OF THE CURRENT SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND FOR APPOINTMENT OF A RECEIVER TO CONDUCT THE INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

NOW COMES the People of the State of Illinois by the Attorney General pursuant to §16(b) of the Charitable Trust Act and for reasons set forth herein, move the court to enjoin Defendant Terra Foundation from using the current Special Litigation Committee to direct the instant investigation/litigation, and to appoint a receiver/custodian/or persons to act independently to investigate and direct the same. In support thereof the People state:

1) Because of the substantial charitable funds being used to pay for the litigation herein and the significant public issues raised in this case , the Attorney General is compelled to share with this court other and further matters which prevent the current special litigation committee from independently conducting an investigation free of conflicts. While the Attorney General has been unable to conduct discovery to date and has been unable to fully gather all of the facts, and thus has been reluctant to submit such before the court until all the facts could be fully developed, there are matters of which this court should be aware at this time to allow it a more complete understanding of the nature of conflicts in this matter and why the current special litigation committee cannot undertake an independent investigation.

2) As this court knows, the special litigation committee of the Terra Foundation was formed only after many court hearings and after order of court. After extensive efforts, the special litigation committee was formed composed of only two members. Director Ted Stebbins and Director Jacques Andreanni. The charge of the committee is to direct the Foundation's legal counsel and to independently investigate the charges in the subject litigation. It is this committee, as well as the law firm, that must conduct an independent investigation of the charges brought by Plaintiffs Gidwitz and Buntrock. Not only must counsel be independent, so must this committee. The co-plaintiffs explain in their motion how quickly the committee acted, without the benefit of sufficient information or investigation to purportedly ratify the litigation related public relations contract, to purportedly ratify payments to non-Foundation counsel for Defendants Terra, Simpson and Tucker and approve payments of legal fees to Sidley & Austin. All these actions were taken before the mandated independent investigation even began.

3) Director Andreanni lives in France. His inability to participate in a meaningful manner given the distance and time zone difference was made clear last week before the court , when it was explained by the Sidley firm that they had to allow days to communicate with Director Andreanni. It appears that Director Andreanni will be severely limited in his ability to assist in directing the independent investigation. Thus, it appears the hands on direction will be left to Director Stebbins.

4) Most problematic, however, is the service of Director Stebbins on this special litigation committee. Certain allegations in the complaint concern his purported conflict of interest conduct in auction bidding on behalf of the Terra Foundation. The ability of the Attorney General to ascertain facts and make allegations has been limited because no discovery has yet been conducted. There are matters concerning Director Stebbins' conflicts which come directly from the Foundation's own records.

5) Attached hereto as Group Exhibit A are recent 1999 memos written by the Terra Museum's Chicago Director and curator John Neff, who raises concerns about conflicts concerning Director Ted Stebbins. Neff's memos disclose that Director Stebbins was representing others in reviewing, evaluating and bidding for art at auction, while at the same time doing such for the Terra Museum. In his memos, curator Neff explains that he was to control the bidding, yet Director Stebbins on more than one occasion acted for the Terra contrary to Neff's direction and in circumstances in conflict with his fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation. The memos show that Neff shared these concerns with individual Defendant Director Tucker. These are curator Neff's contemporaneous notes as a record made as an employee of the Foundation The Attorney General has been unable to interview him or depose him, but his statements in Foundation records must be explored in an independent investigation. Clearly Director Stebbins cannot do so.

6) These matters are raised in the complaint without Stebbins being named, but he accepted the appointment to the special litigation committee knowing that these concerns were directed to his conduct and thus he has forced the details herein being set forth.

7) Defendant Tucker is the person who nominated Director Stebbins to the board. As the facts herein show, there are serious concerns about Stebbins' conduct, and it appears that after being informed of such, Tucker aided or allowed the conduct to continue. In these circumstances, it is unacceptable to allow Stebbins to control or serve upon the independent special litigation committee. Courts have found it inappropriate in conditions as found here, to allow one insufficiently disinterested person to be the special litigation committee. Houle v. Low , 407 Mass. 810, 55(N.E.2d 51, 58 (1990).

8) On Friday December 15, 2000 Defendant Director Paul Tucker stated in a public radio broadcast that the Foundation has incurred litigation fees in excess of hundreds of thousands of dollars in this case. A transcript copy of the broadcast is attached as Exhibit B. Defendant Tucker in the interview states that the plans to move out of state were merely in the planning stage, but the Foundation board minutes of August 2000 and the Tucker white paper of September 2000 (both attached to the Attorney General's complaint) show the Board and Tucker were about to start to effect a move out of Chicago.

9) In the radio interview of December 15, 2000, Defendant Tucker admitted having entered into the $25,000 per month public relations contract with the Dilenschneider firm at the Foundation's expense. He explained it was done to refute in the press the plaintiffs' charges. The unusual public relations contract indicates it is to provide public relations work regarding the litigation and in part to promote the credentials of the Directors. While no benefit to the Foundation from that public relations contract was set forth by Tucker, and clearly none is ascertainable from its content, Tucker admitted that over $100,000 of charitable funds have been spent on this public relations contract to date. Clearly the $100,000 of public relations activities to date spent opposing the plaintiffs' charges have been done without the benefit of an independent investigation. The current special litigation committee attempted to ratify this contract and they, as well as Director Tucker (who was initially responsible for this public relations contract), lack authority to enter into such. This conduct further demonstrates that they are not capable of acting in an independent manner.

10) The special litigation committee composed of Directors Stebbins and Andreanni, without an investigation of any sort has attempted to authorize the payment of Foundation funds to the attorneys for the individual Defendants Terra, Tucker and Simpson. The by-laws require the full board to ratify such payments and the process requires that an independent investigation be conducted before consideration by the full board.

11) The factual allegations of the Plaintiffs against individual Directors named as Defendants require the special litigation committee to conduct an investigation. In addition to the issues regarding Director Stebbins presented by the Neff memos, Judith Terra did in fact have museum art taken from the Giverney museum and placed on display in her home in France. A film exists confirming such. Clearly even the temporary appropriation of the Foundation's property by an individual Director is a serious breach of fiduciary duty and must be independently investigated.

12) The case also involves the significant public policy concern that certain members of the Board of Directors are attempting to cause the Foundation to move its museum from Chicago. (See : attachments to the People's complaint, the August 2000 board minutes and Tucker's September 2000 white paper). Those seeking to move the museum now claim that the Terra museum is just not effective at its location. However, in a October 22, 1999 Report to the Board of Terra Foundation made by Terra Museum art Director John Neff, he observes " the Terra finished FY-99 with record attendance,... membership doubled ... and (there is) a growing awareness of and interest in the museum and its programs." This October 1999 report by John Neff explains expansive program development, commitments to Chicago based educational programs and a dedicated staff at the Terra. A copy of John Neff's October 22, 1999 Report to the Board is attached as Exhibit C.

13) Plaintiffs have alleged that those currently controlling the Foundation have mis-managed the operations causing a loss of staff in year 2000 and thus caused the current declines in the Terra museums attendance and function. Defendant Tucker was elected Chairman just last October 1999, just after the aforesaid Neff Report. In less than a year under his management many of the museum technical and professional staff are gone and he and certain board members are now claiming the museum is ineffective at its current location. The Plaintiffs' contentions regarding mis-management clearly require substantial independent investigation.

14) Section 16(b) of the Charitable Trust Act provides:

Sec. 16 (b) "Upon application to a court of competent jurisdiction, in which the Attorney General alleges that a charitable trust needs to be protected or the trustees of a charitable organization or trust have engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty toward the organization, and he seeks injunctive relief and removal of such trustees, the Court may, as part of the injunctive relief, and after a hearing where such trustees shall have an opportunity to be heard, appoint temporarily or permanently a receiver or additional trustees to protect and operate the organization and may temporarily, or as ultimate relief for breach of duty or to protect the trust, permanently remove any charitable organization's trustees, corporate officers, Directors and members from office and appoint replacements to protect the public interest." (760 ILCS 55/16(b) (1998).)

15) The Foundation is a charitable trust subject to chancery court protection and supervision. To date with its present fiduciaries divided and in conflict, the Foundation has been unable to act to protect the charitable assets it possesses. The court has given its time and direction in this matter and now three months after the filing of this lawsuit, instead of having an independent, objective and available litigation committee in place, with all of its members actively involved in conducting an independent investigation, the Foundation's board chose only two people for the special litigation committee, one of whom resides in France, and the other whose conduct is the subject of certain charges of conflict. That committee, without undertaking any investigation, approved the use of hundreds of thousands of dollars of charitable funds to defend the individual Defendant Directors by paying their attorneys and even attempting to provide them public relations assistance. Clearly, this charitable trust needs this court's protection and the remedy provided under the charitable trust act is a temporary receiver to conduct the independent investigation and to direct the litigation on the Foundation's behalf.

Wherefore plaintiff the Attorney General of Illinois prays that the court :

a) enjoin the Foundation's use of the current special litigation committee;

b) order a limited hearing on this matter;

c) allow limited discovery on these matters;

d) appoint a receiver to conduct the independent investigation and litigation on behalf of the Foundation.

e) enter such further relief that the court deems necessary and equitable under the circumstances.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT, INJUNCTION, BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY, REMOVAL, ACCOUNTING, RECEIVER AND APPOINTMENT OF NEW DIRECTORS

NOW COMES the Plaintiff-Intervenor, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, and complains of Defendants JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, ALAN K. SIMPSON, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, THEODORE E. STEBBINS, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation and charitable trust, and states as follows:

1) This cause is brought for and on behalf of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS by and through the Attorney General of Illinois pursuant to the common law and the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq (1999)), to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS as the ultimate beneficiaries of each charitable trust within the State of Illinois and pursuant to statutory and the common law powers and duties of the Attorney General to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts.

2) Defendant TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS is an Illinois not-for-profit corporation (hereinafter "the FOUNDATION"), that was incorporated on December 13, 1978. Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Group Exhibit "A-1" is a copy of the FOUNDATION's original Articles of Incorporation, and attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "A-2" is a copy of the FOUNDATION's current Articles of Incorporation.

3) Defendant FOUNDATION, as a corporation, is a separate legal person and currently holds legal title to assets worth in excess of $450 million, which assets are held exclusively and solely for charitable purposes.

4) The Illinois Constitution at Article 5, Section 15 adopts English common law as the law of Illinois, and under said common law a trust requires not only a trustee, but of necessity must have identifiable beneficiaries to be valid. Under the common law, the identifiable beneficiaries of a trust held by a trustee for charitable purposes are the People within the jurisdiction where the trust was made, and the People of said jurisdiction are the ultimate and sole beneficiaries of the charitable trust.

5) The Defendant FOUNDATION was created and exists as a charitable trust under Illinois law, and it received and accepted charitable gifts in trust while operating here in Illinois as gifts to be used for exclusively charitable purposes and the Defendant FOUNDATION is a common law trustee for all of the charitable assets which it holds.

6) Charitable trusts are unique trusts which are accorded special protections at common law such as being subject to protection by courts of chancery and being immune from the rule against perpetuities, precisely because their beneficiaries are deemed, as a matter of law, to be the People of the jurisdiction where the trust is made. The existence and creation of the Defendant FOUNDATION in Illinois and its acceptance of assets in trust in Illinois, by operation of law make the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS the sole and exclusive beneficiaries of the charitable assets held by the Defendant FOUNDATION. It is thus the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS who are the vested and rightful beneficiaries of all of the assets held in trust by

FOUNDATION for its exclusively charitable purpose.

7) Under the common law, the trustee of a charitable trust has no right to divest or remove the beneficiaries once the People have been made beneficiaries by operation of law. The FOUNDATION, as common law trustee, is but a steward who has a duty of absolute loyalty and good faith to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS as sole and exclusive beneficiaries.

8) At common law the sovereign of the public beneficiaries was deemed the protector of the public interest in charitable trusts and, under Illinois law, the Illinois Attorney General is the protector of the PEOPLE's interest in all charitable trusts created in Illinois by virtue of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS being the sole and exclusive beneficiaries.

9) The Charitable Trust Act defines a charitable "trustee", said Act providing:

> "Sec 3. "Trustee" means any person, individual, group of individuals, association, corporation, not-for-profit corporation, estate representative, or other legal entity holding property for or solicited for any charitable purpose; or any chief operating officer, director, executive director or owner of a corporation soliciting or holding property for a charitable purpose." (760 ILCS 55/3 (1999).)

10) The Defendant FOUNDATION is an Illinois charitable "trustee", and it has in the past acknowledged that it is an Illinois charitable trust and has registered and reported to the Illinois Attorney General under the Illinois Charitable Trust Act.

11) Plaintiff-Intervenor, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, files this complaint as an intervening but separate party plaintiff, in joinder with the Verified Complaint filed herein by Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, which set forth in verified factual allegations that, GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK are directors of the FOUNDATION; that the Foundation has breached its fiduciary duty ; that certain of its directors have breached their fiduciary duties to the FOUNDATION and the PEOPLE; that the assets of the Foundation have been misused; that the assets of the Foundation are in jeopardy and danger; that certain directors have acted to cause the failure and closing of the FOUNDATION's charitable museum facilities here in Illinois; and that the Defendant FOUNDATION by and through the acts of certain of its directors was expending funds and planning to remove its assets from Illinois and was thereby using the charitable trust's funds to effect a divestment of the beneficial interest of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS in the trust assets held by FOUNDATION. Plaintiff-Intervenors, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, hereby adopt and incorporate herein by reference the verified facts stated by Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in their complaint.

12) The Defendant FOUNDATION has its principal place of corporate business located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois, and has at all times maintained its principal place of business within Cook County, Illinois, where it currently holds approximately $450 million of assets in trust for exclusively charitable purposes.

13) Defendant JUDITH TERRA is a Director of the FOUNDATION, and is the widow of Daniel Terra, one of the founding Trustees of the FOUNDATION. Defendant JUDITH TERRA is a resident of Washington D.C., and is a member of the FOUNDATION's Executive Committee.

14) Defendant PAUL HAYES TUCKER (hereinafter "TUCKER") is the Chairman and

President of the FOUNDATION, and is a resident of Massachusetts and is a member of the FOUNDATION's Executive Committee.

15) Defendant ALAN K. SIMPSON is a Director of the FOUNDATION and is a resident of Wyoming.

16) Defendant THEODORE STEBBINS is a Director of the FOUNDATION, and is a resident of Massachusetts and is the chair of the FOUNDATION's Independent Litigation Committee.

17) Defendants JUDITH TERRA, TUCKER, ALAN K. SIMPSON, and THEODORE STEBBINS are each a charitable "trustee" as that term is defined in Section 3 of the Trust Act, 760 ILCS 55/3 (1999), and by serving as Directors of the FOUNDATION, they have each become a trustee and fiduciary for the charitable assets held by the FOUNDATION.

18) As charitable trustees, Defendants JUDITH TERRA, TUCKER, ALAN K SIMPSON, THEODORE STEBBINS and the FOUNDATION each owe fiduciary duties to the charitable trust beneficiaries, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, to deal fairly, faithfully and loyally with the FOUNDATION assets, and to devote them to the proper charitable purposes without waste or self-dealing.

19) At all relevant times, there was in existence and effect an Illinois statute governing the holding of charitable assets in the State of Illinois, namely the Charitable Trust Act, 760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1999) (hereinafter the "Trust Act"), Section 15 of which Act recites fiduciary duties and responsibilities imposed upon persons collecting and holding assets for charitable purposes and states as follows:

> "Sec. 15. (a) Charitable trustees are subject to certain duties otherwise defined in Illinois statutes and case law, which include but are not limited to the following:
>
> (1) To avoid "self-dealing" and conflicts of interests;
>
> (2) To avoid wasting charitable assets;
> (3) To avoid incurring penalties, fines, and unnecessary taxes;
>
> (4) To adhere and conform the charitable organization to its charitable purpose;
> (5) To not make non-program loans, gifts, or advances to any person, except as allowed by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.];
>
> (6) To utilize the trust in conformity with its purposes for the best interest of the beneficiaries;
>
> (7) To timely file registration and financial reports required by this Act; and
> (8) To comply and to cause the charitable organization to comply with this Act and, if incorporated, the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 [805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq.]. (760 ILCS 55/15(a) (1999).)

:0) The Defendant FOUNDATION was incorporated by Daniel Terra, now deceased; James Terra, Daniel Terra's son; and Robert Sugrue. The FOUNDATION was established under the direction of Daniel Terra, a successful Chicago area businessman, and was established as a philanthropic endeavor supported by Daniel Terra and his first wife, with the intention to establish a museum to promote, display and educate the public in the Chicago area about early American art. The FOUNDATION's first board was comprised of Daniel Terra, James Terra, and Robert Sugrue.

21) The FOUNDATION was established in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act under its original name " Foundation For The Daniel J. Terra Museum", and upon creation it established a museum facility in Evanston, Illinois. From its initial founding it received substantial funding and its assets from charitable gifts made by Daniel Terra, for the expressed purpose of and with the intention of operating a public museum for American art in the Chicagoland area.

22) The FOUNDATION at its inception, then the "Foundation For The Daniel J. Terra Museum", was not only a museum in name, but its specific charitable activity, conduct and operation was the establishment and the development of a charitable museum facility which acted to preserve, promote and exhibit art works of early American art to Chicagoland area residents from its Evanston, Illinois location.

23) For many years after its founding Daniel Terra and those controlling the FOUNDATION caused the FOUNDATION's assets to be used to operate a museum within the Chicagoland area, first in Evanston and then in Chicago, with activities and programs that displayed, promoted the appreciation of, and educated the general public and school children in the Chicago land area about early American art.

24) In the early 1990's the FOUNDATION moved from Evanston, and bought a building in Chicago at 644 North Michigan Avenue, specifically for the purpose of operating at said location a public museum which would display early American art and serve to educate the public about said art.

25) At all times since the purchase of the Michigan Avenue property, the FOUNDATION has operated a public museum at that location called the Terra Museum of American Art.

26) In furtherance of the FOUNDATION's public museum purposes, Daniel Terra over the years contributed hundreds of millions of dollars to the FOUNDATION and the FOUNDATION purchased numerous works of art for use in the public Terra museum. Daniel Terra personally participated in selecting most of the FOUNDATION's art collection. Pursuant to Illinois law, because it was an exclusively charitable organization operating exclusively for the benefit of its charitable beneficiaries, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, the FOUNDATION was exempted from Illinois sale/use taxes and real estate taxes for all its purchases and operation of museum real estate over the years, and the FOUNDATION was benefitted directly by said special laws enacted in Illinois to benefit Illinois charities.

27) Daniel Terra died in June 1996, but while alive he dominated the direction and control of the FOUNDATION and he controlled its development of a museum facility within Illinois, and it was Daniel J Terra's express desire and intent when he made donations of millions of dollars to the FOUNDATION that it operate a public museum in and serving the Chicagoland area. In fact, during the entire period the FOUNDATION was under the direction and control of Daniel Terra, the Defendant FOUNDATION did operate a public museum promoting early American art in the Chicagoland area.

28) During his lifetime Daniel Terra stated that the FOUNDATION was established here in Chicagoland to bring a public museum to Chicago to develop an appreciation for early American art, and he and the Defendant FOUNDATION over the years from its inception represented to the public that it was a public museum here in Cook County, Illinois dedicated to enhancing art appreciation and education for the citizens of Illinois, and in response to and reliance on the representations so made, Illinois businesses and citizens have donated substantial sums in contributions and membership dues to the FOUNDATION to specifically support the operation of the FOUNDATION's museum here in the Chicagoland area.

29) From the time of its inception, the FOUNDATION has had as its central and core purpose the establishment of an art museum in the Chicagoland area, specializing in bringing American art to the area's public and the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS. It was Daniel Terra's expressed intent at the time of making gifts to the FOUNDATION that it hold such in trust to provide a Museum in the Chicago area that would exhibit collections of American art and educate the public on American art. Further, both Daniel Terra and the Defendant FOUNDATION, by and through the actions of Daniel Terra, publicly stated that the FOUNDATION was committed to building and operating a world class art museum in the Chicagoland area and in fact by actions the FOUNDATION represented its purposes as a Chicago area museum.

30) The FOUNDATION in addition to being a charitable trustee is an Illinois not for profit corporation, and under and pursuant to its by-laws :

a) Is generally governed by a board of directors, each of whom is elected to serve a term of one year and is chosen and elected by the sitting directors in office at the time of election;

b) The board of directors is the group of persons responsible for the general acts of the FOUNDATION;

c) The authority of a director of the FOUNDATION is to serve as part of the body of directors, making decisions for the FOUNDATION as a body, the Board controls overall direction of the FOUNDATION;

d) Individual directors, in their capacity as directors, have no authority or right to become involved in operational affairs of the FOUNDATION, by and through their individual acts, but rather act and have authority only as a participant in the body of the Board. unless given expressed delegated authority by the Board;

e) Day to day operational affairs of the FOUNDATION are controlled by the FOUNDATION's president, who is charged to carry-out the Board's decisions;

f) The president of the FOUNDATION is the person responsible for operating the day to day affairs of the FOUNDATION, its museums and its activities, under the direction set by the Board; and

g) The Board of directors is charged with the responsibility of choosing and installing and insuring that a corporate president is in place at the FOUNDATION and the Board has the responsibility to engage in oversight and insure that the president is properly managing the FOUNDATION's affairs.

31) From the time of the FOUNDATION's inception through Daniel Terra's death on June 28, 1996, the FOUNDATION was controlled by a small board of directors of no more than six, whose members were substantially influenced by Daniel Terra..

32) Subsequent to Daniel Terra's death, the Board of Directors of the FOUNDATION has substantially changed. The FOUNDATION currently has eleven directors who include JUDITH TERRA, RONALD GIDWITZ, DEAN BUNTROCK, TUCKER, ALAN L. SIMPSON, THEODORE STEBBINS, Margaret Daley, Arthur A. Hartman, Helene Ahrweiler, Jacques Andreani, and Stephanie Marshall. Many of these current directors have served less than three years. Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "B" is a schedule showing the names of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation from 1993 through the present and indicating the time each director has served on the Board.

33) Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK are current directors of the FOUNDATION who have alleged and verified in their Complaint filed in this action that certain and several directors of the board of directors of the FOUNDATION, including Defendants JUDITH TERRA, TUCKER, and ALAN L. SIMPSON, have engaged and are engaging in actions ultra vires and actions against the interest and charitable purposes of the FOUNDATION.

34) The Defendant FOUNDATION by and through certain of its officers and directors, including the actions of Defendant TUCKER, has acted during the year 1999 and 2000 to engage in the following

a) Attempting to, effect and cause the closing of the FOUNDATION's Terra Museum operations in Illinois, contrary to the intent and long-standing promise and representations made by the FOUNDATION and its founder Daniel Terra to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS and donating public, which representations were made to the donors to the FOUNDATION that the FOUNDATION would be an institution and charitable trust operating an American art museum for the public here in Illinois;

b) Attempting to effect and cause the FOUNDATION to move from the State of Illinois, and/or to substantially remove the Terra museum from Illinois and place the FOUNDATION's assets outside of Illinois for the benefit of beneficiaries other than the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, and specifically has acted to expend and waste substantial charitable funds of the FOUNDATION to explore moving the FOUNDATION and its assets outside of Illinois to Washington DC or to another state or outside the United States, and thereby has attempted to disenfranchise and divest the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS of their vested beneficial interest in the charitable trust estate held by Defendant FOUNDATION;

c) Attempting to effect and cause the closing of the FOUNDATION's operations in Illinois contrary to the terms of endowed restricted gift provisions of Daniel Terra, and to effect a use of assets contrary to the use Daniel Terra intended in restricted gifts he made to the FOUNDATION and contrary to the representations made to donors to the FOUNDATION;

d) Grossly mismanaging Terra Museum and undermined operations at the Illinois museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including most key persons responsible for the Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success, thereby adversely effecting its ability to provide sufficient and proper FOUNDATION mission/program services;

e) Permitted and allowed the gross mismanagement of the museum to undermine the confidence of the remaining staff and caused the primary individuals in charge of security, curatorial care, and collection management at Terra Museum to quit or be terminated, causing the museum to be understaffed and a new unfamiliar staff to be in charge of security, curatorial care, and collection management, all of which jeopardizes the security of the $170 million of art displayed and collected at Terra Museum and which has prevented the FOUNDATION from being able to perform its programs effectively and has resulted in a gap in long-term staff planning and operations, creating a false appearance that the Chicago museum programs are not effective ;

f) Permitted, and failed, after being informed of such to prevent, Defendant THEODORE STEBBINS from acting to obtain, by virtue of his position as a director of the Foundation, confidential Terra Foundation art auction acquisition information during the same period in which he was an employee of another competing museum responsible for directing the acquisition of American art for that museum; and further permitted (and failing after being informed of such to prevent) THEODORE STEBBINS sharing such confidential Terra curatorial auction acquisition plans with the staff of that competing museum and thus breaching the confidential nature of the Terra's curatorial acquisition planning by using his role as a director to interject himself at the art auctions and cause the Terra art director/curators to discuss Terra auction plans with or in the presence of agents of other competing potential collectors at the auctions, all of which has endangered the assets of the FOUNDATION and/or subjected the FOUNDATION to potential additional costs of acquiring works of art above and beyond what it should have faced;

g) Expending significant monies on purchases of art without obtaining requisite professional and impartial advice, as well as failing to have any comprehensive plan in handling and acquiring art or obtaining the approval of an informed Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art handling and acquisition, and specifically, engaged in discussions of moving the entire museum and collection to be placed with a partnering museum, which as a matter of practicality and reality would mean that its art collection would then be subject to modification and change in consultation with its new partner, the Defendants caused the FOUNDATION to purchase a $ 4 million painting in mid-2000 which required the FOUNDATION to obtain a bank loan of $ 4 million and the incurrance of interest expense to purchase same, and the defendants have caused during 2000 the FOUNDATION to sell many of its works of art collected by the founder Daniel Terra, and the FOUNDATION after losing its Giverney based curator in the fall of 2000, in December 2000 terminated its remaining art director/curator John Neff, who had been with the FOUNDATION for several years, thus leaving the FOUNDATION with no curator; all done while the use of the collection and or its merger with other institutions was under discussion, showing that there was no overall or comprehensive planning in the handling of the millions of dollars of art in this collection.

h) Attempting to invade endowment funds restricted to public art educational purposes for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

i) Bypassing the lawful authority of the Board and the Executive Committee in strategic decision making for the Chicago museum by engaging agents to discuss and plan to relocate the Chicago museum to Washington D.C., not only contrary to charitable trust law but without full disclosure and participation by the Board..

j) Wastefully incurring excessive legal fees by retaining duplicative counsel to re-investigate and review the same matters which had already been reviewed and otherwise incurring unnecessary legal expense, allowing excessive travel expenses for directors, and using FOUNDATION funds to hire a public relations firm for promotion of the directors;

k) Replaced the Terra Foundation's long-standing counsel after statements were made at a Board meeting that Defendant director Judith Terra needed to be protected from said counsel, when in fact that counsel had previously on behalf of the Daniel Terra estate opposed Judith Terra's claims of $43 million made against Daniel Terra's estate which estate was otherwise bequeathed to the FOUNDATION, and which $43 million in claims was settled for $ 1 million from that estate which $ 1 million otherwise would have been paid to the FOUNDATION.

l) Misusing the art collection of Terra Foundation by allowing Judith Terra to personally take, possess and use museum art items in her home and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy, and which was an act of self dealing by an interest person contrary to the Internal Revenue Code and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act which adopts said prohibited code sections as part of said

Act, and which impermissible personal use of said FOUNDATION's art in the 1980's had previously been the subject of an investigation of the FOUNDATION by the Illinois Attorney General; and

m) Operating the FOUNDATION without a full-time corporate president and/or sufficient corporate oversight.

35) The several Defendants JUDITH TERRA, TUCKER, SIMPSON, and STEBBINS have acted as aforesaid and/or have caused or otherwise permitted or acted to cause the FOUNDATION to act as aforesaid, and said Defendant directors have by such engaged in actions ultra vires and against the interest and charitable trust purposes of the FOUNDATION, and said Directors have by such acted or permitted the foregoing wrongful actions of the FOUNDATION, said defendant directors having done as part of a plan to close the FOUNDATION and its museum in Illinois, to move the FOUNDATION from Illinois to Washington D C. or other non-Illinois location, and to obtain for certain of themselves positions and/or recognition in a Washington D.C. charitable organization or other non-Illinois entity in exchange for the delivery of the assets of the FOUNDATION. Said plan to move the FOUNDATION has not been undertaken in the best interest of the FOUNDATION and the PEOPLE, but rather where the best terms or advantages for certain of the individual Defendant directors could be obtained.

36) The allegations set forth in Plaintiff GIDWITZ's and Plaintiff BUNTROCK's Verified Complaint, and incorporated herein by reference, and those allegations set forth above, show that the Defendant members of the Board of Directors of the FOUNDATION have been acting towards, or have been otherwise distracted by, matters of self-interest and have ignored and/or have permitted the Terra Museum in Chicago to lose its key staff and to jeopardize its charitable purposes and to place the assets of the organization in jeopardy without proper security and administration for the collection and without sufficient historical institutional knowledge to ensure that the assets are accounted for and safe.

37) The FOUNDATION through the actions of the individual Defendant directors, has chosen to spend funds wastefully to duplicate a review of legal services to see if it can find wrongdoing by the former counsel who acted to defend the Estate of Daniel Terra against the claims of Defendant JUDITH TERRA. Individual Defendant directors have caused the Defendant FOUNDATION to spend $300,000 on public relations costs to promote the Defendants in this action. Individual Defendant directors have caused the termination of Mr. Neff, a long-time employee curator at the end of December 2000, at a time when long-term staff were in short supply at the FOUNDATION, and have replaced him with a $1,000 a day, parttime curator, who is new to the FOUNDATION and lives in New York and who is also paid reimbursement for her travel and lodging to go to the museum facilities in Chicago, Illinois and Giverny, France owned by the FOUNDATION Additionally, the Defendant directors have also caused the Foundation to spend considerable time and FOUNDATION funds to plan, and to hire attorneys and others to discuss and plan a move of the FOUNDATION's Chicago museum elsewhere, yet the several I Defendant Directors now after suit was filed claim that they have no plans to move.

38) Despite the pressing and troubling administrative issues for the FOUNDATION as set forth above, and despite the fact that the FOUNDATION president is the person who must operate and control the FOUNDATION's affairs day to day, the FOUNDATION and specifically the Defendant directors acted to install and maintain Defendant TUCKER as a part-time president for the FOUNDATION, knowing that Defendant TUCKER also has a full time position in Boston, Massachusetts and can only devote a limited amount of time to the FOUNDATION, and despite the many administrative problems, failures and issues facing the FOUNDATION as aforesaid, the Defendant directors have grossly mismanaged the FOUNDATION by failing to assure proper management of its affairs and by failing to appoint a full-time president to serve as chief executive officer of the FOUNDATION.

39) Shortly after the creation of the FOUNDATION in 1978 as aforesaid, Daniel Terra's first wife, Adeline, died. Daniel Terra subsequently married Defendant JUDITH TERRA on June 28, 1986.

40) In a Antenuptial Agreement signed by Defendant JUDITH TERRA prior to her marriage to Daniel Terra, JUDITH TERRA acknowledged that she fully understood that the bulk of Daniel Terra's estate would upon his death go to the FOUNDATION, and she unequivocally promised that after his death she would not seek any assets of his Estate other than those given to her under the said Antenuptial Agreement. (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "C" is a copy of the said Antenuptial Agreement entered into between Daniel Terra and Defendant JUDITH TERRA..)

41) Under the aforesaid Antenuptial Agreement, Defendant JUDITH TERRA agreed she would receive only a fixed amount of money and assets upon Daniel Terra's death, and that the bulk of his estate would go to the FOUNDATION The said Antenuptial Agreement provided that if the parties remained married, JUDITH TERRA would receive $1.5 million from Daniel Terra's Estate if he died prior to the 5th anniversary date of their marriage, or $ 3 million if his death was between the 5th and 10th date of their marriage; or $4.5 million if his death occurred after the 10th anniversary date of their marriage. (See Exhibit "C", Antenuptial Agreement at page 6.)

42) Several days prior to his death on June 28, 1996, Daniel Terra was confined to a hospital, his life being sustained by the use of life-supporting devices. On June 28, 1996, the tenth anniversary date of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, the life-supporting devices employed to keep Daniel Terra alive were ceased. Technically Daniel Terra lived past the tenth anniversary of his marriage to JUDITH TERRA, and Defendant JUDITH TERRA sought and received from Daniel Terra's Estate $4.5 million pursuant to the terms of the aforesaid Antenuptial Agreement.

43) In November-December 1996, Defendant JUDITH TERRA, while a director of the FOUNDATION filed four claims against Daniel Terra's Estate despite and in violation of the express terms of her Antenuptial Agreement with Daniel Terra.

44) JUDITH TERRA asserted in her claims that Daniel Terra had breached certain promises to her and she sought by said claims certain art work and cash in excess of $43 million from his Estate.

45) The assets sought by Defendant JUDITH TERRA were art works and funds otherwise bequeathed to the FOUNDATION and would otherwise pass as a bequest to the FOUNDATION.

46) James Terra, Daniel Terra's son, and a founding Director of the FOUNDATION, was named as the Executor of the Daniel Terra Estate, and as executor was represented by Bell, Boyd & Lloyd. In that capacity both James Terra and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd denied JUDITH TERRA's claims against the Estate and defended and litigated against her $43 million in claims, asserting that none of her claims had any merit.

47) At the time said claims were filed, James Terra was a Director of the FOUNDATION, and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd was the FOUNDATION's regular corporate counsel and had been so for many years prior while Daniel Terra was living.

48) At Daniel Terra's date of death his estate was valued in excess of $450 million, but in early 1997 the Estate's holdings in Mercury Finance Co. lost most of their value and the Terra Estate suffered a devaluation in excess of $150 million. The Estate also owed in excess of $90 million in bank debts which the lenders were uncertain of extension of credit given the stock devaluation By filing her claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra, JUDITH TERRA created a substantial risk, causing certain lenders to threaten to foreclose upon the Estate and thus, by her actions; JUDITH TERRA endangered the economic value and stability of both the estate and the bequest therein to the FOUNDATION.

49) JUDITH TERRA's claims themselves were without merit, but because of the financial pressures of the combined bank debt of the Estate and JUDITH TERRA's claims, the Daniel Terra Estate was compelled to settle and pay $1 million to JUDITH TERRA to resolve her $43 million in claims against the Estate.

50) The Estate funds paid to JUDITH TERRA of $1 million paid to settle her $43 million on claims against the Estate would otherwise have passed to the FOUNDATION

51) JUDITH TERRA's actions in filing $43 million in claims against her husband's Estate were against the interest of the FOUNDATION, while at all times JUDITH TERRA, from the time of first asserting said claims against the Estate to obtaining the settlement, remained a director of the FOUNDATION, and although she purportedly took a leave of absence for a portion of the time her claims against the Estate were pending, she was not on such leave for the entire period, and was active throughout in negotiating and trying to compel the Estate to turn over Estate assets to settlement of her claims

52) The law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd opposed and acted to defeat JUDITH TERRA's attempt to move the Estate from Illinois. With the help of the several Defendant directors herein, JUDITH TERRA acted to cause the FOUNDATION to terminate the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd as counsel to the FOUNDATION after 20 years of service to the FOUNDATION and, upon information and belief, as retribution for defeating her personal claims against the Daniel Terra Estate.

53) The final accounting of the Daniel Terra Estate has been presented by James Terra and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd and it has been reviewed and approved by the FOUNDATION's special counsel Mayer, Brown & Platt and the Illinois Attorney General's Office, both of whom participated in the many aspects of the estate matters. Despite Mayer, Brown & Platt's review and approval of such, the FOUNDATION without an articulated reason has undertaken to hire yet another set of attorneys to review the actions of the executor, James Terra, and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd, relative to the Daniel Terra Estate. The FOUNDATION is bearing the cost of such in the tens of thousands of dollars, including an additional review of the Estate's handling of Mercury Finance Co. stock holdings, after such was once reviewed and approved by Mayer, Brown & Platt, as special additional counsel for that very review and purpose, and despite the fact that the FOUNDATION itself had sold hundreds of millions of dollars of Mercury Finance Co. stock in the several years prior to Daniel Terra's death, and further, despite the fact that the FOUNDATION had a substantial holding in Mercury Finance Co. stock at the time of the devaluation and itself lost over $50 million on devalued Mercury Finance Co. stock.

54) The FOUNDATION is bearing the costs of this further review by additional law firms and such is a further waste of charitable funds.

55) Upon information and belief, the aforesaid termination of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd and hiring additional counsel to conduct a duplicative review of the actions of James Terra and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd were done at the behest of the Defendants out of retaliation for the adverse position James Terra and Bell, Boyd & Lloyd took against Defendant JUDITH TERRA in the aforesaid litigation of the $43 million in claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra, and as such constitutes a waste of charitable assets and a gross breach of fiduciary duty in assisting in using the FOUNDATION's assets for the personal purposes of JUDITH TERRA.

56) In addition to the foregoing, based on the verified factual allegations set forth in Director GIDWITZ's and Director BUNTROCK's Verified Complaint and incorporated herein by reference as though fully set forth herein, Defendant JUDITH TERRA with the aid of Defendant TUCKER has caused works of art of the FOUNDATION to be brought to her home for display, over the objection of museum staff and contrary to all reasonable museum and corporate practices, and such being done for self dealing and personal self-aggrandizement of JUDITH TERRA.

57) Defendant JUDITH TERRA caused FOUNDATION art work to be displayed in her private residence with full knowledge that the FOUNDATION had previously been subject to IRS and Attorney General investigation for allowing its works of art to be displayed in the marital home of Daniel and JUDITH TERRA in the past.

58) Furthermore, Defendant JUDITH TERRA has engaged in discussions with Defendant Director TUCKER and the other Defendant directors to cause and have the FOUNDATION close the Terra Museum in Chicago and move its operation to Washington D.C., where JUDITH TERRA resides, and /or to cause the FOUNDATION to merge with another institution in Washington D.C., which intended acts are contrary to Daniel Terra's intent and the charitable trust purposes of the FOUNDATION to maintain a museum in Chicago for the benefit of its beneficiaries the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

59) Upon information and belief, in seeking to place the FOUNDATION's art collection outside of Illinois and at another museum Defendant JUDITH TERRA and certain of the other Defendant directors have sought director positions on other insututions' boards of directors.

60) Defendant TUCKER has sent the attached "A Vision for The Future" white paper to the FOUNDATION's Board of Directors, a copy of which is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "D", which contains his vision for the future of the FOUNDATION. Defendant TUCKER's vision is not that of Daniel Terra nor is it in keeping with the charitable trust purposes of the FOUNDATION, nor does it support the vested interest of the FOUNDATION's ultimate beneficiaries the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

61) Defendant TUCKER's vision statement shows he seeks to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and to move the FOUNDATION and its art collection to Washington D.C., give its collections to the National Gallery of Art in Washington D.C. and set up an educational facility in Washington D.C., or, as Plaintiffs GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK state in their Verified Complaint, Defendants TUCKER and JUDITH TERRA seek to merge the FOUNDATION into the "Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington", all of which serve to remove the charitable trust held by FOUNDATION from the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS.

62) The FOUNDATION's Board of Directors met on August 24, 2000 and at that meeting Defendant TUCKER made remarks suggesting that the FOUNDATION move to Washington D.C. and close down the Terra Museum in Chicago. At said meeting it was revealed that lawyers had been hired to consider moving the FOUNDATION from Illinois and that plans had been drafted to effect and move the FOUNDATION from Illinois. A copy of the August 24, 2000 FOUNDATION's Board meeting minutes is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "E".

63) Defendant TUCKER is the Chairman and President of the FOUNDATION, and is responsible for its operations, yet he has allowed and/or caused the FOUNDATION's staff to be depleted of long-term staff, has allowed and/or caused the FOUNDATION's long-term security personnel to quit, has allowed and/or caused its executive director to quit, and according to the verified allegations of Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, incorporated in this Complaint, Defendant TUCKER has directed that art belonging to the FOUNDATION be delivered from France to Defendant JUDITH TERRA's home, and has permitted Defendant STEBBINS to interfere with the confidential curator auction activities of the FOUNDATION as aforesaid and to gain confidential information thereon and share it with competitors while in his position with another museum which conflicted with his duty of loyalty to the FOUNDATION and placed him in a conflict of interest. Furthermore, Defendant TUCKER has held the office of FOUNDATION president knowing that in that position he is responsible for the day to day management of the FOUNDATION, its many staff, programs and two museums in different cities on different continents, despite the fact that he works full time as a professor in Boston, Massachusetts, and is unable to attend to the many and varied duties as president of the FOUNDATION

64) While unable to discharge his duties and obligations as FOUNDATION president as aforesaid, Defendant TUCKER, who has been with the FOUNDATION less than three years hired New York legal counsel, Ralph Lerner, and directed him to cause the expenditure of time, resources and funds of the FOUNDATION on efforts to move the Chicago museum to Washington D.C. and /or otherwise from Illinois.

65) Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in their Verified Complaint state, and the PEOPLE adopt their allegations herein, that Defendant JUDITH TERRA set upon a course of conduct and convinced other directors to join her in her efforts to promote her self interests, close the Terra Museum in Chicago, and move the FOUNDATION to Washington D.C. where she lives to effect her own personal interests, and in addition, upon information and belief, the FOUNDATION's Board acted to punish those who had opposed her acts of self-interest including her claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra.

66) As related by directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in their verified statements, Defendant SIMPSON announced when he joined the FOUNDATION Board of Directors at his first meeting in October 1999 that he was there only "to protect JUDITH TERRA." As a consequence, Defendant SIMPSON, by his own admission was not on the FOUNDATION's board to discharge his directors duties and did not demonstrate the requisite loyalty to the Trust beneficiaries which is required of a Director and fiduciary of the FOUNDATION. A copy of the Board minutes of October 1999 are attached hereto in relevant part as Exhibit H and incorporated herein by reference.

67) Defendant SIMPSON's comment to the Board is significant in light of the fact that Defendant SIMPSON joined the Board of the FOUNDATION in fiscal year end 1999, at the recommendation of JUDITH TERRA, at a time years after JUDITH TERRA's claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra had been settled. Thereafter JUDITH TERRA's desire was to assume control over the FOUNDATION's assets and eliminate from the FOUNDATION those who had opposed her claims including the law firm of Bell, Boyd and Lloyd. At the FOUNDATION Board meeting of October 1999 Defendant SIMPSON attending his first meeting accused counsel for Bell, Boyd & Lloyd of working against JUDITH TERRA, and thereafter the Defendants caused the FOUNDATION to discharge Bell, Boyd & Lloyd and hire new counsel. At that time the only interest of JUDITH TERRA to protect was her personal need to seek revenge upon those who had opposed her claims against the Estate of Daniel Terra.

68) Defendant STEBBINS engaged in conflicts of interest and breaches of fiduciary duty, which compromised confidential information of the Terra Museum and which were contrary to the Museum's interest and to the established code of ethics for the Association of Art Museums.

69) Defendant STEBBINS was a paid employee of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston (MFA), and served as the curator for its collection of American Art during the years 1998 until some time in 2000, and in such capacity, he provided advice about acquisition of American art to the MFA, and in that regard he owed the MFA a duty of absolute loyalty.

70) During 1999 Defendant STEBBINS, by his position on the FOUNDATION's board, obtained confidential information about the Terra acquisition strategy to be applied at various art auctions where the FOUNDATION's curators/art directors planned to bid for and attempt to purchase art for the collection, and in this regard Defendant STEBBINS obtained confidential information about the Terra Museum's art acquisition priorities.

71) Defendant STEBBINS owed a duty of absolute loyalty to the FOUNDATION and, while he was an MFA employee with obligations to the MFA to assist it in acquiring the same type of art, he knowingly placed and injected himself in a position and at places wherein his duty to the MFA conflicted directly with his duty of loyalty to the FOUNDATION and whereby, using his position as a director of the FOUNDATION, he acquired detailed knowledge of the FOUNDATION's acquisition plans and required the FOUNDATION curators to share confidential information with him.

72) Defendant STEBBINS shared the confidential acquisition plans of the FOUNDATION which he thus acquired with at least one other MFA employee, a Mr. Jim Wright, who was head of Painting Conservation at the MFA.

73) At art auctions Defendant STEBBINS injected himself into the activities of the FOUNDATION's curators, engaging in discussions of art in the presence of outsiders and otherwise jeopardizing the confidentiality of the intentions of the FOUNDATION's staff.

74) Defendant STEBBINS also shared his art expertise and knowledge and advice on American art with friends and others despite his duties of loyalty to the FOUNDATION, which duties included a duty to respect and preserve its confidences.

75) The "Association of Art Museum Directors", Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums, a copy of which is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "G", provides in pertinent part that:

a) The Director and Curator are to identify acquisitions and no object may be considered for acquisition without the recommendation of the Director (#15);

b) Private collecting by the Director, staff, or other person employed or closely connected with the Museum is appropriate. However, no collecting can be tolerated if, in fact or appearance, it conflicts with the interest of the Museum and its collecting programs. The Museum always must be given the first opportunity to purchase any work of art,. (#25);

c) The Director is to reach a clear understanding of the policies as approved by the Board. The Director must be the one individual answerable to the Board for carrying out and conforming the policy (#61); and

d) It is reasonable for the Director to expect the full support of the Board. Every effort should be made to resolve differences (#63).

76) The ethics code for "Appraisal Pracuce ", a copy of which is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "H", provides: "Where two or more potential clients seek an appraiser's service with respect to the same property. . the appraiser may not properly serve more than one, except with the consent of all parties."

77) The art acquisition plan of the Terra Museum, regarding its acquisition strategy at auction for specific pieces of art and price ranges constitutes important and confidential proprietary information and the directors of the FOUNDATION have a fiduciary obligation to assure that the strategy remains confidential and not revealed to outsiders or otherwise compromised. Members of the board of Directors can not share it with outsiders much less a competitor.

78) Upon information and belief, Mr. Neff, the Director and Curator of the Terra Museum's art here in Chicago, made Defendant STEBBINS' aforesaid actions and conflict of interest known to both Defendant JUDITH TERRA and Defendant TUCKER, and in fact Mr. Neff shared written memos with Defendant TUCKER, but no one took action to prevent the compromise of confidential FOUNDATION information as aforesaid until this lawsuit herein was filed.

79) The FOUNDATION's confidential art acquisition information has not only been compromised but some of the FOUNDATION acquisition activities appear to be suspect, as the Terra's minutes of October 1999 disclose. Said minutes relate a discussion about seeking to acquire a particular painting through an art dealer, Michael Altman & Co. Inc., and reflect that although the original asking price of the painting was $35,000, the dealer, Altman, claimed to have received a $75,000 offer, and that the Terra committee decided to authorize a bid of $50,000 for the painting. The minutes fail to explain why a lesser bid of $50,000 would be made with a pending offer to purchase standing at $75,000. A copy of the October 1999 Board minutes is attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "H".

80) Defendant STEBBINS is now the Curator for the Fogg Museum of Art in Cambridge, Massachusetts, with direction to purchase early American art for the Fogg, and thus he has the same conflict of interest with the FOUNDATION through his role at the Fogg as he did during his employment with the MFA.

81) Daniel Terra established the Terra Museum in the Chicago area and supported and funded the Chicago operation without interruption from its inception through the date of his death in 1996 and in this way and in other ways expressed his charitable intent to benefit the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS. There is no doubt that the other donors over the years relied upon the institutional nature of the FOUNDATION as an Illinois-based public museum, relying and expecting said museum to remain a Chicago, Illinois institution, because the unique nature of a museum's charitable mission is tied to the location where it is established. Further, it is the type of charitable activity whose location and service area are an integral part of its charitable purpose and mission, which here is clearly to serve the Chicagoland area. (Attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as Exhibit "I" is the 1994 list of donors who have contributed to the FOUNDATION.)

82) The removal of the FOUNDATION and its assets to a location outside of Illinois is not permitted at common law or in equity because to do so would place the subject trust outside of the jurisdiction of Illinois and divest the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS of their common law beneficial interest in said trust. The PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS have no right to the beneficial interest of a charitable trust outside its jurisdiction and moving a trust to another jurisdiction would work an impermissibly divestiture of their beneficial rights.

83) The removal of the FOUNDATION and its assets to Washington D.C., Boston or anywhere outside of Illinois under the unique elements and consequences of the making of a charitable trust under common law would have the effect of divesting the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS of their beneficial interest, and at common law there is no right or provision that permits a trustee of a charitable trust to act to divest or change the identity of the charitable trust's beneficiary.

84) The Defendant FOUNDATION is a charitable trustee under the common law and its sole and exclusive beneficiaries are the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS. Under the common law the charitable trustee has no right to divest or alter the beneficial ownership of a charitable trust and the Defendants are without legal power or right to divest, move or alter the beneficial ownership of the assets held in trust by the Defendant FOUNDATION, and Defendants are without legal right to seek to move the FOUNDATION from Illinois.

85) The actions of Defendant FOUNDATION and the Defendant Directors in seeking to remove the FOUNDATION from Illinois are acts in breach of their trust and an attempt to unlawfully and without authority divest the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS of their beneficial rights and interests in said charitable trust.

86) Section 16(b) of the Trust Act provides:

"Sec. 16 (b) Upon application to a court of competent jurisdiction, in which the Attorney General alleges that a charitable trust needs to be protected or the trustees of a charitable organization or trust have engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty toward the organization, and he seeks injunctive relief and removal of such trustees, the Court may, as part of the injunctive relief, and after a hearing where such trustees shall have an opportunity to be heard, appoint temporarily or permanently a receiver or additional trustees to protect and operate the organization and may temporarily, or as ultimate relief for breach of duty or to protect the trust, permanently remove any charitable organization's trustees, corporate officers, directors and members from office and appoint replacements to protect the public interest." (760 ILCS 55/16(b) (1999))

87) As alleged by Directors GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK, the Defendants opposed the election and actions of GIDWITZ and BUNTROCK in order to further their improper actions as aforesaid and insulate them from criticism from within the FOUNDATION's Board.

88) By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of the FOUNDATION, Defendants JUDITH TERRA, SIMPSON, STEBBINS and TUCKER owed fiduciary duties to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS to act in the best interest of the PEOPLE by furthering the FOUNDATION's charitable purpose, not in their own self-interest, and they were bound to fulfill the museum mission started by Daniel Terra and the FOUNDATION more than twenty years ago in and for the benefit of the Chicagoland area which was supported and funded by him without interruption through his death in 1996.

89) The Defendants, by the foregoing alleged actions, breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was detrimental to the interest of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, who are the ultimate beneficiaries of this Trust and of each and every charitable trust within the State of Illinois.

90) As aforesaid, improper conduct here included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago and creating the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

b Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer the art to some other location outside of Illinois, and doing such to further private personal goals;

16di-001185

c. Attempting to remove employees, agents and directors of the Museum who opposed self-interested acts, in order to enable and effect the Defendants' plan of moving or transferring the Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois contrary to Illinois law; and

d. Endangering the charitable status and assets of the TERRA FOUNDATION.

e. Expending substantial FOUNDATION funds to attempt to move the FOUNDATION and close the museum in Chicago.

91) The aforesaid establishes that the FOUNDATION is a charitable trust in jeopardy without proper accounting safeguards or appropriate personnel or a full-time chief executive officer in place, its long-term institutional employees having resigned or been fired, and its individual defendant Board members being more interested in their own vision, self-interest, and/or personal goals of promoting their status in society than in properly safeguarding the FOUNDATION's charitable mission. A small group of Directors, attorneys, and staff and former staff who were loyal to the charitable trust purposes of the FOUNDATION have been subjected to retaliation, removal or neutralization by the acts of the Defendants as aforesaid.

92) A charitable trust formed in Illinois is a precious gift that belongs to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, and is not the property of those persons acting as its stewards, trustees, directors or officers. The Defendant Directors here are not the founders of this FOUNDATION and are not substantial contributors to said FOUNDATION, and each of the Defendant Directors are relatively new to service with the FOUNDATION and, as aforesaid, they have acted against the best interest of the FOUNDATION and the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS and are endangering the trust's assets, and the removal of the Defendant Directors under these circumstances is required to protect the safety and integrity of this charitable trust.

93) The totality of the equities here show that removal of individual defendant directors and installation of new fiduciaries are needed here to protect this trust from the self-interest and improper actions of the aforesaid Defendant Board members of the FOUNDATION.

94) An immediate, interim and permanent receiver is needed to take swift action to secure the assets and conduct an accounting to determine if assets are missing or if have been misused.

95) To protect this charitable trust as aforesaid, the removal of the Defendant Directors and permanent appointment and addition of seven to nine additional board members is needed, to effect, install, and provide the necessary impartial stewardship that an institution such as the FOUNDATION requires, and which the current Board under the aforesaid circumstances cannot provide as aforesaid.

96) By way of the foregoing, Defendants have breached their fiduciary duties to the Plaintiff PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, and as a consequence, the PEOPLE's beneficial interest and the purposes of the FOUNDATION are in need of protection from Defendants, and malice is the gist of this action and an accounting is necessary.

97) The foregoing breaches of fiduciary duty have caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to the FOUNDATION, and irreparable harm to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS as the beneficiaries of Illinois charitable truss, for which no remedy at law is sufficient.

98) Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS for the benefit of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS and as a charitable trust;

(2) The intent of Daniel Terra in creating the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS and that he and others who have donated to the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS intended and relied on the fact that the Museum would remain in the Chicagoland area;

(3) Defendants have no authority to close Terra Museum in Chicago or transfer the museum or its art or the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois, as such is a charitable trust which is for the benefit of and subject to remaining within the jurisdiction of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to any location outside of Illinois would violate the charitable trust established by the creation and operation of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS to date , the intent of Daniel Terra, the common law, the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995));

(5) Defendants, the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, JUDITH TERRA, ALAN K. SIMPSON, THEODORE STEBBINS and PAUL HAYES TUCKER, have each breached their fiduciary duty to the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS as the beneficiaries of TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, and the TERRA

FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS needs to be protected;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS and the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS as the beneficiaries of TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS if Defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties and permitted to remain in control of the subject TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS; and

(7) The Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duty, and the equities require that the Court exercise supervisory authority over the charitable trust at issue here and appoint receivers and additional fiduciaries and directors to protect the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS;

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining each and every Defendant from the following:

(1) Holding any further meetings of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' Board of Directors, until a new and impartial Board is constituted by this Court;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment or governing instruments;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or to move TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois;

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS; and

(5) Transferring, moving, disbursing, selling, encumbering, or exchanging any assets of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS;

C. The appointment of a receiver to operate and maintain TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS pursuant to the Court's equitable powers, the common law, the Charitable Trust Act, and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995));

D. The appointment of a receiver to conduct an accounting of all assets of the Terra Museum and TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS and to determine and locate all assets of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS;

E Entry of an Order removing Defendants JUDITH TERRA, ALAN K. SIMPSON, THEODORE STEBBINS and PAUL HAYES TUCKER as directors and officers of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, and removing such other Directors as the equities require and as proves necessary to protect the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS;

F The appointment and addition to the Board of Directors of the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS of at least nine additional Directors to protect said FOUNDATION to effect the necessary stewardship and fiduciary oversight; and

G. Such additional relief as the Court deems just and equitable herein.

Respectfully submitted,

Dear Mr. Hilliard:

Thank you for your letter of March 30, 2001. We are pleased to learn that the next – and, we hope, final- mediation session will be rescheduled for a time convenient to all. Equally, we are glad to know that the Attorney General or his representative will attend.

We are enclosing a settlement proposal. It is one we have discussed with a few members of the Foundation board; we believe that many members might approve it, although of course we cannot speak for the board. As you will see, it follows the outline of the proposal you sent us, which was dated 3-21-01.

We believe that the board would like to have the mediation result in success, as significant costs will surely result from going back to court. We are confident that the foundation would prevail in the end. Nonetheless, in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago. This alone should end the lawsuit. We are willing to make other concessions as well, as you will see. However, the board has, we believe, a fiduciary duty not to give away the foundation's major assets, including the endowment funds, real estate, and the art collection. Similarly, while we would like the Attorney General and the plaintiffs to be as comfortable as possible with the board nomination and election process, it would set an unacceptable precedent for the board to give over control of this process to non-members, no matter how estimable. Finally, it would seem entirely unreasonable for the foundation to bear the cost of the plaintiffs' unduly harsh, personalized, money-wasting suit; they could have sought the same end through a suit strictly on the merits of their two major complaints.

If we can proceed on these matters, then we believe we may find common ground and bring this unfortunate dispute to an end.

Yours sincerely,

Hon. Jacques Andreani

Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Good afternoon, Arthur. Where are you?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I'm just in from Moscow and France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So you're home?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: In France, yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, you're in France. Okay. Okay. Well, we're just – just gathering.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Where are you, Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I'm at my office.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And I think people will be calling in from all over. I think Ron, you're in the Foundation offices?

RON GIDWITZ: No, actually, I'm in my office.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: You're in your office, okay. I think Maggie and Dean may be in the Foundation offices.

RON GIDWITZ: The food will probably be better there than it is here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Anyone else join the line?

(Pause)

RON GIDWITZ: Arthur, how's the weather over there?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: It's just perfectly beautiful. You wouldn't believe it. The sky is blue; no wind. Nice and warm. It was lovely in Moscow, too.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Who has – someone has just joined us?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: It's Ted.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Good afternoon, Ted.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Hi, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I'm going to turn the volume up here.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Hi, Ted. Arthur.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Hi, Arthur.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ted, I don't hear you very loudly, so we may ask you to talk a little bit more – louder.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Can you hear me now?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah, that's better.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay. Arthur is very clear. Where are you, Arthur?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I'm in France.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Good. Who else have we got here?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron is in his office and that's all of us so far.

RON GIDWITZ: Yeah, Ted, I'm here.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay, Ron, hi.

RON GIDWITZ: Hi. Are you out on the Cape? Ted?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: No, I'm at home in Brooklyn.

RON GIDWITZ: Ah, there you go.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Welcome, whoever has joined us. Who has joined us? Hello? Anyone join us? Ted, are you still there?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'm here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: All right. Everybody still there?

RON GIDWITZ: Yep.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. Hello, has anyone just joined us? Hm, okay.

FEMALE VOICE: There are people on.

MALE VOICE: Don't tie up this line.

FEMALE VOICE: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, do I hear your voice?

FEMALE VOICE: How do I put this on the speaker? Okay.

DON RATNER: Hello? Hello?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Don, is that you?

DON RATNER: Stephanie, hi. It's Don. Maggie and Dean are here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

DON RATNER: Mark Heatwall and Steve Carlson.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, very good.

DON RATNER: And we're waiting for the others to call in and get hold of people, and this may take a few minutes to –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We have, um, we have Ron and Arthur and Ted and I so far. So we're still waiting for Jacques and Alan, Judith and Paul.

DON RATNER: All right. Ron's on the phone?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Correct.

RON GIDWITZ: I am on the phone. I am from my office.

DON RATNER: Okay. I thought you were going to be over here. Oh, I'm sorry.

RON GIDWITZ: Well, that's an extra sandwich for you to eat.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Don't make me hungry.

MARGARET DALEY: Hello, everyone.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Maggie?

MARGARET DALEY: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Good afternoon.

MARGARET DALEY: Yes, nice to talk to you, Stephanie. Have you walked past the Taste of Chicago yet?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, but I've been waiting in traffic. (Laughing)

ARTHUR HARTMAN: What's that?

MARGARET DALEY: Oh, the Taste of Chicago?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yeah.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: It's a huge gastronomical extravaganza where all the restaurants in Chicago, or at least the better ones, sort of lay out their wares along the Lake. It's terrific.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Ah-ha.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And you sample your way to high cholesterol levels.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: (Laughing)

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I understand they will have Lipitor salesmen standing by.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: (Laughing) I can tell you that Mevacor works.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: (Laughing) Don, have you heard from anyone? We know Helene will not be on the call, but have you heard from Judith or Paul or Alan?

DON RATNER: Expected to be on the call, so we're just sort of waiting for them all to –

RON GIDWITZ: And we're expecting Jacques?

DON RATNER: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We are, right. I know Paul is in Italy. I don't know where Judith or Alan are.

DON RATNER: In Washington, Alan's in Russia, and Arthur is in –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur's here.

DON RATNER: Arthur's already there.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Hello. Hello? Who has joined us now? Have Judith or Paul joined us yet?

DON RATNER: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. We're hearing beeps sometimes, and you assume that someone has joined the call when you hear that.

JEFF: And what lawyers are present?

DON RATNER: Here, Mark Heatwall and Steve Carlson.

JEFF: Okay. Hi, Steve.

STEVE CARLSON: Hi, Jeff.

SUSAN STONE: Susan Stone from Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood here with Stephanie.

JOHN SABL: Also John Sabl from Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood out here with Susan and Stephanie.

MALE VOICE: I'm sorry, who are all the lawyers? I didn't catch them all.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We have Susan Stone, Steve Carlson, John Sabl, and my understand is that Mark Heatwall is in Chicago. Let me ask anyone else. Are there – is there any other legal counsel present with anyone?

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Judith, good afternoon.

JUDITH TERRA: Hi, I've been on the line a minute. I just didn't want to interrupt. Ah, have you started things?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, not at all. We're still waiting for – well, we were waiting for you and for Paul and for Alan, and Jacques. Everyone else is here, except Helene who was not going to be on the call.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So, no, we've not started anything.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay. So who is "we" – who is –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We have just – we have just – ah, the question was asked who are the legal counsel present, and we have Mark Heatwall, who is in Chicago at the Foundation office, as the regular Foundation counsel. And we have Susan Stone and John Sabl, who are here with me in Aurora, and Steve Carlson who is in the Foundation office, all representing Sidley Austin. I was just asking every other Board member on the line are there any other legal counsel present.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Not here in France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Anyone else? Ron?

RON GIDWITZ: No, I'm all by myself.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith?

MALE VOICE: Susan Stone and who?

MALE VOICE: John Sabl. S-A-B-L. He is a partner – and is the lawyer who drafted the (inaudible).

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Has anyone joined the call? Jacques or Alan or Paul?

DON RATNER: We're calling both of them.

MALE VOICE: S-A-B-L. (Inaudible)

(Background conversation; inaudible)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Hello? Has anyone else joined the call? Alan, Paul, Jacques? Hello, has anyone else joined the call?

MALE VOICE: That's a lot of beeps on the phone, but –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah, there are. (Laughing) There are. Well, at some point, we will make a decision to move forward, but I think, uh, I know Jacques is overseas and so is Alan, so we'll wait just a few more moments. But we are going to have to proceed relatively shortly.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Stephanie, I assume you're chairing the meeting?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I am, Ted.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: And, uh, what does a quorum consist of?

MALE VOICE: A majority.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Oh.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: The majority of the meeting, but as you know, we need six people to amend the bylaws, so that's critical.

MALE VOICE: And a quorum is six and you also need six to amend the bylaws.

FEMALE VOICE: So right now, who's missing? Jacques, Helene –

MALE VOICE: Jacques, Helene and Paul – and Alan.

MALE VOICE: Have you tried to call them?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, is there any way we might call people to see if – if they are available? Were you able to get the faxes to everyone, as far as you know?

DON RATNER: I talked to everybody. Everybody said they were going to be on the call. If you've heard from Helene since, fine. I talked to Jacques, and he said Helene was going to be on the call.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh.

DON RATNER: I've talked to Andréani, I've talked to Paul, I've talked to Alan. Everybody –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, okay. Has anyone joined us now?

MALE VOICE: It sounds like Don did a good job reaching everyone.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes. I mean, we do have a quorum now, but I think in fairness, we'll wait just a few more moments. Hello, has anyone joined us? Arthur, are there challenges when you call in from Russia?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, okay. I know that's where Alan –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Well, I'm calling from France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I know you are, but Alan is in Russia, so I was just curious.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No, the same system applies there.

16di-001212

DON RATNER: Actually, Stephanie, we are trying to call him. He asked us to call him.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh.

DON RATNER: And we got a hold of his number, but there's nobody there. We get a voice mail. So he may have gotten delayed or something. Or he may be on the phone.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: What time is it in Russia?

DON RATNER: Nine thirty.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: A lot of traffic there. What hotel is he at?

DON RATNER: I have no idea. If I give you the number, will you recognize it?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No.

RON GIDWITZ: Arthur, you don't (inaudible) numbers?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: No. (Laughing)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Has anyone just joined us?

DON RATNER: Stephanie, apparently when Karen tries to call these people on the line, it beeps. That's what that beeping is all about.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, I see. All right, thank you. I keep thinking somebody is joining the call. So, Don, you said you'd talked to Jacques Ahrweiler and Helene will be on the call?

DON RATNER: I talked to Jacques last weekend, and he said that he was going to get Helene on the call. But, you know, things –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. Okay.

RON GIDWITZ: Could someone please share with me what happened – while we're waiting – in court today? What's all that about?

STEVE CARLSON: I guess I can. This is Steve Carlson from Sidley Austin.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Steve, could you speak up a little bit, please?

STEVE CARLSON: I'm speaking pretty loud for this room.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, okay, I'm sorry.

STEVE CARLSON: (Inaudible) if I don't blow everybody out I'll keep speaking up. There was a motion filed by Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson for a temporary restraining order to try to stop this meeting from going ahead. I –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: What court was this in, Steve?

STEVE CARLSON: It was in the state court, in front of Judge Kinaird, who we've been in front of in the litigation (inaudible).

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Right.

RON GIDWITZ: Who were they representing? I mean, who – they filed it themselves, or was it – because yesterday, apparently, they filed on behalf of the Foundation. Were they doing that again today?

STEVE CARLSON: They had Joel Bellows from the firm of Bellows & Bellows, and Laurel Bellows was there as well. Leonard Garment, who's he –

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible)

STEVE CARLSON: (Inaudible) Todd. Basically the same people from yesterday in the Federal court, but today they were representing only the individual defendant directors in this main lawsuit. And they sought a TRO to block this meeting from going forward, and made much the same argument that they made in the Federal court yesterday. And the Attorney General primarily responded to it. Judge Kinaird, I think, at the end of the day, was interested in what irreparable effect whatever happens at this meeting has. And I think at the end of the day she decided that since the draft resolutions that the Board was going to be considering appeared to say that whatever you all vote to do today does not become effective until the Consent Judgment and Order is entered by the court herself, she didn't need to enjoin this meeting at all, that she could give Senator Simpson's lawyers and Dr. Tucker's lawyers and Mrs. Terra's lawyers an opportunity to make whatever presentation they wanted to, to make whatever arguments they wanted to, about the propriety of the settlement when the Consent Judgment is presented to her at a later date, which may very well be Monday afternoon at 2:00.

RON GIDWITZ: And who's defending the Foundation? Are you?

STEVE CARLSON: I'm the Foundation's lawyer, yes.

RON GIDWITZ: And what kind of a defense did you put on today – aggressive?

STEVE CARLSON: I'm always aggressive.

RON GIDWITZ: That's what I've heard. I haven't seen you in action. I understand you are always aggressive. Were you aggressive today?

STEVE CARLSON: (Inaudible) properly noticed and called a Board meeting and that I'd argued that strenuously to the court on many occasions, and it was the Foundation's position that a properly noticed Board meeting should go ahead and should not be interfered with by disgruntled members of the Board or by the court or anybody else.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Thank you.

RON GIDWITZ: Thank you.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is there anyone else on the call? Jacques? Helene? Judith, you are on the call. Paul and Alan?

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Judith is that you?

JUDITH TERRA: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes. Yes, go ahead, Judith.

JUDITH TERRA: No, I was just responding. I had to step out. Emma came to get me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, yeah, we're still waiting for Jacques, Helene, Alan and Paul.

JUDITH TERRA: Right. There was a call on my other line.

MALE VOICE: Jacques, how are you? Tally?

MALE VOICE: You've got Tally, too? I'm sorry, I didn't hear an answer to that. Tally is on the call as well? That's a question.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Uh, it's not appropriate for anybody to be on the call other than the Directors and the legal counsel that we have so noted already.

MALE VOICE: Is Don there?

FEMALE VOICE: Why is Tally talking to Don?

MALE VOICE: I think that's extremely inappropriate.

FEMALE VOICE: So do I.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: We will not proceed until this is a meeting of the Directors and the legal counsel that we have already so noted. So, um, when everybody gets back, I will ask Tally to leave the call.

MALE VOICE: He's not on this call.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Excuse me? I really can't hear very well.

FEMALE VOICE: He's, uh – he called Don on his cell phone, and Don has left the room to talk to him.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. That's fine.

FEMALE VOICE: I don't think that's appropriate in either case.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Has anyone else joined the call? Jacques, Helene, Alan or Paul?

RON GIDWITZ: How long do we expect to wait, out of curiosity?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Not – not very much longer, Ron. I think it's important that we proceed, and uh –

MALE VOICE: Don is – Don is –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: – and move forward on this meeting as expeditiously as we are able to do.

DON RATNER: I called everybody. We've been calling everybody. We can't get a hold of anybody who is not on the call.

16di-001217

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, then I think, uh – I think we will begin. As you all know, this is Stephanie, and I hereby call this meeting to order. Could we please have a roll call of all present? Jacques Andréani. Helene Arweiler. Dean Buntrock.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Maggie Daley.

MARGARET DALEY: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron Gidwitz.

RON GIDWITZ: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur Hartman.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Stephanie Marshall. Present. Alan Simpson. Ted Stebbins.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith Terra.

JUDITH TERRA: Present.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul Tucker. As we know, also present are Don Ratner, Susan Stone, Steven Carlson, John Sabl, and Mark Heatwall..

MARK HEATWALL: Stephanie, Scott Sbla from my office, who was in court this morning observing the proceedings, has joined us. That's Scott S-B-L-A.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Scott is from Winston, Mark?

MARK HEATWALL: Yes, ma'am.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So he is regular Foundation counsel? All right. We are here today to consider, as you know, a proposed settlement of outstanding litigation in a number of matters closely related thereto. Dr. Stebbins?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Yes, I'd like to make a motion. I hereby move the adoption of all the resolutions contained in the three pages of resolutions which the Foundation distributed, including without limitation the approval of the Consent Judgment and Order distributed by the Foundation with such resolutions, with James Donnelly, Marshall Fields V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada, and Frederick Krabel being the five new Class 2 Directors. And in addition, I have a couple of minor changes –

MALE VOICE: Could you go through those five names one more time?

RON GIDWITZ: Read the list again, if you wouldn't mind, please.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: The list is James Donnelly.

RON GIDWITZ: Donnelly, okay.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Marshall Fields V, Dr. Kathleen Foster, Dr. Robert Hamada, and Mr. Frederick Krabel.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And, Ted, you said you had some minor changes.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: And I have some minor changes which various people have suggested. Um, first in the draft resolution, paragraph 4, where it reads "further resolved that Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood, the attorneys for the Foundation, are authorized and directed in the name and on behalf of the Foundation to file with the Circuit Court of Cook County the Consent Judgment if and when it has been executed by or on behalf of Ms. Montrock and Gidwitz, and the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, and" – and from there on, I would suggest that we take out "any other document they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation." So consider that part of my resolution – amending that phrase.

FEMALE VOICE: What paragraph are you –

DON RATNER: We can't find it. Could you – this is on the first page of the resolution, or is it page 10 of your –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Paragraph 4 –

DON RATNER: Wait a minute. Let me get my – page 10 of your fax.

PAUL TUCKER: Sorry, everyone, I've just finally made it through the Terrace Vidley to be here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, hi, Paul.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: That's all.

PAUL TUCKER: Hi, Steph. Hi, Ted.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul, Ted is – we have called the meeting to order and Ted is – Ted has almost concluded his resolution, and Don is helping people find the appropriate section.

DON RATNER: Page 10, first paragraph, Ted, I think it starts out "Further resolved."

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Further resolved.

DON RATNER: Okay. Now what do you want to change?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I wanted to take out the last phrase, "any other document that they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation."

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And you said you had another minor change?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: And – that's my only change in the resolutions. In the Consent Judgment and Order, under paragraph 2 –

DON RATNER: Wait a second. On what page is that?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: It's page –

DON RATNER: Five of the fax. Paragraph 2, "The parties hereto" –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'd like to say "The parties, including plaintiffs and defendants" –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: No, Ted, you can't do that. The Foundation can't speak for defendants.

MALE VOICE: Well the original documents, Stephanie, if you'll recall spoke to the plaintiffs and the defendants. If you want to add people, that's fine, but you can't subtract.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Well, the Foundation – it is my understanding, and maybe legal counsel can speak to this, that this wording is the only wording that can – that can be in place because the Foundation cannot require the defendants to do anything against their will.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Let a court of law decide that. What I'm concerned about with this language, if they understand, Stephanie, is, I don't want to be set up to be sued. And this strikes me, the way that this has been drafted, that it – it doesn't release the defendants and therefore is permissive in terms of having them sue me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I think –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: And I want protection.

MALE VOICE: Well, I'd like to –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I think, Ted, I think –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Stephanie, why don't we ask legal counsel their opinion, because I'm –

MALE VOICE: Can you speak to as why you want to include this?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I want to be accommodative –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: May I – let me take the privilege of the Chair one moment. We are in the middle of a proposed resolution. I recommend that – or proposed motion. I recommend that Ted make his motion. I will see if there is a second. If there is not a second, the motion fails. There may be a second, and then we have discussion. In my view, it is not appropriate to argue the language or the merits of a motion until the motion is duly put on the table.

RON GIDWITZ: Absolutely. I will –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So, let's – Ted, it may be useful –

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Okay, my motion includes the slight change to the resoltuions. It includes in the Consent Order making it, "The parties, including plaintiffs and defendants, hereto desire." And it includes, under Section 7 of the same Consent Judgment, it includes modifying the second phrase, and it should now read, "with the exception that until the 2002 annual meeting, or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, then 50 percent of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents." The purpose of this is to guarantee that it happens in case the annual meeting is delayed for some reason. And those are my – that's my – that's my resolution.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: All right, we have a resolution, and since it was rather circuitous, I don't know if it is appropriate for me either to ask – I think it – maybe you should state it again so people are very clear what the resolution is.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: My resolution – I move adoption of the resolutions contained in the three pages of resolutions which we've distributed, including, without limitation, the approval of the Consent Judgment and Order, with James Donnelly, Marshall Fields V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada, and Frederick Krabel being the five new Class 2 directors with the other three amendments that I mentioned.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. We have a motion on the table. Is there a second?

RON GIDWITZ: I'll second it.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So that's moved by Ted, second by Ron. The motion has been moved and seconded.

RON GIDWITZ: I'd like to offer a –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Because it involves an amendment to the bylaws, its passage requires the affirmative action of at least six Directors. Now it's appropriate to call for any discussion. I think, Ron, if you would give me the privilege of the Chair, I would like legal counsel to address one of the changes that Ted referred to, because I – although I want to be able to vote for this motion, I would not be able to do so with one of the changes that he's – he's suggested, because it's my understanding that it is simply not possible for the Foundation to make this judgment. So I would really like legal counsel, so that we're all clear, on exactly where we are and – where we are at this point in time. I personally don't have any problem with the other modifications that, Ted, you made. But I would not be able to support the motion as it presently.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Let's try to let the lawyers lead us through this problem here.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes.

MALE VOICE: (Inaudible; whispering)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, I've asked legal counsel to do that.

MALE VOICE: Do you have any preference as to who addresses it? Do you want Susan to address it, or John, or –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Susan can address it.

SUSAN STONE: I can address it. This is Susan Stone from Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood. I understand, Stephanie, you would like guidance with respect to whether paragraph 2 of the proposed Consent Judgment and Order could be amended to change the description of the parties giving the relief to be a more general description, which would include all of the parties, including the plaintiffs and the individual defendant Directors. Is that correct?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: That's correct.

SUSAN STONE: All right. It is my understanding that the individual Director defendants are not prepared, voluntarily, to enter into this proposed settlement. They are not agreeing to settle their litigation, and that therefore they are not voluntarily agreeing –

MALE VOICE: Susan, we don't – we don't know that until we've taken a vote, right?

SUSAN STONE: My understanding – that is correct. You don't know that categorically. It is my understanding from what was reported from the mediation session that the individual Director defendants are not prepared to voluntarily release. And I think the question being posed is whether or not the Foundation unilaterally can impose upon a non-consenting party an obligation that they release their legal rights. And I do not believe that the Foundation can do that, or even that if the Foundation purported to do it, that it would have any legal effect. You could, indeed, as Ted points out, query the individual Director defendants as to whether or not they will voluntarily agree to release, and then all of this is perhaps an unnecessary academic legal debate. That might be appropriate at this time.

RON GIDWITZ: Let me ask you a question before we ask that one, and that is, what is the effect of doing it and – I just heard you say, Susan, that it may not have any legal effect period. So what's the down side of just including them?

SUSAN STONE: You know, I'm saying that even if you purport – was that question from Mr. –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: From Ron.

SUSAN STONE: From Ron. Ron, even if you purport to have the Foundation require the individual defendant Directors to release rights, that requirement may not be binding. In other words, it might not be a valid release, because –

RON GIDWITZ: I understand, but there's no damage done.

SUSAN STONE: Well, I do not believe that the Foundation can do this. I do not believe the Foundation can take away the legal rights of another party.

RON GIDWITZ: I understand that. But we have – what my concern is, Susan, is that we have a document that was written and agreed to by six Directors wherein if it doesn't materially affect the execution of the document, why are we making changes?

SUSAN STONE: No. The question is, what can the Foundation counsel put in front of the Board as a document which the Board could pass that has a possibility of standing up to judicial scrutiny, if the Board decides it wants to pass it. And I'm telling you that whatever six individual members of the Board might have done in the last mediation session, that was not an act of the Foundation. The Foundation is a corporation. It can only act through a majority vote of the Board of Directors at a duly called meeting. That has not happened until today. And so the question is, what can the Board do at this point in time. The Board of the Foundation, which is one party to this litigation, cannot unilaterally take away the rights of other parties to the litigation.

RON GIDWITZ: I keep hearing that, and frankly my counsel has also reported to me on numerous occasions that you have made the case that, unless we have a duly called meeting, there's a difference of opinion. And the real issue here, it seems to me, is we'd like to get – we'd like to get this litigation settled, and therefore we'd like to have a document that we can go to the court with next week, which everybody can agree to. And if in fact I feel exposed, I will not agree. It's senseless – then going through this whole process is senseless.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Well, with –

MALE VOICE: Can we let Mark Heatwall respond to that? He wanted to say something. If you could let him talk.

MARK HEATWALL: Ron?

RON GIDWITZ: Yes, Mark.

MARK HEATWALL: (Inaudible) brought your action solely against the Terra Foundation.

RON GIDWITZ: Say again.

MARK HEATWALL: (Inaudible) brought this action solely against the Terra Foundation, you would be in a position today to settle this matter. But by naming three of the individuals, you – I believe Susan's position is right, that the agreement on behalf of the Board of the Foundation to settle this matter only will operate vis-à-vis the Foundation, and not as against the individuals and their rights. And that puts you at peril and Dean at peril in this sense. (Inaudible) settle on those same terms, then you could be in a position where you will have settled your claims against the Foundation, and, under this agreement, against those individuals land waived those rights, and those individuals may still have the ability to claim back against you. You can't force them to waive those rights through this settlement agreement, I don't believe.

MALE VOICE: That's fine, Mark. Ron's point is, which I agree, then it doesn't have to be taken out because the matter can be decided by the courts.

MARK HEATWALL: But if you vote in favor of it and Ron votes in favor of it, what I'm telling you is it would work to your detriment. And I'm not your lawyer –

MALE VOICE: No, I understand.

MARK HEATWALL: – but – but you've got a situation where the – everything I know about this situation tells me – force Paul, Judith and Alan to settle a case that they don't want to settle. And that means that this is a one-way – potentially a one-way settlement by you and Ron against them, and their not waiving rights against you.

MALE VOICE: Fine.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I – I have to say, just to weigh in on this personally, that I mean it's no secret that – that this motion and any changes in bylaws require the vote of at least Directors. And I cannot support the motion as it is currently stated with this amendment to number two. I can certainly support and will support the other changes, Ted, that you made, in both the resolution and the Consent Judgment Order. They seem reasonable. But I cannot and will not support this motion which frankly means you do not have six votes. So I came prepared, I read the motions, I read the Consent Judgment – I mean, I read the resolution, I read the Consent Judgment, I am prepared to support this, but this is a last-minute, 11th-hour change, and I cannot be more clear than I'm being right now. I cannot and will not support this change as it is currently stated.

MALE VOICE: Which change is that, Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: You can continue the conversation if you wish, or, Ted, you can amend your motion.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Well, I knew this was of concern to Ron, that's the reason I suggested it, to hope the lawyers could work it out. But if it's a – if it's thought to be a legal impossibility, then I would go back to the original text as it was distributed, and leave out the amendment of section 2.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So you are accepting an amendment?

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Does Ron have to agree to that to make it legal – (inaudible)?

MALE VOICE: No, it's Ted's motion that –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ted has a motion. He's accepted the amendment, which is keeping the first two changes he made and eliminating the change in the Consent Order paragraph 2.

MALE VOICE: He can – he can –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I guess the question is, is there any further discussion, or we have a properly made and seconded motion, and then we could proceed with the vote if we are ready to do so.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Stephanie, wait a minute. I think it bears more discussion.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: That's fine.

MALE VOICE: Who's this speaking?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: This is Dean.

MALE VOICE: Hi, Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: Hey. First of all, I'd like you to respond. You made your position very, very clear, but when counsel for the Foundation and counsel on the lawsuit have both said, as Susan has said, that you can't do it, what difference does it mean to leave the language in there? I cannot see why you take such a strong position.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I guess I take –

DEAN BUNTROCK: (Inaudible) out. Can you respond to that?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah. It is my understanding – well, based on what legal counsel is saying, Dean, I would be voting for something which is – which is judged not to be legal and/or appropriate. I will not vote –

MALE VOICE: But no one – no one has said –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I will not vote to force anyone into a position that – that four attorneys are saying is inappropriate. The Foundation I don't think, or certainly I do not want to approve a settlement that contemplates a release that – that doesn't exist.

MALE VOICE: Stephanie, they haven't. All they've said is that you legally can't do that, so –

MALE VOICE: I appreciate the fact that –

MALE VOICE: If you can't do it, you can't do it. And I think changing – unnecessary.

STEVE CARLSON: Can I make a comment? I've got one more legal comment to make. This is Steve Carlson.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Steve, go ahead.

STEVE CARLSON: I think anybody who is interested in the possibility of a settlement accomplished and the Consent Judgment and Order being approved by the Foundation and entered by the court needs to consider, at least for a moment, the question of what happens when it's presented to the court if the Consent Judgment and Order presented to the court contains the questionable provision. You are concerned about the possibilities that there may be some members of the Board who will attack the Consent Judgment and Order as they have already tried to stop this meeting. I would, as counsel to the Foundation, say that you probably ought to think strongly about doing something that is as close as you can to being something that looks like it's appropriate and within the limits of what the corporation could truly do. I'm afraid you may be giving fuel to the fire that somehow the corporation has acted inappropriately, if it passes resolutions or consents to Consent Judgments and Orders that have clear legal defects in them.

SUSAN STONE: I would like to underscore that, and add that, although I was not in court today, it is my understanding that the judge has, in essence, invited the individual Director defendants' attorneys to raise any concerns they have when this Order is presented to her. So you know that this order and the procedure that led up to the Order – in fact you vote for the Order – will be under judicial scrutiny. And so I second what Steve says, that I think you want to err on the side of doing everything with scrupulous attention to detail, and keep your process as clean as possible.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And I really – I think, frankly, that, Dean, to your question, and Ron, that if you wanted a release from the defendants, then I think it was essential at the time we were in mediation that there was – there was another line or sentence or something that would have induced the individuals to settle. But that was not part of the mediated agreement. And as I said, at this point, I feel it's a highly significant 11-hour change, and I'll stand with what I said before. I came to this meeting as I trust we all did, in good faith. There were six people that signed off on an intention to ratify. There were some things we had to work out since the last mediated agreement, especially the slate of officers. And I think we were prepared, and I hope still are prepared to reach agreement. But if we hold – if some hold fast to this, then that is not going to be possible.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'm persuaded that I was in error, and that I think the attorneys' comments are appropriate and we need an agreement that will stand up under scrutiny.

RON GIDWITZ: Stephanie, I will back off – excuse me, I've got a little food in my mouth. But I will back off my objection, but I will just state for the record that the language that plaintiffs and defendants originally, that the Sidley & Austin attorneys had been moving to change it, I believe – – distributed version.

(End of Side 1)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay. Thank you, Ron.

PAUL TUCKER: This is Paul. This is Paul. Am I coming though?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes you are, Paul. Go ahead.

PAUL TUCKER: I appreciate the fact that this will be dropped. But just for clarification, could I, since Ted, you had been the one who had proposed it, can you just speak a little bit more as to why, so it could be understood a little bit more clearly as to – I mean, we've spent so much time on this – as to why this really had been of concern.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Paul, are you asking me?

PAUL TUCKER: Yeah.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: The – this is discussion section 2. Well, I think we've discussed it at length. It was written, as you know, in mediation to cover plaintiffs and defendants. And we're – we're hearing now that defendants can't be covered. And I was trying to make it broad enough to win everyone's acceptance, but I'm now persuaded, having heard the legal arguments, that that's not a good course. So that's why I'm going back to – to the original Sidley version.

PAUL TUCKER: Back to the original.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I am prepared to call for a vote on the question, but I don't want to terminate discussion prematurely. So is there any further discussion on the motion, which also has been seconded.

MARGARET DALEY: I'm not clear. I want to know exactly what we're talking about now in terms of changes. I'm – I'm personally not clear.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: All right, Maggie, if I can try to summarize where we are. We had Ted's motion, which was to adopt the resolution that the Foundation had prepared, which is that three-page document that we all received. And he further modified his resolution motion to make a minor change on the resolution, which was page 1, paragraph 4, the last two sentences were eliminated. So in that paragraph, it ended "the Attorney General of the State of Illinois." And then we had also a minor revision on the Consent Agenda, paragraph or number 7, which added, after the 2002 annual meeting, "or until 12-31-02," since the date was not clear. So it was Ted's motion to approve the resolution, and then those two minor changes, one to the resolution and one to the Consent Judgment.

MALE VOICE: Right.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: So unless there is further discussion, I guess the question is, are we –

DON RATNER: Just a second, Steph. I'm just going over with Mrs. Daley. This is where (inaudible)

ARTHUR HARTMAN: This is Arthur. I'm prepared to vote.

DON RATNER: Stephanie, one second. I'm going over this with Mrs. Daley.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, and I want to – I left out one part, as Ted was talking. It was "until 12-31-02 or whichever comes first."

DON RATNER: I'm just going over that all with Mrs. Daley. So just want to (inaudible)

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

DEAN BUNTROCK: So the only changes are to paragraph 2 and paragraph 7, right?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Uh, the – on the resolution, Dean, there is a change eliminating the last two sentences on the fourth paragraph, and on the Consent Judgment, it's number 7 where we have inserted the date. There is no change to paragraph 2.

DON RATNER: Stephanie, let me, if I can, I've got the document here. Let me go through this with the pages so they can see what we're doing. Okay? Give me 30 seconds. Okay? Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Sure. You have different page numbers than we do?

DON RATNER: Let me just show them, it's easier.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

DON RATNER: We're making – we're adding this December 31 date.

FEMALE VOICE: And we're on page 6 of the fax.

DON RATNER: Paragraph 7. Page 7. And we're adding the five Board members, okay. And then the only other thing we're doing is we're taking out this last line. This is on the resolution on page 10, and any other document.

MALE VOICE: That's the motion on the table. That's the motion on the table.

DON RATNER: Well, but you need – the motion on the table is to affect this and the settlement – mediation, so I had to go through the mediation pieces, too.

MALE VOICE: Sure.

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie? Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, Maggie.

JUDITH TERRA: No. This is Judith.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, Judith, I'm sorry. I can't hear you very well. Hello?

MALE VOICE: Just get closer to the phone.

JUDITH TERRA: Can you hear me now? Pardon?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Hello?

MALE VOICE: Closer to the phone.

JUDITH TERRA: I can't. I've got it right in my ear. Can you hear now?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, we can. Not very well, but we can.

JUDITH TERRA: Okay. I just want to say that I am definitely going to object to any waiver of my legal action, and I think I would like to express a strong objection to the fact that Alan Simpson, Helene Ahrweiler, and Jacques Andréani are not on this – at this meeting. Not on this call.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yeah, we will –

MALE VOICE: I couldn't hear a word of that, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: She said that she would not agree to anything that waived her rights, and that she is voicing strong objection to the fact that Jacques and Helene and Alan were not on the call. And as Chair, I can just simply duly note that, but they were given every opportunity to be on the call. Don talked with –

ARTHUR HARTMAN: I had no trouble getting in from France.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: And they said that they would be. So it is absolutely most unfortunate, but we really could not wait. So, Judith, we will note that for the record. This is being taped, so that will be recorded. Don, have you concluded your review? We are –

DON RATNER: No, no, Dean is now talking to Mark and Scott. He's got a question about the last line that's being eliminated on the resolution, which is "and any other documents," so forth and so on, paragraph 4.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Correct.

DON RATNER: There is a question about that. Do you want to give it to everybody?

MARK HEATWALL: Actually, I didn't draft this. John Sabl did. But, John, maybe you would tell us why you would include something like that language in your resolutions. I said to Dean, I thought it was a catch-all in case there was anything else that Sidley needed to do in order to effectuate the settlement.

JOHN SABL: And that was why it was there, Mark. You're absolutely right. My understanding was that Ron had a concern as to whether it was too broad or seemed to contemplate going very far afield. We didn't think there was anything else that we'd need to file and anything that was ministerial, we think would have been – would be contemplated by – by the – by the general authorization at the end. So we think we'd be better to have it in, on the one hand, but we don't see a problem taking it out. I guess we didn't have a strong view either way. We have a mild preference to leave the language in, but since there was some feeling to the contrary, we didn't think it was particularly important.

MARK HEATWALL: So if there was anything else that was required, we would have to come back to the Board and get approval to –

JOHN SABL: I don't think so. I think it would only be if it was something substantive, and, Ron, maybe you want to speak to what your concern was, since I heard this indirectly from Ted. This language was not intended to make – you know, to file, you know substantive changes. And we thought it was helpful from a catch-all. But what – what was your concern, Ron?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron, are you there?

RON GIDWITZ: I was knocked off somehow. I'm just coming back on.

JOHN SABL: Okay, Ron, the question was asked by – it's John Sabl. The question was asked by Mark Heatwall why we were taking out the catch-all language in the resolution, the one change that Ted made to the resolution that I understood he made at your request. And Mark said, "Isn't that sort of a catch-all if other things need to be filed, and would it be better to leave it in?"

RON GIDWITZ: And that's just the point where I – I heard that, and then I was knocked off the –

JOHN SABL: Okay, and I said that I think this – I thought this language was fine; as we drafted it, it was appropriate and the catch-all was just meant to be if other things needed to be – other things needed to be filed, that it might be better to specifically recognize that. I had understood, or I maybe theorized, that your concern was that language somehow was too broad.

RON GIDWITZ: That is correct.

JOHN SABL: Okay. I guess – I think in terms of anything else, if it's ministerial, and I think you'd agree if it's just ministerial filing something the second time or not making a substantive change, you don't have a problem with that and that even as the resolutions change, that really doesn't affect anything.

RON GIDWITZ: I guess my – my concern quite frankly is the things that Sidley has historically considered to be ministerial and insignificant, me and my counsel have not had the same level of lack of concern. So I just – maybe it's the result of this experience, but I am not particularly tolerant of things that I don't understand and don't now about.

JOHN SABL: Okay, well, Ron, I guess our point was we were – we're happy with the language either way, so –

RON GIDWITZ: Fine, well let's just strike it, and then I'll be happy.

JOHN SABL: Okay, good. Again, Mark, we don't believe that this would mean that anything else that was, you know, so clearly contemplated would be prohibited from us doing it. It was just I think something that Ron's concern that there shouldn't be substantive changes made.

MARK HEATWALL: I had no problem with taking it out. Dean raised the question with me as to whether or not there was an impact from that, and I was just trying to explain it.

JOHN SABL: I don't think there really is an impact. I think we don't –

RON GIDWITZ: I'm satisfied with my question, thank you.

JOHN SABL: Thank you.

16di-001239

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Don, have you – have you been able to clarify for Maggie and Dean exactly where the changes are? And then if so, everyone fully understanding what we – what they will be voting on, then I would then call for a vote on the question.

JUDITH TERRA: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith?

JUDITH TERRA: Yes. I would like to say a few words before the vote is taken.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, please.

JUDITH TERRA: Can you hear me okay?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes, we can.

JUDITH TERRA: I'm on a different phone. I don't know what's –

DON RATNER: Let me just respond to Stephanie's question. I think Ms. Daley and Mr. Buntrock can respond to that better than I. I think I described it. And they're nodding that they understand all the –

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, fine. Thank you. Judith, go ahead.

JUDITH TERRA: Well, I just want to say before we take a vote on this motion that the outset, with all due respect to each of my fellow Board members, I think that the mediation result that we are being asked to endorse, and for which we really had high hopes in the beginning, has turned out to be something very different than what we anticipated. For me, it's a process which is distorted the consensual nature of what mediation really should be all about, as reflected in this document. And I think, as Paul Tucker, our Chairman, has already observed, the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees. And I think that this vote that we're about to take is a very momentous decision, because basically today we're going to determine whether we will allow the Terra Foundation to really be destroyed for all time in a process which I believe is oppressive and unlawful. And I think you've seen this reflected in my – in some of my memos to you. Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art, or at least he thought it was magnificent, and I would agree. And I think that the last thing we must really think about is that we will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation, because this is basically the end result of this proposal, telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most – some of the most outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation. And so I'm asking each of you to use your best judgment and wisdom in upholding the principles of self-government that have really been the basic part of this Foundation since its inception in 1978. I hope, Stephanie, and all of you, that you will examine your conscience, your fiduciary duties, and please do not permit the Terra Foundation to be destroyed. So obviously I hope that each of you will join me in voting against this proposal. And I did say earlier, when you couldn't hear me well, that I think it's – I object strongly to the fact that Helene and Jacques Andréani and Alan Simpson were not on this call. Thank you.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: This is Arthur Hartman. We'll be taking a vote which will indicate what all of our views are. I couldn't disagree more with what Judith has said. I think the good of this Foundation has been found in this mediation, and it will carry on the kinds of things that Dan Terra was interested in. And that is my own personal position. Thank you.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I would just like to make a personal comment, too. And I also regret that Jacques and Alan and Helene are not on the call, because I think it would have been important for everyone to have had the opportunity to hear the conversation and to make a statement, if in fact they wished to do so. I sent a letter to David Hilliard dated June 17, where I was responding to the mediated settlement. And in that letter, I raised several concerns which were pretty consistent with concerns I had raised in the past. And then I did say in the letter, having said this, and verbalizing these concerns, that I could live with the substance of the settlement albeit with a heavy heart, and that I was prepared to ratify it at an authorized Board meeting. I also said in that letter that I believe in my heart that it does preserve the most fundamental dimensions of the Foundation's independence in determining the course of its own destiny, which I believe to be stated in the mediated agreement, although I do believe that unprecedented restrictions have been imposed on the Foundation as well. But I believe that a settlement, and not continued litigation, is in fact in the best interests of the Foundation. And I would hope that the 16 Board members for this year, and the 15 Board members in the future would see the astounding opportunities that this Foundation has to make a mark, not only in this country but around the world. And I would hope that we would in fact commit to – to ensuring that the vision of Dan Terra remains not only alive, but burns very brightly. Are there any other – any other points of discussion?

MARK HEATWALL: Stephanie?

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Yes.

MARK HEATWALL: Mark Heatwall. Just one last item before you vote, and I think this is important, and Judith touched on it and, Stephanie, you touched on it in your comments as well. In light of the allegations that have been brought forward in the Federal court yesterday, to a certain extent – I was not there, but I understand that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County courts this morning, about the coercion that some members of this Board may feel, or may not feel, from the actions of the Attorney General. I think it's important for each one of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote that you are voting freely, and you are voting with your fiduciary obligations to this Board and this institution, and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think you should vote. But if you are voting freely, and if you do not feel that compulsion, then I think you are free to vote. And I think the Board ought to be on record and everybody ought to be clear that this vote is being taken without that pressure and without – without that impediment.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Well, Mark, are you – are you asking then for a statement, or a comment, because I certainly can comment on what you just said.

MARK HEATWALL: I just -- the comment was directed really to you and Ted.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

MARK HEATWALL: But in a general way to everyone, because you do have fiduciary obligations to this institution, which transcend your obligations to other – other things. And each one of you should examine that. I think Judith brought that to the fore. Stephanie, you echoed it. But since the – the allegations have been made, I think it's important to be on the record. And if anyone feels that they can't vote that way, I think they should abstain. So, having said that, if you vote, I assume that means you are not doing so – so freely.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Well, I – let me just make a personal comment, just in response to what you just said, Mark. I – I have felt in the past that despite the desire of some Board members over the last year or so to try to peg me into an alleged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice, to represent the integrity of my own convictions. I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. It is true that the Attorney General's office has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation. Ted, I don't know if you want to make a comment as well.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I'd like to just – I'd like to say that I came to the Board, like Stephanie and everyone else, as a volunteer. I came to the Board – I knew Dan Terra. I came to the Board at the request of Jim Collins and Judith Terra. I have served as Chair of the Collections Committee, and I think I've served effectively and have brought some wonderful new paintings – helped bring some wonderful new paintings to the Foundation collection. I've done this without any iota of a conflict of interest. I value my reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity, very, very highly. And I think I'm well known for both those things. I've – last – when – I've always felt free to – to form my own judgments. Last either August or early September, when Paul Tucker told me first about his enthusiasm for the building in Washington and wanting to move there, I disagreed. I'd long argued to explore a variety of stand-alone options in Chicago. I was willing to consider, as part of the strategic planning, going elsewhere, but I've always been a defender of Chicago. Like Arthur, I've – at the Board member in Givencey in September 25, I guess it was, 2000, when we learned of the suit, I argued for a total Board replacement. At the same time, I abhor the personalized suit brought by the plaintiffs. Unnecessary. I feel very, very sympathetic for Judith Terra. I lament the behavior of Senator Simpson. I'm very saddened by the behavior of Paul Tucker. I abhor the threatening tactics of the Attorney General. But I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is the best interests of the Foundation for its future as an independent viable force in Chicago and in France for the promulgation of American Art.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is there anyone else who has a statement to make? Otherwise, I will – I think it's appropriate that we now call the question.

PAUL TUCKER: I'd like to make a statement, Stephanie.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul, is that you?

PAUL TUCKER: It's me.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay.

PAUL TUCKER: It's painful to hear the comments that have been made in many quarters, although I admire the honesty about it all. I think it's very difficult to be able to predict the future in any form or fashion. None of us could have – thought we'd be at this particular juncture when we all joined the Board. Maybe some did, I don't know, but I certainly didn't, and I don't think Ted did, or Stephanie did. And I applaud their effort to try to be able to find the right way to act in these difficult causes. But what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview. The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by a public domain, i.e, the hand of the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive. I find it also counter to the very foundations on which foundations – and America as a whole – is supposed to be founded, which is why I protested this mediation, and will continue to do so. I also find it disturbing that the resolution calls for the continued presence of the Illinois factions, not that there are not wonderful people in Illinois, certainly more than enough to handle all of this. But I think that that should have been our choice, not somebody else's choice, and that compromise of our independence is something which I think, again, goes right to the heart of the matter. I think that everybody's consciences have been articulated with grace and conviction, and I think that is appropriate. But I also believe, in the end, that there are serious principles, particularly that of the ways in which a foundation is supposed to operate, which are deeply compromised by this mediation and its process. I think that it is, in the end, a sad day for the Foundation, and that ultimately a sad day in the larger case for the ways in which a state interferes with private property.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Uh –

MALE VOICE: I really would like to make one further short comment, and that is that foundations are established under certain laws, and have to meet certain requirements. Their responsibilities are to the people of the jurisdiction that has permitted them to set up these tax-free organizations. Therefore, I do not see that an oversight by such authorities is out of order. Thank you.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: I think it's time for us to call the question, so we will now proceed to a roll call on the motion. And I guess the question is – okay. Jacques, not here. Helene, not here. Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: I vote yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Maggie.

MARGARET DALEY: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron.

RON GIDWITZ: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yes.

JUDITH TERRA: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul.

PAUL TUCKER: No.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul?

PAUL TUCKER: No, Steph.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, I'm sorry. I didn't hear you, Paul.

PAUL TUCKER: Okay.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: The motion has been passed by six Board members. We now need a motion for adjourn.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: I move to adjourn.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Oh, I'm sorry. Is there – the Agenda did say any new business. Is there any new business which needs to come before this Board at this time? Hearing none, we need a motion to adjourn.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: So moved.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Is that Ted?

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Second.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Second, I'm sorry, Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: No, that was Arthur.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Do we need a roll call. A roll call for the motion. Dean.

DEAN BUNTROCK: I move to – we adjourn – I vote to adjourn.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Okay, yes. Maggie.

MARGARET DALEY: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Ron.

RON GIDWITZ: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Arthur.

ARTHUR HARTMAN: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Stephanie, yes. Ted.

THEODORE STEBBINS, JR: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Judith.

JUDITH TERRA: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: Paul.

PAUL TUCKER: Yes.

STEPHANIE MARSHALL: This meeting is adjourned. Thank you all, and bonne chance.

MALE VOICE: Thank you.

FURTHER RESOLVED, that not later than August 1, 2001, this Board of Directors shall meet to (i) elect a new Chairman (who shall be chosen from among the Class II Directors elected pursuant to the preceding resolution), (ii) elect new officers and committee heads, (iii) elect a new Executive Committee composed of the newly elected officers that also are directors, and (iv) elect a new Strategic Planning Committee whose members shall include Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Jr. and one or more Class II Directors; and

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the new Strategic Planning Committee, once elected, shall be authorized and directed to seek to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago, it being understood that the terms of any such partnership shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Directors; and

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the officers of the Corporation are authorized, in the name and on behalf of the Foundation, to execute such additional agreements, certificates or other documents, and to take such further actions (including, without limitation, the payment of expenses or other expenditures of money) as may be necessary or advisable to carry out the preceding resolutions.

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts having moved to dismiss Counts I and II of the Buntrock and Gidwitz Complaint, Paul Tucker having answered the Buntrock and Gidwitz Complaint and having denied its allegations, no other answer having been filed to either complaint and the parties having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

1. This Court has personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of these actions.

2. The parties hereto desire to resolve these disputes amicably and without the necessity of further proceedings in these actions. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and committee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to

12. Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation.

13. These actions are hereby dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its Directors, each of whom specifically denies any wrongdoing or liability. REPORTED BY: KAY A. LEVINE, M.A., C.S.R., R.P.R.
Certificate No. 84-3654.

The public policy of the state, the public policy of the United States, the public policy of the United States expressed in the Arbitration Act are that these things are to be encouraged, not discouraged. That's exactly what they would have here. If they want to complain about this agreement, and if they want to complain about this process, they can say it was fraud, they can say it was duress. They can say those things, but they need evidence of proof that's clear and convincing.

There is nothing proffered anywhere here that even offers a scintilla of evidence that nobody agreed to this or it wasn't properly agreed to. In fact, the people that they allege that were somehow coerced are not here. They were not in the federal court. They don't file an affidavit. The very people who supposedly were intimidated or hurt not only do not file an affidavit or appear; in fact, they make a statement that their vote has nothing to do with it. That they were not coerced into making this vote. They make their vote because it's a hard question. And we think on a better analysis here, about.

And if they want to say this was a coerced type of thing, it requires clear and convincing evidence. And that's after they admit there's an agreement; you must have to set it aside. There is no evidence of that at all. At all. All they have is affidavits of third parties, affidavits of an individual, Mr. Tucker, who himself can't testify to what these people feel or don't feel.

He said, I think they were coerced. They just told us they weren't. And in fact the federal court couldn't see any basis to this. Nothing's new. They filed the same things in the federal court. So there's nothing here in front of your Honor to warrant any kind of allowing them to file these matters or to be heard.

These are things that they are just dissatisfied with. Well, they're dissatisfied with a lot of things. Frankly, we're dissatisfied with a lot of things.

THE COURT: Do you believe that it would be different if they came forward with a motion that was seeking to have the Court not approve the settlement because it was not a settlement, not agreed to, something wrong?

MR. QUINLAN: They showed that it had not been agreed or not settled to, and there was substantial evidence -- that is what the Illinois law requires is substantial evidence. It might require a hearing. But there's no substantial evidence of this. In fact, it's admitted.

THE COURT: What about an argument that perhaps there's something illegal about this settlement? I know there were some statements made about that the other day, but I don't really see that necessarily here in terms of something -- cases that are cited that says that there's some provision of this agreement that is contrary to Illinois law.

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you notice in their pleading that they have filed -- actually it's a pleading, there's no complaint on file. There's actually nothing in front of your Honor other than a request to file a motion. So that there's no request to file a pleading. There's nothing that brings this case in front of the Court other than their motion.

proposed consent degree?

MR. BELLOWS: 21 days.

THE COURT: 21? I leave on July 27th. And I would like to have a chance to decide whether or not there's going to be any kind of discovery or evidentiary proceeding here because I would expect that you would do that while -- perhaps while I was gone.

This consent decree provides for the new board to take over and for everything to be done by August 1st. And I'm willing to expedite this as much as I need to in order to get this done.

MR. BELLOWS: Are you ordering the Attorney General to submit himself -- or the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, to submit himself to interrogation by us.

THE COURT: I am not ordering the Attorney General, based on what I have in front of me, to do anything. But he has indicated to you that he is willing to talk to you, and I think a good starting point is to talk to him first. He is a public official. He will not compromise any ongoing investigation, but I would expect that he

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO APPOINT AN INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COUNSEL FOR THE TERRA FOUNDATION, AND/OR RECEIVER

Plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra Foundation"), an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Plaintiffs") respectfully move this Court to appoint an independent litigation committee and independent litigation counsel, and/or receiver for the Terra Foundation to represent its interests in this matter. In support of this motion, Plaintiffs state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

The defendants do not take seriously this Court's TRO and the tenor of this Court's ruling. Within 24 hours of the hearing before this Court and entry of the TRO on September 25, 2000, the defendants appointed Tucker as the "director" of litigation for the Terra Foundation to manage this litigation. Tucker simultaneously is engaged in a comprehensive scheme with Judith Terra and Alan Simpson and others to destroy the Terra Foundation. Tucker's interests are directly adverse to the interests of the Terra Foundation and, accordingly, he cannot serve as litigation director for the Terra Foundation, as a matter of law. The defendants also appointed Sidley & Austin as litigation counsel for the Terra Foundation – under the direction of Tucker. In accepting this retention, Sidley & Austin is in direct violation of Rule 1.7 of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Under the Rules of Professional Conduct, Sidley & Austin owes an absolute duty of loyalty to the Foundation. It cannot serve two masters. Tucker is directly adverse to the Foundation and Sidley & Austin cannot, therefore, represent the Foundation through Tucker.

In addition, Winston & Strawn must be removed as "corporate" counsel for the Foundation under Rule 1.7 because plaintiff Ronald Gidwitz is a current client of Winston & Strawn and the Foundation is a defendant in this action. Mr. Gidwitz has not waived the conflict. Further, during the recent board of directors meeting of the Foundation, counsel for Winston & Strawn failed to advise the board members of the direct conflict of interest between Tucker and the defendants on the one hand and the Foundation on the other. Winston & Strawn also failed to advise the board members of the ethical rules governing the appointment of Tucker as the Foundation's litigation director to direct Sidley & Austin.

Consequently, this Court should appoint a receiver to safeguard the Foundation and, at the very least, appoint an independent litigation committee for the Terra Foundation in this case and order the appointment of independent counsel to represent the Terra Foundation. Such independence will be further assured through the appointment of a provisional receiver to implement the Court's order.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND.

Both the plaintiffs and the Illinois Attorney General's office have presented a verified complaint to this Court that the defendants, Paul Tucker, Judith Terra, Alan Simpson and others have caused, and intend to cause, irreparable harm to the Terra Foundation. Rather than safeguarding the Terra Foundation on behalf of the people of the State of Illinois, the defendants have embarked upon a scheme to close the Museum in Chicago and usurp the Art Work and assets of the Terra Foundation (valued in excess of $400 million) for their own purposes, in violation of the charitable trust established by Daniel Terra for the people of the State of Illinois.

A. Tucker, Terra, and Simpson Have Breached Their Fiduciary Duties to the Terra Foundation and Threaten to Destroy the Terra Foundation.

The evidence before this Court established that the Terra Foundation is a public trust, created for the benefit of the people of Illinois by Daniel Terra. The Terra Foundation is comprised of the Terra Museum in Chicago, substantial cash and real estate holdings, a multimillion dollar collection of American art, and a museum in Giverny, France. (See Plaintiffs' Verified Complaint and Illinois Attorney General's Complaint).

The plaintiffs and the Illinois Attorney General have submitted verified allegations that Tucker, Judith Terra, Simpson and others have engaged in serious waste and mismanagement of the Terra Foundation, and threaten imminent harm to the Terra Foundation, including the following:

- Grossly mismanaging the Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons responsible for the Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success;

- Causing the primary individuals in charge of security at the Terra Museum to quit resulting in an inexperienced and understaffed security staff, and jeopardizing the security of the $100 million of art displayed and collected at the Terra Museum;

- Permitting a director of the Terra Foundation to engage in a conflict of interest in representing the Terra Foundation at art auctions while representing the interests of private clients at the same auction;

- Expending significant monies on the purchases of art without obtaining the input or approval of the Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art acquisition;

- Attempting to invade the D4 Endowment Fund, which is restricted to educational purposes, for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

- Bypassing the lawfully elected Executive Committee operating the Terra Foundation and the Terra Museum;

- Wastefully incurring excessive legal fees by unnecessarily retaining counsel in replacement of the Terra Foundation's long-standing counsel;

- Misusing the art collection of the Terra Foundation for Judith Terra's own personal use and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy; and

- Allowing defendant Michaeli to participate in the management, control and operation of the Terra Foundation and the Terra Museum.

In addition, the verified pleadings submitted establish that Tucker, Judith Terra, Simpson and others have devised a scheme to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and relocate the priceless Art Work from Chicago, including the following:

- Tucker drafted a plan entitled "A Vision for The Future" which sets forth the defendants' intention to: (1) close the Terra Museum in Chicago; (2) move the Terra Foundation and its art collection to Washington, D.C.; (3) give its collections to the National Gallery or Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.; and (4) set up an educational facility in Washington, D.C.

- The Terra Foundation's Board of Directors met on August 24, 2000. At that meeting Tucker pronounced that the Terra Foundation should move to Washington, D.C. and close the Terra Museum in Chicago.

- Tucker is both Chairman and President of the Terra Foundation and is responsible for its safety, yet he has allowed and/or caused the Terra Foundation to be depleted of long term staff, has allowed and/or caused the Terra Foundation's long term security personnel to quit, has allowed and/or caused its executive director to quit, and directed that art belonging to the Terra Foundation be delivered from France to Defendant Judith Terra's home.

Because Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan Simpson have displayed an utter disregard for the best interests of the of the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries, the people of Illinois, the defendants should ultimately be removed as directors of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation.

B. This Court Found That a Fair Question Exists That Tucker, Terra and Simpson Threaten Irreparable Harm to the Terra Foundation.

On September 25, 2000, this Court conducted a hearing on the plaintiffs' and the Illinois Attorney General's Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. After the hearing, this Court found that Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan Simpson posed a genuine and immediate threat to the Terra Foundation and that an injunction was necessary to protect the Foundation and the public. This Court enjoined Tucker, Judith Terra, Simpson and others from removing plaintiffs from the board of directors and executive committee of the Terra Foundation, closing the Terra Museum, or relocating the Artwork outside of Illinois. A copy of the Order is attached as Exhibit A.[1] The tenor of the Court's ruling was to preserve the status quo and avoid actions by the defendants against the plaintiffs "which could then be interpreted as a retaliation measure for this lawsuit." (Report of Proceedings, 9/25/00, pp. 70-71.)

C. The Defendants Ignore this Court.

The defendants persist in treating the Terra Foundation and its assets as their own. First, the defendants did not appoint an independent litigation committee to fairly and independently represent the interests of the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries, the people of Illinois, as required by law. Second, on September 26, 2000, the defendants appointed Tucker as litigation director to oversee, direct and manage this litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation. By reason of the allegations contained in the verified pleadings, Tucker is directly adverse and in conflict with the Foundation in this litigation and therefore, cannot simultaneously represent the interests in the Foundation. Third, the defendants have retained the law firm of Sidley & Austin ostensibly as counsel for the Terra Foundation in this litigation. This relationship violates Rule 1.7 of the Rules of Professional conduct because Sidley & Austin takes direction from Tucker, and not a disinterested representative of the Foundation. Tucker's conduct has been challenged in the verified pleadings of the plaintiffs and Illinois Attorney General as harmful to the Foundation and, under such circumstances, Tucker cannot possibly represent the Foundation.

Winston & Strawn is also in violation of Rule 1.7. On September 26, 2000, when the defendants engineered the selection of Tucker as director of litigation, counsel from the law firm of Winston & Strawn was present for the Terra Foundation. Counsel provided no advice or counsel to the board of directors as to the conflict of interest vis-a-vis Tucker and the Terra Foundation, nor the ethical conflict facing Sidley & Austin in such situations. Winston & Strawn was obligated under the Rules of Professional Conduct as "corporate" counsel to advise the Foundation of the conflicts and the impropriety of such an arrangement. See R.P.C 1.7 and 1.13.

The conflict of interest is obvious and irreconcilable. As this Court found, Tucker's misconduct threatens to cause imminent and irreparable harm to the Terra Foundation. Tucker, therefore, cannot be the director of litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation involving litigation against himself. See R.P.C. 1.7; Lower v. Lanark Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 114 Ill. App.3d 462, 448 N.E.2d 940 (2d Dist. 1983). The best interest of the Terra Foundation is to investigate the allegations against Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson. Moreover, Tucker has already demonstrated that his self interest is directly adverse to the best interests of the Terra Foundation. Thus, by unilaterally appointing Tucker as litigation director, the defendants have revealed their intention to use Sidley & Austin as their own counsel. No attorney has filed an appearance for any of the individual defendants in this case. Each of the defendants must have their own counsel to represent them in this case and not the Foundation's counsel. R.P.C. 1.7.

Under Illinois law, as well as authority from other jurisdictions, Tucker must be replaced as "litigation director" and an independent litigation committee and/or receiver must be appointed for the Terra Foundation to manage the litigation. Consequently, Sidley & Austin must be replaced and the independent litigation committee and/or receiver needs to select independent litigation counsel for the Terra Foundation to protect the trust established by Daniel Terra.

ARGUMENT

I. COUNSEL FOR THE TERRA FOUNDATION SHOULD BE APPOINTED BY AN INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THAT COMMITTEE.

It is clear that the defendants' decision to appoint Tucker as litigation director cannot stand. The decision to retain counsel for the Terra Foundation and to direct the litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation must be made by an independent entity or a receiver appointed by the court to preserve and protect the Foundation's independence during this litigation.

Fundamental principles of corporate law apply here. Mile-O-Moe Fishing Club, Inc. v. Noble, 62 Ill. App.2d 50, 57, 210 N.E.2d 12, 15 (5th Dist. 1965). The authority to retain corporate counsel on behalf of the corporation generally resides in the board of directors. Where, however, members of the board are accused of wrongdoing, the board may only act through special independent litigation committees comprised of disinterested independent individuals. See Auerbach v. Bennet, 393 N.E.2d 994, 1001 (N.Y. 1979) (board of directors retains control over litigation decisions, but where members of the board are accused of wrongdoing, the board must act through a special litigation committee composed of individuals who "possess a disinterested independence and do not stand in a dual relation which prevents an unprejudicial exercise of judgment"); Zapata Corporation v. Maldonado, 430 A.2d 779, 786-788 (Del. 1980) (board of directors retains power over litigation decisions, however, such decisions must be delegated to an independent special litigation committee when the board members are accused of wrongdoing).

It is well settled that a special litigation committee must be comprised of disinterested members. The selection of independent and disinterested members of a litigation committee is of paramount importance to ensure that the best interests of the entity, the Foundation, are served. See Jerold S. Solovy, Barry Levenstam, & Daniel S. Goldman, The Role of Special Litigation Committees In Shareholder Derivative Litigation, Tort & Insurance Law Journal 864, 875. As Mr. Solovy notes, factors that require the disqualification of a board member from service on a special litigation committee include whether it is alleged the director is subject to personal liability and therefore "interested" or whether the director authorized, approved, or benefitted from the transaction underlying the lawsuit. Id. at 875-76. Moreover, counsel chosen must be counsel not previously retained by the corporation and truly independent so as to ensure proper legal advice is provided. Id. ("Consultation with independent counsel has been considered very significant evidence of the special committee's independence.").

The structural bias inherent in the litigation committee context requires that interested directors be disqualified from serving on a litigation committee. See Meg Shevach, Deciding Who Should Decide To Dismiss Derivative Suits, 39 Emory L. J. 937, 958 (1990) (The independent litigation committee must be beyond reproach.)

An interested director must be disqualified from serving on a litigation committee, and as many courts have concluded, directors who are defendants in the litigation should also not be permitted to select the litigation committee's members. See, e.g., Miller v. Register and Tribune Syndicate, Inc., 336 N.W.2d 709 (1983) (interested directors should not vote for the selection of the members of the independent litigation committee.) Here, Tucker, as the litigation director is vested with the authority to make decisions that control Terra's role in the litigation. Tucker's position goes even further than the principle established by the Miller court. Tucker is not simply selecting the litigation committee, but rather, Tucker is acting as the litigation committee.

Illinois law recognizes that directors and officers of a not for profit corporation, such as Tucker here, owe a fiduciary duty to the corporation and its beneficiaries to preserve the assets of the corporation for use exclusively in the stated mission of the corporation. Mile-O-Moe Fishing Club, Inc. v. Noble, 62 Ill. App. 2d 50, 57, 210 N.E.2d 12, 15 (5th Dist. 1965) (the officers and directors of a not for profit corporation are charged with the same degree of fidelity to the interests of the corporation as are the officers and directors of a business corporation.) Given Tucker's conflict of interest with the Terra Foundation by virtue of the numerous alleged acts of illegality and malfeasance, Tucker lacks the fidelity of interest to the Terra Foundation required under the law. Tucker cannot assume the position as "director" of litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

Neither Tucker nor his co-defendants are disinterested directors. The plaintiffs and Illinois Attorney General have charged Tucker and the co-defendants with attempting to destroy the Terra Foundation and seize its precious art work, cash and real estate holdings for their own unauthorized purposes. This Court has already found there is a fair question that unless enjoined, Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson will harm the Terra Foundation, as alleged. (See Exhibit A, Order). Thus, the record before this Court is crystal clear – Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson are directly adverse to the best interests of the Terra Foundation, and cannot represent the Terra Foundation in this litigation.

Independent counsel cannot be independent if they report to parties with personal interests or exposure in this litigation. Yet, counsel must report to someone. Plaintiffs request that this Court appoint a receiver and/or order that a special litigation committee be established to retain independent litigation counsel and direct the litigation on behalf of the Terra Foundation. This special litigation committee must be composed of independent and disinterested persons, possibly other members of the board of directors. See Zapata, 430 A.2d 788-89 (board of directors can appoint a special litigation committee to oversee litigation, but that committee must be independent); Auerbach v. Bennett, 393 N.E.2d at 1001 (directors selected for special litigation committee must be disinterested).

Who selects the independent board members, and how can the court and the parties be assured of true independence? In this case, resolving such an issue can result in costly collateral litigation. To avoid such collateral litigation and to ensure independent representation of the Terra Foundation, this Court should appoint a provisional receiver under the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/112.55) and the Court's inherent authority. See e.g. People ex rel., Fahner v. Community Hospital of Evanston (1st Dist. 1982). As requested in the verified pleadings of the Illinois Attorney General and plaintiffs, the receiver will be ideally equipped to investigate this matter and recommend to the Court the appropriate independent representation of the Foundation. There is no prejudice to any of the defendants, and the Foundation's best interests will be protected.

II. THE TERRA FOUNDATION MUST BE REPRESENTED BY INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COUNSEL.

It is equally clear that Sidley & Austin cannot represent the Terra Foundation under these circumstances. Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson have compromised Sidley & Austin, and Sidley & Austin has violated Rule 1.7 of the Rules of Professional Conduct by accepting Tucker as litigation director.[2] Under Illinois law, the Terra Foundation is entitled to independent counsel.

The Terra Foundation and its endowment is a charitable trust for the benefit of the people of Illinois. Any use of the foundation or its assets to the detriment of its beneficiaries is contrary to Illinois law. People ex rel Scott v. George F. Harding Museum, 58 Ill. App. 3d 408, 374 N.E.2d 756 (1st Dist. 1978). A charitable trust is defined as "a fiduciary relationship with respect to property arising as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it, and subjecting the person by whom the property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for a charitable purpose." Restatement (Second) Trust, Section 348, p. 210. Here, Sidley & Austin is not representing the Terra Foundation, is not protecting its assets for Daniel Terra's stated purpose, and is not discharging its fiduciary duties to the Foundation. Sidley & Austin is representing Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson. Moreover, Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson are improperly diverting funds from the Terra Foundation to pay for Sidley & Austin's services rendered on behalf of Tucker, Judith Terra and Simpson.

The Rules of Professional Conduct require Sidley & Austin's disqualification. Tucker's interest is directly adverse to the interests of the Terra Foundation and neither Tucker nor the other defendants may direct this litigation on their own behalf through Terra Foundation's "litigation" counsel. Rule 1.7 governs the very situation before the Court:

[2] This is not the first time Tucker and the co-defendants attempted to usurp the Terra Foundation's counsel as their own. Tucker directed Mayer Brown & Platt, the Terra Foundation's prior counsel, not to communicate with anyone on the Board but him, without his approval. Mayer Brown & Platt advised they represented the entire Foundation, and could not discharge its ethical obligations to the Terra Foundation under such circumstances. Mayer Brown & Platt resigned, accordingly.

16di-001305

(a) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another client, unless:

(1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client; and
(2) each client consents after disclosure.

(b) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client or to a third person, or by the lawyer's own interests, unless:

(1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not be adversely affected; and
(2) the client consents after disclosure.

(c) When representation of multiple clients in a single matter is undertaken, the disclosure shall include explanation of the implications of the common representation and the advantages and risks involved.

Ill. R. P.C. 1.7. Here, Sidley & Austin cannot reasonably believe that its representation of the Terra Foundation under these circumstances will not constitute a violation of its responsibilities under Rule 1.7. Even the Terra Foundation's consent to the representation would not permit Sidley & Austin to continue its representation of the Terra Foundation because Sidley & Austin cannot establish that it would be "reasonable" to believe that it could represent the Terra Foundation without any adverse effect from its relationship with Paul Tucker. In addition, Sidley & Austin cannot undo the harm.

Similarly, Winston and Strawn cannot continue to represent the Foundation under Rule 1.7 because they have a direct conflict with a current client, plaintiff Gidwitz, and have not demonstrated the lack of independence necessary to represent the Foundation. When Tucker was appointed litigation director to direct Sidley & Austin, the Terra Foundation's attorney from Winston & Strawn present at the meeting did not inform the board of directors of the ethical conflict arising from this arrangement, or give any advice or counsel to the Foundation to avoid these conflicts.

Illinois law recognizes the need for independent corporate counsel in situations like that here — where defendant directors are alleged to have engaged in serious misconduct against the organization. See Lower v. Lanark Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 114 Ill. App. 3d 462, 448 N.E.2d 940 (2d Dist. 1983); Cannon v. U.S. Acoustics Corporation, 398 F. Supp. 209 (N.D. Ill. 1975) rev'd. on other grounds 532 F. 2d 1118 (7th Cir. 1976). As the Court stated in Lower:

> Even if no conflicts currently exist, the potential conflict cannot be ignored, and we must consider the serious hardship to the court and the parties that would ensue if new counsel is made necessary because a conflict does arise in the course of trial. On balance, the corporation must obtain independent counsel.

Lower, 114 Ill. App. 3d at 469, 448 N.E.2d 940. Here, the conflict is actual, not a potential conflict, as in Lower. The Foundation, therefore is entitled to independent counsel forthwith. Tucker's interests are adverse to the Terra Foundation. This Court should therefore order the appointment of a receiver, independent counsel for the Terra Foundation, and/or the creation of an independent litigation committee.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for all the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court disqualify Sidley & Austin from representing the Terra Foundation in this action, disqualify Tucker as litigation director, appoint a receiver for the Foundation, appoint independent counsel for the Terra Foundation, and order the selection of an independent litigation committee for the Terra Foundation, and any other relief that this Court deems fair and just.

DECLARATION OF PROFESSOR EVELYN BRODY

1. My name is Evelyn Brody. My business address is Chicago-Kent College of Law, Illinois Institute of Technology, 565 West Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois 60661.

2. I am Professor of Law at the Chicago-Kent College of Law at the Illinois Institute of Technology, where I have been a faculty member since 1992. In the Fall semester 2001, I will be a visiting professor at Duke University School of Law. My research interests encompass the tax, corporate, trust, property, and constitutional issues relating to nonprofit institutions. My scholarly publications have examined, among other topics, the economic and institutional similarities between nonprofit and for-profit organizations; charitable endowments; the direct and indirect effects of tax reform on charities; the limits of charity fiduciary law; and federal and State regulation of charities. My curriculum vitae is attached as Exhibit A.

3. I obtained my B.A. from Yale College and my J.D. from Georgetown University Law Center. I have been a lawyer for 20 years, having first practiced with Arnold & Porter in Washington, D.C. (1981-85), and then Michael, Best, and Friedrich in Madison, Wisconsin (1985-88), before working in the Office of Tax Policy at the U.S. Treasury Department (1988-92). Much of my time in both practice and the government was devoted to issues relating to tax-exempt organizations. I teach courses on the taxation of individuals and businesses, and recently taught a course on nonprofit law, and present my research at law school faculty workshops, professional conferences, and practitioner conferences around the country. I am also an associate scholar with The Urban Institute's Center on Nonprofits and Philanthropy. Active with the American Bar Association Tax Section, I am co-chair of the policy subcommittee of the Exempt Organizations Committee. I am also working with the ABA Business Law section on a revision to the Revised Model Nonprofit Corporation Act. I serve as a Council member of the Aspen Institute Nonprofit Sector Research Fund, and am an active member of the multi-disciplinary Association for Research on Nonprofit Organizations and Voluntary Action, currently running for the board.

PURPOSE OF DECLARATION

4. Until July 2001, my interest in the above-captioned dispute – while keen – was purely scholarly. I live in Chicago, and followed the news reports closely. Then the Defendants in this dispute – namely, the Terra Foundation (the "Foundation"), Paul Hayes Tucker, Alan K. Simpson, and Judith Terra (collectively, the "Defendants") – contacted me and retained me, as an expert on nonprofit organizations, to assess the implications on the operation of charities of the proposed settlement agreement that is pending before this Court (the "Proposed Settlement"). They provided me with court-filed documents for my review.

5. I have spent my academic career lamenting the twin weaknesses of the charitable sector: the lack of energy and initiative on the part of many nonprofit managers, and the lack of zeal in enforcing the public's interest on the part of many charity regulators. Here, though, was the reverse situation: It appeared to me that the State was weighing in on the side of the minority directors against the efforts of a majority of a board trying to use charitable assets in the most productive way possible consistent with the charitable mission.

6. The settlement agreement would "pack" the Foundation's board with Illinois residents for at least 25 years, and handicap the business judgment of the board with geographic restrictions for the next 50 years, without any support in the existing articles of incorporation or bylaws. The Attorney General cannot, under the law, compel this outcome. Only the courts can preserve the flexibility of this Foundation to operate as originally envisioned.

7. In this Declaration, I will discuss two issues: (I) the significance of the absence of a geographic restriction in the Foundation's organic documents; and (II) the proper role of the State attorney general in the oversight of charities.

I. THE ABSENCE OF A GEOGRAPHIC RESTRICTION IS AN IMPORTANT PART OF THE PURPOSES OF THE FOUNDATION

8. Private philanthropy and the nonprofit sector rest on the fundamental Constitutional guarantees of private property protected by due process, liberty of contract, and freedom of worship and expression. As long as the trust or corporation qualifies as charitable, no legislature, attorney general, or court may mandate a departure from its privately-determined purposes no matter how confident are the parties that a better social use could be made of the funds.

8. The inherent conservative nature of this legal structure has permitted numerous charitable trusts notorious for their founder's idiosyncracies. A donor might dictate a general geographic restriction – such as Buck Trust's limitation of the funds for the benefit of Marin County, California (one of the wealthiest counties in the country). A donor might dictate an even more specific use – such as the prohibition on moving displayed works of art under the trusts establishing the Barnes Foundation (outside Philadelphia), the Isabelle Stuart Gardner Museum (Boston), and the Frick Collection (New York City).

10. Yet just as honored under the law is a purpose clause unrestricted as to geographic use. Indeed, a donor or founder might draw upon the lessons of the Buck Trust and the museum foundations just described – that no mortal can predict the future, and the narrower the purpose, the sooner the charity is likely to outlive its usefulness. Thus, an enlightened founder could recognize that tying the hands of the trustees only invites wasteful benign neglect or wasteful resort to the courts for approval of a cy pres petition. Nor is there any guarantee of a trustee's success in a cy pres proceeding to reform a charitable trust, because relief will be granted only if the original restriction is impossible to carry out. The Buck Trust was prohibited from expending its resources to benefit those in the larger San Francisco area; and a Pennsylvania court recently rejected a thoughtful cy pres petition from the Hershey Trust, whose income from Hershey stock far exceeds its ability to spend, as designated, on students at the Hershey School. Even approval takes time and effort: A Pennsylvania court held a 3-day hearing prior to approving a one-time tour of the art collection of the Barnes Foundation, and the badly needed renovation of the museum; another 3-day hearing (and more delay) was required before the judge approved an additional two sites for the tour. See In re Barnes Foundation, 684 A.2d 123, 443-45 (Pa. Super. 1996).

11. Like the purposes of a charitable trust, the purposes of a not-for-profit corporation are committed to the discretion of private parties. The United States Supreme Court held in the seminal 1819 case of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. 518 (4 Wheat. 518) (1819), that a charitable not-for-profit corporation is a contract protected under the Contracts Clause of the U.S. Constitution against unilateral State legislative amendment of the corporation's governance structure. Writing for the Court, Chief Justice John Marshall observed: "It requires no very critical examination of the human mind to enable us to determine, that one great inducement to these gifts is the conviction felt by the giver, that the disposition he makes of them is immutable." 17 U.S. at 647. Rejecting the New Hampshire legislature's attempt to expand the number of directors of the college, and to convert it into a university, Justice Marshall declared: "This [act] may be for the advantage of this college in particular, and may be for the advantage of literature in general; but it is not according to the will of the donors, and is subversive of that contract, on the faith of which their property was given." 17 U.S. at 653. Not incidentally, Justice Marshall emphasized that "the objects of the contributors, and the incorporating act, were the same[:] the promotion of [C]hristianity, and of education generally, not the interests of New-Hampshire particularly." 17 U.S. at 640.

12. Accordingly, we should credit the absence of an explicit geographic restriction in the Foundation's organic documents as an important part of the founder's intent. Specifically, the articles of incorporation make no mention of any geographic limitation on its activities, either as originally filed in 1978 or as amended in 1994. Indeed, the 1994 amendment substitutes for "a museum" the phrase "museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad" – and was signed by founder Daniel Terra, as chairman. This language is reiterated verbatim in the bylaws. It is uncontested that the Foundation also has operated a museum in Giverny, France since the early 1990's.

II. THE ROLE OF THE STATE ATTORNEY GENERAL IS TO GUARD AGAINST CHARITY FIDUCIARIES' WRONGDOING, NOT TO INTERFERE IN DECISION-MAKING CARRIED OUT IN GOOD FAITH

13. As a basic premise, society relies on the boards, rather than the state, to govern charities. Within broadly bounded charitable purposes, and any restrictions in gifts, no laws tell the entity or its managers how to "do" charity.

14. The actions of the Terra Foundation board prior to the Attorney General's involvement indicate, to me, not mismanagement but rather its opposite – sustained efforts to ensure that the charitable assets continue to be productive. That the board considered conducting activities in another State does not give rise to a breach of fiduciary duty where the articles of incorporation impose no geographic restriction. In the case of the Foundation, there has been no failure of its original purpose and so no amendment to the articles of incorporation would be necessary for the board to redeploy assets out of the State of Illinois.

