In support of their conflict of interest argument they are saying that somehow that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall shouldn't have voted because they were conflicted. But the Illinois Not for Profit Corporation Act has a very specific section dealing with conflict of interest. It specifically addresses this. And it says how do you know if there is a conflict? You look to see whether the director who is voting is a direct or indirect party to the transaction at issue, that's being discussed.

16di-003689

And it's clear they are not direct parties. They didn't sign in their individual capacity this consent decree. They weren't individually named in this litigation. So they weren't parties direct. And they are not indirect parties because Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act says you have to have a material, financial interest in the proposed transaction. You have to have an interest in the other entity that's a party to the transaction, in order to have this indirect conflict.

THE COURT: They say as a matter of law that's wrong, in their response.

MISS STONE: They do two things. First they cite to inapplicable For Profit Corporation law. That's not relevant here. And I think they sort of acknowledge that in their reply brief when they say well let's look at the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act if we've got to, but we can stretch the meaning of that, we can sort of pervert the language of the statute to try to wiggle out case in there. Well they are really stretching it beyond all appropriate bounds.

If you were to accept their argument, any settlement would be up for grabs and no one could vote on it because in very many litigation cases involving corporations there are potential claims against various directors that are floating out there.

So their argument, an incredibly over passive argument would be to lead to very difficult and illogical consequences. And it's just not the plain language of the statute.

So we would argue that they are citing you inapplicable law or misciting and misapplying the governing law.

The fact is here that there was no conflict of interest thatDr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall had.

Their next challenge, your Honor, is to the allegedly improper actions of the Attorney General.

16di-003691

And what's wrong with their analysis here is that they go so far then they stop. They miss a crucial step. They say the Attorney General acted improperly therefore this agreement has to be vitiated.

Well under the law of coercion what the Attorney General allegedly did had to have had an actual affect on Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. It had to have actually overcome their free will.

You've heard them on the tape now, your Honor, you've read the transcript. Their free will was not overcome. In fact at the 11th hour at the meeting itself Dr. Marshall said, well if you all make this new contemplated change to this resolution I'm not going to vote for this. The deal of off. You need my vote and I am not going to go along with that and this whole thing might blow up. See you later and we're back in litigation.

She was not acting like a cowed intimidated victim who was fearful of the Attorney General. She was exercising her free will vigorously, the way she always did.

In fact if you, without getting into the details of mediation, if your Honor will look at some of the letters presented to your Honor, you will see that many of Dr. Marshall's proposals were in fact incorporated in the final end product. He was a vigorous campaigner, a vigorous participant in this debate, so was Dr. Stebbins. They were not intimidated, quaking victims here of the Attorney General.

Finally, your Honor, I have already alluded somewhat to why their antithetical argument to the best interest of the Foundation argument doesn't wash.

What they have really done here is fail to recognize that other directors can act in good faith and can come to an opposite conclusion.

I think the central irony in the case--well there are several--one is it seems to be only the Foundation who is always coming before you and saying you know what, allow the Foundation to be a Foundation, respect our integrity, respect our independence. Don't allow yourself to be used by disgruntled detractors on either side of the political fence here to use you. Let the will of the majority speak for this Foundation and respect that.

There is an irony that Mr. Buntfock and

Mr. Gidvitz have reaped and sowed they are not reaping through this attack from the objectors.

There is another irony here, your Honor. The irony is that maybe it would have been better from the objectors' perspective if this thing had been a trust. This is not a trust despite what the Attorney General says, and despite what the Attorney General says as recently as yesterday afternoon in his filing, this is not a public charitable trust, whatever that term supposedly means.

This is, Dan Terra, if he had set up a trust to exhibit art in Washington, D.C., New York, Boston and Chicago for time immemorial that may have been better from the perspective of the objectors. But he did not do that. What he did he set up a not for profit corporation that had a Board of Directors. He set up a charter and said this is your broad mission, this is your broad constitution. You as directors are now impowered to make decisions about what is in the best interest of this Foundation going forward.

And therefore the directors can, in their wisdon, in their exercise of best judgment, decide what is in the best interest of the Foundation. It is not imperative, it is not absolute, it is not a mandate from a grantor of some trust that this art be shown in D.C., or New York. The Board of Directors has this degree of independence.

I think in conclusion, your Honor, I would simply say this is a case, really these are two cases against the Foundation which have been pending now for about ten months. We've been through five months of mediation. It has been a very expensive process for the Foundation. The majority of the directors have spoken. They want to put an end to this. They think this is indeed in the best interest of the Foundation. The Board has spoken. The Board should be heeded.

MR. QUINLAN. Your Honor, just a couple of things. I think what we have here is a premature attack on the consent decree by the objectors. First of all we're here today to ask your Honor to sign that consent decree. And what's at issue here in your signing the consent decree is whether or not this is an agreement of the parties and the terms are properly reflected in the agreement.

It's undisputed the parties have entered into this and these terms are the terms that were intended.

THE COURT: You lost me for a second. You say it's premature. Are you saying the procedure is it should be signed?

MR. QUINLAN: Yes.

THE COURT: The case should be dismissed, they should be denied discovery, they should be denied leave to file any pleadings, case is over. We have a consent decree. And then what is the next step?

MR. QUINLAN: The next step would be a 2-1401 to challenge the consent decree, your Honor, on the basis that coercion took place. I think what counsel has demonstrated here is there is no basis even for that allegation of coercion.

What we're talking about here really is a presentation to you a settlement. And that settlement whether the Court should sign that settlement or enter the order only requires a determination by you as to whether or not this is an agreement and whether or not this reflects the terms of the agreement.

THE COURT: Where do you come up with this 2-1401? And the reason that I ask that is I looked at all their cases and they're pretty much class action type things. And they're pretty much situation where, you know, you've got one of these public hearings like we have all the time to approve a class settlement. And it's a totally different thing.

I'm looking at the cases that you've cited, or that the Foundation has cited in its brief about the clear and convincing standard. One is a marriage case and some other issues. I'm looking for something where you got any of these cases, any of them, deal with court ordered mediation, or a mediation of case and someone is coming in and challenging that mediated settlement.

MR. QUINLAN: It really doesn't make any difference, for your purposes here, whether it's a mediated settlement or not. The issue is it's a settlement. Let's assume we didn't mediate but we said your Honor, would you delay this case for a couple of weeks, we believe we can work this out.

THE COURT: Okay, and we've got a settlement. You come and you've got a settlement.

MR. QUINLAN: We come in and present it. And there are people who say, wait a minute, wait a minute, that's not the settlement. That's what they might be saying. But they are not saying that here. They're saying they don't like the settlement, that they don't want the settlement, they don't believe the settlement is proper. That's not a challenge.

They're saying the Attorney General, by his actions, coerced them. That's only a challenge to the consent decree after it has been entered.

THE COURT: Okay, but see you're talking about a settlement where everybody settled. We're talking about a situation here that is somewhat different. These folks aren't settling. They are not part of the settlement.

MR. CUMMINS: It is also a derivative case and they ought to address that.

MR. QUINLAN: It is not derivative at all. We sue under the provisions of 103.15 (a). I'd advise you to read our pleadings that we did file.

THE COURT : I just reread today your complaint and you don't say it's derivative. And I reread the

16di-003698

Attorney General's complaint today because I was trying to go back in history.

MR. QUINLAN: And he doesn't say it's derivative. We have our standing and he has his own standing by statute.

THE COURT: Would you then be saying you had the settlement and I signed the consent decree and it's done, and this case is dismissed, they're going to come back and file a 2-1401. Now what standing do they have to come back in and file a 2-1401?

MR. QUINLAN: That's a good question. I don't know if they have any standing here at all. But that's not my problem. That's their problem.

The real issue here today is this is the same as if it were a divorce decree. They had a divorce decree and came in here and both of the parties to the divorce decree asked you to sign it. You don't hold a fairness hearing. You don't hold an evidentiary hearing. You sign it.

This is the agreement. Is there any question that this is the agreement, or is there any question that these are the terms? No. That is what's to be signed. It is not a derivative action, this is not a class action.

If your Honor read the statement by Judge Posner in the Mars case there is a total difference between class actions and --Judge Posner says look, the normal thing is you look at this and you say did the parties agree to this. Okay, that's what it is. We don't look any further.

The only reason we look further in a class action is because those parties are only represented by an attorney whose maybe interest is not the same as the real parties in interest here, who are not present.

THE COURT: We need to do a reporter switch here.

THE COURT: And who will be speaking at this table besides Mr. Cummins?

MR. TODD: Chris Todd. I don't know whether Mr. Garment will have that much to say or not, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Quinlan, I am trying to get a handle on the case law issue about something that's close to here.

Let's assume we have a regular law-suit which this, of course, is not. And some of the parties settle with others of the parties and they come to the Court and they say, "Please approve this settlement."

Usually they come and they say, "Give us a good faith finding that this settlement is in good faith or whatever," and they proceed against the others. You don't have that situation here.

MR. QUINLAN: You don't have that. That's only a contribution.

THE COURT: Right, and in this case you are dismissing everything in regard to everybody else.

MR. QUINLAN: That's correct.

THE COURT: So any of the cases that have been cited, is anything close to the situation where someone is attacking or wants to attack the settlement?

MR. QUINLAN: Sure.

THE COURT: How does one do it?

MR. QUINLAN: One would do it either by motion to vacate a settlement or you would do it by -- depending upon your time, a 21401 gives you two years to try to claim you have some basis for doing it, but you can't be dilatory, as your Honor knows, on a 21401.

If I may, my suggestion is that these are the weapons you take off the arsenal wall. I don't mean to suggest that counsel even has them available to him.

I have a real hard problem with what standing they have. Now, they participated in this. In a mediated settlement, the only basis for ever setting aside or objecting to a mediated settlement is if you haven't had the opportunity to participate.

In fact, it was their client who asked for it. It was their clients who chose a mediator. It was their clients who wanted none of this information to be circulated or to go forward any further.

It was their clients who sought, participated in, and negotiated throughout this process.

Only when it didn't end up with the result that they wanted do they now attempt to object. So they withdraw from the agreement, refuse to be part of it, refuse, even though they participate in the hearing, a Board meeting which was lawfully called, as pointed out by Ms. Stone. And everybody had notice and they participated.

Eight members were there and their two people were there and they did participate and they did object to certain things.

They didn't object to the agreement. They didn't object and say it wasn't the agreement. They didn't say the terms weren't right. They didn't say the terms should be changed.

We are now here to present that agreement to your Honor to be signed. There is no fairness hearing that has to be held here. There is nothing of that nature to take place.

What these people are doing is they are trying to stop you from signing it. There is absolutely no basis to stop this Court from signing it.

You have a validly-executed agreement that was mediated. It was determined by mediation. Everybody participated in it. They were there. They asked for it. They wanted to be part of it.

And that mediated agreement then went to the Board. The Board held a valid hearing. Everybody was there that could be there and it was voted on and they lost.

THE COURT: Give me an example of a case, a non-class-action case, non-class-action, where someone has successfully come forward and challenged a mediated -- or not even a mediated -- a settlement. Just I will settle for a settlement and I am looking for the procedure on how it's done.

MR. QUINLAN: I can give you the procedure, but I don't have a case in front of me where they have been successful.

I have cases where they haven't been successful and the reason, your Honor, they haven't been successful is just, as Judge Posner said, the situations where settlements are ever considered beyond is this -- the agreement of the party and the needs reflected in terms of the party are almost nonexistent, because the parties determine the fairness and the appropriateness of the settlement.

By the parties agreeing to it, by the Board voting for this, determines the fairness. They were exercising their business judgment when they did that.

I would call your Honor's -- yes, Posner's decision: "Fairness of a settlement of a legal dispute is like the adequacy of consideration supporting contractual funds, a matter best left to negotiation between the parties."

And only in class actions is that a different setting and he points out that's only because the lawyer is the principal here. And the lawyer himself is acting not only supposedly on everybody else's behalf but only on his own behalf. They often conflict.

And the case is the Marco case that we cited to you, which is a divorce case, and in that case they said you don't have to have an evidentiary hearing. You don't have to even go through that process. Look at what's been filed here.

Your Honor has seen it twice now, the same documents that were filed in Federal proceedings, which Judge Bucklo discounted, he said did not raise an issue for her to consider.

THE COURT: Their documents are much different this time. Mr. Cummins is --

MR. QUINLAN: Well, the second time -- They are very similar. They are the same type of affidavits. None of those affidavits are based on personal information.

We have evidence of, you know, the potential of looking for real estate, I have some possibilities of putting the property temporarily someplace else, using it for headquarters or facilities and things of that nature.

None of those things are raised in any kind of evidentiary issue or a material evidentiary here. And all of the things are consistent with, in fact, this being a valid, appropriate settlement. And frankly they all went to the intent of the testator here, the settler here, which your Honor says wasn't even an issue.

It was all coercion. None of it goes to coercion.

All we have here is people who have speculated before, Mr. Tucker, about he thinks they may have been coerced.

THE COURT: How about some case law on coercion?

MR. QUINLAN: On coercion?

THE COURT: And who was normally the party who is bringing the coercion issue?

MR. QUINLAN: The people who have been coerced, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Do we have any cases cited in this mass of cases that you have all given me --

MR. QUINLAN: Sure.

THE COURT: -- that talk about someone other than the person who was conversed -- coerced coming forward and saying somebody else was coerced?

MR. QUINLAN: I don't see that, your Honor. I think Judge Bucklo didn't really address that.

She said, "They are asking me to --" First of all, she said, "Where is Mr. Stebbins and where is Ms. Marshall? They are not here. They do not offer any affidavits."

And said, "What you are asking me to do, to find the two actions that you allege that were taken, one was the threatening of filing of the Complaint and the fact that they changed their vote to be a grounds for me to enjoin them from doing that."

She found both of them to be legal actions. And the changing of the vote to be consistently legal actions.

The investigation she also found to be legal and she says, "You are asking me to take legal actions and to somehow apply them to somebody else and to say that that's coercion. It is not coercion."

Even the cases that we cite to your Honor in our brief show that it isn't coercion. They threaten to file a Complaint, to file a Complaint. And what they are saying is that they settled this because they were subject to this Complaint. Isn't every lawsuit about that?

They try to torture this alleged coercion into a conflict of interest, because they had a person conflict. It was their benefit to settle this so all these things wouldn't happen.

Your Honor, this was only the potential of lawsuits here, the potential against Mr. Stebbins and to Ms. Marshall; but, in fact, their clients have the suit against them.

How in God's name under their theory could they participate? They are already in suit here. How can anybody in a settlement ever participate? Because they are sued. That's how you settle cases. Those are the people who sit down and settle.

How could you ever settle a divorce case? Because on the one side is the husband, who is either bringing the suit or has a suit brought against him and vice versa with the wife. And both of those people are the people that come forward to settle.

Those are conflicts? They are not conflicts under the law, your Honor, and surely we can't torture this alleged charge of coercion into a conflict and it doesn't make a conflict.

As we point out in our papers, it requires a wrongful or illegal act or a threat against the person which deprives of them of their free will.

We cite the Reginal case, the Waldeens case, Lindberg/Flynn, Heggins vs. Brunswick, Town vs. -- the Town of Libertyville, In Re the Marriage of Hammond Smith (phonetic spellings).

All these cases stand for that proposition that unless you can do that, that it fails, and that's what basically they have found, that it fails.

The Wellings case, the firm -- the Trial Court's refusal to even vacate a settlement agreement where the movants failed to establish fraud, coercion, or duress by clear and convincing evidence.

The Flynn case, burden of proving duress or coercion by clear and convincing evidence, is on the party asserting. Defendants failed to meet their burden.

Your Honor, there isn't a single situation here and they cite no case, no authority to support any of their positions. What they try to do is they try to torture by analogy class actions into the settings.

Most of the cases that they cite to you, they don't even tell you it's a class action.

And they suggest that it supports their position. But if you look at it, it is a class action, a totally different situation.

Each one of their alleged conflict cases, in fact, involve for the most part pecuniary conflicts. Other situations are conflicts involving lawyers. It's a lawyer's conflict that they had.

In some of the situations it didn't even involve the Board of Directors, so that none of the situations -- frankly, they are the ones that are throwing out the cases on the basis that there is a conflict and it's a pecuniary conflict. And that's why they couldn't participate.

So those cases really support our position, but the issue here, really, your Honor, is not whether or not they can set aside this Consent Decree.

It's whether your Honor can sign it. And they don't even challenge the terms. They don't even challenge whether it's an agreement, because they can't.

They were there. They participated in the mediation. They were there and participated in the Board hearing. They know that this is the terms. They know that this was accepted. And they know it's an agreement of the parties.

They are not there. They are not part of this. This is like the uncle trying to charge in and contest the divorce proceeding between the parties who agree.

I don't know what standing there is for that. None. I don't see any. You may have some sort of an interest, because you know the parties and you have some relationship. But that's not good enough.

THE COURT: So -- I have been taking a look at the cases you were talking about, also. And as I understand it, what you are saying is all of these involve Motions to Vacate, like this.

MR. QUINLAN: Right.

THE COURT: That a Motion to Vacate and already entered into an Agreed Order, the parties have stepped up.

MR. QUINLAN: Right.

THE COURT: And in each of those cases it is a party who participated who seeks to vacate it for some reason. It's not a stranger to it.

MR. QUINLAN: That's right.

THE COURT: And you are saying these three are essentially strangers?

MR. QUINLAN: They are strangers to the agreement.

THE COURT: So you would be saying that they wouldn't be able to bring the 21401?

MR. QUINLAN: Absolutely. I don't see it. I mean, it's their burden to show you. I don't see how they can do it, but they have a long process here. First of all, they don't --

THE COURT: What's the right process? What can they do?

MR. QUINLAN: They can challenge the agreement after it's been entered.

THE COURT: Yes, but how? You said they couldn't bring the 21401, so --

MR. QUINLAN: I don't think they can. That's the process.

THE COURT: So how can they?

MR. QUINLAN: They can't. Well, if you don't have standing, your Honor, you can't bring it. You can't bring a lawsuit without standing.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: So without standing to bring a lawsuit, you can't bring it. I think they don't have standing, but it's not my job to research that finding.

I don't find anything in all the papers that they find that show that they have any standing. I don't see anything in all the documents that they filed that shows that any kind of coercion took place here that is recognizable in the law.

I don't see anything in here that shows that there is a conflict of interest that took place on the part of Mr. Stebbins and Ms. Marshall when they voted.

In fact, I see the law under the Statute, in fact, under the procedures that were adopted by the Foundation for their people that established that a code of ethics that was a pecuniary requirement, and that's not met here, either.

Nothing in any of the papers, any of the documents, establishes a conflict, establishes any coercion taking place. And as a matter of fact, don't even establish any harm to these people, who aren't participating. So I don't know what they are complaining about.

Their lawsuit is dismissed, for they are no longer parties to a lawsuit and will not be, as soon as your Honor signs it. They are out of the case. They suffer no harm from that.

What you have here are disgruntled directors who participated in a vote and lost, which was legal, which was proper. They participated in mediation and they lost. Mediation --

THE COURT: Well, you don't lose in mediation. You just don't agree.

MR. QUINLAN: Pardon?

THE COURT: You don't --

MR. QUINLAN: Well, you don't lose; you don't agree. That's the point. And that's why they are saying I am not supporting this.

And it's the same as in any other settlement. You have two of the parties, three of the parties, four of the parties settle it. They are just not party to it.

And so I don't know what standing they have here to complain about anything.

On the other hand, --

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Quinlan, I really do want to hear from the defendants, because they are the objectors.

MR. QUINLAN: The real point, though, your Honor, the only thing that they can complain about before you sign this is whether or not there is an agreement and whether or not this is the terms. They don't even do that.

So there is nothing here but for you to sign it.

They complain about the conflict of interest that was created by this coercion, saying that it voided their votes. But, as we point out, it isn't a conflict of interest. The votes weren't voided. And even under the procedure and the Statute, there is possibly a way in which that wouldn't make any difference.

But, in any event, they don't even have any standing to do any of those.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Mr. Perkins. You don't need to say anything, if you don't want to. If you want to say anything in support of entering this Consent Decree or do you want to hold your remarks in response to whatever they say or objections? It's up to you.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I just -- I am not going to repeat.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PERKINS: I do think it's important to note that mediation started at the defendants' request, that mediation was conditioned by these defendants by coming to us and saying, "Can we give full releases in a total global Terra-related settlement?"

They came to us, the Attorney General's office, in the middle of expedited hearings and expedited discovery, and said, "Stop litigation. Let's mediate."

So they were the ones who first came to us and said, "Can we get individual releases? Can we settle everything?" And that was the start of mediation.

We never talked to Dr. Stebbins ever. We have never had a conversation with him. We've never sent him a separate communication. We never sent him our First Amended Complaint. He must have gotten it through counsel.

That was sent --

THE COURT: You did meet him. When you say "we," you were the only one who was there with him, all when they had their Board meeting.

You did meet Dr. Stebbins?

MR. PERKINS: When they -- Yes. When we were in mediation sessions, he was present in the room and we did say probably "hello" and he did speak about two other people in the room.

But we did not have any conversation with him. We did not talk about his -- the matters related to him individually.

They were never discussed in those mediation sessions. In fact, none of the matters about individuals were ever discussed in the mediation sessions. That was --

Part of the deal was, if we could resolve the issues with regard to the Foundation staying in Chicago or Illinois or how we resolve its function, that it would -- that the idea was all -- would be included and there would be releases for everyone.

That -- It's also important to note that that draft amended complaint which was sent to people in settlement is to show our position with regard to the -- our belief that the Foundation couldn't leave Illinois, which was a real reason it was given to them. That was given to them in March of 2001.

We then went and spent April, May, and June mediating. Now, if they were concerned that Dr. Stebbins had changed his mind or he was going to have these conflicts, they certainly didn't do anything for all that time period. That's because they all expected to get releases. They wanted releases for themselves. It was part of the mediated plan.

THE COURT: And part of this settlement is to give them those releases.

MR. PERKINS: They have got it, Judge.

THE COURT: Only them. What do you mean by "them," "they have gotten them"?

MR. PERKINS: All the directors of the Foundation, everybody is released.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PERKINS: The releases -- The cause is dismissed with prejudice. They have gotten really what they were seeking.

Due to the fact that in the end of May we thought settlement was over and we have set that forth in our papers. We started to get ready. We were up against law firms that were spending quite a bit of time preparing it.

We are -- You know, we may be the Attorney General's Office, but we have, you know, limited resources. And as we started to do that, we became aware of an unrelated matter. That matter, it was a review by us. It's our duty to do those things.

And we have set those forth in those papers, but we never communicated directly with Dr. Marshall and we resolved that matter with her counsel. And those matters were never tied together. And if they were still going, she would have given up.

Perhaps, if she was going to do something about trading or tying the matter together, she certainly didn't accomplish it, because she already voted. And this deal is already accomplished.

There was no tying those matters by her, by us, or by anyone.

We didn't do anything unlawful or wrongful in this case and we never caused anybody any duress. We participated in mediation.

The contentions about Dr. Stebbins were the releases that everybody was going to get. And it's just convenient now to complain about those.

We don't agree with counsel from Sidley and Austin whether the Foundation is a charitable trust or not.

THE COURT: Let's not get into that.

MR. PERKINS: We put that in our papers. It's moot, Judge, and we agree. However, the objectors have made an issue of it. We placed our arguments in the papers. As is the issue of what Dan Terra's intent was.

There is all kinds of remarks bandied about about what it is. We disagree. However, that also is moot.

We acquiesce to letting the Foundation run as it has and certainly the Foundation running as it has is clearly within its past intent and clearly within its Articles of Incorporation.

So the contention that this settlement is causing it to act contrary to its history is preposterous. It's precisely going to act as it acted in the past.

If there is any particular questions your Honor has, --

THE COURT: No, I don't. I really do want to hear finally from the defendants.

Before I do that, we have -- I know we switched court reporters. I can keep going. I want to make sure that you all don't want to take a five-minute break before you start. It's up to you.

MR. CUMMINS: It will really take a lot longer for me to congeal all of those eloquent words of my colleagues, so we are ready to go now.

THE COURT: Fine. Mr. Cummins, go ahead.

Let me know if anybody feels a need to take a break. I have a tendency to just keep going through. So just let me know. Request a recess at any time.

MR. CUMMINS: I had that feeling earlier, but I restrained myself.

Judge, let me start with some -- just a simple proposition.

You have before you a piece of litigation that has momentous applications to people in the State of Illinois. It is a critical issue in this community. No question about it.

The Attorney General, in his complaint, where he is complaining that folks on the Board weren't doing the right thing, he says, paragraph one: "This cause is brought for and on behalf of the People of the State of Illinois by and through the Attorney General," and citing the Charitable Trust Act, "and his common law power and duty to protect the interests of the People of Illinois and pertaining to charitable assets."

Now, that's the context in which this litigation from the AG's standpoint was initiated.

This is a court of equity and I am going to suggest a couple of things. The decision that you are called upon to make on this settlement, which by any objective standard has some questionable aspects to it, is a critical decision.

You invested a lot of time and effort, the folks who sat through mediation with my colleague, Mr. Cronin.

Judge, there is no need for you to resolve this matter today. And I am not suggesting -- In our papers that we filed, we asked for a couple of simple things. And if you want to restrict me to two hours a shot, that's fine.

I need three depositions. I need the deposition of Mr. Perkins, who was interviewed and said and did certain things.

He contests those matters before this Court. He files a 40-some-page document that is replete with factual assertions that have not been tested.

With respect to the obvious conflicted posture of these two Board members, Marshall and Stebbins, without the opportunity to effectively cross-examine these folks, Judge, you are certainly not in the position to make a determination of whether or not their decision in this case was appropriate.

And more importantly, we take the position they should not have participated in this vote, because they were not disinterested, which is a standard that must apply here.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, then, weren't your clients also not disinterested? I mean, weren't they also disinterested parties? They should not have participated in the vote, either?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, let me answer it this way.

My clients -- My clients were not during the course of mediation, put in a position where they were threatened with the possibility of additional protracted litigation, as was the case of Stebbins.

They were not in the position of allegations that they were engaging in possible conflicted employment positions with the State of Illinois, as with Dr. Marshall.

There was not a word said, with all of the great Foundation guidance and counsel, read those transcripts. There was not --

When the folks from Winston & Strawn asked them about, "Are you sure you are making this vote, you are conducting this vote independent of any pressure or coercion --" you know, the Miranda warnings that he gave them -- there was not a word said about the fact that, "Hey, wait a minute, we have to decide whether or not these people, given their posture in this matter, are conflicted."

say it, either.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, --

THE COURT: Dr. Tucker were there and Mrs. Terra were there.

MR. CUMMINS: Our clients -- I wasn't there, Judge. Their lawyers weren't there. Nobody was there from my folks.

THE COURT: Why?

MR. CUMMINS: If you expect --

THE COURT: Why? I mean, the rest of these folks had lawyers with them, did they not?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge, the only people --

THE COURT: I don't mean on the line. They weren't on the phone. But did any of them have lawyers with them or Acts --

MR. CUMMINS: No.

THE COURT: Not even in the room?

MR. CUMMINS: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Do we know that?

MR. CUMMINS: You see, here is the --

THE COURT: I'm sorry. Do we know that? I --

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, we know that.

THE COURT: Let me go to the transcript.

I know they said they couldn't be on the line, but there sure is an awful lot of whispering on that tape with people.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, there were folks from Sidley, folks from Winston.

THE COURT: So --

MR. CUMMINS: That's who was there. That's all. Those are the only lawyers. They can tell me if I am wrong. I know I am not wrong.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: Now, Judge, here is the simple proposition. You are going to be gone for three weeks.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CUMMINS: There is no reason for you to rush this thing to a conclusion today. I am just trying to be pragmatic. We don't need to go across the street and go through all the, you know, monkey business.

And if they think that we are going to walk away from this and have these counterclaims just filed away, this litigation isn't over, Judge, but it ought to get over but it ought to get over fair and right.

And one way to do it is you afford me six hours of discovery of deposition testimony of those three folks. We will come back here in three weeks. Let's have a presentation on the issues that we have raised, giving us at least, Judge, a fair opportunity to present our position.

Now, there is nothing unreasonable about that, most respectfully. You know I am not a guy that's going to go out and just waste a lot of time. I don't have the attention span for that.

But I will tell you this: Your Honor, it is not coincidental, it is not coincidental that the Attorney General's Office would flip on the switch of an investigation of Dr. Marshall's facility in the midst of these negotiations.

Is that coincidental? It's not coincidental that Dr. Stebbins is accused of engaging, not just in conflict of interest but compromising confidential information of the Foundation in furtherance of his own interests as a director or a participant in the affairs of another institution.

Those things aren't coincidental. Anybody that's been out after dark, who is looking at those facts, and a member of the public would say, "Wait a minute. Something is rotten here."

And all I am asking you to do, in simple sense of simple fairness, consistent with the stakes that are at issue here, give us a chance to vent these things.

And as officers of the court, we are not going to come back here and protract this, if we don't -- if we don't back up what we are saying.

We will make an offer of proof. I will make an offer of proof on what exactly we expect to show.

And I will bet you this: With Dr. Marshall's and Dr. Stebbins' cross examination, they will not be able to utter a word to suggest that anyone reviewed with them the implications of these activities and the impact that it had on them.

Now, if --

THE COURT: On the cases that you cited, and that I did spend a lot of time with over the weekend, your cases, do we have anything that comes close, a non-class-action case where parties to a settlement or a nonparty to a settlement in which your clients are not parties to a settlement, but certain parties in the case have settled and a nonparty to the settlement comes forward and challenges that?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, we are defendants in this lawsuit.

THE COURT: And they are going to dismiss you with prejudice.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, they are going to dismiss us, but we are counterclaimants, your Honor.

And, your Honor, let me just -- This ain't -- This isn't just, you know, a procedural nicety. You abated, and I don't want to put you in the trick bag, you abated these proceedings. That doesn't bar my client from filing an answer to these unfounded charges. We did that. You abated these proceedings. We were not foreclosed and cannot be foreclosed, most respectfully, from filing a counterclaim. Those pleadings are on file.

Just so the record is clear, we filed a motion for leave to submit those, because you directed it to be done that way. And I was -- an answer, never filed a counterclaim. You have two other clients --

MR. CUMMINS: Okay. Blame me, Judge. I wasn't there.

THE COURT: I know. You have two other clients that never answered. One had a motion to dismiss pending and the other one I don't think any responsive pleadings were --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, now you have it all in front of you.

THE COURT: And so, you know, there is a time in Illinois procedure to file a counterclaim. And if you don't file it when you file your answer, I think you have to come in on a motion for leave to file it.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, you -- No, your Honor directed no further pleadings be filed. That stopped the clock. The only reason --

And when I talked to Jim Wilson, the only reason that they were able to get that one pleading on file was they had the opportunity before you closed the case on pleadings.

Your Honor, it would be --

THE COURT: When we went to -- When you went to mediation, right.

MR. CUMMINS: It would be grossly unfair for you to suggest that, "Hey, having entered an order that says no more pleadings, oh, Mr. Cummins, you are too late." I know you wouldn't do that.

THE COURT: Well, I understand that. It's just that I think it was around February 6th. I don't have all the orders here, but when you went -- or February 5th or whatever, when you went -- when they went to mediation, I entered an order that enjoined or stopped anybody from filing any-more, I think we called it briefs or motions, did we not? No more motions could be filed in this case.

Did I -- Is that the way it was worded, that no one could file any motions?

MR. CUMMINS: I've got the order somewhere in this morass of paper.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: But there is no question, according to the lawyers, the lawyers' understanding who represented my clients at the time, was that there were to be no further pleadings.

And for better or worse, we are new lawyers, but that doesn't mean we have to compromise our clients' interests.

And, Judge, you know, I don't want to -- I don't want to get off side-tracked on that, because maybe some of these issues -- I said to you the last time a lot of this can get simplified.

One way to get simplified is to give us a fair opportunity to present our position. And most respectfully, you have given us an opportunity to present a lot of our views and legal arguments. But the critical element, the critical element, the role of these folks and the implications that the Attorney General's conduct has not been dealt with and to leave this record open, your Honor, on that subject is what I am addressing in the first instance.

You -- Your order specifically said, and I am quoting from Paragraph 5 of the order entered on February 5th, 2001: "All motions and matters herein, all matters herein are hereby stayed, pending the further order of court, with the exception of directing the defendants' motion for advancement of fees and emergency motion and so forth, respectfully."

So, Judge, I want to keep that issue aside, except to tell you we believe we have appropriate pleadings on file. I believe those pleadings are on file. Obviously, I'd like you to say, "Yeah, your pleadings are on file." But I think, even if you don't say that, under the Rules of Civil Procedure, the orders of this Court, we are timely and these pleadings are proper.

But let me come back to the major premise of our position. We are asking you, we are respectfully soliciting from you some limited consideration of giving us an opportunity to represent our clients effectively by affording us the limited discovery that we have requested.

THE COURT: Do we have any non-class-action case authority where this has -- this kind of procedure is being asked for when parties who are not --

MR. CUMMINS: I don't know. Candidly, I don't know the answer to that, as I sit here.

THE COURT: Well, I looked at all the cases that were cited, to try to find something that was close here. And I am just not finding anything.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, since last Thursday -- Since last Thursday, having -- We are a group of lawyers, all of whom came to this case relatively recently, as you know.

THE COURT: For somebody who came relatively recently, you put together a fine bit of work here.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes. I don't take credit for that. It's all these folks.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, then they did.

MR. CUMMINS: I just say this: We will supplement our submission in response to precise questions that you want. We will be happy to do that. And Chris Todd may have a comment on that.

But I come back to where we are in this proceeding and I can't imagine you being rushed to conclude this matter, without giving us the opportunity to investigate these issues as we have suggested.

THE COURT: And what you want to file, I guess you already have with leave, but what you are asking leave of Court to file as a counterclaim, where you want to sue Mr. Perkins and you want to sue everybody else on the Board?

MR. CUMMINS: We have named those parties in good faith, consistent with our obligations as lawyers under Rule 37 and otherwise, yes.

THE COURT: So he would be now a party, he personally would be a party to this case?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, he is named in the pleadings.

THE COURT: And I think -- Isn't the -- Is the Attorney General, also, if I remember?

MR. CUMMINS: Of course, the Attorney General is a party.

THE COURT: Is a party?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. So we would be talking special counsel would then have to be coming in on their behalf, is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, here is what I would -- Here is what I would -- You know, there is a -- You know, I am asking you to be reasonable. And I think we can persuade my clients to be reasonable.

If you want -- If you want to continue the issue of these pleadings -- I am not saying we are giving them up or suggesting that they are not properly filed, but if you want to finesse that issue for a moment.

THE COURT: I don't want to finesse anything. I would like to deal with what I have got in front of me. And I have got a motion which you have motioned-up for today --

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: -- along with all the rest of this stuff --

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: -- for leave to file counter-claims and which you want to sue the parties that have entered into this Settlement Agreement.

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: I have that right?

MR. CUMMINS: Right.

THE COURT: Okay. And so you want to sue all the directors who are presenting this individually?

MR. CUMMINS: For the reasons that we articulate in those pleadings.

THE COURT: Okay. And let's assume you file that when you are -- when the day is done and you have totally proven up all of your facts here on it, you get an order that says "no settlement," right?

And you also want damages from each one of these individual directors?

MR. CUMMINS: We plead for that, yes.

THE COURT: It looks like actual and punitive damages from each director or is it just from the Attorney General under your 1983 count?

Now, you see, you have got your wherefore clauses for everybody. So it looks like you want damages from everybody. So you want damages from Ambassador Hartman and Ambassador Andreani and everybody?

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, those pleadings are serious. They are brought in good faith.

THE COURT: I know they are serious. I am just trying to figure out is that -- is your pleading to stop the settlement or is your pleading to also get damages for breach of fiduciary duty for all of them?

MR. CUMMINS: The possible focus of those pleadings is to abort this improvident settlement.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: That's the principal focus.

Now, lawyers, like everybody else that does this, tack on all kinds of other claims for relief. And they are serious. We are not saying they are not serious.

But what's the focal point of this? The focal point is what I am talking about here, which is the problems with the settlement and we can -- If you want me to address the pleadings, I will be happy to do that.

But I come back to where I think we ought to be, if reason prevails here. And that is afford us a limited opportunity. I am asking for a limited opportunity to conduct some decisive discovery with respect to these very serious circumstances, which clearly taint this process, Judge.

You know, I am not going to start repeating what I said. You know that this isn't coincidental that these things happened. You know that.

THE COURT: You had about a two-and-a-half- hour meeting with the Attorney General, is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: My colleagues did.

THE COURT: And were there -- I read through your attachment in that regard, if I have got to the right one.

MR. CUMMINS: And with respect to --

THE COURT: I think that's Mr. -- Just one second. I want to get the right one.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: Your exhibit number.

MR. TODD: That's Mr. Longwell's affidavit.

THE COURT: So it's No. 7. Seven?

MR. TODD: Mr. Longwell is an attorney in my law firm. He accompanied me to the intervenor that was held here in Chicago in the Attorney General's Office.

THE COURT: Right. So is No. 7 attached?

MR. TODD: Correct.

THE COURT: And I remember, when I read this one this week and then going through all of this, there were no points, even in this meeting with Mr. Perkins where he was asked questions and he flatly refused, is that correct?

MR. TODD: That's not accurate.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, point out to me where he --

MR. TODD: If you will look at page two, about the middle of the page, I showed Mr. Perkins the exhibits, what were marked FT2 through 7, which are the -- if I recall correctly, were the declarations of various individuals who had spoken to Dan Terra before his death about moving the collection from Chicago to either Philadelphia, New York, or Washington.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. TODD: The architect that had drawn up the plans in Washington to build the new museum, the real estate agent that had taken him on a helicopter ride to look at places appropriate for a museum in Washington, D.C.

THE COURT: Okay. That all goes to Dan Terra's intent. Now, that wasn't what we were supposed to be talking about.

MR. TODD: I asked Mr. Perkins if he would tell us whether or not he knew about the facts contained in those declarations before he came into this court and represented to your Honor that there was no doubt that Dan Terra intended to lock up this Foundation's collection here in Chicago.

And he said, "You have lost. We have settled this. I am not going to answer those questions."

THE COURT: But that --

MR. TODD: The answer to your question is clearly plainly "yes."

THE COURT: But that wasn't what you were supposed to be talking to him about. You were supposed to be talking to him about the issues of coercion in regard to Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. It wasn't supposed to be about Dan Terra's intent.

So what I am trying to figure out, when you questioned them about those issues, you were talking about those issues, is there something that he was noncooperative with?

I wasn't seeing that here.

MR. TODD: Well, your Honor, there was a question put to him, not by me but by Susan Stone, about whether or not he had coerced, whether he had intimidated, whether he intended to compromise Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall.

And guess what? To everyone's shock and surprise, he said, "Absolutely not, that's not the test, that's not the issue. That's not the standard of review. That's not the law in Illinois or any other State, I submit."

What is the issue is what Mr. Perkins did under the circumstances. Those are objective facts. And then what -- Not subjectively, but what Dr. Stebbins and what Dr. Marshall did after Mr. Perkins did what he did, and those are all objective facts that we can determine.

It doesn't -- It is not, as Ms. Stone and Mr. Quinlan have represented to the Court, that you have to do an analysis of the mental state of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. That's not the analysis. That's not the law.

THE COURT: We pretty much know what they did or they didn't do, based on this mediation record that we have?

There is an abundance of correspondence to and from the mediator and in the various sessions here.

And if you put them in order and you put them in order by date, could you highlight for me where you think the point in time came where they switched gears so dramatically in regard to something that the Attorney General did?

16di-003750

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, most respectfully, on the issue of coercion and intimidation and so forth, those are issues that ought to be explored.

And with respect to that issue, and I don't mean to take my colleague's thunder here, but when -- there was an attempt to do this informally. And you have heard what took place with Mr. Perkins. He wasn't under oath and he wasn't subject to cross examination. And I'm not suggesting anything by those comments regarding Mr. Perkins.

There is a letter of July 13th that was one of our exhibits, you will see. When the issue came up, let's have an opportunity to chat with Dr. Stebbins.

Sidley and Austin, the same law firm that purports to represent the museum and the Board, the Foundation, is speaking for now Dr. Stebbins, who is accused of compromising interests by the AG of the Foundation.

And in that letter of July 13th, which is Tab 34, you will see that they respectfully declined to make Mr. Stebbins available for any kind of examination or interview.

Now, all of us who have tried cases know that what folks do when they are sitting down talking and what they do when they are sitting in that stand having raised their hand to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth and incisively interrogated about facts and circumstances, can turn out to be 180 degrees out of phase with the story they were telling before they hit that stand.

Now, all we are asking you to do is afford us the opportunity to conduct these limited interrogations of these people and come back to you and establish, as I believe we will, and which we offered to prove, that the timing of the Stebbins-Marshall incidents were not fortuitous, coincidental or happenstance, that these individuals did indeed, whether or not they would say that it affected their judgment, felt threatened and intimidated by these activities. They said this much on the record.

And whether or not in that circumstance, as a matter of law, they were conflicted to the point and interested in the outcome of this matter to the point where they are impaired and disqualified from voting in favor of this settlement.

That's the simple proposition. We have put aside the coercion. We put aside the threat. We put aside all that. The package that we will present to you I respectfully suggest that we offer to prove will conclude -- have you conclude that the way this settlement was resolved at that meeting was not appropriate, not consistent with controlling Illinois law.

And given the amount of time and effort that's been put into this case, to deprive of that, deprive us of that opportunity, which you can constrain in any way you want, I respectfully suggest, Judge, leaves a gap in this record that renders this proceeding unfortunately not complete, not appropriate, not fair.

THE COURT: Can we go back to the issue of the point in time there was a draft of a complaint that was circulated by the Attorney General in regard to Dr. Stebbins.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: And that exhibit that circulated that -- Someone help me out on the exhibit number. I am not finding --

MR. CARROLL: Twenty-four?

THE COURT: Twenty-four of the objections exhibit. That was done on March 21st. That was done early on in the mediation process.

Now, do we have between March 21st of that year, of this year, and the time that the mediation concluded or some major shift that's attributable timewise?

Is there anything that I have in any of these minutes where Dr. Stebbins had a certain position in the mediation that changed or was different after that?

Can you point to anything?

MR. CUMMINS: No, I can't.

THE COURT: Because I know you have a lot of -- Well, you have all the same things that I have, which are all these communications to and from counsel and from the mediator.

Do we have anything that shows that the ultimate position that he took in this case at the end was any different than something that he had all along, that he was taking all along?

MR. TODD: Yes, your Honor. There are a couple of things.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: If you look at Dr. Tucker's declaration, it's Exhibit 9, and the paragraph is -- discusses in here Dr. Stebbins' position, the fact that Dr. Stebbins embraced, and I will use the -- with all due respect to the Court, Dan Terra's intent, the original intent, which was not to keep it isolated in Chicago or anywhere else, but that this collection was for all of the people of the United States and indeed the world. And --

THE COURT: I'm sorry. Which paragraph are referring to?

MR. TODD: Just I will find it.

THE COURT: I am showing that he has got Page 7, Paragraph 19, the Attorney General drafted the complaint and then he just says, the Attorney General used this to threaten Dr. Stebbins. But I've got Dr. Stebbins saying no shaky voice, nothing at all on that tape during that hearing, when he approved this, that he is one of the believers from day one that this collection should be in Chicago.

And while he willing to work with Dr. Tucker -- I am doing this from memory. While he was willing to work with Dr. Tucker to talk about various partnerships elsewhere, he always thought that this should be a Chicago based deal.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, if you will also look, I will find it for you, there is a letter from Dr. Stebbins, it's 1997, was written to the Board before he was even on the Board. And he was recommending to the Board -- I think the letter was -- is Exhibit 18.

THE COURT: Your Exhibit 18, sir?

MR. TODD: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. I have got it.

MR. TODD: Okay. This is from Dr. Stebbins to Mr. Collins, who was then the attorney for the Foundation.

And then if you will look on Page 4 --

THE COURT: He is talking about various alternatives here.

And on Page 4 he says, under A, "We strongly feel the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum and the building should be sold and the collection moved to a more appropriate space."

Then he talks for a while about -- if any -- then under "defining the mission" on the next one he is talking about concentrating in France and he is talking about under this plan the Chicago museum will be eliminated. That's at the bottom of page five.

MR. TODD: Correct.

THE COURT: And he is talking about another plan about or moving it to another city with a complementary collection.

But isn't he in this letter just talking about alternatives here?

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, over at the top of the page, under paragraph number three, they were considering keeping the collection in Chicago.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, Mr. Cummins, I am having trouble hearing you.

Three?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes. Top -- Above the recommendations paragraph, you will see that there is a discussion moving into another city with a complementary collection, either a merger or a cooperative relationship.

And they cite the Corcoran and the Pennsylvania Academy, which are precisely a couple of the issues that we addressed earlier today, which depending upon how one wants to interpret paragraph five, the Consent Decree may or may not be appropriate.

But, your Honor, to answer your question straight up, until we get a chance to cross-examine Mr. Stebbins, I would like to find out what he understands this settlement is supposed to be, what he understands the limitations on this collection are, whether or not he understands it as folks were describing the real meaning of the Consent Decree.

And also what kind of advice or guidance he was given, if any, concerning the implications of these allegations by the Attorney General.

And who were his lawyers? Were they the same lawyers that purport to represent the Foundation, whose interest he is alleged to have compromised?

These are questions, Judge, that without answers, most respectfully, we have got a record that can only be best characterized as manifestly incomplete on a critical issue.

And the critical issue is were these two Board members conflicted to the point that they should not have voted?

Forget whether or not they believe they were voting in good faith. That's not the stand.

Judge, judges in this building disqualify themselves from cases every day. Lawyers remove themselves from cases every day, because they recognize that to proceed in a conflicted or presumed or apparent conflicted position compromises our professional and fiduciary duties. And we need to explore that.

And I don't think what we are asking for is in any sense unreasonable in the context of not only this protracted litigation, which I have heard so much about, I want to get to it, get it done and over and come back when you come back three weeks from now, present you with a package so that if at the end of the day you disagree with us, so be it. At least we will have had a fair shot. That's all we want, is a fair shot.

This is a court of equity. And I am asking you to exercise your equitable discretion and give us that opportunity.

THE COURT: And can we go back, just for the last time, before I hear from them again, unless there is something else you wanted to add?

Is there any case where a party in a non-- why don't we call it a nonderivative case or a non-class-action case or a nonparty to a settlement that has had an opportunity to get this kind of discovery before the Court approves the settlement?

MR. CUMMINS: I am sure if their interests are being affected or compromised that, yes, there are cases. To stand here and tell you that I have got it in my hip pocket would be silly. I don't have it, but I --

THE COURT: And the interests that are compromised, isn't it a fact that these three Board members are bound by this settlement to leave the Board? Is that really the --

MR. CUMMINS: That's the long -- That's the long of it.

THE COURT: That's it, because all claims against them are being dismissed with prejudice.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, I can -- You know, there are a lot of people walking around this town, as we know, who have been accused of all kinds of things and then they say, "Oh, well, forget about it, we dismissed the complaint."

This has had a significant impact on the distinguished former Senator Mrs. Terra, and other folks that we represent. And to say that, "Well, we are just going to release all of this resolves all of these problems" just doesn't do it, Judge. And we know that.

Your Honor, I am now at the point where I have said it 15 times. I am asking only to be given a fair opportunity to present you a complete record on these critical issues on a case that's being watched by the press. It's being watched by everybody in the art community. And this is not the time, most respectfully, particularly given your schedule and the circumstances that prevail, to shut us down.

THE COURT: Well, I will be shutting you down because of my schedule. I set this ahead of a whole bunch of other cases and moved cases for a couple of days so I could read this and get through it today --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, --

THE COURT: -- and make this Decision, so --

MR. CUMMINS: The time we spent here today won't be wasted. It is now focused. You put us on our mark. If we come back, if we come back and we are short on our proofs, then we have had an opportunity to present our position. That's all we are asking for.

THE COURT: I think we have one more defense counsel here.

MR. GARMENT: May I?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, I listened to the proceedings today with care and interest, with a partisan interest as one of the lawyers, but with a certain amount of, I think, of objective sadness to hear some of the things that have been said by counsel and the nature of the case, the importance of the case that Mr. Cummins has stressed in his brief remarks.

Before we came here, I wrote something down as -- that I might say before all this took place today. With the exception of two or three words that I changed, I would just like to read what I wrote, which I think is relevant to some of what we are trying to do. And I wrote it down, also, as a curb on myself and my own capacity to go on endlessly and vehemently.

So respectfully --

THE COURT: Sir, if you want to speak from sitting down, you don't have to stand.

MR. GARMENT: No, I --

THE COURT: I am trying to get every -- I am trying to get everybody comfortable.

MR. GARMENT: I would prefer to say this standing up.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GARMENT: Your Honor, the two basic issues in this case are among the most serious issues the Court of the United States can confront. And they are in the particular circumstances of this case closely connected and reinforced each other's considerable significance.

16di-003763

The first issue involves an abuse of power. And these are fighting words in modern law and politics, and rightly so. I am talking about the intervention under the collar of law by the highest law enforcement office of this State, using the power of that office to constrain the free and unimpaired exercise of personal judgment by the directors of Terra Foundation.

That is our allegation. It is our contention that there is sufficient evidence, circumstances that are not coincidental, that require the test of testimony.

There is, I went on to write, in any event, abundant justification for further and precise evidentiary discovery under oath.

Second, the second paramount issue involves the plain abuse of that State power to aggrandize the State itself by the assertion that the heart of this case of a categorical self-proclaimed right to appropriate the property of a private charitable foundation, its assets, its art collection, its fundamental constitutional right of self-government, particularly to determine venues for the use of its property and to appropriate that to State dominion and State control and a State locking, a classic taking of private property.

With respect, your Honor, these matters central to law dominate the contested issues of this case and require, I would say demand, appropriate action by this Court.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, just one -- my colleague's comments remind me of one other thing that ought to be said, simply as footnotes of his observations.

We submitted the affidavit of Professor Brody. If, in fact, it is correct, that whether the perception is a completely accurate perception; if, in fact, the consequence of a rush to judgment in this case is to provide a clear disincentive from other foundations or eleomosanary (phonetic) institutions from coming and finding their own State of Illinois and the Chicago area, that would be the antithesis of what we should all, as interested citizens, be concerned with.

And nothing could be more clear than the message that might be sent as a result of this case, if it's concluded with us -- without us having a full opportunity to develop a record. That might be the message that is sent to other folks: "Don't come to Illinois if you don't want the State to take over and hijack your operation." That's what we need to avoid.

THE COURT: Isn't your objection more to the whole notion of the 50 years and the whole notion to this Board having predominant Illinois representation?

If you do your discovery and you find that there is absolutely no coercion on behalf of the two -- or involving the two individuals, you still have Professor Brody's affidavit. And isn't her affidavit or her declaration simply saying, even if there wasn't that kind of coercion, this settlement itself shouldn't be -- is that the public policy dictates that this settlement shouldn't be approved?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, the answer to that is, first of all, there has been such a great emphasis on coercion, if as a matter of law and fact under the circumstances that people develop in this discovery, these Board members, whether they believe they were coerced or not coerced, were disqualified from voting on this, you have an issue before you that resolves that.

We don't have a valid settlement. But then we take it from there, Judge.

You see, I think that -- I think that the argument -- and, you know, we put the issue on the table, but that issue on the table insofar as the activities and maybe the motives of the Attorney General -- I don't know what his motives are until we -- and why these coincidental events took place allegedly, we will develop that.

But more fundamentally, I think we will establish to your satisfaction that there wasn't a legitimate settlement here. And that these folks were not disinterested, were disqualified from voting on the settlement and we are back to square one. That's what I believe we will present.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. TODD: May I just add to --

THE COURT: Would you identify yourself, please, Mr. Todd?

MR. TODD: Yes. It's Chris Todd.

And Dr. Tucker submitted the Second Declaration, which is attached as Exhibit 19. And in paragraph eight he speaks directly to a Dr. Stebbins' issue stating that, starting with his first report to the Board as an advisor in 1997, there were strategic planning sessions in 2000. Dr. Stebbins encouraged a review of both in-state and out-of-state options.

He has been an especially strong advocate of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

So I submit that to your Honor as further evidence of Dr. Stebbins' position prior to the draft complaint that the Attorney General showed Dr. Stebbins.

THE COURT: Okay. But it goes on and it says right after that that, when Mr. Perkins and the plaintiffs turned their focus on threatening him, that's when he started wanting to spearhead the idea of mediation.

Now, wasn't he a proponent of the mediation from the beginning? Am I wrong on this one?

He was the Special Litigation Committee representative and he was the client that Mr. Carlson and Mr. Conlon were talking to about proceeding or starting mediation. And it was the Foundation and the defendants from day one, long before Mr. Perkins did whatever Mr. Perkins did, that one mediation.

Am I not remembering this correctly?

MR. TODD: I think that's inaccurate, your Honor. What you are probably remembering is that, because of Dr. Stebbins' closeness to Dr. Tucker, the plaintiffs moved to have him disqualified for serving on the special -- on the litigation.

THE COURT: Right. And then we had initial discussions about mediation, where I brought counsel back at least a half a dozen times to try to convince it's time for mediation. And one of the earliest proponents, in addition to Mr. Crowe pushing mediation, was Mr. Conlon.

Am I remembering this correctly?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, Sidley & Austin took direction from the Independent Litigation Committee, the ILC, for purposes of receiving our direct communication. The ILC was composed of Jacque Adreani --

THE COURT: And Dr. Stebbins.

MS. STONE: -- and Ted Stebbins. They were equal members of the Independent Litigation Committee.

Without in any way waiving the attorney-client privilege, I will state that the Independent Litigation Committee authorized us to explore the possibility of mediation.

I believe, even before this time, Mr. Crowe had already started to make noises about mediation to your Honor, but they might have been more closely linked to time. I am not precisely certain on that point.

THE COURT: I remember even recessing some of our discussions, so that Mr. Conlon -- to get on the phone and try to get direction from the client, who wanted -- I remember one day in particular, particularly wanted the mediation idea to be explored, because it was the plaintiffs who originally didn't want anything to do with mediation.

MR. TODD: But, your Honor, this points out, respectfully, the need for a clear directive on what are the facts and what is the timing, what happened, when did it happen, because that will tell the story.

And I am informed reliably that Dr. Stebbins' proof will show that Dr. Stebbins did not become a proponent of mediation until after there was a motion that he had a conflict and could not serve on the Special Litigation Committee.

And there was discovery about to begin related to that possible conflict.

THE COURT: Well, nobody was talking seriously about mediation until after the motion was made that Dr. Stebbins was conflicted with the Special Litigation Committee. I think we can all agree to that.

I mean, I don't think we even talked -- When we saw what was coming up in the future, what the potential was here on the motion for a receiver and special litigation issue and the discovery, that's when everybody started talking about mediation.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, may I ask a question before his?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. TODD: This has mystified me since I have entered this case. We have this extraordinary situation where you -- we are all proponents of mediation and your Honor is one of the -- I am led to believe, the foremost proponents of mediation.

It is a good thing, but I have never seen nor would I submit we would ever want a mediation where one of the parties, in this case the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, during the course of the mediation, step aside and uses a very powerful weapon that the Attorney General has. He says unrelated to the mediation.

He says, "I didn't really -- I didn't speak to Mr. Stebbins about the draft complaint."

That wasn't -- It's like coming into a settlement conference and putting a .357 Magnum on the table and saying, "I never talked about the gun," or whether it would go off or whether someone could get hurt.

It's nonsense. I have never heard of a mediation where in the middle of the mediation, under the guise of now to keep it out of the public domain a mediation document, to pull out a complaint that names for the first time a person with whom you are mediating, where in the middle of the mediation, when you find out that one of the other parties to the mediation may not be -- agree to your rather, I would submit, extreme demands, gets a summons pursuant to an investigation that only the Attorney General can conduct. That's bizarre.

I don't understand that.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, one other point, if I may.

You know, part and parcel of all of this gets laid out on the table and resolved. I have a lot of respect for my colleague, Mr. Quinlan, and the members of his law firm.

I don't believe for one moment, when they filed plaintiff's motion to appoint an Independent Litigation Committee, an independent litigation counsel for the Terra Foundation and/or receiver, the caption of their brief, and when they went on at page nine, for example, and regaled this Court with the critical analysis of the law that demanded independent and disinterested members of this Board, in order to reach decisions about litigation decisions.

Judge, the very folks that are not suggesting to you that whether or not folks are disinterested or independent or whether or not we can establish the necessary elements to have this settlement seen for what it is are the folks who are arguing 180 degrees out of phase on that issue earlier.

And it comes down to one simple proposition: Let us please develop the record.

THE COURT: Okay. I assume that Ms. Stone wants to be heard, because she is standing.

I assume, and tell me if I am wrong, that Mr. Perkins may want to say something or is that a wrong assumption?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, I will wait until after Ms. Stone has to say.

THE COURT: What about you, Mr. Quinlan or Mr. Kennedy?

MR. QUINLAN: I would like to say something. Let her speak.

THE COURT: Okay. I would like to take at least a five-minute break before we do that. Is five enough or would you like ten? Tell me what you'd like.

MS. STONE: Five is fine.

THE COURT: Okay.

(WHEREUPON, a recess was had.)

THE COURT: Let's go back on the record for just a moment.

I know that the Court Clerk had asked some of you to start writing the orders on the documents to be unsealed. The Clerk's Office is closed and they are leaving.

However, what I will do is I will sign the order today and authorize counsel to release two members of the press -- I will sign the orders on the sealing today and authorize counsel to release to members of the press any of those unsealed documents, if you have copies of them with you.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I drafted the order. And the only imprecise aspect of it is those documents that were to be redacted, but I have simply identified those that are to be held in camera or under seal.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: Including the three that we have asked for more time to that.

MR. TODD: I don't mention those.

THE COURT: Okay. So I am going to need -- when you present me with the orders, to take a few moments and make sure that they correspond with what my understanding of what everything was. And I would like to make sure that we are covering everything, because my goal here is to unseal as much as we possibly can get unsealed and so that all of this can be made available to the public.

So we need to -- I would really like to sign those orders today so that overnight you can give whatever is needed to be given.

Ms. Stone.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, several points.

First, your Honor asked pointedly of the objectors: Is there any case where someone who is not a party to the hearing has come in to court and successfully blocked the agreement that the agreeing parties want to enter into?

They have not been able to find any such case. We have found no such case in our research. So what they are really asking you to do, Judge, would be unsupported by the case law of Illinois.

Number two, your Honor pointedly asked, "Show me where the coercion is. Show me the beef. Where is the beef? Show me --"

THE COURT: I don't think that's a bad suggestion.

MS. STONE: Well, I didn't -- I am paraphrasing.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: He said, "Show me the switch in the timeline. Show me where the votes switch."

And perhaps I interpreted that to mean where is your evidence of the actual supposed effect of whatever the Attorney General is doing. And they could not pinpoint the switch, your Honor. And the reason they could not pinpoint the switch is because there was no switch.

As your Honor correctly noted, the transcript of the Board meeting makes it clear that Dr. Stebbins, as far back as last September, said he believed the collection should remain in Chicago. And there was no inconsistency with that position and the documents he agreed to at the Board meeting.

Whatever Dr. Tucker may say in paragraph eight of his Exhibit 19 about thinking that this is a serious tension with Dr. Stebbins' long-stated views about the Foundation's best interest, that's not what Dr. Stebbins himself believes.

With respect to Dr. Marshall, they have not been able to show you the switch, the coercion, the intimidation, because once again they don't have the facts to support it.

The settlement -- Excuse me. The mediation documents before you show that in May Dr. Marshall said that she wouldn't be able to accept the current proposal under debate. She thought that certain changes should be made.

You can tell, your Honor, by looking at the document that the Board agreed to, that those changes were, in fact, made so that Dr. Marshall, if anything, was a vigorous advocate for the Foundation's interest.

And, in fact, the deal did get better over time from the Foundation's perspective in a number of aspects.

As late as June 29th, the day of the Board meeting, when a new proposal was suddenly floated for the first time, Dr. Marshall said, "No, if that's going to be the way it is, I am not voting for it." So she was not desperate to enter into this at any cost.

What have they shown? I guess they cite you now to Exhibit 18, which my reading of this, this appears to be a document authored by three individuals, including Ted Stebbins, done back, I guess, about four years ago.

THE COURT: It was done shortly after -- about six months or so after Dan Terra died and it was a document that was talking about how to look at the Foundation now that its founder was gone.

MS. STONE: Correct. And it's dated February, 1997, and they cited to you on page, I believe, six of the document, in paragraph three. I think they quoted one section of a sentence to you that says, "or moving it to another city with a complimentary collection."

What they didn't read to you is the statement that -- the first part of the sentence that says they would consider keeping the collection in Chicago while perhaps considering a merger with the Art Institute or Northwestern or moving it to another city.

So they are citing to you half of a sentence from a document authored by three people several years ago and using that as their clear and convincing evidence of coercion. It just doesn't wash, your Honor.

Number three, they use a lot of hyperbole. They talk about abuse of power, a gun pointing at someone on the settlement team, something rotten here. It's a lot of very sexy, highly charged language. But when you strip away the hyperbole and look at what they really have, there just isn't any evidence, let alone any clear and convincing evidence of something rotten.

Your Honor has given them an opportunity to come forward. You said at the last hearing, "What you said about the opportunity to take discovery, I have not foreclosed that."

I am saying that based on what you filed, there is nothing to take discovery on right now. I have nothing verified from these defendants to suggest this Court should not approve the settlement. And I am willing to let you file something.

You gave them an opportunity, your Honor. They did have an opportunity to sit down and talk with the AG for two and a half hours.

We did inform them that Dr. Stebbins would, if questioned, say the same thing that he said at the Board meeting. They have every reason to conclude Dr. Marshall would adhere to her position, as well.

They have not come forward with any affidavit from Dr. Marshall or Dr. Stebbins saying --

THE COURT: Well, they won't talk to him, so how can they get an affidavit from him?

MS. STONE: I understand. I am just talking about what evidence they have, what they have presented to your Honor.

They under the case law have to show by clear and convincing evidence that there was an actual corruption of someone's free will, and they have simply not made that threshold standing.

And that gets to their -- my fourth point, their argument that sounds so appealing on its face, which is, Judge, all we are asking for is six hours. You are going to be gone for three weeks. What's the problem?

I mean, it does sound very reasonable, your Honor, and given your attention to detail, I'm sure it hasn't appealed to you, but your Honor has to stop and think about the equities for everyone involved here.

First of all, look at what the resolution is. Look at what the Consent Judgment says. It says that by August 1st we have a deadline the Board has to meet -- if you approve this, the Board has to meet to elect a new Chairman, elect new officers, elect new committee heads, elect a new Executive Committee, elect a new Strategic Planning Committee. These are real deadlines.

THE COURT: Okay. They are real deadlines, but are they hard and fast deadlines?

Are you trying to say that the Board is going to say there is no deal if the Consent Decree is not signed before that day?

16di-003782

MS. STONE: I think in the extreme, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: But I think you do have to recognize what the structure put into place was by the Board. They are the ones coming in and challenging this. They are the ones who are not party to this agreement, who want to upset something they are not party to. And they are asking to do something which would upset that structure.

And you have to understand, your Honor, that right now we have a situation where the current president of the Foundation is suing or seeks leave to file a counterclaim, suing the Foundation, suing six of the directors, so this is a somewhat unusual situation that we are dealing with.

And you have to factor that in, too, when you decide whether or not you want to prolong this.

In addition, your Honor, they have cited no cases to you saying -- I think they asked for leave to try to look to see if there was something, but they have cited no cases saying that they should be afforded an opportunity to discover.

Fifth point, your Honor. They are advocating really a very dangerous reading of this proposed Consent Judgment.

When Mr. Garment, a noted lawyer, gets up and speaks about appropriation of Foundation property, that's a very scary reading of this document. It is not supported by a literal reading of this document.

I would think that the individual defendants would not want this document to be screwed -- to be construed in such a way as to hamstring the Foundation's going forward.

And I would submit that, if your Honor carefully reads the Consent Judgment, asks all the questions you have asked during these several hours of hearings, you will recognize that the Foundation has preserved to itself full rights to operate its own affairs and businesses, with the few restrictions we have identified, but that there has been no appropriation of Foundation property, that the property remains the Foundation's and the Foundation Board will decide how to use that property.

Final point, number six, this has to do with their motion for leave to file the counterclaim. Now, it's true that as a general matter in Illinois, leave to file Amended Pleadings are liberally granted. It is also true that these defendants are not releasing any legal rights they may have, so that they may have the right some-place to try to advance some sort of argument against someone, but the point is right now, your Honor, not here and not now.

THE COURT: So how do they do it?

MS. STONE: Well, your Honor, if I can explain by not hearing that now, if your Honor enters the Consent Judgment, the case is over. It is fully dismissed. There is nothing for them to be counter to. So what can they do?

They could very well seek out another venue and try to institute some sort of lawsuit against someone there.

Now, on behalf of the Foundation, we certainly take exception to their attempt to sue the Foundation. We think that that lacks merit and we would move to dismiss if we were counsel in that case.

But we simply don't think that they should be granted leave to file a counter-claim when there is nothing to be counter to, if the Consent Decree is entered.

THE COURT: I do have one question for you, Ms. Stone.

Defendant's objections are four-part. And the first of the four part I never quite was clear on and that's the business about the number of directors, the four, the five, counting the votes.

Let me just start with the beginning. This meeting was held that approved the Consent Decree with Ms. -- or Dr. Marshall chairing the meeting.

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: Let's start with that. How did she get to be the chair?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, she has chaired several meetings as an officer, who is not a named party, the only officer of the Foundation who is not a named party.

Ever since your Honor ruled that you didn't think it was appropriate for Dr. Tucker to give Sidley and Austin direction in this case, ever since you required the establishment of an ILC, which Ms. Marshall has, to my knowledge, chaired the meeting.

THE COURT: So that's been just something the Board has decided. In other words, Ms. Marshall has been chairing any meetings that have taken place?

MS. STONE: Yes, your Honor, and I believe they thought that -- the Board members believed that was appropriate, since she is Treasurer and Secretary of the Foundation.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, you amended the bylaws?

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And if Dr. Stebbins' vote is eliminated or Dr. Marshall's vote is eliminated, could they be amended?

MS. STONE: I do not think they could be amended, if those two votes were --

THE COURT: Okay. Could they be amended if one vote was eliminated?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: That's the part I got a little fuzzy --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: -- because they are talking about five lawful votes and I am not quite sure what your position is on that one.

MS. STONE: Yes. I think it's fair to say that there is some ambiguity in the bylaws, your Honor. And as to whether it would require five or six votes.

We believe out of an abundance of caution to make sure that this bylaw change is airtight from the Foundation's perspective that six members should vote for it, because that would constitute a majority of the directors in office, you know, on the Board.

The individual defendants have said, well, they believe it was -- only five is necessary, given the fact that only eight people showed up at the meeting.

So they said -- because they are saying it's a two-part test, the majority present -- the majority who are in office, plus a majority who are present in the meeting and they say, because there are only eight people present at the meeting you only need five.

THE COURT: So you -- So that --

MR. TODD: Your Honor, may I just say we corrected that. We agree with Ms. Stone.

THE COURT: Well, I know it's to your advantage to agree with her now --

MR. TODD: Your Honor, we -- In six votes it was made clear at the vote, if you look at the transcript, everyone agreed, including able counsel, who was advising the Board that under the bylaws you have to have six votes.

Now, Ms. Stone is trying to back-track a bit. But it was six votes then that was required. That's what Dr. Marshall understood. That's how the vote was taken. It's six votes.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm sorry. But your papers said five, right?

Did you change that?

MR. TODD: Our original papers misstated five. We corrected it in our reply --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: -- to embrace the fact that it is six. And I believe we are all agreed on it.

THE COURT: Does everybody agree that you need six votes? So --

MR. PERKINS: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: We have some headshaking.

MR. QUINLAN: Well, your Honor, --

THE COURT: How many votes do you need, Mr. Quinlan?

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, we raised the possibility under the Statute of 108.60. I think all this is academic, because there is no conflict. But we have raised even under the worst possible scenario under 108.60, which is the Statute, a not-for-profit, and the articles don't address their attention to that. Surely no -- address their attention to situations where there is interest. Strike it. Strike that.

Excuse me. That they don't address the situation where there is an interest, a director who has voted, but the article date does, and it specifically provides that, if there is enough people for a quorum, including the directors who are interested, the quorum stands.

Then the only question after that is the majority of people, when you remove the interested directors. The majority vote would still prevail and that prevails and you don't set it aside. That's exactly what the Statute provides.

I just don't think we need to get there, but I think under the law it would still say under 108.60, because it anticipates such a situation where you have interested directors who vote on a matter who are subsequently disqualified.

THE COURT: Okay. So let's assume for purposes of arguing their argument, they are interested and they should be disqualified.

It doesn't matter, is what you are saying.

MR. QUINLAN: It doesn't matter.

THE COURT: Even if we disqualify both of them?

MR. QUINLAN: Right. It doesn't matter.

THE COURT: And that --

MR. QUINLAN: The matter was introduced. It's introduced by Mr. Heatwole, who brought that out and said here is a challenge, this challenge has been made to you. We want to raise the issue about coercion that was presented to him. Everybody, the Board was there; they were aware of it, they were aware of those things. They acted upon it and acted upon it, in any event.

THE COURT: And so then the vote is four-two and that's enough to carry the day, is that what you are saying?

MR. QUINLAN: Right, right. Four of the six would be voting and that would be enough under the Statute to do it.

We would argue the Statute applies. On the other hand, we only cite that because we are saying under that scenario, even if they were right, which they are not right, still it would pass, it would be valid, and we could still go forward. So there is no basis for that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: If counsel is finished, I have a couple of other comments.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, here we had several things.

First of all, there is no subsequent pleading in front of your Honor of any kind.

THE COURT: They want to.

MR. QUINLAN: They want to, but there is none.

And they are in here asking for discovery based upon what they have in front of your Honor as an objection to a motion that was to enter and file a Consent Decree.

He is requesting discovery and the basis of the exhibits, which are self-serving, not in compliance with 191B, raise no evidentiary facts and nothing, no new material or material presentation.

They have had five weeks to get something together. They filed in Federal Court. They filed a two-count complaint there, both in 1983 count. That matter was dismissed after a two-hour hearing and a 12-page opinion by the judge there.

They then came here to State Court and they filed in front of your Honor, trying to stop these proceedings. And again filed these voluminous affidavits that your Honor has to consider.

We considered it. We argued. Everybody argued. And your Honor denied that. That's twice that they have been in court.

This is all this time. Now they have filed merely an objection, which is not a substantive pleading.

In all of this, these things, they have made no showing of any standard. They have no cases of authority to support their contentions or any of their requests. They have not addressed the matters that we have raised in our response to their objections and our cases and authorities. They have done nothing.

All we have here, your Honor, is rhetoric. They talk about abuse of power. The issue here is there would be an abuse of power if, in fact, we get into a situation where this leads to discovery.

And what we are doing here is putting ourselves at risk here of having discovery taking place when there is no pleading on file. And I will address the counterclaim in a second.

We talk about policy. They cite Professor Brody. Professor Brody's comments are very interesting, but they are all her own opinions. Her background is in teaching, somewhat of the charitable trusts and not-for-profit, but tax, as well. She cites no case, no authority, and has no personal knowledge of this. This is not a basis on which to make any decision.

Your Honor, we have -- What they talk about is their right to file a counterclaim. Our complaint was filed on September 22nd, 2000. The answer was due October 22nd, 2000. Terra, Tucker, and Simpson entered an Appearance on October 12th, 2000. The Foundation filed an Appearance on 9/26.

December -- Defendant Simpson filed on January 12, 2000, a motion to dismiss, leave asking for a motion to dismiss.

On October 12th the Foundation filed its motion to dismiss. That was denied on October 20th, 2000, without prejudice. A verified answer was filed by Mr. Tucker on October 20th of 2000, with affirmative defenses, no counterclaim.

Mr. Natale asked leave to file an answer on January -- to January 16th, 2000, and he filed on January 9th an answer with affirmative defenses, no counterclaim.

Nothing else has been filed since that time. We are talking about since the beginning of this, over ten months. Five months, nothing has been filed.

THE COURT: But you do recognize that from February 5th on there was this order that pretty much everybody wasn't supposed to file anything.

MR. QUINLAN: But they had over five months from the time that the answer was due. In all of that time, they did not file.

Some other things that I think are worth noting, as well, here is if we look at the situation, first of all, if we look -- what can you do if you don't have a complaint on file? The only thing you can do is you file under 5402, which is respondents in discovery. That only allows you to identify the parties.

Rule 181 requires that the answer be filed in 30 days. Under 240 -- Excuse me. Under 52608, the counterclaim is required to be filed, with the answer. No counterclaim has been filed. They haven't asked leave to file the counterclaim. There has to be something that would be meritorious.

We have a situation here that the real thing and the only thing that's in front of your Honor is the motion to file on the Consent Decree, which has really not been challenged.

Everybody is trying to challenge whether or not a Consent Decree should be set aside, but we have looked at this and there really is no evidence. There is no merit to any of this.

And there really is no basis to do anything other than enter the Consent Decree that we proposed to your Honor that's in proper form and that has been accounted here, adequate or full notice and a proper hearing of the Board plus having gone through mediation, where all the parties participated in that.

The other thing here we are looking at -- we are looking at the equities. The equities here really are on the side of the parties here.

We have been in this for over ten months, the litigation. The attorneys, the plaintiffs, the Foundation are all entitled to have this thing finally resolved.

There is nobody here complaining about this who really has any standing to complain. And I think the time now is to resolve this matter so that we can go forward.

The mediation raised another issue with discovery here. They are asking for a discovery. The only basis for this will be going into mediation matters.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. You need to slow down, because I am not even getting the words, they are coming so fast. So I can't imagine that the court reporter is getting them all.

MR. QUINLAN: Okay.

THE COURT: Slow it down a little bit.

The mediation --

MR. QUINLAN: They are asking for discovery and the discovery that they are asking for will necessarily invade mediation. And they have agreed mediation statements or process would be private and that nothing that is said there could be used by anybody in any litigation for any purpose outside the mediation.

They asked for the mediation. They participated in the mediation. They agreed to that.

The only basis for getting -- interdicting the mediation is where a criminal act may have taken place. Beyond that, there is no authority to get in to invade discovery.

But the real bottom line here is that there is nothing that is a predicate for the discovery, but an effort to file an untimely counterclaim, which, in fact, that counterclaim is not even a proper counterclaim.

They attempt to bring in new parties. And when you can bring in new parties the allegations have to be based upon the complaint that had been filed initially. They have not done that. And under the Statute, that's exactly what you have to do.

What they are complaining about is the settlement process, not anything that's raised in the new complaint.

They also make no allegations against any of these parties. The only allegations that are made are that they participate in the vote. Nothing that indicates it's improper, illegal, that anything was done wrong.

So the problem is they don't even have a proper counterclaim, to begin with. It's untimely. It can be filed without leave of this court. It is preempted by our motion to ask you to have the settlement entered by this Court and accepted by this Court, which really requires nothing other than agreement, the agreement of the parties and being the right terms. And that's what it is.

So that we dismiss -- The case will be dismissed. It is dismissed pursuant to the terms of that agreement. There is no case pending.

If they have any rights, those rights are out there like anybody else has a right if there is a case to be filed, if there is something that can be filed, a complaint that can be filed, that's wonderful. I doubt that there is any. I can't see that any grievance has been foisted upon them as a result of this, other than they are dissatisfied with the result.

In every situation where you have a resolution there are always dissatisfied parties. That does not give you a right to complain. It surely doesn't give you any right to discovery.

THE COURT: One of the counts of the counterclaim is the 1983 action. Now, there was a 1983 action filed in Federal Court.

MR. QUINLAN: Right.

THE COURT: That's been dismissed with prejudice?

MR. QUINLAN: That has been dismissed, your Honor, and I don't -- and the time there, more than 30 days running, would render it being a final order, so that you would not be able to come in and file again.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: So I am asking -- Your Honor, may I speak to that?

Judge Bucklo specifically referred to the abstention doctrine, observing that there is a pending lawsuit here in the State Court. There is a forum to bring a 1983 case and other language.

You have a proper forum. I am deferring this to the State.

You have a Court that will protect your rights, the State Court and Chancery Division. They go back there and litigate this.

Now, we are back here and the position on this side of the courtroom reminds me of what Gertrude Stein said about, oh, "When you get there, there is no there there."

We are here and they say there is no here here.

MR. CUMMINS: There are a number of abstention rulings, Judge, and it was done on the 29th, so it was within 30 days.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, --

THE COURT: Okay. So it was the 29th of June. Okay.

MR. QUINLAN: The plan -- She does base it on abstention, but she goes on and also addresses the substance of the 1983 action.

THE COURT: She essentially says that there wasn't any 1983 violation here.

MR. QUINLAN: 1983 action, that is correct. And they talk about --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, that's a nisi prius judge that you don't have to refer to, with all due respect to Judge Bucklo.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, -- First of all, let me finish. Would you like counsel --

All I am trying to say is the Court dismissed it, did look at the merits of it, dismissed it. It was out there. It's dismissed.

They say -- They came back here and they brought their action here.

I would like to find it. There is no 1983 action pending here. They are trying --

THE COURT: They want to file one.

MR. QUINLAN: They want to take some time, make some claim on a counterclaim. There is no counterclaim to be filed here. And there is no basis for that counterclaim against these people. They are trying to add new parties, which to add new parties has to be based on the other complaint.

And what the 1983 action is based upon and is, in fact, a settlement that took place, if you will, after the case.

It's not part of the complaint. It has nothing to do with the complaint. So they can't bring a counterclaim to do that, anyway.

THE COURT: Are you suggesting that if I deny them leave to file a counterclaim they may or they may not be able to file a separate lawsuit at a later time in another forum against Mr. Perkins or the Attorney General or whoever of these Board members they want to sue?

MR. QUINLAN: They may be able to try, your Honor. It's only noted by the imagination of counsel. And that doesn't mean that it's got any foundation, where there is any basis for it.

THE COURT: What are you showing me,

Mr. Cummins?

MR. CUMMINS: It's a printed opinion of Judge Bucklo's.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. I've got the other one all marked up.

MR. QUINLAN: Page ten of the other one is the slip.

THE COURT: Yes, that's the one I have all marked up, so.

MR. CUMMINS: It's just easier to read those, Judge, at least at my age.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, on that basis, we would ask that you sign the order today and that order is the order that should be signed here.

As I indicated before, the process -- nobody has objected to this being the agreement. Nobody has objected to this being the terms.

And on that basis, I think we are entitled to have the order.

THE COURT: Ms. Stone, you don't want it signed today?

MS. STONE: Well, I don't think it's a matter of corporate formality. It should be signed today.

I mean, we want to do this with meticulous attention to what the Board has authorized and what the Board authorized in the resolution is that an officer, Stephanie Pace Marshall, is authorized to execute and deliver in the name and on behalf of the Foundation a Consent Judgment, if and when it has been executed on behalf of Mr. Buntrock, Gidwitz, and the AG, substantially in the form presented to this meeting, but with such changes therein as the officer executing the same shall approve, such approval to be conclusively evidenced by his or her execution therefor.

Given the fact that your suggested changes or your required changes are in our view administrative, ministerial clarification rather than whole-scale changes to the agreement, we do not -- we concluded with the advice from corporate counsel that it is not necessary to convene another Board meeting, that Stephanie Pace Marshall could sign the clarified proposed Consent Judgment that your Honor wants us to present, but we think we need to give her the opportunity to do that.

She is currently on vacation.

I believe she is in Wisconsin tonight. I will make every opportunity to fax the red line version to her and get her to sign it. But I think it would be more appropriate for us, then, to present it to you tomorrow.

Alternatively, we could handmark the version to your Honor, present it to you tonight, with the idea that Stephanie Pace Marshall's signature only would become binding tomorrow if she agreed to it.

I think the cleaner way to do it is to give a chance to reach out to Ms. Marshall tonight.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, the only thing I would say is it, in fact, is administrative. It is really just a scrivener type of thing. It's making the clarifications that your Honor indicated. That doesn't require anybody's approval, because that says the agreement is the agreement.

It would seem to me that we could do that by interlineating between the lines as to what -- these matters being re-added. I don't see that anybody has to approve it or not approve it. But at the same time I think it's something that can be ordered today and can be signed under either theory, one way or another.

THE COURT: Mr. Perkins, you are anxious to say something.

MR. PERKINS: Not too much, Judge. Just to clarify a few things, Judge.

Your Honor asked me to sit forward and interview with counsel and I did. I spent two and a half hours with him. And the only thing we really refused to talk about was Dan Terra's intent and at the start of this lawsuit we talked about the alleged portion, duress and intimidation, for two and a half hours.

But your Honor did ask about time-line. I think it's really important to keep in mind that in January, 2001, Dr. Stebbins' matters were in pleadings and in discovery in this court and that that is the time when these defendants, the defendants who are objectors, came to us, came to the court and came to the plaintiffs and said, "We want to have this mediated," after Dr. Stebbins' matters were put into the record.

These were these defendants, not Dr. Stebbins, not the Foundation.

These defendants came and said and conditioned, "Only if you will do a global release of us and everybody else, because we want it to be over with. We don't want to settle with the Foundation and litigate against the directors."

So they came knowing what the Stebbins issues were, trying to get more releases. And they sought those rights for themselves.

And Dr. Stebbins -- and from February 5th to the end of May and through June, they thought they were going to get releases. And they participated in mediation.

And it's only now, when at the last minute they didn't get what they wanted, that these defendants didn't have to get the terms they like, that they now try to point -- maybe Mr. Dobbins and/or Mr. Stebbins is the person who shouldn't have been able to vote, because he has some kind of conflict.

It's ridiculous, Judge. It was the process of mediation. It was their very terms. They are the ones that waived the right to complain about Dr. Stebbins' time.

Coincidence. They want to talk about what a coincidence. Well, at the end of May, they were making noises that mediation is over. "We don't want to mediate. We want to litigate."

The Attorney General's Office took them seriously. "You want to litigate, we've got to get back to it. We are going to file a new complaint. We are going to start preparing."

In that process, we came across some unrelated matters. How does that work? Well, we have plenty of cases at our office right now where we are starting to look at something and we discover something else. It turned out that those matters were a minor inquiry into that -- into that organization, had nothing to do with the Terra.

Unfortunately, it became an obligation of our office. We are responsible for doing these matters across the whole state with regard to many organizations.

THE COURT: It was a minor question that you had about the Illinois Math and Science Academy. It was answered and there is no pending investigation and there is no finding of any kind of wrongdoing; is that correct?

16di-003809

MR. PERKINS: Judge, it was a very discrete -- It's over now. We don't even call it an investigation, because that terminology displayed to the public is something we would never have said. We would have called it review or inquiry, because it's too derogatory to call it an investigation.

We investigate and look into cases when we have charges. We review and do inquiries when we have matters that we need to attend to.

The Attorney General is charged with protecting the public interest, the beneficial interest of 25,000 charities. By Illinois law, he is the only person who can look at what charities do, what charities are doing and question them.

THE COURT: So you made a factual inquiry. You are making no investigation into the Academy or in regard to Ms. -- Dr. Marshall; is that correct?

MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge. There were no charges made. There were no attempts to -- There is no proceedings involved, an inquiry, "please produce this," a question to them. That was the extent of it. And those matters were quickly resolved.

THE COURT: And "quickly" is like one meeting. You had one meeting with their lawyer, is that correct?

MR. PERKINS: I only met with the lawyer. He came and brought the documents and clarified the matter and that matter was over.

THE COURT: And that lawyer left that day, knowing that matter was over?

MR. PERKINS: Well, you know, Judge, as counsel pointed out in our meeting, I guess people -- you know, it was pretty clear to me that it was over. I knew it was over. I think it was pretty clear to him that the matter was so discrete.

And we had a discussion of whether someone can read my mind, so I can't say that he positively knew.

We don't issue releases in -- when we do reviews. We don't say, "Good job." They produce documents and we know what -- But we all knew what we were looking at and we knew it was over. They knew it was over before they brought the document.

MR. TODD: Judge, --

THE COURT: And the point at time that that took place, Mr. Perkins, in the mediation scheme of things was when?

MR. PERKINS: At the end of May, when the parties threatened that they weren't going to continue with mediation, we started to look at the preparer, because we had certain matters to look at.

And on May 25th, we issued what's called an Order to Produce, a statutory order to produce, produce a particular document to Ms. Marshall and her school. And that was resolved probably by June 12th, 14th, something like that.

THE COURT: And right before that happened, had Ms. Marshall taken any position in the mediation that reflects that she wasn't -- didn't want to settle this case? Did her position change?

Is there anything in these documents that reflects a change in her position?

MR. PERKINS: Judge, as you know, what we have given you in the exhibits is her May 21st transmittal letter saying she didn't particularly -- though she didn't like everything, she had a laundry list of things she wanted to change with regard to what had been sent on May 15th, her items.

And I took the time in my response to go down the six or seven things that she found particularly unsatisfactory to her on the May 15th document.

And each one of them is addressed in the final document that we have here.

She was concerned about particularly in the May 15th document the part about the Attorney General -- the original document said the Attorney General has to give authority for it to leave after 50 years. She said she didn't think that was right. And it's been changed, just notice comes to us.

And there were concerns of her about certain people having extraordinary powers and they were taken out. And she asked that the Attorney General agree that Giverny could be continued as it has been. That's obviously included.

And, as your Honor knows, there are several -- it's written in my response that we addressed her very -- her varied concerns were addressed.

She was -- In her letter of May 21, at the end paragraph she says, "I am interested in continuing mediation, where these defendants were not."

But, Judge, you asked this question. You said, you know, what do they do now?

Well, Judge, they have no evidence and we are really -- Where are we? We are in a part -- a point where they don't really have any right to discover at all.

Where we are at is there is a settlement proposal before your Honor. Maybe they have a counterclaim on file. Maybe they don't. We can all argue about that.

But if they do, it's not timely for discovery to take place under their counterclaim. And their objections don't have evidence, that they have any proof of wrongdoing.

Your Honor, duress has been universally defined as a condition which exists where one is induced by the unlawful act of another. That's Illinois Supreme Court law in our State. That's People vs. Catholic Homes Bureau at 68 Ill 2d, 433. It's in our papers, unlawful.

There is no showing of unlawful. They are hoping it might be. They have supposition. They have surmise. They would like to be, but there is no evidence.

The people who were allegedly coerced, Dr. Stebbins, they waived to release him. And Stephanie Pace Marshall says, "No, I wasn't."

And when one listens to the tape, that lady was never intimidated by anybody. And certainly not by myself, a lowly Assistant Attorney General.

THE COURT: Do you have a degree from Harvard. like they were talking about?

MR. PERKINS: No, I don't, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PERKINS: I have a night law school degree. And I probably know half of these Harvard lawyers.

MR. CUMMINS: Don't assume that.

MR. PERKINS: They have no right for this expedited discovery they would like, Judge. If they have a counterclaim on file, we will battle that out after your Honor enters this Consent Decree. If they haven't met it timely, then they will be out and they will have to figure out another way.

There is no right to go on a fishing expedition in the hope that maybe they will find evidence that will then give them rights to have a cause of action. That's not how it's done. You don't get expedited discovery to go on a fishing expedition in the hope.

They just don't have a position here that allows them to get the expedited discovery. And they don't have any pleadings on file that would stand in the way of your Honor entering a Consent Decree.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, may I just respond?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. TODD: Could I direct your Honor's attention to Exhibit 21, since your Honor has kept that under seal? This is Dr. Marshall's May twenty--

THE COURT: Hold it one second. I need to get -- It's your Exhibit 21, right?

MR. TODD: Correct, yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: You asked the question, did

Dr. Marshall take a contrary position before this, quote, inquiry that the Attorney General did?

THE COURT: Right.

MR. TODD: And if I can direct your attention to the third full paragraph, it's the first indented paragraph.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. The third full paragraph of which page, sir?

MR. TODD: It's Exhibit 21.

THE COURT: It's got three pages.

MR. TODD: And it's the second page.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: And if you will go down to the first indented paragraph where it says, "first."

THE COURT: Okay. Is it under the section, "foundation"?

MR. TODD: First with respect to the Attorney General's version.

THE COURT: Oh, page two, I have got it. Okay.

MR. TODD: Okay? I'll just ask the Court to read it to yourself, since it's still under seal.

THE COURT: Now I want to go back into the timeframe here.

16di-003817

MR. TODD: Okay. That's --

THE COURT: There wasn't -- Just wait one second.

There was a meeting of -- with the mediator on May 11th? Is that a Friday?

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: An all-day session with mediator on May 11th. And at the conclusion of that day, parties walked away with the idea that there was a settlement.

MS. STONE: Well, --

MR. PERKINS: Some parties, Judge.

THE COURT: Some parties.

MS. STONE: Not all parties.

THE COURT: Well, some parties went away with the idea that there was a supplement and then all the mediator had to do that day was put it in writing and pass it around.

MS. STONE: Well, no, the Foundation always believed that a properly convened Board meeting would be necessary, in effect.

THE COURT: Well, yes, but in other words, the mediator was going to put it into writing. It was put into writing. It was then distributed to everyone and that was -- I am doing this by memory.

May 15th Mr. Hilliard wrote the thing?

MR. PERKINS: That's correct, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay. And May 20th, then, these -- What we are referring to are Ms. Marshall's comments --

MR. TODD: Correct.

THE COURT: -- to Mr. Hilliard's May 15th submission.

Okay. I just wanted to see where we are in terms of the mediation process. And this is how many days after the administrative subpoena?

MR. TODD: No, this is --

THE COURT: This is before the administrative?

MR. TODD: This is five days before the administrative subpoena.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: Okay. That's her position, five days before the subpoena.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. TODD: The subpoena occurred on May 25. The, quote, inquiry --

THE COURT: Okay, but she is talking about

16di-003819

-- Excuse me. She is talking about the Attorney General's version of the proposal.

MR. TODD: Correct.

THE COURT: Now, somebody give me the exhibit number, please, because it's getting very late and I'm getting a little bit tired. Tell me the exhibit number of Mr. Hilliard's proposal.

MS. STONE: Well, --

THE COURT: We have that here.

MS. STONE: Which proposal, your Honor?

THE COURT: The one after May 11th.

MS. STONE: As long as your Honor understands that the proposal being discussed back in May is not the proposal which found form in the Consent Judgment.

THE COURT: Okay. Wait one second.

MS. STONE: Two technically different proposals.

THE COURT: Right. I've got -- I am just trying to understand counsel's argument and in order for me to understand it, I have got to put it in context. And that's Exhibit K of the Attorney General, has got what --

Is this what Mr. Hilliard was circulating -- Right, this is what he was circulating right after. Okay.

So Ms. Marshall is saying in response to that that she doesn't agree with the Attorney General's version of what Mr. Hilliard thought was the settlement, is that correct? Am I reading this right?

MR. TODD: Yes, you are, your Honor.

MR. PERKINS: Well, Judge, just so that everybody can understand, after Mr. Hilliard issued his May 15th draft, the Attorney General issued a draft, a red line variance from what Mr. Hilliard had issued.

So when you look at the paragraph counsel is referring to, she is talking about the AG's version of Mr. Hilliard's draft.

Two paragraphs below that, she talks about David's version, where she says, "David's version, I am working with, and I am making my suggestions to David's version. I am completely disregarding the Attorney General's version."

THE COURT: Okay. So she is ignoring whatever you wrote.

MR. PERKINS: That is correct.

THE COURT: And she is saying, "I am going to make my comments on David Hilliard's version."

MR. PERKINS: That's correct.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, go ahead.

MR. TODD: Your Honor, it speaks for itself.

And in reply to the last comment, that's why we need some evidence, why we need Dr. Marshall to clarify what was in her mind. I know Mr. Perkins from our last conversation, he conceded he doesn't read minds. He is telling you what was in Mrs. -- Dr. Marshall's mind. We need for her to tell us.

MR. PERKINS: I think the last paragraph of Dr. Marshall's May 20th document, your Honor, says, "I am very interested in continuing working on mediation." I really wasn't reading her mind. I was reading her words.

MS. STONE: And, your Honor, you have her words. You have her words at the Board meeting, where she said she is voting her free will. She is not being coerced.

And, again, your Honor, it makes no sense to take one letter that she wrote back on May about the AG's version of what was under discussion back in May, when that's not at all what is now being considered.

What is now being considered is the AG himself has admitted this is something which is much better from the Foundation's perspective. It's better because Dr. Marshall fought for it.

She was not a victim of the AG. She was a protagonist against the AG. She fought long and hard for the Foundation.

THE COURT: Okay. And after this date, after she wrote this letter, there was -- were how many more mediation sessions with the mediator after May 20th?

MR. PERKINS: There were individual discussions, Judge, but I believe the next actual meeting was June 19th.

THE COURT: And the June 19th meeting was pretty much an all-day meeting with the mediator and all of the Board members. Was everybody there or was somebody absent?

No, a number of people were on the phone. That was the one that we excused people from attending.

MS. STONE: And some people were not even able to participate on the phone, your Honor, like Madame Ahweiler.

MR. PERKINS: Most were, Judge. Most of the Board members participated.

THE COURT: And there was a circulation of what -- right before that meeting, of what was a latest draft, which also embodied subsequent input from Ms. Marshall?

MS. STONE: That's correct.

THE COURT: And the bottom line, as you see these progress, is the Foundation came out better at the end, did it not, because of this?

MS. STONE: It did, your Honor, and, you know, again, I thought we were not supposed to get into the intricacies of mediation. I didn't think we were supposed to be able to use what was said in mediation to further their litigation strategy.

THE COURT: They were real simple. They didn't say what she said. They just asked me to read it.

MS. STONE: Well, without myself violating that, I can tell you there were several ways in which it got better for the Foundation. I won't be specific. I will be general.

With respect to the period of years under consideration, with respect to the period of years for Illinois residents under consideration, with respect to the specific recognition and acknowledgement of Giverny, with respect to some other very specific language about the right to exhibit art outside of the Chicagoland area, there were a number of ways in which this document got better, from the Foundation's purposes, perspective. And, in fact, it got better throughout the course of the mediation.

There were some proposals on the table that I am sure the individual defendants would have found even -- and did find even more egregious.

So there was a steady improvement of the document, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, I don't know what folks mean by "got better." You mean the attempt at hijacking by the Attorney General resulted in changes that were less onerous? I mean, that's hardly getting better.

I think it's probably time to wrap it up. I would just say this, your Honor. When Mr. Perkins was speaking and explaining who said what to whom, what happened when, without any record, that's precisely why we need this discovery. And I am not going to put you through the same arguments once again.

I just ask you to grant us the limited relief that we are requesting.

I think there is more than ample evidence before you to justify that relief and not give us that will in our judgment compromise this entire process that you spent so long and hard on.

And we ask you to rule in our favor on that matter, Judge, and simply defer, do what they say is alleged housekeeping. And we dispute that, as well. Defer ruling on this matter until we have had an opportunity to present you with the evidence that we said we will present.

Thank you very much.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Counsel, we have had a long day today and I want to, first of all, apologize to you for keeping you from 2:00 o'clock until a quarter to 7:00 with only a few breaks.

I am sure you are all as hungry and tired as I am, but we have a lot of people that are interested in this case and a lot of people that are here today watching it. And I wanted to make sure that you all had a chance to say what you wanted to say.

I apologize, also, to you that, unlike the Federal Court that has a much larger support staff than we have, I don't have the facilities to hand you out a written decision today. It would have been totally improper for me to do that, anyway, because I wanted to hear everything that was said.

I spent my entire weekend reading only the papers of the objectors and I have read everything that's here. I have read all of the attachments and I have read all other cases.

I can't say the same for everything that the plaintiffs have delivered yesterday. I have read the briefs. I have read most of the attachments and I have read the main portions of their cases.

I believe there have been three appeals, there may have been more, with cross appeals and further appeals. There have been -- There has been a contest along the line of virtually every issue that has been raised in the case and it's an important Foundation and it's an important case and it needs to have careful and deliberate consideration. And I have tried to do that.

I have found nothing in these papers that have been cited by the objectors that should cause me not to approve this settlement. I really don't see it as a close call with respect to counsel and with the fine amount of work that was done here.

I have thought about the process of where we were when we went to mediation and the history of the case and what we were facing and why we went. It was a very difficult process to even get the parties to go to mediation. And the fiercest proponent of that were these defendants, who are now objecting.

At no time was there any even suggestion that Dr. Stebbins whould not be a participant in the mediation, even though everyone knew what was pending against him in regard to disqualifying him from the Special Litigation Committee.

I had the opportunity in the early portion of this case to read many, many Board minutes; and when I got those minutes and I went through and I took a look at the history of this Foundation, one person really stood out in my mind as the voice of reason in this whole process. And that was Dr. Marshall.

And I remember my sincere disappointment at the time that when the Board met and chose a Special Litigation Committee that didn't include Stephanie Pace Marshall.

I have never met any of these Board members, by the way, but I have spent a lot of time reading materials that I have been given.

I listened very, very carefully to the tape and I listened to it twice, yesterday and again today in Chambers.

And after you get through all the music and all the stuff in the beginning of getting everybody on the line and you try to get to that first motion, which is an interminable motion to change the documents, which never got changed, I listened and relistened to the section of the tape when counsel for the Foundation advised everyone about their fiduciary obligations and their votes.

And I listened to the way Ms. Marshall voted and what she said and how she said it, as well as Dr. Stebbins and what he said and how he said it.

This was a lady who was in control. She was running that meeting and she was controlling some very difficult situations and early on in this meeting she said, without any hesitation, that if they made a change she wasn't going to go for this thing.

She didn't like the change that had been advanced by Dr. Stebbins and she wasn't going to go along with it. And this was not a lady who was being intimidated by anybody.

I also did not feel that there was intimidation of Dr. Stebbins in this case. And I just simply don't see it. I have carefully considered all of the objections. I have read every bit, even though they weren't supposed to file it, every bit of the history of the Foundation, the intent of Dan Terra, information that was given by these objectors.

And I do not see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical -- I am reading from the document -- antithetical to the Foundation's purposes. And that it precludes the Foundation from recruiting the best and brightest worldwide to serve on the Board.

This is not a very limiting document as far as this Foundation is concerned. This Foundation is going to be able to pretty much operate the way that it has. It will be able to conduct its mission of providing education and art throughout the world and, yes, the Board is going to change.

Yes, I wish some of these Board members weren't leaving, but that's not for me to say. Yes, I hope that many of them, including the defenants, may continue to be involved in this Foundation.

But I don't read this Consent Decree as the restrictive document that counsel for the defendant has said that it is.

I think this collection can be moved around and loaned and shown throughout the world and everybody, including the people of the State of Illinois, are going to benefit from that.

I do have a very severe problem. And I won't sign a piece of paper that has that last sentence on it, that says no other public statement shall be made. So that has to be changed with combining the two sentences and putting in the words, "and these parties have agreed."

And I won't sign it unless -- I don't want to sign a red line or a sloppily-written document today. I want that first paragraph corrected so that it says who filed answers, including defendant Michaeli, who is not mentioned in here. Everybody who has filed a current responsive pleading.

And as far as I am concerned, I have no problem allowing these defendants leave to file their answer and that can be put in there, also, in the Consent Judgment and Order, if they filed an answer, or it can be in a separate document granting them leave to file an answer.

I do have a problem allowing the filing in this case of the proposed counterclaim. This Consent Judgment, once its signed, and it will be the next -- it will be the document that I sign after I have signed all the orders that release all these things that are under seal.

Once this document is signed, this case will be over. All claims that the plaintiffs have brought will be dismissed with prejudice. And this litigation will be done.

The counterclaim, as I see it, in many parts has a lot of defects to it, not the least of which is against people that aren't even parties to the case; and they have to be added as parties in order to be counterclaimed against. However, I question whether valid causes of action that flow from the main case are, in fact, what's alleged in this counterclaim.

So I am going to be entering an order, shall we call it the third order or fourth, denying the defendants leave to file the counterclaim in this action. And that's without prejudice to them bringing any other separate lawsuit that they may see may be appropriate in any valid cause of action that they may have against any individual. But it's not part of this case.

This Foundation was lucky enough to have one of the most experienced and capable mediators. I did not really believe that this case could be mediated successfully to conclusion.

At the time that it went out, I had some very, very strong doubts. I believe this is a just and appropriate conclusion. I do not see it as a case in which there has been abuse of power and I definitely don't see it as a case in which the State has tried and succeeded to take control of a charitable foundation.

The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation, as being alleged in the papers. And this Court is going to be able to continue to operate the way they have.

The big difference is that this Board is now going to be able to operate. There will be a functional Board, which there has not been for almost a year now. And the Board will be able to make decisions. And the business of art will be able to go ahead, as opposed to the business of litigation.

And seeing what this Foundation is facing ahead of it, I can understand why these directors have made this incredible sacrifice to step down and remove themselves for the good of the Foundation, all of them. I am disappointed that it happened, but I am not supposed to second-guess that.

And so if you bring me in tomorrow morning, I would like to have tonight, if I can, and I will be here, an order unsealing the documents so that there is no issue.

And I would ask counsel to make available to any members of the press who want to have copies of the unsealed documents, those documents today, if you have them with you.

MR. CUMMINS: You are denying the motion for discovery, Judge?

THE COURT: I am denying the motion for discovery, too.

MR. CUMMINS: Will you certify the question on the counterclaim?

16di-003835

THE COURT: On the what, sir?

MR. CUMMINS: On the counterclaim, the denial of the counterclaim.

THE COURT: Well, once I sign that, I don't have to certify anything. You have got a final order and you can go up to the Appellate Court tomorrow. I will be signing all of these tomorrow, with the exception of the question of the unsealing. And I want to do the unsealing tonight.

MR. CUMMINS: And you are making a specific finding, I gather, that there is no conflict with respect to those two directors?

THE COURT: I am not putting any Findings of Fact in the order that I am signing, but I am telling you that I do not see anything in the papers that have been presented to me. And I have read all the mediation papers that have been as attachments here. All the sealed documents.

I have not seen anything here that would defeat the entry of this Consent Decree.

MR. CUMMINS: The reason I want a clarification, Judge, you made a ruling with respect to your perception that they didn't seem to feel coerced, which is --

THE COURT: I am not putting a Finding of Fact in this order. I am saying that I am not seeing anything in this order, I mean in these papers, that should defeat the entry of this Consent Decree.

MR. CUMMINS: But --

THE COURT: You are free to file whatever lawsuit you want against whoever and raise whatever allegations that you want about that.

However, there is not going to be that kind of a finding. You don't want that kind of a finding in this case.

MR. CUMMINS: But you didn't address the issue of disinterestedness, as we believe that's critical. It may have come in late in the game, but that's an issue that was not addressed at the Board meeting.

No one was given advice or counsel on that at the Board meeting and that issue remains, as far as I am concerned, an issue that I presume you are overruling.

THE COURT: I am not finding that under the Illinois Not-for-Profit Act that they are an interested -- that they were interested Board members that should not have participated.

Is that what you are saying?

MR. CUMMINS: I am wanting you to make a ruling on that, yes, Judge.

THE COURT: They could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in the decision.

MR. CUMMINS: I just want to clarify that finding, because that's an issue.

MR. GARMENT: May I, your Honor, --

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. GARMENT: -- express my disappointment at your Honor's ruling, understanding what you articulated.

It is a very long distance from the commencement of this proceeding and I would like on the record to simply have it appear once again that this case started with a suit that was brought by two dissident directors, Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz, which were not privileged documents, it would have been a very clear, very flagrant slander, because it was filled with false allegations that have been known to be false.

On the basis of that pleading, on the basis of that pleading, you have the Attorney General come in and bootstrap himself into a position of the intervenor, using false allegations to play a role.

What followed, your Honor, was the contentious and litigious course of conduct that led to the mediation proceeding and within the cover of the mediation proceeding and without your knowing about this, without your being consulted, without your having any knowledge, the Attorney General forced the proceedings to the point of depriving certain of the directors of this Foundation of their free and untrammeled choice.

But we must not forget where this started and where it came out. And we have a situation that reminds me briefly of a custody case where the clients said, "All I want is custody. I will be prepared to do all the cosmetic things with respect to visitation and holidays and gifts," and they have custody now.

And they have made a great deal out of all of the cosmetic changes and alterations that have nothing to do with the fundamental defect in this case that started right at its beginning, out of all of the cosmetic changes and alterations that have nothing to do with the fundamental defect in this case that started right at its beginning, continued all the way through, and it's now finally solidified in the Judgment of the Court.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I have to object and ask the comments be stricken. Counsel has no basis to make those comments. Frankly, the only test of this has been where your Honor denied the motion to dismiss.

And they have filed an answer today, which admits there is a cause of action. So I don't know how counsel can stand in front of this Court and make his grand speech of the basis that there is something here that is totally unfounded.

The complaint was proper. It was found proper by this Court and it's now been found proper by filing an answer. And I object and ask it be stricken.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, --

THE COURT: I am not going to be striking any remarks of counsel. All of counsel's remarks may stay on the record.

And there were -- There was no

trial in this case. None of the allegations that were alleged in either of the complaints filed in this case have been proven and everyone knows that.

This case is a mediated settlement and in large part I was convinced not only about the skill of the mediator but also the fact that all parties in this mediation process had counsel available to them and including the conflicted -- alleged conflicted Board members.

And there is nothing in anything that I have received here that makes me believe that discovery is necessary or anything is further necessary to investigate in this case any alleged conduct. I just simply don't see it.

MS. STONE: Housekeeping matter, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, before --

THE COURT: Yes, housekeeping.

MR. CUMMINS: Just one matter, if I may, your Honor. But before Mr. Quinlan gets too righteously indignant about the comments of my colleague, I would ask him to go back and read his memorandum that I referred to earlier.

THE COURT: Which one, about the Special Litigation Committee?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, about all the conflicts, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: All the conflicts, which quite frankly no one has addressed in resolution of this matter at any time, including the fact that lawyers who purport to represent the Foundation can currently represent folks individually who purport to be taking actions inconsistent with the Foundation.

But I just assume, when folks made those pleadings, they believed it to be true.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, there comes a time that all litigation has to be ended. And this litigation is going to be ended tomorrow in this Court with the signing of these orders.

And the only thing that is going to remain is the Petitions for Attorney's fees, which the Consent Decree requires me to adjudicate. And if I am wrong, I am sure the Appellate Court is going to tell me I am wrong and I will see you all back here.

MR. CUMMINS: We appreciate your indulgence.

THE COURT: But for now I think we need to conclude today's proceedings.

You have a housekeeping matter.

MS. STONE: Housekeeping matter, yes.

Your Honor, we will try to reach Dr. Marshall tonight. I believe she is expecting our call. If there is some logistical difficulty due to the fact that she is on vacation and may not have access to a fax machine, is your Honor also available Thursday?

THE COURT: Sure.

MS. STONE: When do you leave town?

THE COURT: I will be -- I don't leave town until Saturday.

If I needed to be reached, why sign something when I was gone and I will be reachable. But my last day here in the Daley Center is supposed to be Thursday. But I will come in Friday if I need to.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, finally, I believe it's necessary to respond to the last shot by --

THE COURT: Why?

MS. STONE: I believe it's necessary to respond to the last salvo by counsel for the objectors.

Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood solely represented the Foundation. We do not represent any of the defendants in their -- any of the directors in their individual capacity. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins in his individual capacity. He has another lawyer for that purpose.

We do not represent Dr. Marshall in her individual capacity. We represent merely the Foundation. We give advice to the six non-named, nonparty directors. That includes Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

There is no conflict by Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood at any point in this case. There is no conflict anywhere.

Thank you.

MR. QUINLAN: Judge, I would like to reserve my comments for the lounge across the street after the proceedings here.

Thank you.

THE COURT: We are in recess. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Reporter.

(WHEREUPON, the hearing of this matter was adjourned.)

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO TRANSFER TO THE CHANCERY DIVISION

The Illinois Attorney General's office, on behalf of Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, submits the following reply memorandum in support of its motion to transfer this case to the Chancery Division:

This case should clearly be transferred to the docket of Judge Kinnaird in the Chancery Division. The Terra Museum case, and the litigation among the board members of the Terra Foundation, was before Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock v. Terra, et al., 00 CH 13859. This case is nothing more than a continuation of the dispute, arising out of the same facts, with the same allegations and the same parties (now with new defendants being added). The plaintiffs here, Mr. Tucker, Ms. Terra, Mr. Simpson, fully participated in the earlier case through counsel. That case went into mediation by the agreement of all the parties, including these plaintiffs. Judge Kinnaird conducted numerous hearings; her mediator, David Hilliard, conducted numerous mediation sessions; hundreds of attorney hours were spent trying to reach a settlement acceptable to all the parties. After lengthy negotiations, a settlement was reached. The Illinois Attorney General's Office, which had intervened in the case; the Terra Foundation; and the board members who brought the Chancery action, all agreed to the settlement. A minority of Terra board members voted against it. That minority resisted the settlement at great length; sought a TRO before Judge Kinnaird to prevent the Board from voting on it; sought an injunction in federal court to prevent the Board from voting on it; sought in a lengthy hearing before Judge Kinnaird to overturn the Board vote and urged her not to sign the consent decree. The challengers made the same allegations that they now make here in this Law Division case, and alleged improprieties against the Attorney General's Office which Judge Kinnaird found totally lacking in merit. Finally, Judge Kinnaird held a hearing lasting more than five hours at which all of these matters were discussed, and she signed the consent decree, which states: "The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment and Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment and Order." This jurisdiction will extend beyond the pendency of any appeal taken from it.

Having been turned down in Chancery and in federal court, plaintiffs now seek to raise the same allegations in a new case before a new judge in a different Division of the Circuit Court. The relief plaintiffs seek is the same they sought before Judge Kinnaird - - to reduce the consent decree signed by Judge Kinnaird to a nullity. A new judge would now be expected essentially to "start over" and educate himself or herself about this case; attorneys' fees (already large and all billed against the assets of the not-for-profit Terra Foundation) would no doubt be vastly higher as counsel present their positions anew to a new judge unfamiliar with the lengthy history of the case. Fee petitions in the first case are pending before Judge Kinnaird; the reasonableness of future fee petitions should be evaluated by the same judge. It is simply not in the interests of justice and a grossly inefficient use of judicial resources to reinvent the wheel on what is essentially a collateral attack on a consent decree that is only a month old.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, defendants Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins request that this case be transferred to the Chancery Division.

Respectfully submitted,

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR TRANSFER BASED ON CASE FILED IN THE WRONG DIVISION AND ON RELATEDNESS

Defendants Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Crisham, Ltd., and Theodore Stebbins and Stephanie Pace

16di-003862

Marshall, by and through their attorneys, McDermott Will & Emery, hereby state as follows as their reply in support of their motion to transfer based on case filed in the wrong division and relatedness:

INTRODUCTION

As set forth in the motion to transfer, Terra II should be transferred to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird because Terra II is a direct attack on the consent decree entered into by the Terra Foundation and approved by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I. Tellingly, plaintiffs, in response to the motion, totally fail to address the undisputed fact that Terra II is directly related to Terra I and, in fact, that Terra I is the basis for Terra II. For this reason alone, transfer to the Chancery Division is proper.

Plaintiffs' suggestion that the filing of an appeal is dispositive of the motion to transfer is wrong. It is undisputed that Judge Kinnaird expressly retained jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree and regardless of the filing of an appeal in Terra I, Judge Kinnaird may continue to enforce the consent decree unless a stay is imposed. In any event, even if Judge Kinnaird were divested of all jurisdiction over Terra I — which she is not — it does not in any way diminish the fact that Terra I is inextricably related to Terra II. An ongoing appeal in Terra I does not change the fact that Judge Kinnaird is familiar with the complex issues involved in Terra II and that judicial economy would be best served by transfer of Terra II to the Chancery Division for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird. Terra II is, in essence, the same case as Terra I as these very issues have been raised and considered by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I. In fact, plaintiffs objected to the consent decree on three separate occasions and their objections were found to be without merit.

Plaintiffs devote a substantial amount of effort attempting to persuade this Court that the consent decree of Terra I was not binding on plaintiffs, had no effect on them, and was simply a contract between the Foundation and the Terra I plaintiffs that did not resolve any legal or factual issues. Plaintiffs' attempt to minimize Terra I is totally undermined by the filing of a notice of appeal from Terra I. Assuming the genuineness of plaintiffs' argument, the merits of plaintiffs' appeal from Terra I and even plaintiffs' standing to pursue the appeal is questionable, at best.

In fact, the relief sought by plaintiffs in Terra II falls within the purview of cases that are expressly designated by General Order 1.2 as those which must be filed in the Chancery Division. Plaintiffs — without any support whatsoever — suggest that General Order 1.2 is about to be modified or has been modified and that somehow this should affect the transfer of this matter to the Chancery Division. Plaintiffs ignore the fact that Terra II seeks declaratory and injunctive relief which is directly encompassed by General Order 1.2. Plaintiffs also fail to state the fact that Judge Gardner has already determined that Terra II should be transferred to the Chancery Division and assigned to Judge Kinnaird. See Order and Transcript of August 13, 2001, pp.12-13, attached as Exs. A and B to motion to transfer.

Plaintiffs' objection to the motion to transfer only serves to further illustrate the blatant forum shopping that plaintiffs have engaged in with hope that another court — even a court of coordinate jurisdiction to Judge Kinnaird — will allow them to undermine the consent decree of Terra I after having been rebuffed by the Terra I court and by United States District Court Judge Bucklo. Accordingly, this Court should put an end to such improper tactics and grant defendants' motion to transfer this matter to the Chancery Division for assignment to Judge Kinnaird.

ARGUMENT

I. The Motion To Transfer Is Proper Based On The Relatedness Between Terra I And Terra II.

Plaintiffs have suggested that by their filing a notice of appeal in Terra I, that action is no longer pending before Judge Kinnaird, and thus the motion to transfer is somehow improper.[1] Notwithstanding the notice of appeal, Judge Kinnaird expressly reserved jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree that is at the heart of Terra II. Plaintiffs' notice of appeal does not in any way limit Judge Kinnaird's jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree that is challenged in Terra II. There is no stay in effect that prevents Judge Kinnaird from enforcing the consent decree. See Sup. Ct. R. 305(b) (providing that "[o]n notice and motion . . . .the court may stay the enforcement of any judgment . . . or any other judicial or administrative order.") In fact, defendants never sought a stay of Judge Kinnaird's order. Thus, plaintiffs' argument that Judge Kinnaird is without jurisdiction is simply wrong and based on a fundamental misapprehension of Rule 305. See Town of Libertyville v. Moran, 179 Ill. App. 3d 880, 535 N.E.2d 82 (2d Dist. 1989) (appeal was moot because appellant failed to perfect its interest by failing to obtain a stay); see also JoJan Corp v. Brent, 307 Ill. App. 3d 496, 718 N.E.2d 539 (1st Dist. 1999) (noting that stay is necessary to prevent enforcement of a judgment pending appeal). Clearly, Judge Kinnaird has jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree.[2] [1] Plaintiffs' argument totally ignores the clear language of General Order 1.3(d) that provides that this Court may transfer a matter "[f]or the convenience of parties and witnesses and for the more efficient disposition of litigation." There is no provision in General Order 1.3(d) that limits this Court's authority to transfer actions only if the division proposed for the transfer has a "pending" related action. Nor would such a limitation be proper because that limitation would only serve to facilitate the forum shopping that plaintiffs have demonstrated.

[2] Plaintiffs readily admit that Judge Kinnaird has jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs' pending petition for fees incurred by their former counsel, Shefsky & Froelich, in Terra I. That plaintiffs are seeking payment of attorneys' fees pursuant to a consent decree that they are

Plaintiffs rely on Cowdery v. Northern Trust Co., 321 Ill. App. 243, 53 N.E.2d 43 (1st Dist. 1944), In re Parentage, 321 Ill. App. 3d 823, 748 N.E.2d 291 (1st Dist. 2001), and In re Marriage of Holem, 153 Ill. App. 3d 1095, 506 N.E.2d 739 (5th Dist. 1987), for the unremarkable proposition that the filing of a notice of appeal divests the circuit court of jurisdiction to enter further substantive orders in the action before the circuit court. That law is not in dispute. It is equally undisputed that there is no stay in place pursuant to Rule 305. Thus, in the absence of a stay, Judge Kinnaird may continue to exercise jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree. See Sup. Ct. R. 305(b). Because Terra II directly challenges the consent decree, transfer to Judge Kinnaird is proper.[3]

II. It Is Indisputable That Terra II Is Related To Terra I.

Plaintiffs devote a substantial section of their brief arguing that Terra I is not the "same case" as Terra II. Yet nowhere do plaintiffs contest — because they cannot — that Terra II is inextricably related to Terra I. In fact, the Complaint is replete with allegations regarding Terra I. See ¶33, complaining of the filing of Terra I by Gidwitz and Buntrock; ¶35, complaining of the Attorney General's complaint filed in Terra I; ¶ 37, complaining of the Attorney General's intervention in Terra I; ¶ 38 (same); ¶ 39, complaining of a motion filed in Terra I; ¶ 40, complaining of other motions filed in Terra I; ¶ 42, complaining of the mediation process in Terra I; ¶ 43, complaining of Assistant Attorney General Perkins' actions during the mediation process in Terra I; ¶¶ 48-53, complaining of actions relating to Dr. Stebbins' involvement in Terra I; ¶¶ 55-58 complaining of actions relating to Dr. Marshall's involvement in Terra I; ¶¶ 59-74, complaining of the settlement appealing further illustrates the inconsistency that plagues their objection to the transfer.

[3] Assuming arguendo that Terra I and Terra II were not the same case (which of course, they are), as plaintiffs suggest, then Judge Kinnaird would have jurisdiction to hear Terra II, regardless of the appeal, and it should be transferred based on relatedness.

secured in Terra I. Plaintiffs' Complaint in Terra II is attached hereto as Exhibit A. See also Exhibit A, p. 25, Count I, Prayer for Relief, seeking "[a] declaration that the settlement [in Terra I] is unlawful..." (Emphasis added.)

It is undisputed that Terra II is simply plaintiffs' effort to challenge the settlement that was reached in Terra I. Plaintiffs are unhappy with the settlement, and in fact, tried to prevent its approval by the Foundation and Judge Kinnaird on numerous occasions. Plaintiffs have now initiated Terra II to attempt to review the settlement yet again. In fact, the defendants in Terra II consist of every Foundation Board member who voted for the settlement, two of the law firms involved in Terra I, the intervenor Illinois Attorney General and an Assistant Attorney General from Terra I, and all new Foundation Board members who are responsible for complying with the consent decree.

Rather than even attempting to demonstrate a lack of relatedness between Terra I and Terra II or even suggesting that somehow judicial economy and efficiency would not be served by a transfer, plaintiffs suggest that the effect of Terra I is minimal, citing general principles of law defining a consent decree as an agreement between parties. Plaintiffs argue that by entering into a consent decree, there was no judicial resolution of the rights of Tucker, Terra, and Simpson. Of course, plaintiffs' position regarding the limited effect of a consent decree is totally inconsistent with the arguments that plaintiffs raised in objecting to Judge Kinnaird's approval of the consent decree, namely, that the consent decree would impact the rights of numerous beneficiaries and plaintiffs and that an evidentiary hearing was necessary to demonstrate the fairness of the settlement. Notwithstanding the clear inconsistency, plaintiffs' argument here is without support because a motion for transfer itself does not require that another court have already conclusively resolved the parties' rights. Plaintiffs again miss the point.[4] There is no such limitation on this Court and plaintiffs' objection should be rejected.