15. State attorneys general have no necessary expertise, much less the resources, to address the myriad concerns of the hundreds of thousands of charities that function in the United States today. In particular, an attorney general is not equipped to set the policies and make the hard decisions required to operate a museum. The museum world of today is a complex web of block-buster tours; collaborations (such as this summer's first-time joint exhibit and marketing campaign in New York by the Whitney and the Museum of Modern Art); and cross-border allliances (the Tate Gallery in London and the Museum of Modern Art, while continuing plans collaborating on painting exhibitions, recently terminated their plans for a joint commercial website). Like the Terra Foundation, the Guggenheim operates or plans to operate museums at more than one location – eight, to be precise (two in New York City and one more on the way, plus Venice, Bilbao, Berlin, and sites planned for Las Vegas and Brazil). Among more traditional concerns, museum boards must worry about such issues as the tax consequences of corporate sponsorship arrangements; the intellectual property value of reproductions; and the price to charge for admission, given the competition for museum-goers' educational and entertainment budget.

16. A State attorney general has the obligation to provide oversight of the charitable sector. To this end, an attorney general is vested with the authority to seek to correct breaches of fiduciary duty that have not otherwise been remedied by the board. However, the attorney general is not a "super" member of the board. Where, as here, suit was brought against the board by a minority of the directors, the attorney general's involvement does not tip the weight of the vote in an area committed to the discretion of a majority of the board. Nor, as described above, does the attorney general have authority to impose changes in the purposes of a charity – in particular, a geographic restriction.

17. A regulator's enforcement activities always have policy implications, even if unintended. For example, when Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morganthau seized paintings loaned by a Viennese collector for an exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art – out of concern that they might have an illegal Nazi provenance – museums throughout New York feared for their ability to put together exhibitions requiring loans from nonresidents. See In the Matter of the Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum Served on the Museum of Modern Art, 719 N.E.2d 897, 901 (N.Y. 1999) (referring to the statute then in effect as intended, in part, "to protect State cultural institutions that depend upon the free flow of art for the benefit of the people of the State of New York").

18. Even charity regulators, understandably, have specific goals and priorities. An elected

State attorney general primarily seeks to further the interests of the electorate of his or her State. The risk of such an approach, of course, is that charitable activity in the United States could be viewed as a parochial, zero-sum game: As with business development efforts, one State's loss is another's gain. (Nor is it clear that Illinois – which just lured the Boeing headquarters – would lose on net from this mobility.) In terms of the national public interest, moreover, relocation could be a positive-sum game: A charity board might determine that the overall social benefit can be increased by moving the activities from a State with a low utility to a State with a higher one.

19. In the case of the Terra Foundation, the Attorney General seeks to read into the purposes of the corporation the desire to benefit primarily "the people of Illinois." The Attorney General has in one other recently publicly reported instance made the same demand. As the Chicago Tribune reported on the settlement reached with the Regenstein Foundation:

> The fact that the new directors lived elsewhere had concerned the state attorney general's office, which intervened in the case and insisted the settlement say that most of the money would be disbursed here.
>
> "We're happy to get it locked in for the Chicagoland area," said Assistant Atty. Gen. Floyd Perkins. He noted that his office has intervened in another case to prevent the Terra Museum of American Art on Michigan Avenue from moving out of town.

J. Linn Allen, "Foundation Truce a Boon for Charities," Chicago Tribune, April 28, 2001, at page 14 (emphasis added).

20. In addition, the Attorney General's conception of who are "the people of Illinois" overlooks perhaps the most important constituent of charity in this dispute: the donor. Those with significant assets to bestow on society keep a close eye on the regulatory environment. The position of the Attorney General that all charitable trusts in Illinois are, by law, established for the ultimate enjoyment of the people of Illinois raises two unhappy implications: First, that trust law applies across the board (and not just for registration purposes) for all charities, regardless of the founder's choice of the not-for-profit corporate form; and second, that no regulator exists whose interest it is to look out for the beneficiaries of a national or international charity. The next potential donor of an important art collection will think long and hard before subjecting it to Illinois jurisdiction.

21. The question of the "accountability" of charities is a hotly debated one in the philanthropic world today. Equally important, it seems to me, is the accountability of the regulator. "Who guards the guardian?" Lack of transparency in the regulation of charities makes it impossible to assess the regulators. Few cases involving nonprofit fiduciary issues have reached the courts – often because of the concerns of charity fiduciaries as much as of the attorney general. Reform rather than punishment is generally the goal of the charity regulator, and board members as well prefer a chance to improve their behavior while avoiding embarrassment and personal liability. Closing agreements or settlements between the regulator and the charity to end an enforcement action can be quite detailed, often spelling out specific terms dealing with future structure and governance. Under these circumstances, however, the board of a charity is vulnerable to being strong-armed into assenting to an attorney general's demands.

23. Only a court decision stands between the Foundation's purpose and governance structure as they existed prior to the Attorney General's involvement, and a radical alteration of purpose and governance structure as described in the Consent Judgment and Order.

CONCLUSION

24. For all the reasons outlined above, the Attorney General's participation in and procurement of the Proposed Settlement – and anticipated future half-century involvement – are inconsistent with the legal framework for the operation of charitable not-for-profit corporations. The Attorney General's actions create an enormous disincentive for charities to locate or seek incorporation in the state of Illinois.

Re: People of the State of Illinois vs. Terra Foundation, et.al.

Gentlemen:

At the court hearing on May 16, I was surprised to hear defense counsel report to Judge Kinnaird that the Attorney General's modifications to the mediator's circulated settlement were a substantial deviation from the terms of the mediation agreement. I was further surprised to hear that the mediator's office had also suggested to defense counsel that our changes are a substantial deviation from the terms agreed to last Friday. The mediator's document looked like a broad brush outline and our document was meant to provide the needed specifics.

I am writing therefore to clarify this Office's position on settlement in this case and the basis for our additions and deletions to the mediator's draft. It should be noted that we made no changes to Part A of the mediator's draft. However, settlement here was discussed on a comprehensive total settlement basis and this Office's additions and modifications were made to supply necessary needed mechanics to insure enforceability, which the mediator's draft lacked. Specifically it supplied provisions for selecting the new Board which are in the spirit of what was agreed to last Friday, but which are absent in the mediator's draft. We also provided needed precision about terms of office and how and when new officers would be selected, which was consistent with agreements and discussions on Friday, but which were not sufficient in the mediator's draft.

At the mediation meeting last Friday, I stated the Attorney General's position for settlement could be accomplished by two different approaches. One approach would be by a complex lengthy document providing the details of what the Terra Foundation could and could not do, much along the line of our past discussions, and to the point that it must operate in and from Illinois and in most instances in no other location with some board replacement and re-composition. The second approach to settlement was through a change in control of the Foundation by putting in place, now at settlement, a majority on the Board acceptable to the Attorney General and who he, in his sole discretion, believed favored Illinois, accompanied by the modest restrictive additions to the purposes on the Foundation as our set forth in the mediator's settlement proposal. It evolved through discussion that certain parties preferred a Foundation free to chart its own course, and thus preferred limited modification on purpose and the installation of a Board the Attorney General and plaintiffs would accept.

I explained at the end of the day Friday and several times during the day that this Office would not settle until the wording on restrictions was resolved, actual names of the Board members were known, and the makeup of the Board acknowledged as acceptable to this Office. I stated that we had a sense of who in the past had been pro-Illinois and who had not, and that at the end of the process the Attorney General would settle and accept the Board only if there were a majority who were pro-Illinois as determined by him in his sole discretion. Discussions proceeded and ended on this basis. The mediator's circulated document was not precise on that point.

The mediator's proposal as circulated does not contain this fundamental condition of the Attorney General. We reviewed the mediator's framework it appeared to require an election of the board but wanted the agreement prior to an election. We tried to modify the terms to allow this Office to know and effect the makeup of the Board and accept it in a settlement document before the election occurs. If the parties wish to include the terms agreed last Friday that the Board will hold an election and then allow this Office to review the new Board and decide whether we accept its makeup and whether we agree to settle, we have no objection.

There was substantial discussion about a committee to select the new directors, subject to a final review and right in the Attorney General to accept or reject the new Board prior to having a settlement. A discussion took place about how that would work. The discussions considered all plaintiffs, all defendants and Stebbins resigning. Eventually as a part of a compromise, it was decided that only Alan Simpson's resignation would be accepted and all others would stay on, but five additional Board members would be added. A provision for having a majority of Illinois citizens was then discussed. At each stage and juncture I re-stated that at the end of the process the Attorney General only would settle and accept the Board if it contained a majority who were pro-Illinois as determined by this Office.

Renewed discussions then occurred on how the five new Board members would be selected.

It was agreed that a committee composed of Messrs. Hilliard, Buntrock, Gidwitz, Stebbins and Tucker would accept nominees, that they, the committee, select new Board member candidates, that the Attorney General could make recommendations for nominations, and most importantly the Attorney General had the right at his sole discretion to decide to accept the nominated directors or not, and that ultimately five would be agreed upon by the Attorney General to be proforma elected. This process and right in the Attorney General was made clear at mediation and was an integral part of the compromise that allows the defendants to remain as Board members.

Further it was my understanding that the agreement included a mid-June special Board meeting which would mechanically complete the election of the five new Board members selected as I set forth above, and then allow an election of new officers, establish a new executive committee, establish a new steering committee and set terms of office for the fifteen Board members with the new Board members participating. Thus the agreement reached was that the Attorney General would not settle until the identity of the new Board was clearly stated and accepted by him at his sole discretion and that the new Board members would be immediately involved in electing new officers and the formation of the Foundation's significant committees.

The settlement document circulated by the mediator does not provide all of the terms as set forth above and therefore we do not agree that it sets forth the agreement reached last Friday. The mediator's proposal provides at (Part B 1. c.) that the entire Board will nominate candidates and participate in a special election in mid-June and that nominations shall be coordinated with a committee and the Attorney General. We do not agree that those provisions provide the terms required by the Attorney General as part of the settlement. The mediator's settlement proposal does not provide that the Attorney General has a right to withhold settling until the makeup of the new Board is decided.

Our additions to this section were meant to give meaning to the words "coordinate with....the Attorney General" to reflect our settlement requirement that at the end of the process the Attorney General would settle and accept the Board only if there was a majority who were pro-Illinois as determined by this Office. Our further provision about Illinois directors acting as a group to select the positions reserved for Illinoisans was to reflect that the committee was more than a nominating committee, that it would work to gather nominees and would select the potential Board members that would likely be accepted by the Attorney General.

We had only a limited time to reflect upon and modify the mediator's proposal. The term used by the mediator "coordinate with...the Attorney General" was not sufficient or precise enough. We attempted to work with his draft and make modifications to give effect to the parties agreed terms. We are prepared to put in the agreed terms that the Attorney General may wait until the Board goes through the election process and that he will then review the Board makeup and decide whether there is a majority is pro-Illinois, and then determine in his sole discretion whether to settle this matter.

It seemed to us that the mediator changed the terms as agreed , drafting the agreement to provide that we would agree upon Board members before they were elected. Our changes were made to work within the mediator's suggested modified process. We however, require under that modification that we would have a right to nominate and also veto up-front any and all nominees we did not wish, leaving five new members to be pre-agreed elected to the Board by unanimous consent as an agreed process. We felt that this provision in conjunction with the other suggested changes would allow us to settle before the actual election. Please note, we have no problem with the terms agreed to last Friday that at the end of the process the Attorney General would review the composition of the new Board and in his sole discretion agree to accept it and to settle. In furtherance thereof we submit a substitute addition perfectly acceptable to us, to add at the end of (Part B 1. e) as follows: "It is agreed that upon completion of the new Board's election in Mid-June 2001 the Attorney General will have the right to determine in his sole discretion whether he believes the majority of the Board to be pro-Illinois and to decide and advise then whether he will agree to a settlement of his lawsuit."

We also added terms to (Part B 1. d) because it was agreed at mediation that the new Board members were going to participate in electing new officers and establishing a new executive committee. The mediator's agreement is an outline it did not state such with particularity. Before I was prepared to state any draft reflected the actual agreements of last Friday, I required more clarity and precision. We wanted to schedule the officers' elections so that the new Board members were assured a right to participate as had been agreed.

We believe time is of the essence here. We also wanted the new Board, its new officers, and new executive committee to be in place and moving by end of June 2001. I did not want to leave the issue of the existing officers and executive committee unresolved in limbo while a new Board elected in June 2001 tried to schedule a meeting. send adequate notice and hold those elections. The recent history of scheduling Board meetings explains our concern. I also did not want to take a chance that the new Board members would be scheduled out of such a meeting or that the new officers would be elected at a meeting without the new Board members present. Therefore our purpose was to give precision to what had been agreed to at mediation, i.e. that the new Board members would participate and elect new officers.

Our addition of (Part B 1. f.) was to add the needed mechanism to assure that the terms set forth and agreed to in Part A of the settlement were made an irrevocable part of the corporate purposes of the Foundation. Such an addition is fully consistent with the agreed terms last Friday and a requirement of a settlement here.

Our addition to (Part B 2.) concerning qualities of directors was to allow these standards to be considered and used in looking at nominees. However, while these standards have been circulated in discussion drafts they were not discussed or agreed to at mediation last Friday and clearly a Board member need not have all of these attributes to serve.

Our additions at (Part D) was to flesh out the outline supplied by the mediator. We supplied necessary mechanics to allow enforcement of the agreement, specifically the right of the court to retain jurisdiction to enforce the settlement as a Consent decree. Also it was necessary to make clear that this Office does not give general releases and to make clear that all parties are being released from all claims arising in the matter.

I must tell you I was quite chagrined when our suggested changes were reported to the court to be a vastly different settlement proposal from that agreed to last Friday, that we were in some way attempting to change the agreement. This is not a dollar damage case; here the mechanics and words employed are the settlement, and a skeletal outline proposal is not acceptable to us. In good faith we took the time to rework the mediator's proposal and flesh it out. It was an outline, incomplete and not precise and did not reflect in precise enough enforceable terms what had been agreed to. If the report made to the court was meant to indicate that the terms required by this Office which were agreed to last Friday are not going to be met, then I think we need to resolve such and advise the court.

Substantial public charitable assets are at issue here and we will not proceed in less than a precise and deliberate manner. We have no strong pride of authorship. If "wordsmithing" is needed, we are prepared to be reasonable and spend as much time as it takes, but we insist upon the terms we stated and agreed to last Friday as set forth above, or some modified process that meets the spirit of what was agreed.

In reviewing the mediator's settlement proposal further I note reference to attorney fees being decided by the court. While we agree please note that although not specifically stated in the mediator's document, his reference to a court review of the attorney fees, includes the right of the Attorney General to participate and review any and all fees and to object to fees if we believe they are inappropriate.

This document is provided for settlement discussion purposes only, and can not be used as an admission or for any other purpose in this litgation or any other. I have attached a re-modified Attorney General settlement agreement, providing the terms as agreed last Friday.

Foundation truce a boon for charities

J Linn Allen, Tribune staff reporter

A squabble in a wealthy and philanthropic family ended with a court settlement Friday that will likely mean a generous and speedy windfall for a number of major Chicago cultural institutions, hospitals and other charities.

Cook County Judge Robert Boharic approved the agreement, which provides that $50 million will be distributed this year from the Regenstein Foundation to a number of recipients, including the Lincoln Park Zoo, the Art Institute, the University of Chicago and Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

It also stipulates that 90 percent of all money donated in the future by the $125 million fund will go to charities and institutions in the Chicago area.

The pact ended more than half a year of wrangling among members of the Regenstein clan on how to distribute money from the Chicago-based foundation, one of the city's major benefactors for more than 50 years.

The conflict began late last summer when Betty Regenstein Hartman, daughter of fund founders Joseph and Helen Regenstein, proposed to give away $82 million to various charities in a single year, which would cut foundation funds by two-thirds. Typically the fund gives out only about 5 to 7 percent of its assets a year.

The fund's director, Robert Mecca, blocked the plan, expressing fears that it was a prelude to shutting the fund down. He was supported by Susan Regenstein Frank, a daughter of Hartman's brother, Joseph Regenstein Jr., who ran the fund for many years before his death last year.

Conflict landed in court

Hartman filed a suit in September trying to bar Mecca from thwarting her wishes and allowing the lump-sum distribution to go ahead, which would have included $15 million to the zoo, $12 million to the Art Institute and $10 million to the University of Chicago's Regenstein Library.

The settlement allows Hartman to distribute $50 million this year to beneficiaries on the same list as her original plan, which included more than two dozen charities. No donation amounts were specified, though a $12 million limit was set for any single recipient. Hartman declined to comment on how she intends to divide the money.

Once that is done, the pact provides that Hartman will step down as a fund director and that a new board will be set up with five members to supervise future donations, including at least $20 million more over the next five years.

Members of the new board will be Mecca; Frank; Frank's brother Joseph Regenstein III; one of Hartman's two daughters; and Marshall Field V, who has been involved with various civic institutions.

Field is to occupy a board seat reserved for a "disinterested, non-family person who resides in the State of Illinois," in the words of the settlement agreement. That is important because although Hartman lives in Winnetka, the family members on the new board all live out-of-state.

The fact that the new directors lived elsewhere had concerned the state attorney general's office, which intervened in the case and insisted the settlement say that most of the money would be disbursed here.

"We're happy to get it locked in for the Chicagoland area," said Assistant Atty. Gen. Floyd Perkins. He noted that his office has intervened in another case to prevent the Terra Museum of American Art on Michigan Avenue from moving out of town.

'I'm glad it's over'

Susan Frank, who lives outside Philadelphia, said she and her brother were happy about the settlement, and added that she had long wanted to be a member of the foundation board. "I'm glad it's over," she said.

Last fall, when the family conflict became public, Frank said closing down the foundation would be contrary to the wishes of her father, Joseph Regenstein Jr., who had long been a fixture in Chicago philanthropic circles as head of the foundation.

Frank also said at the time that Hartman didn't have the "energy, care or education to be bothered" with the foundation.

Among the factors holding up settlement of the case, whose terms had been worked out in principle months ago, were some $750,000 in fees being billed to the foundation by attorneys representing the warring parties. A side letter to the pact said the lawyers would reduce their billings to the foundation by 15 percent.

Lincoln Park Zoo president Kevin Bell said he was glad the foundation would continue to be a major giver in Chicago over the long term.

Bell said that the foundation has pledged $9 million for a project to transform the large mammal house to the Regenstein African Journey, and that funds for the project had been coming in regularly despite the conflict.

Joseph Regenstein, who made his fortune in the paper-making and chemical business, and his wife, Helen, set up the foundation in 1950.

Re: Interview of Floyd D. Perkins Regarding Terra Foundation Litigation

Dear Mr. Ioppollo:

Thank you for responding by telephone to our request to interview Mr. Perkins. While the circumstances compel us to accept your limitation of the interview (as you put it, to an informal "chit-chat"), we are disappointed that Mr. Perkins has refused to discuss his role in the Terra case on the record and under oath.

Nevertheless, due to the tight briefing schedule set by the Court, we feel we must proceed with the interview. Of course I am sure you understand that we do so without waiving our right to depose Mr. Perkins or any other discovery rights to which our clients are entitled under well settled law.

We ask that you reconsider, at least, conducting the interview on the record. This will serve all parties' interests in avoiding confusion about the content of the conversation. A transcript will make clear the questions put to Mr. Perkins and his answers without the need to rely on note taking. This is in everyone's interest.

We will be present at your offices for the interview on the afternoon of Monday, July 16, 2001, at 2:00 p.m. if that is convenient. Please do not hesitate to call me at (202) 326-7905 if you have any additional questions.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Levinson.

Dr. Stebbins is on vacation. He learned yesterday of your desire to interview him "on the record and under oath" on Tuesday, July 17 "concerning [his] involvement in the Terra Foundation litigation."

Dr. Stebbins has already stated on the record at the June 29, 2001 Board Meeting the reasons why he joined a majority of the Board in voting in favor of the results of the Court-ordered mediation. We believe you already have a copy of the tape of that meeting. We have prepared a transcript of the meeting of which you could have a copy if you like. Dr. Stebbins would not say anything to you inconsistent with what he already said on the record at the June 29 Board Meeting.

Yours truly

Re: Interview of Dr. Stephanie Marshall

Dear Mr. Roberts:

I represent Alan Simpson, Judith Terra and Paul Hayes Tucker in the Buntrock v. Terra litigation and am writing to request your assistance in scheduling an interview of Dr. Stephanie Marshall in connection with the upcoming hearing on the proposed settlement of that dispute.

I understand that you represent Dr. Marshall in connection with the Illinois Attorney General's investigation concerning the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. We have been seeking to interview Dr. Marshall regarding the settlement of the Buntrock v. Terra litigation. Last week Laurel Bellows, my co-counsel, called Dr. Marshall's office and spoke with her assistant; Ms. Bellows left a message explaining that she would like to interview Dr. Marshall concerning the settlement and requested that Dr. Marshall return her call. Dr. Marshall did not return Ms. Bellows' call.

While I do not understand you to represent Dr. Marshall in connection with this specific dispute, I am requesting your assistance in scheduling the interview given your representation of her in a closely-related matter. We would like to interview Dr. Marshall under oath and have a transcript made of the interview. Due to the schedule set by the Court, we would like to conduct the interview tomorrow or Wednesday, although we also may be able to do it Thursday morning.

I appreciate your assistance in this matter and look forward to hearing from you.

Very truly yours,

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO CONDUCT LIMITED, FOCUSED DISCOVERY CRITICAL TO A RESOLUTION OF PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson (collectively, the "Defendants"), individually and derivatively on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), respectfully move this Court, pursuant to Illinois Supreme Court Rules 201, et seq., for the entry of an order granting defendants limited and focused discovery as follows:

the deposition of Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins;

the deposition of Stephanie P. Marshall;

the deposition of Dr. Theodore Stebbins.

As set forth in our objections of July 19, 2001,[1] no reasonable basis exists for denying the defendants an opportunity to develop additional credible evidence that the proposed settlement was arrived at in contravention of Illinois law. Verified evidence already before this Court – including admissions of Perkins, et al. – are more than sufficient to warrant the requested discovery. Absent this evidence, this Court simply cannot fairly or adequately consider the manifest wrongdoing associated with the coerced and improvident action by certain board members in supporting the proposed settlement. No proper resolution of the issues pertinent to the proposed settlement can be fairly, justly or reasonably effected absent the defendants' opportunity to cross-examine the above identified critical witnesses.

Wherefore defendants respectfully urge this Court to grant the limited discovery requested herein and to adjourn and continue any hearing dealing with the proposed approval of the settlement pending the conclusion of such discovery.

Respectfully submitted,

JUDITH TERRA, ALAN K. SIMPSON and

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE RESPONSIVE PLEADINGS AND TO JOIN ADDITIONAL PARTIES

Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson (collectively, the "Defendants"), individually and derivatively on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), respectfully submit this memorandum in support of their motion for leave to file the attached responsive pleadings. Such filings had previously been abated pending mediation proceedings as directed by this Court. The filing of these responsive pleadings is consistent with the interest of justice and conforms in all respects with the applicable Rules of Civil Procedure.

The applicable provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure (i.e., 735 ILCS 5/2-601 et seq.) are to be broadly and liberally construed so that cases are resolved on their merits. (See Lee v. Chicago Transit Auth., 152 Ill. 2d 432, 467 (1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 908 (1993); Savage v. Pho, 312 Ill. App. 3d 553, 556-57 (2000); First Sec. Bank, 165 Ill. App. 3d 725, 730 (1987).

Analogizing the filing of our proposed responsive pleadings to a circumstance in which pleading amendments are sought to be effected, our Supreme Court as held that the granting of such relief is clearly in the interests of justice. Indeed, the Illinois Supreme Court has identified a number of criteria the satisfaction of which endorses the granting of the relief herein requested.

Stated summarily and consistent with the Court's criteria, the filing of the responsive pleadings is timely; had been abated by the Court's referral to mediation; will advance the merits and resolution of the litigation; and will not prejudice any party to these proceedings. Indeed, absent an opportunity to respond to the unfounded allegations of the complaints, it is the defendants who will be irreparably prejudiced.

Wherefore, we respectfully request that the Court grant the defendants leave to file the attached consolidated answers and counterclaims instanter.

Respectfully submitted,

JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, ALAN K. SIMPSON, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, NAFTALI MICHAELI and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation,

Case No. 00 CH 13859
Hon. Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird

TERRA FOUNDATION'S REPLY TO INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANT DIRECTORS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

Defendant the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), an Illinois not for-profit corporation, by its attorneys, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, hereby by submits its Reply to Objections of Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson to the Proposed Settlement.

Factual Background

On September 22, 2000, plaintiffs Dean L. Buntrock ("Buntrock") and Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, filed a lawsuit against the Foundation and three other members of the Board, Judith Terra, Dr. Paul Hayes Tucker and Senator Alan K. Simpson (collectively the "individual defendants") and another unrelated third party, Naftali Michaeli. After over four months of contentious motion practice, on February 5, 2001, the Court ordered the parties to submit to mediation and stayed all further proceedings. See 2/5/01 Order. Over almost a five month period, the parties engaged in mediation sessions both jointly and individually with the mediator in order to attempt to reach an agreement which would result in the dismissal of this lawsuit. On June 29, 2001, the Foundation held a properly noticed and convened Board meeting at which eight directors were present – a number sufficient to constitute a quorum. At that meeting, by a vote of 6 to 2, the Foundation passed certain Resolutions authorizing the Foundation to enter into a Consent Judgment and Order which would settle this litigation. (See Exhibits A and B to The Foundation's Motion for Entry of Consent Judgment and Order). On July 6, 2001, the Foundation filed a motion for entry of that Consent Judgment and Order. The individual defendants subsequently filed objections to the proposed settlement.

Argument

In an attempt to upset an agreed settlement which they do not personally support, the individual defendants advance four main arguments, none of which are availing. First, the individual defendants argue that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall had a supposed "conflict of interest" which should have prevented them from voting on the Consent Judgment. However, this argument lacks support in the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act or other applicable Illinois law. Second, the individual defendants allege that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall were supposedly "coerced" into voting in favor of the settlement, despite the fact that such "coercion" has been unequivocally denied by both directors, and despite the fact that the individual defendants have presented no affirmative concrete evidence proving such "coercion." Third, the individual defendants argue that the allegedly improper actions of the Attorney General should nullify the settlement. However, the proper inquiry in this case is not what the Attorney General may or may not have tried to accomplish but rather what the actual effect of his conduct on Drs. Stebbins and Marshall was, and both Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have denied that the Attorney General's actions had any effect on their votes. Fourth, the individual defendants argue that because in their opinion the settlement is not in the best interest of the Foundation it should be overturned by the Court, even though that argument improperly invites the Court to substitute its judgment for the business judgment exercised by the majority of the Board's directors. None of these arguments warrant rejection of the Consent Judgment, which was the product of five long months of negotiation among the parties and which was approved by a majority of the Foundation's directors at a properly noticed and properly conducted Board meeting.

I. NEITHER DR. STEBBINS NOR DR. MARSHALL SUFFERED FROM ANY CONFLICT OF INTEREST.

Drs. Stebbins and Marshall had no direct or indirect pecuniary interest whatsoever in the approval of the Consent Judgment and, therefore, no conflict of interest existed. The Foundation is an Illinois not-for-profit corporation governed by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (the "Act"), 805 ILCS 105/101 et seq. Section 108.60 of the Act governs director conflicts of interest. That section provides that a director of a corporation has a conflict of interest if he is either "directly or indirectly a party to the transaction." 805 ILCS 105/108.60. There is no question that neither Dr. Stebbins nor Dr. Marshall is a direct party to the Consent Judgment. The Consent Judgment is entered into by and between plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz and the Attorney General on the one hand and the Foundation on the other. Drs. Stebbins and Marshall are also not indirect parties to the Consent Judgment. "A director is 'indirectly' a party to a transaction if the other party to the transaction is an entity in which the director has a material financial interest or of which the director is an officer, director or general partner." 805 ILCS 105/108.60(d) (emphasis added). None of these circumstances exist between Drs. Stebbins and Marshall and the plaintiffs in this case.

In support of their "conflict of interest" argument, the individual defendants ignore § 108.60 and instead cite to out-of-state case law which purportedly stands for the proposition that a conflict of interest allegation is a valid objection to the approval of a settlement. (See Objections of Defendants, p. 16). However, both of the cases cited in support of this position involve class actions. See New York Hotel & Motel Trades Council v. Hotel Ass'n, 747 F. Supp. 1074, 1078 (S.D. N.Y. 1990); In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litig., 643 F.2d 195, 208 (5th Cir. 1981). This case is not a class action. The standards imposed by courts in approving class action settlements afford protection to absent class members whose rights will be affected by a settlement. Those standards do not apply in this case. The only rights that are affected by entry of the Consent Judgment are those of the plaintiffs and the Foundation – none of which were absent and all of which had an opportunity to participate in the negotiation of the Consent Judgment.

Even if the Court were to consider the class action cases cited, the individual defendants' objections are still invalid. In New York Hotel and Motel Trades Council, the court held that a non-settling defendant only has standing to object to a settlement on conflict of interest grounds, if such defendant "demonstrates that they will suffer 'formal' or 'plain legal prejudice' as a result of this settlement." 747 F. Supp. at 1078. The individual defendants have not even attempted to make such a showing. They are not a party to the Consent Judgment and none of their legal rights or remedies will be foreclosed as a result of the settlement.[1]

[1] The individual defendants' citation to Kerrigan v. Unity Sav. Ass'n, 58 Ill. 2d 20 (1974), is also misplaced. In the Kerrigan case, the Court found that individual directors, who formed an organization engaged in the same business as that of the entity to which such directors owed fiduciary duties, violated their duties by participating in a vote on a transaction which would be

II. THE INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANTS CANNOT MEET THEIR HIGH BURDEN OF ESTABLISHING COERCION BY "CLEAR AND CONVINCING" EVIDENCE IN ORDER TO INVALIDATE THE APPROVAL OF THE CONSENT JUDGMENT.

The individual defendants' argument that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall were "coerced" to cast their votes a certain way is similarly unpersuasive. As an initial matter, the individual defendants mistakenly try to shift the burden in this case and argue that it is the plaintiffs and the Foundation who have the burden of establishing the fairness of the proposed Consent Judgment and Order. (See Objections of Defendants, p. 14). In support of this position, the individual defendants cite to cases involving derivative and class action lawsuits. (See id at 13-14). Yet this case is neither a class action nor a shareholder derivative suit. Accordingly, the standards which apply in those circumstances are not applicable here. Rather, it is the individual defendants who bear the burden of proving by "clear and convincing" evidence that the Consent Judgment, which was properly entered into by and between the Foundation and the plaintiffs, should be rejected. See In re Marriage of Gorman, 284 Ill. App. 3d 171, 180 (1st Dist. 1996); In re Marriage of Smith, 164 Ill. App. 3d 1011, 1016 (1st Dist. 1987); Porter v. Chicago Board of Education, 981 F. Supp. 1129, 1132 (N.D. Ill. 1997); Allstate Financial Corp. v. Utility Trailer of Ill., Inc., 936 F. Supp. 525, 529 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

The individual defendants argue that two of the Foundation's Board members were essentially intimidated or coerced into voting in favor of the Consent Judgment as a result of actions taken by Assistant Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Coercion has been defined as "the imposition, oppression, undue influence, or the taking of undue advantage of the stress of another, whereby that person is deprived of the exercise of her free will." In re Marriage of

"financially advantageous" to those directors. 58 Ill. 2d 20, 24-25. Drs. Stebbins and Marshall do not have any financial or otherwise pecuniary interest in the approval of the Consent Judgment, and not surprisingly, the individual directors do not allege any such pecuniary interest.

Gorman, 284 Ill. App. 3d at 180 (internal citations omitted). The person asserting coercion bears the burden of proving it by "clear and convincing evidence." Id. The individual defendants have not and cannot meet such a high burden.

Despite the individual defendants' speculation as to the subjective state of mind of Drs. Marshall and Stebbins at the time they voted in favor of settling this case, the fact remains that both directors stated at the time of the vote that they were casting their votes based upon their own judgment as to what was in the best interest of the Foundation, without regard for any extraneous considerations. These directors emphasized that they were voting their own conscience, and were doing so freely from outside influence or pressure. Specifically, just before the Board voted on the proposed settlement, corporate counsel for the Foundation stated

> "[i]n light of the allegations . . . about the coercion [that] some members of this board may feel uh, or may not feel, uh from the action of the attorney general. I think it's important for each one of you to . . . indicate . . . that you are voting freely . . . and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think you should vote."

(Transcript of 6/29/01 Board meeting, p. 26, filed under seal as Exhibit A hereto). In response to this advice, Dr. Marshall specifically stated that while the attorney general has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to "a fact finding investigation," that "has not played a part in my decision making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities, as a board member of this Foundation." (Transcript of 6/29/01 Board meeting, p. 27). Similarly, Dr. Stebbins stated, "I abhor the threatening tactics of the attorney general, but I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is in the best interest of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago, and in France." (Transcript of 6/29/01 Board meeting, p. 27).

In the face of such unequivocal statements by Drs. Stebbins and Marshall, the individual defendants' subjective belief that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall felt pressure from Mr. Perkins does not even come close to establishing coercion by clear and convincing evidence. The individual defendants have simply failed to meet the necessarily high burden of proof required to upset a presumptively valid settlement agreement. Indeed, the individual defendants tacitly concede as much by their alternative request for more discovery. Given their failure to make the necessary threshold showing, such discovery request should be denied.[2]

III. THE INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANTS INCORRECTLY FOCUS ON WHAT MR. PERKINS SUPPOSEDLY DID, RATHER THAN ON THE ACTUAL EFFECT OF SUCH ACTIONS ON DRS. STEBBINS AND MARSHALL.

Although the individual defendants harshly criticize the Attorney General and argue that the alleged impropriety of his actions should nullify the settlement, this argument misses the point. The relevant inquiry is not whether Mr. Perkins attempted to employ questionable tactics against Drs. Stebbins and Marshall, but rather whether those alleged tactics had the actual effect of changing Drs. Stebbins' and Marshall's votes in favor of the settlement. Both have already stated that their decision was not influenced by Mr. Perkins. (See Transcript of 6/29/01 Board Meeting, p. 27). Given these statements, the individual defendants' argument about the Attorney General's actions is unavailing.

[2] The individual defendants are simply mistaken when they complain about the fact that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall declined to present themselves for depositions prior to tomorrow's hearing. The Court never required Drs. Stebbins and Marshall to do so – instead, at the last hearing the Court merely suggested that the Attorney General make himself available to answer questions. (See Transcript of 7/02/01 Hearing, pp. 97-98, attached hereto as Exhibit B). Indeed, the Court indicated that the whole point of allowing the individual defendants to file written objections was to determine whether depositions or other formal discovery would be permitted in the future or whether the Court would simply enter the Consent Judgment forthwith. (See id. at p. 92). By complaining about the lack of discovery so far, the individual defendants are putting the cart before the horse.

IV. NEITHER THIS COURT NOR THE MINORITY DIRECTORS MAY INTERFERE WITH THE EXERCISE OF BUSINESS JUDGMENT BY THE MAJORITY DIRECTORS.

This Court's review of the Foundation's decision to settle this case is limited by the business judgment rule. See Mills v. Esmark, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 1275, 1282 (C.D. Ill. 1982). The business judgment rule provides that courts are not at liberty to interfere with the exercise of business judgment by corporate directors. Stamp v. Touche Rosee & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 1016 (1st Dist. 1993). Absent fraud, bad faith or "gross overreaching," under the business judgment rule, "courts will not second-guess" decisions of corporate directors. Lewis v. Playboy Enterprises, Inc., 279 Ill. App. 3d 47, 57 (1st Dist. 1996); see also Fields v. Sax, 123 Ill. App. 3d 460, 464 (1st Dist. 1984) (holding that "this court is without authority to substitute its judgment for the lawful decisions of the directors.").

Although the individual defendants contend they have the best interests of the Foundation's "beneficiaries" at heart, and although they may fervently believe that the approval of this settlement is not in the best interest of the Foundation, the fact remains that these individual directors are seeking to substitute their judgment for the contrary assessments made by their fellow directors. What the individual defendants fail to recognize is that various directors – acting in good faith and in full accordance with their fiduciary duties – may come to alternative conclusions about what is in the best interest of the Foundation. Although the individual defendants focus on such issues as expanding the audience for the Terra collection and operating without "parochial restrictions," other directors voting in favor of this settlement may have legitimately focused on competing concerns such as the drain on the Foundation's resources caused by protracted and expensive litigation. Evaluating and balancing these competing factors falls within the exclusive province of the Foundation's directors, and the collective judgment made by the majority of the directors should not be circumvented by the Court (or by minority directors seeking to use the Court to override the will of the majority).

As the Foundation has consistently argued before this Court, it is for the Foundation's Board of Directors to determine what is in the best interest of the Foundation, and neither this Court nor a minority faction of the Board should be permitted to interfere with the will of the Board majority absent a showing of fraud or bad faith. Any such fraud or bad faith must be proven by "clear and convincing evidence." Allstate Financial Corp., 936 F. Supp. at 529. In light of the unequivocal statements made by Drs. Marshall and Stebbins that they were acting in good faith for the best interests of the Foundation, and given the lack of any affirmative evidence showing fraud or bad faith on the part of any of the majority directors, the individual defendants are forced to resort to mere speculation and innuendo. This is simply not enough to satisfy their heavy burden. Accordingly, this Court should enter the properly approved Consent Judgment and Order now, without interjecting itself any further into the internal workings of the Foundation's Board.

Conclusion

This case has been pending for almost a year. After approximately five months of negotiation, the Foundation and the plaintiffs have reached a compromise settlement which will put an end to this expensive, divisive, and distracting litigation. This resolution has been approved by a majority of the Foundation's directors. The Board has spoken, and the will of the Board should be respected. Accordingly, the Court should enter the Consent Judgment and Order without further delay, so that the Foundation can once again turn its attention to matters of art rather than matters of litigation. For all of the foregoing reasons as well as those to be presented at oral argument, the Foundation respectfully requests that the Court promptly enter the Consent Judgment and Order.

you get those, by all means. Mr. Perkins isn't under any kind of a gag order.

Are you willing to speak to counsel for the defendants about this?

MR. PERKINS: I'll be glad to, Judge.

MS. BELLOWS: About the investigation that's taking place against himself?

MR. PERKINS: To the extent I can, Judge. I'll be glad to share some information. However, that's a private person who has a right to be protected.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. PERKINS: And these people perhaps have no basis or they obviously have no knowledge about what's going on. So we'll get to that. But I'll be glad to answer some questions.

THE COURT: Okay. And then the other thing that I just want to make sure. I want to make it absolutely clear, we are not at any time in this proceeding deposing the mediator in this case.

And as of right now, the documents that were granted leave to be filed under seal on Friday, they're going to stay that way for now. You don't have leave to file these documents today because let's get their motion. I think it would be very, very helpful before you file a motion objecting to what went on Friday, you really knew what went on Friday. So why don't you get the transcript because I assume that hasn't been made available to any one of —

MS. STONE: No, it's not. We only have a very rough draft, your Honor.

MR. GARMENT: We have heard the tape recording of it. I mean, it was recorded.

Your Honor, may I just say this. The Attorney General said he does not want to get into the matter of something involving a private person. I think your Honor is right, that issues such as Dan Terra's intent are secondary to what is the central issue in this case. And that is whether or not crucial votes were obtained by the improper intervention by the Attorney General.

We are entitled to examine the Attorney General representative and the persons who were involved in the initiation under these more than coincidental circumstances in the switch of the crucial votes that turned this Foundation from one level of management to another. With all of its implications to fasten the property here in the state of Illinois, make no suggestion that it would not be properly administered in the state of Illinois. But it is a taking of property of a very serious order involving acts, undeniable acts on the part of the Attorney General's Office at the time that the question of the exercise of discretion was being considered by the crucial parties —

THE COURT: I'm sorry, counsel, you're saying "undeniable act." We haven't even let him talk.

MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just finish? We are entitled as a matter of law to take testimony to have people testify about the circumstances in which this dramatic shift, which spells the extinction of a long-standing foundation, which destroys its ability to operate freely, which sends a message to the world that if you bring a foundation to Illinois, you are subject to the intervention of the Attorney General to fasten those assets in the state of Illinois on pretext. And so far it's all pretext.

There has not been an evidentiary hearing with respect to the central issues since the beginning of this case nor has the public through the press been empowered to make its own judgments about what is going on in this case.

THE COURT: This entire record with the exception of the mediation has been fully open to the press and —

MR. GARMENT: But the mediation is the heart of the problem. The mediation has been infected by the actions of the Attorney General. That is our allegation, and we are entitled to have a day in court to prove it.

THE COURT: And I'm not saying that you may or you may not have a day in court. I'm saying you need to have a verified pleading directed to these issues before the Court. And once I see a verified pleading directed to the issues of intimidation from the Attorney General, it will determine whether or not there needs to be some additional discovery regarding those allegations.

But that's not this document. I don't have any affidavits in this document. I don't have anything from anybody that suggests that the Attorney General has exercised pressure. I have a hearsay affidavit that was attached or a proposed consent degree?

MR. BELLOWS: 21 days.
THE COURT: 21? I leave on July 27th. And I would like to have a chance to decide whether or not there's going to be any kind of discovery or evidentiary proceeding here because I would expect that you would do that while — perhaps while I was gone.
This consent decree provides for the new board to take over and for everything to be done by August 1st. And I'm willing to expedite this as much as I need to in order to get this done.
MR. BELLOWS: Are you ordering the Attorney General to submit himself — or the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, to submit himself to interrogation by us.
THE COURT: I am not ordering the Attorney General, based on what I have in front of me, to do anything. But he has indicated to you that he is willing to talk to you, and I think a good starting point is to talk to him first. He is a public official. He will not compromise any ongoing investigation, but I would expect that he will cooperate with you as fully as he can and answer any concerns you have.

MR. BELLOWS: You have that on the record. Not your statements, his statement.
THE COURT: Well, I have no doubt that Mr. Perkins is going to cooperate and answer whatever questions you have without compromising ongoing investigations.
MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.
THE COURT: Now, can you within a week of — I mean, this isn't any big surprise here. You know what they're going to file. Within a week can you file some type of a verified document to see whether or not we even need to have —
MR. TODD: Your Honor, may we have two weeks for this reason? I'm scheduled to leave on Thursday for a long, planned trip, a business trip, where I'm going to be meeting with over 200 of my clients in the Mideast, and it would be extremely difficult for me to change that. I will be back here July 12th, so if your Honor could compromise and give us two weeks from Friday and we will get it done.
MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, as far as we're concerned, all our petition is going to be is a petition for the Court to approve the consent judgment, the decree, and I will attach probably the resolution that was passed by the board. To get all the formalities done, I would probably like until Friday to do it, but counsel can assume — he already knows what we're going to be filing, and if two weeks from today is some time in which he can be done with whatever he wants, maybe we could speed it up a little bit.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, there are things under the consent decree that are expected to be done speedily so that the board can continue to operate and operate appropriately.
We also note there's three different sets of counsel here. I would imagine that somebody could pick up for counsel who's not available.
MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just make a brief statement?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. GARMENT: I know I've spoken with a certain amount of vehemence today, but this case started with some demonstrably false and very serious allegations against the defendants. They have not been proved. There has not been a hearing to present a bit of evidence in support of those allegations.

THE COURT: And they remain unproven.
MR. GARMENT: And it is our intention, and we ask leave to file an amended answer which will raise those issues in terms of — our present contemplation is to assert counterclaims, which we are entitled to do under an amended pleading.
These issues have never come into focus, and what has happened is through the intervention of the Attorney General, in cooperation with Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, who were the dissenting directors who did not want consideration given to any kind of change in the venue of the museum activities, this process was brought to a halt.
Your Honor understandably tried to find a solution through a mediation process. That mediation process stopped everything except the actions that were necessary in the view of the Attorney General to bring the process to the conclusion he wanted.

Hartman I'm just in from Moscow, in France.

Marshall Are you, so you're home?

Hartman In France, yes.

Marshall Oh, you're in France, OK. (laugh) OK, well we're just, uh

Hartman Where are you, Stephanie?

Marshall Just gathering. I'm at uh my office.

Hartman OK.

Marshall And I think people will be calling in from all over, I think uh Ron, you're in the uh Foundation offices?

Gidwitz No, actually I'm in my office.

Marshall You're in your office, OK.

(Beeps)

Marshall I think uh Maggie and Dean may be in the Foundation offices.

Gidwitz The food will probably be better there than it is here.

Marshall Anyone else join the line?

Gidwitz Arthur, how's the weather over there?

Hartman It's just perfectly beautiful, you wouldn't believe it. The sky's blue, no wind, nice and warm.

(Beep)

Hartman It was lovely in Moscow, too.

Marshall Uh, who has, someone has joined us?

Dr. Theodore Stebbins Uh, it's Ted.

Marshall Uh, good afternoon, Ted.

Gidwitz Hi Ted.

Stebbins Hi, Stephanie.

Marshall I'm going to turn up the volume here.

Hartman Hi Ted. Arthur.

Stebbins Hi Arthur.

Marshall Ted, I don't hear you very loudly, so we may ask you to talk a little more loudly.

Stebbins Can you hear me now?

Marshall Yeah, that's better.

Stebbins OK. Arthur's very clear. Where are you Arthur?

Hartman I'm in France.

Stebbins Good. Who else have we got here?

Marshall Uh, Ron is in his office, and that's all of us so far.

Gidwitz Yeah, Ted, I'm here.

Stebbins OK, Ron, Hi.

Gidwitz Hi.

Hartman Are you out on the Cape? Ted?

Stebbins No, I'm at home in Brookline.

Hartman Ah, there you go.

(Beeps)

Marshall Uh, welcome whoever has joined us. Who has joined us? Hello? Anyone join us? Ted are you still there?

Stebbins I'm here.

Marshall Alright, everybody still there?

Hartman Yep.

Marshall OK.

Gidwitz Here.

Marshall OK. Hello, has anyone just joined us? Hmm. OK.

Margaret Daley There are people on.

Don Ratner OK, talk to him on the other line.

Daley OK.

Marshall Uh, Don, do I hear your voice?

Daley How do I put this on speaker? OK.

Ratner Hello.

Marshall Uh, yes.

Ratner Hello.

Marshall Yes, Don is that you?

Ratner Stephanie, Hi. It's Don, uh, Maggie and and and Dean are here.

Marshall OK.

Ratner Steve Carlson.

Marshall OK. Very good.

Ratner And, we're waiting for the others to call in, and get hold of people, this may take a few, few minutes still.

Marshall — We have um, we have Ron, and Arthur and Ted and I so far, uh, so we're still waiting for uh Jacques, and uh Alan, uh Judith, and Paul.

Ratner — Alright, Ron's on the phone?

Marshall — Correct.

Gidwitz — I am on the phone. I'm still at my office.

Ratner — Oh, I thought you were going to be over here. Oh, I'm sorry.

Gidwitz — Well, that's an extra sandwich for you to eat.

Hartman — Don't make me hungry.

(laughs)

Daley — Hello, everyone.

Marshall — Maggie?

Daley — Yes.

Marshall — Good afternoon.

Daley — Yes, nice to talk to you.

Marshall — Have you uh walked past the Taste of Chicago yet?

Daley — No, but I've been waiting in traffic. (laughs)

Hartman — What's that?

Marshall — Oh, the Taste of Chicago? (laughing)

Hartman — Yeah.

Marshall — It's a huge gastronomical extravaganza where all the restaurants in Chicago, or at least the better ones, sort of lay out their wares, at uh, along the lake. It's terrific.

Hartman — Ah ha.

Marshall — And you sample your way to high cholesterol levels.

Hartman — Ha, ha.

(inaudible background)

Marshall — I understand they will have Lipitor salesmen standing by.

Hartman — laughs. I can tell you that Mevicor works.

Marshall — laughs. Don have you heard from anyone? We know Helene will not be on the call, but have you heard from uh Judith or Paul or Alan?

Ratner — They're expected to be on the call, so we're just sort of waiting for them all to.

Hartman — And we're expecting Jacques?

Ratner	Yes.
Marshall	We are. Right. I know Paul is in Italy, I don't know where Judith or Alan are.
Ratner	In Washington, Alan's in Russia, and uh Arthur is in.
Marshall	Arthur's here.
Ratner	Arthur's already there.
(Beeps)
Marshall	Hello. Hello? Who has joined us now?
(inaudible background)
Marshall	Jacques, Judith or Paul joined us yet?
Ratner	No.
Marshall	OK. We're hearing uh beeps sometimes and you, you assume that someone has joined the call when you hear that.
Stebbins	And what lawyers are present?
Ratner	Uh, well, here, Mark Heatwole, and Steve Carlson.
Stebbins	OK. Oh, hi Steve.
Steve Carlson	Hi, Ted.
Susan Stone	Susan Stone, from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, here with Stephanie.
Stebbins	Hi, Stephanie.
John Sabl	Also, John Sabl from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, out here with Susan and Stephanie.
(Beeps) (inaudible background)
Gidwitz	OK, who are all the lawyers, I didn't catch them all.
Marshall	Uh, we have Susan Stone, uh Steve Carlson, uh John uh Sabl, and my understanding is that Mark Heatwole is in Chicago. Uh, let me ask anyone else are there, are, is there any other legal counsel present with anyone?
(Beeps)
Judith Terra	Hey Stephanie?
Marshall	Uh, yes, Judith, good afternoon.
Terra	Hi, I, I've been on the line a minute, I just didn't want to interrupt. Um, have we, have you started things?
Marshall	No, not at all. We're still waiting for a, well, we were waiting for you, and for Paul, and for Alan. Uh, and, and Jacques. Everyone else is here, except Helene, who was not going to be on the meet, on the call.

Terra OK.

Marshall So, no we've not, we've not started anything.

Terra OK. So who is we, who is.

Marshall We've just a, we've just a, the question was asked, who are the legal counsel president, uh present, and we have Mark Heatwole, who is in Chicago at the Foundation office, uh, as the regular Foundation counsel, and we have Susan Stone, uh and John uh Sabl who are here with me uh in Aurora, and Steve Carlson, uh, who is in the Foundation office, all representing uh Sidley Austin. And I was just asking every other board member on the line, uh, are there any other legal counsel present?

Hartman Not here in France.

Marshall Anyone else? Ron?

Gidwitz No, I'm all by myself.

(Beeps)

Marshall Judith?

(inaudible background)

Marshall Has anyone joined the call? Jacques or Alan or Paul?

(inaudible background)

(Beeps) (inaudible background)

Marshall Hello? Has anyone else joined the call?

Ratner Who's there?

Marshall Alan, Paul, Jacques? Hello, has anyone else joined the call?

Ratner There's a lot of beeps on the phone, but.

Marshall Yes there are. (laughs) there are. Well, at some point, we need, we will make a decision to, to move forward, but I think, uh, I know Jacques is overseas, and so is Alan, so we'll wait uh wait just a few more moments, but we are, we are going to have to proceed relatively shortly.

Stebbins Stephanie, I assume you are chairing the meeting?

Marshall I am, Ted.

Stebbins And, uh what's it, what does a quorum consist of?

Ratner A majority.

Stebbins Oh.

Marshall — Uh, a majority of the meeting, but, as you know, we need uh six people to amend the bylaws, so that, that's critical.

Ratner — A quorum is six, and you need, you also need six to amend the bylaws, so.

(inaudible background)

Daley — So right now, who's missing? Jacques.

Ratner — Jacques, Helene, and Paul. And Alan.

(inaudible background)

Marshall — Uh, Don, is there any a way we might call people to see if, if they are uh available? Were you able to get the faxes to everyone as far as you know?

Ratner — I talked to everybody, everybody said they were going to be on the call. If you've heard from Helene since, fine. I talked to Jacques, who said Helene was going to be on the call, I've talked to Andreani, I've talked to Paul, I've talked to Alan, everybody.

Marshall — Oh, OK.

(Beeps)

Marshall — Uh, has anyone joined us now?

Stebbins — It sounds like Don did a good job of reaching everyone.

Marshall — Yes, I mean, we, we do have a quorum now, but I think in fairness, we'll wait just a few more moments.

(Beeps)

Marshall — Hello, has anyone joined us? Arthur, are there challenges when you call in from Russia?

Hartman — No.

Marshall — No? OK. I know that's where Alan.

Hartman — Well, I'm calling from France, but.

Marshall — Well, I know you are, but Alan is in Russia, so I was just curious.

Hartman — No, no, the same system applies there.

Ratner — Actually, Stephanie, we are trying to call him. He asked us to call him.

Marshall — Oh.

Ratner — And, we got hold of his, his number, but there's nobody there, we get a voicemail. So he may have gotten delayed or something.

Carlson — Or he may be on the phone.

Daley — What time is it there?

Ratner	9:30.
Hartman	A lot of traffic there. What hotel is he in?
Ratner	I have no idea. If I give you the number, you recognize it?
Hartman	Nope.
Gidwitz	I take it you don't (inaudible) numbers?
Hartman	Nope. (laughs)
(Beeps)
Marshall	Has anyone just joined us?
Ratner	Stephanie, apparently when Karen tries to call these people, on the line it beeps. That's what the beeping is all about.
Marshall	Oh, I see. I thank you. I keep thinking somebody is joining the call. But Don, you say you talked to Jacques Ahrweiler and Helene will be on the call?
Ratner	I talked to Jacques last weekend, and he said that he was going to get Helene on the call, but you don't think so.
Marshall	OK. OK.
Gidwitz	Could someone please share with me what happened, while we're waiting, in court today? What's all that about?
Carlson	I guess I can. This is Steve Carlson, from Sidley Austin.
Marshall	Steve, could you speak up a little bit please?
Carlson	I'm speaking pretty loud for this room.
Marshall	Oh, OK, I'm sorry.
Carlson	But that's OK if I don't blow anyone out of the room, I'll keep speaking up. Uh, there was a motion filed by Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson, uh, for a temporary restraining order to try to stop this meeting from going ahead. Uh, I won't.
Hartman	What court was this in, Steve?
Carlson	In the state court in front of Judge Kinnaird, who we've been in front of in the litigation all along.
Hartman	Right.
Gidwitz	Who are they representing? I mean, who, did they file that themselves, or was it, because yesterday, apparently, they filed on behalf of the Foundation. Were they doing that again today?
(Beeps)
Carlson	They had Joel Bellows from the firm of Bellows and Bellows, and Laurel Bellows was there as well, uh, Leonard Garment, uh let's see, Chris Todd. Those were the same people from yesterday in the federal court. But today they were representing only the individual uh defendant directors in this main lawsuit. And they sought uh a TRO to block this meeting from going forward, and made uh much the same argument that they made in the federal court uh yesterday. Uh and the attorney general uh primarily responded to it. Judge Kinnaird I think at the end of the day was interested in what irreparable effect, whatever happens at this meeting has. And I think at the end of the day she decided that since the draft resolutions that the board was going to be considering appeared to say that whatever you all vote to do today does not become effective until the consent judgment and order is entered by the court herself, she didn't need to enjoin this meeting at all. That she could give uh Senator uh Simpson's lawyers and Dr. Tucker's lawyers and Mrs. Terra's lawyers an opportunity to make whatever presentation they wanted to, to make whatever argument they wanted to about the propriety of the settlement when the consent judgment is presented to her at a later date, which may very well be Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Gidwitz And who's defending the Foundation, are you?

Carlson I'm the Foundation's lawyer, yes.

Gidwitz And what kind of a defense did you put on today, aggressive?

Carlson Uh, I'm always aggressive.

Gidwitz That's what I've heard. I haven't seen you in action. I understand you're always aggressive. Were you aggressive today?

Carlson A properly noticed and called the board meeting and that I had argued that strenuously to the court on many occasions that it was the Foundation's position that a properly noticed board meeting should go ahead. It should not be interfered with by disgruntled members of the board or by the court or anybody else.

Hartman Thank you.

Gidwitz Thank you.

Marshall Is there anyone else on the call? Jacques, Helene, uh Judith, you are on the call, Paul and Alan?

Terra Stephanie?

Marshall Yes, Judith, is that you?

Terra Yes.

Marshall Yes, go ahead, Judith.

Terra No, I was just responding, I had to step out. Emma came to get me.

Marshall	Oh, yeah, we're still waiting for Jacques, Helene, Alan and Paul.
Terra	OK. There was a call on my other line.
Ratner	Jacques, how are you? Tali.
Gidwitz	We've got Tali too? I'm sorry, I didn't hear the answer to that. Is Tali on the call as well? That's the question.
Marshall	Uh, it's not appropriate for anybody to be on the call other than the directors and the legal counsel that we have so noted already.
Stebbins	Is Don there?
Daley	Why is Tali talking to Don?
Dean Buntrock	Tali called Don. He left.
Stebbins	I think that's extremely inappropriate.
Daley	So do I.
Marshall	But we will not proceed until this is a meeting of the directors and the legal counsel that we have already so noted. So um when everybody gets back I will make, ask Tali to leave the call.
Buntrock	He's not on this call.
Marshall	Excuse me, I really can't hear very well.
Daley	He's a, he called Don on his cell phone and Don has left the room to talk to him.
Marshall	OK, that's fine.
(Beeps)
Daley	I still don't think that's appropriate in either case.
Marshall	Has anyone else joined the call? Jacques, Helene, Alan or Paul?
Gidwitz	How long do we expect to wait? Out of curiosity?
Marshall	Not, not very much longer, Ron. I think it's important that we proceed and a
Stebbins	Don is, Don is.
Marshall	And move forward on this meeting as expeditiously as we are able to do.
Ratner	Well, everybody, uh, we've been calling everybody, we can't get ahold of anybody who's not on the call.
Marshall	OK, then I think uh, I think we will begin. As you all know, uh, this is Stephanie, and I hereby call this meeting to order. Uh, could we please have a roll call of all present? Jacques Andreani, Helene Ahrweiler, Dean Buntrock

Buntrock	Present.
Marshall	Maggie Daley.
Daley	Present.
Marshall	Ron Gidwitz.
Gidwitz	Present.
Marshall	Arthur Hartman.
Hartman	Present.
Marshall	Stephanie Marshall, present. Alan Simpson, Ted Stebbins.
Stebbins	Present.
Marshall	Judith Terra.
Terra	Present.
Marshall	Paul Tucker. Alright, as we know, also present are Don Ratner, Susan Stone, Steven Carlson, John Sabl and Mark Heatwole.
Heatwole	Uh, Stephanie, Scott Sela from my office who was in court this morning observing the proceedings has joined us. That's Scott S-e-l-a.
Marshall	Scott is from Winston, Mark?
Heatwole	Yes, ma'am
Marshall	And he is regular Foundation counsel. Alright, we are here today to consider, as you know, a proposed settlement of outstanding litigation and the number of matters closely related thereto. Dr. Stebbins?
Stebbins	Yes, I'd like to make a motion. I hereby move the adoption of all the resolutions contained in the three pages of resolutions which the Foundation distributed, including, without limitation, the approval of the consent judgment and order distributed by the Foundation with such resolutions with James Donnelley, Marshal Field V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada and Frederick Cribel, or Krehbiel, I guess it is, being the five new class two directors. And, in addition, I have a couple of minor changes, um.
Ratner	Ted, could you go through those five names one more time?
Gidwitz	Yeah, read the list again, if you wouldn't mind please?
Stebbins	The list is James Donnelley,
Gidwitz	Donnelley, OK.

Stebbins — Marshall Fields V, Kath, Dr. Kathleen Foster, Dr. Robert Hamada, and Mr. Frederick Krehbiel.

Marshall — And Ted you said you have some minor changes?

Stebbins — And I have some minor changes, which various people have suggested. Um, first, in the draft resolutions, uh, paragraph 4, where it reads "further, resolved that Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, the attorneys for the Foundation, are authorized and directed in the name and on behalf of the Foundation to file with the Circuit Court of Cook County the consent judgment, if and when it has been executed by or on behalf of Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz and the attorney general of the state of Illinois and", and from there on I would suggest we take out "and any other document they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation." So consider that part of my resolution, amending that phrase. Uh.

(Beeps)

Daley — What paragraph are you?

Ratner — Yeah, we can't find it, could you, this is on the first page of the resolution, page 10 of your.

Stebbins — Yes, paragraph 4

Ratner — Wait a minute let me get my directions, page 10 of your fax.

Dr. Paul Tucker — Sorry, everyone, I've just uh finally made it through the Terrace Midland to be here.

Marshall — Oh, Hi Paul.

Stebbins — Hi, Paul.

Tucker — Hi, Stephanie. Hi, Ted.

Marshall — Paul, we are, Ted is uh, we have called the meeting to order and Ted is uh, Ted has almost concluded his resolution, and Don is helping people find the appropriate

Ratner — Page 10, first paragraph Ted, I think it says, it starts out "further resolved."

Stebbins — "Further resolved."

Ratner — OK, now what do you want to change?

Stebbins — I want to take out uh, the last phrase "any other document that they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation."

Marshall — And you said you had another minor change?

Stebbins — And that's my only change in the, in the resolutions. In the consent judgment, uh, and order, under paragraph 2.

Ratner	Wait a second, now what page is that, Ted?
Stebbins	On page, uh,
Ratner	Five of the fax. Paragraph 2, "the parties hereto"
Stebbins	I'd like to say "the parties, including plaintiffs and defendants."
Marshall	No, Ted, you can't do that. The Foundation can't speak for defendants.
Gidwitz	Well, the original documents, Stephanie, if you'll recall, spoke to the plaintiffs and the defendants. If you want to add people, that's fine, but you can't subtract.
Marshall	Well, it's the Foundation, it's my understanding, and maybe legal counsel can speak to this, that the, this wording is the only wording that can that can be in place, because the Foundation cannot require the defendants to do anything against their will.
Gidwitz	Let a court of law decide that. What I am concerned about with this language, if I understand, Stephanie, is, I don't want to be set up to be sued. And this strikes me, the way that this has been drafted, that it doesn't release the defendants, and therefore it's permissive in terms of having them sue me.
Marshall	I think, uh
Gidwitz	And I want protection.
Stebbins	Well, I'd like to
Marshall	Well, I think, Ted, uh, I think.
Stebbins	Stephanie, why don't we ask legal counsel their opinion, because I
Tucker	Can you speak as to why you want to include this?
Stebbins	I want to be accommodating.
Marshall	Uh, may I, let me take the privilege of the chair one moment. We are in the middle of a proposed resolution. I recommend uh, or proposed motion. I recommend that Ted make his motion. I will see if there is a second. If there is not a second, the motion fails. There may be a second, and then we have discussion. In my view, it is not appropriate to argue, uh, the language or the merits of a motion, until the motion is duly put on the table.
Gidwitz	Absolutely. I will comply.
Marshall	Ted, if maybe you will.
Stebbins	OK, my motion includes the slight change of the resolutions, it includes in the consent order making it uh, "the parties, including plaintiffs and defendants, hereto desire". And it includes, under section 7 of the same consent judgment, that includes modifying the second para, the second phrase, with the, and it should now read, "with the exception that in until the annual 2002, sorry until the 2002 annual meeting, or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, then 50% of such board positions should be held by Illinois residents." The purpose of this is to guarantee that is happens in case the annual meeting is delayed for some reason. And uh, those are my, that's my resolution.

Marshall — Alright, we have a resolution, and since it was uh, a rather circuitous, I don't know if it's appropriate for me either to ask you. I think maybe you should state it again, so people are very clear what the resolution is.

Stebbins — My resolution, I move adoption of the resolutions, OK. There is a three pages of resolutions, which we have distributed, including without limitation, the approval of the consent judgment and order with James Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada, and Frederick Krehbeil being the five new class 2 directors with the other uh three amendments that I mentioned.

Marshall — OK. We have a motion on the table. Is there a second.

Gidwitz — I'll second it.

Marshall — Alright, that's moved by Ted, seconded by Ron. The motion has been moved and seconded, uh

Gidwitz — I'd like to offer a

Marshall — Uh, let me, because it involves an amendment to the bylaws, it's passage requires the affirmative action of at least six directors. Now it's appropriate to call for any discussion. I think Ron, if you'd give me the privilege of the chair, I would like legal counsel to address um one of the changes that uh Ted uh referred to, because I, although I want to be able to uh vote for this motion, I would not be able to do so with one of the changes that he's, he's suggested, because it's my understanding that it is simply not possible for the Foundation to make this judgment, so I would really like legal counsel, so that we're all clear uh, on exactly uh where we are and uh where we are at this point in time. I personally don't have any problem with the other modifications that Ted, you made, but I, I would not be able to support the motion as it is presently.

Stebbins — Let's try to let the lawyers lead us through the problem here.

Marshall — Yes. Yes, I've asked legal counsel to do that.

Carlson — Do you have any preference as to who addresses it? Do you want Susan to address it, or John, or

Stone — I can address it. This is Susan Stone from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood. I understand, Stephanie, you would like guidance with respect to whether paragraph 2 of the proposed consent judgment and order um could be amended to change the description of the parties giving the relief um to a more general description, which would include all of the parties, including the plaintiffs and the individual defendant directors, is that correct?

Marshall — That's correct.

Stone — Alright. Um, it is my understanding that the individual director defendants are not prepared voluntarily to enter into this proposed settlement. They are not agreeing to settle their litigation. Um, and that therefore they are not voluntarily agreeing that Stebbins — We don't know that until we've taken a vote, right?

Stone — My understanding, that is correct, you don't know that categorically, it is my understanding from, from what was recorded from the mediation sessions, that the individual director defendants are not prepared to voluntarily release. And I think the question being posed is whether or not the Foundation unilaterally can impose upon a non consenting party an obligation that they release their legal rights. And I do not believe that the Foundation can do that, or even that, if the Foundation purported to do it, that it would have any legal effect. Uh, you could indeed, as Ted points out, query, uh the individual director defendants as to whether or not they will voluntarily agree to release, and then all of this is, uh perhaps an unnecessary academic legal debate. Uh, that might be appropriate at this time.

Gidwitz — Uh, let me ask you a question, before we ask that one, and that is, what is the effect of doing it, and, I just heard you say, Susan, that it may not have any legal effect, period. So, what's the downside of just including them?

Stone — No, I'm saying, that even if you purport, with that question from Ron, Ron even if you purport to, um, have the Foundation, uh require the individual defendant directors to release rights, that requirement may not be binding, in other words, it might not be a valid release, because Gidwitz — I understand, but there's no damage done.

Stone — Well, I do not believe that the Foundation can do this. I do not believe the Foundation can take away the legal rights of another party.

Gidwitz — I understand that, but we have it, what my concern is, Susan, is that we have a document that was written and agreed to by six directors, wherein, if it doesn't materially affect the execution of the document, why are we making changes?

Stone — No, the question is, what can the Foundation counsel put in front of the board, as a document which the board could pass that has the possibility of standing up to judicial scrutiny, if the board decides it wants to pass it. And I'm telling you that um whatever six individual members of the board might have done in the last mediation session, that was not an act of the Foundation. The Foundation is a corporation. It can only act through a majority vote of the board of directors at a duly called meeting. Um, that has not happened until today. And so the question is, what can the board do at this point in time. The board as a Foundation, which is one party to this litigation, cannot unilaterally take away the rights of other parties to the litigation.

Gidwitz — I keep hearing this, and frankly, my counsel has also reported to me on numerous occasions that you have made the case that, unless we have a duly called meeting, there's a difference of opinion. And the real issue here, it seems to me, is we'd like to get, we'd like to get, this litigation settled. And therefore, we'd like to have a document that we can go to the court with next week, which everybody can agree to. And if, in fact, I feel exposed, I will not agree. It's senseless, then going through this whole process is senseless.

Stone — Well, with

Carlson — Can we left Mark Heatwole respond to that, he wanted to say something, if you could let him talk.

Mark Heatwole — Just, Ron?

Gidwitz — Yes, Mark.

Heatwole — If you brought this actions solely against the Terra Foundation

Gidwitz — Say again?

Heatwole — If you brought this action solely against the Terra Foundation, you would be in a position today to settle this matter. But by naming three of the individuals, you, I believe Susan's position is right, that the agreement on behalf of the board of the Foundation, to settle this matter, only will operate vis a vis the Foundation. And not as against the individuals and their rights. That puts you at peril, and being at peril in this sense. On those same terms, you could be in a position where you will have settled your claims against the Foundation, and under this agreement against those individuals, and waive those rights, and those individuals may still have the ability to claim back against you. You can't force them to waive those rights through this settlement agreement, I don't believe.

Heatwole — But if you vote in favor of it, and Ron votes in favor of it, what I am telling you is it could work to your detriment. I'm not your lawyer, but, you've got a situation, where, everything I know about this situation tells me, force Paul, Judith and Alan to settle a case that they don't want to settle. And and that means this is a one way, potentially a one way settlement by you and Ron against them and they're not waiving rights against you.

Marshall — Yeah, I have to say, just to weigh in on this personally, that, uh, I mean, it's no secret that, that this, uh, this motion, and any changes in bylaws require uh, the vote of at least six directors. And I cannot support the motion as it is currently stated with this amendment to number 2. I can certainly support, and will support, the other changes, Ted, that you made, uh, in both the resolution, and the consent judgment order they seem reasonable. But I cannot, and will not, support this motion, which frankly means you do not have six votes. So, I came prepared, I read the motions, I read the consent, I mean I read the resolution, I read the consent judgment, I am prepared to support this, but this is uh, a last minute eleventh hour change, and I cannot be more clear than I'm being right now. I cannot and will not support this change as it is currently stated.

Gidwitz — Which change is that, Stephanie?

Marshall — You can continue the conversation, if you wish, uh, or Ted you can amend your motion.

Stebbins — Well, I knew this was of concern to Ron, that's the reason I suggested it, to hope the lawyers could work it out, but if it's a, uh, if it's thought to be, uh, a legal impossibility, then I would go back to the uh original text, as it was distributed. And leave out the amendment, of section 2.

Marshall — You are accepting an amendment?

Stebbins — Uh, yes.

Marshall — OK.

Buntrock — Stephanie?

Marshall — Yes, Dean.

(inaudible background)

Buntrock — Doesn't Ron have to agree to that?

Hartman — No, it's Ted's motion.

Marshall — We had, Ted has a motion, he's accepted the amendment, which is, keeping the first two changes he made and eliminating the change in the consent order paragraph 2. But I guess the question is, is there any further discussion, or we have a properly made and seconded uh motion and then we could proceed with the vote, if we are ready to do so.

Buntrock — Stephanie, wait a minute. I think there's more discussion.

Marshall — That's fine.

Buntrock — Uh, first of all,

Stebbins — Who's this speaking?

Marshall — This is Dean.

Stebbins — Hi Dean.

Buntrock — Hi. First of all, I'd like you to respond. You made your position very very clear, but when, when counsel for the Foundation, and counsel on the lawsuit has both said, as Susan has said, that you can't do it, uh, what difference does it mean, to leave the language in there? I cannot see why you take such a strong position, and uh

Marshall — I guess I take.

Buntrock — And uh, (inaudible). Can you respond to that?

Marshall — Yeah, I mean, uh it's my understanding, well, based on what legal counsel is saying, Dean, I would be voting for something which is, which is uh judged not to be legal and/or appropriate. I, I will not vote for,

Buntrock — No one, no one has said,

Marshall — I will not vote to force anyone, uh, into a position, that, uh four attorneys are saying, uh, is inappropriate. Uh, the Foundation, I don't think, or certainly I do not want to approve a settlement, uh, that, that contemplates a release that's that doesn't exist.

Buntrock — Stephanie, they haven't. All they've said is that you legally can't do that. So,

Stebbins — I appreciate the fact.

Buntrock — If you can't do it, you can't do it. And uh, I think changing it is unnecessary.

Carlson — Can I make a comment? I've got one more legal comment to make. This is Steve Carlson.

Marshall — Yes, Steve, go ahead.

Carlson — I think anybody who is interested in the possibility of a settlement accomplished and the consent judgment and order being approved by the Foundation and entered by the court needs to consider at least for a moment the question of what happens when it's presented to the court if the consent judgment and order presented to the court contains some obviously questionable provision. You are concerned about the possibility that there may be some members of the board that will attack the consent judgment and order, as they have already tried to stop this meeting. Uh, I would as counsel to the Foundation say that you probably ought to think strongly about doing something that is as close as you can to being something that looks like it's appropriate. And within the limits of what the corporation can truly do. I'm afraid you may be giving fuel to the fire, that somehow the corporation has acted inappropriately, if it passes resolution, or consents to consent judgments and orders, that, uh, have clear legal defects in them.

Stone — I would like to underscore that, and add that, although I was not in court today, it is my understanding that the judge has in essence invited the individual director defendants' attorneys to raise any concerns they have when this order is presented to her. So, uh, you know that this order and the procedure that led up to the orders, in fact you vote for the order, uh, will be under judicial scrutiny, and so I second what Steve says, that I think you want to err on the side of doing everything with scrupulous attention to detail and keep your process as clean as possible.

Marshall — And I really, I think frankly, that, Dean, to your question, and Ron, that if you wanted a release from the defendants, then I think it was essential at the time we were in mediation that there was, uh, uh, there was another line, uh, or sentence, or something that would have induced the individuals to settle, but that was not part of the mediated agreement, uh, and, as I said, at this point, I feel it is highly significant, eleventh hour change, and, I'll stand with what I said before, I came to this meeting as I trust we all did in good faith, there were six people that signed off on an intention to ratify, there were some things we had to work out since the last mediated agreement, especially the slate of officers, uh, and I think, um, we were prepared, and I hope, still are prepared, uh, to to reach agreement. But, uh, if we hold, if some hold fast to this, uh, then that is not going to be possible.

Stebbins — Well, I'm persuaded that I was in error, and that I think the attorneys comments are appropriate, and we need an agreement that will stand up under scrutiny.

Gidwitz — Stephanie, I will back off, excuse me, I've got a little food in my mouth, but I will back off of my

Tape 1 side 2

Gidwitz — For the record, that the language that plaintiffs and defendants originally, that the Sidley & Austin attorneys have been moving to change it, I believe

16di-001427

Stebbins — It was written in the Gidwitz — That is correct.

Stebbins — Distributed uh version.

Marshall — OK, thank you Ron.

Tucker — This is Paul. Can, am I coming through?

Marshall — Yes, you are, Paul, go ahead.

Tucker — I appreciate the fact that this will be dropped. I just for clarification, can I just, Ted, you had been the one who proposed it, could you just speak a little bit more, as to why, so it can be understood a little more clearly as to that we've spent so much time on this, as to why this really had been of concern?

Stebbins — Paul, are you asking me?

Tucker — Yeah.

Stebbins — Uh, the um this is discussing section 2, well, I think we've discussed it at length, it was written, as you know, in mediation, to cover um plaintiffs and defendants. And, uh, we're just, we're hearing now that defendants can't be covered. And uh, I was, uh, trying to make it broad enough to win everyone's acceptance, but, but I'm now persuaded, having heard the legal arguments that, that that's not a good course. So that's why I'm going back to, to the original Sidley version.

Marshall — I, I am prepared to call for a vote on the question, but I don't want to uh, terminate discussion prematurely, so is there uh any further discussion on the motion, which also has been seconded?

Daley — I'm not clear. I want to know exactly what we're talking about, now, in terms of changes. I'm personally not clear.

Marshall — Alright, Maggie, if I can try to summarize where we are, um, we have a, we had Ted's motion, which was to adopt the resolution, that the Foundation had prepared, which is that three page document that we all received. And he further modified his resolution, uh, motion, to, uh, make a minor change on the resolution, which was page 1, paragraph 4, uh, the last two sentences were eliminated, so in that paragraph it ended, the attorney general of the state of Illinois. And then we had also a minor revision on the uh, consent agenda, paragraph or number 7, which added after the 2002 annual meeting, or until 12/31/02, since the date was not clear. So it was Ted's motion to approve the resolution, and then those two minor changes, one to the resolution, and one to the consent judgment.

Stebbins — Right.

Marshall — So unless there is further discussion, uh, I guess the question is, are we Ratner — In a second, Steph, I'm just going over this with Mrs. Daley. Uh, this is where, uh

(inaudible background)

Hartman — This is Arthur, I'm prepared to vote.

Ratner — Stephanie, one second, I'm going over this with Mrs. Daley.

Marshall — Don, and I want to, I left out one part as Ted was talking, it was, until 12/31/02, or whichever comes first.

Ratner — Just going over that all with Mrs. Daley. So just one second.

Marshall — OK.

Buntrock — So the only changes are to paragraph 2 and paragraph 7. Right?

Marshall — Uh, the uh, on the resolution, Dean, there's a change, uh, eliminating, uh, the last two sentences on the fourth paragraph, and on the consent judgment, it's number 7 where we have inserted the date. There's no change to paragraph 2.

Ratner — Stephanie, let me, if I can, I've got the document here, let me go through this with the pages, so they can see what we're doing, OK? OK give me 30 seconds, OK? Stephanie?

Marshall — Sure. You have different page numbers than we do?

Ratner — Let me just show them, it's easier.

Marshall — OK.

Ratner — OK, we're making we're adding this December 31 date.

Daley — And we're on page 6 of the fax.

Ratner — That is paragraph 6, page 6. Then we're adding the five board members, OK. And then, the only other thing we're doing, is, we're taking out this last line. This is on the resolution on page 10, and any other document.

Carlson — That's the motion on the table.

Ratner — Well, but the motion on the table is effective and the settlement mediation, so I've got to go through the mediation pieces too.

Buntrock — Sure.

Terra — Stephanie. Stephanie?

Marshall — Yes, Maggie.

Terra — No, this is Judith.

Marshall — Oh, Judith, I'm sorry. I can't hear you very well. Hello?

Terra	Pardon?
Marshall	Hello.
Ratner	Closer to the phone.
Terra	I've got it right in my ear. Can you hear now?
Marshall	Yes we can, not very well, but we can.
Terra	OK. I just want to say that I am definitely going to object to uh any waiver of my legal action. And I think I would like to express strong objection to the fact that uh Allan Simpson, Helene Ahrweiler and Jacques Andreani are not on this, uh, at this meeting, not on this call.
Marshall	Yeah, we will.
Gidwitz	I couldn't hear a word of that Stephanie.
Marshall	Uh, she said uh, that she uh would not agree to anything that that waived her rights, and that she asked she is voicing strong objections uh, to the fact that Jacques and Helene and Alan are not on the call. And as here, I can just simply duly note that, but they were given every opportunity to be on the call, Don talked with
Hartman	I had no trouble getting in from France.
Marshall	They said that they would be, so it is absolutely most unfortunate, but we really could not wait, so Judith, we will, we will note that for the records, this is being taped, so that will be recorded. Don have you concluded your review? We are
Ratner	No, no, Dean is now talking to Mark. And Scott, he's got a question about the last line that's being eliminated on the uh resolution. Uh, which is "and any other document," and so forth and so on, that's paragraph 4.
Marshall	Correct.
Ratner	So there's a question about that, you want to explain to everybody?
Heatwole	Actually, I didn't draft this, John Sabl did, but John, maybe you would tell us why you would include something like that language in your resolution. I said to Dean I thought it was a catch all in case there was anything else that Sidley needed to do in order to effectuate the settlement.
John Sabl	And that is why it was there, Mark, you're absolutely right. My understanding was that, Ron had a concern as to whether it was too broad or seemed to contemplate going very far afield, we didn't think there was anything else that would need to file, and anything that was ministerial we think would have been would be contemplated by by the general authorization at the end. So we think it would be better to have it in, on the one hand, but we don't see a problem taking it out. I guess we didn't have a strong view either way. We have a mild preference to leave the language in, but since there were some feelings to the contrary, we didn't think it was particularly important.

Heatwole — So if there was anything else that was required, we would have to come back to the board and get approval?

Sabl — I don't think so, I think it would only be if it was something substantive, and Ron, maybe you want to speak to what your concern was, since I heard this indirectly from Ted. This language was not intended to make, you know, to file, you know, substantive changes, and we thought it was helpful from a catchall, but what uh, what was your concern, Ron?

Marshall — Ron are you there?

Gidwitz — I was knocked off, somehow. I'm just coming back on.

Sabl — OK, Ron the question was asked by, it's John Sabl, the question was asked by Mark Heatwole, why we were taking out the catchall language in the resolution, the one change that, that Ted made to the resolutions, that, I understood he made at your request, and, um, and Mark said, isn't that sort of a catch all if other things need to be filed, and would it be better to leave it in.

Gidwitz — And that's just the point where, I heard that, and then I was knocked off.

Sabl — OK, and I said that I think this, I thought this language was fine, as we drafted it, it was appropriate, and the catch all was just meant to be if other things needed to be filed, that it might be better to specifically recognize that. Um, I understood, or I maybe theorized that your concern was that language somehow, was too broad. Um.

Gidwitz — That is correct.

Sabl — OK. I guess, I think in terms of anything else, if it's ministerial, and I think you'd agree if it's just ministerial, filing something the second time or not making a substantive change, you don't have a problem with that, and that, and that even as the resolutions change, that really doesn't effect anything.

Gidwitz — I guess my concern, quite frankly, is the things that Sidley has historically considered to be ministerial and insignificant me and my counsel have not had the same level of uh lack of concern. So I just, maybe it's the result of this experience, but I am not particularly tolerant of things that I don't understand and don't know about.

Sabl — OK, well, Ron, I guess our point was, we're happy with the language either way, so

16di-001431

Gidwitz	Alright, well, let's just strike it, and then I'll be happy.
Sabl	OK. Good. Again, Mark, we don't believe that uh this would mean that anything else that was you know so clearly contemplated would be prohibited from us doing it, it was just that, I think it's something that Ron is concerned that, and that there shouldn't be substantive changes made.
Heatwole	I had no problem with taking it out. Dean raised the question with me as to whether or not there was impact from that, and I was just trying to explain it.
Sabl	Yeah, I don't think there really is an impact. I think we don't
Buntrock	I'm satisfied with my question. Thank you.
Sabl	Thank you.
Marshall	Uh, Don, have you uh, have you been able to clarify for Maggie and Dean exactly where the changes are, and then, uh, if so, uh everyone fully understanding what we what they will be voting on, then I would uh, like to call for a vote on the question.
Terra	Stephanie?
Marshall	Judith?
Terra	Yes, I would like to say a few words before the vote is taken.
Marshall	Yes, please.
Terra	Can you hear me OK?
Marshall	Yes we can.
Terra	It must be the phone, I don't know what.
Ratner	Can we just respond to Stephanie's question? I think Mrs. Daley and Mr. Buntrock can respond to that better than I. I think I described it, but, they're nodding that they understand all this.
Marshall	OK, fine. Thank you. Judith, go ahead.
Terra	Well, I just want to say before we take a vote on this motion, that uh the outset with all due respect to the each of my fellow board members, I think that, the uh the mediation results that we are being asked to endorse, um and for which we really had high hopes in the beginning, has turned out to be something very different than what we anticipated. Um, for me, it's a process which has distorted the consensual nature of what mediation really should be all about, as reflected in this document. And I think as Paul Tucker our chairman has already observed, the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees. And I think that this vote that we're about to take is a very momentous decision. Because basically today we're going to determine whether we will allow the Terra Foundation to really be destroyed for all times, in a process which I believe is oppressive and unlawful. And I think you've seen this reflected in my um, in some of my memos to you. Uh, certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream, of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart it's own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art. At least, um, he thought it was magnificent, and I would agree. And I think that, uh, the last think we must really think about is that we will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world, as a result of this uh mediation proposal. As a board, we have invited the state of Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation. Because this is basically the end result of this proposal. Telling us only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most, some of the most outstanding voices certainly in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation. And uh, so, I'm asking each of you to use your best judgment and wisdom in upholding the principles of self-government that have really been the basic part of this Foundation since its inception in 1978. I hope Stephanie, and all of you, that you will examine your conscience, and your fiduciary duties, and please do not permit the Terra Foundation to be destroyed. So obviously, I hope that each of you will join me in voting against this proposal. And I, I did say earlier, when you couldn't hear me well, that I think it's uh, I object strongly to the fact that um, Helene, and Jacques Andreani, and Alan Simpson were not on this call. Thank you.

Hartman — Uh, this is Arthur Hartman. Um, we'll be taking a vote which will indicate um what all of our views are. I couldn't disagree more with what Judith has said. I think the good of this Foundation has been found in this mediation, and it will carry on the kinds of things that Dan Terra was interested in. And, uh, that is my own personal position. Thank you.

Marshall — You know, I, I would just like to make a personal comment too, and I also regret that, uh, Jacques, and Alan, and Helene, uh, are not on the, are not on the call, because I think it would have been important for everyone to have had the opportunity to hear the conversation and to make a statement, if in fact they wish to do so. I sent a letter to uh David Hilliard dated June 17, where I was responding to the mediated settlement. Uh, and in that letter, uh, I raised several concerns which were pretty consistent with concerns I had raised in the past, and then I did say in the letter, having said this, and verbalizing these concerns, that I could live with the substance of the settlement, albeit with a heavy heart. And that I was prepared to ratify it, at an authorized board meeting. Uh, I also said in that letter that I believe in my heart that it does preserve the most fundamental dimensions of the Foundation's independence in determining the course of its own destiny, which I believe to be stated in the mediated agreement, although, I do believe that unprecedented restrictions have been imposed on the Foundation, as well, but I believe that a settlement, and not continued litigation is perhaps in the best interest of the Foundation and I would hope, um that the sixteen board members for this year, and the fifteen board members in the future, would see uh, the astounding opportunities that this Foundation has to make a mark, uh, not only in this country, but around the world. And I would hope that we would in fact commit uh to uh to ensuring that the vision of Dan Terra remain not only alive, but burn very brightly. Are there any other, any other points of discussion?

Heatwole Stephanie?

Marshall Yes.

Heatwole Mark Heatwole. Just one last item, before you vote. And I think this is important, and Judith touched on it, and Stephanie, you touched on it in your comments as well. In light of the allegations that have been uh brought forward in the federal court yesterday, to a certain extent, I was not there, but I understand that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County Courts this morning, about the coercion um that uh some members of this board may feel uh, or may not feel, uh from the action of the attorney general. I think it's important for each one of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely, and you are voting with your fiduciary obligations to this board and this institution and without, and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think you should vote. But if you are voting freely, and if you do not feel that compulsion, then, I think you are free to vote. And I, I think the board ought to be on record and everybody ought to be clear that this vote is being taken without that pressure, without that, um impediment.

Marshall Well, Mark, are you asking then, for a statement, or a comment, because I certainly can, can comment on what you just said.

Heatwole The comment was directed really to you and Ted.

Marshall OK.

Heatwole But in a general way to everyone. Because you do have fiduciary obligations to this institution. Um, which transcend your obligations to other, other facts. And, uh, each one of you should examine that, I think Judith brought that to the fore, Stephanie, you echoed it, but since the allegations have been made, I think it's important to be on the record, that if anyone feels that they can't vote that way, I think they should abstain. So, having said that, if you vote, I assume that means you are not doing so um feel freely.

Marshall — Well, I, let me just make a personal comment, just in response to what you just said, Mark. I have felt in the past that uh, despite the desire of some board members, uh, over the last year or so, to try to peg me into an alleged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked uh, my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice, uh, to represent the integrity of my own convictions. Uh, I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. It is true, that the attorney general's office has asked the Illinois mathematics and science academy to respond to a fact finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities, as a board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation. Ted, I don't know, if you want to make a comment as well.

Stebbins — I'd just, I'd like to say, that I came to the board, like Stephanie, and everyone else, as a volunteer. Um, I came to the board, at, I knew Dan Terra, I came to the board at the request of Jim Collins and Judith Terra, I've served as chair of the collections committee, and I think I've served effectively. And I've brought some wonderful new paintings, helped bring some wonderful new paintings to the Foundation collection. I've done this without any iota of a conflict of interest. I value my reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity, very very highly, and I think I'm well known for both those uh things. Uh, I've last when I've always felt free to form my own judgments, and last either August or early September, um, when Paul Tucker told me first about his enthusiasm for the building in Washington, and wanting to move there, I disagreed. I long argued to explore a variety of stand-alone options in Chicago, I was willing to consider as part of the strategic planning going elsewhere, but I've always been a defender of Chicago. Uh, like Arthur, I at the board meeting in Giverny, on September 25, I guess it was, 2000, when we learned of the suit, I argued for a total board replacement. Um, at the same time, I abhor the personalized suit brought by the plaintiffs. Unnecessary. I feel very very sympathetic for Judith Terra. I lament the behavior of Senator Simpson. I'm very saddened by the behavior of Paul Tucker. I abhor the threatening tactics of the attorney general, but I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is the best interests of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago, and in France. For the promulgation of American art.

Marshall — Is there anyone who has a statement, uh, to make, otherwise I will, I think it's appropriate that we now call for, call the question.

Tucker — I'd like to make a statement, Stephanie.

Marshall — Paul is that you?

Tucker — That's me.

Marshall — OK.

Tucker — Um, I, it's painful to hear, the comments that have been made, and in many quarters, although I admire the honesty about it all. I think it's very difficult to be able to predict the future in any form or fashion. None of us could have thought we would be at this particular juncture when we all joined the board. Maybe some did, I don't know, but I certainly didn't. And I don't think Ted did, or Stephanie did. And I applaud their efforts to try to be able to find the right way to act in these difficult causes. But I find most disturbing is the ways in which uh, this Foundation is a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of uh, the state's purview. Uh, the invasion of its independence, its privacy, of a, a public domain, i.e., the hand of the attorney general, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive, I find it also counter to the very foundations on which foundations and America as a whole are supposed to be founded, which is why I protested this mediation will continue to do so. Uh, I also find it, uh, disturbing that the um, resolution, um calls for the continued presence of uh the Illinois factions, not that they're not wonderful people in Illinois, certainly more than enough to handle all of this, but I think that that should have been our choice, not somebody else's choice. Uh, and that compromise of our independence is something which uh I think again goes right to the heart of the matter. I think that everybody's consciences have been articulated with grace and conviction, and I think that that is appropriate. But I also believe, in the end, that there are serious principles, uh particularly that of the ways in which a foundation is supposed to operate, which are deeply compromised by this mediation and this process. And I think that it is in the end a sad day for uh the Foundation, and ultimately a sad day in the larger case for the ways in which the state interferes with uh private property.

Marshall — Uh,

Hartman — I I really would like to make one further, short comment. And that is that foundations are established under certain laws, and have to meet certain requirements. Their responsibilities are to the people, uh, of the jurisdiction, that has permitted them to set up these tax free organizations. Therefore, I do not see that an oversight by such authorities is out of order. Thank you.

Marshall	I think it's time for us to call the question, so we will now proceed to a role call vote on the motion. Uh, and I guess the question is, uh, OK, Mr. Jacques, not here, Helene, not here, Dean,
Buntrock	I vote yes.
Marshall	Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron
Gidwitz	Yes
Marshall	Arthur
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Stephanie, yes. Alan, Ted
Stebbins	Yes.
Marshall	Judith
Terra	No
Marshall	Paul
Tucker	No.
Marshall	Paul?
Tucker	No, Steph.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, I didn't hear you, Paul.
Tucker	That's OK.
Marshall	Um, the motion has been passed by six board members, uh, we now need a motion for adjourn.
Stebbins	I move to adjourn.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, is there, the agenda did say, any new business. Is there any new business which needs to come before this board at this time? Hearing none, uh, we need a motion to adjourn.
Stebbins	So moved.
Marshall	Is that Ted?
Hartman	Second
Marshall	Second, I'm sorry, Dean?
Buntrock	No, that was Arthur.
Marshall	Oh, Arthur.
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Do we need a roll call? Uh, role call for the motion? Dean.

Buntrock	Uh, I move to ad, we adjourn, or uh, I vote to adjourn.
Marshall	OK, yes. Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron.
Gidwitz	Yes.
Marshall	Arthur.
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Stephanie, yes. Uh, Ted.
Stebbins	Yes.
Marshall	Judith.
Terra	Yes.
Marshall	Paul.
Tucker	Indeed, yes.
Marshall	Uh, the uh, this meeting is adjourned. Thank you all, and bonne chance.
Hartman	Thank you.
Ratner	Thank you.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

DEAN L. BUNTROCK, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al. Plaintiffs, vs. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	)	No. 00 CH 13859
THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ex rel. JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois, Plaintiff-Intervenor, vs. JUDITH TERRA, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al., Defendants.	)

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO DIRECTOR DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO SETTLEMENT

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock ("Buntrock") and Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra Foundation" or "Foundation") by their attorneys Quinlan & Crisham, Ltd., ("Plaintiffs"), hereby respond to the Director Defendants' Objections to Settlement and state as follows[1]:

[1] At the outset, it should be noted that Plaintiffs' response is in excess of the Court's 15-page limit because the Defendant Directors' objections, filed without leave of Court, were 27-pages long. Also, several of the cases in the authority received by Plaintiffs from the Defendant Directors have been highlighted or the text has otherwise been altered.

INTRODUCTION

On July 6, 2001, the Terra Foundation filed its Motion for Entry of Consent Judgment and Order. In response, Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker and Alan K. Simpson (hereinafter "Defendant Directors") filed objections to the proposed settlement. Contrary to this Court's statement on July 2, 2001, that "the issues are coercion and illegality and those issues only" (Exhibit J at p.88), the Defendant Directors again devote a substantial portion of their 28 page objections to a discussion of Dan Terra's intent.

Further, the Defendant Directors' objections do not present new evidence of any substance supported by affidavit as to why the consent decree should not be approved by this Court. Thus, the Defendant Directors should not be allowed to overturn the settlement without a scintilla of proof regarding the purported conflict of interest or evidence of any unlawful coercion by the Attorney General.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Background

Plaintiffs, Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, as directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, instituted this action on September 22, 2000. The verified complaint alleged, among other things, that Defendant Directors Paul Tucker, Judith Terra, and Alan Simpson engaged in an unlawful effort to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and relocate the Foundation's $450 million in assets outside of Illinois. The Defendant Directors further intended to remove plaintiffs from the board of directors because of their opposition to the scheme. The complaint also alleged that the Defendant Directors mismanaged the Terra Museum in Chicago to justify their scheme to close the museum.

The Illinois Attorney General, who possesses broad common law and statutory authority over charitable trusts in Illinois, intervened in this action. The Attorney General filed a complaint seeking, among other things, the removal of the defendant directors from the Board of Terra Foundation for their alleged malfeasance, the appointment of a receiver for the Foundation, an accounting, and the appointment of new directors to the Board.

James Terra, the son of Dan Terra also sought to intervene in this action to ensure that the Terra Foundation remained in Chicago, in accordance with his father's intent. James Terra's petition to intervene was entered and continued until completion of the mediation.

B. The Defendants' Requested Mediation

On January 30, 2001, the Court informed all parties that it had received a letter from counsel for the Defendant Foundation requesting the parties to enter into mediation to settle this case. The Defendant Directors also sought mediation. The Defendant Directors knew well the Attorney General's litigation position going into mediation: the Terra Foundation may not close the museum in Chicago and remove the Foundation's assets from the State of Illinois. Indeed, the Attorney General's position was clearly expressed to all parties and the Court. By participating in mediation the parties (including, Terra, Simpson and Tucker) recognized that the mediation, if successful, would require compromise of the legal issues in the case, including the Terra Foundation's ability to remove its charitable assets from the State of Illinois.

The Defendant Directors were strong proponents of mediating this dispute. They submitted names of several mediators to the Court for consideration. David C. Hillard was one of the mediators recommended by the Defendant Directors to be of "outstanding skill" and "best equipped to handle this mediation." (See February 1, 2001, letter from Brian L. Crowe; February 2, 2001 letter from James Wilson, attached hereto as Exhibits A and B, respectively).

On February 5, 2001, this Court entered an order appointing Mr. Hilliard to mediate this dispute between the parties. The Court stated that Mr. Hilliard would be responsible for setting the ground rules for the mediation and reiterated in a court order the parties' agreement that no statements made by any participants in the mediation process would be admissible as evidence in court. (See Report of Proceedings dated February 5, 2001, attached as Exhibit C at pp. 7-8,and Order of February 5, 2001 attached as Exhibit D) The parties, including the Defendant Directors, also agreed that the Attorney General be permitted to fully participate in the mediation process. (Exhibit D; February 5, 2001 Order)

After nearly four months of difficult negotiations and mutual compromise, the parties reached a written agreement on June 19, 2001 on all material terms, thus resolving this matter.

C. The Defendant Directors' Failed Attempt to Defeat the Settlement in Federal Court.

The board schedule a meeting for June 29, 2001 to formally vote on the agreement reached on June 19, 2001. On June 28, 2000, just one day prior to the Board's scheduled vote on the mediated agreement, the Defendant Directors filed a complaint in federal court against the Assistant Attorney General, Floyd D. Perkins. A copy of the Complaint is attached as Exhibit E. The Defendant Directors did not dispute the terms of the agreement. Rather, they alleged that Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, violated their federal constitutional rights by coercing two Terra Foundation directors, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, to vote in favor of the agreement. The complaint alleged that Mr. Perkins had coerced Dr. Stebbins by proposing to name him in a lawsuit, and had coerced Dr. Marshall by investigating the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, where Dr. Marshall serves as President. The Defendant Directors failed to submit any affidavits from either Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall supporting these allegations. Nevertheless, the Defendant Directors sought a temporary restraining order enjoining Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall from voting at the Board meeting scheduled for June 29, 2001.

The case was heard by Judge Bucklo that same day. After a two hour hearing, Judge Bucklo issued a twelve page Opinion and Memorandum ("Opinion"), dismissing the Defendant Directors' complaint and denying their emergency motion for temporary restraining order. A copy of Judge Bucklo's Opinion is attached hereto as Exhibit F. Judge Bucklo dismissed the case pursuant to the abstention doctrine, but also addressed the substantial allegations of the complaint and ruled that the Attorney General's activities and Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's support of the agreement were entirely lawful. (Exhibit F at p. 10-11.) With regards to the allegations that Mr. Perkins' actions may have influenced the votes, Judge Bucklo noted that under the law "not every incentive and disincentive is coercive." Id. In addition, the Court found that the conduct allegedly being induced - - a changed vote -- was also lawful because it was something that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall "had a lawful right to do in any event." Id.

D. The Defendant Directors' Second Attempt to Defeat The Settlement.

Unable to state a claim in federal court, the Defendant Directors rushed to this Court the next day urging this Court to do what Judge Bucklo had refused to do. Just hours before the duly noticed Board meeting, the Defendant Directors filed an emergency motion for a temporary restraining order seeking to prevent the Board from meeting and voting on the mediated agreement. After a hearing, this Court also denied the Defendant Directors' motion for a temporary restraining order and allowed the board of director's meeting to proceed as scheduled. A copy of the Court's June 29, 2001 Order is attached as Exhibit G.)

E. The Board's Votes to Approve the Proposed Settlement.

The Terra Foundation Board convened at approximately 12:45 pm on June 29, 2001, with a quorum of eight directors present. The meeting was properly noticed and called in strict conformity with the Foundation's bylaws. Counsel for the Foundation was also present. During the meeting, the Board discussed various aspects of the agreement. The Board also specifically addressed the allegations made by the Defendant Directors in federal court and in this Court regarding the alleged coercion of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall explicitly denied any duress and state that they approved the settlement in the best interests of the Foundation and consistent with their fiduciary duties. (See Exhibit H, p. 41)

After substantial discussion, the Board of the Terra Foundation by a vote of 6 to 2 passed a Resolution which authorized the Foundation to enter into the Consent Judgment and Order and amend Article III of its By-Laws. (A copy of the Consent Judgment and Order and Resulution are attached as Group Exhibit I).

F. The Defendant Directors' Third Attempt to Defeat the Settlement.

On July 2, 2001, the Defendant Directors made yet another attempt to defeat the mediated settlement and filed a motion for leave to file written objections and demand for an evidentiary hearing. The motion recycled the same arguments previously rejected by Judge Bucklo. Attached to the motion were the Defendant Directors' written objections, along with a number of exhibits purporting to reflect Dan Terra's intent to move the Terra Museum to Washington, D.C. After reviewing these materials, the Court denied the Defendant Directors' motion for leave to file the documents, stating that those documents were unsupported by sworn affidavits and entirely irrelevant to the issue of coercion. The Court then requested counsel for the Terra Foundation to file a motion to approve the consent decree and allowed the Defendant Directors yet another opportunity to object to entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. However, the Court made it very clear that the only issues that were relevant to the approval of the consent judgment were "coercion and illegality and those issues only." (Exhibit J, July 2, 2001, p. 88). The Court specifically stated "I do not want to hear anything more about the intent of the original founder . . . . That is not before the Court on this motion to approve the consent decree. " Id.

G. Defendant Directors Misrepresent the terms of the Consent Decree.

The Defendant Directors' exaggerated misstatements regarding the actual terms and implications of the Consent Judgment are belied by a reading of the agreement itself. (Group Ex. I, attached). The Defendant Directors mischaracterize the Consent Judgment as effectively limiting the Foundation's ability to function. However, the decree expressly states: "[T]he Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants." ¶4. The Defendant Directors claim that the world wide art community is prevented from enjoying the Collection. However, nothing in the Decree prevents the Foundation from making loans of artwork to institutions worldwide, as it has done for many years. Moreover, the Consent Judgment specifically protects the role of the Museé in Giverny, France. "[T]he Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection." ¶5.

Contrary to the Defendant Directors' claim that the Consent Judgment limits the Foundations' ability to partner with other institutions, the Consent Judgment allows the Foundation to maintain and exhibit the Collection "either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area." ¶5 (emphasis added). In this way, the Foundation Board, in its discretion, may determine whether a partnership, several partnerships, or no partnership is the best course of action.

H. The Defendants' Objections Violate Rule 191.

On July 19, 2001, the Defendant Directors filed their objections to the Proposed Settlement again arguing Dan Terra's intent . Their objections are supported by numerous affidavits previously rejected by this Court.

ARGUMENT

I. The Settlement is Valid, Binding and Represents the Agreement of the Parties.

Pending before this Court is a Motion for Entry of Consent Judgment and Order. The only proper question before this Court at this stage is whether or not there was an agreement to settle between the parties. Here, it is undisputed that the parties to the agreement approved the agreement. Illinois law is clear that "[T]he agreements are binding so long as there is clearly an offer and acceptance to compromise, and there is a meeting of the minds as to the terms of the agreement." Sheffield Poly-Glaz, Inc. v. Humbold Glass Co., 42 Ill. App. 3d 865, 356 N.E.2d 837, 840 (1st Dist. 1976). Here, there is no question that the parties reached a settlement and that Consent Judgment reflects the proper terms. In fact, the parties to the agreement have approved the agreement and this Court need only enter the agreement as submitted. This is because of the long standing Illinois public policy that settlements are to be encouraged and given full force and effect. Id.

None of the parties to the agreement challenge the agreement. Instead, this challenge is brought by three directors who oppose the agreement. There is simply no legitimate question and no dispute among the parties or the Attorney General that the agreement reflects an offer and an acceptance to compromise and there is a meeting of the minds as to the terms of the agreement. Even the Defendant Directors do not challenge the terms of the agreement. This Court should, therefore, enter the Consent Judgment and Order.

II. The Votes Approving The Settlement Were Legal And Valid.

A. This Agreement Was Approved at a Properly Called Meeting of the Board.

It is undisputed that the Board's approval of the mediated agreement occurred at a properly noticed and called meeting of the Foundation's board of directors. Indeed, the Defendant Directors do not challenge the propriety of the meeting. On June 19, 2001, a majority of the directors agreed in writing to a settlement of this matter. The agreement was reached at a session with the mediator.

On June 29, 2001, at approximately 12:30 p.m., the meeting was called to order with due notice to all directors in compliance with Foundation's bylaws. A copy of the bylaws are attached as Exhibit K. Participating at that meeting were Directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Marshall, Stebbins, Tucker and Terra. Also present were the attorneys for the Foundation, including Winston and Strawn, and Sidley Austin Brown and Wood. Eight directors were present at the meeting out of a total of eleven directors on the Board. Therefore, a quorum was present. After much debate and extensive discussion, at the conclusion of the meeting, a vote was taken as to the settlement and six directors voted for the settlement (Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Marshall and Stebbins) and two directors voted against the settlement (Terra and Tucker). Thus, there was a majority vote of the directors taken at a duly called meeting with a quorum present. The agreement to enter into this settlement was clearly the action of the Board. All of the directors had an opportunity to participate and there was lengthy discussion prior to taking of the vote. (See Exhibit H Transcript of June 29, 2001)

Counsel for the Foundation has also stressed that the actions taken at the June 29, 2001 meeting were proper. At the July 2, 2001 meeting, the counsel for the Foundation stated:

> And here you have a situation where there was a duly constituted, duly called board meeting. A quorum was present. There was vigorous discussion and a vote was held. And 6 to 2, the directors voted, exercising their free will that this - and in accordance with their fiduciary duties that this was in the best interests of the Foundation as they understood it.

(Exhibit J, July 2, 2001 Tr. at pp. 42-43)

B. There Was No Conflict Of Interest.

The Defendant Directors now assert that the alleged coercion of the Attorney General created a conflict of interest for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, which rendered their votes a nullity. Such assertions do not, however, establish a conflict of interest under Illinois law. Moreover , the Settlement was properly approved by the Board consistent with the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act. Also, the Defendant Directors' assertions totally ignore the relevant statutory provisions. In fact, the only authority cited by defendants as support for the alleged conflict of interest is not even applicable here. The cases cited by defendants involve dealing with general corporate principles not applicable to the circumstances here. The operations of the Foundation are governed by an entirely separate statutory scheme. 805 ILCS 105/1, et seq.

1. Conflicts in this context are limited to pecuniary conflicts.

In the objections, the Defendant Directors failed to cite a single case which establishes that the votes taken here amount to a conflict of interest under Illinois law.

Even more telling, defendants fail to cite to the appropriate statutory provisions which actually govern the existence of a director conflict of interest with regard to a not-for-profit corporation. See 805 ILCS 105/108.60.

Section 108.60 provides that a conflict of interest exists if a director of the not for profit corporation is directly or indirectly a party to the transaction. Id. Section 108.60(d) further provides that a conflict of interest occurs where a director of a Not-for-Profit corporation is an is an officer, director or general partner or has a material financial interest in an entity which is the other party to the transaction at issue. Thus, a conflict of interest only arises if a director has a pecuniary interest in the transaction. Here, it is undisputed that neither Dr. Stebbins nor Dr. Marshall had a financial interest in any other party to the settlement — nor were they officers or directors of any other entity that was a party to this transaction. There simply was no conflict of interest within the realm of section 108.60. Accordingly, Defendants' argument that the purported conflict of interest invalidates the settlement is without merit and does not meet the test under section 108.60.

Moreover, even if the "conflict of interest" did exist — which it did not — section 108.60 provides that such a transaction may be ratified by the corporation. Id. Here, stripped of all rhetoric, it is clear that the allegations of a "conflict" are merely the assertions of the individual defendants who are unhappy with the settlement. These self-serving statements of Defendants fail to demonstrate how the settlement was the result of any conflict of interest.

Defendants' disregard for section 108.60 is also fatal to their argument that discounting the votes of Marshall and Stebbins would somehow invalidate the Settlement. The premise of defendants' argument is that Stebbins and Marshall should have been disqualified and, had their votes been excluded, the Settlement would have only 4 votes and would not be approved. Section 108.60(b) defeats defendants' argument. Section 108.60 provides that so long as the alleged "conflict" is disclosed, the transaction may be approved by a majority of disinterested directors, "even though the disinterested directors be less than a quorum." Section 108.60(c) makes clear that the presence of a director who is directly or indirectly a party to a transaction or otherwise disinterested, may be counted to determine whether a quorum exists, but may not be counted when the board takes action on the transaction. Thus, under the theory of the Defendant Directors, there were six disinterested directors at the board meeting. Accordingly, if the votes cast by Marshall and Stebbins were invalidated, the Settlement received 4 votes and was properly approved by a majority of the 6 disinterested directors. Therefore, even if this Court were to invalidate Marshall and Stebbins' votes — which it should not do — the Settlement Agreement was approved by a majority of disinterested directors at the board meeting.

2. The Foundation's Own Conflict of Interests Policy Defines Conflicts as Financial Conflicts Only.

Furthermore, the Foundation's own policy is consistent with Illinois law that a director conflict relates to a director's pecuniary interest in the subject transaction. 805 ILCS 105/1108.60 In November of 1998, the Board itself adopted a specific conflict of interests policy to apply to all of its officers, directors and key employees. A copy of the policy is attached as Exhibit L. That policy defines an interested person as one who has a direct or indirect financial interest in a transaction involving the Foundation. Id. As noted above, neither Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins have a financial interest in the settlement and are, therefore, conflict free, consistent with the Foundation's own conflict of interest policy.

Significantly, the cases relied upon by defendants also reflect the principle that conflicts of interest relate to pecuniary interests. Specifically, Weiss Med. Complex v. Kim, 87 Ill. App. 3d 111, 408 N.E.2d 959 (1980) involved a board vote to invalidate non-compete clauses that were provided for in the contracts of certain directors who voted on the issue. Similarly, in Elward v. Peabody Coal Co., 9 Ill. App. 2d 234, 132 N.E.2d 549 (1956) certain board members voted to issue a stock option to themselves.[2]

Additionally, Defendants' effort to parallel the alleged "conflict" with this Court's prior orders removing Tucker from serving as the litigation director is without merit. This Court removed Tucker as the litigation director in accordance with well-established authority that provides that when serious allegations of wrongdoing are alleged against directors of a corporation, the corporation must independently investigate the allegations and determine its position in the litigation. See Auerbach v. Bennett, 393 N.E.2d 994 (N.Y. 1979). Here, defendants are arguing that Stebbins and Marshall had some alleged personal interest that could have impacted their vote in favor of the settlement. There is simply no comparison. Tucker's conflict was palpable – he could investigate himself. Taken to its logical extension, defendants' "analogy" would prohibit any party to the litigation from approving a settlement because of any interest a party may have in resolving the litigation. Defendants cite no cases for such an argument.

[2] Two cases were cited by defendants do not even involve conflicts of interest in a corporate context. Kerrigan v. Unity Savings Ass'n, 58 Ill. 2d 20, 317 N.E.2d 39 (1974) is a business opportunity case. where certain directors failed to inform the corporation of a business opportunity and instead, usurped the business opportunity for their own benefit. Clearly, there was no business opportunity improperly usurped by Marshall and Stebbins and defendants do not allege any such conduct by Stebbins or Marshall. Further, Martin v. Heinhold Commodities, Inc. 163 Il. 2d 33, 643 N.E.2d 734 (1994) involved an action against a broker for investors and did not involve actions by a corporate board of directors.

Defendants' reliance on New York Hotel & Motel Trades Council v. Hotel Ass'n, 747 F. Supp. 1074 (S.D. N.Y. 1990) and In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litigation, 643 F.2d 195 (5th Cir. 1981) is equally unavailing. The crucial factor — disregarded by defendants — is that the purported conflict of interest at issue in New York Hotel and In re Corrugated involved a conflict suffered by counsel not members of a board of directors. Here, the Defendant Directors make no allegations as to the adequacy of the representation by counsel. New York Hotel and In re Corrugated are thus, inapposite.

Finally, defendants' contention that there is no need to prove that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins actually voted to pursue their own interests rather than those of the Foundation to void their vote is unfounded in law. The Defendant Directors cite no cases for this proposition. Moreover, defendants reliance on In Fletcher Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporations, § 837.60 is misplaced. Even Fletcher provides that:

> Multiple loyalties or apparent conflicts are insufficient in themselves to establish a breach of loyalty.

Fletcher Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporation, § 837.60 (rev. vo. 1994 & Supp. 2000). Here, defendants allege no facts that Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall suffered a conflict of interest – much less an apparent conflict of interest used their positions as directors of the Foundation to effectuate a transaction between the Foundation and themselves.

C. Defendant Directors' Reliance on Class Action Cases is Misplaced.

The Defendant Directors also cite numerous class action cases as the basis for their claim that it is the Foundation and Plaintiffs and the Attorney General that bear the burden of establishing the settlement, as if this action were a class action. (Objections, p. 13.)[3] This clearly is not a class action suit and the defendant's argument is misplaced. The class action context is inherently different than the case at bar. Settlements of class actions are governed by Section 2-806 of the Code of Civil Procedure which mandates that a class action "shall not be compromised or dismissed except with the approval of the court..." 735 ILCS 5/2-806. As described above, in the context of non-class action settlements, the burden in challenging a settlement agreement is on the challenging party, not on the proponent of the settlement. Flynn v. Flynn, 232 Ill. App. 3d 394, 401, 597 N.E.2d 709, 713 (burden of proving duress or coercion by clear and convincing evidence is on the party asserting it). This case is not a class action nor was it alleged to be a class action in any pleading. It was never certified as a class action (735 ILCS 5/2-801), there is no defined class (735 ILCS 5/2-802), no notice was sent to prospective class members (735 ILCS 5/2-803) and moreover, it has never been treated as a class action by any of the parties or the Court. All of the parties are before this Court. There are no absent parties, as the defendants content.

---

[3] Defendant Directors have misidentified several class action cases they rely upon, suggesting instead that they are cases of general applicability. See, Obj. p. 13, "[W]hen, as here, parties seek court approval of settlements" citing Waters, ; Steinberg, "court has the affirmative obligation to ensure that any settlement is 'fair, just ...'"; p. 14, "[I]n any contest over a proposed settlement" citing Waters and In re General Motors; p. 16, "Courts in similar circumstances" citing New York Hotel & Motel; p. 25-26, citing In re General Motors Corp., Patterson, Steinberg, and In re Brand Name Prescription Drugs, for the proposition that discovery is required whenever settlement is objected to; p. 27 citing In re General Motors, for proposition that burden is on proponents of a settlement. In each of these instances the Defendant Directors have ignored that these are class action cases and that the courts therein were applying rules of class actions, not general principles as the Defendant Directors would have the court believe.

D. Under Established Illinois Case Law, the Defendant Directors are Not Entitled to an Evidentiary Hearing.

The Defendant Directors argument must be rejected for yet another reason. The safeguards instituted for the approval of a class action settlement are entirely inapplicable to the settlement of a non-class action legal dispute, such as here. As Justice Posner explained:

> "The fairness of a settlement of a legal dispute is like the adequacy of the consideration supporting a contractual promise: a matter best left to negotiation between the parties. A settlement is a contract, and normally the test for the fairness of a contract is strictly procedural: were the parties competent adults duly apprised of the basic facts relating to their transaction? The problem in the class-action setting, and the reason that judicial approval of the settlement of such an action is required, is that the negotiator on the plaintiffs' side, that is, the lawyer for the class, is potentially an unreliable agent of his principals.

Mars Steel Corporation v. Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, 834 F.2d 677, 681 (7th Cir. 1987)(emphasis added).

In this instance, there is no "lawyer for the class" to warrant a hearing on the settlement. Illinois law provides that this Court may decide a motion or other objection directed at a settlement on affidavits, pleadings and arguments of counsel alone without an evidentiary hearing. In Marriage of Varco, 158 Ill. App. 3d 578, 580, 511 N.E.2d 736, 737-38 (1st Dist. 1987), the court affirmed the trial court's rejection of a petition to open a settlement without holding an evidentiary hearing. The court held that it was proper for the trial court to dispose of the petitioner's contentions that his wife entered into settlement as a result of duress without holding an evidentiary hearing. Id. The court cited the well-established rule under Illinois law that motions may be decided on the basis of affidavits alone. Id. Likewise, in Filko v. Filko, 127 Ill. App. 2d 10, 23, 262 N.E.2d 88, 94-95 (1st Dist. 1970), the appellate court affirmed a trial court's determination that no hearing as to duress was necessary where the offer of proof sufficiently presented to the court what the proposed witnesses would testify, the trial court was well acquainted with the matters proposed by movant and there was no showing that there were anything to be presented above and beyond the scope of the offer of proof. See also In re Marriage of Chapman, 162 Ill. App. 3d 308, 312-15, 515 N.E.2d 424, 427-29 (1st Dist. 1987) (where matters raised by motion to vacate settlement were familiar to the trial court and sufficiently informed the court of the proposed testimony, it was not necessary for trial court to hold evidentiary hearing).

E. Defendant Directors' Arguments Regarding the Substance of the Agreement Fail in Light of the Business Judgment Rule.

The Defendant Directors also attempt to subvert this agreement by making extraneous arguments such as Ms. Brody's opinions regarding the agreement.[4] This Court can dispose of those arguments by a simple application of the business judgment rule.

Under the business judgment rule, a presumption attaches by operation of law that in making a business decision the directors acted in an informed manner, in good faith and in the honest belief that they acted in the best interest of the company. Lewis v. Playboy Enterprises, 279 Ill. App. 3d 47, 54, 664 N.E.2d 133, 138 (1st Dist. 1996). In the absence of sufficient factual allegations to the contrary, the court must presume that the protections of the business judgment rule apply. Stamp v. Touche Ross & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 1018, 636 N.E.2d 616, 623 (1st Dist. 1993). Here, a majority of the board has determined that the best interests of the Foundation will be served by this settlement, that determination is protected by the business judgment rule and the court should not accept the Defendant Directors' invitation to insert itself into the Board's management of its corporate affairs. In fact, in Panter v. Marshall Field & Co., 486 F. Supp. 1168, 1193-94 (N.D. Ill. 1980) (Dir. Def.s' Obj. Tab 13), relied upon by Defendant Directors to claim a breach of duty resulting from waste of corporate assets, the court actually entered a directed verdict for the defendants based upon its determination that the actions of the directors was protected by the business judgment rule.

[4] Ms. Brody offers opinions that she would have preferred different terms to the agreement. Ms. Brody's opinion testimony is not predicated on evidence or personal knowledge and, as such, is not only irrelevant but should also be stricken under Ill.S.Ct.R. 191.

III. The Defendant Directors' Fail to Meet Their Burden to Set Aside the Consent Judgment and Order.

A. A Consent Decree Can Only be Set Aside by Proof of Fraud, Duress, Unconscionability or Newly Discovered Evidence.

It is well settled under Illinois law that a consent decree can only be set aside by agreement of the parties to the decree or by a showing that it resulted from fraud, duress, incompetence to contract, unconscionability or newly discovered evidence. Sakun v. Taffer, 268 Ill. App. 3d 343, 353, 643 N.E.2d 1271, 1279 (1st Dist. 1994); Burchett v. Goncher, 235 Ill. App. 3d 1091, 1094-95, 603 N.E.2d 1, 4 (1st Dist. 1991); Filosa v. Pecora, 18 Ill. App. 3d 123, 127, 309 N.E.2d 356, 359 (1st Dist. 1974). Here, none of the parties to the agreement challenges this agreement. Instead, three directors who refused to take part in the settlement are attempting to launch a collateral attack on an agreement, which all of the parties thereto agree is valid, binding and should be entered by this Court. This Court should enter this consent decree without further delay. See New York Hotel & Motel Trades v. Hotel Assoc. of NYC, 747 F. Supp. 1074, 1079 (S.D. NY 1990) (Dir. Def.s' Obj. Tab 12) (rejecting objection of non-settling party stressing that none of the settling parties had any objection to the settlement).

B. The Burden is on the Party Challenging the Decree.

The Defendant Directors assert that the agreement was the result of coercion and duress. As such, the Defendant Directors must plead and prove the existence of duress or coercion by clear and convincing evidence. Wallenius v. Sison, 243 Ill. App. 3d 495, 503-04, 611 N.E.2d 1096, 1101 (1st Dist. 1993) (affirming trial court refusal to vacate a settlement agreement where movants failed to establish fraud, coercion or duress by clear and convincing evidence); Flynn v. Flynn, 232 Ill. App. 3d 394, 401, 597 N.E.2d 709, 713 (1st Dist. 1991) (burden of proving duress or coercion by clear and convincing evidence is on the party asserting it). The defendants fail to meet this burden. Not surprisingly, the Defendant Directors retreat from this burden. Illinois law is clear, however, that the burden lies with the defendants. Id.

C. No Duress or Coercion has been Established by the Defendant Directors.

Duress is not found merely because the bargaining process was tough. Instead, Illinois law requires: 1) a wrongful or illegal act or threat against a person which 2) deprives him of the exercise of his free will. Regengold v. Baby Fold, Inc., 68 Ill. 2d 419, 433, 369 N.E.2d 858, 864 (1977); Wallenius v. Sison, 243 Ill. App. 3d 495, 503-04, 611 N.E.2d 1096, 1101 (1st Dist. 1993); Flynn v. Flynn, 232 Ill. App. 3d 394, 401, 597 N.E.2d 709, 713 (1st Dist. 1991); Higgins v. Brunswick, 76 Ill. App. 3d 273, 277, 395 N.E.2d 81, 85 (1st Dist. 1979); Towne v. Town of Libertyville, 190 Ill. App. 3d 563, 569, 546 N.E.2d 810, 815 (2d Dist. 1989); In re Marriage of Hamm-Smith, 261 Ill. App. 3d 209, 214-15, 633 N.E.2d 225, 230 (4th Dist. 1994). The Defendant Directors fail to establish either of these requirements.

First, the Defendant Directors have not alleged a single action by the Attorney General or any other party which is illegal. Specifically, the filing or threatening to file a lawsuit is not illegal and cannot be used to support a claim of duress. In Regengold v. Baby Fold, Inc., 68 Ill. 2d 419, 433, 369 N.E.2d 858, 864 (1977), the Illinois Supreme Court refused to accept a mother's claim of duress to invalidate a consent to adoption. The Supreme Court stressed that the action alleged must be wrongful or illegal, citing, inter alia, Kaplan v. Kaplan, 25 Ill. 2d 181, 186, 182 N.E.2d 706, 709 (1962), wherein the court held that it was not duress to threaten to institute a suit to enforce what a party believes to be his legal right. Id. Higgins v. Brunswick, 76 Ill. App. 3d 273, 278, 395 N.E.2d 81, 85 (1st Dist. 1979) (merely informing plaintiffs of the legal consequences which could be avoided by settling not illegal or wrongful); Towne v. Town of Libertyville, 190 Ill. App. 3d 563, 569, 546 N.E.2d 810, 815 (2d Dist. 1989) ("not duress to threaten or institute a lawsuit, nor is it duress for a person to assert his legal rights"); Fagala v. Sanders, 140 Ill. App. 3d 429, 432, 488 N.E.2d 1093, 1096 (5th Dist. 1986) (lawful demand or threat to enforce one's rights does not amount to duress).

Second, here the parties who were allegedly bereft of their free will have expressly stated that they understood the vote they were taking and that their votes were the product of their own evaluation of what was in the best interest of the Foundation. At the June 29, 2001 Board meeting, immediately prior to taking a vote, the following exchange occurred:

Heatwole: . . . In light of the allegations that have been uh brought forward in the (counsel) Federal Court yesterday, to a certain extent, I was not there, but I understand that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County Courts this morning, about the coercion um that some members of this board may feel uh, or may not feel, uh from the action of the attorney general. I think it's important for each one of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely, that you are voting with your fiduciary obligations to the board and this institution and without, and without that pressure. And if any feels they can't do that, I don't think you should vote. But if you are voting freely, and if you do not feel that compulsion, then I think you are free to vote. And

I, I think the board ought to be on record and everybody ought to be clear that this vote is being taken without that pressure, without that, um impediment.

Because you do have fiduciary obligations to this institution. Um, which transcend your obligations to other, other facts. And uh, each one of you should examine that, I think Judith brought that to the fore, Stephanie, you echoed it, but since the allegations have been made, I think it's important to be on the record, that if anyone feels that they can't vote that way, I think they should abstain. So, having said that, if you vote, I assume that means you are not doing so um feel freely.

Marshall: Well, I, let me just make a personal comment, just in response to what you just said, Mark. I have felt in the past that uh, despite the desire of some board members, uh, over the last years or so, to try to peg me into an alleged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked, uh, my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice, uh to represent the integrity of my own convictions. Uh, I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. it is true, that the attorney general's office has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities, as a board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that his motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation.

Stebbins: I'd just, I'd like to say, that I came to the board, like Stephanie, and everyone else, as a volunteer. Um, I came to the board, at, I knew Dan Terra, I came to the board at the request of Jim Collins and Judith Terra, I've served as chair of the collections committee, and I think I've served effectively. And I've brought some wonderful new paintings, helped bring some wonderful new paintings to the Foundation collection. I've done this without any iota of a conflict of interest. I value my reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity, very very highly, and I think I'm well known for both those um, things. Uh, I've last when I've always felt free to form my own judgments, and last either August or early September, um, when Paul Tucker told me first about his enthusiasm for the building in Washington, and wanting to move there, I disagreed. I long argued to explore a > variety of stand-alone options in Chicago, I was willing to consider as part of the strategic planning going elsewhere, but I've always been a defender of Chicago. Uh, like Arthur, I at the board meeting in Giverny, on September 25, I guess it was, 2000, when we learned of the suit, I argued for a total board replacement. Um, at the same time, I abhor the personalized suit brought by the plaintiffs. Unnecessary. I feel very very sympathetic for Judith Terra. I lament the behavior of Senator Simpson. I'm very saddened by the behavior of Paul Tucker. I abhor the threatening tactics of the attorney general, but I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is the best interests of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago, and in France. For the promulgation of American Art.

(Ex. H; Tr. of June 29, 2001 Board Meeting, p 27.) (emphasis added.)

Additionally, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall and the Defendant Directors participated in the negotiations over many months, were represented by counsel and had many opportunities to consider and reconsider their position on the settlement. See Higgins v. Brunswick, 76 Ill. App. 3d 273, 278, 395 N.E.2d 81, 85-86 (no duress where parties voluntarily entered into a settlement with the benefit of advice of counsel); In re Marriage of Hamm-Smith, 261 Ill. App. 3d 209, 215-16, 633 N.E.2d 225, 230 (in rejecting claim of duress, court distinguished situations where the complaining party had not participated in the negotiations, had no input in drafting of agreement and where negotiations were hasty); In re Marriage of Cierny, 187 Ill. App. 3d 334, 344, 543 N.E.2d 201, 208 (1st Dist. 1989) (court relying on duration of settlement discussions as dispositive factor); In re Marriage of Steadman, 283 Ill. App. 3d 703, 710, 670 N.E.2d 1146, 1152 (3d Dist. 1996) (duress not shown where challenger agreed to negotiations and took part in negotiations).

by mediation, parties are encouraged to participate more frankly in mediation and accordingly, settlement is more likely. If confidentiality was not available, mediation would simply perpetuate the adversarial nature of litigation. Specifically, in Lake Utopia Paper, Ltd. v. Connelly Containers, Inc., 608 F.2d 928, 930 (2d Cir. 1979, cert denied, 44 U.S. 1076, (1980), the court directly addressed the significance of ensuring the confidentiality of mediation:

> If participants cannot rely on the confidential nature of everything that transpires during these sessions, then counsel of necessity will feel constrained to conduct themselves in a cautious, tight-lipped, noncommital matter more suitable to poker players in a high stakes game than adversaries attempting to arrive at a just solution of a civil dispute.

Id. cited in Mediation: Law, Policy & Practice, Section 9.02 (Second Edition, 1994).

In this case, there is no doubt that from the onset of the mediation all parties agreed that "[n]o statements made by the participants in the mediation would be admissible in evidence or otherwise used in any further proceedings in this case." (Exhibit C at pp. 7-8). To allow new counsel for the Defendant Directors to now attack the settlement agreement based on the mediation position of the Attorney General would be in violation of that agreement and would have an extremely detrimental effect on all future mediation.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for all the reasons stated herein, Plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz respectfully request that the Court deny the Defendant Directors objection and approve and enter the Consent Judgment and Order thereby dismissing the actions with prejudice.

Re: Buntrock, et al. v. Judith Terra, et al.
Case No. 00 CH 13859

Dear Judge Kinnaird:

We have had an opportunity to discuss the individuals suggested for mediator with our clients.

We believe, as currently postured, this may be a complex and difficult case to mediate. The mediator must not only have excellent legal skills, but also an ability to think creatively in attempting to bring these board members to a resolution of the disputes currently before them. Thus, despite the outstanding credentials of many of those proposed from the business world and litigation practices, we believe that individuals who have dedicated a considerable portion of their careers to the alternative dispute process in general and mediation in particular are best equipped to bring about a resolution. Thus, a single mediator with outstanding skills as a mediator is needed.

With this in mind, we believe that John W. Cooley, suggested by the Attorney General and Sidley & Austin, Stephen Goldberg, suggested by Sidley & Austin, Bill Hartgering, Gary McGowan and David Hilliard, suggested by our clients, are best equipped to handle this mediation.

Very truly yours,

SHEFSKY & FROELICH LTD.

THE TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-for-Profit Corporation, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, Director, Chairman, and President, the Terra Foundation for the Arts,
ALAN K. SIMPSON, Director, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, JUDITH TERRA, Director, the Terra Foundation for the Arts, Plaintiffs,

v.

FLOYD D. PERKINS, in his official capacity as Assistant Attorney General, State of Illinois, Defendant.

VERIFIED COMPLAINT

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), Paul Hayes Tucker, Alan K. Simpson, and Judith Terra (with the Foundation, collectively "plaintiffs"), state as follows for their Complaint against defendant Floyd D. Perkins ("defendant"):

Nature of the Case

1. Floyd D. Perkins, the Assistant Attorney General nominally charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws, has engaged in an unlawful power-grab to keep the Terra Foundation (the "Foundation"), a world-renowned $500 million art charity, from moving out-of-state on his watch.

2. Using carefully timed threats of prosecutorial investigation and prosecution, Mr. Perkins has used his official powers to cower certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors into voting to relinquish the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech. Mr. Perkins seeks to rewrite the Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, which encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Mr. Perkins wishes to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons in perpetuity instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the founder's demonstrated intentions and plaintiffs' rights.

3. Defendant's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens to further deprive plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; and (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. Plaintiffs bring this action to preclude Mr. Perkins from meddling in the internal affairs of the Foundation, to relieve those Board Members who have been subjected to Mr. Perkins's harassment from voting on the severe new bylaw restrictions he seeks, and to obtain redress for defendant's unconstitutional misconduct to date.

Parties, Jurisdiction and Venue

4. Plaintiff The Terra Foundation for the Arts is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1978 by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra. The Foundation, pursuant to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, oversees the $175 million Terra Collection of American Art and roughly $250 million in other assets.

5. Plaintiff Paul Hayes Tucker is Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Foundation. He is a chaired professor of art history at the University of Massachusetts Boston and a resident of Massachussetts.

6. Plaintiff Alan K. Simpson is a Director of the Foundation, a former United States Senator and retired President of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and a resident of Wyoming.

7. Plaintiff Judith Terra is Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors and Vice President of the Foundation, Mr. Terra's widow, and a resident of Washington, D.C.

8. Defendant Floyd D. Perkins is Assistant Attorney General of the State of Illinois, Bureau of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations.

9. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343(a)(3). Personal jurisdiction exists over Defendant and venue are proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

The History of the Terra Foundation

10. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to the present. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

11. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation.

> [T]he purposes of the corporation are to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation.

12. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He constructed a multimillion dollar museum facility on Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art.

13. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

14. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

15. Between 1990 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized. During this period Mr. Terra also engaged in active negotiations with the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York and the Corcoran Museum in Washington, D.C.

16. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused his attention intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

17. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable Michigan Avenue museum site.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

18. After three years of regrouping by the Board after Mr. Terra's death, Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris; Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis.

19. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation began active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 meeting, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate any and all ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

20. Dr. Tucker himself circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

21. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

22. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit in Chancery Court on September 22, 2000 against the Foundation, Dr. Tucker, Mrs. Terra, as well as Senator Simpson and non-director Naftali Michaeli. They alleged that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

23. The defendants filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings in the Gidwitz-Buntrock matter, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad. With the dispositive motion pending, the court referred the case to mediation.

The Assistant Attorney General's Demand to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

24. Defendant Floyd D. Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General charged with overseeing non-profit institutions in the Attorney General's office, had no intention of allowing one of the most prestigious and well-capitalized charitable foundations in the State to leave the jurisdiction on his watch.

25. Mr. Perkins began by intervening in the private dispute among the Foundation's Board Members. He did so expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an "ultra vires" act. When pressed by the state court to explain how moving the collection could possibly be ultra vires, Mr. Perkins falsely asserted that the Foundation "was left for the benefit of the People of the State Illinois. . . . [T]here are enough indicia of facts that would lead one to believe that the intent of the trust was that it remain in Illinois."

26. Mr. Perkins proceeded to insinuate himself into the Court-ordered mediation process in an attempt to railroad its result. For example, at a May 10, 2000, mediation session attended only by principal board members without their attorneys, Mr. Perkins appeared and stayed the entire day. Mr. Perkins demanded throughout these negotiations that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate as a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois for a period of at least 50 years.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection "in the Chicago metropolitan area" for at least 50 years.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois (thereby securing the collection in the State in perpetuity).

e. Require all current Board Members to resign within one year.

27. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

The Assistant Attorney General's Resort to Harassment and Intimidation

28. Frustrated by his inability to win agreement from a majority of the Board by legitimate means, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation.

29. By way of example, on June 5, 2001, director Dr. Marshall wrote to the mediator objecting to the Perkins "settlement" proposal, insisting that "we have not agreed to any settlement of this litigation," urging the mediator to "abandon" efforts to impose portions of the plan, and asking the mediator to find "a solution which respects the independence, integrity, and identity of Dan Terra's legacy."

30. At approximately the same time, however, on information and belief, Mr. Perkins launched an ongoing non-public investigation into the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy where Dr. Marshall serves as president full-time. Dr.

Marshall's institution depends on public funding for the vast bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

31. By June 25, 2001, news reports indicated that Dr. Marshall had "flipped" and now planned to vote for the same draconian settlement.

32. A similar story had previously unfolded with Dr. Theodore Stebbins, another Board member and curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum. Dr. Stebbins was the director who called Dr. Tucker to ask him to join the Board in late 1998. He consistently supported the efforts of Tucker and others to consider the full range of strategic planning options.

33. In March 2001, Mr. Perkins drafted a new complaint in the state court litigation seeking appointment of a receiver for the Foundation and removal of several directors, including Dr. Stebbins. The complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time in the ongoing litigation, and included allegations of impropriety, including alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions. Settling the case would, however, allow for the permanent disposal of these inflammatory charges. Dr. Stebbins came to support Mr. Perkins's "settlement."

34. By virtue solely of the votes of Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins, Mr. Perkins's demands are now expected to be approved by the Board of Directors. A vote of the Board of Directors is scheduled for Friday, June 29, 2001. Once signed and entered, the settlement will carry the force of law as a consent decree and final judicial order and the Terra Foundation will be locked into Illinois for at least 50 years.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiffs, The Terra Foundation for the Arts, Paul Hayes Tucker, Alan K. Simpson, and Judith Terra, the latter three all directors of the Terra Foundation, have sued Floyd D. Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Illinois who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws, alleging that Mr. Perkins violated their federal constitutional rights to due process and freedom of speech by intimidating two other Terra Foundation directors who, as a result of the intimidation,[1] are about to vote to substantially change the by-laws of the Terra Foundation and take other acts that will force the Terra Foundation to keep its valuable art collection in Illinois for many years. Plaintiffs seek a temporary restraining order that would prevent either the vote that is expected to take place tomorrow, June 29, 2001, from taking place, or would prevent the two allegedly intimidated directors from taking part in that vote. Plaintiffs have not sued the two directors.[2] Plaintiffs nevertheless say that an injunction against the Attorney General will prevent either any vote from taking place or the two directors' participation in that vote on the ground that because of the intimidation the two directors have become de facto agents of the Attorney General. They argue therefore that an injunction against the defendant will be binding on the directors.

[1] Dr. Stephanie Marshall is head of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, an elite but public high school in Illinois. The other director in question, Dr. Theodore Stebbins, is curator of the Fogg Museum at Harvard University and has no ties to public institutions in Illinois but was allegedly intimidated by proposed

There are at least two problems with plaintiffs' attempted resolution of their conflict in this court. First, there is an ongoing lawsuit (two actually) presently pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County in which the present plaintiffs are defendants charges of conflict of interest in an amended complaint drafted but never filed by the State of Illinois in related state litigation.

[2] Plaintiffs did offer to add them as defendants but the addition of Dr. Marshall would almost certainly prevent diversity jurisdiction, alleged presently, and unless they are state actors, could not form a basis for subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3), the second basis on which plaintiffs allege subject matter jurisdiction. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Whether they can plausibly be considered to be acting under color of state law is discussed further in this opinion.

and involving the same subject matter raised in their federal court complaint. It is actually a proposed resolution of those lawsuits through a settlement which is expected to be voted on tomorrow that plaintiffs seek to stop. Plaintiffs say that neither the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, see Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923); District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983), nor the Anti-Injunction Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2283, prohibit this court from acting so long as it acts before the anticipated consent decree is entered in state court, but assuming that is so, principles of comity and federalism call for abstention where the issues raised can be litigated in the ongoing state action and where action by the federal court would interfere in the state proceeding.

The State of Illinois, representing Mr. Perkins, invokes Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971), in support of abstention. Younger holds that federal courts cannot enjoin ongoing state criminal proceedings unless extraordinary circumstances are present. In a companion case, Samuels v. Mackell, 401 U.S. 66 (1971), the Court applied a similar result to actions for declaratory judgment because they would also interfere with state prosecutions. Younger has been extended widely, including to civil contexts. For example, the State of Illinois likens this case to Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1 (1987) (Younger abstention appropriate when the relief sought by the federal plaintiff was an injunction against the party that had prevailed in state court to prevent it from executing its judgment prior to an appeal to a state appellate court). That case is not precisely on point because there, judgment had been entered, whereas in the case before me the goal is to prevent judgment from being entered. However, judgment need not have been entered for Younger abstention to be appropriate.

The Seventh Circuit states that abstention is appropriate "if the impacted state proceedings satisfy the following requirements: (1) the judicial or judicial-in-nature state proceedings are ongoing; (2) the proceedings implicate important state interests; and (3) there is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise constitutional challenges." AFSCME v. Tristano, 898 F.2d 1302, 1305 (7th Cir. 1990). These requirements are satisfied here. The state court proceedings are obviously judicial. The State of Illinois has set forth what it believes to be, and what I agree are, important state interests in its ability to regulate charitable institutions. It is not necessary that I endorse the policy adopted by the state to recognize that the interests it invokes are important. Finally, there was - and as far as I know still is - ample opportunity to raise any constitutional challenges in the state court proceedings.

The plaintiffs respond that section 1983 provides an exception to the usual application of Younger because federal protection is needed in such cases to vindicate plaintiffs' rights against state abuses. This is not in general true. For example, in Simpson v. Rowan, 73 F.3d 134, 138 (7th Cir. 1995), the court affirmed the use of Younger abstention in a § 1983 case seeking civil relief for constitutional violations of a man convicted of a crime; accord State of Indiana v. Haws, 131 F.3d 1205, 1210 (7th Cir. 1997)(quoting from Barichello v. McDonald, 98 F.3d 948, 954 (7th Cir. 1996): "Younger has 'come to mean that absent unusual circumstances, a federal court must refrain from entertaining injunctive relief which might interfere with the ... judicial process of state courts ....'"). Section 1983 is not a magic key into federal court, especially when, as here, there is ample opportunity to litigate the constitutional issues in state court. Moreover, there is no reason to think that the plaintiffs require the special protections of federal court even though the state is a party to the state court action. The only basis that the plaintiffs give for thinking there may be a problem with the state court is that the very able state court judge is elected. That is not a reason to think that she cannot fairly resolve charges of misconduct made against the state and its officers, such as Mr. Perkins.

Even if I were not to abstain, however, I could not grant the temporary restraining order sought by the plaintiffs. In the first place, plaintiffs do not appear to have standing. In order for a party to bring suit in federal court, three constitutional requirements under Article III must be met: "(1) the party must have personally suffered an actual or threatened injury caused by the defendant's illegal conduct; (2) the injury must be fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury must be one that is likely to be redressed by a favorable decision." United Transp. v. Surface Transp. Board, 183 F.3d 606, 611 n.2 (7th Cir. 1999). In this case, the last requirement is missing.

The only defendant named is Mr. Perkins. It would do no good to enjoin him from interfering in Board business or intimidating the directors with respect to the meeting at question. The State of Illinois says that he is in Canada, and does not even know that he has been sued. As the State says, with respect to his involvement, tomorrow is the best time to hold the meeting.

The plaintiffs really want me to enjoin Drs. Marshall and Crabbins from voting or coming to the meeting, but they are not defendants. If they were named, however, they could not be sued under section 1983, the basis for my jurisdiction. The plaintiffs suggest that they can be enjoined as persons acting "in consort" with the defendant, or as his agents. But they offer no authority that persons who have been intimidated or influenced by a state actor are acting in consort with them or as agents of those who intimidate them, or indeed that they could be named as section 1983 defendants at all. That section requires state action. And that is hard to show.

The Supreme Court has articulated several tests for when private action is state action: the "public function" test, the "state compulsion" test, the "nexus" test, and the "joint action" test. Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 939 (1982). Of these, only the "joint action" and "state compulsion" tests are worth considering. The tests are fact-specific. "Only by sifting facts and weighing circumstances can the nonobvious involvement of the State in private conduct be attributed its true significance." Burton v. Wilmington Parking Auth., 365 U.S. 715, 722 (1961); Dunham v. Frank's Nursery & Crafts, Inc., 919 F.2d 1281, 1284 (7th Cir. 1990).

The "joint action" theory, articulated in cases like Dennis v. Sparks, 449 U.S. 24, 27 (1980), says that a private defendant acts under color of state law when he is "a willful participant in joint action with the State or its agents." A charge of joint action amounts to alleging "some agreement between private and public actors to violate plaintiff's constitutional rights." Cunningham v. Southlake Center for Mental Health, Inc., 924 F.2d 106, 107 (7th Cir. 1991) (citing Fonda v. Gray, 707 F.2d 435, 438 (9th Cir. 1983) ("To prove a conspiracy between private parties and the government under § 1983, an agreement or 'meeting of the minds' to violate constitutional rights must be shown.")). "A requirement of the joint action charge therefore is that both public and private actors share a common, unconstitutional goal." Id. If the directors in question are unwillingly intimidated, however, they are not willful joint actors who share Mr. Perkin's hypothetically unconstitutional goals. See Moore v. Marketplace Restaurant, Inc., 754 F.2d 1336, 1352 (7th Cir. 1985).

I suppose one could be an unwilling co-conspirator, but what is alleged here is not that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins share any unconstitutional goals or have conspired, however unwillingly, to deprive the plaintiffs of their rights, but that they were somehow coerced into changing their votes on the settlement, basically to get Mr. Perkins off their backs, which change will have the effect of furthering Mr. Perkin's unconstitutional goals. That is not what is required.

But the situation for the plaintiffs is worse than this analysis suggests. "To state a § 1983 claim against a private actor, plaintiffs must show that the defendant invoked state authority in such a way that the defendant should be considered a state actor." Davis v. Union National Bank, 46 F.3d 24, 25 (7th Cir. 1994). For example in Del's Big Saver Foods, Inc. v. Carpenter Cook, Inc., 795 F.2d 1344 (7th Cir. 1986), the court held that a private person became a state actor for purposes of the state action requirement when he repossessed collateral on the strength of an ex parte order issued by a court. The ex parte order instructed the sheriff to assist the private person if need be to carry out the order. In that case it was not necessary to call the sheriff. The court held that "[t]he fact that the sheriff remained in the background and hence could not be joined as a defendant does not deprive Carpenter Cook's action in enforcing a judicial order of its character as state action." Id. at 1346. Here, it would not be possible to say that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins invoked the power of the Illinois Attorney General's office, which remains in the background: they are not argued to invoke any power; they have no court or administrative order to carry out, and they could not call in Mr. Perkins to back them up if they wanted to, which, the plaintiffs argue, they do not.

The plaintiffs' best shot is the "state compulsion" test, under which a § 1983 claim may be stated "when the state has so implicated itself in the defendant's action that the state has in effect compelled the action." Starnes v. Capital Cities Media, Inc, 39 F.3d 1394, 1396 (7th Cir. 1994). This test originated in Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 170 (1970). There the Court held that a "state is responsible for the [unconstitutional] act of a private party when the state, by its law, has compelled the act." 'When the State has commanded a particular result, it has saved to itself the power to determine that result and thereby 'to a significant extent' has 'become involved' in it.'" Id. (citation omitted). However the command has to involve action under color of some "statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of a

State," in the language of § 1983 itself. Id.

The actions challenged here are not analogous to the facts in Adickes, where a white woman was denied restaurant service (and subsequently arrested for vagrancy) because she was in the company of African-Americans. The Supreme Court held that it would satisfy state action if she showed that she was refused service by the defendant restaurant as the result of a state enforced custom compelling segregation of the races in Mississippi restaurants. Adickes, 398 U.S. at 171. In this case, there are two actions alleged to force the directors to change their votes. One is proposing to name Dr. Stebbins as a defendant in a lawsuit. The other is investigating Dr. Marshall's school. These are both official practices, but in the first place, neither of these involve a "command." They do not require the conduct they are supposed to induce - that these directors change their votes. The difference between inducement and requirement is a matter of degree, but not every incentive and disincentive is coercive. For example, in Mendoza v. United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, 497 F.2d 311, 312 (9th Cir. 1974) (per curiam), the court rejected the idea that a union shop agreement that grows out of the "normal give and take of collective bargaining and labor-management relations," is coercive, although anyone must recognize that it involves various threats and unwelcome inducements. It might be different if Mr. Perkins had held a gun to the heads of Drs.

16di-001508

Marshall and Stebbins, but all he did was to name one in a proposed amendment to a lawsuit and allegedly investigate the school of another.

Moreover, the conduct being induced (a changed vote) is not itself unlawful, unlike the racial discrimination involved in Adickes. Essentially the plaintiffs argue that Mr. Perkins used his undoubtedly legitimate authority to name Dr. Stebbins in a complaint and to investigate Dr. Marshall's school in order to get them to do something lawful, which the plaintiffs argue will have unfortunate effects. If the directors had just changed their minds, the plaintiffs would just have to live with it. What difference, as far as their status as potential § 1983 defendants goes, does it make if they changed their votes because of the inducements by Mr. Perkins? Even if Mr. Perkin's intentions were to violate the plaintiffs' constitutional rights by getting these directors to vote to approve the settlement, the plaintiffs do not explain, either with authority or with logic, how the directors can be charged with violating the plaintiffs' rights even under compulsion if they do what they had a lawful right to do in any event.

Since enjoining Mr. Perkins would be pointless, and Drs. Marshall and Stebbins are not state actors and cannot be sued under Section 1983, there is no relief that I can give that would redress plaintiffs' complaint. They lack standing. I abstain in any event. The plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order must therefore be denied. The action is dismissed.

REPORTED BY: SHARYN A. EVERMAN, C.S.R.
CERTIFICATE NO. 84-2315.

THE COURT: Counsel, just step up and identify yourselves for the record.

I want to make sure there wasn't anything else I was supposed to read, because one of the parties said there was a reservation of rights to continue to object.

So if you would all identify yourselves.

MR. CARROLL: James Carroll on behalf of plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz.

MR. KENNEDY: Good morning, your Honor. John Kennedy on behalf of plaintiffs.

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan on behalf of Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz.

MR. PERKINS: Therese Harris and Floyd Perkins on behalf of the Illinois Attorney General.

MR. CARLSON: Steven Carlson, your Honor, on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

MR. CROWE: And Brian Crowe, your Honor. I represent Paul Tucker, Al Simpson, and Judith Terra.

THE COURT: Are we still on the same page, that we are trying to talk about a possible mediator here?

MR. PERKINS: Yes.
THE COURT: Would you see if there's eplace available for us to meet informally?
received since you were here the last time, first of all, a letter from Shefsky & Froelich with the individual defendants' recommendations and resumes of all of the people that the individual defendants have recommended.
Then I received from Sidley & Austin their recommendations together with resumes.
I received from the plaintiffs' firm, the Quinlan firm, the names of five individuals and no resumes. The next day I received from them the withdrawal of one of those names.
And I received from the Attorney General a letter with an approach and recommendation of co-mediation with names of business leaders and lawyer mediators; and, once again, although I'm familiar with most of them, no resumes on those.
And then I received responses – nothing more from the Attorney General; a response from Sidley & Austin, a response from

Page 6

Shefsky & Froelich, and a response from the Quinlan firm.
And was I supposed to get anything else from the Quinlan firm? Because you're the ones that said it was a short time period and you are reserving the right to continue objection if something came up.
Should we go into this with the idea that there are no objections to the names that you haven't already objected to?
MR. QUINLAN: That's our position.
THE COURT: And the Attorney General, do you object to any of these names?
MR. PERKINS: Judge, we don't, no.
THE COURT: Is there a room available?
THE CLERK: Yes.
THE COURT: Let's have one attorney from each side, and we'll go down the hall for a few minutes.
MR. CROWE: Can I take Mr. Wilson? Because he had the conversations on the phone with everybody, Judge.
THE COURT: All right. We will be off the record for a while.

(WHEREUPON, discussion was had off the record.)
THE COURT: We are going to go back on the record on Buntrock versus Terra. Counsel, you can stay where you are.
We have had a long off-the-record discussion and one of the counsel had to call clients during this period of time and wait for calls back and that's what's taken so long.
We finally have an agreed order in which the issues involved in this case are going to be submitted to mediation.
The order provides for an agreed-upon mediator who will be essentially responsible for setting the ground rules for the mediation as well as how the mediation will be conducted.
The parties have agreed that no statements made by the participants in the mediation are going to be admissible in evidence in this court and that this is going to be a private proceeding and no party to the action – no member, employee, or agent of the board or attorney for any of the parties – is going to discuss the mediation or anything said in the course of the mediation with members of the press or public or anyone outside those involved in the mediation process.

Page 8

This is a standard type of provision in any kind of serious mediation proceeding. It is absolutely nothing unusual.
The manner and the method of mediation is going to be determined by the mediator, and at this juncture we are going to stay all proceedings in this case, including any current briefing schedules and response times that are in effect or the times for the filing of any motions that have previously been set.
We have a number of hearing dates,
and we are going to strike those hearing dates.
They are the hearing date on defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings and the hearing date on the Attorney General and the plaintiffs' joint motion for the appointment of a receiver and to enjoin the special litigation committee's activities.
So those hearing dates are going to be stricken for now.
Only one hearing date is going to be set. As we went into this mediation process, I indicated at the request of the individual defendants that I would entertain a motion which they had previously filed.

And, Mr. Wilson, the name of that motion is called what?

MR. WILSON: It's a motion to compel the advancement of fees, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm going to have the parties agree to a schedule, and I'm going to give them the date which is the later of the dates that we have, which is I believe March 7th at 11:00.

MR. WILSON: I believe it's March 9, your Honor.

THE COURT: Let me double check in my notes. I'll need a separate order on that.

I have March 8th at 2:00. Could that possibly be it?

MR. CARLSON: That's it.

THE COURT: March 8th at 2:00. And just make sure that I have the last of the briefs by March 1st on that schedule that you've come up with.

And also, of course, I would entertain any emergency motions for any kind of injunctive relief in the meantime if there is such a motion that really needs to be presented.

Also, the parties have advised me that a non-party to this action has put a motion on my call for tomorrow morning at 9:15. I don't have a copy of that motion.

I'm told that that is a motion – it still hasn't come in in the latest things. It's a motion by James Terra for leave to intervene, and I'll have to entertain whatever that motion is once I see it tomorrow morning at 9:15 at the appointed time since there is no one here to present it today.

And I would expect that anybody who wants to object can step forth at 9:15 tomorrow morning. You may have an agreed order in regard to that motion if counsel for the Terra Foundation wants to coordinate any efforts between now and tomorrow.

As a practical matter, however, that motion will probably be stayed also pending this mediation, but I need to hear from – I'm going to keep an open mind on that one. I don't have a movant on that, but that's something that is supposed to come in tomorrow.

The purpose of the mediation is, of course, to try to resolve this immense dispute before it goes any further, and it will go a lot further for a very long period of time based on the history that we have seen so far to date.

And I am a firm believer in alternate dispute resolution and have been an advocate of that for many, many years, as have the attorneys in this case.

The mediator that we have agreed upon is David C. Hilliard. Mr. Hilliard is a former president of the Chicago Bar Association. He's a managing partner in the law firm of Pattishall McAuliffe Newbury Hilliard & Geraldson, which is an intellectual property law firm.

Mr. Hilliard has been engaged for approximately 20 years in mediating cases in federal court, and he has also been a mediator for the last ten years for the International Trademark Association ADR Panel of Neutrals.

He has an extensive background in the art community here in Chicago. He has been a trustee of the Art Institute of Chicago since 1981. He's a former chairman of the board of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and has been a past president or chairman of a number of not-for-profit and charitable organizations in this city.

Most everybody in this case knows him personally and there has been no objection to Mr. Hilliard at all and I'm hoping that he will be able to assist the Court in resolving some, if not all, of the issues.

And we leave what issues to be mediated and who shall be present in the mediation up to Mr. Hilliard working together with the parties, because that's what mediation is all about.

I will be discussing with Mr. Hilliard briefly before the process the history of the case to date so he can see it in some kind of context.

My understanding is that after he receives the assignment, he'll be, as would be normal, in touch with all counsel.

And we talked among ourselves subject to his agreement that he would meet probably first with counsel alone, talk about the history of the case and where they all see the case going and where it's been or what the issues are, but that the actual mediation of the disputes in this case would be without counsel present; that he would be mediating with the parties directly.

And just for clarification, when we say the parties and the issues, we are talking about the Attorney General's complaint and we are talking about the issue in the plaintiffs' complaint Count I through and including Count III.

An order has been drafted along those lines. All counsel have seen it. I am signing it now, and I guess I will see some of you tomorrow morning at 9:15 unless someone just comes in on an agreed order in that regard.

The next court date in front of me would then be March 8th at 2:00.

MR. WILSON: That's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: Unless someone brings some matter of an emergency nature to my attention.

Is there anything further that anybody else want to add? Okay. Thank you all, and I'm sorry we worked through the lunch hour. This order is entered.

Ron Gidwitz	Hello?
Ambassador Arthur Hartman	Hello.
Gidwitz	Hello.
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall	Yes, who's, is that Ron?
Gidwitz	Yes.
Marshall	Ron, good afternoon. Stephanie.
Gidwitz	Hi Stephanie.
Marshall	Is there anyone else on the line?
Hartman	Yes, Art Hartman is on.
Marshall	Uh, good afternoon, Arthur, where are you?

16di-001521

Hartman	I'm just in from Moscow, in France.
Marshall	Are you, so you're home?
Hartman	In France, yes.
Marshall	Oh, you're in France, OK. (laugh) OK, well we're just, uh
Hartman	Where are you, Stephanie?
Marshall	Just gathering. I'm at uh my office.
Hartman	OK.
Marshall	And I think people will be calling in from all over, I think uh Ron, you're in the uh Foundation offices?
Gidwitz	No, actually I'm in my office.
Marshall	You're in your office, OK.
(Beeps)
Marshall	I think uh Maggie and Dean may be in the Foundation offices.
Gidwitz	The food will probably be better there than it is here.
Marshall	Anyone else join the line?
Gidwitz	Arthur, how's the weather over there?
Hartman	It's just perfectly beautiful, you wouldn't believe it. The sky's blue, no wind, nice and warm.
(Beep)
Hartman	It was lovely in Moscow, too.
Marshall	Uh, who has, someone has joined us?
Dr. Theodore Stebbins	Uh, it's Ted.
Marshall	Uh, good afternoon, Ted.
Gidwitz	Hi Ted.
Stebbins	Hi, Stephanie.
Marshall	I'm going to turn up the volume here.
Hartman	Hi Ted. Arthur.
Stebbins	Hi Arthur.
Marshall	Ted, I don't hear you very loudly, so we may ask you to talk a little more loudly.
Stebbins	Can you hear me now?
Marshall	Yeah, that's better.
Stebbins	OK. Arthur's very clear. Where are you Arthur?

16di-001522

Hartman	I'm in France.
Stebbins	Good. Who else have we got here?
Marshall	Uh, Ron is in his office, and that's all of us so far.
Gidwitz	Yeah, Ted, I'm here.
Stebbins	OK, Ron, Hi.
Gidwitz	Hi.
Hartman	Are you out on the Cape? Ted?
Stebbins	No, I'm at home in Brookline.
Hartman	Ah, there you go.
(Beeps)
Marshall	Uh, welcome whoever has joined us. Who has joined us? Hello? Anyone join us? Ted are you still there?
Stebbins	I'm here.
Marshall	Alright, everybody still there?
Hartman	Yep.
Marshall	OK.
Gidwitz	Here.
Marshall	OK. Hello, has anyone just joined us? Hmm. OK.
Margaret Daley	There are people on.
Don Ratner	OK, talk to him on the other line.
Daley	OK.
Marshall	Uh, Don, do I hear your voice?
Daley	How do I put this on speaker? OK.
Ratner	Hello.
Marshall	Uh, yes.
Ratner	Hello.
Marshall	Yes, Don is that you?
Ratner	Stephanie, Hi. It's Don, uh, Maggie and and and Dean are here.
Marshall	OK.
Ratner	Steve Wallace, Steve Carlson.
Marshall	OK. Very good.
Ratner	And, we're waiting for the others to call in, and get hold of people, this may take a few, few minutes still.

16di-001523

Marshall	We have um, we have Ron, and Arthur and Ted and I so far, uh, so we're still waiting for uh Jacques, and uh Alan, uh Judith, and Paul.
Ratner	Alright, Ron's on the phone?
Marshall	Correct.
Gidwitz	I am on the phone. I'm still at my office.
Ratner	Oh, I thought you were going to be over here. Oh, I'm sorry.
Gidwitz	Well, that's an extra sandwich for you to eat.
Hartman	Don't make me hungry.
(laughs)
Daley	Hello, everyone.
Marshall	Maggie?
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Good afternoon.
Daley	Yes, nice to talk to you.
Marshall	Have you uh walked past the Taste of Chicago yet?
Daley	No, but I've been waiting in traffic. (laughs)
Hartman	What's that?
Marshall	Oh, the Taste of Chicago? (laughing)
Hartman	Yeah.
Marshall	It's a huge gastronomical extravaganza where all the restaurants in Chicago, or at least the better ones, sort of lay out their wares, at uh, along the lake. It's terrific.
Hartman	Ah ha.
Marshall	And you sample your way to high cholesterol levels.
Hartman	Ha, ha.
(inaudible background)
Marshall	I understand they will have Lipitor salesmen standing by.
Hartman	laughs. I can tell you that Mevicor works.
Marshall	laughs. Don have you heard from anyone? We know Helene will not be on the call, but have you heard from uh Judith or Paul or Alan?
Ratner	They're expected to be on the call, so we're just sort of waiting for them all to.
Hartman	And we're expecting Jacques?

Ratner	Yes.
Marshall	We are. Right. I know Paul is in Italy, I don't know where Judith or Alan are.
Ratner	In Washington, Alan's in Russia, and uh Arthur is in.
Marshall	Arthur's here.
Ratner	Arthur's already there.
(Beeps)
Marshall	Hello. Hello? Who has joined us now?
(inaudible background)
Marshall	Jacques, Judith or Paul joined us yet?
Ratner	No.
Marshall	OK. We're hearing uh beeps sometimes and you, you assume that someone has joined the call when you hear that.
Stebbins	And what lawyers are present?
Ratner	Uh, well, here, Mark Heatwole, and Steve Carlson.
Stebbins	OK. Oh, hi Steve.
Steve Carlson	Hi, Ted.
Susan Stone	Susan Stone, from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, here with Stephanie.
Stebbins	Hi, Stephanie.
John Sabl	Also, John Sabl from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, out here with Susan and Stephanie.
(Beeps) (inaudible background)
Gidwitz	OK, who are all the lawyers, I didn't catch them all.
Marshall	Uh, we have Susan Stone, uh Steve Carlson, uh John uh Sabl, and my understanding is that Mark Heatwole is in Chicago. Uh, let me ask anyone else are there, are, is there any other legal counsel present with anyone?
(Beeps)
Judith Terra	Hey Stephanie?
Marshall	Uh, yes, Judith, good afternoon.
Terra	Hi, I, I've been on the line a minute, I just didn't want to interrupt. Um, have we, have you started things?
Marshall	No, not at all. We're still waiting for a, well, we were waiting for you, and for Paul, and for Alan. Uh, and, and Jacques. Everyone else is here, except Helene, who was not going to be on the meet, on the call.

16di-001525

Terra OK.

Marshall So, no we've not, we've not started anything.

Terra OK. So who is we, who is.

Marshall We've just a, we've just a, the question was asked, who are the legal counsel president, uh present, and we have Mark Heatwole, who is in Chicago at the Foundation office, uh, as the regular Foundation counsel, and we have Susan Stone, uh and John uh Sabl who are here with me uh in Aurora, and Steve Carlson, uh, who is in the Foundation office, all representing uh Sidley Austin. And I was just asking every other board member on the line, uh, are there any other legal counsel present?

Hartman Not here in France.

Marshall Anyone else? Ron?

Gidwitz No, I'm all by myself.

(Beeps)

Marshall Judith?

(inaudible background)

Marshall Has anyone joined the call? Jacques or Alan or Paul?

(inaudible background)

(Beeps) (inaudible background)

Marshall Hello? Has anyone else joined the call?

Ratner Who's there?

Marshall Alan, Paul, Jacques? Hello, has anyone else joined the call?

Ratner There's a lot of beeps on the phone, but.

Marshall Yes there are. (laughs) there are. Well, at some point, we need, we will make a decision to, to move forward, but I think, uh, I know Jacques is overseas, and so is Alan, so we'll wait uh wait just a few more moments, but we are, we are going to have to proceed relatively shortly.

Stebbins Stephanie, I assume you are chairing the meeting?

Marshall I am, Ted.

Stebbins And, uh what's it, what does a quorum consist of?

Ratner A majority.

Stebbins Oh.

16di-001526

Marshall	Uh, a majority of the meeting, but, as you know, we need uh six people to amend the bylaws, so that, that's critical.
Ratner	A quorum is six, and you need, you also need six to amend the bylaws, so.
(inaudible background)
Daley	So right now, who's missing? Jacques.
Ratner	Jacques, Helene, and Paul. And Alan.
(inaudible background)
Marshall	Uh, Don, is there any a way we might call people to see if, if they are uh available? Were you able to get the faxes to everyone as far as you know?
Ratner	I talked to everybody, everybody said they were going to be on the call. If you've heard from Helene since, fine. I talked to Jacques, who said Helene was going to be on the call, I've talked to Andreani, I've talked to Paul, I've talked to Alan, everybody.
Marshall	Oh, OK.
(Beeps)
Marshall	Uh, has anyone joined us now?
Stebbins	It sounds like Don did a good job of reaching everyone.
Marshall	Yes, I mean, we, we do have a quorum now, but I think in fairness, we'll wait just a few more moments.
(Beeps)
Marshall	Hello, has anyone joined us? Arthur, are there challenges when you call in from Russia?
Hartman	No.
Marshall	No? OK. I know that's where Alan.
Hartman	Well, I'm calling from France, but.
Marshall	Well, I know you are, but Alan is in Russia, so I was just curious.
Hartman	No, no, the same system applies there.
Ratner	Actually, Stephanie, we are trying to call him. He asked us to call him.
Marshall	Oh.
Ratner	And, we got hold of his, his number, but there's nobody there, we get a voicemail. So he may have gotten delayed or something.
Carlson	Or he may be on the phone.
Daley	What time is it there?

Ratner	9:30.
Hartman	A lot of traffic there. What hotel is he in?
Ratner	I have no idea. If I give you the number, you recognize it?
Hartman	Nope.
Gidwitz	I take it you don't (inaudible) numbers?
Hartman	Nope. (laughs)
(Beeps)
Marshall	Has anyone just joined us?
Ratner	Stephanie, apparently when Karen tries to call these people, on the line it beeps. That's what the beeping is all about.
Marshall	Oh, I see. I thank you. I keep thinking somebody is joining the call. But Don, you say you talked to Jacques Ahrweiler and Helene will be on the call?
Ratner	I talked to Jacques last weekend, and he said that he was going to get Helene on the call, but you don't think so.
Marshall	OK. OK.
Gidwitz	Could someone please share with me what happened, while we're waiting, in court today? What's all that about?
Carlson	I guess I can. This is Steve Carlson, from Sidley Austin.
Marshall	Steve, could you speak up a little bit please?
Carlson	I'm speaking pretty loud for this room.
Marshall	Oh, OK, I'm sorry.
Carlson	But that's OK if I don't blow anyone out of the room, I'll keep speaking up. Uh, there was a motion filed by Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson, uh, for a temporary restraining order to try to stop this meeting from going ahead. Uh, I won't.
Hartman	What court was this in, Steve?
Carlson	In the state court in front of Judge Kinnaird, who we've been in front of in the litigation all along.
Hartman	Right.
Gidwitz	Who are they representing? I mean, who, did they file that themselves, or was it, because yesterday, apparently, they filed on behalf of the Foundation. Were they doing that again today?
(Beeps)
Carlson	They had Joel Bellows from the firm of Bellows and Bellows, and Laurel Bellows was there as well, uh, Leonard Garman, uh let's see, Chris Todd. Those were the same people from yesterday in the federal court. But today they were representing only the individual uh defendant directors in this main lawsuit. And they sought uh a TRO to block this meeting from going forward, and made uh much the same argument that they made in the federal court uh yesterday. Uh and the attorney general uh primarily responded to it. Judge Kinnaird I think at the end of the day was interested in what irreparable effect, whatever happens at this meeting has. And I think at the end of the day she decided that since the draft resolutions that the board was going to be considering appeared to say that whatever you all vote to do today does not become effective until the consent judgment and order is entered by the court herself, she didn't need to enjoin this meeting at all. That she could give uh Senator uh Simpson's lawyers and Dr. Tucker's lawyers and Mrs. Terra's lawyers an opportunity to make whatever presentation they wanted to, to make whatever argument they wanted to about the propriety of the settlement when the consent judgment is presented to her at a later date, which may very well be Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Gidwitz — And who's defending the Foundation, are you?

Carlson — I'm the Foundation's lawyer, yes.

Gidwitz — And what kind of a defense did you put on today, aggressive?

Carlson — Uh, I'm always aggressive.

Gidwitz — That's what I've heard. I haven't seen you in action. I understand you're always aggressive. Were you aggressive today?

Carlson — A properly noticed and called the board meeting and that I had argued that strenuously to the court on many occasions that it was the Foundation's position that a properly noticed board meeting should go ahead. It should not be interfered with by disgruntled members of the board or by the court or anybody else.

Hartman — Thank you.

Gidwitz — Thank you.

Marshall — Is there anyone else on the call? Jacques, Helene, uh Judith, you are on the call, Paul and Alan?

Terra — Stephanie?

Marshall — Yes, Judith, is that you?

Terra — Yes.

Marshall — Yes, go ahead, Judith.

Terra — No, I was just responding, I had to step out. Emma came to get me.

Marshall	Oh, yeah, we're still waiting for Jacques, Helene, Alan and Paul.
Terra	OK. There was a call on my other line.
Ratner	Jacques, how are you? Tali.
Gidwitz	We've got Tali too? I'm sorry, I didn't hear the answer to that. Is Tali on the call as well? That's the question.
Marshall	Uh, it's not appropriate for anybody to be on the call other than the directors and the legal counsel that we have so noted already.
Stebbins	Is Don there?
Daley	Why is Tali talking to Don?
Dean Buntrock	Tali called Don. He left.
Stebbins	I think that's extremely inappropriate.
Daley	So do I.
Marshall	But we will not proceed until this is a meeting of the directors and the legal counsel that we have already so noted. So um when everybody gets back I will make, ask Tali to leave the call.
Buntrock	He's not on this call.
Marshall	Excuse me, I really can't hear very well.
Daley	He's a, he called Don on his cell phone and Don has left the room to talk to him.
Marshall	OK, that's fine.
(Beeps)
Daley	I still don't think that's appropriate in either case.
Marshall	Has anyone else joined the call? Jacques, Helene, Alan or Paul?
Gidwitz	How long do we expect to wait? Out of curiosity?
Marshall	Not, not very much longer, Ron. I think it's important that we proceed and a
Stebbins	Don is, Don is.
Marshall	And move forward on this meeting as expeditiously as we are able to do.
Ratner	Well, everybody, uh, we've been calling everybody, we can't get ahold of anybody who's not on the call.
Marshall	OK, then I think uh, I think we will begin. As you all know, uh, this is Stephanie, and I hereby call this meeting to order. Uh, could

16di-001530

	we please have a roll call of all present? Jacques Andreani, Helene Ahrweiler, Dean Buntrock
Buntrock	Present.
Marshall	Maggie Daley.
Daley	Present.
Marshall	Ron Gidwitz.
Gidwitz	Present.
Marshall	Arthur Hartman.
Hartman	Present.
Marshall	Stephanie Marshall, present. Alan Simpson, Ted Stebbins.
Stebbins	Present.
Marshall	Judith Terra.
Terra	Present.
Marshall	Paul Tucker. Alright, as we know, also present are Don Ratner, Susan Stone, Steven Carlson, John Sabl and Mark Heatwole.
Heatwole	Uh, Stephanie, Scott Sela from my office who was in court this morning observing the proceedings has joined us. That's Scott Sela (spelling).
Marshall	Scott is from Winston, Mark?
Heatwole	Yes, ma'am
Marshall	And he is regular Foundation counsel. Alright, we are here today to consider, as you know, a proposed settlement of outstanding litigation and the number of matters closely related thereto. Dr. Stebbins?
Stebbins	Yes, I'd like to make a motion. I hereby move the adoption of all the resolutions contained in the three pages of resolutions which the Foundation distributed, including, without limitation, the approval of the consent judgment and order distributed by the Foundation with such resolutions with James Donnelley, Marshal Field V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada and Frederick Cribel, or Krehbiel, I guess it is, being the five new class two directors. And, in addition, I have a couple of minor changes, um.
Ratner	Ted, could you go through those five names one more time?
Gidwitz	Yeah, read the list again, if you wouldn't mind please?
Stebbins	The list is James Donnelley,
Gidwitz	Donnelley, OK.

Marshall	And Ted you said you have some minor changes?
Stebbins	And I have some minor changes, which various people have suggested. Um, first, in the draft resolutions, uh, paragraph 4, where it reads "further, resolved that Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, the attorneys for the Foundation, are authorized and directed in the name and on behalf of the Foundation to file with the Circuit Court of Cook County the consent judgment, if and when it has been executed by or on behalf of Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz and the attorney general of the state of Illinois and", and from there on I would suggest we take out "and any other document they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation." So consider that part of my resolution, amending that phrase. Uh.
(Beeps)
Daley	What paragraph are you?
Ratner	Yeah, we can't find it, could you, this is on the first page of the resolution, page 10 of your.
Stebbins	Yes, paragraph 4
Ratner	Wait a minute let me get my directions, page 10 of your fax.
Dr. Paul Tucker	Sorry, everyone, I've just uh finally made it through the Terrace Midland to be here.
Marshall	Oh, Hi Paul.
Stebbins	Hi, Paul.
Tucker	Hi, Stephanie. Hi, Ted.
Marshall	Paul, we are, Ted is uh, we have called the meeting to order and Ted is uh, Ted has almost concluded his resolution, and Don is helping people find the appropriate
Ratner	Page 10, first paragraph Ted, I think it says, it starts out "further resolved."
Stebbins	"Further resolved."
Ratner	OK, now what do you want to change?
Stebbins	I want to take out uh, the last phrase "any other document that they believe necessary or advisable in connection with the settlement of the litigation."
Marshall	And you said you had another minor change?
Stebbins	And that's my only change in the, in the resolutions. In the consent judgment, uh, and order, under paragraph 2.

Ratner	Wait a second, now what page is that, Ted?
Stebbins	On page, uh,
Ratner	Five of the fax. Paragraph 2, "the parties hereto"
Stebbins	I'd like to say "the parties, including plaintiffs and defendants."
Marshall	No, Ted, you can't do that. The Foundation can't speak for defendants.
Gidwitz	Well, the original documents, Stephanie, if you'll recall, spoke to the plaintiffs and the defendants. If you want to add people, that's fine, but you can't subtract.
Marshall	Well, it's the Foundation, it's my understanding, and maybe legal counsel can speak to this, that the, this wording is the only wording that can that can be in place, because the Foundation cannot require the defendants to do anything against their will.
Gidwitz	Let a court of law decide that. What I am concerned about with this language, if I understand, Stephanie, is, I don't want to be set up to be sued. And this strikes me, the way that this has been drafted, that it doesn't release the defendants, and therefore it's permissive in terms of having them sue me.
Marshall	I think, uh
Gidwitz	And I want protection.
Stebbins	Well, I'd like to
Marshall	Well, I think, Ted, uh, I think.
Stebbins	Stephanie, why don't we ask legal counsel their opinion, because I
Tucker	Can you speak as to why you want to include this?
Stebbins	I want to be accommodating.
Marshall	Uh, may I, let me take the privilege of the chair one moment. We are in the middle of a proposed resolution. I recommend uh, or proposed motion. I recommend that Ted make his motion. I will see if there is a second. If there is not a second, the motion fails. There may be a second, and then we have discussion. In my view, it is not appropriate to argue, uh, the language or the merits of a motion, until the motion is duly put on the table.
Gidwitz	Absolutely. I will comply.
Marshall	Ted, if maybe you will.
Stebbins	OK, my motion includes the slight change of the resolutions, it includes in the consent order making it uh, "the parties, including plaintiffs and defendants, hereto desire". And it includes, under section 7 of the same consent judgment, that includes modifying the second para, the second phrase, with the, and it should now read, "with the exception that in until the annual 2002, sorry until the 2002 annual meeting, or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, then 50% of such board positions should be held by Illinois residents." The purpose of this is to guarantee that is happens in case the annual meeting is delayed for some reason. And uh, those are my, that's my resolution.

Marshall — Alright, we have a resolution, and since it was uh, a rather circuitous, I don't know if it's appropriate for me either to ask you. I think maybe you should state it again, so people are very clear what the resolution is.

Stebbins — My resolution, I move adoption of the resolutions, OK. There is a three pages of resolutions, which we have distributed, including without limitation, the approval of the consent judgment and order with James Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen Foster, Robert Hamada, and Frederick Krehbeil being the five new class 2 directors with the other uh three amendments that I mentioned.

Marshall — OK. We have a motion on the table. Is there a second.

Gidwitz — I'll second it.

Marshall — Alright, that's moved by Ted, seconded by Ron. The motion has been moved and seconded, uh

Gidwitz — I'd like to offer a

Marshall — Uh, let me, because it involves an amendment to the bylaws, it's passage requires the affirmative action of at least six directors. Now it's appropriate to call for any discussion. I think Ron, if you'd give me the privilege of the chair, I would like legal counsel to address um one of the changes that uh Ted uh referred to, because I, although I want to be able to uh vote for this motion, I would not be able to do so with one of the changes that he's, he's suggested, because it's my understanding that it is simply not possible for the Foundation to make this judgment, so I would really like legal counsel, so that we're all clear uh, on exactly uh where we are and uh where we are at this point in time. I personally don't have any problem with the other modifications that Ted, you made, but I, I would not be able to support the motion as it is presently.

Stebbins — Let's try to let the lawyers lead us through the problem here.

Marshall — Yes. Yes, I've asked legal counsel to do that.

Carlson — Do you have any preference as to who addresses it? Do you want Susan to address it, or John, or

Stone — I can address it. This is Susan Stone from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood. I understand, Stephanie, you would like guidance with respect to whether paragraph 2 of the proposed consent judgment and order um could be amended to change the description of the parties giving the relief um to a more general description, which would include all of the parties, including the plaintiffs and the individual defendant directors, is that correct?

Marshall — That's correct.

Stone — Alright. Um, it is my understanding that the individual director defendants are not prepared voluntarily to enter into this proposed settlement. They are not agreeing to settle their litigation. Um, and that therefore they are not voluntarily agreeing that Stebbins — We don't know that until we've taken a vote, right?

Stone — My understanding, that is correct, you don't know that categorically, it is my understanding from, from what was recorded from the mediation sessions, that the individual director defendants are not prepared to voluntarily release. And I think the question being posed is whether or not the Foundation unilaterally can impose upon a non consenting party an obligation that they release their legal rights. And I do not believe that the Foundation can do that, or even that, if the Foundation purported to do it, that it would have any legal effect. Uh, you could indeed, as Ted points out, query, uh the individual director defendants as to whether or not they will voluntarily agree to release, and then all of this is, uh perhaps an unnecessary academic legal debate. Uh, that might be appropriate at this time.

Gidwitz — Uh, let me ask you a question, before we ask that one, and that is, what is the effect of doing it, and, I just heard you say, Susan, that it may not have any legal effect, period. So, what's the downside of just including them?

Stone — No, I'm saying, that even if you purport, with that question from Ron, Ron even if you purport to, um, have the Foundation, uh require the individual defendant directors to release rights, that requirement may not be binding, in other words, it might not be a valid release, because Gidwitz — I understand, but there's no damage done.

Stone — Well, I do not believe that the Foundation can do this. I do not believe the Foundation can take away the legal rights of another party.

Gidwitz — I understand that, but we have it, what my concern is, Susan, is that we have a document that was written and agreed to by six directors, wherein, if it doesn't materially affect the execution of the document, why are we making changes?

Stone — No, the question is, what can the Foundation counsel put in front of the board, as a document which the board could pass that has the possibility of standing up to judicial scrutiny, if the board decides it wants to pass it. And I'm telling you that um whatever six individual members of the board might have done in the last mediation session, that was not an act of the Foundation. The Foundation is a corporation. It can only act through a majority vote of the board of directors at a duly called meeting. Um, that has not happened until today. And so the question is, what can the board do at this point in time. The board as a Foundation, which is one party to this litigation, cannot unilaterally take away the rights of other parties to the litigation.

Gidwitz	I keep hearing this, and frankly, my counsel has also reported to me on numerous occasions that you have made the case that, unless we have a duly called meeting, there's a difference of opinion. And the real issue here, it seems to me, is we'd like to get, we'd like to get, this litigation settled. And therefore, we'd like to have a document that we can go to the court with next week, which everybody can agree to. And if, in fact, I feel exposed, I will not agree. It's senseless, then going through this whole process is senseless.
Stone	Well, with
Carlson	Can we left Mark Heatwole respond to that, he wanted to say something, if you could let him talk.
Mark Heatwole	Just, Ron?
Gidwitz	Yes, Mark.
Heatwole	If you brought this actions solely against the Terra Foundation
Gidwitz	Say again?
Heatwole	If you brought this action solely against the Terra Foundation, you would be in a position today to settle this matter. But by naming three of the individuals, you, I believe Susan's position is right, that the agreement on behalf of the board of the Foundation, to settle this matter, only will operate vis a vis the Foundation. And not as against the individuals and their rights. That puts you at peril, and being at peril in this sense. On those same terms, you could be in a position where you will have settled your claims against the Foundation, and under this agreement against those individuals, and waive those rights, and those individuals may still have the ability to claim back against you. You can't force them to waive those rights through this settlement agreement, I don't believe.

Heatwole — But if you vote in favor of it, and Ron votes in favor of it, what I am telling you is it could work to your detriment. I'm not your lawyer, but, you've got a situation, where, everything I know about this situation tells me, force Paul, Judith and Alan to settle a case that they don't want to settle. And and that means this is a one way, potentially a one way settlement by you and Ron against them and they're not waiving rights against you.

Marshall — Yeah, I have to say, just to weigh in on this personally, that, uh, I mean, it's no secret that, that this, uh, this motion, and any changes in bylaws require uh, the vote of at least six directors. And I cannot support the motion as it is currently stated with this amendment to number 2. I can certainly support, and will support, the other changes, Ted, that you made, uh, in both the resolution, and the consent judgment order they seem reasonable. But I cannot, and will not, support this motion, which frankly means you do not have six votes. So, I came prepared, I read the motions, I read the consent, I mean I read the resolution, I read the consent judgment, I am prepared to support this, but this is uh, a last minute eleventh hour change, and I cannot be more clear than I'm being right now. I cannot and will not support this change as it is currently stated.

Gidwitz — Which change is that, Stephanie?

Marshall — You can continue the conversation, if you wish, uh, or Ted you can amend your motion.

Stebbins — Well, I knew this was of concern to Ron, that's the reason I suggested it, to hope the lawyers could work it out, but if it's a, uh, if it's thought to be, uh, a legal impossibility, then I would go back to the uh original text, as it was distributed. And leave out the amendment, of section 2.

Marshall — You are accepting an amendment?

Stebbins — Uh, yes.

Marshall — OK.

Buntrock — Stephanie?

Marshall — Yes, Dean.

(inaudible background)

Buntrock — Doesn't Ron have to agree to that?

Hartman — No, it's Ted's motion.

Marshall — We had, Ted has a motion, he's accepted the amendment, which is, keeping the first two changes he made and eliminating the change in the consent order paragraph 2. But I guess the question is, is there any further discussion, or we have a properly made and seconded uh motion and then we could proceed with the vote, if we are ready to do so.

Buntrock — Stephanie, wait a minute. I think there's more discussion.

Marshall — That's fine.

Buntrock — Uh, first of all,

Stebbins — Who's this speaking?

Marshall — This is Dean.

Stebbins — Hi Dean.

Buntrock — Hi. First of all, I'd like you to respond. You made your position very very clear, but when, when counsel for the Foundation, and counsel on the lawsuit has both said, as Susan has said, that you can't do it, uh, what difference does it mean, to leave the language in there? I cannot see why you take such a strong position, and uh

Marshall — I guess I take.

Buntrock — And uh, (inaudible). Can you respond to that?

Marshall — Yeah, I mean, uh it's my understanding, well, based on what legal counsel is saying, Dean, I would be voting for something which is, which is uh judged not to be legal and/or appropriate. I, I will not vote for,

Buntrock — No one, no one has said,

Marshall — I will not vote to force anyone, uh, into a position, that, uh four attorneys are saying, uh, is inappropriate. Uh, the Foundation, I don't think, or certainly I do not want to approve a settlement, uh, that, that contemplates a release that's that doesn't exist.

Buntrock — Stephanie, they haven't. All they've said is that you legally can't do that. So,

Stebbins — I appreciate the fact.

Buntrock — If you can't do it, you can't do it. And uh, I think changing it is unnecessary.

Carlson — Can I make a comment? I've got one more legal comment to make. This is Steve Carlson.

Marshall — Yes, Steve, go ahead.

Carlson — I think anybody who is interested in the possibility of a settlement accomplished and the consent judgment and order being approved by the Foundation and entered by the court needs to consider at least for a moment the question of what happens when it's presented to the court if the consent judgment and order presented to the court contains some obviously questionable provision. You are concerned about the possibility that there may be some members of the board that will attack the consent judgment and order, as they have already tried to stop this meeting. Uh, I would as counsel to the Foundation say that you probably ought to think strongly about doing something that is as close as you can to being something that looks like it's appropriate. And within the limits of what the corporation can truly do. I'm afraid you may be giving fuel to the fire, that somehow the corporation has acted inappropriately, if it passes resolution, or consents to consent judgments and orders, that, uh, have clear legal defects in them.

Stone — I would like to underscore that, and add that, although I was not in court today, it is my understanding that the judge has in essence invited the individual director defendants' attorneys to raise any concerns they have when this order is presented to her. So, uh, you know that this order and the procedure that led up to the orders, in fact you vote for the order, uh, will be under judicial scrutiny, and so I second what Steve says, that I think you want to err on the side of doing everything with scrupulous attention to detail and keep your process as clean as possible.

Marshall — And I really, I think frankly, that, Dean, to your question, and Ron, that if you wanted a release from the defendants, then I think it was essential at the time we were in mediation that there was, uh, uh, there was another line, uh, or sentence, or something that would have induced the individuals to settle, but that was not part of the mediated agreement, uh, and, as I said, at this point, I feel it is highly significant, eleventh hour change, and, I'll stand with what I said before, I came to this meeting as I trust we all did in good faith, there were six people that signed off on an intention to ratify, there were some things we had to work out since the last mediated agreement, especially the slate of officers, uh, and I think, um, we were prepared, and I hope, still are prepared, uh, to to reach agreement. But, uh, if we hold, if some hold fast to this, uh, then that is not going to be possible.

Stebbins — Well, I'm persuaded that I was in error, and that I think the attorneys comments are appropriate, and we need an agreement that will stand up under scrutiny.

Gidwitz — Stephanie, I will back off, excuse me, I've got a little food in my mouth, but I will back off of my

Tape 1 side 2

Gidwitz — For the record, that the language that plaintiffs and defendants originally, that the Sidley & Austin attorneys have been moving to change it, I believe

Stebbins	It was written in the
Gidwitz	That is correct.
Stebbins	Distributed uh version.
Marshall	OK, thank you Ron.
Tucker	This is Paul. Can, am I coming through?
Marshall	Yes, you are, Paul, go ahead.
Tucker	I appreciate the fact that this will be dropped. I just for clarification, can I just, Ted, you had been the one who proposed it, could you just speak a little bit more, as to why, so it can be understood a little more clearly as to that we've spent so much time on this, as to why this really had been of concern?
Stebbins	Paul, are you asking me?
Tucker	Yeah.
Stebbins	Uh, the um this is discussing section 2, well, I think we've discussed it at length, it was written, as you know, in mediation, to cover um plaintiffs and defendants. And, uh, we're just, we're hearing now that defendants can't be covered. And uh, I was, uh, trying to make it broad enough to win everyone's acceptance, but, but I'm now persuaded, having heard the legal arguments that, that that's not a good course. So that's why I'm going back to, to the original Sidley version.
Marshall	I, I am prepared to call for a vote on the question, but I don't want to uh, terminate discussion prematurely, so is there uh any further discussion on the motion, which also has been seconded?
Daley	I'm not clear. I want to know exactly what we're talking about, now, in terms of changes. I'm personally not clear.
Marshall	Alright, Maggie, if I can try to summarize where we are, um, we have a, we had Ted's motion, which was to adopt the resolution, that the Foundation had prepared, which is that three page document that we all received. And he further modified his resolution, uh, motion, to, uh, make a minor change on the resolution, which was page 1, paragraph 4, uh, the last two sentences were eliminated, so in that paragraph it ended, the attorney general of the state of Illinois. And then we had also a minor revision on the uh, consent agenda, paragraph or number 7, which added after the 2002 annual meeting, or until 12/31/02, since the date was not clear. So it was Ted's motion to approve the resolution, and then those two minor changes, one to the resolution, and one to the consent judgment.
Stebbins	Right.

Terra	Pardon?
Marshall	Hello.
Ratner	Closer to the phone.
Terra	I've got it right in my ear. Can you hear now?
Marshall	Yes we can, not very well, but we can.
Terra	OK. I just want to say that I am definitely going to object to uh any waiver of my legal action. And I think I would like to express strong objection to the fact that uh Allan Simpson, Helene Ahrweiler and Jacques Andreani are not on this, uh, at this meeting, not on this call.
Marshall	Yeah, we will.
Gidwitz	I couldn't hear a word of that Stephanie.
Marshall	Uh, she said uh, that she uh would not agree to anything that that waived her rights, and that she asked she is voicing strong objections uh, to the fact that Jacques and Helene and Alan are not on the call. And as here, I can just simply duly note that, but they were given every opportunity to be on the call, Don talked with
Hartman	I had no trouble getting in from France.
Marshall	They said that they would be, so it is absolutely most unfortunate, but we really could not wait, so Judith, we will, we will note that for the records, this is being taped, so that will be recorded. Don have you concluded your review? We are
Ratner	No, no, Dean is now talking to Mark. And Scott, he's got a question about the last line that's being eliminated on the uh resolution. Uh, which is "and any other document," and so forth and so on, that's paragraph 4.
Marshall	Correct.
Ratner	So there's a question about that, you want to explain to everybody?
Heatwole	Actually, I didn't draft this, John Sabl did, but John, maybe you would tell us why you would include something like that language in your resolution. I said to Dean I thought it was a catch all in case there was anything else that Sidley needed to do in order to effectuate the settlement.
John Sabl	And that is why it was there, Mark, you're absolutely right. My understanding was that, Ron had a concern as to whether it was too broad or seemed to contemplate going very far afield, we didn't think there was anything else that would need to file, and anything that was ministerial we think would have been would be contemplated by by the general authorization at the end. So we think it would be better to have it in, on the one hand, but we don't

Gidwitz	Alright, well, let's just strike it, and then I'll be happy.
Sabl	OK. Good. Again, Mark, we don't believe that uh this would mean that anything else that was you know so clearly contemplated would be prohibited from us doing it, it was just that, I think it's something that Ron is concerned that, and that there shouldn't be substantive changes made.
Heatwole	I had no problem with taking it out. Dean raised the question with me as to whether or not there was impact from that, and I was just trying to explain it.
Sabl	Yeah, I don't think there really is an impact. I think we don't
Buntrock	I'm satisfied with my question. Thank you.
Sabl	Thank you.
Marshall	Uh, Don, have you uh, have you been able to clarify for Maggie and Dean exactly where the changes are, and then, uh, if so, uh everyone fully understanding what we what they will be voting on, then I would uh, like to call for a vote on the question.
Terra	Stephanie?
Marshall	Judith?
Terra	Yes, I would like to say a few words before the vote is taken.
Marshall	Yes, please.
Terra	Can you hear me OK?
Marshall	Yes we can.
Terra	It must be the phone, I don't know what.
Ratner	Can we just respond to Stephanie's question? I think Mrs. Daley and Mr. Buntrock can respond to that better than I. I think I described it, but, they're nodding that they understand all this.
Marshall	OK, fine. Thank you. Judith, go ahead.
Terra	Well, I just want to say before we take a vote on this motion, that uh the outset with all due respect to the each of my fellow board members, I think that, the uh the mediation results that we are being asked to endorse, um and for which we really had high hopes in the beginning, has turned out to be something very different than what we anticipated. Um, for me, it's a process which has distorted the consensual nature of what mediation really should be all about, as reflected in this document. And I think as Paul Tucker our chairman has already observed, the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees. And I think that this vote that we're about to take is a very momentous decision. Because basically today we're going to determine whether we will allow the Terra

Marshall — Is there anyone who has a statement, uh, to make, otherwise I will, I think it's appropriate that we now call for, call the question.

Tucker — I'd like to make a statement, Stephanie.

Marshall — Paul is that you?

Tucker — That's me.

Marshall — OK.

Tucker — Um, I, it's painful to hear, the comments that have been made, and in many quarters, although I admire the honesty about it all. I think it's very difficult to be able to predict the future in any form or fashion. None of us could have thought we would be at this particular juncture when we all joined the board. Maybe some did, I don't know, but I certainly didn't. And I don't think Ted did, or Stephanie did. And I applaud their efforts to try to be able to find the right way to act in these difficult causes. But I find most disturbing is the ways in which uh, this Foundation is a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of uh, the state's purview. Uh, the invasion of its independence, its privacy, of a, a public domain, i.e., the hand of the attorney general, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive, I find it also counter to the very foundations on which foundations and America as a whole are supposed to be founded, which is why I protested this mediation will continue to do so. Uh, I also find it, uh, disturbing that the um, resolution, um calls for the continued presence of uh the Illinois factions, not that they're not wonderful people in Illinois, certainly more than enough to handle all of this, but I think that that should have been our choice, not somebody else's choice. Uh, and that compromise of our independence is something which uh I think again goes right to the heart of the matter. I think that everybody's consciences have been articulated with grace and conviction, and I think that that is appropriate. But I also believe, in the end, that there are serious principals, uh particularly that of the ways in which a foundation is supposed to operate, which are deeply compromised by this mediation and this process. And I think that it is in the end a sad day for uh the Foundation, and ultimately a sad day in the larger case for the ways in which the state interferes with uh private property.

Marshall — Uh,

Hartman — I I really would like to make one further, short comment. And that is that foundations are established under certain laws, and have to meet certain requirements. Their responsibilities are to the people, uh, of the jurisdiction, that has permitted them to set up these tax free organizations. Therefore, I do not see that an oversight by such authorities is out of order. Thank you.

16di-001543

Marshall	I think it's time for us to call the question, so we will now proceed to a role call vote on the motion. Uh, and I guess the question is, uh, OK, Mr. Jacques, not here, Helene, not here, Dean,
Buntrock	I vote yes.
Marshall	Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron
Gidwitz	Yes
Marshall	Arthur
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Stephanie, yes. Alan, Ted
Stebbins	Yes.
Marshall	Judith
Terra	No
Marshall	Paul
Tucker	No.
Marshall	Paul?
Tucker	No, Steph.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, I didn't hear you, Paul.
Tucker	That's OK.
Marshall	Um, the motion has been passed by six board members, uh, we now need a motion for adjourn.
Stebbins	I move to adjourn.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, is there, the agenda did say, any new business. Is there any new business which needs to come before this board at this time? Hearing none, uh, we need a motion to adjourn.
Stebbins	So moved.
Marshall	Is that Ted?
Hartman	Second
Marshall	Second, I'm sorry, Dean?
Buntrock	No, that was Arthur.
Marshall	Oh, Arthur.
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Do we need a role call? Uh, role call for the motion? Dean.

Buntrock	Uh, I move to ad, we adjourn, or uh, I vote to adjourn.
Marshall	OK, yes. Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron.
Gidwitz	Yes.
Marshall	Arthur.
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Stephanie, yes. Uh, Ted.
Stebbins	Yes.
Marshall	Judith.
Terra	Yes.
Marshall	Paul.
Tucker	Indeed, yes.
Marshall	Uh, the uh, this meeting is adjourned. Thank you all, and bonne chance.
Hartman	Thank you.
Ratner	Thank you.

Thereafter each class of directors shall be elected for four-year terms.

(c) Tenure. No person shall serve as a member of the Board of Directors for a total of more than eight years following the date in June or July 2001 on which this Section 2(c) shall have first become effective (the "Effective Date"), and none of the persons elected as Class I Directors prior to the 2002 Annual Meeting as contemplated by clause (b)(I) of this Section 2 shall serve past the 2002 Annual Meeting or be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter. Each elected director shall hold office until such director's successor is elected and qualified or until such director's earlier resignation or removal.

(d) Residency. Prior to the 2002 Annual Meeting at least one-half of the elected directors shall be residents of the State of Illinois. Thereafter until at least 25 years after the Effective Date have elapsed, at least a majority of the elected directors shall be residents of the State of Illinois.

FURTHER RESOLVED, that Section 8 of Article III of the Bylaws of the Foundation shall be amended and restated in its entirety, effective as of the Effective Date, to read as follows:

Section 8. Vacancies. Any vacancy occurring in the Board of Directors, or any directorship to be filled by reason of an increase in the number of directors, shall be filled by the Board of Directors. A director elected to fill a vacancy shall be elected for the unexpired term of such director's predecessor in office, and a director elected by reason of an increase in the number of directors shall be elected for a term expiring on the date of the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors at which the class of directors to which such new director has been designated pursuant to Section 2 of this Article III shall be standing for election.

FURTHER RESOLVED, that effective as of the Effective Date, the following persons shall be elected as the respective class of director indicated below to serve until their respective successors are elected and qualified or until their earlier resignation or removal:

Class II Directors (Term to Expire at

FURTHER RESOLVED, that not later than August 1, 2001, this Board of Directors shall meet to (i) elect a new Chairman (who shall be chosen from among the Class II Directors elected pursuant to the preceding resolution), (ii) elect new officers and committee heads, (iii) elect a new Executive Committee composed of the newly elected officers that also are directors, and (iv) elect a new Strategic Planning Committee whose members shall include Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Jr. and one or more Class II Directors; and

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the new Strategic Planning Committee, once elected, shall be authorized and directed to seek to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago, it being understood that the terms of any such partnership shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Directors; and

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the officers of the Corporation are authorized, in the name and on behalf of the Foundation, to execute such additional agreements, certificates or other documents, and to take such further actions (including, without limitation, the payment of expenses or other expenditures of money) as may be necessary or advisable to carry out the preceding resolutions.

REPORTED BY: KAY A. LEVINE, M.A., C.S.R., R.P.R.
Certificate No. 84-3654.

THE COURT: After everybody gets in position, I'm going to ask if we could start on the far right and go across for the benefit of the court reporter. And if we have two rows, that's fine. I just want to do the front row first and the second row second. It makes it easier for the court reporter if that's possible.

MR. CARROLL: Good afternoon, your Honor. James Carroll on behalf of the plaintiffs, Gidwitz and Buntrock.

MR. KENNEDY: Good afternoon, Judge. John Kennedy on behalf of the plaintiffs.

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan on behalf of plaintiffs.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris on behalf of the Attorney General.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson, your Honor, on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

MS. STONE: Susan Stone on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. BELLOWS: I'm Joel Bellows. I'm here for the named defendants.

MS. BELLOWS: Laurel Bellows, the same, for named defendants.

MR. GARMENT: Leonard Garment, the same, for the named defendants.

MR. TODD: Chris Todd, for the same.

MR. WILSON: James Wilson for Judith Terra, Alan Simpson, and Paul Tucker.

MR. CROWE: Brian Crowe here on the last-mentioned defendants.

MR. BELLOWS: Your Honor, is there some significance to the fact that Mr. Crowe has one foot out of the courtroom?

THE COURT: None whatsoever.

Counsel, since you were here on Friday, I've received three filings, and I don't really know yet what has been filed and what hasn't been. There was quite a bit of confusion after Friday's court proceeding, so I want to clarify some of that confusion, first of all.

What I've received since Friday is Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson's emergency motion to withdraw on behalf of the individual defendants, and I assume that everybody has received that.

I also received at 1:15 today, right before I went and did my 1:30 case, from Bellows & Bellows a motion for leave to file written objections and for an evidentiary hearing on a proposed settlement. And there are some attachments to that, and in this short period of time I haven't gotten through all the attachments on that one.

And then while I was hearing my 1:30 case, I received from the mediator a letter dated July 2nd. And I assume that all of you have received that letter?

SEVERAL ATTORNEYS: We have not, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And then I also received what is the first notification officially that I have of a proposed consent judgment and order. I realize that on the papers that were tendered as courtesy copies on Friday, there are included in there some proposed drafts of things that had been circulating in the mediation process. I didn't deem it appropriate to read those on Friday or to read anything until I received something firsthand from the mediator.

What I've received from the mediator is a one-page letter and a proposed consent judgment and order which I have just started to get through and which I haven't gotten through in the short objections and for an evidentiary hearing on a proposed settlement. And there are some attachments to that, and in this short period of time I haven't gotten through all the attachments on that one.

And then while I was hearing my 1:30 case, I received from the mediator a letter dated July 2nd. And I assume that all of you have received that letter?

SEVERAL ATTORNEYS: We have not, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And then I also received what is the first notification officially that I have of a proposed consent judgment and order. I realize that on the papers that were tendered as courtesy copies on Friday, there are included in there some proposed drafts of things that had been circulating in the mediation process. I didn't deem it appropriate to read those on Friday or to read anything until I received something firsthand from the mediator.

What I've received from the mediator is a one-page letter and a proposed consent judgment and order which I have just started to get through and which I haven't gotten through in the short period of time that I've been off the bench.

Now, is there anybody here from the mediator's office? Are there extra copies of this document — oh, Mr. Hilliard is in the courtroom. Do you have extra copies for everyone, sir?
MR. HILLIARD: I have some extra copies, yes.
THE COURT: It's a one-page letter and then a proposed consent judgment. I don't have anything official as to what took place, if anything, on Friday, so I don't know if there was a vote on bylaw changes and I don't know what the vote was. And I don't know if there's anything else I'm supposed to be reading.
And then the last thing I just wanted to bring up is I'm not quite certain from the Bellows & Bellows firm what was filed on Friday. I asked my staff to call on Friday. There were a number of telephone calls back and forth.
I received Friday morning a notice of a motion for a temporary restraining order, and my staff asked two or three times the attorney who dropped it off, Is this the courtesy copy or is this the original? And we were told this is the courtesy copy, so I proceeded to start to mark it up.

Later in the afternoon I checked with the court clerk and was told she had no original. So this is signed by Joel Bellows and — originally, it looks like — and it appears to be the original. So if this is to be filed with the clerk of the court, I have to give it to the clerk.
MS. BELLOWS: May I speak to this, your Honor, to straighten up some of the housekeeping matters that are before you? We are prepared to substitute a copy for you to work on as a courtesy copy. Because you've begun to mark it up, we can arrange as to how you want to handle that.
THE COURT: Why don't you put these two pages on the end of that, the original signed, and give me the other.
MS. BELLOWS: Right. Because we would like —
THE COURT: To file it under seal.
MS. BELLOWS: We would like to file it under seal. Thank you, your Honor. So if we could have an order that gives us authority to file those papers under seal, we will do so.

THE COURT: And those papers would be the document entitled Notice of Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. Let me give you the other, if you don't mind, a copy of the other signed one for Mr. Bellows. Those are the originals.
MR. BELLOWS: Thank you.
THE COURT: Just give me the body, you know, something to complete that.
MS. BELLOWS: I have that here.
THE COURT: Then this document, Additional Appearance, was that ever filed?
MS. BELLOWS: I thought that we have an appearance that is filed.
THE COURT: So this is — even though this is an original, this is meant to be my courtesy copy.
MS. BELLOWS: It's meant to be your courtesy copy and —
THE COURT: And you're going to file under seal the document I handed you back, reshuffled, with the signature pages and your plaintiffs' memorandum and your exhibits that were filed in the federal court case; is that right?
MS. BELLOWS: Precisely. Attached as exhibits to the motion that I filed under seal.

THE COURT: Okay. We need a separate court order that has nothing else in it but that these documents are to be filed under seal and kept separate under seal by the clerk of the court. And then that gets put on the front of the envelope. So they'll be put in an envelope sealed with that on top and give them to the clerk.
MS. BELLOWS: We have come prepared to do that today, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. So that was the first issue from Friday.
The second issue from Friday, when I left, I had a copy of the motion. The original, the clerk tells me from her phone call, was filed on the pro hac vice. And I did not get an order on Friday and the clerk said that an order has just been brought in on that. Anybody have a problem if I sign that order now?
MS. BELLOWS: It has been faxed to everybody for advanced notice, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. So the counsel from Washington are in, and I just want to make sure that before we deal with Mr. Crowe's motion, everybody's in who's supposed to be in.

Page 13

Now, Mr. Crowe, you want to leave us?
MR. CROWE: I do.
THE COURT: And, Mr. Wilson, you want to go along with him?
MR. WILSON: That's correct, your Honor. We are taking this as if it were a motion for substitution, since there is other counsel in at this point. The strictures of the Supreme Court rule regarding withdrawal we didn't feel applied here at the time because of the fact there's more than competent counsel from three law firms in two cities representing these clients.
THE COURT: And I assume that no one wants to say anything about that?
MR. CROWE: Plus, Judge, we'll assert no attorneys' lien on the file.
THE COURT: Thank you.
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we have authority from our clients to enter an additional appearance.
As your Honor may recall, we began in federal court with authority to file that action by our client. Our clients, two of them, one is in Florence, the other is somewhere in Russia.

Page 14

That would be Senator Alan Simpson in Russia.
And as I indicated to your Honor at the close of court at the hearing on this matter on Friday, we do not have the ability to get authority for a substitute, only ability at least for the near future to serve as additional counsel in this matter.
THE COURT: Okay. And you've got your additional appearance on file as to the counsel from Washington. Everybody is from Washington, right? And you have leave to withdraw.
The only issue I want to deal with is or talk about is, you have a pending motion for fees, which if the settlement is approved, will be mooted. And if the settlement is not approved, it will be the first matter I deal with.
MR. CROWE: We have a petition for you today, Judge, to be filed.
THE COURT: What is that?
MR. CROWE: A petition for our fees, whether the settlement is approved or not.
THE COURT: Okay. Should that be filed with clerk of the court?
MR. CROWE: I assume it should, Judge. We'd

give a copy to you, of course.
THE COURT: Anybody have a problem with that petition being filed at this juncture with the clerk of the court?
MR. QUINLAN: No, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. You can go ahead and then drop off a copy.
THE COURT: There is a motion now for an evidentiary hearing on the settlement issue. Let me hear, first of all, from counsel for the Foundation as to what happened on Friday.
And is there anything else I'm supposed to read, and does the Foundation concur that there is the need for a fairness hearing?
MS. STONE: Your Honor, on Friday there was a properly noticed, properly called board meeting. Due notice had been given. There was a meeting held, convened at approximately 12:45.
The board met, discussed the proposed settlement. There was lively debate about certain aspects of the proposed consent judgment and language of resolution that would be needed to amend the bylaws in order to allow the board to enter into the proposed consent judgment. After some vigorous debate, the board voted and by a vote of 6 to 2 voted to enter into the proposed consent order.

THE COURT: And that was with three individuals not present.
MS. STONE: That's correct. Those individuals were Senator Simpson, Ambassador Jacques Andreani and Madame Helene Ahrweiler. All three had been given proper notice. The Foundation administrative staff talked to all three before and after the meeting and confirmed that they had indeed been given notice of the meeting.
I do not believe — we only received the motion that the Bellows & Bellows firm is filing a few moments before court began, but I do not believe from my quick perusal of that document that they are raising any particular concerns about the way in which the notice was given. I believe notice was appropriate, and the meeting was appropriately called in strict conformity with the bylaws.

THE COURT: Was a vote taken to change the bylaws?
MS. STONE: Yes, it was, your Honor.
THE COURT: And was a vote taken to elect new directors?
MS. STONE: Yes, it was, your Honor.
THE COURT: So as far as the Foundation is concerned right now, there are how many directors?
MR. CARLSON: It doesn't change, your Honor.
THE COURT: It doesn't change anything until I sign this, right?
MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: And right now the Foundation is continuing to operate as it has.
MR. CARLSON: Exactly right, your Honor.
THE COURT: Does anybody feel that we should have an oral report from the mediator? Do you want to take a brief recess and read his letter and then decide how you want to proceed? I know you all just received the Bellows & Bellows documents.
MR. CARROLL: We haven't even received the exhibits, your Honor. We just received a fax of — in mediation that are confidential. But I can report that a vote was taken on the 19th of June on which a majority approved of a settlement agreement. That agreement was — modifications were made to it and — in order that it could be a subject of resolutions.

And it was brought before the board of the Foundation on Friday for ratification and for the election of additional members of the board, five additional members, and it has just been reported to you that took place on Friday.
The mediators were informed of this at about 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon. This morning we sent around the document to attempt to get signatures. We weren't able to get all the signatures, but that is the document which we tendered to the Court this afternoon.
THE COURT: The mediation process started on February 6th?
MR. HILLIARD: Correct.
THE COURT: And it's now the beginning of July and during this almost — what is it? — four months' period, you have had, I understand, extensive meetings with all of the parties

THE COURT: Do you have a complete copy to give counsel?
MS. BELLOWS: We do.
THE COURT: I have moved my 3:00 o'clock to 3:30 with the hopes that we would be done a little bit before — I mean relatively soon because I'm not certain this is going to be concluded today.
I want to find out what you believe is the best way that we should proceed on this, but you're not all informed because you don't all have the document. Do you want to take a few moments and look at the document and see whether an oral report is called for from the mediator today?
MR. QUINLAN: I think some sort of report from the mediator would be appropriate.
THE COURT: That was my intent. I intended to hear from him.
MR. QUINLAN: Maybe if we heard from him now, it might help us when we see the documents and where we are.
THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Hilliard, are you prepared to give us an oral report today?
MR. HILLIARD: The mediator's report is necessarily abbreviated because of the proceedings involved and individual meetings with them, meetings with their counsel as well as group meetings of this board.

MR. HILLIARD: We've had individual meetings with all of the members of the board, all the directors of the board, and we have had group meetings in March, again in May, and again in June when we would get everyone together.
THE COURT: And when one refers to a mediated settlement, the settlement is based on a vote on the board; is that correct? I mean, there's no issue that eleven people are not 100 percent happy about this. There are dissenters?
MR. HILLIARD: That's correct.
THE COURT: But this was a proceeding in which everybody had, as far as you're concerned, a full opportunity to participate.
MR. HILLIARD: Oh, yes.
THE COURT: Do you have any concerns about the integrity off this mediation process or presenting the settlement to the court?
MR. HILLIARD: I do not.
THE COURT: Does anybody want to just take a brief recess and get the one-page letter from the mediator, and then we will resume after you have

'hanged some documents?
.MR. GARMENT: May I say something first, your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes, sir.
MR. GARMENT: And what I say is, I hope your Honor will take it in the spirit in which it is intended, which is to make a contribution to this proceeding and with respect. But I understand — I understood and still understand why your Honor would have started the mediating proceeding, mediation process, with an order that the proceedings be sealed in the hope and perhaps a reasonable expectation that this would facilitate the discussions of the parties and permit free and open discussion without the intervention of outsiders and outside pressures of one sort or another of publicity and debate.
And what happened thereafter is a very strong argument — I say respectfully — for the centrality of press access of proceedings of this nature. And I think that at this time the sealing provision should end. I can understand why the press and press comment was, in effect, prevented in order to —

THE COURT: I don't mean to interrupt you, sir, but I don't think anybody is anticipating anything to be sealed from now on, is there?
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we aren't anticipating, but we have been cautious about our filing today. The mediation process — it's our understanding the mediation process is terminated —
MR. GARMENT: Well, I can conclude very quickly then.
THE COURT: And I didn't mean any disrespect in cutting you off, sir, but the order said the board couldn't meet until — or the board couldn't meet or do anything until the mediator reported back. And that during the course of the mediation process, the parties were supposed to be dealing with the mediator and working this case out.
MR. GARMENT: And, of course, your Honor, precisely what we have alleged in the district court proceeding under the Section 1983 claims relating to the interventions and not only roper and unlawful interventions by the Attorney General's office is precisely the reason why open, free access to the processes of law, whether in court or in a mediation proceeding are best aired publicly. And that is the nature of the First Amendment, sometimes abused but always exercised in the interest of public information.

THE COURT: Were these documents that were filed in federal court filed under seal?
MR. GARMENT: We filed them under seal.
MS. BELLOWS: We filed them under —
THE COURT: Because mine aren't marked that, so I have —
MR. GARMENT: In deference to your Honor's —
THE COURT: I assumed that since everyone was talking about things that have come out in the newspaper that there had been plenty of access to these documents. Because how else would anybody know about this stuff?
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we filed them under seal. Judge Bucklo did not accept them under seal; that's as far as the federal court proceeding.
As far as the filings that we have, I have submitted a courtesy copy to your Honor this afternoon. We have pursuant to your clerk's suggestion —

THE COURT: Just brought it here to court.
MS. BELLOWS: — brought it to court, and assume that it will not be filed under seal. But if we have no motion to do so, we would intend to have your Honor — we would intend to file it in the normal course.
But in deference to your Honor and our new place here among you, with an abundance of caution we have provided your Honor with a courtesy copy, counsel with copies by fax, and no one else.
THE COURT: I am one of the strongest advocates in this building on the public's right to know, and anybody who routinely practices here knows that I virtually never seal anything in this courtroom. And the only time I do it is if I feel that there is a really important reason to have it done.
And in this case the only thing that was sealed is while this case was in mediation. I wanted to give it a chance. And I didn't want the parties or anyone or the attorneys talking to anyone except the mediator about what was going on.

Now, lots of people, as I understand it, have violated that order, and that's another issue that we're going to have to deal with about that. That's a whole separate issue.
But now the mediator has reported. That's one of the reasons I wanted to make sure you all have what the appropriate papers are here. The plaintiffs are saying they don't know what you want to file today, Ms. Bellows, because they don't have the exhibits. So I want to take a few moments and make sure that everybody sees this document, which is being sought to be filed with the clerk of the court not under seal and see if there's any objection and whether it's — whether there is a desire on behalf of anyone to file anything under seal from now on.
The proposed consent decree, that's not supposed to be sealed, is it?
MR. CARLSON: No, it is not.
THE COURT: Am I missing something here?
MR. CARLSON: No, it is not.
THE COURT: When we talked about that one, you all came to me and you wanted to have a certain portion of the mediated settlement not public. And I said you can go ahead and try it, but I'm not signing anything that's not going to be public. And so you went back to the drawing board and talked some more.

MS. STONE: There was one aspect of the consent, proposed consent judgment, that we should draw to your Honor's attention. That the parties who are entering into this proposed consent judgment, assuming your Honor approves it —
THE COURT: This is all they're going to say.
MR. CARLSON: That's correct.
MS. STONE: — have agreed that there is a mutually agreeable statement that will be released to the press. And that is all that people will say. And that will be binding on those who — the parties who are parties to this particular agreement.
THE COURT: That's the Attorney General, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, and the Foundation.
MR. CARLSON: That's correct.
THE COURT: And that's all you're going to say. And this is not binding on the three individual defendants because they haven't bought into it.

MS. STONE: Or Mr. Michaeli.
THE COURT: Oh, Mr. Michaeli. Okay. What I would like to do if we could is, Mr. Hilliard, if you could make available to them whatever copies of the letter that you had, I would assume that I would file this letter with the clerk of the court unless someone has a problem with doing that. But I want you all to see it.
And the proposed consent judgment and order is something I'm going to have to take a little bit of time to at least read more than the 15 minutes that I was allotted today after you spent four months putting it together.
And there is a motion which is seeking an evidentiary hearing and a fairness hearing about this, and you all get to be heard as to — unless you feel that you're barred by the consent decree judgment. You're not, are you?
Okay. I want to hear what you all have to say about their proposed motion and we can go from there. But first let's just see the motion and all the attachments. And as soon as you're ready, please let me know.

(WHEREUPON, a recess was had.)
THE COURT: Anybody have any problem if we file the letter from the mediator?
SEVERAL ATTORNEYS: No, your Honor.
MR. BELLOWS: It is what it is. We have a problem with the content, but the letter itself is what it is.
THE COURT: Okay. Well, I will file that with the clerk of the court.
Has everybody had a chance to see the exhibits that are attached to the individual defendants' motion for leave to file written objections and for an evidentiary hearing?
ATTORNEYS: (Nodding.)
THE COURT: That apparently was what the concern was, that you didn't have the exhibits.
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, may I speak for one moment to the exhibits. The exhibits themselves were simply the original articles of incorporation, the amended articles of incorporation, and a page of the transcript.
But counsel, Mr. Quinlan, has reminded me that also referred to in our motion are portions of the exhibits that were filed with this

And I think that that's really the point of it.
My own feeling on this is that we don't necessarily have to take the Court's time in having a hearing as long as we are able to develop — I mean, the affidavits that we get, we can get from third parties and things of that nature by virtue of the people who would not otherwise be able to get them.
I would not be reluctant or opposed to, if the Court gave us an expedited discovery schedule, to taking their depositions and avoid having to drag this thing out in court.
THE COURT: Mr. Bellows, you say that you need to take depositions of people from all over the world on this motion. And are you talking about —
MR. BELLOWS: I don't think so.
THE COURT: Well, that's what you said in this document. You said of the people that would need to be in an evidentiary hearing, witnesses are spread throughout the world. Are you talking about board members or are you talking about people that — similar to these declarations where you're talking about Dan Terra's intent? What are we talking about as a hearing?

MR. BELLOWS: It breaks into two parts, so the answer is yes. It breaks into two parts. The affidavits of declaration from people all over the world, obviously we don't have to depose them.
With regard to the people who were intimately involved in the mediation process itself — and I would think certainly Mr. Hilliard would be one of those persons — we could either call him as a witness if the Court wanted to be involved in the give-and-take of it, or we could take his deposition and several others and just argue from those. The people all over the world, as I say, are people from whom we would get affidavits.
THE COURT: About?
MR. BELLOWS: The various points raised in the — the various points raised in our motion as to the effect of this order on entities wishing to do business in the future in Illinois, not-for-profits most particularly, foundations.
We would also bring in people who would — the Court will recall that part of the — you see, if you don't get me right then and there,

it's gone.
The Court will recall that one of the things that was not done in this very slow rush to judgment was to find out —
THE COURT: What very slow rush to judgment? The mediation process?
MR. BELLOWS: Yes. — was to get alternatives to the arrangement that is proposed in this consent decree. And I think that, for example, and this has been a very large concern of mine, although it's not exclusively.
You've got a major asset here. You've got people on the board, particularly the named plaintiffs, who are used to disposing of assets of substantial size. I have to believe that neither of them, for that matter no one else, would really undertake to make the kind of a decision that had been presented here in the consent decree without considering alternatives.
Now, part of the problem, of course, is that if you start out with the Attorney General of the State of Illinois saying that this entity will remain here, that this will be its focus, that this is where the art will be displayed, that this is where we're going to enter into an arrangement with another entity here in Chicago, I don't know that the board members would even appreciate the fact that it would be in the Foundation's best interest to consider alternatives from places outside of the state. And I think that that is something that the Court's entitled to consider when it determines the fairness of the result of this process.

THE COURT: Now, Mr. Bellows, I don't know how much of an opportunity you all had to discuss the history of the case with your predecessor counsel.
I know from their motion today that their client has stopped communicating with them, and I know that they did not know that you all were going into court on the motion today on Thursday until they read about it in the newspaper.
But we had in this case I would say at least half a dozen sessions with the Court and with counsel from each side to talk about whether or not this case was mediatable, and we had some pretty long sessions about that.

And one of the fiercest proponents for mediation process, one of the most vociferous, "Let's go to mediation," was from your clients' counsel who wanted this case mediated.

Well, right from the very beginning the Attorney General made the statement that they were not going to be participating in any mediated agreement if it meant that this collection would be lost to the state of Illinois. That was up front from day one.

And there were many discussions about that. And that was the ground rule from their perspective pretty much when we — not the ground rule, because I don't mean to say that it was a rule that they were setting, but that was their concern from the very beginning. And there was a full airing of that with the Court about whether or not there should be a mediation to begin with because there are unresolved legal issues here.

And the Attorney General may be right or may be wrong in its view of the law, and the plaintiffs may right or wrong. But there was a substantial concern about the cost of dragging this litigation on for years, and there was a substantial concern about the stakes of not trying to settle this.

But everybody went into the process, as I understand it, with the understanding that the Attorney General was going to have to sign on at the end to this agreement, and in order to sign on to this agreement, there was going to have to be some kind of concession made about Illinois.

That was how it started. So when you say that things were not aired, we all had a number of discussions about where the Foundation was before this lawsuit started and about negotiations with a number of other institutions throughout the country and whether or not this was the right thing or the wrong thing to do to try and settle this case.

And a decision was made by all counsel on behalf of all parties that, yes, let's give this a chance. And this was pretty much the starting point. So I know you're shaking your head yes, but I don't understand. You're gesting that this was something that got hammered in at the last minute. Well, this was

from the very beginning.

MR. BELLOWS: Pardon me for a moment, your Honor. The reason I was nodding is I thought that was the purpose of mediation. People start out with a certain position. The Attorney General started out with a position that some concession had to be made. I don't fault our predecessors in any way for agreeing to the mediation process. That's the first point of it, and the recognition that it is the process itself that is supposed to get people to change their positions. That's the first thing.

The second thing about it is I don't think that anyone really contemplated at the beginning of the process that it could be perverted to the — and that was the word I used in our motion — to the extent that it was. So I think that on two grounds — yes, I appreciate the fact that our predecessors agreed to it. We probably would have for the same reasons that they did.

But to wind up in a position where you're saying, Well, gee, the Attorney General made its views clear at the beginning of the process. Yes, that's why you have this kind of a process, to get them to change their position.

And during that process all kinds of things happen that were not really part of a normal mediation process. You don't have people going outside of this process to attempt to intimidate people. And it is by virtue of the conflicts that arose that there's some very, very severe problems with the validity of any agreement that would be reached.

But when I say, for example, that — and only as an example — that we would want to present the Court with evidence of alternatives of places from without the state, the Court may very well decide, after having heard that evidence or alternatively reading it by way of written submissions, that anyplace that — if it turns out to be, for example, the Art Institute, that that might be a superior way of dealing with this.

A whole bunch of things, Judge, got started with bare allegations, with allegations that we believe have no basis in fact. That Dan Terra, for example, wanted his collection here when the evidence is just the opposite.

And so I think these are things that the Court should understand and appreciate. And if you say, well, gee, there are all these people that have signed on to the result of the mediation, I would say to you, Judge, you know, when you've got the Attorney General of the State of Illinois saying, This is what the law is, this is what the rules are, this is what's going to happen here, you get these participants — I'm beginning to think, well, gee, you know, if that's where this is going to wind up, I mean if it's only going to — if it's going to wind up where the Attorney General is going to be able to keep us here in Illinois so that we can't do other things, then that's what's going to — that's the result. That's what's going to happen as a result of the mediation.

And if, in fact, that had been dispelled at the beginning, if the people who participated in the process understood that they did not have to capitulate on those points, if in fact those people did not have inherent conflicts that precluded them from taking a role in the decisional process, then, your Honor, the will that this — and in accordance with their fiduciary duties that this was in the best interests of the Foundation as they understood it.

Now, Mr. Bellows may disagree that it's in the best interests, Mrs. Terra may disagree, you may disagree, or I may disagree, your Honor. None of that is relevant. The question is whether or not the majority's will of this board will be respected.

And, your Honor, no one ducked the issue of whether or not there was coercion. That was an issue which had been discussed in federal court on Thursday and Friday morning in front of your Honor. And that matter was specifically addressed at the board meeting.

And I would like to read your Honor a portion, a very short portion, from the transcript of the board meeting. Now, this is a rough draft and we haven't had time to refine it, but this is our best understanding of what was said at the board meeting that was taped.

Corporate counsel for the Foundation, Mr. Heatwole, Mark Heatwole of Winston & Strawn, specifically advised all of the directors of their non-majority directors would still have the numerical majority at this point.

THE COURT: Let me hear briefly from each side. Everyone is being very silent here.

MS. STONE: May I speak on behalf of the Foundation, your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. STONE: The Foundation's position is today what it has always been in this case, which is that the board of directors should be able to run the affairs of the Foundation without undue influence from this Court, or quite frankly, from unhappy directors who happen to be in the minority. And that's as true today as it was at the start of the case.

It doesn't matter who the individuals are who may be in the minority. The fact is that a board of directors determines the face of an organization through the majority will.

And here you have a situation where there was a duly constituted, duly called board meeting. A quorum was present. There was vigorous discussion and a vote was held. And 6 to 2, the directors voted, exercising their free need to vote their fiduciary duty.

And he stated: In light of the allegations that have been brought forward in federal court yesterday, to a certain extent I was not there, but I understand that that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County courts this morning, about the coercion that some of the members of this board may feel or may not feel from the action of the Attorney General.

I think it's important for each of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely and that you are voting your fiduciary obligations to this board and this institution and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think we should vote. But if you are voting freely and if you do not feel that compulsion, then I think you are free to vote.

And this is specifically what Stephanie Pace Marshall and Dr. Ted Stebbins said in response to that.

Dr. Marshall: Just in response to what you've just said, Mark, I have felt in the past that despite the desire of some board members over [2] ... last year or so to try to peg me into an [3] ...eged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked my own path and I have ... always spoken with my own voice to represent the [6] integrity of my own convictions. And I have done

... it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now with full knowledge of my fiduciary [9] responsibilities.
[10] It is true that the Attorney General's office has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding [13] investigation. This has not played a part in my ] decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a board member of this [1 Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, [17] that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation.
[20] And then Dr. Stebbins spoke. And it's ] interesting, your Honor, that in his comments he does criticize the tactics, as I believe he calls
[2 them, of the Attorney General. He specifically [24] criticizes the Attorney General, but he says that that is not what is influencing his vote. And he talks about his history throughout this process, 9] about how he has been more of a centrist or 1] someone who is exploring different options. He talks about his history on the board.

Page 46

I came to the board. I knew Dan Terra.
7] I came to the board at the request of Jim Collins 3] and Judith Terra. I've served as chair of the collections committee and I think I served effectively. And I brought some wonderful new 1] paintings, helped to bring some wonderful new ... paintings to the Foundation collection.
I've done this without any iota of a 4] conflict of interest. I've always felt free to .5] form my own judgments. And either last August or early September when Paul Tucker first told me about his enthusiasm for the building in 8] Washington and wanting to move there, I disagreed.
[19] I long argued to explore a variety of stand-alone options in Chicago. I was willing to consider as part of the strategic planning going elsewhere, [22] but I've always been a defender of Chicago.
[23] And then he goes on: I abhor the ... threatening tactics of the Attorney General, but I

Page 47

[1] am voting my own conscience and for what I believe [2] is the best interest of the Foundation for its
[3] future as an independent, viable force in Chicago
[4] and in France for the promulgation of American [5] art.
[6] So, your Honor, these particular
[7] directors clearly and unequivocally stated that [8] they believed they were voting in the best [9] interests of the Foundation and in accordance with [10] their fiduciary duties as they understood it.
[11] I think the board has spoken. It was [12] a 6 to 2 vote, and I think the board process
[13] should be respected.
[14] THE COURT: I have one question. I'm going [15] to go on and let the plaintiffs speak in just a [16] moment.
[17] The consent decree which I just [18] received, I have read again during the breaks
[19] here. This, as I read it — and tell me if I'm [20] wrong — has a new board, once it's elected,
[21] essentially negotiating to partner with another
[22] institution in Chicago. It doesn't require it, [23] does it?
[24] MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.

Page 48

[1] THE COURT: So if something can't be worked
[2] out, the Terra would be its own separate museum.
[3] MS. STONE: That's absolutely an option for [4] the board.
[5] THE COURT: And there's absolutely nothing in [6] here that restricts the Foundation's ability to [7] continue to run its programs, activities, and [8] operations in Giverny, France?
[9] MS. STONE: That's particularly reserved for [10] the board. The board's ability and freedom to [11] conduct its activities, operations, and programs
[12] in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the [13] Illinois Attorney General specifically [14] acknowledges and agrees to.
[15] THE COURT: It can also lend its collection, [16] as it always had, to other museums throughout the [17] United States and continue its educational efforts
[18] in other places of the United States.
[19] MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.
[20] THE COURT: The only thing that this really [21] is making a difference, as I understand it, is the [22] Foundation can't close up shop and move outside of [23] Illinois permanently. I mean —
[24] MS. STONE: Right. I think —

THE COURT: — there's a number of other changes, new board members —
MS. STONE: — paragraph 5 of the consent judgment and order probably identifies what limitations may exist now with respect to the Foundation's activities for a 50-year period.
THE COURT: For a 50-year period.
MS. BELLOWS: And self-governing, your Honor. Which is one of the things that we would speak to when everyone else has a chance to be heard.
THE COURT: Okay. And this document is the board of the Terra Foundation amending its own bylaws to put some restrictions on its activities that Dan Terra didn't put in there when he set it up.
MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: And any board can do that if it chooses to do that, can it not?
MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. Let me hear from the plaintiffs and the need for — I really want you also to address whether you have a problem with anything being filed with the clerk of the court at this juncture. I can tell you that what I'm there's no objection to that.

And the problem is that what they present is really a question that they would like to try in front of this Court, which they had the opportunity to try; namely, what was the intent of Mr. Terra and what was the law on these issues, et cetera.
And that's the reason we went into mediation is the parties agreed to set those things aside, put them off the table, and get together to see if we couldn't resolve this dispute in a way that didn't necessarily require addressing what were some concerns and issues on both sides.
And what we had here was an agreement to mediate by all the parties, including the defendant directors. Counsel now would like to come in and say, Let's take a look at what took place. Let's go out and take depositions. Let's depose the people that were there, including the mediator.
As your Honor knows, that would, in fact, destroy and undercut the ability to have any mediation in any case again, which they agreed to.

going to need to do is to read this very carefully. I want the transcript of the board meeting and —
MR. CARLSON: We'll be happy to give you the resolution that was passed.
THE COURT: Right. — and the resolution, the amended bylaws, whatever else that you have from Thursday. But let me hear from Plaintiff. Is it Mr. Quinlan I'm looking at?
MR. QUINLAN: Yes, your Honor. Well, first of all, the issue here is their motion for leave to file objections to this agreement or consent decree.
And the problem is that what you really have here is an agreement. I don't think there's any question — and I don't even think that the defendant directors raise the issue whether there's agreement or the terms of the agreement.
What they tell you is that they don't like the agreement and they don't like the terms of the agreement. But we have a 6 to 2 vote, which is here by the attorneys representing the Foundation who attest to the validity of that. We have the terms which are in front of your Honor;

This was a mediated process, and they were agreeing in that mediation that nothing in the mediation would be used against anybody involved in this, including anything that was ever said in there.
So the mediation statements and the reason for your order barring disclosure of this was that these couldn't be used in court or in any other proceeding against anybody. Again, a commonplace type of procedure in mediation because no one is going to get into the mediation process if, in fact, this is going to be something to be used against them. The same thing as a settlement. This is a settlement process.
Your Honor herself in a settlement process in any case would say, Ladies and gentlemen, you know that nothing said here is going to be anything that can be used one way or the other. People will make statements, compromise their positions, make offers, make proposals that can't be used later on to show that they were willing to at least agree to that or agree to something else, again, because it would never work.

The public policy of the state, the
[2] blic policy of the United States, the public
[3] policy of the United States expressed in the Arbitration Act are that these things are to be encouraged, not discouraged. That's exactly what [6] they would have here. If they want to complain about this agreement, and if they want to complain about this process, they can say it was fraud,
[9] they can say it was duress. They can say those [10] things, but they need evidence of proof that's clear and convincing.
There is nothing proffered anywhere
[13] here that even offers a scintilla of evidence that [14] nobody agreed to this or it wasn't properly agreed to. In fact, the people that they allege that were somehow coerced are not here. They were not [17] in the federal court. They don't file an affidavit. The very people who supposedly were intimidated or hurt not only do not file an [20] affidavit or appear; in fact, they make a [21] statement that their vote has nothing to do with
it. That they were not coerced into making this vote. They make their vote because it's a hard [24] question. And we think on a better analysis here,

Page 54

] it's the right result. And that's what they said.
] The federal district court judge said, Look,
[3] there's nothing unlawful about that.
[4] What we have as a situation is they ] complain about the lawful activity of the Attorney
] General and they complain about the lawful
[7] activity of two directors that are both lawful.
[8] And to somehow say that that is unlawful has in no ] way been demonstrated. And it has not.
] It is indicated here clearly what we
[11] have is a party who has agreed because they didn't [12] prevail. Their views didn't win out. But it was ] one of those compromise decisions, and they were [14] subject to the same requirements as everybody
[15] else. They were part of the board, and the board ] chose to do this.
] THE COURT: Are you saying that you're
[18] objecting to them filing a motion?
[19] MR. QUINLAN: I see no basis for it, your ] Honor. There is no proper tactic here. What [21] they're asking in that motion is to come forward [22] with evidence that is totally irrelevant to ] hether or not there was an agreement or whether [24] or not the terms were agreed to. That's what it's

Page 55

[1] about.
[2] And if they want to say this was a
[3] coerced type of thing, it requires clear and
[4] convincing evidence. And that's after they admit
[5] there's an agreement; you must have to set it
[6] aside. There is no evidence of that at all. At [7] all. All they have is affidavits of third
[8] parties, affidavits of an individual, Mr. Tucker,
[9] who himself can't testify to what these people
[10] feel or don't feel.
[11] He said, I think they were coerced.
[12] They just told us they weren't. And in fact the [13] federal court couldn't see any basis to this.
[14] Nothing's new. They filed the same things in the [15] federal court. So there's nothing here in front
[16] of your Honor to warrant any kind of allowing them
[17] to file these matters or to be heard.
[18] These are things that they are just
[19] dissatisfied with. Well, they're dissatisfied
[20] with a lot of things. Frankly, we're dissatisfied
[21] with a lot of things.
[22] THE COURT: Do you believe that it would be [23] different if they came forward with a motion that [24] was seeking to have the Court not approve the

Page 56

[1] settlement because it was not a settlement, not
[2] agreed to, something wrong?
[3] MR. QUINLAN: They showed that it had not
[4] been agreed or not settled to, and there was
[5] substantial evidence — that is what the Illinois
[6] law requires is substantial evidence. It might
[7] require a hearing. But there's no substantial
[8] evidence of this. In fact, it's admitted.
[9] THE COURT: What about an argument that
[10] perhaps there's something illegal about this
[11] settlement? I know there were some statements
[12] made about that the other day, but I don't really
[13] see that necessarily here in terms of something —
[14] cases that are cited that says that there's some [15] provision of this agreement that is contrary to [16] Illinois law.
[17] MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you notice in their
[18] pleading that they have filed — actually it's a
[19] pleading, there's no complaint on file. There's [20] actually nothing in front of your Honor other than [21] a request to file a motion. So that there's no
[22] request to file a pleading. There's nothing that [23] brings this case in front of the Court other than [24] their motion.

And, your Honor, if the illegality of this — I don't see any evidence of anything that's illegal. There's nothing here that radically changes the bylaws and says anything that's dramatic. We can never do "X" or we can never do "Y," or we immediately agree that we changed the law, the body of the law of Illinois, or whatever it might be. They're organized under the laws of the State of Illinois.

As any corporation, the laws of the state in which you are organized under are the laws that apply. They are organized under this state, and they are venued here in Illinois. Can they change it? Well, they have to look to the law of Illinois. That's where they chose to come and where they chose to do it. But they make no allegations in any way that this is wrong, illegal, or we're doing anything improper here in this particular consent decree.

All we're doing is articulating some things. That is the extent of the — to change the number of directors, to agree to do something for a period of time. That does not in any way bind them to anything else. They have voluntarily basis for that. You know, the whole point here, they talk about stuff that's outside the state. We can take all of these depositions of people around the world. I don't know what they can add. I really don't. And I don't see how they can add anything to it, other than to say they have opinions about what might happen, et cetera.

I also would ask that even the documents that have been filed by architects and others and real estate brokers, all they talk about is what somebody might have wanted to do about renting property, of using property, et cetera.

As we all know from anything to dealing with the states, a lot of people met and intended to do a lot of things that they never got around to doing. And it didn't happen. Nobody changed the location of the Foundation from Illinois. Nobody changed the bylaws, nobody moved.

It was a question of what everybody was thinking. Everybody was looking for a better place and a better forum for the Terra Museum. And they had talked about that before, which all the parties admit. Can we find a better place in agreed to do certain things. Other parties have voluntarily agreed not to do things which enabled us to go forward. So there is nothing here in terms of the law that is set forward. There's nothing that would contest that. There's nothing illegal. And if they did that, they'd have to do it by some motion as set forth, some basis for an illegal act of the body.

But this was mediation. There is nothing illegal about mediation, there is nothing illegal about the topics, there is nothing illegal about what was being done. As counsel for the Foundation pointed out, this is what's done all the time. This is a typical type of thing a board would consider. It's a typical type of thing going forward that you'd look at. A decree, a mediation, a resolution of this. Boards across the world consider these type of things all the time.

And for counsel to come in here and suggest at the eleventh hour that there is something strange that's going on here and to suggest deposing the mediator, I think is just outlandish, your Honor. There is absolutely no

Chicago? How can we move this? How can we move around to get this out and get a better exposure?

And these are the things that were mediated, and these were the things that were resolved. So to suggest now that we could come in and just raise it at the eleventh hour — they say they never knew about the intent of the Attorney General. They never realized this is what he wanted.

They knew from the very beginning, your Honor. They knew throughout this. These were things that if they wanted to raise to you, if they wanted to object, they could have done so. They agreed and they entered into the order to fully participate in this mediation and never withdrew that until they came in at the eleventh hour and attempted to file these pleadings in federal court.

THE COURT: No, they gave directions to their counsel to stop participating in meetings.

MR. QUINLAN: On the 4th of June. So we're talking about something that never took place at this time. And of course we have contrary affidavits that could attest to just the contrary intent. That was the issue that would need to be ied and need to be resolved. But that wasn't really part of the mediation. The approach of mediation is to remove the issues of which people are in contest about and to seek those things that you are in agreement about. And that's how you resolve it.

THE COURT: Mr. Quinlan, have you ever heard of a situation where there's been a court-ordered mediation, and then everybody comes in and puts the mediator on the stand and has all the mediation completely aired? Have you all been able to find any cases where that's been done?
MR. QUINLAN: No, your Honor.
THE COURT: How about you all? Have you ever been able to —
MR. BELLOWS: I haven't researched it, your Honor, but I would say in that regard that certainly the Court's entitled to go beyond — behind any settlement to determine whether it was obtained by fraud.
If the Court feels that Mr. Hilliard is, by virtue of his appointment, sacrosanct in these proceedings — I'm not saying that in the

Page 62

pejorative — then I could understand that. I could even sympathize with it. But that does not mean in and of itself that the Court's not entitled to some of the other information that can be obtained from this hearing. I've heard all kinds of things, your Honor. Well, you know, there's really nothing fundamentally changed here.
Nothing fundamentally changed here.
THE COURT: Well, there's a lot that's changed. There is no issue that there is a lot that has changed. One of the most significant things and, quite frankly, one of the things that surprised me the most is this board agreed that the entire board was going to resign. When I read that, I was very surprised. But that's what was decided and voted on by the majority. I didn't expect that to come out of this.
MR. BELLOWS: Well, I'd like to speak to whether it was voted on by the majority. First of all, as the Court has heard from Mr. Hilliard, at the very beginning of this session today,
Mr. Hilliard said the vote was taken on June 19.
was ratified on June 29th. That's what
Mr. Hilliard said.

Page 63

THE COURT: Well, perhaps it wasn't —
MR. BELLOWS: I don't know whether you agree with it or don't agree with it, but what I'm saying is that on June the 19th it was a 6 to 5 vote.
THE COURT: Well, it wasn't a vote of the board because there was no board meeting. It was a mediation session on June 19th. The board did not meet till Friday.
MR. BELLOWS: Your Honor, I think, you know, that Mr. Hilliard was certainly capable of articulating what it was. His position was that it was ratified. I don't really care, your Honor,
if it was unanimous.
I still think, your Honor,
notwithstanding the statement of counsel, that it doesn't matter what the Court believes. That's insane. This Court is here to determine questions of this nature. Is this corporation acting pursuant to its charter, to its bylaws, and just going out and changing the charter and the bylaws?
If that action of changing the charter and the bylaws is inappropriate, if the vote could change the charter and the bylaws it participated in by

Page 64

people who should not have been voting, should not have been voting. And to sit here and say, I haven't been coerced.
But, you know, the interesting thing about it, Judge, is that these statements were made in the context of all this pressure has been applied to me, but I'm voting my conscience.
That's the very point of this thing.
It doesn't make any difference whether people felt that they were being coerced; they had something to lose by not making that vote. And what they had to lose, your Honor, was something that didn't have anything to do with the business of the Foundation. It was personal, their personal exposure. And as a result of that, your Honor, they should not have participated in the vote.
THE COURT: Who should not have participated?
MR. BELLOWS: I'm talking about the two people who made the statement that they weren't being coerced even though — it's semicolon —
however, I think that what the Attorney General has done as far as attempting to coerce me, I think is terrible. I'm voting this way of my own conscience but I think it's terrible that he

you get those, by all means, Mr. Perkins isn't under any kind of a gag order.
Are you willing to speak to counsel for the defendants about this?
MR. PERKINS: I'll be glad to, Judge.
MS. BELLOWS: About the investigation that's taking place against himself?
MR. PERKINS: To the extent I can, Judge, I'll be glad to share some information. However, that's a private person who has a right to be protected.
THE COURT: I understand.
MR. PERKINS: And these people perhaps have no basis or they obviously have no knowledge about what's going on. So we'll get to that. But I'll be glad to answer some questions.
THE COURT: Okay. And then the other thing that I just want to make sure. I want to make it absolutely clear, we are not at any time in this proceeding deposing the mediator in this case.
And as of right now, the documents that were granted leave to be filed under seal on Friday, they're going to stay that way for now. You don't have leave to file these documents today implications to fasten the property here in the state of Illinois, make no suggestion that it would not be properly administered in the state of Illinois. But it is a taking of property of a very serious order involving acts, undeniable acts on the part of the Attorney General's Office at the time that the question of the exercise of discretion was being considered by the crucial parties —

THE COURT: I'm sorry, counsel, you're saying "undeniable act." We haven't even let him talk.
MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just finish? We are entitled as a matter of law to take testimony to have people testify about the circumstances in which this dramatic shift, which spells the extinction of a long-standing foundation, which destroys its ability to operate freely, which sends a message to the world that if you bring a foundation to Illinois, you are subject to the intervention of the Attorney General to fasten those assets in the state of Illinois on pretext. And so far it's all pretext.
There has not been an evidentiary hearing with respect to the central issues since because let's get their motion. I think it would be very, very helpful before you file a motion objecting to what went on Friday, you really knew what went on Friday. So why don't you get the transcript because I assume that hasn't been made available to any one of —

MS. STONE: No, it's not. We only have a very rough draft, your Honor.
MR. GARMENT: We have heard the tape recording of it. I mean, it was recorded.
Your Honor, may I just say this. The Attorney General said he does not want to get into the matter of something involving a private person. I think your Honor is right, that issues such as Dan Terra's intent are secondary to what is the central issue in this case. And that is whether or not crucial votes were obtained by the improper intervention by the Attorney General.
We are entitled to examine the Attorney General representative and the persons who were involved in the initiation under these more than coincidental circumstances in the switch of the crucial votes that turned this Foundation from one level of management to another. With all of its

the beginning of this case nor has the public through the press been empowered to make its own judgments about what is going on in this case.
THE COURT: This entire record with the exception of the mediation has been fully open to the press and —
MR. GARMENT: But the mediation is the heart of the problem. The mediation has been infected by the actions of the Attorney General. That is our allegation, and we are entitled to have a day in court to prove it.
THE COURT: And I'm not saying that you may or you may not have a day in court. I'm saying you need to have a verified pleading directed to these issues before the Court. And once I see a verified pleading directed to the issues of intimidation from the Attorney General, it will determine whether or not there needs to be some additional discovery regarding those allegations.
But that's not this document. I don't have any affidavits in this document. I don't have anything from anybody that suggests that the Attorney General has exercised pressure. I have a hearsay affidavit that was attached or a declaration that was attached in a federal court er from the defendant Tucker. And I think that's essentially it.

MR. GARMENT: We may ask the Attorney General who is here whether or not these proceedings were started and that draft complaint circulated under the circumstances —
MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor —
MR. GARMENT: — contained in our pleading.
MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we object. This maligning of the Attorney General —
THE COURT: Okay. Rather than ask him —
MR. QUINLAN: — without any basis whatsoever is really outlandish. And, first of —
THE COURT: Slow down.
MR. QUINLAN: — all, those documents —
THE COURT: I said slow down. She didn't get that and you want this in the transcript. Slow down.
MR. QUINLAN: The documents that he's talking about and the contentions he's talking about were found to be lawful acts by the federal court and also were the changing of the vote found to be lawful acts.

MR. GARMENT: Not right.
MR. QUINLAN: I don't know what the burden of proof is elsewhere, your Honor, but the burden of proof here is on Mr. Garment, not on the Attorney General to disavow something. We're talking about a McCarthy type of proceeding here. We come and make an accusation and the Attorney General is supposed to now come up and disavow himself of doing anything wrong in his life.
THE COURT: The Attorney — just one second —
MR. GARMENT: It is not an accusation. Your Honor, it is —
THE COURT: Counsel. The Attorney General —
MR. GARMENT: — not an accusation. It is an admission on the part of the Attorney General —
THE COURT: You can stop the transcript if you want. She's not taking any of that down.
There have been some very serious allegations lodged against the Attorney General in this case. These documents were filed in federal court presumably on Thursday when Mr. Perkins isn't even in the country. He has not had an opportunity because you all have not even talked to him about any of this. And he does not have to defend himself in any way today in front of this Court based on the status of what I have in front of me. Because right now there's nothing in front of me verified to defend.

You will have an opportunity to file something. Once they file — and that means the Foundation — a petition to approve the consent decree, the only thing I need to talk to you about is the scheduling of this. I'm only here for a couple of weeks. How long will it take the Foundation to make the motion for me to approve the consent decree?
MS. STONE: Your Honor, in order to — the mechanics, in order to file that motion, we need the original signatures from Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz and the Attorney General before anyone from the Foundation is authorized to sign. That is what the resolution states.
So I see that the mediator, I think, tried to kind of cut to the chase in terms of what he submitted to you, and he has something that purports to be Stephanie Pace Marshall's signature on it. That's not actually accurate as a matter of corporate law. She's not actually empowered to sign it yet until we have the signatures from all three of the other signing parties.

THE COURT: Is that going to be a big deal? Can we just get their signatures?
MS. STONE: We have a clean form here. We could get — well, I think we need Mr. Buntrock's and Mr. Gidwitz's signatures.
MR. CARLSON: Would it be faxed around to counsel for all of the parties this morning, your Honor? Or — yes, a copy of the consent judgment, the decree. And if we get signatures, we can have it on file Friday, Monday, whenever it's —
THE COURT: So by Friday perhaps can you get on file a petition to approve the consent decree with the transcript and everything ready?
MS. STONE: Yes, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. And then I assume —
MS. STONE: Assuming we get the signatures.
THE COURT: And I assume that the only parties that want to file any objections to this are the defendants. And when — I don't know who to look to because there have been so many of you. When do you wish to file objections to the proposed consent degree?

MR. BELLOWS: 21 days.
THE COURT: 21? I leave on July 27th. And I would like to have a chance to decide whether or not there's going to be any kind of discovery or evidentiary proceeding here because I would expect that you would do that while — perhaps while I was gone.
This consent decree provides for the new board to take over and for everything to be done by August 1st. And I'm willing to expedite this as much as I need to in order to get this done.
MR. BELLOWS: Are you ordering the Attorney General to submit himself — or the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, to submit himself to interrogation by us.
THE COURT: I am not ordering the Attorney General, based on what I have in front of me, to do anything. But he has indicated to you that he is willing to talk to you, and I think a good starting point is to talk to him first. He is a public official. He will not compromise any ongoing investigation, but I would expect that he will cooperate with you as fully as he can and answer any concerns you have.

MR. BELLOWS: You have that on the record. Not your statements, his statement.
THE COURT: Well, I have no doubt that Mr. Perkins is going to cooperate and answer whatever questions you have without compromising ongoing investigations.
MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.
THE COURT: Now, can you within a week of — I mean, this isn't any big surprise here. You know what they're going to file. Within a week can you file some type of a verified document to see whether or not we even need to have —
MR. TODD: Your Honor, may we have two weeks for this reason? I'm scheduled to leave on Thursday for a long, planned trip, a business trip, where I'm going to be meeting with over 200 of my clients in the Mideast, and it would be extremely difficult for me to change that. I will be back here July 12th, so if your Honor could compromise and give us two weeks from Friday and we will get it done.
MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, as far as we're concerned, all our petition is going to be is a petition for the Court to approve the consent judgment, the decree, and I will attach probably the resolution that was passed by the board. To get all the formalities done, I would probably like until Friday to do it, but counsel can assume — he already knows what we're going to be filing, and if two weeks from today is some time in which he can be done with whatever he wants, maybe we could speed it up a little bit.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, there are things under the consent decree that are expected to be done speedily so that the board can continue to operate and operate appropriately.
We also note there's three different sets of counsel here. I would imagine that somebody could pick up for counsel who's not available.
MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just make a brief statement?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. GARMENT: I know I've spoken with a certain amount of vehemence today, but this case started with some demonstrably false and very serious allegations against the defendants. They have not been proved. There has not been a hearing to present a bit of evidence in support of those allegations.

THE COURT: And they remain unproven.
MR. GARMENT: And it is our intention, and we ask leave to file an amended answer which will raise those issues in terms of — our present contemplation is to assert counterclaims, which we are entitled to do under an amended pleading.
These issues have never come into focus, and what has happened is through the intervention of the Attorney General, in cooperation with Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, who were the dissenting directors who did not want consideration given to any kind of change in the venue of the museum activities, this process was brought to a halt.
Your Honor understandably tried to find a solution through a mediation process. That mediation process stopped everything except the actions that were necessary in the view of the Attorney General to bring the process to the conclusion he wanted.

And we have standing out inexplicably, clearly demonstrated, the fact of two crucial votes being switched in the last few weeks on the basis or in absolute concurrence with interventions on the part of the Attorney General that were threatening to these two directors.

That I submit is enough for us to ask leave to present evidence, to ask for witnesses to come forward and testify about the circumstances of their intervention, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, the Attorney General, and the votes that were switched. That will not take much time. That does not involve affidavits from all over the world. That involves a discrete hearing process under oath where people have to explain why they did it, when they did it, so that your Honor can determine whether or not this is a free voluntary action of a majority of the board of a huge and extremely important national art collection that happens to be temporarily lodged in Chicago.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all —

THE COURT: I'm sorry, what you really were saying was two different things. If you're at this point asking leave to file additional pleadings in this case, as far as a counterclaim, that leave is not granted. You would have to come in the way we normally do it here on a motion for leave to file with a document proposed. I need to know who it is against and what the cause of action is, and whether or not it's affected one way or the other by this mediated settlement. That's a totally separate issue.

What you've said about the opportunity to take discovery, I have not foreclosed that. I'm saying based on what you filed, there's nothing to take discovery on right now. I have nothing verified from these defendants to suggest that this Court should not approve this settlement, and I am willing to let you file something.

But the date that I have available to hear this is — the date I have is July 24th in the afternoon, and that's moving a case that I already have. And I want to be able to seriously consider anything that you're going to file. And I don't want, like I had today, ten minutes before ve to come out here and be given a document. I would like to be able to take it home and review it.

So you can file the motion to approve the consent decree by July 6th, and if you can all get a response filed on time by the 19th of July — can you do July 19th?

MS. BELLOWS: May I remind the Court that one of our clients, Dr. Tucker, is in Italy and the second of our clients is available; Judith Terra is in Washington, D.C. But the third of our clients is presently somewhere in Russia. So I do not want to make the setting of the date a cause celebre. On the other hand, I do believe that we should be able to be in touch with those clients prior to filing.

THE COURT: Well, today is the 2nd, and your response would not be due until the 19th. And if you can't get in touch with your clients by the 19th, then there's a big problem.

MS. BELLOWS: Oh, I'm sorry, your Honor. I thought that you were looking to us to file a pleading on July 6th.

THE COURT: No. Just the —

MS. BELLOWS: I apologize, your Honor.

THE COURT: — and your response would be the 19th, and if the plaintiffs or the parties seeking to enforce this settlement want to file any kind of reply, because I would expect whatever the response is, it's going to have case law. It's going to have an affidavit. There's going to be some type of a firsthand affidavit that says the Attorney General's done something wrong here.

And there's going to be case law that there might be something illegal about this settlement. Because I haven't even seen a trace of that yet. And any case law that you give or that you cite, you've got to give me a copy of the cases because I'm going to have to take them home.

And everybody else, if you want to respond to their cases or whatever, I'm going to give you until noon of the 23rd. I'm sorry it's going to wreck a weekend in July, but it's the best I can do for you. And I would see you July 24th at 2:00 o'clock. And I need somebody to draw an order.

In the meantime, those documents that were filed in Court on Friday, or were supposed to be filed, can just still be filed as they were supposed to have been on file, under seal.

I do not want to have any of the papers that relate to the mediation process made public at this time. I don't see any reason why we need to have that. I will entertain any kind of a motion to open them. Is there anything that — I mean, if you all want it opened, then that's another thing.

MR. GARMENT: It should be opened.

THE COURT: Mr. Carlson, you wanted to say something?

MR. CARLSON: I was going to say now maybe this motion is moot in light of the fact that the individual defendants apparently have changed counsel. But previous counsel — you know, they had a motion they noticed up for today for an order referring the matter to the State's Attorney of Cook County for investigation relating to breaches of the confidentiality provision, your Honor's order of February 5th.

THE COURT: I haven't seen that. I never got that motion.

MR. CARLSON: Oh, you didn't?

THE COURT: No. Nobody ever gave it to me.

MR. CARLSON: Well, we may very well file a

We'd object to that from a procedure point —

THE COURT: Well, he's not going to file it without a motion for leave, and you'd have a chance to see it and then come and tell me what —

MR. QUINLAN: Plus it would be procedurally out of place at this time because the mediation process obviously substituted here, and any motion for a counterclaim frankly is not timely. They never answered to this, so that any answer they'd have to seek —

MR. GARMENT: The injunction took the place of an answer.

MR. QUINLAN: No, the injunction didn't take the place —

THE COURT: There are individual defendants I don't believe ever filed an answer.

MR. QUINLAN: Never filed an answer.

MR. CARLSON: Dr. Tucker did.

MR. QUINLAN: Only Tucker did. But there was no counterclaim filed at that time. But no counterclaim would be appropriate at this time because the mediation process stopped all that.

So to get to that point, you'd have to set aside all the mediation process, the consent motion on behalf of the Foundation, your Honor, relating to what are apparent breaches of your Honor's February 5th confidentiality order. There are articles that appeared in Crain, Chicago Business, and elsewhere suggesting that certain members of the board perhaps have been violating the confidentiality provisions that are currently in place. And that is of concern to the Foundation, getting the confidentiality provisions that are included in the consent judgment, which we hope to have that. I just want to alert the Court to the fact that we'll take a look at it and prepare an appropriate motion.

THE COURT: Okay. Please file that other document like you were supposed to have filed it on Friday. And the document you seek to file today, I'm not going to grant leave to file it. There's nothing objectionable or unconfidential in it; it's just that let's get their motion, and most of what this is all about is Dan Terra's intent. That's not what I'm going to look at when I either approve or not approve the settlement.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, one other thing. You had mentioned about filing a counterclaim.

decree, the mediation, et cetera, and then if you wanted to file a counterclaim, we'd be back to square one to file this.

My only reason for raising this is that we're going to have enough to respond to in this short period of time, and I'd prefer we don't get into these collateral issues before they're appropriately in front of the Court.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, I do want to again — we would have to object whenever anyone tries to seek to impose additional limitations on the proposed consent decree. The proposed consent decree does not release — I'm sorry, does not in any way force the individual defendants to release any claims or rights they might have. I just need to point that out to the Court.

MR. QUINLAN: That has nothing to do with the counterclaim.

MS. BELLOWS: Well, your Honor, clearly you're correct. I mean, in such time as we file a motion for a counterclaim and attach a counterclaim if that's what we decide to do.

THE COURT: That's my 9:15 call. You give them notice. You bring it in and — they'll have a chance to file a written response and objection hat.

Before we adjourn today, I want to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Hilliard.
Mr. Hilliard, you've done a yeoman's effort since February, and I know it hasn't been easy. And I don't know whether or not you've ever been paid because I don't have access to that. But I assume that you are sending your bills to the Foundation, and in due course someone will have a vote and approve the payment of that if that's necessary.
And I want to make it clear if anybody — I assume that if any counsel wants to have any discussion with Mr. Hilliard — Mr. Hilliard, how do you feel about informal discussions with any counsel, or have you just about had it at this point?
MR. HILLIARD: They should meet me in my hotel room in London. I'm leaving tonight.
THE COURT: Good for you. Have a wonderful trip.
MR. KENNEDY: Just one last housekeeping matter. The September 25 is scheduled to expire today. We recommend until this is resolved to extend it to the 24th of July.

THE COURT: That's fine. Make it 5:00 o'clock. And if you'd draw me up some orders. And I would ask if you could kind of maybe do that in the conference room.

REPORTED BY: KAY A. LEVINE, M.A., C.S.R., R.P.R.
Certificate No. 84-3654.

THE COURT: After everybody gets in position, I'm going to ask if we could start on the far right and go across for the benefit of the court reporter. And if we have two rows, that's fine. I just want to do the front row first and the second row second. It makes it easier for the court reporter if that's possible.

MR. CARROLL: Good afternoon, your Honor. James Carroll on behalf of the plaintiffs, Gidwitz and Buntrock.

MR. KENNEDY: Good afternoon, Judge. John Kennedy on behalf of the plaintiffs.

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan on behalf of plaintiffs.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris on behalf of the Attorney General.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson, your Honor, on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

MS. STONE: Susan Stone on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. BELLOWS: I'm Joel Bellows. I'm here for the named defendants.

MS. BELLOWS: Laurel Bellows, the same, for named defendants.

MR. GARMENT: Leonard Garment, the same, for the named defendants.

MR. TODD: Chris Todd, for the same.

MR. WILSON: James Wilson for Judith Terra, Alan Simpson, and Paul Tucker.

MR. CROWE: Brian Crowe here on the last-mentioned defendants.

MR. BELLOWS: Your Honor, is there some significance to the fact that Mr. Crowe has one foot out of the courtroom?

THE COURT: None whatsoever.

Counsel, since you were here on Friday, I've received three filings, and I don't really know yet what has been filed and what hasn't been. There was quite a bit of confusion after Friday's court proceeding, so I want to clarify some of that confusion, first of all.

What I've received since Friday is Mr. Crowe and Mr. Wilson's emergency motion to withdraw on behalf of the individual defendants, and I assume that everybody has received that.

I also received at 1:15 today, right before I went and did my 1:30 case, from Bellows & Bellows a motion for leave to file written objections and for an evidentiary hearing on a proposed settlement. And there are some attachments to that, and in this short period of time I haven't gotten through all the attachments on that one.

And then while I was hearing my 1:30 case, I received from the mediator a letter dated July 2nd. And I assume that all of you have received that letter?

SEVERAL ATTORNEYS: We have not, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And then I also received what is the first notification officially that I have of a proposed consent judgment and order. I realize that on the papers that were tendered as courtesy copies on Friday, there are included in there some proposed drafts of things that had been circulating in the mediation process. I didn't deem it appropriate to read those on Friday or to read anything until I received something firsthand from the mediator.

What I've received from the mediator is a one-page letter and a proposed consent judgment and order which I have just started to get through and which I haven't gotten through in the short period of time that I've been off the bench.

Now, is there anybody here from the mediator's office? Are there extra copies of this document — oh, Mr. Hilliard is in the courtroom. Do you have extra copies for everyone, sir?
MR. HILLIARD: I have some extra copies, yes.
THE COURT: It's a one-page letter and then a proposed consent judgment. I don't have anything official as to what took place, if anything, on Friday, so I don't know if there was a vote on bylaw changes and I don't know what the vote was. And I don't know if there's anything else I'm supposed to be reading.
And then the last thing I just wanted to bring up is I'm not quite certain from the Bellows & Bellows firm what was filed on Friday. I asked my staff to call on Friday. There were a number of telephone calls back and forth.
I received Friday morning a notice of a motion for a temporary restraining order, and my staff asked two or three times the attorney who dropped it off, Is this the courtesy copy or is this the original? And we were told this is the courtesy copy, so I proceeded to start to mark it up.

Later in the afternoon I checked with the court clerk and was told she had no original. So this is signed by Joel Bellows and — originally, it looks like — and it appears to be the original. So if this is to be filed with the clerk of the court, I have to give it to the clerk.
MS. BELLOWS: May I speak to this, your Honor, to straighten up some of the housekeeping matters that are before you? We are prepared to substitute a copy for you to work on as a courtesy copy. Because you've begun to mark it up, we can arrange as to how you want to handle that.
THE COURT: Why don't you put these two pages on the end of that, the original signed, and give me the other.
MS. BELLOWS: Right. Because we would like —
THE COURT: To file it under seal.
MS. BELLOWS: We would like to file it under seal. Thank you, your Honor. So if we could have an order that gives us authority to file those papers under seal, we will do so.

THE COURT: And those papers would be the document entitled Notice of Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. Let me give you the other, if you don't mind, a copy of the other signed one for Mr. Bellows. Those are the originals.
MR. BELLOWS: Thank you.
THE COURT: Just give me the body, you know, something to complete that.
MS. BELLOWS: I have that here.
THE COURT: Then this document, Additional Appearance, was that ever filed?
MS. BELLOWS: I thought that we have an appearance that is filed.
THE COURT: So this is — even though this is an original, this is meant to be my courtesy copy.
MS. BELLOWS: It's meant to be your courtesy copy and —
THE COURT: And you're going to file under seal the document I handed you back, reshuffled, with the signature pages and your plaintiffs' memorandum and your exhibits that were filed in the federal court case; is that right?
MS. BELLOWS: Precisely. Attached as exhibits to the motion that I filed under seal.

THE COURT: Okay. We need a separate court order that has nothing else in it but that these documents are to be filed under seal and kept separate under seal by the clerk of the court. And then that gets put on the front of the envelope. So they'll be put in an envelope sealed with that on top and give them to the clerk.
MS. BELLOWS: We have come prepared to do that today, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. So that was the first issue from Friday.
The second issue from Friday, when I left, I had a copy of the motion. The original, the clerk tells me from her phone call, was filed on the pro hac vice. And I did not get an order on Friday and the clerk said that an order has just been brought in on that. Anybody have a problem if I sign that order now?
MS. BELLOWS: It has been faxed to everybody for advanced notice, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. So the counsel from Washington are in, and I just want to make sure that before we deal with Mr. Crowe's motion, everybody's in who's supposed to be in.

Page 13

Now, Mr. Crowe, you want to leave us?
IR. CROWE: I do.
THE COURT: And, Mr. Wilson, you want to go along with him?
MR. WILSON: That's correct, your Honor. We are taking this as if it were a motion for substitution, since there is other counsel in at this point. The strictures of the Supreme Court rule regarding withdrawal we didn't feel applied here at the time because of the fact there's more than competent counsel from three law firms in two cities representing these clients.
THE COURT: And I assume that no one wants to say anything about that?
MR. CROWE: Plus, Judge, we'll assert no attorneys' lien on the file.
THE COURT: Thank you.
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we have authority from our clients to enter an additional appearance.
As your Honor may recall, we began in federal court with authority to file that action by our client. Our clients, two of them, one is in Florence, the other is somewhere in Russia.

Page 14

That would be Senator Alan Simpson in Russia.
And as I indicated to your Honor at the close of court at the hearing on this matter on Friday, we do not have the ability to get authority for a substitute, only ability at least for the near future to serve as additional counsel in this matter.
THE COURT: Okay. And you've got your additional appearance on file as to the counsel from Washington. Everybody is from Washington, right? And you have leave to withdraw.
The only issue I want to deal with is or talk about is, you have a pending motion for fees, which if the settlement is approved, will be mooted. And if the settlement is not approved, it will be the first matter I deal with.
MR. CROWE: We have a petition for you today, Judge, to be filed.
THE COURT: What is that?
MR. CROWE: A petition for our fees, whether the settlement is approved or not.
THE COURT: Okay. Should that be filed with clerk of the court?
MR. CROWE: I assume it should, Judge. We'd

give a copy to you, of course.
THE COURT: Anybody have a problem with that petition being filed at this juncture with the clerk of the court?
MR. QUINLAN: No, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. You can go ahead and then drop off a copy.
THE COURT: There is a motion now for an evidentiary hearing on the settlement issue. Let me hear, first of all, from counsel for the Foundation as to what happened on Friday.
And is there anything else I'm supposed to read, and does the Foundation concur that there is the need for a fairness hearing?
MS. STONE: Your Honor, on Friday there was a properly noticed, properly called board meeting. Due notice had been given. There was a meeting held, convened at approximately 12:45.
The board met, discussed the proposed settlement. There was lively debate about certain aspects of the proposed consent judgment and language of resolution that would be needed to amend the bylaws in order to allow the board to enter into the proposed consent judgment. After some vigorous debate, the board voted and by a vote of 6 to 2 voted to enter into the proposed consent order.

THE COURT: And that was with three individuals not present.
MS. STONE: That's correct. Those individuals were Senator Simpson, Ambassador Jacques Andreani and Madame Helene Ahrweiler. All three had been given proper notice. The Foundation administrative staff talked to all three before and after the meeting and confirmed that they had indeed been given notice of the meeting.
I do not believe — we only received the motion that the Bellows & Bellows firm is filing a few moments before court began, but I do not believe from my quick perusal of that document that they are raising any particular concerns about the way in which the notice was given. I believe notice was appropriate, and the meeting was appropriately called in strict conformity with the bylaws.

THE COURT: Was a vote taken to change the bylaws?
MS. STONE: Yes, it was, your Honor.
THE COURT: And was a vote taken to elect new directors?
MS. STONE: Yes, it was, your Honor.
THE COURT: So as far as the Foundation is concerned right now, there are how many directors?
MR. CARLSON: It doesn't change, your Honor.
THE COURT: It doesn't change anything until I sign this, right?
MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: And right now the Foundation is continuing to operate as it has.
MR. CARLSON: Exactly right, your Honor.
THE COURT: Does anybody feel that we should have an oral report from the mediator? Do you want to take a brief recess and read his letter and then decide how you want to proceed? I know you all just received the Bellows & Bellows documents.
MR. CARROLL: We haven't even received the exhibits, your Honor. We just received a fax of — in mediation that are confidential. But I can report that a vote was taken on the 19th of June on which a majority approved of a settlement agreement. That agreement was — modifications were made to it and — in order that it could be a subject of resolutions.

And it was brought before the board of the Foundation on Friday for ratification and for the election of additional members of the board, five additional members, and it has just been reported to you that took place on Friday.

The mediators were informed of this at about 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon. This morning we sent around the document to attempt to get signatures. We weren't able to get all the signatures, but that is the document which we tendered to the Court this afternoon.

THE COURT: The mediation process started on February 6th?
MR. HILLIARD: Correct.
THE COURT: And it's now the beginning of July and during this almost — what is it? — four months' period, you have had, I understand, extensive meetings with all of the parties

THE COURT: Do you have a complete copy to give counsel?
MS. BELLOWS: We do.
THE COURT: I have moved my 3:00 o'clock to 3:30 with the hopes that we would be done a little bit before — I mean relatively soon because I'm not certain this is going to be concluded today.