Moreover, even plaintiffs acknowledge — as they must — that Judge Kinnaird, in presiding over Terra I and ruling on plaintiffs' objections to the consent decree, spent a great deal of time addressing the issue reraised in Terra II. In fact, Judge Kinnaird has already considered plaintiffs' claims — raised on several occasions in Terra I — that the consent decree was the product of coercion on the part of the Attorney General. Risk of inconsistent rulings is substantial here. Indeed, virtually all of the issues raised in plaintiffs' current motion to strike Sidley & Austin's pleadings and appearance were raised before and decided by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I.

In their effort to minimize the effect of the consent decree, plaintiffs have misrepresented to this Court that counsel for Buntrock and Gidwitz drafted the consent decree. This is totally false. The consent decree was drafted by the Court-appointed mediator in Terra I and reviewed by all parties and their counsel. Plaintiffs further misrepresent to this Court that defendants somehow short-circuited Judge Kinnaird's ability to adjudicate the issues in Terra I or that by fashioning the settlement in terms of a consent decree, defendants deprived themselves of a hearing on the merits. As set forth in the motion to transfer, the consent decree was only entered after substantial briefing by all parties and five hours of argument before Judge Kinnaird. Accordingly, the significant amount of time that this matter was before Judge Kinnaird, and her resulting familiarity with the legal issues further support transfer to Judge Kinnaird in accordance with General Order 1.3.

[4] Plaintiffs would have this Court exercise its authority to transfer related matters only if another court previously resolved and adjudicated the issues alleged in the action sought to be transferred. Under such a "rule," a matter could only be transferred if another action was no longer pending. Thus, plaintiffs' position totally contradicts their argument that transfer is improper if the related action is no longer pending.

Finally, plaintiffs' argument as to the limited effect of the consent decree is fundamentally inconsistent with their filing of a notice of appeal. On one hand, plaintiffs would have this Court find that the appeal in Terra I prevents the transfer of this matter, while at the same time, plaintiffs suggest that the order that is subject of the appeal in Terra I was not really a judgment and did not bind plaintiffs. Plaintiffs cannot have it both ways and the motion for transfer should be granted.

III. Defendants Are Not Barred From Requesting That This Court Transfer This Matter To The Chancery Division.

Plaintiffs suggest that defendants are somehow barred from even requesting that this Court transfer this matter to the Chancery Division. The basis for the purported "bar" is the fact that defendants did not object to Judge Kinnaird's statement in Terra I that plaintiffs would be free to file whatever lawsuit they wanted and raise whatever allegations they wanted. Plaintiffs have construed Judge Kinnaird's statement, that simply recognizes plaintiffs' constitutional right to file a lawsuit, as somehow validating Terra II. Plaintiffs' argument is totally baseless. Defendants' motion to transfer does not in any way in conflict with Judge Kinnaird's statement. Significantly, defendants have not contested plaintiffs' right to file this "action." Defendants have simply requested that this Court transfer this matter to Judge Kinnaird because Terra II is an attack on Terra I.

The authority relied on by plaintiffs to support the purported "acquiescence" is inapposite. In Auton v. Logan Landfill, Inc., 105 Ill. 2d 537, 474 N.E.2d 817 (1985) and Drollinger v. Merrell, 57 Ill. App. 3d 792, 373 N.E.2d 407 (5th Dist. 1978), the reviewing courts held that a party waived the ability to argue certain issues on appeal because the issues were inconsistent with positions taken before the trial court or had not been properly preserved. In Terra II, there is no reviewing court considering an appealable issue in this case and thus, Auton and Drollinger have no relevance.

Plaintiffs rely on Chicago Park District v. Chicago & North Western Transportation Company, 240 Ill. App. 3d 839, 859, 607 N.E.2d 1300, 1314 (1st Dist. 1992), to suggest that there is a "bargain" that defendants entered into that is somehow violated by this motion. Plaintiffs have unilaterally constructed a "bargain" based on the fact that defendants did not object to Judge Kinnaird's statement recognizing plaintiffs' constitutional right to file an action. There was no "bargain" and plaintiffs' insinuation is disingenuous.[5]

IV. THE COMPLAINT IN TERRA II SEEKS RELIEF THAT IS WITHIN THE TYPE OF RELIEF AWARDED BY CHANCERY COURTS.

It cannot be reasonably disputed that the relief sought in the Complaint is primarily equitable relief that is, pursuant to General Order 1.2, among the express types of relief and cases reserved to the Chancery Division. Specifically, Terra II seeks injunctive and declaratory relief and plaintiffs have already sought a restraining order. Plaintiffs' only response is that General Order 1.2 has been modified or is about to be modified. Of course, plaintiffs have not directed this Court to any such proposed modification or authority to support their suggestion.

Plaintiffs suggest that this matter has been assigned to the "Commercial Litigation Division" and as support, submit a blank Civil Action Cover Sheet. Plaintiffs ignore that the Civil Action Cover Sheet itself provides that "[t]he information contained herein is for administrative purposes only and cannot be introduced into evidence." Plaintiffs also fail to note that the judge to whom this case was assigned in the Commercial Litigation Division, Judge Gardner, sua sponte transferred this action to this Court for purposes of consideration of transfer and expressly stated that it should be transferred to the Chancery Division for assignment to Judge Kinnaird. In addition, the Civil Action Cover Sheet is a form to be completed by the attorneys for the plaintiff. Thus, the fact that plaintiffs' attorneys deem their case as appropriate for the Law Division did not bind Judge Gardner.

Finally, plaintiffs suggest that because the Civil Action Sheet provides for general "statutory actions" and certain statutes provide for injunctive relief, the Law Division is thus the proper division to hear Terra II. Such an argument is illogical and ignores that General Order 1.2 expressly defines injunctions as appropriate for resolution in the Chancery Division.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs accuse defendants of "gamesmanship." That plaintiffs are unable to provide any authority to support their unfounded allegations is not surprising. Defendants' motion to transfer is entirely proper. It is plaintiffs who have engaged in a forum shopping expedition that more accurately constitutes gamesmanship. Indeed, if plaintiffs' appeal of Terra I and the separate litigation of Terra II before a new judge is permitted to proceed, the end result could be inconsistent and conflicting judgments: a decision in the Terra I appeal may moot the proceedings in Terra II.

Plaintiffs' objection to the motion to transfer is predicated solely on plaintiffs' effort to find another forum to reevaluate the consent decree — even a forum of coordinate jurisdiction. Defendants have established that Terra II is based on the consent decree of Terra I. Plaintiffs have not even attempted to rebut the relatedness between Terra I and Terra II. Instead, plaintiffs have sidestepped the issue, suggesting that Judge Kinnaird does not have jurisdiction over Terra I. Plaintiffs' arguments fail because regardless of the filing of a notice of appeal, Judge Kinnaird clearly has jurisdiction to enforce the consent decree as no one has even sought entry of a stay pursuant to Rule 305.

For all foregoing reasons, Defendants Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Marshall, and Stebbins respectfully request that this Court transfer this case to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery Division for assignment to Judge Kinnaird.

COMPLAINT AT LAW

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson complain of the Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, James E. Ryan, Floyd D. Perkins, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, and the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation") as follows:

Preliminary Statement

1. Through this action, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson seek to vindicate both the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder Daniel J. Terra. The plaintiffs complain that certain directors of the Foundation are irreconcilably conflicted and have willfully and wantonly breached their fiduciary obligations by pursuing a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation and inconsistent with both the purpose of the Foundation and the clearly expressed intentions of its founder. These breaches of fiduciary duty were aided by – and even induced by – the illegal conduct of the Illinois Attorney General and his assistant. Indeed, as we set out more fully below, the improvident conduct of the Attorney General not only induced breaches of fiduciary duty but constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law and an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech. The Foundation's interests have been further compromised by the conflicted interests of several Directors and various counsel who purported to, but did not, represent and counsel the Foundation free of improper influence

2. The plaintiffs have been unlawfully denied the opportunity to bring these claims in other litigation. As a result, this case is filed to secure relief – a declaratory judgment, injunctive relief and damages – in order to halt the perversion of the Foundation's mission which has been the direct result of the defendants' conduct.

Nature of the Case

3. On June 29, 2001, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, by a conflicted majority, voted to accept a settlement of this litigation that would chain the Foundation to Chicago for 50 years and install a majority of Illinois residents on its

16di-003875

Board. As the dissenting board members stated before the vote, this acquiescence to the extraordinary intrusions by the State of Illinois into the Foundation's affairs was ultra vires and an utter abdication of the Board's fiduciary responsibilities. Yet six board members, some with personal conflicts, none acting in the best interests of the Foundation, chose to vote in favor of a proposal that—if allowed to stand—will do violence to the clear vision of an American philanthropist and set a chilling precedent for all not-for-profit corporations.

4. The Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Yet six Board members voted to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the Foundation's charter and its founder's demonstrated intentions.

5. Earlier litigation and a mediation process compromised by conflicts of interest became a vehicle for a power grab by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws. Through threats of investigation and legal action—including the threat of suing pivotal board members - Perkins has used his official powers to compromise and conflict certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors such that the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech have been effectively nullified. The Attorney General's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens further to deprive Plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (3) rights under the commerce and contracts clauses of the Constitution. Through this unlawful conduct, Mr. Perkins has also induced certain Board members to violate their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

6. In approving a tainted mediation process, a conflicted a majority of the Board of Directors of the Foundation have violated their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and caused the Foundation to act ultra vires. Despite irreconcilable conflicts of interest and their consequent disqualification, directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins have acted against the interest of the Foundations. By taking action incompatible with the Foundation's charter and wasting valuable assets and opportunities for the Foundation to carry out its mission, the Board members who approved the proposed settlement violated duties of obedience to the Foundation's purpose and best interests.

Parties

7. The Terra Foundation for the Arts is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1978 by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra. The Foundation, pursuant to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, oversees the $175 million Terra Collection of American Art and roughly $250 million in other assets.

8. Paul Hayes Tucker is Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Foundation. He is a chaired professor of art history at the University of Massachusetts Boston and a resident of Massachusetts.

9. Alan K. Simpson is a Director of the Foundation, a former United States Senator and retired Director of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and a resident of Wyoming. Senator Simpson also serves as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, which maintains assets valued in excess of $350 million.

10. Judith Terra is Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors and Vice President of the Foundation, Mr. Terra's widow, and a resident of Washington, D.C.

11. Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall is the Foundation's Secretary and Treasurer and chairman of its finance and strategic planning committees. She is president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, and a resident of Illinois.

12. Dr. Theodore O. Stebbins is a Director of the Foundation and Chairman of the collections committee. He currently serves as curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard University and resides in Massachusetts.

13. Margaret Daley is a Director of the Foundation and Chairman of its education committee. She is a resident of Illinois.

14. Dean Buntrock is a Director of the Foundation and an at-large member of its Executive Committee. He is a resident of Illinois.

15. Ronald Gidwitz is a Director of the Foundation and an at-large member of its Executive Committee. He is a resident of Illinois.

16. James E. Ryan is the Attorney General of Illinois.

17. Floyd D. Perkins is Assistant Attorney General, Bureau of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations.

The History of the Terra Foundation

18. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. Born and educated in Philadelphia and a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Terra maintained residences in Chicago and Washington, D.C. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to 1950. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

19. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Its purposes, according to its original Articles of Incorporation, were > to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation (as filed Dec. 13, 1978).

20. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He created a multimillion dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art. Today, the Foundation owns substantial property in the Village of Giverny.

21. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the North Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

22. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson and his long-time friend Peter Solmsson of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

23. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Terra negotiated with the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City to form a strategic alliance that would pool the Foundation's collection with those of the other two institutions and move the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington. Discussions broke down over issues relating to the Whitney Museum's control over the collection.

24. Between 1993 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized.

25. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans and obtain zoning permits for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Phone lines, name plates, furniture and other items were purchased for the new property. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with his own handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

26. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable North Michigan Avenue museum site. Between 1996 and 1998, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to Mr. Terra's estate.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

27. Upon settlement of Mr. Terra's estate, the Board returned to consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation. At a November 1998 meeting, Mr. Buntrock recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider options for the future of the Foundation. Mr. Gidwitz was elected chairman of this committee.

28. Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard

University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris; Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis Corporation.

29. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation continued active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. The Strategic Planning Committee met several times to consider options, with Mr. Gidwitz himself raising suggestions of building a new museum facility on a different site, affiliation with other museums, and closing the museum to focus on education efforts and building the collection.

30. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 annual meeting in France, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

31. Dr. Tucker circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

32. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

The Ploy to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

33. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit alleging that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

34. In their lawsuit, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock claimed, contrary to fact, that Mr. Terra intended that the Foundation would always remain in the Chicago area. The complaint quoted news reports from 1987, the time of the move from Evanston to North Michigan Avenue, in which Mr. Terra described his enthusiasm for the new location. The complaint did not refer to Mr. Terra's 1990 statement to the Board of Directors or to any of his subsequent discussions and plans relating to relocation of the Foundation to another city. It also did not mention the 1994 amendment to the charter which permitted the Foundation to operate museums and schools "both in the United States and abroad." Based on this misleading statement of Mr. Terra's intent, the defendants alleged that the Foundation's mission was to operate a "museum of American art . . . in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois."

35. Attorney General James Ryan and Floyd Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General, seized upon the turmoil of the Terra Foundation Board as an opportunity to assert State control over its assets. At the inception of the lawsuit, the Attorney General filed an intervenor complaint that simply borrowed the allegations of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. The complaint also reiterated the faulty premise -- based upon a demonstrably incorrect statement of Mr. Terra's intent -- that the Board of Directors were without authority to relocate the Foundation. The complaint sought a declaration, among other things, that "[t]he intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the Foundation intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland."

36. The Attorney General intervened expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an ultra vires act. As Assistant Attorney General Perkins has stated in an interview for that case, he believes it is his role as assistant attorney general to see that Illinois-based charitable institutions utilize their assets in Illinois. Mr. Perkins attempts to accomplish this by seeking installment of Illinois directors on the boards of such institutions and through other restrictions. He has employed this tactic successfully in other cases, for example, that of the Regenstein Foundation. Mr. Perkins acknowledges, however, that he does not have the authority to impose Illinois-related restrictions on institutions which were created to serve broader interests, such as national and international aid organizations, even though such institutions may be based in Illinois and subject to reporting and other statutory requirements of Illinois law.

37. As authority for his intervention in that lawsuit, Mr. Perkins relied on the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997)) and his "common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts." Whatever authority these sources of law may provide to the Attorney General, they do not permit any action to force a charitable trustee or Board member of a not-for-profit corporation to change the institution's fundamental purpose in a manner inconsistent with its charter or founder's intent. Nor do these authorities mandate that any charitable trust or not-for-profit corporation that is established in the State of Illinois must remain in Illinois, regardless of its purposes and founder's intent.

38. The propriety of the Attorney General's intervention and sole basis for authority in that case depended upon his claim that the Terra Foundation's purpose was to serve the people of Illinois, rather than a broader population. Like the other defendants, the Attorney General based this claim on selected statements of Mr. Terra to the press. A reasonable investigation of the facts would have revealed, however, that Mr. Terra did not intend that any of the assets of the Terra Foundation should be restricted geographically. Mr. Perkins did not conduct such an investigation before filing his initial complaint. For example, Mr. Perkins has admitted that when he filed that complaint he was unaware of Mr. Terra's 1994 amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the

39. In January 2001, the Terra Foundation filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad.

40. Although the true facts of Mr. Terra's intent were revealed early in litigation, and at the latest by the Foundation's motion for judgment on the pleadings, defendants and the Attorney General persisted in their efforts to capture the Foundation in Illinois. They were able to do so through a barrage of motions designed to delay the proceedings and deflect attention from the core issue of Mr. Terra's intent. Mr. Perkins and the other defendants first challenged the Board's choice of counsel and early decisions about directing and funding the litigation. Then, once the Board had selected an independent litigation committee of Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Andreani, Mr. Perkins and the other derfendants challenged Dr. Stebbins' ability to serve on this committee. These tactics had the desired effect of paralyzing the Board and placing Mr. Perkins and the other defendants in a strong position to make demands upon the Foundation, without regard to the merits of their lawsuits.

41. As the case proceeded to mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins insinuated themselves into the process in an attempt to railroad its result. Mr. Perkins pursued the goal of capturing the Foundation's assets in Illinois despite the fact that he had no basis to assert that he was seeking to preserve Mr. Terra's intent.

42. In mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins took several extraordinary positions that evidenced their recognition that Mr. Terra's intent was not to constrain the Foundation to Chicago. The Attorney General disagreed that the Board of Directors was governed in the use of the Foundation's funds solely by the Articles of Incorporation. He argued that those Articles were too broad to provide any meaningful purpose to the Foundation. Most strikingly, the Attorney General maintained that a not-for-profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply by virtue of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population.

43. Without legal authority and in disregard of the facts regarding Mr. Terra's intent. Assistant Attorney General Perkins demanded throughout the mediation that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with the Art Institute of Chicago in which the Foundation would sell the North Michigan Avenue property to fund a new wing at the Art Institute.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois in perpetuity.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection in the Chicago metropolitan area in perpetuity.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois.

44. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

45. Frustrated by the Board's resistance to his demands, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation. These tactics were directed in particular at two key swing directors, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall.

Attacks on Dr. Stebbins

46. Since his earliest involvement with the Terra Foundation, Dr. Stebbins had supported a comprehensive approach to strategic planning that included consideration of options outside of Illinois. In 1997, before Dr. Stebbins joined the Board, he headed an advisory committee that conducted a review and analysis of the collection and reported recommendations to the Board for the future. The committee consisted of Dr. Stebbins, then curator of American paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Professor John Wilmerding, former chairman of the art department at Princeton, and Charles Moffett, former deputy director of the National Gallery and director of the Phillips Collection in Washington. In its report to the Board in February 1997, the advisory committee concluded strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. The committee envisioned three alternative scenarios for the future, two of which involved discontinuing the Chicago presence by: (1) concentrating on French operations, with the establishment of a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris, or (2) improving the collection and housing it another American city.

47. Dr. Stebbins joined the Board in April 1998. In Strategic Planning Committee meetings until the outbreak of litigation, he continued to advocate consideration of options within and without Illinois. He was an especially strong advocate for the idea of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

48. When litigation began, Dr. Stebbins became a key figure in its conduct. Upon defendants' demand for an independent litigation committee, Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Jacques Andreani were chosen from among the non-party directors to oversee the litigation on behalf of the Foundation. Because Amb. Andreani was in France at the time, Dr. Stebbins effectively controlled the litigation committee.

49. Within three weeks of Dr. Stebbins' election to the litigation committee on November 30, 2000, Mr. Perkins filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the committee on the grounds of conflict of interest. On January 22, 2001, Mr. Perkins obtained a Court order to conduct special discovery focusing on Dr. Stebbins' conduct as a director. Within two weeks of that order — and less than two weeks before a scheduled evidentiary hearing focusing upon Dr. Stebbins' conduct — the Foundation entered into mediation. With challenges to his reputation and integrity having become the central focus of the litigation, Dr. Stebbins strongly advocated directing the Foundation into mediation.

50. On March 21, 2001, Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time. In a cover letter, Mr. Perkins stated that the document was a draft and was not being filed, but rather supplied to set forth issues to be discussed at settlement. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a new defendant and included specific charges of impropriety against him. The allegations included alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions.

The amended complaint also charged Stebbins with breaching the Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums. The amended complaint was never filed.

51. Dr. Stebbins now knew that, if settlement was not reached, the litigation would resume, with his reputation and integrity once again the central focus, and he would become a defendant in the case.

52. On the same day that the draft complaint was distributed to counsel, the mediator circulated to the Board a revised mediation proposal, which had been formulated after reviewing the amended complaint and discussing this matter with the Attorney General. The proposal contained a requirement that the Foundation would maintain and exhibit its collection in perpetuity at the Art Institute of Chicago. According to the mediator, this provision resulted from the position of the Attorney General. Mr. Perkins had not participated in mediation sessions on March 5 and 6, but worked behind the scenes with the mediator to influence the course of mediation.

53. Dr. Stebbins, facing the threat of becoming a defendant in the lawsuit, now expressed his support for settlement. On April 2, 2001, he and Amb. Andreani prepared a letter to the mediator stating that "in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago." They enclosed a settlement proposal "follow[ing] the outline" of the March 21, 2001, proposal reflecting the Attorney General's positions.

Attacks on Dr. Marshall

54. Dr. Marshall joined the Board in 1998. Like Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall held the view that the Terra Foundation was established for the broadest possible dissemination of American art. For example, at a May 10, 2000, meeting of the Strategic Planning

16di-003891

Committee that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall attended, consensus was reached that the beneficiaries of the Foundation included the national and international public.

55. Late into the mediation process, Dr. Marshall remained a strong critic of the Attorney General's methods and proposals. In a May 20, 2001, letter to counsel for the Foundation and her fellow Board members she reported:

> [W]ith respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

56. In addition to serving on the Board, Dr. Marshall serves full-time as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, a highly-regarded education institution that depends on public funding for the bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

57. After a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been tricked into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. He began to investigate Dr. Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He considered these issues for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr. Perkins knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

58. Mr. Perkins never informed Dr. Marshall or her counsel that the investigation had been concluded.

The Proposed Settlement and Board Approval

59. On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed settlement of this litigation. The settlement called for entry of a consent judgment and order implementing the Attorney General's goal of locking the Foundation in to the State of Illinois. In this regard, the proposed judgment requires:

a. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois;

b. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago metropolitan area;

c. For at least 25 years, the Foundation will require that a majority of its Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois;

d. The Foundation shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

60. Dr. Marshall, the Foundation's Treasurer and Secretary, presided at the special meeting. Other directors present were: Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.

61. Immediately prior to the vote, several Board members made personal statements. Mrs. Terra objected that "the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees."

> Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art . . . . [W]e will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of

> Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation . . . telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most . . . outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation.

62. Dr. Tucker echoed Mrs. Terra's concerns. He stated that > what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview. The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by . . . the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive.

63. At the recommendation of the Foundation's attorney, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall each addressed the issue of conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's conduct in the case. Dr. Marshall confirmed that "the Attorney General has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation," but insisted that the investigation "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation."

64. Dr. Stebbins first defended his "reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity," and maintained that he had served on the Board "without any iota of a conflict of interest." He then stated that he "abhor[ed] the threatening tactics of the Attorney General." Dr. Stebbins also insisted that he was voting his "own conscience."

65. Upon the motion of Dr. Stebbins, the Board voted on whether to approve the proposed resolutions to amend the By-Laws and accept the settlement. Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor. Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against.

66. Members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation have statutory and common law fiduciary duties to the Foundation. These duties include, but are not limited to, the duty of loyalty, which encompasses the duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to act in the best interests of the Foundation; the duty of obedience to purpose, which prohibits action contrary to the purposes for which Foundation was established; and the duty to use the Foundation's assets productively and not to waste Foundation assets.

67. At least two members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement were faced with a conflict of interest. Dr. Marshall expressly acknowledged that the Attorney General, the primary beneficiary of the settlement transaction, was conducting an investigation of the publicly-funded institution of which Dr. Marshall is president. Dr. Marshall reasonably could expect her vote on the settlement to influence the outcome of that investigation, either positively or negatively.

68. Dr. Stebbins also had strong personal incentives to support the settlement to the detriment of the Foundation. During the course of the litigation and corresponding public scrutiny of the Foundation's operations, he had faced charges of serious lapses of professional responsibility. In acknowledging his abhorrence of the Attorney General's tactics and vociferously defending his reputation and integrity immediately prior to the vote, Dr. Stebbins plainly identified his conflict of interest. If the mediation was unsuccessful, Dr. Stebbins would become a defendant in the case and face personal liability. Only through settlement could Dr. Stebbins hope to avoid more scrutiny which carried the threat of a potentially devastating effect on his career.

69. The Foundation's bylaws can be amended only "by a majority of the directors then in office and present" at the meeting at which the vote is taken. Because eight members of the Board were present at the June 29, 2001 meeting, the affirmative vote of five directors was required to approve the Proposed Settlement's many bylaw changes. Without the votes of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the Proposed Settlement garnered only four votes.

70. Each Board member who voted in favor of the settlement did so in violation of their fiduciary duty of obedience to the Foundation's purpose. Restricting the Foundation's art collection to isolation in Chicago for 50 years and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board is directly contrary to the Foundation's stated purpose in its Articles of Incorporation to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added).

71. The Foundation's mission is meant to be world-wide and its board members equally diverse, not given over specially to Illinois and its citizenry. Indeed, the problems of the 50-year lock-in and Illinois-majority provisions were identified by Dr. Marshall prior to her conflict of interest arising. In her letter of May 20, 2001, she stated that because of the Foundation's "intentional national and international outreach and presence," she did "not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority." Dr. Marshall acknowledged that a 50-year lock-in would be a relinquishment of the Board's power to govern the Foundation when she stated that "[a]fter the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future."

72. Each Board member who voted in favor of the proposed settlement also violated a duty not to waste the Foundation's assets. By eliminating the possibility of merger or partnership with a non-Chicago institution, the Board accepted a undue limitation on its negotiating power. By limiting the field of competitors for the Terra relationship, the Board would waste all the benefits that would flow from that competition, and in particular the ability to secure the most attractive possible terms for the future and for the collection to have the greatest possible impact on the art world and public education.

73. The Foundation has benefited tremendously from the participation of art experts worldwide on its board of directors -- including, among others, the curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum; a leading expert on Claude Monet; and the president of a major Parisian art museum. Yet the Board majority voted in favor of a settlement under which the Foundation would forfeit the benefit of such experts in favor of a board packed with individuals whose chief virtue is that they are residents of Illinois. By limiting the pool of talent from which the Board can recruit directors, the Board would waste its opportunity to secure the best and most experienced leadership.

74. Locking the Foundation into Chicago for 50 years or any other length of time and stacking the Board with Illinois residents dangerously compromises the Foundation's flexibility to fulfill its charter. There is absolutely no guarantee that the Chicago community will provide adequate support to the Foundation over such a long period of time. If the Foundation is to remain viable it must have the flexibility to consider other venues where its collection may attract the maximum possible interest.

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

Count I - Declaratory Relief

75. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

76. An actual and justiciable controversy exits between the parties as defined by 735 ILCS 5/2-701.

77. As directors of the Terra Foundation, Plaintiffs have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the mission of the Foundation.

78. Plaintiffs have a fiduciary duty to see that the Foundation acts lawfully and in obedience to its charter and purpose, and to protect the Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement and unlawful interference with its rights.

79. The conduct of the Defendants alleged herein has caused and will continue to cause irreparable harm to the to the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries in the United States and abroad.

80. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law and request that this Court enter a judgment declaring as stated in the prayer for relief below.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) A declaration that the settlement is unlawful because it was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law; it is the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of director fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General; and it is incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count II - Ultra Vires Acts (805 ILCS 105/103.15)

81. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

82. The resolutions approved by six members of the Board of the Foundation on June 29, 2001, constitute acts of the Foundation taken in contravention of its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thus taken without lawful authority, capacity or power.

16di-003898

83. The court should enjoin the doing of such acts in this proceeding pursuant to the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a).

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment as follows:

(a) an Order enjoining the defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation;

(b) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(c) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(d) Punitive damages;

(e) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count III - Breach of Fiduciary Duty

84. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

85. A fiduciary relationship exists between the Foundation and the members of its Board of Directors. The Board's fiduciary duties include, without limitation, the duties of acting in good faith and with due regard for the Foundation's interest, of refraining from acting in a manner adverse to the Foundation's interest, of making full disclosure of all material information in their possession, of obedience to the Foundation's purposes as established by its Articles of Incorporation, of making productive use of the Foundation's assets and opportunities, and the duties of care, loyalty, fair dealing, and honesty.

86. The Defendant Board Members who voted in favor of the proposed settlement willfully and wantonly breached some or all of these fiduciary duties because the settlement is not in the best interests of the Foundation, is inconsistent with the Foundation's charter and by-laws, and wastes assets and opportunities of the Foundation.

87. In addition, board members Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins breached their duties of loyalty to the Foundation by voting in favor of a settlement which offered personal benefits having nothing to do with the interests of the Foundation.

88. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of fiduciary duty, the plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count IV - Inducing Breach of Fiduciary Duty

89. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

90. As set forth above, the Defendant members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement of this litigation did so in violation of their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

91. Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins colluded with these Board members in committing breach of their fiduciary duties, or otherwise induced or participated in such breach.

92. As a direct and proximate result of this conduct, Plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

16di-003900

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Punitive damages;

(d) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count V - Deprivation Under Color of Law of Constitutional Rights (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

93. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

94. At all relevant times, Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins acted under color of law as Assistant Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

95. Mr. Perkins' conduct constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

96. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech under the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

97. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful restraint by the State of Illinois on interstate commerce in violation of Art. I, § 8 of the Constitution of the United States.

98. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful impairment of the Foundation's contractual obligations in violation of Art. I, § 9 of the Constitution of the United States.

16di-003901

99. The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General engaged in such illegal conduct to the injury of Plaintiffs and the Foundation.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Jury Trial Requested

100. Plaintiffs request trial by jury.

OBJECTIONS TO "EMERGENCY" MOTION TO STRIKE APPEARANCE AND TO STRIKE "UNAUTHORIZED" PLEADING

Defendants Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Crisham, Ltd., hereby object to the "Emergency" Motion to Strike Appearance and Strike "Unauthorized" Pleading. In further objection, defendants state as

I. This Motion is Premature

A. Resolution of These Issues would Interfere with the Consent Judgment and Order Entered by Judge Kinnaird in Terra I.

In the interest of judicial economy, as reflected in the Circuit Court's General Orders, a single judge should hear and decide all aspects of this case. The questions regarding representation of the Foundation and the issue of whether or not Marshall Field V has been properly elected as Chairman and President of the Foundation are not stand-alone issues and cannot be separated from Terra I. These issues cannot be resolved independent from consideration of the consent judgment and order entered in Terra I, the Foundation's by laws, the Illinois Not For Profit Corporations Act, the customs and practices of the Foundation's Board and various other issues which have been previously considered by Judge Kinnaird. Plaintiffs' claim that counsel has not been properly retained by the Foundation stems from a theory that the consent judgment and order entered in Terra I is invalid. Plaintiffs' logic is as follows: the consent judgment is invalid, therefore the board was not properly elected, therefore Marshall Field V could not have hired counsel on behalf of the Foundation. Any court deciding whether Plaintiffs' theory is correct must necessarily interpret and interfere with the consent judgment. Judge Kinnaird has retained jurisdiction to enforce and interpret the consent judgment.[1] Moreover, as defendants illustrated in the motions to transfer, this entire "action" including the issues raised in Plaintiffs' motion are inextricably connected to Terra I and should be decided by Judge Kinnaird.

[1] Judge Kinnaird expressly reserved jurisdiction "for the purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order." Exhibit A, p. 4, ¶ 13.

16di-003914

Finally, although Plaintiffs would have this Court believe that it is considering a simple motion to strike, this motion is, at best, a thinly-veiled motion to disqualify.[2] These issues should be decided in the context of Terra I and not at this stage and out of context.

B. Resolution of these Issues Should be Reserved Until After Transfer to the Proper Judge.

Although the Plaintiffs self-styled their motion an "emergency" there is no emergency here. Plaintiffs have offered no justification for asking this Court to answer the issue of representation while this matter is pending before this Court for reassignment. Fully briefed motions to transfer to the Chancery Division are pending before this Court. In fact, pursuant to the Circuit Court of Cook County General Order No. 1.3, the only question before this Court is whether or not this matter should be transferred to the Chancery Division. See General Order 1.3(c) "[Any action improperly filed in the wrong division] shall be transferred to the Presiding Judge of the division or district in which it is pending for the purpose of transferring the action to the Presiding Judge of the proper division or district..." (Emphasis added.)

As the Plaintiffs have failed to articulate any emergency which would justify a circumvention of the General Order, and have failed to present this Court with any authority in support of their attempt to do so, this Court should not condone Plaintiffs tactics and should consider only the transfer motions at this time. After the transfer motions have been resolved, the proper judge (in this case Judge Kinnaird) will be able to adjudicate whether there is any merit to the Plaintiffs' accusations.

[2]As a matter of judicial economy and practicality, it is important to note that any decision made by this Court disqualifying counsel is immediately appealable to the Appellate Court by petition under Supreme Court Rule 306(a)(7). As this matter, and this very issue, has been appealed to the appellate court in Terra I, a further appeal would do nothing but create a procedural morass in an already convoluted matter. Indeed, Plaintiffs have filed a notice of appeal in Terra I. (See notice of appeal attached as Exhibit A to Plaintiffs' Objections to Various Motions to Transfer.)

At this time, pending before this Court are three fully briefed motions to transfer this cause to the Chancery Division and ultimately to Judge Kinnaird. The motion to transfer filed by the Foundation is under attack in Plaintiffs' motion, however there are two independent motions to transfer filed by the Attorney General and director defendants, herein. Therefore, even if Plaintiffs' motion to strike the Foundation's motion to transfer were granted, there remain two independent motions which seek the identical relief. Even if this Court were to grant the motion to strike, Plaintiffs are asking this Court to enter a futile order which does nothing to change the case. In the face of the other two motions which have not and cannot be challenged, this Court should deny the Plaintiffs' motion and proceed directly to transferring this matter.

C. Plaintiffs Never Filed a First Amended Complaint at Law.

Contrary to Plaintiffs' assertion in their motion (Motion to Strike, p. 2), the Plaintiffs have not been granted leave to file a first amended complaint at law in this matter. On August 13, 2001, Plaintiffs served upon the defendants a "First Amended Complaint at Law" with a notice which claimed that they would file that amended complaint "instanter" at the hearing scheduled for 2:00p.m. that day. Pursuant to the Code of Civil Procedure, 735 ILCS 5/2-616, a complaint may be amended before final judgment, "on just and reasonable terms". § 2-616(a). A plaintiff must seek leave of court to amend a pleading. Therefore, Plaintiffs' assertion that they could file an amended complaint "instanter" without a proper motion and without leave of court is wrong.

Moreover, the August 13, 2001 transcript of proceedings and the order entered by Judge Gardner on that same day belie the Plaintiffs' claim that a first amended complaint was ever filed.

A copy of the August 13, 2001 Transcript of Proceedings is attached as Exhibit B. Plaintiffs' own counsel, Mr. Novoselsky, requested of the court:

> What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am sure...

Exhibit B, August 13, 2001 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 11 (emphasis added).

In support of their claim that the first amended complaint was actually filed, Plaintiffs ignore their own representations to the court. Instead, the Plaintiffs direct this Court to the portion of the proceedings wherein the attorneys were introducing themselves for the record. Id. at p. 5. Read in its entirety, the transcript of proceedings before Judge Gardner establishes that a motion for leave to file a first amended complaint was not in fact granted but only entered and continued.

Plaintiffs also ignore the order entered following that same hearing. A copy of the August 13, 2001 order entered by Judge Gardner is attached as Exhibit C. That order states "Plaintiffs' Motion for Leave to File a First Amended Complaint is entered and continued." Exhibit C.

The record is clear that the first amended complaint has not yet been filed and therefore neither Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley") nor Winston & Strawn are yet parties to this action. Thus, at this time, Plaintiffs' claim that Sidley cannot represent the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation") because Sidley is a defendant in this matter is totally inconsistent with the procedural posture of this case.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs' motion is premature. This Court should only address the transfer of this matter and not allow itself to be lead by Plaintiffs into the trap of interfering with the consent judgment and order entered by Judge Kinnaird. Wherefore, the defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz and Hartman respectfully request that this Court deny Plaintiffs' motion in its entirety and proceed directly to transferring this matter to the Chancery Division and ultimately to Judge Kinnaird.

16di-003917

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

1. This Court has personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of these actions.

2. Plaintiffs Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, the Illinois Attorney General and the defendant Foundation now desire to resolve these disputes amicably and without the necessity of further proceedings in these actions. To that end, the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois hereby release and discharge the Terra Foundation for the Arts, its officers, directors, agents and employees, and the Foundation hereby releases and discharges the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois from any and all claims and obligations of any kind or nature raised in or related to the matters raised in this lawsuit, whether in pleadings, motions or argument, other than those obligations set forth herein.

3. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall also maintain its books and records in Illinois, which shall be available to the Attorney General of Illinois for inspection during normal business hours upon reasonable advance notice to the Foundation.

4. The Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws (including promoting American art and culture in the U.S. and abroad) and the laws of the State of Illinois and act consistently with these undertakings. The Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants.

5. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Foundation's ability and freedom to continue to conduct its activities, operations and programs in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the Illinois Attorney General specifically acknowledges and agrees to.

6. The Foundation shall amend its By-Laws to:

a. expand the Board by August 1, 2001, to include fifteen members (except that for the first year the Board may include up to sixteen members);

b. institute initial staggered terms of one, two, three and four years for all Directors with subsequent terms of four years each, and each of the fifteen Board members shall be elected to a term of one, two, three or four years as the Board determines appropriate for each Director elected, subject to the requirement that each of the five new Directors serve an initial term of four years; and

c. establish term limits for all Directors, with no member serving more than eight years after entry of this Order.

7. The Foundation shall reserve and require that, for at least twenty-five years from entry of this Order, a majority of the Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois, with the exception that until the 2002 Annual Meeting or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, fifty per cent of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents.

8. All current members of the Board of Directors will serve only until the 2002 Annual Meeting and will not be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter.

9. The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term:

a. James R. Donnelley

b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and committee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

12. Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation.

13. These actions are hereby dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its Directors, each of whom specifically denies any wrongdoing or liability. The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.

14. The Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General, and the Foundation agree to the mutually-acceptable press release attached as Exhibit A, and agree that no other public statement shall be made by the Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General or the Foundation or any of their attorneys, agents or employees on their behalf regarding the Litigation, the mediation or the settlement.

JOINT PRESS RELEASE re BUNTROCK et. al. v. TERRA FOUNDATION, et al.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased to announce that a settlement has been reached and adopted by the Court.

The settlement will preserve the public's access, here in Chicago, to The Terra Foundation's collection for no less than 50 years. The Foundation will continue to manage its affairs, to operate its museum and programs in Giverny, France, and to promote understanding of and appreciation for American art. The Attorney General is satisfied that the settlement upholds the interests of the people of the State of Illinois. The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased that a settlement could be reached.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation have agreed to let this statement stand alone. No further statements are to be made.

MR. CARLSON: Your Honor, I am Steve Carlson from Sidley & Austin. I got these papers about two minutes before --

THE COURT: Let me ask you, can we stay off the record just a minute?

MR. CARLSON: Sure, absolutely.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan and James Carroll on behalf of certain defendants.

MR. CARLSON: Steve Carlson from Sidley, Austin I believe on behalf of The Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: And pro se, aren't you a party now?

MR. CARLSON: Maybe.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: You granted us leave to file.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. SZOLA: Your Honor, Scott Szola of Winston & Strawn technically hasn't been served either yet, so we will be in the same position as Sidley & Austin.

MR. PERKINS: Floyd Perkins. I am a defendant pro se and Assistant Attorney General on behalf of the Attorney General of Illinois.

MR. HEATWOLE: Mark Heatwole, Winston & Strawn.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Judge.

THE COURT: He assumes everybody knows him, but give them your name.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky and Tom Cronin for plaintiffs.

These are our motions. And I guess the first I would only ask Mr. Quinlan, certain defendants which one, Bill, so there is no question?

MR. QUINLAN: Well, if you want me to go through, I am representing Mr. Hartman, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz. And we are not at the moment representing Miss Marshall or Mr. Stebbins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: As a housekeeping matter, your Honor, we have --

THE COURT: Let me before we start indicate that this case having been set for 2:00 o'clock, as the parties came in, we have had informal discussions which precluded in opening we had as a remaining defendants' attorney came in since the shortage of notice, nobody was essentially late because everything was pretty much of emergency. And that's what we have talked.

A moment ago the attorneys, half a dozen attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the Attorney General, Floyd Perkins. Judge, we object to venue here so anything -- if there is any kind of prejudice --

THE COURT: What are you worried about? I am sending it out sua spontae.

MR. PERKINS: I understand, Judge. I am just -- I don't want any rulings by the court --

THE COURT: Where do you want the venue, in Springfield?

MR. PERKINS: I just don't want any rulings by the court to be used as some prejudice.

THE COURT: Well, I thought everybody heard me since I raised it sua spontae. And I only did you for an afterthought; didn't I?

MR. CARLSON: You sure did, your Honor.

THE COURT: It doesn't make sense to be here. So if you want to argue, I can end up disagreeing. But I totally agree with you. Okay?

MR. PERKINS: Judge --

THE COURT: I think the whole principle of judicial economy and good sense is you put it all in one place. And I have always done that.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Which, your Honor, we may find ourselves going back to square one in front of Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not going to call it which I could do. I could do it. I just don't. I have the right to call it, and it is not ex parte. But I wouldn't do it.

If he has a problem with having this go, that's his problem. I don't see any problem in having it go there. And you would be a delight in my life. I would grow older with you all. But it would be the delight of my life. Sometime when all of you can get a new case from the beginning, it would be my pleasure to have you all here.

(Whereupon, further proceedings in said cause were adjourned sine die.)

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' "EMERGENCY MOTION TO STRIKE APPEARANCE AND TO STRIKE UNAUTHORIZED PLEADING"

Defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), by its attorneys, submits its opposition to Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading. Plaintiffs' premature motion has no merit and should be summarily denied.

I. PLAINTIFFS' MOTION SHOULD BE DECIDED BY THE JUDGE THAT IS ULTIMATELY ASSIGNED TO THIS CASE.

As an initial matter, this Court should not even delve into the issues raised in Plaintiffs' premature motion. On July 31, 2001, Plaintiffs filed their original complaint in the Law Division of the Circuit Court of Cook County. The matter was subsequently assigned to Judge Sheldon Gardner. At a hearing held on August 13, 2001, Judge Gardner stated that he believed that this case should be transferred back to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird, who is currently presiding over a related case, Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859. (See 8/13/01 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 13 ("this case [should] go back [to Judge Kinnaird] and you can quote me."), attached hereto as Exhibit A). This matter was thereafter transferred to this Court, as Chief of the Law Division, for consideration as to the appropriate venue.

For the reasons laid out in the Foundation's Motion to Transfer this Matter to the Presiding Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division, for Reassignment to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird, Judge Gardner was correct in stating that this case is appropriately transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. The Foundation's motion on that issue has now been fully briefed before this Court and is currently set for hearing on September 17, 2001. Until the assignment issue is resolved, this matter is not technically pending before any judge. As such, this Court should simply rule on the Defendants' motions to transfer this matter and not allow itself to be brought into the contentious motion practice which has historically plagued this litigation. Once the case is assigned to the appropriate judge, that judge can then address Plaintiffs' concerns at the appropriate time. Contrary to the title of Plaintiffs' motion, there is simply no "emergency" here, and Plaintiffs' motion should therefore be denied.

II. EVEN IF THIS COURT CHOOSES TO RULE ON PLAINTIFFS' MOTION, IT SHOULD BE DENIED ON ITS MERITS.

A. This litigation is part and parcel of the Buntrock et al. v. Terra et al. matter for which Sidley Austin Brown & Wood was unquestionably retained as the Foundation's counsel.

This litigation is nothing more than an effort by Plaintiffs to circumvent Judge Kinnaird's denial of their motion for leave to file counterclaims in the Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al. case. In other words, they took their counterclaim, fashioned it into a complaint and filed it in the Law Division. There is no question that Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley") was properly retained by the Foundation to represent it in the Buntrock matter. At the Foundation's annual Board of Directors meeting in Giverny, France, on September 26, 2000, the Board voted to retain Sidley to represent it in connection with the Buntrock matter by a vote of 9 to 0 – with only plaintiff Gidwitz abstaining. (See Minutes of 9/26/00 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit B). Since that time (almost one year now) Sidley has served as the Foundation's counsel in that litigation as it continues to do so today.

Moreover, after Judge Kinnaird directed the Foundation to elect an independent litigation committee ("ILC") to direct the litigation, an ILC was formed by the Board and specifically authorized to select and direct counsel for the Foundation. The ILC interviewed Sidley in December 2000 and thereafter reconfirmed Sidley's role as counsel for the Foundation and specifically authorized Sidley "to take any and all action which in its professional judgment is appropriate in representing the Foundation in connection with the Lawsuit." (See 12/4/00 ILC Meeting Minutes and Resolution re: Retention of Counsel, attached hereto as Exhibit C). The ILC has recently indicated that Sidley should continue to represent the Foundation in this litigation because it is nothing more than a collateral attack on the Consent Judgment that settled the Buntrock case, and which merely rehashes the same arguments with which Sidley is intimately familiar.

Indeed, Plaintiffs are simply attempting to "horizontally" appeal Judge Kinnaird's entry of a Consent Judgment and Order in the Buntrock matter and her denial of Plaintiffs' motion for leave to file counterclaims. It appears that Plaintiffs are improperly attempting to cover all their bases. Plaintiffs filed a notice of appeal of Judge Kinnaird's ruling, but rather than wait it out in the appellate court, they also went ahead and filed another lawsuit making the very same allegations they wanted to make in the Buntrock matter. Conveniently, Plaintiffs now claim that, technically, this case is a new matter; therefore, Sidley is not authorized to continue to represent the Foundation. Plaintiffs should not be permitted to use such a tactic to deprive the Foundation of counsel of its choosing who has become uniquely familiar with the allegations and history of this litigation.

B. While not necessary, Sidley's representation of the Foundation in this case has been specifically confirmed.

Even though it was not necessary to do so, Marshall Field V, the new President and Chairman of the Foundation's Board of Directors, has specifically confirmed that Sidley is authorized to defend the Foundation in this case. Retaining litigation counsel is within the broad powers of a corporation's President and Chairman of the Board. See 805 ILCS 105/108.50 ("All officers and agents of the corporation . . . shall have such implied authority as recognized by the common law from time to time."). This type of administrative decision is certainly within the purview of decisions made by presidents and chairmen of corporations all the time, and does not in this case require a formal meeting and vote of the Foundation's entire Board of Directors. Plaintiffs' suggestion that Mr. Field does not have the power to make such a decision is wrong, and in any event is at best a question for another day, and another judge – the one who will ultimately be presiding over this case.

Plaintiffs' motion must be seen for what it truly is. It is not just an attempt to disqualify Sidley – the counsel of choice for the Foundation – but it is even more broadly an attempt to prevent the Foundation from having any counsel to represent it in these contested matters. Plaintiffs' theory that the Foundation's new directors (who were elected on August 1, 2001 as part of the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on July 26, 2001 in the Buntrock matter) were not properly elected to the Board and therefore have no authority to act, is an attempt to bring the Foundation's operations to a screeching halt. If Plaintiffs' theory prevailed, the Foundation would in essence be prevented from making any kind of decision whatsoever, including the retention of counsel to defend itself in the myriad of lawsuits and appeals that Plaintiffs have filed. In short, this is an effort by Plaintiffs to render the Foundation counsel-less. Again, this tactic should not be permitted to prevail.

C. Attempts to disqualify Sidley have already been rejected several times at every court level in Illinois.

Throughout the pendency of the Buntrock litigation, there have been approximately six attempts to disqualify Sidley as the Foundation's counsel. These attempts have been soundly rejected by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court. (See J. Kinnaird's 9/25/00, 10/20/00, 1/2/01 Orders and 1/19/01, 2/16/01 Appellate Court Orders, attached hereto as composite Exhibit D). In addition the Illinois Supreme Court has refused to hear such arguments. (See 6/6/01 letter from Clerk of Ill. Sup. Ct., attached hereto as Exhibit E). In fact, the Plaintiffs in this matter actually filed briefs opposing any disqualification of Sidley by the plaintiffs in Buntrock arguing that any "request to disqualify Sidley [] should be rejected by this Court." (Terra, Tucker and Simpson's Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation and/or Receiver, filed 10/17/00, p. 3). While Plaintiffs may now believe that it suits their situation to contradict themselves, their attempt to change their position is simply too late. As Judge Kinnaird recently stated, in response to Plaintiffs' counsel's objections to Sidley as counsel for the Foundation, "We've been through this Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it . . . Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation . . . and I don't see a conflict." (7/24/01 Transcript of Proceedings, pp. 14-15, attached hereto as Exhibit F).

Plaintiffs' current attempt to deprive the Foundation of its counsel is nothing more than a legal maneuver which they have no standing to bring in the first place, has no factual basis and should not be permitted by this Court. See Schwartz v. Cortelloni, 177 Ill.2d 166, 173, 685 N.E.2d 871, 874 (1997)(noting that "only a party who has been a client of the attorney whose conduct is in question may complain" of a conflict); Renard v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 126 Ill.App.3d 563, 567, 467 N.E.2d 1090, 1094 (1st Dist. 1984)("Absent a complaint by the affected client, a party has no status to object to the representation of an adverse party by an attorney of his choice.") Attorney disqualification is a "drastic measure" which "destroys the attorney-client relationship by prohibiting a party from representation by counsel of his or her choosing." Schwartz, 177 Ill.2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877; accord, Weil, Freiburg & Thomas v. Sara Lee Corp., 218 Ill.App.3d 383, 395, 577 N.E.2d 1344, 1353 (1st Dist. 1991). As the Illinois Supreme Court has admonished, "caution must be exercised to guard against motions to disqualify being used as tools for harassment." Schwartz, 177 Ill.2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877 (emphasis added). In the words of Weil, Freiburg & Thomas v. Sara Lee Corp., 218 Ill.App.3d at 395, 577 N.E.2d at 1353, "our courts disapprove of the use of disqualification motions as a tactical weapon in litigation insofar as such motions can be misused for purposes of harassment." Plaintiffs' motion is similarly just a tactic.

D. Plaintiffs' claim that Sidley made misrepresentations to Judge Gardner is just that – a misrepresentation.

Plaintiffs' citation to supposed promises made to Judge Gardner at the August 13 hearing are completely disingenuous. In their motion, Plaintiffs state that Sidley represented to Judge Gardner that "no action would be taken by the Foundation's board without proper and lawful notice." This statement is simply not true. On August 13, 2001, the parties were before Judge Gardner for a hearing on Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for the Entry of a Temporary Restraining Order to prevent the Foundation from holding a Board of Directors meeting that it had scheduled for the next day. As the transcript clearly reflects, the only thing that Sidley represented that the Foundation would do is "cancel the board meeting" thereby rendering Plaintiffs' motion for a TRO moot. (See 8/13/01 Transcript of Proceedings, pp. 7, 9 ("We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor.")

Sidley made no representation that the Foundation would refrain from doing anything else. In fact, there was explicit discussion of the possibility of rescheduling the Board meeting with the appropriate five days notice and, therefore, any such Board meetings would happen when Judge Kinnaird returned from vacation putting her in a position to deal with any TRO's that Plaintiffs might wish to bring. (See 8/13/01 Transcript of Proceedings, pp. 9-10). Additionally, there certainly was no "promise" to refrain from moving to transfer this case back to Judge Kinnaird. Rather, Sidley made that very motion orally before Judge Gardner, with no objection by Plaintiffs' counsel whatsoever, and Judge Gardner stated that he agreed that it should go back to Judge Kinnaird. (Id. at pp. 8, 13). Obviously, Judge Gardner was not operating under the assumption that Sidley would simply refrain from pursuing that motion.

E. Naming Sidley as a proposed defendant in a proposed pleading does not warrant disqualification.

Despite Plaintiffs' representation, Sidley is not a defendant in this lawsuit. At the August 13 hearing before Judge Gardner, Plaintiffs merely sought leave to file an amended complaint purporting to name Sidley as a defendant (which request for leave the Foundation intends to oppose once the case is assigned to a judge in an appropriate venue). As the Court's Order reflects, Plaintiffs were not granted leave to file that complaint. (8/13/01 Order, attached hereto as Exhibit G; see also 8/13/01 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 11). It was specifically merely entered and continued. Id. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' amended complaint has never been filed and is not currently pending. It is nothing more than a proposed pleading. As counsel for Plaintiffs, Mr. Novoselsky, specifically stated to Judge Gardner, "What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is . . . at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it [at this time]." (8/13/01 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 11). The fact that Plaintiffs have attempted to name Sidley in a proposed amended complaint – which has never been filed – does not mandate the disqualification of Sidley. Accordingly, there is no basis for disqualifying Sidley at this juncture.

Moreover, even if leave were to be granted for the filing of Plaintiffs' amended complaint – which it should not be – that fact alone would not warrant disqualification of Sidley. First, it is important to note that Plaintiffs are not seeking anything in their complaint against Sidley in the nature of monetary damages, but are merely seeking to disqualify Sidley as counsel. On the face of the few paragraphs supposedly directed toward Sidley in Plaintiffs' proposed pleading, the complaint obviously does not even state a cause of action. All they are really doing in "naming" Sidley in their proposed pleading is using a supposed complaint as a way to file a disqualification motion – just another legal maneuver, and one which the courts have stated must be viewed with skepticism. See Schwartz, 177 Ill.2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877; Weil, Freiburg & Thomas, 218 Ill.App.3d at 395, 577 N.E.2d at 1353. Permitting such a ploy would obviously have a pernicious effect by essentially giving attorneys unbridled power to disqualify their opposing counsel by simply adding them to their complaint as supposed defendants. Second, Plaintiffs' basis for their requested relief of disqualification is nothing more than the same supposed conflict arguments which have been heard and rejected by courts of every level of the judiciary in Illinois, and which should also be rejected by this Court.[1] (See Exhs. D and E).

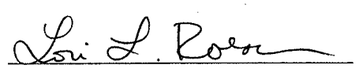
Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, as well as those to be presented at oral argument, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court refuse to hear Plaintiffs' Motion to Strike Appearance and Strike Unauthorized Pleading. In the alternative, the Foundation requests that such motion be denied.

Respectfully submitted,



One of the attorneys for defendant

[1] Ironically, the argument made by the plaintiffs in the Buntrock matter was that Sidley was, contrary to the truth, hired by and taking direction from Dr. Tucker (one of the Plaintiffs in this action) and was therefore beholden to him.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS at the trial of the above-entitled cause before the Honorable SHELDON GARDNER, Judge of said Court, on the 13th day of August 2001 at the hour of 2:00 o'clock p.m.

Reported by: Patricia L. Wangler

License No. 084-002417

attorneys jointly for the defendants went out to discuss the possibility of some interim action as suggested by the court. Is that a fair statement?

MR. QUINLAN: That's fair.

MR. CARLSON: That's correct, your Honor. And I could respond to that suggestion, your Honor --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I am sorry, unless there is going to be an agreement --

MR. CARLSON: I think there is.

THE COURT: I said --

MR. CARLSON: I think there probably in essence is an agreement, your Honor. We have represented The Terra Foundation in the underlying lawsuit in front of Judge Kinnaird. And I think your Honor's off-the-record questions I think correctly pointed out that this piece of litigation probably should be transferred back to the Chief Judge to go back to Judge Kinnaird because it is fundamentally the same thing.

But more importantly the motion for TRO that is up apparently seeks to enjoin a board meeting from taking place tomorrow morning. We can cancel that board meeting so that it doesn't take place tomorrow morning.

None of us have had a chance to take a look at this first amended complaint or maybe even the original complaint. None of us have had a chance to look at any detail at the motion for TRO, so we will cancel the board meeting for tomorrow. So there is no need for any further action in that respect, your Honor.

And I think also as the court was suggesting in your off-the-record comments, this is a case that is rightful to be transferred to the Chief Judge and to be transferred back to Judge Kinnaird. She will --

THE COURT: Do you so move?

MR. CARLSON: I so move, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I have no problem with your suggestion except as follows, I presume that the agreement would be there would be no meeting scheduled unless and until the matter can be presented to -- first of all --

THE COURT: That would be the entering of an injunction. You have to have how many days' notice?

MR. CARLSON: Five, five business days.

THE COURT: So that actually there can't be any meeting scheduled -- let's agree -- we can agree to something, but I can't rule.

MR. CARLSON: We are simply canceling the meeting, your Honor. There isn't any need.

THE COURT: And you will have one within ten days; is that agreeable? If you want to agree to that. I don't want to rule because then I exercise some jurisdiction.

MR. QUINLAN: I think the short answer is there cannot be a meeting of the board of directors without five days' business notice and cannot possibly take place before Monday.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Except then we are in a position of, as you pointed out, your Honor, Judge Kinnaird is coming back from abroad which is a phrase which permeates this case on Monday. I think it would be cruel and unusual to have her come in the door and get hit over the head with this.

I would be willing to agree on behalf of my clients that if there is an agreement to put this over for at least a few days after Judge Kinnaird comes back, we would not take the position that there has been a denial of injunction or that Judge Gardener has entered a substantive ruling.

I don't want to prejudice your clients, but I also don't want to put Judge Kinnaird in the position if the Chief Judge transfers it, he may or may not, to have Judge Kinnaird come back in on a Monday morning from Paris and say, okay, Judge, here is a hearing, let's go.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, first of all, the likelihood of anything taking place is almost nonexistent. Second of all, we have already stricken the meeting so there is nothing that's at issue here. There is no case in controversy.

THE COURT: And it couldn't be any sooner than five days' notice. If you had five days' notice, you wouldn't be able to have it any sooner than a week from Tuesday. That's from the time at the end of the day. I don't want to do anything that exercises something because that would be wrong. I am not afraid.

My understanding is that the meeting has been canceled. This being a quarter to 3:00, I don't think you can conceivably have five business days which would be any closer to Tuesday.

I am going to suggest that you draw an order up on your motion, I will sign it, it will go to Judge Evans. You can contact Judge Evans because they don't argue those before me. My understanding of a transfer that it is really up to the judge to make the provision.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: What I would like to do at this point, your Honor, is at least enter since the case is still before you, at least enter and continue our motion to file the amended complaint. I am not asking you to rule on it since I am --

THE COURT: I don't think anybody cares. You have it. You are on a roll. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And as far as the motion for the restraining order, the court has --

MR. CARLSON: It is moot because we have canceled the meeting.

MR. QUINLAN: You can withdraw it if you want.

THE COURT: The emergency is moot.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I could. Why don't we just have the court find that it is moot.

THE COURT: It is moot. That's fine.

MR. PERKINS: Judge, for the record from the

Judge Kinnaird while you heard a statement that we were absolutely free to file any lawsuit we wanted against anybody.

THE COURT: Well, so far I am sending you back to that square.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, you are such a wonderful person to be in front of. I don't want to leave.

THE COURT: Well, you are all wonderful. And it is my loss having eight of the finest lawyers in America in front of me and not have --

MR. QUINLAN: On behalf of our clients we surely don't object to venue in front of your Honor. Unfortunately you are probably correct, it isn't appropriate venue. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I don't want them going to Judge Evans and saying Judge Gardener says that case should go back to --

THE COURT: All right, I will say it, Judge Gardener as sua spontae has suggested that this case go back. And you can quote me. Okay?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's fine.

THE COURT: I am not shy. All right?

MR. SZOLA: Thank you, your Honor.

Terra Foundation
Board Meeting
Minutes
September 26, 2000

In Attendance:

Paul Tucker, Chair
Helene Ahrweiler
Jacques Andreani
Dean Buntrock
Maggie Daley
Ron Gidwitz
Arthur Hartman
Stephanie Pace Marshall
Theodore Stebbins
Judith Terra
Absent: Alan Simpson

By Invitation:

Mark Heatwole, Foundation Legal Counsel, Winston & Strawn

Staff:

Donald H. Ratner, Vice President Finance & Administration

The meeting was called to order at 10:00am.

Dr. Tucker indicated that the alteration of convening time (the meeting was originally scheduled to begin at 9:00 AM) was a result of needing to clarify the issues with respect to Board actions in response to the constraints imposed by the court action of September 25, 2000.

Mr. Heatwole reported that the court order relating to the lawsuit brought by Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz against the Foundation and the hearing on Monday, September 25, had two principal constraints on Board action:

1. The Board could not take any action to remove any Board members from either the Board or the Executive Committee against their will; and
2. The Board could continue with its normal business except that it could not take any action to transfer offices or assets out of Chicago.

Mr. Heatwole indicated that both of these restrictions continue through October 12 when the next hearing will occur.

Mr. Heatwole indicated that the Board has two options:

1. Re-elect all Board members at this meeting; or

2. Adjourn the election of members to a later date.

Dr. Tucker then asked for a motion to move Item X on the Agenda, "Other Business", to Item II. Ted Stebbins moved and Judith Terra seconded the motion. The motion carried by a unanimous vote.

The two items requiring action in Item X were:

1. The ratification of the selection of Sidley & Austin to represent the Foundation in the lawsuit; and
2. The authorization of the Chairman to deal with all matters regarding the litigation and to defend the Foundation against the charges brought by Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz. Dr. Tucker indicated that, with respect to the second motion, he would bring any settlement proposal back to the Board for final approval.

Discussion ensued, followed by a consensus to call the question.

The vote to move the 10th item "other business" to the 2nd item on the agenda was unanimous.

The first item (the ratification of hiring Sidley & Austin as Counsel for the Foundation for the lawsuit) was moved by Dr. Stebbins and seconded by Dr. Marshall. There was no discussion. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	None
	Jacques Andreani
	Dean Buntrock	Abstain:	Ron Gidwitz
	Margaret Daley
	Arthur Hartman
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next item (giving authorization to the Chair for any and all actions regarding the lawsuit except for the settlement) was moved by Mrs. Terra and seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler.

Mrs. Daley stated that since Dr. Tucker was named as a defendant in the lawsuit, she wondered if it was appropriate for Dr. Tucker to have this authority to act for the Foundation. Mr. Heatwole affirmed that there was no conflict in this matter.

The vote was called. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Margaret Daley
	Stephanie Pace Marshall		Ron Gidwitz
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next item on the agenda was the minutes. Dr. Tucker said that we needed to follow the judge's court order to the letter. Since the court order had not allowed any votes from committees up until this point, the committees could not review and approve their minutes and therefore there was no possibility for Board approval. Therefore, Dr. Tucker recommended that we table the vote on the minutes until the next meeting.

Mr. Gidwitz moved and Ambassador Hartman seconded the tabling of the approval of the minutes.

Ambassador Hartman asked if not approving the minutes would affect the deaccessioning of works of art from the collection. Mr. Heatwole said that it would not.

The vote was taken and there was a unanimous vote in favor of tabling the minutes.

The next item was the election of Directors, Officers and Committee Chairs.

The Board had two alternatives: to elect all Directors as a slate or table a decision until the next meeting.

Dr. Tucker recommended that we proceed with the election and approve the current slate of Directors. Mme. Ahrweiler moved and Dr. Stebbins seconded the motion to approve the current slate of Directors.

Dr. Tucker then asked if anyone did not want to stand for re-election.

At this point Dr. Marshall asked Mr. Buntrock what his reasons were for bringing the lawsuit. He replied:

- That he believed the Board had a "different agenda".
- That he believed there was a conspiracy to move the museum out of Chicago.

- That he had had frustrations with the fact that he had written to Dr. Tucker numerous times about employees being treated poorly, about Senator Simpson's "agenda", about Ambassador Hartman's proposed resolution, about the estate review, about his own suggested resignation, about his frustration with the deterioration of the Chicago museum and with his perception of the lack of focus on the educational aspect of the potential partnerships, and that he did not feel Dr. Tucker responded by bringing closure/resolution to these issues.

Dr. Marshall indicated that she could support the re-election of the Directors if everyone could commit to an openness of discussion.

Mme. Ahrweiler then withdrew her motion. Ambassador Andreani then moved not to take the vote at this time but to defer it to a later session of the annual meeting. Dr. Stebbins seconded Ambassador Andreani's motion.

Dr. Tucker reviewed the discussion of Sunday, September 24. Mr. Gidwitz had said that he could make a dispassionate decision on where the site of the museum and Foundation should be in the best interests of the Foundation, as he understood it.

Dr. Tucker asked if everyone could commit to being open and objective to the alternatives presented to the Foundation and could commit to honestly, fairly and without prejudice evaluating all proposals about the Foundation's strategic future.

Mr. Gidwitz indicated that he would be willing to work toward a position of trust. Ambassador Andreani's motion was then withdrawn.

Dr. Stebbins then moved to vote to re-elect the current slate of Directors and Mme. Ahrweiler seconded. The vote was taken. The results were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Margaret Daley
	Ron Gidwitz	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Jacques Andreani
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next order of business was to elect the Officers. It was decided to take each position individually. The first office was Chairman. Mrs. Terra nominated Dr. Tucker. Dr. Stebbins seconded. The vote was taken.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next vote taken was for Vice Chair. Dr. Tucker moved that Mrs. Terra be Vice Chair. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next vote was for Secretary and Treasurer. Dr. Stebbins nominated Dr. Marshall for Secretary and Treasurer. Ambassador Andreani seconded it. Dr. Marshall indicated that she would be willing to serve as Treasurer for a short period of time if the Board commits to re-evaluating the situation after that limited period of time. The results of the vote were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Ron Gidwitz		Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Arthur Hartman
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

Mr. Gidwitz and Mr. Buntrock remained on the Executive Committee as members-at-large.

The Board then moved to Item IX on the Agenda, Executive Session. Dr. Tucker left the room. Vice Chairman, Mrs. Terra, presided indicating that the purpose of the Executive session was to discuss a salary increase for Dr. Tucker. Mme. Ahrweiler proposed a bonus for Dr. Tucker. Dr. Stebbins moved that we double his compensation until a new President is hired. This motion was seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler.

Discussion followed.

Dr. Stebbins withdrew his motion.

Dr. Stebbins then moved to give Dr. Tucker a $25,000 bonus to recognize Dr. Tucker for the considerable additional time he spent on Foundation affairs over the past year. This was seconded by Ambassador Andreani.

The vote was taken. The results were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani		Margaret Daley
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra

Mrs. Daley indicated that her no vote was not a vote of no confidence in Dr. Tucker but that she believed a decision should have been deferred until after the lawsuit was settled.

The Executive Session was adjourned.

Dr. Tucker returned to the meeting and discussed the slate of committees and committee chairs. (See attached)

The Finance Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Margaret Daley
	Stephanie Pace Marshall		Ron Gidwitz
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The Collections Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Education Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Strategic Planning Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

At 2:10 PM the meeting was adjourned for lunch. At 2:40 the meeting resumed. The next item on the agenda was to review the estate. Mr. Heatwole did so and indicated that there were three issues that Winston & Strawn examined:

1. The transaction with Lawter
2. The transactions between Dan Terra and Jim Terra
3. The magnitude of the Bell, Boyd bills

Mr. Heatwole indicated Winston & Strawn had discussed the estate report with Bell, Boyd, BIK, Mayer, Brown & Platt, the Foundation Board and had reviewed all papers. Winston Strawn has concluded its review. He also indicated that the one open point was that Schiff, Hardin & Waite will be reviewing issues relating to Mercury Finance.

Winston & Strawn's conclusion was that, after thorough review, they found no reason for the Foundation not to accept the report of the Executor, except for Mercury Finance, which they have not reviewed.

He indicated that Bell, Boyd has not turned over the Mercury Finance papers to Schiff, Hardin and that we need to give them a waiver for Schiff, Hardin to get the papers. He noted that Jim Collins needed a letter from the Foundation to turn over the material to Schiff, Hardin.

A resolution with four components, which was as follows, was moved by Mme. Ahrweiler and seconded by Dr. Marshall:

1. Accept the Winston Strawn report as issued.
2. Approve that a letter be sent to Bell, Boyd to release the papers to Schiff, Hardin immediately so that Schiff Hardin may review the Mercury Finance issues expeditiously.
3. Report to the Executive Committee on the result of Schiff, Hardin's review of Mercury Finance.
4. Authorize the Executive Committee to close the estate.

The vote was taken unanimously in favor of this resolution.

The Finance Committee report was given by Mr. Ratner. He discussed results of the audit. He also discussed the four points raised in the Management Letter: Terra Museum Accounting, Endowment Income, Intercompany Activity and In-kind Contributions. Mr. Ratner addressed each of the points and indicated that a resolution of these points would be made. A motion to accept the Audit and Management Letter, subject to any footnotes relating to the current lawsuit, was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. Mr. Ratner then discussed the change of investment allocations within the equity portion. A memo on this matter is included in the Board book under the September 25 Finance Committee section. A motion to accept this reallocation was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. The third item was to review three new potential investment advisors: Kennedy, Ennis and Cambridge. Mr. Ratner recommended Kennedy which Mr. Gidwitz agreed with. The motion to approve was made by Dr. Stebbins and seconded by Dr. Marshall. The vote was unanimous in favor.

Dr. Stebbins then gave the Collection Committee report. The first item on the agenda was the motion by Dr. Stebbins to have the Board delegate the approval of the loans, exhibitions, donations, etc. to the Collections Committee to cover the report included in the Board book. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded. The motion was unanimously in favor. The next item was the Deaccession report. Dr. Stebbins indicated that, after careful review by the Committee and the outside advisors who made two trips to Chicago to examine the proposed deaccessions, the final list had been winnowed to 27 objects, with 16 of them not being included in the American Impressionist sale at Christie's on November 29, 2000.

Ambassador Hartman suggested that there should be some public relation's communications at the time about the deaccessioning. He suggested that it be made clear that these items are being sold to raise purchase funds for new additions to the collection. Dr. Stebbins also indicated that we have chosen Christie's and indicated some of the details of the contract and the reasons for selecting that venue as opposed to Sotheby's or Vance Jordan, a private dealer.

Mr. Gidwitz moved to approve the deaccessioning report and the selection of Christie's. Seconded by Ambassador Hartman. Unanimously in favor.

The Director's reports and VP of Finance reports were not given orally, but were included in the September 26, 2000 Board book.

Dr. Tucker suggested that he and Dr. Stebbins form a search committee for the new MAAG Director.

Mr. Ratner was instructed to change Sophie Levy's position at MAGG to Curator from Assistant Curator.

Mr. Ratner was asked to set-up both an Executive Committee conference call and a Board conference call after the court hearing on the 12th.

Dr. Marshall suggested that we need some formal communication structure perhaps in the form of a written newsletter every 3-4 weeks to keep the Board apprised of developments regarding the lawsuit. Mr. Ratner and Dr. Tucker were asked to coordinate.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00pm.

INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE
MINUTES
December 4, 2000

In Attendance (Conference Call):

Ambassador Jacques Andreani
Dr. Ted Stebbins

Staff:

Donald Ratner

The meeting was called to order at 3:15pm.

There were three agenda items:

- Decide on Counsel for the lawsuit
- Discuss litigation strategy
- Approve legal bills

Dr. Stebbins made a motion to approve the retention of Sidley & Austin, seconded by Ambassador Andreani. After discussion, the attached resolution was approved unanimously.

Litigation strategy was then discussed. Susan Stone from Sidley & Austin was asked to join the call at this time. She discussed the possibility of Sidley & Austin investigating the allegations. Both members of the committee agreed with this idea and Ambassador Andreani made a motion to proceed with this and Dr. Stebbins seconded it. After discussion, the attached resolution was approved unanimously.

The September and October bills of Sidley & Austin were approved. The October bill from Shefsky and Froelich for services for Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, and Senator Simpson were approved for payment subject to our corporate counsel approving the direct payment of these bills.

The meeting adjourned at 3:45pm.

Independent Litigation Committee
Resolution re: Retention of Counsel

WHEREAS, on or about September 22, 2000 there was filed in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Chancery Division, cause no. 00 CH 13850 ("the Lawsuit");

WHEREAS, on September 26, 2000 the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Board") ratified the hiring of Sidley & Austin as Counsel for the Foundation for the Lawsuit;

WHEREAS, on November 30, 2000 pursuant to the Court Order, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Board") established this independent litigation committee and authorized said committee to make all decisions surrounding actions relating to the Lawsuit;

WHEREAS, by way of its Order of November 13, 2000 the Court directed this independent litigation committee to consider the appointment of counsel; and

WHEREAS, one or more members of this independent litigation committee has interviewed Sidley & Austin, checked references, had discussions with Leonard Schrager, reviewed papers filed in connection with the lawsuit and considered the appointment of counsel;

1) This independent litigation committee hereby appoints and ratifies the retention of Sidley & Austin to represent the Foundation in connection with the Lawsuit;

2) This independent litigation committee hereby authorizes Sidley & Austin to take any and all action which in its professional judgment is appropriate in representing the Foundation in connection with the Lawsuit except for settlement and as stated below;

3) This independent litigation committee hereby reserves to itself final approval of the following: the filing of counterclaims in the Lawsuit, the taking of any interlocutory or final appeals from any Order or Judgment entered in the Lawsuit and any other matter which the Committee may from time to time decide to reserve to itself;

4) Notwithstanding anything stated above, settlement of the Lawsuit has been reserved by the Board to itself.

ORDER

This cause coming to be heard on Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Appoint Receiver and for Temporary Restraining Order and Opposition to Stay ("Plaintiffs Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order") and Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Further Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract ("Plaintiffs Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract"), and for scheduling of the Attorney General's and Plaintiffs' Motion to Enjoin the Terra Foundation's Use of the Current Special Litigation Committee and for Appointment of a Receiver, due notice having been given, the Court having heard argument of counsel and having reviewed the briefs of the parties, and for the reasons set forth on the record, IT IS ORDERED:

A. Denial of Temporary Restraining Order

(1) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Terra Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee from continuing to retain Sidley & Austin as counsel is denied, the Court considering the motion as a renewed motion to disqualify counsel and not a proper motion for temporary restraining order;

(2) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Terra Foundations Independent Litigation Committee from taking action to authorize or direct Sidley & Austin to perform the subject investigation is denied;

(3) Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract is denied;

B. Granting of Temporary Restraining Order

(4) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Independent Litigation Committee and the Terra Foundation from paying the legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich to date is granted. This Temporary Restraining Order shall remain in full force and effect until January 30, 2001 at 5:00 p.m. In the event the Board meets as set forth in Paragraph C, this Order may be modified upon motion before January 30, 2001.

In granting this Temporary Restraining Order the Court makes the following findings:

a. Plaintiffs have established a protectible right in need of protection;

b. Plaintiffs have established that they and the public will suffer irreparable injury if injunctive relief is not granted;

c. Plaintiffs have established that there is no adequate remedy at law if injunctive relief were not granted;

d. Plaintiffs have raised a fair question as to their likelihood of success on the merits;

e. To the extent such a finding is necessary, the hardships favor plaintiffs.

The Court therefore orders that the Foundation and the Independent Litigation Committee are enjoined from paying any legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich until January 30, 2001 at 5:00 p.m. This Temporary Restraining Order is entered with notice, as of 5:00 ~~a.m.~~/p.m. on January 2, 2001. This case is continued to January 30, 2001 at 10:30 a.m. for the Court to determine whether this Temporary Restraining Order should be continued, and whether a preliminary injunction hearing shall be scheduled.

C. Board Meeting Regarding Attorney Fees and Costs

(5) Further, the Court orders during the pendency of this Temporary Restraining Order that no attorney fees or costs of Sidley and Austin and/or Shefsky and Froelich shall be paid unless the Terra Foundation's board of directors meets to consider the issues relating to such fees and costs. If the board of directors elects to meet, the meeting shall take place in Chicago, Illinois at the Foundation's headquarters, and as follows:

a. A purpose of the meeting is to advise the Board as to the issues of the review and payment of the legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich;

b. The Board shall make a specific statement as to whether or not: (1) the Board is delegating the authority to review and pay the subject legal bills to the independent litigation committee; or (2) whether the Board retains the authority to review and pay the subject legal bills for itself; or, (3) whether the Board establishes another mechanism to review the subject legal bills, as it may have done when the Terra Foundation was involved in other litigation;

c. The Board shall be informed of the total expense of this litigation to date, including the total amount of attorney fees and costs incurred by Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich to date;

d. No Board member who seeks advancement of attorney fees or costs may vote on the issues set forth in section (b) above, as it relates to any such advancement namely, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, or Senator Simpson;

e. The meeting shall be called upon no less than five business days written notice to each board member. The Foundation shall use its best efforts to schedule the meeting at a time mutually convenient to all board members to ensure maximum board member participation in the meeting. The Foundation shall survey in writing each board member to determine the date for the meeting before the notice for the meeting is issued to each board member. The Foundation shall communicate the full results of the survey to all counsel of record at least 24 hours before the notice is mailed; and

f. The notice for the meeting shall include the following:

i). A copy of this Order;

ii). The total amount of Sidley and Austin's and Shefsky and Froelich's bills, with each attorneys' hourly rates and total number of hours billed monthly;

iii). The undertakings executed by Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson.

D. Attorney General's Motion to Enjoin the Terra Foundation's Use of the Current Special Litigation Committee and for Appointment of a Receiver to Conduct the Independent Investigation

(6) The defendant Terra Foundation shall respond to the Attorney General's Motion to Enjoin by January 8, 2001.

(7) The Attorney General's Emergency Motion to Compel Discovery is granted in part, and the parties may commence immediate expedited discovery as it relates to the allegations involving Dr. Stebbins.

(8) The Emergency Motion is set for status on discovery on January 9, 2001 at 2:00 p.m.

E. Terra Foundation's Motion to Continue Stay of Proceedings Pending Independent Litigation Committee Investigation

(9) The Foundation's motion to continue the stay of proceedings is denied and discovery may commence on all issues after counsel has met and conferred to determine an outline of discovery.

F. The Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Stay

(10) The Plaintiffs emergency motion to stay the enforcement of the orders entered in Paragraph A(1)(2) and (3) of this Order is denied.

(11) That portion of the Report of Proceedings of December 29, 2000, not held in the courtroom shall be under seal and the original shall be submitted to the Court. The court reporter's office shall not release a copy of the sealed transcript to anyone.

Foundation the Foundation does assert attorney client privilege over any communications going either way from an attorney for the Foundation, which Mr. Collins was at this point in time, to Mr. Terra who was then chairman of the Terra Museum.

THE COURT: I don't want to get hung up on this letter forever. Mr. Cummins, how did you all get this?

MR. CUMMINS: I can't answer that question, Judge. I'll find out. One of the preliminary things I was going to address, and I am relying largely on papers that were previously filed by Mr. Quinlan on behalf of his clients Buntrock and Gidwitz. I'm going to object to anything Sidley and Austin does in this case today because based upon the assertions of Mr. Quinlan and his clients they are conflicted in this proceeding. That is one of the reasons we want to adjourn it. We believe Winston and Strawn is conflicted, We believe Sidley is conflicted. And we think that these are serious issues that have to be addressed by the Court as a premise to this entire proceeding.

I just want to make that of record.

THE COURT: It's on the record. And to the extent it's an objection, it's going to be overruled.

We have been through the Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it. The Appellate Court reviewed it. I know that Mr. Quinlan probably totally agrees with you generally on the whole subject matter, but maybe today he disagrees.

But Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation and they have not been removed and I don't see a conflict so let's just move on.

I'm going to keep this letter, it really doesn't do much. I've read it all, I'm going to keep it sealed for now. If you want to come in later and have it unsealed. If you concede that this was somehow in the public domain, attached to a pleading, that somewhere along the line the attorney client privilege got waived we'll open it up. For those of you who have not seen this letter, it's really nothing heavy anyway.

The next thing, Exhibits 9, 10,11, 12, 13 are all documents that relate to Dan Terra. intent. They were declarations filed in Federal Court. They should all be unsealed.

Fourteen I want to unseal. That's a mailing address announcement. The Simpson declaration in Federal Court is 15. That should be unsealed.

DEFENDANTS STEBBINS AND MARSHALL'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE BRIEF JOINING IN TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' "EMERGENCY MOTION TO STRIKE APPEARANCE AND TO STRIKE UNAUTHORIZED PLEADING."

Defendants Theodore Stebbins and Stephanie Pace Marshall hereby move for leave to file their Brief Joining in Terra Foundation for the Arts' Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading". In support of their Motion, Defendants Stebbins and Marshall state as follows:

1) On August 23, 2001, Plaintiffs filed their "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading" ("Plaintiffs' Motion").

2) On August 31, 2001, briefs by the Defendants in opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion were due to be filed.

3) Accordingly, on August 31, 2001, Defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts filed its Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading." Also on August 31, 2001, Defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz and Hartman filed their Objections to "Emergency" Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike "Unauthorized" Pleading, (collectively referred to hereinafter as "Defendants' Oppositions").

4) Defendants Marshall and Stebbins did not file their own opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion on August 31, 2001 because Defendants Marshall and Stebbins anticipated that the other Defendants would file an opposition in which Marshall and Stebbins could join to conserve on the effort and expense of this litigation.

5) The other Defendants' Oppositions have been served on Defendants Stebbins and Marshall, and Stebbins and Marshall now have had the opportunity to review them.

6) Defendants Stebbins and Marshall agree with, and support, both of the Defendants' Oppositions.

7) Defendants Stebbins and Marshall move for leave to file their attached Brief Joining in Terra Foundation for the Arts' Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading."

8) Defendants Stebbins and Marshall also state for the record that they agree with and fully support Defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz and Hartman's Objections to "Emergency" Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike "Unauthorized" Pleading.

WHEREFORE, Defendants Stebbins and Marshall respectfully request this Court to grant them leave to file their attached Brief Joining in Terra Foundation for the Arts'

Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading."

DEFENDANTS STEBBINS AND MARSHALL'S BRIEF JOINING IN TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' "EMERGENCY MOTION TO STRIKE APPEARANCE AND TO STRIKE UNAUTHORIZED PLEADING."

Defendants Theodore Stebbins and Stephanie Pace Marshall, by their attorneys, hereby submit the following in opposition to Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading:

Defendants Stebbins and Marshall agree with and join in its entirety the Terra Foundation of the Arts' Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike Unauthorized Pleading." Defendants Stebbins and Marshall also agree with, and support, in its entirety Defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz and Hartman's Objections to "Emergency" Motion to Strike Appearance and to Strike "Unauthorized" Pleading (collectively referred to hereafter as "Defendants' Oppositions").

16di-004010

In addition, as a member of The Terra Foundation for the Arts' ("Foundation") independent litigation committee ("ILC"), Defendant Stebbins specifically confirms that the ILC interviewed Sidley in December 2000 and thereafter reconfirmed Sidley & Austin's role as counsel for the Foundation, as discussed at page 3 of the Foundations' Opposition. As a member of the ILC, Defendant Stebbins also confirms his position that Sidley & Austin should continue to represent the Foundation in this litigation, as this litigation is essentially the same as, and a continuation of, the Buntrock case, with which Sidley & Austin is intimately familiar as counsel for the Foundation in that case.

For all of the reasons set forth above and in the Defendants' Oppositions, Defendants Stebbins and Marshall respectfully request that this Court refuse to hear Plaintiffs' Motion to Strike Appearance and Strike Unauthorized Pleading. In the alternative, Defendants Stebbins and Marshall request that such motion be denied.

DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S MOTION TO EXTEND DATE TO ANSWER OR OTHERWISE RESPOND TO PLAINTIFFS' COMPLAINT

Defendants Dr. Theodore Stebbins ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall"), by their attorneys, hereby move for an order extending the date for them to answer or otherwise respond to Plaintiffs' Complaint. In support of their motion, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall state as follows:

1. On July 31, 2001, Plaintiffs filed their original Complaint in the Law Division of the Circuit Court of Cook County. The matter was assigned to Judge Sheldon Gardner.

2. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall were not then served with the Plaintiffs' original Complaint.

3. On August 13, 2001, Plaintiffs filed an emergency Motion for the Entry of a Temporary Restraining Order and sought leave to file a First Amended Complaint.

4. On August 17, 2001, Defendants filed Motions to Transfer this action to the Chancery Division of this Court because, among other reasons, the Plaintiffs have impermissibly filed this equitable action in the Law Division and because this case is closely related to Buntrock, et. al. v. Terra, et. al., No. 00 CH 13859 ("the Buntrock Case"), which is pending in the Chancery Division before Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird.

5. At a hearing on August 13, 2001, Judge Gardner, who was originally assigned to this case, expressed his opinion that this case should be transferred to Judge Kinnaird. Judge Gardner entered and continued Plaintiffs' motion for leave to file their First Amended Complaint, and this matter was transferred to Law Division Chief Judge Evans for his further consideration and disposition of the Motions to Transfer. A hearing on these motions is set for September 17, 2001 before Judge Evans.

6. The undersigned counsel filed appearances for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall in connection with the above motions. Accordingly, the undersigned agreed to accept service of process on their behalf, which plaintiffs accomplished on August 28, 2001.

7. Based on the above, it is not yet known in which court Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should file responsive pleadings, and it is not yet clear which pleading they will be responding to.

8. As a result, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall seek leave to file their responsive pleadings within 30 days after this case is assigned to a specific presiding judge.

WHEREFORE, Defendants Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall respectfully request that this Court enter an Order extending the date by which their responsive pleadings are due and permitting Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall 30 days after this case is assigned to a presiding judge to answer or otherwise respond to Plaintiffs' Complaint.

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME TO ANSWER OR OTHERWISE RESPOND TO PLAINTIFFS' COMPLAINT

The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") hereby moves for an extension of time to answer or otherwise respond to Plaintiffs' Complaint. In support of its motion, the Foundation states as follows:

1. On July 31, 2001, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson filed their original complaint in the Law Division of the Circuit Court of Cook County. The matter was assigned to Judge Sheldon Gardner.

2. To the best of its knowledge, the Foundation was never served with the Plaintiffs' original complaint.

3. On August 13, 2001, Plaintiffs filed an Emergency Motion for the Entry of a Temporary Restraining Order and sought leave to file a First Amended Complaint. After expressing an opinion that this matter should be transferred to Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird, who is currently presiding over a related case, (Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859), Judge Gardner entered and continued Plaintiffs' motion for leave to file their First Amended Complaint.

4. This matter was thereafter assigned to Judge Evans for consideration as to what the appropriate venue is for the case.

5. Accordingly, this case is not actually pending in front of any particular judge.

6. At this point it is unclear when the Foundation must respond to Plaintiffs' Complaint.

WHEREFORE, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order that the Foundation shall have 30 days after this case is assigned to a judge to answer or otherwise respond to Plaintiffs' complaint.

OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUBSTITUTION OF JUDGE AS A MATTER OF RIGHT

16di-004029

Marshall, by and through their attorneys, McDermott Will & Emery, hereby state as follows in opposition to plaintiff Judith Terra's motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right:

INTRODUCTION

Under well-established Illinois law, plaintiff Judith Terra's motion for substitution of judge "as a matter of right" constitutes improper forum shopping and an abuse of process. Plaintiff's motion violates section 2-1001(a)(2) of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, as well as the September 17, 2001 order entered by Judge Mulhern that specifically transferred this matter — Terra II — to the Chief Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment to this Court based on its clear relatedness to Terra I.

Terra II is simply an attempt to challenge the consent judgment and order ("consent judgment") entered by this Court in Terra I. This Court expressly retained jurisdiction to enforce that consent judgment. Thus, Terra II is clearly the same case as Terra I and Terra II is a separate action in its physical form only. As discussed below, section 2-1001(a)(2) has no application here. By its terms, section 1001(a)(2) requires that the judge to whom such a motion is presented has not ruled on "any substantial issue in the case." It cannot be reasonably disputed that this Court has previously ruled on most of the issues of Terra II, namely, the alleged coercion of the Attorney General and the validity of the consent judgment. Illinois law does not permit a substitution of judge when a court has ruled on a substantial issue, even if that ruling occurred in a related case. Accordingly, plaintiff's reliance on section 2-1001(a)(2) is improper.

Moreover, on September 17, 2001, the Acting Presiding Judge of the Law Division (Judge Mulhern), transferred this matter to the Chief Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment to this Court. In so doing, Judge Mulhern expressly found that Terra II was, at a minimum, so intertwined and related to Terra I, that this Court was the appropriate forum to hear Terra II. A copy of the September 17, 2001 order is attached hereto as Exhibit A. Plaintiff's motion seeks to render Judge Mulhern's order meaningless and section 2-1001(a)(2) cannot be used as the vehicle for plaintiff's tactics.

Put simply, plaintiff's motion is yet another example of the clear forum shopping that prompted the commencement of Terra II. Section 2-1001(a)(2) does not allow such improper tactics. Indeed, section 2-1001(a)(2) is intended to be used when a particular judge has not ruled on an issue in a case or otherwise given a movant the opportunity to test the waters as to the court's reaction to his or her claim. Here, this Court has ruled on most of the ultimate issues of Terra II. Unhappy with that ruling, plaintiff appealed Terra I — though, at the same time, claiming not to be bound by Terra I — and filed a new action in the Law Division. That new action — as evidenced by plaintiff's petition for fees and expenses — is directly based on Terra I and the counterclaims plaintiff attempted to raise in that case on an untimely basis. Since Terra II was filed, plaintiff has been unable to find any court that has found it to be separate from Terra I. To the contrary, Judge Gardner and then Judge Mulhern, Acting Presiding Judge of the Law Division, found that Terra II was the same case as Terra I, or at least so related, that Terra II should be reassigned to this Court. Plaintiff's motion for substitution of judge is wholly improper and illustrates plaintiff's effort to obtain review of Terra I by a court of coordinate jurisdiction. For these reasons, plaintiff's motion should be denied.

ARGUMENT

I. Section 2-1001(a)(2) Is Not Applicable To Terra II.

Contrary to the requirements of section 2-1001(a)(2), Terra II is not a new and separate action on which this Court has not issued any ruling on "any substantial issue in the case." 735 ILCS 5/2-1001(a)(2)(ii). Indeed, most, if not all of the allegations of Terra II are based on the consent judgment entered by this Court in Terra I.[1] Specifically, Terra II again alleges coercion on the part of the Attorney General — an issue which was considered and rejected by this Court on several occasions, as well as rejected by the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. Rulings are considered "substantial" when they are directly related to the merits of the case or otherwise allow a movant to test the water's as to a judge's reaction to its claims. Bonnie Owen Realty, Inc. v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 283 Ill. App. 3d 812, 670 N.E.2d 1182 (5th Dist. 1996); Paschen Contractors, Inc. v. Illinois State Toll Highway Authority, 225 Ill. App. 3d 930, 590 N.E.2d 539 (2d Dist. 1992); Estate of Roselli, 70 Ill. App. 3d 116, 388 N.E.2d 87 (1st Dist. 1979). This Court's rulings in Terra I directly relate to the merits of Terra II. Thus, this Court has clearly ruled on substantial issues in this case and section 2-1001(a)(2) is not applicable.

[1] In fact, the Complaint is replete with allegations regarding Terra I. Plaintiffs' Complaint in Terra II is attached hereto as Exhibit B. See Exhibit B, ¶33, complaining of the filing of Terra I by Gidwitz and Buntrock; ¶35, complaining of the Attorney General's complaint filed in Terra I; ¶ 37, complaining of the Attorney General's intervention in Terra I; ¶ 38 (same); ¶ 39, complaining of a motion filed in Terra I; ¶ 40, complaining of other motions filed in Terra I; ¶ 42, complaining of the mediation process in Terra I; ¶ 43, complaining of Assistant Attorney General Perkins' actions during the mediation process in Terra I; ¶¶ 48-53, complaining of actions relating to Dr. Stebbins' involvement in Terra I; ¶¶ 55-58 complaining of actions relating to Dr. Marshall's involvement in Terra I; ¶¶ 59-74, complaining of the settlement secured in Terra I. See also Exhibit B, p. 25, Count I, Prayer for Relief, seeking "[a] declaration that the settlement [in Terra I] is unlawful..." (Emphasis added.)

Plaintiff's motion seemingly suggests that the mere act of filing a new action is sufficient to entitle one to seek a substitution of judge as a matter of right. Such "reasoning" flies in the face of section 2-1001(a)(2) which expressly requires that such a motion be raised prior to a court's ruling on a substantial issue. Terra II is a separate action only in its physical form. Thus, Terra II — despite its separate matter number — is a part of Terra I.

Illinois law clearly recognizes that a court's ruling in one matter may constitute a ruling on a substantial issue in another matter when the two matters, as here, are related and differ only in the case number. See Marshall Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Henson, 78 Ill. App. 2d 14, 222 N.E.2d 255 (1st Dist. 1966); Village of Wilsonville v. SCA Services, Inc., 77 Ill. App. 3d 618, 396 N.E.2d 552 (4th Dist. 1979); see also Alcantar by Alcantar v. Peoples Gas Light and Coke Co., 288 Ill. App. 3d 644, 681 N.E.2d 993. In Marshall,[2] the court affirmed the denial of a petition for substitution of judge because it was raised after the court ruled on a substantial issue in another related matter. In Marshall, there were three separately filed actions that the court found to be interrelated legal disputes involving the same issues and parties. Marshall, 78 Ill. App. 2d at 19-20, 222 N.E.2d at 257-58. The court noted that Marshall — similar to Terra II — was unique in that the substantive rulings occurred in separate proceedings, as opposed to the typical situation where the substantive issue and request for a substitution of judge occur in the same proceeding. Id. Further, as here, the separate actions in Marshall were all pending before the same judge. Id. Significantly, in Marshall, the court noted that "except for different court numbers," the cases were an "integrated series of legal disputes involving generally the same parties and issues." Id. at 20, 222 N.E.2d at 258. The court affirmed the denial of the motion for substitution because the judge had ruled on substantial issues in two of the related actions even though there had been no rulings issued in the third action where the motion was sought. Id. As in Marshall, the motion for substitution of judge should be denied because Terra I and Terra II — despite separate court numbers — is an integrated legal dispute involving generally the same parties and issues.

[2] The court in Marshall Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Henson, 78 Ill. App. 2d 14, 222 N.E.2d 255 (1st Dist. 1966), addressed a motion for substitution of judge raised under the predecessor version of section 2-1001. The petition sought a change of venue based on the alleged prejudice of the trial court judge. Although the petition in Marshall, unlike plaintiff's motion here, alleged prejudice by the judge, the law required, as it does today with regard to substitutions as a matter of right, that it be filed prior to a ruling on a substantive issue. Thus, the reasoning of Marshall is certainly relevant.

In addition, Village of Wilsonville v. SCA Services, Inc., 77 Ill. App. 3d 618, 396 N.E.2d 552 (4th Dist. 1979), supports the denial of plaintiff's motion, notwithstanding that this Court has not issued a ruling under the Terra II case number. In Wilsonville, the court affirmed the denial of a motion for substitution of judge in one action based on rulings issued by the judge in a related case. Wilsonville involved two separate actions that were eventually consolidated. Wilsonville, 77 Ill. App. 3d at 621, 396 N.E.2d at 554. The court affirmed the denial a motion for substitution of judge in one of the actions because the judge had already issued rulings on substantial issues in the other related case. Id. at 639, 396 N.E.2d at 566. The court noted that although the judge had issued a ruling on an ex parte matter, as a result of its ex parte nature, the defendant had no notice of that ruling prior to seeking the substitution. Thus, as far as the defendant was concerned, the judge had not issued any rulings on substantial issues in that action. Nevertheless, because the judge issued rulings on substantial issues in the other action, the motion for substitution of judge in the related action was deemed properly denied. Likewise, regardless of the fact that this Court has not yet issued a ruling under the Terra II case number, this Court's rulings in Terra I constitute rulings on substantial issues of Terra II so that plaintiff's motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right is improper.

Further, Terra II is seeking relief from this Court's consent judgment entered in Terra I. In essence, Terra II is a post-judgment motion under section 2-1401. 735 ILCS 5/2-1401. Pursuant to section 2-1401, in order to obtain relief from this Court's order, "[t]he petition must be filed in the same proceeding in which the order or judgment was entered but is not a continuation thereof." 735 ILCS 5/2-1401(b). Therefore, a motion for substitution of judge would not be appropriate because the relief sought in Terra II must be brought before this Court.

If more were needed, under the circumstances, even plaintiff cannot reasonably dispute that Terra II is not a "new" or "separate" action. Incredibly, plaintiff has sought attorneys' fees and expenses from this Court (and in Terra I) for the preparation and filing of the complaint in Terra II. See, e.g., Petition for Fees and Expenses submitted by Cummins & Cronin, LLC. Accordingly, plaintiff has essentially admitted that Terra II is not a new action and its motion for substitution is without merit.

Terra II is not a new action at all and simply requires this Court to vacate the consent judgment of Terra I. A motion for substitution of judge is improper when it is presented after a judge has ruled on substantial issues. See 735 ILCS 5/2-1001(a)(2)(ii). This Court has rendered numerous rulings on substantial issues raised in Terra II and thus, plaintiff's motion for substitution of judge should be denied.

II. Plaintiff's Motion Violates Judge Mulhern's Order Of September 17, 2001.

On September 17, 2001, the Acting Presiding Judge of the Law Division ordered that this matter be transferred to the Chief Judge of the Chancery Division for reassignment to this Court, pursuant to General Orders 1.3(c),(d) and 1.2. See Exhibit A. In so doing, Judge Mulhern found that Terra II was so related to Terra I that it would be transferred to this Court for all further proceedings. Plaintiff's motion should be denied because it not only violates Judge Mulhern's order but, in fact, would render that order, as well as General Orders 1.2 and 1.3 virtually meaningless.

General Orders 1.2 and 1.3, that authorized Judge Mulhern to transfer Terra II for reassignment to this Court, exist to prevent the very forum shopping that plaintiff has engaged in. There has already been a determination that Terra II is related to Terra I and based on that relatedness, this Court was deemed the appropriate forum for Terra II. See e.g. Alcantar, 288 Ill. App. 3d. at 648-49, 681 N.E.2d at 996 (denying motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right raised with regard to motion for sanctions because request for sanctions was directly related to issues of underlying case). The order of September 17, 2001 clearly recognizes that this Court has, in fact, ruled on substantial issues raised in Terra I. Indeed, the fact that this Court has ruled on such substantial issues was the basis for the order to transfer this matter for reassignment to this Court.

Finally, if this Court were to grant plaintiff's motion, General Order 1.3 would be read out of existence. The purpose of these rules is to further judicial economy and minimize the risk of inconsistent judgments. Under plaintiff's theory, a party could totally avoid the effect of rulings by the Presiding Judge of the Law Division, by simply filing a motion for a substitution of judge. Thus, General Order 1.3 would be, for all practical purposes, meaningless. Plaintiff's motion is an improper attempt to thwart the order of September 17, 2001 and General Order 1.3, and should be denied accordingly.

III. Section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii) May Not Be Used To Further Plaintiff's Judge Shopping.

Section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii) expressly limits its application to situations where a judge has not ruled on any issue. This rule is intended to prevent a litigant's attempt to "judge shop" based on a judge's prior rulings. See Marriage of Passiales, 144 Ill. App. 3d 629, 494 N.E.2d 541 (1st Dist. 1984); Bonnie Owen Realty, Inc. v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 283 Ill. App. 3d 812 (5th Dist. 1996). Litigants must not be permitted to "judge shop" after learning that a judge may be unfavorably disposed toward his or her cause. In re Marriage of Kozloff, 101 Ill. 2d 526, 530-31, 463 N.E.2d 719, 721 (1984); Alcantar, 288 Ill. App. 3d at 648, 681 N.E.2d at 996. Indeed, even when a court has not ruled on a substantial issue — which this Court has clearly done — a motion for substitution may be denied if a movant has had the opportunity to test the waters and form an opinion as to the court's reaction to his claim. In re Marriage of Petersen, 319 Ill. App. 3d 325, 338, 744 N.E.2d 877, 887 (1st Dist. 2001). Plaintiff's motion exemplifies the very judge shopping that section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii) prohibits.

The record is replete with examples of plaintiff's judge shopping. Plaintiff has sought to challenge Terra I in the United States District Court, the Illinois Appellate Court, First District, and in the Circuit Court of Cook County. Plaintiff's efforts continue in hopes of finding a court — even a court of coordinate jurisdiction — to review the consent judgment entered by this Court.[3] Terra II is a continuation of Terra I. Section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii) does not support the forum shopping the plaintiff's motion is predicated on. To the contrary, section 2-1001(a)(2) is a safeguard against such forum shopping and plaintiff's motion should be denied.

[3] Plaintiff's concurrent effort to seek review of this Court's order has necessarily required plaintiff to take conflicting positions. On one hand, plaintiff has maintained that the consent judgment entered by this Court has no effect on plaintiff, yet plaintiff's entire appeal is based on that decree. Notably, the bona fide basis of plaintiff's appeal is questionable as plaintiff has failed to file a docketing statement with the appellate court on September 5, 2001, as required by Supreme Court Rule 312, or to pay the fees necessary to pursue its appeal.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, based on the foregoing reasons, Defendants Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Stebbins, and Marshall respectfully request that this Court deny plaintiff Terra's motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right, and order all other relief that this Court deems fair and just.

COMPLAINT AT LAW

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson complain of the Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, James E. Ryan, Floyd D. Perkins, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, and the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation") as follows:

Preliminary Statement

1. Through this action, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson seek to vindicate both the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder Daniel J. Terra. The plaintiffs complain that certain directors of the Foundation are irreconcilably conflicted and have willfully and wantonly breached their fiduciary obligations by pursuing a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation and inconsistent with both the purpose of the Foundation and the clearly expressed intentions of its founder. These breaches of fiduciary duty were aided by – and even induced by – the illegal conduct of the Illinois Attorney General and his assistant. Indeed, as we set out more fully below, the improvident conduct of the Attorney General not only induced breaches of fiduciary duty but constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law and an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech. The Foundation's interests have been further compromised by the conflicted interests of several Directors and various counsel who purported to, but did not, represent and counsel the Foundation free of improper influence

2. The plaintiffs have been unlawfully denied the opportunity to bring these claims in other litigation. As a result, this case is filed to secure relief – a declaratory judgment, injunctive relief and damages – in order to halt the perversion of the Foundation's mission which has been the direct result of the defendants' conduct.

Nature of the Case

3. On June 29, 2001, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, by a conflicted majority, voted to accept a settlement of this litigation that would chain the Foundation to Chicago for 50 years and install a majority of Illinois residents on its

16di-004043

Board. As the dissenting board members stated before the vote, this acquiescence to the extraordinary intrusions by the State of Illinois into the Foundation's affairs was ultra vires and an utter abdication of the Board's fiduciary responsibilities. Yet six board members, some with personal conflicts, none acting in the best interests of the Foundation, chose to vote in favor of a proposal that—if allowed to stand—will do violence to the clear vision of an American philanthropist and set a chilling precedent for all not-for-profit corporations.

4. The Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Yet six Board members voted to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the Foundation's charter and its founder's demonstrated intentions.

5. Earlier litigation and a mediation process compromised by conflicts of interest became a vehicle for a power grab by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws. Through threats of investigation and legal action—including the threat of suing pivotal board members - Perkins has used his official powers to compromise and conflict certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors such that the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech have been effectively nullified. The Attorney General's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens further to deprive Plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (3) rights under the commerce and contracts clauses of the Constitution. Through this unlawful conduct, Mr. Perkins has also induced certain Board members to violate their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

6. In approving a tainted mediation process, a conflicted a majority of the Board of Directors of the Foundation have violated their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and caused the Foundation to act ultra vires. Despite irreconcilable conflicts of interest and their consequent disqualification, directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins have acted against the interest of the Foundations. By taking action incompatible with the Foundation's charter and wasting valuable assets and opportunities for the Foundation to carry out its mission, the Board members who approved the proposed settlement violated duties of obedience to the Foundation's purpose and best interests.

Parties

7. The Terra Foundation for the Arts is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1978 by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra. The Foundation, pursuant to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, oversees the $175 million Terra Collection of American Art and roughly $250 million in other assets.

8. Paul Hayes Tucker is Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Foundation. He is a chaired professor of art history at the University of Massachusetts Boston and a resident of Massachusetts.

9. Alan K. Simpson is a Director of the Foundation, a former United States Senator and retired Director of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and a resident of Wyoming. Senator Simpson also serves as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody. Wyoming, which maintains assets valued in excess of $350 million.

10. Judith Terra is Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors and Vice President of the Foundation, Mr. Terra's widow, and a resident of Washington, D.C.

11. Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall is the Foundation's Secretary and Treasurer and chairman of its finance and strategic planning committees. She is president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, and a resident of Illinois.

12. Dr. Theodore O. Stebbins is a Director of the Foundation and Chairman of the collections committee. He currently serves as curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard University and resides in Massachusetts.

13. Margaret Daley is a Director of the Foundation and Chairman of its education committee. She is a resident of Illinois.

14. Dean Buntrock is a Director of the Foundation and an at-large member of its Executive Committee. He is a resident of Illinois.

15. Ronald Gidwitz is a Director of the Foundation and an at-large member of its Executive Committee. He is a resident of Illinois.

16. James E. Ryan is the Attorney General of Illinois.

17. Floyd D. Perkins is Assistant Attorney General, Bureau of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations.

The History of the Terra Foundation

18. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. Born and educated in Philadelphia and a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Terra maintained residences in Chicago and Washington, D.C. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to 1950. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

19. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation.

Its purposes, according to its original Articles of Incorporation, were > to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation (as filed Dec. 13, 1978).

20. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He created a multimillion dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art. Today, the Foundation owns substantial property in the Village of Giverny.

21. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the North Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

22. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson and his long-time friend Peter Solmsson of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

23. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Terra negotiated with the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City to form a strategic alliance that would pool the Foundation's collection with those of the other two institutions and move the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington. Discussions broke down over issues relating to the Whitney Museum's control over the collection.

24. Between 1993 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized.

25. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans and obtain zoning permits for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Phone lines, name plates, furniture and other items were purchased for the new property. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with his own handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

26. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable North Michigan Avenue museum site. Between 1996 and 1998, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to Mr. Terra's estate.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

27. Upon settlement of Mr. Terra's estate, the Board returned to consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation. At a November 1998 meeting, Mr. Buntrock recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider options for the future of the Foundation. Mr. Gidwitz was elected chairman of this committee.

28. Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris; Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis Corporation.

29. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation continued active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. The Strategic Planning Committee met several times to consider options, with Mr. Gidwitz himself raising suggestions of building a new museum facility on a different site, affiliation with other museums, and closing the museum to focus on education efforts and building the collection.

30. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 annual meeting in France, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

31. Dr. Tucker circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities

frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly. Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

32. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

The Ploy to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

33. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit alleging that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

another city. It also did not mention the 1994 amendment to the charter which permitted the Foundation to operate museums and schools "both in the United States and abroad." Based on this misleading statement of Mr. Terra's intent, the defendants alleged that the Foundation's mission was to operate a "museum of American art . . . in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois."

35. Attorney General James Ryan and Floyd Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General, seized upon the turmoil of the Terra Foundation Board as an opportunity to assert State control over its assets. At the inception of the lawsuit, the Attorney General filed an intervenor complaint that simply borrowed the allegations of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. The complaint also reiterated the faulty premise -- based upon a demonstrably incorrect statement of Mr. Terra's intent -- that the Board of Directors were without authority to relocate the Foundation. The complaint sought a declaration, among other things, that "[t]he intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the Foundation intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland."

36. The Attorney General intervened expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an ultra vires act. As Assistant Attorney General Perkins has stated in an interview for that case, he believes it is his role as assistant attorney general to see that Illinois-based charitable institutions utilize their assets in Illinois. Mr. Perkins attempts to accomplish this by seeking installment of Illinois directors on the boards of such institutions and through other restrictions. He has employed this tactic successfully in other cases, for example, that of the Regenstein Foundation. Mr. Perkins acknowledges, however, that he does not have the authority to impose Illinois-related restrictions on institutions which were created to serve broader interests, such as national and international aid organizations, even though such institutions may be based in Illinois and subject to reporting and other statutory requirements of Illinois law.

37. As authority for his intervention in that lawsuit, Mr. Perkins relied on the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997)) and his "common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts." Whatever authority these sources of law may provide to the Attorney General, they do not permit any action to force a charitable trustee or Board member of a not-for-profit corporation to change the institution's fundamental purpose in a manner inconsistent with its charter or founder's intent. Nor do these authorities mandate that any charitable trust or not-for-profit corporation that is established in the State of Illinois must remain in Illinois, regardless of its purposes and founder's intent.

38. The propriety of the Attorney General's intervention and sole basis for authority in that case depended upon his claim that the Terra Foundation's purpose was to serve the people of Illinois, rather than a broader population. Like the other defendants, the Attorney General based this claim on selected statements of Mr. Terra to the press. A reasonable investigation of the facts would have revealed, however, that Mr. Terra did not intend that any of the assets of the Terra Foundation should be restricted geographically. Mr. Perkins did not conduct such an investigation before filing his initial complaint. For example, Mr. Perkins has admitted that when he filed that complaint he was unaware of Mr. Terra's 1994 amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the

39. In January 2001, the Terra Foundation filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad.

40. Although the true facts of Mr. Terra's intent were revealed early in litigation, and at the latest by the Foundation's motion for judgment on the pleadings, defendants and the Attorney General persisted in their efforts to capture the Foundation in Illinois. They were able to do so through a barrage of motions designed to delay the proceedings and deflect attention from the core issue of Mr. Terra's intent. Mr. Perkins and the other defendants first challenged the Board's choice of counsel and early decisions about directing and funding the litigation. Then, once the Board had selected an independent litigation committee of Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Andreani, Mr. Perkins and the other derfendants challenged Dr. Stebbins' ability to serve on this committee. These tactics had the desired effect of paralyzing the Board and placing Mr. Perkins and the other defendants in a strong position to make demands upon the Foundation, without regard to the merits of their lawsuits.

41. As the case proceeded to mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins insinuated themselves into the process in an attempt to railroad its result. Mr. Perkins pursued the goal of capturing the Foundation's assets in Illinois despite the fact that he had no basis to assert that he was seeking to preserve Mr. Terra's intent.

42. In mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins took several extraordinary positions that evidenced their recognition that Mr. Terra's intent was not to constrain the Foundation to Chicago. The Attorney General disagreed that the Board of Directors was governed in the use of the Foundation's funds solely by the Articles of Incorporation. He argued that those Articles were too broad to provide any meaningful purpose to the Foundation. Most strikingly, the Attorney General maintained that a not-for-profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply by virtue of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population.

43. Without legal authority and in disregard of the facts regarding Mr. Terra's intent. Assistant Attorney General Perkins demanded throughout the mediation that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with the Art Institute of Chicago in which the Foundation would sell the North Michigan Avenue property to fund a new wing at the Art Institute.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois in perpetuity.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection in the Chicago metropolitan area in perpetuity.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois.

44. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

45. Frustrated by the Board's resistance to his demands, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation. These tactics were directed in particular at two key swing directors, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall.

Attacks on Dr. Stebbins

46. Since his earliest involvement with the Terra Foundation, Dr. Stebbins had supported a comprehensive approach to strategic planning that included consideration of options outside of Illinois. In 1997, before Dr. Stebbins joined the Board, he headed an advisory committee that conducted a review and analysis of the collection and reported recommendations to the Board for the future. The committee consisted of Dr. Stebbins, then curator of American paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Professor John Wilmerding, former chairman of the art department at Princeton, and Charles Moffett, former deputy director of the National Gallery and director of the Phillips Collection in Washington. In its report to the Board in February 1997, the advisory committee concluded strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. The committee envisioned three alternative scenarios for the future, two of which involved discontinuing the Chicago presence by: (1) concentrating on French operations, with the establishment of a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris, or (2) improving the collection and housing it another American city.

47. Dr. Stebbins joined the Board in April 1998. In Strategic Planning Committee meetings until the outbreak of litigation, he continued to advocate consideration of options within and without Illinois. He was an especially strong advocate for the idea of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

48. When litigation began, Dr. Stebbins became a key figure in its conduct. Upon defendants' demand for an independent litigation committee, Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Jacques Andreani were chosen from among the non-party directors to oversee the litigation on behalf of the Foundation. Because Amb. Andreani was in France at the time, Dr. Stebbins effectively controlled the litigation committee.

49. Within three weeks of Dr. Stebbins' election to the litigation committee on November 30, 2000, Mr. Perkins filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the committee on the grounds of conflict of interest. On January 22, 2001, Mr. Perkins obtained a Court order to conduct special discovery focusing on Dr. Stebbins' conduct as a director. Within two weeks of that order — and less than two weeks before a scheduled evidentiary hearing focusing upon Dr. Stebbins' conduct — the Foundation entered into mediation. With challenges to his reputation and integrity having become the central focus of the litigation, Dr. Stebbins strongly advocated directing the Foundation into mediation.

50. On March 21, 2001, Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time. In a cover letter, Mr. Perkins stated that the document was a draft and was not being filed, but rather supplied to set forth issues to be discussed at settlement. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a new defendant and included specific charges of impropriety against him. The allegations included alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions.

The amended complaint also charged Stebbins with breaching the Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums. The amended complaint was never filed.

51. Dr. Stebbins now knew that, if settlement was not reached, the litigation would resume, with his reputation and integrity once again the central focus, and he would become a defendant in the case.

52. On the same day that the draft complaint was distributed to counsel, the mediator circulated to the Board a revised mediation proposal, which had been formulated after reviewing the amended complaint and discussing this matter with the Attorney General. The proposal contained a requirement that the Foundation would maintain and exhibit its collection in perpetuity at the Art Institute of Chicago. According to the mediator, this provision resulted from the position of the Attorney General. Mr. Perkins had not participated in mediation sessions on March 5 and 6, but worked behind the scenes with the mediator to influence the course of mediation.

53. Dr. Stebbins, facing the threat of becoming a defendant in the lawsuit, now expressed his support for settlement. On April 2, 2001, he and Amb. Andreani prepared a letter to the mediator stating that "in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago." They enclosed a settlement proposal "follow[ing] the outline" of the March 21, 2001, proposal reflecting the Attorney General's positions.

Attacks on Dr. Marshall

54. Dr. Marshall joined the Board in 1998. Like Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall held the view that the Terra Foundation was established for the broadest possible dissemination of American art. For example, at a May 10, 2000, meeting of the Strategic Planning

16di-004059

Committee that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall attended, consensus was reached that the beneficiaries of the Foundation included the national and international public.

55. Late into the mediation process, Dr. Marshall remained a strong critic of the Attorney General's methods and proposals. In a May 20, 2001, letter to counsel for the Foundation and her fellow Board members she reported:

> [W]ith respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

56. In addition to serving on the Board, Dr. Marshall serves full-time as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, a highly-regarded education institution that depends on public funding for the bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

57. After a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been tricked into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. He began to investigate Dr. Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He considered these issues for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr. Perkins knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

58. Mr. Perkins never informed Dr. Marshall or her counsel that the investigation had been concluded.

The Proposed Settlement and Board Approval

59. On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed settlement of this litigation. The settlement called for entry of a consent judgment and order implementing the Attorney General's goal of locking the Foundation in to the State of Illinois. In this regard, the proposed judgment requires:

a. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois;

b. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago metropolitan area;

c. For at least 25 years, the Foundation will require that a majority of its Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois;

d. The Foundation shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

60. Dr. Marshall, the Foundation's Treasurer and Secretary, presided at the special meeting. Other directors present were: Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.

61. Immediately prior to the vote, several Board members made personal statements. Mrs. Terra objected that "the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees."

> Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art . . . . [W]e will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of > Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation . . . telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most . . . outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation.

62. Dr. Tucker echoed Mrs. Terra's concerns. He stated that > what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview. The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by . . . the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive.

63. At the recommendation of the Foundation's attorney, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall each addressed the issue of conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's conduct in the case. Dr. Marshall confirmed that "the Attorney General has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation," but insisted that the investigation "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation."

64. Dr. Stebbins first defended his "reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity," and maintained that he had served on the Board "without any iota of a conflict of interest." He then stated that he "abhor[ed] the threatening tactics of the Attorney General." Dr. Stebbins also insisted that he was voting his "own conscience."

65. Upon the motion of Dr. Stebbins, the Board voted on whether to approve the proposed resolutions to amend the By-Laws and accept the settlement. Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor. Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against.

66. Members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation have statutory and common law fiduciary duties to the Foundation. These duties include, but are not limited to, the duty of loyalty, which encompasses the duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to act in the best interests of the Foundation; the duty of obedience to purpose, which prohibits action contrary to the purposes for which Foundation was established; and the duty to use the Foundation's assets productively and not to waste Foundation assets.

67. At least two members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement were faced with a conflict of interest. Dr. Marshall expressly acknowledged that the Attorney General, the primary beneficiary of the settlement transaction, was conducting an investigation of the publicly-funded institution of which Dr. Marshall is president. Dr. Marshall reasonably could expect her vote on the settlement to influence the outcome of that investigation, either positively or negatively.

68. Dr. Stebbins also had strong personal incentives to support the settlement to the detriment of the Foundation. During the course of the litigation and corresponding public scrutiny of the Foundation's operations, he had faced charges of serious lapses of professional responsibility. In acknowledging his abhorrence of the Attorney General's tactics and vociferously defending his reputation and integrity immediately prior to the vote, Dr. Stebbins plainly identified his conflict of interest. If the mediation was unsuccessful, Dr. Stebbins would become a defendant in the case and face personal liability. Only through settlement could Dr. Stebbins hope to avoid more scrutiny which carried the threat of a potentially devastating effect on his career.

69. The Foundation's bylaws can be amended only "by a majority of the directors then in office and present" at the meeting at which the vote is taken. Because eight members of the Board were present at the June 29, 2001 meeting, the affirmative vote of five directors was required to approve the Proposed Settlement's many bylaw changes. Without the votes of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the Proposed Settlement garnered only four votes.

70. Each Board member who voted in favor of the settlement did so in violation of their fiduciary duty of obedience to the Foundation's purpose. Restricting the Foundation's art collection to isolation in Chicago for 50 years and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board is directly contrary to the Foundation's stated purpose in its Articles of Incorporation to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added).

71. The Foundation's mission is meant to be world-wide and its board members equally diverse, not given over specially to Illinois and its citizenry. Indeed, the problems of the 50-year lock-in and Illinois-majority provisions were identified by Dr. Marshall prior to her conflict of interest arising. In her letter of May 20, 2001, she stated that because of the Foundation's "intentional national and international outreach and presence," she did "not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority." Dr. Marshall acknowledged that a 50-year lock-in would be a relinquishment of the Board's power to govern the Foundation when she stated that "[a]fter the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future."

72. Each Board member who voted in favor of the proposed settlement also violated a duty not to waste the Foundation's assets. By eliminating the possibility of merger or partnership with a non-Chicago institution, the Board accepted a undue limitation on its negotiating power. By limiting the field of competitors for the Terra relationship, the Board would waste all the benefits that would flow from that competition, and in particular the ability to secure the most attractive possible terms for the future and for the collection to have the greatest possible impact on the art world and public education.

73. The Foundation has benefited tremendously from the participation of art experts worldwide on its board of directors -- including, among others, the curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum; a leading expert on Claude Monet; and the president of a major Parisian art museum. Yet the Board majority voted in favor of a settlement under which the Foundation would forfeit the benefit of such experts in favor of a board packed with individuals whose chief virtue is that they are residents of Illinois. By limiting the pool of talent from which the Board can recruit directors, the Board would waste its opportunity to secure the best and most experienced leadership.