I want to find out what you believe is the best way that we should proceed on this, but you're not all informed because you don't all have the document. Do you want to take a few moments and look at the document and see whether an oral report is called for from the mediator today?
MR. QUINLAN: I think some sort of report from the mediator would be appropriate.
THE COURT: That was my intent. I intended to hear from him.
MR. QUINLAN: Maybe if we heard from him now, it might help us when we see the documents and where we are.
THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Hilliard, are you prepared to give us an oral report today?
MR. HILLIARD: The mediator's report is necessarily abbreviated because of the proceedings involved and individual meetings with them, meetings with their counsel as well as group meetings of this board.

MR. HILLIARD: We've had individual meetings with all of the members of the board, all the directors of the board, and we have had group meetings in March, again in May, and again in June when we would get everyone together.
THE COURT: And when one refers to a mediated settlement, the settlement is based on a vote on the board; is that correct? I mean, there's no issue that eleven people are not 100 percent happy about this. There are dissenters?
MR. HILLIARD: That's correct.
THE COURT: But this was a proceeding in which everybody had, as far as you're concerned, a full opportunity to participate.
MR. HILLIARD: Oh, yes.
THE COURT: Do you have any concerns about the integrity off this mediation process or presenting the settlement to the court?
MR. HILLIARD: I do not.
THE COURT: Does anybody want to just take a brief recess and get the one-page letter from the mediator, and then we will resume after you have

[2] hanged some documents?
[3] MR. GARMENT: May I say something first, your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes, sir.
[6] MR. GARMENT: And what I say is, I hope your [7] Honor will take it in the spirit in which it is intended, which is to make a contribution to this [9] proceeding and with respect. But I understand —
[10] I understood and still understand why your Honor would have started the mediating proceeding, mediation process, with an order that the [13] proceedings be sealed in the hope and perhaps a [14] reasonable expectation that this would facilitate the discussions of the parties and permit free and [16] open discussion without the intervention of [17] outsiders and outside pressures of one sort or another of publicity and debate.
And what happened thereafter is a very [20] strong argument — I say respectfully — for the [21] centrality of press access of proceedings of this nature. And I think that at this time the sealing [23] provision should end. I can understand why the [24] press and press comment was, in effect, prevented

in order to —
THE COURT: I don't mean to interrupt you,
] sir, but I don't think anybody is anticipating ] anything to be sealed from now on, is there?
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we aren't anticipating, but we have been cautious about our ] filing today. The mediation process — it's our ] understanding the mediation process is terminated —
MR. GARMENT: Well, I can conclude very ] quickly then.
[1] THE COURT: And I didn't mean any disrespect [in cutting you off, sir, but the order said the ] board couldn't meet until — or the board couldn't ] meet or do anything until the mediator reported [back. And that during the course of the mediation process, the parties were supposed to be dealing ] with the mediator and working this case out.
[19] MR. GARMENT: And, of course, your Honor, [precisely what we have alleged in the district court proceeding under the Section 1983 claims ] relating to the interventions and not only [2 roper and unlawful interventions by the orney General's office is precisely the reason

[1] why open, free access to the processes of law,
[2] whether in court or in a mediation proceeding are [3] best aired publicly. And that is the nature of [4] the First Amendment, sometimes abused but always [5] exercised in the interest of public information.
[6] THE COURT: Were these documents that were [7] filed in federal court filed under seal?
[8] MR. GARMENT: We filed them under seal.
[9] MS. BELLOWS: We filed them under —
[10] THE COURT: Because mine aren't marked that,
[11] so I have —
[12] MR. GARMENT: In deference to your Honor's —
[13] THE COURT: I assumed that since everyone was [14] talking about things that have come out in the [15] newspaper that there had been plenty of access to [16] these documents. Because how else would anybody
[17] know about this stuff?
[18] MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, we filed them under [19] seal. Judge Bucklo did not accept them under [20] seal; that's as far as the federal court
[21] proceeding.
[22] As far as the filings that we have, I
[23] have submitted a courtesy copy to your Honor this [24] afternoon. We have pursuant to your clerk's

[1] suggestion —
[2] THE COURT: Just brought it here to court.
[3] MS. BELLOWS: — brought it to court, and [4] assume that it will not be filed under seal. But [5] if we have no motion to do so, we would intend to [6] have your Honor — we would intend to file it in [7] the normal course.
[8] But in deference to your Honor and our [9] new place here among you, with an abundance of [10] caution we have provided your Honor with a [11] courtesy copy, counsel with copies by fax, and no
[12] one else.
[13] THE COURT: I am one of the strongest
[14] advocates in this building on the public's right
[15] to know, and anybody who routinely practices here
[16] knows that I virtually never seal anything in this [17] courtroom. And the only time I do it is if I feel [18] that there is a really important reason to have it [19] done.
[20] And in this case the only thing that [21] was sealed is while this case was in mediation. I [22] wanted to give it a chance. And I didn't want the [23] parties or anyone or the attorneys talking to [24] anyone except the mediator about what was going on.

Now, lots of people, as I understand it, have violated that order, and that's another issue that we're going to have to deal with about that. That's a whole separate issue.
But now the mediator has reported. That's one of the reasons I wanted to make sure you all have what the appropriate papers are here. The plaintiffs are saying they don't know what you want to file today, Ms. Bellows, because they don't have the exhibits. So I want to take a few moments and make sure that everybody sees this document, which is being sought to be filed with the clerk of the court not under seal and see if there's any objection and whether it's — whether there is a desire on behalf of anyone to file anything under seal from now on.
The proposed consent decree, that's not supposed to be sealed, is it?
MR. CARLSON: No, it is not.
THE COURT: Am I missing something here?
MR. CARLSON: No, it is not.
THE COURT: When we talked about that one, you all came to me and you wanted to have a certain portion of the mediated settlement not public. And I said you can go ahead and try it, but I'm not signing anything that's not going to be public. And so you went back to the drawing board and talked some more.

MS. STONE: There was one aspect of the consent, proposed consent judgment, that we should draw to your Honor's attention. That the parties who are entering into this proposed consent judgment, assuming your Honor approves it —
THE COURT: This is all they're going to say.
MR. CARLSON: That's correct.
MS. STONE: — have agreed that there is a mutually agreeable statement that will be released to the press. And that is all that people will say. And that will be binding on those who — the parties who are parties to this particular agreement.
THE COURT: That's the Attorney General, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, and the Foundation.
MR. CARLSON: That's correct.
THE COURT: And that's all you're going to say. And this is not binding on the three individual defendants because they haven't bought into it.

MS. STONE: Or Mr. Michaeli.
THE COURT: Oh, Mr. Michaeli. Okay. What I would like to do if we could is, Mr. Hilliard, if you could make available to them whatever copies of the letter that you had, I would assume that I would file this letter with the clerk of the court unless someone has a problem with doing that. But I want you all to see it.
And the proposed consent judgment and order is something I'm going to have to take a little bit of time to at least read more than the 15 minutes that I was allotted today after you spent four months putting it together.
And there is a motion which is seeking an evidentiary hearing and a fairness hearing about this, and you all get to be heard as to — unless you feel that you're barred by the consent decree judgment. You're not, are you?
Okay. I want to hear what you all have to say about their proposed motion and we can go from there. But first let's just see the motion and all the attachments. And as soon as you're ready, please let me know.

(WHEREUPON, a recess was had.)
THE COURT: Anybody have any problem if we file the letter from the mediator?
SEVERAL ATTORNEYS: No, your Honor.
MR. BELLOWS: It is what it is. We have a problem with the content, but the letter itself is what it is.
THE COURT: Okay. Well, I will file that with the clerk of the court.
Has everybody had a chance to see the exhibits that are attached to the individual defendants' motion for leave to file written objections and for an evidentiary hearing?
ATTORNEYS: (Nodding.)
THE COURT: That apparently was what the concern was, that you didn't have the exhibits.
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, may I speak for one moment to the exhibits. The exhibits themselves were simply the original articles of incorporation, the amended articles of incorporation, and a page of the transcript.
But counsel, Mr. Quinlan, has reminded me that also referred to in our motion are portions of the exhibits that were filed with this court that were going to be filed under seal.

Now, frankly, your Honor, there are ce exhibits that were attached to the federal court proceeding and are now filed under seal in connection with our Friday's motion, three exhibits which do have something to do with the mediation process, Exhibits 17, 18, and 19 of those documents attached to our motion for TRO.
Those are letters which involve the mediation process.
Other than those, we do not believe that there is anything else in the exhibit book that your Honor has that should be filed under seal. We would like to then have permission to remove those documents and attach the exhibits as an additional exhibit to our motion today for an objections and evidentiary hearing.
THE COURT: You're talking removing only
Exhibits 17, 18 and 19?
MS. BELLOWS: Yes.
THE COURT: And that would be the things you would be filing today. So what you would file today is this motion for leave to file written objections. Would you also be including that memorandum from Friday or just the exhibits?

MS. BELLOWS: No, your Honor. Just the exhibits.
THE COURT: Just the exhibits with the exception of 17, 18 and 19. Is everybody on board as to what Ms. Bellows is talking about?
MR. BELLOWS: Her husband's not. If I could be heard on this. I thought I understood the Court to say that it did not want to in any way impede the mediation process. As you know, the things that we have been filing with the court have made repeated references to the mediation process.
THE COURT: Well, as of yet, nothing's filed.
You haven't filed anything except an appearance on Friday.
MR. BELLOWS: That doesn't have anything to do with it.
THE COURT: Nothing made it to the clerk's office yet. So nothing — whatever was filed in federal court was filed in federal court. The mediation process, as I'm seeing it, is concluded of the report of the mediator today, is it not?
MR. CARLSON: I think it is, your Honor.

MR. BELLOWS: And then at that point is everything released from seal? Can we feel free to refer to it in arguments before the Court?
THE COURT: That's what I want. I want to have an opportunity to have everyone be heard on that also. Is there any desire to keep any of these documents confidential for purposes of now?
MR. QUINLAN: Which — I'm sorry.
THE COURT: Any documents. The only reason that I wanted the things filed under seal Friday was we were still in the mediation process. And they should have been filed Friday, and if they were filed Friday, they should have been filed under seal.
MR. QUINLAN: I guess the only question I have, your Honor, is if the mediation process has been terminated merely by filing the report of the mediator — are we at that point or — before you consider whether you enact the agreement of the parties pursuant to the mediation. You have not addressed the issue of the resolution that has been adopted by the board.
THE COURT: Well, first of all, I haven't seen the resolution that's been adopted by the board.

MR. QUINLAN: Well, you've seen the consent judgment, which is the —
THE COURT: I've seen the consent decree.
MR. QUINLAN: — which is the result of the resolution.
THE COURT: As I indicated on Friday, I'm going to consider anybody's argument that they may want to present as to whether or not I should sign this consent decree or not. Now, I didn't anticipate an evidentiary hearing. I could possibly see this all being done with affidavits.
It suggests that there's the need for an evidentiary hearing, and that's what I want to talk about today with all of you. Is anybody going to publicly air the entire mediation process, contemplating with your evidentiary hearing calling the mediator as a witness? What are we doing here?
MR. GARMENT: Indeed we do.
MR. BELLOWS: I don't see any way to avoid that, particularly since the mediator has recognized that the mediation could not have succeeded without inter alia the Attorney General.

And I think that that's really the point of it.
My own feeling on this is that we don't necessarily have to take the Court's time in having a hearing as long as we are able to develop — I mean, the affidavits that we get, we can get from third parties and things of that nature by virtue of the people who would not otherwise be able to get them.
I would not be reluctant or opposed to, if the Court gave us an expedited discovery schedule, to taking their depositions and avoid having to drag this thing out in court.
THE COURT: Mr. Bellows, you say that you need to take depositions of people from all over the world on this motion. And are you talking about —
MR. BELLOWS: I don't think so.
THE COURT: Well, that's what you said in this document. You said of the people that would need to be in an evidentiary hearing, witnesses are spread throughout the world. Are you talking about board members or are you talking about people that — similar to these declarations where you're talking about Dan Terra's intent? What are we talking about as a hearing?

MR. BELLOWS: It breaks into two parts, so the answer is yes. It breaks into two parts. The affidavits of declaration from people all over the world, obviously we don't have to depose them.
With regard to the people who were intimately involved in the mediation process itself — and I would think certainly Mr. Hilliard would be one of those persons — we could either call him as a witness if the Court wanted to be involved in the give-and-take of it, or we could take his deposition and several others and just argue from those. The people all over the world, as I say, are people from whom we would get affidavits.
THE COURT: About?
MR. BELLOWS: The various points raised in the — the various points raised in our motion as to the effect of this order on entities wishing to do business in the future in Illinois, not-for-profits most particularly, foundations.
We would also bring in people who would — the Court will recall that part of the — you see, if you don't get me right then and there.

it's gone.
The Court will recall that one of the things that was not done in this very slow rush to judgment was to find out —
THE COURT: What very slow rush to judgment? The mediation process?
MR. BELLOWS: Yes. — was to get alternatives to the arrangement that is proposed in this consent decree. And I think that, for example, and this has been a very large concern of mine, although it's not exclusively.
You've got a major asset here. You've got people on the board, particularly the named plaintiffs, who are used to disposing of assets of substantial size. I have to believe that neither of them, for that matter no one else, would really undertake to make the kind of a decision that had been presented here in the consent decree without considering alternatives.
Now, part of the problem, of course, is that if you start out with the Attorney General of the State of Illinois saying that this entity will remain here, that this will be its focus, that this is where the art will be displayed, that this is where we're going to enter into an arrangement with another entity here in Chicago, I don't know that the board members would even appreciate the fact that it would be in the Foundation's best interest to consider alternatives from places outside of the state. And I think that that is something that the Court's entitled to consider when it determines the fairness of the result of this process.

THE COURT: Now, Mr. Bellows, I don't know how much of an opportunity you all had to discuss the history of the case with your predecessor counsel.
I know from their motion today that their client has stopped communicating with them, and I know that they did not know that you all were going into court on the motion today on Thursday until they read about it in the newspaper.
But we had in this case I would say at least half a dozen sessions with the Court and with counsel from each side to talk about whether or not this case was mediatable, and we had some pretty long sessions about that.

And one of the fiercest proponents for mediation process, one of the most vociferous, "Let's go to mediation," was from your clients' counsel who wanted this case mediated.

Well, right from the very beginning the Attorney General made the statement that they were not going to be participating in any mediated agreement if it meant that this collection would be lost to the state of Illinois. That was up front from day one.

And there were many discussions about that. And that was the ground rule from their perspective pretty much when we — not the ground rule, because I don't mean to say that it was a rule that they were setting, but that was their concern from the very beginning. And there was a full airing of that with the Court about whether or not there should be a mediation to begin with because there are unresolved legal issues here.

And the Attorney General may be right or may be wrong in its view of the law, and the plaintiffs may right or wrong. But there was a substantial concern about the cost of dragging this litigation on for years, and there was a substantial concern about the stakes of not trying to settle this.

But everybody went into the process, as I understand it, with the understanding that the Attorney General was going to have to sign on at the end to this agreement, and in order to sign on to this agreement, there was going to have to be some kind of concession made about Illinois.

That was how it started. So when you say that things were not aired, we all had a number of discussions about where the Foundation was before this lawsuit started and about negotiations with a number of other institutions throughout the country and whether or not this was the right thing or the wrong thing to do to try and settle this case.

And a decision was made by all counsel on behalf of all parties that, yes, let's give this a chance. And this was pretty much the starting point. So I know you're shaking your head yes, but I don't understand. You're gesting that this was something that got hammered in at the last minute. Well, this was

from the very beginning.

MR. BELLOWS: Pardon me for a moment, your Honor. The reason I was nodding is I thought that was the purpose of mediation. People start out with a certain position. The Attorney General started out with a position that some concession had to be made. I don't fault our predecessors in any way for agreeing to the mediation process. That's the first point of it, and the recognition that it is the process itself that is supposed to get people to change their positions. That's the first thing.

The second thing about it is I don't think that anyone really contemplated at the beginning of the process that it could be perverted to the — and that was the word I used in our motion — to the extent that it was. So I think that on two grounds — yes, I appreciate the fact that our predecessors agreed to it. We probably would have for the same reasons that they did.

But to wind up in a position where you're saying, Well, gee, the Attorney General made its views clear at the beginning of the process. Yes, that's why you have this kind of a process, to get them to change their position.

And during that process all kinds of things happen that were not really part of a normal mediation process. You don't have people going outside of this process to attempt to intimidate people. And it is by virtue of the conflicts that arose that there's some very, very severe problems with the validity of any agreement that would be reached.

But when I say, for example, that — and only as an example — that we would want to present the Court with evidence of alternatives of places from without the state, the Court may very well decide, after having heard that evidence or alternatively reading it by way of written submissions, that anyplace that — if it turns out to be, for example, the Art Institute, that that might be a superior way of dealing with this.

A whole bunch of things, Judge, got started with bare allegations, with allegations that we believe have no basis in fact. That Dan Terra, for example, wanted his collection here when the evidence is just the opposite.

And so I think these are things that the Court should understand and appreciate. And if you say, well, gee, there are all these people that have signed on to the result of the mediation, I would say to you, Judge, you know, when you've got the Attorney General of the State of Illinois saying, This is what the law is, this is what the rules are, this is what's going to happen here, you get these participants — I'm beginning to think, well, gee, you know, if that's where this is going to wind up, I mean if it's only going to — if it's going to wind up where the Attorney General is going to be able to keep us here in Illinois so that we can't do other things, then that's what's going to — that's the result. That's what's going to happen as a result of the mediation.

And if, in fact, that had been dispelled at the beginning, if the people who participated in the process understood that they did not have to capitulate on those points, if in fact those people did not have inherent conflicts that precluded them from taking a role in the decisional process, then, your Honor, the will that this — and in accordance with their fiduciary duties that this was in the best interests of the Foundation as they understood it.

Now, Mr. Bellows may disagree that it's in the best interests, Mrs. Terra may disagree, you may disagree, or I may disagree, your Honor. None of that is relevant. The question is whether or not the majority's will of this board will be respected.

And, your Honor, no one ducked the issue of whether or not there was coercion. That was an issue which had been discussed in federal court on Thursday and Friday morning in front of your Honor. And that matter was specifically addressed at the board meeting.

And I would like to read your Honor a portion, a very short portion, from the transcript of the board meeting. Now, this is a rough draft and we haven't had time to refine it, but this is our best understanding of what was said at the board meeting that was taped.

Corporate counsel for the Foundation, Mr. Heatwole, Mark Heatwole of Winston & Strawn, specifically advised all of the directors of their non-majority directors would still have the numerical majority at this point.

THE COURT: Let me hear briefly from each side. Everyone is being very silent here.

MS. STONE: May I speak on behalf of the Foundation, your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. STONE: The Foundation's position is today what it has always been in this case, which is that the board of directors should be able to run the affairs of the Foundation without undue influence from this Court, or quite frankly, from unhappy directors who happen to be in the minority. And that's as true today as it was at the start of the case.

It doesn't matter who the individuals are who may be in the minority. The fact is that a board of directors determines the face of an organization through the majority will.

And here you have a situation where there was a duly constituted, duly called board meeting. A quorum was present. There was vigorous discussion and a vote was held. And 6 to 2, the directors voted, exercising their free need to vote their fiduciary duty.

And he stated: In light of the allegations that have been brought forward in federal court yesterday, to a certain extent I was not there, but I understand that that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County courts this morning, about the coercion that some of the members of this board may feel or may not feel from the action of the Attorney General.

I think it's important for each of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely and that you are voting your fiduciary obligations to this board and this institution and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think we should vote. But if you are voting freely and if you do not feel that compulsion, then I think you are free to vote.

And this is specifically what Stephanie Pace Marshall and Dr. Ted Stebbins said in response to that.

Dr. Marshall: Just in response to what you've just said, Mark, I have felt in the past that despite the desire of some board members over last year or so to try to peg me into an ..ged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked my own path and I have always spoken with my own voice to represent the integrity of my own convictions. And I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities.

It is true that the Attorney General's office has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation.

And then Dr. Stebbins spoke. And it's interesting, your Honor, that in his comments he does criticize the tactics, as I believe he calls them, of the Attorney General. He specifically criticizes the Attorney General, but he says that that is not what is influencing his vote. And he talks about his history throughout this process, about how he has been more of a centrist or someone who is exploring different options. He talks about his history on the board.

I came to the board. I knew Dan Terra. I came to the board at the request of Jim Collins and Judith Terra. I've served as chair of the collections committee and I think I served effectively. And I brought some wonderful new paintings, helped to bring some wonderful new paintings to the Foundation collection.

I've done this without any iota of a conflict of interest. I've always felt free to form my own judgments. And either last August or early September when Paul Tucker first told me about his enthusiasm for the building in Washington and wanting to move there, I disagreed. I long argued to explore a variety of stand-alone options in Chicago. I was willing to consider as part of the strategic planning going elsewhere, but I've always been a defender of Chicago.

And then he goes on: I abhor the ...eatening tactics of the Attorney General, but I am voting my own conscience and for what I believe is the best interest of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago and in France for the promulgation of American art.

So, your Honor, these particular directors clearly and unequivocally stated that they believed they were voting in the best interests of the Foundation and in accordance with their fiduciary duties as they understood it.

I think the board has spoken. It was a 6 to 2 vote, and I think the board process should be respected.

THE COURT: I have one question. I'm going to go on and let the plaintiffs speak in just a moment.

The consent decree which I just received, I have read again during the breaks here. This, as I read it — and tell me if I'm wrong — has a new board, once it's elected, essentially negotiating to partner with another institution in Chicago. It doesn't require it, does it?

MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.

Page 48

THE COURT: So if something can't be worked out, the Terra would be its own separate museum.

MS. STONE: That's absolutely an option for the board.

THE COURT: And there's absolutely nothing in here that restricts the Foundation's ability to continue to run its programs, activities, and operations in Giverny, France?

MS. STONE: That's particularly reserved for the board. The board's ability and freedom to conduct its activities, operations, and programs in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the Illinois Attorney General specifically acknowledges and agrees to.

THE COURT: It can also lend its collection, as it always had, to other museums throughout the United States and continue its educational efforts in other places of the United States.

MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: The only thing that this really is making a difference, as I understand it, is the Foundation can't close up shop and move outside of Illinois permanently. I mean —

MS. STONE: Right. I think —

THE COURT: — there's a number of other changes, new board members —
MS. STONE: — paragraph 5 of the consent judgment and order probably identifies what limitations may exist now with respect to the Foundation's activities for a 50-year period.
THE COURT: For a 50-year period.
MS. BELLOWS: And self-governing, your Honor. Which is one of the things that we would speak to when everyone else has a chance to be heard.
THE COURT: Okay. And this document is the board of the Terra Foundation amending its own bylaws to put some restrictions on its activities that Dan Terra didn't put in there when he set it up.
MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: And any board can do that if it chooses to do that, can it not?
MS. STONE: That's correct, your Honor.
THE COURT: Okay. Let me hear from the plaintiffs and the need for — I really want you also to address whether you have a problem with anything being filed with the clerk of the court at this juncture. I can tell you that what I'm there's no objection to that.

And the problem is that what they present is really a question that they would like to try in front of this Court, which they had the opportunity to try; namely, what was the intent of Mr. Terra and what was the law on these issues, et cetera.
And that's the reason we went into mediation is the parties agreed to set those things aside, put them off the table, and get together to see if we couldn't resolve this dispute in a way that didn't necessarily require addressing what were some concerns and issues on both sides.
And what we had here was an agreement to mediate by all the parties, including the defendant directors. Counsel now would like to come in and say, Let's take a look at what took place. Let's go out and take depositions. Let's depose the people that were there, including the mediator.
As your Honor knows, that would, in fact, destroy and undercut the ability to have any mediation in any case again, which they agreed to.

going to need to do is to read this very carefully. I want the transcript of the board meeting and —
MR. CARLSON: We'll be happy to give you the resolution that was passed.
THE COURT: Right. — and the resolution, the amended bylaws, whatever else that you have from Thursday. But let me hear from Plaintiff. Is it Mr. Quinlan I'm looking at?
MR. QUINLAN: Yes, your Honor. Well, first of all, the issue here is their motion for leave to file objections to this agreement or consent decree.
And the problem is that what you really have here is an agreement. I don't think there's any question — and I don't even think that the defendant directors raise the issue whether there's agreement or the terms of the agreement.
What they tell you is that they don't like the agreement and they don't like the terms of the agreement. But we have a 6 to 2 vote, which is here by the attorneys representing the Foundation who attest to the validity of that. We have the terms which are in front of your Honor;

This was a mediated process, and they were agreeing in that mediation that nothing in the mediation would be used against anybody involved in this, including anything that was ever said in there.
So the mediation statements and the reason for your order barring disclosure of this was that these couldn't be used in court or in any other proceeding against anybody. Again, a commonplace type of procedure in mediation because no one is going to get into the mediation process if, in fact, this is going to be something to be used against them. The same thing as a settlement. This is a settlement process.
Your Honor herself in a settlement process in any case would say, Ladies and gentlemen, you know that nothing said here is going to be anything that can be used one way or the other. People will make statements, compromise their positions, make offers, make proposals that can't be used later on to show that they were willing to at least agree to that or agree to something else, again, because it would never work.

The public policy of the state, the
[2] blic policy of the United States, the public
[3] icy of the United States expressed in the Arbitration Act are that these things are to be encouraged, not discouraged. That's exactly what [6] they would have here. If they want to complain about this agreement, and if they want to complain about this process, they can say it was fraud,
[9] they can say it was duress. They can say those [10] things, but they need evidence of proof that's clear and convincing.
There is nothing proffered anywhere
[13] here that even offers a scintilla of evidence that [14] nobody agreed to this or it wasn't properly agreed to. In fact, the people that they allege that were somehow coerced are not here. They were not [17] in the federal court. They don't file an affidavit. The very people who supposedly were intimidated or hurt not only do not file an [20] affidavit or appear; in fact, they make a [21] statement that their vote has nothing to do with
it. That they were not coerced into making this vote. They make their vote because it's a hard [24] question. And we think on a better analysis here,

Page 54

] it's the right result. And that's what they said.
] The federal district court judge said, Look,
[3] there's nothing unlawful about that.
[4] What we have as a situation is they ] complain about the lawful activity of the Attorney
] General and they complain about the lawful
[7] activity of two directors that are both lawful.
[8] And to somehow say that that is unlawful has in no
] way been demonstrated. And it has not.
] It is indicated here clearly what we
[11] have is a party who has agreed because they didn't [12] prevail. Their views didn't win out. But it was [13] one of those compromise decisions, and they were
[14] subject to the same requirements as everybody
[15] else. They were part of the board, and the board
[16] chose to do this.
[17] THE COURT: Are you saying that you're
[18] objecting to them filing a motion?
[19] MR. QUINLAN: I see no basis for it, your [20] Honor. There is no proper tactic here. What
[21] they're asking in that motion is to come forward
[22] with evidence that is totally irrelevant to
[23] hether or not there was an agreement or whether [24] not the terms were agreed to. That's what it's

Page 55

[1] about.
[2] And if they want to say this was a
[3] coerced type of thing, it requires clear and
[4] convincing evidence. And that's after they admit
[5] there's an agreement; you must have to set it
[6] aside. There is no evidence of that at all. At [7] all. All they have is affidavits of third
[8] parties, affidavits of an individual, Mr. Tucker,
[9] who himself can't testify to what these people
[10] feel or don't feel.
[11] He said, I think they were coerced.
[12] They just told us they weren't. And in fact the [13] federal court couldn't see any basis to this.
[14] Nothing's new. They filed the same things in the [15] federal court. So there's nothing here in front
[16] of your Honor to warrant any kind of allowing them
[17] to file these matters or to be heard.
[18] These are things that they are just
[19] dissatisfied with. Well, they're dissatisfied
[20] with a lot of things. Frankly, we're dissatisfied
[21] with a lot of things.
[22] THE COURT: Do you believe that it would be
[23] different if they came forward with a motion that [24] was seeking to have the Court not approve the

Page 56

[1] settlement because it was not a settlement, not
[2] agreed to, something wrong?
[3] MR. QUINLAN: They showed that it had not
[4] been agreed or not settled to, and there was
[5] substantial evidence — that is what the Illinois
[6] law requires is substantial evidence. It might
[7] require a hearing. But there's no substantial
[8] evidence of this. In fact, it's admitted.
[9] THE COURT: What about an argument that
[10] perhaps there's something illegal about this
[11] settlement? I know there were some statements
[12] made about that the other day, but I don't really
[13] see that necessarily here in terms of something —
[14] cases that are cited that says that there's some [15] provision of this agreement that is contrary to [16] Illinois law.
[17] MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you notice in their
[18] pleading that they have filed — actually it's a
[19] pleading, there's no complaint on file. There's [20] actually nothing in front of your Honor other than [21] a request to file a motion. So that there's no
[22] request to file a pleading. There's nothing that [23] brings this case in front of the Court other than [24] their motion.

And, your Honor, if the illegality of this — I don't see any evidence of anything that's illegal. There's nothing here that radically changes the bylaws and says anything that's dramatic. We can never do "X" or we can never do "Y," or we immediately agree that we changed the law, the body of the law of Illinois, or whatever it might be. They're organized under the laws of the State of Illinois.

As any corporation, the laws of the state in which you are organized under are the laws that apply. They are organized under this state, and they are venued here in Illinois. Can they change it? Well, they have to look to the law of Illinois. That's where they chose to come and where they chose to do it. But they make no allegations in any way that this is wrong, illegal, or we're doing anything improper here in this particular consent decree.

All we're doing is articulating some things. That is the extent of the — to change the number of directors, to agree to do something for a period of time. That does not in any way bind them to anything else. They have voluntarily agreed to do certain things. Other parties have voluntarily agreed not to do things which enabled us to go forward. So there is nothing here in terms of the law that is set forward. There's nothing that would contest that. There's nothing illegal. And if they did that, they'd have to do it by some motion as set forth, some basis for an illegal act of the body.

But this was mediation. There is nothing illegal about mediation, there is nothing illegal about the topics, there is nothing illegal about what was being done. As counsel for the Foundation pointed out, this is what's done all the time. This is a typical type of thing a board would consider. It's a typical type of thing going forward that you'd look at. A decree, a mediation, a resolution of this. Boards across the world consider these type of things all the time.

And for counsel to come in here and suggest at the eleventh hour that there is something strange that's going on here and to suggest deposing the mediator, I think is just outlandish, your Honor. There is absolutely no basis for that. You know, the whole point here, they talk about stuff that's outside the state. We can take all of these depositions of people around the world. I don't know what they can add. I really don't. And I don't see how they can add anything to it, other than to say they have opinions about what might happen, et cetera.

I also would ask that even the documents that have been filed by architects and others and real estate brokers, all they talk about is what somebody might have wanted to do about renting property, of using property, et cetera.

As we all know from anything to dealing with the states, a lot of people met and intended to do a lot of things that they never got around to doing. And it didn't happen. Nobody changed the location of the Foundation from Illinois. Nobody changed the bylaws, nobody moved.

It was a question of what everybody was thinking. Everybody was looking for a better place and a better forum for the Terra Museum. And they had talked about that before, which all the parties admit. Can we find a better place in

Chicago? How can we move this? How can we move around to get this out and get a better exposure?

And these are the things that were mediated, and these were the things that were resolved. So to suggest now that we could come in and just raise it at the eleventh hour — they say they never knew about the intent of the Attorney General. They never realized this is what he wanted.

They knew from the very beginning, your Honor. They knew throughout this. These were things that if they wanted to raise to you, if they wanted to object, they could have done so. They agreed and they entered into the order to fully participate in this mediation and never withdrew that until they came in at the eleventh hour and attempted to file these pleadings in federal court.

THE COURT: No, they gave directions to their counsel to stop participating in meetings.

MR. QUINLAN: On the 4th of June. So we're talking about something that never took place at this time. And of course we have contrary affidavits that could attest to just the contrary intent. That was the issue that would need to be d and need to be resolved. But that wasn't ly part of the mediation. The approach of mediation is to remove the issues of which people are in contest about and to seek those things that you are in agreement about. And that's how you resolve it.

Page 61

THE COURT: Mr. Quinlan, have you ever heard of a situation where there's been a court-ordered mediation, and then everybody comes in and puts the mediator on the stand and has all the mediation completely aired? Have you all been able to find any cases where that's been done?
MR. QUINLAN: No, your Honor.
THE COURT: How about you all? Have you ever been able to —
MR. BELLOWS: I haven't researched it, your Honor, but I would say in that regard that certainly the Court's entitled to go beyond — behind any settlement to determine whether it was obtained by fraud.
If the Court feels that Mr. Hilliard is, by virtue of his appointment, sacrosanct in these proceedings — I'm not saying that in the

Page 62

pejorative — then I could understand that. I could even sympathize with it. But that does not mean in and of itself that the Court's not entitled to some of the other information that can be obtained from this hearing. I've heard all kinds of things, your Honor. Well, you know, there's really nothing fundamentally changed here.
Nothing fundamentally changed here.
THE COURT: Well, there's a lot that's changed. There is no issue that there is a lot that has changed. One of the most significant things and, quite frankly, one of the things that surprised me the most is this board agreed that the entire board was going to resign. When I read that, I was very surprised. But that's what was decided and voted on by the majority. I didn't expect that to come out of this.
MR. BELLOWS: Well, I'd like to speak to whether it was voted on by the majority. First of all, as the Court has heard from Mr. Hilliard, at the very beginning of this session today,
Mr. Hilliard said the vote was taken on June 19.
as ratified on June 29th. That's what
Mr. Hilliard said.

Page 63

THE COURT: Well, perhaps it wasn't —
MR. BELLOWS: I don't know whether you agree with it or don't agree with it, but what I'm saying is that on June the 19th it was a 6 to 5
vote.
THE COURT: Well, it wasn't a vote of the board because there was no board meeting. It was a mediation session on June 19th. The board did not meet till Friday.
MR. BELLOWS: Your Honor, I think, you know, that Mr. Hilliard was certainly capable of articulating what it was. His position was that it was ratified. I don't really care, your Honor,
if it was unanimous.
I still think, your Honor,
notwithstanding the statement of counsel, that it doesn't matter what the Court believes. That's insane. This Court is here to determine questions of this nature. Is this corporation acting pursuant to its charter, to its bylaws, and just going out and changing the charter and the bylaws?
If that action of changing the charter and the bylaws is inappropriate, if the vote could change
the charter and the bylaws it participated in by

Page 64

people who should not have been voting, should not have been voting. And to sit here and say, I haven't been coerced.
But, you know, the interesting thing about it, Judge, is that these statements were made in the context of all this pressure has been applied to me, but I'm voting my conscience.
That's the very point of this thing.
It doesn't make any difference whether people felt that they were being coerced; they had something to lose by not making that vote. And what they had to lose, your Honor, was something that didn't have anything to do with the business of the Foundation. It was personal, their personal exposure. And as a result of that, your Honor, they should not have participated in the vote.
THE COURT: Who should not have participated?
MR. BELLOWS: I'm talking about the two people who made the statement that they weren't being coerced even though — it's semicolon —
however, I think that what the Attorney General has done as far as attempting to coerce me, I think is terrible. I'm voting this way of my own conscience but I think it's terrible that he attempted to coerce me.

I think that the point of it, Judge, is they should not have participated in that vote by virtue of the fact that they had an inherent conflict between being threatened personally and participating in the vote on the Foundation.
Counsel has also indicated we're going to be taking depositions around the world. I said just the opposite. That the people from around the world are people whose affidavits we can get fully and freely.
But with regard to the evidence I think that the Court should hear is the same evidence that it would hear in determining whether a settlement agreement had been procured by inappropriate means, by coercion, by fraud, by any of those things.
And I think that the Court has the responsibility, Judge, notwithstanding the fact that there has been this mediation process, to objectively review the result, notwithstanding the vote.
THE COURT: Are you suggesting that I interview those two board members to find out

Illinois the enforcement of the laws and the regulations and the proper conduct of foundations, which the citizens of Illinois are entitled to, but more to the point to enforce an intent which was not proven by any evidentiary proceeding before your Honor.
So we have the pre-mediation. We have what happened during the mediation, and counsel — Mr. Quinlan — has — and we strongly agree that evidence and proof are what are needed in this instance.
The acts which took place to which Dr. Stebbins referred, the threatening — these are not my words, counsel read them — threatening tactics of the Attorney General, the only attorney seated throughout that mediation process. When somebody states that in the same sentence that they indicate the incredible importance of the preservation of their credibility, and in the next sentence says, And I abhor the threatening tactics, but I agree of my own free will, I believe it is the Court's duty to question what that meant.
Now, you could bring Dr. Stebbins and whether or not they were coerced?

MR. BELLOWS: That's not the issue.
THE COURT: Have you even spoken to either of them to — I have no affidavits from them. I have absolutely nothing to suggest —
MS. BELLOWS: Your Honor, if I may. We see this — and I will answer your questions directly. But we see this in two large categories at least. We see the acts that led up to the mediation process. I should say three categories; the acts which led to the mediation process to which all agreed, the decision to mediate.
But those acts involved misrepresentations to this Court which led this Court to grant a motion for intervention on the Attorney General's behalf to begin with. And those misrepresentations, it is our position, involved the intent of Dan Terra to keep the museum in Illinois.
But for that representation and the decision of this Court to give the Attorney General access to the mediation process, not so much to protect the citizens of Illinois from the — not so much to assure the citizens of

Dr. Marshall into this court and question them under oath, but it is the essence of intimidation; the better the intimidation, the less this Court will hear that they voted for anything other than by their own free will. The more successful the intimidator, the less likely the intimidatee to come forward and say, You're right, your Honor, I was intimidated. I felt I would lose 90 percent of my funding which I receive from the State of Illinois — in Dr. Stebbins' position — and perhaps be subject to continued inquiry by the Attorney General, which Dr. Marshall said right in the same sentence, probably a semicolon.
Yes, of my own free will, but I would like to acknowledge that the Attorney General has come into my academy and is in the process of making inquiries. The very same office of the Attorney General that is seated at the mediation, your Honor.
Those to me are the beginnings of pretty substantial evidence and proof that there is something wrong with the free discussion that should be taking place in the mediation.
And then I have my third category if you'll permit me, your Honor. And that third category is, is the agreement that was reached something that the Court should in fact sign, agree to, consent to? And for a number of reasons the answer is no.

Let's start with a simple one, the power of negotiation. One of the provisions that your Honor asked Mr. Quinlan and Ms. Stone about earlier was, is it a fact that as part of this order that I just — I saw a few minutes ago, so I'm absorbing it as we go.

But is it a fact that one of the provisions of this order is that the Terra Foundation will be asked to negotiate with some — perhaps somebody could help me with the exact wording — but some entity as to the future of the collection?

Now, the only entity in this city, the one that we regard very, very highly, but the only entity that I know of, your Honor, that would be a likely candidate to accept this collection, would be the Art Institute of Chicago. Putting aside for the moment that our esteemed mediator is in fact a well-known lover and board member committed to the Art Institute — and when this came up, frankly, I have to say might well have considered when the word "art" came slashed with "institute" that perhaps as far as the appearance of a fair and open discussion might have suggested that another mediator come forward.

THE COURT: This was also very fully discussed with all of the parties before the mediator was selected, and everybody agreed, including Mr. Crowe. And no mediator was even considered unless we had agreement. And Mr. Hilliard's association with the Art Institute was disclosed from day one.

MS. BELLOWS: Absolutely, your Honor. I think that Mr. Hilliard's resume is well known to everyone in the city of Chicago and his lack of bias generally accepted. However, combine that with the tactics of the Attorney General to which Mr. Hilliard could never have assumed.

I don't think that Mr. Hilliard would ever have anticipated that right smack dab toward the end of his mediation process would the Attorney General choose that time to file an inquiry directed at one of the participants in the mediation, specifically Dr. Marshall.

What curious timing that at the end of May, as the mediation is coming to a close, the people who have the control over the timing of that inquiry would choose to file an inquiry as opposed to two or three weeks later.

Putting that aside — not totally aside — but moving back to the power of negotiation, how difficult it is, what common sense it is, to understand that no entity has the ability to negotiate if there is only one side negotiating. If there is nothing — no other entity in the city of Chicago able to accept this collection — and they are being directed only to negotiate with an art entity for partnership in the city of Chicago, limited to that —

THE COURT: I don't read that the Art Institute is the only entity. There were lots of discussions in this mediation process. You're just assuming the Art Institute.

MS. BELLOWS: No, I am assuming the Art Institute because of the phrasing of the consent judgment, your Honor.

THE COURT: Which paragraph?

MS. BELLOWS: If somebody could help me find it, I would.

MR. CARLSON: It's paragraph 11, your Honor, right at the end. Not to interrupt counsel in her argument, but the words there are "Chicago metropolitan area." I was involved in the drafting of the order, and it was intended to allow the corporation to talk with Northwestern University. I don't know how far the Chicago metropolitan area extends, but it was designed to be much broader than just the city of Chicago.

MS. BELLOWS: To that point, your Honor, the only entity of the caliber that would accept this collection in the metropolitan area of the city of Chicago is undeniably the Art Institute.

If I am incorrect, then again I submit that evidence and proof would be a discussion for what other entities the Terra Foundation's board would have the ability to negotiate freely so that they could determine the simple items, such as what commitment will an institution make to the Terra collection when it arrives. In what way will it be displayed and as a whole or piecemeal? What kind of money will they spend to ensure that it is properly marketed and that it is properly — that the public not only in the city of Chicago and state of Illinois, but according to Dan Terra's intent, the global public and certainly the national public would have the opportunity.

The type of institute that if your Honor probably in her discussions relating to would be the Corcoran Museum or the National Gallery or the Philadelphia Art Museum. There are a number of museums of the caliber of the Art Institute, those in Chicago. And I would say none compare. Nonetheless, there was no beauty contest.

And this agreement forecloses the free and powerful negotiation of the kind of agreement that would be undeniably part of any situation where you would put a collection out to bid, so to speak. It is to me so much a matter of common sense that that small sentence should be read very carefully by this Court as it recognizes whether or not this Court should sign this agreement.

Let me speak to self-governance. I cannot say at this moment what the composition of the major boards of significant foundations are in

But the question is, if the Attorney General of the state of Illinois now comes into a private foundation without proof of wrongdoing in any way and takes over the governance of the foundation to the extent that they're able to negotiate an agreement which names the parties on the board, requires the Attorney General to have approval as to where the Attorney General's office — not the board, the board has given up its right to self-governance — to require the Attorney General to say yea or nay as to whether this organization can stay in the state of Illinois in the future.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, may I respond very briefly?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. STONE: I have four points. First, let me correct a misimpression about my earlier statement. Of course, what the Court thinks about the validity of the settlement —

THE COURT: Oh, I didn't take offense at that at all. But —

MS. STONE: My point is an important —

THE COURT: — I agree with — the Chicago area, much less the United States at this moment. Evidence and proof will show that.

I suspect, your Honor, that it will be hard to show foundations of this character who are precluded from choosing — or who are precluded from choosing board members who are not — a majority of whom are not members of the citizens of the state of Illinois.

I would submit, your Honor, though without evidence today, and that's one of the reasons we would like to go forward with this hearing, that the Field Museum, that the Art Institute itself perhaps, that the Museum of Contemporary Art, and the Science and Industry Museum, and the Aquarium do not have in their bylaws a governance position where they are required to have a majority of their members from the State of Illinois.

THE COURT: Is there anything illegal about that?

MS. BELLOWS: Is it illegal? It is certainly overreaching, and it might — I would hope that counsel for the Foundation wouldn't draft something that they thought was illegal.

MS. STONE: — board should run the organization.

THE COURT: Right. As long as they're doing it properly.

MS. STONE: Right. And the point is that your Honor cannot substitute her business judgment; none of us can substitute our business judgment or the business judgment of the directors of the Foundation. That's point one, and that was all I intended, your Honor.

Number two, as your Honor pointed out, a corporation can through the majority of its directors, decide to actually limit its powers by voting amendments to its bylaws. And we do believe, your Honor, that what the board has agreed to is indeed a further restriction of its powers far beyond what existed when this case was first filed.

The Foundation has never agreed with the very crabbed and limited and, quite frankly, far-fetched interpretation that the plaintiffs in the AG had of the bylaws that were in existence at the time this case was filed.

At the time this case was filed, this

Foundation was free to operate outside of [2] Illinois. However, the board of directors, [3] exercising its business judgment, has agreed to this agreement, this settlement, that does contemplate certain restrictions for [6] 50 years.
The third point, your Honor — and included within that restriction is also the [9] residency requirement. Again, Ms. Bellows points [10] out that this is somewhat unusual. It may be, your Honor, but it is what the board of directors exercising their business judgment has decided to [13] do.
The third point, your Honor, is that the Court should not, and counsel in their zeal [16] should not, impose further restrictions upon the [17] board and the board has agreed. The board has not agreed to partner with the Art Institute. That should be very clear.
[20] All the board has done is to set up a strategic planning committee with certain directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership [23] with another Chicago metropolitan area institution
[24] with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago. There is no guarantee it's going to be the Art Institute, there's no guarantee it's going to be with anyone. And that should be abundantly clear to this Court, and that should be understood by everyone. That was the deal that was struck. An attempt to arrange a forced marriage with the Art Institute was not the end result of the mediation process.

Page 78

And then the final point, your Honor, has to do with the comments of Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins at the board meeting. I believe it was Ms. Bellows, and perhaps Mr. Bellows as well, who made the point that you can't really trust what these directors are saying because they are so intimidated that they're not going to 'fess up to the fact that they're being coerced.
I think that, your Honor, you need to look at the totality of what they said.
[19] Dr. Marshall readily admitted to the fact-finding investigation, and Dr. Stebbins took specific pointed issue with the tactics — his words — [22] used by the Attorney General.
I think that sort of vigorous attack on the Attorney General shows that, in fact, he was

Page 79

[1] not cowed, he was not silenced. He felt that he
[2] could indeed express his free will and point out
[3] that he did not appreciate the way the Attorney
[4] General has conducted himself during this [5] litigation and during the mediation, but that [6] nevertheless, for all of the reasons he [7] articulated, for all the reasons he thought it was [8] important to remain in Chicago, he thought this [9] was the best outcome for the Foundation.
[10] Again, it's not what I think, it's not [11] what anyone else thinks. It's what Dr. Stebbins, [12] Dr. Marshall, and the four other people who voted [13] for this think. We had a vote, it was 6 to 2.
[14] This is what the board wants to do.
[15] MR. TODD: Your Honor —
[16] THE COURT: One second. Very briefly, I'm [17] just about to wrap this up. But I realize I [18] haven't heard from the Attorney General, but I'm [19] even going to hold off on doing that unless [20] Mr. Perkins strongly objects.
[21] But go ahead.
[22] MR. TODD: Your Honor, may I just reply to [23] the issue of coercion and the fact that [24] Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have both apparently

Page 80

[1] said that they were not coerced; this was of their
[2] free will.
[3] It is rare, indeed exceedingly rare,
[4] that one who has been the victim of coercion,
[5] particularly coercion by a state and a state
[6] prosecutor then says, after having been victimized
[7] in that sense and their free will been taken away
[8] from them and they're both corrupted and deluded,
[9] then to come in and say, And by the way,
[10] effectively I didn't have the moral courage to [11] stand up to the pressures that brought to bear on [12] me by the Attorney General of the State of [13] Illinois.
[14] You, I submit, are not going to hear in [15] either sworn testimony or through affidavits or [16] declarations Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall saying [17] that. That brings us to the fact that that is a [18] fact issue for this Court, as are many issues that [19] we have raised in the pleadings, fact issues for [20] the Court.
[21] For example, the Attorney General
[22] injected himself into this case in what I submit [23] was merely a misrepresentation to the Court that, [24] namely, that Dan Terra wanted this Foundation to remain here in Chicago or in Illinois. The overwhelming evidence is to the contrary.

Let me just show you, hand up to the Court, this is a change of address that Dan Terra —
THE COURT: I've seen that document, yes.
MR. TODD: Well, I submit to you, your Honor, that Mr. Quinlan argues that there's no evidence on these fact issues. There is already substantial evidence on each one of the fact issues on coercion, the fact that this vote that occurred last Friday was, as a matter of law, under Illinois law, a nullity.
It was unlawful, and therefore the purported change in the bylaws is also unlawful. It requires six people on that board to vote in favor of a change in bylaws, i.e. the settlement.
That didn't happen if Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins were coerced. And that's the evidence that we merely want an opportunity to present to the Court.
THE COURT: And how are you going to develop that further than what you have? You have the two individuals who have said, We are not coerced.

Certainly deposing a mediator isn't going to get you anything on the coercion issue. So what are you talking about as far as proceeding on coercion?
MR. TODD: For one thing, we have heard from Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins — apparently, we only have it secondhand — of what their position was at the board meeting. We haven't gotten sworn testimony and/or a declaration from them that, Yes, indeed, that is my position. That's what happened.
We also haven't examined the circumstances surrounding how they purportedly came from a position of opposing such a settlement which had such a draconian difference in the intent of Dan Terra to one of, Okay, lock it up in Illinois, we're switching gears.
Okay. Take all the board members that are here now and change them completely and make sure that the Attorney General — make sure that only people — that a majority are from the state of Illinois. That I submit to you, the force of the common sense of the difference between the original position and their position last Friday

MR. BELLOWS: It doesn't matter, Judge.
THE COURT: Well, what else are you going to do? What are you planning to do?
MR. BELLOWS: I think it's important for the Court to understand what kind of power was brought to bear against them, okay? And then the Court will determine whether there was a conflict. Whether the person acknowledges it, understands it, appreciates what happened, there is a purpose that is contrary —
THE COURT: But how are you going to present —
MR. BELLOWS: — to the purpose of the Foundation. A fiduciary cannot serve the Foundation if he or she has a personal interest that is 180 degrees opposed to their responsibility as a fiduciary. Counsel —
THE COURT: I understand that. I'm trying to figure out. You've got two people saying, We were not coerced. Most of the affidavits, declarations, things you've given me, have nothing to do with that issue; they have to do with Dan Terra's intent.
I'm talking about the coercion issue.

despite the fact that they say, Well, the Attorney General's threats to me, which I abhor, didn't have anything to do with it, is a fact issue for this Court. And the circumstances around the change have to be aired and have to be aired publicly in this proceeding.
Secondly, we have proof or we develop proof about what the Attorney General did and when he did it and why he did it. And the proof before the Court right now is, that yes, mediation originally was agreed to, but it became clear to the Attorney General during that mediation that he may not or did not have the votes to force through a lockup in Illinois. And then, and only then, do we see the intimidation that was brought to bear against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.
And then, again, as I say, a change in, I would submit, heart and mind, at least objectively — but I submit it was only a change in what these people did, not in their hearts, and it was not a change in their mind; that was of their own free will. And that's what makes this vote unlawful.
MS. BELLOWS: On what basis, for instance, did the Attorney General commence its inquiry against the Academy?

THE COURT: Has anybody spoken to the Attorney General? Have you all even talked to Mr. Perkins about any of this?

MS. BELLOWS: Mr. Perkins, remember, was in Canada last week.

THE COURT: Well, he's back now, and you've been making an awful lot of very serious allegations. And I don't know whether you've even — as far as I know, and I know nothing about this — they have been contemplating some action of what — against this Academy or thinking about looking into whatever they were looking into — and I don't know even know what they've done — for quite sometime.

You know, you've come into court and you've filed a number of things, and they sound very, very dramatic. But I don't see anything here supported by affidavit. I don't see anything here supportive of any substance. You've got lots of affidavits about Dan Terra's intent. That's how this whole lawsuit started out.

And I rejected James Terra from coming into this case and said he couldn't because we were going to go to mediation. And I was going to let him come in in the event mediation didn't work out, and we were going to talk about Dan Terra's intent. Maybe.

And there were some other issues in this case, much, much — equally as significant as Mr. Terra's intent. And that was the plaintiff and the Attorney General's verified pleadings about waste and mismanagement here. Those issues were very much the subject of the mediation also. So there were — everything ended up going in and being talked about in this mediation —

MR. BELLOWS: But not business judgment, your Honor. Ms. Stone is sitting there saying the board was exercising its business judgment. Your Honor, of all of the numbered paragraphs, fourteen numbered paragraphs, with the exception of the jurisdictional statement, what business judgment, what did the Terra Foundation get for the agreement for a 50-year lockup? What did it get for agreeing that the Foundation conduct its affairs in accordance with the wishes of the Attorney General? What did it get for at least 50 years that the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra collection of American art either by itself or through partnerships with institutions in the Chicago area?

THE COURT: Mr. Bellows, I don't want to speak right now to the Foundation's — the board members who voted, but it seems obvious to me that what this foundation may get from an approval of this mediation is the ability to move on and the ability to keep an important collection together to avoid what is starting out very slowly, but would go years before this litigation would be done.

There are issues right now of this board not even being able to meet, not even being able to have an executive committee meeting, not even being able to go on with its business. There's a lot that it would have gotten.

But this is what I need to do based on the pleadings that I have right now. And I realize that I haven't even asked the Attorney General to speak.

So I don't think anybody's spoken to you, and I don't think it's fair for you to have to defend yourself without them even having spoken to you about this first.

I need a motion to approve the consent decree because I don't have that. I have a one-page letter from the mediator, and I have a proposed consent decree. And attached to that motion I need the copies of whatever the bylaw changes were and the transcript.

And I'm going to allow any party to this case to file a written objection supported by affidavits as to why the consent decree should not be approved. However, the issues are coercion and illegality and those issues only.

I do not want to hear anything more about intent of the original founder or anything about any of these affidavits from people all over the world and change of address and all of that. That is not before the Court on this motion to approve the consent decree, so the defendants do not have leave to file these objections.

So this motion for leave to file these objections is going to be denied. Let's get the proposed consent decree. Let's get the attachments to it, whatever is to be read. When you get those, by all means, Mr. Perkins isn't under any kind of a gag order.

Are you willing to speak to counsel for the defendants about this?
MR. PERKINS: I'll be glad to, Judge.
MS. BELLOWS: About the investigation that's taking place against himself?
MR. PERKINS: To the extent I can, Judge, I'll be glad to share some information. However, that's a private person who has a right to be protected.
THE COURT: I understand.
MR. PERKINS: And these people perhaps have no basis or they obviously have no knowledge about what's going on. So we'll get to that. But I'll be glad to answer some questions.
THE COURT: Okay. And then the other thing that I just want to make sure. I want to make it absolutely clear, we are not at any time in this proceeding deposing the mediator in this case.
And as of right now, the documents that were granted leave to be filed under seal on Friday, they're going to stay that way for now. You don't have leave to file these documents today implications to fasten the property here in the state of Illinois, make no suggestion that it would not be properly administered in the state of Illinois. But it is a taking of property of a very serious order involving acts, undeniable acts on the part of the Attorney General's Office at the time that the question of the exercise of discretion was being considered by the crucial parties —

THE COURT: I'm sorry, counsel, you're saying "undeniable act." We haven't even let him talk.
MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just finish? We are entitled as a matter of law to take testimony to have people testify about the circumstances in which this dramatic shift, which spells the extinction of a long-standing foundation, which destroys its ability to operate freely, which sends a message to the world that if you bring a foundation to Illinois, you are subject to the intervention of the Attorney General to fasten those assets in the state of Illinois on pretext. And so far it's all pretext.
There has not been an evidentiary hearing with respect to the central issues since because let's get their motion. I think it would be very, very helpful before you file a motion objecting to what went on Friday, you really knew what went on Friday. So why don't you get the transcript because I assume that hasn't been made available to any one of —

MS. STONE: No, it's not. We only have a very rough draft, your Honor.
MR. GARMENT: We have heard the tape recording of it. I mean, it was recorded.
Your Honor, may I just say this. The Attorney General said he does not want to get into the matter of something involving a private person. I think your Honor is right, that issues such as Dan Terra's intent are secondary to what is the central issue in this case. And that is whether or not crucial votes were obtained by the improper intervention by the Attorney General.
We are entitled to examine the Attorney General representative and the persons who were involved in the initiation under these more than coincidental circumstances in the switch of the crucial votes that turned this Foundation from one level of management to another. With all of its

the beginning of this case nor has the public through the press been empowered to make its own judgments about what is going on in this case.
THE COURT: This entire record with the exception of the mediation has been fully open to the press and —
MR. GARMENT: But the mediation is the heart of the problem. The mediation has been infected by the actions of the Attorney General. That is our allegation, and we are entitled to have a day in court to prove it.
THE COURT: And I'm not saying that you may or you may not have a day in court. I'm saying you need to have a verified pleading directed to these issues before the Court. And once I see a verified pleading directed to the issues of intimidation from the Attorney General, it will determine whether or not there needs to be some additional discovery regarding those allegations.
But that's not this document. I don't have any affidavits in this document. I don't have anything from anybody that suggests that the Attorney General has exercised pressure. I have a hearsay affidavit that was attached or a declaration that was attached in a federal court

[2] paper from the defendant Tucker. And I think
[3] that's essentially it.
MR. GARMENT: We may ask the Attorney General who is here whether or not these proceedings were [6] started and that draft complaint circulated under [7] the circumstances —
MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor —
[9] MR. GARMENT: — contained in our pleading.
[10] MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we object. This maligning of the Attorney General —
THE COURT: Okay. Rather than ask him —
[13] MR. QUINLAN: — without any basis whatsoever [14] is really outlandish. And, first of —
THE COURT: Slow down.
[16] MR. QUINLAN: — all, those documents —
[17] THE COURT: I said slow down. She didn't get that and you want this in the transcript. Slow down.
[20] MR. QUINLAN: The documents that he's talking [21] about and the contentions he's talking about were found to be lawful acts by the federal court and also were the changing of the vote found to be [24] lawful acts.

Page 94

MR. GARMENT: Not right.
MR. QUINLAN: I don't know what the burden of [3] proof is elsewhere, your Honor, but the burden of [4] proof here is on Mr. Garment, not on the Attorney General to disavow something. We're talking about a McCarthy type of proceeding here. We come and [7] make an accusation and the Attorney General is [8] supposed to now come up and disavow himself of doing anything wrong in his life.
THE COURT: The Attorney — just one [11] second —
MR. GARMENT: It is not an accusation. Your Honor, it is —
[14] THE COURT: Counsel. The Attorney General —
[15] MR. GARMENT: — not an accusation. It is an admission on the part of the Attorney General —
THE COURT: You can stop the transcript if [18] you want. She's not taking any of that down.
[19] There have been some very serious allegations lodged against the Attorney General in this case. These documents were filed in federal [22] court presumably on Thursday when Mr. Perkins
[23] wasn't even in the country. He has not had an opportunity because you all have not even talked

Page 95

[1] to him about any of this. And he does not have to [2] defend himself in any way today in front of this
[3] Court based on the status of what I have in front
[4] of me. Because right now there's nothing in front
[5] of me verified to defend.
[6] You will have an opportunity to file
[7] something. Once they file — and that means the [8] Foundation — a petition to approve the consent
[9] decree, the only thing I need to talk to you about [10] is the scheduling of this. I'm only here for a [11] couple of weeks. How long will it take the [12] Foundation to make the motion for me to approve [13] the consent decree?
[14] MS. STONE: Your Honor, in order to — the [15] mechanics, in order to file that motion, we need [16] the original signatures from Messrs. Buntrock and [17] Gidwitz and the Attorney General before anyone [18] from the Foundation is authorized to sign. That [19] is what the resolution states.
[20] So I see that the mediator, I think,
[21] tried to kind of cut to the chase in terms of what [22] he submitted to you, and he has something that [23] purports to be Stephanie Pace Marshall's signature
[24] on it. That's not actually accurate as a matter

Page 96

[1] of corporate law. She's not actually empowered to [2] sign it yet until we have the signatures from all
[3] three of the other signing parties.
[4] THE COURT: Is that going to be a big deal?
[5] Can we just get their signatures?
[6] MS. STONE: We have a clean form here. We
[7] could get — well, I think we need Mr. Buntrock's
[8] and Mr. Gidwitz's signatures.
[9] MR. CARLSON: Would it be faxed around to [10] counsel for all of the parties this morning, your [11] Honor? Or — yes, a copy of the consent judgment, [12] the decree. And if we get signatures, we can have [13] it on file Friday, Monday, whenever it's — [14] THE COURT: So by Friday perhaps can you get [15] on file a petition to approve the consent decree
[16] with the transcript and everything ready?
[17] MS. STONE: Yes, your Honor.
[18] THE COURT: Okay. And then I assume —
[19] MS. STONE: Assuming we get the signatures.
[20] THE COURT: And I assume that the only [21] parties that want to file any objections to this [22] are the defendants. And when — I don't know who [23] to look to because there have been so many of you.
[24] When do you wish to file objections to the proposed consent degree?

MR. BELLOWS: 21 days.
THE COURT: 21? I leave on July 27th. And I would like to have a chance to decide whether or not there's going to be any kind of discovery or evidentiary proceeding here because I would expect that you would do that while — perhaps while I was gone.
This consent decree provides for the new board to take over and for everything to be done by August 1st. And I'm willing to expedite this as much as I need to in order to get this done.
MR. BELLOWS: Are you ordering the Attorney General to submit himself — or the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Perkins, to submit himself to interrogation by us.
THE COURT: I am not ordering the Attorney General, based on what I have in front of me, to do anything. But he has indicated to you that he is willing to talk to you, and I think a good starting point is to talk to him first. He is a public official. He will not compromise any ongoing investigation, but I would expect that he will cooperate with you as fully as he can and answer any concerns you have.

MR. BELLOWS: You have that on the record. Not your statements, his statement.
THE COURT: Well, I have no doubt that Mr. Perkins is going to cooperate and answer whatever questions you have without compromising ongoing investigations.
MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.
THE COURT: Now, can you within a week of — I mean, this isn't any big surprise here. You know what they're going to file. Within a week can you file some type of a verified document to see whether or not we even need to have —
MR. TODD: Your Honor, may we have two weeks for this reason? I'm scheduled to leave on Thursday for a long, planned trip, a business trip, where I'm going to be meeting with over 200 of my clients in the Mideast, and it would be extremely difficult for me to change that. I will be back here July 12th, so if your Honor could compromise and give us two weeks from Friday and we will get it done.
MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, as far as we're concerned, all our petition is going to be is a petition for the Court to approve the consent judgment, the decree, and I will attach probably the resolution that was passed by the board. To get all the formalities done, I would probably like until Friday to do it, but counsel can assume — he already knows what we're going to be filing, and if two weeks from today is some time in which he can be done with whatever he wants, maybe we could speed it up a little bit.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, there are things under the consent decree that are expected to be done speedily so that the board can continue to operate and operate appropriately.
We also note there's three different sets of counsel here. I would imagine that somebody could pick up for counsel who's not available.
MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, may I just make a brief statement?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. GARMENT: I know I've spoken with a certain amount of vehemence today, but this case started with some demonstrably false and very serious allegations against the defendants. They have not been proved. There has not been a hearing to present a bit of evidence in support of those allegations.

THE COURT: And they remain unproven.
MR. GARMENT: And it is our intention, and we ask leave to file an amended answer which will raise those issues in terms of — our present contemplation is to assert counterclaims, which we are entitled to do under an amended pleading.
These issues have never come into focus, and what has happened is through the intervention of the Attorney General, in cooperation with Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, who were the dissenting directors who did not want consideration given to any kind of change in the venue of the museum activities, this process was brought to a halt.
Your Honor understandably tried to find a solution through a mediation process. That mediation process stopped everything except the actions that were necessary in the view of the Attorney General to bring the process to the conclusion he wanted.

And we have standing out inexplicably, [2] [illegible]t clearly demonstrated, the fact of two crucial [3] [illegible]es being switched in the last few weeks on the basis or in absolute concurrence with [5] interventions on the part of the Attorney General [6] that were threatening to these two directors.

That I submit is enough for us to ask leave to present evidence, to ask for witnesses to [9] come forward and testify about the circumstances [10] of their intervention, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock, the Attorney General, and the votes that were switched. That will not take much time. [13] That does not involve affidavits from all over the [14] world. That involves a discrete hearing process under oath where people have to explain why they [16] did it, when they did it, so that your Honor can [17] determine whether or not this is a free voluntary action of a majority of the board of a huge and extremely important national art collection that [20] happens to be temporarily lodged in Chicago.

[21] MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all —

THE COURT: I'm sorry, what you really were [23] saying was two different things. If you're at [24] this point asking leave to file additional pleadings in this case, as far as a counterclaim, that leave is not granted. You would have to come [3] in the way we normally do it here on a motion for [4] leave to file with a document proposed. I need to know who it is against and what the cause of action is, and whether or not it's affected one [7] way or the other by this mediated settlement. [8] That's a totally separate issue.

What you've said about the opportunity [10] to take discovery, I have not foreclosed that. [11] I'm saying based on what you filed, there's [12] nothing to take discovery on right now. I have [13] nothing verified from these defendants to suggest [14] that this Court should not approve this [15] settlement, and I am willing to let you file [16] something.

[17] But the date that I have available to [18] hear this is — the date I have is July 24th in [19] the afternoon, and that's moving a case that I [20] already have. And I want to be able to seriously [21] consider anything that you're going to file. And [22] I don't want, like I had today, ten minutes before [23] [illegible]ave to come out here and be given a document. [24] [illegible]ould like to be able to take it home and review

[1] it.

[6] MS. BELLOWS: May I remind the Court that one [7] of our clients, Dr. Tucker, is in Italy and the [8] second of our clients is available; Judith Terra [9] is in Washington, D.C. But the third of our [10] clients is presently somewhere in Russia. So I do [11] not want to make the setting of the date a cause [12] celebre. On the other hand, I do believe that we [13] should be able to be in touch with those clients [14] prior to filing.

[15] THE COURT: Well, today is the 2nd, and your [16] response would not be due until the 19th. And if [17] you can't get in touch with your clients by the [18] 19th, then there's a big problem.

[19] MS. BELLOWS: Oh, I'm sorry, your Honor. I [20] thought that you were looking to us to file a [21] pleading on July 6th.

[22] THE COURT: No. Just the —

[23] MS. BELLOWS: I apologize, your Honor.

[24] THE COURT: — and your response would be the

[1] 19th, and if the plaintiffs or the parties seeking [2] to enforce this settlement want to file any kind [3] of reply, because I would expect whatever the [4] response is, it's going to have case law. It's [5] going to have an affidavit. There's going to be [6] some type of a firsthand affidavit that says the [7] Attorney General's done something wrong here.

[8] And there's going to be case law that [9] there might be something illegal about this [10] settlement. Because I haven't even seen a trace [11] of that yet. And any case law that you give or [12] that you cite, you've got to give me a copy of the [13] cases because I'm going to have to take them home.

[14] And everybody else, if you want to [15] respond to their cases or whatever, I'm going to [16] give you until noon of the 23rd. I'm sorry it's [17] going to wreck a weekend in July, but it's the [18] best I can do for you. And I would see you [19] July 24th at 2:00 o'clock. And I need somebody to [20] draw an order.

[21] In the meantime, those documents that [22] were filed in Court on Friday, or were supposed to [23] be filed, can just still be filed as they were [24] supposed to have been on file, under seal.

I do not want to have any of the papers that relate to the mediation process made public at this time. I don't see any reason why we need to have that. I will entertain any kind of a motion to open them. Is there anything that — I mean, if you all want it opened, then that's another thing.

MR. GARMENT: It should be opened.

THE COURT: Mr. Carlson, you wanted to say something?

MR. CARLSON: I was going to say now maybe this motion is moot in light of the fact that the individual defendants apparently have changed counsel. But previous counsel — you know, they had a motion they noticed up for today for an order referring the matter to the State's Attorney of Cook County for investigation relating to breaches of the confidentiality provision, your Honor's order of February 5th.

THE COURT: I haven't seen that. I never got that motion.

MR. CARLSON: Oh, you didn't?

THE COURT: No. Nobody ever gave it to me.

MR. CARLSON: Well, we may very well file a

We'd object to that from a procedure point —

THE COURT: Well, he's not going to file it without a motion for leave, and you'd have a chance to see it and then come and tell me what —

MR. QUINLAN: Plus it would be procedurally out of place at this time because the mediation process obviously substituted here, and any motion for a counterclaim frankly is not timely. They never answered to this, so that any answer they'd have to seek —

MR. GARMENT: The injunction took the place of an answer.

MR. QUINLAN: No, the injunction didn't take the place —

THE COURT: There are individual defendants I don't believe ever filed an answer.

MR. QUINLAN: Never filed an answer.

MR. CARLSON: Dr. Tucker did.

MR. QUINLAN: Only Tucker did. But there was no counterclaim filed at that time. But no counterclaim would be appropriate at this time because the mediation process stopped all that.

So to get to that point, you'd have to set aside all the mediation process, the consent motion on behalf of the Foundation, your Honor, relating to what are apparent breaches of your Honor's February 5th confidentiality order. There are articles that appeared in Crain, Chicago Business, and elsewhere suggesting that certain members of the board perhaps have been violating the confidentiality provisions that are currently in place. And that is of concern to the Foundation, getting the confidentiality provisions that are included in the consent judgment, which we hope to have that. I just want to alert the Court to the fact that we'll take a look at it and prepare an appropriate motion.

THE COURT: Okay. Please file that other document like you were supposed to have filed it on Friday. And the document you seek to file today, I'm not going to grant leave to file it. There's nothing objectionable or unconfidential in it; it's just that let's get their motion, and most of what this is all about is Dan Terra's intent. That's not what I'm going to look at when I either approve or not approve the settlement.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, one other thing. You had mentioned about filing a counterclaim.

decree, the mediation, et cetera, and then if you wanted to file a counterclaim, we'd be back to square one to file this.

My only reason for raising this is that we're going to have enough to respond to in this short period of time, and I'd prefer we don't get into these collateral issues before they're appropriately in front of the Court.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, I do want to again — we would have to object whenever anyone tries to seek to impose additional limitations on the proposed consent decree. The proposed consent decree does not release — I'm sorry, does not in any way force the individual defendants to release any claims or rights they might have. I just need to point that out to the Court.

MR. QUINLAN: That has nothing to do with the counterclaim.

MS. BELLOWS: Well, your Honor, clearly you're correct. I mean, in such time as we file a motion for a counterclaim and attach a counterclaim if that's what we decide to do.

THE COURT: That's my 9:15 call. You give them notice. You bring it in and — they'll have a chance to file a written response and objection to that.

Before we adjourn today, I want to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Hilliard.

Mr. Hilliard, you've done a yeoman's effort since February, and I know it hasn't been easy. And I don't know whether or not you've ever been paid because I don't have access to that. But I assume that you are sending your bills to the Foundation, and in due course someone will have a vote and approve the payment of that if that's necessary.

And I want to make it clear if anybody — I assume that if any counsel wants to have any discussion with Mr. Hilliard — Mr. Hilliard, how do you feel about informal discussions with any counsel, or have you just about had it at this point?

MR. HILLIARD: They should meet me in my hotel room in London. I'm leaving tonight.

THE COURT: Good for you. Have a wonderful trip.

MR. KENNEDY: Just one last housekeeping matter. The September 25 is scheduled to expire today. We recommend until this is resolved to extend it to the 24th of July.

THE COURT: That's fine. Make it 5:00 o'clock. And if you'd draw me up some orders. And I would ask if you could kind of maybe do that in the conference room.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation For The Arts
Officers of the Terra Foundation For The Arts Directors and Assistant/Deputy Directors of Terra Museum of American Art and Musée d'Art Americain Giverny

FROM: Richard L. Sevcik

DATE: October 29, 1999

SUBJECT: Conflicts of Interest Policy

At its November 6, 1998 meeting, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation For The Arts adopted a conflicts of interest policy. This policy applies to the officers, directors and key employees of the Foundation and its constituent museums. At that meeting, the Board specifically designated the directors and assistant/deputy directors of the two museums as subject to this policy. A copy of this policy is enclosed again for your reference.

Article V of this policy provides for an annual statement, a copy of which is enclosed. Prior to the annual meeting, Chairman Hartman asked that I distribute the annual statement after the meeting, even though I had the statements with me at that time. Catherine Stevens later confirmed that request. Please complete this statement and return it to me at your earliest convenience.

If you have any questions regarding the interpretation of this policy or have any reason to believe you have a potential conflict, please contact me at (312) 807-4332.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS CONFLICTS OF INTEREST POLICY

ARTICLE I

Purpose

The purpose of this conflicts of interest policy is to protect the Terra Foundation For The Arts' (the "Foundation") interest when it is contemplating entering into a transaction or arrangement that might benefit the interest of an officer, director or key employee of the Foundation. The Foundation recognizes that both real and apparent conflicts of interest sometimes naturally occur in the course of conducting the Foundation's affairs. These conflicts occur because of the individuals associated with the Foundation and the talents which they can offer to the Foundation and their multiple interests, affiliations and various positions of responsibility. By the adoption of this policy, the Foundation will have a prescribed and effective method and procedure to address these interests and conflicts.

ARTICLE II

Definitions

1. Interested Person

Any director, officer, member of a committee with board delegated powers or key employee designated by the board of directors of the Foundation who has a direct or indirect financial interest, as defined below, is an interested person.

2. Financial Interest

A person has a financial interest if the person has, directly or indirectly, through business, investment or family --

(a) an ownership or investment interest in any entity with which the Foundation has a transaction or arrangement, or

(b) a compensation arrangement with the Foundation or with any entity or individual with which the Foundation has a transaction or arrangement, or

(c) a potential ownership or investment interest in, or compensation arrangement with, any entity or individual with which the Foundation is negotiating a transaction or arrangement.

Compensation includes direct and indirect remuneration as well as gifts or favors that are substantial in nature.

A financial interest is not necessarily a conflict of interest. Under Article III, Section 2, a person who has a financial interest may have a conflict of interest only if the appropriate board or committee decides that a conflict of interest exists.

ARTICLE III

Procedures

1. Duty to Disclose

In connection with any actual or possible conflicts of interest, an interested person must disclose the existence of his or her financial interest and all material facts to the directors and members of committees with board delegated powers considering the proposed transaction or arrangement.

2. Determining Whether a Conflict of Interest Exists

After disclosure of the financial interest, and all material facts, and after any discussion with the interested person, he or she shall leave the board or committee meeting while the determination of a conflict of interest is discussed and voted upon. The remaining board or committee members shall decide if a conflict of interest exists.

3. Procedures for Addressing the Conflict of Interest

(a) An interested person may make a presentation at the board or committee meeting, but after such presentation, he/she shall leave the meeting during the discussion of, and the vote on, the transaction or arrangement that results in the conflict of interest.

(b) The board or committee shall determine by a majority vote of the disinterested directors whether the transaction or arrangement is in the Foundation's best interest and for its own benefit and whether the transaction is fair and reasonable to the Foundation and shall make its decision as to whether to enter into the transaction or arrangement in conformity with such determination.

4. Violations of the Conflicts of Interest Policy

(a) If the board or committee has reasonable cause to believe that a person has failed to disclose actual or possible conflicts of interest, it shall inform the person of the basis for such belief and afford the person an opportunity to explain the alleged failure to disclose.

(b) If, after hearing the response of the person and making such further investigation as may be warranted in the circumstances, the board or committee determines that the person has in fact failed to disclose an actual or possible conflict of interest, it shall take appropriate disciplinary and corrective action.

ARTICLE IV

Records of Proceedings

The minutes of the board and all committees with board-delegated powers shall contain --

(a) the names of the persons who disclosed or otherwise were found to have a financial interest in connection with an actual or possible conflict of interest, the nature of the financial interest, any action taken to determine whether a conflict of interest was present, and the board's or committee's decision as to whether a conflict of interest in fact existed.

(b) the names of the persons who were present for discussions and votes relating to the transaction or arrangement, the content of the discussion, and a record of any votes taken in connection therewith.

ARTICLE V

Annual Statements

Each interested person shall annually sign a statement which affirms that such person --

(a) has received a copy of the conflicts of interest policy,

(b) has read and understands the policy,

(c) has agreed to comply with the policy, and

(d) understands that the Foundation is a charitable organization and that in order to maintain its federal tax exemption it must engage primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of its tax-exempt purposes.

ARTICLE VI

Other Laws

This policy is intended to supplement but not replace any applicable state laws governing conflicts of interest applicable to not-for-profit corporations under the Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation Act or under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

PEOPLE'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

NOW COMES the Plaintiff PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS by JAMES E. RYAN, Attorney General of Illinois and responds to the written Objections Of Defendants Judith Terra, Paul

16di-001635

Tucker and Alan Simpson To The Proposed Settlement and state:

1) The Objections of Defendants Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson and Judith Tucker are baseless diatribe, mistaken in both law and fact. The Objections despite their massive volume are replete with redundant speculation, surmise, conjecture and improper conclusion, and in sum, are unsupported by allegations of ultimate fact essential to a right of action and/or supportive of lawful objection to the settlement.

2) The erroneous theme of the Objections is that Terra Foundation Board members, Dr. Ted Stebbins and Dr. Stephanie Pace-Marshall breached their fiduciary duty by voting for the settlement. The Defendants, by virtue of hyperbolic reasoning and the use of half-truths and outright misstatement of fact, surmise and accuse Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall of casting affirmative vote in favor of the subject settlement in exchange for purported wrongful personal benefits that the Defendants have no evidence were exchanged. The Defendants accuse Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins of offering and exchanging said benefits with Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall charging that by such he abused his office and engaged in improper conduct. The Defendants suggests these imagined events as the basis for the court rejecting the settlement.

3) Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall both denied the baseless charges at the Terra Foundation board meeting on June 29, 2001. The charges were put directly to Drs. Stebbins and Marshall and they unequivocally denied same. The June 29 Board meeting was taped and its content shows that throughout the meeting both Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are poised capable individuals clearly speaking and acting their own mind. Both Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall make clear they were then acting as proper fiduciaries and were setting the terms of the settlement and voting for the settlement with a free will and were not under any duress. A taped copy of that meeting is made Respondent Exhibit A hereto. A written copy of that Board meeting has been submitted by Defendants as Objections Exhibit 26. The audio tape is made an exhibit hereto because the tone and delivery of Drs. Stebbins and Marshall's remarks makes clear they are acting freely.

4) On July 16, 2001 Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins met with counsel upon this court's direction of July 2 and denied then, and denies now, the allegations of duress and abuse of authority made in said Objections. Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins denies all accusations of wrongdoing and states that no secret promises, exchanges, wrongdoing or intimidation occurred, and further states the charges contained in the Objections are without basis in law or fact.

5) Much of what these Defendants state is half-truths. The Objections misquote, misstate and attribute remarks out of context, and otherwise suggest facts that have no basis in reality. The purported rendition of remarks made by Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins is in parts inaccurate and the statements are presented in part out of correct sequence making it appear certain remarks were made in follow-up to previous questions or remarks when such is not the case. Thus to keep this record accurate, Respondent must address certain inaccuracies although for the most part such is without relevance.

6) The Defendants' Objections are without merit because:

a) The Defendants in their Objections simply misrepresent the law, citing unrelated cases and erroneously reference irrelevant authorities. The Defendants' assertion that the settlement is contrary to the FOUNDATION's charter is simply false. The Defendants erroneously attempt to shift the burden by stating there is a burden on the movants to show the settlement is fair is un-supported in law. In fact and law, the Settlement here is a just and proper settlement. The law is that the burden to show the settlement here is improper, rests with the Defendants and their filing and its many accompanying foundation-less submissions are irrelevant and/or are controverted and do not establish the settlement here is improper. Defendants assertion that this matter is akin to a class action is mis-guided and has no acceptance in law. The need to protect class members relative to the actions of representative class members as found in some class action matters has no basis here. Each and every party is fully represented in this case. The Defendants further bluster about the role of the Attorney General in this case being an abuse is made upon inaccurate facts and half truths which are inapposite with well-established principles of law. Defendants stalking-horse fixation on the wording of the TERRA FOUNDATION's charter demonstrates the Defendants misapprehend the argument of the Attorney General as to the applicability of common law charitable trust law principles herein (which was the reason that during mediation defense counsel were given the Attorney General's draft First Amended Complaint) as opposed to the scope authority and provisions of the corporate Articles.

b) Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson were the parties who suggested in January 2001 that the expedited discovery and emergency hearings being pressed by the Attorney General and Plaintiffs be stayed and that mediation instead take place. At that time Assistant Attorney General Perkins stated and made clear to all Defendants' counsel and the Court, that the People of the State of Illinois would engage in mediation, but only if was understood the People would require any settlement agreement to provide that the TERRA FOUNDATION would not leave Illinois. The exhibits the Defendants attach show this was the People's position from the start of mediation. To state they hoped the People would relent in mediation is not a proper Objection now. Moreover, the Defendants ,and specifically Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson , by their counsel, made clear that as a condition to mediation any settlement would require a global resolution of TERRA matters and full release of all matters at issue regrading the TERRA FOUNDATION. Indeed, the very issue of including full releases in mediation was discussed with the Assistant Attorneys General by counsel of Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson in order to obtain assurance from the People that the request for and inclusion of releases in mediation by Defendants would not be used by the Attorney General as a claim of further breach. It was expressly agreed that the issue of global and complete releases for TERRA related matters would be a condition of mediation and would not be used as a suggestion of a breach of duty by the directors of the FOUNDATION.

c) Therefore based upon the conditions imposed by the Defendants from the start of mediation if a settlement could be reached, it was clear all Defendants, directors and agents of the TERRA would be given a release relative to TERRA FOUNDATION activities. The FOUNDATION also required full releases, because it did not want to be faced with indemnification representation costs.

d) The issues relative to the conduct of Dr. Stebbins were known to all and had been raised in documents filed prior to the start of considering mediation. The Attorney General in his filings made in December 2000 and January 2001 set forth allegations seeking to disqualify Dr. Stebbins from the litigation committee. The issues raised relative to Dr. Stebbins were denied by the Defendants. At the end of January 2001, the Dr. Stebbins matters, as well as others, were at issue in a preliminary injunction proceeding set for an emergency hearing, and expedited discovery related thereto had been allowed. When Defendants suggested mediation at the end of January 2001 and set the conditions for a global full release of all TERRA matters as a condition of mediation, the Defendants not only were securing such for themselves but also on behalf of and for Dr. Stebbins. Thereafter from the start of mediation in February the condition of full release for all directors was an assumed term in every mediation settlement proposal and non-negotiable. While the Attorney General's draft First Amended Complaint did name Dr. Stebbins, it was with reference to matters that had already been alleged in the preliminary injunction motion and related pleadings filed prior to mediation. The purpose in supplying the First Amended Complaint was to show counsel for Defendants the further expanded pleading relative to the Attorney General's position that the TERRA FOUNDATION should remain in Illinois.

e) Noteworthy also is the fact that the Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson had counsel representing them and securing the release agreement term specifically for themselves, including a mediation condition agreement that the release request in mediation would not be a raisable conflict. Dr. Stebbins did not have separate counsel to seek such and Dr. Stebbins never independently communicated a request for a release to the Attorney General's staff as a pre-requisite or otherwise. In fact Dr. Stebbins and the staff of the Attorney General's office have never spoken or communicated except for an exchange of pleasantries upon meeting in a group at mediation session and listening to each other in two mediation sessions with Defendants Tucker and Terra and others present.

f) The court order of February 5, 2001 directing mediation came about because of the Defendants' request for mediation. The court also asked the parties to suggest mediators. The mediator chosen, attorney David Hilliard, was in fact suggested by counsel for the Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson (the resume supplied by the Defendants fully disclosed his relationship with the Art Institute. A copy of counsel's letters relative thereto are attached as Group Exhibit B.

g) The court's order of February 5, 2001 ordering mediation also provides that " No statements made by participants in the mediation will be admissible in evidence or otherwise useable in any way in any further proceedings in connection with this case".

h) The foregoing conditions and understandings in mediation were in place with the agreement of all parties and the approval of the court. The Defendants' assertions that Dr. Stebbins acted improperly in mediation and in voting for the settlement are baseless. The release for Dr. Stebbins was negotiated for and sought by these Defendants and was not obtained by Dr. Stebbins.

i) The Objections' allegations of wrongdoing by Dr. Marshall are equally imagined and meritless. A sequence of events led to a limited inquiry of Dr. Marshall and a school at which she is employed (This inquiry is not classified as an investigation, it is simply an inquiry allowed by the Charitable Solicitation Act to permit the Attorney General on behalf of the beneficiaries of charitable trusts to obtain documents relative to solicited charitable funds). That inquiry related to her role with another charity and that school. The response thereto was handled by counsel and not Dr. Marshall. The facts are that neither Dr.

Marshall nor the Assistant Attorneys Generals have ever spoken or communicated with each other except for an exchange of pleasantries upon meeting in a group at mediation session and listening to each other in two mediation sessions with Defendants Tucker and Terra and others present. The facts are that said inquiry matter is independent of the TERRA FOUNDATION and the releases in the TERRA settlement do not provide any benefit to Dr. Marshall in the inquiry matter. The facts are Dr. Marshall was not promised nor has she been given a release relative to the inquiry matter nor will she be given a release relative to that matter at any time (It should be fully understood that there is no reason to surmise she would need such a release). The inquiry was a simple request which was met in sum even before the June 19 mediation settlement meeting , and nothing is outstanding.

j) Neither Dr. Marshall nor the staff of the Attorney General's Office offered or accepted to tie matters from that inquiry to the TERRA FOUNDATION mediation directly or indirectly. Moreover, Dr. Marshall voted without securing any favor or release relative to that inquiry matter. Neither the staff of the Attorney General nor Dr. Marshall offered or tried to tie the matters together. Moreover by Dr. Marshall voting to settle this matter she gave up her purported item of exchange the " vote for settlement " without obtaining a quid pro quo . Dr. Marshall was not offered an opportunity to try and trade her vote for release or consideration relative to another matter, nor does she have such.

k) Moreover, the sequence and detail of mediation related later herein shows that before the inquiry on the unrelated matter was initiated Dr. Marshall had outlined adjustments to the May 11 mediated settlement, all of which were ultimately incorporated into the final settlement. Indeed while Defendants Tucker, Terra and Simpson sought and secured non-negotiable releases for themselves, they now imagine without basis that Dr. Marshall would be like they and seek self-interested releases. Dr. Marshall put self interest aside and did not try and tie the matters together or secure a release in an unrelated matter and has no agreement, condition or release from the Attorney General. (Again, there is no reason to suggest that Dr. Marshall, or anyone else for that matter, needs a release relative to the unrelated inquiry). Dr. Marshall chaired the June 29, 2001 TERRA Board meeting, and at that meeting, she addressed the charges and explained her actions and made it quite clear she was acting without duress and of a free will.

THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT IS NOT INCONSISTENT WITH THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S CHARTER AND ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

7) Defendants Tucker, Simpson and Terra state in their Objections the exaggerated claim that the mediated settlement is inconsistent with the Foundation's Charter and Articles. Such is simply untrue. The mediated settlement agreement does not by its terms include any provision or provisions that are contrary to the "Charter" Amended Articles of Incorporation of the TERRA FOUNDATION (see the Charter at Defendants' Objections Exhibit 5). (A copy of the Settlement agreement is attached as Defendant Objections Exhibit 27.) The Amended Articles of Incorporation of the TERRA FOUNDATION in sum, provides it is organized exclusively for charitable purposes (See Objections Exhibit 5). The Amended Articles by the terms therein have no limit on the type of charitable purpose the FOUNDATION might engage upon. The mediated settlement does not seek to alter the Articles in any way and its terms impose and require that the FOUNDATION continue to engage in only exclusively charitable purposes within the limits of the Articles. Indeed, the language of the Amended Articles would permit the FOUNDATION to operate a hospital or animal shelter, and /or abandon all activities relative to art. However, to the extent that the settlement has any impact on the FOUNDATION's charitable purpose, the settlement reinforces and requires the FOUNDATION to engage in the promotion of American Art as the FOUNDATION has done to date and as Daniel Terra intended, as an exclusively charitable purpose. Indeed, the portions of the Amended Articles of the FOUNDATION which Defendants reference and quote in their Objections are portions about the "United States and abroad" are found under a limiting provision in the Articles that such is merely illustration and not binding on the FOUNDATION, indeed the Amended Articles make quite clear there is no restriction in the Articles providing that further detail is " For illustrative purposes only." (See Objections Exhibit

5). The Defendants' contention that the settlement violates the Charter is indicative of the inaccuracies and exaggeration found throughout the Objections.

8) These Defendants also assert that the settlement is contrary to the founder's intention because the TERRA FOUNDATION under the settlement is not free to completely leave Chicago. Indeed these Defendants fail to explain why their conduct of operating the FOUNDATION here in Chicago since Daniel Terra's death in 1996, or why their efforts at exploring a partnership with the Art Institute during the last year is any different than the proposed settlement. In sum, what the Defendants show at best is that from time to time Daniel Terra's efforts were a work in progress, but through it all he stuck with his first choice, his home town, Chicago. The Defendants fill this record with contentions without test or foundation and by way of purported affidavits which violate Supreme Court Rule 191 and fail to state they are made upon personal knowledge, fail to state with particularity the facts necessary to support the Objections, and which are, for the most part, statements of conclusion, surmise and conjecture, and based upon purported inadmissible hearsay statements. In sum, the Exhibits and affidavits attached to Defendants' Objections are without sufficient foundation and otherwise not facts admissible in evidence. In sum, the Defendants' Exhibits are not evidence of anything; rather they are inadequate conclusions and conjectures replete with unreliable hearsay.

9) The Defendants earlier actions in filing herein on June 29 with their motion for TRO, a copy of their complaint from their dismissed federal lawsuit included in that filing a binder of exhibit documents. Among the Defendants' binder exhibits accompanying their dismissed federal suit is an affidavit of James Terra., the son of Daniel Terra . James Terra in his affidavit states he was an original founder of the FOUNDATION and a Terra Board member from the inception of the FOUNDATION through his father's death. He further contends in his affidavit that the founders had always intended that the FOUNDATION remain in Chicago. James Terra's affidavit which the Defendants have filed states : "When the museum was opened it was clear that it was always meant to have a presence in the Chicagoland area. At no time during all of my discussions with my father about Museum or FOUNDATION matters, did he ever express any intent to move the Museum from Chicago." This is Exhibit "16" in the documents filed by Defendants. (James Terra's affidavit September 25, 2000, Defendants' Federal lawsuit Exhibit "16") The James Terra affidavit is also attached hereto as Respondents Exhibit C.

10) James Terra believes the FOUNDATION should remain in Chicago and he has filed a lawsuit in this court which contends the FOUNDATION articles should be reformed to restrict the FOUNDATION to Chicago. A copy of James Terra's lawsuit is attached as Exhibit D.

11) The Defendants provide as Exhibits to their Objection untested foundation-less documents and affidavit statements from various persons to purportedly support their assertion that Daniel Terra had considered alternatives to a Chicago location for his museum. They argue without logic or citation to authority that such prevents the FOUNDATION's board from entering into the mediated settlement. In addition to such being hearsay, the Defendants' filings herein cite statements by several real estate professionals who claim Daniel Terra considered buildings in Washington D.C. for the FOUNDATION. In fact nothing shows he caused the FOUNDATION to act or consider Washington D.C. property. All of what is suggested by the Defendants' attachments involves purported actions by Mr. Terra in his personal affairs. In stark contrast is the fact that for 18 years Daniel Terra establish his intent to have the TERRA FOUNDATION here in Chicago by conduct and numerous public solicitation statements. The 18 years of conduct can not be disputed and are sufficiently established facts to support the right of the TERRA FOUNDATION to remain in Chicago, and support the right to the entry of the mediated settlement.

12) What the Defendants do not supply and cannot supply are records showing the FOUNDATION board considered or paid for any of the purported Washington DC real estate matters, or was involved in same. Moreover upon Daniel Terra's death, despite the fact that all of the residue of his estate was left to the FOUNDATION, these purported real properties in Washington DC were never delivered to the FOUNDATION. A true and correct copy of Mr. Terra's last will and testament is attached as Exhibit E. From 1996 to 2000 the FOUNDATION continued to operate in Chicago, with no consideration or regard to these so called Washington D.C. desires of Mr.

Terra. In fact the very FOUNDATION documents which Defendants supply to show the FOUNDATION's planning for the future lack any reference to the purported Washington D.C. real estate desires of Daniel Terra that Defendants urge in their Objections. The February 11, 1997 "Report to the Trustees of the Terra Foundation for the Arts" (Exhibit 18 in the Defendants' Objections) states it is a report by an advisory committee to explore the future and operational provisions of the FOUNDATION. The Report by its text makes clear it was commissioned as a advisory committee to make recommendations on the future and long term mission and location of the FOUNDATION, and while the report expressly references Daniel Terra's death, no mention of these Washington DC building plans is mentioned in the report. Also see strategic planning committee meeting notes Defendants Objections Exhibits 2 and 20.

13) The affidavits of the Washington real estate folks and the architect are hearsay and violate provisions required of affidavits as set forth in S.Ct Rule 191 and their contents are therefore subject to doubt and simply under the law what they purport to relate has no presumption of veracity and the Attorney General objects to consideration thereof. Moreover, there was no requirement that Daniel Terra fully or accurately explain his thoughts to real estate professionals. These reported hearsay statements reflected in the real estate people's statements, if true and accurate , are at best casual hearsay conversations in a setting where the speaker has no reason to reveal or make known all of his thoughts or to be fully truthful. Such casual commentary has no probative value here at this juncture in establishing Mr. Terra's charitable intent relative to the use of $450 million dollars of charitable assets held by this FOUNDATION. Clearly it is not uncommon for a person to look at real estate to see what is available without having a decided course. Often the real estate professionals are not provided accurate information by the person with whom they are working. Daniel Terra in 1996 before his death still personally owned approximately $79 million worth of art, and at his death his personal net worth was several hundred million dollars, and left all the art and funds except for approximately $ 7 million to the FOUNDATION. A true and correct copy of select pages of Daniel Terra's federal estate tax return Form 706 is attached hereto as Exhibit F, which shows on page 3 his assets and distributions , and schedule A thereto shows he personally owned the several parcels of real estate which

Objectors claim were for the FOUNDATION. (See Schedule A to Form 706 attached hereto as part of Exhibit F.)

14) As Defendants own Objections show Daniel Terra was acting not on behalf of the FOUNDATION, but rather personally. The Objections by inadmissible hearsay purport to show he personally was looking at the Washington D.C. real estate, personally bought the real estate, and personally commissioned plans. The FOUNDATION records reflect no intent in 1996 to move to Washington D.C. nor did the FOUNDATION pay for any of these Washington D.C. real estate matters. It might have been his intent to place his personal art in Washington D.C. or make a further gift to the FOUNDATION and build offices in Washington D.C., or a further small gallery or maybe he was just considering options and exploring real estate. It is all conjecture, surmise and hearsay.

15) The untested informal discussions reflected in the affidavits Defendants attach include a sheet of paper with a hand written note and a logo at Exhibit 14 and the Attorney General objects to its consideration. Who made and/or wrote such and under what conditions is without foundation it is meaningless as evidence here. Even if its foundation could be laid, it is not unusual when a charity's president has a personal change of address that he has some of the charity's mail re-directed to his home. The note seems to say forward my personal mail at my old personal address along with FOUNDATION mail that comes to you to this new location. Certainly the note did not concern the main mail for the FOUNDATION, for there is no indication that the FOUNDATION's mail actually started to go to this new address. Moreover none of this establishes Daniel Terra's intent to move the FOUNDATION to Washington D.C. These allegations fly in the face of years of conduct and are not evidence as submitted nor supported by FOUNDATION records or reflected in actions by the FOUNDATION, and they certainly are not documented plans by Daniel Terra as a fiduciary.

16) The affidavits of affiants Levy and Solmssen not only suffer from failing to meet the obligations of Supreme Court Rule 191 , they are hearsay and inadmissible and the Attorney General objects to consideration thereof. Moreover they generally reflect what Daniel Terra was considering in 1990, 1991 or 1992, and explain the plans did not work out. Solmssen does reference 1996 and although his contention is hearsay he suggests Mr. Terra may have wished to have offices in Washington D.C. and some galleries. It is incomplete hearsay which does not establish Daniel Terra's charitable intent, and as referenced above it could be interpreted to mean many things and whether Mr. Terra wanted to or would reveal all the FOUNDATION's operational plans to the affiant is clearly not established and highly improbable.

17) Finally the Defendants's Objections do not meet the burden on showing the settlement is unlawful or improper. Rather, the Objections show and establish facts that show the mediated settlement is not contrary to the charitable intent of the FOUNDATION. There is no evidence this FOUNDATION must be located outside Chicago and/or in Washington D.C. to meet Daniel Terra's intent. Indeed these very Defendants have stated this FOUNDATION's location was something the Board could properly decide. The very documents Tucker points to in his affidavit and the strategic planning meeting notes Defendants attach to their Objections all show that Chicago is a viable option under a variety of ideas. Therefore the actions of the Board in reaching the mediated settlement to keep this FOUNDATION in Chicago are not contrary to the testator's intent, rather they are squarely within what had been being considered by the Board and these very Defendants prior to litigation.

18) Indeed, several of Defendants' attachments to the Objections show a variety of Board and committee considerations at various times and in almost each instance one of the considerations set forth is a possible plan for the FOUNDATION and/or the collection and programs to remain in Chicago. Thus the Defendants' documents attached to the Objections show the Board believed it was proper to stay in Chicago. Defendants' Objection Exhibit 18 shows consideration of partnering or standing alone in Chicago in February 1997. Defendants' Objection Exhibit 20 discloses that on May 10, 2000 the strategic planning committee was recommending the FOUNDATION engage in partnering and a had a short list of potential partners including the Art Institute. Indeed, the list is contrary to the exaggerated claims of the Objectors as to the purported beauty contest Defendants claim they would have conducted. The Defendants Objection Exhibit 2 shows the strategic planning committee continued to consider on August 2000 partnering with the Art Institute of Chicago. These documents show the Board and committee thought it would be permissible to stay in Chicago and to partner with institutions in this city expressly mentioning the Art Institute and Northwestern University. The Defendants exaggerate and misstate when they claim the settlement will violate Daniel Terra's intent. These several Board and committee meeting minutes show that Defendants Tucker and Terra participated in discussions of placing this FOUNDATION on the very course the mediated settlement now places it. It is clearly within Daniel Terra's intent and within past Board considerations..

19) The Defendants attachment of the April 1990 minutes of the Museum involves remarks by Mr. Terra when the FOUNDATION was one eighth its current size. (Defendants' Objection Exhibit 1) The 1990 minute show the FOUNDATION to be much smaller in 1990, a book value of only $50 million (Objection Exhibit 1, minute- page 7). It is undisputed Mr. Terra continued the FOUNDATION in Chicago after 1990 and thereafter placed several hundred millions of dollars of assets into the FOUNDATION through his death in 1996, with it current worth in excess of $430 million. A true and correct copy of the FOUNDATION's June 30, 2000 balance sheet is attached hereto as Respondent's Exhibit G. While Mr. Terra might have given a thought in 1990 about where his museum ought to be, there are other explanations for his statements, and no evidence he truly considered moving. More importantly clearly after his 1990 remarks, Daniel Terra's conduct for six years thereafter was to have the FOUNDATION stay in Chicago.

20) The terms of the mediation settlement do not violate the purposes set forth in the Articles of Incorporation nor do the terms of settlement change the operation of the FOUNDATION from that which existed when the founder Daniel Terra was alive. Two of the complaining Defendants Tucker and Simpson were not with the FOUNDATION when Mr. Terra was alive. The other Defendant Judith Terra was originally restricted from being involved with the FOUNDATION under the terms of the TERRA Prenuptial agreement signed in 1986, and she only became a director of the FOUNDATION in 1993.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL HAD A DUTY TO PARTICIPATE IN THIS LITIGATION AND PROPERLY DISCHARGED THAT DUTY

21) The Defendants' filing takes issue with and objects to the very involvement of the Attorney General in this case calling it an abuse. Clearly these Defendants misunderstand the law of Illinois and the role of the Attorney General with regard to charitable trusts. The Defendants make it appear that the Attorney General's litigation and settlement position that the TERRA FOUNDATION remain in Illinois is baseless and/or was a surprise at mediation. The record is clear that said position was taken in the initial pleadings, stated at court sessions and put in writing by the Attorney General on several occasions and was spelled out when mediation commenced. From the initial involvement in this case it has been the position of the People that the FOUNDATION is obligated to remain in Illinois. The Defendants supply attachments showing the Attorney General had this position from the start of mediation, and they should be estopped from complaining four months into mediation.

22) When this litigation was commenced in September 2000 by the Plaintiffs and the Attorney General there was a plan being implemented to move this FOUNDATION from Chicago to Washington D.C. and/or France, and the lawsuits herein were filed to, among other things, stop the move and deal with certain matters of breach of duty.

23) Defendant Tucker who was the president of the FOUNDATION in furtherance of the plan to move the FOUNDATION just prior to the September 2000 annual board in follow up to a board meeting of August 24, 2000 and building upon his remarks in the strategic planning committee meetings of May 2000 and August 2000, set forth his vision for the Terra Foundation in a position paper circulated to the Terra Board for use at the annual meting, entitled a Vision For the Future (the Vision statement is Exhibit C to the Atty General's complaint which Complaint is at Defendant Objectors Exhibit 4) (the August 24 Board meeting minutes is Exhibit D to the Atty General's complaint which complaint is at Defendant Objectors Exhibit 4) (the strategic planning committee meetings of May 2000 and August 2000 are Defendant Objection Exhibits 2 and 20) Defendant Tucker in his vision paper on the eve of the annual meeting of the FOUNDATION board states that the Terra FOUNDATION and its collection belongs in only one place, Washington D.C. The vision statement in pertinent part provides:

> "From the lengthy strategic planning discussions that we have had as a Board over the last ten months, I believe we have all come to recognize that we are at a critical point "..."I also believe that we will have the opportunity at our Board meeting in Giverny to make some of the most important decisions about our future" ... " I know that we all understand the weight of our responsibilities and the concurrent seriousness of our deliberations." ... "Given these unique circumstances, and several recent developments that I will review in greater detail in Giverny, I thought I should share with you my sense of how we should proceed." (Tucker's: A Vision for the Future (white paper) Page 1)... "I believe there is really only one (city) that would serve the center's needs in the fullest, most effective manner. That is Washington D.C." (Tucker white paper Page 3). "I am completely convinced that the Terra FOUNDATION collection should be in the same city as the FOUNDATION itself." (Tucker white paper Page 5). (The White Paper Vision Statement is Exhibit C to the Atty General's complaint, which complaint is Defendant s' Objection Exhibit 4)

24) The Attorney General of Illinois filed suit in this case to protect the common law rights and interests of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS in preventing their divestment of the beneficial rights in the TERRA FOUNDATION. The Illinois Common Law Act (5 ILCS 50/1 (1991).) expressly adopts the common law of England as the law of Illinois. Under the English common law the People of the Sovereign are the ultimate beneficiaries of each and every charitable trust. Under the common law the Attorney General's power to enforce charitable trusts stems from the underlying fact that the PEOPLE are the ultimate beneficiaries of all assets devoted to causes that promote the welfare of the society as a whole and which benefit an indefinite number of persons. (Kerner v. Thompson (1936), 365 Ill. 149, 153; Stowell v. Prentiss (1926), 323 Ill. 309, 318 and 321-22; People ex rel. Smith v. Braucher (1913), 258 Ill. 604, 608; Attorney General v. Newberry Library (1894), 150 Ill. 229, 236.)

25) Under Illinois law, the Attorney General is the sole officer constitutionally authorized to represent the PEOPLE of this State in any litigation in which the PEOPLE OF THE STATE are the real party in interest. (People v. Briceland, 65 Ill. 2d 485, 495 (1976); In re Estate of Stern, 240 Ill. App. 3d 834, 837 (1st Dist.1992).); at common law, the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS are the ultimate beneficiary or cestui que trust of all Illinois charitable bequests (In re Estate of Laas, 171 Ill. App. 3d 916, 920 (1st Dist. 1988)), and the Attorney General has been judicially recognized as the proper representative of the PEOPLE in all actions concerning the enforcement or administration of Illinois charitable trusts. (In re Estate of Tomlinson, 65 Ill. 2d 382, 387 (1976); In re Estate of Laas, 171 Ill. App. 3d at 920).) The Attorney General is therefore vested with the authority to participate in any action to protect a charitable trust and its property either defensively, where an attack is made on its validity, or by action as plaintiff. (In re Estate of Tomlinson, 65 Ill. 2d at 387; In re Estate of Stern, 240 Ill. App. 3d at 837).) In a suit by others where the validity or the enforcement of a charitable trust may come into question, the Attorney General is generally a necessary party and should be joined as a party. (Estate of Tomlinson, 65 Ill. 2d at 387; In re Estate of Stern, 240 Ill. App. 3d at 837; Bogert, The Law of Trusts and Trustees sec. 411 (2d ed. 1964).) The assets are held subject to a trust for the benefit of the public which is enforceable in the public's name by the Attorney General (In re Estate of Tomlinson (1976), 65 Ill.2d 382, 387; In re Estate of Muhammad (1st Dist. 1987), 165 Ill. App. 3d 890, 896-98.) The PEOPLE's beneficial interest in charitable trust is described by the Appellate Court in People ex rel. Scott v. George F. Harding Museum (1st Dist. 1978), 58 Ill. App. 3d 408, 417.), the court stating:

> While the courts often talk of individuals who are to get charitable benefits as 'beneficiaries', strictly speaking the state is the only party having a legal interest in enforcement, and the human beings who are favorably affected by the execution of the trust are merely the medium through whom the social advantages flow to the public. If a trust has as its object the care of the poor, those persons who are chosen to secure the necessities of life under it are not in reality beneficiaries of the trust but only the instrumentalities through which the state receives the social advantages of seeing that its citizens do not suffer want. That this is true is shown by the rule that only the attorney general of the state can sue for enforcement, since he is the legal officer whose duty it is to represent the interests of the state and its citizens.(at 58 Ill. App. 3d 417.)

26) It is well established that the courts of this state have recognized and held that there is a substantial public right and interest in charitable funds vested in the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS and which the Illinois Attorney General has a duty and obligation to protect. In fact the Attorney General has a duty to act to protect the PEOPLE's interest and he must investigate matters of concern with regard to charitable organizations. Here the Attorney General properly sought to protect the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS interest in the Illinois charitable trust the TERRA FOUNDATION.

27) The common law is the evolved rule of decision from case law and English statutes such as the Statute of Uses. "Trust law" evolved at common law to govern property which is delivered by a settlor/grantor to another "as trustee" to hold said property "in trust" for the benefit of others "beneficiaries". The terms by which the trustee holds the property may be written or oral, but a trust to be valid must have a trustee and beneficiar(ies).

28) At common law a charitable trust was special and unique because the identity of the beneficiaries are not named persons or specific individuals but rather benefit the public. The common law provides that the PEOPLE, the citizens of the Sovereign of the jurisdiction where the trust is formed, are the fully vested beneficiaries as equitable owners of a fee simple interest of the charitable trust estate, as a matter of law. Where a trustee in Illinois receives property upon a promise of charitable use or upon a gift for charitable use the vested beneficiary of each and every charitable asset so delivered is the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

29) The TERRA FOUNDATION as a separate legal person, is itself a trustee. It received and accepted charitable gifts, contributions and benefits while in Illinois. The charitable gifts given to the TERRA FOUNDATION as a trustee now amount to more than $450 million in assets. There is no doubt the TERRA FOUNDATION is a legal person and that the assets given to it were made in trust, for charitable purposes and thus it is a charitable trustee. Consequently, by operation of law, the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS are the sole and exclusive vested beneficiaries of the charitable assets held by the Defendant FOUNDATION.

30) The FOUNDATION was incorporated in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not-For-Profit Corporation Act by Daniel Terra (now deceased), James Terra, Daniel's son, and Robert Sugrue under its original name "FOUNDATION For The Daniel J. Terra Museum". The FOUNDATION's first board was comprised of Daniel Terra, James Terra, and Robert Sugrue. The FOUNDATION was created in 1978 under the direction of Daniel Terra, a successful Chicago area businessman, and was formed as a philanthropic endeavor supported by Daniel Terra and his first wife Adeline, to whom he had been married since 1937, to establish a museum in the Chicago area to promote, display and educate the public about early American Art. From the date of its formation through to the present, FOUNDATION has engaged in the charitable activity of establishing and operating a public museum in Illinois, first in Evanston and then in Chicago.

31) Daniel Terra contributed over $200 million to the FOUNDATION while he was alive and he stated from time to time when making gifts to the FOUNDATION that the gifts be used to establish and operate an art museum facility in the Chicago area. In fact Daniel Terra as the chief executive officer and a director of the FOUNDATION caused it to establish a museum in Chicago, and acted and caused the FOUNDATION to develop and maintain a permanent collection of American Art, display works from that collection, and provide and sponsor exhibits, programs, and activities designed to promote an appreciation of American Art here in Chicago.

32) Daniel Terra and the FOUNDATION in soliciting public participation and support, publicly stated and represented that the FOUNDATION was committed to the charitable purpose of building and operating an art museum in the Chicagoland area to promote an appreciation of American Art in Chicagoland area.

33) In 1978, at the direction of its founder of Daniel Terra, the FOUNDATION acquired property in Evanston, Illinois at 2600 Central Street, Evanston, Illinois which it refurbished and used as its art display museum and center of educational activities through 1987. In 1985, at the direction of Daniel Terra, the FOUNDATION purchased properties at 644-670 Michigan Avenue, Chicago for the purpose of expanding its art museum activities and in 1986 or 1987 it established a public museum facility at that location opening under the name Terra Museum of American Art (Terra Museum).[1]

34) At all times since it moved to 664 N. Michigan Avenue through the death of Daniel Terra in 1996, the FOUNDATION under the direction and by actions of Daniel Terra has continued to operate a public museum called the Terra Museum of American Art at the Michigan Avenue location.

35) In addition to other public education efforts at its Chicago location, the FOUNDATION under the direction and actions of Daniel Terra created and sponsored art education programs for Chicago school children, providing access to art and art education to thousands of Chicago area school children each year.

36) For more than 20 years the FOUNDATION has publicly promoted the FOUNDATION's Chicagoland museum purposes and activities, issuing numerous public relations communications, brochures, press releases, and public advertisements, including a recent 2001 ad stating that the Terra Museum is here to stay, soliciting support and contributions as a facility for Chicago. In response to, and in reliance on, the aforesaid representation and actions by the FOUNDATION, over the past 20 years in addition to Daniel Terra, Illinois businesses and citizens have donated

[1]While it is true that in 1990, the FOUNDATION formed a subsidiary French corporation/association with the FOUNDATION's name and under the French corporation opened a small museum facility in Giverney, France where works of American art on loan from the FOUNDATION have been displayed. Unlike the Terra Museum in Chicago which is open all year, the Giverney facility is open on a seasonal basis, typically from April 1st through October 31st each year and none of the works in the FOUNDATION's collection are permanently maintained in Giverney, France.

millions of dollars in contributions and paid membership dues to the FOUNDATION to support its operation of the Terra Museum of American Art in Chicago.

37) In addition, during the period 1978 through to the present, as a result of its charitable purposes here in Illinois, the FOUNDATION has received substantial benefits from the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS in the form of substantial special tax relief, specifically exemption from Illinois income tax on its operational profits and stock sales gains, real estate tax exemption for its real estate at both its Evanston and Michigan Avenue locations, exemption from millions of dollars in State of Illinois Use/Sales taxes which would have been due on the millions of dollars spent on the purchase/use of art and equipment by the FOUNDATION here in Illinois.

38) From the date of its incorporation through to the present, the FOUNDATION has acted to establish and continuously maintain a public museum facility in the Chicagoland area where it houses and displays works of the FOUNDATION's permanent collection of American art, and where it sponsors exhibits, programs and activities designed to educate the public in the Chicagoland area about American art and promote an appreciation thereof. The FOUNDATION's museum activities have a geographical connection and indicates a use tied to its location and establishment in Illinois. The unique nature of a public museum and its tie to its location is such that its charitable mission, purpose, and intended beneficiaries are integrally linked to its physical service area location.

39) By and through its own express representations, as well as those of Daniel Terra, and through its continuous and uninterrupted operation and public promotion of its museum facility in the Chicago area, as well as its repeated and continual acceptance of gifts, grants and benefits from Illinois businesses and citizens, the FOUNDATION has represented that it intended to be a museum and educational institution for Chicagoland residents. Further, the FOUNDATION publicly demonstrated and affirmed by its actions in establishing and operating a museum and educational institution in Chicago, as aforesaid, and having further committed its operation to Illinois by operating within Illinois and accepting millions of dollars in public contributions from Illinois citizens and accepting millions of dollars of Illinois tax reduction benefits available only to Illinois charitable organizations, that its intended beneficiaries are exclusively the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

40) The Defendants attempt to support their claim of abuse with an unverified legal declaration by attorney Evelyn Brody. Her theories found in her declaration are made on mere conclusions and are not properly considered by this court. Professor Brody asserts that the Attorney General's participation in and procurement of the Proposed Settlement are inconsistent with the legal framework for the operation of charitable not-for-profit corporations. Yet in a recent law review article on charity governance, Professor Brody asserts a decidedly different view of state court and Attorney General involvement in charitable trusts. In her article, A Taxing Time for the Bishop Estate: What Is the I.R.S. Role in Charity Governance? (21 U. Haw. L. Rev. 537 (1999) Symposium Issue of the Bishop Estate Controversy; reprinted at 29 Exempt Org. Tax. Rev. 397 (Sept. 2000)), Professor Brody unequivocally states at page 543, "I believe that Congress generally intended that investigations of charity fiduciary behavior be a state, not a federal, case." Furthermore, she discussed with approval, the actions taken by an Hawaii State Court Probate Judge in an action filed by the Hawaii Attorney General seeking to remove Trustees and impose governance reforms on the famous Bishop Trust. In her Review, Professor Brody praised the Probate Court's decisive action in appointing new trustees, instituting new court procedures for selecting replacement trustees, and approving reforms on the governance and management structure of the Bishop Trust. Professor Brody supported the extraordinary measures taken by the State Court in exercising its common law powers of removing trustees and imposing institutional reforms on a charitable not-for-profit corporation, stating that the century-old Hawaiian institution [emerged] from crisis strengthened and renewed. She stated that the State Court's decisive act in appointing new Trustees and approving reforms to the governance and management of the Bishop Trust promised "a happy end to this long, sad story." (Id at 541.) A copy of the Brody Review is attached as Respondent Exhibit H. Professor Brody's statements, in her article reviewing the Bishop Estate, appear to support the intervention of the State Court and the State Attorney General to protect a charitable trust and, as her article a shows, she supports such there on the mere allegation of wrongdoing . The Attorney General assumes her remarks as supplied herein come upon a lack of familiarity with all of the facts. The TERRA settlement agreement here appoints new trustees and institutes reforms in the management and governance of the TERRA FOUNDATION very much like the result in the Bishop Estate, and this Court's approval of the Settlement here, will also bring about a happy end .

41) Defendants' threats that this position of protecting Illinois based charitable trusts will chill the establishment of FOUNDATION's in Illinois is an attempt to persuade the Attorney General from his position by implying some harm will befall Illinois by this position. However, the People respond and state that those who establish charitable trusts in Illinois will have their intended purposes fulfilled and not supplanted by the desires of those who come later after the settlor's death. The Attorney General cites to The Restatement 2d and Restatement 3d of Trusts at 348 Definition of Charitable Trust as further support for his position. A copy of the text of said Restatement is attached as Respondents Exhibit I. The position of the Attorney General protects the founder of an institution from the wishes and/or "visions" of those who come later and attempt to impose their vision and seek to alter the trust to promote their own purpose rather than continue to promote the programs established and continuously supported by the founder. However, this case at this juncture does not require a resolution of the position of the Attorney General on charitable trusts leaving this state. The FOUNDATION's board mediated the dispute, and, by and through a properly called board meeting, resolved this litigation compromising the matters in dispute. No proper challenge can be made to the settlement.

MEDIATION WAS PROPER AND DONE AT THESE DEFENDANTS SUGGESTION

42) These Defendants have in their July 2 Motion implied that mediation here was not a proper process(See: Page 2 and footnote 1). In fact, it was these very Defendants Tucker, Simpson and Terra, by their counsel, that first suggested and urged the parties and the court to stop the ongoing preparation for emergency hearings and consider mediation to settle and resolve this case. T he Defendants also charge earlier that the mediator might have a conflict by a relationship with the Art Institute . However, it was the Defendants not the Plaintiffs or the Attorney General who suggested Mr. Hilliard as the mediator. Indeed, the transmittal letter sent by these Defendants to the court for selection of the mediator had Mr. Hilliard's resume, which stated and fully disclosed his Art Institute involvement. Further a review of Defendant Tuckers May 24, 2001 new revised settlement proposal contains his suggestion of the TERRA partnering with the Art Institute (See Tucker's May 24 letter proposal attached hereto as Respondents Exhibit J). Thus, these Defendants requested mediation and embraced Mr. Hilliard and have no right to complain about imagined conflicts (See letter from Tucker, Simpson and Terra counsel dated February 1, 2001 suggesting Hilliard as a mediator Respondent Group Exhibit B).[2]

43) The Defendants also attempt, by half truths, to make it appear that Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins improperly attended mediation sessions and/or that he acted in an threatening manner at mediation sessions. Both assertions are untrue and without basis in fact. At no time since mediation commenced whether at a mediation session or otherwise has Floyd Perkins threatened, discussed or promised anything with regard to any of the individual directors, save the initial agreement for releases sought by these very Defendants that now complain. At no time did Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins speak about releases to Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall.

44) Mediation, the process, and attendance were controlled by the mediator. The Attorney General's staff never called or wrote to Directors Stebbins or Marshall. The first mediation session involved the Plaintiffs, the Defendants, and the Attorney General staff in three separate rooms. The parties did not meet each other; the mediator traveled between the rooms. After the first mediation session the mediator reported he was in contact with parties, counsel and board members, and from time to time, he asked the Attorney General's assistants about terms, but he did not provide specifics regarding other persons terms. The mediator appeared to be blending the various parties terms together seeking to find a possible consensus among the varied points of view. A second mediation session involved just a meeting of attorneys with no directors present. At both the first and the second meeting the Attorney General's staff stated its position on settlement which included that the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS would not agree to any settlement that allowed the FOUNDATION to leave Illinois.

[2] Moreover, the Art Institute is not mentioned within nor is it a part of this mediated settlement. There are no provisions that grant any rights or interest to the Art Institute.The mediated settlement places control of the FOUNDATION in the hands of its Board.

45) Because the individual Defendants Tucker, Simpson and Terra and the FOUNDATION required that any settlement resolve all issues, during mediation there was never further discussion about actions against individuals it was always a condition the directors would get a full release from TERRA related matters.

46) Mediation was ordered on February 5, 2001. At the time mediation was being considered there were several emergency hearings set and a dozen or more depositions scheduled, as well as, a half dozen document production requests. The attorneys for the Defendant FOUNDATION and the Plaintiffs were expending on average an estimated 600 to 700 hours of lawyers service hours per month at a cost of $ 150,000 to $200,000 per month per side. The staff of the Attorney General were involved in all of the same matters and the service hours required were substantial.

47) By mid-March 2001 it did not look to the Attorney General's staff that settlement would occur. It had never been contemplated that mediation would go on past March. The staff assigned to the Terra file at the Attorney General's office had a limited amount of resources available. The attorneys assigned had many other cases and the ability to match the efforts of competing law firms required creative time and service management. Of necessity to keep pace with competing law firms, during the mediation period the staff of the Attorney General continued to prepare in the event litigation and the emergency proceedings would again commence. Towards mid-March the Attorney General staff began to draft an amendment to its complaint to add the facts that had been developed and were at issue before the court on the emergency hearings regarding Mr. Neff and Dr. Stebbins. In addition, the FOUNDATION lawyers had been questioning the PEOPLE's position on the law relative to keeping the FOUNDATION in Illinois and the Attorney General at mid-March began to add and amend the complaint to add facts making its position and contention on the obligation to remain in Illinois more exact. Preparation of the draft amended complaint was being done to conform the pleadings to the proof, and if the matter did not settle, the Attorney General's office would be ready to proceed.

48) Because there had been a question raised at mediation about the Attorney General's position about the FOUNDATION leaving Illinois, at some point the staff of the Attorney General advised the mediator it had a draft amended complaint that further sets forth the facts and basis for its position and that it would be filing such if the case did not settle. Counsel for the parties were given a copy of the draft amended complaint. This was done in March 2001. The Assistant Attorneys General did not distribute copies of the draft to the directors.

49) Despite the Attorney General's belief at the end of March that settlement was unlikely the mediator assured all that he thought settlement might be possible. Counsel for all parties, including these Defendants, expressed a desire to continue to try to reach settlement. Scheduling the board members to mediate in person was reported to be a difficult process. It was reported by the mediator and the FOUNDATION that scheduling would take weeks. Finally another mediation session was scheduled for May 11, 2001, and the mediator advised that some Board members would like to hear from the Attorney General's staff directly. The mediator asked that Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris attend the mediation session on May 11, 2001. This was fully discussed with the court and all counsel for all parties and it was agreed by all that the Attorney General's staff could attend mediation meetings without the other counsel present.

50) Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris went to the mediator's office on May 11 and entered a conference room with the mediator, a number of Board members and with other board members connected by phone. At some point the mediator asked Floyd Perkins to state the Attorney General's position on settlement and basis for the position. Floyd Perkins explained the Attorney General's position and that any settlement required that the FOUNDATION remain in Illinois. Board members asked questions. A number of variations of settlement terms were proffered and discussed. At that time the Attorney General was asking that the parties agree to the FOUNDATION remaining in Illinois in perpetuity. The Board members were asking if a term of years restriction was something the Attorney General could accept. A number of variations on settlement terms were discussed. When the lunch break came although invited to stay and eat with those attending, the Assistant Attorneys General left, ate lunch on their own, and did not return until requested some time later by the mediator.

51) Throughout the mediation conference on May 11 no discussion of the individual Defendants' conduct or issues were raised or mentioned by anyone. The gist of the mediation discussions concerned why and upon what basis the Attorney General maintained the People's position about the FOUNDATION remaining in Illinois and what might be reasonable acceptable terms of settlement as to FOUNDATION governance. Often the discussions did not involve the Assistant Attorneys General. At the end of the day May 11 the parties present agreed to settlement terms. There had been no hostile remarks, threats or private promises at the May 11 meeting. Thereafter the mediator sent a written settlement document which contained the terms agreed to on May 11, 2001 a copy of the mediators May 15, 2001 settlement draft is attached as Exhibit "K".

52) After the May 11 meeting, it was generally believed there was a settlement. However shortly thereafter the mediator advised that certain terms of the agreement were in dispute. After the May 11 mediation meeting, Defendant Tucker sent a letter suggesting a completely different set of terms from that discussed May 11. A copy of Tucker's May 24 letter settlement proposal has been previously attached as Exhibit "J".

53) Director Marshall also sent a May 21 letter stating that she wanted to continue settlement discussions but had some issues with the mediator's May 14 proposal and in her letter she set forth a number of changes and suggestions. In her May 21 letter Dr. Marshall suggested that: the agreement requiring the FOUNDATION remain in Illinois for at least 50 years was acceptable but she did not agree with the provision that the Attorney General would have to authorize a leave by the FOUNDATION after the 50 year period; she also questioned the May 11 document's provision that the majority of the Board be forever from Illinois; she had concerns about the agreement requiring and totally empowering a committee to negotiate a further partnership for the FOUNDATION; and she raised concern about a provision that allowed the new chairman certain power per the settlement. Dr. Marshall explained her reasons in her letter and urged consideration of her issues and stated she would continue to discuss settlement. A copy of Dr. Marshall's letter of May 21, 2001 is attached as Exhibit "L".

54) The mediator thereafter advised he thought settlement might still be achieved. A number of letters were circulated by Directors. The court ordered that the parties continue with mediation and empowered the mediator to schedule another mediation session. The court directed that the parties and the directors physically attend another mediation session or attend by phone if circumstances did not permit actual attendance. The mediator appeared to be speaking regularly with various persons, parties and directors. The staff of the Attorney General were told by the mediator that he was working on modified draft settlement terms with the FOUNDATION's counsel. On or about June 15 the mediator mailed out a proposed adjusted mediation agreement and the parties and directors met on June 19, 2001 to discuss settlement further. The mediator requested that the Assistant Attorneys General attend the session. Assistants Attorney General Floyd Perkins and Therese Harris attended the June 19 mediation session. At that session the parties did not discuss issues with regard to the individuals, and the agreement continued to provide a release for all directors on all Terra related matters. The mediation session on June 19 did not involve threats, but rather concerns and discussions on the terms of the settlement agreement.

55) On June 19, the parties addressed each of the issues Dr. Marshall raised in her May 21 letter. The May 11 provision requiring the Attorney General to authorize a move from Illinois was changed to providing the Attorney General with only notice if the FOUNDATION in 50 years wants to leave Illinois. The compromised agreement was that the issue of the FOUNDATION leaving Illinois was postponed and will only be dealt with if the FOUNDATION after 50 years decides to leave Illinois. The May 11 requirement that a majority of Board members must be from Illinois was compromised and reduced from a permanent requirement, to a requirement for only 25 years. The May 11 process for selecting the five new board members was modified and instead a group of 12 persons was placed for the election to be conducted by the board upon an election on June 29. Ms. Marshall's concerns about the agreement giving unusual powers to the chairman and the strategic planning committee were also addressed and compromised. Dr. Marshall's May 21 letter requests that the Attorney General recognize that the Giverny museum was a proper and acceptable activity for the FOUNDATION was addressed and such was included. Dr. Marshall's May 21 letter request that the right of the FOUNDATION to control its affairs freely was acknowledged in the settlement. The mediated settlement on June 19 was reached in an all day discussion of give and take and involved the efforts of the many participants to reach a majority and party consensus. There were no threats made in mediation. A copy of the June 19 settlement agreement signed by the parties and six directors that day is attached as Exhibit "M".

DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL WERE NOT SUBJECTED TO WRONGFUL DURESS

56) The Defendants in their filings attempt to make it appear that the Attorney General's staff introduced issues concerning Mr. Stebbins during mediation. The matters concerning Dr. Stebbins are those matters stated in matters filed prior to mediation commencing. Those matters were the subject of planned emergency hearings when this case went to mediation. Mr. Stebbins denied those allegations, as did the FOUNDATION and the Defendants themselves. Those matters were being worked into the draft amended complaint of the Attorney General, but the allegations were already of record and the draft complaint being developed was in that regard only conforming the complaint to the proofs as the Attorney General asserts. These Defendants Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson and Judith Terra participated in settlement knowing that all Terra matters were going to be resolved including the issues and allegations raised against them as individual Defendants. They knew when they started the mediation that a release of Stebbins and all directors was something they requested.

57) The Defendants Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson and Judith Terra requested and obtained the agreement at the start of mediation, that settlement should / could resolve all related claims and issues and it was clear from the start such included issues related to all directors. It is only now when these Defendants did not prevail in settlement that they raise these red herring issues.

58) The staff of the Attorney General's office, including Mr. Perkins never discussed, talked or communicated with Dr. Stebbins other than to exchange hello at two mediation sessions, and participated in those sessions only with the others present. At no time was Dr. Stebbins' conduct mentioned or discussed at mediation by anyone. Nor at any time did Dr. Stebbins ask the Attorney General's staff about the issues raised with regard to him nor did the Assistant Attorneys General speak or communicate with Mr. Stebbins about matters related to his conduct.

59) Dr. Marshall by her May 21 letter clearly was trying to keep the mediation process going. However, at that time Defendant Tucker and others were seeking vastly different settlement terms. As evidenced by Tucker's new mediation proposal of May 24, 2001 a copy is attached as Exhibit J. The staff of the Attorney General, upon learning that Defendant Tucker was suggesting very new and different terms than those agreed to on May 11 again became concerned that settlement might not occur. Having halted work on the draft complaint after what had appeared to have been a successful May 11 settlement session, the Attorney General's staff on or about May 22 again began to prepare for litigation. It began again with drafting the amended complaint and began looking at additional facts and matters to include in the draft amended complaint.

60) From December 2000 until mediation commenced in February 2001 concerns over the supervision and operation of the FOUNDATION arose and those concerns were in part set forth in the filings pending before the court when mediation commenced. It was thought some might need to be added to the amended complaint. The facts were that many of the long term supervisory personnel for the FOUNDATION were no longer on staff. The FOUNDATION's two curator directors had left abruptly. The emergency matters before the court when mediation intervened concerned the end of employment for long time curator John Neff and issues of management concerns. The FOUNDATION's day to day supervisors had been on staff little more than a year and a part time director/curator was hired and serving where the FOUNDATION had had two curators in the past. A review of the financial records of the TERRA FOUNDATION had raised a number of financial matters to be looked at if litigation went forward. For example: Travel and Entertainment expense had risen from $50,000 in 1996 when Mr. Terra was alive to over $300,000 in each fiscal year 1999 and 2000; in 1999 miscellaneous expense was listed as $88,000, but in fiscal year ended June 30, 2000 miscellaneous expense was $1,500,000; a footnote to the FOUNDATION financial statements stated " The documentation of the educational program plans and the decision to use endowment (restricted) earnings was not maintained." Copies of related FOUNDATION financial records showing these financial facts are attached as Group Exhibit N .

61) These concerns over the day to day operations of the FOUNDATION could not be ignored and required the Attorney General's staff to examine the financial records and to determine if the FOUNDATION was being properly managed and safeguarded. Of concern was the fact that the FOUNDATION's president was only serving part-time, his full time position was as a professor of art in Boston, Massachusetts. The curator /director was only part-time and new and working out of New York. The FOUNDATION has staff and substantial assets to protect in Chicago and also in Giverny , France. The curator from France had resigned. The question of who was controlling the FOUNDATION personnel, affairs, expenses and operational needs day to day was of necessity being reviewed by the Assistant Attorneys General in preparation for further litigation. The staff of the Attorney General at the end of May, began to re-look at these matters to determine if any needed to be alleged in the draft amended complaint and who from the FOUNDATION was responsible, and/or subject to deposition, etc. relative thereto, if and when litigation re-commenced.

62) The FOUNDATION's officers at the time were Tucker as president, Marshall as Treasurer and Terra as vice-president. The staff of the Attorney General were reviewing the limited financial records in their possession and sought to assess who was supervising the FOUNDATION's affair and financial activities day to day. Dr. Marshall was the treasurer and an assessment of her function, scope of responsibility and ability to discharge financial supervisory oversight was begun by the staff of the Attorney General at the end of May. Months before the staff of the Attorney General had been told Dr.. Marshall was a state employee at a special state school. It was known she received compensation from the Terra FOUNDATION. It was shortly determined she was also being paid to be a director of another charity.

63) An examination of the state school web-site was made. The web-site stated Dr. Marshall was the president of both the school and a separate charitable organization Fund, which Fund supported the school. Whether Dr. Marshall's employment contract at the school restricted her from other paid positions had been raised and discussed in prior discovery planning conferences but not resolved. A visit to a public web-site that lists all teachers salaries showed Dr. Marshall was receiving substantial pay as a state school employee.

64) Having become aware of Dr. Marshall's several competing obligations on several boards, the fact Dr. Marshall was listed as the president of the separately incorporated charitable Fund , that the separately incorporated fund raised money solely for the school, that the reports of the Fund on file with the Charitable Trust Bureau of the Illinois Attorney General's office reported that the Fund made donations to the school, that said reports showed that a portion of the money transferred to the school by the Fund were restricted in use to paying compensation at the school, aware the web-site listed Dr. Marshall as president of the Fund and after noting that certain restrictions existed on employees of the school controlling a separate organization which supports the school, Floyd Perkins as Bureau Chief of the Charitable Trust Bureau issued an administrative statutory order under the Charitable Trust Act and Charitable Solicitation Act to the school and Dr. Marshall to cause review of certain matters by the production of Dr. Marshall's employment contract on matters wholly unrelated to the TERRA FOUNDATION. These non-Terra related facts were discovered on or about May 23 to May 25 as set forth above and the order to produce was mailed on May 25, 2001.

65) Dr. Marshall's employment contract was produced by counsel on or about June 15 and it content expressly permitted her to have other employment. She did not appear or otherwise make communication with the Attorney General's staff at any time. Counsel for the school informed the Attorney General's staff that the web-site was in error, and that Dr. Marshall was not the president of the separately incorporated supporting charitable Fund.

66) No one from the staff of the Attorney General spoke with Dr. Marshall or otherwise communicated with her at any time except for common courtesies at her attendance at the June 19, 2001 mediation session. No one made or offered to involve issues from the school and related supporting Fund with the matters concerning the TERRA FOUNDATION.

67) The type of inquiry made by the Attorney General's Office relative to the school and its related charitable Fund would be classified by this Office not as an investigation but a review and inquiry. The Attorney General's staff makes numerous inquiries, conducts many audits and reviews many charitable organizations each year. Often when reviewing a matter other issues regarding other entities result in a further and additional review. Reviews by the staff of the Charitable Trust Bureau does not indicate that the law has been violated. Said reviews are done under the authority of the Charitable Trust Act and the Solicitation of Charity Act to allow the Attorney General on behalf of the People as beneficiaries of charitable trusts to examine the affairs and operations of charitable trusts. It is the duty of the staff of the Attorney General Charitable Trust Bureau to review matters when they become aware of facts and issues that create questions concerning the use of charitable funds.

68) Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall were asked at the June 29, 2001 TERRA FOUNDATION board meeting if their votes were obtained by duress. Counsel for the FOUNDATION read in open court the statements made by both Mr. Stebbins and Ms. Marshall made by them at the Board meeting on June 29, 2001. In sum, both Drs. Marshall and Stebbins stated they were not coerced or intimidated and that in voting for Terra FOUNDATION mediation settlement they were acting as responsible fiduciaries. A copy of the transcript of the board minutes is attached to Defendants Objections as Exhibit 26. A copy of the tape of the board meeting is attached as Respondents Exhibit A.

69) There had been no contact with Dr. Stebbins of any sort. Dr. Marshall's May 21 letter concerns were all written before the Attorney General's order to produce was mailed. The issue of her employment contract restriction and role as to the separate fund was resolved before the June 19 mediation session. The June 19 proposed settlement resolves and deals with Dr. Marshall's issues regarding the FOUNDATION as expressed in her May 21 letter. Moreover this court is aware that Dr. Marshall wrote a letter on June 5, 2001 criticizing part of the process and demanding that the mediator adjust the process. Her letter of June 5, 2001 shows she was not intimidated and shows she was participating in the process. A copy of Dr. Marshall letter of June 5, 2001 is attached hereto as Respondents Exhibit O. Moreover the only items requested by the discreet inquiry of Dr. Marshall's school was her employment contract and she knew it allowed her to have other paid positions. There was never any issue raised concerning the state's support of the school.

70) The FOUNDATION board meeting was chaired by Dr. Marshall, and her voice and remarks at that meeting when heard on tape leave no doubt she was proceeding without coercion. At the June 29, 2001 Board meeting counsel for the FOUNDATION raised the concerns about the Attorney General's review of Dr. Marshall's school and asked if Dr. Marshall or Dr. Stebbins were coerced or were under some form of duress. Both Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins explained at length that they were under no duress and were acting of their free will and were properly discharging their fiduciary duty. Both stated they believed the mediated settlement was in the best interest of the FOUNDATION. A review of the taped recorded Board meeting leaves no doubt that both Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins were acting of their own will and under no duress and the Defendants Judith Terra and Paul Tucker were present at said meeting and heard said remarks and their actions of presenting their motion herein is a violation of Supreme Curt Rule 137.

71) In fact no one was intimidated or coerced by Floyd Perkins or anyone else at the Attorney General's office. All actions taken were done professionally and with full and proper legal authority. No promises or inducements outside of the terms found in the four corners of the negotiated settlement agreement were offered or made to Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall by anyone.

72) The fact is the right to TERRA related releases was obtained by these Objecting Defendants and any complaint about their effect was waived by these Defendants in seeking mediation and in obtaining the terms of TERRA related releases for all directors. The Defendants do not explain the facts laying out what they have termed intimidation and coercion, because if they did it would be clear they have no facts to show unlawful conduct. Not only were there no unlawful exchanges, there were no promises at all provided to Dr. Marshall. Further the action of preparing to move forward in a case is not unlawful. The institution of the review and inquiry into the unrelated matters concerning Dr. Marshall were lawful and proper and done with full and proper authority.

The Illinois Appellate Court in Towne v Town of Libertyville , 190 Ill.App.3d 563, 546 NE 2d 810 (2nd Dist., 1989) , rejected as baseless the Plaintiffs claim that Libertyville had engaged in a wrongful act or duress in settling one condemnation claim by purportedly initiating a separate condemnation claim against a separate parcel which plaintiff claimed was not properly subject to condemnation. The court there providing:

> "Neither is there any basis in plaintiff's complaint that defendants instituted a baseless lawsuit which effectively placed plaintiff under duress, forcing him to settle the litigation. Duress is defined as "a condition where one is induced by a wrongful act or threat of another to make a contract under circumstances which deprive him of the exercise of his free will." ... It is not duress to institute or threaten to institute legal actions, nor is it duress for a person to assert his legal rights. ... Plaintiff has failed to provide any specific facts which would support a claim of duress. Plaintiff merely concludes that it was an abuse of process for the township to institute legal proceedings because of his subjective belief that his property did not qualify for condemnation under the Open Space Act. It is clear that the township could, in good faith, institute such proceedings even where there was doubt as to whether the property was exempt under the 50-acre minimum or the agricultural exceptions to the act." (190 Ill. App. 3d at 569.)

73) In Regenold v. Baby Fold, Inc., 68 Ill.2d 419, 369 NE2d 858 (1977) the Supreme Court of Illinois in discussing the meaning of duress citing to its decision in People ex. Rel. Drury v. Catholic Home Bureau , 68 Ill.2d 433 states:

> The Restatement (of Contracts section 492 in defining "duress") does not use the term "unlawful act" that this court used in Drury, but instead uses "wrongful" as the descriptive adjective. This appears to be the meaning generally applied to "unlawful" in modern cases involving duress. (See 25 Am.Jur.2d Duress and (68 Ill.2d 434) Undue Influence sec. 3 (1966).)

74) In People ex. Rel. Drury v. Catholic Home Bureau , 34 Ill. 2d 84 (1966) the Illinois Supreme Court adopted the definition that had been applied in cases involving conveyances and commercial transaction defining duress " as a condition which exists where one is induced by the unlawful act of another to make a contract or perform or forego an act under circumstances which will deprive him of the exercise of his free will" 34 Ill. 2d 84.

75) There is no basis to negate the rights of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to vote on the subject settlement and there is no basis to have an evidentiary hearing. If there is any doubt, the court should play and listen to the taped June 29 , 2001 FOUNDATION board meeting in open court, and then there will be no doubt.

THE PLAINTIFFS HAVE NO BURDEN OF PROOF AS TO THE FAIRNESS OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT OF THIS CASE; RATHER, THE BURDEN IS ON THE DEFENDANTS TO SHOW THAT THE SETTLEMENT IS UNFAIR.

76) The Defendants contend, as a threshold matter, that the Plaintiffs (and in particular the Attorney General) bear the burden of affirmatively proving that the proposed settlement, reached by the FOUNDATION's Board of Directors itself pursuant to this Court's directive that the case be mediated, is fair to everyone, and that the settlement must be held for naught if there is any doubt on that score. That notion is fundamentally mistaken, and it stems from a body of law applicable to private class-action lawsuits which has no application to the instant case.

77) As a general rule, the public policy of this State favors compromise, and it encourages settlement of cases as an alternative to the consumption of judicial resources that a full-blown trial would entail. (E.g., McCracken v. R.L. DePrizio & Associates, 122 Ill. App. 3d 680, 683 (1st Dist. 1984) ('[as] an effective means of promoting judicial economy, settlements are favored and, in the absence of material mistake or fraud, are conclusive on the parties as to all matters included therein and will not be lightly altered or set aside"); Willis v. Reum, 64 Ill. App. 3d 146, 147 (2nd Dist. 1978); Opper v. Brotz, 277 Ill. App. 3d 1024, 1026 (3rd Dist. 1996).) As such, where a settlement or compromise of litigation has been reached between the parties, the burden is on objectors to show that the proposed settlement is materially unfair, not on the proponents to show that it is fair. (Id.) This idea applies with especial force in the instant case, for the Court itself has not only urged the parties and the FOUNDATION to settle the case but has specifically ordered the mediation process whereunder the proposed settlement was reached.

78) In arguing that the burden should instead be on the Plaintiffs (and in particular on the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS) to affirmatively prove that the resolution reached by the FOUNDATION's Board is fair to all interested parties including "absent" ones, the Defendants cite a litany of authorities which involved private class-action lawsuits brought on behalf of a "class" of allegedly similarly-situated plaintiffs by one of their alleged number. (E.g., Waters v. City of Chicago, 95 Ill. App. 3d 919 (1st Dist. 1981); Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago v. Ingram Corp., 85 Ill. 2d 458 (1981); Steinberg v. System Software Associates, 306 Ill. App. 3d 157 (1st Dist. 1999); In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Products Liability Litigation, 55 F. 3d 768 (3rd Cir. 1995); see 2 Herbert B. Newberg & Alba Conte, Newberg on Class Actions sec. 11.42 (3rd ed. 1992).) As such, they are inapposite to the instant case, which is brought on behalf of the PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS not by one of their number who merely purportedly has a representative interest in the outcome but by their Constitutionally-designated legal representative, the Attorney General of Illinois, who represents the collective interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in charitable trusts and charitable assets by operation of law and to the exclusion of all others, including members of the public seeking to sue individually. (E.g., Holden Hospital Corp. v. Southern Illinois Hospital Corp., 22 Ill. 2d 150, 157 (1961); Art Institute of Chicago v. Castle, 9 Ill. App. 2d 473, 478-79 (1st Dist. 1956); Kolin v. Leitch, 343 Ill. App. 622, 628 (1st Dist. 1951); People ex rel. Courtney v. Wilson, 327 Ill. App. 231, 242-43 (1st Dist. 1945); G. Bogert, The Law of Trusts and Trustees sec. 414 (rev. 2nd ed. 1991).)

79) This distinction is vital. The theory behind requiring a definitive showing of fairness of proposed settlements in the private-class-action context is based on the fact that typically the members of a private class of plaintiffs each have an individual right and cause of action in their own right which, but for their aggregation within a court-certified class, they would otherwise be able to assert one by one against the defendant. Because their inclusion in the class might result in their losing otherwise-protectable individual rights should the class representative prove not to be truly representative of their interests, the class members must be afforded a full opportunity to opt out of the class action and courts must be vigilant in ensuring, through appropriate inquiry, whether the purported "class" really has enough in common to constitute a class for purposes of the lawsuit and whether the purported class "representative" really does represent the interests of the class members as opposed to having an agenda of his own which might conflict with the interests of other members of the class. (See, e.g., Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago v. Ingram Corp., 85 Ill. 2d 458, 471-73 (1981) (holding that, because of this, a class representative must be held to a strict fiduciary standard on behalf of those he purports to represent).) None of these considerations are present in the instant context, however. As noted in the cases cited above (Holden Hospital Corp. v. Southern Illinois Hospital Corp., 22 Ill. 2d 150, 157 (1961); Art Institute of Chicago v. Castle, 9 Ill. App. 2d 473, 478-79 (1st Dist. 1956); Kolin v. Leitch, 343 Ill. App. 622, 628 (1st Dist. 1951); People ex rel. Courtney v. Wilson, 327 Ill. App. 231, 242-43 (1st Dist. 1945)), actions such as the instant one brought by the Attorney General to protect a charitable trust in the name of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS proceed from the theory --- rooted in the definition of the Attorney General's office in the Constitution of Illinois --- that the Attorney General is the only party who can bring such actions and that the rights of the citizenry in enforcing charitable trusts, though quite real, is a collective right which is merged into the right of the public as a whole.[3] That right is represented by the Attorney General as a matter of law — not as a result of any class certification as to which detailed fact finding by the Court would be appropriate — and (at least absent convincing evidence of specific wrongdoing brought forward by the objectors) it must be presumed that the Attorney General acts properly and in accordance with the law when he acts in the discharge of his duties (United States v. Morgan, 313 U.S. 409, 421, 61 S. Ct. 999, 1004 (1941); Scott v. Dept. of Commerce and Community Affairs, 84 Ill. 2d 42, 55-56 (1981)).

[3] Indeed, Professor George Bogert, the noted commentator on charitable trusts, has emphasized that representation of the public interest by the State's Attorney General is a necessary feature of the law of charitable trusts: "[Whereas] [i]n the case of private trusts the dangers of long continued neglect or other breaches are not great [because] [d]efinite or ascertainable persons have a financial interest in enforcement and can bring suit against the trustee .... in the case of charitable trusts there are usually no private persons who are the equitable owners of the trust property and who can take the lead in suits for enforcement." (G. Bogert, Proposed Legislation Regarding State Supervision of Charities, 52 Mich. L. Rev. 633, at p. 633 (1954).)

81) For the foregoing reasons, the Defendants are incorrect both in their contention that the burden is on the Plaintiffs to prove the fairness of the proffered settlement (which, it is worth reiterating, was reached by the FOUNDATION's own Board pursuant to a process of mediation that this Court itself ordered) and in asserting that there are "absent parties" whose interests the Court must take into account. While the Defendants purport to identify those "absent parties" as members of the art-appreciating public who might prefer to have the FOUNDATION's collection located elsewhere, the fact remains that, as members of the general public, their interests could never be pursued individually on a one-by-one basis but --- arising as they do from a charitable trust based and incorporated in the State of Illinois --- are subsumed collectively into and represented by the Attorney General of Illinois as a matter of law. Therefore, as in every other case where the interested parties are properly represented before the court, the proposed settlement in this case should be presumed to be acceptable to the public beneficiaries of the FOUNDATION's charitable trust based on the Attorney General's acquiescence therein, and the Defendants should be held to a strict burden of proving unfairness if they wish this Court to reject the proffered settlement.

THE DEFENDANTS PROVIDE A NUMBER OF HALF TRUTHS, MISSTATEMENTS OF FACT AND MISCHARACTERIZATION

82) Defendant Paul Tucker provides several affidavits in support of his specious charges in the Objections. (Tucker affidavits are Defendants Objection Exhibits 9 and 19). The Tucker affidavits like all others submitted by the Defendants fail to comport with proper affidavit requirements, are not made on personal knowledge , do not recite facts to conform to Rule 191, and contain surmise, conclusions and speculations instead of admissible facts, and his affidavits are objected to and should not be considered herein. During mediation (prior to May 11, 2001 mediation meeting), proposals being circulated provided among other terms for Tucker and several board members to withdraw from the FOUNDATION, in exchange provisions for making Paul Tucker a compensated member of an advisory committee to the FOUNDATION was interjected into mediation discussions for consideration, that term came from the Defendants not the Attorney General. A copy of the March 6, 2001 mediation proposal is attached as Respondent's Exhibit P. Defendant Tucker at the May 11, 2001 mediation session when the discussion of some board members leaving including Tucker. Tucker again raised the compensated advisory board position as a concern at the May 11 mediation session. As the mediator's May 14, 2001 mediated settlement shows that provision for a paid role for Tucker was not included in the May 11 proposal. (See Mediator Hilliard's proposal of May 15, 2001, Exhibit K). A cynical person might suggest that Tucker thereafter rejected the May 11 settlement because it removed him from his role as a compensated officer and did not provide the advisory committee role he sought in mediation to receive.

83) Defendant Tucker in his affidavit attached as Objectors' Exhibit 19 and Defendants contend the current settlement limits the FOUNDATION's future making it a captive of the Art Institute. It fact the mediation agreement does not obligate the FOUNDATION to the Art institute. Indeed, as stated earlier the mediated agreement provides a course specifically considered and discussed in the several strategic planning committees. Moreover Defendant Tucker in rejecting the May 11 settlement (reported by the mediator's document dated May 14, 2001) Sent his own new settlement proposal on May 24, 2001 which expressly seeks to lock the FOUNDATION into a relationship with the Art Institute (See Tucker's proposal terms of May 24, 2001 , attached as Respondent's Exhibit J.)

84) Attorney John Longwell supplies an affidavit purporting to be a record of a discussions between counsel, said affidavit does not meet Supreme court rule 191 and is filled with conclusions and in several respects misstatements facts and in other points contains out of context attributions. Longwell asserts Mr. Perkins generally refused to discuss matters. He does not say Mr. Perkins participated in a 2 ½ hour interrogation demanded by Defendants counsel. Longwell misrepresents the positions of Mr. Perkins as to discussing the theories of the cases and issues regarding Dr. Stebbins. What was aid was the theory of the case is no longer relevant and a debate of our various items of evidence not something this office wishes to spend time since the case is settled. The matter of Dr. Stebbins was fully discussed , and it was made quite clear the basis of issues regarding Dr. Stebbins was made in the filed filings in December 2000 and January 2001. Mr. Longwell attempts to place great importance on my offices position that our internal attorney work product would not be shared, clearly he is unfamiliar with Illinois law on that subject. Longwell's affidavit at page 2 bottom references purported remarks made by Floyd Perkins about relying upon the directors verified facts for filing the initial lawsuit, but it was not in response to what Longwell sets forth there above regarding Dr. Stebbins. The purported restatement of remarks on the top of page 3 are likewise out of sequence. When asked how we came to learn of the initial case, Floyd Perkins advised he received the filings. When asked if he spoke with Plaintiff's counsel over the weekend between the plaintiff's filing of a complaint and the Attorney General's filing the following Monday, Floyd Perkins advised he did speak with Plaintiff's counsel , but not the Plaintiffs (Longwell gets this wrong in his note taking) , and further advised that he, Floyd Perkins had conducted an investigation of this FOUNDATION in 1989 and had also been significantly involved in the Estate of Dan Terra and the matters that related to the FOUNDATION then. A true and correct copy of a letter sent by the FOUNDATION to Floyd Perkins in 1989 is attached hereto as Respondent's Exhibit Q, which from its content shows that Floyd Perkins long before September 2000 knew about the TERRA FOUNDATION and its purposes. Thereafter as Defendants counsel began to badger Mr. Perkins and repeat questions, they were advised those matters are closed and settled and what this office knew or did to prepare for suit was none of Defendants business. Mr. Longwell's simplifies the discussion about Dr. Marshall. The details of what was done are set forth above, and the matters of looking at Dr. Marshall were not to make charges against her, but rather to ascertain who and in what manner the part-time officers and depleted staff operated the FOUNDATION. There are further misstatement and out of sequence attributions in Longwell's submission but insufficient time and space for respondent to resolve here.

85) The Defendants raise certain issue relative to the existence of Amended Articles of Incorporation of the FOUNDATION. The Attorney General attached the un-amended Articles of incorporation to his complaint, the amended articles which defendants banter about when compared to those attached to the Attorney General's complaint bring nothing legally significant to this matter, and as stated above it is the restriction made by gifts from the founder which effects and controls the type and scope of charitable activity for the FOUNDATION .

86) This court's order of February 5, 2001 ordered that nothing stated in mediation would be admitted or useable in evidence. The defendants have by their Objections attempted to use mediation actions and activities and submited such herein. Respondents have set forth the forgoing to defend themselves against the outrageous remarks made against them, and to assure and satisfy this court that the settlement was entered into freely and properly. Respondent and Floyd Perkins do not waive or agree that the activities and remarks of mediation can be used in evidence and assert and contend that the defendants Objections are in direct violation of that order and its provisions and is a violation of the agreement of the partics to mediate and that these Defendants have waived and are foreclosed from raising same or using same as evidence.

Wherefore the People contend there is no evidence to support not approving the settlement; the Defendants by calling for mediation and actively participating in such for months without objection waived all rights to claim and alleged consequential personal benefits are a breach of fiduciary, particularly here where the provision for a global settlement of TERRA matters was first requested and interjected into mediation by these Defendants Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson and Judith Terra. The Court should find there in no evidence of duress, no evidence of breach of duty, no basis in fact or law to prevent this settlement, that said settlement is squarely within the purposes of the FOUNDATION's Charter and there is no showing it is not within the past operations of the FOUNDATION (in fact it is within past operations of the FOUNDATION and in fact merely continues the past operation of the FOUNDATION) and deny the Objections to the settlement and approve the mediated settlement and enter the Consent Decree.

Respectfully submitted,

MESSRS: FLOYD PERKINS and THOMAS IOPPOLO, Assistant Attorney Generals.

Circuit Court of Cook County
County Department-Chancery Division

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

THE CLERK: Buntrock versus Terra, 00 CH 13859.

THE COURT: The attorneys planning to address the Court, please step up. Identify yourselves for the court reporter. I'd like to start first with plaintiff's counsel.

MR. CARROLL: Good afternoon, your Honor. James Carroll on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. KENNEDY: Good afternoon. John F. Kennedy on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. QUINLAN: Good afternoon, your Honor. William R. Quinlan on behalf of Plaintiffs.

MR. IOPPOLO: On behalf of the State of Illinois Thomas Ioppolo from the Attorney General's office. And Mr. Perkins will be here momentarily.

MISS STONE: Good afternoon, your Honor. Susan Stone, S-T-O-N-E, from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins and Chris Todd for the defendants, your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm certain this is going to be a long afternoon. I don't want everybody to be uncomfortable. So you are welcome to sit at counsel table.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

I have pretty much an order of proceeding I'd like to go through today. I want to go through, first of all, the pleadings that I have received to make sure that I have everything. And I am also going to want to go through the proposed consent decree. I have a lot of questions. I was just presented with the decree just a few minutes before you were here the last time. I didn't have the opportunity to analyze it, but I would have liked to before July 2nd. So I have many of my own questions.

And then we have to get to the issues that are up today which are issues that are presented by the objectors.

If you can find yourselves comfortable places at counsel table. If you want to take a few moments to unshuffle and set up the way you want. It's going to be really long and you're going to be really tired very soon.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, I do have one preliminary matter once we get through what you wanted to go through in terms of housekeeping, I'd like to address that. It may shorten the proceedings.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001685

THE COURT: What kind of matter?

MR. CUMMINS: Well your Honor, we believe in the interest of justice and consistent with the record that is now before the Court, that particularly given our pending motion for discovery, that this hearing ought to be adjourned until we get that discovery accomplished.

THE COURT: I understand what you're about to say, but you're miles ahead of me. That's down here at the bottom of the pile. And I've got to do it in order or I'm going to lose track of it.

MR. CUMMINS: If I may though I'd be happy to explain in short terms how we might get there.

MISS STONE: Another housekeeping matter, your Honor. When you're done making it clear for the record what you've received, and after you've asked whatever questions you want to ask about the proposed consent judgment, I do believe it would be appropriate at that time to allow the Foundation to go first, since it is our motion.

THE COURT: Everybody just make yourselves comfortable. I'd like main counsel at counsel table. I'm sorry we don't have a large enough courtoom. I'm sorry we don't have enough chairs. There may be some in the conference, if anybody wants to pull one out.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001686

MR. IOPPOLO: Mr. Perkins is here now.

THE COURT: Mr. Perkins, it's going to be a long afternoon. They may be pulling some chairs out of the conference room. I'm sure you don't want to stand.

When this case was last in front of me, July 2nd, it was in front of me for status to find out whether or not the mediation that had been progressing for approximately four months had concluded.

About twenty five minutes before court was to open I received the one page letter from Mr. Hilliard saying that there had been a mediated agreement. And just a couple of moments before court was to start I received from the Foundation a proposed consent judgment and order. And at that time it was not signed by anybody. There was no indication that it was in final form. And there was no motion being made to approve it.

We had an extended proceeding because there were objections that were being raised before the court. And those objections were being presented by counsel from Washington as well as the law firm of Bellows and Bellows.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001687

The Court heard those objections and at the end of the day determined that the orderly way to go about this was a formal motion from someone, which turned out to be the Foundation, to approve a settlement agreement, and an opportunity to respond to those objections.

I set a briefing schedule. And this matter was then set for today for me to determine whether or not there needs to be any kind of an evidentiary hearing, or whether we can go ahead and consider the approval of the proposed consent decree.

Since you were all here the last time I have received a number of things. And many of those documents have either been presented to the Court in sealed envelopes or filed with the clerk under seal. And we need to clear that up before we start and do anything here.

I want to go document by document and talk about unsealing as much as we possibly can because I'm not quite sure what's filed under seal and what is not filed under seal.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001688

On July 2nd when we were here the last time the Bellows firm presented me with an order which was directing the clerk to accept the documents which they had presented the preceding week, on June 29th, directing the clerk to accept those documents under seal. And I granted that. And I nunc pro tunced that order essentially allowing the clerk to accept those documents.

Those documents were the original objections that were being propounded by the Bellows firm and they included most of the documents that were filed in the Federal Court.

After the hearing on July 2nd, at the conclusion, however, I determined that the defendants, the objectors, should not be granted leave to file those objections because we didn't even have a motion at that point to accept the settlement agreement. And before objections were formally filed I wanted to see what it is the Court was being asked to do.

So those documents remain sitting there under seal, but technically they haven't been granted leave to file them. And I just propose at this time that we leave those documents where they are, unless there is a strong objection, which I'll be glad to hear at the end, and just go one by one through everything that has been filed since, I think everything that has been filed since was included in those original documents anyway. I hope that was clear.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001689

Since you were in court I've received a notice of motion from the Terra Foundation. Now my copy was blank and it just said please take notice that on such and such a day, blank, we're going to appear and present the motion for the entry of a consent judgment.

On the copy of the motion for consent judgment that I have is not filed stamped. Now I'm assuming, Miss Stone, that the Foundation filed this.

MISS STONE: Yes, that's correct, your Honor. It was merely a courtesy copy for you. I apologize that the date of the hearing was not on there.

THE COURT: It says you're going to present it on a certain day. And I assume that today is the day that you're going to present it. I just want to be sure. This had been filed, has it not?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001690

MISS STONE: Yes.

THE COURT: It was filed openly. Anybody who wants to see it can see it.

MISS STONE: That's correct.

THE COURT: After that was filed I received from Mr. Cummins objections of Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson. And as counsel on those I received these objections late in the afternoon on July 19th. I had a question as to what was going on. And my paralegal called everyone and you all appeared on July 20th. At that time the Bellows and Bellows law firm was granted leave to withdraw and Mr. Cummins firm, Cummins and Crocin was granted leave to substitute as local counsel with the Washington counsel remaining as before.

Now those objections, and as I indicated to you all when you were here, as far as I was concerned those could be public. There doesn't seem to be anything too terribly secret in those objections or sensitive. It's the exhibits to those objections that were of concern.

Did you file those under seal, sir?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, we filed the transcript and

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001691

the exhibits under seal. But after you ruled the brief was not treated under seal. And your Honor, our position is none of this should be under seal.

THE COURT: I understand. We're going to try to unseal everything that can possibly be unsealed today.

The objections of Judity Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson have been filed with the clerk. They're public?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Now we've got the 35 exhibits to the objections. I'd like to go through them one by one. Does everybody have them with them? That's the second document that I got.

The Board minutes from April 25th of 1990. That's some of the most interesting reading I've ever had. Any reason why we can't have that in the court record?

MR. CUMMINS: No.

THE COURT: As far as the Foundation is concerned?

MISS STONE: No, your Honor, there is no reason why it cannot be.

THE COURT: The Planning Committee meeting of

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001692

August 7th, Exhibit 2. Now I understand that those minutes, as some of the others here, have never been approved by the Board. And with that caveat I don't see any reason that those can't be made a public record. Is there something secret in those strategic planning--

MR. CUMMINS: No, your Honor. We would recommend they be made part of the public record.

MISS STONE: We have no objection.

MR. KENNEDY: We have no objection.

THE COURT: I want to go through the rest of them pretty quickly, 3,4,5,6 should all be unsealed. Those are pleadings in this case, articles of amendment, the restated bylaws. None of that should be sealed.

Number 7 is the Longwell affidavit. And that goes to Dan Terra's intent. I think that should be unsealed. I assume there is no problem with that.

MR. CUMMINS: No objection.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, without admitting to the accuracy of the transcription we have no objection.

THE COURT: Mr. Perkins, do you have any problems with that?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001693

MR. PERKINS: Except for the accuracy, no problem Judge.

THE COURT: And number 8 I have a little problem with. It's a letter from James Collins who had been the attorney of the Foundation from Bell Boyd to Dan Terra. That is a December 6th, 1989 letter. It's kind of old and everything. But is this attorney client privilege, is this something we should be concerned about here? On behalf of the Foundation, Miss Stone?

MISS STONE: It obviously raises an issue, your Honor, of attorney client privilege, which of course the Foundation does not waive.

I am not precisely clear how it was that the individual defendants came in possession of this. They may indeed have come into possession of this by virtually their role as directors of the Foundation. I don't believe any particular individual director can however waive a right of privilege which the Foundation as a corporate entity possesses.

THE COURT: This says confidential in big letters up on the top. And it looks like it was written by the attorney for the Foundation to the chairman of the Foundation in his capacity as chairman. It really doesn't have a lot of exciting stuff. A lot of this stuff is old or whatever, but still I think we probably should keep this sealed under attorney client privilege, unless Mr. Cummins you want to convince me otherwise.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001694

MR. CUMMINS: I don't know that anyone can assert that it's been protected as privilege. I do see it says confidential, but the subject matter and the substance in this letter has been argued back and forth in all kinds of papers well before I arrived at the scene of this accident.

So I don't see any reason that it ought to be kept confidential. And I don't think that there is any serious compromise of any interest as a result of its publication.

It clearly reflects the intention of Mr. Terra is clearly inconsistent with the position of the AGA and the Foundation at the present time.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I have to object.

MR. CUMMINS: Well the AGA doesn't have any position to object.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, again on behalf of the

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001695

Foundation the Foundation does assert attorney client privilege over any communications going either way from an attorney for the Foundation, which Mr. Collins was at this point in time, to Mr. Terra who was then chairman of the Terra Museum.

THE COURT: I don't want to get hung up on this letter forever. Mr. Cummins, how did you all get this?

MR. CUMMINS: I can't answer that question, Judge. I'll find out. One of the preliminary things I was going to address, and I am relying largely on papers that were previously filed by Mr. Quinlan on behalf of his clients Buntrock and Gidwitz. I'm going to object to anything Sidley and Austin does in this case today because based upon the assertions of Mr. Quinlan and his clients they are conflicted in this proceeding. That is one of the reasons we want to adjourn it. We believe Winston and Strawn is conflicted, We believe Sidley is conflicted. And we think that these are serious issues that have to be addressed by the Court as a premise to this entire proceeding.

I just want to make that of record.

THE COURT: It's on the record. And to the extent it's an objection, it's going to be overruled.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001696

We have been through the Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it. The Appellate Court reviewed it. I know that Mr. Quinlan probably totally agrees with you generally on the whole subject matter, but maybe today he disagrees.

But Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation and they have not been removed and I don't see a conflict so let's just move on.

I'm going to keep this letter, it really doesn't do much. I've read it all, I'm going to keep it sealed for now. If you want to come in later and have it unsealed. If you concede that this was somehow in the public domain, attached to a pleading, that somewhere along the line the attorney client privilege got waived we'll open it up. For those of you who have not seen this letter, it's really nothing heavy anyway.

The next thing, Exhibits 9, 10,11, 12, 13 are all documents that relate to Dan Terra's intent. They were declarations filed in Federal Court. They should all be unsealed.

Fourteen I want to unseal. That's a mailing address announcement. The Simpson declaration in Federal Court is 15. That should be unsealed.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001697

Now we have the documents in mediation. And I want to keep those sealed at this point. They are the Attorney General's draft terms, that's number 16. The modification, I've read all of these by the way. Number 17, the second modified red line version. That should stay sealed.

Number 18, that's the letter from Mr. Stebbins to Collins. I don't see any reason not to have that one unsealed. Does anybody think that that one should stay sealed? Okay, that one is unsealed.

Mr. Tucker's affidavit in Chancery, which is number 19, is unsealed.

Strategic planning minutes of May 10th, with the same caveat, I don't think those have ever been approved, but I think they should be unsealed.

Number 21 Miss Marshall's correspondence about mediation, her position, I think that should remain sealed.

Twenty two, unseal.

Twenty three, AG's first amended complaint in Chancery. I want to keep that one sealed. That was never filed. And there is no issue that it was circulated. We're going to unseal the fax transmission, 24, but not the document itself. I don't see that it's going to serve any purpose.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

Number 25 is going to stay sealed. Once again, that's a document from mediation.

MISS STONE: I believe it's also attorney client privilege. It's from Mr. Stebbins to Mr. Carlson and myself in our capacity as Foundation counsel.

THE COURT: Thank you.Number 26, a transcript of the Board meeting conference call. Now that's the one that I got first. That's the one that I read. I just want to clear up one other thing here. I got this transcript and I read it over this weekend. I marked it all up. Then yesterday I got the tape and so I listened to the tape with the transcript. And I caught at least one big thing that kind of jumped out at me.

And so I had my paralegal call Miss Stone today to verify that was not Mr. Stebbins talking. I'm on the version of the transcript that was attached to the objectors' exhibits. I'm on the version of the transcript that was pages 18 and 19. Where it says male voice and it's Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Stebbins again and the part where he presumably said I want protection. Well when I read it that wasn't Mr. Stebbins's voice at all. And I went back and compared voices and spent a lot of time with the tape and realized that was Mr. Gidwitz talking.

16di-001699

Again I realize after I had done all of this and after a telephone call had been made to Sidley that there was another version of this whole thing. Remember Sidley was supposed to give me at the time you gave me the motion to approve the settlement agreement you were suppoed to give me the transcript. I never got that transcript.

MISS STONE: It is attached to the brief we filed yesterday. We apologize we did not get it to you sooner. I have an additional copy.

THE COURT: I saw it just within the last half hour attached to your thing yesterday. And I didn't realize the two versions were different.

MISS STONE: We made it available to all counsel.

THE COURT: Does everybody agree that the version that is attached to the Sidley papers is the correct version?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001700

MR. CUMMINS: I know it's different in that respect. I noticed that myself. I haven't heard the tape, Judge. I'll take your word for it.

THE COURT: It's definately different. And I figured out without knowing about the other transcript it's Mr. Gidwitz.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, that portion of it you're absolutely correct.

THE COURT: So I don't see any reason why that can't be unsealed. We are dealing with Exhibit 26 now, the transcript.

Moving on down, the motion for--number 27 unsealed.

Twenty eight unsealed.

Twenty nine unsealed.

Thirty unsealed.

Mr. Perkin's letter, 31, is sealed. That relates to the mediation.

The Tribune article on the Ragenstein Settlement, unsealed.

And the last three letters, 33, 34 and 35, unsealed.

The objector has leave at the close of today to file the unsealed exhibits with the clerk as a separate document.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001701

The next thing that I received were documents that came in yesterday. And they are the Terra Foundation's objections. And I should mention for the record that the original objections that were filed in this case were 28 pages long. And I thank the counsel for the Terra Foundation. You are the only counsel that complied with this Court's standing order of the15 page limit on all filings.

MISS STONE: If you're right, you can be brief, your Honor.

THE COURT: And I appreciate that very much. There were no separate set of exhibits from the Terra Foundation.

MISS STONE: That is correct, your Honor. We did submit under seal, and I presume you would have one unsealed, the transcript of the Board meeting, the correct version.

THE COURT: I didn't get that. It should be unsealed. There is no reason for it to be sealed.

MISS STONE: And we did attach a few pages of the transcript from the last hearing.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001702

THE COURT: Right, and that wasn't sealed So your documents were not sealed, is that correct?

MISS STONE: Our brief was not sealed. We have now, today, filed an unsealed version of the transcript of the Board meeting on June 29th.

THE COURT: All right, because what I got was this sealed document here.

MISS STONE: That is the transcript.

THE COURT: That is the transcript. Okay, I thought that was an extra copy of your reply. It doesn't say it on the outside. It says on the outside--now I'm reading it correct, it is the transcript. So there is no reason to file this with the clerk.

MISS STONE: We did file it in an unsealed version with the clerk of the court.

THE COURT: Diane, this is not to be sealed. Take it out of the envelope and refile it. Consider it filed.

MISS STONE: Thank you.

THE COURT: The Quinlan documents that came in yesterday from the plaintiff, in that regard we have a motion for leave to file in excess of 15 pages. And they have a document which is 25 pages

16di-001703

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

long with exhibits. And attached thereto are Exhibits (a) through (L), and I'd like to go through them one by one.

The first set of them are the documents we spoke about the other day, relate to the documents, about appointing a mediator and those names. I have no problem if you unseal that provided that you take out all the other names with the exception of Mr. Hilliard in that last paragraph. I just don't want to have all these other names about proposed mediators out there.

The letter from Mr. Crow, which is Exhibit (b) unsealed taking out the other three names and leave Mr. Hilliard's name in. That's the important thing there.

MISS STONE: I'm sorry, your Honor, just for clarification, the previous indication about what could be unsealed with the deletion of other names would be Exhibit (b)?

THE COURT: No, the first one is Exhibit (a) unseal that, but in the last paragraph take out all the other names with the exception of Mr. Hilliard. Does that make sense?

16di-001704

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

MISS STONE: Yes. Would that also be true with (b)?

THE COURT: (B) we're going to take off all the names except Mr. Hilliard.

Exhibit (c) can be unsealed. Exhibit (d) is unsealed. (e) is unsealed. (f) is unsealed, (g) unsealed.

(H) that's the correct transcript, or the correct transcript that was filed already. That's unsealed..

The proposed consent judgment (i) is unsealed. (j) is unsealed, (k) is unsealed. And as far as I'm concerned (L) should be unsealed.

So the only thing in this whole group of stuff that should be sealed are the other mediators names, proposed mediators names. The rest of it is all open.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, may I just have one moment to closely study (L) which is the communication from the Foundation's attorney to members of the Board?

THE COURT: It's the conflict policy.

MISS STONE: I understand the conflict policy

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001705

itself is probably an appropriate matter of open communication. I'm just merely pausing a moment to read the memorandum itself.

THE COURT: Sure. Take your time.

MISS STONE: Just as long as it appears, your Honor, the Foundation is in no way generally waiving the attorney client privilege, we will not object.

THE COURT: Fine, leave that one unsealed. Now I have the People's response. Mr. Perkins outdid everybody with 45 pages coming in yesterday. And we don't have, I think, a leave to file, separate motion for leave to file on Mr. Perkins' one. And I have the various exhibits to Mr. Perkins. And a couple of these I am really looking for some guidance here as to what to do.

So let's go from the beginning. As far as I'm concerned the tapes can be a public record. I don't have a problem with the tapes. Does anyone have a problem with the tape?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge.

THE COURT: Well right now it's back in my tape machine and I will be giving it to the clerk. And it will go down to the clerk's office today. But we will unseal that.

16di-001706

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

The defendant's counsel's letters regarding the mediators I would just simply say the same thing. I would say, and once again this is Mr. Perkins, so you're going to be in charge of your own exhibits. Did you file this all under seal?

MR. PERKINS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay, well most of it is going to come unsealed. The letters, take out all the other names and take out all the resumes of the other people. And that's on your Exhibit (b).

I've gone ahead and tabbed all of these. And I realize your versions, counsel, are probably like mine and they are not tabbed. So if I'm going too fast and you're trying to find these just tell me to slow down.

James Terra's affidavit, unsealed. James Terra's lawsuit, unsealed. Daniel Terra's Will, I assume that's public because it's been filed. That's unsealed.

Okay, what are we going to do with this tax return?

MISS STONE: Could you give me a moment, your Honor.

THE COURT: That's Exhibit (f).

16di-001707

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

MISS STONE: Your Honor, we obviously as counsel for the Foundation did not represent the deceased, Daniel Terra, nor do we represent his estate, nor do we represent his executor James Terra. However, none of those individuals are in court today. I imagine that if they were here they would argue that indeed there is some confidentiality which adheres to the IRS tax return.

THE COURT: How did they get it?

MISS STONE: I'm not sure, your Honor. I believe it was the AG that filed this.

THE COURT: Oh the AG got it, I'm sorry. How did you get it?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, we have been participating in the estate of Dan Terra since it initially started. This is part of the closing report of the estate.

THE COURT: Is it filed with the clerk of the court?

MR. PERKINS: I don't believe it is, Judge.

THE COURT: Does anybody think this should even be in our record as far as the public record?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001708

MR. PERKINS: There's no privilege attached to it, but it should remain sealed.

THE COURT: Anybody want this public? Okay, I'm going to leave it sealed unless there is some reason to make it public.

What about the balance sheet of the Terra Foundation as of June 30th, 2000? Is that a secret?

MR. PERKINS: It's a public record in our files, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay, it's unsealed. Professor Broday's article is unsealed, the statement of trust, if anybody really wants to read it, is unsealed. Dr. Tucker's May 24th letter, let me get to that one. That's a mediation letter, is it not, we're going to keep that one sealed?

(K) keep that one sealed. That's the letter, that's the thing from the mediator, is it not, his draft after the first settlement. So keep that one sealed.

(L) Dr. Marshall's May 20th letter.

MISS STONE: Mediation.

THE COURT: Keep that one sealed. (M) the June 19th settlement agreement. That one was already

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001709

unsealed.

(M) The Foundation's financial records. Are those also you got from your file, Mr. Perkins, that's a public record? Anybody can go to your office and find out?

MR. PERKINS: All but one page.

THE COURT: Which one page can the public not find out?

MR. PERKINS: I believe it says draft on this.

THE COURT: Endowment income?

MR. PERKINS: Endowment income.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, on behalf of the Foundation I have not had a chance to consult with any representative of the Foundation to verify what the Attorney General is saying with respect to the public nature of these documents.

They were initially filed under seal. I didn't realize that today we would be engaging in this unsealing process. If we could with respect just to this document and also the other document.

THE COURT: The June 30th balance sheet?

MISS STONE: If I could have a moment to consult with the client and report back to your Honor within a day or two.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001710

THE COURT: I don't have any problem. Just make it before Thursday if we're going to unseal it. I assume that there is not going to be a problem about unsealing them. I hope you give me an order saying they're going to be unsealed. If they are going to remain sealed, you better give them notice and tell them why.

That is exhibit (M) we were just talking about. Dr. Marshall's June 5th letter remains sealed. Exhibit (P) remains sealed.

And what do we do with the 1989 Foundation letter to Mr. Perkins? Have you all looked at that thing? That's got all kinds of stuff in it.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, it was a confidential communication between the Foundation and Mr. Perkins. At the time, it was drafted back in 1989, the draftor of the letter comtemplated that it would be used for litigation purposes.

I think that it is stamped confidential. Quite frankly I have not gone through it on a line by line basis to find out what would be objectionable from an unsealing point of view because it was under seal. And again I wasn't aware that your Honor was going to engage in this analysis today. I would also like leave to consider this and report back by Thursday.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001711

THE COURT: Okay I don't have a problem with that. But this one I think probably should be unsealed. But I don't know. I mean there's a lot of stuff in here. Mr. Cummins, what about this letter?

MR. CUMMINS: We think it ought to be a part of the public record, Judge. In fact with respect to some of the other exhibits that you tentatively identified as remaining under seal we would like to address those. Because we're going to ask you to reconsider on some of them, particularly given the narration of facts that is set forth in Mr. Perkins' submission. He lays all kinds of stuff out about who said what to whom in these proceedings that were supposed to be confidential.

I think the whole question of confidentiality has been rendered moot.

THE COURT: Well Mr. Perkins' brief is not being filed under seal, is it?

MR. PERKINS: It was originally, Judge, because of the nature of what we put in there in light of mentioning things that occurred in mediation. We took the safe road and filed it under seal. We would like to have it released. We are not asking that it remain under seal, but that's to be decided.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001712

THE COURT: Let me just check from everybody. Plaintiffs, how do you feel about the Attorney General's brief being under seal or not under seal?

MR. QUINLAN: I guess our position would be it's pretty hard to have a brief that's under seal.

MISS STONE: I would agree with that as a general proposition. I would note that at points in his brief the Attorney General sees fit to describe some of the details of his inquiry into the Illinois Math and Science Academy. Again, I don't represent that Academy. I don't represent Dr. Marshall in his capacity of president of that academy.

I would note it would not be at all surprising if the Academy feels there is some privacy concerns or confidentiality concerns which are raised by that filing. I don't have any standing to raise those, but I bring that to your attention as an officer of the Court.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001713

THE COURT: Okay and I know you all want everything unsealed,

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, your Honor. One other thing maybe I should fall on my sword for this one. I did not perceive that the objections fell technically within the purview of your 15 page limitation.

I would like leave to file the extended documents nunc pro tunc.

THE COURT: Okay, you have leave to do that. I am concerned and I was concerned about the Illinois Math and Science Adademy allegations and the things that are in the Attorney General document. I'm going to keep the Attorney General's brief sealed for now. And maybe most if not all of it can be released. It was hard enough getting through it, because when I say 45 pages it's not even the normal type and the normal spacing. It's much much longer. It will take us much much longer here to identify what should come out and what should not. And I don't think we should take that time today. Leave

SF-1L-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001714

that one under seal. That is all of the documents that I want to talk about as being sealed or not sealed. Do you want to be heard on objections to those?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, we will, for example the first amended complaint of the Attorney General was circulated to a lot of folks. It is not subject to any consept of confidentiality that I'm aware of. And that is an example of one of the documents that should not be subject to any protection.

Let me say this, I want to argue strenuously why this document in particular is the predicate for our, among other things, request for discovery and our predicate for suggesting that there are conflicts that have not been addressed with this Court as yet.

So there is just no legitimate bases for contending that this document should be protected and confidential.

THE COURT: Miss Stone, do you want to be heard on that one? I'm concerned about Dr. Stebbins. I'm concerned that there are allegations that the Attorney General decided to put on paper but decided not to file. And they have never been filed.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001715

And what purpose would there be to have this public now?

MISS STONE: I couldn't say it any better, your Honor. This is a matter involving a Board member. This pleading, proposed pleading, was not actually filed. We don't know if it would meet the strictures of Rule 137.

The Attorney General, for whatever reason, chose not to file it. It's really a question of whether at this late date, this 11th hour we are in the process of trying to get the Court to enter an agreed settlement, whether something which has once been contemplated by one party in the thick of litigation should now be made part of the official record.

THE COURT: Does the plaintiff have any position on the filing of that document?

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, our position would be similar in that generally that document would probably be public. In this instance Miss Stone makes a good point, there are allegations in there that may not be a-if this proceeds we can revisit the issue at that time. I do agree there are some interests that perhaps don't need to be invaded.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001716

MR. PERKINS: Your Honor, your February 5th order said that communication with regard to mediation purposes remain private, private among the parties. That was the document that was sent to the lawyers. It is a transmittal letter. It makes clear it is in regards to settlement. It was transmitted in mediation. To suggest there are certain theories, set forth in our response, is thoughtless.

In addition the reason it wasn't filed we were in the middle of mediation, your Honor. We were not allowed to file any additional pleadings. It was the hope of the parties it would be settled and not be employed in litigation. So it was sent in the communicated position with regard to what we were alleging with regard to certain issues. And it was part of the settlement.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, I just need to understand this. There have been a lot of reputations of prominent people in this case, not the least of which is your client, that have been brought shall we say brought into question, perhaps wrongfully, in this case.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001717

And is there any reason to add more to that? It is stipulated that, it's an agreement here that while the case was in mediation the Illinois Attorney General prepared the document and circulated it among counsel. And that document contained some allegations about one of the other directors on this Foundation. And sought to add him as a party defendant, it was not done. Isn't that enough?

You've all seen it. I've seen it. You can argue from it all you want to argue from it, but do we have anything else put out there?

MR. CUMMINS: Here's theproblem. Number 1) it is our position that was nothing but a litigation ploy to force Dr. Stebbins to take a position that he didn't intend to take, or want to take. And that remains subject to him being cross examined I would respectfully suggest.

Let me make one other point, Judge. Those allegations go right to the issue of his disinterestedness or lack thereof. That's the conflict, putting aside coersion and all this other stuff. That's right at the heart of why this gentleman could not legitimately vote on this proposed settlement.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001718

And what we have here is another problem. When you directed that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins and Mr. Perkins might be available to be interviewed after these issues came up. it was at your suggestion. When my colleagues attempted to pursue that Sidley and Austin stepped in on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and said he ain't going to be interviewed.

THE COURT: I requested that Mr. Perkins meet with you all. I don't think I said anything about the other two.

MR. CUMMINS: Okay. If I've overstated it, I apologize. The point is this, we now have Sidley and Austin wearing the hat of the Terra Foundation. We have Sidley and Austin wearing the hat of Dr. Stebbins' lawyer with respect to these issues of conflict. This is among the issues, we think, are critical to your fair and adequate review of this proceeding.

So it's important for us, and we're going to argue, you know the essence of the allegations involving Stebbins was the following. He used confidential information, this is the allegation, I assume the Attorney General didn't do this in bad faith. He alleges that Dr. Stebbins used confidential information of the Terra Foundation to the advantage of some other foundation incident to other--

16di-001719

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

MISS STONE: I'm sorry, I don't--

MR. CUMMINS: Excuse me, Miss Stone, may I finish? May I finish, Judge?

THE COURT: To ahead.

MR. CUMMINS: The allegation is, and I'm not buying into this stuff necessarily.

THE COURT: Then why are you saying it?

MR. CUMMINS: Because, Judge--

THE COURT: We have had it here before in a little bit more oblique nature on the motion to disqualify Dr. Stebbins from the special litigation. And none of that has been presented. If you look at the complaint the Attorney General wants to file, the complaint seeks Dr. Stebbins removal, that's what it does. Nothing else. It seeks the removal of Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, the amended complaint. It seeks his removal as a Board member.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, I--

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I object to any discussion whatsoever. If there's going to be any discussion, this ought to be in chambers, your Honor.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001720

MR. CUMMINS: Well your Honor, here's the problem. According to the Attorney General there is a significant public interest here. Now we want to say don't let the public know about what the attorney general has done, but what they allege.

THE COURT: They have not filed it, and it is not a public pleading. I don't know whether or not it was in final form. I don't know whether or not Mr. Perkins has decided to file it. I don't know whether at the end of the day Mr. Perkins thought there was any merit to it.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, your Honor--

MISS STONE: I don't mean to interrupt counsel I'm just curious, are we arguing about whether or not this document should be unsealed?

THE COURT: He would like to have it unsealed. I'll let you argue about that issue. But at this point I am going to keep the documents sealed.

MISS STONE: With respect to Sidley and Austin's role, your Honor, we are here, as we've always been, representing the Foundation. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins personally, we do not represent Dr. Marshall personally. We represent the directors of the Foundation.

16di-001721

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

THE COURT: Let's get to the proposed consent decree, because I have quite a few questions about that. Do you want me to sign my name to the piece of paper that is entitled consent judgment and order, is that correct?

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: And attached thereto the resolutions, or would it just be the consent judgment?

MISS STONE: I do not believe the resolutions are themselves part of the consent judgment order. I believe only Exhibit (a) which is the press release.

THE COURT: Okay, I am going to retain jurisdiction to enforce this. And one of the reasons that I'm asking all these questions is because I need to have a clear understanding of what this consent judgment does and doesn't do. In the event that I sign it I need to know how to interpret it in the future. And I have recently gotten a consent judgment back from 1975 that was done by four to five predecessors ago who was handeling this calendar.

And sometimes these transcripts of these proceedings and what the parties were thinking about at the time these consent judgments were entered into is very important for future people in order to interpret any problems that may come up.

SF-1L-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001722

Now I know that when this case was sent to mediation by agreement of the parties there were some motions pending, not the least of which was a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the special litigation committee. There was a motion to appoint a receiver for the foundation. I believe that there was also a motion for judgment on the pleadings pending, but I'm not certain, from the Foundation.

So in the preamble here you have the Terra Foundation having moved to dismiss those counts. Did I not rule on those two? Didn't I deny that motion to dismiss?

MISS STONE: You did, your Honor, that's an accurate representation of the history of the case.

THE COURT: It sounds like that's the pending motion and it hasn't been decided and there was a pending motion to dismiss those two counts.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001723

MISS STONE: I believe, your Honor, if you feel it's more appropriate, more accurate to say the Terra Foundation for the Arts having moved for judgment on the pleadings, we can simply keep a list of all those suggested changes or revisions, and if necessary we believe as a matter of corporate law we need to take that back to the Board and resecure a vote, we can do that.

I believe that that sort of administrative modification would fall within the purview of what the Court authorized Miss Marshall to do when they authorized her to sign it.

THE COURT: When I read that it sounded like an unresolved motion to dismiss, that's the one that I did resolve. It's the motion for judgment on the pleadings that I didn't. I went back to my pleadings file and I'm pretty sure that one was done.

MR. CUMMINS: Simpson filed a 2-619 motion.

MR. CARROLL: There was a motion pending besides the Foundation's motion.

THE COURT: So I'm going to ask counsel, counsel is going to have to make that paragraph accurate as to what exactly was pending at the time we went into

16di-001724

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

mediation.

MR. CUMMINS: And of course we filed an answer and--

THE COURT: You filed a motion for leave to file.

MR. CUMMINS: I did that, your Honor, in deference to your direction. We don't think the motion is appropriate.

THE COURT: Okay.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, that does not accurately reflect what the state of the record was at the time the Board voted on. The motion for leave to file a counterclaim had not been made at that point.

THE COURT: Okay. This may open a whole new hornet's nest, but is there any problem with the defendants filing their answer, just their answer, not the counterclaim?

MR.QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: What?

MR. QUINLAN: First of all you have a motion on file, which is a motion for judgment on the pleadings and several defendants have joined that. They have to withdraw that motion before--

MR. CUMMINS: Withdrawn.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001725

MR. QUINLAN: Well, you have to ask leave to do that, sir. And first of all we're not there.

THE COURT: So are you saying there was a formal joinder by the defendants in the Foundations' motion for judgment on the pleadings?

MR. KENNEDY: Correct. And there is a motion to dismiss by defendant Simpson.

THE COURT: My problem with the intro paragraph was that it reflected a motion that had already been adjudicated and did not reflect it was pending at the time you went into mediation.

MR. QUINLAN: There is another issue here too, the motion to accept the consent decree and accept the agreement. That's the first issue you have to address, if you address that and you rule in our favor there is nothing left to consider.

THE COURT: That's what I'm getting to next. Let's just assume I just decided I was going to sign this piece of paper and you have your consent judgment, I'm not quite sure what you have because this does not do anything with the cause of action against Mr. Michaeli. Mr. Michaeli was sued in the plaintiff's case. This releases officers, directors, agents or employees of the Foundation. Plaintiffs plead that he was a friend of Mrs. Terra and had no fficial position. This doesn't release him.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001726

MR. QUINLAN: It does because it would dismiss our cause of action. He is only answering as a defendant, your Honor. Paragraph 13 dismisses these actions with prejudice. So that action would be dismissed against him. He suffers no harm. He is released. There is nothing that he stands in jeopardy of so that there is no interest that he has.

THE COURT: So it's dismissing everything you have, it's gone as of the date I sign this, including Mr. Michaelis's cause of action.'

MR. QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay, how can I say in the first paragraph, parties having reached an agreement? You don't define the parties. And as I understand the parties to this case they include Judith Terra and Alan Simpson and Dr. Tucker and they haven't agreed to anything.

MISS STONE: That is an important issue, your Honor. I think parties here refers to parties to this agreement not the totality of all the parties.

THE COURT: You need to say that. If you listen to that tape, do you remember that motion that Miss Marshall wouldn't vote for on the tape that went on and on and on? That was all about this issue too. This document as it's written doesn't even reflect what happened in that meeting.

16di-001727

MISS STONE: That's not correct, your Honor. The attempt to change, articulated by Mr. Stebbins which Dr. Marshall did not support was the idea of somehow forcing the individual defendants to release their right. Well the individual defendants have chosen not to join in the settlement agreement, that's their legal right. They cannot be forced to relinquish whatever legal rights they may have.

So the language that was not added was to say that the Plaintiff Directors hreby release everybody and the Foundation and the individual defendants hereby releast everybody.

That was the change Dr. Stebbins was suggesting. It was denied. I do believe for clarification purposes though, your Honor, it would be helpful to amend this to say the parties rather than hereto, it would be wise to say the parties to this agreement.

THE COURT: Could you say the plaintiffs, the Attorney General and the Foundation having reached

16di-001728

an agreement. And then in paragraph 2 where it says the parties desire, and it says the parties hereto, make it clear who they are that's desiring to settle it.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, can I just raise a question. I think that these matters that you are addressing are substantive in nature. It cannot be that this Board dealt with these issues in arriving, even assuming arguendo, you give any credence to that vote, this Board didn't have these things in mind, and I'm sure there's more questions.

THE COURT: I don't think that's a substantive thing. I did it for clarification.

MISS STONE: It is clarification. And it was particularly and vigorously debated at the meeting. And there was not a consensus by six directors to force somehow, even if they could, the individuals to give up any rights.

THE COURT: I do have a substantive one coming up. This one I don't consider substantive. There is one that may cause a little bit more problem.

Paragraph 3 of the consent decree the last phrase where it says which shall be available to the

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001729

Attorney General. They're available for the Attorney General anyway, aren't they? It's not changing anything is it, Mr. Perkins or Miss Stone?

MISS STONE: I think you have to read the sentence in its totality. They're saying for 50 years the Foundation shall also maintain not only its principal office, but its books and records.

THE COURT: Which shall be available to the Attorney General, that was the which part that I just wanted to ask. Are there books and records available to the Attorney General anyway?

MISS STONE: There are right now. What this in effect does is precludes the Foundation from moving books and records to let's say Washington, D.C. for 50 years.

MR. CUMMINS: I don't know, Judge. The folks contemplated when they drafted this was what if this Foundation runs out of money. What kind of an order is this? What kind of a decree is this that some entity has to be in existence for 50 years. God forbid if something untoward happens. This provision doesn't make any sense to me.

MISS STONE: I think it's safe to say we can

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001730

leave that argument for another day, your Honor. I understand your Honor is seeking clarification for certain paragraphs.

THE COURT: Paragraph 14. I don't have any problem with the first sentence. But why should I sign my name to that second sentence? If you all agree that the only thing you're going to say is this release, Exhibit (a), the directors all agree that that's what they're going to do and they're not going to talk to anybody, that's fine. But why should I order that? Is there any reason that one can't be changed to say that the plaintiff Directors, Attorney General and Foundation have agreed that no other public statement?

Here's my problem. You're setting me up for contempt proceedings if you all talk to people. And I don't want to sign an order that says you can't talk to people.

MISS STONE: I appreciate the Court's perspective on that. I think there are two points that have to be made. First we are here merely trying to communicate to you what the will of the majority of the Board is. I do believe that a majority of the Board believes as do the other settling parties, that it would be in the interest of everyone to finally put this to an end.

PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302
SF-IL-24A

16di-001731

As you know, the reputation of this Foundation as well as the reputation of certain individuals, has been tarnished in this litigation. I dare say there are reporters in the courtroom today, as there have been in prior instances, and so I believe that the people who entered into this agreement were trying to get to put some teeth into this.

The second point. This is really not very different from what your Honor has done in the past. In the past you have entered orders saying there should be no public statements made about mediation.

THE COURT: That's all, period. You all went into mediation. I talked to all counsel. You all came up with that idea, let's keep the mediation confidential. And you all gave me an order by agreement of everybody to keep the mediation confidential.

But this, you don't want the agents, the employees of the Foundation to talk even about the

16di-001732

litigation?

MISS STONE: I think the sentiment here, your Honor, and again it was shared by the various people who are advocates of this agreement, is that enough is enough. It was time to put this litigation behind the Foundation and allow the Foundation to get back to the business of art appreciation rather than the slings and arrows of litigations and PR battles.

And I believe that that was something that the Board members desired. Do I know to what degree of intensity they would want to adhere to that? I don't. I don't think there was extensive debate about this particular sentence at the Board meeting, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: As a matter of fact it was not extensive debate it wasn't discussed. Read the transcript.

THE COURT: I have.

MR. CUMMINS: Well Judge, this is a provision that no Board has passed on. And quite aside from the fact that I just want it clear that our defendants intend to say whatever they have to say to protect their interests.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001733

THE COURT: I understand, your defendants are going to say whatever they have to say and we have a First Amendment and they can do that. This is really directed to them. They made an agreement. This document was circulated well in advance of the Board meeting. They all had it in front of them. Everybody was talking at the Board meeting about they had the right copy, the documents were in front of them.

Everybody had that. And I assume that was all part of what everybody anticipated was going to be approved.

MISS STONE: It was circulated to all of the directors. Your Honor, I would think if anything the individual defendants would revel in the fact that the Foundation is agreeing to be quiet on this and the settling parties are agreeing to be quiet on this. The individual defendants can speak at length to the press about this if they so chose. They are not in any way bound by this or gagged by this.

Again your Honor, I think this is really not too different from what parties do from time to time at the culmination of litigation where they say let's let bygones be bygones. We'll agree to keep this confidential and not talk about this ad nausaem with the press. Let's move on.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001734

If your Honor is uncomfortable with this provision, we can communicate that back to the Board and the Board will pass it without that sentence being included.

THE COURT: You can all agree not to say something if you want to. That's all up to you. I have a problem ordering that no other public statement should be made by any of you, including the Attorney General. He might agree not to say anything, but why should I order him?

MR. QUINLAN: We find ourselves in a difficult position. I think that is what everybody agreed on. I do think if there is a problem with your Honor siging this order. But the intent is not to say anything about this lawsuit now. Whether it's 20 years from now or 15 years from now that's up to them. It's an agreement.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, you will do what you

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001735

abviously think is advisable. I do believe as a corporate law matter it would be necessary for us, as Foundation's counsel, to go back to the Board with whatever revisions your Honor would insist on. I don't think I can unilaterally say oh, yes the Board is in favor of this settlement agreement modified. That would have to be put back to a Board vote.

I'm not saying that's impossible. I'm just pointing out a practicality.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, the only thing I disagree on is Miss Stone's indication she thinks she has to go back to the Board. This is an interpretation of the law. I don't think it has anything to do with going back to the Board. Everybody has agreed. We still agree. That has not changed.

But the point is I don't think we need to go any further. Your Honor has expressed your opinion. I frankly have, I think everybody has a problem with how you would enforce in the future. What we're saying is at least for ten years we'd have a mutual agreement that this is going to be our press statement. This is going to be our statement and that's it.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001736

THE COURT: Then why can't that last two sentences be changed to a combined sentence that says the plaintiff direcots, the Attorney General and the Foundation agree to the mutually accepted press release attached as Exhibit (a). And agree that no other public statement shall be made. I mean that's real simple. Think about it.

MISS STONE: I think that's a good solution, your Honor. I don't think that will require further Board action.

THE COURT: Okay, those were the first set of questions I have. I have a lot of questions about what this consent decree means, about what the Foundation can do and not do world wide, United States wide, or whatever. But my goal is also not to wipe out my court reporter. So I'm going to ask if you want to take a break right now or do you want to go for about another fifteen minutes?

THE COURT REPORTER: Another fifteen minutes is okay.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, in making your comments is it correct for me to assume that you have not made any determination as to whether or not the

16di-001737

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

underlying vote is valid?

THE COURT: No. I've read everything that you've written. In fact I've read every exhibit. I can't say that I have read absolutely every word of everything they have given. But I have read everything that you have done.

MR. CUMMINS: That's all that's necessary.

THE COURT: And I am willing to hear whatever argument you want to make. And I have not made up my mind. But I do have a lot of questions. And the answers to these questions have to do with whether or not I am going to sign my name or not. So I need to get the answers to some of these questions.

MR. CUMMINS: Thank you.

THE COURT: The directors, Section 2 (b) of the resolution, if you look at the Board resolution. Section 2 (b) says that the class one directors may not stand for reelection at any time. And they use the word there may not stand for election at any time.

The consent decree, paragaph 8, says will not stand for reelection. I'm signing my name to the consent decree, if I approve your motion. So I'm siging it it says will not stand for reelection. Is that clear that that means election at any time? As opposed to reelection at the end of their term? Boards have people go off. They go off for six years or whatever and they come back.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001738

And is the idea that the entirety of the 11 people that are on this Board will never come back for election at any time?

MISS STONE: I believe that is the intent of the majority of the directors of the Foundation.

THE COURT: So you don't see that as inconsistent with the resolution. Should we make paragraph 8, if it needs to be signed, consistent with the resolution? Which says may not stand for election at any time.

MISS STONE: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. That one is changed. That will clear things up. Who is in the best position to give me a little bit of information about the issues of the five proposed new directors? Would that be Miss Stone? Would that be Mr. Quinlan? Who knows something, just tell me something about each one of these five individuals?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001739

MR. CUMMINS: Would this include their political affiliation?

THE COURT: No. I don't want to tell you which ones I don't know who they are because it sounds like I don't know a lot of people. But I just want to know who these people are. Tell me who they all are.

MISS STONE: Sure. Your Honor, on behalf of the Foundation it probably is appropriate for us to give you a quick overview of these various individuals. This was a very much compromised state. I do not claim to know any of these individuals' backround in great detail.

My partner Mr. Sabel, corporate law partner is with us today especially assisting us with corporate law matters. I think he is more intimately familiary. With the Court's indulgence I would like to ask him give that.

THE COURT: Sure. Would you just state you name and spell your last name for the court reporter.

MR. SABL: Sure it's Charlie Sabl.

THE COURT: Tell me who each of these five are.

16di-001740

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

MR. SABL: Mr. James Donnelley is a retired executive of the R.R. Donnelley Company. He is active currently in personal investing and has been active in a number of charitable activies in the Chicago area.

Again I would point out that resumes for these individuals were circulated to the Board members in advance of the meeting.

Marshall Field, V has been active in a number of charitable organizations. He used to be the chairman of Field Enterprises and Communications had a media firm headquarters in Chicago, which was subsequently sold. He also has been active in quite a number of charitable organizations in the Chicago area, past chairman of the Board of the Art Institute of Chicago.

Dr. Kathleen Foster is a professor at Indiana University in Bloomington in art. My understanding is she is or has great familiarity with the Foundation.

THE COURT: She's a resident of Indiana?

MR. SABL: Yes, she is. And she has consulted with the Foundation on art matters in the past. And has a good knowledge with respect to the collection of the collection the Foundation has.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001741

Professor Robert Hamada is the outgoing Dean of the University of Chicago graduate school of business.

Frederick Krehbiel, I believe his title is president, I think he's chairman and chief executive officer of Molex, which is an electrical components company, headquarters in Chicago area. And he also has been very active in arts organizations and other charitable activities in the Chicago area and elsewhere.

THE COURT: Dr. Foster is the only one not from Illinois?

MR. SABL: That is correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. If you would go please to page 2 of the resolution the Board passed. The Board has passed a resolution that has changed Article 3 of its by-laws, sections 2 and 8. And those have to do with the Board and their tenure and their terms and vacancies.

Now do I understand correctly that these five we just talked about are going to be called class 2 directors. And they are going to hold office, if this is approved, starting August 1st of this year until September of next year. And then they each get one four-year term more, is that correct?

PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302
SF-IL-24A

16di-001742

MR. SABL: Your Honor, they would be elected now for a four-year term so they would serve without coming up for reelection until the annual meeting of 2005.

THE COURT: So they're on until 2005. And then we have some class 1 Board members. This gets a little confusing because we have the pre 2002 class 1 members and the post ones. So I'm talking about the post 2002 class 1 and class 3 members. They're going to get staggered terms. There's going to be one term that ends in 02, one in 04, one in 05 and one in 06.

And my question is on the post 2002 class 1 members and class 3 directors, how long do they get to sit? Do they get two full terms after they're, like the class 1 people, end in the year 2003. Do they get two full terms after that, or are they only eligible for one full term?

MR. SABL: They're eligible for 8 years, your Honor, which means they might be elected for a term which is of a class that goes longer but would have to agree to resign before that to comply with this agreement. To stagger the Board you actually have to divide the directors and the class.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001743

And I believe that the mediation contemplated that there would be a limit on any director serving for more than 8 years. For that reason you would have to have either some directors leave before the end of the terms.

So if a director was elected for 3 years and and director elected for three and could be elected for another 4 year term and at that point would only serve one year thereafter.

THE COURT: I just want to make it clear because believe it or not this issue comes up in the future. The provision of this decree that says the limit, the term limit is 8 years, that supercedes anything else as far as class. I just want to make sure that's clear, and that's it.

MISS STONE: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Now there were no amendments made to Article 1 of the by-laws, am I correct? You only amended Article 111. And it might help if you look at the objections that have been filed by the objectors. And you have the restated by-laws in there. That's Exhibit 6. And you've got Article 1. The purposes of the Foundation. That has not changed, has it?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001744

MISS STONE: That's correct. It remains the broadly stated, general purpose that brings it within the 501 (c) 3 characterization. And includes for illustrative purposes only the various purposes that are set forth there.

THE COURT: So it is still the purpose of this Foundation to operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad?

MISS STONE: Correct, your Honor. That is still the purpose and that is precisely why with explicit clarity the Attorney General acknowledges this proposed consent decree, consent judgment, that the Foundation has the right to conduct all of its activities in Giverny, France.

That is also why it is specifically spelled out in the proposed consent decree that the Terra Foundation gets to loan its works of art, or exhibit, or for scholarly use, not limited to the United States, not limited to Chicago.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001745

THE COURT: Originally, when the original complaints were filed these restated by-laws I don't believe were referred to in the original complaint. It was the original by-laws that were referred to, is that correct?

MR. SABL: That is correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: And we all can agree that the original Articles of Incorporation and the original by-laws of this Foundation never mentioned where the museum was going to be, is that correct? There is no where in there. Can everybody agree to that? Or do we have to pull those out? I couldn't find it anywhere. It doesn't say Chicago, it doesn't say Chicagoland, it doesn't say the world, it doesn't say the United States. It doesn't say.

We have a separate lawsuit pending in another calendar in this court where we have James Terra saying as one of the incorporators they meant to put the phrase in in the Chicagoland area or in the State of Illinois. That was never put in there.

Then in 1994 when Mr. Terra, Dan Terra, was still alive the by-laws were amended and the Articles of Incorporation were amended and the words were added, among other things, operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad. Can we all agree to that? Those have been the two changes.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001746

MR. PERKINS: Just so that we can be very clear if one were to look at that, that was changed to provide for illustrative purposes only. If one looks at the difference between the original by-laws and the 1994 version, after the very first sentence the new version says for illustrative purposes only and it goes on and explains. I'm not sure what it all means in the sense that both of them start out with the very same first sentence, and both of them say it's exclusively charitable. The first one has a whole bunch of specific remarks, the original has specific remarks about what it can do.

The 1994 one says illustrative purposes only. I'm not sure we're saying there is a big difference there but there is a difference.

THE COURT: But at no time has there been anything in the by-laws or articles of incorporation

16di-001747

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

that specifically Illinois, Chicago, anything like that. The only thing that has ever been put in is operate museums and schools both in the United States and Abroad. And that is not changing by this consent decree.

So now I need to figure out what this means. If you could please turn to Exhibit 9 of the objectors' exhibits, which is the declaration of Dr. Tucker in regard to the Temporary Restraining Order.

Please turn to page 3, the last sentence: Examples of major non Chicago projects include the recent award of a $500,000.00 grant to a New York production company for a documentry on American Art. Now I'm going to the top of page 4 and the sponsership for the research for the Huntington Museum and Gardens in Pasadena, California.

Is there anything in this consent decree, or this proposed judgment that would prevent the Foundation from continuing to do that? That kine of activity.

MISS STONE: Absolutely not, your Honor.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001748

That's a very important point. The consent decree, consent judgment states that the Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its articles and by-laws, including promoting American Art in the U.S. and Abroad.

It further states it is the Foundation, not the Attorney General, the Foundation who remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals including where and to whom to make grants.

THE COURT: So the answer is there is nothing--just for the record I want to make sure in the future if this consent decree is approved that there aren't going to be a whole bunch of issues, that this Board can pretty much continue to operate the way it has operated as far as its charitable grants and its activities.

MISS STONE: I'd like to state for the record the Foundation has retained through this proposed consent judgment a broad aray of rights. It is the broad awray of rights, and now with the force of a court order, if you approve it, and it has the Attorney General's specific adherence and acknowledgment of. In may ways it garners freedom or confirmation of the freedon and independence of this Foundation. It says the Foundation can make grants wherever it wants, conduct operations wherever it wants, although for 50 years it must of course keep its main headquarter books and records, principal office here in the Chicagoland area..

16di-001749

It says it may acquire works of art. It may exhibit and loan anywhere its works of art, including but not limited to Giverny.

It particularly enshrines the protection of the museum in Giverny. This Foundation has preserved for itself a very broad power and freedom, through this proposed consent judgment.

THE COURT: Let's go to the declaration of Peter Solmssen, Exhibit 10. There were some discussions Mr. Somnssen had with Dan Terra the year before Mr. Terra died. There was discussion about the Foundation and the University of Arts doing some things together and making a three million dollar grant to the university.

Is that the kind of thing that could still be done with other universities outside the Chicago area? I'm on the objection 11. It starts at the bottom of the page, paragraph 6 going on to the next page.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

MISS STONE: The Foundation can engage in the purchase of real estate outside of the Chicagoland area. The Foundation can make grants outside of the Chicagoland area.

Your Honor, for the record, it might be helpful not only to have me as Foundation counsel attest to this, I think it would be very worthwhile to have the Attorney General stand up and also signify his agreement to this as well.

THE COURT: Well Mr. Perkins is being very silent. And when Mr. Perkins is silent I'm taking that as he's agreeing because if he doesn't agree he always tells us.

MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.

MISS STONE: For the purposes of the record, for the purposes of conflicts which may arise in the next decade or two decades, would we have Mr. Perkins stand up and say that he agrees that this Foundation may make grants outside of Chicago.

THE COURT: I think he's saying that. He'll tell us if he disagrees.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001751

I have one last, and this one really intrigues me, it is Exhibit 19 of the affidavit of Dr. Tucker in support of the objections. He's talking on the bottom of the second page, these pages are not numbered, paragraph 5, he's talking about the way the Guggenheim Museum had some exhibit space in Berlin and it supplied members a limited amount of its collection to other museums.

I'm sorry, where is Bilbao?

MISS STONE: Spain, your Honor.

THE COURT: Can this Foundation purchase real estate elsewhere, loan its collection elsewhere, portions of it, as long as the main portion of the collection is based here?

There could be many museums. Everyone keeps throwing out the four hundred fifty million dollar figure that's been in the pleadings here. If funds are available, can the museums in Chicago and France need not be the only museums in this Foundation?

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. And the consent judgment specifically states, while stating that the Foundation shall for fifty years retain and exhibit the Terra collection of American

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001752

Arts either by itself or through partnership arrangements with other institutions in the Chicago metropolitan area, the document also goes on to say that the Foundation shall continue to be able to carry out the act of promoting American art in the U.S. and Abroad and it remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals. That it can manage the collection as it deems appropriate, including providing art for display in Giverny and for special exhibits, programs and scholarly use, to make loans from the collection. So it can indeed loan its art work to other institutions.

THE COURT: I'm going to give the court reporter a break. I'm willing to go as late as you want to go to hear whatever it is that anybody wants to hear. I have to let the court reporter leave at 4:30. So during this break I would appreciate it if someone makes arrangements for a late court reporter.

My next set of questions is going to be talking about the role of the directors that are currently on this Board and what their role can be and not be in the future.

Then I'm pretty much done with my list. I'm going to also just take a look at this to make sure I hit all the things that were of most concern to me. And then I want to hear about the objections after I talk a little bit about these directors when I come back.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001753

I'm going to give the court reporter a break. Is ten minutes enough? Who's going to take the responsibility to try to get a late reporter? Mr. Kennedy?

(At which time in the Proceedings a short recess was had.)

THE COURT: I understand we will have a court reporter here at four thirty.

MR. KENNEDY: Yes, Judge.

THE COURT: So we will take a brief break at four thirty to make that switch.

One of the things that disturbed me about the consent decree is the loss of some of these very very fine people to this Board. And I know that Miss Stone will be the first to jump up and say what I think about it or don't think about it isn't important, it's the business judgment of the Board and they all mediated and they decided that this is the way it's going to be.

We have some individuals on this Board who have served a very-very long time, the longest being Arthur Hartman, former Ambassador to France and Helene Ahrweiler. I am disturbed about the loss of all of what we have referred to here as the independent Board members in particular to this Foundation. In addition to Ambassador Hartman and Ahriweiler, Mrs. Daley , Stephanie Pace Marshall, Dr. Stebbins and Ambassador Andreani.

Apparently the Board decided in the mediation process that everybody was going to have to go. And that would be at the end of one year, Everybody would serve and then at the end of one year they would all go.

I want to pursue this issue a little more based on the wording here. May Foundations and corporations and not for profit organizations as we know invite people to come back and participate in other capacities. Some Boards have things like Fellows Boards, they have individuals that help raise money. They invite non board members to serve on the committees or to serve as advisors.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001755

And I want to make sure there isn't anyone that this consent decree that is being tendered to the Court who is saying this consent decree precludes any of these fine eleven individuals from participating in the future in the activities of the Foundation provided that they do not participate as a member of the Board of Directors.

MISS STONE: Your Honor, you are absolutely right that these eleven individuals have worked long and hard for this Foundation, some of them for a number of years. And it is a loss that they have decided collectively to leave the Board after one year.

Your Honor has correctly predicted what at least some of my argument would be. This is a matter particularly within the purview of the Board. This is an exercise of the business judgment of directors which should not be second guessed by me, by the objectors, by your Honor.

This was, without in any way delving into the mediation process, because I don't think it is appropriate that individuals are now seeking to use a confidential mediation process to further litigation ends. So I don't want to delve into the intricacies of this, but suffice it to say in mediation the composition of the Board was an issue that was discussed at length.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001756

There were various proposals floated. This finally was a proposal that would allow the Board to enter into a resolution which would put an end to protracted, devisive, distractive litigation.

Your Honor is absolutely right that there is no prohibition whatsoever on any of these fine individuals from coming back and being affiliated with the Terra Foundation in some other way, either as an interested patron, as an honorary, non voting Board member, as a member of some sort of advisory committee, there is no prohibition on that.

Indeed it would be my hope that once the dust is settled and once emotions cool and with the passage of time that the newly constituted Board might indeed see fit to see if it could interest some of these fine individuals to once again devote some of their energies in a non voting capacity to the Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: There is also one other capacity

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001757

that I was thinking about also. In all the materials that I've read there have been discussions over the years about partnering with other institutions. Some of the proposals in the materials have talked about institutions such as a university or the Art Institute, or the Museum of Contempory Art that might be partners with, in the future, here in this area.

And that if such a partnership were established it might be that certain representatives of the Foundation would also be asked to sit on the Boards of Directors of that organization that you're partnering with.

My question is does anything preclude any of these individuals from being the designated representative of the Foundation in that kind of a partnership arrangement, as long as they're not Board members?

MISS STONE: I don't think anything would prevent any of these fine individuals from being emmisaries to any other institution, to be ambassadors of good will for the Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: To be the Foundation's representative

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001758

on a partnership Board.

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. May I also add, your Honor, when I make the point that we should not engage now in second guessing, it is important to recognize that this was an unusual mediation. This was not a mediation where it was only counsel for the parties that were involved. The individual directors themselves actively participated in a myriad of mediation sessions. So they all had the right to weigh in on this issue. They all did. The issue was vigorously debated and this was the final consensus resolution of those parties that were free to enter into this proposed settlement.

THE COURT: Anybody else want to be heard? Is there any disagreement that all of the eleven Board members who will be leaving the Board in the year 2002 continue to be active participants in the activities of this Foundation, with the exception that they cannot hold seats on the Board of directors, but they can do almost anything else that the Board would direct them to do.

MR. QUINLAN: There is no prohibition of them doing any of those things.

16di-001759

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

THE COURT: Okay, now we have a multitude of objections. And I spent my whole weekend going through them. I've read them, even the back sides of all your 35 exhibits.

So Mr. Cummins, I don't know how you intend to proceed today. I want to hold off your counter-claim business until the end. I would assume the first thing you need to talk about, or you want to talk about, is discovery. You can't do anything without discovery. Is that correct?

MISS STONE: Again, just as an order of procedure I do think it's more appropriate , since we are moving for the entry of a consent judgment here to be heard on the issue.

THE COURT: Just one second. You wanted to talk about discovery, and you also want to talk about, or do you not, about the burden of proof?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: And you believe that the burden of proof is on them, right?

MR. CUMMINS: Manifestly.

THE COURT: Without any question.

MR. CUMMINS: Not a doubt at all.

SF-1L-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001760

THE COURT: It sounds like they should go first. What do you think?

MR. CUMMINS: Yeah, absolutely. There seems to be a suggestion in the record that we consider to be a grossly inappropriate statement, that it somehow gives this Foundation all of the rights and privileges it once maintained.

Well, that's clearly not the case. As a matter of fact if you take a look at this consent judgment and decree, Terra's collection of American Art will never exhibited for fifty years any place other than Chicago.

That means concepts that were discussed that would really give some value and benefit, not only to the collection, but to those who are interested in the collection, things like common territorial management, that can't be done.

To suggest on the record, oh gee, this is just great and just like apple pie and motherhood and the Foundation can proceed without any limitation is just simply dead wrong, Judge.

THE COURT: I'm trying to figure out what--I went through all of your objections, if what you want to talk about is one portion of your objections, I'll be glad to. But if you want to talk about response to my questions about what they can do and what they can't do. Identify certain things, other than picking up and moving the entire collection out of Illinois, what is it that you are saying they are not going to be able to do?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001761

MR. CUMMINS: If you can tell me what paragraph 5 means, I'd like to be enlightened. It states for at least 50 years from the entry of the order the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago Metropolitan area. That means it ain't going to be exhibited any place else.

And if that's not a major inhibition on the value of this collection and on the goals and intentions of Mr. Terra when he created this Foundation, nothing could be more inconsistent with his intentions. Nothing could be more inconsistent.

THE COURT: Let me just ask them to answer that, as to what you believe that that means. Shall we define the Terra Collection of American Art and what that means?

16di-001762

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

MISS STONE: Your Honor, I would be happy to answer the question, and I will do so. I think I need to clarify at the beginning that we certainly disagree over the burden of proof.

It is clear here, under Illinois law, there is a presumptively valid settlement agreement. They are now seeking to upset the settlement agreement which they don't agree with, arguing that it should be set aside for some sort of supposed duress or coersion.

The law makes it quite clear that they have to meet a very high burden of proof and they must show by clear and convincing evidence that there was some sort of wrongful or illegal act which completely destroyed the free will of the individuals who are alleged to have been coerced, Dr. Stebbins and Mrs. Marshall.

And we would submit, your Honor, they simply cannot or have not met this very high showing.

There is a reason why the law requires such a high showing. First of all the law favors compromise and resolution and it gives presumptive validity when parties are able to finally resolve their differences and come to a meeting of the minds.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001763

In addition, allegations of these sorts, coercion, intimindation, selling out your vote, are very serious, very pernicious accusations. And if you're going to make these allegations the law says you better have the goods to back them up. That is why the burden is so high.

And your Honor, we think it's quite telling that they are trying in essence shirk their burden rather than embraceing it, rather than saying yes, we recognize we have a very high standard and by golly we can meet it, they are trying to divert this Court by citing to a clearly inapplicable class action cases, which have no bearing here.

We are not in a class action context, your Honor. We are not in a fairness hearing where we have to protect absentee class members.

We have a situation where eleven Board members have come together and debated this for months and months. And the collective will of the Board is to have this agreement approved.

Now to answer counsel's question more specifically. Your Honor, you cannot pick out bits and pieces of

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001764

of this consent judgment and read them in isolation. To do so really violates the entire spirit, meaning and language of the consent judgment.

Reading the consent judgment in its totality what does it do? First of all it does obligate the Foundation to maintain its principle office and books and records in Illinois for fifty year. It does require that a majority of the directors be residents of Illinois for 25 years, with an exception for the first year, or it does need to be a majority, it could be fifty fifty.

What else this consent decree does, it preserves and formally recognizes essential freedoms for the Foundation. I would like to enumerate those. And they are contained in paragraph 5 and in other places in the proposed consent judgment.

Number 1) it states the Foundation has the right to conduct its affairs in accordance with its articles and by-laws, including promoting American Arts through the U.S. and Abroad.

Number 2) it states that the Foundation, not a regulator, not disgruntled Board members of whatever stripe, but the Foundation has the right to determine for itself how to best achieve its goals.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001765

3) it preserves for the Foundation the freedom to make grants wherever and to whomever it so chooses.

4) it give the Foundation the right to manage its own collection as it pleases. Again, without interference from outside forces.

Number 5) it give the Foundation the right to make loans, to acquire works and to deassess works as it sees fit.

Number 6) it specifically give the Foundation the right ti display art in Giverny and elsewhere in the world in connection with special exhibits or loans for scholarly use.

Number 7) it give the Foundation the right and freedom to conduct its activities at its museum in Giverny. And that freedom the AG is specifically acknowledging and agreeing to in this consent judgment.

Your Honor, I think you have to put the individual defendant's challenge in perspective. These individual defendants have determined that it is not, in their judgment, in their best judgment to enter into this agreement.

As named parties to this lawsuit they have every

16di-001766

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

right to say this agreement is not for us and we don't want to participate. They have also exercised their rights as directors to say in their judgment this agreement is not in the best interest of the Foundation. They have every right to do that, your Honor. There may be others in this courtroom who agree with them personally, that this is not a good deal for the Foundation.

The point, your Honor, is that these individual directors cannot now come in and try to run rough shot over the considered judgment, an exercise of business judgment by other directors of the Foundation. That is not their right.

THE COURT: The Terra Collection, can you define it.

MISS STONE: It is a collection of arts that is now currently in existence at both the Terra Museum here in Chicago and the museum in Giverny. And it is that collection as it ebbs and flows over the years.

THE COURT: And this consent decree allows the Foundation to set up museums worldwide if it wants to and display portions--portions, what about all of the collection? Can they move the whole thing to Giverny?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001767

MISS STONE: No, I don't think that would be appropriate for the first 50 years. They cannot leave, take everything lot stock and barrel and move it outside of Chicago. But it can conduct freely its activities in Giverny, France and that includes a very big risk loan program from the collection, which is predominately displayed in Chicago, but which is also displayed in Giverny.

THE COURT: How big is the collection right now. I know it's a fluid thing. I know it is somewhere in these papers and I remember reading it. It's hundreds of paintings, is it not?

MISS STONE: It is hundreds. I believe it is roughly in the neighborhood of 800, though I am seeking guidance from an officer of the Foundation, who is not in this agreement.

THE COURT: So about 800 or so pieces of art.

MISS STONE: That is correct.

THE COURT: And as long as there is a place to house it and take care of it here in the State of Illinois and bring it back to, could it loan fifty percent of the collection to other museums at certain times as long as everybody new at the Foundation stays here? The Foundation is a lot more than just the art collection. So as long as it stays here fifty percent of it could be elsewhere.

16di-001768

MISS STONE: Your Honor, it's very difficult to get into a finely calibrated parsing of how many can cross the state border and how many cannot. I think the spirit and intent of this agreement is that for 50 years the collection, the bulk of the collection should remain, should be made available for viewing here.

But at the same time works of art from that collection can be shown elsewhere, they can be housed elsewhere, can be exhibited elsewhere and can be loaned elsewhere, but the bulk of the collection should remain here.

As your Honor points out, it is not just art that this Foundation is about. It is also about education, educational programs can take place elsewhere. This Foundation is also about grant making to encourage scholarships in American art.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001769

THE COURT: So I take it that this means, as I read it, means a large portion of the collection could go like, you know we get the Monet exhibition here or Renior or something here, a large portion of it could be a moving collection and go to museums all over the world. And I would assume even as much as a half as long as its coming back here.

There is nothing in this one way or the other. I mean this is open to interpretation in the future, is it not?

MR. PERKINS: From the Attorney General's standpoint we think of it as based here. Based here doesn't mean it's always here. It means it's loaned out from here. It could be on the road for years.

Many times museums trade pieces. Terra might be exhibiting pieces from other Museums. The Attorney General of Illinois recognizes that. There may be at some times only a little bit will physically be in Illinois at a point in time, the Board deciding that it had five exhibits across the world.

We are not saying that it is prohibited from doing that. We are saying however it's based here. It's under the control of the Board here. And we leave it to the Board to work under that direction. These remarks are here. I can't speak for what a Board will do down the road. It is our hope that they will make appropriate decisions.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001770

The whole agreement was premised on the idea that this Board will go forth and do what it thinks it can under the articles and under the terms of this agreement to act pretty freely without much interference from the State.

THE COURT: Leave it to the Board to make that decision is that you're saying, Mr. Perkins. So it's really up to the Board to make those decisions. And I would assume that this matter would only come back to this Court or some future Court sitting here, if something really outrageous happened.

In other words, if 80 percent of the collection got put under some kind of agreement for 40 years outside of the State of Illinois, something that was clearly a violation of this agreement. Other than that we're not doing things very much different than what was done before. The Foundation can pretty much run its affairs the way it has.

16di-001771

MISS STONE: That's true. It's a very important and I think it t's up one of the main arguments that the objectors are making. They are arguing that this consent decree is, to use their word, antithetical to the mission of the Foundation.

What is the mission of the Foundation? The mission of the Foundation is very broadly stated charitable and educational purposes, including illustrative purposes such things as promoting appreciation of American art to the growing art public, running museums and schools both in the U.S. and Abroad.

Entering into this consent decree is not antithetical to that. This consent decree allows the museum in Giverny, it allows the loaning of art through the U.S. and abroad.

What would be antithetical is if we came in with a consent decree saying we are going to burn the paintings. This is not antithetical. This is something under the descretion and the purview of the Board of Directors in its exercise and use of business judgment.

THE COURT: What about the argument that has been made by the defendants that by not being free to partner, and I assume that means like a permanent patnership, with out of state organizations, that the Foundation has lost its bidding position, lost its bargaining chips. It's essentially saying we are stuck here in Illinois so we didn't get the best deal.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001772

MISS STONE: That is certainly a consideration for this Board. That was certainly a consideration that prompted this Board during this litigation to vigorously oppose what the Foundation perceived what the Attorney General was trying to do. However that is one consideration that the Board members have struggled with.

Another consideration the Board members have struggled with is the hemorrhaging of money to pay lawyers in this case. You merely need to look around this courtroom today to get some sort of idea of what this litigation is costing this Foundation.

Another consideration is the tarnishing of the Foundation's reputation from being in the newspaper every day.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001773

Another consideration is the distraction of the folks from matters of art to matters of litigation. These are all matters which the Board of Directors have weighed. And each of them have weighed them in different manners, and each of them assessed different values to these considerations. I may come out differently on that question, Judge. You may come out differently. We are not elected directors of this Board.

And what the individual defendants fail to recognize is that it doesn't have to be coercion, it doesn't have to be fraud, it doesn't have to be someone selling out their vote to come out in a different place, to come to an alternative conclusion at the end of the day.

It could be that individual directors acted honestly, acting legitmately, acting in good faith simply come to a different conclusion, just as Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker and Mr. Simpson did.

It doesn't have to be that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall sold out their soul to get this deal done.

THE COURT: Does the Foundation want to say

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001774

anything else in support of the approval.

MISS STONE: Yes, we would, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, there has been a long soliloquy here. May I just observe something?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. CUMMINS: What has just been discussed is absolutely contradicted by the plain language. I asked a simple question. I said this language says the Terra Collection of American Art shall be exhibited in the Chicago Metropolitan area.

And if you don't think, Judge, that two years from now if we get another Attorney General who decides that sending fifty percent of the art to Courtney for two years violates this agreement then you're going to have people coming in here.

They better change the language of paragraph 5.

THE COURT: I don't think sending fifty percent of this collection violates this agreement.

MR. CUMMINS: Well then let's say that.

THE COURT: Attorney General, do you think sending fifty percent of the collection to Courtney for two years, knowing it's going to come back here violates this agreement?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001775

MR. PERKINS: I don't think so, Judge.

MR. CUMMINS: How many permeations do we have to go through to clarify this agreement?

THE COURT: That's what you have--that's why I'm having this on-the-record discussion to interpret some of these issues today. I don't see this as a oppresive seeking or keeping of this art as set forth in the objections.

MR. CUMMINS: If you don't interpret the language literally I guess that's right, Judge. But the language ought to be clarified, in the consent judgment.

THE COURT: The parties have agreed to this. Tell me if I'm wrong, the Attorney General, the plaintiffs and the Foundation, the ones that have agreed to this are saying on the record that this doesn't mean that even the bulk of the collection has to at all times stay in the State of Illinois physically for the next 50 years.

MISS STONE: That's correct, your Honor. That's why it says we can manage the collection, loan the collection, exhibit the collection.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we believe it has to be based in Chicago, the books and records here. It is an Illinois Corporation, subject to the laws in Illinois. That means it can't close the foundation here. It can't close the exhibit here. Can't close the museum and have nothing of the art to be shown. So when you say exhibits the art must be exhibited here.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001776

But it is clear that every museum that operates here in the State of Illinois sends their art around the world to different places on a variety of different occasions. We surely are not suggesting that doesn't happen. It is not our agenda to prohibit that.

THE COURT: Is there another example, Mr. Cummins, you're concerned about.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I wasn't in the room with these folks, but I would have given them Miranda warnings not to execute the document that has this kind of literal, express prohibition because we can sit here all day and suggest well they can do this and they can do that.

But you asked a pointed question, what about moving the whole exhibit to France for a period of time. Oh, can't do that, that wouldn't be right. You suggested, well there is this inhibition with respect to partnering with outstanding museums, the Courtney and the Whitney. Oh, can't do that.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001777

Now I can't believe that somebody is going to stand up here and try to defend this language and say its literal meaning is meaningless. And that's exactly what we're hearing.

THE COURT: I believe that what was agreed to here, maybe I'm wrong, but I'm interpreting this as if I'm being asked to sign it is that this pretty much means that this collection can be operated in the way it always has been with the exception that the entirety of the collection cannot permanently be moved out of the state and housed out of the state.

MR. CUMMINS: Why don't we say that then?

MISS STONE: That is correct, your Honor. And in addition there is the residency requirement as well.

Your Honor, the objectors keep saying why don't we day this, why don't we say this. What I would say in response is why don't they read the entire document. They like to focus again only on one sentence in the top of paragraph 5. I would say read the entirety of paragraph 5. I would say read paragraph 4. I would say read the other paragraphs in this document, which do indeed preserve the fundamental freedoms and independence for this Foundation and for the Terra Museum.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001778

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I will say we are the parties who participated in this very hearing that took place at the time that this was adopted. They never raised any questions. They never suggested there was anything wrong with the terms. They never suggested they didn't understand the terms. They voted no. But they participated. They were there. That's all you're entitled to get.

They participated. They didn't have a problem with what was said and they voted no, never suggesting anything else.

THE COURT: These questions were not raised at the Board meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: Not by them. Nobody had any kind of disagreement as to what was intended. Surely we all have given you our consents here. Everybody is in agreement on our side in terms of what we believes this means. It reads as it reads. It's a clear document.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001779

That's the reason you retain jurisdiction. It's this Court who makes those interpretations. It is this Court that consistently rules in a way that furthers the interest of the parties in the sense of what was intended and what was meant.

Sure we can read this in a lot of different ways, we can rewrite it in suggested different ways. Their people never suggested that. Their people did not do any of those kind of things and merely chose to go against it. They chose not to participate in the agreement.

THE COURT: Let me hear from Mr. Perkins on this and then we can move on and Miss Stone can finish and then we can hear from the objectors.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, with regard to everything that has been said about this equitably will be handled, how this collection will be managed, how it will be based here, I think the Court has made remarks that reflect our belief of what is going to happen in the future. It will be based it. It will move around. The majority of the collection could be gone at one point in time based on what what would be reasonable accomodations as to how the art world deals with this kind of art.

In addition these terms didn't come about in a vacuum, even though they weren't discussed at a particular Board meeting. There have been long mediation sessions. There have been discussions among counsel as to issues with regard to whether about the language, what was going to be the restrictions, whether it was going to be in perpetuity or fifty years issue, the very language that we're looking at.

This doesn't come about in one day. This has been discussed over several months time period with people working on that language to try to make it clear that the Foundation would be free to operate as it had operated in the past with its collection with the least restrictions, but for what we placed here that basically it's based here in Chicago for fifty years, hopefully forever.

That was the spirit on which this was put together. It's an equitable consideration. This Court retains jurisdiction. If it comes back before this Court your Honor, or those who come after your Honor, and we have this record now.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001781

That makes clear what the Attorney General believes it to mean, what the plaintiffs believe it to mean, what the Foundation expects it to mean.

But at this point we are pretty clear that this Foundation is free to do what it's been doing up to this point in time.

THE COURT: And you're not going to be looking over its shoulder and second guessing its decision about loaning its collection around the world, unless you see shuttered its museum here and there is no place for it to come back to, right?

MR. PERKINS: Your Honor, there are 25,000 charities in Illinois and we're very busy. We're hoping the new Board will take care of this. We don't have any intention of monitering this.

THE COURT: Miss Stone, did you have anything else you want to say in support? I know you said you don't think it's your burden.

MISS STONE: Yes. I understand, but in light of the objections I do feel we need to have the opportunity to make a few statements for the record.

First, your Honor, it is important to acknowledge what is not in dispute here. It is not disputed that corporate formalities were adhered to, that notice was given, that the meeting was properly conducted, a forum was present, debate was held the proposed langague was distributed to all directors beforehand. Any director who wanted to make him or herself available to participate in the meeting was there and had an opportunity to vote. A vote was held.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001782

And six to two, the majority of the Board said they wanted to do this. Now in light of this actual presumtively valid agreement, between the Foundation the Attorney General and the plaintiffs, the defendants are now trying to upset the agreement by mounting a variety of scattershot or arguments. And I would like to have the opportunity to address each of these because they're serious charges which have been made against some individual directors that require response.

I know your Honor has read her papers, I know you're very diligent about that. But I do need to address this.

First, with regard to the coercion argument. What the objectors would have to prove by clear and convincing evidence is that the Attorney General took

16di-001783

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

took some unlawful action, which as a matter of fact caused Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to lose their free will, to become mere handmaidens of the Attorney General, to vote his bidding.

They have not come up with anything near the required evidence to meet this burden. Not even close.

As a general proposition, your Honor, there is nothing wrong in and of itself with any party, that would include the Attorney General, deciding to add additional parties to their pleadings.

Now the Foundation has always denied that there was any merit whatsoever to any proposed claim against Dr. Stebbins. The Foundation would have moved to dismiss it or Dr. Stebbins' own attorney would have done that. But in and of itself that was not an action by the Attorney General.

The defendants would have to show that that action in and of itself was done to intimidate rather than for some other reason.

Also as a general proposition there is nothing in and of itself wrong with the Attorney General deciding to issue an administrative subpoena

16di-001784

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

to some entity. Again the Attorney General decided there is no basis for any further investigation into the Illinois Academy. But again it's the defendants that would have to show that there was no good faith basis for Mr. Perkins' actions and that he was doing this just to intimidate Dr. Marshall.

That is not all they would have to show. Here is where they really fall down on the task. They have to show that in fact Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall's will was overcome. And there is just no there there to paraphrase Yogi Berra. They just don't have the goods.

First of all, they point to the fact that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor of the settlement. That in and of itself is not illegal, it's not unlawful. The objectors don't challenge the votes of Mrs. Daley or Hartman. There is nothing in and of itself wrong with voting yes instead of no. And there could be many reasons why a director would decide it makes sense to resolve this litigation and get back to the business of promoting art appreciation.

THE COURT: Excuse me one moment. You keep saying that they haven't shown. Well part of what they want to be able to do is be able to show . And part of what they want to be able to do is get discovery. And you have said they haven't shown that the Attorney General didn't have a good faith basis for looking into Illinois Science and Math Academy. They haven't shown anything else. Well, how can they show, if they don't get discovery?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001785

MISS STONE: Well I think there are really two questions you have to ask yourself , your Honor. Have they even made the threshhold showing necessary to reopen this case at this point in the face of an agreed settlement and take us off on another whirlwind of discovery.

And the second question you have to ask is what would the possible outcome of that be? What could they possibly hope to achieve by that?

You have the Attorney General who sat for an interview for two and a half hours answering questions. You have Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall who gave testimony who made statements at the Board meeting that specifically addresses that issue. They said we voted our conscience. We were not coerced. They addressed this question.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001786

We indicated to counsel , that although your Honor had not ordered Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to sit for depositions yet, counsel should be aware that Dr. Stebbins would give the same testimony at a deposition that he gave at the Board meeting. So what would you end up with at the end of the day?

We go through this discovery and once again you have a situation where you have Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall saying we vehemently deny that we sold out the Foundation. We're insulted by that accusation. We voted our conscience. And you have Dr. Tucker saying well I don't really believe them. That's not enough to meet a clear and convincing burden.

So what are we doing? It would be an exercise in futility.

THE COURT: During the mediation process the six independent Board members, and by that I mean everybody but the two plaintiffs and the three main defendants, were represented by counsel?

MISS STONE: By the Foundation's counsel.

THE COURT: Okay. They all had an opportunity to talk to at any time, to write letters to you, to send proposals, to discuss with you any problems or any reservations that they had?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001787

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And at the time of the meeting, if I remember correctly from listening to the tape and reading it, you were present with Miss Marshall in the room throughout the whole meeting which she chaired?

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: Who was with Dr. Stebbins?

MISS STONE: Dr. Stebbins was calling in, I believe.

THE COURT: He was calling in from Boston and he was by himself?

MISS STONE: I can't recall, but I believe that's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: But I take it that--

MISS STONE: Mr. Carlson was present at the Foundation headquarters and several of the directors were persent there.

THE COURT: You had plenty of opportunity to discuss with Dr. Stebbins before and after the entire issue of he didn't need to vote for this?

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001788

MISS STONE: You're right. Your Honor, without in any way waiving attorney client privilege, your Honor should assume that all of the directors when represented were advised of their fiduciary duties.

THE COURT: I know that they were advised at the meeting. I know that they were specifically told by Mr. Heatwall (phonetic spelling) if I remember that one correctly, that even though they had made this agreement at the mediation session, if they didn't feel that they could vote it freely and in light of everything else, they should abstain or vote no.

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, I interrupted you, You were talking about --

MISS STONE: I was talking about what they would need to prove and what they're pointing to to try to support their coercion case, or their speculative coercion case.

They try to make the argument that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall flipped, as they so ineloquently phrase it. Your Honor, that ignores the fact the reality that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have always been on the Board. Both sides of this battle of the Foundation have tried at certain times to adopt, in particular Dr. Marshall. And she has resisted those efforts.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001789

At the Board meeting Dr. Stebbins in particular talked about how there were many matters he disagreed with Dr. Tucker about, including the location of the museum.

THE COURT: Isn't he the one who said when he got to the meeting on September 25th that he thought that everybody should resign?

MISS STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And that he always believed that the collection and the Foundation should stay in Chicago?

MISS STONE: Yes. And he is an art historian who has reasons to believe it would be most advantageous for the collection to be coupled with the collection here in Chicago.

In addition Dr. Marshall has always been neutral. in fact your Honor at one hearing you yourself remarked that after reading the minutes you thought she was the most neutral of anyone.

16di-001790

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

THE COURT: I wanted her on the special litigation committee.

MISS STONE: I understand.

THE COURT: She didn't want to be on it.

MISS STONE: That is correct. So what are they left with in the face of these, this history of neutrality and independence by those two directors?

On the face of their statements, which we read to you last time, which everybody quoted in the briefs, and I'll not read them again to you, but which you know where they said we're voting our conscience, we're voting freely, we are not voting for any extraneous reasons, we are not selling out to this Foundation. We are adhering to our fiduciary duty and this is how we vote.

What are they left with in the face of that? They are left with one or two affidavits from Dr. Tucker. He says you know I don't have a good feeling about that. I just don't really believe them. And he doesn't even really come out and say they sold out. They sold this Foundation down the river. He doesn't go that far. He talks about how it was inconsistent with prior positions. But even if he believes that, that is still only his subjective belief. And that comes no where near clear and convincing evidence, affirmative concrete evidence, that they have to present.

16di-001791

And I think it bears saying, your Honor, fundamentally what is being portrayed by the objectors, this notion that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall could somehow be brow beaten, intimidated, cowed, cowerd to use their word, by the Attorney General. These people are, as your Honor as remarked in the past, very intelligent, well educated, sophisicated people who had the benefit of counsel throughout this process. Dr. Stebbins is a Harvard educated lawyer, not that that means anything in and of itself, who is affiliated with the --Dr. Marshall is a PHD, president of an academy. To think that they would somehow be brow beaten by some assistant attorney general is really--with all due respect to Mr. Perkins, but it's really an insult to their integrity and to their reputation in the community to indicate that they could so easily be bought.

And your Honor, I think in essence what it boils down to is you've got Dr. Tucker and Mrs. Terra and

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001792

Senator Simpson saying, don't believe them, they sold out, they're lying, they're trying to cover up, believe us. That's not enough. Further discovery will not help them prove their case. And I think we should put an end to it.

Let me address a few other allegations they they're making as a way to try to upset this settlement agreement. They use this notion of conflict of interest, which is really I think an inappropriate notion here.

THE COURT: Did you get their latest filing? It came about a half hour before, it's a seven page document and they address the conflict again in that. And I didn't mention that I received that. And I did review that.

MISS STONE: I don't believe they had leave to file that brief. We weren't expecting that brief. We did try to review it quickly and I will try to respond to that as well.

In support of their conflict of interest argument they are saying that somehow that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall shouldn't have voted because they were conflicted. But the Illinois Not for Profit Corporation Act has a very specific section dealing with conflict of interest. It specifically addresses this. And it says how do you know if there is a conflict? You look to see whether the director who is voting is a direct or indirect party to the transaction at issue, that's being discussed.

16di-001793

And it's clear they are not direct parties. They didn't sign in their individual capacity this consent decree. They weren't individually named in this litigation. So they weren't parties direct. And they are not indirect parties because Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act says you have to have a material, financial interest in the proposed transaction. You have to have an interest in the other entity that's a party to the transaction, in order to have this indirect conflict.

THE COURT: They say as a matter of law that's wrong, in their response.

MISS STONE: They do two things. First they cite to inapplicable For Profit Corporation law. That's not relevant here. And I think they sort of acknowledge that in their reply brief when they say well let's look at the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act if we've got to, but we can stretch the meaning of that, we can sort of pervert the language of the statute to try to wiggle out case in there. Well they are really stretching it beyond all appropriate bounds.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001794

If you were to accept their argument, any settlement would be up for grabs and no one could vote on it because in very many litigation cases involving corporations there are potential claims against various directors that are floating out there.

So their argument, an incredibly over passive argument would be to lead to very difficult and illogical consequences. And it's just not the plain language of the statute.

So we would argue that they are citing you inapplicable law or misciting and misapplying the governing law.

The fact is here that there was no conflict of interest thatDr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall had.

Their next challenge, your Honor, is to the allegedly improper actions of the Attorney General.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE. IN 47302

16di-001795

And what's wrong with their analysis here is that they go so far then they stop. They miss a crucial step. They say the Attorney General acted improperly therefore this agreement has to be vitiated.

Well under the law of coercion what the Attorney General allegedly did had to have had an actual affect on Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. It had to have actually overcome their free will.

You've heard them on the tape now, your Honor, you've read the transcript. Their free will was not overcome. In fact at the 11th hour at the meeting itself Dr. Marshall said, well if you all make this new contemplated change to this resolution I'm not going to vote for this. The deal of off. You need my vote and I am not going to go along with that and this whole thing might blow up. See you later and we're back in litigation.

She was not acting like a cowed intimidated victim who was fearful of the Attorney General. She was exercising her free will vigorously, the way she always did.

In fact if you, without getting into the details of mediation, if your Honor will look at some of the letters presented to your Honor, you will see that many of Dr. Marshall's proposals were in fact incorporated in the final end product. He was a vigorous campaigner, a vigorous participant in this debate, so was Dr. Stebbins. They were not intimidated, quaking victims here of the Attorney General.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001796

Finally, your Honor, I have already alluded somewhat to why their antithetical argument to the best interest of the Foundation argument doesn't wash.

What they have really done here is fail to recognize that other directors can act in good faith and can come to an opposite conclusion.

I think the central irony in the case--well there are several--one is it seems to be only the Foundation who is always coming before you and saying you know what, allow the Foundation to be a Foundation, respect our integrity, respect our independence. Don't allow yourself to be used by disgruntled detractors on either side of the political fence here to use you. Let the will of the majority speak for this Foundation and respect that.

There is an irony that Mr. Buntfock and

16di-001797

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

Mr. Gidvitz have reaped and sowed they are not reaping through this attack from the objectors.

There is another irony here, your Honor. The irony is that maybe it would have been better from the objectors' perspective if this thing had been a trust. This is not a trust despite what the Attorney General says, and despite what the Attorney General says as recently as yesterday afternoon in his filing, this is not a public charitable trust, whatever that term supposedly means.

This is, Dan Terra, if he had set up a trust to exhibit art in Washington, D.C., New York, Boston and Chicago for time immemorial that may have been better from the perspective of the objectors. But he did not do that. What he did he set up a not for profit corporation that had a Board of Directors. He set up a charter and said this is your broad mission, this is your broad constitution. You as directors are now impowered to make decisions about what is in the best interest of this Foundation going forward.

And therefore the directors can, in their wisdon, in their exercise of best judgment, decide what is in the best interest of the Foundation. It is not imperative, it is not absolute, it is not a mandate from a grantor of some trust that this art be shown in D.C., or New York. The Board of Directors has this degree of independence.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001798

I think in conclusion, your Honor, I would simply say this is a case, really these are two cases against the Foundation which have been pending now for about ten months. We've been through five months of mediation. It has been a very expensive process for the Foundation. The majority of the directors have spoken. They want to put an end to this. They think this is indeed in the best interest of the Foundation. The Board has spoken. The Board should be heeded.

MR. QUINLAN. Your Honor, just a couple of things. I think what we have here is a premature attack on the consent decree by the objectors. First of all we're here today to ask your Honor to sign that consent decree. And what's at issue here in your signing the consent decree is whether or not this is an agreement of the parties and the terms are properly reflected in the agreement.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001799

It's undisputed the parties have entered into this and these terms are the terms that were intended.

THE COURT: You lost me for a second. You say it's premature. Are you saying the procedure is it should be signed?

MR. QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: The case should be dismissed, they should be denied discovery, they should be denied leave to file any pleadings, case is over. We have a consent decree. And then what is the next step?

MR. QUINLAN: The next step would be a 2-1401 to challenge the consent decree, your Honor, on the basis that coercion took place. I think what counsel has demonstrated here is there is no basis even for that allegation of coercion.

What we're talking about here really is a presentation to you a settlement. And that settlement whether the Court should sign that settlement or enter the order only requires a determination by you as to whether or not this is an agreement and whether or not this reflects the terms of the agreement.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001800

THE COURT: Where do you come up with this 2-1401? And the reason that I ask that is I looked at all their cases and they're pretty much class action type things. And they're pretty much situation where, you know, you've got one of these public hearings like we have all the time to approve a class settlement. And it's a totally different thing.

I'm looking at the cases that you've cited, or that the Foundation has cited in its brief about the clear and convincing standard. One is a marriage case and some other issues. I'm looking for something where you got any of these cases, any of them, deal with court ordered mediation, or a mediation of case and someone is coming in and challenging that mediated settlement.

MR. QUINLAN: It really doesn't make any difference, for your purposes here, whether it's a mediated settlement or not. The issue is it's a settlement. Let's assume we didn't mediate but we said your Honor, would you delay this case for a couple of weeks, we believe we can work this out.

THE COURT: Okay, and we've got a settlement. You come and you've got a settlement.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001801

MR. QUINLAN: We come in and present it. And there are people who say, wait a minute, wait a minute, that's not the settlement. That's what they might be saying. But they are not saying that here. They're saying they don't like the settlement, that they don't want the settlement, they don't believe the settlement is proper. That's not a challenge.

They're saying the Attorney General, by his actions, coerced them. That's only a challenge to the consent decree after it has been entered.

THE COURT: Okay, but see you're talking about a settlement where everybody settled. We're talking about a situation here that is somewhat different. These folks aren't settling. They are not part of the settlement.

MR. CUMMINS: It is also a derivative case and they ought to address that.

MR. QUINLAN: It is not derivative at all. We sue under the provisions of 103.15 (a). I'd advise you to read our pleadings that we did file.

THE COURT : I just reread today your complaint and you don't say it's derivative. And I reread the

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY, MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001802

Attorney General's complaint today because I was trying to go back in history.

MR. QUINLAN: And he doesn't say it's derivative. We have our standing and he has his own standing by statute.

THE COURT: Would you then be saying you had the settlement and I signed the consent decree and it's done, and this case is dismissed, they're going to come back and file a 2-1401. Now what standing do they have to come back in and file a 2-1401?

MR. QUINLAN: That's a good question. I don't know if they have any standing here at all. But that's not my problem. That's their problem.

The real issue here today is this is the same as if it were a divorce decree. They had a divorce decree and came in here and both of the parties to the divorce decree asked you to sign it. You don't hold a fairness hearing. You don't hold an evidentiary hearing. You sign it.

This is the agreement. Is there any question that this is the agreement, or is there any question that these are the terms? No. That is what's to be signed. It is not a derivative action, this is not a class action.

SF-IL-24A PENGAD/INDY. MUNCIE, IN 47302

16di-001803

If your Honor read the statement by Judge Posner in the Mars case there is a total difference between class actions and --Judge Posner says look, the normal thing is you look at this and you say did the parties agree to this. Okay, that's what it is. We don't look any further.

The only reason we look further in a class action is because those parties are only represented by an attorney whose maybe interest is not the same as the real parties in interest here, who are not present.

THE COURT: We need to do a reporter switch here.

MR. BRETT A. AUGUST, Deputy.

THE COURT: And who will be speaking at this table besides Mr. Cummins?

MR. TODD: Chris Todd. I don't know whether Mr. Garment will have that much to say or not, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Quinlan, I am trying to get a handle on the case law issue about something that's close to here.

Let's assume we have a regular law-suit which this, of course, is not. And some of the parties settle with others of the parties and they come to the Court and they say, "Please approve this settlement."

Usually they come and they say, "Give us a good faith finding that this settlement is in good faith or whatever," and they proceed against the others. You don't have that situation here.

MR. QUINLAN: You don't have that. That's only a contribution.

THE COURT: Right, and in this case you are dismissing everything in regard to everybody else.

MR. QUINLAN: That's correct.

THE COURT: So any of the cases that have of this information to be circulated or to go forward any further.

It was their clients who sought, participated in, and negotiated throughout this process.

Only when it didn't end up with the result that they wanted do they now attempt to object. So they withdraw from the agreement, refuse to be part of it, refuse, even though they participate in the hearing, a Board meeting which was lawfully called, as pointed out by Ms. Stone. And everybody had notice and they participated.

Eight members were there and their two people were there and they did participate and they did object to certain things.

They didn't object to the agreement. They didn't object and say it wasn't the agreement. They didn't say the terms weren't right. They didn't say the terms should be changed.

We are now here to present that agreement to your Honor to be signed. There is no fairness hearing that has to be held here. There is nothing of that nature to take place.

What these people are doing is they beyond is this -- the agreement of the party and the needs reflected in terms of the party are almost nonexistent, because the parties determine the fairness and the appropriateness of the settlement.

By the parties agreeing to it, by the Board voting for this, determines the fairness. They were exercising their business judgment when they did that.

I would call your Honor's -- yes, Posner's decision: "Fairness of a settlement of a legal dispute is like the adequacy of consideration supporting contractual funds, a matter best left to negotiation between the parties."

And only in class actions is that a different setting and he points out that's only because the lawyer is the principal here. And the lawyer himself is acting not only supposedly on everybody else's behalf but only on his own behalf. They often conflict.

And the case is the Marco case that we cited to you, which is a divorce case, and in that case they said you don't have to have an evidentiary hearing. You don't have to even go

It was all coercion. None of it goes to coercion.

All we have here is people who have speculated before, Mr. Tucker, about he thinks they may have been coerced.

THE COURT: How about some case law on coercion?

MR. QUINLAN: On coercion?

THE COURT: And who was normally the party who is bringing the coercion issue?

MR. QUINLAN: The people who have been coerced, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Do we have any cases cited in this mass of cases that you have all given me --

MR. QUINLAN: Sure.

THE COURT: -- that talk about someone other than the person who was conversed -- coerced coming forward and saying somebody else was coerced?

MR. QUINLAN: I don't see that, your Honor. I think Judge Bucklo didn't really address that.

She said, "They are asking me to --" First of all, she said, "Where is Mr. Stebbins and where is Ms. Marshall? They are not here. They do not offer any affidavits."

Your Honor, this was only the potential of lawsuits here, the potential against Mr. Stebbins and to Ms. Marshall; but, in fact, their clients have the suit against them.

How in God's name under their theory could they participate? They are already in suit here. How can anybody in a settlement ever participate? Because they are sued. That's how you settle cases. Those are the people who sit down and settle.

How could you ever settle a divorce case? Because on the one side is the husband, who is either bringing the suit or has a suit brought against him and vice versa with the wife. And both of those people are the people that come forward to settle.

Those are conflicts? They are not conflicts under the law, your Honor, and surely we can't torture this alleged charge of coercion into a conflict and it doesn't make a conflict.

As we point out in our papers, it requires a wrongful or illegal act or a threat against the person which deprives of them of their free will.

And they suggest that it supports their position. But if you look at it, it is a class action, a totally different situation.

Each one of their alleged conflict cases, in fact, involve for the most part pecuniary conflicts. Other situations are conflicts involving lawyers. It's a lawyer's conflict that they had.

In some of the situations it didn't even involve the Board of Directors, so that none of the situations -- frankly, they are the ones that are throwing out the cases on the basis that there is a conflict and it's a pecuniary conflict. And that's why they couldn't participate.

So those cases really support our position, but the issue here, really, your Honor, is not whether or not they can set aside this Consent Decree.

It's whether your Honor can sign it. And they don't even challenge the terms. They don't even challenge whether it's an agreement, because they can't.

They were there. They participated in the mediation. They were there and participated in the Board hearing. They know that this is the

THE COURT: And you are saying these three are essentially strangers?

MR. QUINLAN: They are strangers to the agreement.

THE COURT: So you would be saying that they wouldn't be able to bring the 21401?

MR. QUINLAN: Absolutely. I don't see it. I mean, it's their burden to show you. I don't see how they can do it, but they have a long process here. First of all, they don't --

THE COURT: What's the right process? What can they do?

MR. QUINLAN: They can challenge the agreement after it's been entered.

THE COURT: Yes, but how? You said they couldn't bring the 21401, so --

MR. QUINLAN: I don't think they can. That's the process.

THE COURT: So how can they?

MR. QUINLAN: They can't. Well, if you don't have standing, your Honor, you can't bring it. You can't bring a lawsuit without standing.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: So without standing to what they are complaining about.

Their lawsuit is dismissed, for they are no longer parties to a lawsuit and will not be, as soon as your Honor signs it. They are out of the case. They suffer no harm from that.

What you have here are disgruntled directors who participated in a vote and lost, which was legal, which was proper. They participated in mediation and they lost. Mediation --

THE COURT: Well, you don't lose in mediation. You just don't agree.

MR. QUINLAN: Pardon?

THE COURT: You don't --

MR. QUINLAN: Well, you don't lose; you don't agree. That's the point. And that's why they are saying I am not supporting this.

And it's the same as in any other settlement. You have two of the parties, three of the parties, four of the parties settle it. They are just not party to it.

And so I don't know what standing they have here to complain about anything.

On the other hand, --

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Quinlan, I really

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I just -- I am not going to repeat.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PERKINS: I do think it's important to note that mediation started at the defendants' request, that mediation was conditioned by these defendants by coming to us and saying, "Can we give full releases in a total global Terra-related settlement?"

They came to us, the Attorney General's office, in the middle of expedited hearings and expedited discovery, and said, "Stop litigation. Let's mediate."

So they were the ones who first came to us and said, "Can we get individual releases? Can we settle everything?" And that was the start of mediation.

We never talked to Dr. Stebbins ever. We have never had a conversation with him. We've never sent him a separate communication. We never sent him our First Amended Complaint. He must have gotten it through counsel.

That was sent --

THE COURT: You did meet him. When you couldn't leave Illinois, which was a real reason it was given to them. That was given to them in March of 2001.

We then went and spent April, May, and June mediating. Now, if they were concerned that Dr. Stebbins had changed his mind or he was going to have these conflicts, they certainly didn't do anything for all that time period. That's because they all expected to get releases. They wanted releases for themselves. It was part of the mediated plan.

THE COURT: And part of this settlement is to give them those releases.

MR. PERKINS: They have got it, Judge.

THE COURT: Only them. What do you mean by "them," "they have gotten them"?

MR. PERKINS: All the directors of the Foundation, everybody is released.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PERKINS: The releases -- The cause is dismissed with prejudice. They have gotten really what they were seeking.

Due to the fact that in the end of May we thought settlement was over and we have set any duress. We participated in mediation.

The contentions about Dr. Stebbins were the releases that everybody was going to get. And it's just convenient now to complain about those.

We don't agree with counsel from Sidley and Austin whether the Foundation is a charitable trust or not.

THE COURT: Let's not get into that.

MR. PERKINS: We put that in our papers. It's moot, Judge, and we agree. However, the objectors have made an issue of it. We placed our arguments in the papers. As is the issue of what Dan Terra's intent was.

There is all kinds of remarks bandied about about what it is. We disagree. However, that also is moot.

We acquiesce to letting the Foundation run as it has and certainly the Foundation running as it has is clearly within its past intent and clearly within its Articles of Incorporation.

So the contention that this settlement is causing it to act contrary to its history is preposterous. It's precisely going to act as it in the State of Illinois. It is a critical issue in this community. No question about it.

The Attorney General, in his complaint, where he is complaining that folks on the Board weren't doing the right thing, he says, paragraph one: "This cause is brought for and on behalf of the People of the State of Illinois by and through the Attorney General," and citing the Charitable Trust Act, "and his common law power and duty to protect the interests of the People of Illinois and pertaining to charitable assets."

Now, that's the context in which this litigation from the AG's standpoint was initiated.

This is a court of equity and I am going to suggest a couple of things. The decision that you are called upon to make on this settlement, which by any objective standard has some questionable aspects to it, is a critical decision.

You invested a lot of time and effort, the folks who sat through mediation with my colleague, Mr. Cronin.

Judge, there is no need for you to resolve this matter today. And I am not suggesting should not have participated in the vote, either?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, let me answer it this way.

My clients -- My clients were not during the course of mediation, put in a position where they were threatened with the possibility of additional protracted litigation, as was the case of Stebbins.

They were not in the position of allegations that they were engaging in possible conflicted employment positions with the State of Illinois, as with Dr. Marshall.

There was not a word said, with all of the great Foundation guidance and counsel, read those transcripts. There was not --

When the folks from Winston & Strawn asked them about, "Are you sure you are making this vote, you are conducting this vote independent of any pressure or coercion --" you know, the Miranda warnings that he gave them -- there was not a word said about the fact that, "Hey, wait a minute, we have to decide whether or not these people, given their posture in this matter, are conflicted."

THE COURT: Well, your clients didn't

I know they said they couldn't be on the line, but there sure is an awful lot of whispering on that tape with people.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, there were folks from Sidley, folks from Winston.

THE COURT: So --

MR. CUMMINS: That's who was there. That's all. Those are the only lawyers. They can tell me if I am wrong. I know I am not wrong.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: Now, Judge, here is the simple proposition. You are going to be gone for three weeks.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CUMMINS: There is no reason for you to rush this thing to a conclusion today. I am just trying to be pragmatic. We don't need to go across the street and go through all the, you know, monkey business.

And if they think that we are going to walk away from this and have these counterclaims just filed away, this litigation isn't over, Judge, but it ought to get over but it ought to get over fair and right.

at those facts, and a member of the public would say, "Wait a minute. Something is rotten here."

And all I am asking you to do, in simple sense of simple fairness, consistent with the stakes that are at issue here, give us a chance to vent these things.

And as officers of the court, we are not going to come back here and protract this, if we don't -- if we don't back up what we are saying.

We will make an offer of proof. I will make an offer of proof on what exactly we expect to show.

And I will bet you this: With Dr. Marshall's and Dr. Stebbins' cross examination, they will not be able to utter a word to suggest that anyone reviewed with them the implications of these activities and the impact that it had on them.

Now, if --

THE COURT: On the cases that you cited, and that I did spend a lot of time with over the weekend, your cases, do we have anything that comes close, a non-class-action case where parties to a settlement or a nonparty to a settlement in which your clients are not parties to a settlement, an answer, never filed a counterclaim. You have two other clients --

MR. CUMMINS: Okay. Blame me, Judge. I wasn't there.

THE COURT: I know. You have two other clients that never answered. One had a motion to dismiss pending and the other one I don't think any responsive pleadings were --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, now you have it all in front of you.

THE COURT: And so, you know, there is a time in Illinois procedure to file a counterclaim. And if you don't file it when you file your answer, I think you have to come in on a motion for leave to file it.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, you -- No, your Honor directed no further pleadings be filed. That stopped the clock. The only reason --

And when I talked to Jim Wilson, the only reason that they were able to get that one pleading on file was they had the opportunity before you closed the case on pleadings.

Your Honor, it would be --

THE COURT: When we went to -- When you lawyers, but that doesn't mean we have to compromise our clients' interests.

And, Judge, you know, I don't want to -- I don't want to get off side-tracked on that, because maybe some of these issues -- I said to you the last time a lot of this can get simplified.

One way to get simplified is to give us a fair opportunity to present our position. And most respectfully, you have given us an opportunity to present a lot of our views and legal arguments. But the critical element, the critical element, the role of these folks and the implications that the Attorney General's conduct has not been dealt with and to leave this record open, your Honor, on that subject is what I am addressing in the first instance.

You -- Your order specifically said, and I am quoting from Paragraph 5 of the order entered on February 5th, 2001: "All motions and matters herein, all matters herein are hereby stayed, pending the further order of court, with the exception of directing the defendants' motion for advancement of fees and emergency motion and so forth, respectfully."

anything.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, since last Thursday -- Since last Thursday, having -- We are a group of lawyers, all of whom came to this case relatively recently, as you know.

THE COURT: For somebody who came relatively recently, you put together a fine bit of work here.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes. I don't take credit for that. It's all these folks.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, then they did.

MR. CUMMINS: I just say this: We will supplement our submission in response to precise questions that you want. We will be happy to do that. And Chris Todd may have a comment on that.

But I come back to where we are in this proceeding and I can't imagine you being rushed to conclude this matter, without giving us the opportunity to investigate these issues as we have suggested.

THE COURT: And what you want to file, I guess you already have with leave, but what you are asking leave of Court to file as a counterclaim, where you want to sue Mr. Perkins and you want to properly filed, but if you want to finesse that issue for a moment.

THE COURT: I don't want to finesse anything. I would like to deal with what I have got in front of me. And I have got a motion which you have motioned-up for today --

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: -- along with all the rest of this stuff --

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: -- for leave to file counter-claims and which you want to sue the parties that have entered into this Settlement Agreement.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: I have that right?

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: Okay. And so you want to sue all the directors who are presenting this individually?

MR. CUMMINS: For the reasons that we articulate in those pleadings.

THE COURT: Okay. And let's assume you file that when you are -- when the day is done and you have totally proven up all of your facts here

Now, lawyers, like everybody else that does this, tack on all kinds of other claims for relief. And they are serious. We are not saying they are not serious.

But what's the focal point of this? The focal point is what I am talking about here, which is the problems with the settlement and we can -- If you want me to address the pleadings, I will be happy to do that.

But I come back to where I think we ought to be, if reason prevails here. And that is afford us a limited opportunity. I am asking for a limited opportunity to conduct some decisive discovery with respect to these very serious circumstances, which clearly taint this process, Judge.

You know, I am not going to start repeating what I said. You know that this isn't coincidental that these things happened. You know that.

THE COURT: You had about a two-and-a-half- hour meeting with the Attorney General, is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: My colleagues did.

MR. TODD: If you will look at page two, about the middle of the page, I showed Mr. Perkins the exhibits, what were marked FT2 through 7, which are the -- if I recall correctly, were the declarations of various individuals who had spoken to Dan Terra before his death about moving the collection from Chicago to either Philadelphia, New York, or Washington.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. TODD: The architect that had drawn up the plans in Washington to build the new museum, the real estate agent that had taken him on a helicopter ride to look at places appropriate for a museum in Washington, D.C.

THE COURT: Okay. That all goes to Dan Terra's intent. Now, that wasn't what we were supposed to be talking about.

MR. TODD: I asked Mr. Perkins if he would tell us whether or not he knew about the facts contained in those declarations before he came into this court and represented to your Honor that there was no doubt that Dan Terra intended to lock up this Foundation's collection here in Chicago.

the test, that's not the issue. That's not the standard of review. That's not the law in Illinois or any other State, I submit."

What is the issue is what Mr. Perkins did under the circumstances. Those are objective facts. And then what -- Not subjectively, but what Dr. Stebbins and what Dr. Marshall did after Mr. Perkins did what he did, and those are all objective facts that we can determine.

It doesn't -- It is not, as Ms. Stone and Mr. Quinlan have represented to the Court, that you have to do an analysis of the mental state of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. That's not the analysis. That's not the law.

THE COURT: We pretty much know what they did or they didn't do, based on this mediation record that we have?

There is an abundance of correspondence to and from the mediator and in the various sessions here.

And if you put them in order and you put them in order by date, could you highlight for me where you think the point in time came where they switched gears so dramatically in regard to declined to make Mr. Stebbins available for any kind of examination or interview.

Now, all of us who have tried cases know that what folks do when they are sitting down talking and what they do when they are sitting in that stand having raised their hand to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth and incisively interrogated about facts and circumstances, can turn out to be 180 degrees out of phase with the story they were telling before they hit that stand.

Now, all we are asking you to do is afford us the opportunity to conduct these limited interrogations of these people and come back to you and establish, as I believe we will, and which we offered to prove, that the timing of the Stebbins-Marshall incidents were not fortuitous, coincidental or happenstance, that these individuals did indeed, whether or not they would say that it affected their judgment, felt threatened and intimidated by these activities. They said this much on the record.

And whether or not in that circumstance, as a matter of law, they were conflicted

THE COURT: And that exhibit that circulated that -- Someone help me out on the exhibit number. I am not finding --

MR. CARROLL: Twenty-four?

THE COURT: Twenty-four of the objections exhibit. That was done on March 21st. That was done early on in the mediation process.

Now, do we have between March 21st of that year, of this year, and the time that the mediation concluded or some major shift that's attributable timewise?

Is there anything that I have in any of these minutes where Dr. Stebbins had a certain position in the mediation that changed or was different after that?

Can you point to anything?

MR. CUMMINS: No, I can't.

THE COURT: Because I know you have a lot of -- Well, you have all the same things that I have, which are all these communications to and from counsel and from the mediator.

Do we have anything that shows that the ultimate position that he took in this case at the end was any different than something that be in Chicago.

And while he willing to work with Dr. Tucker -- I am doing this from memory. While he was willing to work with Dr. Tucker to talk about various partnerships elsewhere, he always thought that this should be a Chicago based deal.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, if you will also look, I will find it for you, there is a letter from Dr. Stebbins, it's 1997, was written to the Board before he was even on the Board. And he was recommending to the Board -- I think the letter was -- is Exhibit 18.

THE COURT: Your Exhibit 18, sir?

MR. TODD: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. I have got it.

MR. TODD: Okay. This is from Dr. Stebbins to Mr. Collins, who was then the attorney for the Foundation.

And then if you will look on Page 4 --

THE COURT: He is talking about various alternatives here.

And on Page 4 he says, under A, "We strongly feel the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum and the building cooperative relationship.

And they cite the Corcoran and the Pennsylvania Academy, which are precisely a couple of the issues that we addressed earlier today, which depending upon how one wants to interpret paragraph five, the Consent Decree may or may not be appropriate.

But, your Honor, to answer your question straight up, until we get a chance to cross-examine Mr. Stebbins, I would like to find out what he understands this settlement is supposed to be, what he understands the limitations on this collection are, whether or not he understands it as folks were describing the real meaning of the Consent Decree.

And also what kind of advice or guidance he was given, if any, concerning the implications of these allegations by the Attorney General.

And who were his lawyers? Were they the same lawyers that purport to represent the Foundation, whose interest he is alleged to have compromised?

These are questions, Judge, that have had a fair shot. That's all we want, is a fair shot.

This is a court of equity. And I am asking you to exercise your equitable discretion and give us that opportunity.

THE COURT: And can we go back, just for the last time, before I hear from them again, unless there is something else you wanted to add?

Is there any case where a party in a non-- why don't we call it a nonderivative case or a non-class-action case or a nonparty to a settlement that has had an opportunity to get this kind of discovery before the Court approves the settlement?

MR. CUMMINS: I am sure if their interests are being affected or compromised that, yes, there are cases. To stand here and tell you that I have got it in my hip pocket would be silly. I don't have it, but I --

THE COURT: And the interests that are compromised, isn't it a fact that these three Board members are bound by this settlement to leave the Board? Is that really the --

MR. CUMMINS: That's the long -- That's down because of my schedule. I set this ahead of a whole bunch of other cases and moved cases for a couple of days so I could read this and get through it today --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, --

THE COURT: -- and make this Decision, so --

MR. CUMMINS: The time we spent here today won't be wasted. It is now focused. You put us on our mark. If we come back, if we come back and we are short on our proofs, then we have had an opportunity to present our position. That's all we are asking for.

THE COURT: I think we have one more defense counsel here.

MR. GARMENT: May I?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, I listened to the proceedings today with care and interest, with a partisan interest as one of the lawyers, but with a certain amount of, I think, of objective sadness to hear some of the things that have been said by counsel and the nature of the case, the importance of the case that Mr. Cummins has stressed in his

The first issue involves an abuse of power. And these are fighting words in modern law and politics, and rightly so. I am talking about the intervention under the collar of law by the highest law enforcement office of this State, using the power of that office to constrain the free and unimpaired exercise of personal judgment by the directors of Terra Foundation.