74. Locking the Foundation into Chicago for 50 years or any other length of time and stacking the Board with Illinois residents dangerously compromises the Foundation's flexibility to fulfill its charter. There is absolutely no guarantee that the Chicago community will provide adequate support to the Foundation over such a long period of time. If the Foundation is to remain viable it must have the flexibility to consider other venues where its collection may attract the maximum possible interest.

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

Count I - Declaratory Relief

75. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

76. An actual and justiciable controversy exits between the parties as defined by 735 ILCS 5/2-701.

77. As directors of the Terra Foundation, Plaintiffs have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the mission of the Foundation.

16di-004065

78. Plaintiffs have a fiduciary duty to see that the Foundation acts lawfully and in obedience to its charter and purpose, and to protect the Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement and unlawful interference with its rights.

79. The conduct of the Defendants alleged herein has caused and will continue to cause irreparable harm to the to the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries in the United States and abroad.

80. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law and request that this Court enter a judgment declaring as stated in the prayer for relief below.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) A declaration that the settlement is unlawful because it was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law; it is the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of director fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General; and it is incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count II - Ultra Vires Acts (805 ILCS 105/103.15)

81. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

82. The resolutions approved by six members of the Board of the Foundation on June 29, 2001, constitute acts of the Foundation taken in contravention of its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thus taken without lawful authority, capacity or power.

16di-004066

83. The court should enjoin the doing of such acts in this proceeding pursuant to the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a).

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment as follows:

(a) an Order enjoining the defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation;

(b) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(c) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(d) Punitive damages;

(e) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count III - Breach of Fiduciary Duty

84. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

85. A fiduciary relationship exists between the Foundation and the members of its Board of Directors. The Board's fiduciary duties include, without limitation, the duties of acting in good faith and with due regard for the Foundation's interest, of refraining from acting in a manner adverse to the Foundation's interest, of making full disclosure of all material information in their possession, of obedience to the Foundation's purposes as established by its Articles of Incorporation, of making productive use of the Foundation's assets and opportunities, and the duties of care, loyalty, fair dealing, and honesty.

86. The Defendant Board Members who voted in favor of the proposed settlement willfully and wantonly breached some or all of these fiduciary duties because the settlement is not in the best interests of the Foundation, is inconsistent with the Foundation's charter and by-laws, and wastes assets and opportunities of the Foundation.

87. In addition, board members Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins breached their duties of loyalty to the Foundation by voting in favor of a settlement which offered personal benefits having nothing to do with the interests of the Foundation.

88. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of fiduciary duty, the plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count IV - Inducing Breach of Fiduciary Duty

89. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

90. As set forth above, the Defendant members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement of this litigation did so in violation of their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

91. Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins colluded with these Board members in committing breach of their fiduciary duties, or otherwise induced or participated in such breach.

92. As a direct and proximate result of this conduct, Plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

16di-004068

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Punitive damages;

(d) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count V - Deprivation Under Color of Law of Constitutional Rights (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

93. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

94. At all relevant times, Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins acted under color of law as Assistant Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

95. Mr. Perkins' conduct constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

96. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech under the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

97. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful restraint by the State of Illinois on interstate commerce in violation of Art. I, § 8 of the Constitution of the United States.

98. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful impairment of the Foundation's contractual obligations in violation of Art. I, § 9 of the Constitution of the United States.

16di-004069

99. The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General engaged in such illegal conduct to the injury of Plaintiffs and the Foundation.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Jury Trial Requested

100. Plaintiffs request trial by jury.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO MRS. TERRA'S MOTION FOR SUBSTITUTION OF JUDGE

Defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), by its attorneys, submits its Opposition to Mrs. Terra's Motion for Substitution of Judge. In support of its Opposition, the Foundation states as follows:

1. Mrs. Terra's motion for substitution of judge is just another attempt to backdoor her previously rejected claims into yet another forum with the hopes of finally finding one that is favorable to her. In this regard, Mrs. Terra continues to engage in obvious forum and judge shopping which this Court should not condone.

2. After having failed on numerous attempts to convince this Court to permit them leave to file "counterclaims" and to overturn the agreed settlement entered into in Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., Case No. 00 CH 13859, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson filed a complaint in the Law Division, Tucker, et al. v. Buntrock, et al., Case No. 01 L 009112, in the hopes of finding a judge who might rule in their favor. Seeing through this tactic, Judge Mary Mulhern, the interim Chief Judge of the Law Division, ruled that Mrs. Terra's "new" complaint was, in fact, related to the Buntrock matter currently pending before this Court and ordered that the Tucker matter be transferred back to the Chief Judge of the Chancery Division "for reassignment to Judge Kinnaird." (9/17/01 Order, attached hereto as Exhibit A).

Mrs. Terra's Claims are Nothing More than a Collateral Attack on the Judgment Entered in the Buntrock v. Terra Matter

3. A party may only exercise her right to a substitution of judge without cause "before the judge to whom it is presented has ruled on any substantial issue in the case." 735 ILCS 5/2-1001(a)(2)(ii) (emphasis added). Mrs. Terra simply cannot meet this requirement here. There is no question that this Court has already ruled on numerous "substantial issues" in this case, not the least of which is the entry of a Consent Judgment and Order which resolved any claims Mrs. Terra may have purportedly alleged in the Tucker complaint that the Consent Judgment and Order and the settlement it embodied was somehow invalid.

4. Mrs. Terra lost her arguments regarding the invalidity of the Consent Judgment and Order before this Court. She certainly has the opportunity to argue that the Consent Judgment is invalid for some reason or make any other arguments she wishes through the appeal process. Indeed, Mrs. Terra filed a Notice of Appeal of this Court's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order on August 22, 2001.

5. However, rather than simply making her arguments in the Appellate Court and waiting for a ruling, Mrs. Terra has also attempted to take a second bite of the apple by filing an entirely "new" lawsuit purportedly raising the same issues which this Court rejected in entering the Consent Judgment and Order in the hopes of having a new trial court judge hear those issues again. This is nothing more than an improper horizontal appeal of this Court's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. Judge Mulhern's transfer order recognized that this "new" lawsuit is nothing more than the same old claims objecting to the Foundation's decision to enter into the settlement. Accordingly, Judge Mulhern ordered the matter transferred back to the Chancery Division for assignment to Judge Kinnaird. Mrs. Terra now tries yet again to remove Judge Kinnaird by filing her motion to substitute under the mistaken assumption that she is somehow "entitled" to such a substitution at this time. She simply is not.

6. The claims made in the Tucker complaint are part and parcel of the claims made and rejected in the Buntrock matter as Judge Mulhern recognized in finding that Cause No. 01 L 009112 was related to Cause No. 00 CH 13859 and ordering that it be sent back to Judge Kinnaird. Indeed, the vast majority of the allegations contained in the Tucker complaint have already been adjudicated by this Court in the Buntrock matter - namely, the validity of the Consent Judgment and whether the Attorney General "coerced" certain Directors to vote in favor of the Consent Judgment. It is irrelevant that those rulings took place in the Buntrock case rather than in the Tucker case. (See Marshall Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Henson, 78 Ill. App. 2d 14, 21 (1st Dist. 1966) (holding that plaintiff's petition for substitution of judge was properly denied where the court had already ruled on substantive issues in a related matter involving generally the same parties and issues)). This Court has already made substantive rulings on the issues raised in the Tucker complaint and therefore Mrs. Terra's motion for substitution of judge is not timely under Section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii).

7. Mrs. Terra's attempt to judge-shop by creating a supposedly "new" lawsuit out of her previously denied counterclaims and then claiming a supposed right to a substitution of judge should be seen for what it is: a tactical maneuver which should not be countenanced by this Court. To do otherwise would permit litigants to simply create and file new lawsuits every time a judge rules contrary to their position. Section 2-1001(a)(2)(ii) should not be permitted to be used as a tool for such an absurd result.

Allowing Mrs. Terra to Substitute Judges Would Render this Court's General Order Regarding Related Cases Meaningless.

8. Even if Mrs. Terra can convince this Court to accept her view that the Tucker matter is "technically" a new case, Mrs. Terra is nevertheless not entitled to a substitution of judge at this point.

9. Circuit Court of Cook County General Order No. 22 provides that "In order to conserve judicial resources and promote efficiency in the administration of the Circuit Court . . . the Circuit Court may assign or reassign related cases to a single judge whenever it serves the convenience of interested parties and the court." As Judge Mulhern has already ruled, the Tucker and Buntrock matters are related and accordingly the Tucker matter was transferred back to this Court. The purpose of the Order is to promote judicial economy by allowing judges who are intimately familiar with the history, facts and issues surrounding particular matters to use that unique knowledge and insight to foster the efficient adjudication of related cases. This not only conserves judicial resources but prevents inconsistent rulings. To grant parties permission to disregard that Order by simply filing a motion for substitution of judge is wholly inconsistent with the stated purpose of the Order. Permitting Mrs. Terra to now take a substitution of judge would totally circumvent the purpose for which General Order No. 22 was designed and would essentially render the Order meaningless. For that reason alone, her motion should be denied.

This Court Has Already Rendered an Opinion on the Allegations Contained in the Tucker Case

10. A petition for substitution of judge "must be brought at the earliest practical moment in order to prevent a litigant from seeking a change of judge only after he has formed an opinion that the judge may be unfavorably disposed toward his cause." In re Marriage of Petersen, 319 Ill. App. 3d 325, 338 (1st Dist. 2001). The statutory right to a substitution of judge "does not exist beyond the time at which the judge has indicated a position . . . in the cause." Barnes v. The Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., 103 Ill. App. 2d 425, 428 (1st Dist. 1968). A party cannot simply "judge shop until he finds a jurist who is favorably disposed to his cause of action." In re Marriage of Petersen, 319 Ill. App. 3d at 338; Hader v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., 207 Ill. App. 3d 1001, 1008 (5th Dist. 1991); Paschen Contractors, Inc. v. Ill. State Toll Hwy. Authority, 225 Ill. App. 3d 930, 937 (2nd Dist. 1992). Even when the court has not ruled on a substantial issue, a motion for substitution may be denied "if the movant had the opportunity to test the waters and form an opinion as to the court's reaction to his claims." In re Marriage of Petersen, 319 Ill. App. 3d at 338. Any other construction "would subvert the whole trial system." Barnes, 103 Ill. App. 2d at 428.

11. Mrs. Terra had more than an "opportunity to test the waters" in this case. There is no question that this Court has already ruled on issues in these related cases and has expressed her opinion that she finds Mrs. Terra's claims regarding the Consent Judgment questionable. As this Court stated in the July 24th hearing, "The counterclaim, as I see it, in many parts has a lot of defects to it." (7/24/01 Transcript of Proceedings, p. 129, attached hereto as Exhibit B). In filing the Tucker matter, Mrs. Terra simply took her "defective counterclaim" and re-labeled it as a "new" complaint. In this regard, Mrs. Terra certainly has an indication as to how this Court views her allegations. Considering this, it is no wonder that Mrs. Terra now seeks to find a new judge. Unfortunately for Mrs. Terra, however, it is simply too late. See Marshall Savings & Loan Ass'n, 78 Ill. App. 2d at 21.

Conclusion

12. For the foregoing reasons, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts respectfully requests that this Court deny Mrs. Terra's Motion for Substitution of Judge.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS had in the above-entitled cause, before the HONORABLE DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD, Judge of said Court, in Courtroom 2302, on the 24th day of July, A.D. 2001, at the approximate hour of 4:30 o'clock p.m.

also, in the Consent Judgment and Order, if they filed an answer, or it can be in a separate document granting them leave to file an answer.

I do have a problem allowing the filing in this case of the proposed counterclaim. This Consent Judgment, once its signed, and it will be the next -- it will be the document that I sign after I have signed all the orders that release all these things that are under seal.

Once this document is signed, this case will be over. All claims that the plaintiffs have brought will be dismissed with prejudice. And this litigation will be done.

The counterclaim, as I see it, in many parts has a lot of defects to it, not the least of which is against people that aren't even parties to the case; and they have to be added as parties in order to be counterclaimed against. However, I question whether valid causes of action that flow from the main case are, in fact, what's alleged in this counterclaim.

So I am going to be entering an order, shall we call it the third order or fourth, denying the defendants leave to file the counterclaim in

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held in court.)

THE COURT: Okay. We just called 01 CH 9112 which is a new case on my calendar as of, I guess, this morning.

MR. CUMMINS: I think it's 01 L, Judge.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, 01 L 9112.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: And who represents plaintiffs?

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins on behalf of the plaintiffs, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson, Your Honor.

MR. CRONIN: Thomas Cronin, also on behalf of plaintiffs.

THE COURT: Okay. And we have some defendants in this case. Let's go in order. Who is representing Defendants Buntrock and Gidwitz and anybody else?

MR. CARROLL: Actually, Your Honor, yes. It's James Carroll and Cheryl Niro on behalf of the Directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, and Hartman, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. So you've got four. And have you filed an appearance?

MR. CARROLL: I'm not really sure, Your Honor. I don't think -- I don't think we have yet, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Have you been served with the Complaint?

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, we've waived service of the Complaint and accepted service on that.

THE COURT: Okay. So you are representing the first four named defendants?

MR. CARROLL: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Is there anybody in the courtroom who is representing Defendant Stephanie Pace Marshall?

MR. SCHUMAN: Yes, Your Honor, I am. William Schumann from McDermott, Will & Emery on behalf of both Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall and Dr. Theodore Stebbins. And we have filed our appearances. We accepted service and process on behalf of them.

THE COURT: Okay. And let me see who else I've got in this cast. I have the Terra Foundation for the Arts. Three guesses. I bet that's you, Ms. Stone.

MS. STONE: It is until you say it's not, Your Honor. Susan Stone, Sidley, Austin on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

THE COURT: Okay. And I have the Attorney General and Mr. Perkins. Mr. Perkins is a defendant.

Who's representing him?

MR. IOPPOLO: I am, Your Honor. Tom Ioppolo, I-o-p-p-o-l-o, on behalf of Mr. Perkins and the Attorney General.

THE COURT: Okay. This case is originally filed in the Law Division. It was sent by Judge Gardner in the Law Division. I think -- unless I'm wrong -- he sent it himself to the Presiding Judge in the Law Division to make a decision as to where it should be assigned, and you had some kind of a hearing over there --

MR. CARROLL: On Monday, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- in front of Judge Mulhern?

MR. CARROLL: As the Acting Chief of division.

THE COURT: And I take it it was not all by agreement, right? Is that right? It wasn't an amicable hearing or whatever?

MR. CUMMINS: Here's the odyssey if you will, Judge.

THE COURT: It went then from Judge Mulhern who did not consolidate the cases but assigned this case back to the Presiding Judge of the Chancery to be assigned to me as a related case under Rule 22? Is that what we're dealing with here?

MR. CARROLL: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do I have that right, Mr. Cummins? It's Rule 22?

MR. CUMMINS: I don't think -- we believe that Judge Mulhern's ruling was in error.

What happened, just to clear up the record, Judge, the matter was assigned to Judge Gardner. There was a hearing before Judge Gardner on the 13th of August, at which point he transferred the case to Judge Evans. There was a subsequent appearance before Judge Evans where a briefing schedule was established. A number of briefs were filed with respect to the issue of transfer. There are also two other motions pending in the Law Division case that aren't before Your Honor, or aren't on the call today. That case was then set for disposition by Judge Evans, who then handed it off to Judge Mulhern, who then ruled and entered the order that you have in front of you.

And our motion today is simply for substitution of judge.

THE COURT: Okay. But we've got some rules of the court. There's Rule 22, and there's Rule 12. And Rule 12 makes cases consolidated.

MR. CUMMINS: There's no consolidation.

THE COURT: And Rule 22 assigns a case to a judge who has a similar case.

MR. CUMMINS: That's the -- it was the latter, Judge.

THE COURT: I want to make sure that that's what we're here on.

MR. CUMMINS: That's what she ruled but that, we believe, is in error. But that's okay.

THE COURT: So you thought it should have been consolidated?

MR. CUMMINS: No. No. We just don't think it should have been transferred at all. There's no consolidation.

MS. STONE: Just so the record is complete, Your Honor, Your Honor is right that she ruled pursuant to General Order 22.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. STONE: However, she did also state, and I believe it's on page 35 of the transcript, and I unfortunately did not in my case have a copy with me, she did say that she believed these cases are related if not identical. So she did make that statement, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, I have a Motion for Substitution of Judge as a matter of right.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: It's a brand new case, by case name and by case number. And it has some of the same parties we had before. It has some of the same counsel that we had before. And it also has some new parties.

If I remember correctly, the Complaint is in three or four counts, and each of the three or four counts stems from and relates to my case. Is that correct? It all comes down to my case. I mean, there's not like a new fact pattern. There's nothing that came out that --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, I wouldn't characterize it that way. I would say that the -- that the gravamen of the Complaint, and the various counts, arises from the unlawful conduct of certain Directors, of the Attorney General of the State of Illinois, which, in part, was implemented in earlier litigation before this Court, yes. That case, having been concluded by a settlement, now in the Appellate Court.

THE COURT: Did anything that is complained of in case number 01 have anything unrelated to do with my case?

MS. STONE: No. And in fact --

THE COURT: I'm asking Mr. Cummins.

MS. STONE: Okay.

THE COURT: Tell me something different. I just -- I delayed my people that were supposed to be here at 2:30. I had a little bit of trouble getting a copy of the Complaint. Fortunately, one of you had attached it to the --

MR. CARROLL: We did, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- opposition on the substitution, and so I read that copy quickly because I had read an outline of that before, and I have not seen anything that doesn't come out of my case or come out of the mediation process or anything.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, there are claims against parties who were not part of that litigation, weren't even part of the Terra Foundation. They still aren't, in our view. We were denied leave to file claims in your case.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, just help me out. I've got two different headings here.

MR. CUMMINS: Yeah.

THE COURT: I've got a heading with a whole bunch of people. Donnelley. New Board members. And then I've got a heading that doesn't have all those people. What's the right heading? Is there an Amended Complaint?

MR. CUMMINS: There's an Amended Complaint. Leave has been sought to file that. We believed it was filed. There's an issue about that.

THE COURT: They're shaking their head and they're saying the Amended Complaint was never filed.

MR. CARROLL: That's correct, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Here's why --

MS. STONE: No leave was granted. They sought leave. That was not granted. That was entered -- their Motion for Leave to File was entered and continued. So the Amended Complaint, the proposed Amended Complaint, is not -- has not been granted leave to have been filed.

THE COURT: Does somebody have a piece of paper that shows that leave was granted to file an Amended Complaint?

MR. CUMMINS: Let me --

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, we can get the order because the order clearly says it was entered and continued. Mr. Cummins is going to say that in an off the record conversation it was granted. But at the end of the on record hearing --

THE COURT: How can it be granted in an off the record conversation?

MR. CARROLL: That's exactly the point.

THE COURT: It can only be done in a Court order.

MR. CUMMINS: Mr. Cummins isn't speaking.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, do you have an order that says --

MR. CUMMINS: I have a transcript, Judge. Let me tell you what the --

THE COURT: I don't go by transcripts. I've got to go by signed orders. Was there an order granting anybody leave to file an Amended Complaint?

MR. CUMMINS: Was there an order? No, there is not an order.

THE COURT: When you got over to Judge Evans and eventually to Judge Mulhern or whatever, did any of them sign an order granting leave?

MR. CARROLL: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So I don't have to worry right now that Mr. Donnelley, Ms. Forster, Mr. Hamada, and all these other people aren't properly represented by counsel because I don't have them as parties right now. Is that right?

MS. STONE: Right.

MR. SCHUMAN: That's right.

THE COURT: And I don't have to worry about Winston & Strawn right now because they're not parties.

MS. STONE: And you don't have to worry about Sidley, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: I have an order from the Court that day which at the last paragraph, if you'll notice, enters and continues the Motion for Leave to File the Amended Complaint. And it was on Mr. Novoselsky's motion.

THE COURT: As much as I would like nothing better, probably, than to grant Mr. Cummins' motion, I think that based on the Complaint that I have, there is nothing here that's anything other than is coming out of my case.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, most respectfully, first of all, I don't think anything's funny about this.

THE COURT: Well, I don't think it's funny either.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, there was a lot of laughter when you made that observation. I don't think it's funny. And I'm going to say something, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm trying to make things easy for all of us and for me, too. And the easiest thing for me to do would be to say, substitution. Go someplace else.

MR. CUMMINS: That's your obligation, most respectfully.

THE COURT: Well, I understand that's the way you read the statute. And I have read what they have said in their responses. Now, I understand there's some urgency today and so you want us all to stop everything for this because you want to have some type of a hearing on some kind of a motion tomorrow. Is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: Let me --

THE COURT: Sir, I'm trying to do some scheduling, too.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes. Is that correct? Yes, Your Honor, it's correct. And I'll explain why it's correct.

THE COURT: And I want to be able to give you as full of a hearing on your motion for substitution and your cases if you want me to.

However, you have to understand. They have both filed responses. One of the responses just came in this morning. I haven't read the Terra Foundation's response. I was here with you on another case 'til almost 1:00 and was delayed for a meeting for the new judge seminar, which I know you are familiar with, sir, and didn't get to that meeting for an hour. I was late an hour to that meeting. I have just returned from that meeting, and I still haven't read their cases.

MR. CUMMINS: All right. Here's my dilemma.

THE COURT: If you want this heard and you want it heard and have a full opportunity to argue, I'll have to do it tomorrow.

MR. CUMMINS: All right, Judge. Here's the problem. And I -- and you put -- and, you know, they made a tactical move, and I understand tactics.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, what is their tactical move?

MR. CUMMINS: A meeting of the Terra Foundation, which we sought to enjoin before Judge Gardner on the 13th. And here's the transcript of that proceeding.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: I've given everybody that.

We filed an Emergency Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order. And the reason -- and here's the Emergency Motion for the Temporary Restraining Order. It was agreed and understood that no meeting would go forward. We withdrew our motion as moot at that point. We now have a situation where yesterday, my clients received an agenda of items attempting to do exactly what we sought to enjoin on August 13 but which the various defendants, and Mr. Quinlan was one of the most articulate on the subject, said, okay, we won't do anything without appropriate notice.

We believe that our Motion for Temporary Restraining Order is well founded. That there should be no meeting tomorrow for the various reasons we set forth. You're unfamiliar with those. Here's what I don't want to get into the trick bag on. I want the meeting tomorrow stopped because we're entitled to that emergency relief. And I can persuade you on that. If everybody's --

THE COURT: You don't want to persuade me. You want to persuade someone else. So first we have to go through the issue of substitution of judge. And if you want it done right, I have to read this stuff.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, then can we have an agreement of all these parties that if you hear the Motion for the Temporary Restraining Order, that -- the meeting is tomorrow at 10:00. That's the schedule. If you hear that, we don't waive our right to substitution by statute as it's set forth in our motion.

THE COURT: Is there a meeting tomorrow?

MS. STONE: There is a meeting tomorrow, Your Honor. 10:00. Notice was --

THE COURT: When was it scheduled?

MS. STONE: Pardon?

THE COURT: When was it scheduled?

MS. STONE: You man when was the notice sent out?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. STONE: It was sent out by messenger on the 7th and -- I'm sorry, messengered to people on the 7th. Fed Ex'd to people on the 6th with delivery on the 7th.

MR. CUMMINS: That's incorrect. Our clients received the information last evening. There was no agenda sent of any kind or character. And Ms. Stone --

THE COURT: Ms. Stone, you're holding something up. What are you holding?

MS. STONE: Yes. I have the Federal Express receipts showing when the notice was given. An agenda is not required under the Bylaws, Your Honor. The agenda is done as a courtesy so that the Board members can more efficiently conduct the Board meeting.

The point is, Your Honor, there is no stay in place as Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, and Senator Simpson pursue their appeal. In other words, you have granted and entered the Consent Judgment --

MR. CUMMINS: Well, now we're arguing the --

MS. STONE: Excuse me.

MR. CUMMINS: We're now arguing the TRO.

MS. STONE: Excuse me.

MR. CUMMINS: The question is whether there's a meeting tomorrow scheduled? Yes. Did we get proper notice? No. Did we get notice consistent with what was represented to Judge Gardner? No.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, may I be permitted to finish?

THE COURT: Yes, please finish.

MS. STONE: And I would ask if the Court could remind counsel that it is impolite to interrupt other counsel.

MR. CUMMINS: I don't need --

THE COURT: I think Mr. Cummins understands manners, but we have to kind of tone the advocacy down a little bit and let her finish. Go ahead.

MS. STONE: Thank you, Your Honor.

As Your Honor has required of us on previous occasions, the Terra Foundation is carrying out business. And it has done so since Your Honor has entered the Consent Judgment on July 26. This Board meeting is the second Board meeting that is planned that will be held since the entry of your Consent Judgment. There are many very important items that have to be discussed including the budget, certain educational proposals, other matters of importance to the Board. We cannot allow the work of the Foundation to grind to a halt merely because the objectors, having had numerous opportunities to be heard, want yet another opportunity to be heard.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm a little lost on this thing that you gave me. I'm not real good at finding out these tracking directions. What piece of paper do I look at to see that Mr. -- or I'm sorry, Dr. Tucker, Senator Simpson, and Mrs. Terra got it? I see an entry on Abe Gomez.

MS. STONE: May I direct Your Honor to the right

THE COURT: Sure.

MS. STONE: In addition, we also have Don Ratner here who is in charge of sending out the notice. He's also available to give testimony to Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Put him on the stand -- excuse me. I apologize, Judge.

MS. STONE: If I may turn down the corners of the pages that relate to Dr. Tucker, Mrs. Terra, and Senator Simpson? Is that your question?

THE COURT: Sure. That would help. I just want to look at it for a minute.

MS. STONE: And it is my understanding, Your Honor, having spoken with Mr. Ratner, that the Federal Express packages were sent out on the 6th. Received on the 7th. Although the Directors in France received them, I believe, on the 10th. And that messengered delivery was given to folks in Chicago on the 7th.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, what's wrong with what Ms. Stone just said is there were no packages sent that my client ever received. In fact, co-counsel who represents Buntrock said that he found out about the meeting today when he got back to his office.

Those are the folks that represent Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz.

Here is what my client got yesterday, Judge. (Handing.)

THE COURT: I'm sorry, when you say "your client," I'm looking at, for instance, shipping instruction that shows that the one that was sent Judith Terra in Washington at her address was signed for by a representative called Laverne and that it was received, notice was received, on September 7.

And in regard to Dr. Tucker, it looks like it was also signed for and there is -- I don't see the name of the signed for.

MS. STONE: I don't see the name either, Your Honor. But I think it does say the receipt date. The delivery date.

THE COURT: Okay. The same thing for Senator Simpson. And they are both received on September 7. Now --

MS. STONE: I believe the 10th, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: But none of -- Judge --

THE COURT: It says delivery date September 7.

MS. STONE: I'm sorry.

MR. CUMMINS: What's critically important here, not only in the context of the Bylaws, but in the context of the representations made before Judge Gardner when we withdrew the TRO motion, is the substance of what was purporting to be done. This was received for the first time by our client last evening. That's precisely the -- many of those items are precisely the items that were on the August 14 Board meeting that was aborted. Here's that agenda, Judge. (Handing.) And here's the material that came to my client yesterday. My client, whether or not they contend that they got some notice of some meeting that might deal with something, my client did not know until yesterday that there was going to be this attempt to try to repair what wasn't appropriately done on August 1 following the Settlement Agreement that you approved.

Let me say one other thing since we're into this now.

THE COURT: Well, I'm not into this now. I still have to decide what order I'm going to do it in, and I have to get into the merits.

MR. CUMMINS: If they will --

THE COURT: I'm just asking. There's a meeting scheduled tomorrow. You want to stop that meeting tomorrow.

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

THE COURT: They've known about it since September 7. You didn't know what the agenda was. You were all in front of me on the 29th and the 7th. I remember the Terra Foundation counsel saying there's absolutely nothing to stop us from meeting and having Board meetings.

MS. STONE: Right.

THE COURT: And I remember you saying, but they agreed. And I remember them saying, no, they didn't -- we didn't agree. I'm doing this from memory. I'm not doing it from anything else. And Ms. Stone is holding up right now a transcript and I assume I'm -- I hope I'm close to what the -- what happened on those days.

But is this a big surprise that they were going to continue to plan --

MR. CUMMINS: Absolutely

THE COURT: -- and meet and do these things?

MR. CUMMINS: Absolutely because it's precisely what we sought to enjoin, and they said that there would be appropriate notice given.

Now, Judge, if they wanted to have a meeting to do something that did not necessarily involve Mr. Field and some of these other folks who have not yet been duly elected to this Board, and you know what, when Ms. Stone says -- twice now she said this in proceedings, that this Board has conducted business, well, my clients don't know about that. And there is probably --

THE COURT: Let's not get into too much merits here because we've got a Motion for Substitution.

MR. CARROLL: We're getting very far afield, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, you're the one -- excuse me. My colleague --

THE COURT: I'll see you tomorrow -- I'll see you tomorrow at 8:00 in the morning. Please bring your own reporter because our reporters don't start until 9:15. That will give me overnight to have a chance to read the case law that has been cited by the people who are opposing it. My initial reaction is it's a brand new case. Of course you get an automatic substitution as a matter of right. You've cited some case law that says, can't do it under grounds of forum shopping in this situation.

I've looked at the only Complaint that's of record in this case. I'm willing to take a look at your case law based on that. And I'll let you know when I see you tomorrow morning whether the case is going to be in front of me or not. Just in case it is in front of me, I will also read overnight the Emergency Motion for a TRO.

Is there anything else you want me to read?

MR. CUMMINS: Sure.

MS. STONE: I would like Your Honor to read the transcript in front of Judge Gardner. There was no agreement --

MR. CUMMINS: The judge has that. I gave it to her.

MS. STONE: Pardon me. There was no agreement that there would never be a Board meeting. On the contrary, there was a discussion about a Board meeting taking place after an appropriate five days' notice.

THE COURT: Do I have that transcript?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes. I just gave it to you.

THE COURT: Is this the entire transcript before Judge Gardner? I can't imagine you were only over there for this amount of time.

MR. CARROLL: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: There was a lot of stuff said off the record.

MS. STONE: I believe it's 15 pages long, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, they had all kinds of discussions off the record. That's why we'll probably have to file something on behalf of Mr. Novoselsky who was there and I wasn't.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, I will read overnight both of the oppositions. I have the cases that were cited that came over from Mr. Quinlan. The Terra Foundation, did you submit additional cases in your response?

MS. STONE: I believe many of our cases were the same. The Marshall case and the Wilsonville case.

MR. CARROLL: The Wilsonville case is the principal case.

MS. STONE: So we can send over additional copies. If there's anything additional, we'll send it to you.

THE COURT: I'm going to ask you to get them here -- well, the problem is I'm going to be leaving the building soon so I'm not going to be able to read them until 7:00 in the morning. But if you can get them over here as soon as possible, that would be helpful.

MR. CUMMINS: I may get you some cases by 7:00 in the morning, Judge, if you will, in reply.

THE COURT: I will do the best I can to digest it. We have a lot -- don't try for 7:00 in the morning. We are under very tight security in this building, and no one can get in at that hour except me.

MR. CUMMINS: Can I fax something to you?

THE COURT: No. Anybody who wants me to read anything, have it here by 4:30 because they don't let anybody past the guards before 8:00 in the morning.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, not that I mind --

THE COURT: This isn't my emergency.

MR. CARROLL: It's not an emergency, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You want me to read this. You want me to rule for you. I'm going to do the best I can to read it and make a reasoned decision. I'm willing to leave my house tomorrow at 6:00 and come here and read your cases at 7:00. But I'm just telling you, you're not going to get 'em in the building unless you get 'em over here tonight.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, here's a simple proposition.

Here's a simple proposition. I want to give you an opportunity -- I think -- I believe you have no discretion. You have to grant us a substitution. You know that's our position. You want to give that further consideration in the context of what's been presented. I'm all for that. And I'd like to have an opportunity to sensibly reply to that. This is the tactical issue.

Now, here's what I'm suggesting. If they will all agree, if all the parties here will agree that allowing you to rule on the temporary restraining order --

THE COURT: They're not going to agree, Mr. Cummins. You can keep asking over and over, but I know. They're shaking their heads. Is anybody going to agree to that?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, of course.

MS. STONE: No.

MR. CARROLL: No.

THE COURT: If I ask you all to agree, are you going to agree to it?

MR. CARROLL: No, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, now you see --

THE COURT: I can't order them to agree to it.

They're not going to agree to it. So what do I do?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, you can also observe the tactics that are in play here.

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, can I clarify a couple of things? First of all, just because I said I didn't know about the meeting, that doesn't mean my clients didn't get proper notice. And that's the issue here. Not whether the attorneys got notice.

MR. CUMMINS: He's now representing they did, of course.

MR. CARROLL: Second of all, Your Honor, this isn't an emergency matter. Talk about tactics, Mr. Cummins also has tactics at play here.

THE COURT: Let's not get into tactics. I'm just trying to figure out what the law says, and I've got to read it. So please let me read the law.

MR. CARROLL: That's fine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And then I can tell you tomorrow morning how I interpret it. And I might be right, and I might be wrong, but I'm going to do the best I can and I'll see you at 8:00, and you need a court reporter here.

Now, you put a notebook up here. Do you want me to look at that notebook, too?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay. Is it all right if I look at the agendas for the meeting?

MS. STONE: That's fine.

MR. CUMMINS: There is something --

THE COURT: I want to make sure I've got a Motion for Substitution. I've got the Quinlan firm's response. I've got the Terra Foundation firm's response. I've got the Quinlan cases. I'm going to get the Terra Foundation cases. I'm going to get cases from plaintiff. And do you have a response?

MR. SCHUMAN: Your Honor, we join with Quinlan's brief, in particular the Marshall case, which is probably cited as the one we think you should pay most attention to.

THE COURT: Did you file something?

MR. SCHUMAN: We're part of their brief.

MR. CARROLL: They signed onto our brief.

MR. SCHUMAN: We signed onto their brief.

MR. IOPPOLO: We have not filed anything, but I just want to join the motion -- the opposition to the substitution.

THE COURT: Okay. And then as far as the TRO, I have a Complaint and I have an Emergency Motion for a TRO that was filed August 13.

MR. CUMMINS: And you need --

THE COURT: Yes, sir?

MR. CUMMINS: And you need a copy of this Emergency Motion to Disqualify Sidley & Austin which goes to whether or not and to what extent Sidley & Austin can speak to the issue of the temporary restraining order tomorrow.

THE COURT: Stop one moment, please. You motioned this up at 10:00 for September 17 in front of Judge Evans. Did anybody write an order about this motion?

MS. STONE: No.

MR. CUMMINS: That got entered and continued, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: Entered and continued, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: As part of --

THE COURT: Generally?

MR. CUMMINS: -- the stuff that came to you.

MR. CARROLL: The order said entered and continued to the judge that will hear the case.

THE COURT: But it wasn't set at a particular time?

MR. CARROLL: That is correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It was entered and continued.

MR. CARROLL: There were four motions that were a part of that, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: The reason that you have to read that is because unlike any issue that's been presented to you before, when you read Mrs. Terra's affidavit, her testimony, you will understand why Sidley & Austin cannot act as counsel in this case.

THE COURT: Okay. Did anybody ever file a response to that?

MS. STONE: No. Your Honor, it came in minutes before we walked over to the Court on Monday in front of then Presiding Judge Mulhern.

If Your Honor is not inclined to dismiss it out of hand, and we certainly hope you will --

THE COURT: I won't dismiss anything.

MR. CUMMINS: Ms. Stone can testify, Judge.

MS. STONE: Pardon me. Pardon me. Then we would like the opportunity to respond. We don't think that it is appropriate for tomorrow.

THE COURT: I can only read so much between 7:00 and 8:00 in the morning.

MS. STONE: And, Your Honor, it is not up for tomorrow. They've asked you to rule on the Substitution of Judge and the TRO. You indicated you would hear those. The Sidley matter can be heard at a different time.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge --

MS. STONE: For the record -- for the record --

THE COURT: Let's talk about the order of things when I get here in the morning.

MS. STONE: Just for the record, we have the Federal Express receipt showing that, in fact, Mr. Buntrock received notice of this on September 7.

THE COURT: Counsel, I'm going to have to leave the building in less than five minutes. I need to have an order entering and continuing the Motion for Substitution of judge to 8:00 tomorrow morning, entering and continuing -- did you just present the motion for a TRO?

MR. CUMMINS: We presented it on --

THE COURT: Did you notice it up for just now?

MR. CUMMINS: We gave everybody -- we explained the problem which was, we had to have the SOJ ruled on before we could present the Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. It's a -- it's simply a renewal of the motion that was withdrawn when the meeting was voluntarily cancelled.

MR. CARROLL: Is it the same exact motion refiled?

MR. CUMMINS: It is exactly.

THE COURT: I think the order should probably say that the Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order will be presented tomorrow morning at 8:00 upon conclusion of the Motion for Substitution.

If I grant the substitution, we've got to wait for the clerk's office to open up. We've got to get it through the system, get it through the computer, get it to another judge, and I don't want you to have an issue that you didn't have proper notice. So I want to make some reference in the order now. So please do that rather quickly because I need to leave the building and I need to leave the building with Judge Foreman and he is counting on me for the transportation and we need to leave very quickly. Thank you.

THE CLERK: Tucker versus Buntrock, 01 L 9112.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Good morning, Your Honor, David Novoselsky and Robert Cummins on behalf of the plaintiffs.

MR. CARROLL: Good morning, Your Honor, James Carroll and Cheryl Niro on behalf of Defendants Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, and Hartman.

MS. STONE: Good morning, Your Honor, Susan Stone on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. IOPPOLO: Good morning, Your Honor, Thomas Ioppolo on behalf of Mr. Perkins and Attorney General Ryan.

MR. SCHUMAN: Good morning, Your Honor, William Schuman on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

THE COURT: Well, Counsel, it's a couple minutes after 8:00 and I want to make sure that is everyone here that you believe needed to be here for purposes of this hearing? I want to make sure nobody was caught in security downstairs.

MR. CARROLL: I believe Mr. Quinlan is on his way over, Your Honor, but we can proceed.

THE COURT: But you don't believe anybody's downstairs?

MR. CARROLL: Not that I'm aware of. No. They were allowing anybody to enter.

THE COURT: I was asking them to let anybody on this case to enter.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: They did, so. They asked. They were very pleasant.

MR. CUMMINS: There was essentially no security this morning.

THE COURT: When you came.

MR. CUMMINS: When I came.

THE COURT: Was there security when the rest of you came?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Yes. In fact, they asked if we were going to Your Honor's courtroom.

THE COURT: I just wanted to find out. I had spoken to the sheriff. I had described the court reporter and asked that they let her equipment in and to try to accommodate everybody so we would not be delayed this morning.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We appreciate that, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Mr. Brandfonbrener's here as well, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you want to be identified, sir?

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: Good morning, Your Honor. Eric Brandfonbrener. I represent the five new directors.

THE COURT: Okay. I don't have five new directors in front of me right now.

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: On the L case.

THE COURT: I don't have five new directors in the L case.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, respectfully, you do, and we want to address that.

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: Or, let me clarify.

THE COURT: I don't have a Court order that shows that leave was granted to file an Amended Complaint. And I have what has come to me from the Law Division. And what's come to me from the Law Division is a file that shows that apparently a motion had been made for leave to file.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, they've all appeared. They've all --

MR. CUMMINS: -- made jury demands.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: They've made jury demands. They joined in the Motion to Transfer.

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: We did not join in any motions.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Excuse me. Mr. Brandfonbrener didn't. They've appeared. They've filed jury demands. Several of the new defendants have joined in the Motion to Transfer to you urging that it was the same case. They can't on one hand claim that they're not before the Court and at the same -- well, hold on. Why don't we address this.

THE COURT: I'm not saying anything. I'm looking at you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, Your Honor, made a -- I assume has made a statement which we think is incorrect, so we wanted to correct that. And we'd be happy to provide Your Honor with authority that by appearing generally before a Court and filing pleadings, which they did, which included a jury demand, you obviate the need for summons, service, or anything else. You can voluntarily appear before the Court. So therefore, you heard -- we can have it read back to you. I appeared just said, for the five new directors. So they've appeared and they've brought themselves into this case.

THE COURT: Well, the five new directors may or may not have filed an appearance.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: They did.

THE COURT: There's no order in this case striking that appearance.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Nor are we moving to strike it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That appearance is of record and, Counsel, I believe was introducing himself. I was merely saying -- and you're going to have to tell me if I'm wrong -- there has been no order entered granting leave to file an Amended Complaint and there is no complaint currently on file in this case involving these folks who voluntarily came, apparently, and filed an appearance.

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: That's correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Is that correct, Mr. Novoselsky?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: No, ma'am. Very, respectfully. There's a question which I don't think we can get to yet because I don't believe we can go behind the motion for change. If Your Honor insists that I go behind the motion for change --

THE COURT: I'm not insisting on anything.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Then I respectfully disagree with Your Honor. There was an Amended Complaint filed. Judge Gardner gave us leave to do so. There was a question as to the Order, which we never resolved. Everybody can shake their head all they want, Your Honor. I'm trying to answer the Court's questions. I'm also suggesting the Court cannot go behind the motion, and I don't want to waive anything.

THE COURT: Counsel, just so I have records, your name again is?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: David Novoselsky.

THE COURT: Your name again?

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: It's Eric --

THE COURT: Eric? I'm sorry, I can't hear you.

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: Eric Brandfonbrener. B-r-a-n-d-f-o-n-b-r-e-n-e-r.

THE COURT: Okay. We need to take --

MR. BRANDFONBRENER: And, Your Honor, your assessment of the case is correct. We are unsure what the status of the pleading was.

THE COURT: I don't need to hear anything more.

I just wanted to know if you're here, you're welcome to be here. I need to go ahead with the motions that I have in front of me.

The first motion in order is a Motion for Substitution as a matter of right. And I have received that motion. I have also received and viewed from Mr. Cummins case law in support of that motion and I assume you've all seen his case law also.

And I have received the Terra Foundation's opposition to that as well as the plaintiffs' opposition to that. And I know that the time is short because these matters were put on my calendar yesterday with the anticipation that this Court would stop everything, decide this motion, and you would either stay here for a TRO or go elsewhere for a TRO because you have the desire to stop a meeting that's supposed to take place at 10:00 this morning. So that is why I wanted to read the case law. And that is why I wanted to have an opportunity to see what both sides were saying.

Time is short, so the plaintiffs did not have an opportunity to file a memorandum. I had the benefit of reading the defendants' memorandum. I want to ask the plaintiffs, have you been able to distinguish the cases that the plaintiffs -- I'm sorry, the defendants have cited, particularly the Marshall Savings versus Henson case and Village of Wilsonville versus SCA?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, we're prepared to argue this morning.

THE COURT: Go ahead, please.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Although I would ask you for the materials I just handed you because part of them were my notes.

THE COURT: I handed it back to you, sir, and your notes are on the bottom and I didn't look at them. It is one page and it has some handwriting stuff and I handed it right back.

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, it would have been on the motion that he put in front of you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I handed you a copy of Brandfonbrener's appearance. I apologize. My co-counsel absconded with it. I apologize.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, Mr. Novoselsky is going to argue this. I need to clarify one point, if I may.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. CUMMINS: You said that we filed some authority in support of our motion. We didn't file any authority in support of our motion. Our motion should be granted as of right. That's our position. We cited that authority to show what the law is in contradistinction to what was cited by the respondents to the motion.

THE COURT: I asked you to drop off any law you wanted me to read for today. You dropped this off.

MR. CUMMINS: I wanted to clarify, that's all.

THE COURT: I read this. I assume you're citing this in support of your motion.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, I'll address that.

THE COURT: That This is the authority that addresses your motion. What else would you have given it to me for?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, maybe there is a technical nicety that Mr. Cummins gets hung up on. The fact of the matter is, that under the established law, which is reflected by those cases, you have no discretion. You may not look behind this motion.

THE COURT: Then I can look at the cases, right?

MR. CUMMINS: Of course you can.

THE COURT: And you brought them to my attention, and so I said you cited them in support of your motion. What's wrong with that?

MR. CUMMINS: Okay. Well, it's simply a matter we cited them to respond to the authority that they cited which has nothing to do with the issue before this Court. That's why. And Mr. Novoselsky will address that. It's maybe a technical nicety. But some reviewing court may question someday about Mr. Cummins believing that he had to file supporting authority on a Motion for Substitution as a matter of right, which we do not. That's all. Thanks, Judge.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, let me begin briefly. I agree with my co-counsel. This is a motion which does not require proof of anything other than the issue of whether or not it is filed in a timely fashion.

Your Honor has made no rulings in this case. This is not the same case. With all due respect, I don't think the Court can even consider the arguments raised in opposition. The only inquiry a Court can make is, have I made any rulings in this case? The Court is aware that it has not.

THE COURT: Can't I decide whether or not I have made rulings in related cases that are substantially the same?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: No, ma'am. Very respectfully. Even the cases that Your Honor questions.

First of all, this is not the same case. The cases don't say if they have some relation that a motion for change as a matter of right, not as a matter of prejudice, can be granted after a ruling.

First of all, Your Honor has made some -- I'd like to correct some statements Your Honor made before we began but which were on the record.

First of all, we have -- in the original Complaint, let's call this Terra II, but it isn't. It's not captioned as that. It's captioned Tucker versus Buntrock, 01 L 9112. The parties are not and have never been identical. We keep forgetting that Mr. Ryan and Mr. --

THE COURT: Perkins.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: -- Perkins were not parties before you.

THE COURT: I know.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Mr. Perkins was a lawyer.

THE COURT: Still is.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: So the suggestion -- still is. So the suggestion that this is the same case and the same parties falls on its face. It is not a refiled case. It is not the same case. It is not even arguably the same case. We can't wave our hand and say well, on the merits, Mr. Ryan and Mr. Perkins shouldn't be here, because that's going behind the motion. So the suggestion made to the Court that this is the same case under a different title is wrong as a matter of fact.

Now, as a matter of law, Your Honor, if Your Honor will recall, and, again, our first position is -- if Your Honor wants additional argument, I'll present it -- is Your Honor can't look behind the case. All the Court can do is say, it's a different case. That's the Greiman -- the case we gave you with Judge Greiman where the public guardian said, members of family, these are all the same judges. These are related cases. Judge Greiman said, you know what? Related is wonderful. It's a far more recent decision, but so what. The rule says the party has a right to a change. And simply because you're arguing that they're related or they're similar or judicial economy or the nonsense we heard before Judge Evans originally and then Judge Mulhern. Well, Judge, you know, Judge Kinnaird spent all this time on Terra I and we have -- it's related. They argued related. Not the same case. It was transferred as related. They always treated it as a different case. They didn't file a Motion to Dismiss saying it's the same case. Nor could they.

So there is no case in Illinois that says, simply by virtue of similar subject matter, automatic change must be denied. Wilson doesn't say that. No case says it. The case that we've given you and the statute itself, the statute itself, more importantly, grants an absolute right. But assuming Your Honor wants to go behind that, and I sense Your Honor does because you asked me to distinguish Wilson and the other cases.

Let's go behind Terra I, for a second. Your Honor entered a Consent Judgment. That is not a ruling of the Court. We provided that authority. Consent Judgment is merely a private Settlement Agreement, binding upon the parties that executed it. The authority we filed in detail opposing the Motion to Transfer Terra II here was never distinguished nor criticized. Nor could it. It says that a trial court that enters an order on the Consent Judgment makes no finding of law or fact. It merely approves a private settlement. It further says that the parties that don't sign that agreement are not bound by the ruling, nor has the Court made any findings as to them. No contrary authority was ever cited. More importantly, Your Honor --

THE COURT: Did those cases involve any situation where parties were before a court and they were saying, don't sign the Consent Judgment. There's something wrong here. There's been a breach of fiduciary duty. There's been coercion. This is an improper settlement. Those issues were briefed and argued before the Court, and the Court went ahead and signed the Consent Judgment?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, then that's interesting, Your Honor. Because first of all -- well, now we're clearly going behind --

THE COURT: I want to know did any of those cases that you cited in the -- whatever the proceedings or motions were before Judge Mulhern and Judge Evans, did they involve anything close to the facts in this case?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well then, Your Honor, now I'm getting --

MR. CUMMINS: Yes.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Please. Now I'm getting back -- you're asking us to argue Terra I, which is not -- first of all, there's a Notice for Appeal. The issue of that order is now in the Appellate Court. Your Honor had no jurisdiction to do anything.

THE COURT: I'm not asking you to argue Terra I. I'm asking a question.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Yes, you are. The answer is yes.

THE COURT: You don't have to answer if you don't want to.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: The answer is, yes, those cases dealt with parties who had not agreed to the Consent Judgment, who had opposed it, and then the issue became whether or not they were bound or somehow affected, and the reviewing court said absolutely not. The Consent Judgment is not a finding of the court. It is not binding on anyone who doesn't execute it. Nor can it be.

More importantly, Your Honor, and, again, over our objections, what you said, and we've cited this transcript, when we asked in Terra I --

THE COURT: I'm sorry, you cited this transcript where? I don't have a brief from you, because I don't know what you're talking about.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Because we don't believe Your Honor should be reviewing matters that took place -- we don't want to argue the merits of this case. But in Terra I, Your Honor, when Mr. Cummins wanted to file the counterclaims, it would have been similar, or the related matters, although not identical. Your Honor refused to do so and said, I'm not barring you from filing another action against anyone you want. All I'm doing is signing this Consent Decree. Your parties aren't affected by it. You can file whatever lawsuit you want.

Now what they're saying is, Judge, you weren't right. They didn't object to that, we pointed out. And we've also cited -- there's a brand new Supreme Court case that came down in the last six months that said the same thing. When you stand in a court and don't object, you're acquiescing.

THE COURT: I don't think they're saying -- I haven't gotten the merits of this case, that you couldn't file another lawsuit.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We did.

THE COURT: I think what they're saying is you filed another lawsuit and it needs to be here -- apparently the other judges have decided that -- and that you don't get a substitution as a matter of right. That's what they're arguing today.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: If that's what they're arguing. Then, Your Honor, you have in essence -- then it's the same case because then our rights have been decided. Then what you're in essence saying is we have no right to a change because it really isn't a new lawsuit. Either it's a new lawsuit or it isn't. Either Your Honor should have -- what Your Honor perhaps should have done and maybe what they should have agreed to was when we wanted to file counterclaims to be plaintiffs to object to what they were doing, you were induced by the defendants -- excuse me, the plaintiffs in that case, not to permit us to do so. You were told, go someplace else and file another lawsuit. Which we did.

Now what they're arguing to you, in essence, is, no, this is the same case. Because Illinois law says if it's a new action, you have an absolute right to take a change. They're saying, oh, no, it's really the same case, Judge, because it's related. So what you really were doing was ruling on the rights of my clients. Let's forget that it's a Consent Decree that they didn't consent to. Let's forget that we induced you not to permit them to file what they now claim is this case. Because that's what they're arguing. That somehow you did rule on matters relating to these cases. To this case. Terra II. And what they're also suggesting, and I'll go back to the Stambaugh case, if Your Honor agrees with them, everything that follows thereafter is void.

THE COURT: I'm aware of that. Thank you.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And in Stambaugh, 14 years later, the Supreme Court, in its opinion, said, you know what? Fourteen years -- no one's even arguing this, the Supreme Court said. Guess what? Everybody goes back to square 1. And we're talking about millions -- Mr. Perkins, in his pleadings on standing, said millions of dollars of public funds are being spent in attorneys' fees. And more importantly, if you assume this is related and you deny our motion, everything that goes forward from today in both cases would be a nullity. And who's going to end up paying millions of dollars --

THE COURT: I'm sorry, everything that goes forward in both cases?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, if Your Honor says we have no right to a change because this is in essence the same case -- now, the statute doesn't say if it's a related case. Nor does the Wilsonville case say the statute has no impact if you can argue that the two cases are similar or related. In fact, Judge Greiman pointed out quite the opposite.

But if that's their position, Judge, that because there's an exception to the statute which isn't written, and the cases we point out say the statute should be liberally construed in favor of granting it -- not doing what they're doing. I man, You Talk about forum shopping, they're apparently convinced, and I believe improperly, that somehow Your Honor is going to do whatever they want, so they want to stay here because they want to risk millions of dollars in funds. Because I saw some of the fee petitions. And they know that if their -- if Your Honor agrees with them, everything's wasted from today on forward. Millions of funds, dollars of funds for this Foundation disappear.

And what they're arguing is not a case that's even arguably on point. They're not pointing to a statute. They don't distinguish the authorities we've given you. They don't even -- they suggested to you that -- yesterday, you were in here. You asked a question. I'll show you how wrong they are and how willing they are to induce you into error, or lead you into error. The Court said, and this is yesterday in response to a comment from Mr. Carroll.

"So I don't have to worry right now that Mr. Donnelley, Ms. Forster and Mr. Hamada and all these other people aren't properly represented by counsel because I don't have them as parties right now. Is that right?

"MS. STONE: Right.

"MR. SCHUMANN: That's right."

Not only do you have new parties, but they have all filed appearances in Terra II. The 01 Law Division case.

THE COURT: They might have filed appearances, but that doesn't make them a party.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Yes, it does. And if the Court wants to focus on that --

MS. STONE: Your Honor, Sidley, Austin never filed appearances. We're also named as defendants in the Amended Complaint.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I didn't say Sidley & Austin did, Your Honor.

MS. STONE: We have not appeared. We have not accepted service.

THE COURT: You're getting sidetracked. I still want to go back to the question, and maybe I missed it, but I don't think it's been answered, and it was my initial question. And that is, can you distinguish the cases that they are primarily relying on? The Marshall case and the others. I understand all these cases talk about the general proposition that a substitution of judge is a matter of right before anything is done and, you know, that's an important rule. And I appreciate it. And I understand that if I make the wrong decision here, and if it is -- and if it ultimately is, you know, reversed, I understand this -- this kind of an order is, itself, non-appealable. Can we all agree on that?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Unless you certify it.

THE COURT: So the case has to go ahead. And if I'm wrong, everything after that is for naught. I understand the importance of this. And I understand what the cases say.

But there are cases that have been cited by these defendants.

MR. CUMMINS: They're not relevant, Judge, and I'll tell you why.

THE COURT: That's what I'm trying to get at.

MR. CUMMINS: All right. Now, I'll get to it.

THE COURT: There was a different case --

MR. CUMMINS: They were prejudice cases, number one.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Right.

MR. CUMMIN: They're prejudice cases. Not cases as of right.

They were untimely motions, number two.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Right.

MR. CUMMINS: That's the distinction. The authority we cite is authority with respect to motions as of right.

Justice Bilandic points out all of the arguments that they make -- and particularly in the cases that we presented to you last evening -- and there's a host of other authority. Remember, we had a half hour to pull those cases together to get them to you. And it is clear that notwithstanding a perceived lack of judicial economy, notwithstanding the fact that there may be inconsistent rulings by another judge to whom the case is assigned because the substitution is granted, notwithstanding the fact that there may be some inefficiency in the justice system, notwithstanding all of those considerations, the rule is the rule. We have a new case. We have new parties who have appeared. We have new parties who have accepted service. We have new parties who are identified as to claims that were never before this Court. We were foreclosed by this Court from having any findings made. We were foreclosed by this Court in Terra I from asserting any claims even arguably related to the Terra II claims.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And, Judge, that's exactly --

THE COURT: Was the Wilsonville case a case involving prejudice? Or was it a matter of right?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: It was decided on the issue of prejudice and untimeliness. None of which --

MR. CARROLL: Prejudice --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I assume I can complete my sentence.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, was it a matter of right or prejudice?

MR. CARROLL: Prejudice.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: It was prejudice. And the issue

there was not only did you prove prejudice, but was it timely.

Justice Greiman, in the case we gave you yesterday, specifically goes through every one of the arguments that they've presented about -- Mr. Cummins is correct. We have a case right on point where Mr. Murphy, who is very eloquent. I mean, he's been my opponent. Patrick Murphy usually doesn't miss much of anything as far as his arguments. Whether they're right or not is a different story. That opinion goes through virtually all the claims presented to you exhaustively and disposes of them and says, wait a minute. Let's stop reaching around looking for reasons to deny things. It's an absolute right. Let's not tell u judicial economy. Let's not say related. Let's not even say it's the same family. Let's not even say there's six other cases in front of that judge and here's one family member who wants to take a change. The Appellate Court said, you know what? You go.

But more importantly here, Your Honor, so the record is clear, we don't think we should be behind this. But let's focus on exactly what happened.

We cited the Auten case in opposition to being here which says you can't take inconsistent positions. Illinois Supreme Court. They opposed us presenting these matters to you in Terra I. They wanted a Consent Decree. You were induced to, very respectfully, Your Honor, disregard what we believe are the rights of our clients because you were told, Judge, it's just a settlement. It's a Consent Decree. It's not affecting them. You were induced to say, you know what? They can go file another lawsuit in another case and argue their rights. And you refused to permit us to file this.

What do we now find? They're arguing that this is really the same case that's related. You're the only person who can hear this case. And somehow, the statutory right, which these, our courts, have long held cannot be questioned and are absolute should somehow be set aside because you really did work on this case, Judge, and you really did make findings of fact -- that's not what the law says. You really -- this is really the issues you already decided, except you have different parties. You really did pass upon something related to our clients on the merits, even though they wouldn't let you. I mean, this is absurd. It is absolutely absurd.

And then on top of it, so the record is clear, the issue of what you did in Terra I is presently in the Appellate Court. The law says you are out of jurisdiction to do anything that even arguably impacts upon that ruling.

Yes, I will agree, Your Honor, that the issue of attorneys' fees is still before this court. So the only thing -- what they really want to do, Judge, so we understand where they're going, this is not only forum shopping. This is an effort to say nothing can be ruled upon. Because if you get into a TRO here which deals with some of these issues, the argument is made, we've waived our right to appeal because now we're going into the merits.

THE COURT: I don't understand when you say they're forum shopping.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I'm glad I'm amusing Ms. Stone, Your Honor. Let the record reflect she's laughing in light of all that's going on here.

THE COURT: But I don't understand what you mean when you say they're forum shopping. You filed a lawsuit in another division.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Because they wanted to be here.

THE COURT: You filed a lawsuit in another division.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: After you told us to file another lawsuit. Which we did. What they're saying is you really should have been before Judge Kinnaird all along. Judge Kinnaird should have let you file it. Because otherwise you would have allowed the counterclaim and there wouldn't have been a second lawsuit.

But they induced you to say, go someplace else. File another lawsuit. What they're now telling you is what you really said, Judge, was you're here on this lawsuit, your claims are here, go ahead and file them. So forum shopping means, you know what? We think Judge Kinnaird has really already made decisions in our favor. We want to have the case here. So they tell Judge Gardner it was your case.

He got our motion two minutes before he saw it and said, oh, this is a Terra Museum case. That's Judge Kinnaird. He says, you know what? I'm sending it over there. They go to Judge Evans and say, Judge Evans, this is the same case.

THE COURT: Did you object to that?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Of course. Of course.

MR. CUMMINS: Of course.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: And we objected in front of Judge Evans. They stood there and said it's the same case. It's the same case. Judge Kinnaird worked on this for months. Judge --

THE COURT: I'm sorry, could you pronounce it correctly? It's "Kin-nared."

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize.

THE COURT: And every time you say "Kin-nard," I'm thinking of that --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, if Your Honor will recall, when we weren't judge and lawyer, it wasn't that name and I remember the other name. I apologize.

THE COURT: Well, if you could pronounce it correctly --

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize.

THE COURT: -- it's just distracting me and I don't want to be distracted from your legal argument. Go ahead, please.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize to Burke, too.

They kept arguing it was your case. That you'd already resolved these issues. That these matters had already been resolved. We politely tried to point out was that what they were doing was talking out of the other side of their mouth. We're not here to argue the Motion to Transfer.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We're only here to argue, but they're trying to go behind everything and say, Judge, this is the same case. You can't look at it.

THE COURT: I think the answer to my question, which is really all I wanted you to say, because I read this stuff, is you distinguish their cases based on timeliness and that they were prejudiced. Is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, Judge.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Yes, ma'am.

THE COURT: I'd like to hear from this side for a few moments.

MR. CUMMINS: But, Your Honor, may I make one other just concluding remark?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CUMMINS: The cases, which we weren't required to present, because this is a matter of right, and this entire half hour that we've spent is unnecessary and inappropriate, most respectfully --

THE COURT: Why would it be inappropriate any time, sir, to advise a Court about the law?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, because this Court knows --

THE COURT: Why is that --

MR. CUMMINS: I'll tell you why, Your Honor. You asked a question and I respond to questions when judges ask them of me. You know, better than anyone in this courtroom --

THE DEPUTY: Mr. Cummins, lower your tone.

THE COURT: Just a little bit.

MR. CUMMINS: Excuse me. Thank you.

You know better than anyone else in this courtroom that this is a new case involving new parties. There's no doubt about that. You know you've made no rulings in this case. You know that the literal application of the statute grants us a Motion for Substitution.

Now, once you grant that motion, if somebody wants to complain about it or seek reconsideration or do something of that kind -- which would be folly -- let them do that. And that's why I said what I said.

What has happened here, Judge, and Mr. Novoselsky said it straight, what has happened here is that we have been forced to present authority to you simply to respond to the authority that they cited which has nothing to do with the issue before this Court.

So I just wanted to clear that up.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, the authority that they cited to me has to do with the issue about whether or not a party in these circumstances gets a substitution as a matter of right.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: No. The cases they cite do not deal with a matter of right. They don't deal with -- this is a timely motion as a matter of right. The cases they cite are cases that deal with the issue of timeliness, which is not here, and they have not even raised it. And those were cases where it was an issue of change for cause. I.e., prejudice.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Now the statute is very clear on its face.

THE COURT: I need to hear from them now.

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, I think we need to get back in focus on what this motion is. We were here on their motion that they filed on Wednesday. We responded on Thursday. And I guess they wanted to respond to any of our cases because we filed a response. So I think the issue that we're not here on is the relatedness issue because Judge Mulhern already heard a very long argument on that on Monday and she's made a determination that this case is related and that it's related to it. And, in fact, it may be identical to Terra I. And she had the pleadings. She had the file. She had the Complaint. She had the judgment, Judge. She was able to make that determination.

THE COURT: She did not consolidate them. She kept them as separate and --

MR. CARROLL: There was no motion in front of her to consolidate, Your Honor. And there's an issue on consolidate, whether this Court can consolidate a case with another case that's on appeal. So that issue is not before the Court and really bears no relevance to what we're talking about today.

THE COURT: So they're two separate cases. Two separate case numbers. And there has been nothing except this motion, in point of time, put in front of me by the plaintiffs. So we have no timeliness issue here, right?

MR. CARROLL: We do have a timeliness issue, Judge. And I think what plaintiff is actually trying to do is ask you to read words into the statute. It says here specifically under the substitution of judges, under 5/2-1001 (a)(2)(ii) that an application for substitution of judge as of right shall be a motion and shall be granted if presented before the trial or hearing begins and before the judge -- before -- excuse me, before the judge to whom it is presented has ruled on any substantial issue in the case, or if it is presented by consent of the parties.

Our position, Judge, is that it is a timely issue. That you have already ruled on a substantial issue in the case. It doesn't say that it has to be in the same case. You have ruled on a substantial issue in this case. In Terra I, in your consideration of whether Mr. Perkins and the Attorney General coerced a settlement and -- coerced the settlement and also the validity of that Consent Decree, whether it was valid agreement among the parties, you ruled on substantially the issues that they have presented in Terra II.

You, in directing -- or in suggesting that they could file another lawsuit certainly didn't suggest that they file it in the Law Division. You certainly didn't suggest that they file this specific lawsuit. That was their right.

Now it's our right to defend that, Judge. And we brought it back before the Court because it should be before the Court because the pleadings that they have filed are related, if not identical to, as Judge Mulhern has filed.

THE COURT: Are any of the cases that you've cited cases involving substitution as a matter of right?

MR. CARROLL: No, Your Honor, because the statute -- the two cases that we filed were under the prior Act.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CARROLL: But the --

THE COURT: And you haven't found anything under the current Act that talks about substitution as a matter of right where the judge has maybe decided a similar issue in another case or this issue, maybe -- let's look at Count I of this Complaint. Count I of this Complaint, you look at it and it looks like, yes, I've already decided that, by implication, if nothing else, in Terra I. Okay.

Any of the cases which you cited deal with that kind of situation?

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, I think you have to look to what the statute was on prejudice at the time. The statute of prejudice at the time was that if a plaintiff made a bare allegation of prejudice and it was timely filed, they were automatically entitled to a change as of right. That really isn't much different than the situation we have here, Your Honor, where as a right, they can come in and say it. They don't have to allege prejudice.

But in both the prior statute and the current statute, both of them have to be done in a timely manner. And that's exactly what Wilsonville and the Marshall case stand for.

THE COURT: Okay. Tell me what they could have done more timely. They went and they filed a separate lawsuit. They filed it someplace else. They couldn't have made -- they had no reason to make the motion in front of Judge Gardner, so Judge Gardner decided he shouldn't hear the case. It gets sent to the presiding judges to do what they do with it. And all of a sudden, the case finally is now in front of me for the first time yesterday. I've made no rulings on the case, on that case, 01 L, whatsoever.

MS. STONE: Your Honor --

THE COURT: I have indicated, by final order in the other case, something. But I've made no rulings, technically, on their case. How could they have done anything more timely than what they're doing?

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, Your Honor, we're arguing that the case was brought in the wrong place and they're not entitled to a substitution as of right under the circumstances in this case.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, where should they have brought that case?

MS. STONE: Your Honor, can I address that, please? I'm sorry, I don't mean to step on counsel's toes.

The problem, Your Honor, may be with the precise lawsuit that they chose to file. What they are, in essence, doing is rehashing, relitigating, in essence, taking a collateral appeal of matters you already dealt with in Terra I.

THE COURT: I agree. I don't disagree at all. Especially in regard to Count I. I think Count I may, in very fact, be a collateral attack on my order. And it may or it may not be. But my initial reading of it, that's what it looks like to me.

Okay. But they have a right to file a lawsuit. Now, they may want to amend it. I haven't seen the Amended Complaint or the proposed Amended Complaint. They may want to amend it. I know that they have a five-count Complaint here. And their five counts, as I look at them, Count I looks like I pretty much decided that, and that may be a straight collateral attack. Count II, the ultra vires, breach of duty, inducing a breach of duty, I don't know that I have made any definitive rulings on those legal issues.

And 1983 I haven't dealt with at all.

MS. STONE: But, Your Honor, in all due respect, that's not what the case law says. It's not that you needed to have absolutely decided each and every issue. It's that they are not allowed to test the waters. That's the standard. They are not allowed to have found out what your attitude is about any portion of the case. That's the Peterson case that says if --

THE COURT: I understand. But they tried to bring this lawsuit before me, a counterclaim, and I didn't let them.

MS. STONE: I understand, Your Honor. The point was, they did not renounce any legal rights that they might have by the fact that other parties entered into a Consent Judgment. We all understood that. The mere fact that they may have some legal rights, as a philosophical matter, does not mean that they necessarily have the right to file this precise document that they are trying to seek to file first in Law Division and now are desperately trying to get away from you. Because it is nothing more than a rehashing of what you have already ruled.

And the case law, Your Honor, makes it clear that if you have formed an attitude about some portion of the case -- it doesn't have to be the totality of the case -- some portion of the case, the right to change venue no longer exists. That's the Peterson case we've cited to you.

Now, with respect to your specific question about Wilsonville and Marshall Savings & Loan Association, those cases are on point, Your Honor. It is true that they were brought pursuant to the prejudice statute that was then in existence at the time as opposed to the substitution of right. With all due respect, Your Honor, that is a distinction without a difference in this precise situation. And let me explain why.

The reasoning behind those cases is the exact same reasoning that applies in this situation. If, in fact, someone has had an opportunity to test the waters, to find out how a judge is likely to rule on any portion of his case, he cannot then invoke this statute -- whether it's under the rubric of prejudice or whether it's under the rubric of a substitution of right -- because that is to engage in nothing but unabashed forum shopping. And the case law is quite clear. Not just Marshall and Wilsonville, but the Barnes case, the Peterson case says that you can't use this rule to judge shop to find a jurist who is favorably disposed to your action. As Barnes said, that would subvert the entire trial system.

And, Judge, we have another aspect here. We not only have the attempt to really deal fair and square with what the substitution of judge rule does and doesn't allow, it allows you to change if it's a blank slate. It doesn't allow you to judge shop. It doesn't allow you to judge shop, even when the ruling has been made in a related case rather than the same case.

In addition to all that, we have this other consideration which is the General Order 22, the related case for reasons of judicial economy. If you were to now allow them to substitute and go to another judge after Judge Gardner has said on the record that he believes this should go back to you -- and you can quote him -- and after Judge Mulhern, as acting interim Presiding Judge, Law Division, has determined that this case may be, quote, related if not identical, unquote, to now allow them to subvert the orders of those two jurists, and to subvert rule -- General Order 22 --

MR. CARROLL: 22 and 23.

MS. STONE: -- by allowing them to take it to someone else, would be to subvert the whole nature and rationale for the related back rule. The related back rule says, we understand our jurists are overworked. We understand there's a need for judicial economy. We understand the fact that Judge Kinnaird has dealt exhaustively with this case for a full year. I believe Mr. Novoselsky might have said something in error that he didn't think Your Honor had actually really worked on these issues.

Your Honor, I believe, indicated she spent her entire weekend reading every piece of paper they filed. Your Honor allowed us five hours of argument before her on the 24th of July. That was the third hearing you had given them on this same objection to the supposed illegality and coercion of the Consent Judgment that is the gravamen of this new lawsuit that they are attempting to file. Your Honor has dealt exhaustively with these issues. You have bent over backwards to give everyone an opportunity to be heard.

What we are saying is at this juncture, to allow them to start again, to go after the same issues in front of another judge would be, in fact, disrespectful to Your Honor because it would be allowing them to try to avoid what might very well be the collateral estoppel effect of what you've already ruled.

It doesn't have to be completely identical, Your Honor. The Marshall case and the Wilsonville case both had a different party in the second proceeding. And nevertheless, the courts found, even if there was an additional party, it was still related; and therefore, the ruling in one case meant that it was untimely in the second case. That's precisely what we have here -- you have going on here.

The fact that it might have been under the prejudice standard as opposed to the of rights standard doesn't matter when the fundamental issue of timeliness is the same.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Judge, under Daniel R., the judicial --

THE COURT: I'm working on this side now.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize. I'm merely responding to her comments, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. The legislature has decided to give us a statute. A judge substitution as a matter of right. And as it gets applied, pretty much the first time somebody comes in on a case and says, you know, Judge, I want a substitution. We give it.

We do this all the time in declaratory judgments on insurance policies where I may have ruled on an issue in a dec action in another case and someone has the same dec action now that gets filed and by the luck of the draw, they get stuck with me. Well, they pretty much know how I'm going to rule on this issue. So they may come to me and they may ask for a sub with the hope that one of my 13 colleagues might give them a different kind of an order. And as we see and we apply that statute, we grant those orders as a matter of right. Even if it is on the same identical issue. It can even almost be sometimes the same or related kinds of parties. And they have a right to try elsewhere.

Now, I'm not saying that there's any merit to their Count I. I'm not saying that that can be interpreted as anything other than a collateral attack on my decision. And I have been baffled in looking at the timing here. I look at a case that I made my decision on July 26 and there's no appeal and there's no Motion to Stay and I don't know -- I still don't know because I can't tell from these papers that I got for today if there was or there wasn't a Board meeting on August 1.

MS. STONE: There was, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: There was, Your Honor.

THE COURT: But then on July 31, instead of appealing, they filed the different lawsuit. And I'm not quite sure what happened between August 1 and August 14 or 13 because I was out of the country. But there's a meeting that was obviously scheduled for August 14, because you gave me the agenda yesterday. There's a hearing on August 13 before Judge Gardner. It's a Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order to try to stop the meeting on the 14th. Somehow the meeting on the 14th doesn't go ahead. There's no Court order that says anything about that. And it isn't, then, until the end of August, August 22, that my case, the Chancery case, even gets appealed.

And to this date, I still don't know whether there's ever been a Motion to Stay presented in front of one of my colleagues or in front of the Appellate Court. And what is being asked in Count I here is essentially a Motion to Stay my decision.

MS. STONE: Right.

THE COURT: And that's what's being asked in the Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order, essentially. And I am -- you know, I'm baffled at the procedure. But nonetheless, you look at -- behind -- you look at the situation. The legislature says, automatic matter of right. And by the luck of the circumstances, they did. They filed it elsewhere. Against their objection, it gets transferred through the system. It's back to me.

Because of that, do they lose that automatic right?

MR. SCHUMAN: May I make a comment, please, Your Honor?

MS. STONE: Sure.

MR. SCHUMAN: I want to emphasize why Marshall is exactly on point notwithstanding the statute. The basis for moving cases from judge to judge has changed a little bit but the threshold of how you get there has remained the same in all the statutes. The issue of timeliness which is present here was the same then prior to Marshall, during Marshall, and after Marshall.

The linchpin of Marshall, in that case, they were talking prejudice because that was the test they had to meet. But the Court asked the question. Here's how we decide if we let you in that door. Has there been a substantive issue decided by a judge? And in Marshall, for example, there were three related cases. And the issue simply had to do with, has the Judge ruled on a substantive issue? And one of the defenses in saying we still get to move it is that there was one -- the third case had had no decision. The first two had. Interestingly, the third case had different parties. Mostly the same, but a couple of different ones. This circumstance precisely.

And the Court went into the exact analysis which we have asked you to follow which is entirely unchanged throughout the entire juris prudence as this statute has changed, which is, and there are two or three key sentences here that they observe. "All three cases primarily involve the same custodial taking." That was the issue in Marshall. "To insist that they are not related seems to be unrealistic." It asks the question are they related. Identical wasn't essential. Are they related.

They go on slightly later. "FSLIC was not named in the first two cases, but is included as one of the defendants in the case at Bar." And then they go on. "As counsel for FSLIC points out, except for different courtroom numbers, this case, the custody case, the liquidation case, and the case presently on appeal to this Court are one integrated series of legal disputes." That's what you have here. Involving generally the same parties and issues. Even though FSLIC was not a named party in the first two proceedings.

The point is, this case, what is here before you, is the Marshall case. The Marshall case was approved and confirmed 13 years later. You've got two different districts of this -- the First and the Fourth District saying the exact same thing. None of this has ever been changed. What has happened is, is what the law is under this. And it is logical, when you think about why all these -- it's the only way to reconcile all of these rules. The rule about relatedness would be entirely out the door. The rule about inconsistent verdicts would be entirely out the door. The rule that would -- that would prohibit parties from simply taking a voluntary non-suit and refiling because all of a sudden the slate is wiped clean would be entirely out the door.

What has happened here is that the issue of timeliness is before you and it's identical to Marshall because the point is, it's no longer timely once you have ruled on issues in this case. Which you did for one year.

MS. STONE: And, Your Honor, no one is disagreeing with Your Honor's general statement that the substitution of right is an important rule. If you were to rule today that they should proceed in front of you, you would not be destroying the substitution of right rule. You would not be preventing someone in an insurance declaratory judgment case from taking a substitution of right in front of you for whatever reason.

All you would be saying is that in this precise situation, in this case, where you've spent a year on Terra I, where you had eight hours of arguments spread over three different court hearings on the question of coercion and -- alleged coercion and alleged illegality in the Consent Judgment, and what the Consent Judgment does or doesn't do in terms of the powers afforded to the Foundation, that to allow them, now that they have tested the waters with you and have seen your attitude, to forum shop by going to a different judge would be improper. That's all you're ruling would be doing.

So I don't think you need to be concerned that you're somehow flying in the face of the substitution of right rule. You're not. You're adhering to it precisely. The substitution of right rule requires that it be done timely. That it be done when it is truly a blank slate. We are not a blank slate, Your Honor. We're a year into this. We're millions of dollars into this.

THE COURT: How do they get a blank slate in the new lawsuit that I asked them -- or not asked them. I told them they could file?

MS. STONE: No, you --

THE COURT: How do they get a blank slate?

MS. STONE: But with all due respect, Your Honor, you didn't say take your counterclaim and slap -- take out the word "counter" and put the word Complaint and go file it in the Law Division. You never did that.

What you said was, there's nothing to be counter to at this point in time, gentlemen. Mr. Cummins, you're coming in with a counterclaim on the very day I'm dismissing a case. If I dismiss the underlying case, there's nothing for you to be counter to. Now, I'm not saying that you are without legal rights. You may do whatever you choose to do. That's all you said.

You did not invite them to take this precise pleading that merely rehashes all the arguments they presented to you at length, exhaustively, on July 24 and prior, and to go and try them in front of a different judge. You didn't invite them to take a collateral attack on your ruling. They have the appeal process.

THE COURT: Did I make a decision about whether or not there was a breach of fiduciary duty?

MR. CUMMINS: No, Judge, you did not.

THE COURT: I'm just asking this side over here still.

MR. CUMMINS: Okay.

THE COURT: I'm looking for the prayer for relief in Count 1. And obviously I approved the settlement. So I don't believe the settlement is unlawful. I said that I don't believe that it's a product of conflict of interest. And that's the second thing they want in Count I. I'm not quite certain whether I dealt with the fiduciary duty issue. I think you might have argued it --

MR. CARROLL: Certainly issues in the case and in our Complaint, Your Honor. But in the mediation and settlement, we didn't reach that.

THE COURT: But in approving the settlement --

MS. STONE: Excuse me. I think with respect to Stephanie Pace Marshall and Ted Stebbins, I don't know if you precisely used the term breach of fiduciary duty. I'd have to go back and look at the transcript again.

But surely you rejected the notion that they sold out their soul or they sold out the Foundation or that they breached their fiduciary duty by deciding, for whatever reasons they decided, to enter into the Consent Judgment. So I think you did address that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And I don't believe -- you also want me -- they want me to make a declaration in this case that there was unlawful interference by the Attorney General. And I did not reach any 1983 issues or anything like that, but I felt that the conduct of the Attorney General in the mediation and settlement process was not of such a nature that it should preclude the Court approving this settlement.

MS. STONE: That's right.

THE COURT: So to that extent --

MS. STONE: I believe you said it wasn't even a close case. I believe you used that comment, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And certainly I did not -- they're asking in this case for me to say that the settlement was incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad. And I thoroughly went through that one.

MS. STONE: Correct.

THE COURT: And thoroughly said that that is not incompatible with the purpose. And we went ad nauseam through what the Foundation can continue to do throughout the United States and abroad.

MS. STONE: It was quite helpful. It wasn't ad nauseam, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So I know that most of the issues that -- if not all of them in Count I, I've adjudicated already. And even -- and so let's just say, even saying that, I'm troubled by another issue. And I know that the plaintiffs don't want me to get behind this and even talk about this. They want to come in with the statute and say matter of right, we get to go someplace else. Okay?

But I'm troubled by another issue. And that is having both cases on this calendar. I'm in a position right now where a Chancery case is decided and all I have is fee petitions. And I'm going to be spending months trying to adjudicate what is now in excess, I believe, of $3 million in fee petitions.

In order for me to do that, I'm going to see, in camera, all of Sidley & Austin's bills. I'm going to see them unredacted. I'm going to see other unredacted bills. I'm going to see a lot of things that may or may not impact this second case. Why should -- and I don't know what this second case is going to end up looking like. I would think quite a lot of what this second case has that has been filed should be summarily dismissed. But there may be a second case that they may be able to convince some other judge should withstand the time of a Motion to Dismiss and would go ahead. I'm going to see a lot of this stuff, am I not? And isn't it going to be extraordinarily difficult for me to jockey both cases?

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, could we --

THE COURT: Wait one second.

MR. CARROLL: Your Honor, you cannot avoid what the statutes are and what the law is to -- in the name of avoiding judicial economy. You are the judge that heard the other cases. I think it's imperative, and for the sake of judicial economy, and also the fact that there could be inconsistent rulings that would come out of another court hearing in this case.

THE COURT: I understand that. And that -- that happens at sometimes. I don't want inconsistent rulings. And I don't want to have judicial resources wasted. But that's why we have an Appellate Court to sort out any problems with an inconsistent ruling.

MR. CARROLL: That's an interesting point, too, Your Honor. They have filed a Notice of Appeal, but they haven't even filed their statutory fee nor have they filed their docketing statement. So I guess there's a question of whether they're going to pursue their appeal in the Appellate Court. They haven't complied.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We are. And that's not jurisdictional, as counsel knows. And Mr. Quinlan used to sit in the Appellate Court and he's aware that it's not.

THE COURT: We don't have to do personal attacks.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: It's not personal, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Please, Mr. Novoselsky, let me finish with this side.

MR. CARROLL: And you have to come back to the statute that we're talking about here, Your Honor. It says, any substantial issue. And you have ruled on a substantial issue in this case. And therefore, under the plain language of the statute, they're not entitled.

Mr. Novoselsky keeps coming back to the Daniel R. case. The Daniel R. case was decided on some facts that were very endemic to the judicial court, Your Honor. There was five separate petitions filed for five separate children for neglect and wardship. And the Court said this isn't a case of In Re: family of. This is the case of an individual. And that each one had to be decided on separate facts and couldn't be decided on the family issues.

So that's why that case was decided the way it was. It wasn't specifically based on relationship. It was because it was the juvenile court statute and the Juvenile Court Act and endemic to that system. And that's why that case was decided.

And coming back to the Wilsonville case exactly, Your Honor, at that point in time the statute, all you had to allege, was that there was prejudice on behalf of the judge. That's the same type of Act that's here now. We're entitled to it as a matter of right. Those two concepts are exactly the same. There was only an issue of whether there had been a substantial ruling or a ruling on any substantial issue in the case. And that's why Wilsonville, even the Attorney General was involved in the Wilsonville case, Your Honor. There was absolutely no ruling in the second case. It was a brand new decision just like we're talking about here. It was a second case filed, it was a related case, it went to the same judge, and the judge said, even though there's been absolutely no ruling on the second case, any substantial ruling, you can't forum shop, Judge. It has to come back to me and I have to accept responsibility and take this case.

MS. STONE: May I make two points, Your Honor? The first one is I think Your Honor has gone through the first count trying to figure out where the overlap is between the proposed new lawsuit and the old lawsuit. And I would just reemphasize, Your Honor, that it is not necessary that the cases be absolutely identical. That's not what the standard is. It's merely if there has been some attitude formed or some opinion expressed on any portion of the case.

THE COURT: Let me try something else. Do they have a motion -- a right, an absolute right, under this statute to get a substitution from any judge in our system except me?

MS. STONE: No, Your Honor. At this point in time --

THE COURT: Do they lose their right to get it from me by virtue of the fact that Judge Gardner sent it to Judge Evans who had Judge Mulhern hear it and who sent it back here? Do they lose that right?

MS. STONE: The reason they've lost the right for a substitution of judge now in front of any judge. Not just in front of you, but in front of any judge. The reason why it has to come back to you, is because of what they have filed in this proposed new lawsuit. This proposed new lawsuit is nothing more than a thinly disguised sideways appeal of your entry of the Consent Judgment.

THE COURT: And can't that argument, it's a sideways appeal, be easily made in front of another judge who says, look, I'll look at the Consent Decree, I'll look at the first case, I'll look at the second case, and, yes, this count, this count, this count goes. It's a sideway appeal. They want to stop a Board meeting. If they want to stop the new Foundation as consisted -- the Foundation as now consisted from proceeding, they've got to go the right way. A separate lawsuit is not the way to do it.

MS. STONE: But the point is you, above anyone else in this courthouse, knows whether or not it is, indeed, a collateral sideways appeal as we argue or whether it is a brand new lawsuit that they're entitled to bring as they argue. You know because you've spent the time. And both Judge Gardner and Judge Mulhern have recognized that. Your colleagues have said -- and I'm sorry they're dumping on you this way, Your Honor --

THE COURT: I don't feel dumped on. I'm just trying to follow the statute.

MS. STONE: All right. They have said that for reasons of judicial economy, for the very reason that we have a General Rule 22, that you are in the best position to make that decision.

And that brings me to my second point, Your Honor. I wanted to engage you on --

THE COURT: All right. But let's assume. Let's assume -- and I haven't seen the Amended Complaint. I have seen this Complaint. Some of this Complaint, maybe all of it, but some of it, will withstand a Motion to Dismiss. And there will be something, maybe here, on this Complaint. And I say it may be because I haven't evaluated it and I haven't looked at the legal issues yet. But there may be something here. There may be something more here. You've all --

MS. STONE: Maybe. You don't know yet.

THE COURT: -- you've all mentioned that the plaintiffs want to bring in Winston & Strawn or they want to bring in the other Board members or whoever. I don't know who they want to bring in, and I don't know what their causes of action are going to be. But let's assume they do that.

There's going to be things I -- there have to be things that perhaps I haven't dealt with. And they have, under the statute, an automatic substitution as a matter of right. And what you're saying is, once it's in front of me, they lose that right. But if they had it in front of any other judge, they'd have that right.

MS. STONE: But the problem is it's not that you know too much. It's that they're regurgitating things that you've heard before. Perhaps throwing in something new. Perhaps not. But the gravamen of what they're doing is a rehash.

And I do want to engage with Your Honor on this issue that I think you're concerned about. I think you're concerned that you, in essence, know too much. That you're going to have privy to information from Terra I and that's going to affect you and influence you on Terra II. That's precisely the point, Your Honor. That's not a detriment to you keeping the case. That's precisely the reason why you must keep the case. It's the fact that you have waded into this and spent hours of your life engaging in this. That you have listened to the allegations made against Stephanie Pace Marshall. Against Winston -- against Ted Stebbins. Against the Attorney General. Against whoever else they're throwing into their newest conspiracy theory. You've listened to that, and you've dealt with it. And, yes, that may very well influence your opinion on Terra II. It may. But that's what happens when people choose to do collateral attacks or rehashing of issues they've already brought in front of the judge. That's a collateral estoppel effect, Your Honor. It's not a fault that you know too much. It's not an undermining of the substitution of right rule. That's just the reality of what happens when they try on three occasions in front of you to say that this was a Consent Judgment brought about by coercion, and you've said no, and they now bring a separate lawsuit.

Had they brought a lawsuit, let's say -- I don't want to dream up legal theories for them -- but had they really brought up a separate lawsuit against someone, anyone, that was truly new, where you were truly dealing with a blank slate, they would have a right to go in front of a new judge. They wouldn't get related back to you. But as two other respected judges have recognized, what they have done in this Terra II is, in the words of Judge Mulhern, related if not identical.

So that's why what you know in Terra I probably may very well influence what you do in Terra II. That's not your fault. That's not something you should be worried about. That's just the reality of a regurgitation lawsuit.

MR. SCHUMAN: Your Honor, one important point. When you asked the question about what other judge, this statute is very judge specific. The test is, we're going to look at the judge who is sitting here with the case, and we're going to ask the question, has she ruled or indicated a ruling on a substantive issue in the case? And that's where we are.

Now, the issue in play is, is it identical? Or what leeway is there? This case is the same. You can fudge over how many words are different, even over how many counts are different. But everybody in the world knows it's the same. Knows it's another attack. That's indisputable. And so the issue that all the case law that's been presented to you unrefuted says, is that when you have related cases of that kind, if you, the judge with the new case in front of you, have ruled on a substantive issue or indicated a position on a substantive issue, you must keep that case. That's what the case law says.

MR. CARROLL: And just to answer your question directly, Judge, could another judge hear this case and hear this motion? The answer is no because the State of Illinois, in its statutes, this court in its rules, have set up specific public policy that if a case is related to the case that's already been filed, it has to go back to that judge under the rules.

So even if this went to another judge and they made this motion, that judge would have to reconsider the relatedness issue and send it back to you. And that's exactly what's already happened here. So to allow another judge to hear this would vitiate the entire relatedness statutes and the rules of this court which require this matter to go back to the same judge when it's related.

So the answer to your question is, no. Some other judge shouldn't hear this motion. It should be sent back to you under the rules. They chose the allegations of their Complaint. They're bound by those allegations of the Complaint specifically.

THE COURT: You said something about a related statute.

MR. CARROLL: Well, the relatedness.

THE COURT: You're talking about the relatedness Rule 22?

MR. CARROLL: The relatedness rules. Excuse me, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Can the Circuit Court relatedness Rule 22 trump the statute as a matter of right?

MS. STONE: We're not saying trump.

MR. CARROLL: We're not saying trump, Your Honor.

MS. STONE: Because the statute has a timeliness component to it. I'm sorry, I stepped on counsel's toes again.

MR. CARROLL: Go ahead.

MS. STONE: The substitution of right statute has a timeliness requirement. That statute, as interpreted, as interpreted by the courts, all say that you get substitution of right when it's a blank slate. You don't get it once you've tested the waters. The cases say, even if you had nothing more than a pre-trial conference with the judge, and the judge has expressed an opinion, that would be enough to preclude you to have a right to a substitution of judge. That's a timeliness point, Your Honor. And that's a mere pre-trial conference two or three months into the case as opposed to what happened here where I think we said 30 contested motions, by my last count -- I might be off, give or take a dozen -- where you've spent a year on it. You have waded far, far into this case.

So we're not talking about using the relatedness rule to trump the statute. We're saying, first start with the statute. The statute is first and foremost a timeliness requirement. It says, blank slate? Yes, you get it. Once it's no longer a blank slate, once there's writing on that slate, you don't get it.

We're saying the General Rule 22 is, in addition, a secondary reason why you should keep it. Because to allow forum shopping here would be to vitiate that rule.

THE COURT: Let me just hear from Mr. Novoselsky briefly.

MR. CARROLL: Just one last point, Judge. There was many, many cases, too, that say the relatedness issue should go back to the judge. So that's the public policy of the State. It's in the law of the State. It's in the cases. So the rule of this court also supports the law of the State which is the public policy of the State.

THE COURT: Mr. Novoselsky?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor --

THE COURT: As you can see, my 9:15 call is waiting.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I know that. And they know they have a 10:00 meeting. They're trying to talk it to death.

I'll tell you exactly what the law says. This judicial economy argument, the related arguments, is the Daniel R. case. It's the exact same argument Mr. Murphy made. General Rule 22 doesn't --

THE COURT: Is that the Greiman case?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Yes. General Rule 22 as a Circuit Court rule that doesn't have anything to do with a change of judge. It has nothing to do with it at all, Your Honor.

And let me correct something else that has been argued to you. You specifically said -- it is a Consent Judgment. They keep saying, Judge, you made these findings. You made these rules. They've induced you today. I heard part of what you said, and I apologize for it.

THE COURT: You keep saying they induced me. Nobody induced me to do anything.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Fine, Your Honor. Your Honor, a Consent Judgment is not a finding of the Court. Your Honor mad a statement that, well, you know, I've already decided this issue. You very specifically in the transcripts, you permitted no discovery in Terra I. You permitted no filing of the counterclaim. And now to suggest you were very specific to say that somehow the counterclaim -- or they're saying, well, this is just the recaptioned counterclaim. You didn't permit that to be filed. You permitted no discovery whatsoever.

And for them to now suggest that somehow you're the only judge who can hear this because you've already resolved these issues in relation to my clients not only flies in the face of logic, but flies in the face of the very reason that they told you not to permit my clients to have their day in court.

That Consent Judgment was not signed by my clients. And to now suggest that it binds them in any fashion at all is really where we're not only losing Illinois, but we're losing basic fundamental due process.

THE COURT: Okay. Let's go back to the substitution issue.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Rule 22. The substitution issue is absolute. I keep hearing this, well, it says there has to be a blank slate. It doesn't say that. It says, in the case. The relatedness cases they cite do not deal with this statute. They do not deal with the substitution of right.

The judicial economy argument has been dealt with very specifically not under the Juvenile Justice Act. Mr. Murphy tried to drag in the Juvenile Justice Act. Justice Greiman says, wait a minute.

We're dealing with a statute that is clear on its face. It doesn't say we can get around it for the purpose of judicial economy. It doesn't say, if it' related, relatedness statute trumps it.

They keep arguing policy. That's been rejected. They've not answered your question directly. Does the statute say that if there is a related matter, the statute doesn't apply? No, it doesn't. The statute is clear.

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Novoselsky, I'm going to grant your motion.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Thanks, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And I -- even though you didn't, quote, cite any cases to me, I read all the cases that you dropped off last night. And I believe that they are persuasive. And I believe that I have an obligation to grant this motion. Even though this has been sent to me as a related case, I have an obligation under the statute to grant it because I think that you have a right to take a substitution from the first judge that you bring it up to as a matter of right. And the fact that I heard the other case doesn't mean that you lose the right in front of me but you have it in front of everybody else in the courthouse. And I'm troubled by that. The legislature has passed that statute. The courts seem to be saying -- seem to be going in your direction.

Looking at their cases, I realize that they are under the prior statute. And their cases are very persuasive when you look at them that way under the prior statute. I think your motion is timely. But I believe that this statute enacted after their cases doesn't talk about relatedness. The local rule says related, sends it back here.

But I anticipated when you were all here on August 29 or September 7 and you told me that you were going to Judge Evans and that Judge Gardner had sent this case over there and there was going to be a big argument, I said to myself right at that time, well, if they decide to consolidate the cases, I'll have 'em both. If they decide to send it as a related case, there's going to be a Motion for Substitution. And I anticipated there was going to be one. And I can understand why you may want to make one because I personally believe that this second lawsuit, at least what I have seen of it, except for perhaps the last count, is a collateral attack on my decision.

I think these arguments should be in front of the Appellate Court. Not before another judge in the Circuit Court. I don't know what your Amended Complaint's going to say. But you have a right, if you get an order from a court granting you leave to file an Amended Complaint, you will have leave to file an Amended Complaint if someone says you can. And you have a right to take a substitution and you've used it up in this case and, well, this is only Mrs. Terra's motion. Is that correct?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's correct, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: That's right.

MR. CARROLL: Defendants also have a right.

THE COURT: Well, I understand that. And this case is in the Chancery Division now.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: At this point.

THE COURT: And so it will be sent back to the Presiding Judge for reassigning.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. And I don't know when it will get reassigned. That's not up to me.

I need to have you writ an order. I need a draft order that states that the Court has heard argument on this. I'd like to have two orders. One order that says the Court has entertained argument of counsel for in excess of one hour and has considered the case law that has been supplied by all parties and the Motion for Substitution, as a matter of right, is granted for the reasons set forth on the record.

And then I need the second order transferring it to the Presiding Judge.

My apologies to my 9:15 call. As the foreclosure attorneys know, I try to get you all in and out of here so you can get to other courtrooms on time. I'm not going to be out for about another ten minutes. So if you need to check in elsewhere, please do so. I want to get these orders signed for these folks, and so they have to be drafted.

Thank you.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held before Judge Lester D. Foreman at 9:40 a.m.)

THE CLERK: 01 L 9112. Tucker versus Buntrock.

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, this was sent here by Judge Kinnaird. Here is the underlying order explaining the basis for the Court's ruling.

OFFICIAL REPORTER: Could I have counsel's names in the case, please?

MR. CUMMINS: Oh, I beg your pardon. Robert Cummins on behalf of plaintiffs.

THE COURT: I'll send it to the clerk's office for reassignment.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Well, what we'd ask Your Honor to do, Judge Kinnaird very specifically asked us to add language -- in fact, she added the language to the order as to whether the matter should be sent by you to another judge in this division or whether it should be reassigned to the Presiding Judge of the Law Division.

We would ask the Court to reassign it to the Presiding Judge of the Law Division. It was originally filed as a Law division case. Judge Mulhern, sitting for Judge Evans, over our objection, transferred the Law Division case to Judge Kinnaird as related to the pending Chancery case.

Judge Kinnaird has now granted our motion for a change. Our position is, since it's a Law Division case, there is a jury demand, it was transferred to this division by the Chief Judge of the Law Division based on the issue of relatedness.

Judge Kinnaird heard the arguments claiming that the relatedness required the two cases be heard together, rejected them, reassigned the matter here, and she added the language herself giving Your Honor the decision as to whether it should remain within Chancery or go back to Law Division. I would suggest it go back to Law Division. Their argument is Judge Mulhern decided that issue. I think Judge Mulhern should decide whether it should stay in Law Division or come back here for reassignment. Rather than have Your Honor act, in essence, as an Appellate Court to determine what Judge Mulhern --

THE COURT: But I've wanted to do that all my life.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, if Your Honor runs, I'll be more than happy to support you, although I'm not a resident of the State.

THE COURT: I think the first thing I have to determine, irrespective -- and I have all the respect in the world for Judge Kinnaird -- I have to decide is this a Chancery case or is this a Law case? The fact that you tell me it's a Law case doesn't make it a Law case.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We'd have to argue that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You don't have to argue it. I don't need any arguments. All I need to do is look at the Complaint.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: The file was sent over here, Your Honor. I want to hear argument.

THE COURT: Are there any people here who think it's a Chancery case?

MS. STONE: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: Yes, Your Honor. No question. That's why we made the Motion to Transfer.

MS. STONE: Good morning, Your Honor. Susan Stone --

THE COURT: Wait a minute. Hold on. This isn't a circus. Everybody just better behave themselves.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, I can -- I've got a copy of the Complaint, if you'd like.

THE COURT: Who are you?

THE CLERK: I brought the file over.

THE COURT: Oh, you're the carrier.

MS. STONE: Your Honor, Susan Stone, representing the Terra Foundation. If I may be heard for one moment, Your Honor.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor --

THE COURT: If I hear you, I'm being unfair to him because I said I was going to look at the Complaint.

MS. STONE: Okay.

THE COURT: If I wanted to hear argument, I would have heard his argument. If I sound testy, I'm sorry.

MR. CUMMINS: Your Honor, may I make one observation?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Hold on.

THE COURT: Now, wait a minute.

MR. CUMMINS: Thanks, Judge.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We apologize, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's entitled, "Complaint at Law." I guess the thing I should be looking at is what's the relief that's being prayed for.

Well, I'm looking at Count I. It says declaratory relief. We generally think of that as being a Chancery proceeding, although it's a hybrid.

Well, if this is a Law case, why would the representation be made that there's no adequate remedy at law?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, I can answer the question. I don't want to be rude to the Court.

THE COURT: Yes, I want you to answer it.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: This was filed originally in the commercial litigation division. There is a request for damages and a jury demand. We have asked for injunctive relief as part of the case. No question about it, Your Honor. I'll stipulate that a portion of the case, a portion, is Chancery in nature. However, we do seek damages for breach of fiduciary conduct which as Your Honor knows is heard by the commercial litigation division.

THE COURT: I've decided this is a Chancery case. I'll assign you to another chancellor. It will have to be sent down to the clerk's office and looked at at the appropriate time.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Those are our copies of the orders.

MR. CARROLL: That's my copy.

THE COURT: I think that the way this happens is I guess you get informed by the chief judge's office or somebody as to where it's assigned.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Your Honor, we have -- yes. And we have an Emergency Temporary Restraining Order relating to a matter that's going to take place at 10:00 this morning.

THE COURT: Before who?

MR. CUMMINS: Well, before whoever with get.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Whoever this is assigned to.

THE COURT: I think that will go forward as soon as the computer can give you a judge.

MR. CUMMINS: I understand. And that's why --

THE COURT: Do you know how to handle that?

THE CLERK: Yes.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, those are our copies of the orders.

THE COURT: Please give these people all the courtesies to which they're entitled.

THE CLERK: You bet.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That one, too, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: It's all yours.

THE CLERK: The original order I believe is up there. That's the original.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held before Judge Bernetta D. Bush at 10:25 a.m.)

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Let me try to make --

THE COURT: What is this here for?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We may not need the file, Your Honor. Let me explain the situation.

This was originally filed in the Law Division. The defendants -- for the record, this is Tucker

MR. CUMMINS: Tucker.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Tucker versus Buntrock. It was originally filed in the Law Division, Your Honor. The defendants asked the Presiding Judge of the Law Division to transfer it to this division as it related to a matter pending before Judge Kinnaird.

Judge Kinnaird, this morning, granted a motion -- our Motion for Substitution of Judge and it was then reassigned -- sent for reassignment to Judge Foreman. Judge Foreman sent it down to the randomizer, and the randomizer sent us to Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We originally had a motion which we wanted to present this morning to you for a temporary restraining order to prevent a Board meeting that was supposed to take place at 10:00. Given the fact that the argument before Judge Kinnaird dragged on, the matter was reassigned, my co-counsel and I, Mr. Cummins, feel that if we were asking Your Honor to enter a TRO now, which barely maintains the status quo for a meeting that was scheduled to begin 25 minutes ago, that we might be leading the Court into error, even if Court was inclined to rule on it. So rather than present that, we're not going to present that to the Court.

The only other matter that is pending in the case that I'm aware of is our Motion to Disqualify Sidley & Austin. They have not filed a response. I don't know if they want to file a response or we should simply set that matter down for hearing before the Court.

THE COURT: Okay. Let me have everybody, first of all, tell us who's here. Let's find out who is in this case.

MR. CUMMINS: Robert Cummins, on behalf of the plaintiffs, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Can I have the case number, please?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I apologize, Your Honor. This is Tucker versus Buntrock, 01 L 009112. These are my only copies. I apologize, Your Honor.

David Novoselsky. I'm also for the plaintiffs before the Court.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCHUMAN: Your Honor, William Schumann on behalf of two of the individual defendants, Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, Dr. Theodore Stebbins,

And I need to tell Your Honor at this point that on behalf Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, we are also exercising our right for substitution of judge.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Excuse me. Hold on. I presume those motions should be in writing. Obviously we're not going to ask the Court to -- I assume you want him to submit a motion in writing. We're not asking Your Honor to rule on anything this morning. If they want to submit a written motion, I think it would be better for the purpose of the record. I'll leave it up to the Court.

THE COURT: Do you have your motion written down?

MR. SCHUMAN: Well, what happened was, Your Honor, in light of my fear that he might say that, I took their motion and I modified it as I was sitting on the bench, on the chair. I haven't shown it to anybody but Your Honor. However, it is exactly their motion but my client.

THE COURT: Well, what I will allow you to do, because -- what I will allow you to do is I'm not going to accept this, but I will allow you to do a handwritten motion for a substitution of judge, if that is what you wish to do. And I will -- I will assign it. Since whatever emergency you had this morning no longer exists, since you've apparently moved it over, but let me finish getting everything on the record. You're name?

MS. STONE: Susan Stone, Sidley, Austin on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

MR. IOPPOLO: Thomas Ioppolo, I-o-p-p-o-l-o, on behalf of Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins.

THE COURT: Okay. This is with the Terra Museum. Is that correct?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, Judge.

THE COURT: Fine. What's your name?

MR. QUINLAN: William R. Quinlan on behalf of Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz, et al.

MR. CARROLL: James Carroll also on behalf of those individual defendants.

THE COURT: I would have been happy to serve you, but I have no problem letting you go.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Your Honor, the record will reflect that you appear shattered by this matter.

THE COURT: I am shattered. I am absolutely shattered.

There is another order there for a transfer. Do your motion. Fill out the second transfer. And I will sign it and then you guys can get where you need to be so this matter can go on.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I presume it has to go back to Judge Foreman to go back to the randomizer.

THE COURT: To Foreman and then to the randomizer. That's correct.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: I should have brought my roller skates, Your Honor. Thank you.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were held before Judge Lester D. Foreman at 11:10 a.m.)

THE COURT: Yes, sir. May I help you?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: We're back, Your Honor, on Tucker versus Buntrock. The matter, pursuant to Your Honor's instruction, was randomly reassigned by the clerk's office who assigned it to Judge Bush. One of the defendants took a change. The matter has been sent back to Your Honor by Judge Bush for further reassignment.

THE COURT: I called Judge Bush's chambers, and her secretary is on the way here.

MR. CARROLL: She rode up on the elevator with us, Your Honor. I think she's right here.

THE COURT: See, I told you. That's very good service.

THE CLERK: Hi.

THE COURT: Okay. We're going to send you back down again. Thank you for coming up.

THE CLERK: You're welcome.

THE COURT: Why don't you save time. Can you take it down for me?

THE CLERK: They're ready to go?

THE COURT: Go down with them. That will save time.

THE CLERK: I'll wait.

THE COURT: We appreciate it very much.

MR. CUMMINS: Can we just --

MR. CARROLL: Do you want to let the courts take its course?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Why don't we just have it reassigned. It's 11 --

MR. CUMMINS: Just let it happen now, Judge.

THE COURT: You don't want to do it right away?

MR. CUMMINS: No, sir. I don't think there's that --

THE COURT: Why don't you go down there?

MR. CUMMINS: We'll wait for the judge and then we'll decide who wants to do what when. That's fine.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Which were all of the proceedings held in this cause at this time.)

DEFENDANT STEPHANIE PACE MARSHALL'S MOTION FOR SUBSTITUTION OF JUDGE AS OF RIGHT

Pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-1001(a)(2), defendant Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Marshall") submits this Motion for Substitution of Judge As of Right, as follows:

(1) This action was filed on July 31, 2001.

(2) Marshall hereby timely exercises her right to substitution of judge without cause as a matter of right pursuant to §5/2-1001 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

(3) Section 5/2-1001(a)(2)(i) states in pertinent part that "an application for substitution of judge as of right shall be made by motion and shall be granted if it is presented before trial or hearing begins and before the judge whom it is presented to has ruled on any contested issue in the case..."

(4) According to In re Domanguez, 145 Ill.2d 311, 319, 583 N.E.2d 555 (1991), the right is mandatory if made in a timely manner and in proper form and a trial judge has no discretion to deny it. No specific allegations of prejudice are required.

WHEREFORE, defendant Stephanie Pace Marshall respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order granting substitution of the Honorable Barnetta D. Bush and for an Order that the case be heard by some other judge pursuant to the Atty No. 90539 Statute.

DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S MEMORANDUM
IN OPPOSITION TO
PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO DISQUALIFY SIDLEY

Defendants Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall") are Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation"). Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall strongly oppose plaintiffs' motion to disqualify Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley") from representing the Foundation and urge the Court to reject plaintiffs' motion. We understand that the Foundation is filing a comprehensive memorandum in opposition to plaintiffs' motion, which will explain in detail why plaintiffs' motion should be denied. However, Foundation directors Stebbins and Marshall seek here to emphasize two arguments which are particularly powerful in refuting plaintiffs' effort to disqualify Sidley. First, the operative Illinois ethical rules are unambiguous that Sidley represented only the Foundation, not Judith Terra, in the litigation pending before Judge Kinnaird from which the present case is copied. Second, the Foundation would be severely prejudiced, both financially and substantively, if it is not permitted to continue to retain the counsel of its choice.

I. DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL ARE VITALLY INTERESTED IN, AND KNOWLEDGEABLE OF, THE ISSUES RAISED BY THE MOTION TO DISQUALIFY.

Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have served as directors of the Foundation since 1998. Dr. Marshall currently is Secretary, and is a past Treasurer, of the Foundation. As directors, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have been closely involved in the litigation known as Dean Buntrock, et al v. Judith Terra, et al., Case No. 00CH13859, pending before Judge Kinnaird in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division ("the Buntrock case"), since that lawsuit was filed in September of 2000. The Foundation was named as a defendant in the Buntrock case. The plaintiffs in the present case, Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson, each of whom were and continue to be directors of the Foundation, also were named as original defendants in the Buntrock case. See Affidavit of Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Stebbins Aff."), attached hereto as Exhibit A, ¶¶ 3-5; and Affidavit of Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Marshall Aff."), attached hereto as Exhibit B, ¶¶ 3-5.

During the course of the Buntrock case, Dr. Stebbins was elected by the Foundation's Board of Directors ("the Board") as one of two members of the Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee. In that role, he shared responsibility for directing the efforts of the Foundation's legal counsel, Sidley, and worked closely with Sidley, in the Foundation's defense of the Buntrock case. Stebbins Aff., ¶¶ 6-7.

The present case is practically identical to the Buntrock case. Stebbins Aff., ¶ 11; Marshall Aff., ¶ 9. See also discussion in the Foundation's Memorandum in Opposition to the Motion to Disqualify. In the present case, plaintiffs made Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall co-defendants along with the Foundation. Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are perfectly situated to fully understand the importance of Sidley to the Foundation's defense in this action. As continuing directors of the Foundation, who have the responsibility to protect the Foundation, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall want to let the Court know, as forcefully as they can, that they believe it would be wrong to disqualify Sidley.

II. THE ILLINOIS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT PROVIDE THE PRESUMPTION THAT SIDLEY REPRESENTED ONLY THE FOUNDATION, NOT JUDITH TERRA. PLAINTIFFS HAVE FAILED TO OVERCOME THIS PRESUMPTION.

A party moving for disqualification of the opposing party's counsel has the burden of showing the existence of facts requiring the disqualification. In re Conticommodity Services, Inc. Securities Litigation, MDL No. 644, 1988 WL 96179, at *2 (N.D. Ill Sept. 9, 1988). Here, plaintiffs' motion seeking the disqualification of Sidley is predicated on their contention that Sidley represented Ms. Terra in her individual capacity in the Buntrock case. However, Rule 1.13 of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct, entitled "Organization as Client," provides that when an organization such as the Foundation hires an attorney, the organization, not its directors, officers, or other constituents, is the client.

Rule 1.13(a) of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct states, in part:

> A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.

Rule 1.13(a). It is well settled that this rule, i.e., that an organization's lawyer represents the organization and not the organization's constituents, cannot be overcome merely by a director's assertion of her subjective belief that the organization's lawyer was simultaneously representing her in the same matter.

For example, in United States v. Keplinger, 776 F.2d 678, 701 (7th Cir. 1985), the court held that the subjective belief purportedly held by executives of a corporation that the corporation's attorneys represented them individually was insufficient to establish such a relationship. As the Keplinger court explained:

> [a]t least in the absence of any relatively clear indication by the potential client to the attorney that he believed he was being individually represented, we think no individual attorney-client relationship can be inferred without some finding that the potential client's subjective belief is minimally reasonable.

Id. See also In re Conticommodity Services, Inc. Securities Litigation, MDL No. 644, 1988 WL 96179, at*1 (Sept. 9, 1988)("corporate employee's subjective belief that he is individually represented is not sufficient to create such representation"); In re Grand Jury Proceedings, Detroit, Michigan, In the Matter of Lawrence S. Jackier, 434 F. Supp. 648, 650 (E.D. Mich. 1977)(no attorney-client privilege exists "in the absence of any indication to the company's lawyer that the lawyer is to act in any other capacity than as lawyer for the company in giving and receiving communications from control group personnel").

The text of additional sub-sections of Rule 1.13 underscores the presumption that a lawyer representing an entity represents only the entity, not the entity's directors or other constituents. For example, Rule 1.13(b) explains the obligation of a lawyer representing an organization who becomes aware that a director or officer of that organization is acting in a manner which could result in substantial injury to the organization. Under such circumstances, the lawyer is required to "proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization." In other words, the Rule contemplates that potential conflicts may arise between the entity and the person with whom the lawyer is dealing in connection with the lawyer's representation of the entity. The lawyer is not paralyzed by such a circumstance or required to abdicate his representation of the entity. To the contrary, the lawyer is to continue to act in a way which protects the entity and which is in furtherance of the entity's interests. Id.

Similarly, Rule 1.13(e) discusses the limited circumstances under which a lawyer may simultaneously represent both an organization and the organization's directors or officers in a particular matter. None of the Foundation's directors, however, sought such joint representation. To the contrary, it is unrefuted that Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson hired separate, independent counsel, the Shefsky & Froelich firm, to represent their individual interests at the very beginning of the Buntrock case. Indeed, they did so because Sidley explained that it would not represent them personally. Stebbins Aff., ¶¶ 8-9; Marshall Aff., ¶¶ 7-8. For the same reasons, Dr. Stebbins subsequently hired independent counsel to represent him personally when he came under attack from the plaintiffs in the Buntrock case. Stebbins Aff., ¶ 10. Accordingly, the record in this case demonstrates plainly that the presumption that Sidley represented only the Foundation was understood and honored by everyone involved.

In the face of the undisputed facts, Ms. Terra's recently annunciated, subjective belief that Sidley represented her in the Buntrock case, even though she admittedly hired Shefsky & Froelich to represent her in that case precisely because of the potential conflict between her personal interests and the interests of the Foundation, is wholly unreasonable. Ms. Terra admits in her affidavit that "[t]he Foundation's Board subsequently agreed to retain Sidley & Austin to represent the Foundation in [the Buntrock] litigation." Judith Terra Aff., ¶ 5, (Emphasis Added). Ms. Terra admits that she retained other counsel, Shefsky & Froelich, to represent her individually. Id. at ¶ 7. Accordingly, any purported belief by Ms. Terra that Sidley represented her was, and is, unreasonable, and cannot provide a proper basis for disqualifying Sidley.

III. THE DISQUALIFICATION OF SIDLEY WOULD CAUSE SUBSTANTIAL WASTE OF THE FOUNDATION'S ASSETS AND DENY TO THE FOUNDATION ITS RIGHT TO SELECT ITS COUNSEL.

In ruling on a motion to disqualify counsel, courts are mindful that:

> [Disqualification] is a drastic measure which courts should hesitate to impose except when absolutely necessary and disqualification motions should be viewed with extreme caution for they can be misused as techniques of harassment.

In re Conticommodity Services, Inc., Securities Litigation, MDL No. 644, 1988 WL 96179, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 9, 1988)(internal quotations omitted). Here, not only is disqualification of Sidley inappropriate, because no conflicting representations have been established, but it also would be highly prejudicial, and unfairly so, to the Foundation. Disqualification of Sidley would cause substantial harm to the Foundation. This case is practically identical to the Buntrock case. The vast knowledge that Sidley has gained during the more than one year in which the Buntrock case has been pending, concerning the complicated factual and legal issues involved in both cases, cannot be adequately recreated in new lawyers. Requiring the Foundation to obtain new lawyers would require undue and enormously wasteful expense, and substantial duplication of work, that is not justified or justifiable. Stebbins Aff., ¶¶ 11-12; Marshall Aff., ¶¶ 9-10.

It is inevitable that any replacement counsel, operating as it must without the experience and history with this case possessed by Sidley, which is so essential to the representation of the Foundation given the identity between this case and the Buntrock case, simply could not be nearly as effective as Sidley. Id. At bottom, plaintiffs' motion is nothing more than a litigation tactic, conceived solely to give plaintiffs an unwarranted, strategic edge in this case.

It would be wrong to deprive the Foundation of its choice of counsel. The operative law and the undisputed facts require that plaintiffs' motion be denied.

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons set forth in the Foundation's Memorandum, Defendants Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall respectfully request that the Court deny plaintiffs' motion to disqualify Sidley Austin Brown & Wood.

AFFIDAVIT OF DR. THEODORE E. STEBBINS, JR

I, Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr., on oath do hereby state the following.

1. I have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.

2. I am the Distinguished Fellow and Consultative Curator of American Art at the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard University. I reside in Brookline, Massachusetts.

3. I am, and since April, 1998 have been, a director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation ").

4. In my capacity as a director of the Foundation, I have been very much involved in the litigation known as Dean L. Buntrock, et al. v. Judith Terra et al, Case No. 00 CH 13859, pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division ("the Buntrock case"), since that lawsuit was filed in September of 2000.

5. In the Buntrock case, the Foundation was named as a defendant. Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson, each of whom were and are directors of the Foundation, were also named as defendants.

6. During the course of the Buntrock case, I was elected by the Foundation's Board of Directors ("the Board") as one of two members of the Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee. In that role, I shared responsibility for directing the efforts of the Foundation's legal counsel, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley"), in the Foundation's defense of the Buntrock case.

7. In my capacities as a director of the Foundation and as a member of the Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee, I stayed abreast of all important developments in, and relating to, the Buntrock case. I spoke regularly with Stephen Carlson and Susan Stone, the Sidley attorneys with primary responsibility for the defense of the Buntrock case, concerning a host of subjects relating to the litigation.

8. On several occasions, Mr. Carlson and Ms. Stone explained in telephone conferences and in-person meetings that Sidley attorneys represented, and were acting on behalf of, only the Foundation, not the individual directors, in connection with the Buntrock case and matters related thereto. They explained that the information Sidley obtained from the Board members relating to the Buntrock case would be received and used solely for the benefit of the Foundation and that the advice and legal counsel provided by Sidley in connection with the Buntrock case would be solely for the benefit of the Foundation.

9 Judith Terra never said anything in my presence which indicated that she believed that Sidley attorneys were acting as her legal counsel. To the contrary, on several occasions, Judith Terra referred to Brian Crowe of the Shefsky & Froelich law firm as her attorney. None of the other directors ever stated in my presence that he or she believed the Sidley attorneys were serving as his or her legal counsel.

10. During the course of the Buntrock case, allegations regarding my performance as Chairman of the Foundation's Collections Committee were made against me, personally, by the plaintiffs in that case. Susan Stone explained to me that this created the potential for a conflict of interest and that, as a result, I needed to retain independent counsel to advise me on the issues that pertained to me personally. Accordingly, I retained independent counsel. Ms. Stone explained that I should speak with my independent counsel concerning all issues relating to my personal interests, because Sidley represented only the Foundation's interests. I clearly understood that Sidley did not represent me personally. It was my distinct and clear belief, based on my frequent discussions with, and/or that included, Judith Terra, that Judith Terra understood that Sidley did not represent her individually, either.

11. I believe that the present motion to disqualify Sidley in the new action that has been brought by Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson against the Foundation and the Foundation's directors is being asserted for purely tactical reasons, i.e., to disadvantage the Foundation by depriving it of its very effective and able counsel. The Foundation would be substantially harmed if the disqualification motion is granted. This new case is practically identical to the Buntrock case. The vast knowledge that Sidley has gained during the more than one year in which the Buntrock case has been pending, concerning the complicated factual and legal issues involved in both cases, cannot be adequately recreated in new lawyers. Requiring the Foundation to obtain new lawyers would require undue and enormously wasteful expense, and substantial duplication of work, that is not justified or justifiable.

12. I believe that depriving the Foundation of its choice of counsel would be unfair in the extreme. As a continuing member of the Foundation's Board, and in my capacity as one of the two members of the Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee, it is my strong desire that Sidley continue as counsel to the Foundation in the new case as well as in the Buntrock case and all matters related thereto.

Further affiant sayeth not.

1. I have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein.

2. I am President of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, located in Aurora, Illinois. I reside in Wheaton, Illinois.

3. I am, and since 1998 have been, a director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation "). I am Secretary of the Foundation. I have also previously served as Treasurer of the Foundation.

4. In my capacity as a director and officer of the Foundation, I have been very much involved in the litigation known as Dean L. Buntrock, et al. v. 9. I believe that the present motion to disqualify Sidley in the new action that has been brought by Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson against the Foundation and the Foundation's directors will significantly harm and disadvantage the Foundation by depriving it of its most informed, effective and able counsel, thereby requiring the unnecessary outpouring of significant dollars. The Foundation would be substantially harmed if the disqualification motion is granted. This new case is practically identical to the Buntrock case. The vast knowledge that Sidley has gained during the more than one year in which the Buntrock case has been pending, concerning the complicated factual and legal issues involved in both cases, cannot be adequately recreated in new lawyers. Requiring the Foundation to obtain new lawyers would require undue and enormously wasteful expense, and substantial duplication of work, that is not justified, justifiable, or sound.