That is our allegation. It is our contention that there is sufficient evidence, circumstances that are not coincidental, that require the test of testimony.

There is, I went on to write, in any event, abundant justification for further and precise evidentiary discovery under oath.

Second, the second paramount issue involves the plain abuse of that State power to aggrandize the State itself by the assertion that the heart of this case of a categorical self-proclaimed right to appropriate the property of a private charitable foundation, its assets, its art collection, its fundamental constitutional right of self-government, particularly to determine venues for the use of its property and to appropriate that than the message that might be sent as a result of this case, if it's concluded with us -- without us having a full opportunity to develop a record. That might be the message that is sent to other folks: "Don't come to Illinois if you don't want the State to take over and hijack your operation." That's what we need to avoid.

THE COURT: Isn't your objection more to the whole notion of the 50 years and the whole notion to this Board having predominant Illinois representation?

If you do your discovery and you find that there is absolutely no coercion on behalf of the two -- or involving the two individuals, you still have Professor Brody's affidavit. And isn't her affidavit or her declaration simply saying, even if there wasn't that kind of coercion, this settlement itself shouldn't be -- is that the public policy dictates that this settlement shouldn't be approved?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, the answer to that is, first of all, there has been such a great emphasis on coercion, if as a matter of law and fact under the circumstances that people develop in this please, Mr. Todd?

MR. TODD: Yes. It's Chris Todd.

And Dr. Tucker submitted the Second Declaration, which is attached as Exhibit 19. And in paragraph eight he speaks directly to a Dr. Stebbins' issue stating that, starting with his first report to the Board as an advisor in 1997, there were strategic planning sessions in 2000. Dr. Stebbins encouraged a review of both in-state and out-of-state options.

He has been an especially strong advocate of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

So I submit that to your Honor as further evidence of Dr. Stebbins' position prior to the draft complaint that the Attorney General showed Dr. Stebbins.

THE COURT: Okay. But it goes on and it says right after that that, when Mr. Perkins and the plaintiffs turned their focus on threatening him, that's when he started wanting to spearhead the idea of mediation.

Now, wasn't he a proponent of the mediation from the beginning? Am I wrong on this one?

direct communication. The ILC was composed of Jacque Adreani --

THE COURT: And Dr. Stebbins.

MS. STONE: -- and Ted Stebbins. They were equal members of the Independent Litigation Committee.

Without in any way waiving the attorney-client privilege, I will state that the Independent Litigation Committee authorized us to explore the possibility of mediation.

I believe, even before this time, Mr. Crowe had already started to make noises about mediation to your Honor, but they might have been more closely linked to time. I am not precisely certain on that point.

THE COURT: I remember even recessing some of our discussions, so that Mr. Conlon -- to get on the phone and try to get direction from the client, who wanted -- I remember one day in particular, particularly wanted the mediation idea to be explored, because it was the plaintiffs who originally didn't want anything to do with mediation.

MR. TODD: But, your Honor, this points question before his?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. TODD: This has mystified me since I have entered this case. We have this extraordinary situation where you -- we are all proponents of mediation and your Honor is one of the -- I am led to believe, the foremost proponents of mediation.

It is a good thing, but I have never seen nor would I submit we would ever want a mediation where one of the parties, in this case the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, during the course of the mediation, step aside and uses a very powerful weapon that the Attorney General has. He says unrelated to the mediation.

He says, "I didn't really -- I didn't speak to Mr. Stebbins about the draft complaint."

That wasn't -- It's like coming into a settlement conference and putting a .357 Magnum on the table and saying, "I never talked about the gun," or whether it would go off or whether someone could get hurt.

It's nonsense. I have never heard of a mediation where in the middle of the mediation, and regaled this Court with the critical analysis of the law that demanded independent and disinterested members of this Board, in order to reach decisions about litigation decisions.

Judge, the very folks that are not suggesting to you that whether or not folks are disinterested or independent or whether or not we can establish the necessary elements to have this settlement seen for what it is are the folks who are arguing 180 degrees out of phase on that issue earlier.

And it comes down to one simple proposition: Let us please develop the record.

THE COURT: Okay. I assume that Ms. Stone wants to be heard, because she is standing.

I assume, and tell me if I am wrong, that Mr. Perkins may want to say something or is that a wrong assumption?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I will wait until after Ms. Stone has to say.

THE COURT: What about you, Mr. Quinlan or Mr. Kennedy?

MR. QUINLAN: I would like to say something. Let her speak.

or under seal.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: Including the three that we have asked for more time to that.

MR. TODD: I don't mention those.

THE COURT: Okay. So I am going to need -- when you present me with the orders, to take a few moments and make sure that they correspond with what my understanding of what everything was. And I would like to make sure that we are covering everything, because my goal here is to unseal as much as we possibly can get unsealed and so that all of this can be made available to the public.

So we need to -- I would really like to sign those orders today so that overnight you can give whatever is needed to be given.

Ms. Stone.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, several points.

First, your Honor asked pointedly of the objectors: Is there any case where someone who is not a party to the hearing has come in to court and successfully blocked the agreement that the agreeing parties want to enter into?

They have not been able to find

Chicago. And there was no inconsistency with that position and the documents he agreed to at the Board meeting.

Whatever Dr. Tucker may say in paragraph eight of his Exhibit 19 about thinking that this is a serious tension with Dr. Stebbins' long-stated views about the Foundation's best interest, that's not what Dr. Stebbins himself believes.

With respect to Dr. Marshall, they have not been able to show you the switch, the coercion, the intimidation, because once again they don't have the facts to support it.

The settlement -- Excuse me. The mediation documents before you show that in May Dr. Marshall said that she wouldn't be able to accept the current proposal under debate. She thought that certain changes should be made.

You can tell, your Honor, by looking at the document that the Board agreed to, that those changes were, in fact, made so that Dr. Marshall, if anything, was a vigorous advocate for the Foundation's interest.

And, in fact, the deal did get better statement that -- the first part of the sentence that says they would consider keeping the collection in Chicago while perhaps considering a merger with the Art Institute or Northwestern or moving it to another city.

So they are citing to you half of a sentence from a document authored by three people several years ago and using that as their clear and convincing evidence of coercion. It just doesn't wash, your Honor.

Number three, they use a lot of hyperbole. They talk about abuse of power, a gun pointing at someone on the settlement team, something rotten here. It's a lot of very sexy, highly charged language. But when you strip away the hyperbole and look at what they really have, there just isn't any evidence, let alone any clear and convincing evidence of something rotten.

Your Honor has given them an opportunity to come forward. You said at the last hearing, "What you said about the opportunity to take discovery, I have not foreclosed that."

I am saying that based on what you filed, there is nothing to take discovery on right

And that gets to their -- my fourth point, their argument that sounds so appealing on its face, which is, Judge, all we are asking for is six hours. You are going to be gone for three weeks. What's the problem?

I mean, it does sound very reasonable, your Honor, and given your attention to detail, I'm sure it hasn't appealed to you, but your Honor has to stop and think about the equities for everyone involved here.

First of all, look at what the resolution is. Look at what the Consent Judgment says. It says that by August 1st we have a deadline the Board has to meet -- if you approve this, the Board has to meet to elect a new Chairman, elect new officers, elect new committee heads, elect a new Executive Committee, elect a new Strategic Planning Committee. These are real deadlines.

THE COURT: Okay. They are real deadlines, but are they hard and fast deadlines?

Are you trying to say that the Board is going to say there is no deal if the Consent Decree is not signed before that day?

they should be afforded an opportunity to discover.

Fifth point, your Honor. They are advocating really a very dangerous reading of this proposed Consent Judgment.

When Mr. Garment, a noted lawyer, gets up and speaks about appropriation of Foundation property, that's a very scary reading of this document. It is not supported by a literal reading of this document.

I would think that the individual defendants would not want this document to be screwed -- to be construed in such a way as to hamstring the Foundation's going forward.

And I would submit that, if your Honor carefully reads the Consent Judgment, asks all the questions you have asked during these several hours of hearings, you will recognize that the Foundation has preserved to itself full rights to operate its own affairs and businesses, with the few restrictions we have identified, but that there has been no appropriation of Foundation property, that the property remains the Foundation's and the Foundation Board will decide how to use that property.

But we simply don't think that they should be granted leave to file a counter-claim when there is nothing to be counter to, if the Consent Decree is entered.

THE COURT: I do have one question for you, Ms. Stone.

Defendant's objections are four-part. And the first of the four part I never quite was clear on and that's the business about the number of directors, the four, the five, counting the votes.

Let me just start with the beginning. This meeting was held that approved the Consent Decree with Ms. -- or Dr. Marshall chairing the meeting.

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: Let's start with that. How did she get to be the chair?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, she has chaired several meetings as an officer, who is not a named party, the only officer of the Foundation who is not a named party.

Ever since your Honor ruled that you didn't think it was appropriate for Dr. Tucker to fuzzy --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: -- because they are talking about five lawful votes and I am not quite sure what your position is on that one.

MS. STONE: Yes. I think it's fair to say that there is some ambiguity in the bylaws, your Honor. And as to whether it would require five or six votes.

We believe out of an abundance of caution to make sure that this bylaw change is airtight from the Foundation's perspective that six members should vote for it, because that would constitute a majority of the directors in office, you know, on the Board.

The individual defendants have said, well, they believe it was -- only five is necessary, given the fact that only eight people showed up at the meeting.

So they said -- because they are saying it's a two-part test, the majority present -- the majority who are in office, plus a majority who are present in the meeting and they say, because there are only eight people present at need six votes? So --

MR. PERKINS: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: We have some headshaking.

MR. QUINLAN: Well, your Honor, --

THE COURT: How many votes do you need, Mr. Quinlan?

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we raised the possibility under the Statute of 108.60. I think all this is academic, because there is no conflict. But we have raised even under the worst possible scenario under 108.60, which is the Statute, a not-for-profit, and the articles don't address their attention to that. Surely no -- address their attention to situations where there is interest. Strike it. Strike that.

Excuse me. That they don't address the situation where there is an interest, a director who has voted, but the article date does, and it specifically provides that, if there is enough people for a quorum, including the directors who are interested, the quorum stands.

Then the only question after that is the majority of people, when you remove the interested directors. The majority vote would they were aware of those things. They acted upon it and acted upon it, in any event.

THE COURT: And so then the vote is four-two and that's enough to carry the day, is that what you are saying?

MR. QUINLAN: Right, right. Four of the six would be voting and that would be enough under the Statute to do it.

We would argue the Statute applies. On the other hand, we only cite that because we are saying under that scenario, even if they were right, which they are not right, still it would pass, it would be valid, and we could still go forward. So there is no basis for that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: If counsel is finished, I have a couple of other comments.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, here we had several things.

First of all, there is no subsequent pleading in front of your Honor of any kind.

THE COURT: They want to.

MR. QUINLAN: They want to, but there

This is all this time. Now they have filed merely an objection, which is not a substantive pleading.

In all of this, these things, they have made no showing of any standard. They have no cases of authority to support their contentions or any of their requests. They have not addressed the matters that we have raised in our response to their objections and our cases and authorities. They have done nothing.

All we have here, your Honor, is rhetoric. They talk about abuse of power. The issue here is there would be an abuse of power if, in fact, we get into a situation where this leads to discovery.

And what we are doing here is putting ourselves at risk here of having discovery taking place when there is no pleading on file. And I will address the counterclaim in a second.

We talk about policy. They cite Professor Brody. Professor Brody's comments are very interesting, but they are all her own opinions. Her background is in teaching, somewhat of the charitable trusts and not-for-profit, but tax, of this, over ten months. Five months, nothing has been filed.

THE COURT: But you do recognize that from February 5th on there was this order that pretty much everybody wasn't supposed to file anything.

MR. QUINLAN: But they had over five months from the time that the answer was due. In all of that time, they did not file.

Some other things that I think are worth noting, as well, here is if we look at the situation, first of all, if we look -- what can you do if you don't have a complaint on file? The only thing you can do is you file under 5402, which is respondents in discovery. That only allows you to identify the parties.

Rule 181 requires that the answer be filed in 30 days. Under 240 -- Excuse me. Under 52608, the counterclaim is required to be filed, with the answer. No counterclaim has been filed. They haven't asked leave to file the counterclaim. There has to be something that would be meritorious.

We have a situation here that the real thing and the only thing that's in front of your Honor is the motion to file on the Consent with discovery here. They are asking for a discovery. The only basis for this will be going into mediation matters.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. You need to slow down, because I am not even getting the words, they are coming so fast. So I can't imagine that the court reporter is getting them all.

MR. QUINLAN: Okay.

THE COURT: Slow it down a little bit.

The mediation --

MR. QUINLAN: They are asking for discovery and the discovery that they are asking for will necessarily invade mediation. And they have agreed mediation statements or process would be private and that nothing that is said there could be used by anybody in any litigation for any purpose outside the mediation.

They asked for the mediation. They participated in the mediation. They agreed to that.

The only basis for getting -- interdicting the mediation is where a criminal act may have taken place. Beyond that, there is no authority to get in to invade discovery.

But the real bottom line here is nothing other than agreement, the agreement of the parties and being the right terms. And that's what it is.

So that we dismiss -- The case will be dismissed. It is dismissed pursuant to the terms of that agreement. There is no case pending.

If they have any rights, those rights are out there like anybody else has a right if there is a case to be filed, if there is something that can be filed, a complaint that can be filed, that's wonderful. I doubt that there is any. I can't see that any grievance has been foisted upon them as a result of this, other than they are dissatisfied with the result.

In every situation where you have a resolution there are always dissatisfied parties. That does not give you a right to complain. It surely doesn't give you any right to discovery.

THE COURT: One of the counts of the counterclaim is the 1983 action. Now, there was a 1983 action filed in Federal Court.

MR. QUINLAN: Right.

THE COURT: That's been dismissed with prejudice?

abstention rulings, Judge, and it was done on the 29th, so it was within 30 days.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: Okay. So it was the 29th of June. Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: The plan -- She does base it on abstention, but she goes on and also addresses the substance of the 1983 action.

THE COURT: She essentially says that there wasn't any 1983 violation here.

MR. QUINLAN: 1983 action, that is correct. And they talk about --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, that's a nisi prius judge that you don't have to refer to, with all due respect to Judge Bucklo.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, -- First of all, let me finish. Would you like counsel --

All I am trying to say is the Court dismissed it, did look at the merits of it, dismissed it. It was out there. It's dismissed.

They say -- They came back here and they brought their action here.

I would like to find it. There is no 1983 action pending here. They are trying --

Mr. Cummins?

MR. CUMMINS: It's a printed opinion of Judge Bucklo's.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. I've got the other one all marked up.

MR. QUINLAN: Page ten of the other one is the slip.

THE COURT: Yes, that's the one I have all marked up, so.

MR. CUMMINS: It's just easier to read those, Judge, at least at my age.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, on that basis, we would ask that you sign the order today and that order is the order that should be signed here.

As I indicated before, the process -- nobody has objected to this being the agreement. Nobody has objected to this being the terms.

And on that basis, I think we are entitled to have the order.

THE COURT: Ms. Stone, you don't want it signed today?

MS. STONE: Well, I don't think it's a matter of corporate formality. It should be signed today.

I believe she is in Wisconsin tonight. I will make every opportunity to fax the red line version to her and get her to sign it. But I think it would be more appropriate for us, then, to present it to you tomorrow.

Alternatively, we could handmark the version to your Honor, present it to you tonight, with the idea that Stephanie Pace Marshall's signature only would become binding tomorrow if she agreed to it.

I think the cleaner way to do it is to give a chance to reach out to Ms. Marshall tonight.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, the only thing I would say is it, in fact, is administrative. It is really just a scrivener type of thing. It's making the clarifications that your Honor indicated. That doesn't require anybody's approval, because that says the agreement is the agreement.

It would seem to me that we could do that by interlineating between the lines as to what -- these matters being re-added. I don't see that anybody has to approve it or not approve it. But at the same time I think it's something that These defendants came and said and conditioned, "Only if you will do a global release of us and everybody else, because we want it to be over with. We don't want to settle with the Foundation and litigate against the directors."

So they came knowing what the Stebbins issues were, trying to get more releases. And they sought those rights for themselves.

And Dr. Stebbins -- and from February 5th to the end of May and through June, they thought they were going to get releases. And they participated in mediation.

And it's only now, when at the last minute they didn't get what they wanted, that these defendants didn't have to get the terms they like, that they now try to point -- maybe Mr. Dobbins and/or Mr. Stebbins is the person who shouldn't have been able to vote, because he has some kind of conflict.

It's ridiculous, Judge. It was the process of mediation. It was their very terms. They are the ones that waived the right to complain about Dr. Stebbins' time.

Coincidence. They want to talk about

MR. PERKINS: Judge, it was a very discrete -- It's over now. We don't even call it an investigation, because that terminology displayed to the public is something we would never have said. We would have called it review or inquiry, because it's too derogatory to call it an investigation.

We investigate and look into cases when we have charges. We review and do inquiries when we have matters that we need to attend to.

The Attorney General is charged with protecting the public interest, the beneficial interest of 25,000 charities. By Illinois law, he is the only person who can look at what charities do, what charities are doing and question them.

THE COURT: So you made a factual inquiry. You are making no investigation into the Academy or in regard to Ms. -- Dr. Marshall; is that correct?

MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge. There were no charges made. There were no attempts to -- There is no proceedings involved, an inquiry, "please produce this," a question to them. That was the extent of it. And those matters were quickly resolved.

that took place, Mr. Perkins, in the mediation scheme of things was when?

MR. PERKINS: At the end of May, when the parties threatened that they weren't going to continue with mediation, we started to look at the preparer, because we had certain matters to look at.

And on May 25th, we issued what's called an Order to Produce, a statutory order to produce, produce a particular document to Ms. Marshall and her school. And that was resolved probably by June 12th, 14th, something like that.

THE COURT: And right before that happened, had Ms. Marshall taken any position in the mediation that reflects that she wasn't -- didn't want to settle this case? Did her position change?

Is there anything in these documents that reflects a change in her position?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, as you know, what we have given you in the exhibits is her May 21st transmittal letter saying she didn't particularly -- though she didn't like everything, she had a laundry list of things she wanted to change with

She was -- In her letter of May 21, at the end paragraph she says, "I am interested in continuing mediation, where these defendants were not."

But, Judge, you asked this question. You said, you know, what do they do now?

Well, Judge, they have no evidence and we are really -- Where are we? We are in a part -- a point where they don't really have any right to discover at all.

Where we are at is there is a settlement proposal before your Honor. Maybe they have a counterclaim on file. Maybe they don't. We can all argue about that.

But if they do, it's not timely for discovery to take place under their counterclaim. And their objections don't have evidence, that they have any proof of wrongdoing.

Your Honor, duress has been universally defined as a condition which exists where one is induced by the unlawful act of another. That's Illinois Supreme Court law in our State. That's People vs. Catholic Homes Bureau at 68 Ill 2d, 433. It's in our papers, unlawful.

out and they will have to figure out another way.

There is no right to go on a fishing expedition in the hope that maybe they will find evidence that will then give them rights to have a cause of action. That's not how it's done. You don't get expedited discovery to go on a fishing expedition in the hope.

They just don't have a position here that allows them to get the expedited discovery. And they don't have any pleadings on file that would stand in the way of your Honor entering a Consent Decree.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, may I just respond?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. TODD: Could I direct your Honor's attention to Exhibit 21, since your Honor has kept that under seal? This is Dr. Marshall's May twenty--

THE COURT: Hold it one second. I need to get -- It's your Exhibit 21, right?

MR. TODD: Correct, yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: You asked the question, did

MR. TODD: Okay. That's --

THE COURT: There wasn't -- Just wait one second.

There was a meeting of -- with the mediator on May 11th? Is that a Friday?

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: An all-day session with mediator on May 11th. And at the conclusion of that day, parties walked away with the idea that there was a settlement.

MS. STONE: Well, --

MR. PERKINS: Some parties, Judge.

THE COURT: Some parties.

MS. STONE: Not all parties.

THE COURT: Well, some parties went away with the idea that there was a supplement and then all the mediator had to do that day was put it in writing and pass it around.

MS. STONE: Well, no, the Foundation always believed that a properly convened Board meeting would be necessary, in effect.

THE COURT: Well, yes, but in other words, the mediator was going to put it into writing. It was put into writing. It was then distributed to -- Excuse me. She is talking about the Attorney General's version of the proposal.

MR. TODD: Correct.

THE COURT: Now, somebody give me the exhibit number, please, because it's getting very late and I'm getting a little bit tired. Tell me the exhibit number of Mr. Hilliard's proposal.

MS. STONE: Well, --

THE COURT: We have that here.

MS. STONE: Which proposal, your Honor?

THE COURT: The one after May 11th.

MS. STONE: As long as your Honor understands that the proposal being discussed back in May is not the proposal which found form in the Consent Judgment.

THE COURT: Okay. Wait one second.

MS. STONE: Two technically different proposals.

THE COURT: Right. I've got -- I am just trying to understand counsel's argument and in order for me to understand it, I have got to put it in context. And that's Exhibit K of the Attorney General, has got what --

Is this what Mr. Hilliard was

THE COURT: And she is saying, "I am going to make my comments on David Hilliard's version."

MR. PERKINS: That's correct.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, go ahead.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, it speaks for itself.

And in reply to the last comment, that's why we need some evidence, why we need Dr. Marshall to clarify what was in her mind. I know Mr. Perkins from our last conversation, he conceded he doesn't read minds. He is telling you what was in Mrs. -- Dr. Marshall's mind. We need for her to tell us.

MR. PERKINS: I think the last paragraph of Dr. Marshall's May 20th document, your Honor, says, "I am very interested in continuing working on mediation." I really wasn't reading her mind. I was reading her words.

MS. STONE: And, your Honor, you have her words. You have her words at the Board meeting, where she said she is voting her free will. She is not being coerced.

And, again, your Honor, it makes no from attending.

MS. STONE: And some people were not even able to participate on the phone, your Honor, like Madame Ahweiler.

MR. PERKINS: Most were, Judge. Most of the Board members participated.

THE COURT: And there was a circulation of what -- right before that meeting, of what was a latest draft, which also embodied subsequent input from Ms. Marshall?

MS. STONE: That's correct.

THE COURT: And the bottom line, as you see these progress, is the Foundation came out better at the end, did it not, because of this?

MS. STONE: It did, your Honor, and, you know, again, I thought we were not supposed to get into the intricacies of mediation. I didn't think we were supposed to be able to use what was said in mediation to further their litigation strategy.

THE COURT: They were real simple. They didn't say what she said. They just asked me to read it.

MS. STONE: Well, without myself violating hardly getting better.

I think it's probably time to wrap it up. I would just say this, your Honor. When Mr. Perkins was speaking and explaining who said what to whom, what happened when, without any record, that's precisely why we need this discovery. And I am not going to put you through the same arguments once again.

I just ask you to grant us the limited relief that we are requesting.

I think there is more than ample evidence before you to justify that relief and not give us that will in our judgment compromise this entire process that you spent so long and hard on.

And we ask you to rule in our favor on that matter, Judge, and simply defer, do what they say is alleged housekeeping. And we dispute that, as well. Defer ruling on this matter until we have had an opportunity to present you with the evidence that we said we will present.

Thank you very much.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Counsel, we have had a long day today their cases.

This case has had a very, very contested and, shall we say, tortuous history since last September when it was filed.

I believe there have been three appeals, there may have been more, with cross appeals and further appeals. There have been -- There has been a contest along the line of virtually every issue that has been raised in the case and it's an important Foundation and it's an important case and it needs to have careful and deliberate consideration. And I have tried to do that.

I have found nothing in these papers that have been cited by the objectors that should cause me not to approve this settlement. I really don't see it as a close call with respect to counsel and with the fine amount of work that was done here.

I have thought about the process of where we were when we went to mediation and the history of the case and what we were facing and why we went. It was a very difficult process to even get the parties to go to mediation. And the and again today in Chambers.

And after you get through all the music and all the stuff in the beginning of getting everybody on the line and you try to get to that first motion, which is an interminable motion to change the documents, which never got changed, I listened and relistened to the section of the tape when counsel for the Foundation advised everyone about their fiduciary obligations and their votes.

And I listened to the way Ms. Marshall voted and what she said and how she said it, as well as Dr. Stebbins and what he said and how he said it.

This was a lady who was in control. She was running that meeting and she was controlling some very difficult situations and early on in this meeting she said, without any hesitation, that if they made a change she wasn't going to go for this thing.

She didn't like the change that had been advanced by Dr. Stebbins and she wasn't going to go along with it. And this was not a lady who was being intimidated by anybody.

I also did not feel that there was Foundation.

But I don't read this Consent Decree as the restrictive document that counsel for the defendant has said that it is.

I think this collection can be moved around and loaned and shown throughout the world and everybody, including the people of the State of Illinois, are going to benefit from that.

I do have a very severe problem. And I won't sign a piece of paper that has that last sentence on it, that says no other public statement shall be made. So that has to be changed with combining the two sentences and putting in the words, "and these parties have agreed."

And I won't sign it unless -- I don't want to sign a red line or a sloppily-written document today. I want that first paragraph corrected so that it says who filed answers, including defendant Michaeli, who is not mentioned in here. Everybody who has filed a current responsive pleading.

And as far as I am concerned, I have no problem allowing these defendants leave to file their answer and that can be put in there, this action. And that's without prejudice to them bringing any other separate lawsuit that they may see may be appropriate in any valid cause of action that they may have against any individual. But it's not part of this case.

This Foundation was lucky enough to have one of the most experienced and capable mediators. I did not really believe that this case could be mediated successfully to conclusion.

At the time that it went out, I had some very, very strong doubts. I believe this is a just and appropriate conclusion. I do not see it as a case in which there has been abuse of power and I definitely don't see it as a case in which the State has tried and succeeded to take control of a charitable foundation.

The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation, as being alleged in the papers. And this Court is going to be able to continue to operate the way they have.

The big difference is that this Board is now going to be able to operate. There will be a functional Board, which there has not been for almost a year now. And the Board will be able to

16di-001872

THE COURT: On the what, sir?

MR. CUMMINS: On the counterclaim, the denial of the counterclaim.

THE COURT: Well, once I sign that, I don't have to certify anything. You have got a final order and you can go up to the Appellate Court tomorrow. I will be signing all of these tomorrow, with the exception of the question of the unsealing. And I want to do the unsealing tonight.

MR. CUMMINS: And you are making a specific finding, I gather, that there is no conflict with respect to those two directors?

THE COURT: I am not putting any Findings of Fact in the order that I am signing, but I am telling you that I do not see anything in the papers that have been presented to me. And I have read all the mediation papers that have been as attachments here. All the sealed documents.

I have not seen anything here that would defeat the entry of this Consent Decree.

MR. CUMMINS: The reason I want a clarification, Judge, you made a ruling with respect to your perception that they didn't seem to feel coerced, which is -- members that should not have participated.

Is that what you are saying?

MR. CUMMINS: I am wanting you to make a ruling on that, yes, Judge.

THE COURT: They could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in the decision.

MR. CUMMINS: I just want to clarify that finding, because that's an issue.

MR. GARMENT: May I, your Honor, --

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. GARMENT: -- express my disappointment at your Honor's ruling, understanding what you articulated.

It is a very long distance from the commencement of this proceeding and I would like on the record to simply have it appear once again that this case started with a suit that was brought by two dissident directors, Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz, which were not privileged documents, it would have been a very clear, very flagrant slander, because it was filled with false allegations that have been known to be false.

On the basis of that pleading, out of all of the cosmetic changes and alterations that have nothing to do with the fundamental defect in this case that started right at its beginning, continued all the way through, and it's now finally solidified in the Judgment of the Court.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I have to object and ask the comments be stricken. Counsel has no basis to make those comments. Frankly, the only test of this has been where your Honor denied the motion to dismiss.

And they have filed an answer today, which admits there is a cause of action. So I don't know how counsel can stand in front of this Court and make his grand speech of the basis that there is something here that is totally unfounded.

The complaint was proper. It was found proper by this Court and it's now been found proper by filing an answer. And I object and ask it be stricken.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, --

THE COURT: I am not going to be striking any remarks of counsel. All of counsel's remarks may stay on the record.

And there were -- There was no

THE COURT: Which one, about the Special Litigation Committee?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, about all the conflicts, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: All the conflicts, which quite frankly no one has addressed in resolution of this matter at any time, including the fact that lawyers who purport to represent the Foundation can currently represent folks individually who purport to be taking actions inconsistent with the Foundation.

But I just assume, when folks made those pleadings, they believed it to be true.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, there comes a time that all litigation has to be ended. And this litigation is going to be ended tomorrow in this Court with the signing of these orders.

And the only thing that is going to remain is the Petitions for Attorney's fees, which the Consent Decree requires me to adjudicate. And if I am wrong, I am sure the Appellate Court is going to tell me I am wrong and I will see you all back here.

MS. STONE: I believe it's necessary to respond to the last salvo by counsel for the objectors.

Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood solely represented the Foundation. We do not represent any of the defendants in their -- any of the directors in their individual capacity. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins in his individual capacity. He has another lawyer for that purpose.

We do not represent Dr. Marshall in her individual capacity. We represent merely the Foundation. We give advice to the six non-named, nonparty directors. That includes Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

There is no conflict by Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood at any point in this case. There is no conflict anywhere.

Thank you.

MR. QUINLAN: Judge, I would like to reserve my comments for the lounge across the street after the proceedings here.

Thank you.

THE COURT: We are in recess. Thank you.

Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and

EXHIBIT A

JOINT PRESS RELEASE re BUNTROCK et. al. v. TERRA FOUNDATION, et al.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased to announce that a settlement has been reached and adopted by the Court.

The settlement will preserve the public's access, here in Chicago, to The Terra Foundation's collection for no less than 50 years. The Foundation will continue to manage its affairs, to operate its museum and programs in Giverny, France, and to promote understanding of and appreciation for American art. The Attorney General is satisfied that the settlement upholds the interests of the people of the State of Illinois. The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased that a settlement could be reached.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation have agreed to let this statement stand alone. No further statements are to be made.

prospective relief incorporated into the extended collective bargaining agreement. The extended collective bargaining agreement would bind its signatories to the terms of the settlement. The plaintiffs agreed to settle these actions and forego their claims for back pay and attorney's fees in exchange for wage and job classification concessions made explicitly enforceable by a collective bargaining agreement. But because Essex House was not a signatory to the extended collective bargaining agreement, it was not bound to honor the prospective relief. As a result, the arbitrator reasoned that Essex House gave no consideration to the union for the settlement and was not covered by the memorandum of understanding.

After the arbitrator's decision, the parties petitioned this Court to approve the settlement, even without Essex House. This Court scheduled a hearing for July 19, 1990, pursuant to Rule 23(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, to (1) consider the terms of the proposed settlement, (2) discuss the sufficiency of the notice provisions to the plaintiff classes, and (3) set a date for hearing objections to the settlement. Fifteen minutes before the 3:00 p.m. hearing time, this Court received a letter from new counsel for Marriott, Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Mendelsohn, by signature of Bettina Plevan, objecting to the settlement (the "Marriott letter"). The Marriott letter indicated that Marriott had retained the Proskauer firm just days before to represent Marriott in connection with the proceedings regarding the settlement before this Court. The basis of Marriott's objection was that defendants' counsel pursued the settlement even though it excluded Marriott, which it had represented up until Marriott retained the Proskauer firm. As a result, Marriott alleged that defendants' counsel had been in a conflict of interest with respect to the settlement. Marriott asked the Court not to approve the settlement, and for time to investigate their conflict of interest allegation.

At the July 19, 1990 hearing, the Court heard argument and colloquy on Marriott's allegations. Marriott represented that it only objected to its exclusion from the settlement, not to its terms. Marriott conceded they would settle on the exact same terms, except that since they no longer owned the Essex House, they could not sign the extended collective bargaining agreement. Nikko, the current owner of Essex House, refused to sign the collective bargaining agreement. The Court recessed the hearing until the next day for counsel to discuss settlement of Marriott's claims.

At the hearing held July 20, 1990, the Court determined that the Marriott letter provided an insufficient basis to proceed 1077 with an investigation of the charges against defendants' counsel. The Court then considered the notice provision, and ordered that publication of the settlement be expanded from the union trade paper to also include two weeks of daily publication in the New York Daily News and El Diario. Further, the Court set September 10, 1990 as the final hearing date for objections to the settlement. In connection with the September 10, 1990 hearing, the Court received only one set of objections, from Marriott.

II. Discussion

A. Settlement of the Actions

[1][2] In approving this settlement of these class actions, this Court should determine whether the settlement is "fair, reasonable, and adequate." Ross v. A.H. Robbins Co., Inc., 700 F.Supp. 682, 683 (S.D.N.Y.1988); Weinberger v. Kendrick, 698 F.2d 61, 73 (2d Cir.1982), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 818, 104 S.Ct. 77, 78 L.Ed.2d 89 (1983); Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure: Civil 2d § 1797.1 at 378. In this circuit, a presumption in favor of settlement exists where (1) the settlement was reached after arms-length negotiations; (2) the proponents are counsel experienced in similar cases; (3) there has been sufficient discovery to enable counsel to act intelligently; and (4) the number of objectants or their relative interest is small. Ross v. A.H. Robbins, supra, 700 F.Supp. at 683; Munsey Trust v. Sycor, Inc., 457 F.Supp. 924, 926 (S.D.N.Y.1978); see Weinberger v. Kendrick, supra, 698 F.2d at 73-74. In applying these criteria, this Court will first and foremost consider the interests of the absentee class members. See State of West Virginia v. Chas. Pfizer & Co., 440 F.2d 1079, 1085 (2d Cir.1971); Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure: Civil 2d § 1797.1 at 392-93; 3B Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 23.80[4] at 23-487.

[3] In this instance, the plaintiffs and settling defendants have met the burden of sustaining this presumption in favor of the settlement. First, this settlement was consummated after five years of litigation as a part of contract negotiations for a new collective bargaining agreement. The collective bargaining agreement negotiations were themselves "arms-length" negotiations, evidenced by the months of negotiations undertaken to extend the existing collective bargaining agreement. It undoubtedly follows that the subsumed settlement negotiations were conducted at arms-length. Second, counsel for plaintiffs and defendants are experienced labor lawyers who have represented their respective parties for years. Third, these cases have been litigated for many years, and have undergone extensive discovery and much legal maneuvering. Finally, not one single plaintiff in any of the classes objected to a single term of this settlement. That no plaintiff out of the several thousand involved in these suits objected to the terms of this settlement is a testimony to its fairness and sufficiency. As stated earlier, it is their rights that are the primary concern of this Court in evaluating this settlement.

As stated earlier, only one set of objections was received, namely, those from defendant Marriott Essex House.

B. Marriott's Objections

[4] Defendant Marriott objects to the proposed settlement on two grounds; (1) that the notice was insufficient, and (2) that defendants' counsel was in a conflict of interest by pursuing the settlement even though it did not include Marriott. Both of these objections are without merit and must be dismissed.

1. Notice

This Court squarely considered the content of the notice and the extent of its publication before approval. The transcript of the July 20, 1990 hearing reveals that form of the notice and extent of its publication were discussed extensively. The Court only approved the notice after expanding the publication to include two weeks of daily publication in the New York Daily News and El Diario. At that time, the Court explicitly determined that the notice form and its expanded publication 1078 were sufficient to inform the class members of the settlement and its terms. Further, it is utterly disingenuous for Marriott to raise insufficiency of notice at this late time. Counsel for Marriott received the proposed notice of settlement in advance of the hearings held July 19 and 20, 1990. Marriott at that time did not raise any objection to the proposed notice form, even though they had every opportunity to voice their concerns.

2. Conflict of Interest

Marriott's conflict of interest objection can only be considered if it meets two threshold requirements. First, as a non-settling defendant, Marriott only has standing to object if it demonstrates that they will suffer "formal" or "plain legal prejudice" as a result of this settlement. [FN1] Waller v. Financial Corporation of America, 828 F.2d 579, 583 (9th Cir.1987); Quad/Graphics, Inc. v. Fass, 724 F.2d 1230, 1232 (7th Cir.1983); In Re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litigation, 643 F.2d 195, 209 (5th Cir.1981); Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure: Civil 2d § 1797.1 at 408. Second, Marriott's conflict of interest allegation can only be a valid objection if the settlement terms were negotiated while any potential conflict existed. In re Corrugated Contained Antitrust Litigation, supra, 643 F.2d at 208. Since Marriott cannot meet either part of this test, its objection must be dismissed.

> FN1. There is substantial authority to support the association and the union's proposition that Marriott per se has no standing to object to this settlement at all. First, the association argues that Marriott is not even a party to the settlement since these suits are separate actions later consolidated. Second, some courts have held that non-settling defendants per se do not have standing to have their objections considered. See, e.g., In re Fine Paper Litigation State of Washington, 632 F.2d 1081, 1087 (3d Cir., 1980); Wainright v. Krafico, 53 F.R.D. 78, 81 (N.D.Ga.1971). This Court need not reach these arguments in determining these matters.

First, Marriott argues that it stands to suffer formal legal prejudice because settlement of the other suits puts Marriott at a disadvantage with respect to its own settlement discussions with the union. Marriott's contention in this regard is at best highly speculative, and of doubtful relevance to the question of formal legal prejudice.

With respect to 85 Civ. 0216, Marriott's legal rights exist independent of the disposition of the other suits or other defendants. The suit against Essex House was brought as a separate action. The class of plaintiffs seeking relief from Marriott is distinct from the settling classes. Whatever financial liability that Marriott may incur after a trial on the merits is independent of the disposition of the other suits. Marriott may still raise every single legal theory in its defense now that it could have without the settlement. Marriott cannot demonstrate that it stands to suffer any legal prejudice at all from the settlement of the other suits.

With respect to 85 Civ. 9925, the dismissal of the other hotels and the association similarly does not prejudice Marriott's legal rights. The Essex House was operated as an independent entity, and whatever actions might be proved against it only relate to its own conduct. Essex House's potential liability is also not related to the other defendants.

Second, a review of the sequence of events surrounding this settlement reveals that the alleged conflict, if it existed at all, only arose after determination of the settlement terms. The union and the association opened negotiations on the extension of the collective bargaining agreement in September, 1989. The memorandum of understanding setting out the terms of the settlement was executed on January 30, 1990. During the settlement negotiations, defendants' counsel represented all of the defendants and executed the agreement on behalf of all of the defendants. When the dispute arose over whether Essex House was included in the settlement, defendants' counsel maintained that Essex House was, and argued on behalf of Essex House at the arbitration hearing.

Up until the May 10, 1990 decision of the arbitrator holding that Essex House was 1079 not included in the settlement, Marriott's interests and the interests of the other defendants were one and the same. By Marriott's own logic, the potential conflict only arose after May 10, 1990, when the other ten defendants decided to pursue the settlement without Marriott. But this divergence of interests occurred over three months after the final terms of the settlement were memorialized into the memorandum of understanding. Given this sequence of events, it was impossible for the settlement negotiations to have been tainted by any conflict. Indeed, the record shows that the association and defendants' counsel fought vigorously for Marriott's rights.

In sum, it is most revealing that neither Marriott nor any other party to this entire litigation objects to the terms of the settlement. After considering the terms set out in the stipulation of settlement, the arguments of counsel, and that no objections from the classes has been received, this Court finds the settlement fair, adequate and reasonable under the circumstances, and should be approved.

III. Conclusion

The Court hereby approves the settlement of the above-captioned as set out in the stipulation of settlement dated July 11, 1990. For the reasons discussed, Marriott's objections to the settlement of the above captioned cases are hereby denied in all respects. Contemporaneous with this order, the Court will sign the order of settlement previously submitted to the Court as exhibit D to the stipulation of settlement.

So Ordered.

March 3, 1980.

Class actions were brought by department store shareholders against the department store and its officers and directors for alleged violations of securities laws and of corporate fiduciary duties in connection with withdrawn proposed exchange offer made by another department store. On defendant's motion for dismissal, or in alternative, for directed verdicts, the District Court, Leighton, J., held that: (1) defendants did not violate provision of Securities Exchange Act of 1934 proscribing use of manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in purchase or sale of any security, nor did they violate rule promulgated by Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant to such statute; (2) defendants did not violate provision of the Act proscribing engaging in any fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative acts or practices in connection with any tender offer; and (3) directors did not breach fiduciary duties, existing under Delaware law, by resisting take-over attempt solely to perpetuate themselves in office.

Judgment entered on directed verdicts.

MEMORANDUM

LEIGHTON, District Judge.

This is a consolidated jury trial of four out of nine related class suits in which the complaints allege violations of Sections 10b, 14d, and 14e of the 1934 Securities and Exchange Act. Twenty-one plaintiffs, on their behalf and representing four subclasses of 16,662 shareholders who own 9,054,065 shares of common stock of Marshall Field & Company, a Chicago based department store, sue for preliminary and permanent injunction, damages, and other relief. The suits are brought under federal securities laws and rules and regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Plaintiffs invoke the jurisdiction of this court pursuant to 15 U.S.C. s 78aa; and they allege pendent claims based on doctrines of the common law.

In the earliest suit filed in this court, 78 C 537, plaintiffs and class representatives are Alice D. Sinsheimer,[FN1] Sam Brown, Arnold Kamerling, Julius Green, George A. Levitt, Jack Stacey, Jr., Estelle A. Stacey, Anita H. Johnson, Donald E. Tracy, Barber J. Tracy, Irving J. Hillman and Stanley Bernstein; in the next, 78 C 620, Richard Weiss; in the next, 78 C 1141, Paul Kriendler of New Jersey; [FN2] in the next, 79 C 1179, Allen J. Markovitz of Pennsylvania; in the next, 78 C 1700, David H. Greenstein; in the next, 78 C 2067, William Saltiel and Clarice Saltiel; in the next, 78 C 2373, Michael DeBartolo of New York; in the next 78 C 2480, Joseph Berke; and in the last filed of these cases, 78 C 2556, Ronald Egnor of New York. Plaintiffs, in varying amounts, are owners of the common stock of Marshall Field & Company, a Delaware corporation with its principal offices in Chicago, Illinois.

FN1. Ruth Panter, the original plaintiff in 78 C 537, was dismissed from the suit during the pretrial phase of the case.

FN2. Where the citizenship of a plaintiff is not stated, it is because he or she is a citizen of Illinois.

The defendants are Marshall Field & Company, [FN3] Angelo R. Arena, George C. Rinder, and Arthur E. Osborne, president and chief executive officer, executive vice president, and senior vice president, respectively, of Marshall Field; Jean Allard, Edward McCormick Blair, John M. Budd, Albert B. Dick, III, Howard M. Packard, John M. Simpson and Harold Byron Smith, Jr., directors of the company.[FN4] Each defendant, also in varying amounts, is a Marshall Field shareholder.

FN3. Marshall Field & Company is only a nominal party. Plaintiffs have stated that they seek no judgment or relief against it since they are its shareholders, and thus owners of the corporation.

FN4. The death of John M. Budd, prior to this trial, has been suggested; but no attempt has been made by plaintiff to substitute his legal representative as a defendant in these proceedings. See Rule 25(a), Fed.R.Civ.P.

In a stipulation of the parties approved by this court in a pretrial order, it has been 1173 agreed that trial on the pleadings in Weiss, 78 C 620, Egnor, 78 C 2556, and Berke, 78 C 2480, will be binding on all parties in these consolidated cases with the exception of the plaintiffs in Panter, 78 C 537.

In each of these consolidated class suits, after the jurisdictional, venue, and general class allegations, plaintiffs complain [FN5] that in early October, 1977, a California corporation named Carter Hawley Hale, through certain members of its board of directors, approached Marshall Field & Company and expressed an interest in the two companies beginning to negotiate a merger; that this interest continued from that time through and including February 21, 1978; that on December 12, 1977, Carter Hawley Hale delivered a letter to Field proposing that it consider a transaction whereby Carter Hawley Hale would exchange a quantity of its common stock for outstanding stock of Field; that included in the proposal was the understanding that Field shareholders would have the option of receiving cash up to 49% of the total transaction; that on the same day, Carter Hawley Hale issued a press release announcing this communication that was transmitted by it to Field; that from time to time prior to that date, substantial, listed companies, other than Carter Hawley Hale, also approached Field proposing a merger or other form of permanent relationship between Field and those companies; that in February, 1978, Carter Hawley Hale announced that a specific tender offer would be made for Field's common stock under the terms of which Carter Hawley Hale would acquire outstanding common stock of Field for cash and stock amounting to approximately $42.00 per share; that Section 14(e) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. s 78n(e), provides in its pertinent part that:

FN5. This summary of the conduct about which the complaint is made, and of the unlawful course of conduct alleged, is taken from the first amended complaint in Panter, 78 C 537 and the amended complaint for injunction and other relief in Weiss, 78 C 620 because, when examined, it can be seen that the allegations in the other complaints are either identical or substantially similar to those in these two cases.

It shall be unlawful for any person to make any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading, or to engage in any fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative acts or practices, in connection with any tender offer or request or invitation for tenders, or any solicitation of security holders in opposition to or in favor of any such offer, request, or invitation.

It is further alleged that, in spite of the prohibitions contained in Section 14(e), defendants, the directors of Marshall Field, conspired to and did embark on a course of conduct designed to deceive plaintiff(s) and other class members in order to induce plaintiff(s) and other class members to oppose the tender offer. It is also alleged that defendants conspired and embarked upon a course of manipulative acts and practices designed substantially to inhibit plaintiff(s) and other class members from accepting the tender offer. Plaintiffs allege a course of conduct, followed by defendants, aimed at defeating the tender offer of Carter Hawley Hale, and misleading and deceiving Field's shareholders and the public with regard to the company's plans for corporate expansion. In other counts of the complaints, it is alleged that the same course of conduct unlawfully violates Section 10(b) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, and Rule 10(b)-5 promulgated thereunder by the Securities and Exchange Commission; and further, that the acts of the defendants about which plaintiffs complain, and which they allege are unlawful, were breaches of fiduciary obligations which defendants, as Marshall Field directors, owed to the stockholders of the company, including plaintiffs and other members of the class. Plaintiffs pray for injunctive relief, damages which one plaintiff claims exceed $200 million, the award of attorneys' fees and costs, and such other relief as the court may deem just and proper.

1174 Defendants have answered each complaint, and they deny all allegations which charge that they, in any way, have violated any of the provisions of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, Section 10b or 14(e), or any fiduciary duty owed to the stockholders of Marshall Field & Company. They admit, however, that on or about December 12, 1977, Carter Hawley Hale delivered a letter to Field, but state that the letter speaks for itself; that in connection with the letter, defendants caused to be published a communication in the Chicago Tribune that incorporated a letter to Field employees; that they mailed a letter to Field's shareholders; that they filed a lawsuit in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois against Carter Hawley Hale; that thereafter they agreed to acquire five former Liberty House Stores in Washington and Oregon, and announced plans to open and operate a store in Houston, Texas; and that Field is considering the establishment of other stores in other areas of the country including Northbrook, Illinois, and the southwest United States. They further admit that Field has discussed with others the possible acquisition of other stores.

In addition, defendants have pled affirmative defenses, including their allegation that plaintiffs' complaints fail to state a claim on which relief can be granted by this court; that the complaints fail to satisfy the requirements of Rule 23, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, precluding plaintiffs from proceeding in these class suits; that the complaints fail to satisfy the requirements of Rule 23.1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and thus plaintiffs cannot proceed with a derivative suit; and that the complaints are barred in whole or in part by the applicable statutes of limitations. Defendants request the court to dismiss plaintiffs' complaints, award them costs and fees, and grant them such other and further relief as may be appropriate.

After four weeks in which the jury has heard evidence consisting of testimony of thirteen witnesses, excerpts from four depositions, a vast number of exhibits, and several stipulations, plaintiffs have rested their case in chief; defendants now move for dismissal pursuant to Rule 41(b), or in the alternative, for directed verdicts pursuant to Rule 50(a), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. These motions require the court to view the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs; [FN6] and all reasonable inferences which can be drawn from the evidence must be in their favor.[FN7] Accordingly, the court determines that the following are the facts most favorable to the plaintiff which the jury in this case could find from the testimony, the deposition excerpts, the stipulations, and the exhibits in the record.

Marshall Field & Company [FN8] is a full line, high quality department store which has sold general merchandise, apparel, and furniture in Chicago and other large cities of the country. It was founded in 1852 by the Chicago merchant, Marshall Field, and the company expanded gradually over the next century. By the end of 1976, it was the eighth largest department store chain in the United States, with 31 stores, 15 of them in the Chicago area and others in Cleveland, Ohio, and in Seattle and Spokane, Washington. The company is today a publicly owned corporation, with more than 16,000 shareholders having purchased in excess of 9,000,000 shares of its common stock sold on the New York and Midwest Stock Exchanges. Its board of directors at the end of 1976 consisted of twelve persons with extensive industrial, financial, business and 1175 professional backgrounds; five of them were executives of the company. It had five corporate and subsidiary divisions and employed thousands of persons in various capacities, but no member of the Field family either occupied a management position or was a director of the company. For the year 1976, Marshall Field reported to its shareholders that it had made sales totaling $609.9 million.

FN8. Hereafter in this Memorandum, Marshall Field & Company will be referred to as Marshall Field, Field, or company, as the context may require.

Despite this growth, Field's expansion did not match that of other department store chains. It was an attractive combination of stores and was highly regarded for the quality of its name, one which industry leaders thought could be taken anywhere in the country. But because of its accumulated worth, the strength of its balance sheet, its large cash reserves, and its borrowing potential, leaders of the department store business considered Field vulnerable to a takeover by another company. In fact, investing shareholders studied Field's earning reports, researched its performance "and determined that (Field in mid-1976) was a good company for a takeover." [FN9] This evaluation had become known to Field, its management and directors as early as the late 1960s.

FN9. This was the testimony of Joseph Berke, the plaintiff and class representative in one of the related suits, 78 C 2480, and is found in Transcript p. 3510.

In 1967, one of the companies that expressed an interest in a merger with Field was Carter Hawley Hale,[FN10] a nationwide, multi-division chain of department stores with corporate offices in Los Angeles, California. Nothing came of this expression because the directors of Field decided that the company's future lay in remaining an independent corporation. Carter's interest, however, was significant. It had operated traditional department stores since 1946. It was a large company with locations in several cities and operations covering northern California and the southwestern United States. Carter constantly analyzed potential markets throughout this country and Canada; it acquired several stores each year from the origin of its business. By 1977 it had increased its operations to 71 traditional stores, 30 specialty stores, and 433 book stores. It continued to expand by acquisitions throughout the time the controversy in these suits arose.

FN10. Hereafter in this Memorandum, Carter Hawley Hale will be referred to either as Carter, or by the acronym CHH, as the context may require.

Being an attractive company, one vulnerable to a takeover, presents many problems to the management, the directors, and the shareholders of a publicly owned American corporation. A takeover can be either friendly or unfriendly. It is friendly when solicited or welcomed by the target company. It is unfriendly when the target company is the object of acquisition by a raider who, complying with state and federal securities laws, makes the required disclosures and proposes an exchange or tender offer for the number of outstanding common shares of the company that will result in control of the target. A takeover, when unfriendly, has a disruptive effect on the management of a target company and its board of directors. It may be welcomed by some, but not all of the target company's shareholders. A takeover can be expensive; it often raises questions of possible violations of the antitrust laws; and it presents problems under the securities statutes and the rules and regulations adopted thereunder. Consequently, a company vulnerable to a takeover must have guidance from lawyers, investment bankers, accountants, and business consultants.

For a long period of time prior to December 10, 1977, Marshall Field was such a company. In each instance when approaches were made to its directors by anyone interested in acquiring it, or by another corporation that desired a merger, the directors considered the matter but concluded in each case that they did not want the company's uniqueness among its customers diluted by affiliation or merger with another retailer. Pressed, however, by the problem of the company's continued vulnerability to a takeover, Field's directors sought the advice of legal counsel. They consulted 1176 the New York law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom. On December 9, 1969, they employed the services of Joseph H. Flom of that firm, a lawyer whose expertise was in proxy contests, mergers and acquisitions, tender offers and going- private transactions. Flom, after becoming acquainted with Field's position in the department store industry, including its financial standing and potential, gave the directors his advice on what they should do when the company was confronted with any inquiry or expression of interest in being acquired or being the subject of a merger. He also advised the company's executives on how to react to the prospect of a takeover.

He told the directors, and through them the executives, that in each instance when an acquirer expressed interest or the proposer of a merger made an approach to Field, representatives of management should listen, bearing in mind that the interests of the company's shareholders were paramount. They were to respond by indicating that Field was not on the block, and if the particular executive believed the suggestion of acquisition or the proposal of merger was being made seriously, he should express the views of the directors that, in their business judgment, the interests of Field shareholders would be best served by the company remaining independent. Flom advised that directors and those who manage a company should always keep in mind that the timing of the sale of a business, if a sale is to take place, is very important; that if a company, through its management executives, saw and believed that its future was bright, or that the general economic conditions would be more propitious in the future, the directors had the right to decide when the business would be sold, as well as whether this should be done. He told the directors that just because someone approaches a company, no one in that company had any obligation to say automatically that the company was on the block. He further advised the directors that management should always endeavor to determine whether a person proposing an acquisition of the company, or a merger with it, had thought through the proposal being made; whether they were serious; and also whether they had considered the antitrust implications of an acquisition or merger. Flom was retained and, after December 1969, either he or a member of his firm attended each meeting of Field's board of directors.

Later, when his advice was sought by Field's executives concerning how they should deal with an inquiring potential acquirer, or one who was suggesting a merger, Flom, or one of his partners, repeated in general the advice he had given the directors when he was retained in 1969. On one occasion, he advised Field's chief executive officer that whenever a discussion was had with anyone seriously discussing acquisition of Field, potential merger, or the possibility of making a tender offer, at least two persons should attend such a meeting. Details of such transactions should be discussed informally and, preferably, an investment banker or financial officer should not be present. He advised that management personnel representing Field should always listen to what the visitor had to say. If a proposal was outlined, the executive was not to turn if down or argue about it, was never to say that it sounded good; but was simply to say that it was interesting. The executive was advised to say to the proposer that his proposal would be considered and that management would get back to him. Flom urged Field's chief executive officer that he should always find out who the visitor represented and whether he had authority to make a proposal. If he is speaking for someone else, the Field representative should learn all that he can, factual and financial, about the interested party. Field's representative should always inquire about the existence of antitrust issues and whether these had been considered. Flom admonished that anyone speaking for Field should remember at all times that his job was to do the best that could be done for the company's shareholders.

Flom's advice was accepted and followed. Every Field executive who had either a telephone conversation or meeting with any 1177 inquirer concerning possible acquisition of or merger with Field, or a proposed tender offer or exchange offer, wrote a memorandum that became part of the business records of the company. Many of these memoranda are evidence in this joint trial, having been produced by defendants during pretrial discovery in these cases.

In the ten-year period between the time CHH first expressed an interest in Field and 1977, at least three other department store companies, in one way or another, did the same. For example, in 1970, Associated Dry Goods Company expressed a desire to merge with Field. This expression of interest, and the contacts of Field executives with representatives of Associated, were described in memoranda and made part of the company's files. At meetings of the board, the subject was discussed; and after considering the matter, the directors voted, reaffirming their earlier decision that Marshall Field should remain independent. At about the same time that the approach by Associated was considered, Field acquired Halle Brothers, a retailer with stores in Cleveland and other Ohio communities, and in Erie and West Erie, Pennsylvania. Associated had stores in the same cities.

In 1975, Federated Department Stores made acquisition overtures to Field. Again, all of the contacts with representatives of this potential acquirer were made the subject of memoranda that became part of the company's business records. The subject was submitted, with recommendations and views of management, to Field's board of directors. After consideration, the board concluded that remaining independent provided Field with a future that had greater possibilities than being acquired by another company. The board notified Federated that it did not wish to explore the matter further.

In August of the following year, Dayton-Hudson Corporation of Ohio inquired of Field's management about a possible acquisition of the company. Again, Field's executives met with spokesmen for Dayton-Hudson, recorded in memoranda what they said, and reported the inquiry to the board. The directors, after considering the contact, decided that it was in the best interest of the shareholders and the company that Field remain an independent department store. At the same time the Dayton contact was being considered, Field's management, executing policy decisions of the board, sought to show to the public that the company had the ability to grow. Accordingly, management personnel embarked on a program to acquire certain Liberty House Stores in Portland, Oregon and Tacoma, Washington, a market area where there was an overlap between Dayton-Hudson stores and those operated by Liberty House. When Dayton-Hudson later withdrew its acquisition overtures in May, 1977, Field's interest in the Liberty House stores subsided. Subsequently, all inquiries made of Field by companies wanting to acquire it or negotiate a merger were met by the directors with the same conclusion: it was best for the company that it remain independent. This conclusion was expressed so many times that at least two directors who are defendants in these cases recall it being stated as a policy. The occasions when the directors reflected this policy were all recorded either in memoranda which became part of the company's records, or in minutes of board meetings. Prior to December 14, 1977, however, no communication of the board to Field's shareholders, no press release, nor any report Field made to any state or federal regulatory agency contained any statement or description of this policy.

In 1977, the president and chief executive officer of Field was Joseph A. Burnham, an executive who nationally enjoyed a good reputation among leaders of the department store industry. The company's directors, however, thought that Field needed someone to "turn the company around"; they came to believe Burnham needed help at the highest level of management. Therefore, it was decided that Field should seek an experienced department store executive who could work with Burnham and be groomed to succeed to the office of president and chief executive of the company. After a search that took Field's executives 1178 throughout the country, with Burnham principally responsible for the search, the man who was selected and offered the position was Angelo R. Arena who, at the time, was chairman of Nieman-Marcus, the $500 million a year division of Carter Hawley Hale based in Dallas, Texas. The agreement with Arena that he join Field later in 1977 was finalized in August of that year. It was expressly understood by Arena, Field's management, members of the board executive committee and Burnham in particular, that he was to join the company, work with Burnham and, if everything went well, in two or three years he was to succeed Burnham as president and chief executive officer of Field.

Having reached this understanding with Field's people, Arena then had a conversation in Los Angeles, California with Edward W. Carter and Philip M. Hawley who were, respectively, board chairman, president and chief executive officer of CHH. He told them that the opportunity he was being offered at Field was too attractive for him to refuse, and that even being chairman of an important CHH division did not have the career prospects equal to that being offered him by Field. Carter and Hawley told Arena that they did not believe Field was going to remain independent; that he, Arena, was chancing it in taking a job in the face of the possibility there will be a takeover of the company. Arena told his colleagues he had a conversation with Burnham in which he was assured that Field was going to remain an independent department store chain and, therefore, he thought that his decision to accept the position being offered him was one that he should make. Carter and Hawley agreed. Arena proceeded with plans to join Field late in 1977.

However, on October 10, 1977, while he was returning from a vacation, Burnham suffered a fatal heart attack. His death caused the executive committee of Field's board of directors to hold an emergency meeting on October 11, and the result was a recommendation that Arena be asked to come to Chicago immediately and replace Burnham as a Field director, its president and chief executive officer. A special meeting of the board was called for October 13. Edward McCormick Blair, a Field director, attended the executive committee meeting. However, sometime during the day, while Blair was occupied with the emergency caused by Burnham's death, Edward W. Carter called Blair's 93 year old father and, after expressing condolences concerning Burnham's unexpected passing, told the elder Blair that in his view a merger between Field and CHH was an ideal business arrangement. Carter knew enough about the relationship between Blair, the Field director, and his father to know that his mention of the advantages of a Field-CHH merger would be discussed by them; it was. In addition, during the evening of October 12, the younger Blair received a telephone call from Gaylord Freeman, a banker long connected with Field's largest shareholder, the First National Bank of Chicago, who said he was calling for his friend Ed Carter to urge that the subject of a Field-CHH merger be discussed at the next meeting of Field's directors.

The next day, at the special meeting of the directors, after Arena had been elected and appointed to Burnham's old job, George C. Rinder, Executive Vice President of the company, reported on the contacts by Carter. A summary of the board minutes shows the entry that "(p)resumably the inquiry was prompted by the untimely death of Mr. Burnham. The consensus of the Board was that the Company's future plans are such that the proposed business combination should not be considered because the best interests of the Company's stockholders would be served by this Company's continuing as an independent entity in view of the many opportunities to increase earnings and return to the stockholders (sic)." Arena arrived in Chicago on Monday, October 17, and took over as head of the company's management.

CHH's approaches to Field about a possible merger did not cease; in fact, they gathered momentum. On the day Arena began his duties as the company's chief executive officer, Philip Hawley called him 1179 from Los Angeles and urged him to consider the advantages of a Field-CHH merger. Arena reminded Hawley that he was just beginning some rather arduous duties; that Field, like all similar companies, was approaching the most important part of the department store sales year, the Christmas season; and that he wanted to get to understand Marshall Field and its business, and become acquainted with the people with whom he was to work. He told Hawley of feeling uncomfortable bringing to the board of directors the question of selling the company when he had been employed to lead it toward achieving what the directors had in mind for the future.

On the next day, from Philadelphia, Carter called Blair and asked him to consider his "ten fundamental reasons" why he thought a Field-CHH merger made sense. Blair listened, made notes and thanked Carter for his expression of interest. He assured Carter that Field thought highly of CHH; and that if Field should consider a merger with any company, CHH would get the first chance. Carter in turn told Blair that in the event of a merger, Blair would be an important director on the new combined board. Hawley, in the meantime, called Arena and insisted on a meeting of Field's representatives with those of CHH to discuss a merger; and that the meeting take place before the end of the Christmas shopping season.

Arena was disturbed by this insistence on the part of Hawley. The subject of mergers, acquisitions, and takeovers of another company were not strange to him. He knew the economic and business consequences of a takeover for, after all, he had just left Carter Hawley Hale, a department store chain which had grown through the acquisition of other companies. He had, in his short time with the Field management, learned of Joseph H. Flom's retainer by the company, and he was familiar with the advice Flom had given management and the directors. Arena knew that Flom's advice to his clients when faced with the prospects of an unfriendly takeover was to raise questions concerning possible violations of the antitrust laws. Arena knew that once a board of directors, in good faith, considers any merger proposal, one of the questions to be addressed is whether such a business combination was legal. Therefore, on November 16, 1977 he asked

Hammond Chaffetz of the Chicago law firm of Kirkland & Ellis to analyze the antitrust implications of a merger between Field and CHH.

Kirkland & Ellis had been Field's counsel for antitrust matters since 1971. Chaffetz immediately headed a team of Kirkland lawyers who studied the matter. On November 17 Arena reported to the board of directors the contacts from CHH about a merger and his inquiry about the antitrust questions to Kirkland & Ellis. He and Rinder were authorized to "sit down with (CHH) and visit with them on a friendly basis," but not to depart from the board's stated position on the matter. The meeting took place in Arena's Ritz Carlton Hotel suite in Chicago on November 18, and it was attended by Carter, Hawley, Arena and Rinder.

Carter and Hawley did most of the talking, with Carter saying at the outset that a merger of Field and CHH was an objective he had pursued for twenty years. He referred to his previous discussions with Field's three former chief executive officers. He pointed out the advantages of such a merger, especially its size, which he and Hawley expected to ultimately grow into a $10 billion a year business. He said that a combination of the two companies would be the best fit in American retailing, making it the most exciting business event in the history of American department stores. Hawley reviewed the comparative worth of CHH and Field. He emphasized the high quality of the department store name which Field represented, one that could be taken anywhere in the country with the possible exception of California, where expansion of Field was not feasible because of CHH's dominance through its four department store divisions. Reference was made to Field's vulnerability to a takeover by other companies, particularly foreign ones. Either Carter or Hawley mentioned the interest of Brenninkmeyer, a foreign 1180 company they thought would make Field the object of a takeover. Carter said that this foreign company "might well offer $60.00 per share (to Field stockholders) at any time."

In response, Arena told Carter and Hawley that he understood there were some antitrust questions in any merger of the two companies. They answered by saying that they had been advised by their attorneys "that there is no antitrust deterrent." They agreed that there existed one overlap in the competitive area of the two companies, the Northbrook Court store of Nieman- Marcus; but that sale could be arranged for that business which at the time had annual sales exceeding $16 million. No mention was made by either Carter or Hawley of their Michigan Avenue site, or their plans to enter the Oakbrook Shopping Mall. The meeting ended with Arena expressing confidence in the future of Marshall Field, and saying that the question of unfriendly approaches by another company was something Field was living with. Arena emphasized that neither he nor the directors felt that the degree of urgency was as great as CHH was expressing. He concluded the meeting by stating that he and Rinder would report to the executive committee in about two weeks and that the board would meet on December 15, 1977, at which time the subject matter concerning CHH's approach about a merger would be discussed. Arena promised that he would keep them informed of the board's position regarding possible acquisition of Field by CHH. There was no commitment to meet again, or to contact CHH by any particular date.

The subject of the meeting, however, was not forgotten. On December 2, 1977, Chaffetz advised Arena and Rinder that in the opinion of Kirkland & Ellis lawyers, an acquisition of Field by CHH, or a merger of the two companies, would be illegal under the antitrust laws because of (a) the existing competition between Field's stores and the store operated in the Northbrook Court shopping enter by CHH's Nieman-Marcus division; (b) the potential competition between Field's stores and the stores on North Michigan Avenue and in Oakbrook which Nieman-Marcus was planning to open; and (c) the existing competition between Field's stores and the stores operated by CHH's Walden Books division. In forming this opinion, Kirkland lawyers relied on the 1976 CHH annual report issued in the spring of 1977, in which the company announced the intention to expand its Nieman-Marcus division and take advantage of the Chicago market. In this report, CHH recognized the splendid market for luxury fashion merchandise on North Michigan Avenue in Chicago, and emphasized its purchase of a large block of land on the avenue for further development. Prior to that report, CHH had in fact acquired property on Michigan Avenue, less than two blocks south of Field's Water Tower Place store, and announced the intention to build a Nieman-Marcus store almost adjacent to the Field location. The lawyers also considered Nieman-Marcus' interest in opening a store in the Oakbrook area, an interest that was publicly disclosed by CHH. In addition, the Kirkland lawyers took into account the fact that Field was the second largest book seller in the Chicago area, while CHH-owned Walden Books was a major factor in the Chicago book selling market. Up to the time that the lawyers formed the antitrust opinion which was conveyed by Chaffetz to Arena and Rinder, CHH had never formulated nor announced a plan for disposal of any of its Chicago stores which did business in competition with Field, a factor crucial to any reasonable antitrust analysis. Chaffetz's report, giving the opinion of Kirkland lawyers, was communicated to Field's directors. The matter remained in that posture until Saturday, December 10, 1977.

On that day, Philip Hawley called Arena and told him that unless Field directors agreed to begin merger negotiations by Monday, December 12, he would deliver and make public a letter proposing that the directors of the two companies enter into negotiations leading to a combination of Field and CHH. He told Arena what the letter would say. Generally, CHH would propose beginning negotiations with the 1181 idea that for each share of Marshall Field common stock, CHH would exchange a number of its shares determined by dividing $36.00 by the average closing price of CHH common stock on the New York Stock Exchange during a period of thirty trading days immediately preceding the mailing of proxy statements relating to the transaction, with an election feature which would give Marshall Field shareholders the opportunity to receive up to 49% of the exchange in cash. Appropriate provisions were to be made for holders of Field's preferred stock and those persons who had the right to exercise stock options.

Arena construed what Hawley told him as the initiation of an unfriendly takeover of Field by CHH. Therefore, he immediately reached Joseph Flom in New York and arranged a meeting in the Skadden, Arps office on Sunday, December 11 with key Field directors and investment bankers present. The meeting was held and there was a general discussion about what to do the next day when the letter described to Arena by Hawley was delivered. Arena reported the opinion of Kirkland & Ellis lawyers concerning the legality, under the antitrust laws, of a Field-CHH merger. It was agreed that those directors who were absent were to be polled, by phone, for their authorization that a lawsuit be filed in this court asking for resolution of the antitrust issues which, in the opinion of Kirkland lawyers, were inherent in CHH's proposal for a merger. It was also agreed that the New York Stock Exchange would be informed of the development; and that an emergency meeting of the Field board of directors was to be called for Tuesday, December 13.

Events transpired as anticipated. On Monday, December 12, CHH's letter signed by Hawley was received. The letter, as it turned out, reviewed the advantages of the merger to be negotiated, referred to the gains Field shareholders would derive from the combination of the two companies, and ended with the statement that if Field should decline to meet for the proposed negotiation, CHH "will not be bound by these proposals in any offer or other action which we may elect to pursue in the future." Field directors were contacted by telephone, and all but one approved the filing of an antitrust lawsuit in this court by Kirkland & Ellis.

The special meeting of Field directors took place, as scheduled, on December 13 with all board members present. Also at the meeting were three lawyers from the Skadden, Arps firm: Flom, Aaron and Pelster; Chaffetz of Kirkland & Ellis; and representatives of Field's investment bankers: William Blair & Company and Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company, Inc. The lawyers, particularly Chaffetz, gave the directors their opinion concerning the legality of the merger toward which the December 10 letter proposed negotiation, and the investment bankers evaluated the financial aspects of the merger. The CHH letter was reviewed, each director having received a copy by then. Arena, who presided, asked Chaffetz to give his views concerning antitrust implications of a Field-CHH merger. Then Flom and Chaffetz discussed the general legal status of the entire situation, as it then existed. Representatives of the investment bankers presented their report and discussed the financial aspects of the matter.

Questions were asked by board members. Management, represented by Arena and Rinder, made a report and projected the company's expected performance. Generally, the view was that future performance would be favorable. Many of the directors, as did the investment bankers, thought that a share of Marshall Field stock would bring more than $36.00 in a sale or merger of the company. After discussion and consideration, on motion duly made and seconded, the directors unanimously voted to reject the proposal contained in the December 10 letter from CHH because, in their judgment, any merger of Field with CHH would be "illegal, inadequate and not in the best interests of Marshall Field & Company, its stockholders and the communities which it serves." Then the board adopted two resolutions, one ratifying the filing of the antitrust suit and the other giving officers of 1182 the company authority to take such action as they deemed necessary in connection with the CHH matter, including the filing of such reports and documents with the SEC and other governmental agencies as may be necessary.

Contemporaneous with their vote, the directors authorized issuance of a release to the press confirming receipt of the December 10 letter, referring to the filing of the antitrust suit alleging that acquisition of Field by CHH would constitute a violation of the federal antitrust laws, and disclosing the advice the directors had received from Kirkland & Ellis on the antitrust questions. Two days later, Arena wrote Hawley a letter telling him of the board's action on his December 10 merger negotiations proposal. On the same day, December 14, Field issued a press release in which Arena spoke for the company and described the board's position on the December 10 CHH letter. He said that Field's directors and management had faith in the momentum of the company, and that "it would be in the best interests of our stockholders, customers and employees for us to take advantage of this momentum and continue to implement our growth plans as an independent company."

The next day, Arena addressed a letter to all Field employees telling them that CHH was "seeking to take over Marshall Field & Company." He reviewed, in general terms, what had transpired, including "the aggressive and insensitive way (CHH has) pursued Marshall Field & Company." On December 20, he addressed a letter to Field stockholders in which he reviewed his observations of the company since assuming the responsibilities Burnham had discharged before his death. He spoke optimistically of the future, reviewed Field's immediate past performance, referred to the CHH proposal for negotiation, referred to the advice of antitrust counsel "that a CHH-Marshall Field & Company merger would clearly violate the United States antitrust laws," and concluded that "(y)our Board of Directors believes the maximum benefits for Marshall Field & Company and its stockholders, employees, customers and communities it serves will result from continuing to develop as an independent, publicly-owned Company."

CHH's response to the board's rejection of its proposal was a press release issued January 4, 1978 reporting reaffirmation of the desire of its directors to negotiate a merger with Field. Hawley was quoted as expressing the belief "that a negotiated merger of Carter Hawley Hale and Marshall Field is desirable for both parties and legally possible." Thereafter, no contact or communication was made by either company concerning the subject of a merger negotiation. The following day, however, Field issued a press release announcing that it had amended the complaint in its antitrust suit against CHH to add allegations of federal securities laws violations said to be connected with CHH's proposed acquisition of Field. Arena was quoted at the end of the release as saying that "our management is continuing the implementation of our long-standing programs to further build and develop the business of Marshall Field & Company. We are confident that all these programs are on course and are optimistic about our progress."

On January 19, 1978, Field directors had their regular meeting. On the agenda was a proposal that the company expand into Texas, and one that it acquire Liberty House Stores, three of which were located in Portland, Oregon, and two in Tacoma, Washington. Field had business operations in the Pacific Northwest through its Fredrick & Nelson division in Seattle, and its The Crescent subsidiary in Spokane. As to the southwest section of the country, Field executives and directors had considered acquisitions in that area. Investment analysts such as Stanley H. Iverson of Duff & Phelps, Inc., a knowledgeable investment advisor who had followed Field's business and market performance for years, had known of the company's general interest in expanding its Chicago division into the southwest area of the country, although no Field executive had ever particularly mentioned Houston, Texas.

1183 The subject of expansion into other parts of the country, and the acquisition of other stores, had been dealt with by Field directors informally at first, and later through a development committee made up of lawyers, representatives of investment banking firms that advised the board, certain Field key executives, and some of the directors. When Flom was retained in 1969, one of the details of his legal advice to the directors and executives was to invest the company's accumulated reserves and adequately utilize its borrowing power in acquiring other stores. Flom advised that at all times such decisions had to be made consistent with sound business judgment, and in the best interest of the company and its shareholders. From his experience as a lawyer who had represented both acquirers and target companies, he told Field executives and directors that acquisitions were a lawful and legal way of coping with an unfriendly takeover. He was critical of the directors and the company's management in not fully exploiting Field's capacity to expand. It was Flom's view, one he expressed to Field's directors and executives when he gave them legal advice, that once, for sound business reasons, the decision was made to resist a takeover, a defensive acquisition was a legal and proper step for a target company to take, provided that the directors' decision to resist a takeover is reasonably related to the interests of the shareholders, the company, and the community it serves. At the December 11 meeting in his office, Flom reminded Field directors, in the presence of Arena, that he had urged them to make more acquisitions, but they had not followed his advice.

Flom was present on January 19 when the proposed expansion and acquisition were before the directors. Arena distributed a report that reviewed the Liberty House Stores, and the discussion that followed was premised on Field's purchase of their inventories, fixtures, and other assets. He told the board that the Tacoma market was clearly a place where the Fredrick & Nelson division should be operating, and Portland was a natural area for that division's operations. He recommended that officers of the company be authorized to enter into a letter of intent pertaining to acquisition of the five stores. The recommendation was approved by unanimous vote of the board and, accordingly, a formal resolution was adopted.

As to the expansion into Texas, Arena introduced the company's vice president for real estate who discussed management's investigation of four possible Texas locations. Specifically, he commented on The Galleria in Houston, Texas, and three others. After considering demographic details and other data, Arena asked that management be given authority to pursue The Galleria in Houston as a future location for a new Marshall Field store. This request was granted unanimously. On January 20, 1978, a letter of agreement for acquisition of the five Liberty House Stores was executed by the parties, and on that day Field announced the acquisition for the purpose of integrating these stores into its Seattle-based Fredrick & Nelson division. Then on February 2, 1978, a letter of agreement was executed for acquisition of a store location, and expansion of its Chicago division, in The Galleria shopping complex in Houston, Texas.

The day before the last letter was signed, Carter Hawley Hale, as required by law, filed documents with the Securities & Exchange Commission and announced its intention to make an exchange offer by which each Field shareholder who wanted to tender his shares would receive, for each share he owned, $42.00 in a combination of cash and CHH stock. The offer, however, could be accepted only after the Securities & Exchange Commission reviewed and declared the registration statement effective, and holders of a majority of outstanding CHH capital stock approved the offer at a shareholder's meeting to be held on an undetermined date in the future. Further, CHH's intention to make the offer was subject to the condition that if holders of 5% or more of its common stock dissented, they would be entitled to receive what their shares were worth on January 31, 1978, and at that time, CHH would have the option of withdrawing the offer.

1184 Formal notice of this filing was served on Field directors, its president, law vice president and secretary. At a special meeting of the board on February 2nd, CHH's filing was discussed, its legal implications described to the directors by Aaron of the Skadden, Arps firm, and by Hammond Chaffetz of Kirkland & Ellis. In addition, Chaffetz brought the directors up to date on developments in the Field suit then pending in this court. Then, the directors took up a number of proposed acquisitions, including The Galleria in Houston, Texas. There was no mention of the adequacy or the inadequacy of the $42.00 per share price which CHH announced it intended to pay sometime in the future for each share of Field stock. After the board meeting, Field issued a press release in which Arena said that the company's "opposition to the takeover bid by Carter Hawley Hale is unchanged." The release concluded with the statement by Arena that "I assumed my position with Marshall Field & Company with the understanding that I would devote myself to making Marshall Field & Company a truly national retail business organization. We at Marshall Field & Company are determined not to be deterred from this course. Our recently announced agreement to acquire five Liberty House Stores in Tacoma, Washington and Portland, Oregon, was one step in our program."

No other communication occurred between the parties until February 22, 1978. Before that, on February 8, Arena announced, in a press release, that Field had concluded negotiations for a 200,000 square-feet, full line department store to be located in The Galleria complex, Houston, Texas. Then on February 22, CHH informed Field and the public that it was withdrawing its proposed exchange offer because "the expansion program announced by Marshall Field since February 1st has created sufficient doubt about Marshall Field's earning potential to make the offer no longer in the best interest of Carter Hawley Hale's shareholders." None of the events that conditioned CHH's intention to make the offer had occurred since February 1, 1978. It had not purchased any Field shares; no Marshall Field shareholder was ever solicited to sell any share owned; no publicity was engaged in either by CHH or by Field concerning solicitation of Marshall Field shares; and no opportunity was ever given to any Field shareholder to tender any share he owned in Marshall Field & Company.

[1][2][3] These, then, being the facts most favorable to the plaintiff which in this court's judgment the jury can reasonably find from the evidence, defendants' motion for a directed verdict [FN11] presents a question of law: whether when all the evidence is considered, together with all reasonable inferences favorable to the plaintiffs, it totally fails to prove a necessary element of their case. Riggs v. Penn Central Railroad Company, 442 F.2d 105, 106 (7th Cir. 1971). It is recognized and the court bears this in mind, that since a directed verdict will deprive plaintiffs of a determination of the facts by the jury, a motion therefor should be sparingly granted. Farner v. Paccar, Inc., 562 F.2d 518 (8th Cir. 1977); Clemons v. Mitsui O. S. K. Lines, Ltd., 596 F.2d 746 (7th Cir. 1979). Nevertheless, if the facts and inferences point so strongly and overwhelmingly in favor of defendants that the court is convinced reasonable men cannot arrive at a verdict contrary to one in their favor, granting of the motion is proper. Boeing Company v. Shipman, 411 F.2d 365, 374 (5th Cir. 1969); see Neugebauer v. A. S. Abell Co., 474 F.Supp. 1053 (D.Md.1979). The rule is well established that when the evidence in a case is such that without weighing the credibility of witnesses there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the verdict to be reached, a district judge should determine the proceeding by directing the verdict, without submission to the jury; such direction will have the result of 1185 saving the mischance of speculation over legally unfounded claims. See Brady v. Southern Ry. Co., 320 U.S. 476, 479-80, 64 S.Ct. 232, 234, 88 L.Ed. 239 (1943); 9 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure s 2524 (1971). As the court of appeals for this circuit has held, a district judge should direct a verdict where the evidence, with all justifiably deducible inferences, will not support a verdict in favor of the party producing it. Hohmann v. Packard Instrument Company, Inc., 471 F.2d 815, 819 (7th Cir. 1973). Whether, in this case, a verdict should be directed is determined by the law that controls the controversy between the parties, law which this court would instruct the jury it must follow if asked to deliberate and reach a verdict.

FN11. The motion under Rule 41(b), Fed.R.Civ.P., will be treated by the court as a motion for directed verdict. Johnson v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific R. Co., 400 F.2d 968 (9th Cir. 1968).

A. Plaintiffs' Section 10b and Rule 10b-5 Claims

The statute under which plaintiffs make these claims, Section 10b of the Securities & Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. s 78j(b), provides that "(i)t shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce or of the mails, or of any facility of any national securities exchange . . .

(b) To use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered on a national securities exchange or any security not so registered, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors."

Rule 10b-5, adopted by the Securities and Exchange Commission and published in 17 C.F.R. s 240.10b-5 (1977), states that:

It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, or of the mails or of any facility of any national securities exchange,

(a) To employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud,

(b) To make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or

(c) To engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security.

Based on this statute and rule, plaintiffs seek to recover as members of a class of "persons who held common stock of Marshall Field & Company at any time between December 12, 1977 and February 22, 1978." This class, prior to trial, was divided into four subclasses consisting of (1) persons who held Field's stock on or prior to December 12, 1977 and disposed of it after that date but prior to February 22, 1978; (2) persons who acquired Field's stock after December 12, 1977 and disposed of it prior to February 22, 1978; (3) persons who acquired Field's stock after December 12, 1977 and did not dispose of it prior to February 22, 1978; and (4) persons who held Field's stock on or prior to December 12, 1977 and did not dispose of it prior to February 22, 1978.

Plaintiffs contend, from the evidence heard, that between October 11, 1977 and February 28, 1978, when CHH withdrew its proposed exchange offer, defendants as directors of Marshall Field had a policy of keeping the company an independent business entity, a policy formulated years before; that this policy was not disclosed to Field shareholders who made investment decisions in purchasing or selling Marshall Field shares; that during the period in question, defendants made material misstatements in press releases and letters designed to influence investment decisions by the shareholders; that they omitted making material disclosures concerning the policy they were administering as Field directors; that on or about December 13, 1977, defendants arbitrarily rejected a proposal made by 1186 Carter Hawley Hale for negotiation of a merger with Field; and that in doing these things, defendants engaged in manipulative, deceptive, and fraudulent conduct, knowingly recklessly, and with full knowledge of the consequences to the rights of the plaintiffs-shareholders affected. Plaintiffs insist that the evidence now in the record shows defendants made defensive acquisitions by which they succeeded in depriving Field stockholders of the opportunity to sell their shares at an advantageous price. These acts of the defendants, according to the plaintiffs, were committed, not in the interest of Field shareholders, but solely to perpetuate themselves in office as directors of the company.

[4][5][6] The evidence shows that all of the corporate decisions about which plaintiffs complain were made by defendants in their capacity as directors of Marshall Field. It is the law, which the jury would have to follow were it to deliberate to a verdict, that the general authority and power of defendants as Field directors during the period in question was to manage the corporate business and affairs for the stockholders, and their authority at all times was absolute, as long as they acted within the law. Questions of policy and internal management were, in the absence of nonfeasance, misfeasance or malfeasance, left wholly to their decision. 5 Fletcher, Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporations s 2100 (1976 rev. vol.); see Shlensky v. Wrigley, 95 Ill.App.2d 173, 237 N.E.2d 776 (1968). The laws of the State of Delaware governing the powers of corporate directors give defendants this authority. See Del.Code Tit. 8, s 141(a). Directors of a publicly owned corporation do not act outside of the law when they, in good faith, decide that it is in the best interest of the company and its shareholders that it remain an independent business entity. Lipton, Takeover Bids in the Target's Boardroom, 35 The Business Lawyer 101, 130 (1975). Having so determined, they can authorize management to oppose offers which, in their best judgment are detrimental to the company and its shareholders. Northwest Industries, Inc. v. B. F. Goodrich Company, 301 F.Supp. 706, 712 (N.D.Ill.1969). Certainly acquisitions, expansions, and the purchase of new stores are management decisions which, even though some shareholders may consider them breaches of fiduciary duty, are not grounds for liability under Section 10b or Rule 10b-5 unless there is deception, misrepresentation, or nondisclosure in violation of the statute and the rule. Santa Fe Industries, Inc. v. Green, 430 U.S. 462, 476, 97 S.Ct. 1292, 1302, 51 L.Ed.2d 480 (1977).

[7][8] These principles have to be considered together with another well settled rule. There can be no violation of Section 10b or Rule 10b-5 unless the evidence establishes that the person or persons charged with such violation committed three acts in connection with the transaction in question: (1) used the mail or other instrumentality of interstate commerce; (2) purchased or sold a security, or sought to affect the same; and (3) used a manipulative or deceptive device. Capital Corporation v. Newman, 276 F.Supp. 646, 653 (C.D.Cal.1967); accord Cameron v. Outdoor Resorts of America, Inc., 608 F.2d 187 (5th Cir. 1979) and Securities & Exchange Commission v. Diversified Industries, 465 F.Supp. 104 (D.D.C.1979). The term "purchase or sale" as used in the section and rule is not limited to common law transactions. Spector v. L Q Motor Inns, Inc., 517 F.2d 278, 285 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied 423 U.S. 1055, 96 S.Ct. 786, 46 L.Ed.2d 644; see Annot. 4 A.L.R.Fed. 1048. Exchange of shares in connection with the merger or sale of corporate assets constitutes a purchase or sale within Section 10b and Rule 10b-5. Securities & Exchange Commission v. National Securities, 393 U.S. 453, 467, 89 S.Ct. 564, 572, 21 L.Ed.2d 668 (1969); Swanson v. American Consumer Industries, Inc., 415 F.2d 1326, 1330 (7th Cir. 1969).

[9] More importantly, in all such cases, the evidence must prove that the person or persons engaged in such sale or purchase, as defined, did so with intent to deceive, manipulate or defraud. Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 193, 96 S.Ct. 1375, 1380, 47 L.Ed.2d 668 (1976). The expression 1187 "any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance," used in the statute and found in the rule, proscribes knowing or intentional misconduct. See Securities & Exchange Commission v. Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., 401 F.2d 833, 868 (2nd Cir. 1968) (Friendly, J., concurring), cert. denied 394 U.S. 976, 89 S.Ct. 1454, 22 L.Ed.2d 756 (1969); Loss, Summary Remarks, 30 Business Law 163, 165 (special issue 1975). This is conduct quite different from negligence. "Use of the word 'manipulative' is especially significant. It is and was virtually a term of art when used in connection with securities markets. It connotes intentional or willful conduct designed to deceive or defraud investors by controlling or artificially affecting the price of securities." Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, supra at 199, 96 S.Ct. at 1384; see Klamberg v. Roth, 473 F.Supp. 544, 549 n.8 (S.D.N.Y.1979); Annot. 3 A.L.R.Fed. 819.

[10] In this case, there is no evidence from which the jury could find that during the period relevant to this controversy any defendant engaged in the purchase or sale of any security, no matter how the term is defined. Additionally, while it is true that Marshall Field shares have always been sold on the open market, there is no evidence that in making their managerial decisions as to remaining independent, making acquisitions, and expanding the business of Marshall Field, defendants in any way acted with intent to deceive investors by controlling or artificially affecting the price of securities. Cf. Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, supra 425 U.S. at 199, 96 S.Ct. at 1383.

The law and evidence, particularly the minutes of the meetings of Field's directors and the letters and press releases of defendants in response to merger proposals and the proposed exchange offer, simply do not support plaintiffs' allegations that the defendants violated Section 10b or Rule 10b-5 by intentionally and deceptively failing to disclose their policy of remaining independent so as to manipulate the price of the company's stock. Therefore, plaintiffs' evidence does not present a jury question on their claims under Section 10b or under Rule 10b-5. See Sanders v. John Nuveen & Co., Inc., 554 F.2d 790 (7th Cir. 1977).

B. Plaintiffs' Sections 14(d) and 14(e) Claims

[11] The provisions of law plaintiffs here invoke are two of the 1968 amendments to the Securities & Exchange Act of 1934, sometimes collectively referred to as the "Williams Act," and are found in 15 U.S.C. s 78n(d-f). Bath Industries, Inc. v. Blot, 427 F.2d 97 (7th Cir. 1970). Section 14(d) prohibits the making of a tender offer for any class of a registered stock if, after consummation, the offeror would own more than five percent of the class, unless a Schedule 13D form is first filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission. Kennecott Copper Corp. v. Curtiss-Wright Corp., 584 F.2d 1195, 1205-1206 (2d Cir. 1978). Section 14(e), on which plaintiffs particularly rely in this case, provides that

> It shall be unlawful for any person to make any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading, or to engage in any fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative acts or practices, in connection with any tender offer or request or invitation for tenders, or any solicitation of security holders in opposition to or in favor of any such offer, request, or invitation. The Commission shall, for the purposes of this subsection, by rules and regulations define, and prescribe means reasonably designed to prevent, such acts and practices as are fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative.

The sole purpose of Congress in adopting these amendments "was the protection of investors who are confronted with a tender offer." Piper v. Chris-Craft Industries, Inc., 430 U.S. 1, 35, 97 S.Ct. 926, 946, 51 L.Ed.2d 124 (1977). The Williams Act amendments were intended "to insure that the public shareholders who are confronted by a cash tender offer for their stock will not be required to respond without adequate 1188 information." Rondeau v. Mosinee Paper Corp., 422 U.S. 49, 58, 95 S.Ct. 2069, 2076, 45 L.Ed.2d 12 (1975). The critical phrase in Section 14(e) is "in connection with any tender offer." Lewis v. McGraw, (Current Binder) Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CHH) P 97, 195 (S.D.N.Y.1979). Therefore, in order for Sections 14(d) and 14(e) to become operative, there must be an exchange or tender offer, or at least the announcement of one, because when "a public announcement of a proposed offer has been made, the very dangers that the Act was intended to guard against come into play, and the application of sections 14(d) and 14(e) is thus appropriate." Applied Digital Data Systems, Inc. v. Milgo Electronic Corp., 425 F.Supp. 1145, 1155 (S.D.N.Y.1977); cf. Corenco Corp. v. Schiavone & Sons, Inc., 488 F.2d 207 (2d Cir. 1973). In view of plaintiffs' emphasis of this securities law concept, it is necessary that the term "tender offer" be defined.

[12] Neither the Williams Act nor the rules adopted by the Securities & Exchange Commission attempt to define these words. However, from judicial decisions and scholarly works, it can be seen that a tender or exchange offer may be any proposal, by an individual, group or corporation, made through public announcements or other means of communication, to purchase securities made in a manner "likely to pressure shareholders into making uninformed, ill- considered decisions to sell." Note, The Developing Meaning of "Tender Offer", 86 Harv.L.Rev. 1250, 1281 (1973) quoted in Kennecott Copper Corp. v. Curtiss-Wright Corporation, 449 F.Supp. 951, 961 (S.D.N.Y.1978), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 584 F.2d 1195 (2d Cir. 1978); see E. Aranow, H. Einhorn & G. Berlstein, Developments in Tender Offers for Corporate Control, 1-34 (1977). The offer must be stated in terms which will induce the tender of shares by shareholders who wish to sell.

[13] The evidence at the close of plaintiffs' case shows that in the month of October 1977, Edward Carter and Philip Hawley of Carter Hawley Hale made approaches to Field about the possibility of a merger between the company and CHH. Under the laws of Delaware which govern the issue here, a merger proposal to Field had to be approved by defendants, as directors, before it could be presented to the shareholders. See Del. Corp. Law s 251. The courts of that state give directors of Delaware corporations the benefit of a presumption that their judgment in dealing with any plan of merger is made in good faith and attributable to a rational business purpose. E. g., Muschel v. Western Union Corporation, 310 A.2d 904, 909 (Del.Ch.1973). Acting on their authority, therefore, defendants asked Angelo Arena and George Rinder to meet with Carter and Hawley and discuss what they had in mind. A day or so before going to the meeting, Arena had talked with Field's antitrust counsel concerning possible antitrust violations in the merger Carter and Hawley were thinking about. It appears to be without question that had there been a merger of CHH and Field, it would have been the largest one in the history of department stores in this country. There were reasons to believe that antitrust issues existed. CHH was a Field competitor in the Chicago market; its announced plans were to expand that competition.

At the meeting, Arena brought up the possibility of antitrust violations; Carter and Hawley insisted there were none. When Arena said he understood the contrary, one or the other of the two men replied, giving the views of "their attorneys that there is no antitrust deterrent" to the merger they had in mind. They said that the one overlap, Nieman-Marcus' Northbrook Court store, could be sold because it was a highly successful operation. This disposition, they thought, would cure any antitrust problem. No mention was made of the Michigan Avenue site nor of CHH's announced plans to enter the Oakbrook shopping mall. The meeting ended on a friendly note with no understanding of further contacts.

Three days later, Rinder met with two Kirkland & Ellis lawyers, discussed with them the antitrust implications of a Field-CHH merger, and directed that they be 1189 furnished information and data that had been requested. Then, on December 2, Hammond Chaffetz, who had headed the Kirkland & Ellis research into the antitrust questions, gave Arena the opinion of the lawyers. Chaffetz stated that after studying the market operations of the two companies, he and his colleagues had concluded that any merger of Field and CHH would violate the federal antitrust laws. It is reasonable to infer that the substance of Arena's conversation with Chaffetz was conveyed to defendants; and that from the origin of Carter's contact on October 11 to December 13, 1977, the general subject of a merger of Field and CHH was studied and considered by defendants, the lawyers who advised them, Field executives, the company's investment bankers, and the accountants.

On December 10, 1977, Arena received a telephone call from Hawley. That day, as any juror would notice since jurors are good at noticing a mundane fact like this one, was a scant two weeks from Christmas. Field was in the midst of the most important shopping period of the business year, with Arena just becoming adjusted to his new position as its chief executive officer. Hawley told Arena that unless defendants authorized the immediate beginning of merger negotiation discussions with CHH, he would deliver and make public on December 12 a letter outlining a proposal he and Carter had in mind. Hawley knew the impact of this threat on Arena, on Field, its directors and management. He also knew that public announcement of merger possibilities would influence transactions of Marshall Field shares on the exchanges. Arena was also aware of these consequences. He proposed to Hawley that he appear and discuss the subject of his telephone call at a special meeting of Field directors the following week. Hawley declined, saying that a meeting with the directors was not what he had in mind: he wanted the beginning of merger negotiations. The telephone conversation ended with the understanding that the letter would be delivered Monday, December 12.

Arena reacted by calling Joseph H. Flom, the lawyer for corporate matters that Field's directors had retained in 1969. They agreed to meet at the Skadden, Arps law firm office the next day in New York City. The meeting was held, attended by representatives of Field's investment bankers and key directors. Flom reviewed the advice he had given Field through the years. Arena reported the opinion of Kirkland & Ellis lawyers that a Field-CHH merger would violate the federal antitrust laws. It was decided among those present that the stock exchanges would be informed of the impending letter from Hawley and that a suit would be filed by Field against CHH in this court on Monday, December 12. These things were done and, on December 13, Field's directors, each having received a copy of the letter Hawley had described to Arena, held a special meeting. Present were lawyers from Kirkland & Ellis and from Skadden, Arps. Representatives from two firms of investment bankers appeared and gave their views on the subject of the CHH letter. Management representatives expressed views concerning the future of Field, on the whole favorable. Hammond Chaffetz of Kirkland & Ellis discussed in detail the reasons for the opinion he and his colleagues had reached on the antitrust issues present in any proposal to merge Field with CHH.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the directors unanimously decided to reject the proposal contained in the December 10 letter because in their judgment it was "illegal, inadequate and not in the best interests of Marshall Field & Company, its shareholders and the communities which it serves." The next day Hawley was advised of the board's decision by letter and, at the same time, a press release was issued giving the reasons for the board's actions, referring to the law suit that had been filed on December 12, and quoting Arena as saying that the directors believed "it would be in the best interests of our stockholders, customers and employees for us to take advantage of (the momentum of the company's future) and continue to implement our growth plans as an independent company." Thereafter, 1190 defendants authorized officers of the company to proceed with the Liberty House Stores acquisition and with negotiations for a department store location in The Galleria complex, Houston, Texas.

Plaintiffs argue that their evidence showing this course of conduct requires defendants to put on a defense because it has been proven, prima facie, that they made untrue statements of material facts, they omitted stating material facts and engaged in fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative acts or practices when they rejected the proposal contained in CHH's letter of December 10. Plaintiffs say that they have shown that defendants filed documents with the Securities & Exchange Commission, issued press releases, and wrote letters to employees and shareholders all of which contained untrue statements or material omissions. Plaintiffs insist that, prima facie, they have proven defendants filed the antitrust suit and made acquisitions of other businesses after December 10, not in the interest of Marshall Field and its shareholders but, rather, in support of their undisclosed policy of keeping Field an independent business entity and perpetuating themselves in office as directors of the company. Plaintiffs contend their evidence shows defendants violated Sections 14(d), 14(e), and rules promulgated by the Securities & Exchange Commission; and thus, the motion for directed verdict should be denied.

[14] These contentions overlook the fact that sections 14(d) and 14(e) of the Williams Act apply only to conduct committed in connection either with a tender or an exchange offer, S-G Securities, Inc. v. Fugua Investment Co., 466 F.Supp. 1114 (D.Mass.1978); see Annot. 6 A.L.R.Fed. 906, or where there has been a public announcement of an intention to make one. Applied Digital Data Systems v. Milgo Electronic, 425 F.Supp. 1145 (S.D.N.Y.1977). The letter of December 10 was neither an exchange nor a tender offer, nor was it a public announcement concerning one. In fact, it was not even a merger proposal; it was only a request, shielded in a threat, that defendants and Field executives interrupt the company's business and engage in merger negotiations with CHH. [FN12] Therefore, there was no schedule or form which defendants had to first file with the Securities & Exchange Commission as required by Section 14(d); and clearly, their conduct with regard to CHH's proposal, was not "in connection with a tender offer" within the meaning of Section 14(e) of the Williams Act. This is also true of the proposed exchange offer CHH announced on February 1, 1978 when it made the Schedule 14D-1 filing with the Securities & Exchange Commission. The reasons, however, are different. A tender or exchange offer must be so expressed that "(t)he person making the offer obligates himself to purchase all or a specified portion of the tendered shares if certain specified conditions are met (by the shareholder)." H.R.Rep. No. 1711, 90th Congress 2d Sess., reprinted in (1968) U.S.Code Cong. & Admin.News, p. 2811; Kennecott Copper Corp. v. Curtiss-Wright Corp., 584 F.2d 1195, 1206 (2d Cir. 1978). It can be made by issuance of a public announcement stating that after appropriate steps have been taken to comply with federal securities laws, and after securing authorization of the offeror's stockholders, the tender or exchange offer will be made directly to the target shareholders. Applied Digital Data Systems v. Milgo Electronic, 425 F.Supp. 1145 (S.D.N.Y.1977). A person 1191 is not obligated to purchase all or a specified portion of tendered shares if the offer is subject to a condition precedent, that is, "a fact or event which the parties intend must exist or take place before there is a right to performance." 5 Williston on Contracts 126, s 663 (3d ed.); Restatement of the Law, Contracts s 250; United States v. Schaeffer, 319 F.2d 907, 911 (9th Cir. 1963), cert. denied 376 U.S. 943, 84 S.Ct. 798, 11 L.Ed.2d 767 (1964).

FN12. The court will not extend this memorandum to discuss the response, under applicable laws, which defendants as Marshal Field directors were obliged to give the letter written by Philip M. Hawley for CHH. In this court's judgment, that letter, in the context of the circumstances under which it was written and received, was an imposition on Marshall Field, its directors, and executives. The law vested defendants with discretion to decide the answer they were to give it, and the action they should have taken concerning it. Sinclair Oil Corp. v. Levien, 280 A.2d 717, 722 (Del.Supr.1971); Kaplan v. Goldsamt, 380 A.2d 556 (Del.Ch.1977) . There is nothing in the legislative history of the Williams Act to suggest that Congress intended those amendments to modify the traditional powers of American corporate directors. See Piper v. Chris- Craft Industries, Inc., 430 U.S. 1, 25-37, 97 S.Ct. 926, 941-947, 51 L.Ed.2d 124 (1977).

CHH's proposed offer was subject to more than approval by the Securities & Exchange Commission and by holders of a majority of the shares of CHH capital stock. It was also subject to the condition that if holders of 5% or more of CHH shares formally dissented to the making of the exchange offer, they would be entitled to receive what their shares were worth the day before CHH announced its proposal; and upon the happening of that event, CHH would have the option of either proceeding with or withdrawing the making of the proposed offer. From February 1, 1978 when the proposed offer was announced, until February 22 when it was withdrawn, however, CHH did not proceed before the Securities & Exchange Commission to obtain the required approval of its intended offer, it did not call a meeting of its shareholders, and it never ascertained what percent of its shareholders would dissent from the making of the exchange offer. In addition to these conditions which were not met, CHH hedged its proposed exchange offer with nine other conditions precedent, none involving the mere passage of time and only one subject to CHH's control. None of these conditions were met, either, but defendants did nothing to prevent their occurrence or to prevent CHH from effectuating their occurrence. It is clear, also, that at no time did CHH purchase any Field shares, nor did it in any way solicit or urge any Field shareholder to sell. Consequently, in this court's judgment, CHH's announcement of February 1 and the SEC filing it made were not and never became an exchange offer.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[15] But even if a contrary conclusion were reached on this point, the evidence shows that during the period in question defendants never made any untrue statement of a material fact or omitted the stating of any material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading; nor did they engage in any fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative acts or practices, in connection with any tender or exchange offer or request or invitation for tenders or exchanges, or any solicitation of security holders in opposition to such offer, request or invitation. Defendants' only response to CHH's announcement of February 1 was a press release the same day, in which no reference was made to the proposed offer. Arena, as president and chief executive officer of Marshall Field, again reiterated defendants' acceptance of legal advice which told them that any combination of the two companies would violate United States antitrust laws. He referred to the conditions imposed on the proposed exchange offer by CHH. The release concluded with references to the acquisitions Field was making, and was intending to make in the future, and his determination to pursue "making Marshall Field & Company a truly national retail business organization." Neither at the board meeting held that day, nor at any other time, did defendants express any view concerning the adequacy of the proposed exchange offer. They did not solicit shareholders to either accept or reject the offer. Under these circumstances, the evidence at the close of plaintiffs' case shows that they cannot prevail on the claims they made under sections 14(d) and 14(e) of the Williams Act. See Berman v. Gerber Products Co., 454 F.Supp. 1310 (W.D.Mich.1978); Altman v. Knight, 431 F.Supp. 309 (S.D.N.Y.1977) .

C. Plaintiffs' State Law Claims

Based on the same occurrences and same events on which they sue under Section 10b, Rule 10(b)-5, and sections 14(d) and 14(e) of the Williams Act, plaintiffs claim, and insist their evidence shows, that defendants, as 1192 directors, breached their fiduciary duties owed to plaintiffs as shareholders of Marshall Field by maintaining a policy of keeping Field independent, making acquisitions to thwart takeovers they feared would deprive them of their directorships, making misleading statements which included omitting important disclosures, and filing the antitrust suit against CHH. Plaintiffs contend they have proven that defendants rejected CHH's approach concerning a merger, not in the best interests of Field shareholders, but only to preserve their positions as directors of the company. They insist that the hasty and ill-considered decision of defendants deprived them of the opportunity to sell their shares at a premium, first at the suggested figure of $36.00, then at the $42.00 price announced by CHH in its proposed exchange offer.

[16] These claims are based on fiduciary principles discussed by the courts of Delaware in Brophy v. Cities Service Co., 31 Del.Ch. 241, 70 A.2d 5 (1949) and Singer v. Magnavox Co., 380 A.2d 969 (Del.Supr.1977). Since Field is a Delaware corporation, this court must apply the law of that state in determining whether defendants as directors of a corporation have breached any fiduciary duty they owed to the plaintiffs. Davidge v. White, 377 F.Supp. 1084, 1088 (S.D.N.Y.1974); see Scott v. Multi-Amp Corporation, 386 F.Supp. 44 (D.N.J.1974). After reviewing the evidence and the law this court has concluded, as a matter of law, that at the close of their case in chief, plaintiffs have not produced evidence which would prove essential elements of the claims they have made under the federal securities statutes and rules. Despite this conclusion, but without deciding whether the federal claims were not insubstantial, the court is of the view that it should exercise its discretion, retain pendent jurisdiction, and determine whether, as to their state law claims, plaintiffs have made a prima facie case. Parrent v. Midwest Rug Mills, Inc., 455 F.2d 123, 129 (7th Cir. 1972); cf. Rousseff v. Dean Witter & Co., 453 F.Supp. 774 (N.D.Ind.1978); see Forest Laboratories, Inc. v. Pillsbury Company, 452 F.2d 621 (7th Cir. 1971); United States ex rel. Crow Creek Sioux Tribe v. Tri-County Bank of Chamberlain, South Dakota, 415 F.Supp. 858 (D.S.D.1976).

[17] The chancellors of the state of Delaware have said that "(t)here is no rule better settled in the law of corporations than that directors in their conduct of the corporation stand in the situation of fiduciaries." Bodell v. General Gas and Electric Corporation, 15 Del.Ch. 119, 132 A. 442, 446 (1926) aff'd 15 Del.Ch. 420, 140 A. 264 (1927); see Guth v. Loft, Inc., 23 Del.Ch. 255, 5 A.2d 503, 510 (1939). As fiduciaries, directors owe to the corporation and its shareholders the duties of honesty, loyalty, good faith, diligence and fairness; they must act for the benefit of the corporation and its shareholders, and never use their fiduciary positions to further their personal interests. Singer v. Magnavox Co., 380

A.2d 969 (Del.1977). It follows, as a corollary, that corporate directors who negligently waste the assets of the company in buying stock of another corporation, and thus interfere with the rights of shareholders, commit breaches of their fiduciary duties. Penn Mart Realty Company v. Becker, 298 A.2d 349 (Del.Ch.1972); cf. Michelson v. Duncan, 407 A.2d 211 (Del.Supr.1979).

In a background memorandum filed to aid the court in understanding their underlying litigation theory in eight of the nine consolidated cases, plaintiffs argue that as to the question of liability of entrenched management that resists takeover attempts solely to perpetuate itself in office, the leading case is Condec Corporation v. Lunkenheimer Company, 43 Del.Ch. 353, 230 A.2d 769, 775-776 (1967). After a descriptive statement of what they understood was involved, plaintiffs conclude that "(a)lmost identical (with Condec) are the facts in the instant case."

In their memorandum objecting to defendants' motion for directed verdict, they again cite Condec Corporation v. Lunkenheimer Company and say it holds that "(w)here directors have taken actions otherwise lawful but for an improper motive, 1193 such as resisting the acquisition of their corporation out of a desire to perpetuate the present directors' control, Delaware law holds that the directors have breached their fiduciary duty and are outside the protection of the business judgment rule." In view of this reliance on Condec v. Lunkenheimer, this court will examine that decision in order to determine whether, as plaintiffs contend, it controls the issues at bar.

Condec was a case in which a Delaware court of chancery heard a motion to restrain the use of 75,000 authorized but unissued shares of a target corporation in a way which would have prevented the plaintiff, a tender- offeror, from exercising its rights as a minority shareholder of the target company. Lunkenheimer Company directors, for reasons they could not justify at the hearing for preliminary relief, had rejected Condec's approach toward a merger; but, not to be undone, Condec, through two tender offers, succeeded in obtaining tenders for 191,017 shares of Lunkenheimer stock, a total of 414,000 then being outstanding. It became clear to Lunkenheimer that Condec was going to acquire enough shares to control the company. To prevent this, but without any benefit to the company and its shareholders, Lunkenheimer entered into an agreement with a subsidiary of a company that had evinced an interest in acquiring all of Lunkenheimer's assets, an interest Lunkenheimer approved, whereby it issued to the subsidiary 75,000 shares. The terms of the agreement were such that no money was paid; the sole purpose of the issuance was to thwart Condec's efforts to complete its tender offer and control the company. Without hearing more, the chancellor ruled that a final order would be entered cancelling the 75,000 shares of Lunkenheimer stock.

[18][19] Condec Corporation v. Lunkenheimer is the law of Delaware; see Young v. Valhi, Inc., 382 A.2d 1372, 1379 (Del.Ch.1978); it is cited by Delaware chancellors for the propositions that "shares may not be issued solely to preserve or to gain corporate control" and "corporate action, though technically correct and in compliance with Delaware Corporation Law, may not be undertaken for an inequitable purpose." Lynch v. Vickers Energy Corporation, 351 A.2d 570, 575 (Del.Ch.1976), rev'd on other grounds, 383 A.2d 278 (Del.Supr.1977). In Delaware, a majority of shareholders of a corporation owes a fiduciary duty to the minority. Roland International Corporation v. Najjar, 407 A.2d 1032 (Del.Supr.1979). Obviously, it is inequitable, and hence a breach of fiduciary duties, for a corporation acting at the instigation of a majority of its shareholders to issue stock, without consideration, solely to prevent a minority shareholder from completing a tender offer that is proceeding in accordance with law. Clearly, Condec is distinguishable as to parties, facts, issues, and relief sought. Nothing of the kind that happened in that case is shown in the evidence which plaintiffs have produced in this one.

[20] What plaintiffs have shown is that in each instance when a contact or approach was made to Field concerning an acquisition of it by another company, or a possible merger, the proposition was considered by defendants on its merits. Each contact or approach was made a part of the company's records by signed or initialed memoranda, with defendants' actions recorded in board minutes containing appropriate resolutions. Defendants reached their decision as to each approach or contact only after consulting with management, lawyers, accountants, and investment bankers. For reasons that were applicable to each occasion, defendants decided that the suggested acquisition or proposed merger was not in the best interest of Marshall Field, its shareholders, and communities served by the company. These were decisions made in the exercise of business judgment.

The same process, the evidence shows, occurred in connection with the approach made by Carter and Hawley in October 1977. The important difference was the timing of it, and the insensitivity represented by the fact that representatives of CHH appeared to be taking advantage of the 1194 death of an important Field executive, and trying to exploit defendants' employment of Arena, who had just left CHH. There were valid reasons to believe that any merger of Field with CHH would violate the antitrust laws, and the subject, over a period of more than a month, was studied and discussed by Field executives with qualified lawyers. It is true that neither defendants nor the lawyers they consulted communicated with the law firm Carter and Hawley had mentioned; but this was a matter of judgment. Defendants did not breach any fiduciary duty they owed plaintiffs when they acted on the CHH approach.

It is worth remembering that according to plaintiffs' evidence, defendants had never told anyone they were interested in a merger with CHH, or that Field was for sale. Corporations in the kind of business as important as that in which Marshall Field was engaged plan to exist as on-going commercial or merchandising entities. Plaintiffs appear to believe that large companies like Field are developed for takeovers; and that seeing to shareholder opportunities for sale of their shares at a premium is the most important duty of directors who manage publicly owned corporations. Plaintiffs are mistaken; for if they were not, public equity ownership in corporations would be a form of entreprenuerial hazard that few corporations could survive.

As to the acquisitions which defendants authorized Field management to make, Halle's, The Liberty House Stores, and The Galleria in Houston, Texas, each was consummated after defendants considered business projections by management received the advice of lawyers and experts, and consulted with accountants and investment bankers. Despite a great deal of straining with financial data, reports and statistics, plaintiffs have not produced evidence which could prove that any of these acquisitions were unsound business ventures.

The lawsuit Field filed against CHH was authorized by defendants only after they had considered the advice of competent legal counsel who, according to evidence shown to the jury, had reasonable grounds for the litigation that was contemplated. Directors of corporations are entitled to rely in good faith on the advice of experts, including that of legal counsel. Spirt v. Bechtel, 232 F.2d 241, 247 (2d Cir. 1956); Voege v. Magnavox Co., 439 F.Supp. 935, 942 (D.Del.1977). The suit was proper; defendants had in good faith and in the exercise of business judgment decided that CHH's proposal toward a merger was illegal, inadequate, and not in the best interests of Marshall Field, its shareholders, and the communities it serves.

[21][22] Directors of corporations discharge their fiduciary duties when in good faith they exercise business judgment in making decisions regarding the corporation. Warshaw v. Calhoun, 221 A.2d 487 (Del.Supr.1966); Gimbel v. Signal Companies, Inc., 316 A.2d 599, 609 (Del.Ch.1974) aff'd 316 A.2d 619 (Del.Supr.1974); see S. Kaplan, Fiduciary Responsibility in the Management of the Corporation, 31 Business Law 883 (1976). When they act in good faith, they enjoy a presumption of sound business judgment, reposed in them as directors, which courts will not disturb if any rational business purpose can be attributed to their decisions. Kaplan v. Goldsamt, 380 A.2d 556, 568 (Del.Ch.1977). In the absence of fraud, bad faith, gross overreaching or abuse of discretion, courts will not interfere with the exercise of business judgment by corporate directors. Sinclair Oil Corporation v. Levien, 280 A.2d 717, 722 (Del.Supr.1971); Warshaw v. Calhoun, 221 A.2d 487 (Del.Supr.1966). There is no evidence in this record on which the jury could find that at any time any defendant in this case committed fraud, was guilty of bad faith, grossly overreached, or abused his discretion in dealing with any property or right of any plaintiff, or a member of the class or subclasses.

[23] Corporate directors have the duty to oppose a takeover offer which they have determined would be detrimental to the interests of the corporation and its shareholders. Treadway Companies v. Care Corporation, 1195 (Current Binder) Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CHH) P 97,188 (S.D.N.Y.1979). Having so decided in good faith, with rational business purposes attributable to their decision, defendants had not only the right "but the duty to resist by all lawful means persons whose attempt to win control of the corporation, if successful, would harm the corporate enterprise." Heit v. Baird, 567 F.2d 1157, 1161 (1st Cir. 1977); Northwest Industries, Inc. v. B. F. Goodrich Co., 301 F.Supp. 706, 712 (N.D.Ill.1969); Cheff v. Mathes, 41

Del.Ch. 494, 199 A.2d 548 (Del.Supr.1964).

IV.

For these reasons, as they have been stated by the court in the subdivisions of this memorandum, each discussing the law applicable to plaintiffs' claims under sections 10b, 14(d), 14(e) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, Rule 10(b)-5 adopted by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and common law claims of alleged breaches of fiduciary duties by defendants, the court concludes that plaintiffs' evidence, considered together with all reasonable inferences favorable to them, totally fails to prove necessary elements of their claims. The facts established by the proof, and the inferences reasonably drawn therefrom, point so strongly and overwhelmingly in favor of defendants that the court is convinced the jury in this case, as reasonable men and women, would not arrive at a verdict contrary to one in defendants' favor.

Therefore, defendants' motion for directed verdict should be granted, without submission of this case to the jury, because this ruling will have the result of saving the mischance of speculation over plaintiffs' legally unfounded claims. Accordingly, the motion for directed verdict is granted and since an order granting a motion for directed verdict is effected without any assent of the jury, it will be discharged; and judgment will be entered on the directed verdict. The clerk will be instructed to enter a judgment in each of these consolidated cases against the plaintiffs and in favor of each defendant, with costs as provided by law.

[1] Appeal and Error ⇐1024.2
30k1024.2

Supreme Court's standard and scope of review as to facts on appeal from preliminary injunction entered by Court of Chancery is whether, after independently reviewing entire record, Supreme Court can conclude that findings of Court of Chancery are sufficiently supported by the record and are product of orderly and logical deductive process.

[2] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

Directors' conduct is subject to enhanced scrutiny in situations involving approval of transaction resulting in sale of control, and adoption of defensive measures in response to threat to corporate control.

[3] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

Enhanced judicial scrutiny was mandated in sale or change of control transaction, by threatened diminution of current shareholders' voting power, fact that control premium was being sold, and traditional concern of courts for actions which impair or impede shareholder voting rights.

[4] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

Key features of enhanced judicial scrutiny applied to sale or change of control transaction are: judicial determination regarding adequacy of decision-making process employed by directors, including information on which directors based their decision; and judicial examination of reasonableness of directors' action in light of circumstances then existing.

[5] Corporations ⇐320(11)
101k320(11)

In sale or change of control situation, directors have burden of proving that they were adequately informed and acted reasonably.

[6] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

In cases where traditional business judgment rule is applicable and board of directors acted with due care, in good faith and in honest belief that they were acting in best interests of shareholder, court gives great deference to substance of directors' decision and will not invalidate the decision, will not examine its reasonableness, and will not substitute its views for those of the board if latter's decision can be attributed to any rational business purpose.

[7] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

In applying enhanced scrutiny to sale or change of control transaction, courts will not substitute its business judgment for that of directors, but will determine if directors' decision was, on balance, within range of reasonableness.

[8] Corporations ⇐310(1)
101k310(1)

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In sale or change of control transaction, enhanced judicial scrutiny is applied, and directors are obligated to seek best value reasonably available for stockholders, regardless of whether there is to be breakup of the corporation.

[9] Corporations ⚿310(1)
101k310(1)

When corporation undertakes transaction which will cause change in corporate control or breakup of corporate entity, directors' obligation is to seek best value reasonably available to stockholders.

[10] Corporations ⚿310(2)
101k310(2)

Having decided to sell control of corporation and faced with two tender offers, directors had obligation: to be diligent and vigilant in critically examining proposed transaction and competing offers; to act in good faith; to obtain, and act with due care on, all material information reasonably available, including information necessary to compare the two offers to determine which of these transactions, or an alternative course of action, would provide best value reasonably available to stockholders; and to negotiate actively and in good faith with both prospective purchasers to that end.

[11] Corporations ⚿310(1)
101k310(1)

Enhanced judicial scrutiny of directors' action was implicated by defensive provisions of merger agreement, coupled with sale of control and subsequent disparate treatment of competing bidders.

[12] Corporations ⚿310(1)
101k310(1)

Having entered merger agreement with one corporation, directors violated their fiduciary duties by failing to modify improper defensive provisions of agreement or improve economic terms of agreement when faced with competing higher offer.

[13] Corporations ⚿582
101k582

Provision of merger agreement, whereby board of selling corporation agreed that it would not solicit, encourage, discuss, negotiate or endorse any competing transaction unless certain conditions were met, was unenforceable, to extent provision was inconsistent with directors' fiduciary duties.

[14] Corporations ⚿310(1)
101k310(1)

To extent that contract, or provision thereof, purports to require board to act or not act in such a fashion as to limit exercise of fiduciary duties, it is invalid and unenforceable.

[15] Corporations ⚿582
101k582

Defensive provision of merger agreement, which granted buyer an option to purchase percentage of seller's outstanding common stock at a fixed price if seller terminated agreement because of competing transaction, if seller's stockholders did not approve merger or if seller's board recommended competing transaction, and which permitted buyer to pay for shares with senior subordinated note of questionable marketability and allowed buyer to elect to require seller to pay seller in cash a sum equal to difference between purchase price and market price of seller's stock, was invalid, insofar as provisions were inconsistent with directors' fiduciary duties.

Before VEASEY, C.J., MOORE and HOLLAND, JJ.

VEASEY, Chief Justice.

In this appeal we review an order of the Court of Chancery dated November 24, 1993 (the "November 24 Order"), preliminarily enjoining certain defensive measures designed to facilitate a so-called strategic alliance between Viacom Inc. ("Viacom") and Paramount Communications Inc. ("Paramount") approved by the board of directors of Paramount (the "Paramount Board" or the "Paramount directors") and to thwart an unsolicited, more valuable, tender offer by QVC Network Inc. ("QVC"). In affirming, we hold that the sale of control in this case, which is at the heart of the proposed strategic alliance, implicates enhanced judicial scrutiny of the conduct of the Paramount Board under Unocal Corp. v. Mesa Petroleum Co., Del.Supr., 493 A.2d 946 (1985), and Revlon, Inc. v. MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings, Inc., Del.Supr., 506 A.2d 173 (1986). We further hold that the conduct of the Paramount Board was not reasonable as to process or result.

QVC and certain stockholders of Paramount commenced separate actions (later consolidated) in the Court of Chancery seeking preliminary and permanent injunctive relief against Paramount, certain members of the Paramount Board, and Viacom. This action arises out of a proposed acquisition of Paramount by Viacom through a tender offer followed by a second-step merger (the "Paramount- Viacom transaction"), and a competing unsolicited tender offer by QVC. The Court of Chancery granted a preliminary injunction. QVC Network, Inc. v. Paramount Communications Inc., Del.Ch., 635 A.2d 1245, Jacobs, V.C. (1993), (the "Court of Chancery Opinion"). We affirmed by order dated December 9, 1993. Paramount Communications Inc. v. QVC Network Inc., Del.Supr., Nos. 427 and 428, 1993, 637 A.2d 828, Veasey, C.J. (Dec. 9, 1993) (the "December 9 Order"). [FN1]

> FN1. We accepted this expedited interlocutory appeal on November 29, 1993. After briefing and oral argument in this Court held on December 9, 1993, we issued our December 9 Order affirming the November 24 Order of the Court of Chancery. In our December 9 Order, we stated, "It is not feasible, because of the exigencies of time, for this Court to complete an opinion setting forth more comprehensively the rationale of the Court's decision. Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, such an opinion will follow in due course." December 9 Order at 3. This is the opinion referred to therein.

The Court of Chancery found that the Paramount directors violated their fiduciary duties by favoring the Paramount-Viacom transaction over the more valuable unsolicited offer of QVC. The Court of Chancery preliminarily enjoined Paramount and the individual defendants (the "Paramount defendants") from amending or modifying Paramount's stockholder rights agreement (the "Rights Agreement"), including the redemption of the Rights, or taking other action to facilitate the consummation of the pending tender offer by Viacom or any proposed second-step merger, including the Merger Agreement between Paramount and Viacom dated September 12, 1993 (the "Original Merger Agreement"), as amended on October 24, 1993 (the "Amended Merger Agreement"). Viacom and the Paramount defendants were enjoined from taking any action 37 to exercise any provision of the Stock Option Agreement between Paramount and Viacom dated September 12, 1993 (the "Stock Option Agreement"), as amended on October 24, 1993. The Court of Chancery did not grant preliminary injunctive relief as to the termination fee provided for the benefit of Viacom in Section 8.05 of the Original Merger Agreement and the Amended Merger Agreement (the "Termination Fee").

Under the circumstances of this case, the pending sale of control implicated in the Paramount-Viacom transaction required the Paramount Board to act on an informed basis to secure the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. Since we agree with the Court of Chancery that the Paramount directors violated their fiduciary duties, we have AFFIRMED the entry of the order of the Vice Chancellor granting the preliminary injunction and have REMANDED these proceedings to the Court of Chancery for proceedings consistent herewith.

We also have attached an Addendum to this opinion addressing serious deposition misconduct by counsel who appeared on behalf of a Paramount director at the time that director's deposition was taken by a lawyer representing QVC. [FN2]

FN2. It is important to put the Addendum in perspective. This Court notes and has noted its appreciation of the outstanding judicial workmanship of the Vice Chancellor and the professionalism of counsel in this matter in handling this expedited litigation with the expertise and skill which characterize Delaware proceedings of this nature. The misconduct noted in the Addendum is an aberration which is not to be tolerated in any Delaware proceeding.

I. FACTS

38 Viacom is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Massachusetts. Viacom is controlled by Sumner M. Redstone ("Redstone"), its Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, who owns indirectly approximately 85.2 percent of Viacom's voting Class A stock and approximately 69.2 percent of Viacom's nonvoting Class B stock through National Amusements, Inc. ("NAI"), an entity 91.7 percent owned by Redstone. Viacom has a wide range of entertainment operations, including a number of well-known cable television channels such as MTV, Nickelodeon, Showtime, and The Movie Channel. Viacom's equity co-investors in the Paramount-Viacom transaction include NYNEX Corporation and Blockbuster Entertainment Corporation.

QVC is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in West Chester, Pennsylvania. QVC has several large stockholders, including Liberty Media Corporation, Comcast Corporation, Advance Publications, Inc., and Cox Enterprises Inc. Barry Diller ("Diller"), the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of QVC, is also a substantial stockholder. QVC sells a variety of merchandise through a televised shopping channel. QVC has several equity co- investors in its proposed combination with Paramount including BellSouth Corporation and Comcast Corporation.

Beginning in the late 1980s, Paramount investigated the possibility of acquiring or merging with other companies in the entertainment, media, or communications industry. Paramount considered such transactions to be desirable, and perhaps necessary, in order to keep pace with competitors in the rapidly evolving field of entertainment and communications. Consistent with its goal of strategic expansion, Paramount made a tender offer for Time Inc. in 1989, but was ultimately unsuccessful. See Paramount Communications, Inc. v. Time Inc., Del.Supr., 571 A.2d 1140 (1990) ("Time-Warner ").

Although Paramount had considered a possible combination of Paramount and Viacom as early as 1990, recent efforts to explore such a transaction began at a dinner meeting between Redstone and Davis on April 20, 1993. Robert Greenhill ("Greenhill"), Chairman of Smith Barney Shearson Inc. ("Smith Barney"), attended and helped facilitate this meeting. After several more meetings between Redstone and Davis, serious negotiations began taking place in early July.

It was tentatively agreed that Davis would be the chief executive officer and Redstone would be the controlling stockholder of the combined company, but the parties could not reach agreement on the merger price and the terms of a stock option to be granted to Viacom. With respect to price, Viacom offered a package of cash and stock (primarily Viacom Class B nonvoting stock) with a market value of approximately $61 per share, but Paramount wanted at least $70 per share.

Shortly after negotiations broke down in July 1993, two notable events occurred. First, Davis apparently learned of QVC's potential interest in Paramount, and told Diller over lunch on July 21, 1993, that Paramount was not for sale. Second, the market value of Viacom's Class B nonvoting stock increased from $46.875 on July 6 to $57.25 on August 20. QVC claims (and Viacom disputes) that this price increase was caused by open market purchases of such stock by Redstone or entities controlled by him.

39 On August 20, 1993, discussions between Paramount and Viacom resumed when Greenhill arranged another meeting between Davis and Redstone. After a short hiatus, the parties negotiated in earnest in early September, and performed due diligence with the assistance of their financial advisors, Lazard Freres & Co. ("Lazard") for Paramount and Smith Barney for Viacom. On September 9, 1993, the Paramount Board was informed about the status of the negotiations and was provided information by Lazard, including an analysis of the proposed transaction.

On September 12, 1993, the Paramount Board met again and unanimously approved the Original Merger Agreement whereby Paramount would merge with and into Viacom. The terms of the merger provided that each share of Paramount common stock would be converted into 0.10 shares of Viacom Class A voting stock, 0.90 shares of Viacom Class B nonvoting stock, and $9.10 in cash. In addition, the Paramount Board agreed to amend its "poison pill" Rights Agreement to exempt the proposed merger with Viacom. The Original Merger Agreement also contained several provisions designed to make it more difficult for a potential competing bid to succeed. We focus, as did the Court of Chancery, on three of these defensive provisions: a "no-shop" provision (the "No-Shop Provision"), the Termination Fee, and the Stock Option Agreement.

First, under the No-Shop Provision, the Paramount Board agreed that Paramount would not solicit, encourage, discuss, negotiate, or endorse any competing transaction unless: (a) a third party "makes an unsolicited written, bona fide proposal, which is not subject to any material contingencies relating to financing"; and (b) the Paramount Board determines that discussions or negotiations with the third party are necessary for the Paramount Board to comply with its fiduciary duties.

Second, under the Termination Fee provision, Viacom would receive a $100 million termination fee if: (a) Paramount terminated the Original Merger Agreement because of a competing transaction; (b) Paramount's stockholders did not approve the merger; or (c) the Paramount Board recommended a competing transaction.

The third and most significant deterrent device was the Stock Option Agreement, which granted to Viacom an option to purchase approximately 19.9 percent (23,699,000 shares) of Paramount's outstanding common stock at $69.14 per share if any of the triggering events for the Termination Fee occurred. In addition to the customary terms that are normally associated with a stock option, the Stock Option Agreement contained two provisions that were both unusual and highly beneficial to Viacom: (a) Viacom was permitted to pay for the shares with a senior subordinated note of questionable marketability instead of cash, thereby avoiding the need to raise the $1.6 billion purchase price (the "Note Feature"); and (b) Viacom could elect to require Paramount to pay Viacom in cash a sum equal to the difference between the purchase price and the market price of Paramount's stock (the "Put Feature"). Because the Stock Option Agreement was not "capped" to limit its maximum dollar value, it had the potential to reach (and in this case did reach) unreasonable levels.

After the execution of the Original Merger Agreement and the Stock Option Agreement on September 12, 1993, Paramount and Viacom announced their proposed merger. In a number of public statements, the parties indicated that the pending transaction was a virtual certainty. Redstone described it as a "marriage" that would "never be torn asunder" and stated that only a "nuclear attack" could break the deal. Redstone also called Diller and John Malone of Tele-Communications Inc., a major stockholder of QVC, to dissuade them from making a competing bid.

Despite these attempts to discourage a competing bid, Diller sent a letter to Davis on September 20, 1993, proposing a merger in which QVC would acquire Paramount for approximately $80 per share, consisting of 0.893 shares of QVC common stock and $30 in cash. QVC also expressed its eagerness to meet with Paramount to negotiate the details of a transaction. When the Paramount Board met on September 27, it was advised by Davis that the Original Merger 40 · Agreement prohibited Paramount from having discussions with QVC (or anyone else) unless certain conditions were satisfied. In particular, QVC had to supply evidence that its proposal was not subject to financing contingencies. The Paramount Board was also provided information from Lazard describing QVC and its proposal.

On October 5, 1993, QVC provided Paramount with evidence of QVC's financing. The Paramount Board then held another meeting on October 11, and decided to authorize management to meet with QVC. Davis also informed the Paramount Board that Booz-Allen & Hamilton ("Booz-Allen"), a management consulting firm, had been retained to assess, inter alia, the incremental earnings potential from a Paramount-Viacom merger and a Paramount-QVC merger. Discussions proceeded slowly, however, due to a delay in Paramount signing a confidentiality agreement. In response to Paramount's request for information, QVC provided two binders of documents to Paramount on October 20.

On October 21, 1993, QVC filed this action and publicly announced an $80 cash tender offer for 51 percent of Paramount's outstanding shares (the "QVC tender offer"). Each remaining share of Paramount common stock would be converted into 1.42857 shares of QVC common stock in a second-step merger. The tender offer was conditioned on, among other things, the invalidation of the Stock Option Agreement, which was worth over $200 million by that point. [FN5] QVC contends that it had to commence a tender offer because of the slow pace of the merger discussions and the need to begin seeking clearance under federal antitrust laws.

> FN5. By November 15, 1993, the value of the Stock Option Agreement had increased to nearly $500 million based on the $90 QVC bid. See Court of Chancery Opinion, 635 A.2d 1245, 1271.

Confronted by QVC's hostile bid, which on its face offered over $10 per share more than the consideration provided by the Original Merger Agreement, Viacom realized that it would need to raise its bid in order to remain competitive. Within hours after QVC's tender offer was announced, Viacom entered into discussions with Paramount concerning a revised transaction. These discussions led to serious negotiations concerning a comprehensive amendment to the original Paramount-Viacom transaction. In effect, the opportunity for a "new deal" with Viacom was at hand for the Paramount Board. With the QVC hostile bid offering greater value to the Paramount stockholders, the Paramount Board had considerable leverage with Viacom.

At a special meeting on October 24, 1993, the Paramount Board approved the Amended Merger Agreement and an amendment to the Stock Option Agreement. The Amended Merger Agreement was, however, essentially the same as the Original Merger Agreement, except that it included a few new provisions. One provision related to an $80 per share cash tender offer by Viacom for 51 percent of Paramount's stock, and another changed the merger consideration so that each share of Paramount would be converted into 0.20408 shares of Viacom Class A voting stock, 1.08317 shares of Viacom Class B nonvoting stock, and 0.20408 shares of a new series of Viacom convertible preferred stock. The Amended Merger Agreement also added a provision giving Paramount the right not to amend its Rights Agreement to exempt Viacom if the Paramount Board determined that such an amendment would be inconsistent with its fiduciary duties because another offer constituted a "better alternative." [FN6] Finally, the Paramount Board was given the power to terminate the Amended Merger Agreement if it withdrew its recommendation of the Viacom transaction or recommended a competing transaction.

> FN6. Under the Amended Merger Agreement and the Paramount Board's resolutions approving it, no further action of the Paramount Board would be required in order for Paramount's Rights Agreement to be amended. As a result, the proper officers of the company were authorized to implement the amendment unless they were instructed otherwise by the Paramount Board.

Although the Amended Merger Agreement offered more consideration to the Paramount stockholders and somewhat more flexibility to the Paramount Board than did the Original Merger Agreement, the defensive measures designed to make a competing bid more difficult were not removed or modified. 41 In particular, there is no evidence in the record that Paramount sought to use its newly-acquired leverage to eliminate or modify the No-Shop Provision, the Termination Fee, or the Stock Option Agreement when the subject of amending the Original Merger Agreement was on the table.

Viacom's tender offer commenced on October 25, 1993, and QVC's tender offer was formally launched on October 27, 1993. Diller sent a letter to the Paramount Board on October 28 requesting an opportunity to negotiate with Paramount, and Oresman responded the following day by agreeing to meet. The meeting, held on November 1, was not very fruitful, however, after QVC's proposed guidelines for a "fair bidding process" were rejected by Paramount on the ground that "auction procedures" were inappropriate and contrary to Paramount's contractual obligations to Viacom.

On November 6, 1993, Viacom unilaterally raised its tender offer price to $85 per share in cash and offered a comparable increase in the value of the securities being proposed in the second-step merger.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

At a telephonic meeting held later that day, the Paramount Board agreed to recommend Viacom's higher bid to Paramount's stockholders.

QVC responded to Viacom's higher bid on November 12 by increasing its tender offer to $90 per share and by increasing the securities for its second-step merger by a similar amount. In response to QVC's latest offer, the Paramount Board scheduled a meeting for November 15, 1993. Prior to the meeting, Oresman sent the members of the Paramount Board a document summarizing the "conditions and uncertainties" of QVC's offer. One director testified that this document gave him a very negative impression of the QVC bid.

At its meeting on November 15, 1993, the Paramount Board determined that the new QVC offer was not in the best interests of the stockholders. The purported basis for this conclusion was that QVC's bid was excessively conditional. The Paramount Board did not communicate with QVC regarding the status of the conditions because it believed that the No-Shop Provision prevented such communication in the absence of firm financing. Several Paramount directors also testified that they believed the Viacom transaction would be more advantageous to Paramount's future business prospects than a QVC transaction. [FN7] Although a number of materials were distributed to the Paramount Board describing the Viacom and QVC transactions, the only quantitative analysis of the consideration to be received by the stockholders under each proposal was based on then-current market prices of the securities involved, not on the anticipated value of such securities at the time when the stockholders would receive them. [FN8]

FN7. This belief may have been based on a report prepared by Booz- Allen and distributed to the Paramount Board at its October 24 meeting. The report, which relied on public information regarding QVC, concluded that the synergies of a Paramount-Viacom merger were significantly superior to those of a Paramount-QVC merger. QVC has labelled the Booz-Allen report as a "joke."

FN8. The market prices of Viacom's and QVC's stock were poor measures of their actual values because such prices constantly fluctuated depending upon which company was perceived to be the more likely to acquire Paramount.

The preliminary injunction hearing in this case took place on November 16, 1993. On November 19, Diller wrote to the Paramount Board to inform it that QVC had obtained financing commitments for its tender offer and that there was no antitrust obstacle to the offer. On November 24, 1993, the Court of Chancery issued its decision granting a preliminary injunction in favor of QVC and the plaintiff stockholders. This appeal followed.

II. APPLICABLE PRINCIPLES OF ESTABLISHED DELAWARE LAW

The General Corporation Law of the State of Delaware (the "General Corporation Law") and the decisions of this Court have repeatedly recognized the fundamental principle that the management of the business and affairs of a Delaware corporation is entrusted to its directors, who are the duly elected and authorized representatives of the 42 stockholders. 8 Del.C. § 141(a); Aronson v. Lewis, Del.Supr., 473 A.2d 805, 811-12 (1984); Pogostin v. Rice, Del.Supr., 480 A.2d 619, 624 (1984). Under normal circumstances, neither the courts nor the stockholders should interfere with the managerial decisions of the directors. The business judgment rule embodies the deference to which such decisions are entitled. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 812.

[2] Nevertheless, there are rare situations which mandate that a court take a more direct and active role in overseeing the decisions made and actions taken by directors. In these situations, a court subjects the directors' conduct to enhanced scrutiny to ensure that it is reasonable. [FN9] The decisions of this Court have clearly established the circumstances where such enhanced scrutiny will be applied. E.g., Unocal, 493 A.2d 946; Moran v. Household Int'l, Inc., Del.Supr., 500 A.2d 1346 (1985); Revlon, 506 A.2d 173; Mills Acquisition Co. v. Macmillan, Inc., Del.Supr., 559 A.2d 1261 (1989); Gilbert v. El Paso Co., Del.Supr., 575 A.2d 1131 (1990). The case at bar implicates two such circumstances: (1) the approval of a transaction resulting in a sale of control, and (2) the adoption of defensive measures in response to a threat to corporate control.

FN9. Where actual self-interest is present and affects a majority of the directors approving a transaction, a court will apply even more exacting scrutiny to determine whether the transaction is entirely fair to the stockholders. E.g.,

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., Del.Supr., 457 A.2d 701, 710-11 (1983); Nixon v. Blackwell, Del.Supr., 626 A.2d 1366, 1376 (1993).

A. The Significance of a Sale or Change [FN10] of Control

FN10. For purposes of our December 9 Order and this Opinion, we have used the terms "sale of control" and "change of control" interchangeably without intending any doctrinal distinction.

When a majority of a corporation's voting shares are acquired by a single person or entity, or by a cohesive group acting together, there is a significant diminution in the voting power of those who thereby become minority stockholders. Under the statutory framework of the General Corporation Law, many of the most fundamental corporate changes can be implemented only if they are approved by a majority vote of the stockholders. Such actions include elections of directors, amendments to the certificate of incorporation, mergers, consolidations, sales of all or substantially all of the assets of the corporation, and dissolution. 8 Del.C. §§ 211, 242, 251-258, 263, 271, 275. Because of the overriding importance of voting rights, this Court and the Court of Chancery have consistently acted to protect stockholders from unwarranted interference with such rights. [FN11]

FN11. See Schnell v. Chris-Craft Indus., Inc., Del.Supr., 285 A.2d 437, 439 (1971) (holding that actions taken by management to manipulate corporate machinery "for the purpose of obstructing the legitimate efforts of dissident stockholders in the exercise of their rights to undertake a proxy contest against management" were "contrary to established principles of corporate democracy" and therefore invalid); Giuricich v. Emtrol Corp., Del.Supr., 449 A.2d 232, 239 (1982) (holding that "careful judicial scrutiny will be given a situation in which the right to vote for the election of successor directors has been effectively frustrated"); Centaur Partners, IV v. Nat'l Intergroup, Del.Supr., 582 A.2d 923 (1990) (holding that supermajority voting provisions must be clear and unambiguous because they have the effect of disenfranchising the majority); Stroud v. Grace, Del.Supr., 606 A.2d 75, 84 (1992) (directors' duty of disclosure is premised on the importance of stockholders being fully informed when voting on a specific matter); Blasius Indus., Inc. v. Atlas Corp., Del.Ch., 564 A.2d 651, 659 n. 2 (1988) ("Delaware courts have long exercised a most sensitive and protective regard for the free and effective exercise of voting rights.").

In the absence of devices protecting the minority stockholders, [FN12] stockholder votes are likely to become mere formalities where there is a majority stockholder. For example, minority stockholders can be deprived of a continuing equity interest in their corporation by means of a cash-out merger. Weinberger, 43 457 A.2d at 703. Absent effective protective provisions, minority stockholders must rely for protection solely on the fiduciary duties owed to them by the directors and the majority stockholder, since the minority stockholders have lost the power to influence corporate direction through the ballot. The acquisition of majority status and the consequent privilege of exerting the powers of majority ownership come at a price. That price is usually a control premium which recognizes not only the value of a control block of shares, but also compensates the minority stockholders for their resulting loss of voting power.

FN12. Examples of such protective provisions are supermajority voting provisions, majority of the minority requirements, etc. Although we express no opinion on what effect the inclusion of any such stockholder protective devices would have had in this case, we note that this Court has upheld, under different circumstances, the reasonableness of a standstill agreement which limited a 49.9 percent stockholder to 40 percent board representation. Ivanhoe, 535 A.2d at 1343.

In the case before us, the public stockholders (in the aggregate) currently own a majority of Paramount's voting stock. Control of the corporation is not vested in a single person, entity, or group, but vested in the fluid aggregation of unaffiliated stockholders. In the event the Paramount-Viacom transaction is consummated, the public stockholders will receive cash and a minority equity voting position in the surviving corporation. Following such consummation, there will be a controlling stockholder who will have the voting power to: (a) elect directors; (b) cause a break-up of the corporation; (c) merge it with another company; (d) cash-out the public stockholders; (e) amend the certificate of incorporation; (f) sell all or substantially all of the corporate assets; or (g) otherwise alter materially the nature of the corporation and the public stockholders' interests. Irrespective of the present Paramount Board's vision of a long-term strategic alliance with Viacom, the proposed sale of control would provide the new controlling stockholder with the power to alter that vision.

Because of the intended sale of control, the Paramount-Viacom transaction has economic consequences of considerable significance to the Paramount stockholders. Once control has shifted, the current Paramount stockholders will have no leverage in the future to demand another control premium. As a result, the Paramount stockholders are entitled to receive, and should receive, a control premium and/or protective devices of significant value. There being no such protective provisions in the Viacom-Paramount transaction, the Paramount directors had an obligation to take the maximum advantage of the current opportunity to realize for the stockholders the best value reasonably available.

B. The Obligations of Directors in a Sale or Change of Control Transaction

The consequences of a sale of control impose special obligations on the directors of a corporation. [FN13] In particular, they have the obligation of acting reasonably to seek the transaction offering the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. The courts will apply enhanced scrutiny to ensure that the directors have acted reasonably. The obligations of the directors and the enhanced scrutiny of the courts are well-established by the decisions of this Court. The directors' fiduciary duties in a sale of control context are those which generally attach. In short, "the directors must act in accordance with their fundamental duties of care and loyalty." Barkan v. Amsted Indus., Inc., Del.Supr., 567 A.2d 1279, 1286 (1989). As we held in Macmillan:

> FN13. We express no opinion on any scenario except the actual facts before the Court, and our precise holding herein. Unsolicited tender offers in other contexts may be governed by different precedent. For example, where a potential sale of control by a corporation is not the consequence of a board's action, this Court has recognized the prerogative of a board of directors to resist a third party's unsolicited acquisition proposal or offer. See Pogostin, 480 A.2d at 627; Time-Warner, 571 A.2d at 1152; Bershad v. Curtiss-Wright Corp., Del.Supr., 535 A.2d 840, 845 (1987); Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1285 n. 35. The decision of a board to resist such an acquisition, like all decisions of a properly- functioning board, must be informed, Unocal, 493 A.2d at 954-55, and the circumstances of each particular case will determine the steps that a board must take to inform itself, and what other action, if any, is required as a matter of fiduciary duty.

> It is basic to our law that the board of directors has the ultimate responsibility for managing the business and affairs of a corporation. In discharging this function, the directors owe fiduciary duties of care and loyalty to the corporation and its shareholders. This unremitting obligation extends equally to board conduct in a sale of corporate control.
> 44 559 A.2d at 1280 (emphasis supplied) (citations omitted).

In the sale of control context, the directors must focus on one primary objective--to secure the transaction offering the best value reasonably available for the stockholders--and they must exercise their fiduciary duties to further that end. The decisions of this Court have consistently emphasized this goal. Revlon, 506 A.2d at 182 ("The duty of the board ... [is] the maximization of the company's value at a sale for the stockholders' benefit."); Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1288 ("[I]n a sale of corporate control the responsibility of the directors is to get the highest value reasonably attainable for the shareholders."); Barkan, 567 A.2d at 1286 ("[T]he board must act in a neutral manner to encourage the highest possible price for shareholders."). See also Wilmington Trust Co. v. Coulter, Del.Supr., 200 A.2d 441, 448 (1964) (in the context of the duty of a trustee, "[w]hen all is equal ... it is plain that the Trustee is bound to obtain the best price obtainable").

In pursuing this objective, the directors must be especially diligent. See Citron v. Fairchild Camera and Instrument Corp., Del.Supr., 569 A.2d 53, 66 (1989) (discussing "a board's active and direct role in the sale process"). In particular, this Court has stressed the importance of the board being adequately informed in negotiating a sale of control: "The need for adequate information is central to the enlightened evaluation of a transaction that a board must make." Barkan, 567 A.2d at 1287. This requirement is consistent with the general principle that "directors have a duty to inform themselves, prior to making a business decision, of all material information reasonably available to them." Aronson, 473 A.2d at 812. See also Cede & Co. v. Technicolor, Inc., Del.Supr., 634 A.2d 345, 367 (1993); Smith v. Van Gorkom, Del.Supr., 488 A.2d 858, 872 (1985). Moreover, the role of outside, independent directors becomes particularly important because of the magnitude of a sale of control transaction and the possibility, in certain cases, that management may not necessarily be impartial. See Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1285 (requiring "the intense scrutiny and participation of the independent directors").

Barkan teaches some of the methods by which a board can fulfill its obligation to seek the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. 567 A.2d at 1286-87. These methods are designed to determine the existence and viability of possible alternatives. They include conducting an auction, canvassing the market, etc. Delaware law recognizes that there is "no single blueprint" that directors must follow. Id. at 1286-87; Citron 569 A.2d at 68; Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1287.

In determining which alternative provides the best value for the stockholders, a board of directors is not limited to considering only the amount of cash involved, and is not required to ignore totally its view of the future value of a strategic alliance. See Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1282 n. 29. Instead, the directors should analyze the entire situation and evaluate in a disciplined manner the consideration being offered. Where stock or other non-cash consideration is involved, the board should try to quantify its value, if feasible, to achieve an objective comparison of the alternatives. [FN14] In addition, the board may assess a variety of practical considerations relating to each alternative, including:

> FN14. When assessing the value of non-cash consideration, a board should focus on its value as of the date it will be received by the stockholders. Normally, such value will be determined with the assistance of experts using generally accepted methods of valuation. See In re RJR Nabisco, Inc. Shareholders Litig., Del.Ch., C.A. No. 10389, 1989 WL 7036, Allen, C. (Jan. 31, 1989), reprinted at 14 Del.J.Corp.L. 1132, 1161.

> [an offer's] fairness and feasibility; the proposed or actual financing for the offer, and the consequences of that financing; questions of illegality; ... the risk of non-consum[m]ation; ... the bidder's identity, prior background and other business venture experiences; and the bidder's business plans for the corporation and their effects on stockholder interests.

Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1282 n. 29. These considerations are important because the selection of one alternative may permanently foreclose other opportunities. While the assessment of these factors may be complex, 45 the board's goal is straightforward: Having informed themselves of all material information reasonably available, the directors must decide which alternative is most likely to offer the best value reasonably available to the stockholders.

C. Enhanced Judicial Scrutiny of a Sale or Change of Control Transaction

[3] Board action in the circumstances presented here is subject to enhanced scrutiny. Such scrutiny is mandated by: (a) the threatened diminution of the current stockholders' voting power; (b) the fact that an asset belonging to public stockholders (a control premium) is being sold and may never be available again; and (c) the traditional concern of Delaware courts for actions which impair or impede stockholder voting rights (see supra note 11). In Macmillan, this Court held:

> When Revlon duties devolve upon directors, this Court will continue to exact an enhanced judicial scrutiny at the threshold, as in Unocal, before the normal presumptions of the business judgment rule will apply. [FN15]

> FN15. Because the Paramount Board acted unreasonably as to process and result in this sale of control situation, the business judgment rule did not become operative.

559 A.2d at 1288. The Macmillan decision articulates a specific two- part test for analyzing board action where competing bidders are not treated equally: [FN16]

> FN16. Before this test is invoked, "the plaintiff must show, and the trial court must find, that the directors of the target company treated one or more of the respective bidders on unequal terms." Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1288.

> In the face of disparate treatment, the trial court must first examine whether the directors properly perceived that shareholder interests were enhanced. In any event the board's action must be reasonable in relation to the advantage sought to be achieved, or conversely, to the threat which a particular bid allegedly poses to stockholder interests.

Id. See also Roberts v. General Instrument Corp.,

Del.Ch., C.A. No. 11639, 1990 WL 118356, Allen, C. (Aug. 13, 1990), reprinted at 16 Del.J.Corp.L. 1540, 1554 ("This enhanced test requires a judicial judgment of reasonableness in the circumstances.").

[4][5] The key features of an enhanced scrutiny test are: (a) a judicial determination regarding the adequacy of the decisionmaking process employed by the directors, including the information on which the directors based their decision; and (b) a judicial examination of the reasonableness of the directors' action in light of the circumstances then existing. The directors have the burden of proving that they were adequately informed and acted reasonably.

[6][7] Although an enhanced scrutiny test involves a review of the reasonableness of the substantive merits of a board's actions, [FN17] a court should not ignore the complexity of the directors' task in a sale of control. There are many business and financial considerations implicated in investigating and selecting the best value reasonably available. The board of directors is the corporate decisionmaking body best equipped to make these judgments. Accordingly, a court applying enhanced judicial scrutiny should be deciding whether the directors made a reasonable decision, not a perfect decision. If a board selected one of several reasonable alternatives, a court should not second-guess that choice even though it might have decided otherwise or subsequent events may have cast doubt on the board's determination. Thus, courts will not substitute their business judgment for that of the directors, but will determine if the directors' decision was, on balance, within a range of reasonableness. 46 See Unocal, 493 A.2d at 955-56; Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1288; Nixon, 626 A.2d at 1378.

> FN17. It is to be remembered that, in cases where the traditional business judgment rule is applicable and the board acted with due care, in good faith, and in the honest belief that they are acting in the best interests of the stockholders (which is not this case), the Court gives great deference to the substance of the directors' decision and will not invalidate the decision, will not examine its reasonableness, and "will not substitute our views for those of the board if the latter's decision can be 'attributed to any rational business purpose.' " Unocal, 493 A.2d at 949 (quoting Sinclair Oil Corp. v. Levien, Del.Supr., 280 A.2d 717, 720 (1971)). See Aronson, 473 A.2d at 812.

D. Revlon and Time-Warner Distinguished

The Paramount defendants and Viacom assert that the fiduciary obligations and the enhanced judicial scrutiny discussed above are not implicated in this case in the absence of a "break-up" of the corporation, and that the order granting the preliminary injunction should be reversed. This argument is based on their erroneous interpretation of our decisions in Revlon and Time- Warner.

In Revlon, we reviewed the actions of the board of directors of Revlon, Inc. ("Revlon"), which had rebuffed the overtures of Pantry Pride, Inc. and had instead entered into an agreement with Forstmann Little & Co. ("Forstmann") providing for the acquisition of 100 percent of Revlon's outstanding stock by Forstmann and the subsequent break-up of Revlon. Based on the facts and circumstances present in Revlon, we held that "[t]he directors' role changed from defenders of the corporate bastion to auctioneers charged with getting the best price for the stockholders at a sale of the company." 506 A.2d at 182. We further held that "when a board ends an intense bidding contest on an insubstantial basis, ... [that] action cannot withstand the enhanced scrutiny which Unocal requires of director conduct." Id. at 184.

It is true that one of the circumstances bearing on these holdings was the fact that "the break-up of the company ... had become a reality which even the directors embraced." Id. at 182. It does not follow, however, that a "break-up" must be present and "inevitable" before directors are subject to enhanced judicial scrutiny and are required to pursue a transaction that is calculated to produce the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. In fact, we stated in Revlon that "when bidders make relatively similar offers, or dissolution of the company becomes inevitable, the directors cannot fulfill their enhanced Unocal duties by playing favorites with the contending factions." Id. at 184 (emphasis added). Revlon thus does not hold that an inevitable dissolution or "break-up" is necessary.

[8] The decisions of this Court following Revlon reinforced the applicability of enhanced scrutiny and the directors' obligation to seek the best value reasonably available for the stockholders where there is a pending sale of control, regardless of whether or not there is to be a break-up of the corporation. In Macmillan, this Court held:

We stated in Revlon, and again here, that in a sale of corporate control the responsibility of the directors is to get the highest value reasonably attainable for the shareholders.

559 A.2d at 1288 (emphasis added). In Barkan, we observed further:

We believe that the general principles announced in Revlon, in Unocal Corp. v. Mesa Petroleum Co., Del.Supr., 493 A.2d 946 (1985), and in Moran v. Household International, Inc., Del.Supr., 500 A.2d 1346 (1985) govern this case and every case in which a fundamental change of corporate control occurs or is contemplated.

567 A.2d at 1286 (emphasis added).

Although Macmillan and Barkan are clear in holding that a change of control imposes on directors the obligation to obtain the best value reasonably available to the stockholders, the Paramount defendants have interpreted our decision in Time-Warner as requiring a corporate break-up in order for that obligation to apply. The facts in Time-Warner, however, were quite different from the facts of this case, and refute Paramount's position here. In Time-Warner, the Chancellor held that there was no change of control in the original stock-for-stock merger between Time and Warner because Time would be owned by a fluid aggregation of unaffiliated stockholders both before and after the merger:

If the appropriate inquiry is whether a change in control is contemplated, the answer must be sought in the specific circumstances surrounding the transaction. Surely under some circumstances a stock for stock merger could reflect a transfer of corporate control. That would, for example, plainly be the case here if Warner were a private company. But where, as 47 here, the shares of both constituent corporations are widely held, corporate control can be expected to remain unaffected by a stock for stock merger. This in my judgment was the situation with respect to the original merger agreement. When the specifics of that situation are reviewed, it is seen that, aside from legal technicalities and aside from arrangements thought to enhance the prospect for the ultimate succession of [Nicholas J. Nicholas, Jr., president of Time], neither corporation could be said to be acquiring the other. Control of both remained in a large, fluid, changeable and changing market.

The existence of a control block of stock in the hands of a single shareholder or a group with loyalty to each other does have real consequences to the financial value of "minority" stock. The law offers some protection to such shares through the imposition of a fiduciary duty upon controlling shareholders. But here, effectuation of the merger would not have subjected Time shareholders to the risks and consequences of holders of minority shares. This is a reflection of the fact that no control passed to anyone in the transaction contemplated. The shareholders of Time would have "suffered" dilution, of course, but they would suffer the same type of dilution upon the public distribution of new stock.

Paramount Communications Inc. v. Time Inc., Del.Ch., No. 10866, 1989 WL 79880, Allen, C. (July 17, 1989), reprinted at 15 Del.J.Corp.L. 700, 739 (emphasis added). Moreover, the transaction actually consummated in Time-Warner was not a merger, as originally planned, but a sale of Warner's stock to Time.

In our affirmance of the Court of Chancery's well-reasoned decision, this Court held that "The Chancellor's findings of fact are supported by the record and his conclusion is correct as a matter of law." 571 A.2d at 1150 (emphasis added). Nevertheless, the Paramount defendants here have argued that a break-up is a requirement and have focused on the following language in our Time-Warner decision:

However, we premise our rejection of plaintiffs' Revlon claim on different grounds, namely, the absence of any substantial evidence to conclude that Time's board, in negotiating with Warner, made the dissolution or break-up of the corporate entity inevitable, as was the case in Revlon.

Under Delaware law there are, generally speaking and without excluding other possibilities, two circumstances which may implicate Revlon duties. The first, and clearer one, is when a corporation initiates an active bidding process seeking to sell itself or to effect a business reorganization involving a clear break-up of the company. However, Revlon duties may also be triggered where, in response to a bidder's offer, a target abandons its long- term strategy and seeks an alternative transaction involving the breakup of the company.

Id. at 1150 (emphasis added) (citation and footnote omitted).

The Paramount defendants have misread the holding of Time-Warner. Contrary to their argument, our decision in Time-Warner expressly states that the two general scenarios discussed in the above-quoted paragraph are not the only instances where "Revlon duties" may be implicated. The Paramount defendants' argument totally ignores the phrase "without excluding other possibilities." Moreover, the instant case is clearly within the first general scenario set forth in Time-Warner. The Paramount Board, albeit unintentionally, had "initiate[d] an active bidding process seeking to sell itself" by agreeing to sell control of the corporation to Viacom in circumstances where another potential acquiror (QVC) was equally interested in being a bidder.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Paramount defendants' position that both a change of control and a break- up are required must be rejected. Such a holding would unduly restrict the application of Revlon, is inconsistent with this Court's decisions in Barkan and Macmillan, and has no basis in policy. There are few events that have a more significant impact on the stockholders than a sale of control or a corporate break-up. Each event represents a fundamental 48 (and perhaps irrevocable) change in the nature of the corporate enterprise from a practical standpoint. It is the significance of each of these events that justifies: (a) focusing on the directors' obligation to seek the best value reasonably available to the stockholders; and (b) requiring a close scrutiny of board action which could be contrary to the stockholders' interests.

[9] Accordingly, when a corporation undertakes a transaction which will cause: (a) a change in corporate control; or (b) a break-up of the corporate entity, the directors' obligation is to seek the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. This obligation arises because the effect of the Viacom-Paramount transaction, if consummated, is to shift control of Paramount from the public stockholders to a controlling stockholder, Viacom. Neither Time-Warner nor any other decision of this Court holds that a "break-up" of the company is essential to give rise to this obligation where there is a sale of control.

III. BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTIES BY PARAMOUNT BOARD

We now turn to duties of the Paramount Board under the facts of this case and our conclusions as to the breaches of those duties which warrant injunctive relief.

A. The Specific Obligations of the Paramount Board

[10] Under the facts of this case, the Paramount directors had the obligation: (a) to be diligent and vigilant in examining critically the Paramount-Viacom transaction and the QVC tender offers; (b) to act in good faith; (c) to obtain, and act with due care on, all material information reasonably available, including information necessary to compare the two offers to determine which of these transactions, or an alternative course of action, would provide the best value reasonably available to the stockholders; and (d) to negotiate actively and in good faith with both Viacom and QVC to that end.

Having decided to sell control of the corporation, the Paramount directors were required to evaluate critically whether or not all material aspects of the Paramount-Viacom transaction (separately and in the aggregate) were reasonable and in the best interests of the Paramount stockholders in light of current circumstances, including: the change of control premium, the Stock Option Agreement, the Termination Fee, the coercive nature of both the Viacom and QVC tender offers, [FN18] the No-Shop Provision, and the proposed disparate use of the Rights Agreement as to the Viacom and QVC tender offers, respectively.

FN18. Both the Viacom and the QVC tender offers were for 51 percent cash and a "back-end" of various securities, the value of each of which depended on the fluctuating value of Viacom and QVC stock at any given time. Thus, both tender offers were two-tiered, front-end loaded, and coercive. Such coercive offers are inherently problematic and should be expected to receive particularly careful analysis by a target board. See Unocal, 493 A.2d at 956.

These obligations necessarily implicated various issues, including the questions of whether or not those provisions and other aspects of the Paramount-Viacom transaction (separately and in the aggregate): (a) adversely affected the value provided to the Paramount stockholders; (b) inhibited or encouraged alternative bids; (c) were enforceable contractual obligations in light of the directors' fiduciary duties; and (d) in the end would advance or retard the Paramount directors' obligation to secure for the Paramount stockholders the best value reasonably available under the circumstances.

The Paramount defendants contend that they were precluded by certain contractual provisions, including the No-Shop Provision, from negotiating with QVC or seeking alternatives. Such provisions, whether or not they are presumptively valid in the abstract, may not validly define or limit the directors' fiduciary duties under Delaware law or prevent the Paramount directors from carrying out their fiduciary duties under Delaware law. To the extent such provisions are inconsistent with those duties, they are invalid and unenforceable. See Revlon, 506 A.2d at 184-85.

Since the Paramount directors had already decided to sell control, they had an obligation 49 to continue their search for the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. This continuing obligation included the responsibility, at the October 24 board meeting and thereafter, to evaluate critically both the QVC tender offers and the Paramount-Viacom transaction to determine if: (a) the QVC tender offer was, or would continue to be, conditional; (b) the QVC tender offer could be improved; (c) the Viacom tender offer or other aspects of the Paramount-Viacom transaction could be improved; (d) each of the respective offers would be reasonably likely to come to closure, and under what circumstances; (e) other material information was reasonably available for consideration by the Paramount directors; (f) there were viable and realistic alternative courses of action; and (g) the timing constraints could be managed so the directors could consider these matters carefully and deliberately.

B. The Breaches of Fiduciary Duty by the Paramount Board

[11][12] The Paramount directors made the decision on September 12, 1993, that, in their judgment, a strategic merger with Viacom on the economic terms of the Original Merger Agreement was in the best interests of Paramount and its stockholders. Those terms provided a modest change of control premium to the stockholders. The directors also decided at that time that it was appropriate to agree to certain defensive measures (the Stock Option Agreement, the Termination Fee, and the No-Shop Provision) insisted upon by Viacom as part of that economic transaction. Those defensive measures, coupled with the sale of control and subsequent disparate treatment of competing bidders, implicated the judicial scrutiny of Unocal, Revlon, Macmillan, and their progeny. We conclude that the Paramount directors' process was not reasonable, and the result achieved for the stockholders was not reasonable under the circumstances.

When entering into the Original Merger Agreement, and thereafter, the Paramount Board clearly gave insufficient attention to the potential consequences of the defensive measures demanded by Viacom. The Stock Option Agreement had a number of unusual and potentially "draconian" [FN19] provisions, including the Note Feature and the Put Feature. Furthermore, the Termination Fee, whether or not unreasonable by itself, clearly made Paramount less attractive to other bidders, when coupled with the Stock Option Agreement. Finally, the No-Shop Provision inhibited the Paramount Board's ability to negotiate with other potential bidders, particularly QVC which had already expressed an interest in Paramount. [FN20]

FN19. The Vice Chancellor so characterized the Stock Option Agreement. Court of Chancery Opinion, 635 A.2d 1245, 1272. We express no opinion whether a stock option agreement of essentially this magnitude, but with a reasonable "cap" and without the Note and Put Features, would be valid or invalid under other circumstances. See Hecco Ventures v. Sea- Land Corp., Del.Ch., C.A. No. 8486, 1986 WL 5840, Jacobs, V.C. (May 19, 1986) (21.7 percent stock option); In re Vitalink Communications Corp. Shareholders Litig., Del.Ch., C.A. No. 12085, Chandler, V.C. (May 16, 1990) (19.9 percent stock option).

FN20. We express no opinion whether certain aspects of the No-Shop Provision here could be valid in another context. Whether or not it could validly have operated here at an early stage solely to prevent Paramount from actively "shopping" the company, it could not prevent the Paramount directors from carrying out their fiduciary duties in considering unsolicited bids or in negotiating for the best value reasonably available to the stockholders. Macmillan, 559 A.2d at 1287. As we said in Barkan: "Where a board has no reasonable basis upon which to judge the adequacy of a contemplated transaction, a no-shop restriction gives rise to the inference that the board seeks to forestall competing bids." 567 A.2d at 1288. See also Revlon, 506 A.2d at 184 (holding that "[t]he no-shop provision, like the lock-up option, while not per se illegal, is impermissible under the Unocal standards when a board's primary duty becomes that of an auctioneer responsible for selling the company to the highest bidder").

Throughout the applicable time period, and especially from the first QVC merger proposal on September 20 through the Paramount Board meeting on November 15, QVC's interest in Paramount provided the opportunity for the Paramount Board to seek significantly higher value for the Paramount stockholders than that being offered by Viacom. QVC persistently demonstrated its intention to meet and exceed the Viacom offers, and 50 frequently expressed its willingness to negotiate possible further increases.

The Paramount directors had the opportunity in the October 23-24 time frame, when the Original Merger Agreement was renegotiated, to take appropriate action to modify the improper defensive measures as well as to improve the economic terms of the Paramount-Viacom transaction. Under the circumstances existing at that time, it should have been clear to the Paramount Board that the Stock Option Agreement, coupled with the Termination Fee and the No-Shop Clause, were impeding the realization of the best value reasonably available to the Paramount stockholders. Nevertheless, the Paramount Board made no effort to eliminate or modify these counterproductive devices, and instead continued to cling to its vision of a strategic alliance with Viacom. Moreover, based on advice from the Paramount management, the Paramount directors considered the QVC offer to be "conditional" and asserted that they were precluded by the No- Shop Provision from seeking more information from, or negotiating with, QVC.

By November 12, 1993, the value of the revised QVC offer on its face exceeded that of the Viacom offer by over $1 billion at then current values. This significant disparity of value cannot be justified on the basis of the directors' vision of future strategy, primarily because the change of control would supplant the authority of the current Paramount Board to continue to hold and implement their strategic vision in any meaningful way. Moreover, their uninformed process had deprived their strategic vision of much of its credibility. See Van Gorkom, 488 A.2d at 872; Cede v. Technicolor, 634 A.2d at 367; Hanson Trust PLC v. ML SCM Acquisition Inc., 2d Cir., 781 F.2d 264, 274 (1986).

When the Paramount directors met on November 15 to consider QVC's increased tender offer, they remained prisoners of their own misconceptions and missed opportunities to eliminate the restrictions they had imposed on themselves. Yet, it was not "too late" to reconsider negotiating with QVC. The circumstances existing on November 15 made it clear that the defensive measures, taken as a whole, were problematic: (a) the No-Shop Provision could not define or limit their fiduciary duties; (b) the Stock Option Agreement had become "draconian"; and (c) the Termination Fee, in context with all the circumstances, was similarly deterring the realization of possibly higher bids. Nevertheless, the Paramount directors remained paralyzed by their uninformed belief that the QVC offer was "illusory." This final opportunity to negotiate on the stockholders' behalf and to fulfill their obligation to seek the best value reasonably available was thereby squandered. [FN21]

FN21. The Paramount defendants argue that the Court of Chancery erred by assuming that the Rights Agreement was "pulled" at the November 15 meeting of the Paramount Board. The problem with this argument is that, under the Amended Merger Agreement and the resolutions of the Paramount Board related thereto, Viacom would be exempted from the Rights Agreement in the absence of further action of the Paramount Board and no further meeting had been scheduled or even contemplated prior to the closing of the Viacom tender offer. This failure to schedule and hold a meeting shortly before the closing date in order to make a final decision, based on all of the information and circumstances then existing, whether to exempt Viacom from the Rights Agreement was inconsistent with the Paramount Board's responsibilities and does not provide a basis to challenge the Court of Chancery's decision.

IV. VIACOM'S CLAIM OF VESTED CONTRACT RIGHTS

Viacom argues that it had certain "vested" contract rights with respect to the No-Shop Provision and the Stock Option Agreement. [FN22] In effect, Viacom's argument is that the Paramount directors could enter into an agreement in violation of their fiduciary duties and then render Paramount, and ultimately its stockholders, liable for failing to carry out an agreement in violation of those duties. Viacom's protestations about vested rights are without merit. This Court has found that those defensive measures were improperly designed to deter potential bidders, and that 51 such measures do not meet the reasonableness test to which they must be subjected. They are consequently invalid and unenforceable under the facts of this case.

FN22. Presumably this argument would have included the Termination Fee had the Vice Chancellor invalidated that provision or if appellees had cross-appealed from the Vice

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Chancellor's refusal to invalidate that provision.

[13][14] The No-Shop Provision could not validly define or limit the fiduciary duties of the Paramount directors. To the extent that a contract, or a provision thereof, purports to require a board to act or not act in such a fashion as to limit the exercise of fiduciary duties, it is invalid and unenforceable. Cf. Wilmington Trust v. Coulter, 200 A.2d at 452-54. Despite the arguments of Paramount and Viacom to the contrary, the Paramount directors could not contract away their fiduciary obligations. Since the No- Shop Provision was invalid, Viacom never had any vested contract rights in the provision.

[15] As discussed previously, the Stock Option Agreement contained several "draconian" aspects, including the Note Feature and the Put Feature. While we have held that lock-up options are not per se illegal, see Revlon, 506 A.2d at 183, no options with similar features have ever been upheld by this Court. Under the circumstances of this case, the Stock Option Agreement clearly is invalid. Accordingly, Viacom never had any vested contract rights in that Agreement.

Viacom, a sophisticated party with experienced legal and financial advisors, knew of (and in fact demanded) the unreasonable features of the Stock Option Agreement. It cannot be now heard to argue that it obtained vested contract rights by negotiating and obtaining contractual provisions from a board acting in violation of its fiduciary duties. As the Nebraska Supreme Court said in rejecting a similar argument in ConAgra, Inc. v. Cargill, Inc., 222 Neb. 136, 382 N.W.2d 576, 587-88 (1986), "To so hold, it would seem, would be to get the shareholders coming and going." Likewise, we reject Viacom's arguments and hold that its fate must rise or fall, and in this instance fall, with the determination that the actions of the Paramount Board were invalid.

V. CONCLUSION

The realization of the best value reasonably available to the stockholders became the Paramount directors' primary obligation under these facts in light of the change of control. That obligation was not satisfied, and the Paramount Board's process was deficient. The directors' initial hope and expectation for a strategic alliance with Viacom was allowed to dominate their decisionmaking process to the point where the arsenal of defensive measures established at the outset was perpetuated (not modified or eliminated) when the situation was dramatically altered. QVC's unsolicited bid presented the opportunity for significantly greater value for the stockholders and enhanced negotiating leverage for the directors. Rather than seizing those opportunities, the Paramount directors chose to wall themselves off from material information which was reasonably available and to hide behind the defensive measures as a rationalization for refusing to negotiate with QVC or seeking other alternatives. Their view of the strategic alliance likewise became an empty rationalization as the opportunities for higher value for the stockholders continued to develop.

It is the nature of the judicial process that we decide only the case before us--a case which, on its facts, is clearly controlled by established Delaware law. Here, the proposed change of control and the implications thereof were crystal clear. In other cases they may be less clear. The holding of this case on its facts, coupled with the holdings of the principal cases discussed herein where the issue of sale of control is implicated, should provide a workable precedent against which to measure future cases.

For the reasons set forth herein, the November 24, 1993, Order of the Court of Chancery has been AFFIRMED, and this matter has been REMANDED for proceedings consistent herewith, as set forth in the December 9, 1993, Order of this Court.

ADDENDUM

The record in this case is extensive. The appendix filed in this Court comprises 15 volumes, totalling some 7251 pages. It includes52 substantial deposition testimony which forms part of the factual record before the Court of Chancery and before this Court. The members of this Court have read and considered the appendix, including the deposition testimony, in reaching its decision, preparing the Order of December 9, 1993, and this opinion. Likewise, the Vice Chancellor's opinion revealed that he was thoroughly familiar with the entire record, including the deposition testimony. As noted, supra p. 37 note 2, the Court has commended the parties for their professionalism in conducting expedited discovery, assembling and organizing the record, and preparing and presenting very helpful briefs, a joint appendix, and oral argument.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Court is constrained, however, to add this Addendum. Although this Addendum has no bearing on the outcome of the case, it relates to a serious issue of professionalism involving deposition practice in proceedings in Delaware trial courts. [FN23]

FN23. We raise this matter sua sponte as part of our exclusive supervisory responsibility to regulate and enforce appropriate conduct of lawyers appearing in Delaware proceedings. See In re Infotechnology, Inc. Shareholder Litig., Del.Supr., 582 A.2d 215 (1990); In re Nenno, Del.Supr., 472 A.2d 815, 819 (1983); In re Green, Del.Supr., 464 A.2d 881, 885 (1983); *Delaware Optometric Corp. v. Normally our supervision relates to the conduct of members of the Delaware Bar and those admitted pro hac vice. Our responsibility for supervision is not confined to lawyers who are members of the Delaware Bar and those admitted pro hac vice, however. See In re Metviner, Del.Supr., Misc. No. 256, 1989 WL 226135, Christie, C.J. (July 7, 1989 and Aug. 22, 1989) (ORDERS). Our concern, and our duty to insist on appropriate conduct in any Delaware proceeding, including out-of-state depositions taken in Delaware litigation, extends to all lawyers, litigants, witnesses, and others.

[16] The issue of discovery abuse, including lack of civility and professional misconduct during depositions, is a matter of considerable concern to Delaware courts and courts around the nation. [FN24] One particular instance of misconduct during a deposition in this case demonstrates such an astonishing lack of professionalism and civility that it is worthy of special note here as a lesson for the future--a lesson of conduct not to be tolerated or repeated.

FN24. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor recently highlighted the national concern about the deterioration in civility in a speech delivered on December 14, 1993, to an American Bar Association group on "Civil Justice Improvements."

> I believe that the justice system cannot function effectively when the professionals charged with administering it cannot even be polite to one another. Stress and frustration drive down productivity and make the process more time-consuming and expensive. Many of the best people get driven away from the field. The profession and the system itself lose esteem in the public's eyes.
> ....
> ... In my view, incivility disserves the client because it wastes time and energy--time that is billed to the client at hundreds of dollars an hour, and energy that is better spent working on the case than working over the opponent.

The Honorable Sandra Day O'Connor, "Civil Justice System Improvements," ABA at 5 (Dec. 14, 1993) (footnotes omitted).

On November 10, 1993, an expedited deposition of Paramount, through one of its directors, J. Hugh Liedtke, [FN25] was taken in the state of Texas. The deposition was taken by Delaware counsel for QVC. Mr. Liedtke was individually represented at this deposition by Joseph D. Jamail, Esquire, of the Texas Bar. Peter C. Thomas, Esquire, of the New York Bar appeared and defended on behalf of the Paramount defendants. It does not appear that any member of the Delaware bar was present at the deposition representing any of the defendants or the stockholder plaintiffs.

FN25. The docket entries in the Court of Chancery show a November 2, 1993, "Notice of Deposition of Paramount Board" (Dkt 65). Presumably, this included Mr. Liedtke, a director of Paramount. Under Ch. Ct. R. 32(a)(2), a deposition is admissible against a party if the deposition is of an officer, director, or managing agent. From the docket entries, it appears that depositions of third party witnesses (persons who were not directors or officers) were taken pursuant to the issuance of commissions.

Mr. Jamail did not otherwise appear in this Delaware proceeding representing any party, and he was not admitted pro hac vice. [FN26] 53 Under the rules of the Court of Chancery and this Court, [FN27] lawyers who are admitted pro hac vice to represent a party in Delaware proceedings are subject to Delaware Disciplinary Rules, [FN28] and are required to review the Delaware State Bar Association Statement of Principles of Lawyer Conduct (the "Statement of Principles"). [FN29] During the Liedtke deposition, Mr. Jamail abused the privilege of representing a witness in a Delaware proceeding, in that he: (a) improperly directed the witness not to answer certain questions; (b) was extraordinarily rude, uncivil, and vulgar; and (c) obstructed the ability of the questioner to elicit testimony to assist the Court in this matter.

FN26. It does not appear from the docket entries that Mr. Thomas was admitted pro hac vice in the Court of Chancery. In fact, no member of his firm appears from the docket entries to have been so admitted until Barry R. Ostrager, Esquire, who presented the oral argument on behalf of the Paramount defendants, was admitted on the day of the argument before the Vice Chancellor, November 16, 1993.

FN27. Ch.Ct.R. 170; Supr.Ct.R. 71. There was no Delaware lawyer and no lawyer admitted pro hac vice present at the deposition representing any party, except that Mr. Johnston, a Delaware lawyer, took the deposition on behalf of QVC. The Court is aware that the general practice has not been to view as a requirement that a Delaware lawyer or a lawyer already admitted pro hac vice must be present at all depositions. Although it is not as explicit as perhaps it should be, we believe that Ch.Ct.R. 170(d), fairly read, requires such presence:

(d) Delaware counsel for any party shall appear in the action in which the motion for admission pro hac vice is filed and shall sign or receive service of all notices, orders, pleadings or other papers filed in the action, and shall attend all proceedings before the Court, Clerk of the Court, or other officers of the Court, unless excused by the Court. Attendance of Delaware Counsel at depositions shall not be required unless ordered by the Court.

See also Hoechst Celanese Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., Del.Super., 623 A.2d 1099, 1114 (1991). (Super.Ct.Civ.R. 90.1, which corresponds to Ch.Ct.R. 170, "merely excuses attendance of local counsel at depositions, but does not excuse non-Delaware counsel from compliance with the pro hac vice requirement.... A deposition conducted pursuant to Court rules is a proceeding."). We believe that these shortcomings in the enforcement of proper lawyer conduct can and should be remedied consistent with the nature of expedited proceedings.

FN28. It appears that at least Rule 3.5(c) of the Delaware Lawyer's Rules of Professional Conduct is implicated here. It provides: "A lawyer shall not ... (c) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal or engage in undignified or discourteous conduct which is degrading to a tribunal."

FN29. The following are a few pertinent excerpts from the Statement of Principles:

The Delaware State Bar Association, for the Guidance of Delaware lawyers, and those lawyers from other jurisdictions who may be associated with them, adopted the following Statement of Principles of Lawyer Conduct on [November 15, 1991].... The purpose of adopting these Principles is to promote and foster the ideals of professional courtesy, conduct and cooperation.... A lawyer should develop and maintain the qualities of integrity, compassion, learning, civility, diligence and public service that mark the most admired members of our profession.... [A] lawyer ... should treat all persons, including adverse lawyers and parties, fairly and equitably.... Professional civility is conduct that shows respect not only for the courts and colleagues, but also for all people encountered in practice.... Respect for the court requires ... emotional self-control; [and] the absence of scorn and superiority in words of demeanor.... A lawyer should use pre-trial procedures, including discovery, solely to develop a case for settlement or trial. No pre-trial procedure should be used to harass an opponent or delay a case.... Questions and objections at deposition should be restricted to conduct appropriate in the presence of a judge.... Before moving the admission of a lawyer from another jurisdiction, a Delaware lawyer should make such investigation as is required to form an informed conviction that the lawyer to be admitted is ethical and competent, and should furnish the candidate for admission with a copy of this Statement.

(Emphasis supplied.)

To illustrate, a few excerpts from the latter stages of the Liedtke deposition follow:

A. [Mr. Liedtke] I vaguely recall [Mr. Oresman's letter].... I think I did read it, probably.

....

Q. (By Mr. Johnston [Delaware counsel for QVC]) Okay. Do you have any idea why Mr. Oresman was calling that material to your attention?

MR. JAMAIL: Don't answer that.

How would he know what was going on in Mr. Oresman's mind?

Don't answer it.

Go on to your next question.

MR. JOHNSTON: No, Joe--

MR. JAMAIL: He's not going to answer that. Certify it. I'm going to shut it down if you don't go to your next question.

54 MR. JOHNSTON: No. Joe, Joe--

MR. JAMAIL: Don't "Joe" me, asshole. You can ask some questions, but get off of that. I'm tired of you. You could gag a maggot off a meat wagon. Now, we've helped you every way we can.

MR. JOHNSTON: Let's just take it easy.

MR. JAMAIL: No, we're not going to take it easy. Get done with this.

MR. JOHNSTON: We will go on to the next question.

MR. JAMAIL: Do it now.
MR. JOHNSTON: We will go on to the next question. We're not trying to excite anyone.
MR. JAMAIL: Come on. Quit talking. Ask the question. Nobody wants to socialize with you.
MR. JOHNSTON: I'm not trying to socialize. We'll go on to another question. We're continuing the deposition.
MR. JAMAIL: Well, go on and shut up.
MR. JOHNSTON: Are you finished?
MR. JAMAIL: Yeah, you--
MR. JOHNSTON: Are you finished?
MR. JAMAIL: I may be and you may be. Now, you want to sit here and talk to me, fine. This deposition is going to be over with. You don't know what you're doing. Obviously someone wrote out a long outline of stuff for you to ask. You have no concept of what you're doing.
Now, I've tolerated you for three hours. If you've got another question, get on with it. This is going to stop one hour from now, period. Go.
MR. JOHNSTON: Are you finished?
MR. THOMAS: Come on, Mr. Johnston, move it.
MR. JOHNSTON: I don't need this kind of abuse.,
MR. THOMAS: Then just ask the next question.
Q. (By Mr. Johnston) All right. . To try to move forward, Mr. Liedtke, ... I'll show you what's been marked as Liedtke 14 and it is a covering letter dated October 29 from Steven Cohen of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz including QVC's Amendment Number 1 to its Schedule 14D-1, and my question--
A. No.
Q. --to you, sir, is whether you've seen that?
A. No. Look, I don't know what your intent in asking all these questions is, but, my God, I am not going to play boy lawyer.
Q. Mr. Liedtke--
A. Okay. Go ahead and ask your question.
Q. --I'm trying to move forward in this deposition that we are entitled to take. I'm trying to streamline it.
MR. JAMAIL: Come on with your next question. Don't even talk with this witness.
MR. JOHNSTON: I'm trying to move forward with it.
MR. JAMAIL: You understand me? Don't talk to this witness except by question. Did you hear me?
MR. JOHNSTON: I heard you fine.
MR. JAMAIL: You fee makers think you can come here and sit in somebody's office, get your meter running, get your full day's fee by asking stupid questions. Let's go with it.

FN30. Joint Appendix of the parties on appeal.

Staunch advocacy on behalf of a client is proper and fully consistent with the finest effectuation of skill and professionalism. Indeed, it is a mark of professionalism, not weakness, for a lawyer zealously and firmly to protect and pursue a client's legitimate interests by a professional, courteous, and civil attitude toward all persons involved in the litigation process. A lawyer who engages in the type of behavior exemplified by Mr. Jamail on the record of the Liedtke deposition is not properly representing his client, and the client's cause is not advanced by a lawyer who engages in unprofessional conduct of this nature. It happens that in this case there was no application to the Court, and the parties and the witness do not 55 appear to have been prejudiced by this misconduct. [FN31]

FN31. We recognize the practicalities of litigation practice in our trial courts, particularly in expedited proceedings such as this preliminary injunction motion, where simultaneous depositions are often taken in far-flung locations, and counsel have only a few hours to question each witness. Understandably, counsel may be reluctant to take the time to stop a deposition and call the trial judge for relief. Trial courts are extremely busy and overburdened. Avoidance of this kind of misconduct is essential. If such misconduct should occur, the aggrieved party should recess the deposition and engage in a dialogue with the offending lawyer to obviate the need to call the trial judge. If all else fails and it is necessary to call the trial judge, sanctions may be appropriate against the offending lawyer or party, or against the complaining lawyer or party if the request for court relief is unjustified. See Ch.Ct.R. 37. It should also be noted that discovery abuse sometimes is the fault of the questioner, not the lawyer defending the deposition. These admonitions should be read as applying to both sides.

Nevertheless, the Court finds this unprofessional behavior to be outrageous and unacceptable. If a Delaware lawyer had engaged in the kind of misconduct committed by Mr. Jamail on this record, that lawyer would have been subject to censure or more serious sanctions. [FN32] While the specter of disciplinary proceedings should not be used by the parties as a litigation tactic, [FN33] conduct such as that involved here goes to the heart of the trial court proceedings themselves. As such, it cries out for relief under the trial court's rules, including Ch. Ct. R. 37. Under some circumstances, the use of the trial court's inherent summary contempt powers may be appropriate. See In re Butler, Del.Supr., 609 A.2d 1080, 1082 (1992).

FN32. See In re Ramunno, Del.Supr., 625 A.2d 248, 250 (1993) (Delaware lawyer held to have violated Rule 3.5 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, and therefore subject to public reprimand and warning for use of profanity similar to that involved here and "insulting conduct toward opposing counsel [found] ... unacceptable by any standard").

FN33. See Infotechnology, 582 A.2d at 220 ("In Delaware there is the fundamental constitutional principle that [the Supreme] Court, alone, has the sole and exclusive responsibility over all matters affecting governance of the Bar.... The Rules are to be enforced by a disciplinary agency, and are not to be subverted as procedural weapons.").

Although busy and overburdened, Delaware trial courts are "but a phone call away" and would be responsive to the plight of a party and its counsel bearing the brunt of such misconduct. [FN34] It is not appropriate for this Court to prescribe in the abstract any particular remedy or to provide an exclusive list of remedies under such circumstances. We assume that the trial courts of this State would consider protective orders and the sanctions permitted by the discovery rules. Sanctions could include exclusion of obstreperous counsel from attending the deposition (whether or not he or she has been admitted pro hac vice), ordering the deposition recessed and reconvened promptly in Delaware, or the appointment of a master to preside at the deposition. Costs and counsel fees should follow.

FN34. See Hall v. Clifton Precision, E.D.Pa., 150 F.R.D. 525 (1993) (ruling on "coaching," conferences between deposed witnesses and their lawyers, and obstructive tactics):

> Depositions are the factual battleground where the vast majority of litigation actually takes place.... Thus, it is particularly important that this discovery device not be abused. Counsel should never forget that even though the deposition may be taking place far from a real courtroom, with no black-robed overseer peering down upon them, as long as the deposition is conducted under the caption of this court and proceeding under the authority of the rules of this court, counsel are operating as officers of this court. They should comport themselves accordingly; should they be tempted to stray, they should remember that this judge is but a phone call away.
> 150 F.R.D. at 531.

[17] As noted, this was a deposition of Paramount through one of its directors. Mr. Liedtke was a Paramount witness in every respect. He was not there either as an individual defendant or as a third party witness. Pursuant to Ch. Ct. R. 170(d), the Paramount defendants should have been represented at the deposition by a Delaware lawyer or a lawyer admitted pro hac vice. A Delaware lawyer who moves the admission pro hac vice of an out-of-state lawyer is not relieved of responsibility, is required to appear at all court proceedings (except depositions when a lawyer admitted pro hac vice is present), shall certify that the lawyer appearing 56 pro hac vice is reputable and competent, and that the Delaware lawyer is in a position to recommend the out-of-state lawyer. [FN35] Thus, one of the principal purposes of the pro hac vice rules is to assure that, if a Delaware lawyer is not to be present at a deposition, the lawyer admitted pro hac vice will be there. As such, he is an officer of the Delaware Court, subject to control of the Court to ensure the integrity of the proceeding.

FN35. See, e.g., Ch.Ct.R. 170(b), (d), and (h).

Counsel attending the Liedtke deposition on behalf of the Paramount defendants had an obligation to ensure the integrity of that proceeding. The record of the deposition as a whole (JA 5916-6054) demonstrates that, not only Mr. Jamail, but also Mr. Thomas (representing the Paramount defendants), continually interrupted the questioning, engaged in colloquies and objections which sometimes suggested answers to questions, [FN36] and constantly pressed the questioner for time throughout the deposition. [FN37] As to Mr. Jamail's tactics quoted above, Mr. Thomas passively let matters proceed as they did, and at times even added his own voice to support the behavior of Mr. Jamail. A Delaware lawyer or a lawyer admitted pro hac vice would have been expected to put an end to the misconduct in the Liedtke deposition.

FN36. Rule 30(d)(1) of the revised Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which became effective on December 1, 1993, requires objections during depositions to be "stated concisely and in a non-argumentative and non- suggestive manner." See Hall, 150 F.R.D. at 530. See also Rose Hall, Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Overseas Banking Corp., D.Del., C.A. No. 79- 182, Steel, J. (Dec. 12, 1980); Cascella v. GDV, Inc., Del.Ch., C.A. No. 5899, 1981 WL 15129, Brown, V.C. (Jan. 15, 1981); In re Asbestos Litig., Del.Super., 492 A.2d 256 (1985); Deutschman v. Beneficial Corp., D.Del., C.A. No. 86-595 MMS, Schwartz, J. (Feb. 20, 1990). The Delaware trial courts and this Court are evaluating the desirability of adopting certain of the new Federal Rules, or modifications thereof, and other possible rule changes.

FN37. While we do not necessarily endorse everything set forth in the Hall case, we share Judge Gawthrop's view not only of the impropriety of coaching witnesses on and off the record of the deposition (see supra note 34), but also the impropriety of objections and colloquy which "tend to disrupt the question-and-answer rhythm of a deposition and obstruct the witness's testimony." See 150 F.R.D. at 530. To be sure, there are also occasions when the questioner is abusive or otherwise acts improperly and should be sanctioned. See supra note 31. Although the questioning in the Liedtke deposition could have proceeded more crisply, this was not a case where it was the questioner who abused the process.

This kind of misconduct is not to be tolerated in any Delaware court proceeding, including depositions taken in other states in which witnesses appear represented by their own counsel other than counsel for a party in the proceeding. Yet, there is no clear mechanism for this Court to deal with this matter in terms of sanctions or disciplinary remedies at this time in the context of this case. Nevertheless, consideration will be given to the following issues for the future: (a) whether or not it is appropriate and fair to take into account the behavior of Mr. Jamail in this case in the event application is made by him in the future to appear pro hac vice in any Delaware proceeding; [FN38] and (b) what rules or standards should be adopted to deal effectively with misconduct by out-of-state lawyers in depositions in proceedings pending in Delaware courts.

FN38. The Court does not condone the conduct of Mr. Thomas in this deposition. Although the Court does not view his conduct with the gravity and revulsion with which it views Mr. Jamail's conduct, in the future the Court expects that counsel in Mr. Thomas's position will have been admitted pro hac vice before participating in a deposition. As an officer of the Delaware Court, counsel admitted pro hac vice are now clearly on notice that they are expected to put an end to conduct such as that perpetrated by Mr. Jamail on this record.

As to (a), this Court will welcome a voluntary appearance by Mr. Jamail if a request is received from him by the Clerk of this Court within thirty days of the date of this Opinion and Addendum. The purpose of such voluntary appearance will be to explain the questioned conduct and to show cause why such conduct should not be considered as a bar to any future appearance by Mr. Jamail in a Delaware proceeding. As to (b), this Court and the trial courts of this State will undertake to strengthen the existing mechanisms for dealing with the type of misconduct referred 57 to in this Addendum and the practices relating to admissions pro hac vice.

United States Court of Appeals,
Seventh Circuit.

John PATTERSON et al., Plaintiffs-Appellees,
v.
Roy STOVALL et al., Defendants-Appellees,
William P. Corkill et al., Objectors-Appellants.

No. 75--1349.

Argued Oct. 29, 1975.
Decided Jan. 8, 1976.
Rehearing Denied Jan. 26, 1976.

Suit was brought on behalf of depositors to recover sums invested by defendants in cash commodities for deferred deliveries. The United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, Thomas R. McMillen, J., approved settlement and certain depositors objected and appealed. The Court of Appeals, Bauer, Circuit Judge, held that approval of settlement which would return 80 to 90% of original investment or allow option to pursue 100% recovery and which was not in conflict with power to order further restitution in connection with criminal proceedings pending against individual defendant out of $1,000,000 fund that would, after payment of certain claims, eventually be returned to defendants, was not abuse of discretion.

Affirmed.

Where objectors to class action settlement of claims for sums invested in cash commodities for deferred deliveries were allowed 18 months to pursue whatever discovery or investigations they desired, and refusal to order individual defendant to answer questions concerning his potential liability was not abuse of discretion in that settlement negotiations had neared fruition with vast majority of class members and such defendant may have had privilege under Fifth Amendment not to answer questions, trial court did not abuse its discretion in approving settlement without further discovery. In reviewing proposed settlement court should consider judgment of counsel and presence of good faith bargaining.

Trial judge should not attempt to decide merits of controversy where parties have reached settlement since any virtue which may reside in compromise is based upon doing away with effect of such a decision.

Approval of class action settlement which would return 80 to 90% of original investment by depositors in cash commodities for deferred deliveries or allow option to pursue 100% recovery and which was not in conflict with power to order further restitution in criminal proceedings against individual defendant out of $1,000,000 fund that, after satisfying certain claims, would eventually be returned to defendants was not abuse of discretion.

Even assuming that defendants would come out of settlement with depositors concerning sums invested in cash commodities for deferred deliveries with money remaining in $1,000,000 fund that, after payment of certain claims, was to be returned to the defendants, that fact alone would not make settlement unreasonable.

Trial court did not err in relying on accounting of defendants' assets in approving settlement in suit brought on behalf of depositors to recover sums invested in cash commodities for deferred deliveries where accuracy of reports, although initially questionable, was borne out during disbursement of settlement funds.

BAUER, Circuit Judge.

This appeal is brought by certain named individuals on behalf of themselves and other individuals similarly situated raising objections to a class action settlement. The sole question on appeal is whether the trial judge abused his discretion in approving the settlement. We affirm the trial court's approval of the settlement.

[1] Appellants-objectors[FN1] are members of a class of plaintiffs who over a two-year period deposited money ultimately totalling approximately $9,700,000 with Rawlin L. Stovall and his company, American Cash Commodities of Missouri, Inc., both defendants herein, for investment by them in cash commodities for deferred delivery. In September, 1973, immediately prior to the defendants' indictment on charges arising out of their misuse of these funds, numerous 110 suits were filed seeking class status, an accounting of the depositors' funds, and a recession of all contracts between the depositors and the defendants.

FN1. William P. Corkill, John Corkill, Joane Duda, James Fry, Diane Jezierski and Robert Ryan are the six appellant-objectors who equal in number .0018 percent (6 of 3,183 $ 18), or approximately 1/5 of 1 percent of all depositors, having claims totalling $19,925.00 or .0022 percent of all claims. In fact, they represent approximately 1/5 of 1 percent in number and in amounts of all claims. Although in terms of the class and settlement their number and size might be considered miniscule, the serious issues raised before this Court are not reduced in their magnitude. Initially appellees maintained that the objectors had no standing to bring this appeal. In light of the total factual picture, however, there is no doubt that the objectors have standing to appeal. The fact that they accepted certain funds in settlement did not constitute a waiver since that action was taken primarily to help the plaintiff-appellees secure a disbursement from the bank.

Shortly after the criminal indictments were returned against both defendants, plaintiffs requested the court to enjoin the transfer of $6,500,000 on deposit in the defendants' bank accounts. Although no injunction order was entered the money remained on deposit at the Continental Bank. On February 6, 1974, a proposed settlement was presented to the trial court and counsel for both sides requested leave to present the settlement to the class members.

Appellants, through independent counsel, filed numerous objections both to the substance of the settlement and to the procedures followed in preparing the settlement proposal for submission to the court. With one exception, appellants' objections and suggestions were overruled; the class was certified, the proposed settlement was approved for submission to the class, and notice of the class certification and the proposed settlement was sent to the class. Appellants filed objections to the form of the notice and again asserted their objections to the proposed settlement itself. On February 20, 1975, the trial court overruled all objections, approved the settlement, and authorized a distribution of part of the sequestered funds to the class.[FN2]

FN2. The settlement agreement provided as follows:

'The defendants Stovall, American and Hackbarth, have submitted a Settlement Agreement for approval to the Court. The Agreement provides, in substance, that $6,500,000 (now approximately $6,800,000) (Fund 'A') will be set aside and deposited in interest bearing accounts for eventual distribution to those class members on a pro rata basis who establish their claims and to counsel for plaintiffs for their fees and expenses, as determined by the Court, in full and final settlement of all claims against Stovall, American and Hackbarth, which are alleged in the Complaints or could have been alleged by reason of or in connection with any matter or fact set forth or referred to in any of the Complaints.

'Settlement Fund A' shakll consist of all the aforesaid funds and all interest accruing thereon, less $1,000,000 allocated to 'Settlement Fund B'. Upon its establishment by court order, 'Settlement Fund A' shall be available to all plaintiff-depositors who shall participate in this settlement by filing acceptable claims for refund (which shall be limited to the amount of monies deposited, exclusive of interest, profits and other increments) with the Court, and for claimants who do not file, but may be equally entitled to a refund; 'Settlement Fund A' shall be used for the pro rata distribution of all such claims, subject only to actual costs of administrating said funds which are necessarily incurred by consolidated class counsel, costs in mailing distribution after notice, and reasonable costs and attorneys' fees to consolidated class counsel.

The approximate sum of $1,000.000 (Fund 'B') will be set aside in interest bearing accounts and subject to claims of any creditors who are not depositors, the claims of depositors who choose to litigate their claims, claims of the Internal Revenue Service, and of any creditors who are not depositors, defendants' attorneys' fees and costs of any fines imposed against defendants in the criminal proceedings before Judge Abraham L. Marovitz. In the event any funds remain in Fund 'B' after payment of all claims herein described the balance shall be turned over to American.'

It appears that the major stimulus for the defendants' civil settlement of the actions against Stovall was the government's agreement to accept a plea of nolo contendere to all counts in the indictment, except for one perjury count, to which Stovall pled guilty. Judge Marovitz received the pleas and sentenced Stovall to two concurrent five year sentences, which were immediately suspended in favor of probation under 18 U.S.C. s 3651. Judge Marovitz was fully informed of the terms of the civil settlements. On February 28, 1974, at the time of defendant's sentencing, the judge announced that the disposition of the defendants, admittedly quite lenient under all the facts and circumstances, was based in part on his intention of ordering further restitution out of settlement monies in fund 'B' (discussed infra pp. 114--115) pursuant to the court's power under the restitution statutes. 111 This point was again restated by the court on September 20, 1974. Nevertheless, the language of the settlement agreement reached by the parties states that any money remaining in fund 'B' will be turned over to Stovall's company. Depositors who were reimbursed out of fund 'A' are barred from claiming or receiving further amounts from fund 'B'. Thus Judge Marovitz' intention to order further restitution appears to conflict with the language of the settlement agreement.

We believe that this apparent conflict must be interpreted in favor of the depositors. Since Judge Marovitz' handling of the criminal proceedings greatly influenced the settlement of the civil cases we do not believe that the wording of the agreement should be read to usurp his power to order restitution [FN3]--an action which he clearly indicated he would take on two separate occasions. If in the future, he should decide that as a condition of probation defendants must make restitution by paying out of money left over in fund 'B' in the criminal case such an order would not violate the settlement agreement reached in the civil suit. Thus the most compelling argument of objectors that Stovall still remains a millionaire, despite his nefarious activities in defrauding depositors, his criminal conviction, and the multiple lawsuits filed against him, is not really valid since Judge Marovitz still retains the power to order restitution to depositors from any funds remaining with Stovall or his company in fund 'B'.

> FN3. Under 18 U.S.C. s 3651 the sentencing judge clearly has the power to make restitution a condition of probation. Section 3651 states, inter alia:
> '(W)hile on probation and among the conditions thereof, the defendant may be required to pay a fine in one or several sums; and may be required to make restitution or reparation to aggrieved parties for actual damages or loss caused by the offense for which conviction was had; . . .'

As the Court of Appeals we have no power to rewrite a settlement agreement reached by the parties. However, we do have the authority to approve or disapprove a class action settlement after considering any objections raised. Our approval in this case is based upon our interpretation of the agreement entered into after the parties were made aware of Judge Marovitz' intentions. [FN4]

> FN4. The transcript of proceedings on February 28, 1974 before Judge Marovitz indicates that attorneys involved in the civil suit were present for the defendants' sentencing and that the following colloquy took place:
> 'By Mr. Montana (prosecutor): 'Through various discussions with our office, it is my understanding that our office has agreed that in the unique situation of this case, because of the availability of the money, that we would not oppose and in fact would suggest to the Court that probation be imposed under the strictest condition and that is that this Court maintain power and jurisdiction over those settlement funds; that as complete restitution as possible be made to the victims for the monies that Mr. Stovall fraudulently took from them; that the Court is sure that the defendant does not profit substantially from his fraud . . . (Tr. 4).
> By Mr. Branvik (attorney for defendant):
> Your Honor, I have explained to Mr. Stovall, following our discussions that this Court will maintain jurisdiction to review the terms of the settlement and also particularly the contents of Fund B under the settlement at the end of the civil litigation and that this Court will determine, will have the power to determine at such time, whether a fine or other conditions should be imposed with respect to that Fund B settlement as to Mr. Stovall and he understands it, your Honor.
> The Court: Does he consent to it?
> Branvik: Yes, your Honor.
> The Court: Is that correct, Mr. Stovall?
> The Defendants: Yes, sir, it is (Tr. 6). By the Court:
> Well, this Court will impose a sentence on each count of five years and suspend the sentence, and also by agreement of the defendant in his own proper person and through his counsel suspend the imposition of a fine on each of these counts until September 20th or any other earlier or later date within the period of the probation depending upon the determination of the civil case which will establish the amount of money left in the B fund.
> It is the Court's intention then to order restitution and impose such fines as the Court deems just under the circumstances.'

112 [2] Our approval is also based upon the principle that an appellate court will only intervene and upset a settlement upon a clear showing that the trial court committed an abuse of its discretion. State of West Virginia v. Chas. Pfizer & Company, 440 F.2d 1079, 1085 (2d Cir. 1971); Newman v. Stein, 464 F.2d 689, 692 (2d Cir. 1972); United Founders Life Insurance v. Consumers Nat'l. Life Insurance, 447 F.2d 647, 655 (7th Cir. 1971). Courts of review generally will consider the facts of a settlement in a light favorable to promoting settlements. As the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit stated in Florida Trailer and Equipment Co. v. Deal, 284 F.2d 567 (1960):

> 'Of course, the approval of a proposed settlement does not depend on establishing as a matter of legal certainty that the subject claim or counterclaim is or is not worthless or valuable. The probable outcome in the event of litigation, the relative advantages and disadvantages are, of course, relevant factors for evaluation. But the very uncertainties of outcome in litigation, as well as the avoidance of wasteful litigation and expense, lay behind the Congressional infusion of a power to compromise. This is a recognition of the policy of the law generally to encourage settlements. This could hardly be achieved if the test on hearing for approval meant establishing success or failure to a certainty. Parties would be hesitant to explore the likelihood of settlement apprehensive as they would then be that the application for approval would necessarily result in a judicial determination that there was no escape from liability or no hope of recovery and (thus) no basis for a compromise.'

In light of this standard we shall review each of the major objections to the settlement raised by this appeal.

[3] Appellant-objectors submit that the proponents of the settlement agreement did not create a sufficient factual record to permit the trial court to make a proper determination that the agreement was fair, reasonable and adequate. Specifically they argue that they were denied sufficient discovery before the settlement which would have enabled them to evaluate Stovall's claims for commissions, the potential costs of a trial, and the probability of multiple appeals. In addition they question the defendants withdrawing their motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. Since the question of jurisdiction can never be waived by the parties we have reviewed the record sua sponte on this issue and believe that one or more alternate grounds for federal jurisdiction does exist.[FN5]

FN5. On appeal none of the parties have argued that this Court does not now have jurisdiction. However the question was seriously raised in the trial court before defendants withdrew their motion to dismiss. Despite that withdrawal the District Court would have no authority to approve the settlement had it lacked jurisdiction. However we believe jurisdiction was available on a number of different theories. First, Judge Marovitz clearly had jurisdiction of the criminal suit and he conditioned his sentence in that case on the return of the depositors funds. Thus even if the civil suits were without jurisdiction he could approve the settlement as a condition of probation. Second, although class members cannot aggregate their claims in a diversity case, Snyder v. Harris, 394 U.S. 332, 89 S.Ct. 1053, 22 L.Ed.2d 319 (1969); Zahn v. International Paper Co., 414 U.S. 291, 94 S.Ct. 505, 38 L.Ed.2d 511 (1973), at least some of the claimants could have individually satisfied the $10,000 limitation. Third, jurisdiction might exist under either the Commodity Exchange Act ss 4 and 6(b) or the Securities Exchange Act. Fourth, even if the case was dismissed on jurisdictional grounds the bank could clearly re-file the same case with the same parties under the statutory interpleader section, 28 U.S.C. s 1335, which requires only minimal jurisdiction of claimants. See State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 530--1, 87 S.Ct. 1199, 18 L.Ed.2d 270 (1967); Haynes v. Felder, 239 F.2d 868 (5th Cir. 1957). Cf. State of West Virginia v. Chas. Pfizer & Co., 314 F.Supp. 710 (S.D.N.Y.1970), aff'd 440 F.2d 1079 (2d Cir. 1971).

[4] Obviously an evidentiary hearing is not required before the settlement of every case. Under Rule 23 the trial court must be more vigilant over class settlements because of the rights of the 113 absent class members and because sometimes counsel may appear to be too eager to settle in order to guarantee themselves a fee for their professional services. However a review of the settlement agreement here indicates that its genesis was on January 14, 1974 when Stovall's counsel were engaged in plea bargaining with the government. The class determination was not made until July 12, 1974, and all the parties were given until October 3, 1974, to determine whether the agreement was to be approved or to present their objections. At the October 3rd hearing appellant-objectors requested additional discovery and the court granted additional time to pursue discovery. They were allowed to depose Stovall, Hackbarth, the accountant, and any bank or financial institution they chose. [FN6] Unfortunately, this additional discovery did not produce any new information that would materially effect the settlement. Subsequently the court received various reports from the objectors and other parties in the action and entered an order on February 20, 1975 giving final approval to the settlement. There is no evidence of the trial court abusing its discretion. The court was most patient in allowing the appellant-objectors to pursue whatever discovery or investigations they desired over a period of eighteen months. Thus, objector-appellants misplace reliance on Cohen v. Young, 127 F.2d 721 (6th Cir. 1942) where the court summarily dismissed the objectors' petition to intervene and denied them the right to produce evidence.

FN6. Appellant-objectors claim that their discovery was limited in that they were not allowed to question the defendant about his potential liability. They requested the court to direct Stovall to answer the questions. The court > refused to order the defendant to answer. We believe it was within the ambit of the trial court's discretion to refuse to order the answers. Since settlement negotiations had neared fruition with the vast majority of class members the court may have decided that the only inquiry that was proper dealt with the extent of Stovall's assets. In addition, Stovall may have had a privilege under the Fifth Amendment not to answer the questions. Normally, however, we would consider it an abuse of the court's discretion not to order a defendant to answer questions concerning his acts and possible liability in a civil case.

The objectors' main argument is similar to that pursued by Greenspun v. Bogan, 492 F.2d 375 (1st Cir. 1974), where the trial court had approved a derivative action settlement. Certain parties appealed claiming that the District Court abused its discretion because it failed to conduct an independent evaluation of the settlement and because it received more supporting data after giving its tentative approval. In considering this issue, the Court stated at p. 378 of the opinion:

> 'Appellants contend that the district court could not have exercised independent judgment because it lacked sufficient evidence to show the fairness of the proposed settlement. They point to the fact that the court had access to only two depositions concerning the proposed fee schedules, both of which were conducted after the March 19th announcement that an agreement had been reached 'in principle' between the parties of the derivative action. Moreover, two volumes of exhibits and documents were given to the court on the eve before it approved the settlement, giving rise to the speculation that the court did not have a full opportunity to review their contents. And appellants point, most particularly, to the fact that the court did not have any documents in its possession which could show that the proposed fee schedule was comparable to the fee schedules of other similar real estate investment trusts and their advisors.
> While the district court's evaluation of the proposed settlement may not have been as comprehensive or intensive as it could have been, appellants have failed to show that the district court clearly abused its discretion in approving the settlement because it lacked sufficient evidence upon which an independent appraisal (could) be based' (492 F.2d at 378).

114 [5] In the instant case the trial court had sufficient facts before it to make an informed judgment. Perhaps holding an evidentiary hearing may be the better practice; the failure to do so however does not constitute a per se abuse of discretion. The court had ample opportunity to gain familiarity with the subtleties of the proposed settlement. Memoranda in support of the settlement as well as objections were presented to the court. Further, the court had access to numerous documents, exhibits, a computer print-out of depositors and amounts invested, a transcript of the proceedings in the criminal case, a summary of the government's evidence, and, the benefit of dozens of appearances by counsel for the plaintiffs and defendants.

[6] In reviewing a proposed settlement the court should consider the judgment of counsel and the presence of good faith bargaining. Newman v. Stein, supra p. 111. Courts usually refuse to substitute their business judgment for that of counsel, absent fraud or overreaching. As stated in Zerkle v. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., 52 F.R.D. 151 at 159 (S.D.N.Y. 1971).

> 'The Court will not substitute its business judgment for that of the parties; 'the only question . . . is whether the settlement, taken as a whole, is so unfair on its face as to preclude judicial approval.' Glicken v. Bradford, 35 F.R.D. 144, 151 (S.D.N.Y. 1964) . . .'

[7] The trial judge should not attempt to decide the merits of the controversy where the parties have reached a settlement. Any virtue which may reside in a compromise is based upon doing away with the effect of such a decision. Woods & Selick, Inc. v. Todd, 282 U.S. 881, 51 S.Ct. 85, 75 L.Ed. 777 (1930); Schleiff v. Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co., 43 F.R.D. 175, 178--179 (S.D.N.Y.1967); City of Detroit v. Grinnel Corp., 495 F.2d 448 (2d Cir. 1974); 'Factors Considered in Determining the Fairness of a Settlement,' 68 N.U.L.Rev., p. 1145. As Judge Wyatt stated in Schleiff, supra:

> 'In determining whether to approve the compromise or not, the Court does not try out the disputed issues. The compromise was agreed to for the purpose of avoiding just that' (43 F.R.D. at 178).

[8] Appellant-objectors are asking this Court to upset a settlement which returns 80 to 90% of the original investment of the class members plus allows plaintiffs an option to pursue a 100% recovery. This settlement compared to much of the litigation in the federal courts is imminent fair and reasonable.

The creation of funds 'A' and 'B' is the result of negotiations between plaintiffs and defendants. It is a division of Stovall's assets accumulated from the scheme and acquired during the period described in the complaint. The trial court did not create the divided funds. The parties chose it as a method to provide defendants an incentive to settle.

Fund 'A' consisted of approximately 6.8 million dollars set aside and deposited in interest bearing accounts for pro rata distribution to class members who agreed to the settlement. The majority of the money in fund 'A' has already been paid out to depositors.

Fund 'B' consists of one million dollars set aside to provide for those depositors who opt out of the settlement agreement of fund 'A', claims by the Internal Revenue Service for taxes, claims by any creditors who are not depositors, and, any costs, fines or restitution payments resulting from the criminal proceedings before Judge Marovitz. Claims on fund 'B' by depositors amount to approximately $48,000. The Internal Revenue Service has subpoenaed the records of defendants but no claims have been made at this time. Judge Marovitz has not yet ordered any restitution of monies from this fund as a condition of probation because not all of the money in fund 'A' has been distributed nor have any of the other potential claims on fund 'B' been made.

Appellant-objectors submit that the trial court had no basis for establishing 115 the fund 'B'; that the claims of the Internal Revenue Service cannot possibly amount to one million dollars, consequently Stovall and his company, American, stand to profit handsomely from the settlement. As we stated previously, Judge Marovitz still has the power to order restitution from fund 'B'. As to the potentially large claims of the Internal Revenue Service we issue no opinion at this time. Nevertheless it is difficult to believe that Stovall stands to make a profit because of wrongdoing.

[9] Assuming arguendo that the defendants were to come out of the settlement with money remaining in fund 'B' (a decision that largely rests within Judge Marovitz' discretion), that fact alone would not make the settlement unreasonable. A settlement by its very nature is an agreement where both sides gain as well as lose something. It is clear that by settling Stovall was able to maintain his freedom. But he also gave up a potentially large claim for 'handling fees', he gave up his seat on the Chicago Board of Trade, as well as his constitutional right to a jury trial and the raising of any legitimate defenses. In addition he has to serve a period of five years of probation during which he will not be allowed to trade on behalf of anyone other than himself.

[10] Finally appellant-objectors contend that the court improperly relied upon the J. K. Lasser Company reports which gave an accounting of the Stovall assets. They submit the reports are without integrity because their author, Mr. Adelman, did not express an opinion, as is the usual practice by accountants; and, the fact that the reports did not constitute a full and complete audit of accounts, liabilities, and assets. Appellant-objectors advised the trial court of numerous deficiencies in the report and requested the appointment of an independent expert to evaluate the defendants' financial status. That request was denied after both plaintiffs and defendants attempted to explain the discrepancies in the Lasser Co. reports.

In response to this argument appellees now point out that the accuracy of the reports has been verified by the settlement itself. As of June 24, 1975, a total of 3143 claims were either filed, approved, or paid. This was out of an original 3369 depositors. Subsequent verification showed that many persons had three or four accounts and that the true number of located individual depositors came to 3143. These class members have all verified that their accounts were correctly reflected in the defendants' records which were the materials upon which the Lasser reports were based.

Moreover, the total claims amount to $8,755,546 as of this date, with only a few claimants to be located. This figure is very close to the estimated deposit figure of $8,900,000 used in the settlement and the J. K. Lasser Co. computation. $6,063,274.50 has been paid to class members whose names and addresses and amount of deposits were taken from the Hackbarth computer print- out and the J. K. Lasser reports. Even though the Lasser reports initially may have been questionable, their accuracy has been borne out of the disbursement of the settlement funds. No error was committed in relying on the reports in approving the settlement.

Accordingly, the judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

Affirmed.

[8] Judgment ⚿829(3)

Federal court judgment dismissing securities fraud action under Securities Act and rule and pendent common-law claim concluded plaintiff as to any allegations of fraud, the standard of fraud under statute and rule being more lenient than that required to establish common-law fraud, but, since federal court had no jurisdiction over common-law claim after determination that plaintiff had failed to state federal claim, plaintiff was not concluded on any common-law theory except fraud and could allege gross negligence and waste by directors. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 10(b), 15 U.S.C.A. § 78j(b).

Hugh Corroon, and E. D. Griffenberg, Jr., of Potter Anderson & Corroon, Wilmington, for defendants Investors Diversified Services, Inc., and Investors Variable Payment Fund, Inc.; Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Irvine, and Davis, Polk & Wardwell, New York City, of counsel.

Howard M. Handelman, of Bayard, Brill & Handelman, Wilmington, for defendant Glen Alden Corp.

SHORT, Vice Chancellor:

This is a derivative suit brought on behalf of Glen Alden Corporation (Glen Alden), a Delaware corporation, by one of its stockholders, Penn Mart Realty Co. (Penn Mart). The individual defendants are the board of directors of Glen Alden. The corporate defendants are Investors Diversified Services, Inc. (IDS), a Minnesota corporation; Investors Variable Payment Fund, Inc. (Investors), a Nevada corporation; and Carter, Berlind & Weill, Inc. (Carter), a Delaware corporation. IDS is a securities broker-dealer and principal underwriter and investment manager of Investors, an open-end diversified investment company. Carter is a securities broker-dealer.

Penn Mart seeks to recover for Glen Alden damages which it says the latter suffered because of the individual defendants' gross negligence and waste of corporate assets. It charges the corporate defendants with knowingly assisting in the directors' alleged breaches of their fiduciary duty.

IDS and Investors have moved to dismiss the complaint as to them on the alternative theories that it either fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, or that the matter has been concluded between them and plaintiff by the decision of the Federal District Court for the Southern District of New York in Penn Mart Realty Company v. Becker, 300 F.Supp. 731 (S.D.N.Y.1969). This is the decision on that motion.

The controversy centers about the following series of events. Between February 1, 1968 and February 23, 1968 Glen Alden acquired, through Carter as broker, 92,700 shares of common stock of Schenley Industries, Inc., in open market transactions on the New York Stock Exchange. On February 8, 1968 a meeting, arranged by Carter, was held between Glen Alden and representatives of IDS and Carter. Penn Mart says that at this meeting and thereafter Glen Alden disclosed to IDS and Carter inside information concerning its affairs, its subsidiaries and other companies in which it has an interest.

On March 14, 1968, Glen Alden sold to Investors the block of 92,700 shares of Schenley common stock which it had acquired during the previous month. The sale was made through Carter as broker in a New York Stock Exchange transaction at a market price of $63 per share.

On March 20, 1968, Glen Alden bought from Lewis S. Rosenstiel 945, 126 shares of Schenley common stock at a price of $80 351 per share (an aggregate purchase price of $75,610,080). On the following day Glen Alden announced its plans to make a tender offer to purchase all of the outstanding shares of Schenley common stock, at a price substantially equivalent to or in excess of $80 per share, payable partly in cash and partly in Glen Alden debentures.

Penn Mart claims that at the time of the February 8 meeting, Glen Alden knew of its plan to acquire the Rosenstiel shares and to make the tender offer, and that those plans were disclosed to IDS. Plaintiff says that Glen Alden's directors were grossly negligent and breached their fiduciary duties when, knowing that they would soon be purchasing the Rosenstiel shares at a price of $80 per share and would be offering to purchase all outstanding Schenley common at that same price, they made the March 14 sale to Investors at the considerably lower price of $63 per share, a difference of $17 per share or approximately $1,700,000 in the aggregate.

[1] I consider first the defendants' motion under Chancery Rule 12(b)(6), del.C.Ann., to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim. In considering such a motion, all inferences must be construed in favor of the plaintiff, and the complaint may not be dismissed unless it appears to a reasonable certainty that plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Jefferson Chemical Company v. Mobay Chemical Company Del.Ch., 253 A.2d 512 (1969). It is against this standard that the theory of plaintiff's case against defendants must be tested.

[2][3] Penn Mart argues that the Glen Alden directors were grossly negligent, wasted corporate assets, and therefore breached their fiduciary duty, by selling a corporate asset (the stock) to Investors at a price greatly less than what they knew, and had in fact determined, to be its true worth. Both Investors and IDS knew, says Penn Mart, that they were dealing with fiduciaries, knew the true worth of the asset through their inside information, and nevertheless aided the directors in the breach of their duties. Thus, asserts Penn Mart, IDS and Investors are liable to the beneficiary of the fiduciary relationship, the corporation. The legal theory is sound. The directors of a corporation stand in a fiduciary relationship to the corporation's shareholders. Cahall v. Lofland, 12 Del.Ch. 299, 114 A. 224 (1921). And one who knowingly joins with any fiduciary, including corporate officials, in a breach of his obligation is liable to the beneficiaries of the trust relationship. Bogart, Trust and Trustees, s 901. Whatley v. Wood,157 Colo. 552, 404 P.2d 537 (1965); Adams v. Smith, 275 Ala. 142, 153 So.2d 221 (1963); Cachules v. 116 E. 57th Street, Inc., 125 N.Y.S.2d 97 (Sup.1953). Cf. Baker v. Baker, 122 Misc. 757, 204 N.Y.S. 11 (1924), aff'd 212 App.Div. 850, 207 N.Y.S. 809 (Mem.).

In order to make out its case, Penn Mart must allege (1) the existence of a fiduciary relationship, (2) a breach of the fiduciary's duty, and (3) knowing participation in that breach by the defendants. Bogart, Supra s 901.

Defendants claim that the plaintiff must allege either that 'the IDS--Glen Alden negotiations were not conducted at arms length (or) that IDS exerted an influence over the directors sufficient to infect their action with vitiating conflict of interest.' They argue that because Penn Mart has made no such allegations of fraud or selfdealing (or is barred from making them under the doctrines of res judicata or collateral estoppel), it has failed to state a good cause of action.

[4] That argument cannot prevail. Fraud and self-dealing are not the only ways in which corporate directors may breach their fiduciary duty; they may also breach that duty by being grossly negligent or by wasting corporate assets. Fletcher, Cyclopedia Corporations s 1011. See Adams v. Smith, Supra, and Cachules v. 116 352 E. 57th Street, Inc., Supra. This is what Penn Mart has alleged, and the necessary elements are therefore made out.

[5][6] It is true that the directors are accorded a presumption of having acted in good faith and in the interests of the stockholders, and may also avail themselves of the benefit of the business judgment rule. But the ultimate effect of those doctrines upon the directors' liability is not, as defendants concede in their briefs, the matter here to be decided. I cannot say that those doctrines and the fact that the sale to Investors was made at market price establish as a matter of law that there was no breach of the directors' duty, and the question is not otherwise ripe for decision.

I am not persuaded by defendants' argument that an ultimate decision of liability as to them in this case would cause an intolerable conflict between their fiduciary duty to their own shareholders (in obtaining the best price for stock purchased) and their duty to refrain from participating in another's breach of fiduciary duty. For purposes of this motion, plaintiff's allegations must be taken as true, and the circumstances they portray show no such fiduciary conflict.

[7] I am therefore not satisfied that plaintiff would not under any state of facts provable in support of its claim be entitled of relief. Therefore, the motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) must be denied.

I now consider defendants' argument that plaintiff is barred from asserting this claim by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel as a result of the district court's opinion in Penn Mart Realty Company v. Becker, Supra. In that case, plaintiff advanced two claims. The first was a federal cause of action brought under s 10(b) of the Securities Act of 1934. 15 U.S.C. s 78j(b), and Rule 10b--5, 17 C.F.R. 240 10--5. The second was a common law claim, joined with the federal claim under the doctrine of pendent jurisdiction.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The district court dismissed that complaint, holding that plaintiff had failed to make out a federal cause of action under Rule 10b--5. Because the standard of fraud under Rule 10b--5 is more lenient than that required to establish common law fraud, it follows that the parties are certainly concluded as to any allegations of fraud. See II Loss, Securities Regulation 1019.

[8] When the district court found that plaintiff had failed to state a cause of action under Rule 10b--5 (the federal claim), it followed that it had no jurisdiction over the common law claim. See United Mine Workers of America v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966). Plaintiff therefore could not have been concluded as to any theory at common law, except as to any based upon fraud.

The result is that plaintiff is indeed barred from any assertions of fraud as to these defendants but is free to advance other theories of liability in this court. This it has done, its theory being based upon gross negligence and waste.

Defendants' motion to dismiss is therefore denied.

Nos. 474, 475, Dockets 71-1332, 71-1380.

Argued Jan. 27, 1972.
Decided March 7, 1972.

Stockholder's derivative action for violations of federal securities laws and for recovery under state law. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York entered summary judgment for defendants, 274 F.Supp. 253. The Court of Appeals reversed and remanded, 391 F.2d 965. On remand, the District Court dismissed pendent state claims, 302 F.Supp. 1174, unless complaint was amended in certain material respects. Thereafter, the District Court, Sylvester J. Ryan, J., entered order approving settlement over objection of plaintiff and other stockholders, and they appealed. The Court of Appeals, Friendly, Chief Judge, held that settlement should not have been approved over opposition of plaintiff when there was doubt whether there had been truly adversary discovery prior to stipulation of settlement and plaintiff was afforded no opportunity for any thereafter.

Reversed and remanded.

Abraham I. Markowitz, pro se.

Before FRIENDLY, Chief Judge, and ANDERSON and MANSFIELD, Circuit Judges.

FRIENDLY, Chief Judge:

This appeal raises questions about the settlement of a stockholder's derivative action over the objection of the plaintiff. While we decline to lay down a rule that this may never be done, we hold that the procedures here followed did not adequately protect the right of plaintiff, and of other objecting stockholders, to develop a record which might show that the settlement was improvident.

The transaction here at issue, the twostep sale to Mines Incorporated, in 1951 and 1953, by the Tonopah Mining Company of Nevada (Tonopah) of the stock of Tonopah Nicaragua Company (Tonopah Nicaragua), owner of the Rosita copper mine, is no stranger to the courts of this circuit. The history of an earlier action attacking the sale, Hawkins v. Lindsley, brought in 1957, in the District Court for the Southern District of New York, is recounted in Judge Swan's opinion for this court, 327 F.2d 356 (2 Cir. 1964). It suffices here to say that a second amended complaint in that action charged that the sale violated both state law of fiduciary obligations and the Investment Company Act of 1940; that in September, 1958, Judge Noonan dismissed the claim under the Investment Company Act and required the furnishing of $50,000 of security pursuant to § 61-b of the New York General Corporation Law (McKinney's Consol.Laws, c. 23 Supp. 1971-72); and that when plaintiff failed to post security, Judge Ryan, on July 27, 1961, ordered dismissal with prejudice. Plaintiff failed to take a timely appeal, and other efforts to vacate Judge Ryan's order of dismissal were rejected in the opinion cited.

In February, 1965, plaintiff Saylor began this action, also in the District Court for the Southern District of New York. Federal jurisdiction was based on violations of the federal securities laws, and state claims were alleged merely as pendent. Defendants responded by way of a motion for summary judgment on the basis that this new action was barred by res judicata and by the applicable statute of limitations. Judge Cooper granted the motion and dismissed the complaint on the ground of res judicata; in addition, while not purporting to decide the defense of limitations, he suggested that this presented a question which, if plaintiff appropriately amended his complaint, would create a triable issue of fact, 274 F.Supp. 253 (S.D.N.Y.1967). We reversed on the ground that the dismissal of the Hawkins action for failure to post security was not "on the merits" for purposes of res judicata; we indicated agreement with Judge Cooper's statement as to the defense of limitations and remanded for further proceedings with respect to that issue. 391 F.2d 965 (2 Cir. 1968). [FN1] In an opinion on remand, Judge 898 Cooper determined that with respect to the federal claims there were, indeed factual questions whether the applicable statute of limitations had run, and therefore denied summary judgment on that ground; however, with regard to the pendent state claims, he granted summary judgment on the basis of the running of the applicable limitations period unless within thirty days of the court's order plaintiff amended his complaint in certain material respects, 302 F.Supp. 1174 (S.D.N.Y.1969). [FN2] The defendants filed their answer on January 9, 1970, denying most of the allegations in the complaint and setting up a number of affirmative defenses.

FN1. The opinion does not discuss in terms the effect of Judge Noonan's dismissal of the claim under the Investment Company Act in Hawkins in 1958. Apparently the court proceeded on the ground that there could have been no true "dismissal" of what was merely an alternative theory of recovery for the same operative facts, see 391 F.2d at 969, n. 6, and that the only final judgment in the Hawkins case was that entered by Judge Ryan in 1961 for failure to post security. Judge Noonan's order was not appealable, see 327 F.2d at 358 n. 2, and for that reason also would not have res judicata effect. Cf. ALI, Restatement of Judgments § 69 (1942).

FN2. The record contains no indication of any amendment to the complaint being filed within the time stipulated or at any time thereafter.

[1] On September 24, 1970, Mr. Markowitz, "attorney for plaintiff," entered into a stipulation of settlement with the attorneys for the various individual and corporate defendants and the attorneys for Tonopah, which had previously been dissolved. This provided for the payment to Wilmington Trust Company, which a Delaware court had appointed to receive and distribute any assets of Tonopah that could not be distributed in liquidation before March 31, 1965, of $250,000 less the costs of notice of the settlement hearing and the fees and disbursements of plaintiff's counsel. Although there is a dispute when agreement on the settlement was actually reached, it is not asserted that plaintiff Saylor at any time authorized it or that Markowitz or anyone else advised him of its terms until November 4, 1970.

On that date Judge Ryan had signed an order setting a hearing on the settlement for December 1, 1970. The notice approved for transmission to stockholders contained no intelligible reference to the most important allegation of the complaint, namely, that defendants had intended the sales to Mines Incorporated to constitute only a step in an ultimate transfer to defendant La Luz Mines, Limited. [FN3] The notice informed stockholders that transcripts of depositions could be read at the office of the clerk of the district court, and that exhibits could be inspected at the offices of the attorneys. The notice indicated that Mr. Markowitz would apply for an allowance of $83,000 and expenses of $1,313.73. After deduction of these sums, which were subsequently allowed, distribution to Tonopah stockholders would be something less than $166,000, or about 19 cents a share, as against the many millions of dollars in damages alleged to have been suffered. Of this amount, over $109,000 would be paid to the unserved defendant, Falconbridge Nickel Mines, Limited, which held some 74% of Tonopah's shares at the time of the latter's dissolution; the balance, some $57,000, would go to the independent stockholders.

> FN3. We intend no criticism of the district judge on this score; the form of the notice was prepared by counsel.

At the hearing on December 1, 1970, Mr. Markowitz announced that he appeared "on behalf of the plaintiff." This elicited a response by Lillian Eichman, who had been of counsel in the Hawkins action, that she appeared on behalf of Mr. Saylor in opposition to the settlement. Avrom S. Fischer announced he represented another opposing stockholder, Roseanne Horn, and was of counsel to Mrs. Eichman. Gerard J. O'Brien appeared on behalf of another objecting stockholder, Michael J. McLaughlin. McLaughlin, Saylor, and Fischer, on Miss Horn's behalf, filed affidavits in opposition. Mr. Markowitz made an extended statement in support of the settlement, 899 which was seconded by Mr. Jacobi, counsel for the defendants, and Mr. Singer, counsel for Tonopah, who reported approval of the settlement by Wilmington Trust Company. After briefly hearing Mr. Fischer and Mr. O'Brien, the judge gave them two weeks in which to submit further papers. McLaughlin and Fischer filed extensive affidavits; Markowitz submitted a reply affidavit. On January 14, 1971, the court issued an opinion approving the settlement, [1970-71 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. ¶92,222, at 90,410 (S.D.N.Y.1971); this was followed by the order here under appeal.

As earlier stated, there is a dispute about the time when the settlement was actually reached. McLaughlin's second affidavit stated that Markowitz informed him on June 4, 1969, of a meeting to be held the next day to discuss settlement; that "on Aug. 20, 1969, [Markowitz] informed me of the present offer, which I refused. Mr. Saylor soon thereafter advised me that he had similarly told Mr. Markowitz that he does not agree to any settlement, such as the present proposal." Fischer's second affidavit pointed to a letter to Miss Horn, dated October 29, 1969, from a member of the firm representing defendants, which states in part:

> Without going into details as to all the procedural matters that have taken place in the meantime, I can tell you that we have been in active negotiations with counsel for the plaintiff and today agreed on a settlement of the case. It will be necessary to have examinations of several people because the entire settlement will be subject to approval of the court and the court will have to be convinced that it is in the best interest of the stockholders.

Fischer also relied on the nature of the three depositions taken by Markowitz and filed with the District Court, which, we must say, impress us as designed to justify a settlement rather than as an aggressive effort to ferret out facts helpful to prosecution of the suit, as evidence that a settlement had been agreed upon by the time they were taken. In contrast, Markowitz asserted in his reply affidavit that on August 20, 1969, he did not inform McLaughlin of defendants' offer but essentially of the prospects of negotiations; that on September 27, 1969, he called Saylor to advise him of the negotiations and the weakness of plaintiff's case; that he and counsel for Lindsley did believe on October 28, 1969, they had agreed on a settlement, but this subsequently fell through because there was in fact no agreement on the extent to which Falconbridge as a stockholder of Tonopah should share in the proceeds; that subsequent negotiations foundered; and that on January 15, 1970, he sent McLaughlin a letter which he claims informed McLaughlin that settlement negotiations were halted. [FN4] We find it unnecessary to resolve this dispute or to direct the district court to do so, for even on the basis of Markowitz' version of the relevant events we cannot conclude that enough was done here to protect the rights of the stockholder plaintiff.

> FN4. The pertinent part of the letter read:
> I have concluded all discussions of settlement and am proceeding with pre- trial proceedings. In that connection, the defendants are supplying me with documents that I have requested and depositions of defendants and others are being scheduled.
> Everything turns on the meaning of "concluded." Plaintiff says it means "finished." Markowitz, relying on the reference to "pre-trial proceedings", contends it means "broken off". Plaintiff counters that the October 29 letter of defendants' counsel quoted in the text contemplated the taking of depositions prior to a hearing on a settlement.

[2][3] We are willing to go along with appellees and hold, despite the seeming incongruity, that the assent of the plaintiff (or plaintiffs) who brought a derivative stockholder's action is not essential to a settlement; [FN5] a contrary view 900 would put too much power in a wishful thinker or a spite monger to thwart a result that is in the best interests of the corporation and its stockholders. On the other hand, despite the fact that the usual plaintiff in a derivative stockholder's action does not give his attorney the help normally furnished by a client, we are not willing to go to the other extreme and accept the view that the attorney for the plaintiff is the dominus litis and the plaintiff only a key to the courthouse door dispensable once entry has been effected. The attorney remains bound to keep his client fully informed of settlement negotiations, to advise the client before signing a stipulation of settlement on his behalf, and, if the client has objected, to inform the court of this when presenting the settlement, so that it may devise procedures whereby the plaintiff, with a new attorney, may himself conduct further inquiry if so advised. [FN6] We find the record before us inadequate to sustain the conclusion that this obligation was met here-whatever the timing of the initial agreement in principle on the settlement. As has been said in an article much relied upon by appellee Markowitz, "As a practical matter, derivative settlements concluded over the head of the complaining stockholders are extremely rare and should be so." Haudek, The Settlement and Dismissal of Stockholders' Actions-Part II: The Settlement, 23 Sw.L.J. 765, 771 (1969).

> FN5. See 3B Moore, Federal Practice ¶ 23.1.24 [2], at 23.1-407 (1969); 2 Barron & Holtzoff, Federal Practice and Procedure § 570, at 335. (Wright ed. 1961). Denicke v. Anglo California Nat'l Bank, 141 F.2d 285 (9 Cir.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 739, 65 S.Ct. 44, 89 L.Ed. 592 (1944), the case usually cited for this proposition, supports it only to a limited extent. There the corporation, the real party in interest, had come under new management, which made a settlement with the defendants and secured court approval of it over the objection of the stockholder plaintiff. Settlement of a derivative action by the real party in interest over the plaintiff's objection is quite different from settlement by the plaintiff's own attorney over the plaintiff's objection. Moreover, it appears that in Denicke the corporation attempted to keep the stockholder plaintiff informed of the settlement negotiations. 141 F.2d at 286. Although in this case the Wilmington Trust Company could arguably be cast in the role of the settling real party in interest, we are not inclined to do that here since the statements made at the hearing and the affidavit submitted by its attorney in support of the settlement do not convey the impression that it either actively participated in the negotiations or reviewed the settlement in depth.

> FN6. In this connection we find it rather significant that although the stipulation of settlement was signed on September 24, 1970, Mr. Markowitz did not formally advise his client of the settlement until November 4, after Judge Ryan had signed the order directing a hearing and approving the form of notice. It was thus largely his own fault that, as claimed in his affidavit of December 17, 1970, "[he] had no knowledge of Mr. Saylor's objection to the settlement until the Hearing before the Court." What is more important, prompt advice of the signature of the stipulation to Mr. Saylor would have allowed the latter to communicate his opposition to Mr. Markowitz and the Court before the notice of the hearing was approved; if he had done so, the notice should have stated this and a greater amount of opposition might have developed.

[4] There can be no blinking at the fact that the interests of the plaintiff in a stockholder's derivative suit and of his attorney are by no means congruent. While, in a general sense, both are interested in maximizing the recovery this is only a half-truth. Even apart from special considerations which, as has been noted, may cause special divergence of interest in cases where extremely large amounts are at stake, see Haudek, supra, 23 Sw.L.J. at 768 & n. 166, there is a difference in every case. The plaintiff's financial interest is in his share of the total recovery less what may be awarded to counsel, simpliciter; counsel's financial interest is in the amount of the award to him less the time and effort needed to produce it. A relatively small settlement may well produce an allowance bearing a higher ratio to the cost of the work than a much larger recovery obtained only after extensive discovery, a long trial and an appeal. The risks in proceeding to trial vary even more essentially. For the plaintiff, a defendant's judgment may mean simply the defeat of an expectation, often of relatively small 901 amount; for his lawyer it can mean the loss of years of costly effort by himself and his staff. In this respect a derivative action is in a quite different posture from a personal injury action conducted on a contingent basis. We say this not in criticism but in simple recognition of the facts of class action life. While recognition of this conflict of interest should not mandate rejection of a settlement opposed by the plaintiff but represented by the attorney to be in the best interest of all stockholders, it does require the court to exercise particular care to see to it that the non-assenting plaintiff has had a full opportunity to develop the basis for his objection.

In many suits which have been prepared almost to the point of trial, the pretrial discovery, conducted when the objective of plaintiff's attorney was still to develop the strongest possible basis for a recovery, may be entirely adequate to that end. But that is not the case here. Two of the defendants, La Luz and Falconbridge, [FN7] had not even been served. The only depositions taken were those of defendants Zeckhausen and McWilliams and of H. S. McGowan, president of La Luz. Naturally these gentlemen were not disposed to assist plaintiff in sustaining his theories of recovery; helpful testimony from them could be obtained only by confronting them with documents they would find difficult to explain. Yet there had been little discovery of documentary evidence save of such generally selfserving instruments as minutes and annual reports, although even these proved valuable to plaintiff as we shall see; there had been no attempt to find the kind of inculpatory correspondence that so often reposes in corporate files even for the long time here involved, and refutes, or at least casts doubt upon, exculpatory testimony by the defendants of the sort here given. [FN8]

FN7. Ventures, Limited, which is nominally a defendant, also was not served. However, it was merged into defendant Falconbridge in 1962, before this action was instituted.

FN8. The annals of antitrust litigation and, indeed, of stockholder's derivative actions include many such instances, including the "destroy all copies" sort.

Despite all this, we ought not to take up the time of the district court and the parties with a remand if, on the basis of undisputed facts, a substantial recovery here was hopeless or nearly so. We do not think, however, this can fairly be said on the record before us. We shall limit our discussion to what we consider plaintiff's most promising theory-that the defendants, or at least some of them, in obtaining the SEC exemptions from § 17(a) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 which were required for the sale of the stock of Tonopah Nicaragua to Mines Incorporated, had concealed that the true beneficiary of the transfers was always intended to be La Luz, [FN9] which was in a peculiarly advantageous position to develop the mine economically, and thus the consideration was unfairly low.

FN9. La Luz, like Mines Incorporated, was an "affiliated person" of Tonopah within § 2(a) (3) of the Investment Company Act, see infra.

In order to understand the problem, some knowledge of the intricate intercorporate relations is needed. Plaintiff's complaint alleges the following facts in this respect: In 1950 Ventures, Limited, owned 13.48% of the voting stock of Tonopah, a registered investment company; by 1953 the proportion had increased to 26.25%, presumptively control under § 2(a) (9) of the 1940 Act. Defendant Lindsley, individually and through defendant Northfield Mines, Inc., owned more than 34% of the voting stock of Ventures. That company owned in excess of 54% of the voting stock of Frobisher Ltd., of which Mines Incorporated was a wholly owned subsidiary. Also Ventures owned more than 69% of the voting stock of La Luz, which owned and operated a gold and silver mine in Nicaragua only thirty miles away from Tonopah Nicaragua's Rosita copper mine and had developed a hydro-electric power plant at a site which was apparently the 902 only feasible one in the area and was even closer to the Rosita mine than to its own.

In November, 1950, Tonopah applied, pursuant to § 17(b) of the 1940 Act, for an exemption permitting the sale of 60% of the stock of Tonopah Nicaragua to Mines for $210,000. This was necessary because

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Ventures' ownership, then 13.48%, of the voting stock of Tonopah and of some 54% of the voting stock of Frobisher made Tonopah and Mines affiliated persons within § 2(a) (3). The application recited unsuccessful efforts in 1948-49 to sell the Rosita mine at a net price of $297,000, and a similarly unsuccessful effort early in 1950 to sell it for $275,000. There appears never to have been doubt that the Rosita mine possessed very substantial copper reserves; the problem was the cost of mining and refining, due to the mine's remote jungle location and the complex nature of the Rosita copper ore. The application was twice amended, apparently on the insistence of the SEC, to incorporate further detail, including a report by an engineering firm, Singmaster & Breyer, bringing up to date a 1943 report by A. Wheeler, which showed that the cost of producing a pound of refined copper by a process involving the use of a flotation concentrator, a reverberatory furnace, and converters would be 31.6 cents as against a domestic copper price, as of February 21, 1951, of 24.5 cents, and would require investment of $12,000,000, several times Tonopah's total resources. On April 16, 1951, the SEC granted the exemption.

In January, 1953, Tonopah filed an application with the SEC for a § 17(b) exemption for the sale of the remaining 40% of the stock of Tonopah Nicaragua to Mines for $65,000 plus 10,000 shares of common stock of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Limited having a market value of some $200,000, more or less, in Canadian funds. Defendant Lindsley was president of Falconbridge, and Ventures owned 61.1% of its stock. Just how Mines came into ownership of the 10,000 shares was not explained. This application, too, was twice amended. One amendment included a new report from Singmaster & Breyer showing that "the most feasible process," still the flotation concentrator, reverberatory furnace and converters recommended by Wheeler a decade before, would now require a capital investment in excess of $13,500,000 and would result in a cost per pound well above current copper prices. The SEC granted the exemption in November, 1953.

All of the Tonopah Nicaragua stock was transferred from Mines to its parent, Frobisher, on February 11, 1954. Frobisher then entered into agreement, dated September 21, 1954, to sell the Tonopah Nicaragua stock-and thus the Rosita mine-to La Luz for $515,907.65. Evidently an agreement in principle had been made much earlier, since the minutes of a La Luz shareholders' meeting on May 26, 1954, recited that half the price had already been paid. The mine was conveyed in January, 1955. The refining method evaluated by Wheeler and by Singmaster and Breyer being economically impracticable, La Luz apparently devoted considerable effort to the development of an electrolytic refining process for the Rosita ore. That process, however, was also eventually rejected because of excessive capital requirements and too narrow a profit margin. Ultimately, it was decided not to smelt and refine the ore at the mine site, but rather to use a leach precipitation flotation process to produce a copper concentrate which was then shipped overseas for smelting and refining. The operating cost of producing a pound of refined copper by this process was estimated to be 22 cents by H. S. McGowan in 1957, and the capital cost to La Luz was in fact only some $7,500,000. Acquisition of the mine was hugely profitable to La Luz; objector McLaughlin asserts that La Luz realized net operating profits from it of $38,660,000 between 1959 and 1969.

Although the 1950-51 exemption application to the SEC contained no reference to La Luz, that company's report to stockholders for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1951, issued on March 12, 1952, stated, in explanation of a small balance sheet item entitled "Rosita property 903 . . . $26,763.62," that this "represents expenditures made by La Luz investigating a high-grade copper property within thirty miles of your gold mine in Nicaragua. Your Board considers this property as having great promise and has joined with Mines Inc. and Northfield to purchase a 60% interest in the Tonopah Nicaragua company, who are the owners." The second application, of January, 1953, made no reference to any such joinder by La Luz in the ownership of Tonopa Nicaragua, although the first amendment, dated July 7, 1953, said that if the sale were effected and the Rosita property profitably operated, "Tonopah would share in the profits as it is presently contemplated that a Management Contract would be made with La Luz Mines Ltd.," in which Tonopah had an 8% stock interest, "for the operation of the Rosita property." La Luz' annual report for the year ended September 30, 1954, told of the contract for the acquisition of the Rosita mine mentioned above and added:

> We consider the possibility of a successful operation on the Rosita property as very encouraging. Calculations based on ore now blocked out indicate 3,582,000 tons of ore averaging 2.91% copper and .027 ozs. of gold per ton. At an estimated price of 30 cents per pound the gross value of copper content (208 million pounds) works out at over $62,000,000.

Research work, carried on for several years, indicates that electrolytic cathode copper can be produced at a cost not exceeding 15 cents per pound at the plant. This cathode copper is readily marketable at a trifle less than the wire bar price-a considerable amount of the gold will be recovered as a by- product.
Electric power is an important factor in the proposed process and the possibilities of expanding the La Luz hydroelectric system to produce the additional power for Rosita is being investigated. Results obtained so far indicate that the power plant expansion is feasible and at not too great a cost.

None of this history explicitly refutes defendants' claim that, at the time the SEC granted the first exemption application in April, 1951, there was no thought that La Luz, also an "affiliated person" of Tonopah within § 2(a) (3), would become the owner of the Rosita mine, although La Luz' statement of joint ownership in its 1951 annual report at least creates some basis for scepticism. In any event, some explanation would surely seem required why no mention was made of La Luz in the application of January, 1953, and why it was characterized merely as a prospective operator in the amendment of July 7, 1953. What puts a somewhat sinister color on what may have been merely an innocent mistake, if even that, is the possibility that La Luz ownership of a nearby hydroelectric power plant may have invalidated the calculations submitted to convince the SEC that the Rosita mine could not be profitably operated at that time, and that some of the directors of Tonopah or other persons having responsibility for the applications knew not only this but also the actual extent of development of an economically feasible refining process for the Rosita ore. [FN10] If either of these should be true, the fact that Lindsley and Northfield had only a slightly larger proportional interest in La Luz than in Frobisher would be no answer; the SEC, in all likelihood, would have insisted on a considerably higher price as a condition to permitting the sale. If in its applications Tonopah made "any untrue statement of a material fact" or omitted "to state therein any fact necessary in order to prevent the 904 statements made therein, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, from being materially misleading," this would be "unlawful" under § 34(b) of the Investment Company Act and would provide a basis for imposing civil liability on those who were responsible for the statements or omissions or who profited therefrom with knowledge of the falsity. See Brown v. Bullock, 194 F.Supp. 207, 231 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 294 F.2d 415 (2 Cir. 1961) (en banc); J. I. Case Co. v. Borak, 377 U.S. 426, 84 S.Ct. 1555, 12 L.Ed.2d 423 (1964); Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375, 90 S.Ct. 616, 24 L.Ed.2d 593 (1970).

> FN10. By letter dated October 8, 1953, L. H. Bregy on behalf of Mines Incorporated informed the SEC that the company was working to find a "better and more economical method of treatment" for the Rosita ore. It can hardly be said, however, that he was encouraging about the prospects of success; without providing any details of the process under development, he said, "It can be definitely stated that a commercial process has not been developed at the present time, and that it will take a minimum of two or three years to do so, if it can be done at all."

We do not mean any of this to be taken either as indicating that plaintiff in fact has a winning case on the theory here discussed or that others of his theories may not have promise, at least as against some of the defendants. We have felt compelled to go this far into the merits only to show that the settlement should not have been approved over his opposition when there is such doubt whether there had been truly adversary discovery prior to the stipulation of settlement and he was afforded no opportunity for any thereafter.

[5] We recognize that since "[t]he very purpose of a compromise is to avoid the trial of sharply disputed issues and to dispense with wasteful litigation", the court must not turn the settlement hearing "into a trial or a rehearsal of the trial"; and that the court "is concerned with the likelihood of success or failure and ought, therefore, to avoid any actual determination of the merits." See Haudek, supra, 23 Sw.L.J. at 795 (footnotes omitted). Still, in passing on the settlement of a derivative suit, as on a compromise in a proceeding under Ch. X of the Bankruptcy Act, the judge must have "apprised himself of all facts necessary for an intelligent and objective opinion of the probabilities of ultimate success should the claim be litigated." Protective Committee for Independent Stockholders of TMT Trailer Ferry, Inc. v. Anderson, 390 U.S. 414, 424-425, 88 S.Ct. 1157, 1163, 20 L.Ed.2d 1 (1968). We cannot say that, particularly in light of the reasoned objections of the plaintiff, as well as of other stockholders, the court did that here. No one would think of applying to the presentation of plaintiff's former attorney at the hearing in this case the characterization of "thoroughness, thoughtfulness and disinterested judgment," which Judge Wyzanski used in approving the settlement in Cherner v. Transitron Electronic Corp., 221 F.Supp. 48, 51 (D.Mass.1963). [FN11] The plaintiff, through his new counsel, and the other objectors should be allowed to delve somewhat more deeply into the merits of this action; whether this should be done by further discovery, or by taking evidence in open court, or by both, is for the district court to determine in the exercise of sound discretion. While a remand may well result in renewed approval of the settlement, [905 FN12] this should come only after thorough consideration of what the parties will present although "less than a trial." See Isaacs v. Forer, 39 Del.Ch. 105, 159 A.2d 295, 296 (1960).

FN11. We are not overly impressed with the observation, [1970-71 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. ¶ 92,922, at 90,415, that plaintiff would face serious difficulties of proof because the only living members of the Tonopah board involved in the transaction, at suit are defendants McWilliams and Lindsley; that the latter is old, ill and almost deaf; and that because of Tonopah's dissolution in 1965 many of its documents cannot be located. Our recital shows that plaintiff was not far from making a prima facie case solely on the basis of the few documents that were discovered; if the distance should be narrowed, for example, by further discovery of documents or by testimony of mining engineers that the process ultimately adopted was known all along, and that, particularly with the power resources of La Luz available, the Rosita mine had much better possibilities than were represented to the SEC, the handicaps arising from unavailability of Tonopah's directors would weigh more heavily on the defendants than on the plaintiff. Furthermore, whatever the state of Tonopah's files, there is no indication that those of Frobisher, Mines, La Luz, and the now merged Falconbridge and Ventures are not available.

FN12. Judge Ryan gave little weight to the defense of limitations, and it was not seriously pressed on appeal. Those supporting the settlement are free to give consideration to the questions raised by Judge Cooper in his 1969 opinion and to make more of the defense on remand if they legitimately can. See generally Note, The Statute of Limitations in Stockholders' Derivative Suits against Directors, 39 Colum.L.Rev. 842 (1939).

The order is reversed and the cause remanded for further consistent proceedings.

Appellate Court of Illinois,
First District, Fifth Division.

Eli STEINBERG and Gershon Sontag, on Behalf of Themselves and All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiffs-Appellees,
v.
SYSTEM SOFTWARE ASSOCIATES, INC., Roger E. Covey, Terence H. Osborne, Terry E. Notari and Joseph Skadra, Defendants-Appellees (Albert Bachorowski, Michael Connor IRA Rollover, Lucian B. Cox III, Catherine Drozd, Dennis W. Corbin, Retsky Family Limited Partnership, Hung A. Pham, Nathan Schleifer, Jaspal Singh, Ravinder Singh, Donald Sorota and Kim Walter, Objectors and Petitioners and Intervenors-Appellants).

No. 1-97-3952.

June 18, 1999.

Stock purchaser filed a class action complaint against corporation, seeking damages for alleged violations of the Securities Law, common law fraud, the Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act, and negligence. The Circuit Court, Cook County, Lester D. Foreman, J., dismissed following settlement, and denied objectors' petition to intervene. Objectors appealed. The Appellate Court, Theis, J., held that: (1) exclusion of objectors from settlement negotiations did not render the settlement unfair; (2) trial court did not misconstrue its role when it approved the settlement; and (3) trial court's analysis of the settlement did not erroneously exclude defendant corporation's current, improved financial condition.

Affirmed.

Exclusion of objectors from settlement negotiations in securities litigation did not render the settlement unfair as a matter of law, despite objectors' assertion that, by virtue of their status under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PSLRA) as lead plaintiffs in parallel federal litigation, they should have been apprised of the settlement negotiations before release of the notice of the proposed settlement, so that they could have ensured that the settlement was the product of adequate representation and the adversarial process, that the settlement class and release were precisely and accurately defined, and that notice was proper. Trial court's analysis of a proposed settlement in a securities class action did not erroneously exclude defendant corporation's current, improved financial condition; plaintiffs, defendants, and objectors all admitted that corporation's financial condition at the time of the settlement negotiation was dire, record indicated that corporation's ability to obtain financing was directly linked to its ability to resolve the claims at issue, and settlement agreement hedged against the possibility that corporation's financial condition might improve upon recapitalization by including 100,000 shares of corporation's stock as part of the settlement amount.

Federal class action plaintiffs who had chosen to pursue securities claims in federal court were not necessary parties to a parallel State court action, and thus, denial of their petition to intervene was not an abuse of discretion.

Justice THEIS delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff-appellee, Eli Steinberg [FN1] (Steinberg), filed a class action complaint in the circuit court of Cook County, Illinois, on January 8, 1997, against defendants-appellees, System Software Associates, Inc. (SSA), and certain of its officers (Roger E. Covey, Terence H. Osborne, Terry E. Notari, and Joseph Skadra). Steinberg, on behalf of a class of purchasers of SSA common stock, sought damages for alleged violations of the Illinois Securities Law of 1953, as amended (815 ILCS 5/1 et seq. (West 1996)), common law fraud, the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act (815 ILCS 505/2 (West 1996)), and negligence. Steinberg's complaint stemmed from SSA's use of allegedly overly aggressive accounting practices and revenue recognition policies.

FN1. This action was brought on behalf of a class of purchasers of the common stock of System Software Associates, Inc., during the period from November 21, 1994, through January 7, 1997. At the time of the settlement, plaintiff Sontag withdrew from the case, and the stipulation was entered on behalf of plaintiff Steinberg only.

The day after Steinberg's class action complaint was filed, the appellants, federal class action plaintiffs and objectors below to the circuit court class action settlement (the Objectors), filed a federal securities fraud class action against the same defendants in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, seeking damages based on essentially the same set of facts. [FN2] Defendants moved to dismiss the consolidated federal complaint and, pursuant to the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (the PSLRA) (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(b)(3)(B) (West 1997)), pretrial discovery in the federal court class action was automatically stayed. The Objectors now appeal from the final judgment of dismissal of the circuit court class action entered on September 30, 1997, and the circuit court's order of October 8, 1997, denying the Objectors' petition to intervene. We affirm.

FN2. The federal class period begins three months earlier and covers August 22, 1994, through January 7, 1997.

*161 BACKGROUND

Defendant SSA develops business information systems for large, industrial sector companies. An October 5, 1995, Wall Street Journal article disclosed that SSA's revenue recognition policies may have been "overly aggressive" in recording certain sales for which it had not yet been paid or on which payment might be withdrawn in the future. The day before Steinberg's complaint was filed, SSA announced that it was restating its revenues and earnings for fiscal years 1994 and 1995, as well as for the first three quarters of 1996.

While discovery was stayed in the federal court, plaintiffs in the circuit court filed discovery requests. In response to those requests, defendants produced approximately 20,000 pages of documents to plaintiff's counsel during April 1997. Documents were subpoenaed from SSA's accountant, Price Waterhouse, which produced approximately 40,000 pages of documents on April 2, 1997. Roger Covey, chairman and chief executive officer of SSA, and Joseph Skadra, chief financial officer of SSA, also gave confirmatory depositions, disclosing their financial condition. The discovery materials obtained in the circuit court class action were later made available to lead counsel in the federal class action.

Settlement discussions began between the parties to the state court class action suit. The parties, unable to reach an agreement, employed a mediator. The mediation resulted in an agreement in principal to a settlement. Pursuant to section 2-806 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure (735 ILCS 5/2-806 (West 1996)), the parties applied for an order approving settlement of the lawsuit in accordance with a settlement agreement dated June 26, 1997 (the Agreement).

Under the terms of the Agreement, SSA would pay the plaintiff class $1,700,000 in cash and interest accruing from May 29, 1997, to the date of deposit. Covey was to 712 181 contribute 100,000 shares of SSA stock with a guaranteed minimum worth of $5 per share. Therefore, the guaranteed minimum settlement value was $2,200,000. Following the settlement hearing, in September 1997, plaintiffs sold the SSA stock and converted it to cash at prices ranging from 12-7/8 to 13-1/8 per share. Thus, the value of the settlement ultimately exceeded $3 million.

On June 27, 1997, the circuit court entered an order certifying the class for settlement purposes and granting preliminary approval of the settlement set forth in the Agreement. By that order, the circuit court also provided that a settlement hearing be held on September 5, 1997, to determine whether the Agreement was fair, just, reasonable, adequate, in the best interest of the class, and should be approved. In addition, the circuit court's order of June 27, 1997, approved the notice *162 proposed, as to form and content, noted the manner by which class members were to request exclusion from the class, and specified that any member of the class may appear at the settlement hearing and show cause why settlement should not be approved.

By letter dated July 15, 1997, counsel for the defendants informed the judge presiding over the federal class action of the developments in the circuit court regarding settlement. Lead counsel in the federal action were also notified of the circuit court settlement by their receipt of a copy of that letter. Defendants were represented by the same counsel in circuit court and federal court.

Attached to defendants' circuit court brief, filed in support of the settlement, was a letter from the mediator to the presiding judge in the circuit court action, dated September 3, 1997. By his letter, the mediator noted that the case settled "after much give and take." The mediator further noted in the letter:

> "There can be no doubt that the financial condition of the company, over which the greater part of our time and effort was spent, and which was clearly, fully, and unmistakably established to the satisfaction of both sides, including that of the mediator, was a key factor in bringing this matter to a reasonable conclusion."

SSA'S FINANCIAL CONDITION

At the September 1997 settlement hearing, counsel for the Objectors noted his awareness of SSA's precarious financial condition at the time the settlement agreement was being negotiated. By affidavit attached to defendants' brief in support of final approval of the proposed settlement, Skadra, SSA's chief financial officer, attested to the truthfulness of the following statements regarding SSA's financial condition. In early 1997, SSA faced a serious liquidity crisis caused primarily by a lack of revenue and profitability over the immediately preceding five quarters and by the high debt-equity leverage in SSA's capital structure. Investment bankers involved in SSA's attempt to refinance expressed concern that the pending class actions could be resolved without a material impact on SSA's financial statement.

In the spring of 1997, while negotiations with plaintiffs were underway, SSA began negotiating with potential investors to accomplish the recapitalization of its balance sheet. During that time, SSA began negotiating for a refinancing with Bain Capital, Inc. (Bain), an investment banking group. Thereafter, other investment banking firms expressed interest in facilitating SSA's refinancing. Prior to the settlement hearing, SSA accomplished its refinancing, and its financial situation had improved significantly.

163 OBJECTIONS RAISED BEFORE THE CIRCUIT COURT

On August 22, 1997, the Objectors filed a petition to intervene in the circuit court suit. The Objectors maintained: (1) that their status as class members in the circuit court and as plaintiffs in the federal suit conferred upon them the "right to know fully all of the details of any negotiations leading to the proposed settlement"; (2) that they should be allowed to intervene to take discovery to protect their rights; and that (3) intervention was warranted as the representation of their interests by existing parties may be inadequate.

By accompanying motion also filed on August 22, 1997, the Objectors complained the proponents of the settlement had failed to *713 182 show that the compromise was fair and reasonable under each of the factors delineated in City of Chicago v. Korshak, 206 Ill.App.3d 968, 972, 151 Ill.Dec. 797, 565 N.E.2d 68, 70 (1990) (the Korshak factors). The Korshak factors include: (1) the strength of the case for plaintiffs on the merits, balanced against the money or other relief offered in settlement; (2) the defendant's ability to pay; (3) the complexity, length and expense of further litigation; (4) the amount of opposition to the settlement; (5) the presence of collusion in reaching the settlement; (6) the reaction of members of the class to the settlement; (7) the opinion of competent counsel; and (8) the stage of the proceedings and amount of discovery completed. Korshak, 206 Ill.App.3d at 972, 151 Ill.Dec. 797, 565 N.E.2d at 70. Before the circuit court, as on appeal, the Objectors' various complaints of unfairness stemmed, in large part, from their interpretation of recent federal legislation governing class action securities litigation. Consequently, a brief explication is required in order to place the Objectors' arguments in context.

The Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, the PSLRA, raised the pleading burden for fraud (15 U.S.C.A. §§ 78u-4(b)(1), (b)(2) (West 1997)), imposed mandatory sanctions for frivolous pleadings and motions (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(c) (West 1997)), insulated certain projections and forecasts against claims of securities fraud (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-5 (West 1997)), and made it more difficult to establish joint and several liability for violations of certain federal securities laws (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(g) (West 1997)). The PSLRA also provides that discovery in a federal class action is automatically stayed upon the filing of a motion to dismiss (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u- 4(b)(3)(B) (West 1997)). In addition, under the PSLRA, the party with the largest financial interest is ordinarily entitled to become the lead plaintiff and selects the class attorney (15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(a)(3)(B)(iii) (West 1997)).

Shortly after promulgation of the PSLRA, the United States Supreme Court held in Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Epstein, 516 U.S. 367, 116 S.Ct. 873, 134 L.Ed.2d 6 (1996), 164 that state court class action settlements can release exclusive federal claims. However, under certain circumstances, state court class action settlements purporting to release the claims of federal class action plaintiffs are subject to collateral attack in federal court.

Following the Supreme Court's decision in Matsushita, the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 (the Uniform Standards Act) (15 U.S.C.A. § 77a et seq. (West Supp.1999)) was passed, amending the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C.A. § 77a et seq. (West 1997)) and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C.A. § 78a et seq. (West 1997)). The Uniform Standards Act amended section 16 of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C.A. § 77p (West 1997)) to require that certain securities fraud class actions involving nationally traded securities be brought in federal, not state, court (15 U.S.C.A. § 77p(b) (West Supp.1999)). An additional amendment provides that any such action brought in state court involving a covered security shall be removable to the federal district court for the district in which the action is pending (15 U.S.C.A. § 77p(c) (West Supp.1999)). The Uniform Standards Act is not applicable in this instance and applies only to actions filed after the date of its enactment.

OBJECTIONS BEFORE THE CIRCUIT COURT

The Objectors' arguments before the circuit court, though grounded in Korshak, were informed by the PSLRA and the perceived potential for unfairness implicit in Matsushita. The Objectors argued that the circuit court should not allow the plaintiff in the state court class action to "circumvent the Reform Act and highjack the federal action simply by virtue of accepting a low bid." As to Korshak factor number five, the presence of collusion, the Objectors maintained that, regardless of the purported merit of the settlement, the defendants had attempted to manipulate "the process" and "sandbag" the Objectors by excluding lead counsel in the federal class action from the circuit court settlement negotiations.

SETTLEMENT HEARING

At the settlement hearing on September 30, 1997, the discussion centered on SSA's *714 183 ability to pay and the significance of the fact that SSA's financial condition had improved in the four months following agreement as to the terms of the settlement. The Objectors argued the court should consider SSA's changed circumstances in evaluating the settlement's fairness. They maintained that SSA's changed circumstances were foreseen at the time of the settlement, that the settlement was and is not necessary to SSA's financial prosperity, and that 165 the fairness of the settlement at the time of final approval rather than at the time of negotiation and agreement should control. Consequently, the circuit court questioned the parties regarding SSA's financial condition at the time of the settlement negotiations and at the time of the settlement hearing. The circuit court specifically inquired of the mediator whether he was concerned that SSA's financial condition might improve or that SSA might obtain financing. The mediator responded that he "never saw a glimmer of hope from either side with respect to what could have happened" and that the "[p]otential for financing was very grim." The mediator explained that it was his understanding that SSA either had a loan or was about to get one at very unfavorable rates and that he told the plaintiffs, "you want a company, I can get you a company."

Defendants hired Charles C. Cox (Cox) to render an expert opinion on the issue of damages independent of the issue of liability. Cox's opinion, submitted by affidavit dated September 11, 1997, was attached to defendants' brief in support of final approval of the settlement. Cox, senior vice-president of Lexicon, Inc., a consulting firm that specializes in the application of economics to legal and regulatory issues, served as commissioner of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) from 1983 to 1989 and was acting chairman of the SEC in 1987. Assuming liability could be shown and using SSA's disclosure of January 7, 1997, as the curative disclosure, Cox calculated that damages for the entire alleged class period would amount to $3,129,969. Cox further calculated that, if his analysis were to take into account the effect of SSA's alleged partial disclosure to the marketplace on November 4, 1996, alleged damages would amount to $4,400,000. Cox stated that, even if the damages of the two announcement periods were considered together, the settlement value of $3,200,000 would amount to approximately 42% of this damage calculation, an amount Cox opined was "well within reason in light of questioned liability and SSA's poor financial condition at the time of the settlement." The Objectors do not challenge these damage calculations, but do suggest that the circuit court case was unfairly settled for litigation costs. [FN3]

> FN3. New restrictions limit damages to the difference between an investor's purchase price and the 90-day average trading price of the stock following any curative disclosure. 15 U.S.C.A. § 78u-4(e) (West 1997).

ANALYSIS

With this context in mind, we turn to the Objectors' specific complaints on appeal. The Objectors assert: (1) the trial court erred as 166 a matter of law as to the proper standard for reviewing a proposed class action settlement; (2) the named plaintiff and his counsel inadequately represented the class' interests in settlement negotiations; (3) the trial court erred in certifying a class for settlement purposes without making the findings required by section 2-801 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure (735 ILCS 5/2-801 (West 1996)); and (4) the trial court erred in denying the Objectors' petition to intervene.

[1] As a threshold matter, we must first determine whether each of the issues presented on appeal is properly before us. The Objectors have appealed from two orders: from the order and final judgment of dismissal entered September 30, 1997, and from the order denying the Objectors' petition to intervene entered October 8, 1997. Defendants correctly note that the Objectors have not appealed from the order of June 27, 1997, certifying the class represented by the named plaintiff and his counsel. Consequently, defendants maintain this court lacks jurisdiction to review Objectors' arguments regarding the settlement class' certification and the named plaintiff's adequacy.

[2][3][4][5] "It is well established that an appellate court has jurisdiction only of those *715 184 matters which are raised in the notice of appeal." Lewanski v. Lewanski, 59 Ill.App.3d 805, 815, 16 Ill.Dec. 854, 375 N.E.2d 961, 968 (1978). To that end, Illinois Supreme Court Rule 303 provides that the notice of appeal "shall specify the judgment or part thereof * * * appealed from and the relief sought from the reviewing court." 155 Ill.2d R. 303(b)(2). However, the notice of appeal is to be liberally construed as a whole. Glassberg v. Warshawsky, 266 Ill.App.3d 585, 591, 202 Ill.Dec. 881, 638 N.E.2d 749, 753 (1994). Moreover, an appeal from a final judgment draws into issue all prior nonfinal orders which produced the final judgment. Burtell v. First Charter Service Corp., 76 Ill.2d 427, 433, 31 Ill.Dec. 178, 394 N.E.2d 380, 382 (1979). Thus, an unspecified judgment is reviewable if it is a " 'step in the procedural progression leading to the judgment specified in the notice of appeal.' " Taylor v. Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., 275 Ill.App.3d 655, 659, 211 Ill.Dec. 942, 656 N.E.2d 134, 138 (1995), quoting Burtell, 76 Ill.2d at 435, 31 Ill.Dec. 178, 394 N.E.2d at 383.

First and foremost, we note that the Objectors did not directly raise the issue of the propriety of class certification per se in the circuit court. There, as here, the Objectors chose an indirect path of attack: they attacked class certification by means of an assault on the fairness of the settlement. With respect to the propriety of class certification, we further note that the Objectors were themselves engaged in class action litigation derived from the same set of facts in federal court.

In Cunningham Courts Townhomes Homeowners Ass'n v. Hynes, 163 Ill.App.3d 572, 575-76, 115 Ill.Dec. 416, 517 N.E.2d 1102, 1105 (1987), this court 167 declined to consider whether the named plaintiffs certified as class representatives were similarly situated with the class where the notice of appeal did not request a review of the order that certified the class. Here, the Objectors failed to appeal from the order of the circuit court certifying the class, and the notice of appeal, even when read broadly, does not reference or allude to the issue of class certification. Nor was the issue of class certification directly engaged below. Accordingly, we decline to consider whether the trial court erred in certifying the class for settlement purposes.