10. I believe that depriving the Foundation of its choice of counsel would be unfair in the extreme. As a continuing member and officer of the Foundation's Board, it is my strong desire that Sidley continue as counsel to the Foundation in the new case as well as in the Buntrock case and all matters related thereto.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' "EMERGENCY" MOTION TO DISQUALIFY

The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") hereby submits its opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency" Motion to Disqualify. Plaintiffs seek to disqualify the Foundation's counsel of choice, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley"), who have represented the Foundation in the various highly contentious and emotionally-charged lawsuits filed in the never-ending struggle for control of the Foundation. Plaintiffs claim that Sidley had an attorney-client relationship with Mrs. Terra in the first lawsuit filed in the litigation war over control of the Foundation and therefore should be disqualified as counsel in this case. That claim is untrue. There is no basis in law or in fact for plaintiffs' motion. Accordingly, this tired litigation tactic must not prevail and plaintiffs' motion to disqualify should be denied.

BACKGROUND

Sidley is counsel for the Foundation in the case of Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859, in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division before Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. (Affidavit of Susan A. Stone ("Stone Aff."), ¶ 3, attached hereto as Exhibit 1). In the Buntrock matter, two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, sued the Foundation, three of the Foundation's Directors (Judith Terra, Senator Alan Simpson, and Dr. Paul Tucker), as well as non-Board member Naftali Michaeli. (Id.) Throughout the course of the Buntrock litigation Sidley has only served as counsel for the Foundation and no other party to that case. (Id.)

The Foundation's Board of Directors retained Sidley to represent the Foundation in the Buntrock litigation in September 2000. (Id., Ex. A). Sidley initially reported to the then-President of the Foundation, to which the Foundation's Board had delegated authority for any and all actions regarding the litigation except final settlement pursuant to a resolution passed by the Foundation's Board at its annual meeting in September 2000 (Id.) Judge Kinnaird subsequently ordered the Foundation's Board to form an Independent Litigation Committee ("ILC") to handle the litigation and consider again retention of counsel for the Foundation. (Stone Aff., ¶ 3). In December 2000, the subsequently formed ILC confirmed the retention of Sidley as counsel for the Foundation in the Buntrock matter. (Id., Ex. B). Once the ILC was formed, it was in charge of the litigation and Sidley reported to and took direction from it. (Stone Aff., ¶ 3).

Sidley's engagement letter with the Foundation confirmed in writing that Sidley's "client in this matter will be the Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation" and that Sidley's representation was limited "solely to the representation of the Foundation in connection with the litigation Buntrock v. Terra, et al." (Id., Ex. C). Accordingly, Sidley filed an appearance in the Buntrock case only on behalf of the Foundation and issued legal bills for services rendered only to the Foundation. (Id., Ex. D).

Sidley never acted as counsel for Judith Terra. (Stone Aff., ¶ 4; Affidavit of Stephen C. Carlson ("Carlson Aff."), ¶ 4, attached hereto as Exhibit 2). Sidley did not enter an appearance on behalf of Mrs. Terra or perform any legal services for her. (Carlson Aff., ¶¶ 4, 6). Sidley never entered into an engagement agreement with Mrs. Terra or issued any legal bills to her. (Stone Aff., ¶ 4). Sidley never took any direction from Mrs. Terra. (Id.) Throughout the pendency of the Buntrock case, Mrs. Terra was represented by her own counsel, who entered an appearance on her behalf, performed legal services for her, and issued bills for those legal services to her. (Stone Aff., ¶ 5). In fact, the bills of the law firm that Mrs. Terra retained to represent her in connection with the Buntrock matter (Shefsky & Froelich, Ltd.) make clear that Mrs. Terra was in constant communication with her own lawyers. (Id., Ex. F). Specifically, those bills identify almost 70 telephone conferences or meetings between Mrs. Terra and her lawyers. (Id., Ex. F). Mrs. Terra was in weekly and sometimes even daily communication with her lawyers throughout the pendency of the Buntrock litigation. (Id.)

From the time Sidley was retained to represent the Foundation, Sidley made it clear to Mrs. Terra, as well as other members of the Foundation's Board, that the firm represented only the Foundation and not Mrs. Terra or any of the other Directors individually. (Id. at ¶ 6; Affidavit of Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Marshall Aff."), ¶ 7, attached as Exhibit A to Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Disqualify Sidley; Affidavit of Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Stebbins Aff."), ¶ 8, attached as Exhibit B to Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Disqualify Sidley). Sidley specifically informed Mrs. Terra that she should obtain her own counsel because Sidley could only act as counsel for the Foundation. (Stone Aff., ¶ 6). Mrs. Terra did just that. In fact, throughout the course of the litigation, Mrs. Terra retained no less than six different law firms to represent her. (Id. at ¶ 7). Mrs. Terra's choice of counsel was never dictated by Sidley. (Id.; Carlson Aff., ¶ 9).

Although Sidley attorneys had communications with Mrs. Terra during the Buntrock case, these communications were no different in nature from the type of communications Sidley had with other members of the Board of the corporation Sidley represented. (See Stone Aff., ¶ 9; Carlson Aff. ¶ 11). Indeed, Sidley had more frequent communications with other members of the Board, particularly the ILC members. (Id.) Sidley communicated with Mrs. Terra in her role as a Director and as a potential witness – not as a client. (Stone Aff., ¶ 14). These communications were not secret or confidential, but were rather shared with other members of the Board, particularly the ILC. (Stone Aff., ¶ 12). Mrs. Terra repeated the substance of her conversation with Sidley at greater length in public court documents filed by her own attorneys and in newspaper articles. (Stone Aff., ¶ 14).

Until recently, Mrs. Terra has never claimed to have an attorney-client relationship with Sidley. (Marshall Aff., ¶ 8; Stebbins Aff., ¶ 9 ("Judith Terra never said anything in my presence which indicated that she believed that Sidley attorneys were acting as her legal counsel."). To the contrary, "on several occasions, Judith Terra referred to Brian Crowe of the Shefsky & Froelich law firm as her attorney." (Id.) In fact, Mrs. Terra herself denied in a court pleading filed in the Buntrock case that any attorney-client relationship existed between her and Sidley. Specifically, she stated "Sidley & Austin has only appeared on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. . . . Plaintiffs' statements to the contrary are simply wrong and . . . could not have been believed to be well grounded in fact." (Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation, and/or Receiver, Ex. G to Stone Aff.). Mrs. Terra' recent attempt to disqualify Sidley is only being made after six other disqualification motions have failed. (See Exhibits 3-4). As Judge Kinnaird stated in rejecting Mrs. Terra's new lawyers' attempt to disqualify Sidley, "We've been through this Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it . . . Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation . . . and I don't see a conflict." (7/24/01 Transcript of Proceedings, pp. 14-15, attached hereto as Ex. H to Stone Aff.).

The Foundation will suffer substantial harm if plaintiffs succeed in disqualifying Sidley. (Marshall Aff., ¶ 9; Stebbins Aff., ¶ 11). This current litigation is practically identical to the Buntrock case. (Id.) The knowledge that Sidley has gained during the more than one year that it has represented the Foundation in the Buntrock and related litigation cannot easily be transferred to a new law firm. (Id.) The Foundation would incur an enormous amount of unnecessary expense and wasted time in educating new counsel if Sidley were unjustifiably disqualified at this juncture due to the litigation tactic of Mrs. Terra. (Id.)

ARGUMENT

Courts hesitate to disqualify a party's counsel of its own choosing "except when absolutely necessary." Schiessle v. Stephens, 717 F.2d 417, 420 (7th Cir. 1983). Attorney disqualification is a "drastic measure" which "destroys the attorney-client relationship by prohibiting a party from representation by counsel of his or her choosing." Schwartz v.

Cortellone, 177 Ill. 2d 166, 178, 685 N.E.2d 871, 877 (1997); accord, Weil, Freiburg & Thomas v. Sara Lee Corp., 218 Ill. App. 3d 383, 395, 577 N.E.2d 1344, 1353 (1st Dist. 1991). As the Illinois Supreme Court has admonished, "caution must be exercised to guard against motions to disqualify being used as tools for harassment." Schwartz, 177 Ill. 2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877 (emphasis added). "Our courts disapprove of the use of disqualification motions as a tactical weapon in litigation insofar as such motions can be misused for purposes of harassment." Weil, Freiburg & Thomas, 218 Ill. App. 3d at 395, 577 N.E.2d at 1353. This is particularly true here, where motions to disqualify counsel have been repeatedly used as a harassing litigation tactic by disgruntled minority members of the Foundation's Board seeking to impose by force their will upon the Foundation. (See discussion infra, pp. 12 - 13). Such a legal maneuver must not be allowed to prevail.

I. NO ATTORNEY-CLIENT RELATIONSHIP EVER EXISTED BETWEEN SIDLEY AND MRS. TERRA.

In blatant violation of Illinois Supreme Court Rule 137, Mrs. Terra claims she had an attorney-client relationship with Sidley without any good faith basis for making any such allegation, as she herself has acknowledged in prior Court papers. No such relationship ever existed. (Stone Aff., ¶ 4; Carlson Aff., ¶ 6). Sidley has never acted as counsel for Mrs. Terra. (Id.). Sidley never sent Mrs. Terra an engagement letter; never entered an appearance on behalf of Mrs. Terra; never gave Mrs. Terra any legal advice; never issued legal bills to Mrs. Terra; never took direction from Mrs. Terra; and never filed any pleadings or made any arguments on her behalf. (Stone Aff., ¶4). Throughout the Buntrock litigation Mrs. Terra had her own set of capable attorneys to represent her. Mrs. Terra's own attorneys, whom she hired, filed appearances on her behalf; filed pleadings and made arguments on her behalf; rendered legal services to her; and billed her for those services. (See Shefsky & Froelich bills, Ex. F to Stone Aff.). Mrs. Terra was in frequent communication with her lawyers – not Sidley. (Id.)

Astonishingly, Mrs. Terra herself has admitted in Court papers she filed that Sidley did not represent her or any of the other individual defendant directors in the Buntrock case. Specifically, in response to a previous motion to disqualify Sidley brought by plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz in the Buntrock litigation,[1] Mrs. Terra filed an opposition to that motion stating:

> "I. SIDLEY & AUSTIN DOES NOT REPRESENT THE DEFENDANT DIRECTORS.
> In charging Sidley & Austin with ethical violations, Buntrock and Gidwitz ignore the appearances filed in this very matter and claim that Sidley & Austin represents the individual defendants. (Motion, at p. 7). The law firm of Sidley & Austin has only appeared on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. (Exhibit A). Separate counsel has appeared on behalf of the defendant directors. (Exhibit B). Plaintiffs' statements to the contrary are simply wrong and, given the appearances that have been filed, could not have been believed to be well grounded in fact at the time the statements were made."

(Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation, and/or Receiver, Ex. G to Stone Aff. (emphasis added)). Mrs. Terra's previous admission that Sidley did not represent her in the Buntrock litigation makes clear that her current claim is a recent fabrication. See Snitowsky v. NBC Subsidiary (WMAQ-TV), Inc., 297 Ill. App. 3d 304, 515, 696 N.E.2d 761, 769 (1st Dist. 1998) (admissions of a party in a pleading are evidence of the matter admitted). As she has admitted, Mrs. Terra never had an attorney-client relationship with Sidley and her current claim to the contrary cannot be believed to be well grounded in fact.

[1] This attempt to disqualify Sidley in the Buntrock case was rejected by both Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court; the Illinois Supreme Court refused to hear it.

II. NO IMPLIED ATTORNEY-CLIENT RELATIONSHIP EXISTED BETWEEN SIDLEY AND MRS. TERRA.

Mrs. Terra also fails to establish the existence of any implied attorney-client relationship with Sidley. The "general rule is that corporate counsel does not become counsel for the corporation's individual shareholders and directors." Hoban v. Strata Marketing, Inc., 1991 WL 204965 *1 (N.D. Ill. Oct., 2, 1991); see also Illinois Rule of Professional Conduct 1.13. "There is normally no conflict of interest when a director sues a corporation represented by its corporate counsel." Hoban, 1991 WL 204965 *1. The reason for this rule is that anything the director previously told the attorneys for the corporation would ordinarily have been communicated to the attorney as counsel for the corporation. Bobbitt v. Victorian House, Inc., 545 F. Supp. 1124, 1126 (N.D. Ill. 1982). As a result a party trying to overcome this presumption has a heavy burden. Specifically, in order to establish an implied attorney-client relationship, Mrs. Terra must show that (1) she submitted confidential information to Sidley, and (2) she did so with the "reasonable belief" that Sidley was acting as her attorney. See Stopka v. Alliance of American Insurers, 1996 WL 204324 *3 (N.D. Ill. April 25, 1996).[2] Mrs. Terra cannot meet either of these criteria.

A. Mrs. Terra Never Shared Any "Confidential" Information With Sidley.

At no time did Mrs. Terra share any "confidential" information with any Sidley attorney. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 5; Stone Aff., ¶ 11). While Mrs. Terra states in her affidavit that she "shared confidential information on my legal status with Ms. Stone," such a vague, conclusory and unsupported statement (whatever it is supposed to mean) is simply not sufficient to meet her burden of proof. See Stopka, 1996 WL 204324 at *3. As laid out in the affidavits of Susan [2] "Reliance on Federal cases [in interpreting the Illinois Code of Professional Responsibility] is appropriate." Herbes v. Graham, 180 Ill. App. 3d 692, 699, 536 N.E.2d 164, 167-68 (2nd Dist. 1989).

Stone and Stephen Carlson, the type of information that Mrs. Terra communicated to Sidley concerned factual matters relating to the Foundation's history – not confidential or secret information. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 12; Stone Aff., ¶ 14). This information was gathered by Sidley as part of its factual investigation of the allegations in the Buntrock case. (Stone Aff., ¶ 14). Obviously, as a long-standing Board member and the widow of the Foundation's founder Dan Terra, Mrs. Terra was an important witness to interview. (Id.) However, the type of conversations Sidley had with Mrs. Terra were not unique to her. Sidley also spoke with other members of the Foundation's Board in order to obtain any and all factual information relevant to the dispute. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 11; Stone Aff., ¶ 9). Indeed, Sidley communicated more frequently with other Directors. (Carlson Aff., ¶¶ 11, 14; Stone Aff., ¶ 9). Yet, none of these other Directors are now asserting that they magically became Sidley's clients merely as a result of these conversations.

Simply put, at no time did Mrs. Terra share any confidential information with Sidley which would transform Sidley inter her personal counsel. Mrs. Terra never had any conversations or other communications with Sidley other than in her capacity as a Director of the Foundation. At most, Sidley attorneys spoke to Mrs. Terra as they did with a number of the Foundation's Directors about certain factual matters, and Mrs. Terra provided certain factual information. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 12; Stone Aff., ¶ 14). That information was purposefully given to Sidley by Mrs. Terra to assist Sidley in representing the Foundation, and Sidley did indeed use in the litigation on behalf of its client, the Foundation. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 12). Moreover, Mrs. Terra herself has made this information public by including it in her complaint in this action. (See Complaint). Accordingly, Mrs. Terra could not have reasonably believed that this information was confidential. See Hoban, 1991 WL 204965 at *2 (finding that information shared with corporate counsel that was also contained in complaint "cannot be reasonably construed as confidential.").

B. Mrs. Terra Could Not Possibly Have "Reasonably Believed" that Sidley Was Acting as Her Personal Counsel.

Even if Mrs. Terra were able to convince this Court that she provided Sidley with "confidential" information, in order to succeed on her motion to disqualify Mrs. Terra must also prove that she gave this confidential information with the "reasonable belief" that Sidley was acting as her personal lawyer. See Stopka, 1996 WL 204324 at *3. As a director of a not-for-profit corporation communicating with counsel for that corporation, Mrs. Terra's recently claimed supposed "belief" that Sidley was her own personal law firm is presumptively unreasonable. A director or officer conferring with corporate counsel is held to understand that anything revealed to that attorney is known by the corporation. Id.; Bobbitt v. Victorian House, Inc., 545 F. Supp. 1124, 1126 (N.D. Ill. 1982).

Illinois Rule of Professional Conduct 1.13 also presumes that a "lawyer employed or retained by an organization [only] represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents." Ill. R.P.C. 1.13(a). Obviously, lawyers cannot communicate with abstract legal entities. Sidley's client consists of the Foundation operating through its authorized directors, officers, and employees. As Rule 1.13 contemplates, of course Sidley would communicate with Mrs. Terra, but solely in her capacity as a "duly authorized constituent" – i.e., a Director – of the Foundation. Such communications do not transform Mrs. Terra as an individual into Sidley's client. If this were the case, every employee, officer or director of Foundation could claim such a relationship with counsel representing the Foundation, and could use this claim to disqualify the counsel of the Foundation's choosing. More broadly stated, an acceptance of Mrs. Terra's claim could open the door to similar challenges by every employee, officer and director of every corporation represented by counsel. Such a result is exactly what Rule 1.13 prevents.

In addition to the well-settled law on this issue, Mrs. Terra cannot in good faith claim that she had a reasonable belief that Sidley represented her for several additional reasons. First, Sidley repeatedly told Mrs. Terra that it was not her counsel and that Sidley only represented the Foundation. (Stone Aff., ¶ 6). Mrs. Terra's understanding of this distinction is evidenced by the fact that she hired separate counsel to represent her. In fact, throughout the course of the Buntrock litigation, Mrs. Terra hired six different law firms to represent her. (Stone Aff., ¶ 7). As revealed by the billing statements of Shefsky & Froelich, Ltd., the first firm that Mrs. Terra hired to represent her, Mrs. Terra was in weekly and sometimes daily communication with Shefsky lawyers. (Stone Aff., ¶ 5). Given the thousands of hours Mrs. Terra's various law firms spent performing legal services on her behalf, it is obvious that she understood that she had her own counsel to represent her in the litigation, and that she never reasonably believed that Sidley acted as her private counsel.

Second, none of the other Foundation Directors or employees with whom Sidley communicated felt that Sidley was their own personal counsel. Contrary to Mrs. Terra's claim, she did not have a "special" relationship with Sidley. Sidley attorneys communicated with various members of the Foundation's Board – not just Mrs. Terra. Indeed, Sidley attorneys were in frequent communication not only with Mrs. Terra but also with many other Foundation Directors. (Carlson Aff., ¶ 11; Stone Aff., ¶ 12; Stebbins Aff., ¶ 7; Marshall Aff., ¶ 6). The unreasonableness of any claim by Mrs. Terra that any of those communications converted her into Sidley's client is highlighted by the Affidavits of Drs. Stebbins and Marshall, with whom Sidley had frequent communications concerning the same matters that Sidley attorneys discussed with Mrs. Terra. (Stebbins Aff., ¶¶ 7, 8; Marshall Aff., ¶¶ 6, 7). Both Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall state that they knew Sidley was acting only as counsel for the Foundation and not as their own personal attorneys. (Stebbins Aff., ¶ 8; Marshall Aff., ¶ 7).

Third, as discussed above, Mrs. Terra previously admitted that Sidley did not represent her. (See Ex. G. to Stone Aff. ("Sidley & Austin Does Not Represent the Defendant Directors")). Her new found "belief" that Sidley was acting as her attorneys is not only unreasonable, but obviously not made in good faith. Indeed, Mrs. Terra herself stated that such an accusation was not well-grounded in fact, implying that such an accusation violated Illinois Supreme Court Rule 137. (Id.)

Finally, Mrs. Terra's supposed belief that Sidley was serving as her personal counsel is belied by the history of this litigation in which disgruntled minority Directors have repeatedly raised disqualification motions as a tactical weapon against the Foundation. From the very inception of this litigation, motions to disqualify counsel have been used as ploys to delay and deflect attention from the merits (or lack thereof) of the underlying litigation. Specifically, in the related Buntrock litigation, there were approximately six attempts by Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz to disqualify Sidley as the Foundation's counsel. Those attempts were soundly rejected by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court (see J. Kinnaird's 9/25/00, 10/20/00, 1/2/01 Orders; 1/19/01 and 2/16/01 Appellate Court Orders, attached hereto as Exhibit 3), and refused to be heard by the Illinois Supreme Court. (See 6/6/01 letter from Clerk of Ill. Sup. Ct., attached hereto as Exhibit 4). Plaintiffs' latest attack is hardly original, and is brought for the same improper purposes. (See Stebbins Aff., ¶ 11 ("the present motion to disqualify Sidley . . . is being asserted for purely tactical reasons, i.e., to disadvantage the Foundation by depriving it of its very effective and able counsel.")).

Attacking Sidley's allegiance to the Foundation is apparently a litigation tactic of choice for whomever happens to be a minority faction on the Foundation's Board. In the initial motions to disqualify Sidley, Directors Buntrock and Gidwitz argued that Sidley was "really" acting as Dr. Tucker's lawyer; it was later falsely suggested that Sidley was acting as Dr. Stebbins' counsel. Now that the tide has turned and Mrs. Terra's views on certain matters are no longer those held by a majority of the Board, she is suddenly claiming that Sidley acted as her lawyer. The fact remains – as it always has – that Sidley did not and does not represent any individual Director of the Foundation. Sidley only represents the Foundation. Mrs. Terra, apparently fearing getting to the "merits" of her complaint here, is now simply mimicking the harassing and delay-causing tactics employed by her opposition in the Buntrock litigation. As Judge Shadur put it in denying a similar motion to disqualify counsel:

> "Well before appointment to the bench this Court had occasion to note the use of the meritless disqualification motion as a litigation tactic. That trend has not abated, and in this case it has had the usual effect of diverting the litigation from attention to the merits."

Bobbitt, 545 F. Supp. at 1127.

CONCLUSION

Mrs. Terra never had an attorney-client relationship with Sidley, either actual or implied. There is no legal or factual basis for plaintiffs' supposed "emergency" motion to disqualify. The Foundation should not be divested of counsel of its own choosing. Plaintiffs' motion to disqualify Sidley should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

AFFIDAVIT OF SUSAN A. STONE

The undersigned, under oath, does hereby depose and state as follows:

1. I, Susan A. Stone, am over 18 years of age and have personal knowledge of the facts attested to herein. If called as witness, I could competently testify as set forth herein.

2. I am a litigation partner in the law firm of Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley"). I have worked at Sidley for over a decade, and have been a partner since 1995. Prior to joining Sidley, I was an Assistant United States Attorney in California. Prior to becoming a federal prosecutor, I served as a judicial clerk to Hon. William Orrick of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California. I am a member of the Illinois and California bars. I received my J.D. degree from Harvard Law School (cum laude), and my B.A. from Yale University (summa cum laude). In addition to working at Sidley, I also taught for many years at DePaul University College of Law. To the best of my recollection, in all of my years of practice prior to this case, I have never been counsel on a case where Sidley has been the target of a disqualification motion or where Sidley's compliance with the Professional Rules of Conduct has been questioned.

3. Sidley is counsel of record for The Terra Foundation For The Arts ("Terra Foundation") in the litigation Dean Buntrock v. Judith Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859, Circuit Court, Cook County, Chancery Division (Judge Kinnaird). In that litigation, Board Members Dean Buntrock and Ron Gidwitz sued five separate defendants: (1) Terra Foundation; (2) Judith Terra; (3) Alan Simpson; (4) Paul Tucker; and (5) Naftali Michaeli. Throughout this litigation, Sidley has acted as counsel for only one of those defendants: the Terra Foundation, and only the Terra Foundation. Sidley was retained to represent the Terra Foundation by the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation in September 2000. (See Minutes of Board Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit A). In early December 2000 the Independent Litigation Committee ("ILC") which was formed by the Foundation's Board of Directors at the direction of Judge Kinnaird again decided to retain Sidley as counsel for the Foundation. (See Minutes of ILC meeting and ILC Resolution, attached hereto as Exhibit B). Sidley's engagement letter with the Terra Foundation specified that the Terra Foundation was Sidley's sole client in this matter. (See Engagement Letter, at p 2, ¶1, attached hereto as Exhibit C) ("Our client in this matter will be the Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation"). Sidley explicitly limited the scope of its engagement as relating "solely to the representation of the Foundation in connection with the litigation Buntrock v. Terra, et al." (Id.) Sidley filed an appearance in this matter only on behalf of the Terra Foundation. (See Appearance, attached hereto as Exhibit D). At all times in this litigation, Sidley filed pleadings and made arguments only on behalf of the Terra Foundation. Throughout this litigation, Sidley issued legal bills for services rendered only to the Terra Foundation. Sidley originally took direction from the then-president of the Terra Foundation, pursuant to a resolution passed by the Foundation's Board of Directors at its Annual Meeting in September 2000, which granted the then-president the authority to take all actions in the litigation to protect the Foundation's interests (except for settlement). Once the ILC was formed, the ILC was in charge in all matters relating to the litigation except settlement (which matter was reserved to the full Board), and Sidley thereafter reported to and took direction from the ILC.

4. Sidley never acted as counsel for Judith Terra in her individual capacity. Sidley never entered an appearance for Mrs. Terra. Sidley never entered into an engagement letter with Mrs. Terra. Sidley never performed legal services for Mrs. Terra. Sidley never issued bills to Mrs. Terra. Sidley never took direction from Mrs. Terra. Sidley never filed pleadings or made arguments in favor or on behalf of Mrs. Terra.

5. During this litigation Mrs. Terra was represented by her own counsel, attorneys Brian Crowe and Jim Wilson at the law firm of Shefsky & Froelich ("Shefsky"). Shefsky acted as her counsel, entered an appearance on her behalf (see Shefsky Appearance, attached hereto as Exhibit E), filed pleadings on her behalf, made arguments on her behalf, rendered legal services to her, and billed her for those services. The bills filed in court by Shefsky make it clear that her lawyers were in constant communication with Mrs. Terra throughout this case. (See Shefsky Bills, attached hereto as Exhibit F.) Specifically, those bills reflect almost 70 telephone conferences or in-person meetings that are clearly identified as being with Mrs. Terra, and approximately 20 other telephone conversations with "client" or "clients" which may also refer to communications with her. May entries show "lengthy," "extensive" or multiple telephone calls with her on a given day. The bills also reflect multiple written communications to and from Mrs. Terra. In addition to the several face-to-face meetings which Shefsky attorneys had with Mrs. Terra, Shefsky attorneys consistently talked to her several times a week – sometimes even daily – throughout this case.

6. From the very outset of this litigation, Sidley made it clear to Mrs. Terra that Sidley was not her counsel, but rather that Sidley represented only the Terra Foundation. Indeed, in my very first conversations with Mrs. Terra after the lawsuit was filed in September 2000, I told her she needed to retain her own counsel to represent her in this matter, and that Sidley could only act as counsel for the Terra Foundation. I repeated this statement to her on more than one occasion. I never told Mrs. Terra she needed to retain separate counsel solely "for the purposes of formality," and to my knowledge no one else at Sidley did either. I would not have made such a statement, because I do not even know what this statement means. I have never heard of anyone retaining counsel solely "for the purposes of formality;" a party in a lawsuit retains counsel to represent his, her or its own legal interests.

7. Mrs. Terra, Sen. Simpson, and Paul Tucker decided to retain Shefsky to represent them in this matter. They were of course free to choose any attorneys they wished to represent them. They have exercised this right freely in this case, as they have retained various sets of attorneys over time to represent them (six different law firms in total). Sidley never dictated the choice of counsel to Mrs. Terra.

8. At no time did Mrs. Terra ever say to me or indicate in any way that she believed Sidley represented her in her individual capacity. To the contrary, she affirmatively admitted in official court pleadings that "Sidley & Austin does not represent the individual defendants" and further stated that any accusations to the contrary were "not. . . well grounded in fact" and "simply wrong." See Opposition To Plaintiffs' Motion To Appoint An Independent Litigation Committee, at pp 2-3 (attached hereto as Exhibit G).

9. During the course of the Buntrock v. Terra litigation, Sidley had communications with all nine of the eleven directors of the Terra Foundation who were not suing the Terra Foundation. (Sidley obviously did not have communications with Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz, who were adverse to the Terra Foundation). Sidley's communications with Mrs. Daley, Sen. Simpson, and Ambassador Hartman were fairly limited. We had more regular conversations and communications with the other directors, in particular Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall, Ambassador Andreani, Mrs. Terra, and Dr. Tucker. Many of these directors called my partner Steve Carlson and myself, both at the office and at our homes. We were of course willing to talk to any Board Member of the organization we represented. That fact does not mean we represented any of the directors in their individual capacities, including Mrs. Terra. We did not, and we made it clear we did not. We certainly had more frequent communications with some of the other directors, particularly the ILC members, than we ever did with Mrs. Terra.

10. Moreover, at no time during these communications with various Foundation directors did we ever give legal advice to any of these directors in their individual capacities. Instead, when asked, we would give our advice and recommendations about the applicable law and the various legal options available to the Terra Foundation in the lawsuit. When asked by any of these directors, including Mrs. Terra, about matters relating to their own individual legal situations, we specifically told them to consult with their own attorneys. I can recall different occasions when I told Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, or Dr. Stebbins to consult with their own attorneys about matters they were attempting to raise with me. For example, I recall an occasion when Mrs. Terra tried to introduce the topic of potential counterclaims she (as opposed to the Terra Foundation) might raise. I specifically told her to consult with her own attorneys on that matter.

11. Mrs. Terra alleges in a conclusory fashion in her affidavit that she supposedly "shared confidential information on my legal status with Mrs. Stone, and she in return provided me with legal advice." Mrs. Terra does not specify the purported facts on which this statement is based, and I have utterly no idea what she is talking about. I did not provide Mrs. Terra with any legal advice in her capacity as an individual defendant. She had her own highly-qualified attorneys, with whom she spoke frequently and I can only assume they gave her such advice. I did speak with Mrs. Terra about the applicable law and various legal arguments the Terra Foundation could advance, just as I did with other directors, and perhaps that is what she is referring to. Doing so did not transform Sidley into the personal counsel for Mrs. Terra, or for any other of the directors. At no time did Mrs. Terra share "confidential" information with me in her capacity as an individual defendant. Instead, in her conversations with me, Mrs. Terra generally referred to what was occurring in the litigation, on the Board, and at the Foundation. Nothing she said differed in kind from what the many other directors of the Terra Foundation told me, or from what any director of any corporation would typically share with litigation counsel for the corporation.

12. Even more astonishingly, Mrs. Terra claims that I supposedly engaged in certain "secret conversations" with her "that no one could know about," and that I supposedly encouraged her to speak to me privately outside the office. These fantastical allegations are simply not true. In response, the following facts should be noted:

First, completely contrary to what Mrs. Terra alleges, I actually specifically tried to discourage Mrs. Terra from calling me as often as she did, by telling her that frequent communications with me might create a mis-impression which could lend support to certain allegations being raised by Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz, and by encouraging her to call her own lawyers instead. I was polite when delivering this message – Mrs. Terra was after all a director of an organization I represented. Nevertheless, my message should have been unmistakable: please stop calling me so much. My politeness should not now be used as a basis for disqualifying Sidley. In short, far from encouraging Mrs. Terra to conduct "secret conversations" with me, I was actually telling her to talk to her own attorneys at Shefsky.

Second, we made it a regular practice to inform Mrs. Terra's own lawyers about conversations Sidley did have with her. Far from trying to cloak these conversations in secrecy, as Mrs. Terra alleges, we wanted to make sure that her own attorneys were aware of Sidley's communications with Mrs. Terra. Although we had the right to communicate with her as a director of an organization we represented, we wanted to make sure her own attorneys were aware of these communications.

Third, I also regularly informed ILC members about my conversations with Mrs. Terra, and my partner Steve Carlson did the same. Once again, there was no secrecy about our conversations with Mrs. Terra, or any other director or witness for that matter.

Fourth, I regularly discussed any conversations I had with Mrs. Terra and other directors with my partners, and they in turn did the same with me. I cannot imagine working on a case with colleagues and not sharing information in that way. If the implication of Mrs. Terra's affidavit is that I kept my conversations with her "secret" from my partners, that is simply wrong. I have never shielded information from other members of the team on any of the cases I have worked on, and I am hard-pressed to imagine how anyone, other than a sole practitioner, could practice law that way.

Fifth, the idea that I would encourage Mrs. Terra (or any other director) to call me at home is erroneous. As a working mother who is called upon to travel frequently for work (I estimate I was out of town for a total of approximately two out of the last twelve months), I cherish my limited private time at home with my family. While I certainly took phone calls from Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall, Dr. Tucker, and Mrs. Terra at home, and while I tried to be cordial and professional in doing so, I never encouraged this practice.

Sixth, Mrs. Terra does not allege in her affidavit where or when these "secret conversations" supposedly took place, and given the lack of specificity, I am unable to respond more completely. I would note for the record that I was out of town or otherwise employed in other cases for much of the time this litigation was pending. I believe I made four or five one-week trips to London for another client. I was absorbed getting ready for trial for another client for more than a month. I spent several weeks preparing for and participating in an out-of-town arbitration/mediation for another client. I was also out of town for various other reasons for several weeks during this time period. During this time much of the day-to-day litigation work was handled by my partner Steve Carlson (and to a lesser extent my partner Bill Conlon). In short, I was not even generally available to participate in "secret conversations" – not that I ever would.

13. Mrs. Terra also refers in her affidavit to a "close legal and confidential relationship with Ms. Stone and Mr. Carlson." I am not sure exactly what this phrase is intended to convey. I certainly had communications with Mrs. Terra, just as we did with all nine directors who were not then suing the Terra Foundation. I did not have an attorney-client relationship with Mrs. Terra, and I did not receive any confidential or privileged information from her, in her capacity as an individual defendant. My relationship with her did not differ from my relationship with many of the other directors of the Terra Foundation, none of whom are suddenly now claiming a supposed individual attorney-client relationship. From my observation, I do not believe the relationship Mr. Carlson had with Mrs. Terra differed in any material way from the relationship he had with other Board Members.

14. Mrs. Terra refers in her affidavit to a meeting early in the case at the offices of Sidley & Austin, at which Mrs. Terra discussed the history of the Terra Foundation and her understanding of Dan Terra's intent with respect to the Terra Foundation. Such a meeting did take place. Sidley clearly had the right on behalf of the Terra Foundation to engage in a factual investigation of the dispute, and Mrs. Terra, as a long-standing Board Member and widow of Dan Terra, was obviously an important witness to interview. During the litigation, Sidley also discussed the history of the Terra Foundation with other long-standing Board members and other potential witnesses. Once again, the fact that we talked with Mrs. Terra as a potential witness did not transform her into a client. Moreover, nothing Mrs. Terra said to us about her understanding of Dan Terra's intent is different from what she has said publicly and at greater length on numerous occasions in filed court papers and to the press.

15. Mrs. Terra alleges in her affidavit that I supposedly advised her to cooperate with the mediation process. I did not give personal advice to Mrs. Terra about entering into mediation. In fact, it was Mrs. Terra's own attorney Brian Crowe who, during a meeting at which Sidley lawyers were present, advised Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, and Sen. Simpson to pursue mediation, as has been indicated in open court. Sidley suggested mediation on behalf of the Terra Foundation, not on behalf of Mrs. Terra or any other individual defendant, and did so only after the Court itself had raised the subject and after being so directed by the ILC. Although Mrs. Terra claims that I supposedly "advised" that "no disposition would occur without [Mrs. Terra's] personal consent," I did not say this, and it is obvious that, at a minimum, Mrs. Terra misunderstood what I said. It was always possible for a majority of the Terra Foundation's directors to vote to settle this case on behalf of the Terra Foundation, over Mrs. Terra's objection, as did in fact happen. Perhaps Mrs. Terra is referring to the fact that she could not be forced as an individually named party to agree to enter into a settlement if she did not so choose. This statement is true, and it is possible that I may have made a comment to this effect, although I have no specific recollection of having done so. Once again, Mrs. Terra had her own attorneys to offer her legal advice and guidance on matters relating to mediation, and it is my understanding that she did in fact consult with them about this. Indeed, the bills Shefsky have filed make it clear that they spent extensive time preparing Mrs. Terra for mediation and discussing the mediation process with her, and that they were in constant communication with her throughout the months-long mediation process. See Shefsky Bills, attached hereto as Exhibit F.

16. Mrs. Terra refers to a meeting during the mediation process at which Sidley lawyers and various Board members were present. I believe she is referring to an evening meeting at the Allerton Hotel, which was held after the first day of a two-day mediation session. This meeting was held so Sidley could discuss strategy with its client representative, the ILC. It is my understanding that members of the ILC invited several other directors to attend this meeting, and several non-ILC directors were present. Mrs. Terra's own lawyer, Jim Wilson, was also present. Without waiving any attorney-client privilege which may exist and without running afoul of the Court Order protecting the confidentiality of the mediation process, I can generally state that Mrs. Terra's account of that meeting is not accurate, particularly with regard to what she contends I said. What I said at that meeting was that I was troubled by many aspects of the mediation proposal as it then existed and if I were a Board member I would have a hard time voting in favor of that proposal. Obviously, I am not and never have been a Board member, and the decision about whether or not to agree to a given mediation proposal is a matter of business judgment to be exercised by each Board member. Moreover, without specifying details which might violate Judge Kinnaird's Order protecting the confidentiality of the mediation process, it should be noted that the mediation proposal as it then existed differed dramatically from the eventual settlement the Board agreed to enter into, which is memorialized in the Consent Judgment.

17. Mrs. Terra states in her affidavit that "Ms. Stone seemed to have great empathy for my position and the position of the then majority of the Foundation's Board," but then acknowledges that towards the end of the mediation process "[t]he board majority, for a variety of reasons, had shifted away from my view. . .." This acknowledgement is very telling. The position that the Terra Foundation ultimately took in this litigation, particularly with regard to the settlement of the litigation, was always dictated by the majority will of the Board of Directors, as is appropriate for a private foundation governed via a democratic Board process. In turn, Sidley's position on behalf of the Terra Foundation was also ultimately dictated by the will of the Board majority, as is appropriate. This basic fact of life could not have been a surprise to Mrs. Terra. In fact, I can recall telling Mrs. Terra early on in the litigation that if majority and minority positions on the Board were reversed by a vote of the Board, Sidley may very well be required to take a different posture in the litigation. While I believed the governing corporate documents strongly supported the Foundation's legal position, I never gave Mrs. Terra any "assurances," "promises," or guarantees that either the Foundation or she personally would prevail in this litigation. Given the inherent unpredictability of litigation, I have never given any director of any corporation I have represented any guaranty of success. Once again, Mrs. Terra was represented by highly competent counsel with whom she enjoyed open lines of communication, and those counsel were certainly qualified to give her advice about the possible outcomes in the case.

18. Mrs. Terra also alleges that it is her "impression" that certain actions taken by me and my partner Steve Carlson were "the direct result [of] pressure by other partners at their firm." Mrs. Terra does not allege any facts to support this conclusory statement about her how to resolve this dispute. It is regrettable she feels "betrayed" by a law firm which she never retained and which never worked for her. Yet, any sense of "betrayal" which she now feels is misplaced and self-inflicted. The reality in this case is that the votes on the Board simply went against her – an outcome she may not like, but which stems from a democratic Board process which she should respect. The reality in this case is also that the Terra Foundation was never Judith Terra's personal foundation, and Sidley was never Judith Terra's personal counsel. Her attacks on other directors, on my firm, and on me are unwarranted and unjustified.

26. Under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-108 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, I attest that the statements set forth in this affidavit are true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Board Meeting
Minutes
September 26, 2000

In Attendance:
Paul Tucker, Chair
Helene Ahrweiler
Jacques Andreani
Dean Buntrock
Maggie Daley
Ron Gidwitz
Arthur Hartman
Stephanie Pace Marshall
Theodore Stebbins
Judith Terra
Absent: Alan Simpson

By Invitation:
Mark Hearwole, Foundation Legal Counsel, Winston & Strawn

Staff:
Donald H. Ratner, Vice President Finance & Administration

The meeting was called to order at 10:00am.

Dr. Tucker indicated that the alteration of convening time (the meeting was originally scheduled to begin at 9:00 AM) was a result of needing to clarify the issues with respect to Board actions in response to the constraints imposed by the court action of September 25, 2000.

Mr. Hearwole reported that the court order relating to the lawsuit brought by Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz against the Foundation and the hearing on Monday, September 25, had two principal constraints on Board action:

1. The Board could not take any action to remove any Board members from either the Board or the Executive Committee against their will; and
2. The Board could continue with its normal business except that it could not take any action to transfer offices or assets out of Chicago. Mr. Hearwole indicated that both of these restrictions continue through October 12 when the next hearing will occur.

Mr. Hearwole indicated that the Board has two options:

1. Re-elect all Board members at this meeting; or
2. Adjourn the election of members to a later date.

The vote was called. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Arthur Hartman Stephanie Pace Marshall Ted Stebbins Judith Terra Paul Tucker	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
		Abstain:	Margaret Daley Ren Gidwitz

The next item on the agenda was the minutes. Dr. Tucker said that we needed to follow the judge's court order to the letter. Since the court order had not allowed any votes from committees up until this point, the committees could not review and approve their minutes and therefore there was no possibility for Board approval. Therefore, Dr. Tucker recommended that we table the vote on the minutes until the next meeting.

Mr. Gidwitz moved and Ambassador Hartman seconded the tabling of the approval of the minutes.

Ambassador Hartman asked if not approving the minutes would affect the deaccessioning of works of art from the collection. Mr. Hearwole said that it would not.

The vote was taken and there was a unanimous vote in favor of tabling the minutes.

The next item was the election of Directors, Officers and Committee Chairs.

The Board had two alternatives: to elect all Directors as a slate or table a decision until the next meeting.

Dr. Tucker recommended that we proceed with the election and approve the current slate of Directors. Mme. Ahrweiler moved and Dr. Stebbins seconded the motion to approve the current slate of Directors.

Dr. Tucker then asked if anyone did not want to stand for re-election.

At this point Dr. Marshall asked Mr. Buntrock what his reasons were for bringing the lawsuit. He replied:

- That he believed the Board had a "different agenda".
- That he believed there was a conspiracy to move the museum out of Chicago.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Margaret Daley Arthur Hartman Stephanie Pace Marshall Ted Stebbins Judith Terra Paul Tucker	Nayes:	none
		Abstain:	Dean Buntrock Ron Gidwitz

The next vote taken was for Vice Chair. Dr. Tucker moved that Mrs. Terra be Vice Chair. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Margaret Daley Arthur Hartman Stephanie Pace Marshall Ted Stebbins Judith Terra Paul Tucker	Nayes:	none
		Abstain:	Dean Buntrock Ron Gidwitz

The next vote was for Secretary and Treasurer. Dr. Stebbins nominated Dr. Marshall for Secretary and Treasurer. Ambassador Andreani seconded it. Dr. Marshall indicated that she would be willing to serve as Treasurer for a short period of time if the Board commits to re-evaluating the situation after that limited period of time. The results of the vote were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Margaret Daley Ron Gidwitz Arthur Hartman Ted Stebbins Judith Terra Paul Tucker	Nayes:	none
		Abstain:	Dean Buntrock Stephanie Pace Marshall

Mr. Gidwitz and Mr. Buntrock remained on the Executive Committee as members-at-large.

The Board then moved to Item IX on the Agenda, Executive Session. Dr. Tucker left the room. Vice Chairman, Mrs. Terra, presided indicating that the purpose of the Executive session was to discuss a salary increase for Dr. Tucker. Mme. Ahrweiler proposed a bonus for Dr. Tucker. Dr. Stebbins moved that we double his compensation until a new President is hired. This motion was seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler.

Discussion followed.

Dr. Stebbins withdrew his motion.

Dr. Stebbins then moved to give Dr. Tucker a $25,000 bonus to recognize Dr. Tucker for the considerable additional time he spent on Foundation affairs over the past year. This was seconded by Ambassador Andreani.

The vote was taken. The results were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Arthur Hartman Stephanie Pace Marshall Ted Stebbins Judith Terra	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock Margaret Daley
		Abstain:	Ron Gidwitz

Mrs. Daley indicated that her no vote was not a vote of no confidence on Dr. Tucker but that she believed a decision should have been deferred until after the lawsuit was settled.

The Executive Session was adjourned.

Dr. Tucker returned to the meeting and discussed the slate of committees and committee chairs. (See attached)

The Finance Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler Jacques Andreani Arthur Hartman Stephanie Pace Marshall Ted Stebbins Judith Terra Paul Tucker	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
		Abstain:	Margaret Daley Ron Gidwitz

The Collections Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Education Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Strategic Planning Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

At 2:10 PM the meeting was adjourned for lunch. At 2:40 the meeting resumed. The next item on the agenda was to review the estate. Mr. Heatwole did so and indicated that there were three issues that Winston & Strawn examined:

1. The transaction with Lawter
2. The transactions between Dan Terra and Jim Terra
3. The magnitude of the Bell, Boyd bills

Mr. Heatwole indicated Winston & Strawn had discussed the estate report with Bell, Boyd, BIK, Meyer, Brown & Platt, the Foundation Board and had reviewed all papers. Winston Strawn has concluded its review. He also indicated that the one open point was that Schiff, Hardin & Waite will be reviewing issues relating to Mercury Finance.

Winston & Strawn's conclusion was that, after thorough review, they found no reason for the Foundation not to accept the report of the Executor, except for Mercury Finance, which they have not reviewed.

He indicated that Bell, Boyd has not turned over the Mercury Finance papers to Schiff, Hardin and that we need to give them a waiver for Schiff, Hardin to get the papers. He noted that Jim Collins needed a letter from the Foundation to turn over the material to Schiff, Hardin.

A resolution with four components, which was as follows, was moved by Mme. Ahrweiler and seconded by Dr. Marshall:

1. Accept the Winston Strawn report as issued.
2. Approve that a letter be sent to Bell, Boyd to release the papers to Schiff, Hardin immediately so that Schiff Hardin may review the Mercury Finance issues expeditiously.
3. Report to the Executive Committee on the result of Schiff, Hardin's review of Mercury Finance.
4. Authorize the Executive Committee to close the estate.

The vote was taken unanimously in favor of this resolution.

The Finance Committee report was given by Mr. Ratner. He discussed results of the audit. He also discussed the four points raised in the Management Letter: Terra Museum Accounting, Endowment Income, Intercompany Activity and In-kind Contributions. Mr. Ratner addressed each of the points and indicated that a resolution of these points would be made. A motion to accept the Audit and Management Letter, subject to any footnotes relating to the current lawsuit, was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. Mr. Ratner then discussed the change of investment allocations within the equity portion. A memo on this matter is included in the Board book under the September 25 Finance Committee section. A motion to accept this reallocation was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. The third item was to review three new potential investment advisors: Kennedy, Ennis and Cambridge. Mr. Ratner recommended Kennedy which Mr. Gidwitz agreed with. The motion to approve was made by Dr. Stebbins and seconded by Dr. Marshall. The vote was unanimous in favor.

Dr. Stebbins then gave the Collection Committee report. The first item on the agenda was the motion by Dr. Stebbins to have the Board delegate the approval of the loans, exhibitions, donations, etc. to the Collections Committee to cover the report included in the Board book. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded. The motion was unanimously in favor. The next item was the Deaccession report. Dr. Stebbins indicated that, after careful review by the Committee and the outside advisors who made two trips to Chicago to examine the proposed deaccessions, the final list had been winnowed to 27 objects, with 16 of them not being included in the American Impressionist sale at Christie's on November 29, 2000.

Ambassador Hartman suggested that there should be some public relation's communications at the time about the deaccessioning. He suggested that it be made clear that these items are being sold to raise purchase funds for new additions to the collection. Dr. Stebbins also indicated that we have chosen Christie's and indicated some of the details of the contract and the reasons for selecting that venue as opposed to Sotheby's or Vance Jordan, a private dealer.

Mr. Gidwitz moved to approve the deaccessioning report and the selection of Christie's. Seconded by Ambassador Hartman. Unanimously in favor.

The Director's reports and VP of Finance reports were not given orally, but were included in the September 26, 2000 Board book.

Dr. Tucker suggested that he and Dr. Stebbins form a search committee for the new MAAG Director.

Mr. Ratner was instructed to change Sophie Levy's position at MAGG to Curator from Assistant Curator.

Mr. Ratner was asked to set-up both an Executive Committee conference call and a Board conference call after the court hearing on the 12th.

Dr. Marshall suggested that we need some formal communication structure perhaps in the form of a written newsletter every 3-4 weeks to keep the Board apprised of developments regarding the lawsuit. Mr. Ratner and Dr. Tucker were asked to coordinate.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00pm.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS
INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE
MINUTES
December 4, 2000

In Attendance (Conference Call):

Ambassador Jacques Andreani
Dr. Ted Stebbins

Staff:

Donald Ratner

The meeting was called to order at 3:15pm.

There were three agenda items:

- Decide on Counsel for the lawsuit
- Discuss litigation strategy
- Approve legal bills

Dr. Stebbins made a motion to approve the retention of Sidley & Austin, seconded by Ambassador Andreani. After discussion, the attached resolution was approved unanimously.

Litigation strategy was then discussed. Susan Stone from Sidley & Austin was asked to join the call at this time. She discussed the possibility of Sidley & Austin investigating the allegations. Both members of the committee agreed with this idea and Ambassador Andreani made a motion to proceed with this and Dr. Stebbins seconded it. After discussion, the attached resolution was approved unanimously.

The September and October bills of Sidley & Austin were approved. The October bill from Shefsky and Froelich for services for Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, and Senator Simpson were approved for payment subject to our corporate counsel approving the direct payment of these bills.

The meeting adjourned at 3:45pm.

Independent Litigation Committee
Resolution re: Retention of Counsel

WHEREAS, on or about September 22, 2000 there was filed in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, Chancery Division, cause no. 00 CH 13850 ("the Lawsuit");

WHEREAS, on September 26, 2000 the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Board") ratified the hiring of Sidley & Austin as Counsel for the Foundation for the Lawsuit;

WHEREAS, on November 30, 2000 pursuant to the Court Order, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Board") established this independent litigation committee and authorized said committee to make all decisions surrounding actions relating to the Lawsuit;

WHEREAS, by way of its Order of November 13, 2000 the Court directed this independent litigation committee to consider the appointment of counsel; and

WHEREAS, one or more members of this independent litigation committee has interviewed Sidley & Austin, checked references, had discussions with Leonard Schrager, reviewed papers filed in connection with the lawsuit and considered the appointment of counsel;

1) This independent litigation committee hereby appoints and ratifies the retention of Sidley & Austin to represent the Foundation in connection with the Lawsuit;

2) This independent litigation committee hereby authorizes Sidley & Austin to take any and all action which in its professional judgment is appropriate in representing the Foundation in connection with the Lawsuit except for settlement and as stated below;

3) This independent litigation committee hereby reserves to itself final approval of the following: the filing of counterclaims in the Lawsuit, the taking of any interlocutory or final appeals from any Order or Judgment entered in the Lawsuit and any other matter which the Committee may from time to time decide to reserve to itself;

4) Notwithstanding anything stated above, settlement of the Lawsuit has been reserved by the Board to itself.

Re: Engagement Letter

Dear Mr. Ratner:

We are pleased that you have asked Sidley & Austin to serve as your counsel.

For over 100 years, our Firm commenced its relationship with each new client without formality. In recent years, however, the practice of law and the professional standards governing it have become increasingly complex. As a result, we, like other large firms, now follow the practice of entering into engagement letters with our clients. (As you may know, investment banking, consulting, accounting and other professional service firms adopted this practice years ahead of law firms.) Letters such as these serve the general purpose of setting forth the ground rules for our engagement. In addition, they address certain specific matters that are required to be set forth in writing by, or relate to rules of, the bar associations and other regulatory bodies under which we practice.

Although we have accepted this measure of formality with reluctance, we have nevertheless come to appreciate that it is preferable to have these matters understood and agreed to by our clients at the commencement of our representation. Accordingly, we submit for your approval the following provisions governing our engagement. If you are in agreement, please sign the enclosed copy of this letter in the space provided below. If you have any questions about these provisions, or if you would like to discuss possible modifications, do not hesitate to call. Again, we are pleased to have the opportunity to serve you.

I. Client; Scope of Representation. Our client in this matter will be the Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation (the "Foundation"), and we will advise the Foundation in connection with, and the scope of our engagement and duties to the Foundation shall relate solely to, the representation of the Foundation in connection with the litigation Dean Buntrock et al. v. Judith Terra et al., No. 00-CH-13859 (Circuit Court, Cook County, Illinois) (hereinafter the "representation"). You may limit or expand the scope of our representation from time to time, provided that any substantial expansion must be agreed to by us.

Term of Engagement. Either of us may terminate the engagement at any time for any reason by written notice, subject on our part to applicable rules of professional responsibility. In the event that we terminate the engagement, we will take such steps as are reasonably practicable to protect your interests in the above matter .

Unless previously terminated, Sidley & Austin's representation of the Foundation will terminate upon our sending you our final statement for services rendered. Following such termination, any otherwise nonpublic information you have supplied to Sidley & Austin which is retained by us will be kept confidential in accordance with applicable rules of professional responsibility. If, upon such termination, you wish to have any documents delivered to you, please advise us. Otherwise, all such documents will be transferred to the person responsible for administering our records retention program. For various reasons, including the minimization of unnecessary storage expenses, we reserve the right to destroy or otherwise dispose of any such documents retained by us.

You are engaging Sidley & Austin to provide legal services in connection with the specific representation as set forth above. After completion of the representation, changes may occur in the applicable laws or regulations that could have an impact upon your future rights and liabilities. Unless you actually engage us after the completion of the representation to provide additional advice on issues arising from the representation, Sidley & Austin has no continuing obligation to advise you with respect to future legal developments.

SIDLEY & AUSTIN CHICAGO

II. Fees and Expenses. Our fees will be based on the billing rate for each attorney and legal assistant devoting time to this matter. Our billing rates for attorneys currently range from $ 175 per hour for new associates to $ 550 per hour for senior partners. These billing rates are subject to change from time to time. We will include on our bills charges for performing services such as photocopying, messenger and delivery service, computerized research, travel, long-distance telephone, telecopy, word processing, and search and filing fees. Fees and expenses of others (such as consultants, appraisers, and local counsel) generally will not be paid by us, but will be billed directly to you. We anticipate billing you monthly and expect that our bills will be paid within 30 days after receipt.

III. Conflicts. As you know, Sidley & Austin has numerous clients. Many of these clients rely upon the Firm for general representation. Although we hope it never happens, it is possible that an adverse relationship (including litigation) may develop in the future between the Foundation and one of our other clients. If Sidley & Austin is not representing the Foundation in that matter and the matter in which the Foundation and another client have adverse interests is not substantially related to our representation of the Foundation as described above, the Foundation agrees that we may represent the other client. (You should know that, in similar engagement letters with many of our other clients, we have asked for similar agreements to preserve our ability to represent you.) You should be aware that Sidley & Austin has in the past done certain work for corporations and partnerships in which Ronald Gidwitz has had an interest but that (1) Ronald Gidwitz, personally, is not a client of Sidley & Austin, and (2) in a conversation with Sidley & Austin's Managing Partner Tomas Cole on September 23, 2000, Mr. Gidwitz acknowledged that he was not personally a client of Sidley & Austin and stated that he would not object to the Foundation's hiring of Sidley & Austin, even though he was aware that Sidley & Austin would vigorously represent and defend the Foundation in this matter.

Once again, we are pleased to have this opportunity to work with you. If you have any questions or comments during the course of our representation, please call me at 312-853-2177.

Sincerely,

Susan A. Stone

AFFIDAVIT OF BRIAN L. CROWE IN SUPPORT OF SHEFSKY & FROELICH LTD.'S PETITION FOR FEES AND COSTS

I, Brian L. Crowe, under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-109 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, certify that the statements set forth in this Affidavit are true and correct.

1. I have knowledge of the facts contained in this Affidavit and if called as a witness could testify competently thereto.

2. I am a shareholder in the law firm of Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. ("Shefsky"). I am the attorney who was responsible for supervising the litigation work performed by this law firm during the period it represented the Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson ("Director Defendants") in this matter, October 2000 to June 29, 2001. I have been licensed to practice law in the State of Illinois since 1964 and have overseen and conducted numerous lawsuits.

3. For nearly twelve years, from 1975 to 1987, I served as a Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, and in that capacity I had occasion from time to time to review, and rule on, the reasonableness of attorneys fees awarded in various matters in which fees were an appropriate award.

4. From 1997 to 1999, I served as Corporation Counsel for the City of Chicago, and in that capacity I had occasion from time to time to review attorneys fees charged to the City of Chicago by outside counsel.

5. I have also, from time to time, been called and qualified to testify as an expert witness regarding the reasonableness of attorneys fees.

6. Each of the foregoing experiences has provided me with an informed basis to state my opinion that the fees and costs billed by Shefsky for its representation of the Director Defendants are reasonable.

7. Exhibit A to this Affidavit is a detailed explanation of the work performed by members and employees of Shefsky in connection with the above matter and the charges for that work. The explanation includes the date of the service rendered, the identity of the person rendering the service, a detailed narrative of the service rendered, and the amount of time spent providing that service. For those persons who provided services both before and after November 1, 2000, two hourly rates are given because Shefsky's hourly rates increased on that date.

8. The billing rate for each person is as follows:

Person	Position	Hourly Rate
Brian L. Crowe (BLC)	Shareholder	335.00 (to October 31, 2000) 355.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Michael J. Howlett, Jr. (MJH)	Shareholder	355.00
James D. Wilson (JDW)	Shareholder	275.00 (to October 31, 2000) 295.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Alan T. Slagel (ATS)	Shareholder	295.00
Jack J. Hagerty (JJH)	Shareholder	260.00 (to October 31, 2000) 290.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Gregory C. Ward (GCW)	Shareholder	210.00 (to October 31, 2000) 250.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Patricia S. Spratt (PSS)	Shareholder	220.00 (to October 31, 2000) 230.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Brett Nolan (BXN)	Associate	150.00 (to October 31, 2000) 175.00 (as of November 1, 2000)
Jared M. Wayne (JMW)	Associate	150.00
Ellen M. Avery (EMA)	Associate	155.00
Gary L. Nuzzi (GLN)	Paralegal	95.00
Thomas S. DalCompo (TSD)	Paralegal	90.00
Gabriel Reilly-Bates (GRB)	Paralegal	70.00 (to October 31, 2000) 75.00 (as of November 1, 2000)

Jennie B. Fisher (JBF)	Paralegal	70.00

9. As is correctly reported on Exhibit A, the attorneys' fees the Director Defendants incurred in connection with this matter through June 29, 2001 total $450,800.00.

10. In addition, the attached Exhibit A shows the costs incurred and disbursements made by Shefsky on behalf of the Director Defendants in relation to this matter.

11. As is correctly reported on Exhibit A, the costs incurred and disbursements made by Shefsky & Froelich Ltd. in connection with this matter through June 29, 2001, total $17,576.17.

12. The total of these amounts equals $468,376.17.

13. Based upon my experience, the amount charged in this matter for the services rendered and costs disbursed was reasonable and necessary. The charges are equivalent to the usual and customary charges that Shefsky charges its clients for similar work and are comparable to charges by other law firms in this area with similar experience and background for similar services.

Further affiant sayeth not.

OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO APPOINT AN INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COMMITTEE AND INDEPENDENT LITIGATION COUNSEL FOR TERRA FOUNDATION, AND/OR RECEIVER

Defendants Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson, by their attorneys, Shefsky & Froelich Ltd., respectfully submit this Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion

Received Oct 17 04:50PM (05:26) on SBA line [5] for 'WCONLON' WORKSRV4 printed OPE39ECB4DF190B on Oct 18 08:38AM 2000 * Pg 6/23 to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation for the Arts, and/or Receiver.

INTRODUCTION

Apparently afraid of their opposition, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz have taken to attempting to disqualify anyone who would defend against their claims, arguing for legal remedies that do not and cannot logically exist, misstating the facts and misrepresenting the remedies they seek. This response to Plaintiffs' Motion to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation, and/or Receiver (the "Motion") supplements and adopts the Terra Foundation's response to the Motion. It does not attempt to counter each and every misstated fact and fallacious argument of law but only tries to set the record straight as to who represents whom, explain what the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation, did in appointing its Acting President and Chairman of the Board as the point person for the newly retained Sidley & Austin lawyers and to provide the Court with some legal precedent as to when a special litigation committee is appropriate, who may appoint such a committee and who may select counsel.

I. SIDLEY & AUSTIN DOES NOT REPRESENT THE DEFENDANT DIRECTORS.

In charging Sidley & Austin with ethical violations, Buntrock and Gidwitz ignore the appearances filed in this very matter and claim that Sidley & Austin represents the individual defendants. (Motion, at p. 7). The law firm of Sidley & Austin has only appeared on behalf of the Terra Foundation for the Arts. (Exhibit A). Separate counsel has appeared on behalf of the defendant directors. (Exhibit B). Plaintiffs' statements to the contrary are simply wrong and, given the appearances that have been filed, could not have been believed to be well grounded in fact at the time the statements were made. Thus, Buntrock and Gidwitz' request to disqualify Sidley & Austin should be rejected by this Court.

II. THE BOARD DID NOT CREATE A SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE

By mixing terms as if they had no recognized legal meanings, Buntrock and Gidwitz claim that Dr. Paul Tucker has somehow been appointed as "litigation director," or "director of litigation" (see Motion at pp. 2, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14), or a "litigation committee." (Motion, at p. 10.)[1] Those phrases, which Buntrock and Gidwitz place in quotes, never appear in the minutes or resolution providing Dr. Tucker, the Acting President and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation, with the limited power to defend the Foundation against the charges made by plaintiffs. (Exhibit C).

An overwhelming majority of the directors, including five of the six non-litigant directors voted in favor of that resolution. Only Director Buntrock voted against it. (Exhibit C). Plaintiffs' disingenuous use of quotes, misstatements regarding the authority of Dr. Tucker is nothing more than an unseemly attempt to deceive this Court as to the actions of the Board.

III. THIS COURT CANNOT APPOINT A SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE OR ITS COUNSEL

Plaintiffs request this Court appoint a special litigation committee and further appoint counsel for the committee. (Motion, at pp. 8-14.) What plaintiffs ignore is that the decision,

---

[1] Buntrock, at least, should understand the importance of a Special Litigation Committee after having appointed such a committee when he was accused of insider trading in ChemLawn stock while Chairman of the Board of the now defunct Waste Management, Inc.. Spiegel v Dean L. Buntrock, et al., 571 A.2d 767 (Del., 1990).

Received Oct 17 04:50PM (05:26) on SBA line [5] for WACONLON WORKSRV4 printed OPE39EC84DF1908 on Oct 18 08:38AM 2000 * Pg 8/23 single case in which a special litigation committee was appointed by a court. Cf. Welland, Zapata, Auerbach, Houle and Alford. It is the prerogative of the board of directors, not a court hearing a derivative case to make such an appointment. Id.

Here, there has not even been an allegation of misconduct against Hélène Ahrweiler, Jacques Andréani, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore E. Stebbins or Margaret Daley, a majority of the Board. Thus, the Board of Directors could, at any time, decide to appoint a special litigation committee composed of disinterested members if it so chooses. There is no reason nor is there any authority for this Court to appoint a special litigation committee.

Finally, despite having themselves cited two cases which directly reject the proposition that an Illinois court may appoint independent counsel, Buntrock and Gidwitz claim the law is otherwise and ask this Court for such relief. (Motion at pp 1,2, 6-14.) Appointments of counsel in derivative litigation are not the province of a court. Lower v. Lanark Mutual Fire Insurance Company, et al., 114 Ill. App. 3d 462, 469-470, 448 N.E.2d 940, 946 (2nd Dist. 1983). As the Illinois Appellate Court stated:

> Plaintiff's motion requested that the court appoint counsel to represent the defendant corporation. We disagree. The defendant corporation may select its own counsel even though some or all of the defendant directors may make the selection. Certainly new counsel will recognize the duty to represent solely the interests of the corporate entity.

See also Cannon v U.S Acoustics Corp, 898 F.Supp.209 (N.D. Ill. 1975. The Lower case sits as binding precedent to this Court. Counsel should be chosen by the Board of Directors, not the court.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, as well as those set forth in the Terra Foundation for the Arts

Received Oct 17 04:50PM (05:26) on SBA line [5] for WCONLON, WORKSRV4 printed DPE39ECB4DF190B on Oct 18 08:38AM 2000 * Pg 10/23

Terra Foundation
Board Meeting
Minutes
September 26, 2000

In Attendance:
Paul Tucker, Chair
Helene Ahrweiler
Jacques Andreani
Dean Buntrock
Maggie Daley
Ron Gidwitz
Arthur Hartman
Stephanie Pace Marshall
Theodore Stebbins
Judith Terra
Absent: Alan Simpson

By Invitation:
Mark Hearwole, Foundation Legal Counsel, Winston & Strawn

Staff:
Donald H. Ratner, Vice President Finance & Administration

The meeting was called to order at 10:00am.

Dr. Tucker indicated that the alteration of convening time (the meeting was originally scheduled to begin at 9:00 AM) was a result of needing to clarify the issues with respect to Board actions in response to the constraints imposed by the court action of September 25, 2000.

Mr. Hearwole reported that the court order relating to the lawsuit brought by Messrs. Buntrock and Gidwitz against the Foundation and the hearing on Monday, September 25, had two principal constraints on Board action:

1. The Board could not take any action to remove any Board members from either the Board or the Executive Committee against their will; and
2. The Board could continue with its normal business except that it could not take any action to transfer offices or assets out of Chicago. Mr. Hearwole indicated that both of these restrictions continue through October 12 when the next hearing will occur.

Mr. Hearwole indicated that the Board has two options:

1. Re-elect all Board members at this meeting; or
2. Adjourn the election of members to a later date.

Dr. Tucker then asked for a motion to move Item X on the Agenda, "Other Business", to Item U. Ted Stebbins moved and Judith Terra seconded the motion. The motion carried by a unanimous vote.

The two items requiring action in Item X were:

1. The ratification of the selection of Sidley & Austin to represent the Foundation in the lawsuit; and
2. The authorization of the Chairman to deal with all matters regarding the litigation and to defend the Foundation against the charges brought by Mr. Bumrock and Mr. Gidwitz. Dr. Tucker indicated that, with respect to the second motion, he would bring any settlement proposal back to the Board for final approval.

Discussion ensued, followed by a consensus to call the question.

The vote to move the 10th item "other business" to the 2nd item on the agenda was unanimous.

The first item (the ratification of hiring Sidley & Austin as Counsel for the Foundation for the lawsuit) was moved by Dr. Stebbins and seconded by Dr. Marshall. There was no discussion. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	None
	Jacques Andreani
	Dean Bumrock	Abstain:	Ron Gidwitz
	Margaret Daley
	Arthur Hartman
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next item (giving authorization to the Chair for any and all actions regarding the lawsuit except for the settlement) was moved by Mrs. Terra and seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler.

Mrs. Daley stated that since Dr. Tucker was named as a defendant in the lawsuit, she wondered if it was appropriate for Dr. Tucker to have this authority to act for the Foundation. Mr. Hesewole affirmed that there was no conflict in this matter.

The vote was called. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Margaret Daley
	Stephanie Pace Marshall		Ron Gidwitz
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next item on the agenda was the minutes. Dr. Tucker said that we needed to follow the judge's court order to the letter. Since the court order had not allowed any votes from committees up until this point, the committees could not review and approve their minutes and therefore there was no possibility for Board approval. Therefore, Dr. Tucker recommended that we table the vote on the minutes until the next meeting.

Mr. Gidwitz moved and Ambassador Hartman seconded the tabling of the approval of the minutes.

Ambassador Hartman asked if not approving the minutes would affect the deaccessioning of works of art from the collection. Mr. Hearwole said that it would not.

The vote was taken and there was a unanimous vote in favor of tabling the minutes.

The next item was the election of Directors, Officers and Committee Chairs.

The Board had two alternatives: to elect all Directors as a slate or table a decision until the next meeting.

Dr. Tucker recommended that we proceed with the election and approve the current slate of Directors. Mme. Ahrweiler moved and Dr. Stebbins seconded the motion to approve the current slate of Directors.

Dr. Tucker then asked if anyone did not want to stand for re-election.

At this point Dr. Marshall asked Mr. Buntrock what his reasons were for bringing the lawsuit. He replied:

- That he believed the Board had a "different agenda".
- That he believed there was a conspiracy to move the museum out of Chicago.

- That he had had frustrations with the fact that he had written to Dr. Tucker numerous times about employees being treated poorly, about Senator Simpson's "agenda", about Ambassador Hartman's proposed resolution, about the estate review, about his own suggested resignation, that he did not feel Dr. Tucker responded by bringing closure/ resolution to these issues, about his frustration with the deterioration of the Chicago museum and with his perception of the lack of focus on the educational aspect of the potential partnerships.

Dr. Marshall indicated that she could support the re-election of the Directors if everyone could commit to an openness of discussion.

Mme. Ahrweiler then withdrew her motion. Ambassador Andreani then moved not to take the vote at this time but to defer it to a later session of the annual meeting. Dr. Stebbins seconded Ambassador Andreani's motion.

Dr. Tucker reviewed the discussion of Sunday, September 24. Mr. Gidwitz had said that he could make a dispassionate decision on where the site of the museum and Foundation should be in the best interests of the Foundation, as he understood it.

Dr. Tucker asked if everyone could commit to being open and objective to the alternatives presented to the Foundation and could commit to honestly, fairly and without prejudice evaluating all proposals about the Foundation's specific future.

Mr. Gidwitz indicated that he would be willing to work toward a position of trust. Ambassador Andreani's motion was then withdrawn.

Dr. Stebbins then moved to vote to re-elect the current slate of Directors and Mme. Ahrweiler seconded. The vote was taken. The results were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Margaret Daley
	Ron Gidwitz	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Jacques Andreani
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next order of business was to elect the Officers. It was decided to take each position individually. The first office was Chairman. Mrs. Terra nominated Dr. Tucker. Dr. Stebbins seconded. The vote was taken.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next vote taken was for Vice Chair. Dr. Tucker moved that Mrs. Terra be Vice Chair. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded.

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Arthur Hartman		Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The next vote was for Secretary and Treasurer. Dr. Stebbins nominated Dr. Marshall for Secretary and Treasurer. Ambassador Andreani seconded it. Dr. Marshall indicated that she would be willing to serve as Treasurer for a short period of time if the Board commits to re-evaluating the situation after that limited period of time. The results of the vote were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	none
	Jacques Andreani
	Margaret Daley	Abstain:	Dean Buntrock
	Ron Gidwitz		Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Arthur Hartman
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

Mr. Gidwitz and Mr. Buntrock remained on the Executive Committee as members-at-large.

The Board then moved to Item IX on the Agenda, Executive Session. Dr. Tucker left the room. Vice Chairman, Mrs. Terra, presided indicating that the purpose of the Executive session was to discuss a salary increase for Dr. Tucker. Mme. Ahrweiler proposed a bonus for Dr. Tucker. Dr. Stebbins moved that we double his compensation until a new President is hired. This motion was seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler.

Discussion followed.

Dr. Stebbins withdrew his motion.

Dr. Stebbins then moved to give Dr. Tucker a $25,000 bonus to recognize Dr. Tucker for the considerable additional time he spent on Foundation affairs over the past year. This was seconded by Ambassador Andreani.

The vote was taken. The results were:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani		Margaret Daley
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Ron Gidwitz
	Stephanie Pace Marshall
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra

Mrs. Daley indicated that her no vote was not a vote of no confidence on Dr. Tucker but that she believed a decision should have been deferred until after the lawsuit was settled.

The Executive Session was adjourned.

Dr. Tucker returned to the meeting and discussed the slate of committees and committee chairs. (See attached)

The Finance Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote was as follows:

Ayes:	Helene Ahrweiler	Nayes:	Dean Buntrock
	Jacques Andreani
	Arthur Hartman	Abstain:	Margaret Daley
	Stephanie Pace Marshall		Ron Gidwitz
	Ted Stebbins
	Judith Terra
	Paul Tucker

The Collections Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mme. Ahrweiler. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Education Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker and seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

The Strategic Planning Committee and Chair was moved by Dr. Tucker, seconded by Mrs. Terra. The vote in favor was unanimous.

At 2:10 PM the meeting was adjourned for lunch. At 2:40 the meeting resumed. The next item on the agenda was to review the estate. Mr. Heatwole did so and indicated that there were three issues that Winston & Strawn examined:

1. The transaction with Lawter
2. The transactions between Dan Terra and Jim Terra
3. The magnitude of the Bell, Boyd bills

Mr. Heatwole indicated Winston & Strawn had discussed the estate report with Bell, Boyd, BIK, Mayer, Brown & Platt, the Foundation Board and had reviewed all papers. Winston Strawn has concluded its review. He also indicated that the one open point was that Schiff, Hardin & Waite will be reviewing issues relating to Mercury Finance.

Winston & Strawn's conclusion was that, after thorough review, they found no reason for the Foundation not to accept the report of the Executor, except for Mercury Finance, which they have not reviewed.

He indicated that Bell, Boyd has not turned over the Mercury Finance papers to Schiff, Hardin and that we need to give them a waiver for Schiff, Hardin to get the papers. He noted that Jim Collins needed a letter from the Foundation to turn over the material to Schiff, Hardin.

A resolution with four components, which was as follows, was moved by Mme. Ahrweiler and seconded by Dr. Marshall:

1. Accept the Winston Strawn report as issued.
2. Approve that a letter be sent to Bell, Boyd to release the papers to Schiff, Hardin immediately so that Schiff Hardin may review the Mercury Finance issues expeditiously.
3. Report to the Executive Committee on the result of Schiff, Hardin's review of Mercury Finance.
4. Authorize the Executive Committee to close the estate.

The vote was taken unanimously in favor of this resolution.

The Finance Committee report was given by Mr. Ratner. He discussed results of the audit. He also discussed the four points raised in the Management Letter: Terra Museum Accounting, Endowment Income, Intercompany Activity and In-kind Contributions. Mr. Ratner addressed each of the points and indicated that a resolution of these points would be made. A motion to accept the Audit and Management Letter, subject to any footnotes relating to the current lawsuit, was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. Mr. Ratner then discussed the change of investment allocations within the equity portion. A memo on this matter is included in the Board book under the September 25 Finance Committee section. A motion to accept this reallocation was made by Ambassador Hartman and seconded by Mr. Gidwitz. The vote was unanimously in favor. The third item was to review three new potential investment advisors: Kennedy, Ennis and Cambridge. Mr. Ratner recommended Kennedy which Mr. Gidwitz agreed with. The motion to approve was made by Dr. Stebbins and seconded by Dr. Marshall. The vote was unanimous in favor.

Dr. Stebbins then gave the Collection Committee report. The first item on the agenda was the motion by Dr. Stebbins to have the Board delegate the approval of the loans, exhibitions, donations, etc. to the Collections Committee to cover the report included in the Board book. Mme. Ahrweiler seconded. The motion was unanimously in favor. The next item was the Deaccession report. Dr. Stebbins indicated that, after careful review by the Committee and the outside advisors who made two trips to Chicago to examine the proposed deaccessions, the final list had been winnowed to 27 objects, with 16 of them not being included in the American Impressionist sale at Christie's on November 29, 2000.

Ambassador Hartman suggested that there should be some public relation's communications at the time about the deaccessioning. He suggested that it be made clear that these items are being sold to raise purchase funds for new additions to the collection. Dr. Stebbins also indicated that we have chosen Christie's and indicated some of the details of the contract and the reasons for selecting that venue as opposed to Sotheby's or Vance Jordan, a private dealer.

Mr. Gidwitz moved to approve the deaccessioning report and the selection of Christie's. Seconded by Ambassador Hartman. Unanimously in favor.

The Director's reports and VP of Finance reports were not given orally, but were included in the September 26, 2000 Board book.

Dr. Tucker suggested that he and Dr. Stebbins form a search committee for the new MAAG Director.

Mr. Ratner was instructed to change Sophie Levy's position at MAGG to Curator from Assistant Curator.

Mr. Ratner was asked to set-up both an Executive Committee conference call and a Board conference call after the court hearing on the 12th.

Dr. Marshall suggested that we need some formal communication structure perhaps in the form of a written newsletter every 3-4 weeks to keep the Board apprised of developments regarding the lawsuit. Mr. Ratner and Dr. Tucker were asked to coordinate.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00pm.

Respectively submitted,

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS had at the hearing of the above-entitled cause, before the Honorable DOROTHY KINNAIRD, Judge of said court, on the 24th day of July, 2001.

APPEARANCES: MESSRS: JAMES CARROLL, JOHN F. KENNEDY and WILLIAM R. QUINLAN, on behalf of Plaintiffs; MESSRS: FLOYD PERKINS and THOMAS IOPPOLO, Assistant Attorney Generals.

MISS SUSAN STONE, on behalf of the Terra Foundation;

MESSRA: ROBERT CUMMINS and CHRIS TODD, on behalf of Defendants.

Circuit Court of Cook County
County Department-Chancery Division

Foundation the Foundation does assert attorney client privilege over any communications going either way from an attorney for the Foundation, which Mr. Collins was at this point in time, to Mr. Terra who was then chairman of the Terra Museum.

THE COURT: I don't want to get hung up on this letter forever. Mr. Cummins, how did you all get this?

MR. CUMMINS: I can't answer that question, Judge. I'll find out. One of the preliminary things I was going to address, and I am relying largely on papers that were previously filed by Mr. Quinlan on behalf of his clients Buntrock and Gidwitz. I'm going to object to anything Sidley and Austin does in this case today because based upon the assertions of Mr. Quinlan and his clients they are conflicted in this proceeding. That is one of the reasons we want to adjourn it. We believe Winston and Strawn is conflicted, We believe Sidley is conflicted. And we think that these are serious issues that have to be addressed by the Court as a premise to this entire proceeding.

I just want to make that of record.

THE COURT: It's on the record. And to the extent it's an objection, it's going to be overruled.

We have been through the Sidley issue so many times I don't even want to think about it. The Appellate Court reviewed it. I know that Mr. Quinlan probably totally agrees with you generally on the whole subject matter, but maybe today he disagrees.

But Sidley is here, they are representing the Foundation and they have not been removed and I don't see a conflict so let's just move on.

I'm going to keep this letter, it really doesn't do much. I've read it all, I'm going to keep it sealed for now. If you want to come in later and have it unsealed. If you concede that this was somehow in the public domain, attached to a pleading, that somewhere along the line the attorney client privilege got waived we'll open it up. For those of you who have not seen this letter, it's really nothing heavy anyway.

The next thing, Exhibits 9, 10,11, 12, 13 are all documents that relate to Dan Terra. intent. They were declarations filed in Federal Court. They should all be unsealed.

Fourteen I want to unseal. That's a mailing address announcement. The Simpson declaration in Federal Court is 15. That should be unsealed.

MS. STONE: I believe it's necessary to respond to the last salvo by counsel for the objectors.

Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood solely represented the Foundation. We do not represent any of the defendants in their -- any of the directors in their individual capacity. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins in his individual capacity. He has another lawyer for that purpose.

We do not represent Dr. Marshall in her individual capacity. We represent merely the Foundation. We give advice to the six non-named, nonparty directors. That includes Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

There is no conflict by Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood at any point in this case. There is no conflict anywhere.

Thank you.

MR. QUINLAN: Judge, I would like to reserve my comments for the lounge across the street after the proceedings here.

Thank you.

THE COURT: We are in recess. Thank you.

AFFIDAVIT OF STEPHEN C. CARLSON

The undersigned, upon oath, does hereby depose and state as follows:

1. I, Stephen C. Carlson, am over 18 years of age and have personal knowledge of the facts attested to herein.

2. I am a partner at the law firm of Sidley Austin Brown & Wood and practice in the Chicago office of the firm at Bank One Plaza. I am one of the attorneys who has represented The Terra Foundation for the Arts in the litigation brought against it by Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz in September, 2000 and by Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson in July, 2001.

3. I have read the "Affidavit of Judith Terra" attached to "Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Disqualify" and the motion faxed to counsel for the parties on the morning of Monday, September 17, 2001 along with a Notice of Motion, purporting to notice the motion to be heard that morning.

4. Contrary to the "Emergency Motion to Disqualify," at no time in either of the above-described lawsuits did Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ever "act as counsel to Mrs. Terra in her individual capacity."

5. Contrary to that motion, at no time did Mrs. Terra "share" any "confidential information" with me or with any attorney from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood in my presence, nor to my knowledge did she ever provide any confidential information to any Sidley attorney.

6. Contrary to that motion, at no time did I, or any attorney from Sidley Austin Brown & Wood in my presence, "provide legal advice to Mrs. Terra", nor to my knowledge did any Sidley attorney ever provide her legal advice in either of the above-described lawsuits.

7. Mrs. Terra's affidavit claims (par. 8) that "because the [Buntrock and Gidwitz] lawsuit was brought against the Foundation's Board, it was necessary to maintain a close legal and confidential relationship with Ms. Stone and Mr. Carlson, and we continued to work closely with them, particularly Ms. Stone." Mrs. Terra is wrong. I never had a "close legal and confidential relationship" with Mrs. Terra, nor did Ms. Stone.

8. Perhaps Mrs. Terra's confusion results from her mistaken and unreasonable belief (par. 8) that the Buntrock and Gidwitz lawsuit was somehow "brought against the Foundation's Board." On the contrary, that lawsuit was brought against the Foundation and only three members of the Foundation's eleven person Board, namely Mrs. Terra, Dr. Paul Hayes Tucker and Senator Alan Simpson (as well as a non-Board member, Naftali Michaeli). Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson were never represented by Sidley, but had separate counsel, of their own choosing, Judge Brian Crowe and his colleagues at Shefsky & Froelich. Mr. Michaeli represented himself.

9. Mrs. Terra was, of course, always free to retain whatever other or additional counsel she felt she wanted to retain to represent her and she has, of course, now been represented in connection with both of the above-described lawsuits by at least five different law firms in addition to Judge Crowe's firm, and never by Sidley Austin Brown & Wood.

10. At no time did I, or any other Sidley attorney in my presence, ever say anything to Mrs. Terra from which she could have reasonably believed that Sidley represented her or any party to either of the above-described lawsuits other than the Foundation which had retained us and to which we submitted our statements for professional services. At no time did Mrs. Terra ever suggest to me or to any Sidley attorney in my presence nor to my knowledge to any Sidley attorney that she thought that Sidley represented her in her individual capacity or that she ever intended to pay Sidley for any legal services.

11. During the course of the Buntrock and Gidwitz litigation, to my knowledge, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, as counsel for the Foundation, communicated at various points in time, with all nine of the non-plaintiff members of the Foundation's Board of Directors. Our principal contacts were with Dr. Theodore Stebbins and Ambassador Jacques Andréani, whom the Board of the Foundation appointed in late November, 2000 as an Independent Litigation Committee to oversee the litigation.

12. While I participated in a few discussions with Mrs. Terra during the course of the Buntrock and Gidwitz litigation, I had no "regular and detailed conversations about the status of the litigation" or "strategies going forward" with her. While she claims to have "shared" with me her "most personal concerns and hopes," my substantive discussions with her concerned certain factual matters relating to the Foundation's history, as she admits in paragraph 5 of her affidavit. Nothing she ever told me was even arguably confidential (and indeed it was communicated to become and did, to the degree it was helpful, become part of obviously nonconfidential Court papers). None of what she told me was communicated to obtain any legal advice. She knew I was one of the attorneys for the Foundation and that she had counsel of her own to provide her with whatever legal advice she needed in an individual capacity in connection with the Buntrock and Gidwitz litigation.

13. I believe I was present during the meeting Mrs. Terra seems to refer to in paragraph 10 of her affidavit. I believe one of Mrs. Terra's lawyers, Jim Wilson, from Shefsky & Froelich, was also present. Mrs. Terra's recollection of that meeting is incorrect. Among other things, at no time did anyone in my presence even remotely suggest to her that she had some sort of unique personal veto power over any mediated settlement. Indeed, no one in my presence ever suggested to Mrs. Terra that she was anything other than one vote out of eleven or that the Foundation's ultimate position on any mediated settlement would be determined by anything other than a vote of the Foundation's Directors. Moreover, nothing that occurred during that meeting could reasonably have led Mrs. Terra to believe that Sidley Austin Brown & Wood represented her in her individual capacity.

14. My discussions with Mrs. Terra were far less frequent than my discussions with other members of the Terra Foundation's Board of Directors or other of its employees, but at no point in time did my few communications with her change in any appreciable way as she apparently claims in paragraph 11 of her affidavit, nor did I ever take or ever need to take any "actions" to "shut her out" of anything.

15. Under penalties as provided by law pursuant to Section 1-108 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, I certify that the statements set forth in this affidavit are true and correct.

ORDER

This cause coming to be heard on Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Appoint Receiver and for Temporary Restraining Order and Opposition to Stay ("Plaintiffs Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order") and Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Further Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract ("Plaintiffs Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract"), and for scheduling of the Attorney General's and Plaintiffs' Motion to Enjoin the Terra Foundation's Use of the Current Special Litigation Committee and for Appointment of a Receiver, due notice having been given, the Court having heard argument of counsel and having reviewed the briefs of the parties, and for the reasons set forth on the record, IT IS ORDERED:

A. Denial of Temporary Restraining Order

(1) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Terra Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee from continuing to retain Sidley & Austin as counsel is denied, the Court considering the motion as a renewed motion to disqualify counsel and not a proper motion for temporary restraining order;

(2) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Terra Foundations Independent Litigation Committee from taking action to authorize or direct Sidley & Austin to perform the subject investigation is denied;

(3) Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to Enjoin Implementation of the Dilenschneider Contract is denied;

B. Granting of Temporary Restraining Order

(4) That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Independent Litigation Committee and the Terra Foundation from paying the legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich to date is granted. This Temporary Restraining Order shall remain in full force and effect until January 30, 2001 at 5:00 p.m. In the event the Board meets as set forth in Paragraph C, this Order may be modified upon motion before January 30, 2001.

In granting this Temporary Restraining Order the Court makes the following findings:

a. Plaintiffs have established a protectible right in need of protection;

b. Plaintiffs have established that they and the public will suffer irreparable injury if injunctive relief is not granted;

c. Plaintiffs have established that there is no adequate remedy at law if injunctive relief were not granted;

d. Plaintiffs have raised a fair question as to their likelihood of success on the merits;

e. To the extent such a finding is necessary, the hardships favor plaintiffs.

The Court therefore orders that the Foundation and the Independent Litigation Committee are enjoined from paying any legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich until January 30, 2001 at 5:00 p.m. This Temporary Restraining Order is entered with notice, as of 5:00 ~~a.m.~~/p.m. on January 2, 2001. This case is continued to January 30, 2001 at 10:30 a.m. for the Court to determine whether this Temporary Restraining Order should be continued, and whether a preliminary injunction hearing shall be scheduled.

C. Board Meeting Regarding Attorney Fees and Costs

(5) Further, the Court orders during the pendency of this Temporary Restraining Order that no attorney fees or costs of Sidley and Austin and/or Shefsky and Froelich shall be paid unless the Terra Foundation's board of directors meets to consider the issues relating to such fees and costs. If the board of directors elects to meet, the meeting shall take place in Chicago, Illinois at the Foundation's headquarters, and as follows:

a. A purpose of the meeting is to advise the Board as to the issues of the review and payment of the legal bills of Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich;

b. The Board shall make a specific statement as to whether or not: (1) the Board is delegating the authority to review and pay the subject legal bills to the independent litigation committee; or (2) whether the Board retains the authority to review and pay the subject legal bills for itself; or, (3) whether the Board establishes another mechanism to review the subject legal bills, as it may have done when the Terra Foundation was involved in other litigation;

c. The Board shall be informed of the total expense of this litigation to date, including the total amount of attorney fees and costs incurred by Sidley and Austin and Shefsky and Froelich to date; ℄ as it relates to any such advancement

d. No Board member who seeks advancement of attorney fees or costs may vote on the issues set forth in section (b) above, namely, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker, or Senator Simpson;

e. The meeting shall be called upon no less than five business days written notice to each board member. The Foundation shall use its best efforts to schedule the meeting at a time mutually convenient to all board members to ensure maximum board member participation in the meeting. The Foundation shall survey in writing each board member to determine the date for the meeting before the notice for the meeting is issued to each board member. The Foundation shall communicate the full results of the survey to all counsel of record at least 24 hours before the notice is mailed; and

f. The notice for the meeting shall include the following:

i). A copy of this Order;

ii). The total amount of Sidley and Austin's and Shefsky and Froelich's bills, with each attorneys' hourly rates and total number of hours billed monthly;

iii). The undertakings executed by Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Senator Simpson.

D. Attorney General's Motion to Enjoin the Terra Foundation's Use of the Current Special Litigation Committee and for Appointment of a Receiver to Conduct the Independent Investigation

(6) The defendant Terra Foundation shall respond to the Attorney General's Motion to Enjoin by January 8, 2001.

(7) The Attorney General's Emergency Motion to Compel Discovery is granted in part, and the parties may commence immediate expedited discovery as it relates to the allegations involving Dr. Stebbins.

(8) The Emergency Motion is set for status on discovery on January 9, 2001 at 2:00 p.m.

E. Terra Foundation's Motion to Continue Stay of Proceedings Pending Independent Litigation Committee Investigation

(9) The Foundation's motion to continue the stay of proceedings is denied and discovery may commence on all issues after counsel has met and conferred to determine an outline of discovery.

F. The Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Stay

(10) The Plaintiffs emergency motion to stay the enforcement of the orders entered in Paragraph A(1)(2) and (3) of this Order is denied.

(11) That portion of the Report of Proceedings of December 29, 2000, not held in the courtroom shall be under seal and the original shall be submitted to the Court. The court reporter's office shall not release a copy of the sealed transcript to anyone.

Bruce R. HOBAN, Plaintiff,
v.
STRATA MARKETING, INC., Roger Skolnik and Bruce Johnson, Defendants.

No. 91 C 5331.

Oct. 2, 1991.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

CONLON, District Judge.

1 In this diversity action, plaintiff Bruce R. Hoban ("Hoban") sues defendants Strata Marketing, Inc. ("Strata"), Roger Skolnik ("Skolnik"), and Bruce Johnson ("Johnson") (collectively, "defendants") for breach of an oral contract. Hoban moves to disqualify James Gordon ("Gordon") and Edward Slovick ("Slovick") as defendants' counsel. Defendants oppose disqualification. [FN1]

BACKGROUND

The facts alleged by Hoban are as follows. [FN2] Hoban claims that defendants breached an oral agreement that Hoban would become a one-third owner of Strata. ¶ 1. The other major issue is the purpose and scope of Hoban's work on upgrading Strata's software. ¶ 9; Complaint ¶ 16. Attorneys Gordon and Slovick currently serve as defendants' counsel. ¶ 2. Although they are not affiliated by a formal partnership agreement, Gordon and Slovick share office space, telephone service, and profits. ¶ 3.

In 1990, prior to the filing of this action, Gordon served as Strata's counsel in an unrelated matter. ¶ 5. During that time, there were three presidents of Strata: Skolnik, Johnson, and Hoban. ¶ 6. All three presidents met with Gordon concerning the unrelated matter. During these meetings, Gordon received information concerning Hoban's position at Strata. Gordon also received information concerning Hoban's work on upgrading Strata's software. ¶¶ 7, 8. At the time of these meetings, Hoban looked upon Gordon as Strata's attorney. ¶ 10. Hoban confided in Gordon in accordance with his duties as an officer of Strata. ¶ 11.

Hoban claims that there is a substantial relationship between the information Gordon received in his prior representation of Strata and issues relevant to the current litigation. ¶ 13. For this reason, Hoban argues that Gordon should be disqualified as defendants' counsel. Hoban also argues that Slovick should be disqualified because he is in the same firm as Gordon. ¶ 14.

DISCUSSION

Disqualification of an attorney is a drastic measure that should only be imposed when absolutely necessary. Schiessle v. Stephens, 717 F.2d 417, 420 (7th Cir.1983). The moving party has the burden of showing that the opposing attorney had access to confidential or privileged information in the course of a prior representation. Roth v. Continental Casualty Co., 676 F.Supp. 816 (N.D.Ill.1987).

The standard for disqualification is the "substantial relationship" test. LaSalle National Bank v. County of Lake, 703 F.2d 252, 255 (7th Cir.1983). The test involves a three-part inquiry to determine whether a substantial relationship exists between the confidential information gained by the attorney in the previous representation and the issues in the current litigation. First, the court determines the scope of the prior representation. Second, the court determines whether it is reasonable to infer that the confidential information allegedly given would have been given to the attorney under those circumstances. Third, the trial court determines whether that information is relevant to the current litigation. Id. at 255-256. If the court determines that a substantial relationship exists, the attorney is presumed to have received confidential information during the prior representation. This presumption, however, may be rebutted. Id. at 256; Schiessle, 717 F.2d at 420.

2 The substantial relationship test assumes a prior attorney/client relationship between the attorney at issue and the party seeking his disqualification. In other words, the moving party must show the existence of a prior attorney/client relationship as a preliminary matter. Bridge Products, Inc. v. Quantum Chemical Corp., No. 88 C 10734, 1990 WL 70857, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5019 (N.D.Ill. April 27, 1990); See also Pain Prevention Lab, Inc. v. Electronic Waveform Labs, Inc., 657 F.Supp. 1486, 1495 (N.D.Ill.1987); Bobbitt v. Victorian House, Inc., 545 F.Supp. 1124, 1125 (N.D.Ill.1982); DCA Food Industries Inc. v. Tasty Foods, Inc., 626 F.Supp. 54, 58-60 (W.D.Wis.1985) (applying Seventh Circuit precedent).

Copr. © West 2001 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Here, Hoban does not assert that there was ever a formal attorney/client relationship between Gordon and himself. In fact, Hoban admits that Gordon was Strata's counsel, not his. Hoban's motion ¶¶ 5, 10, 13 and 14. Indeed, the general rule is that corporate counsel does not become counsel for the corporation's individual shareholders and directors. In other words, a director or officer conferring with corporate counsel should understand that anything revealed to that attorney is known by the corporation. There is normally no conflict of interest when a director sues a corporation represented by its corporate counsel. The reason is that anything the director previously told that attorney would ordinarily have been communicated to the attorney as counsel for the corporation. Bobbitt, 545 F.Supp. at 1126.

Rather, Hoban appears to contend that his dealings with Gordon created an implied attorney/client relationship. It is true that an attorney/client relationship does not have to be formal or express. Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Kerr-McGee Corp, 580 F.2d 1311, 1318-1319 (7th Cir.1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 955 (1978). Thus, the question of whether an implied attorney/client relationship was created between Hoban and Gordon must be determined by the facts. Bobbitt, 545 F.Supp. at 1126; Rosman v. Shapiro, 653 F.Supp. 1441, 1445 (S.D.N.Y.1987). To establish an implied attorney/client relationship, Hoban must show (1) that he submitted confidential information to Gordon, and (2) that he did so with the reasonable belief that Gordon was acting as his personal attorney. Pain Prevention Lab, 657 F.Supp. at 1495; DCA Food Industries, 626 F.Supp. at 59-60.

Hoban fails both parts of this test. The alleged confidential information consists only of Hoban's position with Strata and his work on their software. This is the same information contained in Hoban's complaint and cannot be reasonably construed as confidential. Furthermore, Hoban admits that defendants Johnson and Skolnik were also present when much of this information was given to Gordon. Hoban's motion ¶ 7. Information freely given to defendants cannot be viewed as confidential. There is no evidence whatsoever that Hoban privately discussed with Gordon confidential matters that he expected would not be revealed to any of the defendants. See Bobbitt, 545 F.Supp. at 1127. [FN3]

*3 Nor is there any basis to conclude that Hoban reasonably believed that Gordon was acting as his personal attorney. Hoban acknowledges that Gordon represented only Strata. In fact, Hoban admits that he never consulted Gordon in any capacity other that as an officer, director or agent of Strata. Hoban's motion ¶ 11. Under these circumstances, there cannot be an implied attorney/client relationship between an officer or director and a corporate counsel. Id. at 1126. [FN4]

CONCLUSION

Hoban fails to show that he had a previous attorney/client relationship with Gordon. Thus, a substantial relationship inquiry is unnecessary. [FN5] Accordingly, Hoban's motion to disqualify defendants' counsel is denied.

FN1. The defendants' motion to dismiss plaintiff's motion to disqualify shall be treated as an opposing memorandum to Hoban's motion to disqualify.

FN2. All references in this section are to Hoban's motion to disqualify unless otherwise indicated.

FN3. Hoban argues that it does not matter whether Gordon's formal client was Strata or Hoban. But this is only true if Hoban gave confidential information to Gordon with the reasonable belief that Gordon was acting as his individual attorney. Analytica, Inc. v. NPD Research, Inc., 708 F.2d 1263, 1268 (7th Cir.1983); Kerr-McGee, 580 F.2d at 1319- 1320. Thus, Analytica and Kerr-McGee may be distinguished because those cases involve circumstances where a party gave the kind of confidential information that the party would have furnished a privately retained lawyer. Analytica, 708 F.2d at 1268-1269.

FN4. Rosman may also be distinguished because it is narrowly limited to its facts: a close corporation consisting of only two 50% shareholders, created solely to facilitate the transaction that was the focus of the litigation. Rosman, 653 F.Supp. at 1445, fn. 8. The court finds the facts presented here more analogous to those in Bobbitt.

FN5. Since Hoban has not established a previous attorney/client relationship with Slovick, there is no basis to disqualify Slovick either.

Jo Ann STOPKA, Plaintiff,
v.
ALLIANCE OF AMERICAN INSURERS, Rodger S. Lawson, C. Clarke Imbler, and Gregory W. Heidrich, Defendants.

No. 95 C 7487.

April 25, 1996.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

CONLON, District Judge.

*1 Plaintiff Jo Ann Stopka sues her current employer Alliance of American Insurers ("Alliance"), and three of her former supervisors, Roger S. Lawson, C. Clarke Imbler and Gregory W. Heidrich (the "individual defendants") (collectively "defendants") for violations of the Equal Pay Act ("EPA"), 29 U.S.C. § 206(d), Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ("Title VII"), 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., the Age Discrimination in Employment Act ("ADEA"), 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq., the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA"), 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq., the Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA"), 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq., and Illinois common law for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Stopka moves to disqualify defendants' attorneys Lawrence Cohen and Richard Pincus and their law firm Fox and Grove, Chtd. ("Fox & Grove") (collectively "defense counsel") from further representation of Alliance and the individual defendants in this matter. Defendants oppose Stopka's motion. Additionally, Alliance and defense counsel move to quash document and deposition subpoenas directed to Fox & Grove, Cohen and Pincus. Stopka opposes the motion to quash.

BACKGROUND

Stopka is a current Alliance employee on long term disability leave. Stopka has been employed for 12 years by Alliance. She held the position of vice president of the administration division allegedly between 1981 and October 1995. See Affidavit of Jo Ann Stopka ("Stopka Aff.") ¶ 2. Stopka's responsibilities included supervising Alliance's human resources department, including salary and benefits administration, employee relations and compliance with state and federal employment laws and regulations. Id. at ¶ 3.

Stopka sues defendants for disparate treatment and pattern and practice discrimination. Fox & Grove has been labor and employment relations counsel for Alliance for approximately 15 years. Cohen and Pincus are partners at Fox & Grove. To support her claims, Stopka intends to testify about conversations occurring at meetings she attended with the individual defendants and defense counsel allegedly about similar discrimination against other Alliance employees.

On March 22, 1996, Stopka served Fox & Grove, Cohen and Pincus with subpoenas for documents and testimony. See Def. Exs. A-C. In the subpoenas, Stopka seeks production of the following documents: (i) itemized billing statements or invoices from Fox & Grove to Alliance between August 1984 and July 1995; (ii) time sheets reflecting telephonic, in-person and written communications between Fox & Grove and Stopka between August 1984 and July 1995; (iii) notes, memoranda, correspondence, electronic mail or other communication between Fox & Grove and Stopka between 1984 and 1996, including carbon copies; and (iv) notes or recordings of conversations taken by Fox & Grove attorneys of conversations between themselves and Stopka. See Def. Exs. A-B to motion to quash.

DISCUSSION

I. DISQUALIFICATION

*2 Stopka raises four arguments in support of her motion to disqualify defense counsel: (i) she asserts Cohen and Pincus are potential witnesses, and thus should be disqualified under Rule 3.7 of the Rules of Professional Conduct for the Northern District of Illinois providing for disqualification when a conflict arises between a lawyer who may be both a witness and an advocate; (ii) Cohen and Pincus' prior role as Stopka's alleged legal advisors in her individual capacity and as Alliance vice president purportedly conflict with their role as defense counsel in violation of Rule 1.9; (iii) Cohen and Pincus' multiple representation of Alliance and the individual defendants in a case involving both corporate and individual liability may violate Rule 1.7; and (iv) Cohen and Pincus' disqualification should be imputed to Fox & Grove under Rule 1.10.

Defense counsel respond as follows: (i) Regarding Rule 3.7, Cohen and Pincus will not testify, asserting that the communications Stopka was privy to are protected by the attorney-client privilege between defense counsel and Alliance, and Stopka has not demonstrated with specificity that their testimony would substantially prejudice Alliance; (ii) Rule 1.9 is inapplicable because Stopka was never a client of Fox & Grove and the "substantial relationship" test is inapplicable because Alliance was privy to all information communicated to or by Stopka and Fox & Grove attorneys; (iii) Rule 1.7 is inapplicable because the individual defendants were all informed of potential conflict issues and consented to Fox & Grove's multiple representation; and (iv) Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to disqualifying Fox & Grove because there is no basis to disqualify Cohen and Pincus.

Disqualification of an attorney is a drastic measure that should only be imposed when absolutely necessary. Hoban v. Strata Marketing, Inc., No. 91 C 5331, 1991 WL 204965, at *1 (N.D. Ill., Oct. 2, 1991); Schiessle v. Stephens, 717 F.2d 417, 420 (7th Cir. 1983). Disqualification motions should be viewed "with extreme caution for they can be misused as techniques of harassment." Lanigan v. Resolution Trust Corp., No. 91 C 7216, 1992 WL 350688 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 23, 1992) (quoting Freeman v. Chicago Musical Instrument Co., 689 F.2d 715, 721-22 (7th Cir. 1982)).

A. The Attorney-Client Relationship

To succeed on her motion, the moving party must show that opposing counsel had access to confidential or privileged information in the course of a prior representation. Hoban, 1991 WL 204965, at *1. See also Rule 1.9 (concerning a "lawyer who has formerly represented a client in another matter"). Thus, a necessary precondition to disqualification is proving a prior attorney-client relationship. The attorney-client relationship may either be expressed or implied. Hoban, 1991 WL 204965, at *2 (citing Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 580 F.2d 1311, 1318-1319 (7th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 955 (1978)).

3 Stopka admits that she did not have an express attorney-client relationship with defense counsel. To establish an implied attorney-client relationship, Stopka must show: (1) that she submitted confidential information to opposing counsel and (2) that she did so with the reasonable belief that opposing counsel was acting as her personal attorney. Hoban, 1991 WL 204965 at *2 (citation omitted).

Stopka's motion to disqualify is premised on her assumption that Fox & Grove, Cohen and Pincus provided her with legal services and advice in her individual capacity. However, Stopka fails to establish that she had an implied attorney- client relationship. Stopka contends she was either the client or the agent of the client at the time of these communications. Stopka's affidavit filed in camera does not establish an attorney-client relationship between herself and defense counsel. She attests she had, > numerous contacts both [by] telephone and in person with [defense counsel]. I relied on Messrs. Cohen and Pincus to provide legal advice and counsel regarding various employment matters for which I had day-to-day responsibilities. I believed that they were advising me in my individual capacity as a client as well as in my capacity as a Division Vice President. I relied upon their legal advice in recommending routine as well as difficult personnel decisions to avoid personal as well as corporate liability for such decisions.... Some of these conversations involved highly confidential corporate personnel matters.

Stopka Aff. ¶¶ 5-6 (emphasis added). Stopka describes numerous conversations she had with Fox & Grove attorneys in which other Alliance officials, and generally one or more of the individual defendants, also participated. Id. at ¶¶ 7-14.

In her motion, Stopka asserts without any support that "Messrs. Pincus and Cohen undoubtedly garnered information from Ms. Stopka during these numerous conversations which she considered confidential that could be used against her in cross-examination or during the course of the litigation." Pl. memorandum at 8. This conclusory and unsupported assertion is wholly unpersuasive. There is no basis for Stopka to reasonably believe that Fox & Grove acted as her personal attorney. Stopka only attests that she consulted with Fox & Grove in her capacity as an officer or agent of Alliance. A corporate officer "conferring with corporate counsel should understand that anything revealed to that attorney is known by the corporation." Hoban, 1991 WL 204965, at *2 (citing Bobbitt v. Victorian House, Inc., 545 F. Supp. 1124, 1126 (N.D. Ill. 1982)). Stopka simply fails to show that she had private and confidential communications with Fox & Grove that she expected would not be revealed to the corporation. Id. Indeed, all of the conversations described in her affidavit involved another Alliance officer or employee, and generally one or more of the individual defendants. "Information freely given to defendants cannot be viewed as confidential." Id. Under these circumstances, there cannot be an implied attorney-client relationship between a corporate officer and the corporation's outside counsel. Because Stopka fails to establish a prior attorney-client relationship, defense counsel may not be disqualified under Rule 1.9.

B. Rule 3.7

4 Stopka's argument that defense counsel should be disqualified under Rule 3.7 because they may be called to testify is also unfounded. Rule 3.7(a) provides, "a lawyer shall not act as an advocate in a trial or evidentiary proceeding if a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the lawyer may be called as a witness therein on behalf of the client ...." Stopka contends Pincus and Cohen should be disqualified if they intend to testify on behalf of their clients. However, defendants do not intend to call their counsel to testify, asserting the attorney-client privilege concerning previous legal advice given to Alliance. Thus, Rule 3.7 is inapplicable.

Rule 3.7(b) provides that a lawyer who reasonably should know he may be called as a witness other than on behalf of the client may act as an advocate in a trial or evidentiary proceeding unless the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the lawyer's testimony is or may be prejudicial to the client. Stopka bears the burden of demonstrating with specificity that Cohen and Pincus' testimony would substantially prejudice the defendants. Lanigan, 1992 WL 350688 at *4. Like the moving party in Lanigan, Stopka fails to specify how the attorneys' testimony could be prejudicial to their client. Stopka candidly acknowledges that she "does not know how [Cohen and Pincus] will testify about the various communications between themselves and her." Pl. memorandum at 4.

Moreover, Stopka has not clearly explained the need for Cohen and Pincus' testimony. Her allegations of prior acts of discrimination concern decisions made and carried out by Alliance and its officers. "Where evidence is easily available from other sources, attorneys who participate in a case should not be called as witnesses absent extraordinary circumstances or compelling reasons." Lanigan, 1992 WL 350688 at *4 (citing United States v. Dack, 747 F.2d 1172, 1176 n.5 (7th Cir. 1984)). Stopka fails to show that extraordinary circumstances or compelling reasons require Cohen and Pincus' testimony. Accordingly, defense counsel will not be disqualified under Rule 3.7

C. Rule 1.7

Rule 1.7 prohibits a lawyer from representing multiple clients under certain circumstances. The rule provides that a lawyer shall not represent a client, "if the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another client, unless: (1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client; and (2) each client consents after consultation."

Stopka contends Fox & Grove's appearance on behalf of Alliance "will very likely be at odds now or during the course of litigation with the defense of the individual defendants who supervised Ms. Stopka." Pl. memorandum at 10. Stopka asserts that even if there presently is no conflict, the likelihood that conflict could arise militates strongly in favor of disqualification.

Stopka's argument is unpersuasive. Defendants explain that after they were informed of all potential conflict issues, the individual defendants consented to Fox & Grove's multiple representation. Moreover, defendants maintain their interests are aligned; Alliance does not contend the individual defendants acted without authority or inconsistent with their fiduciary responsibilities. Finally, the low probability that the litigation could be delayed in the future should a conflict arise does not outweigh the significant prejudice to defendants from having counsel of their choice disqualified.

5 Thus, defense counsel will not be disqualified under Rule 1.7. Since Stopka fails to meet her burden of showing cause for disqualifying Cohen and Pincus, there is no basis to impute any reasons for disqualification to Fox & Grove under Rule 1.10. Accordingly, Stopka's motion to disqualify must be denied.

II. MOTION TO QUASH

Defense counsel move to quash subpoenas served on them by Stopka, arguing that Stopka seeks documents that are subject to the attorney-client privilege between Alliance and Fox & Grove. Defense counsel contends disclosure would reveal the nature and substance of Fox & Grove's legal advice to Alliance. Finally, Fox & Grove contends the purpose of deposing Cohen and Pincus is not because they are occurrence witnesses of Stopka's alleged discrimination, but rather to show that Fox & Grove should be disqualified. Fox & Grove maintains that if Cohen and Pincus are later needed to testify as occurrence witnesses about non-privileged, non-duplicative matters, they can be deposed at that time.

Stopka responds she is seeking documents and testimony that will prove the individual defendants and other Alliance employees participated in conferences with her in which unlawful termination of other Alliance employees allegedly was considered. She contends the Fox & Grove billing records and attorney notes will establish the date, time and place of the meetings, as well as who was in attendance and the substance of the employment matters discussed. She also seeks to probe Cohen and Pincus' recollections of the meetings, and statements made by defendants and other Alliance employees concerning their alleged intent to unlawfully terminate older, female or disabled employees. She agrees to modify her subpoena to encompass only records up to and including the date of her last written or verbal communication with Fox & Grove attorneys.

A. Documents

Rule 45(c)(3)(iii) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that the court may quash or modify a subpoena if it "requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies." Defendants contend the documents Stopka seeks are all attorney-client privileged. Stopka claims any privilege was waived when her interest became adverse to the defendants' interests. Stopka further maintains that the crime- fraud exception to the privilege should apply because the intent of defendants' communications with their lawyers was to violate the anti-discrimination laws and to defraud Alliance employees into believing Alliance was an equal employment employer. In re Special September 1978 Grand Jury, 640 F.2d 49, 59 (7th Cir. 1980); Cooksey v. Hilton Int'l Co., 863 F. Supp. 150, 151 (S.D.N.Y. 1994).

1. The Attorney-Client Privilege

The attorney-client privilege applies to communications made by corporate employees concerning matters pertinent to their corporate duties if sought by the corporation's attorney in order to formulate and render legal advice to the corporation. Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 394 (1981).

> *6 The power to waive the corporate attorney-client privilege rests with the corporation's management and is normally exercised by its officers and directors. The managers, of course, must exercise the privilege in a manner consistent with their fiduciary duty to act in the best interests of the corporation and not of themselves as individuals.

Commodity Futures Trading Comm'n v. Weintraub, 471 U.S. 343, 348-49 (1985) (internal citations omitted). Any privilege that exists as to a corporate officer's role and functions within a corporation belongs to the corporation, not the officer. Matter of Bevill, Bresler & Schulman Asset Mgmt. Corp., 805 F.2d 120, 124 (3rd Cir. 1986) (citing Weintraub, 471 U.S. at 348). Based on the evidence submitted in support of the motions to disqualify and to quash, Alliance officers, including Stopka in her role and function as vice president of administration, sought legal advice from defense counsel on behalf of Alliance concerning Alliance employment matters.

Under these circumstances, Stopka may not waive Alliance's attorney-client privilege. Nor is her attempt to waive the privilege consistent with her fiduciary duties to Alliance because the attempted waiver clearly is in her own interests rather than for the benefit of the corporation. Finally, as discussed above, Stopka fails to establish a personal attorney-client relationship with Fox & Grove.

Accordingly, Fox & Grove has not waived the attorney-client privilege and Stopka may not waive the privilege. However, general application of the privilege to quash the subpoenas is inappropriate. The court must determine if the privilege applies to the documents and testimony sought by Stopka in the subpoenas.

a. Itemized billing statements and time sheets

Fox & Grove asserts that its itemized billing statements and attorney time sheets would identify the subject matter and substance of confidential conversations between attorney and client. It argues these records are privileged from disclosure. Real v. Continental Group, Inc., 116 F.R.D. 211, 213-14 (N.D. Cal. 1986) ("The attorney-client privilege embraces attorney time, records, and statements to the extent that they reveal litigation strategy and the nature of the services provided"). Fox & Grove maintains the records would reveal the nature of the legal services provided. See Affidavit of Lawrence Cohen ("Cohen Aff.") ¶ 3; Affidavit of S. Richard Pincus ("Pincus Aff.") ¶ 3. See also In re Grand Jury Witness, 695 F.2d 359, 362 (9th Cir. 1982) (the attorney-client privilege protects correspondence between attorney and client and time records that reveal the client's motivation for creating the relationship or possible litigation strategy).

Stopka asserts billing and time records are not generally protected by work product doctrine because they are prepared in the regular course of business. Leach v. Quality Health Services, 162 F.R.D. 499, 502 (E.D. Pa. 1995). Moreover, the records should only be protected by the attorney-client privilege to the extent they reveal litigation strategy, and should be modified by redaction rather than non-production. Id. at 501-02.

7 In Leach, the plaintiff moved to compel compliance with a subpoena directed to defendants' law firm seeking billing statements and time records to establish the ownership and control of various defendants. The court found the records were not protected by the work product doctrine because they were not prepared in anticipation of litigation. However, the description of the legal services found in the billing and time records were protected by the attorney- client privilege and non-discoverable. Leach, 162 F.R.D. at 501-02. The court ruled that the records should be produced with protected material redacted. The court would examine the records in question in camera, but only in the event disagreements over the scope of the privilege arose. Id. at 502; see also In re Grand Jury Witness, 695 F.2d at 362 (disfavoring blanket assertions of privilege and requiring in camera submission with an explanation of how the information is privileged).

Stopka cites Gottlieb v. Wiles, 143 F.R.D. 241, 247 (D. Colo. 1992), to support her argument that a former corporate officer cannot be denied access to documents created during her tenure although her interests are now adverse to the corporation's. However, Gottlieb has been criticized for making "a fundamental error by assuming that for a corporation there exists a collective corporate client which may take a position adverse to management for purposes of the attorney-client privilege." Milroy v. Hanson, 875 F. Supp. 646, 649 (D. Ne. 1995) (inner quotations omitted) (citing Weintraub, 471 U.S. at 348). Milroy explained that a dissident director "is by definition not 'management' and, accordingly, has no authority to pierce or otherwise frustrate the attorney-client privilege when such action conflicts with the will of 'management."' Id. at 649-50. The court further noted that the plaintiff was not entitled to the documents because the suit was primarily for his personal benefit, at the expense of the corporation. Id. at 651-52. Accordingly, Stopka's reliance on Gottlieb is misplaced.

Fox & Grove's general assertion that the billing statements and time records should not be disclosed because they are privileged is unpersuasive. Cohen and Pincus attest the billing statements and attorney time sheets maintained by the law firm "would reveal the Alliance's motivation for seeking legal counsel and would reveal the nature of services provided by Fox and Grove to the Alliance in both this case and other matters." Cohen Aff. ¶ 3; Pincus Aff. ¶ 3. "A client's motive for seeking legal advice is undeniably a confidential communication." Matter of Grand Jury Proceeding, Cherney, 898 F.2d 565, 568 (7th Cir. 1990); In re Grand Jury Witness, 695 F.2d at 362. Accordingly, the substance of those meetings is privileged. However, billing statements and time records are not privileged insofar as they state when, where and for how long Fox & Grove attorneys met with Stopka or other Alliance officials.

b. All communications between Fox & Grove and Stopka

8 Stopka seeks all notes, memoranda, correspondence and electronic mail between herself and Fox & Grove from 1984 to 1996. Fox & Grove contends all communications with Stopka were for the purpose of formulating or rendering legal advice. See Cohen Aff. ¶ 4; Pincus Aff. ¶ 4. It maintains disclosing these communications would necessarily disclose either confidential information or legal advice between the law firm and Alliance. As explained above, Stopka's assertion that the attorney-client privilege no longer applies to the communications between herself and the law firm is unavailing. Because the communications between Stopka and Fox & Grove were made for purposes of formulating or rendering legal advice, the communications are protected by the attorney-client privilege.

c. All notes or recordings of conversations

Fox & Grove argues that its notes or recordings of conversations between its attorneys and Stopka are subject to both the attorney-client and work product privilege. It asserts notes taken by Fox & Grove attorneys relate to legal risks of Alliance personnel policies or decisions. Cohen Aff. ¶ 5; Pincus Aff. ¶ 5. Fox & Grove contends the notes or recordings were prepared in anticipation of litigation and contain attorneys' mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). Furthermore, Fox & Grove maintains the work product privilege covers documents and other tangible things prepared in anticipation of litigation. Panter v. Marshall Field & Co., 80 F.R.D. 718, 724 (N.D. Ill. 1978) (discussing the weight of modern authority); 8 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2024 at 200-1. Finally, Fox & Grove asserts the notes and recordings are protected by the attorney-client privilege because they contain the substance of specific legal services rendered by an attorney to his client. Stopka does not respond to these arguments.

Fox & Grove's arguments are persuasive. Notes and recordings made by attorneys concerning conversations between the attorneys and Stopka involving Alliance personnel decisions are protected by both the work-product doctrine and attorney-client privilege. Disclosure of these items will disclose attorneys' mental impressions or opinions as well as the substance of the legal services rendered. Accordingly, both privileges apply to the items requested in Stopka's subpoena request number four.

2. The crime-fraud exception

Stopka argues that even if the requested materials are privileged, the privilege does not extend to communications with an attorney to further a continuing or future crime, fraud or other misconduct. Sound Video Unlimited, Inc. v. Video Shack, Inc., 661 F. Supp. 1482, 1486 (N.D. Ill. 1987); In re Special September 1978 Grand Jury, 640 F.2d 49, 59 (7th Cir. 1980). She maintains the crime-fraud exception has been applied in an employment discrimination lawsuit concerning communications with counsel where the objective was to mislead the plaintiff about the compensation disparity between herself and a male employee. See, e.g., Cooksey v. Hilton Int'l Co., 863 F. Supp. 150, 151 (S.D.N.Y. 1994). Stopka insists the intent of defendants' communication with their lawyers was to violate the anti-discrimination laws, as evidenced by her affidavit submitted for the court's in camera review. Fox & Grove did not seek leave to file a reply brief addressing the crime-fraud exception.

9 In Sound Video, the district court found the crime-fraud exception to the attorney-client privilege applies when a person consults an attorney to further a continuing or future crime, fraud or other misconduct. However, the court noted the privilege "remains intact" when a person consults an attorney in an effort to receive legal advice or assistance. Sound Video, 661 F. Supp. at 1486. Nor is a communication subject to disclosure "merely because it relates to a crime or fraud or because it would help to prove that one existed." Id. Rather, the party seeking disclosure must "first make a prima facie showing of a violation sufficient to defeat the privilege." Id. (citing Clark v. United States, 289 U.S. 1, 15 (1933); In re Special September 1978 Grand Jury, 640 F.2d at 60). The moving party must also establish "some relationship between the communications at issue and the alleged offense." Id. Prima facie evidence is a "lax standard" and "as in the law of discrimination, a prima facie case must be defined with regard to its function: to require the adverse party, the one with superior access to the evidence and in the best position to explain things, to come forward with that explanation." Matter of Feldberg, 862 F.2d 622, 626 (7th Cir. 1988). "If the court finds the explanation satisfactory, the privilege remains." Id.