Nevertheless, for purposes of clarification, we do respond to the Objectors' selective references to Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 117 S.Ct. 2231, 138 L.Ed.2d 689 (1997). In Amchem, the Supreme Court found several requirements for class certification were lacking where, for purposes of effectuating a global settlement as to asbestos litigation, the settlement class included both exposure-only plaintiffs and those presently injured. In that context, the Supreme Court decided the role settlement may play in determining the propriety of class certification. The Supreme Court concluded:

> "Confronted with a request for settlement-only class certification, a district court need not inquire whether the case, if tried, would present intractable management problems, [citation], for the proposal is that there be no trial. But other specifications of the Rule--those designed to protect absentees by blocking unwarranted or overbroad class definitions--demand undiluted, even heightened, attention in the settlement context." Amchem, 521 U.S. at 620, 117 S.Ct. at 2248, 138 L.Ed.2d at 710.

We find nothing in Amchem to suggest that the circuit court abused its discretion or failed in its application of the law when it certified the class for purposes of settlement.

Though we decline to consider the issue of class certification, we will consider the due process concerns raised by this appeal, noting that the context of this litigation and the content of the Objectors' petition to intervene place those issues squarely before us. Initially, we observe that the Objectors' arguments here, as below, are premised upon their belief that they, by virtue of their status under the PSLRA, should have been apprised of the settlement negotiations before release of the notice of the proposed settlement. Had they been so informed, the Objectors maintain they would have ensured that the settlement was the product of adequate representation and the adversarial process, that the settlement class and release *716 185 were precisely and accurately defined, and that notice was proper. These assertions, though advanced in the academy, do not suggest that the absence of Objectors' counsel from the settlement negotiations was erroneous as a 168 matter of law or resulted in cognizable harm. See M. Kahan & L. Silberman, Matsushita And Beyond: The Role Of State Courts In Class Actions Involving Exclusive Federal Claims, 1996 Sup.Ct. Rev. 219, 255-56 (1996) (observing that a state court "should invite counsel for the federal plaintiffs, and in particular counsel for the lead plaintiff if one has been appointed, to a preliminary fairness hearing" (emphasis omitted)).

[6] We find no support for the notion that the Objectors' mere exclusion from the settlement negotiations rendered the settlement unfair as a matter of law. To be sure, global class action settlements, state court settlements that release exclusive federal claims, raise issues of fairness and process that extend beyond those present in nonglobal settlement class actions. These concerns include the fear of inadequate prosecution or discovery, the presence of collusion or "plaintiff shopping," attorney inexperience, and the settlement's potentially preclusive effect on federal claims. Despite these concerns, and the recent promulgation of the Uniform Standards Act notwithstanding, "Congress contemplated the possibility of dual litigation in state and federal courts related to securities transactions." Orman v. Charles Schwab & Co., 179 Ill.2d 282, 293, 227 Ill.Dec. 927, 688 N.E.2d 620, 625 (1997), citing Matsushita, 516 U.S. 367, 116 S.Ct. 873, 134 L.Ed.2d 6 (for the proposition that Congress contemplated the possibility of dual litigation).

In Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Epstein, 516 U.S. 367, 116 S.Ct. 873, 134 L.Ed.2d 6 (1996), the United States Supreme Court held that a Delaware chancery court judgment settling shareholders' state and federal claims against an acquiring corporation had preclusive effect in federal courts under the Full Faith and Credit Act (28 U.S.C.A. § 1738 (West 1994)) even though the shareholders could not have pressed their federal claims in chancery court. Thus, Matsushita undercuts the Objectors' argument that their exclusion from the settlement negotiations necessarily meant that the product of those negotiations, the agreement, was unfair as a matter of law or that their status under the PSLRA as lead plaintiff in the federal matter required their presence and participation. The record itself undermines the Objectors' suggestion that their exclusion from the negotiations in fact prejudiced the plaintiffs.

Nothing in the record indicates that the concerns present in global class action settlements prejudiced the plaintiffs in this matter. The agreement was the product of adversarial give-and-take overseen by an experienced mediator. Class members received notice and the opportunity to opt out or to participate in the settlement. Out of the 19,000 notices sent, five class members representing an estimated 169 1,250 shares of SSA stock requested exclusion from the class. The amount of stock represented is an estimate because one class member who requested exclusion did not indicate how many shares of SSA stock he held during the class period. We find no support in the record for the Objectors' claims that prosecution and discovery were inadequate. All parties were represented by able counsel with extensive experience in class action securities litigation. Nor do we find discovery was inadequate. As the circuit court noted, 60,000 pages of discovery were obtained and made available to the Objectors, though discovery in the federal suit was stayed. Despite the Objectors' insinuations, the particular facts of this case do not suggest the presence of collusion or "plaintiff shopping." As for the settlement's potentially preclusive effect on the federal claims, we note that the circuit court was fully apprised that the allegations against SSA were the subject of dual litigation and was briefed on the relative merits of the state and federal claims.

Lastly, the Objectors' complaints regarding the supposed imprecision of the release and the quality of the notice afforded are more properly the subject of the federal litigation that remains after the state court settlement. There, the Objectors remain free to convince the federal court that this *717 186 settlement was the product of inadequate representation and does not deserve full faith and credit.

[7][8][9] Having exposed the premises upon which many of the Objectors' arguments of unfairness rest, we turn now to the question of fairness. As a general matter, we are asked to decide whether the circuit court abused its discretion or erred in its application of the law in finding that the settlement was fair, reasonable, and in the best interest of the class. "[T]he trial court's decision may be reversed only on a clear showing that the trial court was guilty of an abuse of discretion." City of Chicago v. Korshak, 206 Ill.App.3d 968, 971-72, 151 Ill.Dec. 797, 565 N.E.2d 68, 70 (1990). "The standard to be used in evaluating the compromise settlement of a class action is that the agreement must be fair, reasonable, and adequate." Langendorf v. Irving Trust Co., 244 Ill.App.3d 70, 78, 184 Ill.Dec. 822, 614 N.E.2d 23, 28 (1992). "In a class action, the court is the guardian of the interests of the absent class members." Waters v. City of Chicago, 95 Ill.App.3d 919, 924, 51 Ill.Dec. 185, 420 N.E.2d 599, 603 (1981).

[10] The Objectors first contend the trial court misconstrued its role when it approved the settlement. We disagree. To support this argument, the Objectors reference the circuit court's statement that "it is most important that people be able to rely upon a handshake or acquiescence." The Objectors do not provide the context for the statement, discussion over whether SSA's improved financial condition should be 170 considered. In addition, the Objectors do not acknowledge what is clearly evident from the record: the circuit court's understanding of and attention to the complex legal and financial issues germane to the settlement before it. Having reviewed the record, we find that the circuit court correctly understood its role.

[11] The strength of plaintiff's case on the merits balanced against the settlement amount is the most important factor in determining whether a settlement should be approved. Korshak, 206 Ill.App.3d at 972, 151 Ill.Dec. 797, 565 N.E.2d at 70-71. The record shows that the relative merits of the federal and the state claims were thoroughly briefed and vigorously argued before the circuit court. In fact, the court noted its sensitivity to the issues of liability when it stated for the record: "I have great question in my mind as to the total innocence of the officers of this company. * * * So what I'm getting at, maybe this isn't as bad a case as [counsel for defendants] thinks it is." Moreover, it is apparent from the record that the circuit court was apprised of the particular problems posed by dual state and federal settlement class action securities litigation. In addition, the record indicates that the issue of damages was explored in context of the amount of damages potentially recoverable under the PSLRA. The record also shows, and the parties agree, that the circuit court properly focused its attention on SSA's ability to fund the settlement.

[12] We now address the issue most vigorously argued at the settlement hearing, the significance of SSA's improved financial condition. Here, the Objectors maintain the trial court's analysis of the proposed settlement erroneously excluded SSA's then current financial condition. Again, we disagree.

As to the issue of the significance of SSA's improved financial condition, the Objectors' assertions are threefold: (1) SSA's financial condition was not as dire as the mediator was led to believe it was at the time of the settlement negotiations; (2) at the time of the negotiations, the parties did not inform the mediator that SSA's financial condition was improving or disclose to him the likelihood of significant financing in the near future; and (3) the fact that SSA's financial condition improved after it achieved its recapitalization rendered the previously negotiated settlement agreement unfair.

We turn first to the issue of SSA's financial condition at the time of the settlement negotiations. Specifically, the Objectors complain that the mediated settlement was unfair because it did not take into account "SSA's positive revenue, working capital, total stockholders' equity and the anticipated financing." Taking all these factors into account, the Objectors claim that, "as of June 27, 1997, the date the settlement agreement was entered, SSA's financial picture 171 was *718 far 187 from bleak." We find no merit in this argument given the position taken by the Objectors at the settlement hearing. There, counsel for the Objectors stated:

> "Your Honor, it is fair to say that SSA was in a severe, likewise, crisis, a higher settlement demand might well have dried up potential source[s] of capital and forced the company into bankruptcy.
> That was what was going on with the negotiations of this settlement. That's what brought about this settlement."

We turn next to the Objectors' second contention that, at the time of the negotiations, the parties did not inform the mediator that SSA's financial condition was improving or disclose to him the likelihood of significant financing in the near future. In support of these assertions, the Objectors point to the following exchange at the settlement hearing:

> "THE COURT: What about the potential for financing?
> [MEDIATOR]: Potential for financing was very grim. As a matter of fact, my recollection is that they either had a loan or were about to get one at very unfavorable rates. They were extremely unfavorable as I recall it. And that's the best they could get.
> If I were advising a client, I would tell them not to take that kind of a loan, but this situation, as a matter of fact, I think, I told the plaintiffs, you want a company, I can get you a company. And my ability--or the facts are here, the key factor certainly was finance. The financial condition of the company. But liability was strenuously argued."

We are not persuaded that this exchange constitutes evidence of collusive conduct on the part of counsel. When read in context, the exchange indicates what was obvious to all parties: the relationship between SSA's financial condition, the settlement negotiations, and the availability of financing. The plaintiffs, defendants, and objectors all admit that SSA's financial condition at the time of the settlement negotiation was dire. Moreover, the record indicates that SSA's ability to obtain financing was directly linked to its ability to resolve the claims at issue here.

In addition, we find no legal basis for the Objectors' contention that the circuit court erred in approving the settlement because SSA's financial condition at the time of the settlement hearing had improved. As a factual matter, we simply note that the settlement agreement itself contemplated the possibility that SSA's financial condition might improve upon recapitalization and hedged against that possibility by including 100,000 shares of SSA stock as part of the settlement amount. Circuit court plaintiffs' counsel stated at the settlement hearing:

> 172 "We bargained very hard and very long at the mediation progress over how do we protect ourselves in the event you get the financing, and in case the price of the stock goes up, and the solution that we came up with was the hundred thousand shares of stock we got."

[13] Finally, we find no abuse of discretion in the circuit court's order denying the Objectors' petition to intervene. The federal class action plaintiffs chose to pursue their claims in federal, not state, court and were not necessary parties to the circuit court action. Therefore, we conclude that the circuit court did not err when it entered the final judgment of dismissal of the circuit court class action on September 30, 1997, and when it entered the order of October 8, 1997, which denied the Objectors' petition to intervene.

Supreme Court of Illinois.

In re ESTATE of Josie A. TOMLINSON.
Katherine D. SHELTON, Appellee,
v.
FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF PEORIA, Appellant.

Nos. 47956, 47962.

Nov. 15, 1976.
Rehearing Denied Jan. 28, 1977.

The Circuit Court, Peoria County, Robert A. Coney, J., construed clause providing for bequest to 'Cancer Research Fund' as intending to bequeath remainder of estate to American Cancer Society, and adopted daughter of testatrix appealed. The Appellate Court, 30 Ill.App.3d 502, 333 N.E.2d 663, reversed and remanded, and petitions for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court were allowed. The Supreme Court, Ryan, J., held that Attorney General properly intervened by filing petition for leave to appeal, that cy pres doctrine would be applied to carry out charitable purpose expressed in will, and that general charitable purpose expressed in will of benefiting cancer research would properly be carried out by directing that bequest be given to American Cancer Society.

Judgment of Appellate Court reversed and judgment of Circuit Court affirmed.

RYAN, Justice.

This case involves the construction of the will of Josie A. Tomlinson which was executed in 1951. She died on February 28, 1973. The will was admitted to probate in the circuit court of Peoria County. Katherine D. Shelton, who is also referred to in these proceedings as Catherine D. Shelton, is the adopted daughter of the decedent. She filed the complaint to construe the will. The primary issue is whether a bequest to a nonexisting charitable beneficiary must fail.

The will provided for certain nominal bequests to the plaintiff and other individuals and for bequests to each of three churches. All of the remainder of her estate was given to the First National Bank of Peoria as trustee with directions to convert it to cash and to erect a suitable monument on decedent's grave and to provide for perpetual care of the burial lot. The will then provided:

> 'I order and direct that my said Trustee shall then distribute all of the remainder of my said estate to the CANCER RESEARCH FUND absolutely and forever.'

Following this provision the testator provided that it was her intent to 'generally and specifically disinherit each, any and all persons whomsoever claiming to be or may be 386 determined to be my heirs at law.'

The complaint alleges that notice of the petition to admit the will to probate and of the other probate proceedings had been given to her, certain other individuals, the *111 701 three churches named in the will, the trustee and the American Cancer Society. It alleges that no notice was given to 'Cancer Research Fund' because there is not now in existence nor was there in existence at the time of the execution of the will or at the date of decedent's death any organization known as 'Cancer Research Fund.'

At the hearing on the complaint an affidavit of an executive vice president of the Illinois Division, Inc., of the American Cancer Society was introduced as evidence. Attached to the affidavit was a list of estates from which the American Cancer Society had received funds although the designations of the beneficiaries in those estates were not the same as the legal name of the society. Three of the 17 estates listed were probated in Illinois. In three of the estates the beneficiary was referred to as 'CANCER RESEARCH FUND,' 'The Cancer Research Fund,' and 'Cancer Research Fund.' No other evidence was introduced in support of the American Cancer Society's claim. The plaintiff, Katherine D. Shelton, introduced into evidence a copy of certain pages from a 1973 publication of an encyclopedia of national organizations of the United States. The pages copied related to health and medical organizations active in the field of cancer research and education. It was stipulated that at the present time, at the time the decedent died and at the time the will was executed there was no organization known as the 'Cancer Research Fund.' The circuit court of Peoria County construed the questioned clause in the will as intending to bequeath the remainder of the estate to the American Cancer Society, Inc. The plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court found that there was no evidence in the record which establishes that the decedent intended to give the remainder of her estate to the American Cancer *387 Society, Inc., and held that the bequest failed and the property passed as intestate property. (30 Ill.App.3d 502, 333 N.E.2d 663.) We reverse this holding.

The Attorney General filed a petition for leave to appeal to this court as did the American Cancer Society, Inc. Both petitions were allowed. The plaintiff contends that the Attorney General has no authority to intervene in this case. In the trial court no notice of the hearing on the complaint was given to the Attorney General, and he was not a party to the appeal in the appellate court. He has entered the case by filing a petition for leave to appeal in this court.

[1] We find that the Attorney General properly intervened in this case by filing a petition for leave to appeal. Rule 301 of this court (58 Ill.2d R. 301) provides that '(a)ll rights that could have been asserted by appeal or writ of error may be asserted by appeal.' Prior to the enactment of the Civil Practice Act, one who was not a party to an action had no statutory right of appeal. He could, however, prosecute a writ of error by showing that he would be injured by the judgment or decree or that he would benefit by its reversal. (Gibbons v. Cannaven, 393 Ill. 376, 66 N.E.2d 370.) This court has held that the interests that will justify an appeal by one not a party must be direct, immediate and substantial. It must be an interest which would be prejudiced by the judgment or benefit from its reversal. City of Alton v. County Court, 16 Ill.2d 23, 156 N.E.2d 531.

[2] The interest of the Attorney General in this litigation is sufficient to meet this test. He has the authority to protect a charitable trust and its property either defensively, where an attack is made on its validity, or by an action as plaintiff, by securing the construction of the trust instrument. In a suit by others where the validity or the enforcement of a charitable trust may come into question the Attorney General should be made a party defendant. Bogert, Trusts and Trustees sec. 411 (2d ed. 1964); see also Stoner Mfg. Co. v. Y.M.C.A., 13 Ill.2d 162, 148 N.E.2d 441; Kerner v. *388 Thompson, 365 Ill. 149, 153, 6 N.E.2d 131; Stowell v. [3][4] A trust for the promotion of health is a charitable trust. (Restatement (Second) of Trusts sec. 372 (1959).) If an outright gift of property to a charitable corporation without restrictions on its use or disposition is involved, the corporation is under a duty to apply the property to one or more of the charitable purposes for which it was organized. This duty is ordinarily enforceable by the Attorney General. (Restatement (Second) of Trusts sec. 348, Comment (f) (1959); Bogert, Trusts and Trustees sec. 41, at 325 (2d ed. 1964).) The Charitable Trust Act (Ill.Rev.Stat.1973, ch. 14, par. 51 Et seq.) vests in the Attorney General authority to enforce and supervise charitable trusts. For these reasons we hold that the Attorney General is a proper party to this appeal.

[5] Generally if a bequest is given to a specific entity and the legatee declines to accept the bequest or cannot take or is not capable of taking and holding it the bequest fails. See First National Bank v. Elliott, 406 Ill. 44, 92 N.E.2d 66, which distinguishes Volunteers of America v. Peirce, 267 Ill. 406, 108 N.E. 318; Chicago Daily News Fresh Air Fund v. Kerner, 305 Ill.App. 237, 27 N.E.2d 310, and Quimby v. Quimby, 175 Ill.App. 367.

[6] If, however, there is a mistake in the name or description of the legatee, whether an individual or a corporation, or if a latent ambiguity exists as to the identity of the legatee, extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of determining the identity of the intended recipient. Woman's Union Missionary Society of America v. Mead, 131 Ill. 338, 23 N.E. 603; Hitchcock v. Board of Home Missions, 259 Ill. 288, 102 N.E. 741; Daniels v. *389 The appellate court found that there was insufficient evidence presented to the trial court to show that the testator intended that the bequest should be given to the American Cancer Society.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We agree that the evidence is deficient in this regard. Under the facts of this case, however, this should not invalidate the bequest or cause it to fail.

There can be no doubt that the testator intended to make a bequest to benefit an organization involved in cancer research. The parties stipulated, however, that no organization named 'Cancer Research Fund' ever existed. This does not mean that the gift must fail.

[7][8] It is generally held that if a bequest to a particular charitable entity cannot be carried out and does not manifest a general charitable intent, the doctrine of Cy pres is not applied. (Bogert, Trusts and Trustees sec. 436 (2d ed. 1964).) In our case, however, although the bequest to the Cancer Research Fund cannot be carried out, we find in the will evidence that the testator did not intend that the bequest should completely fail under such circumstances. The will contains no provision for the disposition of the remainder of the estate in the event of the failure of the charitable bequest. If the bequest should fail, the property would pass to the heirs as intestate property. Such a disposition would be contrary to the clearly expressed intent of the testator to disinherit her heirs at law. The absence of a gift over or a reversion in case of the failure of a charitable purpose constitutes evidence of a general charitable intent. See Fisch, The Cy Pres Doctrine in the United States 152 (1950); Bogert, Trusts and Trustees sec. 437 (2d ed. 1964); Comment, A Revaluation of Cy Pres, 49 Yale L.J. 303 (1939).

Under the circumstances of this case it is appropriate to apply the Cy pres doctrine to carry out the charitable purpose expressed in the will. Bogert in his treatise states that by the application of Cy pres '(i)f the failed gift was to or for a charitable institution which never existed, or has ceased to exist, or is too vaguely described to be *390 identified, * * * the court will usually either deliver the corpus to another like institution in the same region, to hold out-right or in trust, whether a successor, affiliate, parent, or unrelated institution.' Bogert, 113 703 Trusts and Trustees sec. 442 (2d ed. 1964).

It is not necessary that we remand this case to the circuit court of Peoria County for the purpose of ascertaining the manner in which the Cy pres doctrine should be applied. The record before this court contains sufficient facts for such a determination to be made here.

[9] As indicated above there can be no doubt that the testator intended to make a bequest to benefit an organization engaged in cancer research. The affidavit filed on behalf of the American Cancer Society's claim to the bequest states that the American Cancer Society, which maintains an office in Peoria, Illinois, is a widely known national organization engaged in raising and distributing funds for cancer research programs. The general charitable purpose expressed in the will of benefiting cancer research will properly be carried out by directing, as the trial court did, that the bequest be given to the American Cancer Society, Inc.

For these reasons the judgment of the appellate court is reversed and the judgment of the circuit court of Peoria County is affirmed.

Appellate Court reversed; Circuit Court affirmed.

A class action settlement was approved by the Cook County Circuit Court, Reginald J. Holzer, J., and appeal was taken by certain objectors. The Appellate Court, Stamos, J., held that: (1) a petition to intervene was properly denied in the trial court's discretion; (2) given lack of consideration for rights of subclass of plaintiffs, whose claims were in an amount less than $1,000, trial court's approval of settlement was abuse of discretion; and (3) record failed to sustain amount of attorney fee award.

STAMOS, Justice:

This matter is now before the appellate court for the second time. In 1975, John Nebel filed a class action lawsuit against the city of Chicago, seeking relief from the defendant city's practice of postponing the payment of tort judgments. The trial court dismissed the complaint, and this court reversed. (Nebel v. City of Chicago (1977), 53 Ill.App.3d 890, 11 Ill.Dec. 620, 369 N.E.2d 74.) On remand, Nebel's class action was consolidated with Effie Waters' similar class action. On October 30, 1979, the class of plaintiffs was certified.[FN1] On November 16, 1979, the parties filed with the court a proposed compromise and settlement of the action. Subsequently, a number of class members appeared and entered their objections to the proposed settlement. Dorothy Epstein objected and also sought leave to intervene as a party plaintiff. The trial court denied the objections, denied the petition to intervene, and approved the settlement. Epstein and three other objectors have appealed.

> FN1. The class includes "all unpaid tort judgment creditors of the defendant, THE CITY OF CHICAGO, as of the date of entry of this order (October 30, 1979)." On November 30, 1979, the class was modified to exclude those judgment creditors who had sold or assigned their judgments prior to November 16, 1979.

921 Before considering the merits of the settlement, we must first describe the city of Chicago's past practices. Prior to 1980, the city budgeted no more than.$4.5 million per year to satisfy tort judgments rendered against the city. It was the practice of the city to pay judgments in the order in which they were entered, so, as the.$4.5 million judgment fund became increasingly inadequate, delays in the satisfaction of tort judgments increased. Plaintiff Nebel's *601 187 1975 complaint alleged a 21/2 year delay in paying judgments; by late 1979, when the lawsuit was settled, delays in satisfying judgments had increased to over 4 years. This period of delay did not affect judgment amounts of $1000 or less. The city paid these judgments in the order in which judgment creditors presented them for payment, and delay in satisfying these judgments was relatively minor, as most such awards were paid in the year entered.

Under the terms of the settlement, the city was required to budget $9 million for payment of tort judgments for each of the next 3 years (1980, 1981, and 1982). By January 1, 1983, the city was to budget an amount sufficient to pay all outstanding tort judgments. Under the agreement, the city would pay judgment creditors in the order in which the judgments were obtained. An exception was made for judgments of $1000 or less; the city could continue to pay these judgments promptly and prior to larger judgments. On December 10, 1979, the settlement agreement was modified to provide for judgment creditors excluded from the class (i. e., those who had opted out of the class action). The city was required to give priority to class members, but when an excluded judgment creditor's judgment became 52 months old, that creditor was to receive priority. The settlement also provided for fees for the plaintiffs' attorneys and the trustee. These sums were to be assessed against the amounts due the members of the class; the final computation provided that each class member's judgment would be reduced by 1.30887%. A judgment creditor could escape this 1.3% assessment by opting out of the class, but he then lost priority of payment.

A class member holding a judgment for more than $1000 would, like all class members, accept a 1.3% reduction in his judgment. Plaintiffs argue that this reduction is more than offset by the benefit of remaining in the class: the judgment will be paid sooner because the city has doubled its budget for satisfaction of tort judgments.[FN2] If this class member elects to 922 opt out of the class, the amount of his judgment will not be reduced. He will, however, be paid later than class members whose judgments are more recent. Fifty-two months after the entry of his judgment, he regains priority. By this time, his judgment is older than that of any unpaid class member, so the opting-out judgment creditor then has first priority for payment. The 52 month figure is apparently based on the waiting time as of November 1979, the time of the settlement, when judgment creditors were waiting about 41/3 years for satisfaction. Plaintiffs argue that a judgment creditor who opts out of the class is therefore in the same position he would be in had no action been brought: his judgment is satisfied approximately 52 months after entry.

FN2. The objectors have pointed out that the city's 1980 budget was first prepared in tentative form in August, 1979, and showed a $9 million amount for tort judgment satisfaction. This budget was prepared prior to the settlement and even prior to the settlement negotiations. Plaintiffs point out that this fact was not before the trial court. Further, plaintiffs argue, the settlement binds the city to budget a like amount in 1981 and 1982. Plaintiffs conclude that sufficient consideration has been shown, and, in any event, the point has been waived for appeal. We have not found it necessary to rely on these facts in ruling on the issues presented.

Under the city's previous practice, persons holding judgments of $1000 or less were paid promptly. Under the settlement, these persons continue to receive the same priority. They are also subject to the 1.3% assessment for attorneys' fees. If, however, these small judgment creditors opt out of the class, they are not subject to the 52 month waiting period. Paragraph 7a of the settlement agreement (requiring that class members be paid before those excluded from the class) does not change the order of payment provided in paragraph 7, which is the section referring to judgments of $1000 or less.

The 1.3% assessment for attorneys' and trustee's fees was arrived at by dividing the total fee award ($220,000) by the aggregate amount of unpaid tort judgments held by *602 188 members of the class ($16,808,309).[FN3] The $220,000 amount includes $20,000 for the trustee and $100,000 for the attorneys for each of the two plaintiffs. Plaintiff Nebel is represented by Byron D. Knight of the firm of Judge, Drew, Cipolla and Kurnik, Ltd. Plaintiff Waters is represented by Larry D. Drury. Attorney Knight's petition for fees contains a fully detailed listing of the time spent on the litigation, from December 1974 through December 1979. The 14 page listing shows 656 hours of work, and quotes an hourly rate of $75, for a total of $49,200. The petition also lists $126.66 in costs. Knight requests that the hourly total be multiplied by 3, and seeks a total fee award of $147,726.66. Attorney Drury's fee petition, lacking the specificity of Attorney Knight's, lists 526 hours of work performed between May 1, 1979, and December 10, 1979. The petition adds 125 hours for "Completion of litigation, anticipated time to close case and make refunds over a three year interval," for a total of 651 hours. Drury asks $100 per hour ($65,100), and asks that this figure be trebled ($195,300). A thorough review of the record does not reveal what factors were considered by the trial court in awarding each attorney $100,000.

FN3. 286 judgments, having an aggregate value of $1,532,665, were excluded from the class.

On November 19, 1979, the trial court appointed a trustee to 923 administer the settlement. The trustee petitioned the trial court for fees on February 8, 1980. The petition contains the trustee's estimate that he will expend 400 hours over a 3 year period, and asks $40,000. As noted above, the trial court made an award of $20,000.

[1] The objectors first contend that the denial of Epstein's petition to intervene was error. Section 57.5 of the Civil Practice Act states that,

> "Any class member seeking to intervene or otherwise appear in the action may do so with leave of court and said leave shall be liberally granted except when the court finds that said intervention will disrupt the conduct of the action or otherwise prejudice the rights of the parties or the class." (Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 110, par. 57.5(a).)

The Historical and Practice Notes to section 57.5 refer to section 26.1 of the Civil Practice Act, and state that the procedure for intervention and the status of intervenors is controlled by that section. (Ill.Ann.Stat., ch. 110, par. 57.5, Supplement to Historical and Practice Notes, at 116 (Smith- Hurd, 1979 Supp.).) Section 26.1 provides for intervention as of right in certain cases; generally, however, intervention is allowed at the discretion of the trial court, and denial of intervention will not be reversed on appeal absent a clear abuse of that discretion. (See Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 110, par. 26.1(2); United Steelworkers of America v. Bailey (1975), 29 Ill.App.3d 392, 393, 329 N.E.2d 867.) Epstein's petition to intervene was presented on February 14, 1980. The objectors have not demonstrated that the trial court's denial of the eleventh hour petition was an abuse of discretion. The objectors' assignment of error, therefore, can only be upheld if Epstein's status was that of an intervenor as of right.

Intervention is permitted as of right,

> "(a) when a statute confers an unconditional right to intervene; or (b) when the representation of the applicant's interest by existing parties is or may be inadequate and the applicant will or may be bound by an order or judgment in the action; or (c) when the applicant is so situated as to be adversely affected by a distribution or other disposition of property in the custody or subject to the control or disposition of the court or an officer thereof." (Ill.Rev.Stat.1979, ch. 110, par. 26.1(1).)

In the case at bar, clause (a) does not apply, since section 57.5, the governing statute, does not create an unconditional right to intervene. Clause (b) does not apply, because, regardless of the adequacy of the class representation, Epstein could have avoided being bound by the result by opting out of the class. The objectors argue that clause (c) applies, since Epstein will allegedly suffer the adverse effects of additional924 603 189 delay if she opts out of the class, and will suffer a 1.3% fee assessment if she remains in the class. Since the 52 month waiting period was intended to leave opting-out creditors in their status quo ante, the nature of the claimed additional delay is unclear. Intervention as of right requires a more tangible detriment than the speculative additional delay that the objectors predict. The Committee Comments to section 26.1 state that, "Clauses (b) and (c) * * * provide for intervention as of right in the few instances in which the applicant would suffer tangible detriment if denied the right to intervene." (Ill.Ann.Stat., ch. 110, par. 26.1, Joint Committee Comments, at 318 (Smith-Hurd 1968).) We conclude that there was no error in the denial of the petition to intervene, and find it unnecessary to consider plaintiffs' charge that the petition was not timely made.

[2] The next issue is whether the settlement itself should be sustained. Our supreme court has supplied the standard to be used in evaluating the compromise settlement of a class action: the agreement must be fair, reasonable, and in the best interest of all affected. Evaluation of the settlement is a discretionary matter, and a reviewing court will not upset the trial court's judgment without a showing of abuse of discretion. (People ex rel. Wilcox v. Equity Funding Life Ins. Co. (1975), 61 Ill.2d 303, 316, 335 N.E.2d 448 (hereinafter, Equity Funding).) The same standard is used in the federal courts. See Patterson v. Stovall (7th Cir. 1976), 528 F.2d 108, 112.

[3][4][5] Our supreme court in Equity Funding stated that a settlement must be "in the best interest of all those who will be affected by it." (Equity Funding, 61 Ill.2d at 316, 335 N.E.2d 448.) We believe that absent class members are necessarily included in "all those." In a class action, the court is the guardian of the interests of the absent class members. (Zerkle v. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. (S.D.N.Y.1971), 52 F.R.D. 151, 159; see Fiorito v. Jones (1978), 72 Ill.2d 73, 88, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019.) A settlement which is unfair to a subclass or a fraction of the class should not be sustained. (See In re General Motors Corp. Engine Interchange Litigation (7th Cir. 1979), 594 F.2d 1106, 1133, cert. denied (1979), 444 U.S. 870, 100 S.Ct. 146, 62 L.Ed.2d 95.) In the case at bar, the subclass of persons holding judgments of $1000 or less received virtually no benefit from the settlement. Prior to the settlement, these creditors were paid more or less promptly. Under the terms of the settlement, the city is to follow the same payment procedure with respect to this subclass. Although the city has agreed to budget a larger amount for the payment of tort judgments, this promise only benefits the holders of larger judgments who were faced with a waiting period in excess of four years. The only effect of the settlement that the members of the subclass will see is a 1.3% reduction in the amount of their judgments. They could have escaped this assessment by opting out of the class, but few chose to 925 do so.[FN4] It is understandable that few members of the subclass would perceive the benefit of opting out: the published notice of the settlement did not include paragraph 7a, which contains the provisions for paying judgment creditors excluded from the class. The notice of the proposed settlement was prepared on November 30, 1979; paragraph 7a was inserted in the proposed settlement on December 10, 1979. [FN5] While an amended notice to the *604 190 class would have entailed additional cost and delay, expedience does not justify disregarding the rights of even a fraction of the class. (See In re General Motors, at 1133.) The reviewing court cannot re-write the parties' settlement to excise unfair portions; it can only approve or disapprove of the entire agreement. (In re General Motors, at 1133.) Given the lack of consideration for the rights of the under-$1000 subclass, we find that the trial court's approval of the settlement was an abuse of discretion.

FN4. Six of the 286 excluded creditors held judgments of $1000 or less.

FN5. This defect of notice also raises questions concerning the fairness of the settlement to absent class members holding judgments greater than $1000. While the notice adequately informed class members of their right to opt out, and provided clear instructions on the method of opting out, the notice did not reveal the consequences of opting out, and thus necessarily failed to give class members a basis for evaluating their two options. Even though the settlement gave most class members a quid pro quo (accelerated satisfaction in return for a 1.3% reduction), fairness might dictate that a class member's decision to remain in the class be a fully informed one. In particular, creditors whose judgments were already 52 months old in February 1980 had no way of knowing that remaining in the class would be of no benefit. When one of the objectors' attorneys pointed out this fact to the trial court, he was rebuffed.

[6] Plaintiffs contend that the objectors have no standing to assert the rights of the subclass, since all objectors hold judgments greater than $1000. This argument misses the point. The burden is on the proponents of a class action settlement to prove that the compromise is fair and reasonable. (Zerkle, at 159.) If the objectors can point to an unfair or inadequate aspect of the settlement, then the proponents have failed to carry their burden, irrespective of whether that aspect impinges on the rights of the objectors personally. The very existence of an unfair portion of the settlement also indicates that the trial court has failed to adequately consider the rights of absent class members.

[7] Plaintiffs' argument that the objectors have waived this point by not raising it in the trial court must fail for the same reason. The general rule is that new theories and new claims not considered by the trial court cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. (See Kravis v. Smith Marine, Inc. (1975), 60 Ill.2d 141, 147, 324 N.E.2d 417.) Here, however, the trial court was obligated to consider the rights of absent class members (see Zerkle, at 159), and evidence that it did not is a proper matter for appellate review.

[8][9] 926 The next issue is whether the trial court's award of attorneys' and trustee's fees was proper. An award of attorney's fees in a class action is contingent upon success, and upon the existence of a fund from which the fees can be paid. (See Fiorito, 72 Ill.2d at 87, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019.) Plaintiffs argue that the promised increased appropriations by the city constitute a fund for the payment of fees. Since we hold that the order approving the settlement must be vacated, both the "success" and the "fund" have perished. Similarly, the trustee's fee is based on his future actions to implement the settlement, so vacation of the lower court's order also necessitates a vacation of the trustee's fee award.

[10] Since the question of attorney's fees will again be presented to the trial court, however, we are obliged to note that the lower court erred in its order for payment of attorneys' fees. As described above, Attorneys Knight and Drury presented the trial court with petitions requesting that their hourly rate charges ($49,326.66 and $65,100 respectively) be multiplied by 3. The multiplication factor for class action attorney fees was discussed by our supreme court in Fiorito v. Jones (1978), 72 Ill.2d 73, 89-93, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019. The trial court first considers the number of hours expended by the attorneys. After disallowing time spent that did not benefit the class, the trial court determines whether the hourly total is reasonable, and notes whether the time has been expended by law clerks, associates, or senior partners. The trial court then considers the complexity of the problem and the skill of the attorneys, and fixes an hourly rate of compensation. The hourly rate, multiplied by the allowable hours, is called the "lodestar computation," because it provides the point of orientation for determining the final fee award. (See Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. v. American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corp. (3d Cir. 1973), 487 F.2d 161, 168.) The lodestar computation can then, at the discretion of the trial court, be adjusted by a multiplier. The application of a multiplier depends on two factors: the contingent nature of the class's recovery (an unlikely recovery justifying an increased fee), and the quality of the benefit to the class. The supreme court in Fiorito *605 191 specified that, if the trial court is to award fees greater than the lodestar computation, it should identify the factors that merit the increase, and state the value of the multiplier applied. 72 Ill.2d at 92, 18 Ill.Dec. 383, 377 N.E.2d 1019; see also Lurie v. Canadian Javelin Ltd. (1980), 92 Ill.App.3d 15, 19-21, 47 Ill.Dec. 742, 415 N.E.2d 1055.

[11] In the instant case, a multiplier was evidently applied, as each attorney received $100,000, and the quoted hourly rates totaled $49,200 and $65,100, respectively. The trial court made no findings that warrant the application of a multiplier. We read Fiorito to require that such findings must be specific and in the record.

Furthermore, the hourly rate totals ($49,200 and $65,100) do not appear to have been submitted to the scrutiny demanded in Fiorito. Although Attorney Knight's petition is admirably detailed, there is no evidence that 927 the trial court made an independent determination of the reasonableness of the hourly rate requested. Attorney Drury's petition contained a very general accounting of time spent, and the trial court might well have inquired into the hourly total, since Drury managed to expend in 7 months nearly as much time as Knight's firm spent over a 5 year span, during which period Knight's firm successfully prosecuted the earlier appeal of this case. The 125 hours charged by Drury for completing the litigation and making refunds is particularly suspect, in light of the fact that it was the trustee's duty to implement the terms of the settlement.

In consideration of the foregoing, the trial court's order denying the petition to intervene is affirmed; the order approving the settlement and the orders approving attorneys' and trustee's fees are vacated, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings in the trial court.

VACATED AND REMANDED.

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

William B. WEINBERGER, et al., Plaintiffs-Appellees,
v.
James C. KENDRICK, et al., Defendants-Appellees,
Charles M. Coyne, et al., Appellants.

Nos. 956-959, Dockets 81-7317, 81-7629, 81-7827, 81-7829.

Argued April 19, 1982.
Decided July 14, 1982.
Order on Petitions for Rehearing Jan. 26, 1983.

Final judgments of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, Kevin Thomas Duffy, J., 91 F.R.D. 494 and 20 B.R. 186, approved settlement of two class actions against banks that had been large lenders to debtor and officer of the lead bank who had been director of the bankrupt corporation. Holders of securities of the bankrupt appealed. The Court of Appeals, Friendly, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) notice of proposed settlement met requirements; (2) that class was certified and class representatives recognized after settlement, with notice simultaneous with that of the settlement, did not preclude approval; (3) there is no rigid rule against addition of new claims shortly before submission of proposed settlement of class action provided that proper notice and opportunity for opting out are afforded and that settlement fairly and adequately provides for the new claims; (4) common-law fraud claims could be found to be generally less valuable than Rule 10b-5 claims of actual purchasers of securities, and it was not unfair for distribution formula for settlement to reflect same; (5) treatment of state law claims by proposed settlement was fair and adequate; (6) district court did not err in refusing to conduct evidentiary hearing preceded by additional discovery on adequacy of settlement; but (7) sanction of fee award for issuance of subpoenas was not shown to be justified.

Judgment approving settlement affirmed; order imposing sanctions reversed.

Plaintiff's burden of proof in common-law fraud case, i.e., clear and convincing evidence, is more demanding than in Rule 10b-5 case, and, similarly, Rule 10b-5 is typically regarded as better suited than common-law fraud principles for application to novel theories of securities frauds. FRIENDLY, Circuit Judge:

These consolidated appeals are from a final judgment of Judge Duffy of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, entered on October 16, 1981, 91 F.R.D. 494, approving, pursuant to F.R.Civ.P. 23, the settlement of two securities class actions consolidated below--Weinberger, et al. v. Kendrick, et al., and Panzirer v. Peterkin, et al. The complaints in these actions, filed on October 3, 1975, and October 22, 1976, respectively, asserted claims on behalf of classes consisting of persons who had purchased securities of W. T. Grant Company (Grant) during the 34 months prior to that company's bankruptcy on October 2, 1975 (sometimes referred to hereafter as the class period). The defendants named in the actions were financial institutions (the banks) that loaned Grant more than $600 million prior to its bankruptcy, [FN1] and Dewitt Peterkin, Jr., a former vice-chairman of Morgan Guaranty and a Grant director. The complaints alleged that the defendants had dominated the management of Grant in the years preceding its bankruptcy and had concealed from the public both the seriousness of Grant's financial predicament and the inflated value of Grant securities. The plaintiffs asserted, among other things, claims against the defendant-appellees based on § 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5, and common law fraud. The complaints in Weinberger and Panzirer were superseded by a consolidated amended complaint, filed July 25, 1980, along with the proposed settlement. In addition to the claims previously asserted, this advanced state law breach of fiduciary duty claims; the new complaint also expanded the plaintiff class to include persons who merely held Grant securities during the class period. The settlement approved by Judge Duffy would extinguish a number of these 65 claims [FN2] in return for some $2.84 million, [FN3] which, after allowance of attorneys' fees, would be distributed to the plaintiff class. While no determination has been made how even the gross amount of the settlement compares to the amounts claimed, estimated by objectors' counsel as between $250 million and $1 billion, it is not disputed that the recovery will be only a negligible percentage of the losses suffered by the class. Both the plaintiffs and the defendants below are here as appellees defending the settlement's adequacy.

FN1. The principal lender to Grant was Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York (Morgan Guaranty), a wholly owned subsidiary of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc. The banks named as defendants in the actions below, in addition to Morgan Guaranty are Citibank, N. A., The Sanwa Bank, Ltd., The Chase Manhattan Bank, N. A., Chemical Bank, Irving Trust Company, Marine Midland Bank, Bankers Trust Company, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company and The Bank of New York. The settlement also applies to a number of other banks that had been major lenders to Grant, because the suits below were brought against Morgan Guaranty both individually and as agent for these banks and also because the loan agreements among the banks and Grant provide for the sharing of obligations and recoveries on the loans to Grant.

FN2. Federal securities and state common law claims asserted against a number of defendants, including certain officers and directors of Grant and Grant's auditors, are not involved in the settlement. In addition, claims against Mr. Peterkin that do not relate to insider trading (Count III of the consolidated amended complaint) are not included in the settlement. Finally, the settlement does not affect claims against Chase Manhattan as Indenture Trustee for Grant's 4 3/4 % Debentures, see note 8, infra, or claims asserted in Grant's bankruptcy proceedings on behalf of present debenture holders.

FN3. This was deposited in an interest-bearing account and by the date of oral argument had increased to approximately $3.5 million.

The appellants are a number of persons who purchased or held Grant securities during the class period. One group, the Coyne appellants, allegedly 583 in number, represented by Bradley R. Brewer, fit the above description simpliciter. The other group, the Lewy appellants, are the eight named plaintiffs in a class action, Index No. 17857-75, filed in September 1975 in the Supreme Court of New York County which is now against three of the lending banks, Morgan Guaranty, Chase Manhattan and Citibank, asserting some of the claims asserted in the Weinberger/Panzirer actions but only under state law. Appellants raise a number of procedural and substantive challenges to the determination that the settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate. We affirm.

I. Background

On October 2, 1975, Grant, with recorded liabilities of well over a billion dollars, filed a petition in bankruptcy court in the Southern District of New York for an arrangement under Chapter XI of the former Bankruptcy Act. Grant's petition came after two years of declining earnings and credit ratings. When the company's publicly reported earnings for the year ending January 31, 1974, declined by some $85,000,000, rating agencies downgraded Grant's commercial paper, thereby effectively denying the company access to the commercial paper market. As a result, in the spring of 1974, Grant began to obtain financing from commercial banks, first on an ad hoc basis with credit lines from numerous lenders throughout the country, and later, in the fall of 1974, under a $600,000,000 committed revolving credit agreement arranged by the company's principal banks. Morgan Guaranty was the lead lender and acted as agent for the other banks, see note 1, supra. The revolving credit was secured by Grant's accounts receivable and certain securities it held in a subsidiary.

Despite the new credit, and various other steps taken by its lenders to ameliorate Grant's situation, [FN4] and contrary to rosy predictions by Grant's management, the company's financial position continued to deteriorate. The seriousness of this became fully apparent when an internal study ordered in the summer of 1975 by a new Grant president, Robert Anderson, was completed in late September: this revealed that the company had a negative net worth. The evidence indicates that the news came as a surprise to the banks and Grant's board. Grant's Chapter XI petition quickly followed.

FN4. For example, the banks agreed to the granting of a senior security interest to Grant's vendors in early 1975, extended the maturity of the revolving credit agreement from June 2, 1975, to March 31, 1976, permitted the early repayment of loans due to a number of small banks, and subordinated payments of $300,000,000 of the outstanding bank loans to the payment of Grant's vendors. The last action was taken less than a month before Grant filed its Chapter XI petition. Naturally the objectors place a quite different interpretation upon those actions.

66 Even more quickly came the first complaint in the Weinberger action, filed October 3, 1975. The complaint alleged that, as a result of their large loans, Grant's principal lenders had been in a position to, and in fact did, exercise considerable control over the management of the company in its final years. It further charged that the defendant banks and Grant's management had cooperated in presenting a misleadingly optimistic picture of the company's future to the public. The Panzirer complaint, filed on October 22, 1976, elaborated on this theme. It alleged that Peterkin became aware of Grant's true financial predicament in March, 1973, and passed this information to Morgan Guaranty, including the Trust and Investment Division, which thereafter sold virtually its entire holding of Grant securities on the open market. Motions for class certification were filed in Weinberger in June, 1977, and in Panzirer in August, 1977; the motions were later adjourned during settlement discussions and were not renewed until agreement had been reached.

The development and settlement of the Weinberger/ Panzirer action require an understanding of Grant's bankruptcy proceedings. Some six months after the filing of Grant's Chapter XI petition, the Bankruptcy Court, on April 13, 1976, determined that the company could not be reorganized and ordered its liquidation. On July 2, 1976, the principal banks commenced an adversary proceeding seeking enforcement of security interests they held in property of Grant's estate, see p. 64, supra. In his September 24, 1976, answer, the trustee in bankruptcy challenged these security interests on the grounds that they were preferential transfers and fraudulent conveyances; more important for our purposes, he also claimed that, because of the control they allegedly exercised over Grant's affairs during the years 1973-75, the company's principal lenders should be equitably subordinated [FN5] to other claimants.

FN5. The Bankruptcy Court defined equitable subordination as requiring proof that "the claimant sought to be subordinated (a) has acted in a fiduciary capacity; (b) has breached a fiduciary duty; [and] (c) that breach resulted in detriment to those claimants to whom a duty was owed," In re W. T. Grant Co., 4 B.R. 53, 74 (Bkrtcy.N.Y.1980). See Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 306-07, 60 S.Ct. 238, 245, 84 L.Ed. 281 (1939) ("The essence of the [equitable subordination] test is whether or not under all the circumstances the transaction carries the earmarks of an arm's length bargain.").

In an effort to substantiate his charges, particularly his claim to equitable subordination, the trustee conducted investigations throughout the remainder of

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1976 and 1977 into the relationship between Grant and its lenders during the class period. He relied principally on testimony taken under Bankruptcy Rule 205 and on documents subpoenaed from various parties. [FN6] Rule 205 examinations were taken of all the principal officers and directors of Grant, the principal officers at Morgan Guaranty responsible for dealings with Grant, and two officers of other major lending banks. The testimony ran to some 10,000 pages. The trustee also subpoenaed those files of Grant's principal lenders which related to the company--comprising hundreds of thousands of documents. [FN7] In short, the trustee conducted a far- reaching and intensive probe of the banks' involvement in Grant's affairs during the class period.

FN6. The trustee was assisted by the law firm of Weil, Gotshal & Manges and the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse & Co.

FN7. On March 20, 1976, Bankruptcy Judge Galgay ordered that various of Grant's business records be preserved and made available to counsel for the plaintiffs below; Grant's employees also were enjoined from disposing of or destroying any of these documents.

Despite his extensive investigations, Grant's trustee concluded that his chances of proving any fraud or other wrongdoing by the lending banks were extremely slim, cf. 4 B.R. at 73-79 (Judge Galgay's approval of similar determinations by the trustee). Accordingly, he attempted, ultimately successfully, to settle the banks' claims. On February 24, 1978, the trustee and the banks entered into a settlement whereby the banks released their security interests in Grant's property in return for allowance 67 of principal and interest on all prepetition loans which it was estimated would result in their receiving distributions of 55% or more of their claims, 4 B.R. at 59. The Bankruptcy Court, in a careful decision, 4 B.C.D. 597, issued on July 20, 1978, approved the settlement, and shortly thereafter the banks began receiving distributions. The appellees have averred that, despite the settlement, the banks will have lost more than $250,000,000 on their loans to Grant by the time the estate is fully liquidated.

Following approval of the settlement of the banks' claims, negotiations commenced regarding claims of holders of Grant's subordinated debt. [FN8] By April, 1979, an agreement had been reached and the trustee applied to the Bankruptcy Court for permission to offer the proposed settlement to holders of Grant's subordinated debt. On February 20, 1980, after six days of hearings on the proposed settlement, including cross-examination of the trustee, his counsel, and his chief staff assistant regarding the fairness of the settlement, Judge Galgay, in a second lengthy decision, 4 B.R. 53, approved the settlement. He expressly found, among other things, that the banks' relationship with Grant during the class period had been one of "arms-length negotiations" and that Grant's actions "reflected independent policy decisions", 4 B.R. at 76-77. Eleven bondholders appealed this order to the District Court for the Southern District of New York (Conner, J.), which stayed consideration of the appeals so that Bankruptcy Judge Galgay could supervise continuing negotiations among the bankruptcy trustee, the indenture trustee, the banks, and the debentureholders for an improved offer to the latter. Counsel for the debentureholders who had appealed from the order approving the earlier offer stipulated that these appeals be withdrawn with prejudice, and this was so ordered. On June 23, 1981, an amended offer was approved by Judge Galgay. Two groups of debentureholders appealed to the District Court (Duffy, J.) from the order approving the amended offer. In an opinion and order dated March 15, 1982, Judge Duffy affirmed the order, 20 B.R. 186. He rested his decision primarily on the ground of res judicata, although he also stated that the appeals were without merit. Two groups of debentureholders have appealed to this court.

FN8. These were holders of Grant's 4 3/4 % convertible subordinated debentures due 1996 ($92,507,000 face amount outstanding) and 4% convertible subordinated debentures due 1990 ($834,000 face amount outstanding). The settlement covered only claims of persons then holding the debentures.

After agreement in principle was reached regarding the claims of Grant's major creditors, efforts focused, in the fall of 1979, on settling the Weinberger and Panzirer actions. Plaintiffs' counsel had engaged in a wide range of discovery during the four years prior to the commencement of settlement discussions. They had access to, and reviewed, both the bank documents subpoenaed by the trustee and the testimony from the Rule 205 examinations he conducted. In addition, plaintiffs' counsel deposed several officers of Morgan Guaranty, paying particular attention to the relationship between that bank and Grant during the class period. Like Grant's trustee and Judge Galgay, however, plaintiffs' counsel found virtually nothing to substantiate their allegations against the banks: "[o]n the basis of all the evidence we were compelled to the conclusion that our chance of prevailing against the banks, while not nonexistent, was slim." With this in mind, and after rejecting as inadequate one settlement offer by the banks, plaintiffs' counsel agreed in late 1979 to the settlement of a number of the class action claims asserted in the Weinberger/Panzirer actions. An original settlement fund of $2.6 million agreed upon in May of 1980 was later increased to $2.84 million, which, with interest, now exceeds $3.5 million.

This proposed settlement was submitted to Judge Duffy for approval on July 25, 1980. It was accompanied by a consolidated amended complaint. Count I of the consolidated amended complaint. Count I of the consolidated amended complaint, brought 68 on behalf of all purchasers of Grant securities during the class period, alleged, as had the Weinberger complaint, that the banks "were in a position to, and did, control, influence and participate in Grant's operations, including the disclosure and nondisclosure of information relating to Grant's financial condition," ¶ 28, and that, using this control the banks "engaged in a scheme, plan and continuous course of conduct to present a falsely inflated and optimistic picture of Grant's ... financial condition, and to conceal the true nature of Grant's operations and deteriorating financial condition from the investing public ...." ¶ 30. It also asserted that the purchasers of Grant securities during the class period had relied in purchasing the allegedly overvalued Grant securities upon false or misleading disclosures and nondisclosures resulting from the defendants' "course of conduct." Based on these allegations Count I of the complaint claimed violations of § 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder, ¶ 42, as well as of common law fraud principles, ¶ 44.

Count II of the consolidated amended complaint asserted claims on behalf of a broader class of plaintiffs. In addition to purchasers of Grant securities, the class included persons not previously included in either the Panzirer or Weinberger classes--persons who merely held, rather than purchased, Grant securities during the class period, ¶ 48(B). In addition to alleging the claims described above under the federal securities laws, ¶ 49, the complaint charged that the defendants "have committed common law fraud and have breached their fiduciary duties to plaintiffs ....", ¶ 58, the latter theory not having previously been expressly advanced by plaintiffs. All these claims were based upon factual allegations almost identical to those underlying the federal securities law claims. The banks were charged with having "caused Grant to delay disclosing facts relating to the financial condition of Grant" and having caused Grant "to delay for their own benefit the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by Grant," ¶ 56.

Count III of the consolidated amended complaint, asserted on behalf of a class limited to purchasers of Grant common stock during the class period, alleged that Morgan Guaranty and Peterkin had violated Rule 10b-5 by engaging in insider trading during the class period. It also alleged that, during the class period, Morgan Guaranty was a controlling person of Grant under § 20(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

The proposed settlement agreement submitted to the district court along with the consolidated amended complaint, was accompanied by the parties' consent to the filing of the new complaint. In addition, the agreement requested the district court to enter an order determining, "for the purpose of effectuating the settlement", ¶ 8(a), that the action be maintained as a class action on behalf of the previously discussed classes of purchasers and holders of Grant securities. Substantively, the settlement agreement provided for the release of the above-described class claims asserted in the consolidated amended complaint, as well as any related claims arising out of the same transactions which might have been asserted, cf. note 2, supra, in return for the payment to the class of some $2.84 million.

Submitted to Judge Duffy on July 25, 1980, along with the consolidated amended complaint and the proposed settlement agreement, were notices of the pendency of class action, the class action determination, the proposed settlement and settlement hearing, which were to be mailed to prospective class members. These notices, among other things, described the Weinberger/Panzirer action, set out the terms of the proposed settlement, defined the class that approval of the settlement would bind, and informed class members that they could opt out of the settlement, by so requesting before January 24, 1981, [FN9] or enter an appearance through counsel. Objections to 69 the proposed settlement were required to be filed not later than two weeks before the scheduled February 18, 1982, fairness hearing; no deadline was set for submission of affidavits supporting the proposed settlement. Pursuant to the July 28, 1980, order of Judge Duffy, these notices were mailed to class members on December 9, 1980, and were published in the Wall Street Journal. In a January 19, 1981, motion to vacate the July 25 order, counsel for appellants alleged that the settlement was inadequate and that the class notification procedure was defective in a number of respects. Judge Duffy denied the motion on February 6, 1981.

FN9. Judge Duffy later extended the deadline for opting out as to states represented by Mr. Brewer whose pension funds had invested in Grant securities, but not as to other class members, until February 16, 1981.

On February 17, 1981, the appellees filed papers supporting the settlement, including lengthy affidavits from counsel for both plaintiffs and defendants attesting to the fairness and adequacy of the settlement. Judge Duffy conducted the fairness hearing the next day; appellants tell us that this took no more than 10 minutes. At this hearing counsel for appellants submitted a memorandum requesting that the court treat their January 19 motion and certain letters counsel had written to the court as timely objections to the settlement. Judge Duffy refused to do so, although in his opinion approving the settlement, 91 F.R.D. at 495 n.3, he also rejected the objections as without merit. By May 19, 1981--the deadline for filing proofs of claim--some 26,000 claims had been filed.

[1] On August 13, 1981, Judge Duffy issued an opinion approving the proposed settlement as fair, reasonable and adequate. He found that "able and experienced" counsel for the class had conducted protracted arms-length negotiations in good faith; that "extensive" pre-trial discovery had enabled the parties to "fully ... evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the class claims"; that both he and the parties properly could rely on factual and legal findings made by Bankruptcy Judge Galgay, In re W. T. Grant Co., 4 B.R. 53 (Bkrtcy.S.D.N.Y.1980) , which dealt with the circumstances underlying the settlement and which indicated that the plaintiffs' "chances of prevailing were slim"; that the plaintiffs' claims were "complex" and "not easily proven", particularly in view of the "heavy burdens of proof" faced by plaintiffs and "vigorous defenses" asserted by defendants; and that a trial would inevitably involve "lengthy and costly litigation". He concluded that, "[i]n view of the difficulties plaintiffs would confront if this case went to trial, the recommendation of experienced counsel and the lack of individual objections to the settlement, I find that the sum offered by the defendants is acceptable". The opinion did not discuss most of the procedural objections considered in this opinion, perhaps because of the judge's finding that no timely objections were filed. [FN10]

FN10. In addition to the January 19 motion, a letter by Mr. Brewer to Judge Duffy dated September 16, 1980, with copies to counsel for the plaintiffs and for the defendants in the Weinberger action, clearly raised the objections as to the inclusion of state law claims not previously pleaded and as to the making of class determination only as incident to a settlement considered below. Objections which have been brought to the attention of the court and of counsel for proponents of a settlement by counsel for objectors should not be disregarded simply because they do not precisely comply with the procedures for the filing of individual objections specified in the notice of settlement. See 3 Newberg, Class Actions § 5660d (1977). In passing on settlements of class actions under F.R.Civ.P. 23 the judge should not regard himself as an umpire in typical adversary litigation. He sits also as a guardian for class members who have not received a notice or who lack the intellectual or financial resources to press objections, National Super Spuds v. New York Mercantile Exchange, 660 F.2d at 9, 20 (2nd Cir.1981) (citing cases); Mandujano v. Basic Vegetable Products, Inc., 541 F.2d 832, 834- 36 (9 Cir. 1976). Here the judge evidently did consider all the objections, see 91 F.R.D. at 495 n.4 and the February 6 order, although erroneously believing he was not required to do so and accordingly not discussing many of them or doing so only conclusorily.

II. Discussion

A. The Class Notice

[2] We deal first with appellants' numerous challenges to the notice of class 70 action and proposed settlement mailed to prospective class members on December 9, 1980. Appellants

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

initially argue that the notice failed adequately to describe the proposed settlement. They also contend that it should have contained a wide variety of additional information more fully describing the terms of the proposed settlement and the manner in which the negotiations leading to it had been conducted. [FN11]

FN11. Appellants also argue that the notice was defective because it did not state what proportion of the class's total loss the settlement fund represented. Appellees meet this by noting that any estimate as to class losses--much less individual losses--would have been highly speculative and more likely to hinder informed decision-making by class members than advance it.

Although no rigid standards govern the contents of notice to class members, Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314, 70 S.Ct. 652, 657, 94 L.Ed. 865 (1950), the notice must "fairly apprise the prospective members of the class of the terms of the proposed settlement and of the options that are open to them in connection with [the] proceedings", Grunin v. International House of Pancakes, 513 F.2d 114, 122 (8 Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S.Ct. 124, 46 L.Ed.2d 93 (1975), quoting Philadelphia Housing Authority v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 323 F.Supp. 364, 378 (E.D.Pa.1970), aff'd sub nom., Ace Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Crane Co., 453 F.2d 30 (3 Cir. 1971); see Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., supra, 339 U.S. at 314, 70 S.Ct. at 657, and it must be neutral, see Grunin, supra, 513 F.2d at 122. Numerous decisions, no doubt recognizing that notices to class members can practicably contain only a limited amount of information, have approved "very general description[s] of the proposed settlement," Grunin v. International House of Pancakes, supra, 513 F.2d at 122. See In re Equity Funding Corp. of America Securities Litigation, 603 F.2d 1353, 1361-62 (9 Cir. 1979); Mendoza v. United States, 623 F.2d 1338, 1351-52 (9 Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 912, 101 S.Ct. 1351, 67 L.E.2d 336 (1981), In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litigation, 643 F.2d 195, 223-24 (5 Cir. 1981).

[3] The December 9, 1980, class action notice, met the foregoing requirements. It fairly, accurately and neutrally described the claims and parties in the Weinberger/Panzirer litigation, as well as the terms of the proposed settlement and the identity of persons entitled to participate in it. The notice described in detail a related state court action--Lewy v. The Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., et al., App.Div. 437 N.Y.S.2d 263--brought by counsel for the appellants. [FN12] It explicitly informed class members that "[p]articipation in the present settlement would preclude any participation in the Lewy case." The notice also explained that class members could exclude themselves from the settlement by requesting this prior to January 24, 1981, or could enter an appearance at the fairness hearing through counsel. Finally, it informed the class that the recovery would be subject to the district court's allowance of attorney's fees and expenses and that counsel expected to apply for fees not exceeding 25% of the settlement fund. There is little question that all this "fairly apprise[d]" prospective class members of the class action's pendency, the relevant terms of the proposed settlement, and their options in connection 71 with that case. Those who wanted to probe more deeply could, as the notice plainly told them, examine "[t]he settlement stipulation and the papers and documents filed in this action ...." [FN13]

FN12. The Second Amended Complaint in Lewy served in March, 1979, named only Chase Manhattan, Morgan Guaranty and Citibank as defendants. The complaint, which relies on factual allegations almost identical to those in the consolidated amended complaint, asserts that the defendants "exercised dominance and control over the board of directors and management of Grant." ¶ 9. In addition, the complaint alleges that the defendants "conceal[ed] negative facts concerning the financial condition and unlawful mismanagement of Grant" thus effecting a manipulation of the securities market. ¶ 11. The complaint goes on to describe numerous acts allegedly committed in furtherance of defendants' conspiracy, dwelling principally upon those set out in the Weinberger/Panzirer papers. Like the consolidated amended complaint, the Lewy complaint asserts causes of action based on common law fraud, ¶ 1, and on breach of fiduciary duties, ¶¶ 1, 31. So far as we can tell, the Lewy action would require proof of fault identical to what would be demanded in the Weinberger/Panzirer cases.

FN13. Appellants also allege that the notice was "substantially incorrect and seriously misleading" in a number of respects, Appellants' Br. in No.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

81-7829, at 19-21. The defects cited by appellants either do not exist--owing to misreadings by appellants' counsel of the notice or other publicly filed documents--or are immaterial.

[4] Appellants next contend that the mailing of individual notices to the last known addresses of all class members, as determined from the records of Grant and various brokerage houses and nominees, was inadequate since the addresses of many security-holders might have changed during the period since Grant's bankruptcy. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(c)(2) [FN14] and Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S.Ct. 2140, 2151, 40 L.Ed.2d 732 (1974), require only that "each class member who can be identified through reasonable effort " (emphasis added), be notified. In In re Franklin National Bank Securities Litigation, 574 F.2d 662, modified, 599 F.2d 1109 (1978), we discussed the application of the Eisen requirement to classes consisting of purchasers of securities, noting the difficulty of ensuring that notice is received by persons whose purchases are recorded in "street names"--typically banks or brokerage houses. We disapproved the practice of sending class notices to street name addresses with a request that the recipient forward the notice to the beneficial holder of the securities but without an offer to defray the resulting expenses, 574 F.2d at 669-70. We indicated approval, however, of the use of bank and brokerage house records to compile a list of actual holders of securities to whom individual notices would be mailed, 574 F.2d at 672. Here appellees compiled such a list, mailed individual notices, and, in addition, published notice of the class action and settlement in the Wall Street Journal. Some 26,000 proofs of claim have been filed as a result of these notice procedures. The district court, in its July 28, 1980, order, expressly found this procedure adequate and we see no reason to disturb its finding, particularly since no alternative method of ascertaining class members' identities has been suggested to us, see Grunin v. International House of Pancakes, supra, 513 F.2d at 121-22 (individual mailing to last known address, without supplemental newspaper publication, approved, despite evidence that one third of prospective class did not receive notices).

FN14. The subsection provides, in pertinent part, that

In any class action maintained under subdivision (b)(3), the court shall direct to the members of the class the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort.

[5][6] Likewise, the timing of the notices, which were mailed on December 9, 1980; the opt-out deadline, January 24, 1981; the deadline for the filing of objections, February 4; the date affidavits in support of the settlement were filed, February 17; and the fairness hearing, February 18, were not beyond the authority of the court. According to Professor Moore, "[t]he manner of giving notice is committed to the sound discretion of the court," 3B Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 23.80[3], at 23-513 (1982), as is suggested by Rule 23's statement that notice of settlement shall be "in such manner as the court directs". The notice, however, must be "reasonably calculated, under all the circumstances, to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections", Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., supra, 339 U.S. at 314, 70 S.Ct. at 657, and it must "afford a reasonable time for those interested to make their appearance," id. Prospective class members had some six weeks in which to decide whether or not to accept the settlement. Although we think it would have been preferable if appellees' affidavits and other papers in support of the settlement had been required to be available at a date earlier than the eve of the hearing, the failure of the district court to demand this does not require reversal. 72 Objectors were fully apprised of the terms of the proposed settlement and, although they did not avail themselves of the opportunity, had complete access to materials discovered in the case; this provided an adequate base from which objections could be developed. See 3 Newberg, Class Actions § 5660d (1977). The requirement, challenged by appellants, that requests to opt-out be filed prior to the fairness hearing placed prospective objectors in no worse position than occurs when formal class certification precedes settlement; indeed, their position was better in that they knew the terms of the proposed settlement before having to decide whether to opt out.

Appellant's final procedural objections relate to appellees' having engaged in and concluded settlement negotiations prior to class certification and notice. Closely related to this, they challenge the simultaneous notification of class members of the class determination (for purposes of settlement) and the proposed settlement. We shall discuss this initially as if the class certification related solely to the class named in the earlier Weinberger/Panzirer complaints, i.e., claims arising from the purchase of Grant securities during the class period, and will deal later with the added problems arising from the inclusion of other claims.

In In re Franklin National Bank Securities Litigation, supra, 574 F.2d at 671-72 n.6, we questioned in dictum the practice of bypassing the formal class certification procedure and of sending simultaneous notice of the pendency of a class action and of a proposed settlement to prospective class members. We voiced concern that the practice might be "inconsistent with the requirement [of Rule 23] that certification as a class action be determined 'as soon as practicable after the commencement of the action' and the implication that the initial class notice should follow promptly after the certification," id., and said that "[s]o far as we are aware the only cases in which this question has been specifically passed upon have held that the sending of the initial class notice should not be postponed," id. Our hesitation to approve the practice echoed the concerns expressed in the Manual for Complex Litigation § 1.46, at 60-61 (1977) (Manual), which argues that the practice may create the possibility of collusion or improper pressure by defendants on "unofficial" counsel for the class. The Manual recommends a firm prophylactic rule prohibiting the bypassing of an early formal class certification and the formation of temporary classes for settlement purposes.

Despite the Manual's concerns and the misgivings expressed in the Franklin National Bank footnote, we concluded in Plummer v. Chemical National Bank, 668 F.2d 654, 656 (2 Cir. 1982), that "[a]lthough negotiations in the instant case were conducted by undesignated class representatives without pretrial discovery, this, standing alone, did not preclude judicial approval", 668 F.2d at 658. See also City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., 495 F.2d 448, 464-66 (2 Cir. 1974). A similar view is taken in Judge Wisdom's thorough opinion in In re Beef Industry Antitrust Litigation, 607 F.2d 167, 173-78 (5 Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 905, 101 S.Ct. 3029, 69 L.Ed.2d 405 (1981), which carefully reviews the authorities and commentary on the question. Much like our decision in Plummer v. Chemical Bank, the Fifth Circuit concluded that:

> A blanket rule prohibiting the use of temporary settlement classes may render it virtually impossible for the parties to compromise class issues and reach a proposed class settlement before a class certification. Such a firm restriction does not appear necessary or desirable. The hallmark of Rule 23 is the flexibility it affords to the courts to utilize the class device in a particular case to best serve the ends of justice for the affected parties and to promote judicial efficiencies.
>
>
> Temporary settlement classes have proved to be quite useful in resolving major class action disputes. While their use may still be controversial, most courts have recognized their utility and have authorized the parties to seek to compromise their differences, including class action issues, through this means.

73 In re Beef Industry Antitrust Litigation, supra*, 607 F.2d at 177- 78, quoting 3 Newberg, Class Actions § 5570c, at 479-80 (1977).

Other circuits have held that the absence of class certification prior to the notice of the settlement is not an absolute bar to approval. See Ace Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Crane Co., supra, 453 F.2d at 33; In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litigation, supra, 643 F.2d at 223 ("Rule 23 includes no language proscribing combined notice of a class action and a proposed settlement."); Marshall v. Holiday Magic, Inc., 550 F.2d 1173, 1176 (9 Cir. 1977); Valerio v. Boise Cascade Corp., 80 F.R.D. 626, 639 (N.D.Cal.1978), aff'd, 645 F.2d 699 (9 Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1126, 102 S.Ct. 976, 71 L.Ed.2d 113 (1981).

[7] Although we thus refuse to adopt a per se rule prohibiting approval when a class action settlement has been reached by means of settlement classes certified after the settlement, with notice simultaneous with that of the settlement, we emphasize that we are permitting, not requiring, use of this procedure, and also underscore that, as intimated by us in Plummer, supra, 668 F.2d at 658, district judges who decide to employ such a procedure are bound to scrutinize the fairness of the settlement agreement with even more than the usual care. This is necessary in order to meet the concerns, noted in the Manual, regarding the possibilities of collusion or of undue pressure by the defendants on would-be class representatives. Accordingly, we will demand a clearer showing of a settlement's fairness, reasonableness and adequacy and the propriety of the negotiations leading to it in such cases than where a class has been certified and class representatives have been recognized at an earlier date. As discussed below, we are satisfied that the settlement in this case meets these requirements.

B. The Fairness, Reasonableness and Adequacy of the Proposed Settlement

[8] The central question raised by the proposed settlement of a class action is whether the compromise is fair, reasonable and adequate. There are weighty justifications, such as the reduction of litigation and related expenses, for the general policy favoring the settlement of litigation, 3 Newberg, Class Actions § 5570c, at 479-80 (1977); cf. Williams v. First National Bank, 216 U.S. 582, 595, 30 S.Ct. 441, 445, 54 L.Ed. 625 (1910). In part to realize these advantages of settlements negotiated by litigants, we have long recognized that a district court's disposition of a proposed class action settlement should be accorded considerable deference, West Virginia v. Chas. Pfizer & Co., 440 F.2d 1079, 1085 (2 Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Cotler Drugs, Inc. v. Chas. Pfizer & Co., 404 U.S. 871, 92 S.Ct. 81, 30 L.Ed.2d 115 (1971); Newman v. Stein, 464 F.2d 689, 692 (2 Cir.), cert. denied sub nom., Benson v. Newman, 409 U.S. 1039, 93 S.Ct. 521, 34 L.Ed.2d 488 (1972); City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 454-55 (2 Cir. 1974); Patterson v. Newspaper & Mail Delivery Union, 514 F.2d 767, 771 (2 Cir. 1975). The trial judge "is exposed to the litigants, and their strategies, positions and proof. He is aware of the expense and possible legal bars to success. Simply stated, he is on the firing line and can evaluate the action accordingly." Ace Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Crane Co.; supra, 453 F.2d at 34. While this principle does not apply in full force when settlement of a class action has been negotiated before a class has been certified and a higher degree of judicial scrutiny is required, particularly when, as here, there is nothing to indicate that the district judge felt compelled to do this, it is not wholly deprived of force.

[9] Determination whether a proposed class action settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate involves consideration of two types of evidence. The primary concern is with the substantive terms of the settlement: "Basic to this ... is the need to compare the terms of the compromise with the likely rewards of litigation." Protective Committee for Independent Stockholders of TMT Trailer Ferry, Inc. v. Anderson, 390 U.S. 414, 424-25, 88 S.Ct. 1157, 1163, 20 L.Ed.2d 1 (1968). See also *Newman v. 74 Stein, supra, 464 F.2d 689; City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 455. In order to make this comparison, the trial judge must "apprise[ ] himself of all facts necessary for an intelligent and objective opinion of the probabilities of ultimate success should the claim be litigated." Protective Committee for Independent Stockholders of TMT Trailer Ferry, Inc. v. Anderson, supra, 390 U.S. at 424, 88 S.Ct. at 1163. However, "all" cannot really mean "all". The Supreme Court could not have intended that, in order to avoid a trial, the judge must in effect conduct one. Saylor v. Lindsley, supra, 456 F.2d at 904; Newman v. Stein, supra, 464 F.2d at 691-92; City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 462. In order to supplement the thus necessarily limited examination of the settlement's substantive terms, attention also has been paid to the negotiating process by which the settlement was reached, and courts have demanded that the compromise be the result of arm's-length negotiations and that plaintiffs' counsel have possessed the experience and ability, and have engaged in the discovery, necessary to effective representation of the class's interests, City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 463-66.

[10] The appellants, citing Protective Committee v. Anderson, supra, argue at great length that the lower court's two page opinion demonstrates that it did not adequately scrutinize either the substantive terms of the proposed settlement or the propriety of the process of negotiations. We see nothing in the latter point. The district court noted the absence of any indication of collusion, the protracted settlement negotiations, the ability and experience of plaintiffs' counsel, the extensive discovery preceding settlement and the fact that counsel for all parties--including the objectors--had access to materials produced in discovery, including the extensive and detailed discovery of Grant's trustee, who commanded financial resources and professional assistance, see note 6, supra, not always available to plaintiffs' counsel in class actions. All these considerations, as previous decisions have noted, City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 465; In re Beef Industry Antitrust Litigation, supra, 607 F.2d at 176; Plummer v. Chemical Bank, supra, 668 F.2d at 658, are important indicia of the propriety of settlement negotiations. Indeed, as discussed more fully below, plaintiffs' presettlement preparation and discovery efforts in this case were substantially more thorough than those in many other decisions where settlements have been approved.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We are almost equally confident as regards the substantive terms of the proposed settlement. Although the district court's discussion of this was rather cursory, our own examination of the record leads us to conclude that the court had before it sufficient materials to evaluate the settlement and came to the correct conclusion.

Both the defendants and plaintiffs in Weinberger/Panzirer submitted lengthy affidavits to the district court. These carefully described the history of the litigation and, more important, thoroughly canvassed the evidence, both that supporting and that refuting plaintiffs' claims. As noted above, this evidence included the materials amassed in the trustee's investigation. Since his claim of equitable subordination required a detailed inquiry into the relationship between the banks and Grant, which is precisely the issue raised in the Weinberger/Panzirer actions, his discovery efforts were extremely relevant to the plaintiffs' claims. The lower court also had the unusual and important benefit of several careful and well-reasoned opinions by Bankruptcy Judge Galgay, see pp. 7-8, supra. These opinions, particularly as they related to the equitable subordination question, provided excellent guidance from a disinterested source on questions central to the fairness and adequacy of the proposed settlement. Taken together, these materials provided a satisfactory record on which the district court could base its decision.

Moreover, from what we have distilled from the record, we think the district court's decision met the higher standard of scrutiny we believe appropriate in this case. 75 As plaintiffs' counsel observed, "[i]n weighing the class' chance of prevailing on the merits in the case against the banks it was ... important to differentiate between proving the liability of a bankrupt Grant to the class and proving any liability on the part of the defendant banks, who themselves lost hundreds of millions of dollars by reason of their transactions with Grant during the class period." Levy Affidavit ¶ 59. Central to plaintiffs' claims against the banks under both the federal securities laws and the common law was the allegation that the defendants "were in a position to, and did, control, influence and participate in Grant's operations." Consolidated Amended Complaint ¶ 28. This precise point had been considered by Judge Galgay in Grant's bankruptcy proceedings. He said:

> I am satisfied that in the case of Grant the transactions between the Bank Claimants and Grant are the result of arms-length negotiations conducted in good faith and governed by the dictates of sound business judgment. I have reviewed the evidence and, in particular, the portions of testimony elicited in examinations pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 205(a) which the [objectants] claim establish control and domination on the part of the Bank Claimants. The excerpts referred to by the [objectants] constitute but a small portion of the vast amount of information, facts and materials considered by the Trustee. To a considerable extent, the "facts" presented by the [objectants] are based upon hearsay testimony, distortions of testimony, out-of-context statements or misstatements.
>
> The record establishes the converse. It appears that the action taken by Grant reflected independent policy decisions and not rigid submission to the dictates of the Bank Claimants. Mr. Sundman, a chief financial officer of Grant who had been appointed a director in 1974, testified that he operated without instructions from the Bank Claimants and that the advisory group organized by the Bank Claimants in 1974 offered neither suggestions nor opinions as to the business operations of Grant. There has been no evidence introduced by the [objectants] which would tend to establish that the Bank Claimants prevented Grant from initiating a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act in 1974 or 1975. The record demonstrates that prior to the decision made by the Grant Board of Directors during the end of September 1975 to seek relief under the Bankruptcy Act, both the Bank Claimants and Grant management viewed Grant as a turnaround situation and not insolvent. Accordingly, it must be concluded that the probabilities of success as to the prosecution of claims of equitable subordination are very remote. In that context, the Trustee's recommendation is well founded.

4 B.R. at 76-77 (footnote omitted).

Likewise the affidavit of plaintiffs' counsel described the uncontradicted deposition statements of various officers of Morgan Guaranty to the effect that the bank was "not capable or desirous of making management decisions and did not attempt to tell Grant how to run its business."

The evidence adduced in discovery had also failed to support plaintiffs' claims in other respects. Counsel for the plaintiffs averred that the evidence indicated that "the banks themselves were misled by

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Grant's management's statements and projections that the fortunes of Grant would recover." Levy Affidavit ¶ 56. The allegation, advanced in the Panzirer action, and Count III of the consolidated amended complaint, that Morgan Guaranty's Trust and Investment Division had sold approximately one million shares of Grant common stock in 1973 based on inside information obtained from Peterkin regarding Grant's financial condition, was also belied by the evidence. Peterkin testified that in 1973 he had not foreseen Grant's later troubles. Harrison U. Smith, Vice-Chairman of Morgan Guaranty's Trust and Investment Committee, testified that the decision to sell Grant securities had been reached in 1972 and that no discussions with Peterkin had occurred. Plaintiffs' counsel frankly conceded, "[76 w]e do not have any hard evidence to contradict Smith" and admitted that the fact that Morgan commenced selling Grant shares in 1972 severely cut against his case.

We should thus have no difficulty in affirming the approval of the settlement were it not for appellants' contentions based on the inclusion in the consolidated amended complaint and thus in the settlement of "state law" claims arising from the purchase of Grant securities prior to the "class period" but held into or beyond the period--a subject to which we now turn.

C. The Inclusion of Claims Arising Out of the Mere Holding of Grant Securities

[11][12] So far as concerns a class member who had purchased Grant securities prior to and during the class period, the court clearly had jurisdiction to entertain the claims arising from mere holding as well as those arising from purchase as a matter of pendent jurisdiction. The requirement of United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 1138, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966), that federal and state claims share a "common nucleus of operative fact" before the doctrine may apply is satisfied, as our discussion of the similarities between the rule 10b-5 and the state common law claims, pp. 31-35, infra, demonstrates. Likewise, there is no question that plaintiffs' Rule 10b-5 claims are constitutionally "substantial". The requirement of "an examination of the posture in which the nonfederal claim is asserted and of the specific statute that confers jurisdiction over the federal claim, in order to determine whether 'Congress ... has ... expressly or by implication negated' the exercise of jurisdiction over the particular nonfederal claim," Owen Equipment & Erection Co. v. Kroger, 437 U.S. 365, 373, 98 S.Ct. 2396, 2402, 57 L.Ed.2d 274 (1978), is readily met since the Securities Exchange Act's conferral of exclusive jurisdiction on federal courts, § 27, for violations of that act permits adjudication of all related claims only in those courts, see International Controls Corp. v. Vesco, 593 F.2d 166, 175 n.5 (2 Cir.), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 941, 99 S.Ct. 2884, 61 L.Ed.2d 311 (1979).

[13] A more difficult jurisdictional question would be raised by the inclusion of persons having only claims arising from purchases prior to the class period, if such there be. Such a person would lack the federal claim necessary as a predicate to pendent jurisdiction; federal jurisdiction with respect to him seemingly would have to rest on the notion that when there is federal jurisdiction over the claims of many parties having both federal and state claims with a common nucleus of law and fact, a federal court, in the exercise of sound discretion, may also join as plaintiffs persons holding only state claims having such a nexus.

The law on this subject, including the Supreme Court's decision in Aldinger v. Howard, 427 U.S. 1, 96 S.Ct. 2413, 49 L.Ed.2d 276 (1976), is fully discussed in 3A Moore, Federal Practice ¶ 20.07 [5.-1]-[5.-3] (1982). Although the Aldinger Court disapproved of the joinder of a pendent party defendant in the case before it, the Court explicitly limited its conclusion to "the issue of so-called 'pendent party' jurisdiction with respect to a claim brought under [28 U.S.C.] §§ 1343(3) and [42 U.S.C.] 1983", id. at 18, 96 S.Ct. at 2422, and noted that "[o]ther statutory grants and other alignments of parties and claims might call for a different result," id., and that "it would be as unwise as it would be unnecessary to lay down any sweeping pronouncement upon the existence or exercise of such jurisdiction", id.

The circumstances here are about as powerful for the exercise of pendent party jurisdiction as can be imagined. The exclusivity of federal jurisdiction over claims for violation of the Securities Exchange Act makes a federal court the only one where a complete disposition of federal and related state claims can be rendered. Cf. the Court's comment in Aldinger that "[w]hen the grant of jurisdiction to a federal court is exclusive, for example, as in the prosecution of tort claims against the United States under 28 U.S.C. § 1346, the argument of judicial economy and convenience can be coupled with the additional argument *77 that only in federal court may all of the claims be tried together," 427 U.S. at 18, 96 S.Ct. at 2422. The concern most frequently voiced with regard to the pendent party doctrine is that it requires a party not otherwise subject to suit in federal court to defend himself in that forum, see Aldinger v. Howard, supra, 427 U.S. at 18, 96 S.Ct. at 2422. In this case pendent party jurisdiction serves, see Almenares v. Wyman, 453 F.2d 1075, 1084-85 (2 Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 944, 92 S.Ct. 962, 30 L.Ed.2d 815 (1972), to extend federal jurisdiction to a new group of plaintiffs. Pursuant to the opt-out procedures established by the district court, plaintiffs who did not wish to have their claim settled in a federal forum and in fact received notice of the settlement needed only to request exclusion. Finally, the state law claims asserted on behalf of the pendent plaintiffs are already before the federal courts, having been asserted on behalf of persons who purchased Grant securities during the class period. [FN15]

FN15. Our holding regarding pendent party jurisdiction is also limited to the peculiar "alignment of parties and claims" involved here, namely, the joinder of plaintiffs in a settlement of an action involving Rule 10b-5 and state law claims. Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 95 S.Ct. 1917, 44 L.Ed.2d 539 might be read as discerning a congressional intent to preclude the joinder of mere holders of securities in Rule 10b-5 cases in federal court, because of a desire to prevent disruption of the nation's businesses and to reduce vexatious litigation, 421 U.S. at 739-49, 95 S.Ct. at 1927-31. Whatever the strength of this argument as to claims that are proceeding to litigation, it surely is inapplicable when, as here, extension of pendent party jurisdiction permits the comprehensive settlement of plaintiffs' claims, thus furthering the policies underlying Blue Chip Stamps. We need not now decide how Blue Chip Stamps would affect the assertion of pendent plaintiff jurisdiction in a case not involving a settlement.

Appellants contend further that what was done here with respect to claims arising out of purchases of Grant securities before the class period was, for all practical purposes, what we condemned in National Super Spuds, Inc. v. New York Mercantile Exchange , 660 F.2d 9 (2 Cir. 1981). We disagree. In that case class certification had been ordered fairly early in the game; the class was limited to persons who had purchased May 1976 Maine Potato Future Contracts and were damaged in liquidating such contracts between April 13, 1976, and the close of trading on May 7, 1976. The settlement, executed a year after notice of the certification had been sent and long after the opting out period had expired, purported to settle claims going beyond those asserted on behalf of this class and including the objector's claims for losses on contracts which were not liquidated on or before May 7, 1976, but on which he claimed to have suffered a loss thereafter. However, the proceeds of the settlement were to go solely to persons who had suffered losses on contracts which were liquidated on or before May 7, 1976.

The situation here is quite different. Before the class was certified, it was expanded to include persons holding state as well as federal claims. The notice sent to security holders clearly stated this and afforded an opportunity to opt out. Moreover, the settlement made provision for payments to holders of state claims although these were generally less than to holders of federal claims. We have no intention to depart in any way from National Super Spuds ; we simply find it inapplicable to the facts here and hold, in agreement with other courts, that there is no rigid rule against the addition of new claims shortly before submission of a proposed settlement provided that proper notice and opportunity for opting out are afforded, see Cherner v. Transitron Electronic Corp. , 221 F.Supp. 48, 50 (D.Mass.1958); Heddendorf v. Goldfine, 167 F.Supp. 915, 921, 928 (D.Mass.1958); Pergament v. Frazer, 93 F.Supp. 13, 20 (E.D.Mich.1950), aff'd sub nom., Masterson v. Pergament, 203 F.2d 315 (6 Cir.), cert. denied, 346 U.S. 832, 74 S.Ct. 33, 98 L.Ed. 355 (1953), and that the settlement fairly and adequately provides for the new claims. See also National Super Spuds v. New York Mercantile Exchange, supra, 660 F.2d at 18 n.7; TBK Partners Ltd. v. Western Union Corp., 675 F.2d 456 (2nd Cir. 1982).

78 [14][15] In considering whether the settlement discriminated unfairly against the state versus the federal claims, we confront the reiterated contention by appellants that the state law fraud and breach of fiduciary duty claims faced less worrisome legal obstacles than did the federal securities law claims. Such a position runs counter to generally received learning. 5 Jacobs, Litigation and Practice under Rule 10b-5, § 11.01, at 1-272 to 1-273 (1981) (footnotes omitted) ("it is now generally agreed that [rule] 10b-5 is procedurally more advantageous and substantively broader than the common law.") (citing cases); Shapiro v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 495 F.2d 228, 239 (2 Cir. 1974) (citing cases). For example, the plaintiff's burden of proof in a common law fraud case--clear and convincing evidence--is more demanding than in a Rule 10b-5 case. Rudman v. Cowles Communications, Inc., 30 N.Y.2d 1, 330 N.Y.S.2d 33, 280 N.E.2d 867 (1972); Pierce v. Richard Ellis & Co., 62 Misc.2d 771, 773, 310 N.Y.S.2d 266, 269 (Civ.Ct.1970); Ajax Hardware Mfg. Corp. v. Industrial Plants Corp., 569 F.2d 181, 186 (2 Cir. 1977); 5 Jacobs, supra, at 1-277. Similarly, Rule 10b-5 is typically regarded as better suited than common law fraud principles for application to novel theories of securities frauds--which is admittedly the type of action involved in Weinberger/Panzirer, see, e.g., Frohling, The Promoter and Rule 10b-5; Basis for Accountability, 48 Cornell L.Q. 274, 290 (1963). The one element in which Rule 10b-5 is more rigorous against a plaintiff than New York law, which appellants assume would apply to the common law fraud claims, is its requirement that the fraud be "in connection with" the purchase or sale of a security, see Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 730, 95 S.Ct. 1917, 1922, 44 L.Ed.2d 539 (1976), in contrast to the rule of New York law whereby persons who merely held Grant securities would have been permitted to show reliance by proving that defendants' alleged misrepresentations and nondisclosures caused them to hold securities they would otherwise have sold. Continental Insurance Co. v. Mercadante, 222 A.D. 181, 225 N.Y.S. 488 (1927); 24 N.Y.Jur.Fraud and Deceit § 165, at 233-34 (1962 & 1982 Supp.). This, however, simply shows which claims get into the federal basket, not that those that don't are more valuable than those that do. In the light of all this, we conclude that the common law fraud claims against the defendants were generally less valuable than the Rule 10b-5 claims of actual purchasers of Grant securities, and that it was not unfair for the settlement's distribution formula to reflect this.

[16] We are similarly unimpressed by the appellants' contentions as to the strength of their common law breach of fiduciary duty claims. Appellants make much of the point that under New York law the general rule that plaintiff has the burden of proving fraud is "somewhat relaxed in cases where a fiduciary relation exists between the parties to a transaction, and where one has a dominant and controlling force over the other", 24 N.Y.Jur. § 278, at 360 (1962 & 1982 Supp.). Application of this principle ordinarily has been limited to relationships such as those between "guardian and ward, trustee and cestui que trust, attorney and client, and physician and patient", id., with more recent extensions to relationships such as those between social worker and client, Hector M. v. Commissioner of Social Services, 102 Misc.2d 676, 425 N.Y.S.2d 199 (Family Ct. N.Y.City 1980) (ad hoc application only), and nursing home and patient, Gordon v. Bialystoker Center & Bikur Cholim, Inc., 45 N.Y.2d 692, 412 N.Y.S.2d 593, 385 N.E.2d 285 (1978). In order for the principle to apply plaintiffs must affirmatively show the existence of a fiduciary relationship between defendants and themselves, which requires judicial inquiry into the legitimate expectations of the parties and, more generally, the practical implications of recognition of a fiduciary relationship, 24 N.Y.Jur. § 278 (1962 & 1982 Supp.); see Diamond v. Oreamuno, 24 N.Y.2d 494, 301 N.Y.S.2d 78, 248 N.E.2d 910 (1969); Frigitemp Corp. v. Financial Dynamics Fund, 524 F.2d 275, 278-79 (2 Cir. 1975). Plaintiffs would have faced serious difficulties in establishing the existence of a 79 fiduciary relationship between a lending bank and the security holders of a borrowing corporation. While such a development is not beyond the realm of possibility, it would have required a significant extension of existing procedures. The fiduciary relation recognized in Diamond v. Oreamuno, supra --between a manager of a corporation and its shareholders--has been accorded such status for nearly a century. In contrast, appellants have cited us to no decisions in which a fiduciary relationship was found to exist between a bank and its borrower's security holders. Moreover, the extension of fiduciary principles to this relationship would face serious obstacles, such as arguments that lending relations between banks and large corporations are the product of arm's-length bargaining and that it would be anomalous to require a lender to act as a fiduciary for interests on the opposite side of the negotiating table. [FN16] Similarly, Bankruptcy Judge Galgay's findings that "the transaction between the Bank Claimants and Grant are the result of arms-length negotiations" and "the action taken by Grant reflected independent policy decisions", 4 B.R. at 76-77, would cut strongly against the application of fiduciary principles to the banks in this case.

FN16. Cf. Rader v. Boyd, 252 F.2d 585, 587 (10 Cir. 1958) ("Parties may assuredly deal at arm's length for their mutual benefit without raising a confidential relationship between them.") In passing on a settlement we are > "not to ... resolve unsettled legal questions", Carson v. American Brands Inc., 450 U.S. 79, 88 n.14, 101 S.Ct. 993, 998 n.14, 67 L.Ed.2d 59 (1981), which a theory of recovery based on breach of fiduciary duty by the lenders surely would be.

[17] Even assuming that the banks could be shown to stand in a fiduciary relation to Grant's security holders, the record indicates that neither they nor Peterkin, who as a director concededly was in such a relation, engaged in any wrong-doing. Indeed, as the above-quoted findings of Judge Galgay on the closely-related subject of equitable subordination show, see pp. 24-26, supra, there is virtually no evidence that the defendants engaged in any wrongdoing in their dealings with Grant. In light of all this, we agree with appellees that the state law claims were extremely weak and that the proposed settlement's treatment of such claims was fair and adequate, even though the fairness of the treatment of claims added on the eve of settlement is subject to especial scrutiny. Finally, as to the settlement's release of unasserted class claims arising out of the facts underlying the consolidated amended complaint, appellants have suggested no such claims, and we are aware of none, which would have had even the slight chance of success that the Rule 10b-5 and common law claims possessed.

D. The Lack of an Evidentiary Hearing

[18] We next deal with appellants' contention that the district court erred in refusing to conduct an evidentiary hearing preceded by additional discovery on the adequacy of the settlement. As the court below observed, counsel for appellants have had complete access to the extensive materials compiled in this litigation in the bankruptcy proceedings, and their state court claim provided them with yet another route for discovery. Appellants appear to have done little to explore any of these options. In addition, they came forward with no specific objections to the substantive fairness of the settlement, and they have provided no specific criticisms of Judge Galgay's careful examination of the relationship between the banks and Grant. Moreover, aside from expressing a desire to cross-examine plaintiffs' counsel regarding their efforts in the litigation, appellants did not suggest what further efforts at discovery might be pursued.

On these facts we see no reason to require an evidentiary hearing preceded by discovery. The only objections raised by appellants which have required serious consideration deal with points of law. Given the adequacy of the existing record and the absence of cogent factual objections to the settlement, we do not see what purpose an evidentiary hearing would have served. As we said in City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., supra, 495 F.2d at 464:

> 80 Although the parties reaching the settlement have the obligation to support their conclusion to the satisfaction of the District Court, once they have done so, they are not under any recurring obligation to take up their burden again and again ad infinitum unless the objectors have made a clear and specific showing that vital material was ignored by the District Court.

III. Propriety of the Fee Award against Appellants

One other matter requires discussion. On February 13, 1981, five days before the scheduled February 18 fairness hearing, Mr. Brewer served subpoenas duces tecum on counsel for both plaintiffs and defendants. The subpoena served on lead counsel for the banks, Davis Polk & Wardwell, sought production of "[a]ll documents and records ... relating to the commencement, prosecution and settlement" of the Weinberger/Panzirer action, and listed ten categories of documents. Mr. Brewer claims that in a subsequent phone conversation with an attorney at Davis Polk he limited the scope of the subpoena; the attorney averred that even if Mr. Brewer's recollection was correct, he continued to seek production of an extremely wide range of materials, many of which he must have known to be privileged.

On February 17 Davis Polk applied for an order to show cause why an order quashing the subpoena and awarding Morgan Guaranty $1,800 in attorneys' fees and expenses should not be issued. Counsel for the plaintiffs also moved to quash the subpoena, but did not seek a fee award. Judge Duffy did not sign the Davis Polk order, but, in an endorsement on the application, stayed the subpoena. A copy of Judge Duffy's endorsement was delivered to Mr. Brewer on February 17, although it appears he was not then informed of Davis Polk's request for fees. At the February 18 fairness hearing, Judge Duffy briefly questioned Mr. Brewer as to why he had served the February 13 subpoenas. Not satisfied with Mr. Brewer's responses, he imposed two $2,500 fee awards against him, one to plaintiffs' attorneys, and the other to Davis Polk. These were later reduced to a single $1,800 award to Davis Polk.

Appellees argue that the award against Mr. Brewer was warranted because he acted "vexatiously both in issuing subpoenas seeking obviously privileged materials ... and in doing so without having properly identified any client or having properly filed any objections." Mr. Brewer vigorously denies these charges, averring that "the subpoenas in question were issued by my office in good faith on my part and in the honest belief and expectation that the proceedings at the hearing on the fairness and adequacy of the proposed settlement would be evidentiary and adversary in nature." Brewer Affidavit ¶ 4. He stated that he intended to use the documents produced to attack the adequacy of plaintiffs' preparations for the case.

[19] "The general American rule governing allocation of the costs of litigation places the burden of counsel fees on each party ...." Nemeroff v. Abelson, 620 F.2d 339, 348 (2 Cir. 1980), citing Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240, 247, 95 S.Ct. 1612, 1616, 44 L.Ed.2d 141 (1975). There is, however, an "exceptional power to shift fees where an action has been commenced or conducted 'in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly or for oppressive reasons.' " F. D. Rich Co. v. United States ex rel. Industrial Lumber Co., 417 U.S. 116, 129, 94 S.Ct. 2157, 2165, 40 L.Ed.2d 703 (1974); Browning Debenture Holders' Committee v. DASA Corp., 560 F.2d 1078 (2 Cir. 1977). We have previously found that a procedural step such as the issuance of "dragnet subpoenas", id. at 1088-89, may constitute bad faith or vexatiousness. We have required, however, a high degree of specificity in the factual findings of lower courts when attorneys' fees are awarded on the basis of bad faith, id. at 1089, and that there be "clear evidence" that the challenged actions "are entirely without color and [are taken] for reasons of harassment or delay or for other improper purposes", Nemeroff v. Abelson, supra, 620 F.2d at 348, quoting Browning Debenture Holders' Committee v. DASA Corp., supra, 560 F.2d at 1088. These requirements are a sound means of ensuring that persons with colorable 81 claims will not be deterred from pursuing their rights by the fear of an award of attorneys' fees against them, see id. at 1088.

[20] The district court offered little by way of explanation for its fee award. At the February 18 fairness hearing, when the awards were initially imposed--even in favor of the plaintiffs who had not sought one--no reasons were stated. In a brief order of March 26, 1981, the court characterized the subpoenas as "on their face, grossly overbroad". The order also relied on the fact that "there were no objections" to the settlement in determining that the issuance of the subpoenas was improper.

The record does not support a finding that there was "clear evidence" of bad faith or vexatiousness. Mr. Brewer contends that he was expecting an evidentiary hearing to be held on February 18 and that he needed to have the documents in court, particularly since the affidavits supporting the settlement were not yet available. His phone conversation with Mr. Lewis narrowing the scope of the document request was at least some evidence that he had not in fact been acting in bad faith in issuing the February 13 subpoenas. As noted previously, the judge erred with respect to the absence of any objections to the proposed settlement. Davis Polk contends that Mr. Brewer had no standing to be heard on February 18 since all his clients who had filed objections had withdrawn them. The judge did not so find and this is not plain to us. In short, while not applauding Mr. Brewer's conduct, we do not think it reached the level at which the sanction of a fee award would be justified.

The judgment approving the settlement is affirmed. The order imposing sanctions on Brewer is reversed. No costs.

FURTHER ORDER ON PETITIONS FOR REHEARING

On September 10, 1982, we entered an unpublished order on petitions for rehearing and suggestions for rehearing in banc filed by both sets of appellants with respect to our opinion of July 14, 1982, slip opinions at 61, in which we affirmed an order of Judge Duffy, in the District Court for the Southern District of New York, approving the settlement of class actions brought by purchasers of W.T. Grant Co. securities alleging violations of federal and state securities law. We corrected a factual statement, slip opinions at 67, full paragraph, last sentence, in a manner stated therein. Beyond that we noted the contention made on behalf of the Coyne appellants that by affirming Judge Duffy's order approving the settlement despite his failure to render more than a cursory opinion, we had placed ourselves in conflict with In re General Motors Corp. Engine Interchange Litigation, 594 F.2d 1106 (7 Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Oswald v. General Motors Corp., 444 U.S. 870 (1979), and Girsh v. Jepson, 521 F.2d 153 (3 Cir.1975), and indeed had ignored the command of Protective Committee for Independent Stockholders of TMT Trailer Ferry, Inc. v. Anderson, 390 U.S. 414 (1968). We stated that we had no intention of doing anything of the sort but rather had regarded this as a unique situation where, because of the careful and well-reasoned opinions of Bankruptcy Judge Galgay on closely related issues arising in the bankruptcy liquidation of Grant, the district judge could properly have considered himself relieved of what would otherwise have been his obligation to make a detailed assessment of the settlement. See slip opinions at 74. However, because the point had not been adequately brought to our attention, we had not sufficiently focused on the fact that Judge Galgay's findings and conclusions were being seriously attacked in an appeal in the Grant bankruptcy proceedings that would shortly reach this court. We therefore directed that argument on the appeal from the order of Judge Duffy affirming Bankruptcy Judge Galgay's order in the Grant bankruptcy proceedings (hereinafter the Cosoff and Miller appeals) be heard before this same panel and ordered that issuance of the mandate in this case by stayed pending further order of this court.

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Because of the number of issues raised in the Cosoff and Miller appeals, the need to supplement the inadequate record that had been filed, and the fact that Judge Duffy had rested his approval in that case primarily 82 on res judicata, disposition of those appeals has taken longer than we had anticipated. However, by decision filed today, In re W.T. Grant Co., we have generally approved Judge Galgay's findings of fact and conclusions of law in his opinion of February 20, 1980, 4 B.R. 53, as supplemented by his order of June 23, 1981, approving the settlement with the subordinated debentureholders there at issue. Specifically, after examining the findings and conclusions submitted by counsel for the trustee in bankruptcy in that case, we have rejected the assertions made by attorney Brewer, both in that case and in this, that Judge Galgay had simply rubber-stamped the submissions of counsel for the trustee, a practice disapproved by United States v. El Paso Natural Gas Co., 376 U.S. 651, 656-67 (1964). Taking note of that decision Judge Galgay said he had adopted the trustee's proposed findings of fact where he had found no reason to do otherwise; however, he formulated his own discussion of the law of equitable subordination, the issue that is of particular moment here. In light of his opinion and our own examination of much of the evidence, we find that the chances of plaintiffs' establishing that the banks promoted a public belief in the viability of Grant which the banks did not share are extremely problematic.

We thus adhere to our opinion of July 14, 1982. In doing so we reaffirm the duty of district judges in this circuit to make a considered and detailed assessment of the reasonableness of proposed settlements of class actions, as held by the Third Circuit in Girsh, supra, 521 F.2d 153, 157-58, 159-60, and by the Seventh Circuit in General Motors, supra, 594 F.2d 1106, 1132 n. 44.

The factual correction made by our order of September 10, 1982, is further revised as follows: Strike last sentence of the full paragraph on p. 67 and substitute:

> Eleven bondholders appealed this order to the District Court for the Southern District of New York (Conner, J.), which stayed consideration of the appeals so that Bankruptcy Judge Galgay could supervise continuing negotiations among the bankruptcy trustee, the indenture trustee, the banks, and the debentureholders for an improved offer to the latter. Counsel for the debentureholders who had appealed from the order approving the earlier offer stipulated that these appeals be withdrawn with prejudice, and this was so ordered. On June 23, 1981, an amended offer was approved by Judge Galgay. Two groups of debentureholders appealed to the District Court (Duffy, J.) from the order approving the amended offer. In an opinion and order dated March 15, 1982, Judge Duffy affirmed the order, 20 B.R. 186. He rested his decision primarily on the ground of res judicata, although he also stated that the appeals were without merit. Two groups of debentureholders have appealed to this court.

The petitions for rehearing are thus granted insofar as concerns the correction of the factual statement but are otherwise denied. The clerk will take appropriate steps with respect to appellants' suggestion for rehearing in banc. The stay of the mandate will be revoked if no judge in regular active service requests rehearing in banc or, if this is done, such a request is denied.

Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, Third Division.

WEISS MEDICAL COMPLEX, LTD., Plaintiff-Appellant,
v.
Sun C. KIM, M.D., and Chusak Ladpli, M.D., Defendants-Appellees.

No. 79-2475.

June 25, 1980.
Rehearing Denied Aug. 13, 1980.

Medical clinic corporation brought action to enforce restrictive covenant contained in employment contracts of two doctors which covenant prevented doctors from practicing within ten-mile area of clinic for one year after leaving clinic and from soliciting, corresponding or contacting any clinic patient except for benefit of clinic during this time period. The Circuit Court, Cook County, George J. Schaller, J., entered an order denying clinic's motion for preliminary injunction, and clinic filed interlocutory appeal. The Appellate Court, McNamara, J., held that: (1) clinic was not entitled to preliminary injunction against one former employee-doctor, whose contract was cancelled by oral agreement with representative of clinic; (2) four members of board of directors of clinic had personal interest in matter before the board of eliminating restrictive covenants, stood to benefit from elimination of covenants, and were thus, disqualified to vote such benefit of removal to themselves; (3) action of board in voting to eliminate restrictive covenants was voidable; and (4) shareholders' refusal to ratify action of board of directors voided action of board.

Affirmed in part; reversed and remanded in part.

McNAMARA, Justice:

[1] Plaintiff, Weiss Medical Complex, Ltd., brought this action to enforce 112 a restrictive covenant provision contained in the employment contracts of defendants, Drs. Sun C. Kim and Chusak Ladpli. Following a hearing, the trial court found that the restrictive covenant in Kim's contract was cancelled by virtue of both an oral agreement with a representative of plaintiff and an action of plaintiff's board of directors. The court further concluded that the restrictive covenant in Ladpli's contract was not eliminated by oral agreement but was cancelled by the aforementioned corporate action. Accordingly, the trial court entered an order denying plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction. Plaintiff's interlocutory appeal challenges the finding that the board of director's action removed the restrictive covenants. Plaintiff does not, however, contest the court's ruling that an oral agreement rescinded Kim's restrictive covenant. Since Kim admittedly is not bound by the restrictive covenant at issue, the trial court correctly denied plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction as to him.

Plaintiff, an Illinois corporation, is a medical clinic located in Harvey, Illinois. Defendants are physicians licensed to practice medicine in Illinois. On October 10, 1972, and April 11, 1973, Kim and Ladpli, respectively, entered into employment agreements with plaintiff. Each contract *961 252 contained the following pertinent provisions:

"You agree to be employed by (plaintiff) for a period of one year * * *. After the one-year period, your employment and this understanding will be automatically renewed upon the same understanding as contained in this letter unless either (plaintiff) or you give notice in writing to the other not less than 90 days prior to the end of the year.

You recognize that the services which you will render to (plaintiff) are of unique and extraordinary character and you agree not to perform medical services individually or in connection with any other person, firm, association or corporation within a ten mile radius of the business location of (plaintiff), both during your employment and for one year after the expiration of your employment and for the same period you agree not to solicit, correspond or contact any patient except for the benefit of (plaintiff). In the event it is necessary to continue treating any patients after termination of your employment, the value of your services performed after termination will be fairly determined by (plaintiff). * * * Since we are sure you recognize your uniqueness to (plaintiff), if this paragraph is violated, (plaintiff) at its option shall be entitled, in addition to any other rights, to enjoin you."

Defendants resigned from the clinic on May 31, 1979, but remained affiliated with plaintiff on a part-time basis until September 24, 1979. 113 During June through September 1979, defendants also performed medical services in their own offices in Park Forest, Illinois.

On October 29, 1979, plaintiff filed a verified complaint for injunctive and other relief alleging that defendants breached their post-employment restrictive covenant by treating plaintiff's patients without plaintiff's knowledge or consent and by rendering treatment within a ten mile radius of the facility after leaving the clinic. Defendants filed a verified answer and motion to strike asserting, in pertinent part, that the employment agreements containing the restrictive covenant were cancelled by corporate action of plaintiff's board of directors on February 3, 1977.

On November 16, 1979, a hearing commenced on plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction and the following relevant evidence was adduced: Beginning in 1972, newly hired physicians entered into written employment contracts with plaintiff which contained the foregoing restrictive covenant and provided for a fixed salary. Because this salary arrangement was not successful financially, plaintiff adopted an "incentive pay plan", effective November 1, 1976, under which physicians were paid on a commission basis with a minimum salary "draw." In February, 1977, plaintiff's by-laws provided that the number of directors on the board should be an odd number not less than the number of shareholders. There were twelve shareholders at the time, of whom seven were elected directors.

All seven directors were present at the meeting of the board of directors on February 3, 1977. Four of these directors, including Ladpli, had written employment contracts containing the restrictive covenant at issue. Thomas Maloney, business administrator of the clinic, also attended the meeting. The corporate minutes of the meeting read in relevant part:
"After some discussion, to make it easier for physicians being 'eased out' of the clinic under the incentive system to leave and to make it easier for future physician recruitment, it was unanimously decided that the 'restrictive covenant' on all existing contracts be removed. Mr. Maloney also stated that new employment agreements are being worked on by Jerry Biederman. (Plaintiff's corporate counsel)."

Witnesses offered different accounts of who initiated the discussion about the restrictive covenants as well as the reasons underlying the board's decision. Dr. Oleg Prozorovsky, then chairman of the board, testified that there was discussion concerning the fact that some doctors were drawing962 253 relatively high salaries unjustified by their production. There was also discussion that removal of the restrictive covenants would make it easier for doctors who were not producing sufficiently to leave the clinic and would facilitate the hiring of new physicians. He did not recall who introduced the topic of restrictive covenants. Dr. Constante F. *114 Vallejos, another director, testified that Maloney indicated some doctors were dissatisfied with the incentive program and might sue plaintiff for their salaries. Vallejos also related that something was mentioned about easing out non-productive doctors by removing restrictive covenants. Vallejos and Prozorovsky, neither of whom had restrictive covenants, testified that deletion of the covenants was in plaintiff's best interest. Ladpli testified that Maloney initiated the discussion concerning the restrictive covenants. Ladpli had no knowledge, however, of any particular doctor being eased out. Maloney, who prepared the minutes, did not remember who presented the subject of restrictive covenants, and did not recall any discussion about plaintiff's intent to eliminate any doctors.

After reviewing the minutes, Mr. Biederman sent a memorandum to Dr. Robert Gloss, president of the clinic, expressing reservations about the vote to terminate restrictive covenants. Biederman explained that the resolution might be void or voidable, and that the directors, being on both sides of the contractual arrangement, may have breached their fiduciary duties. Gloss wrote back to Biederman stating that the board of directors had passed a "preliminary resolution removing the 'restrictive covenant' on all existing contracts." Biederman informed Gloss that the proper way to remove the restrictive covenant and to protect the directors was to obtain shareholder approval. Biederman advised Gloss to meet with Dr. Frederick Weiss, the majority shareholder, to find out if he were amenable to deleting the restrictive covenant from the employment contracts.

On June 6, 1977, a shareholder's meeting was held at which Weiss, among others, was present. The minutes provide, in relevant part, as follows:
"It was requested by Dr. Gloss that the shareholders ratify the actions of the Board of Directors that have taken place since the January meeting. A lengthy discussion followed regarding the new employment agreements which have been drawn up excluding the 'restrictive covenant'."

Weiss testified that the deletion of the restrictive covenant was sought to be ratified. He and other shareholders objected to its removal. Weiss further stated that no ratification of the board's February 3, 1977 resolution was achieved after the discussion.

Ladpli testified that ratification of the board's acts was not obtained at the shareholders' meeting, and that he never signed any employment contract excluding the restrictive covenant. Ladpli also testified that in late 1976, prior to the resolution in issue, he had discussions with Kim about leaving the clinic.

115 At the conclusion of the hearing, the trial court found that the written employment contracts between plaintiff and defendants were not contrary to public policy; that Kim, but not Ladpli, had an oral agreement with plaintiff, through Weiss, deleting the restrictive covenant; and that the restrictive covenants in the employment contracts of both defendants were cancelled by virtue of the February 3, 1977 action of plaintiff's board of directors. The court concluded that the board's action did not constitute self-dealing and was done in fairness and in the best interest of the corporation. The court found that the action was introduced by Maloney, and was instituted primarily for the benefit of Weiss and then for the doctors involved. The court dissolved a temporary restraining order which had been entered and denied plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction.

On appeal plaintiff challenges the trial court's ruling that the February 3, 1977 resolution of plaintiff's board was binding on the corporation and cancelled Ladpli's restrictive covenant. Specifically, plaintiff urges that it was legal error to allow four *963 254 personally interested directors having restrictive covenants in their employment contracts to be counted toward the quorum and majority vote of plaintiff's board of directors.

A quorum is composed of a majority of the number of directors fixed by the corporation's by-laws. The act of a majority of the directors at a meeting at which a quorum is present is the act of the board of directors. (Ill.Rev.Stat.1977, ch. 32, par. 157.37.) At the time of the resolution in issue, plaintiff's by-laws provided for thirteen directors; thus seven directors constituted a quorum.

[2][3][4][5] Duties imposed upon a director of the corporation as a fiduciary require him to manage the corporation with undivided and unqualified loyalty, and prohibit him for profiting personally at corporate expense or permitting his private interests to clash with those of his corporation. (See Patient Care Services, S. C. v. Segal (1975), 32 Ill.App.3d 1021, 337 N.E.2d 471.) In Illinois, a director who has a personal interest in a subject under consideration is disqualified to vote on the matter and may not be counted for the purpose of making a quorum. (Karris v. Water Tower Trust & Sav. Bank (1979), 72 Ill.App.3d 339, 27 Ill.Dec. 951, 389 N.E.2d 1359; Elward v. Peabody Coal Co. (1956), 9 Ill.App.2d 234, 132 N.E.2d 549; Federal Life Insurance Co. v. Griffin (1912), 173 Ill.App. 5.) The only exception is that a director, irrespective of any personal interest, may vote to establish reasonable compensation to all directors for service to the corporation. (Ill.Rev.Stat.1977, ch. 32, par. 157.33.) Whether a director is personally interested in a matter is a question of fact. (Karris v. Water Tower Trust & Sav. Bank.) Where there is no quorum because of the disqualification 116 of directors, a contract executed pursuant to a resolution of the board is voidable and may be rendered valid by shareholder ratification. Federal Life Insurance Co. v. Giffin.

Four of the seven directors who voted affirmatively to delete the restrictive covenant from all existing contracts had a restrictive covenant in their own employment contracts with plaintiff. The trial court did not make a determination whether these four directors had a personal interest in the matter under consideration by the board, although it did note that they benefited from the action.

[6] We believe that the evidence conclusively demonstrated that these four directors had a personal interest in the matter under consideration by the board. They were among the intended beneficiaries of the board's resolution. Removal of the restrictive covenant would enable a director to leave the clinic and yet continue to render services to patients previously treated at the clinic. This access to plaintiff's patients would provide clientele and a source of income to physicians leaving the clinic. Consequently, a director who was restrained from such ongoing patient contact by the restrictive covenant in issue stood to benefit from a favorable outcome on the vote to delete the provision from all existing contracts. Contrary to Ladpli's suggestion, it is immaterial that defendants remained with the clinic for over two years after the board's action. Had the resolution been valid, the benefit would still have accrued to defendants upon their departure from the clinic. We conclude, therefore, that the directors with restrictive covenants in their contracts were clearly disqualified to vote this benefit of removal to themselves.

[7] In view of the personal interest of four board members, when the matter of restrictive covenants was considered, there were only three directors whose lack of personal interest entitled them to be counted towards a quorum. Consequently, no affirmative action on restrictive covenants was taken by a qualified majority of the board of directors.

Under such circumstances, the board's action was voidable. Although the action could have been ratified by the shareholders, the shareholders expressed objections at a meeting on June 6, 1977, and ratification was not achieved.

964 255 [8] Ladpli asserts that because the action was voidable, plaintiff had to repudiate affirmatively the board's vote and urges further that a refusal to ratify does not constitute sufficient repudiation. In support of this contention, he cites Freeport Journal-Standard Publishing Co. v. Ziv Co. (1952), 345 Ill.App. 337, 103 N.E.2d 153. That case is clearly distinguishable from the present matter. There the court reasoned that where a corporate agent enters into an unauthorized agreement with a third party, the corporation has a duty to repudiate the transaction *117 promptly, and that silence under such circumstances is evidence from which ratification could be found. The case did not address the issue of shareholder ratification of an action taken by a board in the absence of a quorum. Moreover, here no third party contract existed, and, instead of remaining silent, the shareholders objected to removal of the restrictive covenant. The shareholders here refused to ratify the board's decision; no further affirmative acts of repudiation or disavowal of the vote was required.

Relying on Shlensky v. South Parkway Building Corp. (1960), 19 Ill.2d 268, 166 N.E.2d 793, Ladpli maintains that the vote of a personally interested director may be counted towards establishing a quorum and majority if made in fairness to the corporation. In Shlensky, the court addressed the fiduciary duty of corporate directors in transactions between corporations with interlocking directorates. Our supreme court held that transactions between corporations with common directors may be avoided only if unfair, and that the directors who would sustain the challenged transaction have the burden of overcoming the presumption against its validity by demonstrating its fairness.

In reaching its decision in the present case, the trial court apparently applied the fairness test advanced in Shlensky and concluded that the board's action was done in fairness to the corporation. The Shlensky decision, however, is inapposite. There, the court was primarily concerned with transactions between corporations where the directors had potentially conflicting or adverse obligations to more than one corporation. When speaking of a "disinterested" board, the court was referring to one in which the members had loyalty to only one corporation. The case did not consider whether a director with a personal interest in a matter under consideration by a corporation could be counted towards a quorum or could vote on the matter. Shlensky thus did not alter the law governing quorum requirements and the disqualification of directors having a personal interest.

In view of the personal interest of four directors, there was no quorum present at the board meeting on February 3, 1977. And since shareholder ratification was refused, the resolution to remove restrictive covenants from all existing employment contracts was not binding on the corporation. Consequently, the trial court erred in finding that the board's action cancelled the restrictive covenant in Ladpli's employment contract. Having so concluded, it is unnecessary to consider the additional arguments offered by plaintiff.

For the reasons stated, the order of the circuit court of Cook County denying plaintiff's motion for a preliminary *118 injunction against Dr. Sun C. Kim is affirmed; the order denying plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction against Dr. Chusak Ladpli is reversed and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Affirmed in part; Reversed and remanded in part.

Chapter 11. Directors, Other Officers and Agents
XXV. Directors and Officers as Fiduciaries or Trustees
A. General Rules
By Beth A. Buday, J.D. and Gail A. O'Gradney, J.D. [FNb]

§ 837.60 DUTY OF LOYALTY.

In discharging their function of managing the business and affairs of the corporation, directors owe fiduciary duties of care [FN1] and loyalty to the corporation. [FN2] The duty of loyalty is a broad encompassing duty, that in appropriate circumstances, is capable of impressing a special obligation upon a director in any of his or her relationships with the corporation. [FN3]

The duty of loyalty is fiduciary in nature, by reason of which the officer is held to something stricter than the morals of the market place. [FN3.50] The duty obtains most directly when the officer is interested personally in a matter affecting the corporation. [FN3.55] The concept of interest is broadly defined and includes cases where the officer has a relationship with a party to the transaction that may reasonably be expected to affect the officer's judgment or is subject to the influence and domination of such a party. [FN3.60] Yet, the duty goes beyond this and is coextensive with the legitimate, enduring interests of the corporation. [FN3.65]

The duty of loyalty takes no canonical form. It is as complex as corporate interests and officer temptations and means of descent from grace. It partakes of the objective as well as the subjective. If, for example, an officer neglects the substantial interests of his or her corporate principal by preferring another in a matter of importance, the officer may well offend his or her duty of loyalty though his or her heart is pure. [FN3.70] In such a case, a court would not concern itself with the officer's subjective intent but with the content of his or her conduct reasonably viewed by objective third persons. The question is whether there is a rational basis for a belief that the officer's action was in the best interest and not whether in fact the officer held such a belief. [FN3.75]

In a leading case, the Delaware Supreme Court stated that an undivided loyalty to the corporation demands that there shall be no conflict between duty and self-interest. [FN4] Corporate officers and directors are not permitted to use their position of trust and confidence to further their private interests. [FN5] Thus, officers and directors must exert all reasonable and lawful efforts to ensure that the corporation is not deprived of any advantage to which it is entitled. [FN6]

The duty of loyalty in essence involves conflicting economic or other similar interests. [FN7] Multiple loyalties or apparent conflicts are insufficient in themselves to establish a breach of loyalty. [FN7.50] The duty of loyalty is transgressed when a corporate fiduciary, whether director or officer, uses his or her corporate office to promote, advance or effectuate a transaction between the corporation and such person, and that transaction is not substantively fair to the corporation. [FN8] The test as to undivided loyalty of directors is whether corporate action is the result of the exercise by the directors of their unbiased judgment in determining that such action will promote the corporate interests. [FN9]

Even when directors act in good faith, their conduct may unintentionally violate the duty of loyalty. [FN10] Generally, the business judgment rule will not apply where there is a breach of the duty of loyalty. Thus, the duty of loyalty must be satisfied before the business judgment rule is applicable to actions of corporate fiduciaries. [FN11]

Although a corporation may limit or eliminate the liability of a director to the corporation or its shareholders for a breach of duty of care, [FN12] Delaware law provides that no provision in a certificate of incorporation shall limit or eliminate personal liability of a director breaching his or her duty of loyalty. [FN13] Courts have recognized the importance of such a distinction by refusing to dismiss claims against directors that have violated the duty of loyalty. [FN14]

Whether a director or officer has properly discharged his or her duty of loyalty is a question of fact to be determined in each case in view of all of the circumstances. [FN15] If a director is found to have breached his or her duty of loyalty, an injunction may be issued, [FN16] or damages may be awarded to the injured shareholders. [FN17] recommendations before it, to assure that the interests of absent class members are protected.[236] If no outside objections to the settlement are raised, all parties of record who are proposing the settlement are obligated in any event to furnish adequate information to enable the court to reach a reasonable determination of fairness. When absent class members or third parties, who have proper standing, interpose objections to a proposed settlement, these objections must be taken into consideration by the court independently weighing the considerations for settlement approval. Although theoretically the original settling parties may be said to have the burden of establishing the fairness of the settlement in relation to third-party objectors, the invocation of these concepts does not really add to the ordinary obligation of the settling parties to furnish adequate information for the purpose of enabling the court independently to reach its own determination of reasonableness and fairness.

The Manual for Complex Litigation (2d) states:

> Counsel for the parties are the main source of information concerning the settlement. They must fully disclose to the court all agreements and understandings and be prepared to explain how the settlement was reached and why it is fair and reasonable. They must also disclose any facet of the settlement that may adversely affect any member of the class or does not treat all members of the class in the same manner.[237]

The Manual editors go on to recognize that there are practical limitations on the ability of counsel for the parties to justify a settlement, including the very real danger of jeopardizing their client's future litigation position if the settlement is not approved or if the settlement is with fewer than all defendants:

> The justification given by counsel for the proposed settlement, although important, has practical limits. Attorneys who have been engaged in serious advocacy cannot be expected instantaneously to lay bare the strengths and weaknesses of their respective cases. Moreover, the settlement may be based in part on matters which, if disclosed, might be damaging if the settlement is disapproved or if claims remain against nonsettling parties. To press counsel too hard for detailed explanations of their settlement calculus may, therefore, be unwise. The court's evaluation of the settlement should take into account the presumptions of counsel, but may also be based on other sources—including comments from class representatives and class members, the judge's own knowledge of the case obtained during pretrial proceedings, and information provided by persons who in unusual cases may be appointed by the court as special masters under Fed. R. Civ. P. 53 or as experts under Fed. R. Evid. 706 to assess the settlement.[238]

§11.43 General Criteria for Settlement Approval

The criteria generally utilized in determining whether a settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate are:

1. Likelihood of recovery, or likelihood of success
2. Amount and nature of discovery or evidence
3. Settlement terms and conditions
4. Recommendation and experience of counsel
5. Future expense and likely duration of litigation
6. Recommendation of neutral parties, if any
7. Number of objectors and nature of objections
8. The presence of good faith and the absence of collusion

These and other similar criteria have been used to determine the fairness of the settlement.[239] The Manual for Complex Litigation, Second states:

[238] Id.

[239] Detroit v Grinnell Corp, 495 F2d 448, 463 (2d Cir 1974) (antitrust). A variation on the criteria determining fairness of settlement was designed by the court as follows:

1. Complexity, expense, and likely duration of litigation
2. Reaction of class to settlement
3. Stage of proceedings and amount of discovery completed
4. Risks of establishing liability
5. Risks of establishing damages
6. Risks of maintaining class action through trial
7. Ability of the defendants to withstand greater liability come of the litigation and the terms of the settlement agreement and must weigh the remedies the class could secure from the settlement against the probable costs and results of continued litigation.[230] "The court's power to approve or reject settlements does not permit it to modify the terms of a negotiated settlement. . . . It may only approve or disapprove the proposal."[231] Once it enters a final judgment in the form of an order approving a settlement agreement, the district court cannot alter the class under Rule 23, except in the face of egregious error.[232]

§11.42 Burden of Proving Fairness on Proponents

The burden of proving the fairness of the settlement is on the proponents.[233] An initial presumption of fairness is usually involved if the Moore v City of San Jose, 615 F2d 1265 (9th Cir 1980) (sex). The sole question before the district court in reviewing a settlement agreement is whether the agreement is fundamentally fair or just. The federal district court did not abuse its discretion when it approved an agreement settling an assistant policewomen's Title VII action against the city. The court's findings were sufficient to support belief that the assistant policewomen probably would have prevailed if the matter had been fully litigated, and evidence supported its findings that no existing employees would lose their jobs under the agreement.

Settlement was approved in a securities fraud class action, despite provision for a cash payment to a named defendant auditor when a collateral difference between the company and the auditor threatened the settlement, when continued litigation against the auditor would have implicated jurisdictional uncertainties, and when there were no objections to the proposed settlement. Extensive negotiations were conducted at arm's length and there were questions involving the collectibility from the defendant company of any judgment obtained against it.

settlement is recommended by class counsel after arm's-length bargaining.[234] As a practical matter, the overwhelming majority of proposed settlements are approved when the court is satisfied that arm's-length bargaining took place during settlement negotiations and experienced class counsel has recommended approval of the settlement.[235]

The use of burden of proof concepts in the context of settlement approvals for class or derivative actions goes primarily to the burden of providing the court with sufficient factual background concerning the ease or difficulty in proving the merits and defenses for or against claims raised and the scope and extent of potential relief available after adjudication as compared to relief obtained in settlement. In any proposed settlement, both the plaintiffs and the settling defendants have come to a proposed compromise of the controversy, and both are interested in obtaining court approval. Thus, in the absence of any third-party objectors, both the plaintiffs and the settling defendants are the proponents of the settlement and are no longer in an adversarial position with respect to requesting court approval. However, as noted earlier, the court must independently analyze the evidence and

TERRA MUSUEM OF AMERICAN ART

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING

April 25, 1990

By Daniel J. Terra

While this is an Annual Meeting of the Board of Terra Museum of American Art, i is my suggestion that, in addition to recent analyses, we try to assess the present circumstances in relation to the full period of the existence of the Museum, now ending its 10th year; seven of those years the Museum was in Evanston and the last three years in Chicago.

Before doing this, in order to acquaint Directors with as much historical perspective as possible, I would like to present events which eventually led to the opening of the Museum in Evanston, going back to the earliest collecting periods of Daniel and Adeline Terra.

The first phase covers the period when Daniel and Adeline were independent collectors. The first painting, an English landscape by Benjamin Leader, was purchased in May 1937 at Marshall Fields for $35.00. We were engaged at that time and were buying pieces of furniture for an apartment where we would live after our marriage which took place August 7, 1937. Adeline was an Art History Major at Northwestern University, then attended the Art Institute and had one of the finest "eyes for fine art" I have known.

Lawter was started just 50 years ago this month on April 1, 1940, and to [illegible] directors a brief early history of Lawter. It began to make progress after [illegible] and this made it possible for us to continue to expand the collection. During this period from 1945 until 1950, only English paintings were acquired - about 130 of them. From 1950 to 1955, we concentrated on old masters which DJT really, at that time, thought he liked best. Our means began to improve further and from 1955 to 1960 we went through the relatively short French Impressionist period, and acquired a collection which was housed in Kenilworth. The year 9[illegible] was a critical year in that Lawter went public that year and Adeline and Dan found American paintings through an invitation to dinner in New York where we saw a magnificant collection of American paintings in a home environment. Prior to that time, we had only noticed American paintings in museums. From that evening on, all the attention was on American Art. Gradually, we sold pr[illegible] the French Impressionist paintings to buy American Impressionist paintings. In retrospect, even financially, this was a good move. French Impressionist paintings had increased in value since we had acquired them and American paintings were available at extremely low prices. We continued selling as much as possible of the French paintings and the old masters, too, though some were retained at Adeline's insistence. She also would never agree to sell the English paintings. They were in her estate. I sold them in London in 1984, two years after her death to raise money for the new museum.

As we continued to buy American paintings, both Impressionist period and of the periods of the first three quarters of the nineteenth century, values of American paintings began to escalate at a slow, orderly rate. We continue buying starting in 1970 through 1975 when our improved financial circumstances made it possible to acquire many of the fine masterpieces which are now in the collection. The funding of these acquisitions really was made possible because our means was improving rapidly because Lawter was doing well as a public Company and I personally sold stock of Lawter through five underwritings at multiples of 23 to 55 times earnings. These registrations were successful because of the guidance of two marvelously professional investment bankers. The first three were done by Winfield Ellis and the next two by Ronald Melvin, both with the then named firm - Blunt, Ellis & Simmons.

By 1975, we had accumulated quite a good collection of American paintings which since their acquisition had risen in value far more than we could have imagined. These paintings were not bought for profit but merely because we liked them. At this point, it was suggested by counsel that we examine our estates which were growing but losing liquidity. It was estimated that the worth of the paintings had become a very large portion of DJT's and to some degree ART's estate, as well.

This led us to examine the concept of orderly giving works of art to museums of American art or to colleges with American art collections, all located along the Eastern Seaboard. All of the American paintings were in DJT's estate and all the English paintings were in ART's estate. The thought was to start an orderly disposition of the paintings to the artistically logical recipients during our life time. During this time, there were twenty odd small musuems of American art, part of liberal arts colleges, along the East Coast and the two major American Museums, also on the East Coast, the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia and the Whitney Museum in New York.

In 1977, a friend in New York suggested at lunch one day that we really had the where with all to start a small museum, an idea previously not thought of by us and added that there was not a museum of American Art within 400 miles of Chicago. This is how it all started. We acquired the Evanston property in 1978, refurbished it for use as a museum and we opened there in May of 1980 while DJT was full time National Finance Chairman for Ronald Reagan.

I went with then "Governor" Ronald Reagan's campaign starting in the summer o 1979 against the advice of some leading Republicans who did not think Governo Reagan had a chance. I do not wish to dwell on the political side of my experience, but merely wanted to mention it since all of these events took pl ce at about the same time.

Before the Museum opened in Evanston, we had met with Bob Strotz, then the President of Northwestern Univeristy, and told him the story of what we were about, proposed that the Museum and Northwestern University each put in $50,0C per year to hold a series of symposia of American Art. We had a sort of a "sixth sense" that a large University connection might be important to the museum, and this really turned out to be the case. The first symposia was hel at Northwestern, using primarily the Northwestern University mailing list, and we had over 1,000 people come in June, 1980, just a few weeks after the Museum opened. Subsequent symposia, addressed by the finest American Art scholars in the nation, became more and more successful. Using John Wilmerding, the foremost American Art authority from the National Gallery as our speaker, we filled Cahn auditorium with 1,300 people and turned several hundred away. To this day, it was probably the only time, (I believe we have photos of this incident) that people were scalping tickets for an art lecture. Later, the following year, we had to move into much larger Northwestern quarters and at a peak meeting, we had 2,100 people come to hear Tom Armstrong, Director of the Whitney Museum which was, and still is, the ranking musuem of American art in the nation. The success of these jointly sponsored symposia continued to be successful until 1983 when the Administration at Northwestern was critized by faculty groups for a wide variety of projects, one of which was the arrangement the University had with the Museum. President Strotz had no choice but to bow out of the arrangement and from then on, it was not the same, although the meetings still drew 500 to 700 people, far more than any art lectures in the country. By 1984, despite a difficult location in Northwest Evanston, attendance and financial support was making headway and we were encouraged that interest in historical American art was growing in the Chicago Area and in the Middle West in general.

When thinking of a Chicago location, it was decided that North Michigan Avenue would be our best for visibility and attendance. The first property, the Southwest corner of Michigan and Erie, was acquired in late 1984 and the other three properties in the next block were acquired in 1985. As you all know, the original Southwest corner of Erie and Michigan was sold in 1988 to both raise cash and because a careful study had revealed that it could not be used in the future as part of the Museum because it was not in the same block as the other three properties. Further, the three properties in the same block, which were then and are still owned by the Museum, were considered to be adequate for any future needs of the Museum.

Now, we come to the part about which I believe you are more familiar although might be well to repeat things that have been reported to the Board after t opening of the Museum in April of 1987.

In 1986, we hired Michael Sanden, as the new Director of the Museum. Michael Sanden had been Director of the Oklahoma Art Museum in Oklahoma City He was given full responsibility for both the reconstruction and the new construction of the buildings and all other matters for opening a new Museum When looking at the record and the costs incurred during this period, we simply had to find someone else to run the Museum and asked Michael Sanden to resign and replaced him with the current Director in July of 1987.

The record attached herewith (Page 6A) shows the 6-year operating record of the Musuem which starts for the audited fiscals 1986 thru 1989 and projections to fiscal 1990 and a budget for 1991. After reaching a peak in fiscal 1988, we have, starting in fiscal 1989, experienced both a decline in support and a reduction of expenses. The largest attendance was achieved in fiscal 1988 (126,231) and began to decline substantially in 1989 (36,173). In fiscal 1990, a continuation of the decline in financial support is projected and a nominal increase in attendance. Attendance during fiscal 1990 will be about 52,000.

This analysis of the 6-year period including the budget for fiscal 1991, speak for itself. Had it not been for the infusion of funds from the Terra family and the profits from the sale of the SW corner building and the profit from First Illinois and Mercury Finance stock, the deficits during fiscal 1988 and fiscal