In overcoming the privilege, the court may conduct an in camera review of the alleged communications. In United States v. Zolin, 491 U.S. 554, 572 (1989), the Supreme Court held:

> ... a lesser evidentiary showing is needed to trigger in camera review than is required ultimately to overcome the privilege....
> Before engaging in in camera review to determine the applicability of the crime-fraud exception, "the judge should require a showing of a factual basis adequate to support a good faith belief by a reasonable person," that in camera review of the materials may reveal evidence to establish the claim that the crime-fraud exception applies.
> Once that showing is made, the decision whether to engage in in camera review rests in the sound discretion of the district court. The court should make that decision in light of the facts and circumstances of the particular case, including, among other things, the volume of materials the district court has been asked to review, the relative importance to the case of the alleged privileged information, and the likelihood that the evidence produced through in camera review, together with other available evidence then before the court, will establish that the crime-fraud exception does apply. The district court is also free to defer its in camera review if it concludes that additional evidence in support of the crime-fraud exception may be available that is not allegedly privileged, and that production of the additional evidence will not unduly disrupt or delay the proceedings.
> (inner citations omitted).

10 Stopka contends that the crime-fraud exception should be applicable upon this court's in camera review of the conversations detailed in her affidavit. Stopka describes telephone conferences concerning personnel decisions. Not all of these meetings raise a reasonable inference necessary for this court to undertake a more exhaustive in camera review of the requested documents. Stopka describes occasions where a Fox & Grove attorney allegedly advised Alliance on proper procedure for terminating employees, including building paper trails to make the terminations defensible. See Stopka Aff. ¶¶ 9, 10, 12, 13. The advice on how to carry out a legally defensible termination does not raise a reasonable inference of misconduct necessary to either pierce the attorney-client privilege or to require the court to review the requested documents. In fact, it appears from the affidavit that the attorney actually recommended not firing one employee in the desired time frame because there was not enough time to thoroughly document defensible reasons for termination. Id. at ¶ 9.

Stopka attests without explanation that one of the individual defendants did not want a female Alliance officer retained as part of a reorganization. Id. at ¶ 10. The basis for the defendant's decision is not offered; nothing is mentioned about the officer's job performance. Moreover, Stopka describes how the attorney stated that a separate severance benefit could be designed and offered to the employee. Stopka simply asserts that the employee left Alliance shortly thereafter, apparently voluntarily. Id. Stopka does not raise a reasonable inference of misconduct or show that the attorney assisted in any wrongdoing when Alliance offered and an employee voluntarily accepted a severance package during a reorganization.

Similarly, Stopka's description of a defendant's desire to terminate a long- time female Alliance employee does not attribute the termination to the employee's age; rather, the defendant allegedly wanted to fire the employee even though he was aware of her age and tenure with Alliance. Id. at ¶ 13. The attorney's role was purportedly to offer advice on documenting the employee's performance on a new system. Finally, the employee was apparently never terminated, although she allegedly did not receive a salary increase. Id.

Finally, Stopka attests a male corporate officer was suspended without pay for violating corporate policies. Id. at ¶ 14. Stopka attests the officer is still employed at the salary level he held almost two years ago. Id. An allegation that Alliance imposed a significant penalty on a male officer and froze his salary at 1994 rates is not a reasonable basis for this court's further review into the crime-fraud exception.

Two events that may raise a reasonable inference of sufficient misconduct are contained in paragraphs 8-9 and 11-12. The first incident involved a defendant's purported desire to terminate a female employee who complained about salary discrepancies between female and male employees. Additionally, when Stopka reported the employee's age to defendants, defendants allegedly wanted to fire the employee before she turned 40. This conduct could raise a prima facie case of the crime-fraud exception as to this particular employee if the communications with defense counsel furthered or assisted the wrongdoing. Sound Video, 661 F. Supp. at 1488-90. However, Stopka attests defense counsel responded that Alliance needed to document defensible reasons for terminating the employee. Stopka Aff. ¶ 9. Moreover, the attorney advised offering the employee a small salary increase, which addressed the employee's complaint. Id. Finally, Stopka does not attest that the employee was actually terminated. Thus, it appears that the communication with defense counsel did not further the alleged violation of employment discrimination laws.

11 Finally, in paragraphs 11 and 12, Stopka attests that defense counsel was contacted for advice on how Alliance could terminate an employee with alleged physical problems. This would appear to be a legitimate basis to seek counsel's advice; Stopka acknowledges that the communications involved difficult personnel decisions to avoid corporate liability. Stopka Aff. ¶ 5. While Stopka attests that an individual defendant did not wish to accommodate any of the employee's "problems" under the ADA, she does not claim that counsel was informed of this position. Id. at ¶ 11. Nor does the attorney's advice that Alliance create and enforce performance standards to "eventually build a paper trail that would be defensible," raise an inference of nefarious conduct. Id. at ¶ 12. However, Stopka attests that another individual defendant wanted to terminate the employee as soon as possible. Id. In response, the attorney allegedly advised eliminating the employee's position, having her duties absorbed by other employees for at least six months, and later hiring someone else for this position. Id. Although this solution was allegedly adopted to terminate the employee, Stopka does not attest that Alliance ever hired another employee to fill the position -- Stopka did not begin her current leave of absence until approximately a year and one-half had passed after the employee's termination. Moreover, while Stopka was responsible for supervising Alliance's human resources department, including employee relations and compliance with state and federal employment laws and regulations, she fails to articulate if she offered a recommendation concerning this employee and if her recommendation differed from the suggested solution.

Although there may be issues that preclude disclosure of the allegedly privileged documents relating to paragraphs 11 and 12, Stopka raises a reasonable inference that the court should make a careful in camera inquiry as to whether the privileged materials reveal sufficient evidence to establish the claim that the crime-fraud exception applies. Zolin, 491 U.S. at 572. The conduct described in paragraphs 11 and 12 may have a bearing on Stopka's ADA claim. Defendants and defense counsel must explain the conduct alleged in paragraphs 11 and 12. If their explanation is satisfactory, the privilege applies. Matter of Feldberg, 862 F.2d at 626.

Stopka fails to raise a prima facie case of fraudulent or other misconduct sufficient to generally pierce the attorney-client privilege. On the basis of four or five events occurring between 1991 and 1994, Stopka seeks access to all privileged communications between defense counsel and Alliance occurring between 1984 and 1995. Nothing in Stopka's affidavit permits such a broad intrusion into the attorney-client privilege.

Thus, defense counsel's motion to quash Stopka's request for documents must be granted in part. The subpoena request shall only require production of records up to and including the date of Stopka's last communication with Fox & Grove. Defense counsel shall comply with the subpoena request as to billing statements and time records, but may redact the description of the substance or purposes of any billings reflected in those records. Defense counsel's motion to quash Stopka's request for notes, memoranda, correspondence and electronic mail between Stopka and defense counsel, as well as notes and recordings of conversations between Fox & Grove and Stopka, is granted.

B. Deposition Subpoenas

12 Fox & Grove contends Stopka served the deposition subpoenas on Cohen and Pincus only to establish cause for their disqualification. It asserts Stopka refused to appear for her own deposition, stating that it was inappropriate to depose her while the motion to disqualify was pending. See Def. Ex. C to memorandum in support (March 25, 1996 letter from Stopka's attorney to Fox & Grove). Fox & Grove argues the depositions of Cohen and Pincus would unnecessarily disrupt the litigation. Marco Island Partners v. Oak Development Corp., 117 F.R.D. 418, 420 (N.D. Ill. 1987). It maintains that Cohen and Pincus may be deposed later in the litigation if non-privileged information is available by no other means. Id. at 419. Finally, it notes that Stopka only references Pincus in her affidavit. Based on the crime-fraud exception, Stopka responds she should be able to depose Cohen and Pincus concerning their recollections of the conversations alleged in her affidavit.

As discussed above, the crime-fraud exception might only apply to the events described in paragraphs 11 and 12 of Stopka's affidavit. Moreover, Stopka only discusses Pincus' involvement in those paragraphs (or anywhere in the affidavit). Thus, the deposition subpoena concerning Cohen shall be quashed.

As for Pincus, defendants must explain why the conduct alleged in paragraphs 11 and 12 does not meet the crime-fraud exception and submit relevant privileged documents for the court's in camera inspection. Thus, it is not apparent at this time that Pincus may be deposed concerning those events. Additionally, Stopka fails to show that she needs to depose Pincus. Stopka seeks Pincus' recollection of events described in paragraphs 11 and 12. However, Stopka attests she talked with the individual defendants concerning the underlying events in paragraphs 11 and 12 independent of telephone conferences with Pincus. Because the individual defendants can testify concerning that employee's termination, Pincus' deposition testimony would be duplicative. Marco Island, 117 F.R.D. at 419. Deposing an opposing side's attorney disrupts the opposing attorney's preparation for trial. Id. at 420. If Stopka demonstrates that Pincus' deposition would not be duplicative, this court will reconsider permitting a limited deposition. Accordingly, defendants' motion to quash Cohen and Pincus' deposition subpoenas must be granted.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiff's motion to disqualify defense counsel is denied. Defendants' motion to quash subpoenas is granted in part. Fox and Grove, Chtd. must disclose billing statements and time records up to and including their last conference with Stopka, after redacting privileged entries disclosing the substance of attorney-client communications. Defendants shall submit for the court's in camera inspection privileged documents concerning paragraphs 11 and 12 of Stopka's affidavit, along with their response to the conduct alleged in paragraphs 11 and 12, by May 1, 1996.

PLAINTIFFS' MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS EMERGENCY MOTION TO CONDUCT LIMITED EXPEDITED DISCOVERY

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson (the "plaintiffs"), by their attorneys, hereby file this memorandum in support of its Emergency Motion to Conduct Limited and Expedited Discovery. The plaintiffs state as follows:

Preliminary Statement

Well-settled law makes clear that, in the face of conflicting affidavits, the parties should be permitted to explore each opponent's factual assertions through oral testimony with the opportunity to cross-examine. Indeed, the answer to the very question posed by this Court in its October 26, 2001 Order should be obvious. This Court has asked the parties to submit "short concise memoranda dealing with the precise issue [of] the propricty of the requested depositions in the context of opposing and conflicting testimony presented by the Terra, Stone and Carlson affidavits." Of course, the answer to this question is Yes – depositions of the affiants are entirely appropriate to test in the crucible of cross-examination the credibility of each affiant's assertions. Controlling case law – in addition to the plain interests of justice – require that such limited discovery proceed in order to assist the Court in its task of resolving the plaintiffs' motion to disqualify.

16di-004445

For all these reasons, the plaintiffs respectfully submit that the depositions of Attorneys Stone and Carlson (and, if so desired, Judith Terra as well) should proceed without delay.

Argument:

Because The Submitted Affidavits Directly Conflict, Depositions Are Appropriate.

Section 2-1103 of the Illinois Civil Practice Act makes clear that, when any factual assertion is submitted by affidavit, the Court may in its discretion require oral examination of the witness.[1] This principle lies at the heart of the plaintiffs' request to depose Attorneys Stone and Carlson. Simply stated, the affidavits submitted by Stone and Carlson attempt to defeat the plaintiffs' motion to disqualify by practically shouting that "Sidley never acted as counsel for Judith Terra in her individual capacity."[2] Nonetheless, Stone concedes that she frequently met and/or spoke to Mrs. Terra without any other attorneys present.

Most importantly, Stone is artfully ambiguous as to the advice she gave to Mrs. Terra in certain meetings – statements that Mrs. Terra has asserted were confidential communications between a client and her attorney.[3] Beyond those ambiguities, Ms. Stone repeatedly responds to Mrs. Terra's sworn assertions with the dismissive statement that she "is not certain what [Mrs. Terra's statements] are meant to convey."[4] We respectfully submit that these failures of recollections and generalized

[3]See, e.g., id. at ¶ 15 (while Stone denies providing any legal advice she admits "that [she] may have made a comment to this effect [that Mrs. Terra could not be forced to join the settlement] although [she] ha[s] no specific recollection of having done so."). We respectfully submit that Ms. Stone's lack of "specific recollection" and other comparable vague disclaimers demand cross-examination.

[4]See, e.g., id. at ¶ 13. Similarly, at ¶ 6: "I do not even know what this statement means;" at ¶ 11: "I have utterly no idea what she is talking about;" and at ¶ 21: "Whatever that means. . . ." We respectfully submit that such a profuse lack of understanding is quite remarkable given the impressive credentials Ms. Stone avers.

denials of Mrs. Terra's version of events warrants focused discovery. Section 5/2-1103 makes clear that testing an affidavit's assertions through oral examination is perfectly appropriate.

Well-settled case law supports this conclusion. For instance, in Wilson v. Wilson, in which the pending motion involved a petition for relief from a judgment, the Court held that when the facts as set forth in the parties' affidavits are controverted, the proof should be established through examination of the witnesses.[5] Similarly, in situations that in which one party asserts that he was deprived of effective assistance of counsel, competing affidavits are insufficient to resolve the issue. Instead, an evidentiary hearing including oral examination of the witnesses, is appropriate.[6] Such results seem both logical and obvious; when affidavits cannot resolve disputed factual issues, the motion can only be resolved by permitting the parties to probe the opponent's assertion through cross-examination.

Such an opportunity is all the plaintiffs seek in their motion for limited and expedited discovery. The plaintiffs merely seek to probe the factual assertions – or, more accurately, the failed recollections and conclusory dismissals – of Ms. Stone and Mr. Carlson. The vocal indignation of the witnesses should not be permitted to defeat the plaintiffs' right to cross-examination. We respectfully submit that the Illinois Civil Practice Act, well-settled case law and the interests of justice require that the requested depositions be permitted to proceed.

Conclusion

For all the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson respectfully request that their Emergency Motion to Conduct Limited and Expedited Discovery be granted.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS' RESPONSE TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO CONDUCT LIMITED EXPEDITED DISCOVERY

In response to "Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion to Conduct Limited Expedited Discovery" in connection with their "Emergency Motion to Disqualify" counsel representing the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") in this action, the Foundation hereby submits the following:

1. Plaintiffs' complaint herein filed on July 31, 2001 is nothing more than an improper collateral attack upon a Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on July 24, 2001 after almost a year of litigation in the matter of Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859.

2. Plaintiffs Terra, Tucker and Simpson were defendants in the Buntrock case, and on August 22, 2001 filed a Notice of Appeal of Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. Plaintiffs are currently pursuing that appeal and presumably the Appellate Court, at some point in time, will rule upon its merits. Nevertheless, Plaintiffs have decided for reasons of their own that, in addition to their appeal, they wish to try to also attack the Consent Judgment and Order through a collateral lawsuit filed in the same trial level court where the original Consent Judgment and Order was entered and try to present to another trial court judge matters that were already considered and rejected by Judge Kinnaird.

3. Plaintiffs' recent motion to "disqualify" is nothing more than an attempt by Plaintiffs to disadvantage the Foundation by interfering with the Foundation's choice to be represented in this action by the same counsel who have represented the Foundation throughout the course of the Buntrock matter. Such interference is not permitted under applicable Illinois law. See Schwartz v. Cortelloni, 177 Ill.2d 166, 178 (1997). Plaintiffs' motion to disqualify is an obvious cynical litigation ploy which the Foundation is confident it would ultimately defeat.[1] Nevertheless, because the Foundation has been subject for over a year to extraordinarily burdensome and expensive litigation brought against it by warring factions of its own Board of Directors, in an attempt to limit (to the degree possible) the continued burden and expense of that war, the Foundation in consultation with its counsel has chosen to simply substitute counsel in this action, rendering moot Plaintiffs' "Motion to Disqualify" and "Motion to Conduct Limited Expedited Discovery." The Foundation hopes that by avoiding this even further collateral argument over who its counsel in this lawsuit should be, that the Foundation will be able to get to the heart of this collateral attack upon the Consent Judgment and Order of July 24, 2001 with a minimum of time, expense and burden, and this Court will avoid being further diverted by Plaintiffs' litigation tactics.

4. Rather than address Plaintiffs' discovery motion and allow Plaintiffs to further divert this Court's attention from resolving this lawsuit on the merits by turning this case into another "disqualification" side-show such as has plagued the Foundation throughout the litigation inflicted upon it by its own Directors,[2] the Foundation simply requests it be given two weeks in order to allow the Foundation time to obtain substitute counsel and to file a motion for substitution of counsel.[3]

WHEREFORE, the Foundation respectfully requests that this Court grant the Foundation two weeks in which to obtain substitute counsel and to file a motion for substitution of counsel in this lawsuit.

[1] See generally Terra Foundation for the Arts' Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency" Motion to Disqualify, filed on October 24, 2001.

[2] See Terra Foundation for the Arts' Opposition to Plaintiffs' "Emergency" Motion to Disqualify, pp. 12-13.

[3] In any event, Plaintiffs would not be permitted to take the depositions of opposing counsel in order to gather support for their "disqualification" motion. See The European Community v. RJR Nabisco, Inc., 134 F. Supp. 2d 297, 310 (E.D. N.Y. 2001) (proceedings relating to motion for disqualification of counsel were judicial in nature, and thus movant was not entitled to conduct discovery in support of its accusation). Taking the deposition of opposing counsel is "only permitted when it has been shown that: (1) no other means exist to obtain the information than to depose opposing counsel; (2) the information sought is relevant and nonprivileged, and (3) the information is crucial to the preparation of the case." Williams v. Kopco, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 670, 673 (D. Kan. 1995). Plaintiffs have clearly made no such showing in this case and have admitted both in their "Emergency Motion to Conduct Limited Expedited Discovery" and argument in Court on October 26, 2001 that they have no actual need for any such discovery.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-616, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson (the "plaintiffs"), through their counsel, CUMMINS & CRONIN, LLC and NOVOSELSKY LAW OFFICES, respectfully request leave to file their First Amended Complaint, Instanter. In support of this motion, the plaintiffs state as follows:

1. On July 31, 2001, the plaintiffs filed their Complaint at Law against Defendants Dean Buntrock ("Buntrock"), Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), Margaret Daley ("Daley"), Arthur Hartman ("Hartman"), Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Marshall"), Theodore Stebbins ("Stebbins"), The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation"), James E. Ryan ("Ryan") and Floyd D. Perkins ("Perkins").

2. The First Amended Complaint, attached as Exhibit A, differs from the original complaint in the following respects: The First Amended Complaint names James R. Donnelley ("Donnelley"), Marshall Field V ("Field"), Kathleen A. Foster ("Foster"), Robert S. Hamada ("Hamada"), Frederick A. Krehbiel ("Krehbiel"), and the law firms Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin as additional defendants. These new individual defendants purport to be "new" directors of the Foundation but, as the plaintiffs assert, have never been properly elected to the Foundation's Board. The two law firms suffer debilitating conflicts of interest which, among other things, require their disqualification from any further representation of the Foundation or its Directors.

3. In support of this request for leave to file, the plaintiffs state that all parties have previously been served with the First Amended Complaint and that Defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, Hartmann, Stebbins, Ryan, Perkins, Marshall, Donnelley, Field and Krehbiel have appeared in this litigation.

4. Section 5/2-616 of the Illinois Civil Practice Act makes clear that amendments to the pleadings may be allowed on just and reasonable terms. See 735 ILCS § 5/2-616. It is well-settled that leave to amend should be liberally construed and any doubts concerning the propriety of allowing the amendment must be resolved in favor of the party seeking to make it. See, e.g., Lykowski v. Bergman, 299 Ill. App. 3d q57, 162, 700 N.E.2d 1064 (1st Dist. 1998).

For all these reasons, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson respectfully request leave to file the First Amended Complaint instanter.

DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS IN EXCESS OF FIFTEEN PAGES

Defendants Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall"), by their attorneys, respectfully move for permission to file a brief in support of their motion to dismiss in excess of fifteen pages. In support of this motion, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall state the following:

1. The amended complaint contains seven counts. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are moving to dismiss all seven claims as against them, pursuant to Sections 2-615 and 2-619 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure.

2. Counsel for Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have made every effort to be as concise as possible. In particular, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are relying on, adopting and incorporating various aspects of the Motions to Dismiss and the supporting memoranda of the Foundation and the other defendants that are being separately filed, so as to avoid duplication.

3. However, several separate bases for dismissal exist for each count which need to be explained. In addition, the amended complaint is based on a lengthy litigation history which needs to be addressed.

4. Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall ask the Court for leave to file their supporting memorandum up to 21 pages.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth above, defendants Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall respectfully request that the Court grant this motion and issue an Order permitting them to file their memorandum in support of their motion to dismiss in excess of fifteen pages, up to 21 pages.

SIDLEY AUSTIN BROWN & WOOD'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT AS AGAINST IT

16di-004478

Defendant Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley"), formerly known as Sidley & Austin, moves this Court to dismiss the First Amended Complaint as filed against it by Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson. This motion is brought pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 as the First Amended Complaint's purported claim against Sidley is substantially insufficient in law and pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) as it is barred by collateral estoppel. In support of its motion Sidley submits its accompanying memorandum of law and states as follows:

1. The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") is a not-for-profit corporation that oversees an approximately $175 million collection of American act. (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 7). Sidley is counsel for the Foundation in Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., NO. 00 CH 13859 in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division before Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. In the Buntrock case, two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors sued the Foundation as well as three other members of the Foundation's Board, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson (who are also the Plaintiffs in this case). To the dismay of the Plaintiffs here, the Buntrock case was eventually settled by a Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on July 26, 2001 (see id. ¶¶ 67, 73), which judgment they have appealed.

2. In an attempt to collaterally attack the Consent Judgment and Order entered in the Buntrock case, Plaintiffs filed this action now naming the Foundation, 11 members of the Foundation's Board (the six who voted in favor of the settlement, plus five who were added to the Board as part of the settlement), the Attorney General, Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, the Foundation's corporate counsel, Winston & Strawn, and the Foundation's litigation counsel in the Buntrock case, Sidley as defendants.

3. Plaintiffs state in wholly conclusory terms that Sidley has supposedly engaged in the Foundation's representation "despite obvious and foreseeable actual and potential conflicts of interest." (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 87). The only relief Plaintiffs seek against Sidley is a declaration that Sidley is disqualified from representing either the Foundation or any of its Directors "in this litigation." (Id. at pp. 33-34). Such relief is nonsensical given the fact that Sidley does not represent the Foundation or any of its Directors in this litigation. While Sidley initially filed an appearance on behalf of the Foundation in this case, for reasons having nothing to do with any alleged "conflict of interest," on November 5, 2001, Sidley was granted leave to withdraw as counsel for the Foundation in this action (see 11/5/01 Order) and substitute counsel now represents the Foundation.

Plaintiffs' Complaint Against Sidley Should be Dismissed Pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 as Substantially Insufficient in Law for the Following Reasons:

4. Plaintiffs' complaint utterly fails to state any cognizable claim against Sidley. Plaintiffs state that Sidley violated Rules 1.1, 1.3, 1.4, and 1.7 of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct. (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 91). As the Appellate Court ruled in Hannan v. Watt, 147 Ill. App. 3d 456, 461, 497 N.E.2d 1307, 1310, there is no independent cause of action for alleged violation of the ethical rules and any attempt to state one is nothing more than a thinly veiled motion for disqualification.

5. Plaintiffs' wholly conclusory allegations fail to set forth sufficient specific facts as required under Illinois fact pleading standards. Plaintiffs' allegations that other Directors "accused" Sidley of a conflict of interest in another case, and Sidley supposedly represented Dr. Stebbins by merely informing Plaintiffs that he did not wish to submit himself for a voluntary interview regarding their allegations concerning coercion by Perkins and the Attorney General fail to specify particular facts upon which any cause of action could be based.

6. Moreover, Plaintiffs' cause of action for declaratory judgment against Sidley is moot. There is no "actual or justiciable controversy between the parties" as required to assert a cause of action for declaratory judgment. AG Farms, Inc. v. American Premier Underwriters, Inc., 296 Ill. App. 3d 684, 695 N.E.2d 882, 887 (4th Dist. 1998). Plaintiffs seek a declaration that Sidley is disqualified from further representing the Foundation or its Directors in this litigation. However, Sidley does not represent any party in this litigation. Plaintiffs' continued pursuit of their complaint against Sidley even after Sidley has withdrawn as counsel for the Foundation in this case has no basis in law or fact.

Plaintiffs' Complaint Against Sidley Should be Dismissed Pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) as it is Barred by Collateral Estoppel for the Following Reason:

7. In any event, Plaintiffs' claims against Sidley are barred by collateral estoppel. The Plaintiffs in this case were all parties to the Buntrock case where the claims of Sidley's alleged "conflict of interest" and inability to continue to represent the Foundation were fully litigated and rejected by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court on at least six occasions. Plaintiffs are collaterally estopped from wasting this Court's time and resources in an attempt to re-litigate that issue yet again in this Court.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth in both this motion as well as the accompanying memorandum of law in support thereof, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood respectfully requests that this Court enter an order dismissing the First Amended Complaint against it with prejudice pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 and 5/2-619(a)(4), and grant such other relief that this Court deems appropriate.

SIDLEY AUSTIN BROWN & WOOD'S MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS THE FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT AS AGAINST IT

Defendant Sidley Austin Brown & Wood ("Sidley"), formerly known as Sidley & Austin, moves this Court to dismiss the First Amended Complaint as filed against it by Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson. Plaintiffs' complaint utterly fails to state any cognizable claim against Sidley. Moreover, Plaintiffs' wholly conclusory allegations fail to set forth sufficient specific facts as required under Illinois law. In addition, Plaintiffs' complaint against Sidley is both moot and barred by collateral estoppel. This motion is brought pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 as Plaintiffs' purported claim against it is substantially insufficient in law and pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) as it is barred by collateral estoppel.

Factual Background

The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1978 by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra. (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 7). The Foundation oversees an approximately $175 million collection of American art. (Id.) Sidley is counsel for the Foundation in the case of Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859, in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division before Judge Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. In the Buntrock case, two members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock, sued the Foundation and three members of the Foundation's Board of Directors (Judith Terra, Senator Alan Simpson, and Dr. Paul Tucker) claiming that neither the Foundation nor its Directors had the right to move either the Foundation or its assets out of the Chicago area. (See First Am. Complaint, ¶ 41).

The Buntrock case eventually proceeded to mediation. (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 49). On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed Consent Judgment and Order to settle the Buntrock litigation. (Id. at ¶ 67). At that meeting, by a vote of six to two (Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Ambassador Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor, and Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against), the Board voted to accept the Consent Judgment and Order. (Id. at ¶ 73). The Consent Judgment and Order was approved and entered by Judge Kinnaird on July 26, 2001.

The Plaintiffs in this case were all defendants in the Buntrock case, and on August 22, 2001 filed a Notice of Appeal of Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. Plaintiffs are currently pursuing that appeal. Nevertheless, Plaintiffs Terra, Tucker and Simpson decided for reasons of their own, in addition to their appeal, that they wished to also try to collaterally attack the Consent Judgment and Order by filing this lawsuit. On July 31, 2001, Plaintiffs Terra, Tucker and Simpson filed a complaint in this case naming the Foundation, six of the Foundation's Directors, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins as defendants. (See, generally, Original Complaint). The complaint essentially attacked the validity of the Consent Judgment and the process by which it was entered. (See id.). On November 20, 2001, Plaintiffs were granted leave to file their First Amended Complaint which added as additional defendants five new members of the Foundation's Board, the Foundation's litigation counsel in the Buntrock case, Sidley, and the Foundation's corporate counsel, Winston & Strawn. (See First Am. Complaint).

Plaintiffs state in wholly conclusory terms in their First Amended Complaint that Sidley has "engaged in the Foundation's representation – and [has] . . . continued with that representation – despite obvious and foreseeable actual and potential conflicts of interest" and therefore supposedly may not represent the Foundation in this litigation. (First Am. Complaint, ¶¶ 87, 89). Plaintiffs seek only a declaration that "Sidley & Austin is, and has been, tainted by conflicts of interest . . . and that, as a result . . . Sidley & Austin [is] disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." (Id. at pp. 33-34). They seek no other relief regarding Sidley. While Sidley did initially file an appearance on behalf of the Foundation in this case, Sidley does not presently represent the Foundation in this litigation. On November 5, 2001 Sidley was granted leave to withdraw as counsel for the Foundation in this action. (See 11/5/01 Order).[1] Mulroy Scandaglia Marrinson & Ryan subsequently filed an appearance as substitute counsel.

Argument

I. PLAINTIFFS' COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A COGNIZABLE CLAIM AGAINST SIDLEY.

Illinois is, of course, a fact-pleading jurisdiction. Vernon v. Schuster, 179 Ill. 2d 338, 344, 688 N.E.2d 1172, 1175 (1997). In order to avoid dismissal, a plaintiff must allege specific facts sufficient to bring his or her claim within the scope of a cognizable cause of action. Id. Those facts, if proven true, must be able to support a judgment. Miles Homes, Inc. of Ill. v. Mintjal, 17 Ill. App. 3d 642, 644, 307 N.E.2d 724, 726 (4th Dist. 1974). The legal sufficiency of a complaint requires more than "mere conclusions." Martin v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 109 Ill. App. 3d 596, 608, 440 N.E.2d 998, 1007 (1st Dist. 1982).

Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint against Sidley simply does not and cannot meet Illinois' pleading standards. Plaintiffs' supposed "claim" against Sidley is nothing more than a motion for disqualification which they thinly disguise as a supposed cause of action. Their attempt to "disqualify" Sidley from representing the Foundation by naming Sidley as one of the Foundation's co-defendants has no basis in law and certainly does not state a cause of action. A simple reading of Count III – the only count directed toward Sidley – demonstrates its deficiency. Notably, Plaintiffs seek nothing more than a "declaration" that Sidley should be [1] This Court may take judicial notice of Sidley's withdrawal as counsel for the Foundation in this case. See In re A.B., 308 Ill. App. 3d 227, 237, 719 N.E.2d 348, 356 (2nd Dist. 1999) (holding a court may take judicial notice of matters of record in its own proceedings).

"disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation . . . in this litigation." (First Am. Complaint, pp. 33-34). All Plaintiffs are really doing in naming Sidley as a defendant is using a complaint for the wholly improper purpose of seeking to disqualify opposing counsel.

"Both federal and state courts have viewed with disapproval a litigant's attempt to disqualify opposing counsel as a tactical weapon in litigation." Hannan v. Watt, 147 Ill. App. 3d 456, 461, 497 N.E.2d 1307, 1310 (1st Dist. 1986). As the Illinois Supreme Court has admonished, "caution must be exercised to guard against motions to disqualify being used as tools for harassment." Schwartz v. Cortellone, 177 Ill. 2d 166, 178, 685 N.E.2d 871, 877 (1997); accord, Weil, Freiburg & Thomas v. Sara Lee Corp., 218 Ill. App. 3d 383, 395, 577 N.E.2d 1344, 1354 (1st Dist. 1991). Not surprisingly, disqualification is regarded as a "drastic measure which courts should approach with continuance and grant only as a last resort." Hannan, 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497 N.E.2d at 1310; see Schwartz, 177 Ill. 2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877.

Not only are motions to disqualify counsel disfavored by the courts, the Illinois Appellate Court has specifically rejected an attempt – strikingly similar to what Plaintiffs are trying to do here – to disqualify opposing counsel by filing a lawsuit against them for the sole purpose of seeking disqualification. See Hannan v. Watt, 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497 N.E.2d at 1310. In Hannan v. Watt, plaintiffs Republic airline pilots sought to disqualify the law firm of Cotton Watt Jones & King ("Cotton Watt") from representing pilots of Northwest airlines during seniority list integration proceedings stemming from the merger of the two airlines. 147 Ill. App. 3d at 457, 497 N.E.2d at 1308 . The plaintiffs sued Cotton Watt alleging that the firm suffered from a conflict of interest in violation of the Illinois Code of Professional Responsibility[2] and sought to enjoin the firm from representing the Northwest pilots. 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497

[2] The Illinois Code of Professional Responsibility was the predecessor to the current Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct.

N.E.2d at 1310. In affirming the trial court's dismissal of the complaint, the Appellate Court held that the Illinois Code of Professional Responsibility "do[es] not by [its] own terms, create independent rights of action." Id. The court accordingly found that the plaintiffs had failed to base their complaint on an underlying substantive cause of action and that "this case is nothing more than an action to disqualify Cotton Watts from partaking in the current proceedings." Id.

The facts of this case are no different than Hannan v. Watt. Here, Plaintiffs are attempting to create a cause of action out of an alleged violation of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct. Plaintiffs state that Sidley supposedly violated Rules 1.1, 1.3, 1.4 and 1.7 (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 91) and ask the Court for a "declaration" that Sidley is "disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." (Id. at pp. 33-34). As the Hannan Court held, no such cause of action exists. See Hannan, 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497 N.E.2d at 1310. Even if Plaintiffs had a valid basis for attempting to "disqualify" Sidley from serving as opposing counsel in this litigation, the proper way to address that issue would have been to file a motion – not to purport to name Sidley as a defendant,[3] which as Hannan holds has no basis in Illinois law. Hannan, 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497 N.E.2d at 1310. Because Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts supporting a cognizable cause of action, their complaint against Sidley must be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615. See Vernon, 179 Ill. 2d at 344, 688 N.E.2d at 1175.

[3] There are, of course, multiple reasons which it is not necessary to address here why such a motion would itself have been baseless and improper. See Blanchard v. Edgemark Financial Corp., 1998 WL 988958, p. 21 (N.D. Ill.); Renard v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 126 Ill. App. 3d 563, 567, 467 N.E.2d 1090, 1094 (1st Dist. 1984) ("Absent a complaint by the affected client, a party has no status to object to the representation of an adverse party by an attorney of his choice.").

II. PLAINTIFFS' WHOLLY CONCLUSORY ALLEGATIONS FAIL TO SET FORTH SUFFICIENT SPECIFIC FACTS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN ANY EVENT.

Even if this Court finds, contrary to the Appellate Court's holding in Hannan, that Plaintiffs might conceivably be able to state a cause of action against opposing counsel for alleged violations of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct, Plaintiffs have failed to plead sufficient, specific facts to support any such claim. Plaintiffs make only two allegations in support of their conclusory assertion of "actual and potential conflicts of interest" involving Sidley (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 87):

(1) Plaintiffs state that Sidley was previously "accused – by two defendant directors in this litigation – of breaching its responsibilities to the Foundation . . . [who] submitted an expert affidavit that concludes that Sidley & Austin is unable to provide the Foundation with independent professional advice given its conflicts of interest"; and

(2) Plaintiffs allege that Sidley "represented director Stebbins . . . and informed the other parties that director Stebbins would not submit for an interview regarding the allegations of Perkins and the Attorney General."

(First Am. Complaint, ¶ 89). These "mere conclusions" are not the type of specific factual allegations required to properly support a judgment under Illinois law. See Martin, 109 Ill. App. 3d at 608, 440 N.E.2d at 1007.

First, the claim that Sidley was "accused" by other Directors in another lawsuit of supposed conflicts of interest does not provide even an iota of factual support that Sidley has in fact violated any ethical obligations with respect to this litigation. Not surprisingly, Plaintiffs fail to inform this Court that while Buntrock and Gidwitz attempted to disqualify Sidley in the Buntrock case on approximately six different occasions, each of those attempts were soundly rejected by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court and refused to be heard by the Illinois Supreme Court. (See J. Kinnaird's 9/25/00 Order ("Plaintiffs' Motion to Disqualify Sidley & Austin is denied"), 10/20/00 Order ("The Motion to Appoint Special Litigation Counsel, et al. is denied without prejudice with respect to disqualification of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin"), 1/2/01 Order ("That portion of plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Temporary Restraining Order to enjoin the Terra Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee from continuing to retain Sidley & Austin as counsel is denied") and 1/19/01, 2/16/01 Appellate Court Orders).[4] Moreover, the allegation that Buntrock and Gidwitz submitted a supposed "expert affidavit" purportedly "concluding" that Sidley suffered from a conflict of interest in that case is similarly unsupportive of any basis for relief in this case. Plaintiffs did not attach this supposed "expert report" to their complaint, and notably, also did not attach the court orders twice rejecting the opinion contained in that "expert report." (See J. Kinnaird 10/20/00 and 1/2/01 Orders).[5] More significantly, the statement regarding a supposed "expert report" clearly does not itself allege any specific facts sufficient to establish the existence of any cause of action.

Second, Plaintiffs' conclusion that Sidley "represented director Stebbins" is also not supported by any factual allegation whatsoever. Plaintiffs do not, and could not, allege that Sidley was retained by Dr. Stebbins to represent him in connection with this or any other litigation, that Sidley billed Dr. Stebbins for legal services rendered, that Dr. Stebbins paid

[4] This Court may take judicial notice of the orders entered in the Buntrock case. See Storm & Assoc., Ltd. v. Cuculich, 298 Ill. App. 3d 1040, 1047, 700 N.E.2d 202, 207 (1st Dist. 1998) (holding matters of record in a related action are the proper subject of judicial notice in considering a motion to dismiss); In re Marriage of DeBow, 236 Ill. App. 3d 1038, 1040, 602 N.E.2d 984, 985 (5th Dist. 1992) ("A trial court should take judicial notice of closely related proceedings."); Walsh v. Union Oil Co., 53 Ill. 2d 295, 291 N.E.2d 644 (1972) (holding judicial notice of other proceedings proper where the same parties are involved and the allegations from those proceedings have been proven).

[5] Similarly, Plaintiffs here totally ignore the obvious deficiencies in the "expert affidavit" (see Terra Foundation's Motion to Strike the Affidavits of Professor John M. Breen, filed on December 11, 2000 filed in the Buntrock case), the fact that there were contrary expert affidavits and that expert affidavits are not even properly admissible on motions to disqualify. See In re Masters 91 Ill. 2d 413, 425, 438 N.E.2d 187, 192 (1982).

Sidley for any such legal services, or any other factual allegation that could prove an attorney-client relationship between Sidley and Dr. Stebbins. McDermott Will & Emery has filed an appearance for Dr. Stebbins in this matter and is his personal counsel in connection with the matters referred to in Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint. Plaintiffs' only shred of "factual" support that Sidley represented Dr. Stebbins is their allegation that Sidley "informed the other parties that director Stebbins would not submit for an interview regarding the allegations of Perkins and the Attorney General." (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 89). This "fact" can hardly prove an attorney-client relationship between Dr. Stebbins and Sidley, particularly given the fact that Dr. Stebbins was a member of the Foundation's Board and a "key figure" in the conduct of the Buntrock litigation as one of only two members of the Independent Litigation Committee ("ILC") formed, pursuant to Judge Kinnaird's Orders, to direct the Buntrock litigation. (First Am. Complaint, ¶ 56). Obviously, it is no surprise that the Foundation's counsel would be in direct contact with Dr. Stebbins in his capacity as a member of the ILC and as a member of the Foundation's Board. As counsel to the Foundation in the Buntrock case, Sidley's mere ministerial act of communicating to opposing counsel that one of the Foundation's Directors, who was a member of its ILC, chose not to voluntarily submit to an "interview" regarding Plaintiffs' allegations in this case, can hardly support a finding that Sidley "represented" Dr. Stebbins in his individual capacity.[6]

Plaintiffs' desperate attempt to turn their unfounded conclusions into factual allegations, in the hopes of winning a declaration that Sidley is disqualified in this litigation, is insufficient. A claim that Sidley was "accused" of a conflict of interest by other directors and the [6] Even if it were true (as it is not) that Sidley had been Dr. Stebbins' counsel, Plaintiffs allege no facts stating a cause of action arising out of any such representation or establishing that they have any right to attempt to state any such cause of action.

unsupported conclusion that Sidley "represented" Dr. Stebbins are simply not enough to meet Illinois' fact-pleading standards in order to support any claim against Sidley. Accordingly, the complaint against Sidley should be dismissed as substantially insufficient in law pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615.

III. PLAINTIFFS' COMPLAINT IS BARRED BY COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL PURSUANT TO 735 ILCS 5/2-619.

The matters referred to in paragraph 89 of the First Amended Complaint have already been adjudicated as to the parties in this case. Plaintiffs may not re-litigate them before this Court. The Plaintiffs in this case, Mrs. Terra, Dr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson, were parties to the Buntrock case. They were each represented by counsel in the Buntrock case. They actively participated in all aspects of that case, including the many failed attempts by Directors Buntrock and Gidwitz to disqualify Sidley as counsel for the Foundation. In fact, Plaintiffs Terra, Tucker and Simpson specifically opposed the Buntrock and Gidwitz attempts to disqualify Sidley. (See, e.g., Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion to Appoint an Independent Litigation Committee and Independent Litigation Counsel for Terra Foundation, and/or Receiver, filed by Terra, Tucker and Simpson in the Buntrock case on 10/17/00). Accordingly, Plaintiffs in this case are collaterally estopped from re-litigating those matters here.

The purpose of collateral estoppel is "to prevent repeated litigation of the same factual issue." Cree Development Corp. v. Mid-America Advertising Co., 324 Ill. App. 3d 534, 536, 755 N.E.2d 491, 493 (5th Cir. 2001); see also Nowak v. St. Rita High School, 197 Ill. 2d 381, 757 N.E.2d 471, 477 (2001). The doctrine of collateral estoppel applies when a party participates in two separate and consecutive causes of action and some controlling fact or question material to the determination of both causes has been adjudicated against that party in the former suit by a court of competent jurisdiction. Nowak, 757 N.E.2d at 477. "The adjudication of the fact or question in the first cause will, if properly presented, be conclusive of the same question in the later suit." Id. The three requirements of collateral estoppel are: (1) the issues in the cases are identical; (2) there was a final judgment on the merits in the first case; and (3) the party against whom estoppel is asserted was a party or in privity with a party to the prior adjudication. Id. at 478.

Plaintiffs' supposed claim against Sidley in this case meets all the requirements for collateral estoppel. First, Plaintiffs' attempt to disqualify Sidley as counsel for the Foundation is identical to the prior failed attempts to disqualify Sidley in the Buntrock case. Indeed, Plaintiffs' rely on their allegation that Sidley was "accused" of conflicts of interest in the Buntrock case (see First Am. Complaint, ¶ 89) in order to prevail in their attempt to disqualify Sidley in this case. This effort only underscores the identity of those issues in the two cases. Second, as the numerous orders entered by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court demonstrate, there was a final ruling that Sidley was not disqualified from representing the Foundation. Third, each of the Plaintiffs in this case were also parties in the Buntrock case. Accordingly, Plaintiffs are collaterally estopped from wasting this Court's time and re-litigating the tired issue of whether Sidley should be disqualified from representing the Foundation. See Nowack, 757 N.E.2d at 477-78. Plaintiffs' complaint should therefore be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) as it is barred by a prior decision entered in the Buntrock case.

IV. PLAINTIFFS' ALLEGED CAUSE OF ACTION FOR DECLARATORY JUDGMENT IS MOOT.

Even ignoring the fact that Plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for any cognizable cause of action, failed to allege sufficient, specific facts in support of their supposed claim and are collaterally estopped from re-litigating this issue, Plaintiffs' complaint for a declaratory judgment against Sidley should nevertheless be dismissed as moot. The test of the sufficiency of a declaratory judgment action is whether the complaint "alleges facts showing an actual or justiciable controversy between the parties." AG Farms, Inc. v. American Premier Underwriters, Inc., 296 Ill. App. 3d 684, 689, 695 N.E.2d 882, 887 (4th Dist. 1998). Specifically, the elements of an action for declaratory judgment are: (1) a plaintiff with a tangible legal interest, (2) a defendant with an adverse interest, and (3) an actual controversy regarding that interest. Id. Courts are precluded from entering a declaratory judgment unless an actual controversy is presented. Village of Maywood Bd. of Fire and Police Comm'rs v. Dep't. of Human Rights, 296 Ill. App. 3d 570, 575, 695 N.E.2d 873, 877 (1st Dist. 1998).

An actual controversy exists if there is a legitimate dispute requiring an immediate and definite determination of the parties' rights, the resolution of which would help terminate all or part of the dispute. First of America Bank, N.A. v. Netsch, 166 Ill. 2d 165, 173, 651 N.E.2d 1105, 1109 (1995). The "ripeness" doctrine prevents courts "from entangling themselves in abstract disagreements" and protects parties from judicial interference until a decision has been made and "its effects felt in a concrete way by the challenging parties." Village of Maywood, 296 Ill. App. 3d at 576, 695 N.E.2d at 877. Courts should not decide a case where the judgment would have a merely advisory effect. CGE Ford Heights, L.L.C. v. Miller, 306 Ill. App. 3d 431, 441, 714 N.E.2d 35, 42 (1st Dist. 1999).

There is no question that Plaintiffs' "claim" against Sidley is moot. Plaintiffs seek "a declaration" from this Court that Sidley is disqualified from "further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." (First Am. Complaint, pp. 33-34). Sidley does not represent the Foundation or any of its Directors in this litigation. Sidley initially appeared as counsel for the Foundation in this case; however, for reasons that have nothing to do with any supposed violation of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct, the Foundation has obtained substitute counsel and Sidley has withdrawn from its representation of the Foundation in this case. For Plaintiffs to further pursue Count III is nonsensical. Plaintiffs are asking this Court to issue a purely advisory opinion as to the propriety of a legal representation that does not exist. The fact that Sidley previously represented the Foundation in this litigation is irrelevant. Plaintiffs must establish that there is a present, actual controversy in order to sufficiently plead a cause of action for a declaratory judgment. Village of Maywood Bd. of Fire and Police Comm'rs, 296 Ill. App. 3d at 575, 695 N.E.2d at 877. Plaintiffs' request that this Court declare Sidley disqualified from this litigation is no less inappropriate than if Plaintiffs had randomly chosen a law firm out of Sullivans or Martindale Hubble and asked the Court to find that law firm disqualified from representing the Foundation or its Directors in this case. Simply put, given the fact that Sidley does not represent any party in this litigation, any decision by this Court as to whether Sidley's representation of the Foundation or its Directors in this case would violate the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct could be nothing but an improper advisory opinion. See CGE Ford Heights, L.L.C., 306 Ill. App. 3d at 441, 714 N.E.2d at 42. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' cause of action for declaratory judgment should be dismissed as a matter of law.[7]

[7] Considering the fact that Plaintiffs have chosen to employ the highly unusual tactic of naming former opposing counsel as a defendant in this lawsuit without any legal or factual basis for doing so, it may be particularly appropriate for this Court to consider the requirements of Illinois Supreme Court Rule 137. Rule 137 "authorizes the imposition of sanctions against a party or his attorney for filing a pleading, motion, or other paper that is not well grounded in fact and warranted by existing law or which has been imposed for an improper purpose." Baker v. Daniel S. Berger, Ltd., 323 Ill. App. 3d 956, 962, 753 N.E.2d 463, 469 (1st Dist. 2001) (internal citations omitted). The policy underlying the rule is to penalize a litigant "who pleads frivolous or false matters, or who brings a suit without any basis in the law." Baker, 323 Ill. App. 3d at 963, 753 N.E.2d at 469. Rule 137 imposes an affirmative duty on attorneys and litigants alike to Plaintiffs have attempted to re-litigate an issue that has previously been decided by both Judge Kinnaird as well as the Appellate Court. Additionally, Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts supporting a cognizable cause of action against Sidley. Furthermore, Plaintiffs have asked this Court to issue an advisory opinion on a legal representation that simply does not exist. Plaintiffs' cause of action for a declaratory judgment is moot and not ripe. Accordingly, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood respectfully requests that this Court dismiss the First Amended Complaint with prejudice as against it pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 and 5/2-619(a)(4), and grant such other relief that this Court deems appropriate.

Conclusion

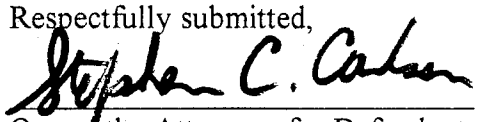
Respectfully submitted,



One of the Attorneys for Defendant

adequately investigate the facts and the law prior to filing an action, pleading, or other paper and to be sure that a basis exists for the claim. Century Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Tracy, 316 Ill. App. 3d 639, 651, 737 N.E.2d 353, 363 (2nd Dist. 2000). In this case, Plaintiffs have utterly failed to meet this standard. There is no basis in the law for a cause of action arising out of a supposed violation of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct. See Hannan, 147 Ill. App. 3d at 461, 497 N.E.2d at 1310. Plaintiffs and their counsel know full well that Judge Kinnaird ruled on the Buntrock and Gidwitz claims of "conflict of interest" and held there was no such conflict. The Amended Complaint clearly fails to allege sufficient, specific facts in support of any claim against Sidley. Moreover, as Plaintiffs are well aware, Sidley does not currently represent the Foundation or any of its Directors in this litigation. Continued pursuit of Count III is obviously baseless. Accordingly, Plaintiffs are equally aware that there is no present case or controversy that could possibly entitle Plaintiffs to a declaration that Sidley is disqualified as counsel in this litigation. The tactic of trying to name opposing counsel as a party to try to remove them from a case and of continuing to pursue them even after substitute counsel has appeared is obviously one which no court should condone and which suggests a need for careful review under Rule 137.

STATE DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS

BACKGROUND

Because this case arises out of, and indeed is at most a continuation of, disputes that originated in earlier litigation, it is necessary to discuss the earlier Buntrock case (Buntrock I) before Judge Kinnaird, Buntrock v. Terra, 00 CH 13859.

Buntrock I began with a lawsuit by two members of the Terra Foundation's Board of Directors, Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, against several other Board members including Judith Terra (widow of the late Daniel Terra), and the Terra Foundation itself. The Terra Foundation is an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, with several hundred million dollars of assets, created by Mr. Terra. Its main purpose is to preserve and display American art. The Foundation runs the Terra Museum of Art on Michigan Avenue in Chicago.

The Buntrock I plaintiffs alleged, in substance, that the Foundation was being mismanaged and losing money, and that some of the defendant Board members were not fulfilling their fiduciary obligations to the Foundation, all with a purpose to create grounds to move the Museum and Foundation out of Illinois to Washington, D.C. It was alleged that these actions were ultra vires and a breach of fiduciary obligations.

Mrs. Terra and the other Board members named as defendants had legal representation separate from that of the Foundation. Mrs. Terra, Mr. Tucker, and former Senator Alan Simpson were represented by Brian Crowe and James Wilson of Shefskey & Froelich. The Foundation was represented by lawyers at Sidley Austin Brown & Wood. Various TRO motions and motions to disqualify Sidley were ruled upon. Sidley was permitted to remain as counsel for the Foundation.

The Illinois Attorney General's Office filed an intervenor's complaint against the defendants on behalf of the People, alleging that the Terra Museum was a charity in which the people of the state had an interest, and that, consistent with charitable trust principles, the Museum should remain in Illinois. The Attorney General has common law powers to institute the assets of charities and is authorized under the Charitable Trust Act, 760 ILCS 55/12, to institute "appropriate proceedings" to enforce the Act's regulatory requirements.

Numerous motions were filed, including motions to dismiss, disqualify, for TRO. In February, 2001, the case was postured for a preliminary injunction hearing when the defendants sought mediation, and the parties unanimously agreed to enter into mediation to attempt to resolve the controversy. Judge Kinnaird appointed David Hilliard, a Chicago attorney, as the mediator, on February 3, 2001. The parties all willingly participated in long and difficult mediation sessions beginning in March, 2001. Numerous meetings, settlement proposals and collectively thousands of hours of attorney and client time were expended. Finally, the Terra Foundation, the plaintiff Board members, and the Attorney General's Office were able to agree on a settlement. The agreement provided that new Board members would be appointed, the majority of whom would be Illinois residents. The Terra Foundation would continue to base its collection here and agree not to move its headquarters out of Illinois for 50 years. The plaintiff directors and the People released the Terra Foundation, and all the board of directors, from all claims as part of the settlement. The Foundation also agreed to pay all reasonable attorneys' fees for Board members incurred in Buntrock I.

A quorum of board members voted to approve the settlement on June 29, 2001, in a recorded telephone conference call with 6 voting for and 2 voting against settlement. Board members Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, Hartman, Stebbins and Marshall voted to accept the settlement. Mrs. Terra and Mr. Tucker voted against it. Other Board members did not participate.

The three dissident Board members (Terra, Tucker and Simpson) made strenuous efforts before Judge Kinnaird to prevent the vote with a motion for a temporary restraining order, which was denied, and to nullify the action after the vote by filed Objections. Judge Kinnaird denied these motions and Objections. The dissident three Board members also sought to stop the Board meeting and vote with a federal lawsuit against Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins. As we will discuss in more detail later, the federal suit was also quickly dismissed.

Judge Kinnaird conducted an extensive hearing, lasting more than 5 hours, on July 24, 2001, to consider the Objections filed by Mrs. Terra, Tucker and Simpson. (See transcript submitted as part of the Terra Foundation's motion to dismiss). Judge Kinnaird rejected the Objectors' arguments that the settlement somehow unduly tied the collection to Illinois or limited the Foundation's ability to share works of art in the collection with other museums around the country or world. Judge Kinnaird compared the Foundation's Articles and purpose with the terms of the settlement and found that the settlement provisions affecting the Foundation were permissible under the Articles of Incorporation. The Court specifically found that the settlement was not ultra vires and was a fair and equitable resolution of the case and in the best interests of the Foundation. Judge Kinnaird signed the consent judgment on July 26, 2001.

The Court also had no trouble rejecting another of the objector's main contentions - - that some of the Board members were unduly influenced into making the settlement. Those contentions concern Dr. Stephanie Marshall and Dr. Ted Stebbins who voted for the agreement. This allegation stemmed from the fact that the Illinois Attorney General's Office, in the course of its litigation preparation in the Buntrock I case, had served an administrative subpoena on Dr. Marshall seeking information about her position as President of the Illinois Math and Science Academy, but which led to no action being taken against Dr. Marshall as a consequence of the facts discovered. The dissidents also charge that Floyd Perkins had circulated a draft amended complaint (never filed) alleging possible conflict of interest against a second Board member, Dr. Stebbins. The facts concerning Dr. Stebbins had been of record and were the very same matters involving the preliminary injunction hearing in preparation when the defendants, including the individual defendants, urged mediation. Thus, the allegations in the unfiled amended complaint involving Dr. Stebbins was not new information, it was already in the pleadings. Judge Kinnaird considered allegations of coercion raised in the objections in Buntrock I and personally listened to the tape of the Board meeting at which the settlement was approved, heard the comments of all Board members including Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins at the meeting, and found absolutely no evidence whatever of coercion or undue influence that would lead her to conclude there was any reason to overturn the settlement. In the course of the hearing on the Objections, Judge Kinnaird commented that she did not consider this to be even a "close call." (Tr. 124) The affairs of the Terra Foundation are governed by majority vote of its Board, which voted to approve the settlement. Judge Kinnaird approved the consent decree, over which she retains jurisdiction. She also is currently in the process of deciding voluminous fee petitions submitted by counsel for the Board members. These significant fees include, of course, the considerable time spent by the dissident Board member's first set of attorneys for participating in the mediation and settlement, and their second set of attorneys in challenging and attempting to overturn the settlement. This is, of course, in addition to the attorney time being logged in this suit which can fairly be termed a collateral attack on the Buntrock I settlement. The objecting Board members have also appealed Judge Kinnaird's ruling approving the settlement to the Illinois Appellate Court.

THE FEDERAL SUIT

As noted earlier, Mrs. Terra and the other Board members made a last-ditch attempt to stop the crucial Board meeting of June 29, 2001, with an additional lawsuit in federal court, against Illinois Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, Bureau Chief of the Charitable Trusts Division and lead counsel representing the State in the Buntrock litigation. This suit, brought under 42 U.S.C. §1983, raised similar allegations to those rejected later by J. Kinnaird - - that Mr. Perkins had used improper tactics to force through a settlement that would require the Foundation to stay in Illinois, and had somehow deprived the plaintiffs of their First Amendment rights and Fourteenth Amendment property rights (claims similar to what are raised in this case). Plaintiffs sought a TRO to stop the Terra Board from voting on the settlement. Judge Elaine Bucklo quickly dismissed the suit on the grounds that there was no valid case or controversy against Mr. Perkins, based on the clearly-apparent point that enjoining him would have no legal effect on stopping the Terra Board from meeting the next day, since it was not named a party in the federal case. Judge Bucklo also found the case had to be dismissed on abstention grounds, and stated Assistant Attorney General Perkins had "undoubtedly legitimate authority" to file pleadings involving Dr. Stebbins and to investigate Dr. Marshall's school. Terra Foundation v. Perkins, 151 F.Supp. 2d 931, 937 (N.D. Ill.2001)

THE ALLEGATIONS OF THIS CASE (BUNTROCK II)

This case began in the Law Division, was transferred to Chancery, and eventually was assigned to the calendar of Judge Nowicki.

The allegations in the first amended complaint are a continuation of the objections raised in the earlier cases. Mr. Tucker, Mrs. Terra, and Mr. Simpson were parties in Buntrock I. They are now suing Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz (plaintiffs in Buntrock I), as well as the other Terra Board members, including the new members who joined the Board as part of the settlement. The Terra Foundation itself is also named as a defendant. The amended complaint also names Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn as defendants. These firms were counsel to the Foundation. The state defendants are Attorney General Ryan and Floyd Perkins.

Counts I and II seek a declaratory judgment that the Buntrock I settlement approved by Judge Kinnaird was unlawful and that the new Board members elected to the Board under the consent order be enjoined from participating on the Board. The remaining counts are all dependent on the allegation of unlawful coercion, breach of duty and ultra vires, conclusions asserted in Counts I and II. Count III seeks a declaratory judgment that Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn be disqualified from representing the Foundation. Count IV seeks damages, punitive damages, and an injunction on the grounds that the June 29, 2001, vote was ultra vires. Count V alleges that Board members who voted for the settlement breached their fiduciary duty, and seeks damages. Count VI alleges that the Attorney General and Mr. Perkins "colluded with" Board members to commit the breach of fiduciary duty, and seeks damages and punitive damages. Counts VII, a federal count brought under 42 U.S.C. §1983, alleges that Mr. Perkins deprived the Foundation of its property in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; violated the Foundation's right under the interstate commerce clause Art. I, §8 of the U.S. Constitution; and impaired its contractual obligations under the Contracts Clause. Art. I §9. Plaintiffs seek damages in Count VII.

The state defendants join in the motions and arguments raised by the co-defendants in support of dismissal, of all Counts, including the grounds of res judicata and collateral estoppel. In addition to those arguments, the state defendants raise additional arguments specific to Counts VI and VII, which are directed at Attorney General Ryan and Floyd Perkins. State law immunities should bar Count VI, a state law claim, and federal law immunities should bar Count VII, a federal civil rights count brought under 42 U.S.C.§1983. As noted above, the Terra Foundation's resources are finite - - and attorneys' fees in another protracted litigation will be harmful to the Foundation. This lends additional urgency to the defendants' desire that this case be ended quickly on motions to dismiss.

ARGUMENT

I. COUNT VI FAILS TO STATE A CLAIM (735 ILCS 5/2-615)

Count VI alleges that the Terra Board members committed a breach of fiduciary duty when they voted for the settlement, and that Attorney General Ryan and Floyd Perkins "colluded" (par. 118) with these defendants and induced a breach of their fiduciary duties.

We have found no Illinois case which would support such a theory in any factual context remotely similar to what is presented here.

Illinois cases involving a claim of inducing a breach of fiduciary duty have held that a third person who has colluded with a fiduciary in committing a breach of duty, and who obtained a benefit from the fiduciary, is liable for restitution. In cases involving public officials, this principle usually comes into play where a public official (with a fiduciary duty to the public at large) is bribed by a third party. The third party who induced the breach cannot profit from the wrong. See, e.g., Chicago Park Dist. v. Kenroy, Inc., 78 Ill.2d 555, 564-65 (1980). Similarly, the public official who breaches his fiduciary duty by engaging in corruption may be forced to make restitution. Chicago, ex rel. Cohen v. Keane, 64 Ill.2d 559, 565-66 (1976). But there is no allegation here that a public official somehow personally benefitted monetarily from the settlement, or somehow induced a Board Member corruptly in a scheme which personally benefitted the Board Member or the public official.

The allegations in this case are vastly different. The Attorney General's Office, representing the people of the State, was granted leave to intervene. The lawsuit eventually was settled after a Court hearing. Plaintiffs here allege that the allegations in a pleading drafted by the Attorney General's Office but never filed constituted some sort of breach of fiduciary duty. In the course of that litigation, the Attorney General's Office also served an administrative subpoena, pursuant to statutory authority in the Charitable Trusts Act, 760 ILCS 55/1 et seq., to one defendant to gather certain information which led to no enforcement action against that official. These litigation-related actions, which never prompted the slightest criticism from the trial judge who approved the settlement and who was aware of the Attorney General's Office litigation position, are now alleged to be wrongful on the theory of an inducement to breach a fiduciary duty. On this reasoning, any lawyer, even one in private practice, could be held liable for normal litigation activities - - serving a subpoena, filing a pleading - - which are the part and parcel of all litigation. The law favors settlements of disputed claims, In re Estate of Cooper, 125 Ill.2d 363, 370 (1988), and litigants often choose to settle. Plaintiffs' theory, were it allowed to stand, would permit a collateral attack in which one party could seek to overturn a settlement because it was "coerced" to settle by a motion to dismiss, or motion for summary judgment, or discovery request, or an allegedly extortionate settlement demand. [1]

The cause of action for inducing a breach of fiduciary duty comes from the law of restitution, to remedy unjust enrichment. It has no bearing whatsoever in the context of this case. Floyd Perkins was engaging in litigation activity as a lawyer representing the State of Illinois. Mr. Perkins representation of his client, the People of the State of Illinois in no way undermines the settlement or suggests the Attorney General's Office "colluded" with anyone or induced a

[1]Both state and federal cases make clear that it is not "duress" to institute or threaten to institute legal actions. Towne v. Libertyville, 190 Ill.App.3d 563, 569 (1989); Fleury v. Clayton, 847 F.2d 1229, 1232 (7th Cir. 1988) ("an overbearing attorney does not violate the Due Process Clause by stressing the grave consequences that may attend failure to bargain.") breach of fiduciary duty on the part of Terra Board members who were found explicitly by Judge Kinnaird to have entered into a valid settlement.

II. THE DOCTRINE OF STATE PUBLIC OFFICIAL IMMUNITY BARS THIS CLAIM. (735 ILCS 5/2619)

Illinois law has long provided public officials an absolute immunity from damages for governmental activities, to protect them from lawsuits that would interfere with the performance of their official duties. One of the Attorney General's core responsibilities is to represent the State's interests in civil litigation.

In Morton v. Hartigan, 145 Ill.App.3d 417 (1986), an attorney with the Illinois Attorney General's Office was terminated from his position. He filed a suit alleging retaliatory discharge, defamation, and invasion of privacy against the Attorney General and various supervisory officials in the Office. The court held that the Attorney General and supervisory staff were absolutely immune from money damages, as "essential in promoting the effective functioning of government." Id. at 424. The Court noted that "officials of government should be free to exercise their duties unembarrassed by the fear of damage suits," quoting Barr v. Mateo, 360 U.S. 564, 571 (1959), a defamation case brought against a public official.

The absolute immunity extends to all actions within the scope of the official's employment, which is broadly construed. Morton, 145 Ill.App.3d at 425. In Blair v.Walker, 64 Ill.2d 1 (1976), Gov. Walker was sued for defamation when he issued a press release criticizing an individual who purchased the home of a senior citizen at a tax sale. The Court held that the Governor's statement was within the scope of his duties and held that it was absolutely privileged. Id. at 10-11.

The Attorney General was found to have a similar absolute immunity for a press statement in People, ex rel. Hartigan v. Knecht, 216 Il.App.3d 843 (2nd Dist. 1991). A consumer fraud case was brought by the Attorney General's Office; a press release about the case was issued by the Attorney General's Office which the defendant alleged contained defamatory statements, and a counterclaim was filed. The Court found the statements absolutely privileged:

> It is the function and responsibility of the Attorney General to bring consumer fraud actions. As such, he must be allowed to keep the public informed of his actions without fear of personal liability. Educating and informing the public is just as much a part of the Attorney General's function as prosecuting fraudulent and deceptive practices. We find that his actions were essentially governmental in character and thus protected under the immunity doctrine.

Id. at 862. The absolute privilege has been applied to other officials' public statements or media statements as well. See, e.g., Dolatowski v. Life Printing & Publishing Co., 197 Ill.App.3d 23, 28-29 (1st Dist. 1990) (police chief's public statements about arrest, citing Morton); Williams v. Fischer, 221 Ill.App.3d 117, 118 (5th Dist. 1991) (coroner's statements on death certificate, citing Morton). In each case the Court found that the statements were within the scope of the official's duties and immunized. The doctrine of absolute public official immunity has been applied in other contexts as well for discretionary acts performed by public officials. See, e.g., Mora v. State, 68 Ill.2d 223 (1977) (alleged failure by State Dept. of Transportation officials to establish no-passing zone); Lusietto v. Kingan, 107 Ill.App.3d 239 (1969) (highway repair considered discretionary); Larson v. Darnell, 113 Ill.App.3d 975 (1973) (immunizing parole officials for discharge of inmate who committed crime after release); People v. Patrick J. Gorman Consultants, Inc., 111 Ill.App.3d 729 (1982) (Attorney General and Assistant Attorneys General absolutely immune for civil prosecution of charitable solicitation laws).

The only question to be decided is whether the activities which form the basis of the allegations against Floyd Perkins and Attorney General Ryan were within the scope of the office's duties.

The Attorney General's Office participated in the Buntrock I litigation as an intervening party for the State of Illinois; and served an administrative subpoena pursuant to 760 ILCS 55/9, which explicitly authorizes the Attorney General to do so. Of course these are "core" functions of the office - - if issuing a press release is within the Attorney General's job responsibilities, issuing a subpoena and participating in cases as lawyer for the State are all the more so. These are activities well within the Attorney General's Office common law and constitutional powers, see People, ex rel. Scott v. Briceland, 65 Ill.2d 485 (1976) (Attorney General is constitutional officer authorized to represent people of the State in litigation).

If this state claim were allowed to proceed, it would open the door to repeated ancillary litigation against the Attorney General and his staff attorneys, subjecting them to suits for money damages for discretionary litigation decisions, or discretionary decisions to issue administrative subpoenas (which are common in a number of bureaus of the Office, including Consumer Fraud and Charitable Trusts). The absolute immunity doctrine expressed in Morton, Knecht, Blair, Gorman, and other cases is essential to the functioning of the Attorney General's Office, and plaintiffs' efforts to sue Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins for litigation activities at the core of the Office's functions should be rejected.[2]

III. JAMES RYAN AND FLOYD PERKINS ARE ENTITLED TO SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY (735 ILCS 5/2-619)

Plaintiff has brought this action against James Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois and Floyd Perkins, Assistant Illinois Attorney General, however sovereign immunity bars Plaintiffs from bringing a state-law against both of these Defendants. 745 ILCS 5/1.

Illinois case law creates a three-part test for determining whether a defendant is entitled to sovereign immunity. Sovereign immunity exists where (1) the defendant is an arm of the State; (2) the plaintiff's action constitutes a "present claim" with the potential to subject the State to liability; and (3) no exceptions to the application of the doctrine exist. See Healy v. Vaupel, 133 Ill.2d 295, 308 (1990).

The first step in deciding whether a defendant is entitled to sovereign immunity is to determine whether the defendant is an arm of the State. Ellis v. Board of Governors, 102 Ill.2d 387, 390-91 (1984). The determination of whether an action is in fact a suit against the State turns upon an analysis of the issues involved and the relief sought, rather than the formal designation of the parties. Healy v. Vaupel, 133 Ill. 2d 295 (1990). An action brought nominally against a State employee in his individual capacity will be found to be a claim against the State where a judgment for the plaintiff could operate to control the actions of the State or subject it to liability. Gocheff v. State Community College, 69 Ill. App. 3d 178 (1979). There is no question that the Attorney General and his assistants are an arm of the state. See 15 ILCS 205/4 et. seq.

[2]Illinois law also affords an absolute litigation privilege to all attorneys for anything said or written in a legal proceeding, even when malice is assumed to have motivated the attorney's statements. Scheib v. Grant, 22 F.3d 149, 156 (7th Cir. 1994); Libco Corp. v. Adams, 100 Ill.App.3d 314 (1981). The privilege also covers out-of-court communications between attorneys pertaining to proposed or pending litigation. Libco, 100 Ill.App. at 316-17. The pertinency requirement is applied fairly broadly and need not be limited to specific issues involved in litigation. Id. Thus, for all attorneys, whether governmental or private, statements made in litigation, in court papers, to opposing counsel in or out of court, in mediation sessions, etc., would be absolutely privileged.

Turning to the second element, it cannot be contested that this action is a "present claim" with the potential to subject the State to liability. Therefore, the second element in establishing sovereign immunity has been met.

Similarly, there are no exceptions which would preclude the adoption of sovereign immunity upon Attorney General Ryan or his assistant Floyd Perkins. They are therefore immune from this action in Count VI for monetary damages. Plaintiff is therefore barred from bringing this action against the Attorney General Ryan or his assistant Floyd Perkins.

IV. COUNT VII, ALLEGING FEDERAL CLAIMS UNDER 42 U.S.C. §1983, FAILS TO STATE A CLAIM AND IS BARRED BY THE DOCTRINE OF ABSOLUTE AND QUALIFIED IMMUNITY. (735 ILCS 5/2-619)

Count VIII alleges that Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins deprived the Foundation of property in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment and the Foundation's First Amendment rights to free speech. Count VII also alleges that the state defendants violated the Commerce Clause (presumably by the settlement terms which keep the foundation based in Illinois) and impaired the Foundation's contractual obligations, in violation of Article I, §9 of the Constitution. These federal counts fail to state a cause of action and are barred by federal doctrines of absolute immunity and qualified immunity.

A. THE INDIVIDUAL BOARD MEMBERS LACK STANDING TO ASSERT THE FOUNDATION'S RIGHTS. (735 ILCS 5/2-619)

It is an axiomatic principle, both under Illinois and federal law of standing, that a party must assert his or her own rights and not the rights of third parties. Amtech Systems Corp. v. Ill. Toll Highway Authority, 264 Ill.App.3d 1095, 1103 (1st Dist. 1994). Town of Northville v. Village of Sheridan, 274 Ill.App.3d 784, 786 (3rd Dist. 1995). See also Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 752 (1984); Shimer v. Washington, 100 F.3d 506, 508 (7th Cir. 1996). Plaintiffs do not claim their own property rights or speech rights or contract rights were damaged. They assert the Foundation's rights. Dissenting Board members do not own the Foundation or have a property interest in it. Moreover the Plaintiffs have not pled their action as a derivative action on behalf of the corporation. Nor do they, on their own, have the power to decide where the Foundation's art should go, or what contracts the Foundation should enter into. Plaintiffs' position on the state law claims is subject to the same objection. Plaintiffs, in essence, have sustained no injury in fact to a legally recognized interest of their own. See In re Marriage of Rodriguez, 131 Ill.2d 273, 280 (1989). They lack standing to sue.

Property interests are created by state law. Before a person can claim to be deprived of property, he or she must show, based on state law, some legitimate claim of entitlement to the particular status (such as continued employment, where the issue often arises) or property at issue. Board of Regents v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564 (1972). The Due Process Clause will not protect a person's mere expectation or interest in a particular property:

> Property in the constitutional sense is what is securely and durably yours under state (or...Federal) law, as distinct from what you hold > subject to so many conditions as to make your interest meager, transitory, or uncertain.

Simpkins v. Sandwich Community Hospital, 854 F.2d 215, 218 (7th Cir. 1988). No individual Board member has a property interest in the Foundation's property. The Foundation's art belongs to the Foundation, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, not to Mrs. Terra or Mr. Tucker; the Foundation's contracts are the Foundation's. Likewise, its First Amendment rights cannot be asserted by individual Board members. Because a clear majority of the Board has voted and the majority will was ratified in a Court-approved settlement, the dissenting members have no standing to assert rights of the Foundation as their own in this situation. If the majority of the Board believed there was some inducement to breach a fiduciary duty or some violation of the Foundation's rights, it would have the power to redress its own rights. Count VIII fails at the threshold level of standing. (To the extent the state law claim seeks relief purely intended to benefit the individual plaintiffs, it too fails for lack of standing).

B. NO PERSONAL INVOLVEMENT IS ALLEGED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL RYAN. (735 ILCS 5/2-615)

Attorney General Ryan is sued individually under section 1983 for money damages, yet there are no specific allegations against him in the amended complaint. Liability in a section 1983 case cannot be based on a theory of respondeat superior or vicarious liability. Gossmeyer v. McDonald, 128 F.3d 481, 495 (7th Cir. 1997); Wolf-Lillie v. Sonquist, 699 F.2d 864, 869 (7th Cir. 1983). The State's interests in the Buntrock I litigation were represented by Floyd Perkins and the Charitable Trusts Division of the Attorney General's Office. In the complete absence of any allegations that the Attorney General himself committed any constitutional violation, he should be dismissed from the case with prejudice.

C. ABSOLUTE PROSECUTORIAL IMMUNITY BARS THE CLAIMS AGAINST THE ATTORNEY GENERAL DEFENDANTS. (735 ILCS 5/2-619)

Criminal prosecutors are absolutely immune from damages liability under 42 U.S.C. §1983 for actions taken in prosecuting a criminal case. Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 U.S. 409 (1976). The holding of Imbler has been extended to governmental attorneys litigating administrative or civil cases. Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478 (1978). In Butz, attorneys representing the federal government in an administrative hearing were held to have absolute immunity for their activity in prosecuting the administrative case. Id. at 515. Butz has been cited repeatedly as authority in the lower courts for the principle of absolute immunity for governmental lawyers in administrative and civil cases. See, e.g., Sloan v. HUD, 231 F.3d 10 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (prosecution of administrative sanctions); Scott v.Hurn, 216 F.3d 897 (10th Cir. 2000) (presenting civil commitment proceeding); Pfeiffer v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 929 F.2d 1484 (10th Cir. 1991) (Colorado Attorney General lawyers absolutely immune for medical misconduct prosecution); Fry v. Melaragno, 939 F.2d 832 (9th Cir. 1991) (IRS attorneys).

Closer to home, the Illinois Appellate Court has explicitly adopted the Butz holding in a case factually similar to this one. In People v. Patrick J. Gorman Consultants, 111 Ill.App.3d 729 (1st Dist. 1982), the Illinois Attorney General's Office filed suit in 1976 for violations of charitable solicitation laws. A counterclaim was filed alleging federal civil rights violations against the Attorney General and three Assistant Attorneys General. The Court found that the Attorney General and staff attorneys were absolutely immune from the federal civil rights claims, citing Butz v. Economou. Id. at 111 Ill.App.3d 732.

The Attorney General defendants are absolutely immune under these cases. The activities that form the basis of plaintiffs' allegations - - filing pleadings, participating in settlement discussions, serving an administrative subpoena - - all relate to the litigation process and are absolutely protected from civil liability. If they were not protected, it would have a major deterrent effect on the ability of governmental lawyers to do their jobs, in exactly the same way judges would be deterred if they faced civil liability for every difficult ruling they made.

D. QUALIFIED IMMUNITY PROTECTS ATTORNEY GENERAL RYAN AND ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL PERKINS. (735 ILCS 5/2-619)

Even if they were not protected by absolute immunity, the state defendants would be protected by the federal-law doctrine of qualified immunity. The doctrine of qualified immunity shields government officials performing discretionary functions from liability for civil damages. The doctrine is designed to accommodate competing values. An action for damages may provide citizens with their only means of vindication when an official violates their constitutional rights. Courts, however, must also protect against the danger that the fear of being sued will hamper officials in the proper discharge of their duties. Qualified immunity allows courts to quickly terminate insubstantial lawsuits, without denying worthy claimants their day in court. Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 814, 73 L.Ed. 2d 396, 102 S.Ct. 2727 (1982). Officials cannot receive qualified immunity, however, if their conduct violated clearly established constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Id. at 818.

The Court must apply a two-step approach in determining whether the defense of qualified immunity applies. The threshold issue is whether there is any constitutional right asserted at all. As discussed earlier, no viable Federal claims are stated, and the case ends on that basis. If there is a claim stated, the Court must then consider whether the right was clearly established at the time the alleged violation occurred. Siegert v. Gilley, 500 U.S. 226, 232 (1991); Delaney v. DeTella, 256 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2001).

Plaintiffs have the burden of demonstrating that the defendants violated a constitutional right that was clearly established. Davis v. Scherer, 468 U.S. 183, 197, 82 L.Ed.2d 139, 104 S.Ct. 3012 (1984); Abel v. Miller, 824 F.2d 1522, 1534 (7th Cir. 1987). The Supreme Court has provided courts with guidance in determining whether the law was clearly established at the time of an alleged constitutional violation. It is not enough to allege at a high level of generality that a defendant violated a plaintiff's right to due process or freedom of speech:

> The contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in the light of preexisting law the unlawfulness must be apparent.

Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S.635, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 3039, 97 L.Ed.2d 523 (1987).

The Seventh Circuit has made the same point: The right must be sufficiently particularized to put potential defendants on notice that their conduct probably is unlawful. "[O]ur conclusion is that the test for immunity should be whether the law was clear in relation to the specific facts confronting the public official when he acted." Colaizzi v. Walker, 812 F.2d 304,, 308 (7th Cir. 1987) (quoting Azeez v. Fairman, 795 F.2d 1296, 1301 (7th Cir. 1986)).

In Count VII of their complaint, Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate how any conduct on the part of the Attorney General deprived the Foundation of property without due process of law (Comp. ¶ 95); deprived the foundation of their right of freedom of speech (Comp. ¶ 96); or impaired the Foundation's contractual obligations (Comp. ¶ 97). Notwithstanding the fact that the Plaintiffs have stated conclusory allegations in violation of Illinois pleading standards (735 ILCS 5/2-615), Small v. Sussman, 306 Ill.App.3d 639, 642 (1st Dist. 1999), there is no clearly established law that demonstrates that any of the conduct alleged in the complaint constitutes a violation of the civil rights of the Foundation.

At no time could it be said that any conduct by Floyd Perkins in the Buntrock I litigation was anything approaching the standard of "apparent" unlawfulness in violation of clearly-established constitutional rights, i.e. that anything transpiring in Buntrock I was a violation of the Commerce Clause, Contract Clause, First Amendment, or Due Process Clause. If anything, the "clearly-established" legal principle was the line of cases giving him absolute prosecutorial immunity for litigation activities.

The doctrine of qualified immunity, in addition to absolute immunity, bars all damage claims against Attorney General Ryan and Floyd Perkins. Plaintiffs' constitutional claims are not even colorable and fall far short of the standard needed to survive a motion to dismiss.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs' claims against the Attorney General and Floyd Perkins are similar to those raised in federal court against Mr. Perkins which Judge Bucklo summarily dismissed for lack of standing and on abstention grounds. Judge Bucklo noted, in dismissing the suit, that the Assistant Attorney General had "undoubtedly legitimate authority to name Dr. Stebbins in a complaint and to investigate Dr. Marshall's school...." 151 F. Supp.2d at 937. (Emphasis added). This "undoubtedly legitimate authority" of an Assistant Attorney General is protected by absolute immunity, under both Illinois law (as applied to the state law claims of Count VI) and federal law (as applied to the federal law claims of Count VII). Again, defendants adopt the res judicata and collateral estoppel arguments raised by the co-defendant, Terra Foundation.

The defendants, Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, request that their motion to dismiss be granted, and that the plaintiffs' complaint against them be dismissed in its entirety and with prejudice.

MOTION TO DISMISS

The defendants, Attorney General James E. Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, move the Court, pursuant to Section 2-619.1 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to dismiss the amended complaint against them with prejudice.

In support of this motion, defendants state as follows:

1. The case is barred by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. (Section 2-619).

2. The complaint, as to all Counts and particularly with respect to Counts VI and VII which are directed at these defendants specifically, fails to state a cause of action against these defendants. (Section 2-615).

3. Count VI is barred by the doctrine of public official immunity. (Section 2- 619).

4. Count VI is barred by the doctrine of sovereign immunity. (Section 2-619).

5. Count VII is barred because plaintiffs lack standing to sue for violation of their rights under 42 U.S.C. §1983. (Section 2-619).

6. Count VII is barred as to Attorney General Ryan because there are no allegations of his personal involvement sufficient to state a cause of action against him. (Section 2-615).

7. Count VII is barred by the doctrine of absolute prosecutorial immunity. (Section 2-619).

8. Count VII is barred by the doctrine of qualified immunity. (Section 2-619).

A memorandum of law is submitted in support of this motion.

WHEREFORE, defendants request that the complaint against Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins be dismissed with prejudice.

Respectfully submitted,

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S
MOTION TO DISMISS, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE TO STAY, COUNTS I, II AND IV OF PLAINTIFFS' AMENDED COMPLAINT

Now comes defendant Terra Foundation For the Arts ("the Foundation"), by its attorneys and pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619.1, and hereby moves to dismiss Counts I, II, IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint. In further support thereof, the Foundation states as follows:

1. Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint contains seven counts, three of which are directed toward the Foundation. Each of the Counts directed toward the Foundation ask this Court to review and to vacate the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock, et al. v. Terra et al., No. 00 CH 13859 ("Buntrock I" or "the first lawsuit"). In that proceeding, plaintiffs raised several objections to the Consent Judgment and Order and the underlying settlement. After the submission of voluminous briefs and a five-hour hearing, Judge Kinnaird rejected each of plaintiffs' objections and entered the Consent Judgment and Order, ending Buntrock I.

On August 22, 2001, plaintiffs' appealed Judge Kinnaird's ruling and that appeal is presently pending in the First District Appellate Court.

2. The three counts directed toward the Foundation in this proceeding are as follows: First, in Count I, the plaintiffs seek declaratory relief setting aside the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on the ground that the settlement upon which that order is based was "the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General" and was "antithetical" to the Foundation's purposes. (Am. Cmplt. at 31.) Second, in Count II, the dissenting directors incredibly ask the Court to nullify the election of the five new directors on the ground that they "have not been properly elected" under the Foundation's bylaws and the terms of same Consent Judgment and Order plaintiffs ask the Court to vacate in Count I. Third, in Count IV, the dissenting directors (presumably) seek to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order on the ground that the underlying settlement constituted an ultra vires act.

3. The Foundation moves to dismiss Counts I, II, IV on three independent grounds:

(a) First, because Counts I, II, and IV ask this Court to review and to vacate the Consent Judgment and Order based on the same objections rejected by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock I, those counts are barred by doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel and should be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4). This argument is set forth on pages 10 through 18 of the Foundation's supporting memorandum, which is attached hereto and incorporated herein.

(b) Second, because Counts I, II, and IV involve the "same parties" and "same cause" as the pending appeal of Buntrock I, those counts should be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILC 5/2-619(a)(3). In the alternative, although the immediate dismissal of this action on res judicata/collateral estoppel and other grounds would best serve the interest by justice by definitively terminating this improper collateral attack on Judge Kinnaird's Consent Judgment and Order, this Court may stay this litigation under Section 2-619(a)(3) pending resolution of the dissenting directors' appeal of Buntrock I. This argument is set forth on pages 18 and 19 of the Foundation's supporting memorandum, which is attached hereto and incorporated herein.

(c) Third, because Counts I, II, and IV fail to allege facts sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted, those counts should be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615. This argument is set forth on pages 19 through 25 of the Foundation's supporting memorandum, which is attached hereto and incorporated herein.

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons and those stated in its supporting memorandum, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts respectfully moves this Court to dismiss Counts I, II, and IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint with prejudice pursuant to Section 2-619.1. In the alternative, this Court should stay this litigation under Section 2-619(a)(3) pending resolution of the dissenting directors' appeal of Buntrock I.

Respectfully submitted,

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S MEMORANDUM
IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE TO STAY, COUNTS I, II AND IV OF PLAINTIFFS' AMENDED COMPLAINT

This lawsuit is the latest chapter in a much-publicized dispute about the future of the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") and the Terra Museum of American Art ("the Museum"). In June 2001, the Foundation's Board of Directors approved, by a vote of 6 to 2, a settlement to end a lawsuit filed by certain directors that was pending in this Court before Judge Kinnaird. When the Foundation moved for the entry of a Consent Judgment and Order before Judge Kinnaird, the directors who opposed the settlement ("the dissenting directors") objected and asserted that Judge Kinnaird should reject the Consent Judgment and Order on the grounds that it was the product of director conflicts of interest, unlawful interference and coercion by the Attorney General, and inconsistent with the Foundation's purpose (i.e., ultra vires). After reviewing the dissenting directors' voluminous submissions and entertaining their arguments at a five-hour hearing, Judge Kinnaird rejected their objections and entered the Consent Judgment and Order on July 26, 2001. The dissenting directors appealed Judge Kinnaird's decision on August 22, 2001 but have taken no action to advance their appeal.

Notwithstanding Judge Kinnaird's rejection of their claims and their pending appeal, the dissenting directors – in Counts I, II and IV of their Amended Complaint -- now ask this Court to sit as a lateral Court of Appeals and to review and vacate the Consent Judgment and Order based on the very same objections considered and rejected by Judge Kinnaird. As explained in detail below, this Court should dismiss Counts I, II and IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint on three independent grounds: (1) the claims asserted therein are barred by well established principles of res judicata and collateral estoppel, 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) (see infra at 10-17); (2) there is another action – plaintiffs' appeal of Judge Kinnaird's decision – pending between "the same parties for the same cause," 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(3) (see infra at 18-19);[1] and (3) those counts fail to plead sufficient facts to vacate the settlement agreement on any of the grounds asserted by plaintiffs, 735 ILCS 5/2-615 (see infra at 19-25).[2]

BACKGROUND

The Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") is an Illinois not-for-profit corporation established by Daniel J. Terra in 1978. (Amended Complaint ("Am. Cmplt.") ¶ 27.) In 1980, the Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established the Terra Museum of American Art ("the Museum") in Evanston, Illinois. (Id. ¶ 28.) In 1987, the Foundation moved the museum to its present downtown Chicago location at 664 North Michigan Avenue. (Id.) In 1992, the Foundation established a second museum: the Musee d'Art Americain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. (Id.) Today, the Foundation oversees the $175 million Terra Collection of American Art and $250 million in other assets. (Id. ¶¶ 7, 28.)

After Mr. Terra's death in 1996, the Foundation – and its Board of Directors – became embroiled in a dispute over whether the future of the Foundation was best served by maintaining its main museum in Chicago or by relocating the Terra Collection to a different city. (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 35-40.) This dispute culminated in the filing of the first lawsuit.

[1] In the alternative, this Court may exercise its discretion to stay this lawsuit pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3) pending resolution of the dissenting directors' appeal of Judge Kinnaird's order.

[2] The Foundation's Motion To Dismiss addresses only Counts I, II and IV because the other Counts are not directed at the Foundation but rather are directed at the defendant law firms (Count III), the individual directors who voted in favor of the proposed settlement (Count V), and the Attorney General (Count VII).

I. The First Lawsuit: Buntrock I

On September 22, 2000, Directors Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz (collectively "the Buntrock I plaintiffs") sued the Foundation, Directors Judith Terra, Paul Hayes Tucker, and Alan K. Simpson, and Naftali Michaeli in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Chancery Division: Buntrock, et al. v. Terra, et al., No. 00 CH 13859 (hereinafter "Buntrock I" or "the first lawsuit") (Exh. A). The Buntrock I plaintiffs sought, inter alia, a court order prohibiting the Foundation from moving the Museum out of Chicago. The Illinois Attorney General intervened in Buntrock I on September 25, 2000, aligning with the Buntrock I plaintiffs in their effort to keep the Foundation and Musuem in Chicago. Buntrock I was assigned to Judge Kinnaird.

II. The Buntrock I Mediation

After a contentious start to the litigation marked by extensive motion practice, the parties agreed to submit to mediation. (2/5/01 Order, Exh. B hereto.) The Court, with the support of Directors Terra, Tucker, and Simpson, selected David C. Hilliard to mediate Buntrock I. On June 19, 2001, after five months of intense mediation, a settlement proposal was agreed to by six Directors of the Foundation's Board, including the Buntrock I plaintiffs, and the Attorney General. ("Agreement to Entry of Consent Judgment," attachment to 6/19/01 Hilliard Ltr. To Board, Exh. C.) Among other things, the settlement agreement provided that the Museum would remain in Chicago for fifty years and that the Foundation would add five new directors to its Board. (Id.) A special meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors was scheduled for June 29, 2001 to vote on the proposed settlement.

16di-004536

III. The Second Lawsuit: Terra, Tucker and Simpson Sue in Federal Court

In an attempt to stop the Board vote on the proposed Settlement, Directors Terra, Tucker and Simpson ("the dissenting directors") filed suit in federal court against Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins alleging that Perkins had intimidated Directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins into supporting the proposed settlement: Terra Foundation v. Perkins, No. 01 C 4976 (N.D. Ill. 2001). (The Complaint in the Second Lawsuit is Exh. D hereto.) Among other relief, the dissenting directors sought a temporary restraining order enjoining Directors Marshall and Stebbins from participating in the June 29th vote on the proposed settlement. (Exh. E, ¶ 3.) The federal court dismissed the second lawsuit, exercising its discretion to abstain in favor of the pending state court proceedings under the Younger doctrine. See generally Terra Foundation v. Perkins, 151 F. Supp. 2d 931 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (Exh. F). However, the federal court also dismissed the second lawsuit on the additional ground that Perkins' alleged actions (naming Stebbins in a prospective lawsuit and investigating Dr. Marshall's school) were within his "legitimate authority" and that Stebbins' and Marshall's decision to support the settlement was lawful. See 151 F. Supp. 2d at 937.

IV. Judge Kinnaird Rejects The Dissenting Directors Motion For TRO

Having failed in federal court, the dissenting directors sought to stop the June 29th vote on the proposed settlement by filing a motion for a temporary restraining order in Buntrock I. The dissenting directors argued that the scheduled vote should be stopped on the grounds that Perkins had coerced Stebbins and Marshall into supporting the proposed Settlement and that the settlement would result in the Foundation taking ulra vires actions in violation of the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act, 805 ILCS

105/103.15(a). (Exh. G, Dissenting Directors' Mot. for TRO.) Judge Kinnaird denied the dissenting directors' request for a TRO. (Exh. H.)

V. The June 29th Meeting: The Board of Directors Approves the Settlement

On June 29, 2001, the Foundation held a properly noticed and convened Board meeting at which eight directors – a number sufficient to constitute a quorum – were present. (Exh. I, 6/29/01 Board Meeting Minutes.) After attendance was taken, Stebbins moved for adoption of the resolutions approving of, among other things, the settlement agreement, and the addition of five new directors – namely, James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada, and Frederick A Krehbiel. (Exh. J, Resolutions.) After each of the directors, including Ms. Terra, had an opportunity to argue the merits of the settlement and prior to the vote, Foundation Counsel Mark Heatwole ("Heatwole") asked Directors Stebbins and Marshall to address the allegations made by the dissenting directors that Assistant Attorney General Perkins coerced them into supporting the settlement:

> I think it's important for each one of you to . . . indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely, and you are voting with your fiduciary obligations to this board and this institution and without . . . that pressure. . . . I think the board ought to be on record and everybody ought to be clear that this vote is being taken without that pressure, without that, um, impediment.

(Exh. K, Tr. of 6/29/01 Board Meeting at 11.)

Marshall responded to Heatwole first, firmly asserting that she had arrived at her decision to support the settlement of her own free will:

> I have always walked . . . my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice . . . to represent the integrity of my own convictions. . . . I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. It is true, that the attorney general's office has > asked the Illinois mathematics and science academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities, as a board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion [to adopt the resolutions settling the case] and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation.

(Id. at 27.)

> Likewise, Stebbins affirmed that he too was voting his free will:
>
> I abhor the personalized suit brought by the plaintiffs [Buntrock and Gidwitz]. . . . I feel very, very sympathetic for Judith Terra. I lament the behavior of Senator Simpson. I'm very saddened by the behavior of Paul Tucker. I abhor the threatening tactics of the attorney general, but I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is the best interests of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago, and in France. For the promulgation of American art.

(Id. at 27.)

After these statements, the Foundation approved the resolutions, which included the settlement and the election of five new directors, by a vote of 6 to 2. (Id. at 29.)

VI. The Dissenting Directors Seek Leave To File Written Objections

On July 2, 2001, the dissenting directors filed a motion seeking a "fairness hearing" to demonstrate that the "proposed settlement is substantively and procedurally unsound." (Exh. L, Motion at 2.) In response to the dissenting directors' motion, Judge Kinnaird indicated that the Court would "seriously consider" any objections to the proposed settlement prior to entering the proposed Consent Judgment and Order. (Exh. M, Tr. of 7/2/01 Hearing at 32, 102.) Accordingly, the Court ordered the Foundation to file by July 6, 2001 a motion for entry of the Consent Judgment and Order based on the settlement approved by the Board. (Id. at 103.) The Court further allowed the dissenting directors to file written objections to the settlement and set a hearing on the matter for July 24, 2001. (Id. at 104.)

VII. The Dissenting Directors Object To the Proposed Settlement.

After the Foundation filed its Motion for Entry of Consent Judgment and Order (Exh. N), the dissenting directors filed a twenty-eight page brief laying out in detail their objections to the proposed settlement. (Exh. O, Objections.) In their brief, the dissenting directors urged Judge Kinnaird to set aside the settlement on at least three grounds: (1) Directors Marshall and Stebbins should have not have been allowed to participate in the vote because they had a conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's supposedly "threatening" actions towards them; (2) the Attorney General unlawfully coerced Directors Marshall and Stebbins into voting in favor of the settlement; and (3) the settlement required the supporting Directors to "abdicate their fiduciary duties" by endorsing a mission for the Foundation that was "antithetical" to the Foundation's purposes or "ultra vires." (Id. at 13-23.) The dissenting directors asserted that the "evidence" presented in support of their objections was "more than enough to require the Court to reject [the settlement]." (Id. at 3.)

The Foundation, Directors Buntrock and Gidwitz (the Buntrock I plaintiffs), and the Attorney General separately filed responses to these objections. The dissenting directors then filed a reply brief in support of their objections. (Exh. P.) In total, over several hundred pages in briefing documents (including legal memoranda, exhibits, and case law), and a tape recording of the June 29, 2001 Board meeting were submitted to Judge Kinnaird in advance of the July 24th hearing.[3]

[3] In addition, on July 20, 2001, the dissenting directors sought leave to file counterclaims against Attorney General James Ryan, Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins, the Foundation, and each of the Directors

16di-004540

VIII. The July 24th Hearing: Judge Kinnaird Rejects the Dissenting Directors' Objections and Enters the Consent Judgment and Order.

On July 24, 2001, Judge Kinnaird held a five-hour hearing to consider the dissenting directors' objections to the proposed settlement. (See Tr. of 7/24/01 Hearing Volumes I and II, Exhs. S & T hereto.) Judge Kinnaird considered each of the dissenting directors' objections, noting that she had read all of the papers submitted by the objectors including their briefs, exhibits, and cases. (Exh. T at 123.) Judge Kinnaird ultimately rejected each of the dissenting directors' objections, holding that (1) neither Director Marshall nor Stebbins suffered from a "conflict of interest" and both properly participated in the vote on the proposal settlement (id. at 133-34); (2) the settlement was not the product of coercion or other unlawful acts by the Attorney General (id. at 126-27, 130); and (3) the settlement was not inconsistent with the Foundation's purpose (id. at 127-28.) The Court then entered the Consent Judgment and Order (Exh. U) and denied the dissenting directors' motions to join additional defendants, to file counterclaims, and to take additional discovery. Finally, Judge Kinnaird expressed her hope that with the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order, "the business of art will be able to go ahead, as opposed to the business of litigation." (Exh. T at 131.)

IX. The Dissenting Directors File This Lawsuit.

Judge Kinnaird's hopes were dashed a few days later when the dissenting directors filed this lawsuit: Tucker et al. v. Buntrock et al. (01 L 009112) (hereinafter Buntrock II). Buntrock II, which was later amended to join additional defendants, is substantially a restatement of the objections rejected by Judge Kinnaird. The Amended who voted in favor of the proposed settlement at the June 29th board meeting. The dissenting directors' proposed counterclaims in Buntrock I are nearly identical to their Complaint in Buntrock II. (See Proposed Verified Answers, Affirmative Defenses, and Counterclaims, Exhs. Q & R.)

16di-004541

Complaint names as defendants: the six directors who supported the settlement (Buntrock, Gidwitz, Marshall, Stebbins, Margaret Daley and Arthur Hartman); the five new directors named in the settlement and elected at the June 29 meeting (Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada, Frederick Krehbiel, and James R. Donnelly); the Foundation; Attorney General Ryan; Assistant Attorney General Perkins; and the two law firms that represented the Foundation in Buntrock I (Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin).

The Amended Complaint alleges seven counts, three of which appear to be directed at the Foundation. First, in Count I, the dissenting directors seek declaratory relief setting aside the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on the ground that the settlement upon which that order is based was "the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General" and was "antithetical" to the Foundation's purposes. (Am. Cmplt. at 31.) Second, in Count II, the dissenting directors incredibly ask the Court to nullify the election of the five new directors on the ground that they "have not been properly elected" pursuant to the terms of same Consent Judgment and Order plaintiffs ask the Court to vacate in Count I. Third, in Count IV, the dissenting directors (presumably) seek to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order on the ground that the underlying settlement constituted an ultra vires act.

X. The Dissenting Directors File a Notice of Appeal in Buntrock I

On August 22, 2001, Directors Tucker, Terra, and Simpson filed their Notice of Appeal, asking the appellate court to "vacate the order of July 26, 2001" (i.e., the Consent Judgment and Order) and "remand this cause for a new hearing, or . . . such other relief that that Court shall deem just and proper." (Notice of Appeal at 2, attached as Ex. V.) Despite filing their Notice of Appeal five months ago, the dissenting directors have done nothing to advance their appeal.

ARGUMENT

I. Counts I, II and IV Should Be Dismissed As Barred By Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel (735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4)).

The well-established doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel bar parties from relitigating claims and issues that were decided in an earlier lawsuit. Specifically, res judicata bars a second lawsuit when (1) the parties in the first and second case are the same; (2) the first case resulted in a final judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction; and (3) the second lawsuit is based on the same claim, demand or cause of action as the first lawsuit. See River Park v. City of Highland, 184 Ill. 2d 290, 302 (1998). Likewise, collateral estoppel bars the relitigation of issues decided in a previous proceeding when (1) the party against whom estoppel is asserted was a party to the first proceeding; (2) the first suit resulted in a final judgment; and (3) the issue decided in the first lawsuit is identical to the issue presented in the second lawsuit. See Taylor v. Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company, 275 Ill. App. 3d 655, 660 (1st Dist. 1995).

Here, in Counts I, II, and IV of their Amended Complaint, the dissenting directors ask this Court to set aside the Buntrock I Consent Judgment and Order on the same grounds that were presented to and rejected by Judge Kinniard in that lawsuit. Because the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel bar plaintiffs from relitigating those same claims and issues here, Counts I, II and IV should be dismissed with prejudice. [4]

A. Buntrock I and this lawsuit involve the same parties.

The plaintiffs in this action – Tucker, Terra and Simpson – were parties in Buntrock I, as were defendants Buntrock, Gidwitz, Assistant Attorney General Perkins and the Foundation. Thus, for purposes of both res judicata and collateral estoppel, the "same parties" requirement is met.

B. Buntrock I resulted in a final judgment for res judicata and collateral estoppel purposes.

Buntrock I ended when Judge Kinnaird entered the Consent Judgment and Order that dismissed that action with prejudice. (Exh. U.) Under Illinois law, "a consent decree operates to the same extent for res judicata purposes as a judgment entered after contest and is conclusive with respect to the matters which were settled by the judgment or decree." City of Matoon v. Mentzer, 282 Ill. App. 3d 628, 635 (4th Dist. 1996). Likewise, collateral estoppel applies to Judge Kinnaird's rejection of the dissenting directors' objections to the settlement agreement at the July 24th hearing. See DuPage Forklift Service, Inc. v. Material Handling Services, Inc., 195 Ill. 2d 71, 86 (2001) ("Collateral estoppel may apply to determinations made prior to the entry of a settlement agreement disposing of the underlying litigation."). Accordingly, the "final judgment" element is also met.

[4] Essentially, plaintiffs are asking this Court to review and vacate the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird. Plaintiffs simply are not entitled to seek such so-called "declaratory relief" in a different lawsuit. Rather, plaintiffs may seek relief from the Consent Judgment and Order in two ways: (1) filing a 735 ILCS 5/2-1401 petition for relief from judgment in Buntrock I (which they have not done); or (2) filing an appeal (which they have done). Because plaintiffs must seek relief under Section 2-1401 in the "same proceeding in which the order or judgment was entered" (i.e., Buntrock I) and because this Court may not sit as a Court of Appeals in review of Judge Kinnaird's decision, plaintiffs are entitled to no relief in this proceeding and their Complaint should be dismissed.

C. Plaintiffs assert the same objections to the settlement in this lawsuit that were rejected by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock I.

The final element required for the application of res judicata and collateral estoppel is also met because plaintiffs raise the "same claims" and "same issues" that were raised and rejected in Buntrock I. To determine whether a subsequent lawsuit is based on the "same claim" for res judicata purposes, Illinois courts apply the liberal "transactional" test. See River Park, 184 Ill. 2d at 311. Under that test, "separate claims will be considered the same cause of action for purposes of res judicata if they arise from a single group of operative facts, regardless of whether they assert different theories of relief." Id. The "same claim" therefore includes not only those contentions that were offered and rejected in the first proceeding, but includes any other contentions that might have been raised in the first proceeding. See LaHood v. Couri, 236 Ill. App. 3d 641, 645 (3rd Dist. 1992). In contrast to the liberal transactional test, the "same issue" element of the collateral estoppel doctrine is "narrowly tailored" and requires that the issue raised in the second proceeding be "identical" to the issue determined in the first proceeding. See Nowak v. St. Rita School, 197 Ill. 2d 381, ---, 757 N.E.2d 471, 478 (2001).

Here, Counts I and IV clearly satisfy either the "same claim" or "same issue" test because those counts not only arise from the "same operative group of facts" as the dissenting directors failed objections in Buntrock I but also involve the identical issues litigated in that proceeding. Accordingly, those counts are barred under either res judicata or collateral estoppel principles. Likewise, Count II is also barred by res judicata because the claims made therein either were raised or should have been raised in the first proceeding.

1. Because Counts I and IV Are Based on the Same Claims and Issues Raised and Rejected in Buntrock I, They Are Barred Under Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel Principles.

In Count I, the dissenting directors' seek to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock I on three grounds: (1) Directors Marshall's and Stebbins' votes in favor of the settlement were "the product of conflicts of interest"; (2) the settlement was the product of the Attorney General's "unlawful interference," including the coercion of Marshall and Stebbins; and (3) the settlement is "incompatible with the Foundation's purpose." (Am. Cmplt. at 31.) Similarly, in Count IV, the dissenting directors seek relief on the ground that the settlement was ultra vires within the meaning of the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a), a contention which is essentially a restatement of the third ground asserted in Count I. (Id. at 34.) Judge Kinnaird rejected each of these contentions in Buntrock I.

a. In Buntrock I, Judge Kinnaird ruled that Directors Marshall and Stebbins did not suffer from conflicts of interest and legitimately participated in the June 29th vote in favor of the proposed settlement.

In Buntrock I, plaintiffs vigorously urged Judge Kinnaird to reject the proposed Consent Judgment and Order on the ground that Directors Marshall's and Stebbins' votes in favor of the settlement were invalid because they had a conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's supposedly "threatening" actions towards them. (See, e.g., Exh. O at 2, 14-18, 22-24; Exh. P at 4-7; Exh. S at 36, 78-122; Exh. T at 10-63.) Judge Kinnaird, however, flatly rejected this objection, stating:

> I am not finding that under the Illinois Not-for-Profit Act that . . . there were interested Board members that should not have participated. . . .

> They could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in this decision.

(Exh. T at 133-34) (emphasis added).

Nonetheless, in Count I here, the dissenting directors ask this Court to reverse Judge Kinnaird's decision and to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order on the ground that Marshall and Stebbins suffered from "conflicts of interest" due to the Attorney General's supposedly "threatening" tactics. (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 75-76, 99(a).) However, because this identical claim was raised and rejected in Buntrock I, the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel bar plaintiffs from relitigating their "conflict of interest" claim in this case. Accordingly, to the extent Count I relies on the "conflict of interest" allegations, it should be dismissed.

b. In Buntrock I, Judge Kinnaird ruled that the Attorney General did not coerce Directors Marshall or Stebbins into supporting the settlement or otherwise act unlawfully.

In Buntrock I, the dissenting directors also argued that the settlement agreement should be set aside because the Assistant Attorney General Perkins had unlawfully inserted himself into the settlement process by using his official powers to coerce Directors Marshall and Stebbins into supporting the proposed settlement. (See, e.g., Exh. O at 2, 10-14.) Again, Judge Kinnaird disagreed:

> [Dr. Marshall] was in control. She was running that [June 29, 2001] meeting and she was controlling some very difficult situations and early on in this meeting she said, without any hesitation, that if they made a change she wasn't going to go [vote] for this thing [Consent Judgment]. She didn't like the change that had been advanced by Dr. Stebbins and she wasn't going to go along with it. And this was not a lady who was being intimidated by anybody.
>
> I also did not feel that there was intimidation of Dr. Stebbins in this case. . . . I just simply don't see it.

(Exh. T at 126-27) (emphasis added). Moreover, the Court dismissed the dissenting directors' generalized allegations of improper interference by the Attorney General's office:

> I do not see [this] as a case in which there has been abuse of power and I definitely don't see it as a case in which the State has tried and succeeded to take control of a charitable foundation. The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation, as being alleged in the papers.

(Id. at 130.)[5]

Undeterred, plaintiffs now ask this Court to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order based on the same allegations of coercion and unlawful interference rejected by Judge Kinnaird. Accordingly, the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel require dismissal of Count I to the extent it is based on allegations of coercion and unlawful interference by the Attorney General.

c. In Buntrock I, Judge Kinnaird rejected the dissenting directors' assertion that the settlement was contrary to the Foundation's purposes (i.e., ultra vires).

In Buntrock I, the dissenting directors also urged Judge Kinnaird to set aside the proposed settlement on the ground that the settlement was "antithetical" to the Foundation's purposes. (See, e.g., Exh. O at 2, 14, 18-22.) Yet again, Judge Kinnaird rejected the dissenting directors' objection:

> And I don't see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical . . . to the Foundation's purposes. And that it precludes the Foundation from recruiting the best and brightest worldwide to serve on the Board. This is not a very limiting document as far as this Foundation is concerned. This Foundation is going to be able to pretty much operate the way that it has. It will be able to conduct its mission of providing education and art throughout the world.

(Exh. T at 127-28.)

Nonetheless, in Counts I and IV of their Amended Complaint, plaintiffs now ask this Court to revisit Judge Kinnaird's decision and set aside the Consent Judgment and Order as "incompatible with the Foundation's purpose" or "ultra vires." (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 99(a), 109.) However, the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel prevent plaintiffs' from relitigating that claim (or issue) in this proceeding. Accordingly, to the extent Counts I and IV are based on ultra vires allegations, they should be dismissed.

2. Count II is also barred by res judicata.

In Count II, plaintiffs seek to vacate the election of the five new directors (Donnelley, Field, Foster, Hamada and Krehbiel) to the Foundation's Board on the grounds that those Directors were not properly elected under (1) the Foundation's bylaws and (2) the Consent Judgment and Order.

First, plaintiffs' contention that the addition of the new directors is contrary to the Foundation's bylaws is barred by res judicata. Because plaintiffs do not point to any specific bylaw in support of this contention, it is difficult to ascertain the precise nature of plaintiffs' claim in Count II. However, the Foundation's best guess is that plaintiffs are again asserting the conflict of interest theory raised in Count I, i.e., that the election of the five new directors violated the bylaws because Directors Marshall and Stebbins participated in the vote despite a "conflict of interest." As discussed above, that claim is barred by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel because the identical contention was rejected by Judge Kinniard in Buntrock I. (See supra at pp. 13-15.)

Moreover, even if plaintiffs intend to raise an objection based on the bylaws they did not raise in Buntrock I, they are barred from doing so here because they had ample opportunity to raise that objection – whatever it is -- in the first proceeding and failed to do so. See LaHood, 236 Ill. App. 3d at 645 (res judicata bars not only the relitigation of those contentions that were offered and rejected in the first proceeding, but also any other contentions that might have been raised in the first proceeding). Indeed, at the hearing on plaintiffs' objections, Judge Kinnaird specifically addressed the provision concerning the election of the five new directors and the dissenting directors' did not raise any objection to that provision. (Exh. S at 57-62.) Having failed to raise their objection then, res judicata bars plaintiffs from now challenging a provision of a valid Consent Judgment and Order entered by a court of competent jurisdiction. See City of Matoon, 282 Ill. App. 3d at 635 (res judicata bars relitigation of matters settled by consent judgment). Accordingly, to the extent Count II attempts to set aside the addition of the five new directors based on the Foundation's bylaws, it should be dismissed.

Second, even apart from the patent absurdity of plaintiffs' attempt to rely on the very Consent Judgment and Order they vehemently assert is invalid, plaintiffs' assertion that the addition of the new directors was not "in compliance with the Consent Judgment and Order" (Am. Cmplt. ¶ 103(a)) is not properly brought before this Court. Paragraph 13 of the Consent Judgment and Order expressly provides that:

> The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment and Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction or effectuation of this Consent Judgment and Order.

(Exh. U .) Thus, if plaintiffs genuinely believe the Foundation is not complying with Judge Kinnaird's order vis-à-vis the election of the five new directors, their remedy is not the initiation of a new lawsuit, but rather an action asking Judge Kinnaird to enforce the terms of that order. Accordingly, to the extent Count II seeks enforcement of the Consent Judgment and Order, it should be dismissed.[6]

II. Counts I, II and IV Should Be Dismissed Pursuant To Section 2-619(a)(3) Because the Dissenting Directors' Pending Appeal in Buntrock I Involves the "Same Parties" and the "Same Cause." In the Alternative, this Lawsuit Should Be Stayed Pending Resolution of That Appeal.

In addition to dismissing Counts I, II and IV as barred by res judicata and collateral estoppel principles pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(4) of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, this Court should dismiss those counts pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3) in light of the plaintiffs' pending appeal of Buntrock I. (Exh. V (Notice of Appeal).) Section 2-619(a)(3) provides that a lawsuit should be dismissed when "there is another action pending between the same parties for the same cause." The purpose of that section is to "foster orderly procedure by preventing a multiplicity of actions" and the Court's analysis "should be geared toward effectuating that purpose." Illinois Central Gulf. R.R. v. Goad, 168 Ill. App. 3d 541, 544 (4th Dist. 1988).

Here, this case and the Buntrock I appeal indisputably involve the "same parties." (See supra Argument Section I.A.) Likewise, this case and the Buntrock I appeal involve the "same cause." Indeed, much like the res judicata analysis above, two [6] Given that a majority of the Board of Directors approved the proposed settlement, including the addition of the five new directors, at the June 29th Board meeting, plaintiffs' assertion that an additional election is required to effectuate the terms of the Consent Judgment and Order is absurd. Indeed, the Court's order requires the Foundation to name the five new directors; thus, any additional "election" would be a mere formality. Moreover, the Board subsequently ratified its actions at the June 29th meeting – including the election of the five new directors – at a Board meeting on August 1, 2001.

"causes" are the "same" for the purposes of section 2-619(a)(3) if they "arise out of the same transaction or occurrence." Terracom Develop. Group v. Village of Westhaven, 209 Ill. App. 3d 758, 762 (1st Dist. 1991). Put another way, "two actions are for the same cause where 'relief is requested on substantially the same set of facts.'" Id. (quoting Skolnick v. Martin, 32 Ill. 2d 55, 57 (1964)). As discussed in Section I.C above, the dissenting directors seek to set aside the Consent Judgment on the same grounds (conflict of interest, coercion/unlawful interference, ultra vires) in both this case and the Buntrock I appeal. Thus, dismissal of this action will serve Section 2-619(a)(3)'s purpose of promoting judicial economy. Moreover, Judge Kinnaird's decision to enter the Consent Judgment and Order over the dissenting directors' objections is properly reviewed by the Appellate Court, not by a different Judge of the same Court. Accordingly, Counts I, II and IV should be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3).[7]

III. Counts I, II and IV Also Should Be Dismissed Pursuant to Section 2-615 Because They Fail To State A Cause of Action.

Even if Counts I, II and IV could avoid dismissal under Sections 2-619(a)(3) and (a)(4), and they cannot, those counts nonetheless should be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-615 because they fail to state a viable cause of action. As discussed above, Count I asks this Court to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on three grounds: (1) Directors Marshall's and Stebbins' votes in favor of the settlement were "the product of conflicts of interest"; (2) the settlement was the product of the Attorney General's "unlawful interference," including the coercion of [7] Although the Foundation believes that dismissal of this action on res judicata/collateral estoppel and other grounds at this juncture would best serve the interest by justice by definitively terminating this improper collateral attack on Judge Kinnaird's Consent Judgment and Order, this Court may – in the alternative – stay this litigation under Section 2-619(a)(3) pending resolution of the dissenting directors' appeal of Buntrock I. See Couri v. Korn, 203 Ill. App. 3d 1091, 1093-94 (3rd Dist. 1990) (Court has to discretion stay proceedings under Section 2-619(a)(3)).

Marshall and Stebbins; and (3) the settlement is "incompatible with the Foundation's purpose" (i.e., ultra vires). (Am. Cmplt. at 31.) In Count II, as best the Foundation can tell, the dissenting directors seek to set aside the election of the five new directors on the first ground raised in Count I, i.e., that Directors Marshall and Stebbins should have been barred from participating in the election of the new directors due to alleged "conflicts of interest." In Count IV, the dissenting directors seek additional relief on the third ground asserted in Count I: that the settlement was incompatible with the Foundation's purpose and thus ultra vires within the meaning General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a). (Id. at 34.) Because plaintiffs fail to allege sufficient facts to support their "conflict of interest," "coercion/unlawful interference" or ultra vires claims, Counts I, II and IV should be dismissed.

A. Counts I and II Should Be Dismissed To The Extent They Rely on Allegations Concerning Marshall and Stebbins Supposed Conflict of Interest.

Whether a director of a not-for-profit corporation has a "conflict of interest" regarding a matter before the Board is governed by section 108.60 of the Illinois' General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (the "Act"), 805 ILCS 105/108.60. Under this section, a director of a corporation has a conflict of interest if he is either "directly or indirectly a party to the transaction." 805 ILCS 105/108.60(c). There is no dispute that Directors Marshall and Stebbins were not direct parties to the settlement agreement that resulted in Judge Kinnaird's Consent Judgment and Order or to the Buntrock I lawsuit. Thus, the only question is whether Directors Marshall and Stebbins had an "indirect" interest in that transaction within the meaning of the Act.

Under the Act, a director is "indirectly" a party to a transaction "if the other party to the transaction is an entity in which the director has a material financial interest or of which the director is an officer, director, or general partner." 805 ILCS 105/108.60 (emphasis added).[8] Plaintiffs do not – and cannot – allege that Directors Marshall and Stebbins had a "material financial interest" in the June 29, 2001 vote so as to disqualify their participation. Nor does the Complaint allege that Marshall and Stebbins were officers or directors of any other entity that was a party to or had a financial interest in the transaction. Absent such allegations, Count I fails to allege sufficient facts to state a viable "conflict of interest" claim. Accordingly, to the extent Counts I and II seek relief based on Marshall's and Stebbins' alleged "conflict of interest," those counts should be dismissed.

B. Count I fails to allege any unlawful conduct or coercion by the Attorney General.

In addition to the conflict of interest allegations, Count I also seeks to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird on the ground that the Attorney General unlawfully interfered in Buntrock I by coercing Marshall and Stebbins into supporting the proposed settlement. To set aside a settlement agreement on the basis of coercion, plaintiffs must show: (1) a wrongful or illegal act or threat against a person which (2) deprives him of the exercise of his free will. See Regengold v. Baby Fold, Inc., 68 Ill. 2d 419, 433 (1977). Plaintiffs have not – and indeed cannot – allege sufficient facts to satisfy either element.

[8] See also Foundation's Conflicts of Interest Policy, adopted 11/06/98 ("Interested person" defined as a director "who has a direct or indirect financial interest" to a transaction) (emphasis added, attached as Exh. W hereto.)

16di-004554

First, plaintiffs have failed to allege any unlawful acts by the Attorney General necessary to establish the first element of the coercion test. The Plaintiffs essentially claim Assistant Attorney General Perkins coerced Directors Marshall and Stebbins into voting for the proposed settlement agreement by threatening the institution of judicial and administrative proceedings in unrelated matters. In the case of Marshall, Perkins began a fact-finding inquiry into the Illinois Academy of Mathematics and Science, where Marshall serves as president. (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 62-66.) In the case of Stebbins, Perkins named him in a "draft" state court complaint charging conflict of interest due to Stebbins' alleged representation of multiple parties at art auctions. (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 54-61.) As Judge Bucklo held in the second (federal) lawsuit, both the Attorney General's fact-finding inquiry concerning Dr. Marshall's school and the threatened lawsuit against Stebbins constituted perfectly lawful acts and thus fail to support a claim of coercion. See Terra Foundation for the Arts v. Perkins, 151 F. Supp. 2d 931, 937 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (citing cases). Thus, plaintiffs' "coercion/unlawful interference" claim fails on this ground alone.

Second, even if plaintiffs could allege unlawful conduct by the Attorney General, and they cannot, they do not allege that either Marshall or Stebbins were "deprived of their free will." In fact, plaintiffs' own allegations demonstrate that Directors Marshall and Stebbins' freely arrived at their decision to support the settlement. Indeed, with respect to Dr. Marshall, plaintiffs allege that Dr. Marshall "insisted that the [Attorney General's] investigation 'had not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of the Foundation.'" (Am Cmplt. ¶ 71.) Similarly, plaintiffs allege that Dr. Stebbins insisted that – while he "abhorred the threatening tactics of the Attorney General" – he "was voting his 'own conscience'" in supporting the settlement. (Id. ¶ 72.) Thus, far from alleging facts sufficient to support their assertion that Directors Marshall and Stebbins were coerced, plaintiffs own allegations demonstrate that those directors arrived at their decision to support the settlement of their own free will. On this ground as well, plaintiffs' "coercion/unlawful interference" claim fails. Accordingly, to the extent that Count I seeks to set aside the settlement agreement based on coercion or unlawful interference by the Attorney General, it should be dismissed.

C. Counts I and IV should be dismissed because the Foundation's approval of the settlement was not expressly prohibited by its Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws.

Finally, in both Counts I and IV, plaintiffs assert that the settlement should be set aside because it was "incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad," or, put another way, ultra vires. (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 99(a), 108-110.) To succeed on this claim, plaintiffs must demonstrate that the settlement agreement embodied in the Consent Judgment and Order is expressly prohibited by the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation. See Sherrard State Bank v. Vernon, 243 Ill. App. 122 (2d Dist. 1926); Stroh v. Blackhawk Holding Co., 48 Ill. 2d 471, 475 (1971) (powers and limitations of a corporation are found in its articles of incorporation and by-laws). Because plaintiffs do not – and indeed cannot – point to a provision of the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws that expressly prohibits the Foundation from agreeing to the terms of the Consent Judgment and Order, Counts I and IV fail to state a viable ultra vires claim.[9]

Indeed, the only provision of the Articles of Incorporation and by-laws referenced in the plaintiffs' Amended Complaint allows the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

(Am. Cmplt. ¶ 30.) It cannot be reasonably disputed that this provision does not prohibit – but in fact expressly allows – the continued operation of a museum in Chicago as provided for in the Consent Judgment and Order. In fact, no other provision of the Articles of Incorporation or by-laws – cited by plaintiffs or not – expressly prohibits the continued operation of a museum in Chicago. On this basis alone, plaintiffs' ultra vires claim fails.

In fact, the Foundation's decision to agree to the settlement embodied in the Consent Judgment and Order is not only allowable under the Articles of Incorporation and By-laws, but is perfectly consistent with their mandate to promote American art "both in the United States and abroad." Indeed, the Consent Judgment and Order expressly provides that the Foundation "shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws (including promoting American art and culture in the U.S. and abroad)" and that the "Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants." (Exh. U ¶ 4.) Further:

[9] Because they are incorporated by reference in plaintiffs' Amended Complaint and for the Court's convenience, the Foundation includes the complete Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws as Exhibits X and Y to its Motion to Dismiss.

> The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France. . . . Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Foundation's ability and freedom to continue to conduct its activities, operations and programs in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the Illinois Attorney General specifically acknowledges and agrees to.

(Id. ¶ 5.) As Judge Kinnaird observed in Buntrock I, the Consent Judgment and Order is not the draconian document plaintiffs make it out to be, but rather permits the Foundation wide latitude to manage its own affairs.

Moreover, the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act specifically empowers the Board of Directors to amend the Articles of Incorporation and by-laws of the Foundation as they did here. See 805 ILCS 105/102.55, 110.05. Thus, the Foundation's approval of the settlement was permissible under its Article of Incorporation, By-Laws, and Illinois law. The dissenting directors were entitled to vote against the proposed settlement; however, now that they have done so and lost, they are not entitled to judicial relief merely because they disagree with the Board's vote. Accordingly, to the extent Counts I and IV seek to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order on the ground that it is "inconsistent with the Foundation's purposes" or "ultra vires," those counts should be dismissed.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should dismiss Counts I, II and IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint with prejudice, thereby dismissing the Foundation as a party to this litigation and allowing it to return to the business of art, as opposed to the business of litigation.

SECTION 2-619.1 MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V OF AMENDED COMPLAINT

Defendants, Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., hereby move this Court to strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint pursuant to sections 2-606, 2-615, 2-619, and 2-619.1 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure. In further support of their motion, defendants state as follows:

16di-004567

1. Plaintiffs' amended complaint is an improper attempt to undermine and vacate the consent judgment and order entered in the matter Buntrock and Gidwitz v. Terra, et al., 00 CH 13859 ("Terra I"). The issues and claims raised in counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint have previously been considered and rejected by the court in Terra I. In fact, plaintiffs are currently appealing Terra I and that appeal is pending. Thus, as set forth further and incorporated herein by reference in defendants' memorandum of law in support of its motion to strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint, defendants move for dismissal pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3) and (a)(4) on the grounds that the matter is currently pending before the appellate court and is barred by res judicata and collateral estoppel.

2. Defendants also move to dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint pursuant to section 2-606 as a result of plaintiffs' failure to attach a copy of the consent judgment on which plaintiffs' claims for relief are based.

3. In addition, defendants move for dismissal of counts I, IV and V pursuant to section 2-615 because plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for declaratory relief, breach of fiduciary duty, or ultra vires acts. Plaintiffs are seeking to vacate the consent judgment and argue that it is ultra vires and that Board members who voted in favor of the consent judgment breached fiduciary duties by doing so. Plaintiffs have failed to allege any facts to support such claims and, as set forth further in the memorandum of law, these claims should be denied.

WHEREFORE, for all these reasons, as well as those set forth in the memorandum of law filed concurrently herewith and incorporated herein by reference, defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, and Hartman respectfully request that this Court strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint pursuant to sections 2-606, 2-615, 2-619, and 2-619.1 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, and enter any other relief that this Court deems fair and just.

MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF SECTION 2-619.1 MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V OF AMENDED COMPLAINT

Defendants, Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz, and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., state as follows as their memorandum of law in support of their section 2-619.1 motion to strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the

INTRODUCTION

By this motion, defendants move this Court to strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint on numerous grounds.[1] The crux of plaintiffs' complaint is to undermine and challenge the consent judgment and order entered in the matter Buntrock and Gidwitz v. Terra, et al., 00 CH 13859 (hereinafter "Terra I"). A copy of that consent judgment and order is attached hereto as Exhibit A. Plaintiffs' attempt to seek review of Terra I in this Court while, at the same time, appealing Terra I to the Appellate Court amounts to improper litigation of the same cause in two forums. Moreover, counts I, IV and V are simply plaintiffs' attempt to relitigate issues that were presented, litigated, and ruled on in Terra I. Thus, not only is review of these issues reserved to the Appellate Court, but plaintiffs' effort to relitigate these issues here is barred by the well-established doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. Indeed, the only proper forum for plaintiffs' claims is the Appellate Court. Accordingly, as set forth below, this Court should strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint.

RELEVANT FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Terra Foundation

The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") was established in 1978 by Daniel J. Terra (deceased) ("Dan Terra") to preserve and exhibit an extensive collection of American [1] Count II seeks a declaratory judgment regarding the addition of new members to the Foundation's Board. Count II does not seek direct relief against the individual defendants and is therefore not specifically addressed in this motion; however, the individual defendants expressly incorporate and adopt the Foundation's motion and memorandum to dismiss to the extent it addresses Count II. Defendants also incorporate and adopt the motion and memorandum filed by defendants Stebbins and Marshall.

Art, to expand the artistic horizons of the Illinois art public through educational programs, and to operate a museum in the Chicago area. The Foundation's assets now total approximately $450 million, including investments, real estate, and a valuable collection of American art.

Terra I

In September, 2000, Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, directors of the Foundation, filed Terra I. A copy of the complaint in Terra I is attached hereto as Exhibit B. That case was assigned to the Honorable Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird. In Terra I, Buntrock and Gidwitz sought a declaratory judgment, injunctive and other relief to protect the Foundation from inter alia, breaches of fiduciary duties by certain directors of the Foundation, namely, Judith Terra, Paul Tucker and Alan Simpson.[2] At issue in Terra I was an attempt by Simpson, Tucker and Terra to close the museum in Chicago and move the Foundation, an Illinois charitable trust, out of Illinois. Within days of the filing of Terra I, the Illinois Attorney General intervened as a party plaintiff to protect the interests of the people of the State of Illinois as the beneficiary of the Foundation.

Settlement of Terra I

Throughout the pendency of Terra I before Judge Kinnaird, from September 2000 to July 2001, an extraordinary number of substantive motions were filed and decided in this matter. Judge Kinnaird heard no less than 30 motions, including 10 motions for injunctive relief. After months of litigation, the complexity and volatility of the case motivated all the parties, particularly the current Terra II plaintiffs, to agree to participate in mediation. Accordingly, on [2] Specifically, the individual defendants in Terra I are now the plaintiffs in the current matter, Terra, et al. v. Buntrock, et al. ("Terra II").

February 5, 2001, Judge Kinnaird entered an agreed order submitting this case for mediation. The mediation process continued for over 4 months and resulted in a mediated settlement on June 29, 2001. The settlement was encompassed in a proposed consent judgment and order ("consent judgment") that required approval by both the Board and Judge Kinnaird.

The Consent Judgment and Order

The consent judgment was approved by Board members Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Marshall, and Stebbins — a clear majority of the Board. Specifically, the consent judgment provides as follows:

- For at least 50 years from the court's entry of the consent judgment, the Foundation will remain an Illinois corporation and maintain its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois. Throughout that 50 years, the Foundation's books and records will remain in Illinois and be available to the Attorney General of Illinois for inspection upon reasonable advance notice to the Foundation.

- For at least 50 years from the entry of the consent judgment, the Foundation will maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art, either by itself or through partnerships and arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area.

- After 50 years, if the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the collection elsewhere, the Foundation must give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois. The Attorney General may take whatever action he deems appropriate in response to the receipt of any such notice.

- The Foundation is free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and acquire works for, and de-acceession works from, the Collection.

- The consent judgment and order shall not in any way interfere with the Foundation's ability to continue and conduct its activities, operations and programs in Giverny, France.

- The Foundation bylaws would be amended to expand the Board to 15 members and establish an 8 year term limit for all directors by August 1, 2001.

- For at least 25 years from the entry of the consent judgment, the majority of the Board must be residents of Illinois (except that until the December 31, 2002 meeting or the 2002 annual meeting, whichever occurs first, 50% of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents).

- All current members of the Board will only serve until the 2002 annual meeting and will not be eligible to stand for future election to the Board.

- Terra I was dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its directors.

Efforts to Prevent Settlement

Significantly, the defendants in Terra I — now the plaintiffs in Terra II — disagreed with the settlement reached by the majority of the Board and engaged in various measures to prevent the Board's approval of the settlement and the entry of the consent judgment by Judge Kinnaird.[3]

On June 28, 2001, Terra, Tucker and Simpson attempted to prevent the Board's vote on the settlement by filing an action in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Terra, et al. v. Floyd Perkins, 01 CV 4976, alleging undue influence of the Attorney

[3] Terra, Tucker, and Simpson's specific objections to the consent judgment are set forth further in section IIIa.

General. The federal action was filed on the eve of the Board meeting in which the consent judgment was scheduled to be voted on by the Board. The federal court, Judge Elaine E. Bucklo presiding, dismissed that action the same day. In a 12-page opinion, Judge Bucklo held that, inter alia, the federal court lacked jurisdiction to hear Terra, Tucker and Simpson's claims and that they lacked standing to bring the claims.

On June 29, 2001, after the first attempt to block the Board's approval of the consent judgment, Terra, Tucker and Simpson sought an emergency injunction in the Circuit Court of Cook County before Judge Kinnaird to stop the June 29 meeting. Judge Kinnaird denied their motion for a temporary restraining order and allowed the June 29, 2001 meeting to proceed.

Approval of the Settlement by the Board and the Court

On June 29, 2001, the Board voted by a vote of 6 to 2 to adopt the consent judgment. The lone dissenters were Terra and Tucker. Indeed, at the meeting, in direct response to the objections by Terra, Tucker and Simpson, Stebbins and Marshall expressly stated that their vote was not the result of any coercion or indue influence by the Attorney General. See Transcript from June 29, 2001 Board meeting, attached as Exhibit C, pp. 26-28.

Shortly thereafter, the Foundation requested the court approve and enter the consent judgment. Judge Kinnaird allowed the filing of objections by Terra, Tucker and Simpson to the consent judgment.[4] The matter was extensively briefed and, on July 24, 2001, Judge Kinnaird heard over 5 hours of arguments from the parties. After thoroughly considering all arguments, on July 26, 2001, Judge Kinnaird signed and entered the consent judgment that settled this matter and dismissed Terra I.

August 1, 2001 Board Meeting

The consent judgment provided that five directors would be added to the Board by August 1, 2001 and each would be elected to a four year term. The consent judgment reflecting the consensus of the original Board, specifically named the five directors: James R. Donnelly, Marshall Field, V, Dr. Kathleen A. Foster, Professor Robert S. Hamada, and Frederick A. Krehbiel. On August 1, 2001, the Foundation held a Board meeting and welcomed the new directors. Since August 1, 2001, the Board has conducted its business on behalf of the Foundation.

Terra II

On July 31, 2001, Terra, Tucker and Simpson initiated this action, Terra II. Initially, Terra II was filed in the Law Division but was transferred to the Chancery Division and reassigned to Judge Kinnaird based on its relatedness to Terra I. Shortly thereafter, Judge Kinnaird granted plaintiffs' motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right. On November 20, 2001, this Court granted plaintiffs' leave to file an amended complaint, naming Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood and Winston & Strawn — counsel for the Foundation — as defendants. A copy of the amended complaint is attached as Exhibit D.

Appeal from Terra I

On August 22, 2001, Terra, Tucker and Simpson filed their notice of appeal from Judge Kinnaird's order entering the consent judgment. A copy of the notice of appeal is attached hereto as Exhibit E.

Parties in Terra I and Terra II

The plaintiffs in Terra I were Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, directors of the Foundation. The defendants in Terra I were Judith Terra, Paul Tucker, Alan Simpson, Naftali Michaeli,[5] and the Foundation. The Illinois Attorney General intervened as a plaintiff on behalf of the people of the State of Illinois.

The plaintiffs in Terra II are Judith Terra, Paul Tucker, and Alan Simpson — the individual director defendants in Terra I. The defendants in Terra II are all members of the Board that voted in favor of the consent judgment, the five new directors of the Board, the Foundation, Attorney General James E. Ryan, Assistant Attorney General, Floyd Perkins, and the two law firms that represented the Foundation.

ARGUMENT

I. THIS COURT SHOULD DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V OF THE AMENDED COMPLAINT PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-619(a)(3).

This Court should dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3) because "there is another action pending between the same parties for the same cause." 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(3).[6] Dismissal under section 2-619(a)(3) is appropriate to avoid duplicative litigation. Southwest Financial Bank of Orland Park v. McGrath, 200 Ill. App. 3d 736, 558 N.E.2d 441 (1st Dist. 1990). Here, there is an appeal pending in Terra I that seeks the same relief sought in counts I, IV and V and thus dismissal under section 2-619(a)(3) is proper.

[5] Mr. Michaeli has never been a member of the Board and is not involved in Terra II.

Specifically, the Terra II plaintiffs have appealed Judge Kinnaird's entry of the consent judgment in Terra I. The appeal in Terra I is currently pending before the First District, Appellate Court.[7] Counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint are an improper effort by plaintiff to appeal Terra I to a court of coordinate jurisdiction while, at the same time, pursuing an appeal before the appellate court. Section 2-619(a)(3) provides for dismissal when, as here, the same cause is pending in another forum. Accordingly, plaintiffs may not pursue the same claims in two forums and counts I, IV and V should be dismissed.

Counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint purport to challenge the consent judgment by a variety of legal theories which have already been litigated in Terra I and are now subject of a pending appeal in that matter: count I of the amended complaint seeks a declaration that the settlement is unlawful; count IV alleges that the approval of the consent judgment by the Board constituted an ultra vires act; and count V alleges that the board members who voted in favor of the consent judgment breached their fiduciary duties.

The purpose of section 2-619(a)(3) is to further the interest of judicial economy and to avoid a multiplicity of actions. Schnitzer v. O'Connor, 274 Ill. App. 3d 314, 318, 653 N.E.2d 825, 828 (1st Dist. 1995). Illinois courts have recognized that this section should be applied liberally in furtherance of these goals. Id. Under Illinois law, dismissal pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3) is proper when, as here, the same claim is pending on appeal. See Wheatley v. International Harvester Co., 166 Ill. App. 3d 775, 520 N.E.2d 975 (5th Dist. 1998); In re Ordinance Requesting the Annexation of Certain Territory to the Village of Willowbrook, 62 Ill.

[7] Although plaintiffs' opening brief was due in January 2002, plaintiffs have moved for a second extension of time to file the record of proceedings and record on appeal.

App. 2d 45, 210 N.E.2d 25 (2nd Dist. 1965) (pendency of appeal from order of disconnection is proper grounds to dismiss of annexation action).

Illinois courts have held that the definition of "same parties" for purposes of section 2-619 does not require that the parties be identical. Id. at 318, 653 N.E.2d at 828. The requirement of "same parties" is satisfied if the litigants' interests are sufficiently similar, even though the litigants differ in name or number. Id. Here, the litigants' interests are sufficiently similar: the Terra I appellants and Terra II plaintiffs are seeking to invalidate the consent judgment in Terra I. Moreover, the Terra I appellants and Terra II plaintiffs are the same. The appellees in the Terra I appeal are the Terra Foundation, Ronald Gidwitz and Dean Buntrock. As to counts I, IV and V, defendants Daley, Hartman, Stebbins and Marshall are the only "new" parties — they were not individually named in Terra I. However, the interests of these "new" parties is sufficiently similar to that of the appellees' in the Terra I appeal because these individuals, like Buntrock and Gidwitz, are all directors on the Board and they all voted in favor of the consent judgment and thus have the same interest in preserving the settlement allowing the Foundation's business to proceed after lengthy litigation.

In addition, the appeal in Terra I and the relief sought in Terra II is for the "same cause" as required by section 2-619(a)(3). Two actions are for the "same cause" under section 2-619 if the relief sought is requested on substantially the same set of facts. Schnitzer, 274 Ill. App. 3d at 319, 653 N.E.2d at 829. The central inquiry is whether the two actions arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, and not whether the legal theories or the relief sought materially differs between the actions. Id. Here, regardless of the legal theory advanced by plaintiff, counts I, IV and V seek to invalidate the consent judgment. The appeal in Terra I also seeks to invalidate the consent judgment. The appeal and counts I, IV and V all arise out of the same set of facts: the mediation, the consent judgment, the alleged coercion by the Attorney General, the Board's vote on the consent judgment, and the alleged conflict of interest of Stebbins and Marshall. Thus, pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3), counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint should be dismissed due to the pendency of the appeal in Terra I.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V OF THE AMENDED COMPLAINT PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-606.

Plaintiffs failed to attach a copy of the consent judgment to the amended complaint and, for this reason, this Court should dismiss counts I, IV, and V pursuant to section 2-606. Section 2-606 provides that "[i]f a claim or defense is founded upon a written instrument, a copy thereof, or so much of the same as is relevant, must be attached to the pleading as an exhibit or cited therein . . ." See 735 ILCS 5/2-606. Counts I, IV, and V of the amended complaint are expressly founded upon the consent judgment approved by the Foundation.[8] Moreover, plaintiffs fail to attach the Foundation's articles and bylaws. Counts I, IV, and V are also predicated on purported violations of the bylaws and articles. Failure to comply with the requirements of section 2-606 is grounds for dismissal of a complaint. Plocar v. Dukin' Donuts of America, 103 Ill. App. 3d 740, 431 N.E.2d 1175 (1st Dist. 1981). Accordingly, counts I, IV, and V should be dismissed.

III. COUNTS I, IV AND V SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-619(a)(4).

Dismissal is appropriate where, as here, the cause of actions are barred by a prior

[8] Count I seeks a declaratory judgment invalidating the consent judgment; count IV alleges that the Board's approval of the consent judgment is an ultra vires act; and count V alleges a breach of fiduciary duty by the Board members that voted in favor of the consent judgment.

judgment. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4). The court in Terra I entered and approved the consent judgment and as a result, considered and rejected the claims alleged in count I (declaratory judgment), count IV (ultra vires), and count V (breach of fiduciary duty). As discussed further below, the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel bar plaintiffs' attempt to relitigate certain claims

A. Relitigation Of Prior Objections To The Consent Judgment.

After the Board approved the consent judgment in Terra I, the Foundation filed a motion seeking the court's approval of the consent judgment. In response, Terra, Tucker and Simpson submitted numerous objections.

In particular, plaintiffs argued that the consent judgment was not approved by the Board because directors Stebbins and Marshall had a conflict of interest that prevented them from voting. The purported conflict of interest was based on the alleged undue influence of the Attorney General. Specifically, as to Stebbins, it was argued that Stebbins voted in favor of the settlement because the Assistant Attorney General circulated a proposed amended complaint at the start of mediation that named Stebbins as a defendant. As to Marshall, it was argued that her vote was conflicted because the Assistant Attorney General investigated the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy (where Marshall serves as President) and that she allegedly voted in favor of the settlement as a result of the investigation. According to plaintiffs, if the votes of Marshall and Stebbins were not counted, then the consent judgment did not receive the number of votes necessary to change the Foundation's bylaws. Here, count IV of the complaint alleges that the approval of the consent judgment was ultra vires because it contravened the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation and bylaws.

Plaintiffs also argued in Terra I that the consent judgment required the abandonment of the fiduciary obligations owed by the directors of the Foundation to the beneficiaries because the consent judgment violated the corporate purpose and resulted in waste of the Foundation's assets. Plaintiffs argued that the Foundation's purpose was violated and its assets wasted because the consent judgment limited its directors to Illinois residents, required it to remain in Illinois for 50 years, and limited the Foundation to "partnering" with an Illinois institution. Here, count IV alleges that by voting for the consent judgment, the directors violated their fiduciary duty to the Foundation.

In addition, plaintiffs objected to the consent judgment because of the alleged coercion of the Attorney General and his assistant. Here, in count I, plaintiffs seek a "declaration that the settlement is unlawful because it was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law; it is the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of director fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General; and it is incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad."

B. The Court's Prior Rulings On the Issues Raised In Counts I, IV, and V.

The court in Terra I considered and rejected the claims alleged in counts I, IV, and V. For example, with regard to the issue that the consent judgment was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law and was based on conflicts of interests (counts I and IV), the court ruled:

> I am not finding that under the Illinois-Not-For-Profit Act that they (Stebbins and Marshall) are an interested – that they were interested Board members that should not have participated . . . They could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in this decision.

Ex. F, Transcript of Proceedings July 24, 2001, Vol. II, pp. 133-34.

The court ruled with regard to the issue of the alleged improper interference by the Attorney General: "I do not see it as a case in which there has been abuse of power and I definitely don't see it as a case in which the State has tried and succeeded to take control of a charitable Foundation. The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation, as being alleged in the papers." Id., p. 130.

In addition, the court also rejected the objection that the consent judgment was inconsistent with the Foundation's purpose and the director's fiduciary duties:

> And I do not see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical — I am reading from the document – antithetical to the Foundation's purposes. And that it precludes the Foundation from recruiting the best and brightest worldwide to serve on the Board.
>
> This is not a very limiting document as far as this Foundation is concerned. This Foundation is going to be able to pretty much operate the way that it has. It will be able to conduct its mission of providing education and art throughout the world . . .
>
> But I don't read this Consent Decree as the restrictive document that counsel for the defendant has said that it is.
>
> I think this collection can be moved around and loaned and shown throughout the world and everybody, including the people of the State of Illinois, are going to benefit from that.

C. Counts I, IV, and V Should Be Dismissed Pursuant To The Doctrine Of Collateral Estoppel.

Collateral estoppel applies when a party participates in two separate and consecutive cases arising out of different causes of action and some controlling fact or question material to the determination of both cases has been adjudicated against the party in the former suit by a court of competent jurisdiction. See St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company v. Lefton Iron & Metal Co., 296 Ill. App. 3d 475, 694 N.E.2d 1049 (5th Dist. 1998). When some specific fact or question has been directly in issue and decided upon and the same fact or question is again put in issue by the same parties or their privies, the former adjudication is conclusive on the parties whether or not the cause of action is the same. Preferred America Ins. v. Dulceak, 302 Ill. App. 3d 990, 706 N.E.2d 706 (2d Dist. 1999) (tort judgment against insured collaterally estopped insurer from relitigating liability of insured). Collateral estoppel is properly invoked when the issue decided in the prior adjudication is identical with the one presented in the current action, there was a final judgment on the merits in the prior adjudication, and the party against whom estoppel is asserted was a party to, or in privity with a party to, the prior adjudication. DuPage Forklift Service, Inc. v. Material Handling Services, Inc., 195 Ill. 2d 71, 744 N.E.2d 845 (2001); Illinois State Chamber of Commerce v. Pollution Control Board, 78 Ill. 2d 1, 398 N.E.2d 9 (1979). As set forth below, each of these three elements is satisfied in this case.

Here, the issues alleged in counts I, IV, and V are identical to the issues decided in Terra I; namely, the alleged conflict of interest of Stebbins and Marshall, whether Stebbins and Marshall's vote violated the Foundation's bylaws, the alleged interference by the Attorney General, the alleged violations of the Articles and bylaws caused by the consent judgment, and the alleged breach of fiduciary duties. The circuit court in Terra I considered and rejected these issues by approving the consent judgment.

The court's rulings on the objections to the consent judgment constitute adjudications on the merits for purposes of collateral estoppel. The Illinois Supreme Court has recognized that:

'[w]hen an issue is properly raised, by the pleadings or otherwise, > and is submitted for determination, and is determined the issue is actually litigated within the meaning of this Section.'

DuPage, 195 Ill. 2d at 85, 744 N.E.2d at 852, citing Restatement (Second) of Judgments, § 27, Comment, D at 255 (1982). The consent judgment was the result of a mediated settlement between the parties in Terra I.[9] The court expressly approved the consent judgment and rejected plaintiffs' objections to the consent judgment. Collateral estoppel may apply to determinations made prior to the entry of a settlement agreement disposing of the underlying litigation. Knodle v. Jeffrey, 189 Ill. App. 3d 877, 545 N.E.2d 1017 (2d Dist. 1989) (interlocutory orders became final judgments when parties settled and agreed to dismiss claims with prejudice). Here, the consent judgment dismissed Terra I with prejudice and was thus, a final judgment on the merits.

A dismissal with prejudice pursuant to settlement is deemed to be as conclusive of rights of parties as if the matter had proceeded to trial and been resolved by final judgment. SDS Partners, Inc. v. Cramer, 305 Ill. App. 3d 893, 896, 713 N.E.2d 239, 241 (4th Dist. 1999 (successor owner was barred by res judicata from relitigating issue subject of settlement agreement between defendant and original owner). In fact, defendants have essentially conceded

[9] Defendants recognize that, in general, courts are reluctant to give preclusive effect to consent judgments because at times the extent to which issues are actually litigated in suits ending in consent judgments is often in doubt. See Ekkert v. City of Lake Forest, 225 Ill. App. 3d 702, 588 N.E.2d 482 (2d Dist. 1992) (federal consent order would not have preclusive effect due to lack of identity of issues or parties and it was unclear whether relevant issue was actually litigated in federal action). This case is distinguishable in that plaintiffs are challenging the ultimate validity of the consent judgment itself. Moreover, there is no doubt that the issues plaintiffs are raising were expressly considered and rejected by the circuit court in Terra I. The consent judgment, as a court approved settlement that resulted from court ordered mediation, should, similar to arbitration awards, be given the same res judicata or collateral estoppel effect as court judgments. See Peregrine Financial Group, Inc. v. Martinez, 305 Ill. App. 3d 571, 712 N.E.2d 861 (1st Dist. 1999); Rosee v. Board of Trade of City of Chicago, 43 Ill. App. 3d 203, 239 356 N.E.2d 1012, 1036-7 (1st Dist. 1976) (arbitration award entitled to preclusive effect and barred litigation alleging identical issues).

the finality of Terra I by filing a notice of appeal of the consent judgment in that case.

Finally, plaintiffs here were defendants in Terra I. Thus, the requirement of identity of parties is satisfied. Accordingly, the doctrine of collateral estoppel is applicable and precludes plaintiffs from relitigating counts I, IV, and V.

D. Counts I, IV, and V Should Be Dismissed Based On Res Judicata.

The doctrine of res judicata also prevents plaintiffs from relitigating the claims alleged in counts I, IV, and V. The doctrine of res judicata provides that a final judgment on the merits rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction acts as a bar to a subsequent suit between the parties involving the same cause of action. River Park, Inc. v. City of Highland Park, 184 Ill. 2d 290, 703 N.E.2d 883 (1998) (affirming dismissal of complaint on grounds that dismissal of federal complaint was a final adjudication for purposes of res judicata). Res judicata bars relitigation of matters decided in the first action, as well as those matters that could have been decided. River Park, 184 Ill. 2d at 303, 703 N.E.2d at 889; LaSalle National Bank v. County Board of School Trustees, 61 Ill. 2d 524, 529, 337 N.E.2d 19 (1975). Here, the matters raised in counts I, IV, and V were decided in Terra I when the court rejected plaintiffs' objections and entered the consent judgment.

There are three requirements for res judicata: (1) a final judgment on the merits rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, (2) an identity of parties or their privies, and (3) an identity of cause of action. River Park, 184 Ill. 2d at 303, 703 N.E.2d at 889. Each of these requirements is satisfied here.

First, there was a final judgment on the merits rendered in Terra I. Indeed, plaintiffs are appealing that final judgment — the consent judgment. A judgment entered by consent of the parties operates in the same manner as any other judgment for res judicata purposes, and is conclusive with respect to matters settled by the judgment. City of Mattoon v. Mentzer, 282 Ill. App. 3d 628, 635, 668 N.E.2d 601, 606 (4th Dist. 1996) (consent decree was res judicata); Barth v. Reagan, 146 Ill. App. 3d 1058, 497 N.E.2d 519 (2d Dist. 1986); Elliot v. LRSL Enterprises, Inc., 226 Ill. App. 3d 724, 728, 589 N.E.2d 1074, 1077 (2d Dist. 1992); Wascher v. Lundeen, 111 Ill. App. 2d 452, 250 N.E.2d 318 (4th Dist. 1969); Village of Maywood Bd. of Fire and Police Com'rs v. Dep't of Human Rights of State of Ill., 296 Ill. App. 3d 570, 580, 695 N.E.2d 873, 881 (1st Dist. 1998) (no res judicata because court in prior action lacked subject matter jurisdiction). Any other interpretation would effectually nullify all settlements because the same claim would be subject to the possibility of future litigation and double recovery. Elliot, 226 Ill. App. 3d at 728, 589 N.E.2d at 1077; see also Arnett v. Environmental Science & Engineering, Inc., 275 Ill. App. 3d 938, 944, 657 N.E.2d 668, 673 (3d Dist. 1995).

In addition, if a court approves a settlement, it merges all included claims and causes of action and is a bar to further proceedings. Keim v. Kalbfleisch, 57 Ill. App. 3d 621, 624, 373 N.E.2d 565, 568 (5th Dist. 1978) (dismissal with prejudice pursuant to settlement agreement in first action was res judicata bar to second action). Here, the court approved the consent judgment. In addition, the consent judgment provided for the dismissal with prejudice of Terra I. A dismissal with prejudice is as conclusive of the rights of the parties as if the suit was prosecuted to a final adjudication adverse to the plaintiff. Keim, 57 Ill. App. 3d at 624, 373 N.E.2d at 568. Thus, the entry of the consent judgment by the Court constituted a final judgment on the merits for purposes of res judicata.

The element of identity of the parties is also satisfied. For purposes of res judicata, privity is defined as a mutual or successive relationship to some property rights which were the subject matter of the prior litigation. Marvel of Illinois, Inc. v. Marvel Contaminant Control Industries, Inc., 318 Ill. App. 3d 856, 865,744 N.E.2d 312, 320 (2d Dist. 2001). Here, for purposes of counts I, IV, and V, the only "new" parties are defendants Stebbins, Marshall, Daley, and Hartman. These "new" defendants stand in privity to defendants Gidwitz and Buntrock who were also parties in Terra I. Buntrock and Gidwitz and the "new" defendants are all members of the Board and all voted in favor of the consent judgment. Thus, the "new" defendants share a mutual relationship to the Foundation that is the subject of this litigation.

Plaintiffs' claims in counts I, IV, and V were resolved in Terra I. The Illinois Supreme Court has stated that Illinois courts are to apply the transactional test to determine whether there is an identity of causes of action. River Park, 184 Ill. 2d at 311, 703 N.E.2d 883; Saxon, 318 Ill. App. 3d at 863-64, 744 N.E.2d at 319. The transaction test is satisfied if the claims arise from a single group of operative facts even if the evidence needed to support the claims does not substantially overlap. River Park, 184 Ill. 2d at 311. Here, the claims of counts I, IV, and V arise from the same operative facts that the court considered in its ruling on the consent judgment and plaintiffs' objection to the consent judgment: the terms of the consent judgment, the intent of the Foundation as set forth in its articles, the Foundation's bylaws, the mediation, the Attorney General's involvement in the mediation, the Board's vote to approve the consent judgment, and the alleged conflict of interest.

In fact, Judge Kinnaird expressly noted that much of Terra II is simply a collateral attack on Terra I. Specifically, when ruling on plaintiffs' motion for substitution of judge as a matter of right, Judge Kinnaird stated as follows:

> Now, I'm not saying that there's any merit to their Count I. I'm not saying that that can be interpreted as anything other than a collateral attack on my decision.
>
>
> And I can understand why you may want to make [a substitution for motion of judge] because I personally believe that this second lawsuit, at least what I have seen of it, except for perhaps the last count, is a collateral attack on my decision.
>
> I think these arguments should be in front of the Appellate Court. Not before another judge in the circuit court.

Ex. G, Transcript of Proceedings of September 21, 2001, pp. 45, 71-72. Judge Kinnaird, who was extremely familiar with the issues and record litigated before the court in Terra I, expressly noted that res judicata or collateral estoppel would be applicable based on her review of the complaint in this action.[10] For this additional reason, plaintiffs' claims are barred pursuant to res judicata and should be dismissed accordingly.

IV. COUNT I FAILS TO STATE A CLAIM FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF AND SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615.

Count I fails to state a claim for declaratory relief and should be dismissed pursuant to section 2-615. Count I seeks a declaration that would declare the consent judgment unlawful. Declaratory judgments are governed by section 2-701 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure that provides that "[t]he court shall refuse to enter a declaratory judgment or order, if it appears that the judgment or order, would not terminate the controversy or some part thereof, giving rise to the proceeding." 735 ILCS 5/2-701. Under Illinois law, a declaratory judgment will be deemed to terminate "some part" of a controversy if it terminates "an entire claim which is part of more than one claim." Marlow v. American Suzuki Motor Corp., 222 Ill. App. 3d 722, 584 N.E.2d (1st Dist. 1994). The purpose of a declaratory judgment is to avoid litigation by allowing a court to address a controversy "one step sooner than normally, after the dispute has arisen but before steps are taken which give rise to a claim for damage or other relief." Tait v. Sangamon County, 138 Ill. App. 3d 169, 485 N.E.2d 558, 560 (4th Dist. 1985). Thus, Illinois courts require that declaratory judgments terminate at least "some part" of litigation.

[10] Although Judge Kinnaird did not review the amended complaint, that complaint did not substantively amend counts I, IV, and V.

Here, count I seeks declaratory relief that would not terminate the controversy or "some part" of the controversy that led to this action. Indeed, the declaratory relief sought would result in piecemeal litigation. For example, a declaration as to the invalidity of the consent judgment would result in additional litigation in Terra I, as well as have an impact on the appeal of that matter.

In Marlow, the Illinois Appellate Court, First District, upheld the dismissal of a complaint for declaratory judgment on the grounds that the relief sought would lead to "impermissible piecemeal litigation." Marlow, 222 Ill. App. 3d 722, 584 N.E.2d 345; see also Schlossberg v. E.L. Trendel & Associates, Inc., 63 Ill. App. 3d 939, 942, 380 N.E.2d 950 (1st Dist. 1978) (affirming dismissal of complaint that does not seek to declare rights under a contract or a continuing legal relationship, but was an improper attempt to adjudicate whether plaintiff has a legitimate cause of action). In addition, in Krebs v. Mini, 53 Ill. App. 3d 787, 368 N.E.2d 159, 163 (2d Dist. 1977), the court affirmed the dismissal of a prayer for declaratory relief on the grounds that the relief would not terminate the litigation, but "would have led to the use of a declaratory judgment for the kind of piecemeal resolution of matters in controversy which the [Code of Civil Procedure] prohibits."

To avoid piecemeal litigation, dismissal of a declaratory judgment claim is appropriate when that claim — as here — is essentially a collateral attack on another action. Tait, 138 Ill. App. 3d 169, 485 N.E.2d 558 (declaratory judgment action barred as impermissible collateral attack on judgment in criminal proceedings); see also Coles-Moultrie Electric Co-op v. City of Charleston, 8 Ill. App. 3d 441, 289 N.E.2d 491 (4th Dist. 1972) (affirming dismissal of claim for declaratory relief because issues subject of claim were pending before Commerce Commission). Here, plaintiffs fail to state a claim for declaratory judgment because the relief sought in count I will clearly lead to "impermissible piecemeal litigation" and a clear collateral attack on Terra I.[11]

V. COUNT IV SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615.

Count IV of the complaint alleges that the Board's adoption of the consent judgment on June 29, 2001 was an ultra vires act and seeks injunctive relief and monetary damages, including punitive damages. Plaintiffs allege that the resolutions adopted by the Board on June 29, 2001 were ultra vires and that this Court should "enjoin the doing of such acts" and enter an order "enjoining the defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation." Count IV, as discussed below, must also be dismissed for several reasons.

[11] Plaintiffs are essentially seeking to vacate the consent judgment by count I. Indeed, the plaintiffs are essentially seeking to rescind the consent judgment but have failed to allege the requisite elements of recision, namely, a statement of material fact, made to induce another party to act, statement is false, and known by party making it to be false, and party to whom statement is made reasonably believes it to be true and relies on it. Peddinghaus v. Peddinghaus, 295 Ill. App. 3d 943, 692 N.E.2d 1221 (1st Dist. 1998). Moreover, although seeking to rescind the consent judgment, plaintiffs have failed to seek such relief pursuant to section 2-1401 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure and, for this additional reason, count I must be dismissed.

A. The Amended Complaint Does Not Establish That The Board's Actions On June 26, 2001 Were Ultra Vires.

Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts to support the conclusory allegation that the six members of the Board took actions that contravened the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws. Plaintiffs allege that the amended Articles of Incorporation state that the Foundation may "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad" but do not provide any facts to support the allegation that the consent judgment is ultra vires. Plaintiffs' conclusory allegation that the consent judgment is ultra vires, without more, fails to state a claim and should be dismissed.

B. Plaintiffs Fail To Allege The Elements Necessary For Injunctive Relief.

Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts necessary to support a claim for the injunctive relief sought. An injunction, whether preliminary or permanent, is an extraordinary remedy, the use of which is limited to those instances where the remedy at law is inadequate and serious irreparable harm would result without immediate relief. Brown v. Murphy, 278 Ill. App. 3d 981, 664 N.E.2d 186 (1st Dist. 1996). A party must establish, through well-pled facts that: (1) he possesses a clearly ascertainable right or protectable interest which will suffer irreparable damage in the absence of relief, and (2) he has an inadequate remedy at law. Id. Here, plaintiffs fail to allege any facts to establish an ascertainable right or protectable interest. Nor do plaintiffs allege any irreparable harm or inadequate remedy at law. Indeed, plaintiffs' claim for damages undermines any claim of inadequate legal remedy.

C. The Requested Injunctive Relief Sought Is Vague.

Plaintiffs request that this court enjoin defendants "from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation." Plaintiffs fail to allege any illegal acts that must be enjoined. Illinois law requires that injunctions be specific:

> The terms of an injunction should be as definite, clear and precise as possible in order that there may be no excuse or reason for misunderstanding or disobeying it . . . A proper injunction must couch its directions or prohibitions 'in terms so definite, clear and precise as to demand obedience or to be capable of enforcement or execution.'

Hartlett v. Dahm, 94 Ill. App. 3d 1, 5, 418 N.E.2d 44, 47 (2d Dist. 1981) (reversing judgment entered that enjoined landowner from using property other than for authorized purposes) citing People ex rel. Traiteur v. Abbot, 27 Ill. App. 3d 277, 282-83, 327 N.E.2d 130 (5th Dist. 1975). Here, the injunction that plaintiffs seek is impermissibly vague and, count IV should be dismissed.

D. There Are No Allegations To Support Punitive Damages.

Plaintiffs improperly seek punitive damages in count IV. Under Illinois law, punitive damages are available only where the plaintiff alleges that the conduct at issue was malicious or outrageous: "Illinois courts have consistently held that punitive damages are disfavored at law and are generally inappropriate absent evidence of outrageous conduct or acts committed with malice or a reckless indifference towards the rights of others." McCann v. Presswood, 308 Ill. App. 3d 1068, 1071, 721 N.E.2d 811, 814 (4th Dist. 1999). To be entitled to punitive damages, one must allege outrageous conduct, acts perpetrated by evil motive or with reckless indifference to the rights of others." Guice v. Sentinel Tech., Inc., 294 Ill. App. 3d 97, 689 N.E.2d 355, 365 (1st Dist. 1997). Here, plaintiffs fail to allege any such facts and the claim for punitive damages must be stricken.

E. The Board's Approval Of The Consent Judgment Was Consistent With The Foundation's By-Laws And Illinois Law.

Plaintiffs are unable to state an ultra vires claim based on allegations that the Board's approval of the consent judgment (and amendment of the by-laws) did not have the requisite number of votes. Plaintiffs allege in a conclusory fashion that defendants Stebbins and Marshall had a conflict of interest, their votes should not have been counted, and that, as a result, there was not enough votes to approve the consent judgment. Plaintiffs fail to allege a conflict of interest under Illinois law. Specifically, section 108.60 of the Not For Profit Act provides that a conflict of interest exists if a director of the corporation is directly or indirectly a party to the transaction. 805 ILCS 105/108.60. Section 108.60(d) further provides that a conflict of interest occurs where a director of a corporation is an officer, director or general partner, or has a material financial interest in an entity which is the other party to the transaction at issue. Thus, under Illinois law, a conflict of interest exists only if a director has a pecuniary interest in the transaction. 805 ILCS 105/108.60. Here, plaintiffs do not allege that Stebbins or Marshall had a financial interest in any other party to the consent judgment — nor were they officers or directors of any other entity that was a party to this transaction. Plaintiffs have not alleged a conflict of interest existed under Illinois law and have failed to state a claim that the Board's approval of the settlement was ultra vires.

VI. COUNT IV SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-619(a)(9).

The terms of the consent judgment itself bar plaintiffs' claim that the consent judgment is an ultra vires act. Plaintiffs allege in conclusory fashion that the consent judgment violates the Articles of Incorporation that provide that the Foundation's purpose is to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Plaintiffs suggest that the consent judgment violates the Foundation's purpose by "[r]estricting the Foundation's art collection to Chicago in isolation and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board."

The consent judgment provides that:

> For at last fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. . . The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection.

Ex. A, pp. 2-3. The consent judgment does not limit the Foundation's ability to exhibit its Collection in Giverny and for other special programs and scholarly use outside of Chicago. Indeed, Judge Kinnaird in Terra I, expressly noted that the consent judgment did not require that the entire Collection remain in Chicago for fifty-years and that the Foundation was entitled to exhibit the Collection elsewhere. See Exhibit F, p. 128. Thus, the terms of the consent judgment bar plaintiffs' claim that it was an ultra vires act.

VII. COUNT V SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615.

Count V purports to state a claim of breach of fiduciary duty against the Foundation's directors that voted in favor of the consent judgment, alleging that the directors "willfully and wantonly breached some or all of these fiduciary duties because the settlement is not in the best interests of the Foundation, is inconsistent with the Foundation's charter and by-laws, and wastes assets and opportunities of the Foundation." Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts to support the allegations that the directors breached their fiduciary duty to the Foundation by voting in favor of the consent judgment.

The officers and directors of a not-for-profit corporation are charged with the same degree of fidelity to the interests of the corporation as are the officers and directors of a business corporation. Mile-O-Mo Fishing Club, Inc. v. Noble, 62 Ill. App. 2d 50, 210 N.E.2d 12 (5th Dist. 1965). Pursuant to the business judgment rule, corporate directors are not liable for mere mistakes or errors of judgment. 3A Fletcher, Cyclopedia of Corporations, § 1039, at 45 (perm rev. ed 1986 and § 1039, at 4 (supp. 1994). The rationale behind the business judgment rule is "that those to whom the management of the corporation has been entrusted are primarily responsible for judging whether a particular act or transaction is one which is helpful to the conduct of corporate affairs." Id.

Here, the amended complaint contains only conclusory allegations that the directors' votes in favor of the consent judgment amounts to a breach of fiduciary duty. Under Illinois law, absent allegations of fraud, illegality or conflict of interest on the part of the directors, decisions made by corporate directors are protected by the business judgment rule, and may only be attacked by alleging facts showing lack of due care in the making of those decisions. Stamp v. Touche Ross & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 636 N.E.2d 616 (1st Dist. 1993). Plaintiffs have not alleged any fraud, illegality or conflict of interest on the part of defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, and Hartman. In addition, plaintiffs have not alleged any facts establishing that the business judgment rule should not apply, i.e., that the vote for the consent judgment was the result of a lack of due care, such as inattentiveness or the failure to make informed decisions. Id. Instead, plaintiffs' claim for breach of fiduciary duty is based on the plaintiffs' conclusory allegations that the consent judgment was not in the Foundation's best interest and inconsistent with the Foundation's by-laws and charter. Plaintiff's self-serving statements are not sufficient to allege a claim for breach of fiduciary duty or to overcome the business judgment rule.

Plaintiffs have not alleged any facts to establish that defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, and Hartman did not exercise due care when voting in favor of the consent judgment. The consent judgment was the product of months of highly contested litigation and extensive mediation efforts. The circuit court approved the consent judgment.[12] Stripped of all rhetoric, it is clear that plaintiffs simply are unhappy with the consent judgment. In the absence of additional factual allegations, plaintiffs' dissatisfaction with the consent judgment is insufficient to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty against defendants Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz, and Hartman.

VIII. PLAINTIFFS' CLAIM FOR DAMAGES IN COUNTS IV AND V MUST BE STRICKEN.

Plaintiffs seek damages in count IV (ultra vires) and count V (breach of fiduciary duty). Plaintiffs have failed to allege any facts to support their claim for damages. Assuming plaintiffs properly stated a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, which they have not, the defendants owe a duty to the Foundation, not plaintiffs, and thus, any purported harm would be to the Foundation. Plaintiffs have not alleged any facts whatsoever to establish any damages suffered by either the Foundation or themselves and thus, the prayer for damages must be stricken.

[12] Courts across the nation have recognized the value of referring litigated matters to alternative methods of resolution. Here, Judge Kinnaird's suggestion of mediation, and the consent of all the parties, was the appropriate methodology to resolve the dispute. Mediation by a skilled facilitator forced a dysfunctional and divided Board to rediscover its functionality, communication and ability to achieve consensus. The process had the requisite integrity and the consent decree reflects that consensus.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for all the foregoing reasons, defendants Dean Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz, and Arthur Hartman, respectfully request that this Court strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the Amended Complaint and enter any relief that this Court deems fair and just.

Respectfully submitted,

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

1. This Court has personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of these actions.

2. Plaintiffs Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, the Illinois Attorney General and the defendant Foundation now desire to resolve these disputes amicably and without the necessity of further proceedings in these actions. To that end, the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois hereby release and discharge the Terra Foundation for the Arts, its officers, directors, agents and employees, and the Foundation hereby releases and discharges the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois from any and all claims and obligations of any kind or nature raised in or related to the matters raised in this lawsuit, whether in pleadings, motions or argument, other than those obligations set forth herein.

3. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall also maintain its books and records in Illinois, which shall be available to the Attorney General of Illinois for inspection during normal business hours upon reasonable advance notice to the Foundation.

4. The Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws (including promoting American art and culture in the U.S. and abroad) and the laws of the State of Illinois and act consistently with these undertakings. The Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants.

5. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Foundation's ability and freedom to continue to conduct its activities, operations and programs in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the Illinois Attorney General specifically acknowledges and agrees to.

6. The Foundation shall amend its By-Laws to:

a. expand the Board by August 1, 2001, to include fifteen members (except that for the first year the Board may include up to sixteen members);

b. institute initial staggered terms of one, two, three and four years for all Directors with subsequent terms of four years each, and each of the fifteen Board members shall be elected to a term of one, two, three or four years as the Board determines appropriate for each Director elected, subject to the requirement that each of the five new Directors serve an initial term of four years; and

c. establish term limits for all Directors, with no member serving more than eight years after entry of this Order.

7. The Foundation shall reserve and require that, for at least twenty-five years from entry of this Order, a majority of the Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois, with the exception that until the 2002 Annual Meeting or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, fifty per cent of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents.

8. All current members of the Board of Directors will serve only until the 2002 Annual Meeting and will not be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter.

9. The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term:

a. James R. Donnelley

b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

16di-004603

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and committee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

12. Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation.

13. These actions are hereby dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its Directors, each of whom specifically denies any wrongdoing or liability. The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.

14. The Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General, and the Foundation agree to the mutually-acceptable press release attached as Exhibit A, and agree that no other public statement shall be made by the Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General or the Foundation or any of their attorneys, agents or employees on their behalf regarding the Litigation, the mediation or the settlement.

EXHIBIT A

JOINT PRESS RELEASE re BUNTROCK et. al. v. TERRA FOUNDATION, et al.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased to announce that a settlement has been reached and adopted by the Court.

The settlement will preserve the public's access, here in Chicago, to The Terra Foundation's collection for no less than 50 years. The Foundation will continue to manage its affairs, to operate its museum and programs in Giverny, France, and to promote understanding of and appreciation for American art. The Attorney General is satisfied that the settlement upholds the interests of the people of the State of Illinois. The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased that a settlement could be reached.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation have agreed to let this statement stand alone. No further statements are to be made.

VERIFIED COMPLAINT
FOR DECLARATORY, INJUNCTIVE AND OTHER RELIEF

Plaintiffs, Dean L. Buntrock ("Buntrock") and Ronald Gidwitz ("Gidwitz"), Directors of Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, for their Complaint against the Defendants, state as follows:

Nature of this Action

1 This is an action for declaratory, injunctive and other relief seeking to enjoin defendants' illegal and wasteful conduct in connection with the management and operations of Terra Foundation for the Arts, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation ("Terra Foundation").

2 In this action Plaintiffs seek to enjoin defendants from (1) holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws; (2) taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment; (3) taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and (4) taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation or defendants' fiduciary duties as directors of an Illinois Not For Profit Corporation.

The Parties

3 Plaintiff Buntrock is a resident of DuPage County, Illinois, a prominent businessperson, and a benefactor of the arts. Since 1998, Buntrock has served as a director and officer of Terra Foundation. He presently serves as Terra Foundation's treasurer, is chairman of its finance and investment committee, and is a member of its Executive Committee.

4 Plaintiff Gidwitz is a resident of Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, a former CEO of Helene Curtis Corporation, and a benefactor of the arts. Since 1982, Gidwitz has served as a director and officer of Terra Foundation. He presently serves as chairman of Terra Foundation's strategic planning committee and is a member of its Executive Committee.

5 Defendant Paul Hayes Tucker ("Mr. Tucker") is a resident of Massachusetts. Mr. Tucker is a director, chairman and president of Terra Foundation and is a member of its Executive Committee.

6 Defendant Judith Terra is a resident of Washington, D.C. Judith Terra is a director and vice chairman of Terra Foundation, and is a member of its Executive Committee.

7 Defendant Senator Alan K. Simpson is a resident of Wyoming and a former United States senator from that state. Sen. Simpson is a director of Terra Foundation and a member of its finance and investment committee.

8 Defendant Naftali Michaeli ("Mr. Michaeli") is an Israeli citizen and a resident of Washington, D.C. Mr. Michaeli is a close personal friend of Judith Terra, and has no official position with Terra Foundation.

9 Defendant Terra Foundation is an Illinois not-for-profit charitable corporation established in 1978 by Daniel J. Terra (deceased) ("Dan Terra") to preserve and exhibit collections of American Art, to expand the artistic horizons of the Illinois art public through educational programs, and to operate museums in Chicago and France.

10 Because of Dan Terra's extraordinarily generous gifts to Terra Foundation in his lifetime, and his bequest to Terra Foundation of most of his estate, Terra Foundation's assets now total approximately $450 million, including investments, real estate, and a priceless collection of American art.

11 Terra Foundation owns and operates the Terra Museum of American Art (the "Terra Museum") located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

12 Terra Foundation currently has eleven directors, the maximum number allowed under the by-laws of Terra Foundation. The Board includes Margaret Daley, a well-known benefactor of education and the arts and the wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley, and Arthur A. Hartman, the former United States Ambassador to France. The Board also includes Helene Ahrweiler, Jacques Andreani, Stephanie Marshall and Theodore Stebbins. Catherine A. Stevens, the wife of United States Senator Ted Stevens, was the Executive Director of Terra Foundation from August of 1996 through April, 2000 until terminated by Tucker.

Creation of Terra Foundation

13 Dan Terra established Terra Foundation in December 1978 under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. It was Dan Terra's intent and purpose to provide a Museum in the Chicago area that would exhibit collections of American art and educate the public generally on issues of American art. As set forth in the original Articles of Incorporation, the purpose of Terra Foundation was:

> to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings, sculpture, graphic arts, architecture, and design representing American art; expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses and other subjects relating thereto; build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate a museum and all component parts deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions; engage in any and all other activities and exhibitions.

(See Articles of Incorporation, attached hereto as Exhibit 1).

14 To ensure that the primary mission and purpose of Terra Foundation was carried out, the Terra Museum was opened in 1982 in Evanston, Illinois. In 1987, the Museum relocated to 664 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and remains at that location until today.

15 Throughout the 1980s and early to mid-1990s, Dan Terra contributed cash, stock and art for the continued growth and viability of the Terra Foundation and the Terra Museum in Chicago. To ensure that his contributions would further the goals and mission of Terra Foundation for the benefit of the public, Dan Terra created two restricted endowments, the "B2 Endowment," restricted to the acquisition of art for Terra Foundation, and the D4 Endowment restricted to education endeavors relating to American art.

16 In the early 1990s, Terra Foundation constructed and developed the Musee d'Art Americain Giverny ("Giverny Museum"), an art museum in Giverny, France dedicated to the exhibition of American art and American art education.

17 Primarily because of Dan Terra's gifts and bequests, the value of Terra Foundation has grown substantially since its creation. Currently, Terra Foundation holds net assets worth approximately $450 million. The value of the art alone located at the Terra Museum in Chicago exceeds $100 million, with the overall value of Terra's Foundation's art collection exceeding $173 million.

18 Pursuant to its by-laws, the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation is required to hold an annual meeting during the month of September of each year for the purpose of electing directors and officers and for the transacting of other business. If the election of the directors and officers is not held at such meeting, the Board of Directors may cause the election to be held at a meeting of the Board of Directors as soon thereafter as may be convenient. The Board of Directors may only elect officers and directors by a majority vote.

19 In periods of time between the quarterly Board of Director Meetings, the by-laws provide that as Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has the authority to take action on behalf of Terra Foundation, except on specific issues delegated to the Board of Directors pursuant to the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. Since October, 1999, Terra Foundation's Executive Committee has consisted of plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, defendants Edith Terra and Mr. Tucker, and director Stephanie Marshall.

Dan Terra's Dedication To Chicago

20 Dan Terra was a successful entrepreneur and businessman who resided predominately in the Chicago area. A large portion of his wealth enured through investments in companies located in and around Chicago. As result, Dan Terra made the decision to start the Terra Foundation with the intent to benefit of the citizens of Illinois and the Chicago area. Terra Foundation became Terra's principal charitable endeavor.

21 Dan Terra described his decision to establish Terra Foundation in Illinois and to open Terra Museum in the Chicago area for the people of Illinois as follows:

> [W]hat's exciting is that it's a deep commitment. There's not another museum of American art within 400 miles of Chicago, and we have a real educational job to do.

(See Grace Glueck, American-Art Museum Opening in Chicago, N.Y. Times, April 19, 1987 at B14, attached hereto as Exhibit 2). On many occasions, Dan Terra articulated his intent to benefit the people of Illinois through the creation of Terra Foundation in Illinois and the opening of Terra Museum as "major institution in Chicago." (See, e.g., Dodie Kazanjian, Daniel J. Terra, America's First Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs Pursues the Best in American Painting for His New Museum in Chicago, House & Garden, May 1987, at 52, attached hereto as Exhibit 3).

22 Shortly after the creation of Terra Foundation, Dan Terra's first wife, Adeline died. In 1986, Dan Terra married Judith Terra. Judith Terra acknowledged in a prenuptial agreement that she fully understood that the bulk of Dan Terra's estate would go to the Terra Foundation, and she unequivocally promised that after his death she would not seek any assets of his Estate other than those given to her under the prenuptial agreement. Under the prenuptial agreement, Judith Terra agreed she would receive only a fixed amount of money and assets upon Dan Terra's death. Judith Terra became a member of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation.

23 On information and belief, after Judith Terra became a member of the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation, she suggested to Dan Terra that the Terra Museum be closed and Terra Foundation be moved out of Chicago. This was never done during Dan Terra's lifetime.

Terra's Death And The Will Contest

24 On June 28, 1996, Dan Terra died after suffering a stroke. As the sole residuary beneficiary under his will, Terra Foundation was to receive $125 million.

25 As the first step in a plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra immediately attempted to transfer Dan Terra's probate proceedings from the Circuit Court of Cook County to Washington, D.C. After a five-day trial, the Chief Judge of the Probate Division denied the motion to transfer, finding that the motion was without merit in law or fact.

26 Judith Terra next embarked on a scheme to seize tens of millions of dollars that Dan Terra intended for Terra Foundation.

27 Under the prenuptial agreement between Dan Terra and Judith Terra, Judith Terra was to receive $4.5 million in cash plus approximately $2.6 million in other assets, for a total of $7.1 million.

28 Contrary to her promise in the prenuptial agreement, after Dan's death, Judith Terra immediately filed an action challenging the prenuptial agreement and contesting Dan Terra's will. Judith Terra sought for herself $43 million of the $125 million bequest to Terra Foundation.

29 Judith Terra's attempt to seize $43 million of Dan Terra's bequest to Terra Foundation put her in irreconcilable conflict with the interests of Terra Foundation and, therefore, with the people of the State of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust created by Dan

Terra. As a result, Judith Terra was forced to take a leave of absence as a director of Terra Foundation.

30 The Terra Foundation hired Tyrone Fahner, former Attorney General of Illinois, and Howard McCue III of Mayer, Brown & Platt as special counsel with respect to Judith Terra's attempt to seize the $43 million bequest. Both Terra Foundation's special counsel and the counsel for Dan Terra's estate found that Judith Terra's claims lacked substantial merit. However, to avoid protracted litigation, the estate and Terra Foundation entered into a settlement with Judith Terra whereby she received approximately $1 million more than she was entitled to under the prenuptial agreement. This allowed Terra Foundation to receive virtually all of Dan Terra's $125 million bequest as intended under Dan Terra's will.

Mismanagement of Terra Museum After Dan Terra's Death

31 Following the settlement of her claims against the Dan Terra's Estate, Judith Terra sought reinstatement to her position as director of Terra Foundation. Thereafter, changes were made within Terra Foundation and the Museum that were contrary to the best interests of Terra Foundation and therefore contrary to the public interest that was intended to benefit from Terra Foundation.

32 Beginning in mid-1998, Judith Terra launched a scheme to gain control of Terra Foundation to carry out her own agenda of closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. Judith Terra owns a home in Washington, D.C. and desires to move the Foundation there to obtain a prominent place in the social circles of Washington, D.C. Judith Terra believes that if she is able to move a foundation as large as Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C., she would be able to establish herself in Washington, D.C. as a large benefactor of the arts, thereby placing herself in the elite social circles of Washington, D.C.

33 To accomplish her scheme of seizing control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra began stacking Terra Foundation's Board with persons loyal to her alone. For example, Judith Terra recommended and sought the election of her friend Sen. Simpson to the Board. Sen. Simpson became a director in mid-1999. At his first Board of Directors meeting in October 1999, Sen. Simpson announced to the Board that his purpose for being on Terra Foundation's Board of Directors was "to protect Mrs. Terra's interests."

34 Prior to October 1999, Judith Terra orchestrated a plan to replace Arthur Hartman as Terra Foundation's president and chairman with her loyalist, Mr. Tucker. Although Terra Foundation had been searching for a new president for more than two years from outside the Board of Directors, Judith Terra and her new allies on the Board replaced Arthur Hartman as president and chairman with Mr. Tucker. As was later discovered, the decision to place Mr. Tucker in the position of president and chairman was made to further Judith Terra's attempt to gain control of Terra Foundation and to further her own agenda contrary to the mission and intent of Dan Terra in creating Terra Foundation.

35 Mr. Tucker and Judith Terra further entrenched their power through the hiring of Donald Ratner and the unauthorized expansion of his authority within Terra Foundation. Mr. Ratner was originally retained as a consultant to the Foundation on an interim basis. During the January 25, 2000 meeting of the Board of Directors a motion was made to give Mr. Ratner the title of vice president of finance and administration. The Board members present at the meeting voted in favor of the motion. However, because not all Board Members were present, the motion was made subject to the ratification by each of the absent Board members. In a subsequent poll of Board members, the motion failed to receive unanimous approval as required by the vote at the January 25, 2000 meeting. Nonetheless, pursuant to Mr. Tucker's dictate, Mr. Ratner has continued to serve as a purported officer of Terra Foundation, and has taken direction from Board members loyal to Judith Terra.

36 Judith Terra also furthered her scheme to gain control of Terra Foundation by causing the removal of the attorneys that had counseled and represented Terra Foundation since its inception. In 1982, Dan Terra asked James Collins, an attorney at the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd, to act as both general counsel and an officer of Terra Foundation. Collins served in the capacity of general counsel and secretary of Terra Foundation from 1978 until his removal in October 1999. He also served as treasurer from August 1996 through October 1999. During this time, Collins had represented the interests of Terra Foundation through many difficult issues, including Judith Terra's attempt to confiscate $43 million of Dan Terra's bequest to Terra Foundation.

37 Defendants next forced the resignation of Terra Foundation's special counsel, Ty Fahner and Howard McCue III of Mayer, Brown & Platt. Terra Foundation hired Mayer, Brown & Platt as special counsel when Judith Terra sued Dan Terra's estate for the $43 million residual bequest to Terra Foundation. Mayer, Brown & Platt also represented Terra Foundation in connection with its interests in the now defunct Mercury Finance Company.

38 Specifically, on or about August 11, 2000, Mr. Ratner, acting in his ultra vires capacity at the direction of defendants, told Mayer, Brown & Platt that Terra Foundation would not pay its fees for any time incurred in dealing with or responding to any issues not specifically requested by either Mr. Tucker or Mr. Ratner. Mayer, Brown & Platt rejected this arrangement recognizing that it would be contrary to its duties and obligations as special counsel to Terra Foundation and its directors. In resigning its position as special counsel to Terra Foundation, Mayer, Brown & Platt stated in a letter to Mr. Tucker:

> In our original engagement letter of December 11, 1996, sent by Ms. Ahrweiler and ourselves, the Foundation requested that we act as special counsel to the Foundation. It was clear that the client was the foundation, not merely its President and Chairman. That letter also made clear that we were to provide legal advice and representation to the Board of the Foundation. As special counsel, we have worked with three different Chairmen, a number of board members, staff and counsel. We owe professional obligations to the institution and all of its directors. It would not be consistent with our professional obligations to decline to respond to the concerns of directors.

(Emphasis added) (See August 18, 2000 Letter, attached hereto as Exhibit 4).

39 In furtherance of her plan to seize control of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson have ignored the requirements of Terra Foundation's by-laws regarding management of Terra Foundation. Article III, Section 11 of the by-laws provides that the executive committee is to operate Terra Foundation between the quarterly Board of Director meetings. (See By-laws of Terra Foundation, attached hereto as Exhibit 5, at Article IV, Section 9). With few exceptions relating to bringing in new counsel for Terra Foundation, issues were not brought before the executive committee. By not having meetings of the executive committee, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson were able to control the operations of Terra Foundation for their own benefit, contrary to the provisions of the by-laws.

40 Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson have also consulted with and taken advice from Mr. Michaeli. Mr. Michaeli has been making decisions for Terra Foundation even though he is not an officer or director of Terra Foundation, or even an employee. Mr. Michaeli's only connection to Terra Museum is his relationship with Judith Terra.

41 Judith Terra also began treating the art collection of Terra Foundation as if it were her own personal property. Judith Terra ordered that art from the collection held by Terra Foundation be transported from the Giverny Museum to her personal residence. The curator of the Giverny Museum objected to any piece of the collection leaving the Giverny Museum. However, at Judith Terra's direction, Mr. Tucker ordered the curator of the Giverny Museum to transport the art to Judith Terra's residence for her personal use.

42 Under the control of Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Michaeli, substantial waste and mismanagement has occurred which jeopardizes the continued viability of Terra Museum. This waste and mismanagement includes, but is not limited to, the following:

a. Grossly mismanaging Terra Museum in a manner that has resulted in the loss or turnover of almost half the employees, including key persons responsible for Terra Museum's day-to-day operations and continued success;

b. Causing the primary individuals in charge of security at Terra Museum to quit resulting in an inexperienced and understaffed security staff, and jeopardizing the security of the $100 million of art displayed and collected at Terra Museum;

c. Permitting a director of Terra Foundation to engage in a conflict of interest in representing Terra Foundation at art auctions while, on information and belief, representing the interests of private clients at the same auction;

d. Expending significant monies on the purchases of art without obtaining the input or approval of the Board of Directors or the Collections Committee charged with the responsibility of advising the Board of Directors on issues involving art acquisition;

e. Attempting to invade the D4 Endowment restricted to educational purposes for the unauthorized purpose of acquiring art;

f. Bypassing the lawfully elected Executive Committee operating Terra Foundation and Terra Museum;

g. Wastefully incurring excessive legal fees by retaining inexperienced counsel in replacement of Terra Foundation's long-standing counsel;

h. Misusing the art collection of Terra Foundation for Judith Terra's own personal use and in a manner that placed the collection in danger and jeopardy; and

i. Allowing Mr. Michaeli to participate the management, control and operation of Terra Foundation and Terra Museum.

43 Members of the Board of Directors have repeatedly questioned the manner in which Mr. Tucker, Judith Terra and Sen. Simpson have been operating Terra Foundation in the past year. For example, on March 2, 2000, Margaret Daley wrote to John Neff, Director of Terra Museum, regarding the significant problem occurring at Terra Museum as a result of the high turnover of key employees. Specifically, Mrs. Daley stated:

> Having just returned from out of town, I am disheartened about the news concerning Ginny Spindler. John, Ginny worked tirelessly on the School Resource Guide. I was very impressed with her work and Rachel's as well. In fact, without their herculean efforts, it would not have been a worthwhile publication. In fact, it would have been an embarrassment to the Foundation. Your letter to Ginny was, from my point of view, unkind and uncalled for. It distressed me to see people treated in such a manner. In my working with her on education issues, I believe she has always gone "above and beyond" her duties .... I couldn't leave without letting you and the Board know my feelings and deep concerns.

(See March 2, 2000 Letter, attached hereto as Exhibit 6).

44 Other members of the Board of Directors, including Buntrock, as well employees of both Terra Foundation and Terra Museum have repeatedly and vigorously challenged the manner and lack of direction in which Terra Foundation has been operated and managed under the direction of Mr. Tucker. (See Arthur A. Hartman letter dated November 7, 1999, attached hereto as Exhibit 7).

45 On information and belief, the pattern of mismanagement and waste occurring at Terra Museum is a conscious effort on the part of Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to cause the failure of Terra Museum in Chicago to justify closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation from Chicago to Washington, D.C. for their own purposes and in utter disregard for the people of Illinois intended to benefit from Dan Terra's museum and foundation.

Judith Terra's Plan To Move Terra Museum From Chicago To Washington

46 Despite the fact that Terra during his life had rejected any suggestion of moving Terra Museum from Chicago and therefore depriving the people of the State of Illinois of the charitable trust that he had created, Judith Terra has never abandoned her personal scheme to close Terra Museum in Chicago and move Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. In the last year, after Mr. Tucker obtained the position of president and chairman, Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Mr. Michaeli have been actively seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago.

47 To this end, and in breach of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois, Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker have engaged in negotiations relating to a merger or affiliation between Terra Foundation and The Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. ("the Corcoran"). As part of the proposed merger of affiliation, certain positions on the Board of The Corcoran would be filled by individuals on the Board of Directors of Terra Foundation. Also, the proposal provides that the president and chairman of Terra Foundation, Mr. Tucker, would assume the position of vice-chairman of The Corcoran.

48 The overall plan and method whereby Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker would secure their mission of obtaining prominent positions in Washington, D.C., in breach of their fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois, was clearly evidenced at the recent Board of Directors meeting held on August 24, 2000. There, Mr. Tucker made clear that it was his intention to close Terra Museum in Chicago. Mr. Tucker stated that under his thinking, there were potential problems with the continued operation of the museum in Chicago. Mr. Tucker went to state clearly and unambiguously, > the best way to maximize our resources and fulfill our mission is to align with another institution, close the Chicago museum and focus on Giverny and educational initiatives of the Foundation.

(Emphasis added) (See Minutes of August 24, 2000 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit 8, p. 2). In fact, many of the "problems" with the Chicago museum were of the defendants' own making.

49 Buntrock objected to Mr. Tucker's improper interpretation of the mission of Terra Foundation and stated that the closing of Terra Museum in Chicago had never been discussed or considered by the full Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker agreed that this critical issue had never been discussed by the full Board of Directors, but stated that a decision had already been reached to close Terra Museum in Chicago. According to Mr. Tucker, the Strategic Planning Committee was prepared to make a recommendation on this issue to the Board of Directors. Mr. Tucker stated that the Board of directors "definitely" must make a decision on the closing of the Chicago museum during the annual Board of Directors meeting in September 2000.

50 In conjunction with their overall plan, Judith Terra and Mr. Tucker have attempted to create the impression that Terra Museum in Chicago needs to be abandoned as a mission of Terra Foundation.

Defendants' Plan To Remove Buntrock
From Board Of Directors To Further Their Goals

51 Notice was mailed to the directors informing them that the annual Board of Directors meeting of Terra Foundation was scheduled for Tuesday, September 26, 2000 in France. Although various events and committee meetings were scheduled to occur between September 23, 2000 and September 26, 2000, the annual meeting of the Board of Directors was scheduled for September 26, 2000.

52 As set forth in the agenda for the annual Board meeting that was distributed to each Board member, the election of officers and directors for the upcoming year was to be held during the September 26, 2000 meeting. (See Agenda for September 26, 2000 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Exhibit 9). As set forth in the agenda, the elections were to occur and then the chairman of each committee would make a presentation to the Board. (Id.) As indicated in the agenda, Mr. Buntrock was scheduled to give a presentation to the Board as the chairman of the finance and investment committee immediately subsequent to the election of the directors and officers.

53 The defendants have now contrived a plan to ensure that the directors are elected with the exception of Buntrock. Defendants intend to see that Buntrock is not retained as a director in order to allow them to more easily accomplish their unlawful personal objective of closing the museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. Buntrock has recognized defendants' efforts and has continued to question the Board's authority to move the charitable assets of the people of the State of Illinois to Washington, D.C. in contravention of the Board's fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois.

54 Plaintiffs have just recently learned of the defendants' improper plan to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Directors. Subsequent to the dissemination of the agenda for the September 26, 2000 meeting of the Board of Directors, and only days prior to the directors leaving for France, Mr. Ratner was directed to send a letter to all directors, without any consultation, informing them that a 30-minute Board of Directors meeting was scheduled for September 24, 2000, two days prior to the properly noticed and scheduled meeting of the Board of Directors. (See September 15, 2000 Letter, attached hereto as Exhibit 10). This improperly noticed meeting has been scheduled because defendants will not have a sufficient number of directors available on September 26, 2000 to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Terra Foundation.

55 Defendants' attempt to hold the elections for directors and/or officers at a Special Meeting of the Board of Directors on September 24, 2000, is violative of the by-laws of Terra Foundation for at least two reasons. First, Ratner does not have the authority to provide notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors as he is not the secretary of Terra Foundation, nor is he even a duly elected officer or director. Pursuant to the by-laws of Terra Foundation, only the secretary of Terra Foundation is empowered to provide notices required under the by-laws. (Exhibit 5, Article IV, Section 9). Any attempt by Ratner to send notice of a meeting of the Board of Directors constitutes an ultra vires act.

56 Second, under the by-laws an election of the officers and directors may occur only at one of two occasions. First, the election may take place at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors. Second, if the election is not held at the scheduled annual meeting, a special meeting may be held subsequent to the annual meeting. (Id. at Article III, Section 3). The by-laws provide no authority for the holding of elections of officers or directors prior to the scheduled annual meeting. For this additional reason, defendants' attempt to hold the elections of directors and officers at the improperly noticed meeting on September 24, 2000 constitutes and ultra vires act, as well as a clear breach of their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois.

57 Without relief from this Court, defendants will carry out their improper plan to ensure that Buntrock does not remain as a director and officer, to close the Terra Museum in Chicago and to undermine the effort of the other directors to ensure that fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation, and its beneficiaries -- the people of the State of Illinois -- are followed. The Defendants' plan is motivated by their own self-interests and desires, and inconsistent with their fiduciary obligations as directors of a charitable trust intended to benefit the people of Illinois.

58 Moreover, if defendants are permitted to carry out their plan to remove Buntrock there is a real and serious danger that other members of the Board of Directors will resign their positions thereby leaving the Terra Foundation in great jeopardy, and leaving the people of Illinois without protection on the Board. Once Buntrock and other similar "obstructionist" directors are removed or resign, defendants will have no opposition to carrying out their plan of depriving the people of Illinois of the public trust created over twenty years ago by Dan Terra for their benefit.

COUNT I
(Declaratory Relief)

59 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 58 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 59.

60 By and through the creation Terra Foundation as a not-for-profit Illinois corporation, Dan Terra intended that a museum of American art be operated in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois.

61 At various times after the creation of Terra Foundation, Terra reaffirmed his mission of operating a museum in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois through the collection of American art and the education generally of the public on the issue of American art.

62 The Board of Directors of Terra Foundation are the trustees of the charitable trust created by Dan Terra responsible to the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the public trust.

63 As directors of Terra Foundation, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz, as well as many others, have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the goals and mission started over twenty years ago by Terra.

64 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to protect Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement caused by defendants.

65 Plaintiffs as directors of Terra Foundation have a fiduciary duty and an obligation to see that Terra Foundation continues to carry out the mission for which it was started for the benefit of the people of Illinois.

66 By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois to protect the charitable assets of Terra Foundation and to act in their interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Terra more than twenty years ago.

67 Notwithstanding their fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois to further the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker used their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation to intentionally mismanage Terra Museum in Chicago to further their own self interests in closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C.

68 The foregoing improper conduct of Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker has caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, and irreparable harm to the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the public trust established for Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

69 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

70 An actual controversy exists between the parties hereto concerning Terra Foundation's obligation and purpose to maintain a museum in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois as originally intended by Dan Terra at the time of the creation of Terra Foundation.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created Terra Foundation as a public trust for the benefit of the people of Illinois on or before December 13, 1978;

(2) The intent of Dan Terra in creating Terra Foundation was to operate the museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois;

(3) Defendants are precluded from closing Terra Museum in Chicago and moving the Foundation to a location outside of the Chicago area;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of the Chicago area would violate the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from closing Terra Museum in Chicago or transferring the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois.

C. For such additional relief as the Court deems fair and just.

COUNT II
(Statutory Ultra Vires Acts)

71 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 70 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 71.

72 The above acts and conduct of defendants have been taken without lawful authority, capacity, or power and will continue unless enjoined.

73 Section 103.15 of the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986 allows this Court to enjoin defendants' unlawful acts.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation.

B. The appointment of a receiver to operate and maintain Terra Foundation pursuant to the Court's equitable powers and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

C. An accounting of all assets of the Terra Museum and Terra Foundation.

D. For such additional relief as the Court deems fair and just.

COUNT III
(Breach of Fiduciary Duty)

74 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 73 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 74.

75 By virtue of their positions as directors and/or officers of Terra Foundation, Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker owed fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois to act in their interests by furthering the charitable purpose and mission started by Dan Terra more than twenty years ago.

76 Defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further their own personal interests to the detriment of the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust. Defendants improper conduct included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago to create the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer the art to some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to defeat Buntrock's re-election as director to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois contrary to Illinois law;

d. Contrary to the by-laws of Terra Foundation, attempting to improperly reschedule the vote for the election of directors to ensure that defendants have enough votes to defeat Buntrock's nomination and therefore further their personal agenda to the detriment of the intended beneficiaries of Terra Foundation.

77 The foregoing breaches of fiduciary duty of Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker have caused, and will continue to cause, irreparable harm to Terra Foundation, and irreparable harm to the people of Illinois, as the beneficiaries of the public trust by endangering the future of Terra Foundation and the continued viability of Terra Museum in Chicago as a unique center for American art.

78 Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A declaration that:

(1) Daniel Terra created Terra Foundation for the benefit of the people of Illinois on or before December 13, 1978;

(2) The intent of Terra in creating Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois;

(3) Defendants have no authority to close Terra Museum in Chicago or transfer the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois;

(4) The closure of Terra Museum in Chicago or the transfer of the museum or its art to Washington, D.C. or any other location outside of Illinois would violate the Illinois Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (West 1995)) and the Illinois Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

(5) Defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker have breached their fiduciary duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation;

(6) Irreparable injury will result to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of Terra Foundation if defendants are permitted to continue breaching their fiduciary duties;

(7) Defendants have acted improperly and breached their fiduciary duties by seeking to defeat Mr. Buntrock's re-election as director in order to further their own agenda;

(8) The letter sent by Ratner to the members of the Board of Directors dated September 15, 2000 is a nullity and does not comply with the by-laws of Terra Foundation for scheduling a meeting of the Board of Directors for the election of directors and/or officers.

B. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants from the following:

(1) Holding a meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors in violation of Terra Foundation's by-laws;

(2) Taking any action to elect or remove any member of the Board of Directors or changing any committee assignment;

(3) Taking any action to close the Terra Museum in Chicago or move Terra Foundation or any of its assets outside the State of Illinois; and

(4) Taking any other action contrary to the by-laws of the Terra Foundation.

C. The appointment of a receiver to operate and maintain Terra Foundation pursuant to the Court's equitable powers and the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986 (805 ILCS 105/101.01 et seq. (West 1995)).

D. An accounting of all assets of the Terra Museum and Terra Foundation.

E. For such additional relief as the Court deems fair and just.

COUNT IV
(Inducing A Breach of Fiduciary Duty)

79 Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1 through 78 of this Complaint as though fully set forth in this Paragraph 79.

80 As set forth more fully above, defendants Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker breached their fiduciary duties by acting in a manner that was intended to further their own personal interests to the detriment of the people of Illinois as the beneficiaries of the charitable trust established by Dan Terra. Defendants improper conduct included, but is not limited to, the following acts:

a. Intentionally mismanaging Terra Museum in Chicago to create the impression that the museum needs to be closed;

16di-004633

b. Seeking to close Terra Museum in Chicago and transfer or re-establish the museum to Washington, D.C. or some other location outside of Illinois to further their own personal goals;

c. Attempting to defeat Buntrock's re-election as director to enable defendants to carry out their plan of moving or transferring Terra Museum from Chicago to a location outside of Illinois;

d. Attempting to improperly reschedule the vote for the election of directors to ensure that defendants have enough votes to defeat Buntrock's nomination and therefore further their personal agenda to the detriment of the intended beneficiaries of Terra Foundation

81 Defendant Mr. Michaeli colluded with Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker in committing breaches of fiduciary duty, or otherwise induced or participated in their breaches of duty to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois as the various ways, including, but not limited to the following:

a. Knowingly providing advice to Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson that was contrary to the fiduciary duties owed by them as directors of Terra Foundation;

b. Acting with Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to make decisions for Terra Foundation in contravention of the by-laws of Terra Foundation;

c. Advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson to take action relating to Terra Foundation that constituted waste and mismanagement in an attempt to justify the closure of Terra Museum in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

d. Colluding with or advising Judith Terra, Mr. Tucker and Sen. Simpson in the decision to replace Jim Collins and the law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd in order to gain control over the operations of Terra Foundation for their own improper purpose in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

e. Colluding with, advising or participating in the plan to remove Mr. Buntrock from the Board of Directors in order to remove opposition to their plan to close Terra Museum in Chicago and move Terra Foundation to Washington, D.C. in contravention of their fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois;

82 The conduct of Mr. Michaeli has caused, and will continue to cause, damage to Terra Foundation and the people of Illinois. If the conduct of Mr. Michaeli is not stopped, the public trust created by Dan Terra may be destroyed to the detriment of the people of Illinois.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

A. A temporary, preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining Mr. Michaeli, his agents or assigns from colluding with, inducing or participating in any further breaches of fiduciary duty with Judith Terra, Sen. Simpson and Mr. Tucker.

B. An award of exemplary damages for Mr. Michaeli's intentional, deliberate, and ongoing inducement of Judith Terra's, Sen. Simpson's and Mr. Tucker's breaches of its fiduciary duties to Terra Foundation.

American-Art Museum Opening in Chicago

By GRACE GLUECK
Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, April 19 — For a cultural institution, the Terra Museum of American Art has had a meteoric career. The latest entry in what seems to be an increasing trend toward private museums, it started out seven years ago with a highly personal selection of paintings — dating mainly from 1850 to 1900 — installed in a former florist's shop in nearby Evanston. Tuesday, at four times its original size and with holdings more oriented to the needs of a public institution, it opens in a pair of elegantly refurbished buildings on North Michigan Avenue, part of a $25 million real-estate package in the heart of Chicago's "Magnificent Mile."

"Someone said that Dan Terra has made up his mind he'll be a force in American art, and I don't deny it," Mr. Terra said. The museum's ebullient founder is a 75-year-old industrialist who since 1981 has been a cultural ambassador-at-large for President Reagan.

"Sure, I suppose you could characterize the museum as a personal monument," he said. "But what's exciting is that it's a deep commitment. There's not another museum of American art within 400 miles of Chicago, and we have a real educational job to do."

Although Mr. Terra and his wife, Adeline, who died in 1982, had been acquiring 18th- and 19th-century American paintings for many years, he came to national attention as a collector in 1982 by paying $3.25 million for Samuel F. B. Morse's 1832 canvas "The Gallery of the Louvre." It was then the highest auction price ever paid for an American work of art. The painting stars in the museum's opening show, which combines works from the Terra collection with a distinguished group borrowed from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. "God knows what we'd pay for the Morse today," said Mr. Terra, whose holdings of some 800 works are valued, for insurance purposes, at more than $100 million. "It's not at all unusual to spend $2.5 to $3 million for top American paintings now."

Stores Help Pay Expenses

The new museum at present occupies two of the four buildings on North Michigan Avenue owned by Mr. Terra. The elegant five-story entrance building at No. 664, a former Helena Rubinstein salon of rather shallow interior space, was gutted and handsomely redone by the architect Larry Booth. Entrance is through a ground-floor museum bookshop, and a ramp-and-stair system with a dramatic arrangement of railings guides the viewer up the four gallery levels. A four-story glass window on the facade gives a full view of the bustling street and the Saks Fifth Avenue store across from the museum.

The entrance building is connected to an older, 11-story structure next door, which also houses four floors of galleries, along with museum offices and education, library and workshop facilities. A shoe store that occupies the ground floor will remain for the present, since its lease helps pay for the museum's operation.

"I got the idea from Paul Mellon's Yale Center for British Art in New Haven, which has retail stores on its ground level," Mr. Terra said.

The two other Terra-owned buildings, one across the street to the south, the other immediately north of the two now used for the museum, will figure in later plans. At present, they are leased to retail tenants who sell shoes, haberdashery, popcorn and books and produce a substantial income for the new museum. So far, real estate and renovation expenses have cost Mr. Terra and his son, James, an electronics entrepreneur, more than $30 million, with an additional $3 million contributed by individuals and corporations.

Before making firm plans for the new facility, Mr. Terra — the founder, president and chief executive officer of Lawler Chemicals Inc. — had thought of merging his collection with the Art Institute of Chicago, which has impressive holdings in American art and is building a new wing to house them. But after some months of negotiations, discussions broke off.

"The hang-up was that I insisted that we have our own board, raise our own money and make our own decisions," Mr. Terra said, then laughed. "Many times since, I've wondered if I didn't make a mistake."

The director of the Art Institute, James Wood, said: "He really wanted to have his own identity. After all, there's only so much you can do in an existing institution. But as a separate museum, there's a wonderful role he can play. In Chicago, we don't have many of the smaller, more specially focused institutions that are a vital part of urban culture."

'Flabbergasted by the Interest'

It was the success of the small museum in low-profile Evanston that brought about the move to Chicago, Mr. Terra said. "After we started the Evanston museum, I was flabbergasted by the interest it excited and the number of people who showed up for symposia we held. We said to ourselves, if this excitement exists, now would be the time to open a museum with the highest visibility and accessibility, in Chicago. So we began to broaden the collection from a public viewpoint, and we bought the first property on Michigan Avenue in 1981."

He rejected the idea of seeking city-owned park land for the museum because — partly inspired by the Whitney Museum branches in New York — he wanted it in a "high density" area, Mr. Terra said. "I hope it draws lots of people who have never seen a museum or looked at American art before," he said. "But we're going to have to prove that locating a museum of this character on a very valuable commercial piece of land is viable. If we do it well, the public will support it."

If the present facilities meet Mr. Terra's hopes in terms of such support, there will be a Phase 2 and then a Phase 3 to the project.

Actually, Phase 2 is already in the planning stage. It would involve razing the low structure immediately to the north of the entrance building, and putting up a nine-story one instead. Cantilevering over the top of the entrance building, it would not only add to the present exhibition space, but would provide room for a 900-seat concert hall, which Mr. Terra said was sorely needed in Chicago. Altogether the museum's space would be increased to around 100,000 square feet from its present 60,000. To carry out these plans, some $25 million will be sought from individuals, corporations and foundations.

Phase 3: Unification

Phase 3, perhaps to be the subject of an architectural competition, would presumably involve unification of the various buildings into a large museum complex. "When all the elements are in place, we project an income of $3 million a year from retail tenants," the museum's director, Michael H. Sanden, said. "It will help considerably toward operational expenses."

The New York Times/Mark Peterson

So far Mr. Terra, whose collection will not actually be given to the museum until after his death, has borne the brunt of those expenses. The Evanston museum, which will be retained as a branch, costs $900,000 a year, and it is hoped that corporate sponsorship can be found for it. Estimated costs for both Evanston and Chicago are between $3 million and $4 million a year. "I sell properties and securities and I borrow," Mr. Terra said. "I don't beg, I don't steal, but I do everything else."

The museum's staff now comprises some 30 professionals, headed by Mr. Sanden and including three curators and a director of education. "We need to build strong education and exhibition programs so that people don't think of the Terra as just one man's collection," Mr. Sanden said.

There is general agreement, too, that the six-member board, closely associated with Mr. Terra, needs broadening. Already, on the educational side, the museum runs symposiums for the general public as well as programs for schoolteachers and children. On the exhibition side, apart from the collection itself, several shows are being organized, among them one on the Ashcan school and another on the work of William Merritt Chase. In December, a show of art by three generations of the Wyeth family, now in the Soviet Union, is to open at the Terra.

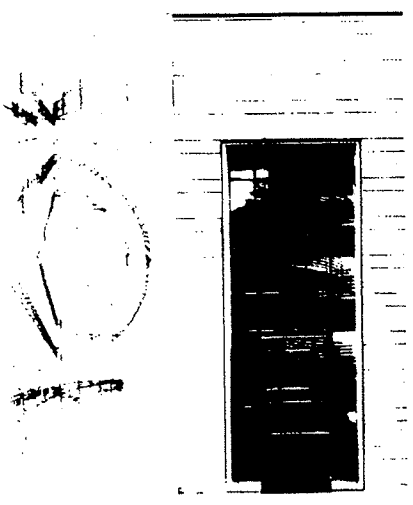
DANIEL J. TERRA

America's first ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs pursues the best in American painting for his new museum in Chicago

By Dodie Kazanjian

We have more frontage on North Michigan Avenue than Neiman-Marcus, Saks Fifth Avenue, Marshall Field's, Lord & Taylor, or—what's the name of that other one?—Bloomingdale's," says Daniel J. Terra looking down from the rooftop of his new Terra Museum of American Art. Even the wind that Chicago is famous for and subzero winter weather can't stifle his enthusiasm. "We have more frontage than the Whitney. Yes, we do. But we don't have as much frontage as the Metropolitan . . . yet," he laughs uproariously. His explosive laugh has an infectious quality that makes any listener want to join in.

Ambassador Terra, above, on the dramatic central staircase of his Chicago museum. Below: Details of interior ramp and elevation by architect Laurence Booth.



For more than three years Ambassador Terra and I have been talking about the opening of his North Michigan Avenue museum. Beneath us on this cold January day, the museum that bears his name is far from finished. The skeleton of a ramp system is in place, but welding, hammering, plastering, and painting continue at an accelerated pace so that the museum can be ready for its scheduled opening on April 21. (See the opening feature of this issue for a selection of American Impressionist paintings from the museum.) We, along with his wife, Judith, are on top of the tallest of four buildings (eleven stories) that will make up the Terra Museum. These buildings take up 245 feet along Chicago's Magnificent Mile where Terra plans to attract as many as he can of the estimated 14.5 million pedestrians who pass by here every year. He says the museum "will ultimately be the tallest known art museum. This land is so valuable, we had to go vertical." His idea is to bring American art to the people. That's why he picked a site on the avenue that has one of the highest pedestrian traffic counts in the nation, second only to Fifth Avenue between 48th and 57th streets.

Don't be fooled by Dan Terra's age, 75, or his full white head of hair or his diminutive stature. He has more energy than a Fourth of July firecracker. He is, first of all, chairman of his own company, Lawter International, the printing-ink manufacturing company in Northbrook, Illinois, which he started in the 1930s. The son of an immigrant Italian lithographer, Terra at age 25 pioneered a printing process with fast-drying ink that "revolutionized magazine printing" and made it possible to substantially shorten deadlines "so that news items in national magazines wouldn't be stale by the time the magazines came out." In 1936, using his new process, Life magazine began publication. "I had a cot for a six-week period in the plant where it was being printed so I could be there all night if they had problems."

In 1981, President Reagan appointed him America's first ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs. His office is at the State Department, and last year he gave 109 speeches around the world promoting the importance of America's cultural achievements and urging private-sector support for the arts in this country. And to make sure his museum opens on time, he's been commuting for the past year at least twice a week between his two homes in Washington and Kenilworth, near Chicago.

A longtime collector of American paintings, Terra has had a museum in Evanston, Illinois, since 1980 (it will remain open as a branch of the new one on North Michigan Avenue). His first wife, the late Adeline Evans Richards, was an art historian and inspired Terra to begin collecting more than fifty years ago. But it wasn't until a New York dealer mentioned to him that there wasn't a museum of American art within 400 miles of Chicago that he got the idea to open his own museum. "One of the problems with the little museum in Evanston is its location," he says. "We don't even have bus service there on Sundays, and weekends are the biggest part of museum attendance. We were in a quiet hard-to-find spot, and we were getting excellent crowds. So we decided that we had to go to the other extreme. Imagine what American art would draw if you had the best location. And when you start thinking in terms of Chicago, the best location has to be North Michigan Avenue."

Many of Dan Terra's paintings—his collection now numbers more than eight hundred important American works—are on loan elsewhere and are being reassembled for the museum opening. The most famous, The Gallery of the Louvre by Samuel F. B. Morse ("It's the icon of America," he says), which he purchased in 1982 for $3.25 million—a then-record price for an American painting—is returning from Cincinnati. Brace's Rock, Brace's Cove by Fitz Hugh Lane, which National Gallery Deputy Director John Wilmerding says is one of the finest examples of Luminism, and The Jolly Flatboatmen by George Caleb Bingham are being hand-carried from Sweden. And Lilies by Frederick Carl Frieseke, Terra's most recent acquisition, is being framed at the Berry Hill Gallery in New York, but will be ready on time. The opening exhibition, "A Proud Heritage: Two Centuries of American Art," will feature about a hundred paintings from the Terra collection along with more than sixty major paintings from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia. ("It's the longest-standing museum of American art in the country, and we're the newest," explains Terra.) "It's very unusual for the Pennsylvania Academy to lend a substantial group of paintings like this," says Michael Sandin, director of the Terra Museum and former director of the Oklahoma Art Center.

The museum opening in April is the first phase of a three-phase plan and will involve two of the existing four buildings—a 1927 limestone building by architect Philip B. Maher and the five-story building that Helena Rubenstein built in 1957. The third building sits next to the Helena Rubenstein building to the north, and the fourth is across Erie Street to the south. Architect Laurence Booth of the noted Chicago firm Booth/Hansen & Associates has gutted the interior of the eleven-story corner building and connected it with a new five-story building constructed on the foundations of the Helena Rubenstein building. "We wanted something that would catch people's attention," says Booth, "so we chose white Vermont marble to brighten that stuffy part of the avenue. We wanted it to be appropriately visible, exciting and intriguing, and at the same time not jarring and aggressive—creating the appropriate presence that establishes the Terra as a major institution in Chicago."

Booth's white marble building houses the main entrance and a winding ramp that runs from top to bottom. Descending through the interior, the ramp—unlike the Guggenheim's spiral, it's more like a sculpture combining stairs and ramps—makes a dramatic statement. "Larry Booth deserves the credit for coming up with the ramp system," says Dan Terra. "It is really quite brilliant because it allows plenty of wall space for large paintings and for receptions, too."

The museum's second phase is expected to begin in 1988. This will involve tearing down the third building to the north and replacing it with a new structure that will connect with and add four stories to the white marble center building. "The second phase has to unify the three buildings," says Ambassador Terra. The third and final phase will involve the fourth building across Erie Street and will not begin until the second phase is finished.

Terra chose Laurence Booth because of his experience with conversion and restoration. "Larry Booth has done most of the conversion work of the loft buildings on Printers Row in Chicago," says Terra. "I think he's come up with some very intriguing plans. He took that Helena Rubenstein building and really did something."

"The museum is not inward looking. It's outward looking," explains Laurence Booth, referring to the four-story-high window that exposes the ramp system and defines the entrance into the museum. "It breaks the museum open and makes it much more American. It's not like an exclusive club. It's open to all the people. That's the spirit of the place. And it's certainly the spirit of the ambassador and his generosity."

James Wood, director of the nearby Art Institute of Chicago, which has an extensive collection of Amercian art, feels that "this is an opportunity for the city. There is no question that there is room for a new vital institution." Art historian Barbara Novak goes even further: "It's tremendously important for a new museum devoted to American art to exist and tremendously important for it to happen in the Midwest. We don't have enough of them yet in this country because many people don't share Ambassador Terra's sense of the value and richness of American art. He has a genuine enthusiasm and I respect what he's doing."

Terra did not begin as a collector of American art. "The first painting I bought was in 1936," he says, as he and Judith and I drive to the museum in Evanston. "It was a nineteenth-century English landscape, which is still hanging over the fireplace at home. And it cost $40."

But it took him more than twenty years before he bought his first American works—two of the four studies of John Singer Sargent's The Oyster Gatherers of Cancale. Twenty years later he bought the third study at a cost that "was 51 times as much as either one of the others. That gives you a pretty good idea of what has happened to the value of important American paintings." Another indication: George Caleb Bingham's first version of The Jolly Flatboatmen painted in 1846 (Terra owns the second version of 1848) was sold in January by Senator Claiborne Pell for $6 million, the new record price for an American painting.

And Terra predicts the trend will continue. "We're on the cutting edge of the most dynamic surge of interest in American art that this nation has ever seen."

When we arrive in Evanston at the first Terra Museum, which he refers to these days as the "little museum," I'm immediately drawn to one painting in particular. In 1985, Dan Terra called to ask me to go to the Coe Kerr Gallery in New York to take a look at his latest acquisitions. One was In the Garden, Corfu by John Singer Sargent, which I recently saw again on loan to the Whitney's Sargent show. And the other, Summertime: Woman and Child in a Rowboat by Mary Cassatt, I now find myself in front of once again.

American Impressionist paintings play an important part in the Terra collection, and standing in this room surrounded by Cassatt's Summertime and The Cup of Chocolate, Charles Courtney Curran's Lotus Lilies, Winslow Homer's The Croquet Match, James McNeill Whistler's Note in Red: The Siesta, John Leslie Breck's Rock Garden at Giverny, Frieseke's Lady in a Garden, and so many others, it is apparent that women and gardens are a common theme in the collection. And his most recent purchase, Frieseke's Lilies, continues this theme.

"This garden is right next door to the Monet compound at Giverny," Terra says. "The painting is just called Lilies because the main flower that's in the picture is the white lily, as you can see. But what makes that very exciting to us is we know that garden so well," he says turning to his bride of less than a year, the former Judith Banks. (About two years ago while the three of us were having dinner in Washington, he told me that Judith reminds him of all the beautiful women in his paintings.)

"The name of the house is the Perry House because Lilla Cabot Perry was the earliest of five American artists who lived there," the ambassador continues. The others are, in addition to Perry and Frieseke, Theodore Robinson, John Leslie Breck, and Frederick MacMonnies; all five are represented in the Terra collection. "We have about fifty pictures in the collection which were painted either in this garden or in gardens that are close to it, including the Monet gardens themselves."

Dan Terra's passion for Lilies is apparent. "This is a drop-dead picture. It really is. Frieseke didn't always make it but this time he was absolutely superb. And there isn't anybody in American art who I think paints these magnificent flowers like Frieseke did. And beautiful, beautiful female figures."

Later during lunch Terra says, "I know the story behind all the paintings before I buy them," he says. For instance, if there is a house in the painting, the ambassador often visits the site before buying the painting.

"That's part of learning what these artists were all about because of all the information you can get out of these visits. We went to Shinnecock Hall [the Long Island home of William Merritt Chase] and spent two days at that house just exploring it before we bought that great Chase pastel. It's so fabulous." He lowers his voice to a near whisper and says, "Let me tell you, as great he was, Degas never did any better."

You can't talk about the Terra collection without mentioning Maurice Prendergast. "The last non-American paintings we collected were the French Impressionists, and there was something about Prendergast that resembled the Impressionists and Post-Impressionists," says Terra. He has acquired about eighty works (considered to be the most comprehensive collection) by Prendergast, 58 of which are monotypes. These are now traveling in a show that first opened at the National Gallery of Art in Washington in January 1985.

In the past year Daniel Terra has bought more than twenty important works to fill gaps in his collection. Through one collector in Zürich he found several paintings by early modern artists Marsden Hartley, Joseph Stella, Stuart Davis, and Patrick Henry Bruce. "I don't think it's compulsive buying," he says. "I think it's very careful, deliberately planned buying to fill out the collection. There are always gaps in all of these periods, and that acquisition was a fine step forward in the early modern collection.

"I'm aware of where probably ninety percent of the last remaining American historical works, perhaps a hundred, are in private hands. I never stop trying to negotiate a purchase." Right now he's trying to obtain several

Dr. Paul Tucker
Chairman and President
Terra Foundation for the Arts
664 N. Michigan Avenue
Chicago, IL 60611

Dear Dr. Tucker:

We are in receipt of Donald H. Ratner's letter of August 11, 2000. In that letter, Mr. Ratner, purporting to speak for you, has indicated that the Foundation will not pay Mayer, Brown & Platt "for any time incurred in dealing with or responding to any issues not specifically requested by either Paul Tucker or Donald Ratner as his agent." We have spoken to Mr. Ratner about this letter. He has indicated to us that the Foundation wishes to reduce the substantial level of its professional fees; he has suggested that you intend to make our task easier and less time consuming by encouraging us to decline to communicate with other officers and directors.

With all due respect to you and Mr. Ratner, we conclude that we cannot continue to act as special counsel to the Foundation under these circumstances and therefore withdraw from our representation. In our original engagement letter of December 11, 1996, sent to us by Catherine A. Stevens on behalf of Helene Ahrweiler, Chairman of the Board, and signed by Ms. Ahrweiler and ourselves, the Foundation requested that we act as special counsel to the Foundation. It was clear that the client was the Foundation, not merely its President and Chairman. That letter also made clear that we were to provide legal advice and representation to the Board of the Foundation. As special counsel, we have worked with three different Chairmen, a number of board members, staff and counsel. We owe professional obligations to the institution and all its directors. It would not be consistent with our professional obligations to decline to respond to the concerns of directors.

Most recently, we have been engaged in three tasks. We have been providing information to your new general counsel at Winston & Strawn. We have represented the Foundation in connection with the administration of the Estate of Ambassador Terra (which is ready to close, awaiting only final action by the Foundation). We have given advice to the Foundation with regard to its claim as a member of the "holder class" in the Mercury Finance bankruptcy matter.

As to the transition to new general counsel, we have made all of our files available to your new counsel. They and Mr. Ratner have examined them extensively and requested voluminous copies. We have complied with all of their requests, and they have acknowledged our complete cooperation. These files remain available to you and your counsel.

As to the Estate of Daniel Terra, you have asked your new general counsel to review the matters as to which we were previously asked to give counsel. We should arrange for a prompt substitution of counsel in the Estate so that the Foundation can be represented by Winston & Strawn in these matters. You do not require both firms.

We understand that Winston & Strawn has a potential conflict of interest in the Mercury bankruptcy. Note, however, that we have never filed an appearance in any of these matters, but have gathered information from Bell, Boyd & Lloyd and other sources. Under these circumstances, we recommend that you retain another firm to act as special counsel to advise you with respect to these matters.

We have enjoyed the opportunity to work with the Terra Foundation for the Arts.

Very truly yours,

Tyrone C. Fahner

RESTATED BYLAWS OF
TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS

ARTICLE I

Purposes

The purposes for which the corporation is organized are exclusively for charitable, educational, literary, and scientific purposes including, for such purposes, the making of distributions to organizations that qualify as exempt organizations under Section 501(c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or the corresponding provisions of any subsequent Federal tax laws ("Code"). For illustrative purposes only, the purposes of the corporation are to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings, sculpture, graphic arts, architecture, and design representing American art; expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, concerts and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain or provide funds for schools of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational courses in the visual and performing arts and other general educational subjects; build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all component parts deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions; engage in any and all other activities and exhibitions; engage in any and all other activities and promote any and all other purposes permitted by law to such a not-for-profit corporation.

No part of the net earnings of the corporation shall inure to the benefit of or be distributed to, its members, directors, trustees, officers, or other private persons, except that the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to pay reasonable compensation for services rendered and to make payments and distributions in furtherance of the purposes set forth above. No substantial part of the activities of the corporation shall be the carrying on of propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation, and the corporation shall not participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distribution of statements) any political campaign on behalf of any candidate for public office. Notwithstanding any other provision of these bylaws the corporation shall not carry on any other activities not permitted to be carried on by a corporation exempt from Federal income tax under Section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

If this corporation is in any one year a private foundation, as defined in Section 509(a), it shall be required to distribute its income for such taxable year at such time and in such manner as not to subject the foundation to tax under Section 4942, and shall be prohibited from engaging in any act of self-dealing, as defined in Section 4941(d), from retaining any excess business holdings, as defined in Section 4943(c), from making any investments in such manner as to subject the foundation to tax under Section 4944, and from making any taxable expenditures, as defined in Section 4945(d), all Sections being of the Code.

Upon dissolution of the corporation, the Board of Directors shall, after paying or making provision for the payment of all the liabilities of the corporation, dispose of all of the assets of the corporation exclusively for the purposes of the corporation in such manner, or to such organization or organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational, literary, religious or scientific purposes as shall at the time qualify as an exempt organization or organizations under Section 501(c)(3) of the Code, as the Board of Directors shall determine.

The corporation shall have such powers as are authorized by law and in general, subject to such limitations and conditions as are or may be prescribed by law, to exercise such other powers which now are or hereafter may be conferred by law upon a corporation organized for the purposes hereinabove set forth, or necessary or incidental to the powers so conferred, or conducive to the attainment of the purposes of the corporation, subject to the further limitation and condition that only such powers shall be exercised as are in furtherance of the exempt purposes of the organization set forth in Section 501(c)(3) of the Code and its Regulations as they now exist or as they may hereafter be amended.

The corporation also has such powers as are now or may hereafter be granted by the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of the State of Illinois.

ARTICLE II

Offices

The corporation shall have and continuously maintain in this state a registered office and a registered agent whose office is identical with such registered office, and may have such other offices within or without the State of Illinois as the Board of Directors may from time to time determine.

ARTICLE III

Board of Directors

Section 1. General Powers. The affairs of the corporation shall be managed by its Board of Directors.

Section 2. Number, Tenure, and Qualifications.

(a) The number of directors elected by the Board of Directors shall be no less than seven and no more than eleven. The number of directors may be fixed or changed from time to time, within this minimum and maximum, without further amendment to these bylaws. Each elected director shall hold office until the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors or until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

(b) Directors need not be residents of Illinois.

Section 3. Regular Meetings. A regular annual meeting shall be held during the month of September of each year, for the purposes of electing directors and officers and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. If the election of directors and officers shall not be held at such meeting, the board of directors shall cause the election to be held at a meeting of the board of directors as soon thereafter as conveniently may be. The Board of Directors shall provide by resolution the time and place, either within or without the State of Illinois, for the holding of the regular annual meeting and additional regular meetings of the Board without other notice than such resolution.

Section 4. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the Board of Directors may be called by or at the request of the president or any two directors. The person or persons authorized to call special meetings of the board may fix any reasonable place, either within or without the State of Illinois, as the place for holding any special meeting of the Board called by them.

Section 5. Notice. Notice of any meeting of the Board of Directors shall be given at least five days previously thereto by written notice delivered personally or sent by mail or telegram to each director at his address as shown by the records of the corporation. If mailed, such notice shall be deemed to be delivered when deposited in the United States mail in a sealed envelope so addressed, with postage thereon prepaid. If notice be given by telegram, such notice shall be deemed to be delivered when the telegram is delivered to the telegraph company. Any director may waive notice of any meeting. The attendance of a director at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a director attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting to the transaction of any business because the meeting is not lawfully called or convened. Neither the business to be transacted at, nor the purpose of, any regular or special meeting of the board need be specified in the notice of waiver of notice of such meeting, unless specifically required by law or by these Bylaws.

Section 6. Quorum. A majority of the Board of Directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting of the board, except that if less than a majority of the directors are present at such meeting, a majority of the directors present may adjourn the meeting from time to time without further notice.

Section 7. Manner of Acting. The act of a majority of the directors present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be the act of the Board of Directors, except where otherwise provided by law or by these Bylaws.

Section 8. Vacancies. Any vacancy occurring in the Board of Directors, or any directorship to be filled by reason of an increase in the number of directors, shall be filled by the Board of Directors. A director elected to fill a vacancy shall be elected for the unexpired term of his predecessor in office, and a director elected by reason of an increase in the number of directors shall be elected for a term expiring on the date of the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors.

Section 9. Informal Action by Directors. Unless specifically prohibited by the articles of incorporation or bylaws, any action required to be taken at a meeting of the board of directors, or any other action which may be taken at a meeting of the board of directors or any committee thereof, may be taken without a meeting if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all the directors entitled to vote with respect to the subject matter thereof, or by all the members of such committee, as the case may be. Any such consent signed by all the directors or all the members of the committee shall have the same effect as a unanimous vote, and may be stated as such in any document filed with the Secretary of State.

Section 10. Participation by Telecommunications Equipment. Directors or nondirector committee members may participate in and act at any meeting of the board or committee through the use of a conference telephone or other communications equipment by means of which all persons participating in the meeting can communicate with each other. Participation in such meeting shall constitute attendance and presence in person at the meeting of the person or persons so participating.

Section 11. Executive Committee. The board of directors may, by resolution passed by a majority of the whole board, designate an executive committee consisting of two or more of the directors of the corporation. The executive committee shall have and may exercise all the authority of the board of directors in the management of the corporation between meetings of the board of directors, provided the committee shall not have the authority of the board of directors in reference to (a) amending the articles of incorporation, (b) adopting a plan of merger or adopting a plan of consolidation with another corporation or corporations, (c) authorizing the sale, lease, exchange or mortgage of all or substantially all of the property and assets of the corporation, (d) authorizing the voluntary dissolution of the corporation or revoking proceedings therefor, (e) adopting a plan for the distribution of the assets of the corporation, (f) amending, altering or repealing the bylaws of the corporation, (g) electing, appointing or removing any director or officer of the corporation or any member of the executive committee or (h) amending, altering or repealing any resolution of the board of directors which by its terms provides that it shall not be amended, altered or repealed by the executive committee. The executive committee shall keep minutes of each of its meetings and report the same at the next meeting of the board of directors.

Section 12. Other Committees. The board of directors may from time to time establish other committees and specify the scope of their authority.

Section 13. Compensation. Directors as such shall not receive any stated salaries for their services, but by resolution of the Board of Directors, a fixed sum may, and expenses of attendance, if any, shall be allowed for attendance at each regular or special meeting of the Board or committee thereof; except that nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude any director from serving the corporation in any other capacity and receiving compensation therefor.

ARTICLE IV

Officers

Section 1. Officers. The officers of the corporation shall be a chairman, one or more vice chairmen, a president, one or more vice presidents, a secretary and a treasurer. The Board of Directors may appoint such other officers, including one or more assistant secretaries and one or more assistant treasurers as it shall deem desirable, such appointed officers to have the authority to perform the duties prescribed from time to time by the Board of Directors. Any two or more offices may be held by the same person, except the offices of president and secretary.

Section 2. Election and Term of Office. The officers of the corporation shall be elected by the Board of Directors at its regular annual meeting. If the election of officers shall not be held at such meeting, such election shall be held as soon thereafter as conveniently may be.

Vacancies may be filled and new offices created and filled at any meeting of the Board of Directors. Each elected officer shall hold office until the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors or until his successor shall have been duly elected and shall have qualified. Election or appointment of an officer or agent shall not of itself create contract rights.

Section 3. Removal. Any officer or agent elected or appointed by the Board of Directors may be removed by the Board of Directors whenever in its judgment the best interests of the corporation would be served thereby, but such removal shall be without prejudice to the contract rights, if any, of the person removed.

Section 4. Chairman. The chairman shall be the chief executive officer of the corporation and shall in general supervise and control all of the affairs of the corporation. He shall preside at all meetings of the Board of Directors. He shall have the power to execute all documents that the board of directors has authorized to be executed, except in cases where the signing and execution thereof shall be expressly delegated by the board of directors or by these bylaws to some other officer or agent of the corporation, or shall be required by law to be otherwise signed or executed, and in general shall perform all duties incident to the office of chairman and such other duties as the board of directors may from time to time prescribe.

Section 5. Vice Chairman. In the absence of the chairman or in the event of his inability or refusal to act, the vice chairman, or in the event there is more than one in the order designated by the Board of Directors (or if none, in the order of election), shall perform the duties of the chairman and when so acting shall have all the powers of the chairman. These duties shall not include the duty to preside at meetings of the Board of Directors in the event of the absence, inability or refusal to act of the chairman, which is expressly granted to the president. Each vice chairman shall perform such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the chairman or the Board of Directors.

Section 6. President. The president shall be the principal operating officer of the corporation and shall in general supervise and control all the day-to-day business and affairs of the corporation. In the absence of the chairman or in the event of his inability or refusal to preside at any meeting of the Board of Directors, the president shall preside at such meeting or meetings of the Board of Directors. He may sign, with the secretary or any other proper officer of the corporation authorized by the Board of Directors, any deed, mortgages, bonds, contracts, or other instruments which the Board of Directors have authorized to be executed, except in cases where the signing and execution thereof shall be expressly delegated by the Board of Directors or by these Bylaws or by statute to some other officer or agent of the corporation; and in general shall perform all duties incident to the office of president and such other duties as may be prescribed by the Board of Directors from time to time.

Section 7. Vice Presidents. In the absence of the president or in the event of the inability or refusal to act of the president, the vice presidents in the order designated by the Board of Directors (or if none, in the order of election) shall perform the duties of the president, and when so acting shall have all the powers of the president. Each vice president shall perform such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the president or by the Board of Directors.

Section 8. Treasurer. If required by the Board of Directors, the treasurer shall give a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties in such sum and with such surety or sureties as the Board of Directors shall determine. He shall have charge and custody of and be responsible for all funds and securities of the corporation; receive and give receipts for moneys due and payable to the corporation from any source whatsoever, and deposit all such moneys in the name of the corporation and in such banks, trust companies or other depositories as shall be selected in accordance with the provisions of ARTICLE V of these Bylaws; and in general perform all the duties incident to the office of treasurer and such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the president or by the Board of Directors.

Section 9. Secretary. The secretary shall keep minutes of the meetings of the Board of Directors in one or more books provided for that purpose; see that all notices are duly given in accordance with the provisions of these Bylaws or as required by law; be custodian of the corporate records and of the seal of the corporation and see that the seal of the corporation is affixed to all documents, the execution of which on behalf of the corporation under its seal is duly authorized in accordance with the provisions of these Bylaws; and in general perform all duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the president or by the Board of Directors.

Section 10. Assistant Treasurers and Assistant Secretaries. If required by the Board of Directors, the assistant treasurers shall give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties in such sums and with such sureties as the Board of Directors shall determine. The assistant treasurers and assistant secretaries, in general, shall perform such duties as shall be assigned to them by the treasurer or the secretary, as the case may be, or by the president or the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE V

Contracts, Checks, Deposits and Funds

Section 1. Contracts. The Board of Directors may authorize any officer or officers, agent or agents of the corporation, in addition to the officers so authorized by these Bylaws, to enter into any contract or execute and deliver any instrument in the name of and on behalf of the corporation and such authority may be general or confined to specific instances.

Section 2. Checks, Drafts, Etc. All checks, drafts or other orders for the payment of money, notes or other evidences of indebtedness issued in the name of the corporation, shall be signed by such officer or officers, agent or agents of the corporation and in such manner as shall from time to time be determined by resolution of the Board of Directors. In the absence of such determination by the Board of Directors, such instruments shall be signed by any two elected officers of the corporation.

Section 3. Deposits. All funds of the corporation shall be deposited from time to time to the credit of the corporation in such banks, trust companies or other depositaries as the Board of Directors may select.

Section 4. Gifts. The Board of Directors may accept on behalf of the corporation any contribution, gift, bequest or devise for the general purposes or for any special purpose of the corporation.

Section 5. Loans. No loan of money shall be contracted on behalf of the corporation and no evidence of indebtedness shall be issued in its name unless authorized by the board of directors. Such authority may be general or confined to specific instances.

ARTICLE VI

Books and Records

The corporation shall keep correct and complete books and records of account and shall also keep minutes of the proceedings of its Board of Directors and its committees.

ARTICLE VII

Fiscal Year

The fiscal year of the corporation shall begin on July 1 of each year and end on June 30 of the succeeding year.

ARTICLE VIII

Seal

The Board of Directors shall provide a corporate seal which shall be in the form of a circle and shall have inscribed thereon the name of the corporation and the words "Corporate Seal, Illinois".

ARTICLE IX

Waiver of Notice

Whenever any notice whatever is required to be given under the provisions of the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of Illinois or under the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation or the Bylaws of the corporation, a waiver thereof in writing signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, whether before or after the time stated therein, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice.

ARTICLE X

Indemnification

(a) The corporation shall indemnify any and all of its directors or officers or the directors or members of the boards or committees of the constituent museums or schools of the corporation or any person who may have served at its request or by its election as a director or officer of another corporation (an "indemnified person") against expenses actually and necessarily incurred by them in connection with the defense or settlement of any action, suit or proceeding in which they, or any of them, are made parties, or a party, by reason of being or having been an indemnified person except in relation to matters as to which any such indemnified person shall be adjudged in such action, suit or proceeding to be liable for willful misconduct in the performance of duty and to such matters as shall be settled by agreement predicted on the existence of such liability.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (a) above, the termination of any litigation by judgment, settlement, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendre, or its equivalent, shall not create a presumption that the person seeking indemnification did not meet the applicable indemnification standard as set forth in paragraph (a) above.

(c) Advances may be made by the corporation against costs, expenses and fees arising out of, or in connection with, such litigation at the discretion of, and upon such terms (but always subject to the final determination of a person's right to indemnification) as may be determined by the Board of Directors.

(d) The right of indemnification provided hereunder shall not be deemed exclusive of any other right to which any person may be entitled, or of any other indemnification which may lawfully be granted to any person in addition to the indemnification provided hereunder. Indemnification provided hereunder shall, in the case of the death of the person entitled to indemnification, inure to the benefit of his heirs, executors or other lawful representative.

(e) The corporation may purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any and all of its indemnified persons against any liability, incurred by them by reason of being or having been an indemnified person, whether or not the corporation would have the power to indemnify them against such liability or settlement under the provisions of this ARTICLE X.

ARTICLE XI

Interchangeability

Whenever the context requires or permits, the gender and number of words shall be interchangeable.

ARTICLE XII

Amendments to Bylaws

These Bylaws may be altered, amended or repealed and new Bylaws may be adopted by a majority of the directors then in office and present at any regular meeting or at any special meeting, if at least two days' written notice is given of intention to alter, amend or repeal or to adopt new Bylaws at such meeting.

Dear John

Having just returned from out of town, I am disheartened about the news concerning Ginny Spindler.

John, Ginny worked tirelessly on the Stark Resource Guide. I was very impressed with her work and Rachel's as well. In fact, without their tireless efforts it would not have been a worthwhile publication. In fact, it would have been an embarrassment to the Foundation.

Your letter to Ginny was, from my point of view, unkind and uncalled for. It distressed me to see people treated in such a manner.

In my dealings with her on Education issues, I believe she has always gone "above and beyond" her duties.

I am leaving today for my Aunt's funeral in Pittsburgh.
But I couldn't leave without letting you and the Board know my feelings and deep concerns.

November 7, 1999 CONFIDENTIAL

MEMORANDUM to the Board of the Terra Foundation

On my return from Moscow, I find the concerns that I expressed to all of you both prior to our meeting and at the meeting itself have now come true. We are once again embarked on an argument that is seriously dividing the Board and keeping us from carrying on the fulfillment of our mandate. This is due in my opinion to the hasty action of transferring authorities without each of the members taking the time to get properly briefed on the functions and the activities of the previous Board leadership. I am not counting in this the charges made by Alan Simpson, which I can only describe as off the wall. Thus, after what I had seen as progress at our recent retreat, we are now engaged in a review of past history and not focused on the search for a President. So be it.

I would like to state for the record that I agree with the description of events and actions in Jim Collins' memorandum. I have always said to you that, despite my occasional differences with Jim, this Foundation owes him a debt of gratitude for the effective and scrupulously honest way that he has brought our finances together. If anything, his memo understates the efficient and creative effort that he and his colleagues made to assure that the intentions of Dan Terra (as he directly related it to me) to leave the bulk of his estate to this Foundation, was carried out. Lest we forget, that was and is the duty of all those on this Board. (Here I must say that I found Alan's statements totally out of line and contrary to the law under which this Foundation is chartered in the State of Illinois.) Some of our new members might not have been present when we briefed the Board (and sought appropriate approval) on the various stages of the settlement of the estate and the sale of assets. The reason for the participation of special counsel—Scott McCue and Ty Fahner—a former Attorney General of Illinois—was to assure ourselves that our duties were being properly carried out. Since Dan had put me on the Lawter Board, I was particularly concerned that there might even be the appearance of a conflict of interest with my position as President/Chairman of the Foundation. On the advice of special counsel, I was always careful to tell my colleagues what actions were proper for me to take and those on which I had to recuse myself. Jim did the same. But we were both able to work with the Lawter Board to get them first to buy back the estate shares and then, finally, to help in the mutually advantageous sale of Lawter itself to Eastman Chemical. Jim's efforts in all these endeavors, to say nothing of his handling of Dan's outstanding bank loans, saved this Foundation millions of dollars in assets which might have been lost or reduced in value. These efforts were at all times in the interest of this Foundation. And I reject any notion that his efforts on our behalf met anything other than the highest ethical standards.

Several of you have commented on the question of continuity. As I informed you, I was in the process of attempting to effect a seamless transition on the financial side by hiring A.T. Kearney to search for a Vice President for Finance and Administration in order to provide the necessary continuity in the functions that Jim had performed. I did this with complete accord of the Finance Committee even though we all recognized that such a hire should logically follow that of the President. The intention was to assure that our Finance Committee and Chairman would have the most competent professional advice at all times. This was naturally to be followed by the election of a Board member as Treasurer. I hope this process will continue but I fear our current controversy may make that search more difficult. In any case, it is urgent to build into the Foundation staff an ability to backstop our Finance Committee and to look after our resources properly.

With respect to the Secretary, Stephanie should obviously have access to all records. This too was in process as I read Dean's memo after his conversations with a senior partner in Bell/Boyd. Incidentally, these records are not only at Bell/Boyd, as Cathy could have told anyone willing to be briefed. They are also indexed and in the possession of the Foundation. On the subject of counsel, I should point out that Jim Collins was not our sole resource at Bell/Boyd. Rick Sevcik has been of invaluable assistance to us on matters as varied as getting employment manuals and human relations policies in place in the Chicago Museum to settling employment issues in France and the U.S. Others in the firm have helped us with many problems that have arisen because the Foundation and its properties were not in the best shape from a documentary and regulatory point of view when Dan died. He had many great qualities but as with other founders he was more focused on long-term objectives and was very impatient with what he considered bureaucratic detail. We can thank Jim and his staff for getting much of this straightened out, with help from Cathy. On personnel issues, several of these are still outstanding and require continuity of treatment.

As you all know, I spent a great amount of time over the last six months, particularly on the problems of Chicago. It is essential that these matters be dealt with and followed through along the lines that on behalf of the Foundation I have set out contractually with John Neff. We should not let our current discussions deflect us from the progress that has been made. I clearly have much less concern about MAAG than I do about Chicago which is not well led. Again, someone must pick up with Cathy to prevent this situation from deteriorating.

You may ask if I have any positive suggestions. My feeling at this point is that the Chairman/President should call another Board meeting prior to January 18th to review our proposed candidates for President, the status of the search for a Vice President for Finance and Administration and thrash out the other matters before us. This would get us back to the point I thought we had reached at the end of our retreat.

Terra Foundation
Board Meeting
Minutes
August 24, 2000

In attendance by Conference Call:

Dr. Paul Tucker, Chair
Hon. Jacques Andreani
Mr. Dean Buntrock
Mrs. Margaret Daley
Senator Alan Simpson
Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Jr.
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall
Mrs. Judith Terra

By Invitation:
Mr. Mark Heatwole
Mr. Ralph Lerner

Staff:

Mr. Donald Ratner

By Invitation:

Dr. Derrick Cartwright
Dr. John Hallmark Neff

The meeting was called to order at 1:08 PM. Dr. Tucker indicated that the purpose was to review the four proposals and detailed data we had received from our four potential partners allow us to be better prepared for the September meeting. The minutes from the August 7, 2000 Strategic Plan meeting were reviewed and unanimously approved by the Strategic Planning Committee.

There were significant discussions around whether Giverny was "central" to the focus of the Foundation's mission. A decision was made to examine this question at the Board meeting in September.

Dr. Stebbins suggested that we had already decided on the central importance of Giverny.

Dr. Tucker reviewed the background that resulted in the decision of making Giverny central. Mr. Buntrock indicated that he saw that there is a difference between the importance of Giverny and making it central. Dr. Marshall discussed alternatives at this point:

1. Agree that there are unresolved issues and put them aside and then look at the proposals in front of us; or
2. Focus on the issues and then refer them back to a small group to make a presentation at the next meeting and end the call now.

Dr. Marshall agreed that we had not discussed the centrality of Giverny as a Board but had discussed it in Strategic Plan Committee meetings and that Committee has come to the conclusion of Giverny as being central.

Dr. Marshall also suggested we ask Helene to write "her perception of Dan's vision of Giverny". In other words, what is the purpose of Giverny?

Dr. Cartwright indicated that he has Helene's paper and will send it out as soon as Helene reviews it.

The Board asked Dr. Cartwright to write his view of Giverny's future relating to education.

Mrs. Daly said that she did not recall that we had discussed "abandoning" Chicago.

Dr. Tucker indicated that the thinking had gone along these lines:

- The Chicago facility needs a great deal of money to be brought up to par with other museums;
- There are problems with the Chicago museum's configuration;
- We have a problem attracting attendance in Chicago;
- There is considerable cost involved in supporting the Chicago museum;
- The collection is not adequate to be split between two institutions;
- Therefore, the best way to maximize our resources and fulfill our mission is to align with another institution, close the Chicago museum and focus on Giverny and educational initiatives of the Foundation.

Mr. Buntrock said that we had never discussed this at the Board level.

Dr. Tucker agreed but noted that it was a conclusion of the Strategic Planning Committee and that they were going to make a recommendation to the Board.

Dr. Marshall said that we could make a decision on this call if we so chose. She further indicated that we should make sure that there are two issues on the agenda at the September meeting:

- Giverny as being central;
- Closing Chicago

Dr. Tucker suggested that we definitely make a decision in September.

Dr. Marshall suggested we change the order of the agenda to go through Ralph's contract. Mr. Andreani indicated that two of the proposals need more detail. Mr. Lerner then discussed the strategic alliance contract. One premise of his draft was that there would be no museum in the U.S. and that would relieve us of the administrative burden of running that museum. He also indicated that the education portion had not yet been sufficiently developed. And the final premise was that we would ultimately turn the works of art over to the new/aligned institution.

Mr. Lerner walked the Board through each part of the draft contract. From that review there emerged the following items:

1. Ownership of the collection. Would it be donated and who holds title.
2. Where the collection would be housed, how much would be exhibited and for how long.
3. The question of a study center.
4. The question of office space.
5. Whether we should contribute money for construction or a naming opportunity.
6. Who would curate the collection and who that person would work for.
7. On what subjects the aligned institution would have to consult with the Terra Board.
8. What works should never be sold.
9. Issues regarding exhibitions, publications, etc. resulting from the possible alliance.
10. How the acquisition fund should be handled and who should maintain control of it.
11. Educational issues.
12. The status of the art at Giverny and what needs to stay there permanently versus what might rotate.

The Board concluded that it will have to address the above 12 issues as well as the issue of determining a strategic partner.

Mr. Ratner was asked to finalize the above list and send it out with the minutes by the end of next week.

At the September meeting, we need to be prepared to discuss what qualities of the educational programs we want to have included in this plan.

Dr. Marshall asked if we should send out an RFP to all four suitors on education. Senator Simpson suggested that we need to decide what we want as opposed to what they're going to give us.

Dr. Tucker suggested that the next step should be the following:

1. Get proposals on education from the four institutions as to how they would see working with the Foundation.
2. Equalize the general portion of the proposals on affiliation from all four institutions.

3. Get more information on the existing educational programs of the four institutions.

4. Reduce the four institutions to two or three and then focus on those and discuss.

In September we will need:

1. White papers on education from any Board member who would like to prepare one.

2. Educational information.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00 PM.

Respectively submitted,

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT AT LAW

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson complain of the

16di-004682

Defendants Dean Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz, Margaret Daley, Arthur Hartman, Stephanie Pace Marshall, Theodore Stebbins, James R. Donnelley, Marshalll Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada, Frederick A. Krehbiel, James E. Ryan, Floyd D. Perkins, the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Foundation"), Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin as follows:

Preliminary Statement

1. Through this action, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson seek to vindicate both the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder Daniel J. Terra. The plaintiffs complain that certain directors of the Foundation are irreconcilably conflicted and have willfully and wantonly breached their fiduciary obligations by pursuing a course of action antithetical to the best interests of the Foundation and inconsistent with both the purpose of the Foundation and the clearly expressed intentions of its founder. These breaches of fiduciary duty were aided by – and even induced by – the illegal conduct of the Illinois Attorney General and his assistant. Indeed, as we set out more fully below, the improvident conduct of the Attorney General not only induced breaches of fiduciary duty but constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law and an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech. The Foundation's interests have been further compromised by the conflicted interests of several Directors and various counsel who purported to, but did not, represent and counsel the Foundation free of improper influence

2. The plaintiffs have been unlawfully denied the opportunity to bring these claims in other litigation. As a result, this case is filed to secure relief – a declaratory judgment, injunctive relief and damages – in order to halt the perversion of the Foundation's mission which has been the direct result of the defendants' conduct.

Nature of the Case

3. On June 29, 2001, the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, by a conflicted majority, voted to accept a settlement of this litigation that would chain the Foundation to Chicago for 50 years and install a majority of Illinois residents on its Board. As the dissenting board members stated before the vote, this acquiescence to the extraordinary intrusions by the State of Illinois into the Foundation's affairs was ultra vires and an utter abdication of the Board's fiduciary responsibilities. Yet six board members, some with personal conflicts, none acting in the best interests of the Foundation, chose to vote in favor of a proposal that—if allowed to stand—will do violence to the clear vision of an American philanthropist and set a chilling precedent for all not-for-profit corporations.

4. The Foundation's existing bylaws, written under the direction of the founder Daniel J. Terra, encourage the world-wide dissemination of its art and the artistic accomplishments of American artists. Yet six Board members voted to impose parochial new rules that would prevent the Foundation from moving across state boundaries, preclude it from displaying its collection permanently outside Chicago, force it to relinquish control of its assets to another Chicago-based museum, and pack its board with native sons instead of seeking out the finest art experts worldwide. None of these restrictions were ever envisioned by Mr. Terra; indeed, they are antithetical to the Foundation's charter and its founder's demonstrated intentions.

5. Earlier litigation and a mediation process compromised by conflicts of interest became a vehicle for a power grab by the Attorney General of the State of Illinois and

16di-004684

Assistant Attorney General Floyd D. Perkins, who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws. Through threats of investigation and legal action—including the threat of suing pivotal board members - Perkins has used his official powers to compromise and conflict certain members of the Foundation's Board of Directors such that the Foundation's right of self-governance, its right to control its own assets, and its right to freedom of speech have been effectively nullified. The Attorney General's conduct has unlawfully interfered with the conduct of the Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, through a pattern of harassment, threats and acts of intimidation under color of law, which has deprived and threatens further to deprive Plaintiffs of (1) their freedom of speech, in violation of the First Amendment; (2) their property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (3) rights under the commerce and contracts clauses of the Constitution. Through this unlawful conduct, Mr. Perkins has also induced certain Board members to violate their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

6. In approving a tainted mediation process, a conflicted majority of the Board of Directors of the Foundation have violated their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and caused the Foundation to act ultra vires. Despite irreconcilable conflicts of interest and their consequent disqualification, directors Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins have acted against the interest of the Foundations. By taking action incompatible with the Foundation's charter and wasting valuable assets and opportunities for the Foundation to carry out its mission, the Board members who approved the proposed settlement violated duties of obedience to the Foundation's purpose and best interests.

Parties

7. The Terra Foundation for the Arts is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1978 by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra. The Foundation, pursuant to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, oversees the $175 million Terra Collection of American Art and roughly $250 million in other assets.

8. Paul Hayes Tucker is Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Foundation. He is a chaired professor of art history at the University of Massachusetts Boston and a resident of Massachusetts.

9. Alan K. Simpson is a Director of the Foundation, a former United States Senator and retired Director of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and a resident of Wyoming. Senator Simpson also serves as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, which maintains assets valued in excess of $350 million.

The History of the Terra Foundation

26. Daniel J. Terra (1911-1996) was a scientist, businessman, and an art lover. Born and educated in Philadelphia and a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Terra maintained residences in Chicago and Washington, D.C. President Ronald Reagan, who appointed Mr. Terra Ambassador-at-large for Cultural Affairs, lauded his achievements in promoting education in American art nationally and internationally. Mr. Terra's collection includes hundreds of important American paintings and other works spanning the period from 1750 to 1950. Among the artists represented are John Singleton Copley, Thomas Cole, Frederic Edwin Church, George Caleb Bingham, Winslow Homer, James Whistler, John Singer Sargent, Edward Hopper, and Georgia O'Keefe.

27. In 1978, Mr. Terra formed the Foundation to hold his collection and enhance public appreciation of the arts in the broadest sense, without any geographic limitation. Its purposes, according to its original Articles of Incorporation, were > to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings . . . expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain a school of instruction and any and all artistic and technical educational fine arts courses.

Articles of Incorporation (as filed Dec. 13, 1978).

28. The Foundation, with Mr. Terra as President and Chairman of the Board, established a museum in Evanston, Illinois, in 1980. In 1987, Mr. Terra decided to move the museum to Chicago where, he hoped, it would receive a wider audience and appreciation. He created a multimillion dollar museum facility on North Michigan Avenue now worth well over $30 million. Bolstered by a belief that American cultural development and art was underappreciated abroad, in 1992 Mr. Terra founded the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny, France, the rural home of Claude Monet. He moved a substantial portion of his collection there every year from April to October. Mr. Terra insisted that the American painters, whom he honored in the museum, offered something new to the international art scene and provided a way to celebrate the cultural connection between U.S. and European art. Today, the Foundation owns substantial property in the Village of Giverny.

29. By the 1990s, Mr. Terra became concerned that his collection was underappreciated in Chicago. At an April 25, 1990, annual meeting of the Board of the Terra Museum of American Art, Mr. Terra expressed dismay over low attendance at the Chicago museum. Given his massive investment in the North Michigan Avenue property and only around 60,000 visitors per year, Mr. Terra calculated that he was spending more than $5,000 per visitor. Mr. Terra confided his concerns to friends and future Board members, such as Senator Alan Simpson, and actively investigated relocating his art collection.

30. By 1994, Mr. Terra began concrete steps to move his collection. On August 26, 1994, Mr. Terra caused the Foundation to adopt certain changes to its Articles of Incorporation, allowing the Foundation to:

> Build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad, and all components deemed advisable or necessary to provide space for these activities and exhibitions.

Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added). Mr. Terra reiterated to others, including Senator Simpson and his long-time friend Peter Solmsson of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia, that he wanted his art to achieve the broadest possible impact on the public.

31. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Terra negotiated with the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City to form a strategic alliance that would pool the Foundation's collection with those of the other two institutions and move the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington. Discussions broke down over issues relating to the Whitney Museum's control over the collection.

32. Between 1993 and 1995, Mr. Terra conducted negotiations with two Philadelphia institutions, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, concerning relocation of the collection from Chicago to Philadelphia. A deal with the former institution broke down when Mr. Terra sought to retain ownership and control over his collection; a preliminary agreement with the latter institution was signed, but not finalized.

33. In 1996, the last year of his life, Mr. Terra focused intently on Washington, D.C., where he then resided. He expressed to many colleagues a desire to move the Foundation to Washington. In early 1996, Mr. Terra hired a real estate agent and bought a building on Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown to serve as the new interim corporate headquarters of the Foundation. At the same time, Mr. Terra commissioned an architect to draw plans and obtain zoning permits for a new museum facility and headquarters on his existing property on Connecticut Avenue, which were completed in May 1996. Phone lines, name plates, furniture and other items were purchased for the new property. Mr. Terra even distributed change of address forms to friends and colleagues announcing the move of the Foundation's headquarters to the Thomas Jefferson street location, sometimes with his own handwritten annotations. However, Mr. Terra was unable to complete his contemplated move of the Foundation's collection because of his death in June 1996.

34. By the time of his death, Mr. Terra had left more than $100 million in art, $210 million in cash and securities, and millions in real property to the Foundation, including the valuable North Michigan Avenue museum site. Between 1996 and 1998, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to Mr. Terra's estate.

The Board Fight Over the Future of the Foundation

35. Upon settlement of Mr. Terra's estate, the Board returned to consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation. At a November 1998 meeting, Mr. Buntrock recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider options for the future of the Foundation. Mr. Gidwitz was elected chairman of this committee.

36. Paul Hayes Tucker was elected Chairman of the Board and President of the Foundation in 1999. Dr. Tucker holds a Ph.D. in the History of Art from Yale University and teaches Art History at the University of Massachusetts where he is a chaired professor and a leading expert on Claude Monet. Other current members of the 11-member Board of Directors include Mr. Terra's widow, Judith Terra; former U.S. Senator Alan Simpson, recently retired as Director of the Institute for Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall, president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy; Margaret Daley, wife of Mayor Richard M. Daley; Jacques Andreani, former French Ambassador to the United States; Arthur A. Hartman, former U.S. Ambassador to France and Russia; Helene Ahrweiler, former president of the Sorbonne and the Georges Pompideu Center in Paris;

Dr. Theodore Stebbins, curator of American art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard; Dean Buntrock, former chief executive of Waste Management, Inc.; and Ronald Gidwitz, former chief executive of Helene Curtis Corporation.

37. Under Dr. Tucker's leadership, the Foundation continued active strategic planning in the year 2000, considering cooperative arrangements presented by a number of nationally recognized art institutions, based both within and outside Chicago. The Strategic Planning Committee met several times to consider options, with Mr. Gidwitz himself raising suggestions of building a new museum facility on a different site, affiliation with other museums, and closing the museum to focus on education efforts and building the collection.

38. In preparation for the Board's September 2000 annual meeting in France, Dr. Tucker encouraged members to focus on long-term planning options and circulate ideas they might have in advance of the meeting for the group to study and consider.

39. Dr. Tucker circulated a "white paper" suggesting a potential collaboration with the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. -- which attracts 6 million visitors annually, more than double that of any alternative in Chicago. Dr. Tucker presented the idea as only one way to encourage increased exposure for the collection, and he sought full consideration of other ideas. He noted, for example, that museums and localities frequently "compete" for the honor of hosting such unique and irreplaceable collections as Mr. Terra's, offering incentives to foundations that agree to provide their collections on a semi-permanent basis. Mr. Tucker thought that such a competition could bring enhanced global awareness of the collection and financial wherewithal to enhance the Foundation's ability to pursue its educational mandate throughout the world; accordingly,

Dr. Tucker encouraged members to consider the potential value of a "beauty contest" as another option.

40. At the same time, Dr. Tucker pointed out that the sale of the Chicago facility could be beneficial given that it ties up over $30 million worth of assets and requires an additional $3.5 million in annual support from the Foundation, a fact that deeply concerned Mr. Terra before his death.

The Ploy to Keep the Foundation in Chicago

41. Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock opposed Dr. Tucker's brainstorming suggestions. Instead of taking up their concerns with their colleagues, however, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock filed a lawsuit alleging that the named individual directors had breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation merely by considering the possibility of moving the collection from Chicago.

42. In their lawsuit, Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock claimed, contrary to fact, that Mr. Terra intended that the Foundation would always remain in the Chicago area. The complaint quoted news reports from 1987, the time of the move from Evanston to North Michigan Avenue, in which Mr. Terra described his enthusiasm for the new location. The complaint did not refer to Mr. Terra's 1990 statement to the Board of Directors or to any of his subsequent discussions and plans relating to relocation of the Foundation to another city. It also did not mention the 1994 amendment to the charter which permitted the Foundation to operate museums and schools "both in the United States and abroad." Based on this misleading statement of Mr. Terra's intent, the defendants alleged that the Foundation's mission was to operate a "museum of American art . . . in the Chicago area to be held in trust for the benefit of the people of the State of Illinois."

43. Attorney General James Ryan and Floyd Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General, seized upon the turmoil of the Terra Foundation Board as an opportunity to assert State control over its assets. At the inception of the lawsuit, the Attorney General filed an intervenor complaint that simply borrowed the allegations of Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. The complaint also reiterated the faulty premise -- based upon a demonstrably incorrect statement of Mr. Terra's intent -- that the Board of Directors were without authority to relocate the Foundation. The complaint sought a declaration, among other things, that "[t]he intent of Daniel Terra in creating the Terra Foundation was to operate a museum of American art in the Chicago area for the benefit of the people of Illinois and he and others who have donated to the Foundation intended and expected the Museum to remain in Chicagoland."

44. The Attorney General intervened expressly to prevent any possibility that the Board might remove the Foundation's assets from Chicago, which he described as an ultra vires act. As Assistant Attorney General Perkins has stated in an interview, he believes it is his role as assistant attorney general to see that Illinois-based charitable institutions utilize their assets in Illinois. Mr. Perkins attempts to accomplish this by seeking installment of Illinois directors on the boards of such institutions and through other restrictions. He has employed this tactic successfully in other cases, for example, that of the Regenstein Foundation. Mr. Perkins acknowledges, however, that he does not have the authority to impose Illinois-related restrictions on institutions which were created to serve broader interests, such as national and international aid organizations, even though such institutions may be based in Illinois and subject to reporting and other statutory requirements of Illinois law.

45. As authority for his intervention in that lawsuit, Mr. Perkins relied on the Charitable Trust Act (760 ILCS 55/1 et seq. (1997)) and his "common law power and duty to protect the interests of the PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS in matters pertaining to charitable assets and trusts." Whatever authority these sources of law may provide to the Attorney General, they do not permit any action to force a charitable trustee or Board member of a not-for-profit corporation to change the institution's fundamental purpose in a manner inconsistent with its charter or founder's intent. Nor do these authorities mandate that any charitable trust or not-for-profit corporation that is established in the State of Illinois must remain in Illinois, regardless of its purposes and founder's intent.

46. The propriety of the Attorney General's intervention and sole basis for authority in that case depended upon his claim that the Terra Foundation's purpose was to serve the people of Illinois, rather than a broader population. Like the other defendants, the Attorney General based this claim on selected statements of Mr. Terra to the press. A reasonable investigation of the facts would have revealed, however, that Mr. Terra did not intend that any of the assets of the Terra Foundation should be restricted geographically. Mr. Perkins did not conduct such an investigation before filing his initial complaint. For example, Mr. Perkins has admitted that when he filed that complaint he was unaware of Mr. Terra's 1994 amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the Foundation expressly stating that the Foundation's efforts shall include museums "both in the United States and abroad."

47. In January 2001, the Terra Foundation filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, noting that nothing in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws prevented Board members from considering a move of the collection, but instead encouraged simply the best possible dissemination of art, knowledge and appreciation among the public in the United States and abroad.

48. Although the true facts of Mr. Terra's intent were revealed early in litigation, and at the latest by the Foundation's motion for judgment on the pleadings, defendants and the Attorney General persisted in their efforts to capture the Foundation in Illinois. They were able to do so through a barrage of motions designed to delay the proceedings and deflect attention from the core issue of Mr. Terra's intent. Mr. Perkins and the other defendants first challenged the Board's choice of counsel and early decisions about directing and funding the litigation. Then, once the Board had selected an independent litigation committee of Dr. Stebbins and Amb. Andreani, Mr. Perkins and the other derfendants challenged Dr. Stebbins' ability to serve on this committee. These tactics had the desired effect of paralyzing the Board and placing Mr. Perkins and the other defendants in a strong position to make demands upon the Foundation, without regard to the merits of their lawsuits.

49. As the case proceeded to mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins insinuated themselves into the process in an attempt to railroad its result. Mr. Perkins pursued the goal of capturing the Foundation's assets in Illinois despite the fact that he had no basis to assert that he was seeking to preserve Mr. Terra's intent.

50. In mediation, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Perkins took several extraordinary positions that evidenced their recognition that Mr. Terra's intent was not to constrain the Foundation to Chicago. The Attorney General disagreed that the Board of Directors was governed in the use of the Foundation's funds solely by the Articles of Incorporation. He argued that those Articles were too broad to provide any meaningful purpose to the Foundation. Most strikingly, the Attorney General maintained that a not-for-profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply by virtue of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population.

51. Without legal authority and in disregard of the facts regarding Mr. Terra's intent, Assistant Attorney General Perkins demanded throughout the mediation that any settlement include a massive re-write of the Foundation's bylaws requiring it to give up its rights to self-governance, keep its collection in Chicago, and fold into an existing Chicago-based institution. Mr. Perkins demanded, among other things, that the Foundation:

a. Negotiate a partnership with the Art Institute of Chicago in which the Foundation would sell the North Michigan Avenue property to fund a new wing at the Art Institute.

b. Remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois in perpetuity.

c. Maintain and exhibit its collection in the Chicago metropolitan area in perpetuity.

d. Amend its by-laws to expand the Board to include fifteen members, a majority of whom must at all times be residents of Illinois.

52. Mr. Perkins won approval for these limitations, unsurprisingly, from Messrs. Gidwitz and Buntrock. He also gained support from Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman. But Mr. Perkins was unable to win over a majority of the Board.

53. Frustrated by the Board's resistance to his demands, Mr. Perkins resorted to using the power of his office to harass, threaten and intimidate directors and the Foundation.

These tactics were directed in particular at two key swing directors, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall.

Attacks on Dr. Stebbins

54. Since his earliest involvement with the Terra Foundation, Dr. Stebbins had supported a comprehensive approach to strategic planning that included consideration of options outside of Illinois. In 1997, before Dr. Stebbins joined the Board, he headed an advisory committee that conducted a review and analysis of the collection and reported recommendations to the Board for the future. The committee consisted of Dr. Stebbins, then curator of American paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Professor John Wilmerding, former chairman of the art department at Princeton, and Charles Moffett, former deputy director of the National Gallery and director of the Phillips Collection in Washington. In its report to the Board in February 1997, the advisory committee concluded strongly that the present building in Chicago is inappropriate as a museum. The committee envisioned three alternative scenarios for the future, two of which involved discontinuing the Chicago presence by: (1) concentrating on French operations, with the establishment of a new Terra Center for American Art and American Studies in Paris, or (2) improving the collection and housing it another American city.

55. Dr. Stebbins joined the Board in April 1998. In Strategic Planning Committee meetings until the outbreak of litigation, he continued to advocate consideration of options within and without Illinois. He was an especially strong advocate for the idea of maintaining a stand-alone museum.

56. When litigation began, Dr. Stebbins became a key figure in its conduct. Upon defendants' demand for an independent litigation committee, Dr. Stebbins and Amb.

16di-004698

Jacques Andreani were chosen from among the non-party directors to oversee the litigation on behalf of the Foundation. Because Amb. Andreani was in France at the time, Dr. Stebbins effectively controlled the litigation committee.

57. Within three weeks of Dr. Stebbins' election to the litigation committee on November 30, 2000, Mr. Perkins filed a motion to remove Dr. Stebbins from the committee on the grounds of conflict of interest. On January 22, 2001, Mr. Perkins obtained a Court order to conduct special discovery focusing on Dr. Stebbins' conduct as a director. Within two weeks of that order — and less than two weeks before a scheduled evidentiary hearing focusing upon Dr. Stebbins' conduct — the Foundation entered into mediation. With challenges to his reputation and integrity having become the central focus of the litigation, Dr. Stebbins strongly advocated directing the Foundation into mediation.

58. On March 21, 2001, Mr. Perkins circulated a draft complaint naming Dr. Stebbins as a defendant for the first time. In a cover letter, Mr. Perkins stated that the document was a draft and was not being filed, but rather supplied to set forth issues to be discussed at settlement. The draft complaint named Dr. Stebbins as a new defendant and included specific charges of impropriety against him. The allegations included alleged breaches of the duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representation of multiple parties at art auctions. The amended complaint also charged Stebbins with breaching the Code of Ethics for Professional Practices in Art Museums. The amended complaint was never filed.

59. Dr. Stebbins now knew that, if settlement was not reached, the litigation would resume, with his reputation and integrity once again the central focus, and he would become a defendant in the case.

60. On the same day that the draft complaint was distributed to counsel, the mediator circulated to the Board a revised mediation proposal, which had been formulated after reviewing the amended complaint and discussing this matter with the Attorney General. The proposal contained a requirement that the Foundation would maintain and exhibit its collection in perpetuity at the Art Institute of Chicago. According to the mediator, this provision resulted from the position of the Attorney General. Mr. Perkins had not participated in mediation sessions on March 5 and 6, but worked behind the scenes with the mediator to influence the course of mediation.

61. Dr. Stebbins, facing the threat of becoming a defendant in the lawsuit, now expressed his support for settlement. On April 2, 2001, he and Amb. Andreani prepared a letter to the mediator stating that "in order to end this destructive process, we are willing to pledge that the foundation and its collection remain in Chicago." They enclosed a settlement proposal "follow[ing] the outline" of the March 21, 2001, proposal reflecting the Attorney General's positions.

Attacks on Dr. Marshall

62. Dr. Marshall joined the Board in 1998. Like Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall held the view that the Terra Foundation was established for the broadest possible dissemination of American art. For example, at a May 10, 2000, meeting of the Strategic Planning Committee that Drs. Stebbins and Marshall attended, consensus was reached that the beneficiaries of the Foundation included the national and international public.

63. Late into the mediation process, Dr. Marshall remained a strong critic of the Attorney General's methods and proposals. In a May 20, 2001, letter to counsel for the Foundation and her fellow Board members she reported:

16di-004700

> [W]ith respect to the AG's version of the proposal, I find it unacceptable and antithetical to my understanding of the fiduciary obligations of a director with respect to the duty of diligence. My understanding of the mediation process is that a settlement agreement, if it can be achieved, is dictated by no one party and mutually constructed by all parties. The AG's version of the proposed agreement clearly lacked mutual construction.

64. In addition to serving on the Board, Dr. Marshall serves full-time as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, a highly-regarded education institution that depends on public funding for the bulk of its operating budget and is currently in the midst of a significant capital campaign.

65. After a mediation session on May 11, 2001, Mr. Perkins began to feel that several of the directors were resisting settlement and that the mediation might be unsuccessful. Mr. Perkins believed that he had been tricked into going along with mediation and had lost valuable time preparing for litigation. He began to investigate Dr. Marshall to determine if there were allegations he could make against her in this action. After reviewing public documents, Mr. Perkins purportedly developed concerns about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as president of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. He considered these issues for "a couple of days" before sending an administrative subpoena to the Academy on May 25, 2001. Mr. Perkins knew that the subpoena would come to the attention of Dr. Marshall and would "aggravate" her.

66. Mr. Perkins never informed Dr. Marshall or her counsel that the investigation had been concluded.

The Proposed Settlement and Board Approval

67. On June 29, 2001, the Board held a special meeting to consider the terms of a proposed settlement of this litigation. The settlement called for entry of a consent judgment and order implementing the Attorney General's goal of locking the Foundation in to the State of Illinois. In this regard, the proposed judgment requires:

16di-004701

a. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and corporate headquarters in Illinois;

b. For at least 50 years, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art in the Chicago metropolitan area;

c. For at least 25 years, the Foundation will require that a majority of its Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois;

d. The Foundation shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

68. Dr. Marshall, the Foundation's Treasurer and Secretary, presided at the special meeting. Other directors present were: Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker.

69. Immediately prior to the vote, several Board members made personal statements. Mrs. Terra objected that "the mediation proposal before us cannot be approved consistent with our responsibilities as Terra Foundation trustees."

> Certainly, it will destroy Dan Terra's dream of allowing this private Terra Foundation to really chart its own course, free from any kind of state intervention, which is what he always intended. And I think, finally, we're going to be destroying his goal of allowing people across this entire country and the world to view this magnificent collection of art . . . . [W]e will be sending a chilling signal to the entire foundation world as a result of this mediation proposal, that as a Board, we have invited the State of Illinois to really come in and run our Foundation . . . telling us that only Illinois residents can serve, and really depriving the Foundation of access to the most . . . outstanding voices, certainly, in the national and international art community, which is what Dan wanted so badly to have as a part of the Foundation.

70. Dr. Tucker echoed Mrs. Terra's concerns. He stated that > what I find most disturbing is the ways in which this Foundation, as a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of the state's purview.

16di-004702

> The invasion of its independence, its privacy, by . . . the Attorney General, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive.

71. At the recommendation of the Foundation's attorney, Drs. Stebbins and Marshall each addressed the issue of conflict of interest due to the Attorney General's conduct in the case. Dr. Marshall confirmed that "the Attorney General has asked the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy to respond to a fact-finding investigation," but insisted that the investigation "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board member of this Foundation."

72. Dr. Stebbins first defended his "reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity," and maintained that he had served on the Board "without any iota of a conflict of interest." He then stated that he "abhor[ed] the threatening tactics of the Attorney General." Dr. Stebbins also insisted that he was voting his "own conscience."

73. Upon the motion of Dr. Stebbins, the Board voted on whether to approve the proposed resolutions to amend the By-Laws and accept the settlement. Mr. Buntrock, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Gidwitz, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins voted in favor. Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker voted against.

74. Members of the Board of Directors of the Terra Foundation have statutory and common law fiduciary duties to the Foundation. These duties include, but are not limited to, the duty of loyalty, which encompasses the duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to act in the best interests of the Foundation; the duty of obedience to purpose, which prohibits action contrary to the purposes for which Foundation was established; and the duty to use the Foundation's assets productively and not to waste Foundation assets.

75. At least two members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement were faced with a conflict of interest. Dr. Marshall expressly acknowledged that the

16di-004703

Attorney General, the primary beneficiary of the settlement transaction, was conducting an investigation of the publicly-funded institution of which Dr. Marshall is president. Dr. Marshall reasonably could expect her vote on the settlement to influence the outcome of that investigation, either positively or negatively.

76. Dr. Stebbins also had strong personal incentives to support the settlement to the detriment of the Foundation. During the course of the litigation and corresponding public scrutiny of the Foundation's operations, he had faced charges of serious lapses of professional responsibility. In acknowledging his abhorrence of the Attorney General's tactics and vociferously defending his reputation and integrity immediately prior to the vote, Dr. Stebbins plainly identified his conflict of interest. If the mediation was unsuccessful, Dr. Stebbins would become a defendant in the case and face personal liability. Only through settlement could Dr. Stebbins hope to avoid more scrutiny which carried the threat of a potentially devastating effect on his career.

77. The Foundation's bylaws can be amended only "by a majority of the directors then in office and present" at the meeting at which the vote is taken. Because eight members of the Board were present at the June 29, 2001 meeting, the affirmative vote of five directors was required to approve the Proposed Settlement's many bylaw changes. Without the votes of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the Proposed Settlement garnered only four votes.

78. Each Board member who voted in favor of the settlement did so in violation of their fiduciary duty of obedience to the Foundation's purpose. Restricting the Foundation's art collection to isolation in Chicago for 50 years and installing a majority of Illinois residents on its Board is directly contrary to the Foundation's stated purpose in its Articles of Incorporation to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public" and to "operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad." Articles of Incorporation (Aug. 26, 1994) (emphasis added).

79. The Foundation's mission is meant to be world-wide and its board members equally diverse, not given over specially to Illinois and its citizenry. Indeed, the problems of the 50-year lock-in and Illinois-majority provisions were identified by Dr. Marshall prior to her conflict of interest arising. In her letter of May 20, 2001, she stated that because of the Foundation's "intentional national and international outreach and presence," she did "not believe any specifically defined constituency should hold a reserved majority." Dr. Marshall acknowledged that a 50-year lock-in would be a relinquishment of the Board's power to govern the Foundation when she stated that "[a]fter the stipulated period, it is the Board of the Foundation that must make decisions regarding the Foundation's future."

80. Each Board member who voted in favor of the proposed settlement also violated a duty not to waste the Foundation's assets. By eliminating the possibility of merger or partnership with a non-Chicago institution, the Board accepted a undue limitation on its negotiating power. By limiting the field of competitors for the Terra relationship, the Board would waste all the benefits that would flow from that competition, and in particular the ability to secure the most attractive possible terms for the future and for the collection to have the greatest possible impact on the art world and public education.

81. The Foundation has benefited tremendously from the participation of art experts worldwide on its board of directors -- including, among others, the curator of American art at Harvard's Fogg Museum; a leading expert on Claude Monet; and the president of a major Parisian art museum. Yet the Board majority voted in favor of a settlement under which the Foundation would forfeit the benefit of such experts in favor of a board packed with individuals whose chief virtue is that they are residents of Illinois. By limiting the pool of talent from which the Board can recruit directors, the Board would waste its opportunity to secure the best and most experienced leadership.

82. Locking the Foundation into Chicago for 50 years or any other length of time and stacking the Board with Illinois residents dangerously compromises the Foundation's flexibility to fulfill its charter. There is absolutely no guarantee that the Chicago community will provide adequate support to the Foundation over such a long period of time. If the Foundation is to remain viable it must have the flexibility to consider other venues where its collection may attract the maximum possible interest.

The August 1, 2001 Board Meeting and the So-Called "New Board Members"

83. On August 1, 2001, the Foundation's Board of Directors convened a meeting purportedly to implement the directives of the so-called "Consent Judgment and Order" erroneously entered by the Court on July 26, 2001. Even though the notice for this August 1, 2001 was both procedurally and substantively defective and failed to comply with the requirements of the Foundation's bylaws, members of the Foundation's Board – namely, directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Arhweiler, Daley, Stebbins and Hartman – attempted to conduct business. The plaintiffs, directors Tucker, Terra and Simpson, objected to the transaction of any business at the August 1, 2001 because of the procedural and substantive defects in the notice. The plaintiffs moved to adjourn the meeting. That motion was defeated. As hereinafter alleged, the law firms representing the Foundation allowed this improper meeting to be conducted despite serious and ongoing conflicts of interest.

84. During this improper August 1, 2001 Board meeting, the so-called "new board members" – defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Dr. Kathleen A. Foster, Robert s. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel – were summarily "welcomed" to the Board of the Foundation. Indeed, these purportedly "new directors" were never properly elected to the Board. The Agenda for the August 1, 2001 meeting states that these "new board members" were "elected June 29, 2001, effective as of July 26, 2001." No such election ever took place. Even the "Consent Judgment and Order," entered by the Court on July 26, 2001, states, "The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term."

85. Because defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel were not properly elected to the Board in compliance with the Consent Judgment and Order and the Foundation's bylaws, these individuals are not, in fact, directors and should therefore exercise none of the duties and obligations of directors. At least two these "new" directors have even been elected officers of the Foundation. Such election is without effect when these purported officers were not even properly elected directors in the first place.[1] Indeed, the performance of duties reserved solely for directors by these five individuals constitutes illegal and ultra vires conduct on the part of both the Foundation and the defendant directors who improperly convened and continued the August 1, 2001 meeting.

86. The failure of the Board and its directors to properly elect the so-called "new [1] As a result, any action taken by these "officers" – including the issuance of a notice for a Board meeting – is also void and without effect.

16di-004707

directors" renders all action taken by the Board at its August 1, 2001 void. Declaratory relief setting forth the failure of the Board and the defendant directors to properly elect the so-called "new directors" is therefore appropriate. In addition, the Foundation and the plaintiff directors have been injured and continue to be injured by the improper exercise of authority by the so-called "new" directors. By these "new directors" exercising authority and casting votes on the Foundation's board without having been properly elected, the Foundation acts without any legitimate authority while the plaintiffs' lawful participation as directors and/or officers of the Foundation's board has been improperly restricted.

The Debilitating Conflicts of the Foundation's Law Firms

87. Throughout this fight over the future of Daniel Terra's vision, the Foundation has been represented by two law firms, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin. Despite the obligations imposed by the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct regarding conflicts, these two firms have engaged in the Foundation's representation – and have continued with that representation – despite obvious and foreseeable actual and potential conflicts of interest.

88. Specifically, Winston & Strawn continues to engage in the concurrent, adverse representation of the Foundation and at least one of the defendant directors. Winston & Strawn has continued this hopelessly conflicted representation under the misguided theory that it acts only as "corporate" counsel for the Foundation and has played no role in the litigation between the Foundation and its director client. Such a theory is belied by the facts which plainly demonstrate that Winston & Strawn has provided – and continues to provide – substantive legal counsel to the Foundation on matters directly related to litigation tactics and outcomes. As a result, Winston & Strawn has breached its fiduciary obligations to the Foundation and its directors and has violated the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct.

89. Sidley & Austin has engaged in similar conduct. Specifically, Sidley & Austin has been accused – by two defendant directors in this litigation – of breaching its responsibilities to the Foundation throughout the underlying fight over the Foundation's future. Indeed, the defendant directors have even submitted an expert affidavit that concludes that Sidley & Austin is unable to provide the Foundation with independent professional advice given its conflicts of interest. Sidley & Austin has even undertook the representation of one of the directors – defendant Stebbins – just after Floyd Perkins and the Attorney General circulated allegations against that director making it perfectly clear that the Foundation and Stebbins were directly adverse. Despite such an obvious and foreseeable conflict, Sidley & Austin represented director Stebbins, provided him with counsel and, on his behalf, informed the other parties that director Stebbins would not submit for an interview regarding the allegations of Perkins and the Attorney General. At the time Sidley & Austin refused to submit Stebbins for an interview, Sidley & Austin knew that submitting for such an interview was in the best interests of the Foundation.

90. Both Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have compounded their breaches of fiduciary duty and violations of applicable ethical rules by continuing to represent the Foundation despite unresolved conflicts of interest. Indeed, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have pursued their own interests at the expense of the Foundation by failing to challenge the other firm's representation of the Foundation in the face of such obvious and debilitating conflicts. On at least two occasions, counsel for the plaintiffs has written to Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn requesting information regarding the law firms' adverse, concurrent representation of the both the Foundation and one or more of its directors. Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn have refused to provide any information.

91. In seeking to represent the Foundation, Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin were obligated to competently pursue the Foundation's interests free of any conflicts as mandated by their fiduciary obligations and applicable provisions of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct. Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have breached their fiduciary duties and obligations and violated the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct in at least the following respects:

a. By Engaging in Conflicts of Interest in Violation of Rule 1.7

Winston & Strawn's and Sidley & Austin's concurrent representation of individual board members whose conduct was alleged to be in conflict with the interests of the Foundation place these firms in a position whereby their representation of the Foundation was materially limited by the obligations to such board members and by their own interests in seeking to maintain their relationship as counsel to both the Foundation and the individual board members; and

b. By Failing to Competently and Diligently Represent the Foundation's Interests in Violation of Rules 1.1, 1.3 and 1.4

Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that serious allegations of breaches of fiduciary duty were asserted against one or more board members; Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that allegations of their own conflicts had not been fully developed, investigated and resolved; Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that at a critical stage in the mediation process potential conflicted interests of the designated mediator warranted evaluation, discussion and, as necessary, appropriate remedial action; and Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin knew that each of the above circumstances as well as the improvident intervention of the Attorney General warranted competent, diligent and thorough discussion and evaluation by independent counsel. Nonetheless, both Winston and Sidley failed to advise the Foundation to seek such independent advice.

92. The inaction and conduct of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin have compromised the interests of the Foundation as well as the interests of the plaintiffs and have directly and proximately caused damage and injury including but not limited to the imposition of legal fees and expenses all of which could have been avoided had the Foundation had the benefit of unconflicted independent counsel.

93. The actions and conduct of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin continue to cause damage and injury to the plaintiffs in that they are aiding and abetting further and continuing actions of the defendant directors as herein alleged.

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

Count I - Declaratory Relief

94. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

95. An actual and justiciable controversy exits between the parties as defined by 735 ILCS 5/2-701.

96. As directors of the Terra Foundation, Plaintiffs have donated their time, efforts and resources to accomplish the mission of the Foundation.

97. Plaintiffs have a fiduciary duty to see that the Foundation acts lawfully and in obedience to its charter and purpose, and to protect the Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement and unlawful interference with its rights.

16di-004711

98. The conduct of the Defendants alleged herein has caused and will continue to cause irreparable harm to the to the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries in the United States and abroad.

99. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law and request that this Court enter a judgment declaring as stated in the prayer for relief below.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) A declaration that the settlement is unlawful because it was not approved by the Board in accordance with Illinois law; it is the product of conflicts of interest, breaches of director fiduciary duties and unlawful interference by the Attorney General; and it is incompatible with the Foundation's purpose to propagate American art in the United States and abroad;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count II - Declaratory and Injunctive Relief

100. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

101. Plaintiffs have a fiduciary duty to see that the Foundation acts lawfully and in obedience to its charter and purpose, in compliance with its bylaws and to protect the Terra Foundation from waste and mismanagement and unlawful interference with its rights.

102. The conduct of Defendants alleged herein – specifically, the exercise of authority reserved solely for directors by defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V,

16di-004712

Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel when these individual have not been properly elected members of the Foundation's board -- has caused and will continue to cause irreparable harm to the to the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries in the United States and abroad.

103. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law and request that this Court enter a judgment declaring as stated in the prayer for relief below.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) A declaration that defendants James R. Donnelley, Marshall Field V, Kathleen A. Foster, Robert S. Hamada and Frederick A. Krehbiel have not been properly elected as members of the Foundation's board in compliance with the Consent Judgment and Order and with the Foundation's bylaws; that any such exercise of authority by these defendants, having failed to become duly elected directors of the Foundation is void, without any effect and inconsistent with the governing rules of the Foundation;

(b) Injunctive relief to prevent these so-called new directors from taking any action purportedly on behalf of the Foundation when these individuals have not been properly elected to the Board and, as a result, should exercise no authority whatsoever over the Foundation;

(c) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(d) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

16di-004713

Count III - Declaratory Relief

104. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

105. Plaintiffs have a fiduciary duty to see that the Foundation acts lawfully and in obedience to its charter and purpose, in compliance with its bylaws and to ensure that the Terra Foundation secure competent legal counsel free from any conflicts of interest as mandated by Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct.

106. The conduct of Defendants alleged herein – specifically, the concurrent, adverse representation of the Foundation and at least some of its directors by Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin -- has caused and will continue to cause irreparable harm to the to the Terra Foundation and its beneficiaries in the United States and abroad. In addition, the conduct of Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin in furthering their own interests in derogation of their obligations to the Foundation should disqualify these firms from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors.

107. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law and request that this Court enter a judgment declaring as stated in the prayer for relief below.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) A declaration that the representation of the Foundation by Winston & Strawn and Sidley & Austin is, and has been, tainted by conflicts of interest in violation of Winston & Strawn's and Sidley & Austin's fiduciary duties and is inconsistent with applicable provisions of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct; and that, as a result of such obvious and foreseeable conflicts of interest, Winston & Strawn and

16di-004714

Sidley & Austin are disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred; and

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count IV - Ultra Vires Acts (805 ILCS 105/103.15)

108. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

109. The resolutions approved by six members of the Board of the Foundation on June 29, 2001, constitute acts of the Foundation taken in contravention of its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thus taken without lawful authority, capacity or power.

110. The court should enjoin the doing of such acts in this proceeding pursuant to the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a).

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment as follows:

(a) An Order enjoining the defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation;

(b) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(c) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(d) Punitive damages;

(e) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count V - Breach of Fiduciary Duty

111. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

112. A fiduciary relationship exists between the Foundation and the members of its

Board of Directors. The Board's fiduciary duties include, without limitation, the duties of acting in good faith and with due regard for the Foundation's interest, of refraining from acting in a manner adverse to the Foundation's interest, of making full disclosure of all material information in their possession, of obedience to the Foundation's purposes as established by its Articles of Incorporation, of making productive use of the Foundation's assets and opportunities, and the duties of care, loyalty, fair dealing, and honesty.

113. The Defendant Board Members who voted in favor of the proposed settlement willfully and wantonly breached some or all of these fiduciary duties because the settlement is not in the best interests of the Foundation, is inconsistent with the Foundation's charter and by-laws, and wastes assets and opportunities of the Foundation.

114. In addition, board members Stephanie Pace Marshall and Theodore Stebbins breached their duties of loyalty to the Foundation by voting in favor of a settlement which offered personal benefits having nothing to do with the interests of the Foundation.

115. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of fiduciary duty, the plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count VI - Inducing Breach of Fiduciary Duty

116. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

16di-004716

117. As set forth above, the Defendant members of the Board who voted in favor of the proposed settlement of this litigation did so in violation of their fiduciary duties to the Foundation.

118. Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins colluded with these Board members in committing breach of their fiduciary duties, or otherwise induced or participated in such breach.

119. As a direct and proximate result of this conduct, Plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Punitive damages;

(d) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Count VII - Deprivation Under Color of Law of Constitutional Rights (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

120. All foregoing paragraphs are incorporated herein by reference.

121. At all relevant times, Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins acted under color of law as Assistant Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

122. Mr. Perkins' conduct constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

123. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General constitutes an unlawful deprivation of the Foundation's rights to freedom of speech under the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

16di-004717

124. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful restraint by the State of Illinois on interstate commerce in violation of Art. I, § 8 of the Constitution of the United States.

125. The conduct of the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General has resulted in an unlawful impairment of the Foundation's contractual obligations in violation of Art. I, § 9 of the Constitution of the United States.

126. The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General engaged in such illegal conduct to the injury of Plaintiffs and the Foundation.

Prayer for Relief

Plaintiffs request that this Court to enter judgment on their behalf as follows:

(a) Damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(b) Plaintiffs' costs of suit herein, including without limitation their attorneys' fees actually incurred;

(c) Such other relief as may be just and proper.

Jury Trial Requested

127. Plaintiffs request trial by jury.

Ron Gidwitz	Hello?
Ambassador Arthur Hartman	Hello.
Gidwitz	Hello.
Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall	Yes, who's, is that Ron?
Gidwitz	Yes.
Marshall	Ron, good afternoon. Stephanie.
Gidwitz	Hi Stephanie.
Marshall	Is there anyone else on the line?
Hartman	Yes, Art Hartman is on.
Marshall	Uh, good afternoon, Arthur, where are you?

16di-004722

was prepared to ratify it, at an authorized board meeting. Uh, I also said in that letter that I believe in my heart that it does preserve the most fundamental dimensions of the Foundation's independence in determining the course of its own destiny, which I believe to be stated in the mediated agreement, although, I do believe that unprecedented restrictions have been imposed on the Foundation, as well, but I believe that a settlement, and not continued litigation is perhaps in the best interest of the Foundation and I would hope, um that the sixteen board members for this year, and the fifteen board members in the future, would see uh, the astounding opportunities that this Foundation has to make a mark, uh, not only in this country, but around the world. And I would hope that we would in fact commit uh to uh to ensuring that the vision of Dan Terra remain not only alive, but burn very brightly. Are there any other, any other points of discussion?

Heatwole — Stephanie?

Marshall — Yes.

Heatwole — Mark Heatwole. Just one last item, before you vote. And I think this is important, and Judith touched on it, and Stephanie, you touched on it in your comments as well. In light of the allegations that have been uh brought forward in the federal court yesterday, to a certain extent, I was not there, but I understand that sort of the same substantive comments were made in the Cook County Courts this morning, about the coercion um that uh some members of this board may feel uh, or may not feel, uh from the action of the attorney general. I think it's important for each one of you to, I think, indicate before you take this vote, that you are voting freely, and you are voting with your fiduciary obligations to this board and this institution and without, and without that pressure. And if anyone feels they can't do that, I don't think you should vote. But if you are voting freely, and if you do not feel that compulsion, then, I think you are free to vote. And I, I think the board ought to be on record and everybody ought to be clear that this vote is being taken without that pressure, without that, um impediment.

Marshall — Well, Mark, are you asking then, for a statement, or a comment, because I certainly can, can comment on what you just said.

Heatwole — The comment was directed really to you and Ted.

Marshall — OK.

Heatwole — But in a general way to everyone. Because you do have fiduciary obligations to this institution. Um, which transcend your obligations to other, other facts. And, uh, each one of you should examine that, I think Judith brought that to the fore, Stephanie, you echoed it, but since the allegations have been made, I think it's important to be on the record, that if anyone feels that they can't vote that way, I think they should abstain. So, having said that, if you vote, I assume that means you are not doing so um feel freely

16di-004723

Marshall

Well, I, let me just make a personal comment, just in response to what you just said, Mark. I have felt in the past that uh, despite the desire of some board members, uh, over the last year or so, to try to peg me into an alleged camp or an alleged side, one side or the other, I have always walked uh, my own path, and I have always spoken with my own voice, uh, to represent the integrity of my own convictions. Uh, I have done it throughout this arduous process, and I do so now, with full knowledge of my fiduciary responsibilities. It is true, that the attorney general's office has asked the Illinois mathematics and science academy to respond to a fact finding investigation. This has not played a part in my decision making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities, as a board member of this Foundation. I believe now, as I have said before, that this motion and settlement to be in the best long-term and sustainable interest of this remarkable Foundation. Ted, I don't know, if you want to make a comment as well.

Stebbins

I'd just, I'd like to say, that I came to the board, like Stephanie, and everyone else, as a volunteer. Um, I came to the board, at, I knew Dan Terra, I came to the board at the request of Jim Collins and Judith Terra, I've served as chair of the collections committee, and I think I've served effectively. And I've brought some wonderful new paintings, helped bring some wonderful new paintings to the Foundation collection. I've done this without any iota of a conflict of interest. I value my reputation, both as a scholar and as someone of complete integrity, very very highly, and I think I'm well known for both those uh things. Uh, I've last when I've always felt free to form my own judgments, and last either August or early September, um, when Paul Tucker told me first about his enthusiasm for the building in Washington, and wanting to move there, I disagreed. I long argued to explore a variety of stand-alone options in Chicago, I was willing to consider as part of the strategic planning going elsewhere, but I've always been a defender of Chicago. Uh, like Arthur, I at the board meeting in Giverny, on September 25, I guess it was, 2000, when we learned of the suit, I argued for a total board replacement. Um, at the same time, I abhor the personalized suit brought by the plaintiffs. Unnecessary. I feel very very sympathetic for Judith Terra. I lament the behavior of Senator Simpson. I'm very saddened by the behavior of Paul Tucker. I abhor the threatening tactics of the attorney general, but I am voting my own conscience, and for what I believe is the best interests of the Foundation for its future as an independent, viable force in Chicago, and in France. For the promulgation of American art.

16di-004724

Marshall — Is there anyone who has a statement, uh, to make, otherwise I will, I think it's appropriate that we now call for, call the question.

Tucker — I'd like to make a statement, Stephanie.

Marshall — Paul is that you?

Tucker — That's me.

Marshall — OK.

Tucker — Um, I, it's painful to hear, the comments that have been made, and in many quarters, although I admire the honesty about it all. I think it's very difficult to be able to predict the future in any form or fashion. None of us could have thought we would be at this particular juncture when we all joined the board. Maybe some did, I don't know, but I certainly didn't. And I don't think Ted did, or Stephanie did. And I applaud their efforts to try to be able to find the right way to act in these difficult causes. But I find most disturbing is the ways in which uh, this Foundation is a not-for-profit entity, is in fact going to become part of uh, the state's purview. Uh, the invasion of its independence, its privacy, of a, a public domain, i.e., the hand of the attorney general, I find repugnant. I find it detrimental and offensive, I find it also counter to the very foundations on which foundations and America as a whole are supposed to be founded, which is why I protested this mediation will continue to do so. Uh, I also find it, uh, disturbing that the um, resolution, um calls for the continued presence of uh the Illinois factions, not that they're not wonderful people in Illinois, certainly more than enough to handle all of this, but I think that that should have been our choice, not somebody else's choice. Uh, and that compromise of our independence is something which uh I think again goes right to the heart of the matter. I think that everybody's consciences have been articulated with grace and conviction, and I think that that is appropriate. But I also believe, in the end, that there are serious principles, uh particularly that of the ways in which a foundation is supposed to operate, which are deeply compromised by this mediation and this process. And I think that it is in the end a sad day for uh the Foundation, and ultimately a sad day in the larger case for the ways in which the state interferes with uh private property.

Marshall — Uh,

Hartman — I I really would like to make one further, short comment. And that is that foundations are established under certain laws, and have to meet certain requirements. Their responsibilities are to the people, uh, of the jurisdiction, that has permitted them to set up these tax free organizations. Therefore, I do not see that an oversight by such authorities is out of order. Thank you.

16di-004725

Marshall	I think it's time for us to call the question, so we will now proceed to a role call vote on the motion. Uh, and I guess the question is, uh, OK, Mr. Jacques, not here, Helene, not here, Dean,
Buntrock	I vote yes.
Marshall	Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron
Gidwitz	Yes
Marshall	Arthur
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Stephanie, yes. Alan, Ted
Stebbins	Yes.
Marshall	Judith
Terra	No
Marshall	Paul
Tucker	No.
Marshall	Paul?
Tucker	No, Steph.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, I didn't hear you, Paul.
Tucker	That's OK.
Marshall	Um, the motion has been passed by six board members, uh, we now need a motion for adjourn.
Stebbins	I move to adjourn.
Marshall	Oh, I'm sorry, is there, the agenda did say, any new business. Is there any new business which needs to come before this board at this time? Hearing none, uh, we need a motion to adjourn.
Stebbins	So moved.
Marshall	Is that Ted?
Hartman	Second
Marshall	Second, I'm sorry, Dean?
Buntrock	No, that was Arthur.
Marshall	Oh, Arthur.
Hartman	Yes.
Marshall	Do we need a roll call? Uh, role call for the motion? Dean.

16di-004726

Buntrock	Uh, I move to ad, we adjourn, or uh, I vote to adjourn.
Marshall	OK, yes. Maggie.
Daley	Yes.
Marshall	Ron.
Gidwitz	Yes.

SIMPSON, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, and the TERRA FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS, an Illinois Not-For-Profit Corporation, Defendants.

NOTICE OF APPEAL

NOW COME the defendants, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, JUDITH TERRA and ALAN K. SIMPSON, by their attorneys, CUMMINS & CRONIN, LLC. and NOVOSELSKY LAW OFFICES, and appeal to the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, from order of July 26, 2001 in its entirety (Exhibit "A").

By this appeal, defendants, PAUL HAYES TUCKER, JUDITH TERRA and ALAN K. SIMPSON, will ask the Appellate Court to vacate the order of July 26, 2001. In the alternative they will ask the Court to vacate the order and remand this cause for a new hearing, or will seek such other relief that that Court shall deem just and proper.

Respectfully submitted,

CONSENT JUDGMENT AND ORDER

This case having come before the Court upon the Complaints of, in the first instance, Dean L. Buntrock and Ronald Gidwitz and, in the second instance, The People of the State of Illinois, ex rel. James E. Ryan, Attorney General of Illinois, the Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") having moved for judgment on the pleadings, defendants Sen. Alan Simpson, Dr. Paul Tucker and Mrs. Judith Terra having filed a verified answer to the complaints by leave of Court on July 24, 2001, and defendant Mr. Naftali Michaeli having filed a verified answer; the plaintiffs Mr. Dean Buntrock and Mr. Ronald Gidwitz, the Foundation and the Illinois Attorney General having reached an agreement to settle this dispute pursuant to Mediation ordered by this Court, it is hereby ORDERED as follows:

1. This Court has personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of these actions.

2. Plaintiffs Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, the Illinois Attorney General and the defendant Foundation now desire to resolve these disputes amicably and without the necessity of further proceedings in these actions. To that end, the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois hereby release and discharge the Terra Foundation for the Arts, its officers, directors, agents and employees, and the Foundation hereby releases and discharges the Plaintiff Directors and the People of the State of Illinois from any and all claims and obligations of any kind or nature raised in or related to the matters raised in this lawsuit, whether in pleadings, motions or argument, other than those obligations set forth herein.

3. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall remain an Illinois corporation, maintain its principal office in, and have its corporate headquarters in Illinois. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall also maintain its books and records in Illinois, which shall be available to the Attorney General of Illinois for inspection during normal business hours upon reasonable advance notice to the Foundation.

4. The Foundation shall conduct its affairs in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws (including promoting American art and culture in the U.S. and abroad) and the laws of the State of Illinois and act consistently with these undertakings. The Foundation remains free to determine how best to achieve its goals, including (without limitation) where and to whom to make grants.

5. For at least fifty years from the entry of this Order, the Foundation shall maintain and exhibit the Terra Collection of American Art ("the Collection"), either by itself or through partnerships or arrangements with other institutions, in the Chicago metropolitan area. If at any time thereafter the Foundation desires to maintain and exhibit the Collection elsewhere, to cease being an Illinois corporation or to cease maintaining its principal office, corporate headquarters and books and records in Illinois, it shall first give one year's advance written notice to the Attorney General of Illinois of its intent, which notice may be given before or after the end of such fifty-year period. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Attorney General's ability to take whatever action he or she deems appropriate in response to receipt of any such notice. The Foundation shall remain free to manage the Collection as it deems appropriate including to provide art for display in Giverny, France, and for special exhibits and programs and for scholarly use, to make loans and to acquire works for, and de-accession works from, the Collection. Nothing herein shall be deemed to interfere in any way with the Foundation's ability and freedom to continue to conduct its activities, operations and programs in Giverny, France, which ability and freedom the Illinois Attorney General specifically acknowledges and agrees to.

6. The Foundation shall amend its By-Laws to:

a. expand the Board by August 1, 2001, to include fifteen members (except that for the first year the Board may include up to sixteen members);

b. institute initial staggered terms of one, two, three and four years for all Directors with subsequent terms of four years each, and each of the fifteen Board members shall be elected to a term of one, two, three or four years as the Board determines appropriate for each Director elected, subject to the requirement that each of the five new Directors serve an initial term of four years; and

c. establish term limits for all Directors, with no member serving more than eight years after entry of this Order.

7. The Foundation shall reserve and require that, for at least twenty-five years from entry of this Order, a majority of the Board positions be at all times held by residents of Illinois, with the exception that until the 2002 Annual Meeting or December 31, 2002, whichever occurs first, fifty per cent of such Board positions shall be held by Illinois residents.

8. All current members of the Board of Directors will serve only until the 2002 Annual Meeting and will not be eligible to stand for election to the Board of Directors at any time thereafter.

9. The Foundation will add to its Board the following five Directors, each of whom shall be elected to serve an initial term of four years and be eligible for election to one additional four-year term:

a. James R. Donnelley

b. Marshall Field V

c. Dr. Kathleen A. Foster

d. Prof. Robert S. Hamada

e. Frederick A. Krehbiel

10. The new Chairman of the Board shall be chosen from among the five new Directors.

16di-004733

11. As soon as practicable after the new Directors have taken office, new officers and committee heads shall be elected. The new Executive Committee shall be composed of the newly elected officers and committee heads. The new Strategic Planning Committee shall include Messrs. Gidwitz and Stebbins and one or more of the new Directors and shall try to negotiate a partnership with another Chicago metropolitan area institution with the goal of ceasing to operate a stand-alone museum in Chicago.

12. Reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the Foundation's Directors in connection with this lawsuit, as determined by the Court, shall be paid by the Foundation.

13. These actions are hereby dismissed with prejudice, without any admission of wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Foundation or any of its Directors, each of whom specifically denies any wrongdoing or liability. The Court retains jurisdiction over the actions and the parties solely for purposes of enforcing the terms of this Consent Judgment And Order and for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction and effectuation of this Consent Judgment And Order.

14. The Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General, and the Foundation agree to the mutually-acceptable press release attached as Exhibit A, and agree that no other public statement shall be made by the Plaintiff Directors, the Attorney General or the Foundation or any of their attorneys, agents or employees on their behalf regarding the Litigation, the mediation or the settlement.

JOINT PRESS RELEASE re BUNTROCK et. al. v. TERRA FOUNDATION, et al.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased to announce that a settlement has been reached and adopted by the Court.

The settlement will preserve the public's access, here in Chicago, to The Terra Foundation's collection for no less than 50 years. The Foundation will continue to manage its affairs, to operate its museum and programs in Giverny, France, and to promote understanding of and appreciation for American art. The Attorney General is satisfied that the settlement upholds the interests of the people of the State of Illinois. The plaintiffs and the Foundation are pleased that a settlement could be reached.

The plaintiffs and the Foundation have agreed to let this statement stand alone. No further statements are to be made.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS had in the above-entitled cause, before the HONORABLE DOROTHY KIRIE KINNAIRD, Judge of said Court, in Courtroom 2302, on the 24th day of July, A.D. 2001, at the approximate hour of 4:30 o'clock p.m.

intimidation of Dr. Stebbins in this case. And I just simply don't see it. I have carefully considered all of the objections. I have read every bit, even though they weren't supposed to file it, every bit of the history of the Foundation, the intent of Dan Terra, information that was given by these objectors.

And I do not see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical -- I am reading from the document -- antithetical to the Foundation's purposes. And that it precludes the Foundation from recruiting the best and brightest worldwide to serve on the Board.

This is not a very limiting document as far as this Foundation is concerned. This Foundation is going to be able to pretty much operate the way that it has. It will be able to conduct its mission of providing education and art throughout the world and, yes, the Board is going to change.

Yes, I wish some of these Board members weren't leaving, but that's not for me to say. Yes, I hope that many of them, including the defenants, may continue to be involved in this Foundation.

But I don't read this Consent Decree as the restrictive document that counsel for the defendant has said that it is.

I think this collection can be moved around and loaned and shown throughout the world and everybody, including the people of the State of Illinois, are going to benefit from that.

I do have a very severe problem. And I won't sign a piece of paper that has that last sentence on it, that says no other public statement shall be made. So that has to be changed with combining the two sentences and putting in the words, "and these parties have agreed."

And I won't sign it unless -- I don't want to sign a red line or a sloppily-written document today. I want that first paragraph corrected so that it says who filed answers, including defendant Michaeli, who is not mentioned in here. Everybody who has filed a current responsive pleading.

And as far as I am concerned, I have no problem allowing these defendants leave to file their answer and that can be put in there, this action. And that's without prejudice to them bringing any other separate lawsuit that they may see may be appropriate in any valid cause of action that they may have against any individual. But it's not part of this case.

This Foundation was lucky enough to have one of the most experienced and capable mediators. I did not really believe that this case could be mediated successfully to conclusion.

At the time that it went out, I had some very, very strong doubts. I believe this is a just and appropriate conclusion. I do not see it as a case in which there has been abuse of power and I definitely don't see it as a case in which the State has tried and succeeded to take control of a charitable foundation.

The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation, as being alleged in the papers. And this Court is going to be able to continue to operate the way they have.

The big difference is that this Board is now going to be able to operate. There will be a functional Board, which there has not been for almost a year now. And the Board will be able to

THE COURT: I am not putting a Finding of Fact in this order. I am saying that I am not seeing anything in this order, I mean in these papers, that should defeat the entry of this Consent Decree.

MR. CUMMINS: But --

THE COURT: You are free to file whatever lawsuit you want against whoever and raise whatever allegations that you want about that.

However, there is not going to be that kind of a finding. You don't want that kind of a finding in this case.

MR. CUMMINS: But you didn't address the issue of disinterestedness, as we believe that's critical. It may have come in late in the game, but that's an issue that was not addressed at the Board meeting.

No one was given advice or counsel on that at the Board meeting and that issue remains, as far as I am concerned, an issue that I presume you are overruling.

THE COURT: I am not finding that under the Illinois Not-for-Profit Act that they are an interested -- that they were interested Board members that should not have participated.

Is that what you are saying?

MR. CUMMINS: I am wanting you to make a ruling on that, yes, Judge.

THE COURT: They could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in the decision.

MR. CUMMINS: I just want to clarify that finding, because that's an issue.

MR. GARMENT: May I, your Honor, --

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. GARMENT: -- express my disappointment at your Honor's ruling, understanding what you articulated.

It is a very long distance from the commencement of this proceeding and I would like on the record to simply have it appear once again that this case started with a suit that was brought by two dissident directors, Mr. Buntrock and Mr. Gidwitz, which were not privileged documents, it would have been a very clear, very flagrant slander, because it was filled with false allegations that have been known to be false.

On the basis of that pleading, allegations that have been known to be false.

On the basis of that pleading, on the basis of that pleading, you have the Attorney General come in and bootstrap himself into a position of the intervenor, using false allegations to play a role.

What followed, your Honor, was the contentious and litigious course of conduct that led to the mediation proceeding and within the cover of the mediation proceeding and without your knowing about this, without your being consulted, without your having any knowledge, the Attorney General forced the proceedings to the point of depriving certain of the directors of this Foundation of their free and untrammeled choice.

But we must not forget where this started and where it came out. And we have a situation that reminds me briefly of a custody case where the clients said, "All I want is custody. I will be prepared to do all the cosmetic things with respect to visitation and holidays and gifts and they have custody now."

And they have made a great deal

out of all of the cosmetic changes and alterations that have nothing to do with the fundamental defect in this case that started right at its beginning, continued all the way through, and it's now finally solidified in the Judgment of the Court.

MR. QUINLAN: Your Honor, I have to object and ask the comments be stricken. Counsel has no basis to make those comments. Frankly, the only test of this has been where your Honor denied the motion to dismiss.

And they have filed an answer today, which admits there is a cause of action. So I don't know how counsel can stand in front of this Court and make his grand speech of the basis that there is something here that is totally unfounded.

The complaint was proper. It was found proper by this Court and it's now been found proper by filing an answer. And I object and ask it be stricken.

MR. CUMMINS: Well, Judge, --

THE COURT: I am not going to be striking any remarks of counsel. All of counsel's remarks may stay on the record.

And there were -- There was no

trial in this case. None of the allegations that were alleged in either of the complaints filed in this case have been proven and everyone knows that.

This case is a mediated settlement and in large part I was convinced not only about the skill of the mediator but also the fact that all parties in this mediation process had counsel available to them and including the conflicted -- alleged conflicted Board members.

And there is nothing in anything that I have received here that makes me believe that discovery is necessary or anything is further necessary to investigate in this case any alleged conduct. I just simply don't see it.

MS. STONE: Housekeeping matter, your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: Judge, before --

THE COURT: Yes, housekeeping.

MR. CUMMINS: Just one matter, if I may, your Honor. But before Mr. Quinlan gets too righteously indignant about the comments of my colleague, I would ask him to go back and read his memorandum that I referred to earlier.

THE COURT: Which one, about the Special Litigation Committee?

MR. CUMMINS: Yes, about all the conflicts, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CUMMINS: All the conflicts, which quite frankly no one has addressed in resolution of this matter at any time, including the fact that lawyers who purport to represent the Foundation can currently represent folks individually who purport to be taking actions inconsistent with the Foundation.

But I just assume, when folks made those pleadings, they believed it to be true.

THE COURT: Mr. Cummins, there comes a time that all litigation has to be ended. And this litigation is going to be ended tomorrow in this Court with the signing of these orders.

And the only thing that is going to remain is the Petitions for Attorney's fees, which the Consent Decree requires me to adjudicate. And if I am wrong, I am sure the Appellate Court is going to tell me I am wrong and I will see you all back here.

MS. STONE: I believe it's necessary to respond to the last salvo by counsel for the objectors.

Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood solely represented the Foundation. We do not represent any of the defendants in their -- any of the directors in their individual capacity. We do not represent Dr. Stebbins in his individual capacity. He has another lawyer for that purpose.

We do not represent Dr. Marshall in her individual capacity. We represent merely the Foundation. We give advice to the six non-named, nonparty directors. That includes Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

There is no conflict by Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood at any point in this case. There is no conflict anywhere.

Thank you.

MR. QUINLAN: Judge, I would like to reserve my comments for the lounge across the street after the proceedings here.

Thank you.

THE COURT: We are in recess. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Reporter.

for a sub with the hope that one of my 13 colleagues might give them a different kind of an order. And as we see and we apply that statute, we grant those orders as a matter of right. Even if it is on the same identical issue. It can even almost be sometimes the same or related kinds of parties. And they have a right to try elsewhere.

Now, I'm not saying that there's any merit to their Count I. I'm not saying that that can be interpreted as anything other than a collateral attack on my decision. And I have been baffled in looking at the timing here. I look at a case that I made my decision on July 26 and there's no appeal and there's no Motion to Stay and I don't know -- I still don't know because I can't tell from these papers that I got for today if there was or there wasn't a Board meeting on August 1.

MS. STONE: There was, Your Honor.

MR. CARROLL: There was, Your Honor.

THE COURT: But then on July 31, instead of appealing, they filed the different lawsuit. And I'm not quite sure what happened between August 1 and August 14 or 13 because I was out of the country. But there's a meeting that was obviously scheduled me but you have it in front of everybody else in the courthouse. And I'm troubled by that. The legislature has passed that statute. The courts seem to be saying -- seem to be going in your direction.

Looking at their cases, I realize that they are under the prior statute. And their cases are very persuasive when you look at them that way under the prior statute. I think your motion is timely. But I believe that this statute enacted after their cases doesn't talk about relatedness. The local rule says related, sends it back here.

But I anticipated when you were all here on August 29 or September 7 and you told me that you were going to Judge Evans and that Judge Gardner had sent this case over there and there was going to be a big argument, I said to myself right at that time, well, if they decide to consolidate the cases, I'll have 'em both. If they decide to send it as a related case, there's going to be a Motion for Substitution. And I anticipated there was going to be one. And I can understand why you may want to make one because I personally believe that this second lawsuit, at least what I have seen of it, except for perhaps the last count, is a collateral attack on my decision.

I think these arguments should be in front of the Appellate Court. Not before another judge in the Circuit Court. I don't know what your Amended Complaint's going to say. But you have a right, if you get an order from a court granting you leave to file an Amended Complaint, you will have leave to file an Amended Complaint if someone says you can. And you have a right to take a substitution and you've used it up in this case and, well, this is only Mrs. Terra's motion. Is that correct?

MR. NOVOSELSKY: That's correct, Your Honor.

MR. CUMMINS: That's right.

MR. CARROLL: Defendants also have a right.

THE COURT: Well, I understand that. And this case is in the Chancery Division now.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: At this point.

THE COURT: And so it will be sent back to the Presiding Judge for reassigning.

MR. NOVOSELSKY: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. And I don't know when it will get reassigned. That's not up to me.

I need to have you writ an order. I need a draft order that states that the Court has heard

DR. STEBBINS' AND DR.MARSHALL'S MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615 AND SECTION 2-619, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE FOR A STAY

Defendants Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall"), by their attorneys, respectfully move for dismissal of the Amended Complaint filed by plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra, and Alan K. Simpson ("plaintiffs"), pursuant to Section 2-615 and Section 2-619 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, or in the alternative for a stay of this case. In support of their motion, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall state the following:

1. In plaintiffs' amended complaint, plaintiffs seek to undo a settlement agreement entered into by the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") in Buntrock v. Tucker, Case No. 00 CH 1359. The settlement agreement was approved and effectuated on July 26, 2001 in a Consent Judgment and Order entered in the Buntrock case by Judge Dorothy Kinnaird. Plaintiffs contend that the Foundation wrongfully agreed in Buntrock to the Consent Judgment and Order and that Judge Kinnaird wrongfully entered the Consent Judgment and Order.

2. Plaintiffs are three Foundation directors who objected to the settlement agreement in Buntrock, but were outvoted by their fellow board members. Plaintiffs have named as defendants in this case the Foundation, all of the six directors who voted for the settlement, all five new Foundation directors, the two law firms which represented the Foundation during the Buntrock litigation, and the Illinois Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are two of the six directors who voted for the settlement.

3. As we explain in our supporting memorandum which accompanies this motion, plaintiffs have failed pursuant to Section 2-615 to state any claim for relief against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, for several reasons. First, plaintiffs have no standing to assert claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Second, plaintiffs fail to allege sufficient facts, as opposed to conclusions, to state any viable claim against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. In particular, plaintiffs do not plead that they have personally suffered any injury or damage. Plaintiffs do not allege that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall owed them any fiduciary duties. Plaintiffs do not allege facts which show that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall breached any fiduciary duties to anyone. Indeed, plaintiffs' complaint is so unclear and imprecise that it cannot be discerned with certainty as to which counts of their complaint are even asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. For all of these reasons, all of plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should be dismissed, with prejudice, pursuant to Section 2-615.

4. All of plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should also be dismissed on the additional grounds that their claims are barred pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(4) by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel, and pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3) because a prior case is pending in which the same issues are raised by these very same plaintiffs. The Foundation is briefing these Section 2-619 issues in detail. In order to avoid duplication, Dr.

Stebbins and Dr. Marshall will not repeat the Foundation's arguments and authorities in their supporting memorandum. Instead, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall adopt and incorporate them, and hereby assert them on their own behalf, in support of their motion to dismiss.

5. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall also adopt and incorporate, and hereby assert on their own behalf, the arguments and authorities set forth in the motions to dismiss and supporting memoranda which are being filed by each of the other defendants in this case, as well.

6. If any of plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall survive this motion to dismiss, then Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall ask the Court, in the alternative, to stay this case pending resolution of the prior pending action involving these plaintiffs i.e., the Buntrock litigation, which currently is on appeal in the Illinois Appellate Court. This would avoid enormous duplication of efforts and costs, eliminate the risk of inconsistent results in two different courts, and prevent plaintiffs from impermissibly seeking to have this Court act as a lateral court of appeals in connection with the decisions rendered by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein and in Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's memorandum in support of their motion to dismiss, and for the reasons set forth in the motions to dismiss and the supporting memoranda of the Foundation and the other defendants in this case, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall respectfully request that the Court grant this motion and issue an Order dismissing all of plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, with prejudice, or in the alternative staying this case, and awarding to Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall all of their attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with this matter and all other relief which the Court deems appropriate under the circumstances.

MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S MOTION TO DISMISS, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE FOR A STAY

This memorandum is submitted by two of the director defendants in this case, Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall"), in support of their motion to dismiss the First Amended Complaint (hereafter "Complaint") filed by plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra, and Alan K. Simpson ("plaintiffs"), based on Section 2-615 and Section 2-619 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, or in the alternative to stay the proceedings.

I. INTRODUCTION.

In plaintiffs' Complaint, plaintiffs seek to undue a settlement agreement entered into by the Terra Foundation for the Arts ("the Foundation") in a case known as Buntrock v. Tucker, Case No. 00 CH 1359, which was approved on July 26, 2001 in a Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Dorothy Kinnaird. The essence of plaintiffs' Complaint is that the Foundation wrongfully agreed to settle the Buntrock case, and that Judge Kinnaird wrongfully entered the Consent Judgment and Order which made the Buntrock settlement effective.

16di-004767

The plaintiffs in this case are three directors of the Foundation who opposed the Buntrock settlement, but were outvoted by the majority of the Foundation's Board. In what can fairly be described as litigation by blunderbuss, plaintiffs name as defendants in this case not only the Foundation, but also (1) all six of the directors who voted in favor of the settlement, (2) all five new Foundation directors who were not directors during the Buntrock case, (3) Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn, the law firms which represented the Foundation during the Buntrock litigation, and (4) the Illinois Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General.

In this Memorandum, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall primarily address the claims asserted by plaintiffs personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, and the bases for dismissal of those claims pursuant to Section 2-615. First, plaintiffs have no standing to assert claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Second, plaintiffs fail to allege sufficient facts, as opposed to conclusions and rhetoric, to state any viable claim for relief against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Plaintiffs do not plead that they have personally suffered any injury or damage, nor do they allege that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall owed to them any fiduciary duties. Nor do they plead any facts showing that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall breached any fiduciary duties to anyone.

The Foundation addresses comprehensively the reasons why the Complaint is fatally defective as against the Foundation in its separately filed motion to dismiss and supporting memorandum. These reasons include the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel, which require dismissal under Section 2-619(a)(4), and the presence of a prior pending action, which requires dismissal under Section 2-619(a)(3). Each of these arguments also requires dismissal of the claims asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Moreover, if the Complaint fails to state a claim against the Foundation, the claims asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall must fail, a fortiori. To avoid unnecessary duplication, these arguments by the Foundation will not be repeated here. However, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall hereby join in and adopt, and assert on their own behalf, all of these arguments set forth in the Foundation's motion to dismiss and supporting memorandum.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth herein, and in the Foundations' papers, plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should be dismissed, with prejudice.[1]

II. PERTINENT FACTS[2]

Dr. Stebbins is, and at all times pertinent hereto has been, a Director of the Foundation and Chairman of the Foundation's Collections Committee. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 12). He is the current Consultative Curator of American Art at the Fogg Museum at Harvard University. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 12). Dr. Stebbins has been involved with the Foundation since at least 1997. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 54).

Dr. Marshall is, and at all times pertinent hereto has been, a Director of the Foundation. She has served as the Foundation's Secretary and Treasurer and Chairman of its Finance and Strategic Planning Committees. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 11). Dr. Marshall is the current President of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy. (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 11, 64).

In the Buntrock litigation, filed in the Fall of 2000, two members of the Board of Directors of the Foundation sued the Foundation to prevent the Foundation from moving the Foundation's art collection out of Illinois. The Illinois Assistant Attorney General intervened and filed a companion case which was consolidated with the Buntrock case. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 5). Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall were not defendants in the Buntrock litigation. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 83).

[1] We understand that the other defendant directors, the defendant law firms and the Illinois Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General are separately filing motions to dismiss and supporting memoranda. We adopt and join in their motions and supporting memoranda, as well.

[2] We accept as true the following facts alleged in the Complaint only for purposes of this Motion to Dismiss.

After many months of litigation, all parties agreed to mediate the dispute. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 49). Dr. Stebbins was from the beginning in favor of attempting to mediate the dispute. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 57).

During the mediation, the Illinois Attorney General prepared a draft amended complaint in the Buntrock litigation, which was never filed. According to plaintiffs, the draft amended complaint purported to assert that Dr. Stebbins had breached a duty of loyalty to the Foundation by representing multiple parties at art auctions. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 58). Also during the mediation, the Illinois Attorney General began to investigate Dr. Marshall "about two issues relating to Dr. Marshall's position as President of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy." (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 65). Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall knew these facts. (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 75, 76).

In a May 20, 2001 letter addressing an early mediation proposal made by the Attorney General (which plaintiffs do not attach to the Complaint and which is not alleged to be the same agreement which was subsequently approved by the Foundation's board), Dr. Marshall stated that she found that particular proposal to be "unacceptable." (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 63).

The mediation continued. At the conclusion of the mediation, a majority of the members of the Board of Directors of the Foundation approved a settlement agreement which disposed of the Buntrock litigation. Accordingly, at the Foundation's June 29, 2001 board meeting, the mediator's final proposed settlement agreement was approved by the Foundation's board. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall voted in favor of the settlement. They were joined by co-directors Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, and Hartman, thereby constituting a majority of the eleven member board. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 73). Only two directors, Judith Terra and Paul Tucker, voted against the settlement. Id.

As plaintiffs concede in their Complaint, Dr. Stebbins specifically stated at the board meeting that he was "voting his 'own conscience'," and Dr. Marshall specifically stated that the Illinois Attorney General's conduct "has not played a part in my decision-making with respect to my fiduciary responsibilities as a Board Member of this Foundation." (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 71, 72).

The parties agreed that the Court had to approve the settlement in the form of a Consent Judgment and Order in order to make the settlement effective. On July 26, 2001, after a lengthy hearing, the Court entered the Consent Judgment and Order. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 83-84). The plaintiffs in this case, who were defendants in the Buntrock litigation, objected to the terms of the settlement and the Consent Judgment and Order, but Judge Kinnaird overruled their objections. They thereafter promptly appealed to the Illinois Appellate Court all aspects of the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird. See Notice of Appeal, attached as an Exhibit to the Foundation's supporting memorandum. Plaintiffs also filed the instant lawsuit.

At an August 1, 2001 meeting of the Foundation's Board of Directors, the new members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, who had been designated and approved in the settlement agreement and Consent Judgment and Order, were welcomed to the Board. (Am.Cmplt.¶ 84).

III. STANDARD OF REVIEW FOR A SECTION 2-615 MOTION TO DISMISS FOR FAILURE TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION.

A motion to dismiss brought pursuant to Section 2-615 for failure to state a cause of action admits all well-pleaded facts and attacks only the legal sufficiency of the complaint. Malanowski v. Jabamoni, 293 Ill. App. 3d 720, 725, 688 N.E.2d 732, 736 (1st Dist. 1997). However, in considering a Section 2-615 motion, conclusions contained within the challenged pleading will not be taken as true unless supported by specific factual allegations. Simon v. Wilson, 291 Ill. App. 3d 495, 503, 684 N.E.2d 791, 796 (1st Dist. 1997). Legal conclusions couched as factual allegations are not taken as true. Estate of Johnson v. Condell Mem'l Hosp.,

16di-004771

119 Ill.2d 496, 510, 520 N.E.2d 37, 43 (1988); Eymon v. McDonough Dist. Hosp., 245 Ill. App. 3d 394, 397, 613 N.E.2d 819, 821 (3rd Dist. 1993). As a fact pleading jurisdiction, Illinois courts require plaintiffs to allege facts, and not merely conclusions, sufficient to bring a claim within the scope of the cause of action being asserted. Gallagher Corp. v. Russ, 309 Ill. App. 3d 192, 199, 721 N.E.2d 605, 612 (1st Dist. 1999).

IV. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT HAVE STANDING TO ASSERT THEIR CLAIMS PERSONALLY AGAINST DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL.

Plaintiffs' Complaint plainly demonstrates that they have no standing to bring claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Nothing in the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/101.01, et seq. (hereafter, "the Act"), provides standing to these plaintiffs to sue Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall personally. Likewise, plaintiffs fail to allege sufficient facts to give them standing to assert claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall under traditional standing analysis.

A. Plaintiffs Have No Standing to Sue Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall Under the Act.

The Act provides only very limited standing to directors of Not For Profit corporations to bring a lawsuit on the ground that the corporation has acted without the capacity or power to act. Section 103.15 specifically permits a director to bring such an action only "against the corporation." Id., § 105/103.15(a) (emphasis added). Directors are plainly given no standing under the Act to bring such claims against their fellow directors. Moreover, were the limited breadth of the standing conferred by the Act subject to any doubt, that doubt has been conclusively resolved – and the absence of any such standing as against individual directors has been confirmed – in Brown Leasing, Inc. v. Stone, 284 Ill. App. 3d 1035, 1047, 673 N.E.2d 430, 438 (1st Dist. 1996). In Brown, the plaintiff sued a bank and its directors to recover damages which allegedly occurred because the bank refused to honor the guarantees it had promised. In support of the plaintiff's purported standing to sue the directors, the plaintiff relied on a section of the Illinois Business Corporation Act of 1983, namely 805 ILCS 5/3.20. That section provides that "all persons who assume to exercise corporate powers without authority to do so shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts and liabilities incurred or arising as a result thereof." Id. Section 5/3.20 of the Illinois Business Corporation Act is identical to Section 105/103.20 of the Not for Profit Act on which plaintiffs in this case purport to rely. The Brown court held that this language provides standing to sue a director only "where a defendant acted before incorporation or after a corporation was dissolved." Brown Leasing, Inc., 284 Ill. App. 3d at 1047, 673 N.E.2d at 438 (citations omitted). The court observed that other jurisdictions with similar statutes are entirely in agreement, and impose personal liability only upon those who act on behalf of a nonexistent corporation. Id. Plaintiffs in the present case do not, and obviously cannot, contend that the acts of which they complain occurred prior to the incorporation of the Foundation or after dissolution. Accordingly, the Act provides no standing to plaintiffs to assert their claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.[3]

B. Plaintiffs Have No Standing to Assert Their Claims Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall Under Traditional Standing Analysis.

Without any special, statutorily-conferred standing, plaintiffs must satisfy traditional standing requirements in order to pursue claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Under well-settled common law, a plaintiff must allege facts showing that the plaintiff suffered a distinct and palpable injury to himself or herself, that the injury is fairly traceable to the defendant's alleged action, and that the specific injury to the plaintiff is substantially likely to [3] The Act permits a corporation, acting directly or derivatively through a Receiver or other legal representative, to bring suit against directors in connection with a claim of lack of authority. 805 ILCS 105/103.15(b). However, the Foundation did not bring such an action, and plaintiffs did not, and cannot, bring this action derivatively.

be prevented or redressed by the grant of the requested relief. See, e.g., Messenger v. Edgar, 157 Ill. 2d 162, 170, 623 N.E.2d 310 (1993). Plaintiffs do not come close to satisfying this standard.

In the Complaint, plaintiffs allege that Daniel Terra's intentions have been violated by the Foundation's approval of the settlement and by the Court's issuance of the Consent Judgment and Order. (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 1, 4). However, nowhere in the Complaint do any of the plaintiffs allege how they have been personally injured. They certainly plead no physical harm to themselves. Neither do they plead, and they could not truthfully do so, that they have suffered any financial harm. To the contrary, the only purported "damage" they allege is to the Foundation. But plaintiffs did not, and could not, bring this case in the name of the Foundation. See Complaint generally. Indeed, the only reference to plaintiffs' purported "damages" in the Complaint appears in the Prayer for Relief in Counts IV (for ultra vires conduct) and Count V (for breach of fiduciary duty). There, plaintiffs purport to seek "damages in an amount to be determined at trial." However, not one word is alleged in the Complaint which even suggests, much less alleges, that plaintiffs have personally suffered "distinct and palpable" injury or damage.[4] Accordingly, plaintiffs have no standing to assert their claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall under the common law. See, e.g., Glisson v. City of Marion, 188 Ill.2d 211, 221, 740 N.E.2d 1034, 1040 (1999); Kemp-Golden v. Dept. of Children and Family Services, 281 Ill. App. 3d 869, 878, 667 N.E.2d 688, 694 (4th Dist. 1996).

V. PLAINTIFFS HAVE FAILED TO STATE ANY VIABLE CLAIMS AGAINST DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL.

Should the Court reach the substance of plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, which we respectfully suggest the Court should not do because plaintiffs have no standing, plaintiffs' complaint nonetheless must be dismissed as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr.

[4] Count VI (for allegedly inducing a breach of fiduciary duty) and Count VII (for deprivation under color of law of Constitutional rights) also include a request for damages in the Prayer for Relief. However, those claims are plainly asserted only against the Illinois Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General. Moreover, those counts do not include any factual assertions that plaintiffs have personally suffered damages.

Marshall on the independent ground that they fail to state any viable claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

A. Counts I, II, III, VI, and VII Are Not Asserted Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

As an initial matter, it is not sufficiently clear from the Complaint which claims plaintiffs are even attempting to assert personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. For this reason alone, the claims should be dismissed.

Counts I and II seek solely declaratory and injunctive relief that would provide: (1) that the Consent Judgment and Order entered by Judge Kinnaird, and the settlement which that Consent Judgment and Order effectuated, are unlawful and unenforceable, (2) that the new members of the Foundation's board have not been properly elected and any exercise of the Foundation's authority by them is void, and (3) that the new board members may not act on behalf of the Foundation. Counts I and II allege nothing against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, seek nothing from Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, and do not require Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall to be part of those Claims in order for plaintiffs to obtain the relief they seek in those counts.

Indeed, any injunction entered by this Court against the Foundation would bind the Foundation's directors as well. See, e.g., In re Marriage of Marshall, 278 Ill. App. 3d 1071, 1079, 663 N.E.2d 1113, 1119 (3rd Dist. 1996) ("a decree of injunction binds not only the parties but also those identified with them in interest, in 'privity' with them, represented by them or subject to their control."); Floralife, Inc. v. Floraline Int'l, Inc., 807 F.2d 518, 519 (7th Cir. 1986) (injunction entered against defendant corporation and its non-defendant "officers, agents and all persons or entities in concert or privity with it.").[5] Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are in no way necessary parties to these claims.

[5] All non-Illinois cases cited herein are attached at the back of this memorandum and are organized alphabetically.

Count III is targeted only against Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn, the two law firms which have represented the Foundation during the Buntrock litigation. In Count III, plaintiffs seek a declaration that Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn should be disqualified from representing the Foundation and its directors in this litigation. This claim alleges no wrongdoing by Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, seeks nothing from Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, and does not require the inclusion of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall in order for plaintiffs to obtain the relief they seek.

Similarly, Counts VI and VII are asserted only against the Illinois Attorney General and the Assistant Attorney General. There, plaintiffs contend that the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General induced a breach of fiduciary duty and deprived the Foundation of property under color of law without due process. No wrongdoing is asserted in those counts against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, and no relief is sought from them.

In sum, Counts I, II, III, VI and VII must be dismissed as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall for failure even to attempt to state a claim against them. And if, contrary to the plain language of these counts, it was plaintiffs' intent to assert those claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, plaintiffs have in all events totally failed to plead sufficient facts to sustain those claims as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

B. Plaintiffs Have Failed to State a Claim in Count IV for Ultra Vires Conduct as Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

In Count IV, plaintiffs allege that approval of the settlement and the Consent Judgment and Order by the Foundation's board was an ultra vires act. An action is ultra vires if it is unauthorized or beyond the scope of power allowed or granted by corporate charter or by-law. BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY, 1525 (7th ed. 1999). For their remedy, plaintiffs seek an order "enjoining defendants from taking further action in violation of law and contrary to the best interests of the Foundation." (Count IV, Prayer for Relief). Plaintiffs also seek in Count IV "damages in an amount to be determined at trial." Id. However, plaintiffs' ultra vires allegations fail to state a claim as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.[6]

First, as we showed above, the Act permits a director to file an action for alleged ultra vires conduct only against the Foundation. No such action against fellow directors is authorized by the Act. See Section IV.A. above. Indeed, the law is the same under statutory and common law in respect to For Profit corporations, as well. See, e.g., ILLINOIS JUR., BUSINESS RELATIONSHIPS §8:8-8:9 (1994), citing Illinois Business Corporation Act of 1983, 805 ILCS 5/3.15.

Second, plaintiffs have failed to allege sufficient facts to support any ultra vires claim against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. They have made no showing whatsoever that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall acted outside of their authority. Indeed, what Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are accused of doing, is voting. There is nothing ultra vires about voting. As described in more detail in the Foundation's supporting memorandum, Judge Bucklo was asked to address these very same allegations raised against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall by these very same plaintiffs. Judge Bucklo held, as a matter of law, that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall had a lawful right to vote as they did. As Judge Bucklo explained, "the conduct being induced (a changed vote) is not itself unlawful... [T]he plaintiffs do not explain, either with authority or with logic, how the directors can be charged with violating the plaintiffs' rights even under compulsion if they do what they had a lawful right to do in any event." Terra v. Perkins, 151 F. Supp. 2d 931, 937 (N.D. Ill. 2001). Moreover, plaintiffs concede that a majority of the duly [6] The Foundation in its memorandum is setting forth in detail the reasons why plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for ultra vires acts as against the Foundation. We specifically adopt and incorporate those arguments on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Dismissal of the ultra vires claim against the Foundation would require, a fortiori, dismissal of the claim against all of the defendant directors, including Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

elected board voted to approve the settlement of the contentious Buntrock litigation, and that the Chancery Court specifically approved the settlement and entered a Consent Judgment and Order putting the settlement into effect. (Am.Cmplt. ¶¶ 73, 84.).

Still further, plaintiffs have failed to allege any facts which show that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, along with their fellow board members who voted in favor of the Consent Judgment, took any action or caused any action to be taken by the Foundation which was ultra vires. As the Foundation explains in its supporting memorandum, plaintiffs do not, and cannot truthfully, cite to anything in the Consent Judgment and Order that is prohibited by the Foundation's articles of incorporation or by-laws. See Complaint generally. Accordingly, plaintiffs have failed to allege sufficient facts to state a claim for ultra vires conduct.

C. Plaintiffs Have Failed to State a Claim in Count V for Breach of Fiduciary Duty Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

Count V alleges a purported breach of fiduciary duty. It is the only count in which the gravamen of the claim is purported wrongdoing by Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. In Count V, plaintiffs contend that Dr. Marshall and Dr. Stebbins "breached their duties of loyalty to the Foundation by voting in favor of a settlement which offered personal benefits having nothing to do with the interests of the Foundation." (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 114). As a result of this purported breach of fiduciary duty, claim plaintiffs, "the Plaintiffs and the Foundation have suffered injury." (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 115). However, plaintiffs do not even come close to alleging facts sufficient to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

1. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall Do Not Owe Fiduciary Duties to Plaintiffs.

To assert a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiffs must allege facts establishing that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall had a fiduciary relationship with plaintiffs, and that they breached that fiduciary duty. See, e.g., Cessna v. City of Danville, 296 Ill. App. 3d 156, 693 N.E.2d 1264 (4th Dist. 1998) (plaintiffs must allege facts establishing a breach of duty owed to them); Stamp v. Touche Ross & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 636 N.E.2d 616 (1st Dist. 1993) (complaint which fails to allege facts supporting the elements of a claim for breach of fiduciary duty cannot survive a Rule 2-615 motion to dismiss). Plaintiffs do not even attempt to allege, for they could not truthfully do so, that they had a fiduciary relationship with Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall. See Count V, generally. To the contrary, each of the directors owed a fiduciary duty only to the Foundation. Plaintiffs have not brought this action as a derivative action, so they cannot assert the fiduciary duty claim on behalf of the Foundation. Because Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall owed no fiduciary duty to plaintiffs, Count V is defective as a matter of law.

16di-004778

2. Plaintiffs Have Failed to Allege Facts Sufficient to Show that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall Breached Any Fiduciary Duty.

Plaintiffs' Complaint is also devoid of any well-pleaded factual allegations that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall acted in breach of any fiduciary duty. Under Illinois law, a fiduciary duty is the duty of an agent to treat his principal with the utmost candor, rectitude, care, loyalty and good faith and to treat the principal as well as the agent would treat himself. Peterson v. H&R Block Tax Serv., Inc., 971 F. Supp. 1204 (N.D. Ill. 1997). Plaintiffs have failed to allege any facts, as distinct from bald conclusions, which show that either Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall voted to approve the settlement because of the purported "threats" against them by the Attorney General. Instead, plaintiffs' own allegations show the contrary. See Complaint, ¶¶ 71-73.

Dr. Marshall's comments in her May 20, 2001 letter on a soon-to-be superceded settlement proposal cannot be relied upon to support a claim for breach of fiduciary duty. In fact, plaintiffs do not even allege, for they cannot truthfully do so, that Dr. Marshall's comments were made on the same proposal that was ultimately approved by her and a majority of the Board. Plaintiffs pleaded no facts which show that Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall changed their minds as to an appropriate resolution of the Buntrock litigation after receiving the alleged "threats." Nor did plaintiffs allege facts showing that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall ultimately based their vote on anything other than their belief as to what was in the best interests of the foundation. See, e.g., Borgsmiller v. Burrought, 187 Ill. App. 3d 1, 542 N.E.2d 1281 (5th Dist. 1989) (Plaintiff shareholders, who sued derivatively on behalf of a corporation for alleged breach of fiduciary duty by directors who had purchased a controlling interest in the corporation, did not allege facts showing that the directors abused inside information, usurped a corporate opportunity, or otherwise acted wrongfully. Accordingly, they failed to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty). Indeed, the significance of the Attorney General's purported "threats" against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall is entirely undermined by plaintiffs' own allegations acknowledging that four other directors voted to approve the settlement and the Consent Judgment without the "pressure" of any "threats" by anyone.

Plaintiffs allege, without any factual support, that the mere act of voting to approve the settlement was a breach of fiduciary duty on the part of all of the directors who approved it. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 78). However, such an unsupported conclusion is insufficient to state a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty. See Dangeles v Muhlenfeld, 191 Ill. App. 3d 791, 795, 548 N.E.2d 45, 48 (2nd Dist. 1989). Conclusory allegations of fact or law are not admitted in a Section 2-615 motion. Shaker & Assoc., Inc. v. Med. Tech. Group, Ltd., 315 Ill. App. 3d 126, 134, 733 N.E.2d 865, 872 (1st Dist. 2000), citing Knox Coll. v. Celotex Corp., 88 Ill. 2d 407, 417, 430 N.E.2d 976, 981 (1981).

Still further, as discussed above, plaintiffs have failed to plead that they have been personally injured or damaged in any way by the purported breach of fiduciary duty. They have alleged no physical injury. They have alleged no financial damage. They state the bald conclusion that the Foundation has been damaged, but they allege no facts to support such alleged damages. Moreover, plaintiffs cannot assert the Foundation's alleged damages as a basis for their fiduciary duty claim. Without a proper factual pleading showing that the plaintiffs suffered compensable damages, an essential element of the claim is missing and the cause of action must be dismissed. See, e.g., Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. v. Brauer, 275 Ill. App. 3d 300, 313-14, 655 N.E.2d 1162, 1172-73 (1st Dist. 1995) (no specific allegation that actual, pecuniary or consequential losses to plaintiff directly resulted from the alleged wrongdoing); Latex Glove Co., Inc. v. Gruen, 146 Ill. App. 3d 868, 874, 497 N.E.2d 466, 469 (1st Dist. 1986) (plaintiff did not allege facts showing that plaintiff suffered damages which could be proved with reasonable certainty, were proximately caused by defendant, and were reasonably within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was formed.) Accordingly, the fiduciary duty claim is fatally defective as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall for these reasons, too.

3. Plaintiffs Have Failed to Allege Facts Which Would Overcome the Business Judgment Rule.

It is well-settled that courts will not re-examine the actions of a director in authorizing or permitting a corporate action, if the director's action was undertaken in good faith, in a manner reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the corporation, and with an independent and informed judgment. In re S.N.A. Nut Co., 186 B.R. 98 (Bankr. N.D.Ill. 1995); Spillyards v. Abboud, 278 Ill. App. 3d 663, 662 N.E.2d 1358 (1st Dist. 1996). Decisions by directors of a board are entitled to deference. Cottle v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 635 F. Supp. 1094 (N.D.Ill. 1986). This is known as the business judgment rule. Id. The business judgment rule applies to the decisions of boards of directors of charitable organizations, such as the Foundation. Beard v. Achenbach Mem'l Hosp. Ass'n, 170 F.2d 859 (10th Cir. 1948). Accordingly, a plaintiff operates under an even greater pleading burden when accusing a director of a breach of fiduciary duty arising out of the performance of the director's duties for the corporation, because the plaintiff must plead facts which are strong enough to overcome the business judgment rule. See Spillyards v. Abboud, 278 Ill. App. 3d at 675. The burden is on the party challenging a director's decision to establish facts rebutting the presumption that the director's decisions were made on an informed basis, in good faith and in an honest belief that the actions were taken in the best interest of the Foundation. Id., 278 Ill. App. 3d 663, 681, 662 N.E.2d 1358, 1370 (1st Dist. 1996). Count V fails this test entirely.

4. Plaintiffs Failed to Meet the Further Heightened Pleading Burden Resulting from the Approval by the Non-Interested Directors of the Settlement and Consent Judgment.

Under the Act, a transaction in which a director of a corporation has a direct or indirect interest can be ratified if "the material facts of the transaction and the director's interest or relationship were disclosed or known to the board of directors...and the board...authorized, approved or ratified that transaction by the affirmative votes of a majority of disinterested directors, even though the disinterested directors be less than a quorum...." 805 ILCS 105/108.60(b)(1) (2001). Plaintiffs' own complaint reveals that a majority of the disinterested directors present at the June 29 Board meeting voted to approve the settlement and Consent Judgment and Order. Eight directors voted: Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, Mrs. Daley, Mr. Hartman, Dr. Stebbins, Dr. Marshall, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 68). Exclusion of Mr. Buntrock, Mr. Gidwitz, Mrs. Terra and Dr. Tucker, because they were named parties in the Buntrock litigation, and exclusion of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, pursuant to plaintiffs' "theory" that they, too, were "interested," leaves only Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman as disinterested Board members who voted on the settlement. Both Mrs. Daley and Mr. Hartman voted to approve the settlement and the Consent Judgment and Order. (Am.Cmplt. ¶ 73). This ratification by the disinterested directors, which plaintiffs admit in their complaint (id.), further increases plaintiffs' pleading burden and further increases the distance between plaintiffs' actual conclusory allegations and the necessary level of fact pleading which would suffice to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

In sum, plaintiffs have failed to state, and cannot state, any claim for relief against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. All claims asserted against them personally must be dismissed, with prejudice.

VI. PLAINTIFFS HAVE FAILED TO ALLEGE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO STATE A CLAIM FOR PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

For all of the reasons discussed herein, plaintiffs have failed to state any viable claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. A fortiori, plaintiffs' request for punitive damages in Counts IV and VI must also be dismissed.

Furthermore, plaintiffs failed to allege any facts whatsoever which would support the kind of fraudulent or malicious conduct on the part of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall necessary to state a claim for punitive damages. See, e.g., Monotronics Corp. v. Baylor, 107 Ill. App. 3d 14, 21, 436 N.E.2d 1062, 1068 (2d Dist. 1982), citing City of Chicago v. Martin, 49 Ill. 241 (1868). In light of the fact that Judge Kinnaird approved the settlement and herself entered the Consent Judgment and Order, thereby effectuating the settlement, plaintiffs' request for punitive damages is nothing but a cynical effort to coerce the individual defendants through in terrorem tactics that have long been vigorously disapproved by the Courts. See, e.g., Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 741 (1975). Indeed, to accuse these defendants of such wrongful motives is to accuse Judge Kinnaird herself of the wrongful conduct. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall respectfully suggest that, especially in this regard, plaintiffs have stretched zealous advocacy far past the snapping point.

VII. ALL OF PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS AGAINST DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-619(a)(3) AND 2-619(a)(4).

Section 2-619(a)(3) and Section 2-619(a)(4) provide additional, independent bases for dismissal of all of plaintiffs' claims as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Under Section 2-619(a)(3), the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall must be dismissed because the prior action before Judge Kinnaird, dealing with all of the same issues raised in this case, is pending in the Illinois Appellate Court. Under Section 2-619(a)(4), the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall must be dismissed for the independent reasons that plaintiffs' claims were, or could have been, raised by them in the action before Judge Kinnaird, and Judge Kinnaird has already ruled on them. As a result, the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel bar the litigation of these same issues in this case.

For example, as the Foundation explains in detail in its memorandum, Judge Kinnaird made the following findings and rulings, among others:

- [Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall] "could properly participate in this decision and they did properly participate in this decision."
- [Dr. Marshall] "was not a lady who was being intimidated by anybody."
- "I also did not feel that there was intimidation of Dr. Stebbins in this case."
- "The Attorney General is not controlling this Foundation as [is] being alleged in the papers."
- "And I don't see this settlement, as the objectors have said as being antithetical...to the Foundation's purposes."

16di-004784

See Transcript of July 24, 2001 hearing before Judge Kinnaird, at pp. 126-34, attached as an Exhibit to the Foundation's supporting memorandum. The Foundation has fully briefed these issues in its supporting memorandum. To avoid duplication, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall join in, adopt, and incorporate all of these arguments and the accompanying authorities provided by the Foundation, and assert these arguments and authorities on their own behalf as independent bases for dismissal of the claims against them.

VIII. IN THE ALTERNATIVE, DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL ASK THAT THE COURT STAY THIS CASE.

As we have shown above, all of plaintiffs' claims as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should be dismissed with prejudice. However, if the Court were to determine that any portion of the claims asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should survive their motion to dismiss, then Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall ask the Court to stay all proceedings in this case pending a resolution by the Illinois Appellate Court of the appeal filed by these same plaintiffs in the Buntrock litigation. As we explained above, and as described in more detail in the Foundation's motion to dismiss and supporting memorandum, all of the issues central to the present complaint are being challenged in the Illinois Appellate Court by these very plaintiffs. Indeed, plaintiffs are effectively asking this Court to act as a collateral, lateral court of appeals, and to rule on the propriety of, and indeed reverse, Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. This the court cannot do. Furthermore, if this case is permitted to proceed while the Buntrock litigation is pending in the Appellate Court, the result will be an enormous waste of assets and unnecessary duplication of effort. In addition, a substantial risk will be created that the two courts will issue conflicting rulings.

Accordingly, it makes most sense, if any portion of this case survives the motions to dismiss, to wait for the Appellate Court to rule in the Buntrock litigation. If the Appellate Court affirms Judge Kinnaird's Consent Judgment and Order, this case is moot. If the Appellate Court should reverse Judge Kinnaird's decision, then the issues raised in this case must be addressed, and are more appropriately addressed, in that proceeding.

IX. CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons set forth in the Motions to Dismiss and the supporting memoranda filed by the Foundation and the other defendants, the Court should grant Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's motion to dismiss all of plaintiffs' claims asserted against them, with prejudice. In the alternative, any portion of this case which survives Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Motion to Dismiss should be stayed pending resolution of the Buntrock case on appeal.

DE LA LAMA v. UNITED STATES.

No. 12551.

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit.

Nov. 30, 1948.

Criminal law ⇐998

On defendant's motion for a vacation of judgment and sentence and a discharge therefrom on the ground that sentence was for an escape and illegal because made to run concurrently with sentence which defendant was serving when he escaped, granting of motion to vacate and the resentencing of defendant to a term to run consecutively was not error.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas; T. Whitfield Davidson, Judge.

Manuel F. De La Lama was convicted of an escape. From a judgment of resentence, defendant appeals.

Affirmed.

Manuel F. De La Lama, pro se.

Cavett S. Binion, Asst. U. S. Atty., of Ft. Worth, Tex., for appellee.

Before HUTCHESON, SIBLEY, and McCORD, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

Appellant, claiming that the sentence of three years theretofore imposed upon him on Dec. 10, 1947, for an escape was illegal and void because made to run concurrently with the sentence he was serving when he escaped, moved in the sentencing court for a vacation of the judgment and sentence and a discharge therefrom.

The district judge agreed with petitioner's contention that the judgment and sentence was illegal and void, but disagreed with his contention that he could not be resentenced. He, therefore, on August 21, 1948, ordered vacated, the sentence imposed on Dec. 10, 1947, and resentenced the defendant to serve two years, the sentence to run consecutively with the sentence under which appellant was serving at the time of the escape.

Appellant is here complaining of the judgment and seeking its reversal.

A careful examination of the record shows that appellant was afforded a full and fair hearing in the court below, that no new or unsettled question requiring discussion is presented for our review, and that no error requiring reversal attended the proceedings which resulted in the judgment appealed from. The said judgment is accordingly affirmed.

HAWLEY v. UNITED STATES.

No. 12492.

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit.

Nov. 30, 1948.

Criminal law ⇐1162

An order denying defendant's motion to correct recital in judgment that defendant had appeared in proper person and by counsel and pleaded guilty would be affirmed where examination of record left no doubt that appeal was without merit.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas; T. Whitfield Davidson, Judge.

Philip John Hawley was convicted for an offense, and he filed a motion to correct a recital in the judgment. From an order denying the motion, he appeals.

Order affirmed.

Philip John Hawley, pro se.

William Cantrell, Jr., and Clyde G. Hood, Asst. U. S. Attys., both of Dallas, Tex., for appellee.

Before HUTCHESON, SIBLEY, and McCORD, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

His motion to correct the recital in the judgment, that he had appeared in proper person and by counsel and pleaded guilty, having, after hearing, been denied, appellant is here appealing from the order.

An examination of the record leaves us in no doubt that the appeal is without merit,[1] and that the order appealed from should be affirmed.

No. 3524.

United States Court of Appeals
Tenth Circuit.

Nov. 12, 1948.

1. Courts ⇐406(1¼)

In trial of non-jury case, it is province of trial court to appraise credibility of witnesses, to determine weight to be given to their testimony, to draw reasonable inferences from the facts established, and to resolve conflicts in the evidence and inferences fairly to be drawn from it.

2. Courts ⇐406(1¼)

Where evidence and reasonable inferences fairly to be drawn from it were sufficient to support findings of trial court in non-jury case, and such findings were not plainly erroneous, they would not be overturned on appeal.

3. Contracts ⇐236, 252

Generally, parties to a simple contract may modify its provisions, and draft new terms upon it, or rescind it altogether, and in absence of a constitutional or statutory provision otherwise, it is not necessary that the agreement to modify, alter, change, add to or rescind be express.

4. Corporations ⇐310(1, 2)

Under Kansas law, directors of a corporation are charged with duty of managing its affairs honestly and in good faith, and they must exercise ordinary and reasonable care in performance of their duties and they must act with fidelity to interests of the corporation.

Under Kansas law, directors of a corporation are jointly and severally liable for losses of the corporation proximately resulting from bad faith, or fraudulent breaches of trust, or gross or wilful negligence in discharge of their duties.

Under Kansas law, directors of a corporation, acting in good faith and within limitations of law, have power to determine policies and manage affairs of the corporations.

Where directors of non-profit corporation operating a hospital and members of medical staff agreed that if remuneration of staff members for their services proved inadequate during early operation of hospital and that hospital later became a financial success a bonus would be paid staff members, subsequent payment of bonus to staff members upon finding of such conditions did not constitute reckless or extravagant expenditure of funds by directors so as to warrant appointment of a receiver for the corporation or rendition of a personal judgment against directors.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Kansas, Second Division; Bower Broaddus, District Judge.

Class action by Charles C. Beard, a member of Achenbach Memorial Hospital Association, on behalf of himself and other members, against Achenbach Memorial Hospital Association and others, for appointment of a receiver, for an appropriate order restraining defendant corporation from execution of a renewal contract with defendant H. L. Galloway for conducting the hospital, and for accounting of funds alleged to have been wrongfully paid to members of medical staff of the hospital. From judgment for defendants, the plaintiff appeals.

Affirmed.

Harry O. Glasser, of Enid, Okl. (Harry O. Juricke, of Winfield, Kan., on the brief), for appellant.

Riley W. MacGregor, of Medicine Lodge, Kan., and J. B. Patterson, of Wichita, Kan. (Paul R. Wunsch, of Kingman, Kan., A. W. Hershberger, Richard Jones, and Wm. P. Thompson, all of Wichita, Kan., on the brief), for appellees.

Before PHILLIPS, Chief Judge, and BRATTON and MURRAH, Circuit Judges.

BRATTON, Circuit Judge.

Jacob Achenbach died leaving a will which contained a provision directing the trustees of his estate to erect and equip a public hospital in the town of Hardtner, Kansas, or on a specified tract of land adjacent to the town, at a cost to the estate of not more than $125,000. The provisions permitted the trustees to secure such persons or organizations as they might deem best to manage, control, and operate the hospital. The will was admitted to probate; and the hospital was constructed, equipped, and conveyed to Achenbach Memorial Hospital Association, a non-profit corporation organized under the laws of Kansas for the purpose of accepting and operating it. The deed of conveyance recited that it was executed under the terms and provisions of the will and certain orders of court; and it provided that should the grantee become unable or unwilling to maintain and operate the property as a hospital, or should it commit or permit waste upon the premises, or should it not protect and preserve the property according to the true intent and purpose of the conveyance, the conveyance should terminate and the property revert to the estate of the testator. Several months prior to the opening of the hospital, the corporation entered into a contract with Doctor H. L. Galloway, then engaged in conducting a hospital at Anthony, Kansas, a town located approximately forty miles from Hardtner, which provided that Doctor Galloway should move to Hardtner and be the chief of the hospital; that he should receive as remuneration for himself and other doctors and specialists sixty-five per cent of all moneys received from members of the hospital association, except that received from membership pledges, and sixty-five per cent of all moneys charged for the treatment of non-members who were treated by Doctor Galloway and his associates; that the remaining thirty-five per cent of such moneys should be used for the upkeep and maintenance of the hospital; and that all moneys received from the use of rooms, drugs, medicines, bandages, X-ray machines, laboratory equipment, and any other equipment owned by the association should go into the permanent or maintenance fund to be used for the maintenance of the hospital. The contract further provided that it should be in force and effect for a period of five years. The hospital was opened for the reception of patients in September, 1941. Doctor Galloway became its chief and he had two medical assistants.

In 1946, Charles C. Beard, a member of the association, on behalf of himself and other dissatisfied members, brought this class action against the corporation, certain directors, certain former directors, the three members of the medical staff of the hospital, the superintendent of the hospital, the executor of the last will of the testator, and the trustees of the estate of the testator. The cause of action pleaded in the second amended complaint was that the deed conveying the property to the corporation did not fulfill in certain particulars the intent and purposes of the provision contained in the will and subjected the corporation to certain handicaps and burdens not contemplated by the bequest; that funds of the corporation had been and were being paid to the members of the medical staff of the hospital as compensation for medical services, in violation of the contract with Doctor Galloway; that funds of the corporation had been wrongfully paid to Doctor Galloway and his associates in the form of a bonus; that the original contract with Doctor Galloway would terminate soon; and that unless prevented from doing so, the corporation and the doctor would enter into a new contract beneficial to the doctor and harmful to the corporation. The prayer was for the appointment of a receiver, for an appropriate order restraining the execution of a renewal contract, and for an accounting of the funds wrongfully paid to the members of the medical staff of the hospital. By answer, the defendants admitted certain allegations contained in the complaint, denied fraud, and pleaded that all of the dealings between the directors of the corporation and Doctor Galloway, including the payment of the bonus, had been from time to time approved by the members of the association. Judgment was entered for the defendants, and plaintiff appealed.

[1, 2] It is urged that more funds were paid to the doctors for their professional services at the hospital than was authorized by the contract, and that such excessive payments constituted wrongful mismanagement of the affairs of the corporation for which appropriate relief should have been granted. The written contract provided the basis on which the members of the medical staff were to be compensated for their professional services, and from the beginning of the operation of the hospital the provisions of the written agreement were not followed in certain respects. The doctors received all of the doctors fees, not including fees of the clinic, for operation upon and services to hospitalized non-members of the association; and, in addition, they received a portion of the fees for their services in connection with the laboratory and X-ray equipment. But the court found that at the time the terms of the written contract were agreed upon, the division of the fees and the need later for a change was discussed; that from the opening of the hospital, Doctor Galloway and his associates refused to proceed under the original contract and on various occasions informed the directors that they would not continue to staff the hospital without the change in distribution of such fees; that the division and distribution of the fees throughout the entire period was known to the directors; that the directors discussed such division and distribution at their monthly meetings; and that the directors accepted and acquiesced in the change or departure from the original contract. In the trial of a non-jury case, it is the province of the trial court to appraise the credibility of the witnesses, to determine the weight to be given to their testimony, to draw reasonable inferences from the facts established, and to resolve conflicts in the evidence and the inferences fairly to be drawn from it. The evidence and the reasonable inference fairly to be drawn from it were sufficient to support these findings of the trial court, and they are not plainly erroneous. Therefore they are not to be overturned on appeal. Yates v. American Republics Corporation, 10 Cir., 163 F.2d 178; Wyoming Railway Co. v. Herrington, 10 Cir., 161 F.

[3] The parties did not enter into a new agreement expressly rescinding or modifying the original contract between the corporation and Doctor Galloway. But with certain exceptions having no material bearing here, the parties to a simple contract may modify its provisions, engraft new terms upon it, or rescind it altogether. The parties are ordinarily as free to modify or change a contract after making it as they were to execute it in the first instance. And in the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision otherwise, it is not necessary that the agreement to modify, alter, change, add to, or rescind be express. Mutual assent to modification, change, or rescission may be implied from the acts of the parties and the circumstances. 6 Williston on Contracts § 1826. Here, under the facts as found by the trial court, the parties discussed from time to time the question of compensating the members of the medical staff on a basis substantially different from that specified in the original contract; throughout the entire period intermediate the opening of the hospital and the institution of the suit, the doctors were paid monthly on such basis different from that fixed in the written contract; and the directors acquiesced in such payment. Manifestly, the court was warranted in concluding that the parties impliedly modified the original contract in respect to the compensation of the doctors.

[4–8] The directors of a corporation are charged with the duty of managing its affairs honestly and in good faith, and they must exercise ordinary and reasonable care in the performance of their duties. They must act with fidelity to the interests of the corporation, and they are jointly and severally liable for losses of the corporation proximately resulting from bad faith, fraudulent breaches of trust, or gross or wilful negligence in the discharge of their duties. But under the law of Kansas the directors of a corporation, acting in good faith and within the limitations of the law, have the power to determine its policies and manage its affairs. Fees v. Mechanics' State Bank, 84 Kan. 828, 115 P. 563, L.R.A.1915A, 606; Inscho v. Mid-Continent Development Co., 94 Kan. 370, 146 P. 1014, Ann.Cas.1917B, 546; National Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 114 Kan. 456, 219 P. 261. And ill-success or bad judgment not so reckless or extravagant as to amount to bad faith or gross or wilful negligence on the part of directors in the discharge of their duties do not warrant the appointment of a receiver for the corporation or the rendition of a personal judgment against the directors. Inscho v. Mid-Continent Development Co., supra. The modification by course of conduct of certain provisions in the contract relating to the compensation to be paid the members of the medical staff for their professional services and the making of monthly payments according to the modification did not constitute such reckless, extravagant, or wrongful conduct on the part of the directors as to warrant the appointment of a receiver for the corporation or the rendition of personal judgment against the directors.

[9, 10] Turning to the payment of the bonus, the directors of the corporation, at their meeting held in October, 1945, adopted a resolution authorizing payment of a bonus of $1500 each to the three doctors. The resolution recited that such payment was for the efficient services which the doctors had rendered during the previous four years. The court found that the directors and the doctors agreed that should the remuneration of the doctors for their services prove inadequate during the early operation of the hospital, a bonus would be paid later if the hospital became a financial success; that the doctors were inadequately compensated during the early operation of the hospital; that the hospital proved a financial success later; that the directors authorized payment of the bonus as such additional compensation; and that it was reasonable in amount for the services rendered. Again, these findings are adequately supported by the evidence and the inferences fairly to be drawn from it, and they are not plainly erroneous. Therefore they must stand on appeal. Yates v. American Republics Corporation, supra; Wyoming Railway Co. v. Herrington, supra; Boston Insurance Co. v. Read, supra.

The payment of incentive compensation in the form of a bonus to employees who render continuous and efficient services is a common practice of long standing among large employers. While incentive compensation of that kind must bear some reasonable relation to the value of the services rendered, ordinarily a bonus which bears a reasonable relation to the value of the services rendered, which is deemed to further the best interests of the corporation, and which is paid in good faith is not a mere gift, gratuity, or reckless expenditure of which stockholders or shareholders may complain in an action of this kind. Putnam v. Juvenile Shoe Corporation, 307 Mo. 74, 269 S.W. 593, 40 A.L.R. 1412. It cannot be said that under the facts and circumstances as found by the court, the payment of the bonus to the doctors constituted such reckless or extravagant expenditure of funds as to warrant the appointment of a receiver for the corporation or the rendition of a personal judgment against the directors authorizing the payment.

The judgment is affirmed.

tory issues raised by appellees' claim against Philbrook were indistinguishable from those raised by their claim against the Secretary. Thus the only practical difference that resulted from the District Court's assumption of jurisdiction over the Secretary was that its injunction was directed against him as well as against appellant Philbrook. But the Secretary has announced, in his brief to this Court, that in the event the decision of the District Court on the statutory issue is affirmed, he intends to comply with it. The exercise of the District Court's jurisdiction over the Secretary in this case, therefore, has resulted in no adjudication on the merits that could not have been just as properly made without the Secretary, and has resulted in no issuance of process against the Secretary which he has properly contended to be wrongful before this Court.

The Secretary's appeal from the judgment in No. 74–132 is, therefore, dismissed.

It is so ordered.

BLUE CHIP STAMPS ET AL. v. MANOR DRUG STORES

CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

No. 74–124. Argued March 24, 1975—Decided June 9, 1975

Under an antitrust consent decree petitioner New Blue Chip was required to offer a substantial number of common stock shares in its new trading stamp business to retailers like respondent which had previously used the stamp service but which were not shareholders in petitioner's corporate predecessor. Charging that New Blue Chip and other petitioners devised a scheme to dissuade the offerees by means of materially misleading statements containing an overly pessimistic appraisal of the new business from purchasing the securities so that the rejected shares might later be offered to the public at a higher price, respondent brought this class action for damages for violation of the provisions of § 10 (b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (Act) and Rule 10b–5 promulgated thereunder by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), which make it unlawful to use deceptive devices or make misleading statements "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security." Acting on the basis of the rule enunciated in 1952 in Birnbaum v. Newport Steel Corp., 193 F. 2d 461, which states that a person who is neither a purchaser nor a seller of securities may not bring an action under § 10 (b) of the Act or the SEC's Rule 10b–5, the District Court dismissed respondent's complaint. The Court of Appeals reversed, concluding that the facts warranted an exception to the Birnbaum rule. The court noted that prior cases had held that the rule did not exclude persons owning contractual rights to buy or sell securities and that the offering of securities in this case in compliance with the antitrust decree served the same function as a securities purchase or sales contract. Held: A private damages action under Rule 10b–5 is confined to actual purchasers or sellers of securities and the Birnbaum rule bars respondent from maintaining this suit. Pp. 731–755.

(a) The longstanding judicial acceptance of the rule together with Congress' failure to reject its interpretation of § 10 (b) argues significantly in favor of this Court's acceptance of the rule. P. 733.

16di-004792

(b) Evidence from the texts of the Act and the Securities Act of 1933 supports the Birnbaum rule. When Congress wished to provide statutory remedies to others than purchasers or sellers of securities, it did so expressly. Pp. 733–736.

(c) Policy considerations predominantly favor adherence to the rule. Failure to follow it could well result in vexatious litigation caused by a widely expanded class of plaintiffs bringing "strike" suits under Rule 10b–5 and opening litigation to hazy factual issues the proof of which would largely depend on uncorroborated oral testimony to the effect that a person situated like respondent consulted the security issuer's prospectus, and paid attention to it, and that its representations injured him. Pp. 737–749.

(d) Respondent, who derives no entitlement from the antitrust decree and does not otherwise possess any contractual rights relating to the offered stock, occupies the same position as any other disappointed offeree of stock registered under the 1933 Act who claims that an overly pessimistic prospectus has caused him to pass up the chance to purchase, and there is ample evidence that Congress did not intend to extend a private cause of action for money damages to the nonpurchasing offeree of stock registered under the 1933 Act for loss of the opportunity to purchase due to an overly pessimistic prospectus. Pp. 749–754.

(e) The exception to the Birnbaum rule that the Court of Appeals relied upon would expose the rule to case-by-case erosion depending upon whether a particular group of plaintiffs was deemed more discrete than potential purchasers in general so as to warrant departing from the rule, and would result in an unsatisfactory basis for establishing liability for the conduct of business transactions. Pp. 754–755.

MR. JUSTICE REHNQUIST delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case requires us to consider whether the offerees of a stock offering, made pursuant to an antitrust consent decree and registered under the Securities Act of 1933, 48 Stat. 74, as amended, 15 U. S. C. § 77a et seq. (1933 Act), may maintain a private cause of action for money damages where they allege that the offeror has violated the provisions of Rule 10b–5 of the Securities and Exchange Commission, but where they have neither purchased nor sold any of the offered shares. See Birnbaum v. Newport Steel Corp., 193 F. 2d 461 (CA2), cert. denied, 343 U. S. 956 (1952).

I

In 1963 the United States filed a civil antitrust action against Blue Chip Stamp Co. (Old Blue Chip), a company in the business of providing trading stamps to retailers, and nine retailers who owned 90% of its shares. In 1967 the action was terminated by the entry of a consent decree. United States v. Blue Chip Stamp Co., 272 F. Supp. 432 (CD Cal.), aff'd sub nom. Thrifty Shoppers Scrip Co. v. United States, 389 U. S. 580 (1968).[1] The decree contemplated a plan of reorganization whereby Old Blue Chip was to be merged into a newly formed corporation, Blue Chip Stamps (New Blue Chip). The holdings of the majority shareholders of Old Blue Chip were to be reduced, and New Blue Chip, one of the petitioners here, was required under the plan to offer a substantial number of its shares of common stock to retailers who had used the stamp service in the past but who were not shareholders in the old company. Under the terms of the plan, the offering to nonshareholder users was to be proportional to past stamp usage and the shares were to be offered in units consisting of common stock and debentures.

The reorganization plan was carried out, the offering was registered with the SEC as required by the 1933 Act, and a prospectus was distributed to all offerees as required by § 5 of that Act, 15 U. S. C. § 77e. Somewhat more than 50% of the offered units were actually purchased. In 1970, two years after the offering, respondent, a former user of the stamp service and therefore an offeree of the 1968 offering, filed this suit in the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Defendants below and petitioners here are Old and New Blue Chip, eight of the nine majority shareholders of Old Blue Chip, and the directors of New Blue Chip (collectively called Blue Chip).

Respondent's complaint alleged, inter alia, that the prospectus prepared and distributed by Blue Chip in connection with the offering was materially misleading in its overly pessimistic appraisal of Blue Chip's status and future prospects. It alleged that Blue Chip intentionally made the prospectus overly pessimistic in order to discourage respondent and other members of the allegedly large class whom it represents from accepting what was intended to be a bargain offer, so that the rejected shares might later be offered to the public at a higher price. The complaint alleged that class members because of and in reliance on the false and misleading prospectus failed to purchase the offered units. Respondent therefore sought on behalf of the alleged class some $21,400,000 in damages representing the lost opportunity to purchase the units; the right to purchase the previously rejected units at the 1968 price; and in addition, it sought some $25,000,000 in exemplary damages.

The only portion of the litigation thus initiated which is before us is whether respondent may base its action on Rule 10b–5 of the Securities and Exchange Commission without having either bought or sold the securities described in the allegedly misleading prospectus. The District Court dismissed respondent's complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief might be granted.[2] On appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, respondent pressed only its asserted claim under Rule 10b 5, and a divided panel of the Court of Appeals sustained its position and reversed the District Court.[3] After the Ninth Circuit denied rehearing en banc, we granted Blue Chip's petition for certiorari. 419 U. S. 992 (1974). Our consideration of the correctness of the determination of the Court of Appeals requires us to consider what limitations there are on the class of plaintiffs who may maintain a private cause of action for money damages for violation of Rule 10b–5, and whether respondent was within that class.

The 1933 Act was described as an Act to "provide full and fair disclosure of the character of securities sold in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and to prevent frauds in the sale thereof, and for other purposes." The Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 48 Stat. 881, as amended, 15 U. S. C. § 78a et seq. (1934 Act), was described as an Act "to provide for the regulation of securities exchanges and of over-the-counter markets operating in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, to prevent inequitable and unfair practices on such exchanges and markets, and for other purposes."

The various sections of the 1933 Act dealt at some length with the required contents of registration statements and prospectuses, and expressly provided for private civil causes of action. Section 11 (a) gave a right of action by reason of a false registration statement to "any person acquiring" the security, and § 12 of that Act gave a right to sue the seller of a security who had engaged in proscribed practices with respect to prospectuses and communication to "the person purchasing such security from him."

The 1934 Act was divided into two titles. Title I was denominated "Regulation of Securities Exchanges," and Title II was denominated "Amendments to Securities Act of 1933." Section 10 of that Act makes it "unlawful for any person . . . (b) [t]o use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered on a national securities exchange or any security not so registered, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors." The "Commission" referred to in the section was the Securities and Exchange Commission created by § 4 (a) of the 1934 Act. Section 29 of that Act provided that "[e]very contract made in violation of any provision of this chapter or of any rule or regulation thereunder" should be void.

In 1942, acting under the authority granted to it by § 10 (b) of the 1934 Act, the Commission promulgated Rule 10b–5, 17 CFR § 240.10b–5, now providing as follows:

> "§ 240.10b–5 Employment of manipulative and deceptive devices.
>
> "It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, or of the mails or of any facility of any national securities exchange,
>
> "(a) To employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud,
>
> "(b) To make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or
>
> "(c) To engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person,
>
> "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security."

Section 10 (b) of the 1934 Act does not by its terms provide an express civil remedy for its violation. Nor does the history of this provision provide any indication that Congress considered the problem of private suits under it at the time of its passage. See, e. g., Note, Implied Liability Under the Securities Exchange Act, 61 Harv. L. Rev. 858, 861 (1948); A. Bromberg, Securities Law: Fraud—SEC Rule 10b–5 § 2.2 (300)–(340) (1968) (hereinafter Bromberg); S. Rep. No. 792, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 5–6 (1934). Similarly there is no indication that the Commission in adopting Rule 10b–5 considered the question of private civil remedies under this provision. SEC Securities Exchange Act Release No. 3230 (1942); Conference on Codification of the Federal Securities Laws, 22 Bus. Law. 793, 922 (1967); Birnbaum v. Newport Steel Corp., 193 F. 2d, at 463; 3 L. Loss, Securities Regulation 1469 n. 87 (2d ed. 1961).

Despite the contrast between the provisions of Rule 10b–5 and the numerous carefully drawn express civil remedies provided in the Acts of both 1933 and 1934,[4] it was held in 1946 by the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania that there was an implied private right of action under the Rule. Kardon v. National Gypsum Co., 69 F. Supp. 512. This Court had no occasion to deal with the subject until 25 years later, and at that time we confirmed with virtually no discussion the overwhelming consensus of the District Courts and Courts of Appeals that such a cause of action did exist. Superintendent of Insurance v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 404 U. S. 6, 13 n. 9 (1971); Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U. S. 128, 150–154 (1972). Such a conclusion was, of course, entirely consistent with the Court's recognition in J. I. Case Co. v. Borak, 377 U. S. 426, 432 (1964), that private enforcement of Commission rules may "[provide] a necessary supplement to Commission action."

Within a few years after the seminal Kardon decision, the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit concluded that the plaintiff class for purposes of a private damage action under § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5 was limited to actual purchasers and sellers of securities. Birnbaum v. Newport Steel Corp., supra.

[4] See, e. g., §§ 11, 12, 15 of the 1933 Act, 15 U. S. C. §§ 77k, 77l, 77o; §§ 9, 16, 18, 20 of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. §§ 78i, 78p, 78r, 78t.

The Court of Appeals in this case did not repudiate Birnbaum; indeed, another panel of that court (in an opinion by Judge Ely) had but a short time earlier affirmed the rule of that case. Mount Clemens Industries, Inc. v. Bell, 464 F. 2d 339 (1972). But in this case a majority of the Court of Appeals found that the facts warranted an exception to the Birnbaum rule. For the reasons hereinafter stated, we are of the opinion that Birnbaum was rightly decided, and that it bars respondent from maintaining this suit under Rule 10b–5.

III

The panel which decided Birnbaum consisted of Chief Judge Swan and Judges Learned Hand and Augustus Hand: the opinion was written by the last named. Since both § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5 proscribed only fraud "in connection with the purchase or sale" of securities, and since the history of § 10 (b) revealed no congressional intention to extend a private civil remedy for money damages to other than defrauded purchasers or sellers of securities, in contrast to the express civil remedy provided by § 16 (b) of the 1934 Act, the court concluded that the plaintiff class in a Rule 10b–5 action was limited to actual purchasers and sellers. 193 F. 2d, at 463–464.

Just as this Court had no occasion to consider the validity of the Kardon holding that there was a private cause of action under Rule 10b–5 until 20-odd years later, nearly the same period of time has gone by between the Birnbaum decision and our consideration of the case now before us. As with Kardon, virtually all lower federal courts facing the issue in the hundreds of reported cases presenting this question over the past quarter century have reaffirmed Birnbaum's conclusion that the plaintiff class for purposes of § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5 private damage actions is limited to purchasers and sell-

HILTON HOTELS CORPORATION, a Delaware corporation, and Barron Hilton, as Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer and as a Director of Hilton Hotels Corporation, William H. Bates, Benjamin V. Lambert, Thomas R. Wilcox, Frank G. Wangeman, Sam D. Young, Jr., Gregory R. Dillon, John V. Giovenco, respectively as Directors of Hilton Hotels Corporation, Defendants.

No. 85 C 4610.

United States District Court, N.D. Illinois, E.D.

April 17, 1986.

Shareholder derivative action was brought against officers and directors of hotel corporation to recover for alleged waste of corporate assets and breach of duty in connection with construction and sale of casino and hotel. Defendants moved to dismiss for failure to comply with demand requirements of civil rule. The District Court, Aspen, J., held that demand was not excused by allegations of entrenchment or that because directors allegedly were responsible for matters complained of it would be futile to demand that they cause the corporation to sue themselves.

Motion granted.

1. Corporations ⇐206(2)

Civil rule requirement of demand on directors as prerequisite to maintaining derivative action is intended to encourage intracorporate resolution of disputes and protect the managerial freedom of those delegated with responsibility of running the business; that policy is merely an extension of the business judgment rule. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2072; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 23.1, 28 U.S.C.A.

2. Corporations ⇐310(1)

The "business judgment rule" dictates that judicial interference with corporate decision-making be limited to circumstances where the directors are not in a proper position to make sound corporate judgments.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

3. Corporations ⇐206(4)

Prerequisite to derivative action that shareholders made demand on directors and officers to bring action on behalf of the corporation is excused in certain circumstances where it would not be logical to require such demand. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2072; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 23.1, 28 U.S.C.A.

4. Corporations ⇐320(5, 7)

Demand on corporate directors prior to instituting derivative suit was not excused by allegations that because directors were responsible for matters complained of, i.e., disassociating themselves from certain individual in order to obtain casino license for new hotel and selling the business for a loss when gambling license was denied, it would have been futile to demand that they cause the corporation to sue themselves; there were no allegations, as required by Delaware law, creating a reasonable doubt that underlying transactions were made by disinterested and independent directors or that challenged transaction was not product of a valid business judgment notwithstanding directors' disinterestedness and independence. MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

ASPEN, District Judge:

Plaintiff Robert Cottle filed this shareholder's derivative suit on behalf of Hilton Hotels Corporation ("Hilton") against nominal defendant Hilton and several officers and directors of Hilton ("the individual defendants") based on allegations that the individual defendants engaged in transactions surrounding the construction and eventual sale of a New Jersey casino and hotel which constituted a breach of fiduciary duty to Hilton and a waste of Hilton's corporate assets. Hilton, joined by the individual defendants, has moved to dismiss Cottle's complaint for failure to comply with the demand requirements of Fed.R. Civ.P. 23.1.[1] The defendants also filed a motion for a protective order barring further discovery on both the merits of Cottle's claims and certain jurisdictional issues. After a careful review of the pleadings and memoranda filed on this motion, the Court grants the defendants' motion to dismiss for the reasons elaborated below. The motion for protective order is moot.

I. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

Hilton is a major hotel management corporation incorporated in Delaware with its principal place of business in Beverly Hills, California. It operates hotel facilities in many locations across the country. Cottle owns shares of common stock in Hilton and owned them at the time that all transactions relevant to this case took place. The allegations in Cottle's complaint involve the decision of Hilton's board of directors to build a casino and hotel facility in Atlantic City, New Jersey. The attraction to the Atlantic City location was apparently the lucrative legalized gambling business, and the financial success of the hotel-casino project turned largely on approval and licensing by the New Jersey Casino Control Commission ("the Commission"). The individual defendants made public pronouncements projecting financial success while representing that the proposed casino would be licensed without a problem. Cottle alleges that these defendants knew or should have known that the Commission had "stringent licensing requirements."

While the individual defendants predicted that their casino proposal was an offer the Commission could not refuse, they instead encountered serious obstacles in their pursuit of a license. Allegations were made before the Commission that the individual defendants fostered a relationship between Hilton and Sidney Korshak, a Chicago attorney who, according to the complaint, "had been identified by state and federal law enforcement officials and a United

1. The individual defendants initially moved to dismiss the complaint on the additional ground that this Court lacked personal jurisdiction over any of them. In conjunction with that claim, Hilton moved to dismiss for Cottle's failure to join indispensable parties claiming that at least one individual defendant must be joined for a derivative action to proceed. The individual defendants have since withdrawn their personal jurisdiction motion thus eliminating the necessity that the Court address any of these claims.

States Senate Sub-Committee as a prominent link between organized crime and legitimate business." Complaint ¶ 11. The individual defendants failed to sever this relationship with Korshak even though they were aware that it would jeopardize their chances of successfully obtaining the casino license.

On February 28, 1985, the Commission denied a casino license for Hilton as a result of the Korshak connection. At first, the defendants announced that they would appeal the Commission's ruling, but instead sold the entire project to New York real estate entrepreneur Donald Trump for $320 million. This sale did not result from a competitive bidding process and yielded a purchase price approximately $20 million above Hilton's investment in the project.

Cottle alleges that were it not for the Korshak affiliation and the individual defendants' failure to distance the Hilton Corporation and themselves from Korshak, the Commission would have granted the license. Hilton has been harmed, Cottle further claims, by the loss of expected casino and hotel earnings in the millions of dollars and by the sale of the casino and hotel project at a loss.[1] Cottle also alleged that the individual defendants sold the project to Trump "without bidding or otherwise fully exploiting the market" as part of an improperly motivated scheme to stave off an attempted takeover of Hilton and entrench themselves in their current corporate positions.

Except for the cursory assertion that the individual defendants were in part motivated by the desire to retain their positions, the complaint does not contain any allegations regarding any personal benefits which might have accrued to the individual defendants as a result of these transactions. Cottle does not allege that the individual defendants had any sort of financial stake in their association with Korshak or their refusal to sever that association.

2. Although the sale of the project yielded $20 million in excess of Hilton's investment, Cottle claims that there was a net loss when that gain is compared to the interest sacrificed during the relevant period in which the corporate capital was tied up in the casino project.

II MOTION TO DISMISS UNDER RULE 23.1

[1, 2] Shareholder derivative suits are in a distinct class of federal litigation and are governed by a special procedural rule which states:

> In a derivative action brought by one or more shareholders or members to enforce a right of a corporation or of an unincorporated association, the corporation or association having failed to enforce a right which may properly be asserted by it, the complaint shall be verified and shall allege (1) that the plaintiff was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction of which he complains or that his share or membership thereafter devolved on him by operation of law, and (2) that the action is not a collusive one to confer jurisdiction on a court of the United States which it would not otherwise have. The complaint shall also allege with particularity the efforts, if any, made by the plaintiff to obtain the action he desires from the directors or comparable authority and, if necessary, from the shareholders or members, and the reasons for his failure to obtain the action or for not making the effort. The derivative action may not be maintained if it appears that the plaintiff does not fairly and adequately represent the interests of the shareholders or members similarly situated in enforcing the right of the corporation or association. The action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court, and notice of the proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to shareholders or members in such manner as the court directs.

Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1. The only aspect of Rule 23.1 relevant to the present motion is the shareholder demand requirement which establishes as a prerequisite to maintaining a shareholder derivative action the plaintiff's demand on the directors of the corporation to take action to correct the asserted wrong. This requirement was intended to encourage the intracorporate resolution of disputes and protect the managerial freedom of those delegated with the responsibility of running the business. Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 812 (Del.1984). That policy is merely an extension of the business judgment rule, which dictates that judicial interference with corporate decision-making shall be limited to circumstances where the directors are not in a proper position to make sound corporate judgments. Id. Furthermore, there are numerous practical advantages to encouraging the corporation to pursue recourse on its own behalf. See Lewis v. Graves, 701 F.2d 245, 247–48 (2d Cir.1983).

[3] Nevertheless, procedural rules have been developed to provide shareholders with a remedial option to sue derivatively in behalf of the injured corporation even without first complying with the demand requirement. Thus, the requirement will be excused in certain circumstances where it would not be logical to require such a demand. 7A C.A. Wright & A.R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1831 (1972). However, where federal subject matter jurisdiction in a derivative suit rests on the parties' diversity of citizenship, courts must refer to the substantive law of the relevant state, which in almost all circumstances will be the state of incorporation of the aggrieved corporation. See Kreindler v. Marx, 85 F.R.D. 612, 615 (N.D.Ill.1979). Moreover, the demand requirement has been described as a substantive right of the corporation and not simply a procedural prerequisite to the derivative action. Haber v. Bell, 465 A.2d 353, 357 (Del.Ch.1983). Thus, the substantive right to a demand on the corporation must be kept conceptually apart from the procedural requirement of Rule 23.1 that the plaintiff shareholder plead with particularity his or her efforts to obtain relief from the corporation or the reasons for not making such an effort. Daily Income Fund, Inc. v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523, 544 & n. 2, 104 S.Ct. 831, 843 & n. 2 (1984) (Stevens, J. concurring).[3] Thus, in the present case this Court is faced with the task of evaluating whether Cottle has pleaded with particularity (federal procedural requirement) facts which would constitute grounds for excusing the pre-suit demand requirement under Delaware law (state substantive requirement). It is with this analytical framework in mind that we evaluate Cottle's complaint.

In a relatively recent case, the Delaware Supreme Court established the standards for excusing the demand requirement in derivative suits against Delaware corporations. Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805 (Del.1984).[4] The court noted that the "derivative" nature of shareholder suits extends from the primary right of a corporation to pursue its own legal interests. Id. at 811. Hence, under ordinary circumstances, a corporation through its board of directors, should be able to make the decision whether to pursue legal remedies for injuries to the corporate entity. As with other corporate decision-making processes, the decision of whether to sue is accorded great deference by the courts under the so-called "business judgment" rule. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 812 ("It is a presumption that in making a business decision the directors of a corporation acted on an informal basis, in good faith and in the honest belief that the action taken was in the best interests of the company").

Under this analysis, the plaintiff shareholder must plead particular facts suggest-

3. In his customarily perceptive manner, Justice Stevens observed in his concurring opinion that Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1 merely creates a pleading requirement and not a substantive right to pre-suit demand. He further noted that the Rules Enabling Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2072 (1982), prohibits enlargement or alteration of a substantive right by a procedural rule.

4. In Aronson, the court was evaluating the plaintiffs' pleadings under Delaware Chancery Court Rule 23.1, Del.Ch.Ct.R. 23.1, which substantially mirrors Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1 and includes a requirement that plaintiff plead with particularity the reasons for not making a pre-suit demand on the directors. However, in its fundamental analysis of the demand requirement, the court applied Delaware substantive standards.

16di-004799

ing that the corporate directors are not entitled to hide within the impenetrable fortress of the business judgment rule with respect to their participation in the transactions for which legal remedies are sought by the shareholder. The same circumstances which remove the business judgment rule's protections in other contexts will negate its applicability to the shareholder demand requirement. Thus, directors cannot raise the business judgment rule where they are personally interested in the questioned transactions such as where they sit on both sides of a corporate transaction or engage in self-dealing. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 812. Furthermore, their judgment must follow the consideration of all material information reasonably available of which they have a duty to inform themselves. Id.

In paring these considerations down to a "test" for determining the futility of the shareholder demand requirement, the Delaware Supreme Court requires that a trial court > must decide whether, under the particularized facts alleged, a reasonable doubt is created that: (1) the directors are disinterested and independent and (2) the challenged transaction was otherwise the product of a valid exercise of business judgment. Hence, the Court ... must make two inquiries, one into the independence and disinterestedness of the directors and the other into the substantive nature of the challenged transaction and the board's approval thereof.

Id. at 814. If a reasonable doubt has been raised with respect to either the directors' disinterestedness and independence or whether the decision was otherwise a valid business judgment, the demand requirement will be excused and the shareholder permitted to pursue the derivative action. Pogostin v. Rice, 480 A.2d 619, 624–25 (Del.1984).

[4] In the present case, the only overt reason Cottle alleges to excuse his failure to execute a pre-suit demand is that "[b]ecause the defendant directors were responsible for the matters complained of, it would be futile to demand that they cause the Corporation to sue themselves." Complaint ¶ 22. No other allegations in the complaint purport to establish grounds for not making a demand on the corporation prior to the filing of the suit. Furthermore, the parties do not dispute the fact that Cottle never made any such demand.[5] Cottle's assertion in Paragraph 22 boils down to a contention that because the Hilton directors directly participated in and approved of the transactions regarding the casino project and casino licensing procedure, a demand for them to pursue legal remedies on Hilton's behalf would be futile. However, several courts have held that the mere fact that directors participated in and authorized the disputed transactions underlying the derivative suit is not enough by itself to excuse demand. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 817; accord Lewis v. Graves, 701 F.2d 245, 248 (2d Cir.1983); Lewis v. Curtis, 671 F.2d 779, 785 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 880, 103 S.Ct. 176, 74 L.Ed.2d 144 (1982). If this were the only prerequisite to excusing demand, the demand requirement would be effectively repealed since, by definition, the directors have a hand in all corporate transactions of any consequence. See Graves, 701 F.2d at 248.

The contention that prior board approval of the disputed transaction negates the demand requirement is often coupled with the quite similar but also universally rejected argument that demand is excused where the directors are called upon to sue themselves in behalf of the corporation. The rationale for this argument is that the plaintiff shareholder cannot expect to successfully place the litigation in the hands of the very parties whose actions are being challenged. Again, this circumstance alone is not sufficient without more particularized allegations regarding director disinterestedness in the underlying business transactions to excuse the shareholder demand requirement. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 818; Allison on behalf of General Motors Corp. v. General Motors Corp., 604 F.Supp. 1106, 1114–15 (D.Del.), aff'd, 782 F.2d 1026 (3d Cir.1985).

These are not the type of excuses which permit shareholders to circumvent the demand requirement under the Aronson test. Rather, as the first part of the test suggests, the allegations must create a reasonable doubt that the underlying corporate transactions were made by disinterested and independent directors. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 814. As elaborated in further detail by the court in Pogostin v. Rice, 480 A.2d 619, 624 (Del.1984), "[d]irectorial interest exists whenever divided loyalties are present, or a director has received, or is entitled to receive, a personal financial benefit from the challenged transaction which is not equally shared by the stockholders." However, in Cottle's case, nothing has been alleged which even remotely suggests that the Hilton directors' decision to pursue the casino project, to associate with the purportedly nefarious Korshak or to abandon the casino project following the licensee denial was motivated by any personal interest. Nor, for example, has any external allegiance been alleged such that the directors could be presumed to lack "independence." Because none of the complaint's allegations raises a reasonable doubt that the Hilton directors were disinterested and independent, Cottle has not met the first part of the Aronson test for excusing demand.

A plaintiff-shareholder can also be excused from demand under Aronson if he or she can allege particularized facts which create a reasonable doubt that the challenged transaction was the product of a valid business judgment notwithstanding the directors' disinterestedness and independence. Aronson, 473 A.2d at 814. This aspect of the test has not been examined as thoroughly by the courts, though the Aronson court alluded to the narrowness of this exception when it noted that "in rare cases a transaction may be so egregious on its face that board approval cannot meet the test of business judgment, and a substantial likelihood of director liability therefore exists." Id. at 815 (emphasis added). Again, Cottle failed to allege any particularized facts which would suggest that any of the casino transactions were the product of anything besides a valid business judgment. The protections of the business judgment rule are waived only in the case of improperly-motivated corporate decisions, not in the case of poor ones. Thus, Cottle's only recourse may be at the annual shareholders' meeting.

Next, the Court addresses two additional potential bases for excuse of demand raised by Cottle in response to the defendants' motion to dismiss. The defendants anticipated that Cottle would argue that his allegations of waste of corporate assets and entrenchment in corporate office, Complaint ¶¶ 19, 20, sufficiently demonstrated the futility of pre-suit demand, although it is apparent from the complaint that Cottle included these claims as part of his allegation of liability and not as an excuse for his failure to make a demand. However, since Cottle cursorily argued these points in his memorandum in opposition to the motion to dismiss, we will deal with them briefly. In Pogostin v. Rice, 480 A.2d 619 (Del.1984), the Delaware Supreme Court applied the principles laid out in Aronson to a shareholder suit alleging wrongful rejection of a tender offer by the corporate directors. The plaintiffs failed to make a pre-suit demand on the directors, claiming unsuccessfully that demand should be excused. Among other things, the plaintiffs in Pogostin claimed that the directors' rejection of the tender offer permitted them to receive bonuses under a shareholder-approved executive compensation plan (waste of corporate assets) and to maintain their positions of control in corporate management (entrenchment).

5. On August 20, 1985, this Court granted a motion to transfer to this Court as a related case Lewis v. Hilton, No. 85-6968 (N.D.Ill. filed Aug. 7, 1985), a derivative suit by another Hilton shareholder based on the same transactions questioned here. See Local Rule 2.31. We stayed all proceedings in Lewis until resolution of this motion to dismiss. Lewis, however, alleged that he made a demand on Hilton's directors and his case would not be affected by today's ruling. The Court will hold a status hearing in the Lewis case on May 2, 1986, at 10:30 a.m.

In rejecting these claims as a basis for excusing demand, the Pogostin court noted that plaintiff shareholders "have the burden of demonstrating by particularized allegations that the ... [director action] is so devoid of a legitimate corporate purpose as to be a waste of assets." 480 A.2d at 626. If Cottle had met this pleading obligation, demand would have been excused under the second part of the Aronson test discussed above. Hence, his corporate waste claim adds nothing to his demand excuse argument. The Pogostin court further noted that while a claim that directors have acted with the sole or primary motive of perpetuating themselves in office would be sufficient to excuse demand, the plaintiff must allege particularized facts to sustain such a claim. Id. at 627. In the present case, Cottle has merely pled in a conclusional fashion his charge that the Hilton directors sold the casino project without bidding "as an improper entrenchment device to ward off a takeover attempt of Hilton." Complaint ¶ 19. This Court does not view this allegation as the type of particularized pleading of entrenchment sufficient to excuse demand.[6]

Cottle's complaint must be dismissed under Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1 in light of the above discussion.[7] While the Aronson test appears to present substantial barriers to the maintenance of a shareholder derivative suit, this Court believes that the Delaware Supreme Court contemplated precisely that result. In its own words, that court felt that "[t]he reasonable doubt standard in conjunction with the particularity requirement of [Chancery] Rule 23.1 strikes the essential balance between avoiding abuse of the derivative action and forcing a plaintiff to plead evidence without the benefit of discovery." Pogostin, 480 A.2d at 625. In the context of Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1, federal courts called upon to apply the Delaware demand excuse standard must avoid an overly restrictive reading of the Aronson rule in order to maintain that balance and remain mindful that the plaintiff shareholder need only plead facts which raise a reasonable doubt of director disinterestedness, and not a certainty.

III. CONCLUSION

The defendants' motion to dismiss Cottle's complaint for failure to comply with Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1 is allowed. Accordingly, the defendants' motion for a protective order is dismissed as moot. It is so ordered.

6. Cottle claimed, in any event, that he need not rely on the entrenchment argument to establish an excuse for the pre-suit demand requirement. Plaintiff's Answering Memorandum in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Based on F.R.C.P. 23.1 at 8. We note that even with this argument, his pleadings are inadequate to excuse demand.

7. Motions to dismiss under Fed.R.Civ.P. 23.1 are ordinarily decided solely on the basis of the complaint. Lewis v. Graves, 701 F.2d 245, 248 (2d Cir.1983). While Hilton's motion to dismiss was pending, all defendants filed a motion for a protective order, Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(c), regarding outstanding discovery requests by Cottle. At a status hearing on November 1, 1985, this Court indicated that it would decide in what order to rule on these two motions. Granting the motion to dismiss renders moot the motion for protective order.

Marvin BEMIS, Plaintiff,

v.

John HOGUE, as Plan Administrator and Trustee of the Franklin Electric Profit Sharing Plan and Franklin Electric, Inc., a Michigan corporation, Defendant.

No. 83-CV-8122-FL.

United States District Court, E.D. Michigan, S.D., at Flint.

April 22, 1986.

Former employee brought action against employer and administrator of employer's profit-sharing plan for benefits and penalties in connection with distribution of plan, after having been denied benefits after being terminated. On cross motions for summary judgment, the District Court, Newblatt, J., held that: (1) amount of benefits to which employee was entitled presented genuine issue of material fact precluding summary judgment; (2) employee was entitled to penalties for failure of administrator to notify him of decision to deny request for benefits; and (3) employee was entitled to damages for administrator's delay in providing employee with requested plan documents.

Ordered accordingly.

1. Action ⇐6
Pensions ⇐139

Former employee's action against employer and administrator of profit-sharing plan for lump-sum distribution of vested benefits was rendered moot by employee's refusing to accept benefits after having been offered them; however, "appropriate equitable relief" to which former employee would be entitled for alleged violation of Employee Retirement Income Security Act could include benefits improperly denied. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, §§ 502(a)(3), 510, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 1132(a)(3), 1140.

2. Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2497

Amount of benefits to which former employee was entitled under profit-sharing plan presented genuine issue of material fact precluding summary judgment on claim under Employee Retirement Security Act arising from denial of vested interest in plan at employee's termination. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, §§ 502(a)(3), 510, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 1132(a)(3), 1140.

3. Pensions ⇐140

Generally, claimants under retirement plans must exhaust administrative remedies before seeking federal court review unless exhaustion would be futile as claimant has been or will be wrongfully denied meaningful access to internal remedies. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, § 502(c), 29 U.S.C.A. § 1132(c).

4. Pensions ⇐87

Former employee who was participant in profit-sharing plan was entitled to penalties under Employee Retirement Income Security Act for failure of plan administrator to notify employee of decision to deny request for benefits upon receiving written request for vested benefits or reason for denying them. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, §§ 502(c), 503, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 1132(c), 1133.

5. Pensions ⇐49

Former employee who was participant in profit-sharing plan was entitled to statutory damages from plan administrator, for administrator's delay in complying with employee's request for plan documents, irrespective of whether employee was prejudiced or administrator acted in good faith. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, § 502(c), 29 U.S.C.A. § 1132(c).

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

NEWBLATT, District Judge.

Before the Court are the parties' cross Motions for Summary Judgment pursuant to Rule 56, Fed.R.Civ.P., on the issue of liability. This case is an action against defendants Franklin Electric and John Hogue for benefits and penalties in relationship to the distribution of the Franklin Electric Profit Sharing Plan (hereinafter referred to as the Plan).

Plaintiff, Marvin Bemis, a participant in the Plan, was terminated from Franklin on March 26, 1982. On April 19, 1982, Bemis sent a request by certified mail for the "non-forfeitable vested portion" of his account. Hogue did not respond but claims

FLORALIFE, INC., Plaintiff-Appellee,

v.

FLORALINE INTERNATIONAL, INC., Defendant-Appellant.

No. 86-1442.

United States Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit.

Argued Oct. 31, 1986.

Decided Oct. 31, 1986.*

Opinion Dec. 1, 1986.

Rehearing Denied Jan. 14, 1987.

Defendant appealed from injunctive order entered by the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, Hubert L. Will, J., in trademark infringement suit. The Court of Appeals, Posner, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) stipulation authorized judge to enter injunction that deviated from language of stipulation, and (2) plaintiff was entitled to award of reasonable attorney fees as sanction for defendant's frivolous appeal.

Affirmed, with sanctions.

1. Stipulations ⇐14(12)

Stipulation authorized judge to enter injunction that deviated from language of stipulation, where stipulation provided that defendant would consent to entry of a final order, and then stated gist of order, thus leaving it to district judge to formulate exact language.

2. Injunction ⇐70

Principles of equity jurisprudence codified in Federal Rules of Civil Procedure would automatically extend reach of injunction against corporation to officers, successors, etc., when acting in these capacities. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 65(d), 28 U.S.C.A.

3. Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2747

Plaintiff was entitled to award of a reasonable attorney fees as sanction for defendant's frivolous appeal, where appeal was effort by defendant to renege on stipulation that it signed with its eyes open and waiver of attorney fees in parties' stipulation had reference only to proceedings in district court. F.R.A.P.Rule 38, 28 U.S.C.A.

Edward D. Gilhooly, Edward D. Gilhooly, Ltd., Chicago, Ill., for defendant-appellant.

James Van Santen, Hill, Van Santen, Steadman & Simpson, Chicago, Ill., for plaintiff-appellee.

Before BAUER, Chief Judge, POSNER, Circuit Judge, and PELL, Senior Circuit Judge.

POSNER, Circuit Judge.

This appeal presents a novel although not difficult question as to the meaning of a stipulation resolving a trademark dispute. Floralife, Inc. sells products to florists, including a preservative for cut flowers which it sells under the trademark "Floralife." Floraline International, Inc. offers the public a flower-ordering and delivery service through telephone terminals installed in public areas. Floraline sought to register "Floraline" with the Patent and Trademark Office as a service mark. Floralife filed both an opposition with the Patent and Trademark office and a complaint, in the federal district court in Chicago, charging Floraline with trademark infringement. Floralife requested and was granted a preliminary injunction in that action, and Floraline filed a notice of appeal to this court; the Patent and Trademark Office had by this time sustained Floralife's opposition to the registration of "Floraline," and Floraline had appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. At this juncture Floraline dismissed its appeal in this court and the parties signed and filed with the district court a stipulation the key paragraph of which states:

> In the event the decision of the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board [of the Patent and Trademark Office] is affirmed ..., by the Federal Circuit ..., defendant [Floraline] will thereupon waive its objection to [personal] jurisdiction and venue in this action, and will consent to entry of a final order against defendant, without the assessment of damages, or attorney fees and costs, permanently enjoining defendant from using any trademark "Floraline" as a word feature or in stylized form for telemarketing units and floral industry credit cards, or on the services as specified in the defendant's various trademark application(s) or any other manner in the floral industry.

The Federal Circuit did affirm, whereupon Floralife submitted to the district judge, and the district judge, after a brief discussion with counsel for both parties but without an evidentiary hearing, signed, the following injunctive order:

> Defendant Floraline International, Inc., its officers, agents and all persons or entities in concert or privity with it are permanently enjoined from all further use of the trademark, trade style or designation "FLORALINE" or any colorable imitation thereof whether as trademark, trade name, servicemark or any other colorable imitation of the trademark and trade name "FLORALIFE" of the Plaintiff Floralife, Inc. Such injunction is against any use by the Defendant of any trademark "FLORALINE" as a word feature or in stylized form for telemarketing units and floral industry credit cards, or on the services as specified in the Defendant's various trademark application(s) or in any other manner in the floral industry.

Floraline appeals, arguing that the stipulation did not authorize the judge to enter an injunction that deviated from the language of the stipulation.

[1] The stipulation is a contract. It must be enforced according to its terms. If it had said that, in the event of the Federal Circuit's affirming the ruling by the Patent and Trademark Office, Floraline would consent to the entry of the following order, or the attached order, or an order stating as follows, or had otherwise indicated that the parties had agreed on the language of the consent order, then the judge could not (at least on the authority of the stipulation) enter a different order, as he did here. But that is not what the stipulation said. It said that Floraline would consent to the entry of a final order, and then it stated the gist of the order, thus leaving it to the district judge, upon considering proposed drafts of an actual order when and if the condition precedent in the stipulation was fulfilled, to formulate the exact language. If Floraline mistrusted the judge, all it had to do was negotiate the exact language of the order with Floralife.

[2] Any other interpretation would be ridiculous, because the language in the stipulation is so plainly not the language of a final order. A minor point is that by omitting all reference to Floraline's officers, and possible successors and assigns, the stipulation, if treated as a draft order rather than the sketch of an order, might invite an argument that no human being could be held in contempt for violating it and that Floraline could not be prevented from reincorporating and continuing to use "Floraline" as a trademark. In fact the principles of equity jurisprudence codified in Fed.R.Civ.P. 65(d) would automatically extend the reach of the injunction to officers, successors, etc., when acting in these capacities (see 11 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2956 (1973))—but then Floraline cannot argue that the judge added to the stipulation when he made the injunction expressly applicable to such persons. In any event a careful draftsman of an actual injunction would not be likely to leave the matter to implication.

More important, if the "order" is deemed limited to the word "Floraline," thus excluding such colorable imitations as "Flora-Line," it is not worth the paper it is typed on, since it would enable Floraline to continue its trademark infringement, even while complying with the "order" by abandoning the trademark "Floraline." Finally, if the "order" is deemed limited to the trademark "Floraline" and excludes the use of the name as a trade name, then since Floraline must use its name in its advertising to identify itself to its customers, and on its telephone terminals and trademarks, there will be the same likelihood of confusion as with use of the name as a trademark. The only significant differences between the stipulation and the injunction actually entered by the judge are those necessary to give the stipulation the body and breath of an effective injunction. It is hardly likely that Floralife, in negotiating the stipulation, meant to give up its case against Floraline (which it had already won both in the Patent and Trademark Office and in the district court) in exchange for a porous, empty, worthless injunction—which is the interpretation that Floraline places on the stipulation. The words of the stipulation do not compel or even support such an interpretation, and contract interpretations that give one party everything and the other party nothing are implausible anyway and certainly should not be adopted without any support in the language of the contract.

[3] Floralife has asked us to award it the attorney's fees that it has incurred in defending this appeal, which it describes as a disingenuous attempt by Floraline to wriggle out of the obligations that it freely assumed by signing the stipulation. The parties by their stipulation consented to be bound by the outcome of the appeal to the Federal Circuit, which Floralife won hands down; and the injunction entered by the district judge was no broader than Floraline should have anticipated as the consequence of losing in the Federal Circuit, which upheld the finding of a likelihood of confusion between "Floraline" and "Floralife." We agree that the appeal is frivolous—an effort by Floraline to renege on a stipulation that it signed with its eyes open—and that the waiver of attorney's fees in the stipulation has reference only to the proceedings in the district court; and we reiterate this court's unwillingness to allow its processes to be abused by litigants unwilling or unable to evaluate the merits of an appeal. See, e.g., Dreis & Krump Mfg. Co. v. International Ass'n of Machinists & Aerospace Workers, Dist. No. 8, 802 F.2d 247, 255–56 (7th Cir.1986). Rule 38 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure authorizes an award of reasonable attorney's fees as a sanction for a frivolous appeal. See Note of Advisory Comm. to Rule 38; Dreis & Krump Mfg. Co. v. International Ass'n of Machinists & Aerospace Workers, Dist. No. 8, supra, 802 F.2d at 255. Floralife shall submit to the clerk of this court, within 15 days, a statement of its attorney's fees reasonably incurred in defending this appeal.

Argued Feb. 24, 1986.

As Amended March 3, 1987.

Unsuccessful bidder for professional basketball franchise and its president brought antitrust action against successful bidder and its stockholders, sports arena owner and others. The United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, Stanley J. Roszkowski, J., bifurcated the trial, found that the successful bidder and its stockholders and the arena owner had violated the antitrust laws. The District Court awarded damages, 594 F.Supp. 853. Defendants' motion to amend was denied but plaintiffs' motion to amend was granted in part and denied in part, 609 F.Supp. 982, and appeal was taken. The Court of Appeals, Cudahy, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) the denial of lease of sports arena to the unsuccessful bidder violated the Sherman Act; (2) the defendants' lobbying of board of governors of basketball league to reject transfer of franchise to unsuccessful bidder was not antitrust violation; (3) the defendants did not commit tortious interference with contract under Illinois law; (4) the defendants did commit the tort of unlawful interference with prospective advantage; (5) death of one defendant did not abate award of treble damages; (6) error in the calculation of "opportunity cost" required remand for recalculation of damages; (7) punitive damages were not recoverable on state tort claim; and (8) prejudgment interest could not be recovered.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part, vacated in part and remanded.

Easterbrook, Circuit Judge, dissented in part and filed opinion.

1. Monopolies ⇐12(1.3)

"Relevant market," for purposes of antitrust laws, is comprised of those commodities reasonably interchangeable by consumers for the same purposes, and in making the determination of the "relevant market" the trier must decide whether the product is unique or has close substitutes, as to which there are substantial cross-elasticities of demand. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

2. Federal Courts ⇐856

Finding in antitrust case as to area of effective competition and relevant market is subject to the "clearly erroneous" standard of review. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

3. Monopolies ⇐12(1.3)

When competitors for acquisition of franchise are also bidding to acquire access to a market, it is not clearly erroneous to define the "relevant market" as the market to which access is sought. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

4. Monopolies ⇐28(7.4)

In antitrust suit between successful and unsuccessful bidders for professional basketball team, findings that the relevant product market was the presentation of live professional basketball and that the relevant geographic market was the Chicago metropolitan area were not clearly erroneous. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

5. Monopolies ⇐12(6)

Successful bidders' refusal to lease sports arena that they controlled effectively cut off all competition for acquisition of professional basketball franchise and thereby inflicted antitrust injury on unsuccessful bidder. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

6. Monopolies ⇐12(1)

The Sherman Act does protect competition to acquire a natural monopoly. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

7. Monopolies ⇐12(1.7)

Fact that the precise impact of alleged anticompetitive conduct on the broad consuming public remains unfocused does not prevent finding that antitrust laws have been violated. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, §§ 1, 2, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

8. Monopolies ⇐17(2.2)

The "essential facilities doctrine" imposes upon a firm controlling an essential facility, i.e., a facility that cannot reasonably be duplicated and to which access is necessary if one wishes to compete, the obligation to make that facility available to competitors on nondiscriminatory terms.

improper disclosures. 18 U.S.C. §§ 401(3), 2(b)(2)(C), 1503. We sentenced Girardi as an accessory after the fact to the marijuana distribution crime which the grand jury was investigating. For a full description of the case's background, see the opinion affirming the defendant's sentence, United States v. Girardi, 62 F.3d 943 (7th Cir.1995). Girardi now brings a motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, requesting that we reduce his sentence. For the reasons that follow, we deny the motion.

[1] Girardi first appears to re-argue an earlier motion he filed under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(2). Under that provision, if the Sentencing Commission lowers a sentencing range and generally expresses that the reduced range may be applied retroactively, then a court may reduce the sentence when warranted in light of the sentencing factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a). On January 4, 1996, we denied Girardi's § 3582(c)(2) motion, emphasizing the seriousness and uniqueness of the crime. Girardi failed to file a timely notice of appeal. Insofar as the defendant seeks reconsideration of the earlier denial, we adhere to our original decision.

[2,3] Next, the defendant also argues, in a "Supplement Motion," that we should depart downward and reduce his sentence due to extraordinary family circumstances. Supp. Mot. at 3-12. If Girardi means to argue that we should correct a sentencing guidelines error, § 2255 does not empower us to do so, see Scott v. United States, 997 F.2d 340, 342 (7th Cir.1993), nor would we have done so at the time of sentencing. If Girardi is contending that we should now, based on the unfortunate circumstances that have arisen after sentencing, reduce his sentence based on familial concerns, we possess no authority to modify the sentence on those grounds absent a motion from the Director of the Bureau of Prisons. See 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A); Orajo v. United States, No. 95-CV-1184, 1997 WL 139908, at *1 (E.D.N.Y March 12, 1997); United States v. Hankins, No.Crim. 93-221-01, 1996 WL 502199, at *2 n. 2 (E.D.Pa. Aug.27, 1996); *United States v. For the reasons stated, the defendant's motion is denied. It is so ordered.

v.

H & R BLOCK TAX SERVICES, INC., a Missouri corporation, and John Does 1-10,

No. 96 C 6647.

United States District Court, N.D. Illinois, Eastern Division.

July 10, 1997.

Client of tax preparation service company sued company for breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty. Company moved to dismiss. The District Court, Castillo, J., held that: (1) client's petition alleging that company solicited and charged client for "rapid refund" tax services despite knowing that services were unavailable stated cause of action for breach of contract, but (2) company's relationship with taxpayer-customer did not constitute agency or fiduciary relationship.

Granted in part and denied in part.

1. Contracts ⇐322(2)

Under Illinois law, client's petition alleging that tax preparation service company solicited and charged client and other customers for "rapid refund" tax services despite knowing that these services were unavailable stated cause of action for breach of contract to provide client with accurate tax advice and breached obligations of good faith and fair dealing implied in contract.

2. Contracts ⇐322(2)

To state cause of action for breach of contract under Illinois law, plaintiff must allege existence of contract, including allegations indicating offer, acceptance and consideration, plaintiff's performance of all contractual conditions required of him, fact of defendant's alleged breach and existence of damages as consequence.

3. Contracts ⇐168

Although covenant of good faith and fair dealing is never independent source of duties for parties to contract under Illinois law, it is frequently invoked when one of contracting parties is vested with broad discretion in contract performance forcing dependent party to rely on party in control to exercise that discretion fairly.

4. Contracts ⇐168, 326

Under Illinois law, obligation of good faith requires party vested with contractual discretion to exercise it reasonably, not arbitrarily, capriciously, or in manner inconsistent with reasonable expectations of parties and when such discretion is abused by party in bad faith, cause of action may arise derivatively from duty of good faith and fair dealing.

5. Contracts ⇐322(2)

To plead breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, party must allege that other party to contract had wide discretion in contract performance and that it exercised this discretion in bad faith.

6. Contracts ⇐312(1)

Under Illinois law when party acts with improper motive, party is exercising contractual discretion in manner inconsistent with reasonable expectations of parties and, thus, is acting in bad faith.

7. Principal and Agent ⇐18

Under Illinois law, "fiduciary duty" is duty of agent to treat his principal with utmost candor, rectitude, care, loyalty and good faith and to treat principal as well as agent would treat himself.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions

8. Fraud ⇐7

Although courts may find fiduciary relationship when one person solicits another to repose trust in his expertise, fact that one party trusts other is insufficient to create fiduciary relationship under Illinois law.

9. Fraud ⇐7

Under Illinois law, essence of fiduciary relationship is one party's dominance over other and without dominance and influence there is no fiduciary relationships regardless of level of trust between parties.

10. Fraud ⇐7

Under Illinois law, slightly dominant business position does not operate to turn formal, contractual relationship into confidential or fiduciary relationship, and thus, courts will not impose fiduciary duties absent significant degree of dominance and superiority of one party over another.

11. Principal and Agent ⇐1

Under Illinois law, "agency" relationship has the following components: 1) principal has right to control manner and method in which agent performs work for her, and 2) agent has power to subject principal to personal liability.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions

12. Principal and Agent ⇐1(2)

To form agency under Illinois law, parties need not use word agent nor characterize their relationship as principal-agent, but rather, their actions need only demonstrate desire to create agency relationship, for example, through previous course of dealing that is sanctioned or ratified by principal.

13. Principal and Agent ⇐1

Tax preparation service company's relationship with client did not constitute "agency relationship," even though client provided company with information it needed to complete her tax return, where company ran

312 984 7700 MN E CHICAGO 01/09/02 14:10 P.044/080
16di-004806

trolled manner and method in which it performed tax preparation services, such as whether client was eligible for earned income tax credit (EITC) and for refund anticipation loans.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions

14. Principal and Agent ⇐1

Key consideration in determining whether agency relationship exists is whether principal had right to control manner and method in which agent performs work.

15. Principal and Agent ⇐189(1)

Although trier of fact most often answers whether particular facts giving rise to agency relationship exist, under Illinois law plaintiff must still plead facts, which, if proved, could establish existence of agency relationship.

16. Fraud ⇐7

Under Illinois law, tax advisor-client relationship does not constitute "fiduciary relationship" as matter of law.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions

17. Fraud ⇐7

Relationship between client and tax preparation services company did not constitute "fiduciary relationship," even though client trusted in company's superior knowledge in filing her tax return, where company merely performed basic accounting functions in preparing tax returns and advising client on process, had no close, long-term relationship with client, had no influence over management and investment of client's assets and expressly offered client opportunity to ask questions.

18. Accountants ⇐9

When accountant merely performs basic accounting functions, no fiduciary relationship is created, but rather, to render accountant liable as fiduciary, plaintiff must allege that he either provided investment advice, recommended complex financial transactions, structured deals, or performed audits.

1. This Court granted Peterson's motion for class certification in a companion order issued today Cathleen M. Combs, Daniel A. Edelman, James O. Latturner, Richard Joseph Doherty, Edelman & Combs, Chicago, IL, for Plaintiff.

Theodore John Low, Altheimer & Gray, Chicago, IL, David H. Latham, Chicago, IL, for Defendants.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

CASTILLO, District Judge.

Plaintiff Belinda Peterson and the putative tax class[1] ("Peterson") allege that defendants H & R Block Tax Services, Inc. and ten of its corporate officers (collectively, "Block") solicited and charged customers for Block's "Rapid Refund" tax services despite knowing that these services were unavailable. Peterson claims that this scheme was intended to defraud Block's customers, and has made it the subject of a six-count complaint. Count I alleges that Block breached the terms of a contract to provide Peterson with accurate tax advice and breached obligations of good faith and fair dealing implied in the contract. Counts II and III add RICO claims; Count IV asserts a violation of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Practices Act; Count V claims breach of fiduciary duty; and Count VI seeks restitution. Block's motion to dismiss Counts I and V for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted is presently before the Court.

LEGAL STANDARDS

A motion to dismiss tests the sufficiency of the complaint, not the merits of the suit. Triad Assocs., Inc. v. Chicago Housing Auth., 892 F.2d 583, 586 (7th Cir.1989). When considering a motion to dismiss, the Court views all facts alleged in the complaint, as well as any inferences reasonably drawn from them, in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Mosley v. Kliment, 947 F.2d 1338, 1339 (7th Cir.1991). A motion to dismiss will be denied unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no facts which would entitle him or her to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45, 78 S.Ct. 99, 101-02, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957).

RELEVANT FACTS

The following facts are drawn from Peterson's amended complaint. Block provides tax return preparation services to the public and, as part of that business, offers electronic tax return filing and refund anticipation loans ("RALs"). Amd. Cmplt. ¶ 10. These services are advertised and represented to the public as "Rapid Refund." Id. Electronic filing means transmitting tax returns to the IRS via computer rather than through the mail. RALs are loans issued by banks in the amount of the taxpayer's anticipated federal tax refund. Participating national banks contract with Block to make RALs to Block's electronic filing customers, and repayment is secured by the actual refund from the IRS. Id. For payment of a specified fee, Block's electronic filing customers can apply for RALs while at a Block office obtaining tax preparation services. Id. ¶ 18. Block allegedly endeavors to provide each customer with professional advice on their eligibility for RALs. Id. ¶ 17.

In January 1995, Peterson entered a Block office located in Forest Park, Illinois. Id. ¶ 11. With her, she brought the information that Block would need to complete her 1994 state and federal income tax returns. During her visit, a Block employee presented Peterson with a pamphlet entitled "Service-Plus," which informed Peterson, among other things, that Block would "[d]escribe how Rapid Refund works for you."[2] Id. ¶ 16, Ex. B.[3] Block then gave Peterson a schedule of RAL fees corresponding to the amount and timing of anticipated refunds. Id. ¶ 13, Ex. C. The schedule explained how Peterson could obtain the greater portion of her refund in the fastest time by paying $155.50—the highest RAL fee. By paying $100.50—the second highest fee—Peterson could obtain a modest portion of her refund in the fastest time, and the balance within three weeks. Finally, Peterson could obtain the entire balance of her refund within three weeks by paying $51.50—the lowest fee. Id. ¶ 20. Although the Fact Sheet warns that the bank issuing the RAL may limit loans in some cases or reduce the loan if the taxpayer claims an earned income tax credit (EITC),[4] the Fact Sheet does not anticipate refunds taking longer than three weeks. Id.

Based upon the representations that Block made in these materials, Peterson authorized Block to start preparing her tax returns. Id. ¶ 23. In the process, Block determined that Peterson was eligible for an EITC. Id. ¶ 21. In addition to purchasing tax preparation services, Peterson applied for Block's RAL program.[5] Id. ¶ 23. She paid a $100.50 fee, so that she could receive an immediate refund of $399.50 and a second refund check of $2,436.00.[6] Id. Block informed Peterson that

2. The pamphlet also assured Peterson that Block had completed her return and reported all income; that all appropriate adjustments, deductions, and credits had been claimed; and that all payments had been identified. It then explained that "[o]ur service doesn't end here", in addition to pledging to describe "how Rapid Refund works for you," the pamphlet said Block would explain what happens next with the refund and answer any questions; plan for next year's refund; provide record keeping materials, and explain its service and guarantees. Amd. Cmplt. Ex. B.

3. Peterson has attached four exhibits, lettered A through D, to her amended complaint. This Court may consider documents attached to the complaint if they are referred to in the complaint and central to the plaintiff's claims. Siegel v. Village of Arlington Heights, 65 F.3d 664, 665 (7th Cir.1995). Exhibits B and C comprise the alleged contract at issue and Exhibit D is evidence of its alleged breach, while Exhibit A is central to Peterson's breach of fiduciary duty claim. Therefore, Peterson's four exhibits are properly before the Court.

4. The Earned Income Tax Credit is an advance refundable credit based on the taxpayer's earned income. The amount of the credit is a specified percentage of the taxpayer's earned income, up to a certain amount. The applicable percentage and amounts vary according to IRS tables, which account for variables such as inflation and the number of the taxpayer's qualifying children. Amd. Cmplt. ¶ 30. For persons qualifying, the EITC makes up a substantial portion of their eventual refund. Id. ¶ 31.

5. Her application for RAL was approved by the contracting bank. Def. Br. Ex. 1.

6. The latter four figures are individualized, tailored to Peterson's personal tax status. Amd. Cmplt. ¶ 19.

9312 984 7700 NW E CHICAGO 01/04/02 14:11 P.045/080

she would get the second refund check in two or three weeks. Id. ¶¶ 22, 23. She did not.[7] Id. ¶ 28. Instead, Peterson's refund was delayed as a result of the IRS's decision to review all 1994 tax year returns claiming an EITC in an effort to combat fraudulent EITC claims. Id. ¶ 28, Ex. D. The IRS sent Peterson a letter on February 20, 1995, a few weeks after she had filed her return. Id. The letter explained that the remainder of her refund—her second refund check—would be delayed for at least eight weeks because she had claimed an EITC. Id.

At the time that it prepared Peterson's tax return and charged her for its Rapid Refund service, Block allegedly knew that Peterson could not obtain a Rapid Refund because refunds for customers claiming an EITC were being delayed by the IRS for at least eight weeks. Id. ¶¶ 24, 33. In short, Peterson claims that Block knew persons claiming EITCs were ineligible for RAL but charged them for it anyway. Although Block allegedly failed to disclose this information to its customers, Block later informed its shareholders. Id. ¶ 35. In its Form 10-K dated July 28, 1995, Block stated, "During the 1995 tax season, the IRS made further changes to its electronic return processing systems and procedures to crack down on taxpayer fraud believed to be associated with the earned income tax credit claimed on returns. These changes resulted in delays in the IRS's issuance of refunds associated with the EITC . . . RAL's were not made available on the portion of the refund amount attributable to the EITC." Id. ¶ 35, Ex. A.

In Count I of her complaint, Peterson contends that Block breached a contract to provide accurate tax advice, as well as the obligations of good faith and fair dealing implied in the contract, by selling the Rapid Refund service to customers who were not eligible for it. Peterson further claims, in Count V of her complaint, that Block breached its fiduciary duty as a professional tax adviser to the class members by misrepresenting RAL services for the purpose of advancing Block's own interests. Block moves to dismiss both Counts under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim.

ANALYSIS

I. Count I—Breach of Contract

Peterson's breach of contract claim alleges that Block contracted with her to provide accurate tax advice, particularly with regard to RAL availability, through its Service*Plus* pamphlet and RAL Fact Sheet. In exchange, Peterson paid the $100.50 RAL fee, expecting to receive this service as promised. By soliciting and charging Peterson for RAL when it knew she did not qualify for the service, Block allegedly breached its express contractual obligations, as well as covenants of good faith and fair dealing implied in the contract.

Block responds initially that the Court should dismiss Count I because Block has no contract with Peterson: rather, the only contract formed was the loan contract between Peterson and the lending bank. After all, Block points out the Bank is clearly identified in both the loan contract and RAL application as the lender—in other words, as the entity responsible for issuing the RALs. Moreover, the RAL Fact Sheet warns that the Bank has the authority to limit loans or reduce the amount of the RAL for applicants claiming an EITC. Consequently, Block claims, any promises that Peterson would obtain her refund by a specific date fall exclusively on the Bank's shoulders.

[1] A careful examination of the pleadings reveals that Block misperceives Peterson's breach of contract claim. The amended complaint does not allege that the lending bank or Block breached the loan contract. Nor does Peterson complain that the Bank limited her loan or reduced her RAL based on the fact that she claimed an EITC—indeed, the bank accepted her RAL application without such conditions. Most importantly, Peterson does not allege that her claim is based upon either the Bank or Block's failure to deliver her full tax refund within a certain amount of time. What Peterson claims is that, based on the language of Service*Plus* pamphlet and RAL Fact Sheet, Block had a written contractual obligation to advise her accurately on tax matters. She alleges that Block, not the lending bank, prepared her tax forms, determined she was eligible for an EITC, and promised to render her accurate tax advice when it pledged in the Service*Plus* pamphlet, among other things, to 1) describe how Rapid Refund would work for her and 2) explain what would happen next with her tax return. Since Peterson was claiming an EITC, describing how Rapid Refund would work for Peterson amounts to explaining that it wouldn't. Instead, Block solicited Peterson's interest in RAL by showing her the Fact Sheet and sold her the service for a hefty fee, all the while aware that Peterson could not take advantage of RAL. The Bank had no part in making these representations; it does not purport to dole out tax advice, sell the RAL service, or opine on how RAL works for a particular customer. Because a plaintiff need only plead a claim for relief "under any set of facts" consistent with the complaint, we will not force Peterson to accept Block's characterization of her contract claim. See Rice v. Panchal, 65 F.3d 637, 639 (7th Cir. 1995) (paramount policy of the well-pleaded complaint rule is that the plaintiff is master of her complaint). We therefore find that Peterson's claim is based on the alleged written service contract (i.e., the Service*Plus* pamphlet) with Block for tax advice.

Block's sole legal authority on this issue is a case also involving Block's RAL service, which granted summary judgment on a claim that Block had breached a contract promising RAL check deposits by a specific date. See Washington v. H & R Block, Inc., No. 90 CH 2312 (Cook County, Ill. Jan. 6, 1995). This case is unavailing. The Washington plaintiffs' breach of contract theory differs markedly from Peterson's—it was based entirely on the premise that Block had guaranteed the plaintiffs that they would receive their Rapid Refunds by a specific date. The Washington court found that Block never guaranteed a specific date for refunds; Block merely told the plaintiffs when they could "expect" their checks to come in. Tr. at 7, 11. The court further determined that the relevant agreement addressing refund timing was the loan contract between the plaintiffs and the lending bank. Id. at 11. Here, by contrast, the alleged contract concerns certain customers' eligibility for RAL in the first place, not refund timing. And unlike the equivocal timing estimates in Washington, Block's obligation to tell customers how RAL would work for them is unqualified. Because Peterson's claim is based on Block's alleged obligation to provide accurate tax advice, not on the loan contract with the Bank, the Washington court's opinion has no application here.[8]

[2] Block next argues that, assuming the loan contract fails to dispose of Peterson's contract claim, we should still dismiss Count I because Peterson has not set forth sufficient facts giving rise to a service contract between her and Block for tax advice. To state a cause of action for breach of contract under Illinois law,[9] a plaintiff "must allege the existence of the contract, including allegations indicating an offer, acceptance and consideration, the plaintiff's performance of all contractual conditions required of him, the fact of the defendant's alleged breach, and the existence of damages as a consequence." Nurvio v. Chicago Commodities, Inc., 257 Ill.App.3d 437, 443, 195 Ill.Dec. 670, 676, 628 N.E.2d 1134, 1139 (1993); see Weil v. First Midwest Bank of Danville, 142 Ill.App.3d 703, 706–09, 96 Ill.Dec. 516, 520–22, 491 N.E.2d 795, 799–801 (1986); see also Steve-

7. Peterson had previously used the services of Block, including Rapid Refund, on two or three occasions. Each time she claimed an EITC and received her RAL within three days of filing her return. Amd. Compl. ¶ 15.

8. We also note that the requirements for surviving a motion to dismiss are much less stringent than on summary judgment, which was the procedural posture facing the Washington court (although state procedural rules governed that case). Here, Peterson's facts are assumed true and examined only for purposes of stating a claim for relief. On summary judgment, however, the plaintiff must point to specific evidence that precludes judgment as a matter of law. See Liberty v. Gas Research Inst., 31 F.3d 451, 454 (7th Cir.1994), and the court views all facts through the "prism of the substantive evidentiary burden," see Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 254, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2513, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986), which lies on the plaintiff in a breach of contract action.

9. The parties do not dispute that Illinois law applies to Peterson's state law claims.

Jecki v. Schwartz Paper Co., 824 F.Supp. 821, 829 (N.D.Ill.1993) (plaintiff satisfies pleading requirements of Fed.R.Civ.P. 8 by alleging that a contract was formed, plaintiff performed it, defendant breached it, and plaintiff suffered damages; detail need only be sufficient to enable defendants to identify the contract at issue). According to Block, the only contract that could possibly have been formed between Peterson and Block was for tax preparation and electronic filing services, and Peterson does not contend that those services were deficient in any way.

We find that, under the broad pleading standards of Fed.R.Civ.P. 8, Peterson's complaint alleges the requisite elements for a contract to render tax advice. First, Peterson pleads the existence of a contract that offers services beyond simply preparing tax forms. Block's Service*Plus* pamphlet begins with the basics, informing Peterson that it has prepared her 1995 tax returns and ensuring that: (1) the return is complete and all income has been reported; (2) all appropriate adjustments and deductions have been claimed; and (3) all relevant credits and payments have been identified and claimed, including the EITC. But Service*Plus* does not end there; it goes on to promise that Block will: (1) explain what happens next with your tax return; (2) answer any questions you may have; (3) plan for the refund you want next year; (4) describe how Rapid Refund works for you; and (5) provide record keeping material. It is this latter set of services that indicates Block is knowledgeable in tax matters and can ably answer its customers' tax questions, explain what the IRS will do with their tax returns, offer advice on obtaining tax refunds in the future, and explain the inner workings of Rapid Refund.

Peterson likewise sufficiently alleges acceptance of Block's offer to provide tax advice, as well as consideration and performance. Peterson authorized Block to proceed with preparing her tax return, and, after Block presented her with the Service*Plus* pamphlet and RAL Fact Sheet, paid the $100.50 fee in order to receive an immediate refund of $399.50 and a second refund check of $2,436.00 on an expedited basis. This payment, Peterson alleges, was based upon Block's explanation of how Rapid Refund could work for her. It also served as consideration, having worked as a monetary benefit to Block and a financial detriment to Peterson, see Wait, 142 Ill.App.3d at 708, 96 Ill.Dec. at 522–23, 491 N.E.2d at 801–02, and, besides filling out the loan application, was the only act required for Peterson's performance.

Third, Peterson adequately alleges that Block breached the contract by knowingly providing false tax advice. By the time Block prepared Peterson's tax return and sold her Rapid Refund services, it had already determined that she was eligible for an EITC. The key allegation, whose truth we must assume in this opinion, is that Block also knew, at the same time, that the IRS was delaying—for a minimum of eight weeks—refunds on returns claiming the tax credit. Armed with this knowledge, Block had the obligation, as part of its duty to explain how Rapid Refund would work for Peterson, to tell her that she was ineligible to receive the principal benefit of RAL—obtaining her second refund check on an expedited basis. But it never did so. As a consequence, Peterson paid for a service she had no hope of receiving, expending $100.50 for an expedited check worth only $399.50. She suffered damages by forfeiting the portion of the fee attributable to securing an expedited second refund check worth $2436.00 and losing the time value of her money while it languished in the government's coffer.[9]

9. Block proffers one more argument, which merits only footnote discussion, in support of its claim that the only contract it had with Peterson was one for tax preparation and filing services, not tax advice. According to Block, the past tense language in the Service*Plus* pamphlet reveals that Block does not give it to customers until after preparing and electronically filing their tax returns. At this point, Block has already performed its contractual obligations, the subsequently tendered pamphlet cannot thrust upon Block any additional duties. But this argument is premised on an erroneous assumption—that preparing and filing Peterson's tax return was tantamount to full contractual performance. We rejected this assumption in finding that Service*Plus* promised something more. In light of Service*Plus*'s offer to counsel Peterson as to how Rapid Refund "works" for her, Block did not discharge its contractual obligations simply by preparing and filing Peterson's return. Moreover, this key language is written in the future tense, contemplating that responsibilities remain after Block has prepared and filed tax forms.

We acknowledge that Peterson's express contract claim is somewhat tenuous. The Service*Plus* pamphlet does not explicitly promise that Block will render accurate tax advice. Nor does it state that Block will accept responsibility for circumstances outside its control that later undermine its advice on how RAL "works" for a particular customer. What is contemplated by Service*Plus*'s pledge to explain how RAL "works" for someone is honesty and forthrightness in that explanation. In this respect, Peterson's breach of contract claim is saved only by her allegation that Block knew before telling Peterson about its RAL service that the IRS was taking action that would render her ineligible for RAL—in essence, a deliberate breach of its promise to advise Peterson honestly about how RAL would work for her. The liberal federal pleading rules governing breach of contract claims require us to accept this allegation's truth. And Peterson is required only to allege facts sufficient to notify Block that the service contract was breached. See Murphy v. White Hen Pantry, 691 F.2d 350, 352 (7th Cir.1982) (under lenient federal pleading rules, breach of contract claim need only plead facts sufficient to notify the defendant that an agreement has been violated); see also Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47–48, 78 S.Ct. 99, 102–03, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957) (complaints are to be construed liberally under the notice pleading theory of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure). We cannot say beyond doubt that she has failed to do this.

[3, 4] Moreover, Peterson's breach of contract claim is redeemed by the fact that Peterson does not rely solely on the terms of the Service*Plus* pamphlet. Peterson also asserts a breach of the implied contractual obligation of good faith and fair dealing, which Illinois law incorporates into every contract. Oil Express Nat'l, Inc. v. Burgstone, 958 F.Supp. 366, 369 (N.D.Ill.1997); Northern Trust Co. v. VIII South Michigan Assocs., 276 Ill.App.3d 355, 367, 212 Ill.Dec. 760, 769, 657 N.E.2d 1095, 1104 (1995); Dugan v. McDonald's Corp., 125 Ill.App.3d 972, 989–90, 81 Ill.Dec. 166, 169, 466 N.E.2d 958, 971 (1984). Although this covenant "has never been an independent source of duties for the parties to a contract," it is frequently invoked when one of the contracting parties is vested with broad discretion in contract performance, Oil Express Nat'l, 958 F.Supp. at 369, forcing the "dependent party (to) rely on the party in control to exercise that discretion fairly." Dugan, 125 Ill.App.3d at 990, 81 Ill.Dec. at 169, 466 N.E.2d at 971. In short, the obligation of good faith "requires the party vested with contractual discretion to exercise it reasonably, not arbitrarily, capriciously, or in a manner inconsistent with the reasonable expectations of the parties." First Nat'l Bank v. Sylvester, 196 Ill.App.3d 902, 910–11, 144 Ill.Dec. 24, 30, 554 N.E.2d 1063, 1069 (1990); see Oil Express Nat'l, 958 F.Supp. at 369. "When such discretion is abused by a party in bad faith, then, a cause of action may arise derivatively from the duty of good faith and fair dealing." Oil Express Nat'l, 958 F.Supp. at 369

[5] To plead a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, Peterson must allege 1) that Block had wide discretion in contract performance and 2) that it exercised this discretion in bad faith. Id. at 369–70. She meets these requirements with the contentions that Block deliberately dispensed erroneous tax advice by soliciting and charging unsuspecting customers for a service Block knew they could never obtain.

First, Block was plainly vested with broad discretion in providing Peterson accurate tax advice. Its tax return preparation and RAL business primarily serves customers who, like Peterson, are not wealthy (with an income sufficiently low to claim an EITC) and are relatively unsophisticated in tax matters (needing assistance to fill out tax forms). Consequently, these customers depend on Block's expertise, reposing in Block wide discretion to render appropriate tax advice. For example, Block determines for its customers what adjustments to income and deductions to make, and what credits and payments to identify and claim. And only Block knows what additional services, listed on this information, are appropriate for each customer. In this case, Block allegedly knew that Rapid Refund services would not work for Peterson because she was claiming an earned income credit. But instead of being truthful, Block used its discretion and superior knowledge to keep this information from her.

[6] Likewise, Block's alleged actions show bad faith. Its concealment was allegedly deliberate, done with the improper motive of defrauding Peterson by charging her for a service she could not obtain. "Where a party acts with improper motive ... that party is exercising contractual discretion in a manner inconsistent with the reasonable expectations of the parties and therefore is acting in bad faith." Dayan, 125 Ill.App.3d at 991, 81 Ill.Dec. at 170, 466 N.E.2d at 972; see also Saunders v. Michigan Ave. Nat'l Bank, 278 Ill.App.3d 307, 316, 214 Ill.Dec. 1036, 1044, 662 N.E.2d 602, 610 (1996) (improper motive is a "predominant theme" in bad faith cases). Rather than exercising its discretion reasonably, Block transgressed Peterson's reasonable expectation of receiving accurate tax advice by duping her into paying money for a service wholly unavailable to her. If proven, such conduct would unquestionably violate Block's duty of good faith and Fair dealing.

In sum, when we consider the obligation of good faith and fair dealing inherent in every contract, we conclude that Peterson has satisfied the generous federal pleading standards for breach of contract. Block's motion to dismiss is therefore denied as to Count I.

II. Count V—Breach of Fiduciary Duty

In Count V, Peterson alleges that Block owed her a fiduciary duty by virtue of its position as her tax adviser and accountant. Block allegedly abandoned this duty because it fraudulently misrepresented that Rapid Refund services were available to taxpayers who claimed an EITC. Instead of putting its customers' interests first, Block allegedly worked only to advance its own interests—contrary to its fiduciary duty. Block responds that the Court should dismiss Count V because 1) Block's affiliation with Peterson does not fit any of the traditional fiduciary models, including an agency relationship; 2) its relation to her as a tax preparer (and assuming the truth of Peterson's allegations) advisor or accountant does not give rise to fiduciary duties; 3) Peterson does not plead facts sufficient to establish any other fiduciary relationship; and 4) even assuming that Block owed Peterson a fiduciary duty, the alleged wrongs fall outside the scope of that duty.

[7–10] "A fiduciary duty is the duty of an agent to treat his principal with the utmost candor, rectitude, care, loyalty, and good faith—in fact to treat the principal as well as the agent would treat himself" Lagen v. Balcor Co., 274 Ill.App.3d 11, 21, 210 Ill.Dec. 773, 780, 653 N.E.2d 968, 975 (1995). Although courts may find a fiduciary relationship when one person solicits another to repose trust in his expertise, "[t]he fact that one party trusts the other is insufficient [to create a fiduciary relationship]. We trust most people with whom we choose to do business." Id. The "essence" of a fiduciary relationship is one party's dominance over the other. Id. "Indeed, in the absence of dominance and influence there is no fiduciary relationships regardless of the level of trust between the parties." Id. (citations omitted). Significantly, a "slightly dominant business position ... [does] not operate to turn a formal, contractual relationship into a confidential or fiduciary relationship." Id. (citations and internal quotations omitted). Courts therefore will not impose fiduciary duties absent a "significant degree of dominance and superiority of one party over another." Id.

Illinois courts recognize that these elements are manifested by nature in certain relationships, which they deem fiduciary as a matter of law. See, e.g., Winston & Strawn v. Nosal, 279 Ill.App.3d 231, 239, 215 Ill.Dec. 842, 847–48, 664 N.E.2d 239, 244–45 (1996) (partners); Neaton v. Aitken, 260 Ill.App.3d 717, 722, 198 Ill.Dec. 751, 756, 633 N.E.2d 213, 218 (1994) (joint venturers); Lossman v. Lossman, 274 Ill.App.3d 1, 7, 210 Ill.Dec. 818, 824, 653 N.E.2d 1280, 1286 (1995) (attorney and client); Matter of Estate of Dynniewicz, 271 Ill.App.3d 616, 622, 208 Ill.Dec. 154, 159, 648 N.E.2d 1075, 1081 (1995) (guardian and ward); Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Danville, 254 Ill.App.3d 251, 261, 191 Ill.Dec. 711, 719, 624 N.E.2d 899, 907 (1993) (trustee and beneficiary); Kurtz v. Solomon, 276 Ill.App.3d 643, 651, 212 Ill.Dec. 31, 37, 656 N.E.2d 184, 190 (1st Dist.1995) (agent and principal). Peterson's first argument in support of her fiduciary claim is that Block owed her fiduciary duties as a matter of law by agreeing to act as her agent.

A. Block Was Not Peterson's Agent

[11, 12] An agency relationship has two components: 1) the principal has the right to control the manner and method in which the agent performs work for her, and 2) the agent has the power to subject the principal to personal liability. Knapp v. Hill, 276 Ill.App.3d 378, 380, 212 Ill.Dec. 723, 726, 657 N.E.2d 1068, 1071 (1995). To form an agency, the parties need not use the word "agent" nor characterize their relationship as principal-agent. RTC v. Hardisty, 269 Ill.App.3d 613, 619, 207 Ill.Dec. 62, 66–67, 646 N.E.2d 628, 632–33 (1995). Their actions need only demonstrate a desire to create an agency relationship, for example, through a previous course of dealing that is sanctioned or ratified by the principal. Id. at 67, 646 N.E.2d at 633. "Once an agency relationship is found, a fiduciary relationship arises as a matter of law." Letsos v. Century 21—New West Realty, 285 Ill.App.3d 1050, 1060, 221 Ill.Dec. 310, 317, 676 N.E.2d 217, 224 (1996).

[13–15] Peterson and Block's relationship fails the first and most critical element. The "key consideration" in determining whether an agency relationship exists is whether the principal had the right to control the "manner and method" in which the agent performs work. Knapp, 276 Ill.App.3d at 380, 212 Ill.Dec. at 726, 657 N.E.2d at 1071. Although Peterson argues in her brief that Block's clients "direct[ed]" Block "regarding what returns to file and what information to put in the return," Pl. Br. at 9–10, the allegations in her complaint do not support this. The most Peterson alleges is that she provided Block the information it needed to complete her tax return. From there, Block took over. It was Block who made the determination that Peterson was eligible for an EITC and, according to ServicePlus, ensured that all of Peterson's income was reported, her adjustments and deductions claimed, and her credits and payments identified. Furthermore, Peterson's complaint indicates that it was Block who wielded complete control in determining, RAL eligibility. There is no allegation that Peterson instructed Block as to how it should go about preparing her return or assessing what services were available to her. Consequently, the complaint is devoid of facts demonstrating that Peterson controlled the "manner or method" in which Block performed its services.[11] Although the trier of fact most often answers whether particular facts giving rise to an agency relationship exist, "a plaintiff must still plead facts, which, if proved, could establish the existence of an agency relationship." Knapp, 276 Ill.App.3d at 382, 212 Ill.Dec. at 727, 657 N.E.2d at 1072. Peterson has not done so.

B. No Other Fiduciary Relationship Exists

[16, 17] Unable to establish a fiduciary relationship as a matter of law, Peterson attempts to impose fiduciary duties on Block on an "ad hoc" basis, alleging that the particular tax advisor/accountant-client relationship between her and Block rendered Block her fiduciary.[12] See Burdett v. Miller, 957 F.2d 1375, 1381 (7th Cir.1992) (while investment advisor-advisee relationship is not fiduciary by law, "fiduciary duties are sometimes imposed on an ad hoc basis."). In support of her position, Peterson cites a plethora of cases, only two of which were decided in this circuit and/or based on Illinois law, where courts held that the facts before them warranted attributing fiduciary status to a tax advisor or accountant. See, e.g., Burdett, 957

11. Because Peterson's agency claim fails the first element, we express no opinion as to whether Peterson satisfies the second, i.e., whether Block had the power to subject her to personal liability.

12. At the present time, Illinois courts do not consider the tax advisor-client relationship fiduciary as a matter of law. See Congregation of the Passion v. Touche Ross & Co., 224 Ill.App.3d 559, 590, 166 Ill.Dec. 642, 663, 586 N.E.2d 600, 621 (1991) aff'd, 159 Ill.2d 137, 201 Ill.Dec. 71, 636 N.E.2d 503 (1994).

312 984 7700 MN E CHICAGO 01/04/02 14:13 P.048/080
16di-004810

F.2d 1375; Terrell v. Childers, 920 F.Supp. 854 (N.D.Ill.1996).

But these cases do not assist Peterson because in each, the defendants did far more than simply provide basic tax advice on an isolated basis. The courts' decisions to impose fiduciary duties were all premised on the parties' long-term, ongoing relationships, as well as the defendants' roles in managing assets, rendering complex investment advice and/or performing audits. For example, in Burdett the Seventh Circuit held a financial advisor liable to his investor for breach of fiduciary duty where the advisor, in addition to preparing the investor's income tax returns, recommended a number of investments over several years and rendered advice on a series of tax shelters. Burdett, 957 F.2d at 1378–79. The court emphasized that the parties "cultivated a relation of trust ... over a period of years," and that the defendant induced the plaintiff "to accept his advice with no questions asked or answered." Id. at 1381–82. Likewise, in Terrell, the court concluded that a genuine issue of fact existed as to whether the defendant, a tax planning expert retained for several years to provide budget advice and preparation, tax advice and planning, insurance and estate planning, as well as to manage the plaintiff's assets, owed a fiduciary duty to his client. Terrell, 920 F.Supp. at 857.

[18] The facts before us are vastly different: Block has no close, long-term relationship with Peterson or influence over the management and investment of her assets. Unlike the sophisticated financial advisor in Burdett and the tax planning expert in Terrell, Block is alleged to have done nothing more than perform a basic accounting function—preparing tax returns and advising its customers on the process. "Where an accountant merely performs basic accounting functions, no fiduciary relationship is created." Fleet Nat'l Bank v. H & D Entertainment, Inc., 926 F.Supp. 226, 242 (D.Mass. 1996), aff'd, 96 F.3d 532 (1st Cir.1996). Indeed, to render an accountant liable as a fiduciary, the plaintiff must allege that he either provided investment advice, recommended complex financial transactions, structured deals, see id., or performed audits, see, e.g., In re DeLorean Motor Co., 56 B.R. 936 (Bankr.E.D.Mich.1986), none of which Peterson claims Block did here. Moreover, Peterson did not have to accept Block's advice blindly. Block expressly offered her the opportunity, via the Service*Plus* pamphlet, to ask questions, a factor whose absence the Seventh Circuit found significant in Burdett. The sharp distinctions between these cases and the one before us prevent Peterson from resting her ad hoc fiduciary duty claim on this authority.

Aside from the defeating factual distinctions in her cited case law, Peterson fails to plead the "essence" of a fiduciary duty claim. Peterson is required to plead that Block had "a significant degree of dominance and superiority" over her, a standard her complaint does not meet. See Logen, 274 Ill.App.3d at 21, 210 Ill.Dec. at 780, 653 N.E.2d at 976. Peterson claims that she trusted in Block's "superior knowledge, help, and guidance" in filing her tax return and dispensing RAL advice; however, nothing in these allegations shows significant dominance. Her relationship with Block was limited to an arms-length, isolated transaction for tax preparation services and basic tax advice; Block did not retain continuing control or influence over Peterson's assets, was in no position to stake large sums of her money in risky venture, nor had unquestioning control over her financial portfolio. The fact that she trusted Block is simply not enough, see id., especially when she had the opportunity to ask questions about the process. In short, Peterson and Block's relationship was merely contractual, not fiduciary. Although Block was somewhat dominant, given that Peterson lacked sophistication in tax matters and yielded control over preparing her return, a "slightly dominant business position ... [does] not operate to turn a formal, contractual relationship into a confidential or fiduciary relationship." Id.; see Pettinger, 238 Ill. App.3d at 918, 179 Ill.Dec. at 124, 605 N.E.2d at 1138 ("[W]e do not consider the existence of a contractual relationship ..., without more, to support a finding that a fiduciary relationship in fact existed."). We find that her allegations fall short of pleading an ad hoc fiduciary relationship.

We acknowledge that Block is alleged to be a commercially successful and well-known expert on tax matters and the world's largest provider of tax services to United States taxpayers. But no case in Illinois or anywhere else holds that every expert is ipso facto a fiduciary. If this were so, every business that specializes in a particular type of service would be the fiduciary of its customers. And making Block a fiduciary to all of its customers would produce absurd results given that Block allegedly assists in filing one in every seven federal income tax returns. See Amd. Cmplt. Ex. B (H & R Block Report to Stockholders for Year Ending 4/30/95 at *14). The deterrent effect of saddling Block with fiduciary obligations could easily leave taxpayers without the firm's valuable services altogether.

After considering all of Peterson's arguments, we find that the complaint, as it stands, pleads neither an agency relationship nor any other fiduciary affiliation with Block. Because we accept Block's argument that no fiduciary relationship exists, we need not address its alternative argument that the facts alleged fall outside the scope of Block's fiduciary duty. Accordingly, we dismiss Count V without prejudice.[13]

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, Block's motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in part. It is granted as to Count V and denied as to Count I.

13. The dismissal of Count V is without prejudice in case further facts learned in discovery justify the future replending of this count in a manner consistent with this opinion.

UNITED STATES of America, Plaintiff,

v.

Musiliu BALOGUN, et al., Defendants.

No. 96 CR 518.

United States District Court,
N.D. Illinois,
Eastern Division.

July 28, 1997.

Defendants were charged with offenses arising from alleged participation in Nigerian heroin ring. On various motions, the District Court, Alesia, J., held that: (1) severance of several defendants from trial was not warranted; (2) bill of particulars was not warranted; (3) disclosure of grand jury proceedings was not warranted; (4) defendants were not entitled to list of prospective government witnesses; (5) Government was not required to produce sentencing information as part of pretrial discovery; (6) defendants' speedy trial rights were not violated; and (7) defendants were not entitled to disclosure of information regarding government informants.

So ordered.

1. Indictment and Information ⇐144

Defendants' motions to dismiss indictment charging defendants with heroin offenses, on ground that indictment was duplicitous, were moot, where Government intended to seek return of superseding indictment charging defendants with separate counts of conspiracy to import heroin and conspiracy to distribute and possess with intent to distribute heroin. Bard* v. Dasho, 389 U. S. 977 (1967).

In 1957 and again in 1959, the Securities and Exchange Commission sought from Congress amendment of § 10 (b) to change its wording from "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security" to "in connection with the purchase or sale of, or any attempt to purchase or sell, any security." 103 Cong. Rec. 11636 (1957) (emphasis added); SEC Legislation, Hearings on S. 1178–1182 before a Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking & Currency, 86th Cong., 1st Sess., 367–368 (1959); S. 2545, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957); S. 1179, 86th Cong., 1st Sess. (1959). In the words of a memorandum submitted by the Commission to a congressional committee, the purpose of the proposed change was "to make section 10 (b) also applicable to manipulative activities in connection with any attempt to purchase or sell any security." Hearings on S. 1178–1182, supra, at 331. Opposition to the amendment was based on fears of the extension of civil liability under § 10 (b) that it would cause. Id., at 368. Neither change was adopted by Congress.

The longstanding acceptance by the courts, coupled with Congress' failure to reject Birnbaum's reasonable interpretation of the wording of § 10 (b), wording which is directed toward injury suffered "in connection with the purchase or sale" of securities,[5] argues significantly in favor of acceptance of the Birnbaum rule by this Court. Blau v. Lehman, 368 U. S. 403, 413 (1962).

Available evidence from the texts of the 1933 and 1934 Acts as to the congressional scheme in this regard, though not conclusive, supports the result reached by the Birnbaum court. The wording of § 10 (b) directed at fraud "in connection with the purchase or sale" of securities stands in contrast with the parallel antifraud provision of the 1933 Act, § 17 (a), as amended, 68 Stat. 686, 15 U. S. C. § 77q,[6] reaching fraud

[5] Mr. Justice Blackmun, dissenting, post, at 764–765, finds support in the literal language of § 10 (b) since he concludes that in his view "the word 'sale' ordinarily and naturally may be understood to mean, not only a single, individualized act transferring property from one party to another, but also the generalized event of public disposal of property through advertisement, auction, or some other market mechanism." But this ignores the fact that this carefully drawn statute itself defines the term "sale" for purposes of the Act, and, as we have noted, infra, at 751 n. 13, Congress expressly deleted from the Act's definition events such as offers and advertisements which may ultimately lead to a completed sale. Moreover, the extension of the word "sale" to include offers is quite incompatible with Congress' separate definition and use of these terms in the 1933 and 1934 Acts. Cf. § 2 (3) of the 1933 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 77b (3). Beyond this, the wording of § 10 (b), making fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of a security a violation of the Act, is surely badly strained when construed to provide a cause of action, not to purchasers and sellers of securities, but to the world at large.

[6] Section 17 (a) of the 1933 Act provides in wording virtually identical to that of Rule 10b–5 with the exception of the italicized portion that:

"It shall be unlawful for any person in the offer or sale of any securities by the use of any means or instruments of transportation

9312 984 7700 MN E CHICAGO 01/04/02 14:14 P.050/080

16di-004812

"in the offer or sale" of securities. Cf. § 5 of the 1933 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 77e. When Congress wished to provide a remedy to those who neither purchase nor sell securities, it had little trouble in doing so expressly. Cf. § 16 (b) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78p (b).

Section 28 (a) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78bb (a), which limits recovery in any private damages action brought under the 1934 Act to "actual damages," likewise provides some support for the purchaser-seller rule. See, e. g., Bromberg § 8.8, p. 221. While the damages suffered by purchasers and sellers pursuing a § 10 (b) cause of action may on occasion be difficult to ascertain, Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U. S., at 155, in the main such purchasers and sellers at least seek to base recovery on a demonstrable number of shares traded. In contrast, a putative plaintiff, who neither purchases nor sells securities but sues instead for intangible economic injury such as loss of a noncontractual opportunity to buy or sell, is more likely to be seeking a or communication in interstate commerce or by the use of the mails, directly or indirectly—

"(1) to employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud, or

"(2) to obtain money or property by means of any untrue statement of a material fact or any omission to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or

"(3) to engage in any transaction, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon the purchaser." (Emphasis added.)

We express, of course, no opinion on whether § 17 (a) in light of the express civil remedies of the 1933 Act gives rise to an implied cause of action. Compare Greater Iowa Corp. v. McLendon, 378 F. 2d 783, 788–791 (CA8 1967), with Fischman v. Raytheon Mfg. Co., 188 F. 2d 783, 787 (CA2 1951). See, e. g., SEC v. Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., 401 F. 2d 833, 867 (CA2 1968) (Friendly, J., concurring), cert. denied sub nom. Coates v. SEC, 394 U. S. 976 (1969); 3 L. largely conjectural and speculative recovery in which the number of shares involved will depend on the plaintiff's subjective hypothesis. Cf. Estate Counseling Service, Inc. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 303 F. 2d 527, 533 (CA10 1962); Levine v. Seilon, Inc., 439 F. 2d 328, 335 (CA2 1971); Wolf v. Frank, 477 F. 2d 467, 478 (CA5 1973).

One of the justifications advanced for implication of a cause of action under § 10 (b) lies in § 29 (b) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78cc (b), providing that a contract made in violation of any provision of the 1934 Act is voidable at the option of the deceived party.[1] See, e. g., Kardon v. National Gypsum Co., 69 F. Supp., at 514; Slavin v. Germantown Fire Insurance Co., 174 F. 2d 799, 815 (CA3 1949); Fischman v. Raytheon Mfg. Co., 188 F. 2d 783, 787 n. 4 (CA2 1951); Bromberg § 2.4 (1)(b). But that justification is absent when there is no actual purchase or sale of securities, or a contract to purchase or sell, affected or tainted by a violation of § 10 (b). Cf. Mount Clemens Industries, Inc. v. Bell, supra.

[1] Section 29 (b) of the 1934 Act provides in part:

"Every contract made in violation of any provision of this chapter or of any rule or regulation thereunder, and every contract (including any contract for listing a security on an exchange) heretofore or hereafter made, the performance of which involves the violation of, or the continuance of any relationship or practice in violation of, any provision of this chapter or any rule or regulation thereunder, shall be void (1) as regards the rights of any person who, in violation of any such provision, rule, or regulation, shall have made or engaged in the performance of any such contract, and (2) as regards the rights of any person who, not being a party to such contract, shall have acquired any right thereunder with actual knowledge of the facts by reason of which the making or performance of such contract was in violation of any such provision, rule, or regulation . . . ."

dies, created by Congress contemporaneously with the passage of § 10 (b), for violations of various provisions of the 1933 and 1934 Acts are by their terms expressly limited to purchasers or sellers of securities. Thus § 11 (a) of the 1933 Act confines the cause of action it grants to "any person acquiring such security" while the remedy granted by § 12 of that Act is limited to the "person purchasing such security." Section 9 of the 1934 Act, prohibiting a variety of fraudulent and manipulative devices, limits the express civil remedy provided for its violation to "any person who shall purchase or sell any security" in a transaction affected by a violation of the provision. Section 18 of the 1934 Act, prohibiting false or misleading statements in reports or other documents required to be filed by the 1934 Act, limits the express remedy provided for its violation to "any person .... who ... shall have purchased or sold a security at a price which was affected by such statement ...." It would indeed be anomalous to impute to Congress an intention to expand the plaintiff class for a judicially implied cause of action beyond the bounds it delineated for comparable express causes of action.[8]

[8] MR. JUSTICE BLACKMUN, dissenting, post, at 762, finds the Birnbaum rule incompatible with the purpose and history of § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5. But it is worthy of more than passing note that the history of Rule 10b–5 itself, recounted at some length in the dissent, post, at 766–767, strongly supports the purchaser-seller limitation. As the dissent notes, Rule 10b–5 was adopted in order to close "a loophole in the protections against fraud . . . by prohibiting individuals or companies from buying securities if they engage in fraud in their purchase." See SEC Release No. 3230 (May 21, 1942); remarks of Milton Freeman, Conference on Codification of the Federal Securities Laws, 22 Bus. Law. 793, 922 (1967). The modest aims and origins of the Rule as recounted by the dissent stand in stark contrast with its far-ranging conclusion that a remedy exists under Rule 10b–5 whenever there is "a logical nexus between the alleged fraud and the sale or purchase of a security." Post, at 770. On these facts, as we have indicated, infra, at 752–754, extension of a Rule 10b–5 cause of action, far from closing an unforeseen loophole, would extend a private right of action for misrepresentations in a 1933 Act prospectus to those whom Congress excluded from the express civil remedies provided in the 1933 Act to cover such a violation.

Having said all this, we would by no means be understood as suggesting that we are able to divine from the language of § 10 (b) the express "intent of Congress" as to the contours of a private cause of action under Rule 10b–5. When we deal with private actions under Rule 10b–5, we deal with a judicial oak which has grown from little more than a legislative acorn. Such growth may be quite consistent with the congressional enactment and with the role of the federal judiciary in interpreting it, see J. I. Case Co. v. Borak, supra, but it would be disingenuous to suggest that either Congress in 1934 or the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1942 foreordained the present state of the law with respect to Rule 10b–5. It is therefore proper that we consider, in addition to the factors already discussed, what may be described as policy considerations when we come to flesh out the portions of the law with respect to which neither the congressional enactment nor the administrative regulations offer conclusive guidance.

Three principal classes of potential plaintiffs are presently barred by the Birnbaum rule. First are potential purchasers of shares, either in a new offering or on the Nation's post-distribution trading markets, who allege that they decided not to purchase because of an unduly gloomy representation or the omission of favorable material which made the issuer appear to be a less favorable investment vehicle than it actually was. Second are actual shareholders in the issuer who allege that they decided not to sell their shares because of an unduly rosy representation or a failure to disclose unfavorable material. Third are shareholders, creditors, and perhaps others related to an issuer who suffered loss in the value of their investment due to corporate or insider activities in connection with the purchase or sale of securities which violate Rule 10b–5. It has been held that shareholder members of the second and third of these classes may frequently be able to circumvent the Birnbaum limitation through bringing a derivative action on behalf of the corporate issuer if the latter is itself a purchaser or seller of securities. See, e. g., Schoenbaum v. Firstbrook, 405 F. 2d 215, 219 (CA2 1968), cert. denied sub nom. Manley v. Schoenbaum, 395 U. S. 906 (1969). But the first of these classes, of which respondent is a member, cannot claim the benefit of such a rule.

A great majority of the many commentators on the issue before us have taken the view that the Birnbaum limitation on the plaintiff class in a Rule 10b–5 action for damages is an arbitrary restriction which unreasonably prevents some deserving plaintiffs from recovering damages which have in fact been caused by violations of Rule 10b–5. See, e. g., Loewenfels, The Demise of the Birnbaum Doctrine: A New Era for Rule 10b–5, 54 Va. L. Rev. 268 (1968). The Securities and Exchange Commission has filed an amicus brief in this case espousing that same view. We have no doubt that this is indeed a disadvantage of the Birnbaum rule,[8] and if it had no countervailing advantages it would be undesirable as a matter of policy, however much it might be supported by precedent and legislative history. But we are of the opinion that there are countervailing advantages to the Birnbaum rule, purely as a matter of policy, although those advantages are more difficult to articulate than is the disadvantage.

[8] Obviously this disadvantage is attenuated to the extent that remedies are available to nonpurchasers and nonsellers under state law. Cf. § 28 of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78bb. See Iroquois Industries, Inc. v. Syracuse China Corp., 417 F. 2d 963, 969 (CA2 1969), cert. denied, 399 U. S. 909 (1970). Thus, for example, in Birnbaum itself, while the plaintiffs found themselves without federal remedies, the conduct alleged as the gravamen of the federal complaint later provided the basis for recovery in a cause of action based on state law. See 3 L. Loss, Securities Regulation 1469 (2d

There has been widespread recognition that litigation under Rule 10b–5 presents a danger of vexatiousness different in degree and in kind from that which accompanies litigation in general. This fact was recognized by Judge Browning in his opinion for the majority of the Court of Appeals in this case, 492 F. 2d, at 141, and by Judge Hufstedler in her dissenting opinion when she said:

> "'The purchaser-seller rule has maintained the balances built into the congressional scheme by permitting damage actions to be brought only by those persons whose active participation in the marketing transaction promises enforcement of the statute without undue risk of abuse of the litigation process and without distorting the securities market.'" Id., at 147.

Judge Friendly in commenting on another aspect of Rule 10b–5 litigation has referred to the possibility that unduly expansive imposition of civil liability "will lead to large judgments, payable in the last analysis by innocent investors, for the benefit of speculators and their lawyers . . . ." SEC v. Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., 401 F. 2d 833, 867 (CA2 1968) (concurring opinion). ed. 1961). And in the immediate case, respondent has filed a state-court class action held in abeyance pending the outcome of this suit. Manor Drug Stores v. Blue Chip Stamps, No. C–5052 (Superior Court, County of Los Angeles, Cal.)

Boone & McGowan, Standing to Sue under SEC Rule 10b–5, 49 Tex. L. Rev. 617, 648–649 (1971).

We believe that the concern expressed for the danger of vexatious litigation which could result from a widely expanded class of plaintiffs under Rule 10b–5 is founded in something more substantial than the common complaint of the many defendants who would prefer avoiding lawsuits entirely to either settling them or trying them. These concerns have two largely separate grounds.

The first of these concerns is that in the field of federal securities laws governing disclosure of information even a complaint which by objective standards may have very little chance of success at trial has a settlement value to the plaintiff out of any proportion to its prospect of success at trial so long as he may prevent the suit from being resolved against him by dismissal or summary judgment. The very pendency of the lawsuit may frustrate or delay normal business activity of the defendant which is totally unrelated to the lawsuit. See, e. g., Sargent, The SEC and the Individual Investor: Restoring His Confidence in the Market, 60 Va. L. Rev. 553, 562–572 (1974); Dooley, The Effects of Civil Liability on Investment Banking and the New Issues Market, 58 Va. L. Rev. 776, 822–843 (1972).

Congress itself recognized the potential for nuisance or "strike" suits in this type of litigation, and in Title II of the 1934 Act amended § 11 of the 1933 Act to provide that:

> "In any suit under this or any other section of this title the court may, in its discretion, require an undertaking for the payment of the costs of such suit, including reasonable attorney's fees . . . ." § 206 (d), 48 Stat. 881, 908.

Senator Fletcher, Chairman of the Senate Banking and Finance Committee, in introducing Title II of the 1934

Act on the floor of the Senate, stated in explaining the amendment to § 11 (e): "This amendment is the most important of all." 78 Cong. Rec. 8669. Among its purposes was to provide "a defense against blackmail suits." Ibid.

Where Congress in those sections of the 1933 Act which expressly conferred a private cause of action for damages, adopted a provision uniformly regarded as designed to deter "strike" or nuisance actions, Cohen v. Beneficial Loan Corp., 337 U. S. 541, 548–549 (1949), that fact alone justifies our consideration of such potential in determining the limits of the class of plaintiffs who may sue in an action wholly implied from the language of the 1934 Act.

The potential for possible abuse of the liberal discovery provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure may likewise exist in this type of case to a greater extent than they do in other litigation. The prospect of extensive deposition of the defendant's officers and associates and the concomitant opportunity for extensive discovery of business documents, is a common occurrence in this and similar types of litigation. To the extent that this process eventually produces relevant evidence which is useful in determining the merits of the claims asserted by the parties, it bears the imprimatur of those Rules and of the many cases liberally interpreting them. But to the extent that it permits a plaintiff with a largely groundless claim to simply take up the time of a number of other people, with the right to do so representing an in terrorem increment of the settlement value, rather than a reasonably founded hope that the process will reveal relevant evidence, it is a social cost rather than a benefit. Yet to broadly expand the class of plaintiffs who may sue under Rule 10b–5 would appear to encourage the least appealing aspect of the use of the discovery rules.

Without the Birnbaum rule, an action under Rule 10b–5 will turn largely on which oral version of a series of occurrences the jury may decide to credit, and therefore no matter how improbable the allegations of the plaintiff, the case will be virtually impossible to dispose of prior to trial other than by settlement. In the words of Judge Hufstedler's dissenting opinion in the Court of Appeals:

> "The great ease with which plaintiffs can allege the requirements for the majority's standing rule and the greater difficulty that plaintiffs are going to have proving the allegations suggests that the majority's rule will allow a relatively high proportion of 'bad' cases into court. The risk of strike suits is particularly high in such cases; although they are difficult to prove at trial, they are even more difficult to dispose of before trial." 492 F. 2d, at 147 n. 9.

The Birnbaum rule, on the other hand, permits exclusion prior to trial of those plaintiffs who were not themselves purchasers or sellers of the stock in question. The fact of purchase of stock and the fact of sale of stock are generally matters which are verifiable by documentation, and do not depend upon oral recollection, so that failure to qualify under the Birnbaum rule is a matter that can normally be established by the defendant either on a motion to dismiss or on a motion for summary judgment.

Obviously there is no general legal principle that courts in fashioning substantive law should do so in a manner which makes it easier, rather than more difficult, for a defendant to obtain a summary judgment. But in this type of litigation, where the mere existence of an unresolved lawsuit has settlement value to the plaintiff not only because of the possibility that he may prevail on the merits, an entirely legitimate component of settlement value, but because of the threat of extensive discovery and disruption of normal business activities which may accompany a lawsuit which is groundless in any event, but cannot be proved so before trial, such a factor is not to be totally dismissed. The Birnbaum rule undoubtedly excludes plaintiffs who have in fact been damaged by violations of Rule 10b–5, and to that extent it is undesirable. But it also separates in a readily demonstrable manner the group of plaintiffs who actually purchased or actually sold, and whose version of the facts is therefore more likely to be believed by the trier of fact, from the vastly larger world of potential plaintiffs who might successfully allege a claim but could seldom succeed in proving it. And this fact is one of its advantages.

The second ground for fear of vexatious litigation is based on the concern that, given the generalized contours of liability, the abolition of the Birnbaum rule would throw open to the trier of fact many rather hazy issues of historical fact the proof of which depended almost entirely on oral testimony. We in no way disparage the worth and frequent high value of oral testimony when we say that dangers of its abuse appear to exist in this type of action to a peculiarly high degree. The Securities and Exchange Commission, while opposing the adoption of the Birnbaum rule by this Court, states that it agrees with petitioners "that the effect, if any, of a deceptive practice on someone who has neither purchased nor sold securities may be more difficult to demonstrate than is the effect on a purchaser or seller." Brief for the Securities and Exchange Commission as Amicus Curiae 24–25. The brief also points out that frivolous suits can be brought whatever the rules of standing, and reminds us of this Court's recognition "in a different context" that "the expense and annoyance of litigation is 'part of the social burden of living under government.'" Id., at 24 n. 30. See Petroleum Exploration, Inc. v. Public Service Comm'n, 304 U. S. 209, 222 (1938). The Commission suggests that in particular cases additional requirements of corroboration of testimony and more limited measure of damages would correct the dangers of an expanded class of plaintiffs.

But the very necessity, or at least the desirability, of fashioning unique rules of corroboration and damages as a correlative to the abolition of the Birnbaum rule suggests that the rule itself may have something to be said for it.

In considering the policy underlying the Birnbaum rule, it is not inappropriate to advert briefly to the tort of misrepresentation and deceit, to which a claim under Rule 10b–5 certainly has some relationship. Originally under the common law of England such an action was not available to one other than a party to a business transaction. That limitation was eliminated in Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51, 100 Eng. Rep. 450 (1789). Under the earlier law the misrepresentation was generally required to be one of fact, rather than opinion, but that requirement, too, was gradually relaxed. Lord Bowen's famous comment in Edgington v. Fitzmaurice, [1882] L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 459, 483, that "the state of a man's mind is as much a fact as the state of his digestion," suggests that this distinction, too, may have been somewhat arbitrary. And it has long been established in the ordinary case of deceit that a misrepresentation which leads to a refusal to purchase or to sell is actionable in just the same way as a misrepresentation which leads to the consummation of a purchase or sale. Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456 (1872). These aspects of the evolution of the tort of deceit and misrepresentation suggest a direction away from rules such as Birnbaum.

But the typical fact situation in which the classic tort of misrepresentation and deceit evolved was light years away from the world of commercial transactions to which Rule 10b–5 is applicable. The plaintiff in Butler, supra, for example, claimed that he had held off the market a patented machine for tying cotton bales which he had developed by reason of the fraudulent representations of the defendant. But the report of the case leaves no doubt that the plaintiff and defendant met with one another in New Orleans, that one presented a draft agreement to the other, and that letters were exchanged relating to that agreement. Although the claim to damages was based on an allegedly fraudulently induced decision not to put the machines on the market, the plaintiff and the defendant had concededly been engaged in the course of business dealings with one another, and would presumably have recognized one another on the street had they met.

In today's universe of transactions governed by the 1934 Act, privity of dealing or even personal contact between potential defendant and potential plaintiff is the exception and not the rule. The stock of issuers is listed on financial exchanges utilized by tens of millions of investors, and corporate representations reach a potential audience, encompassing not only the diligent few who peruse filed corporate reports or the sizable number of subscribers to financial journals, but the readership of the Nation's daily newspapers. Obviously neither the fact that issuers or other potential defendants under Rule 10b–5 reach a large number of potential investors, or the fact that they are required by law to make their disclosures conform to certain standards, should in any way absolve them from liability for misconduct which is proscribed by Rule 10b–5.

But in the absence of the Birnbaum rule, it would be sufficient for a plaintiff to prove that he had failed to purchase or sell stock by reason of a defendant's violation of Rule 10b–5. The manner in which the defendant's violation caused the plaintiff to fail to act could be as a result of the reading of a prospectus, as respondent claims here, but it could just as easily come as a result of a claimed reading of information contained in the financial pages of a local newspaper. Plaintiff's proof would not be that he purchased or sold stock, a fact which would be capable of documentary verification in most situations, but instead that he decided not to purchase or sell stock. Plaintiff's entire testimony could be dependent upon uncorroborated oral evidence of many of the crucial elements of his claim, and still be sufficient to go to the jury. The jury would not even have the benefit of weighing the plaintiff's version against the defendant's version, since the elements to which the plaintiff would testify would be in many cases totally unknown and unknowable to the defendant. The very real risk in permitting those in respondent's position to sue under Rule 10b–5 is that the door will be open to recovery of substantial damages on the part of one who offers only his own testimony to prove that he ever consulted a prospectus of the issuer, that he paid any attention to it, or that the representations contained in it damaged him.[10]

[10] The SEC, recognizing the necessity for limitations on nonpurchaser, nonseller plaintiffs in the absence of the Birnbaum rule, suggests two such limitations to mitigate the practical adverse effects flowing from abolition of the rule. First, it suggests requiring some corroborative evidence in addition to oral testimony tending to show that the investment decision of a plaintiff was affected by an omission or misrepresentation. Brief for the Securities and Exchange Commission as Amicus Curiae 25–26. Apparently ownership of stock or receipt of a prospectus or press release would be sufficient corroborative evidence in the view of the SEC to reach the jury. We do not believe that such a requirement would adequately respond to the concerns in part underlying the Birnbaum rule. Ownership of stock or receipt of a prospectus says little about whether a plaintiff's investment decision was affected by a violation of Rule 10b–5 or whether a decision was even made. Second, the SEC would limit the vicarious liability of corporate issuers to nonpurchasers and nonsellers to situations where the corporate issuer has been unjustly enriched by a violation. We have no occasion to pass upon the compatibility of this limitation with § 20 (a) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78t (a). We do not believe that this proposed limitation is relevant to the concerns underlying in part the Birnbaum rule as we have expressed them. We are not alone in feeling that the limitations proposed by the SEC are not adequate to deal with the adverse effects which would flow from abolition of the Birnbaum rule. See, e. g., Vine v. Beneficial Finance Co., 374 F. 2d 627, 630 (CA2), cert. denied, 389 U. S. 970 (1967); Iroquois Industries, Inc. v. Syracuse China Corp., 417 F. 2d, at 967; Rekant v. Desser, 425 F. 2d 872, 879 (CA5 1970); GAF Corp. v. Milstein, 453 F. 2d 709, 721 (CA2 1971), cert. denied, 406 U. S. 910 (1972); Drachman v. Harvey, 453 F. 2d 722, 736, 738 (CA2 1972) (en banc); Mount Clemens Industries, Inc. v. Bell, 464 F. 2d 339, 341 (CA9 1972).

The virtue of the Birnbaum rule, simply stated, in this situation, is that it limits the class of plaintiffs to those who have at least dealt in the security to which the prospectus, representation, or omission relates. And their dealing in the security, whether by way of purchase or sale, will generally be an objectively demonstrable fact in an area of the law otherwise very much dependent upon oral testimony. In the absence of the Birnbaum doctrine, bystanders to the securities marketing process could await developments on the sidelines without risk, claiming that inaccuracies in disclosure caused nonselling in a falling market and that unduly pessimistic predictions by the issuer followed by a rising market caused them to allow retrospectively golden opportunities to pass.

While much of the development of the law of deceit has been the elimination of artificial barriers to recovery on just claims, we are not the first court to express concern that the inexorable broadening of the class of plaintiff who may sue in this area of the law will ultimately result in more harm than good. In Ultramares Corp. v. Touche, 255 N. Y. 170, 174 N. E. 441 (1931), Chief Judge Cardozo observed with respect to "a liability in an indeterminate amount for an indeterminate time to an indeterminate class":

> "The hazards of a business conducted on these terms are so extreme as to enkindle doubt whether a flaw may not exist in the implication of a duty that exposes to these consequences." Id., at 179–180, 174 N. E., at 444.

In Herpich v. Wallace, 430 F. 2d 792, 804–805 (CA5 1970), a case adopting the Birnbaum limitation on the class of plaintiffs who might bring an action for damages based on a violation of Rule 10b–5, Judge Ainsworth expressed concern similar to that expressed by Chief Judge Cardozo. Judge Stevens, writing in Eason v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 490 F. 2d, at 660, stated that court's view that these concerns were unduly emphasized, and went on to say that "we may not for that reason reject what we believe to be a correct interpretation of the statute or the rule." He relied in part on the view that Rule 10b–5 should be interpreted, in keeping with this Court's repeated admonition, "'not technically and restrictively, but flexibly to effectuate its remedial purposes.'" Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U. S., at 151.

We quite agree that if Congress had legislated the elements of a private cause of action for damages, the duty of the Judicial Branch would be to administer the law which Congress enacted; the Judiciary may not circumscribe a right which Congress has conferred because of any disagreement it might have with Congress about the wisdom of creating so expansive a liability. But as we have pointed out, we are not dealing here with any private right created by the express language of § 10 (b) or of Rule 10b–5. No language in either of those provisions speaks at all to the contours of a private cause of action for their violation. However flexibly we may construe the language of both provisions, nothing in such construction militates against the Birnbaum rule. We are dealing with a private cause of action which has been judicially found to exist, and which will have to be judicially delimited one way or another unless and until Congress addresses the question. Given the peculiar blend of legislative, administrative, and judicial history which now surrounds Rule 10b–5, we believe that practical factors to which we have adverted, and to which other courts have referred, are entitled to a good deal of weight.

Thus we conclude that what may be called considerations of policy, which we are free to weigh in deciding this case, are by no means entirely on one side of the scale. Taken together with the precedential support for the Birnbaum rule over a period of more than 20 years, and the consistency of that rule with what we can glean from the intent of Congress, they lead us to conclude that it is a sound rule and should be followed.

IV

The majority of the Court of Appeals in this case expressed no disagreement with the general proposition that one asserting a claim for damages based on the violation of Rule 10b–5 must be either a purchaser or seller of securities. However, it noted that prior cases have held that persons owning contractual rights to buy or sell securities are not excluded by the Birnbaum rule. Relying on these cases, it concluded that respondent's status as an offeree pursuant to the terms of the consent decree served the same function, for purposes of delimiting the class of plaintiffs, as is normally performed by the requirement of a contractual relationship. 492 F. 2d, at 142.

212 984 7700 NYE CHICAGO 01/04/02 14:18 P.058/080

The Court of Appeals recognized, and respondent concedes here,[11] that a well-settled line of authority from this Court establishes that a consent decree is not enforceable directly or in collateral proceedings by those who are not parties to it even though they were intended to be benefited by it. United States v. Armour & Co., 402 U. S. 673 (1971); Buckeye Co. v. Hocking Valley Co., 269 U. S. 42 (1925).[12]

A contract to purchase or sell securities is expressly defined by § 3 (a) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78c (a),[13]

[11] See Brief for Respondent 60.

[12] See n. 1, supra; 492 F. 2d, at 144 n. 3 (Hufstedler, J., dissenting).

[13] Section 3 (a)(13) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78c (a)(13), provides:

"The terms 'buy' and 'purchase' each include any contract to buy, purchase, or otherwise acquire."

Section 3 (a)(14) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78c (a)(14), provides:

"The terms 'sale' and 'sell' each include any contract to sell or otherwise dispose of."

These provisions as enacted starkly contrast with the wording of the bill which became the 1934 Act when it emerged from committee and was presented on the Senate floor by Senator Fletcher, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Finance. See S. 2693, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. (1934). Section 3 (11) of the bill as presented to the Senate provided:

"The terms 'buy' and 'purchase' each include any contract to buy, purchase, or otherwise acquire, contract of purchase, attempt or offer to acquire or solicitation of an offer to sell a security or any interest in a security." (Emphasis added.)

And § 3 (12) of the bill provided:

"The terms 'sale' and 'sell' each include any contract of sale or disposition of, contract to sell or dispose of, attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy a security or any interest therein." (Emphasis added.)

During consideration of the bill on the Senate floor, the ambit of these provisions was narrowed through amendment into the present wording of §§ 3 (a)(13) and (14). 48 Stat. 884. In arguing that it, as an offeree of stock, ought to be treated as a purchaser or seller for purposes of the Act, respondent is in effect seeking a judicial reinsertion of language into the Act that Congress had before it but deleted prior to passage.

as a purchase or sale of securities for the purposes of that Act. Unlike respondent, which had no contractual right or duty to purchase Blue Chip's securities, the holders of puts, calls, options, and other contractual rights or duties to purchase or sell securities have been recognized as "purchasers" or "sellers" of securities for purposes of Rule 10b–5, not because of a judicial conclusion that they were similarly situated to "purchasers" or "sellers," but because the definitional provisions of the 1934 Act themselves grant them such a status.

Even if we were to accept the notion that the Birnbaum rule could be circumvented on a case-by-case basis through particularized judicial inquiry into the facts surrounding a complaint, this respondent and the members of its alleged class would be unlikely candidates for such a judicially created exception. While the Birnbaum rule has been flexibly interpreted by lower federal courts,[14] we have been unable to locate a single decided case from any court in the 20-odd years of litigation since the Birnbaum decision which would support the right of persons who were in the position of respondent here to bring a private suit under Rule 10b–5. Respondent was not only not a buyer or seller of any security but it was not even a shareholder of the corporate petitioners.

[14] Our decision in SEC v. National Securities, Inc., 393 U. S. 453 (1969), established that the purchaser-seller rule imposes no limitation on the standing of the SEC to bring actions for injunctive relief under § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5.

As indicated, the 1934 Act, under which respondent seeks to assert a cause of action, is general in scope but chiefly concerned with the regulation of post-distribution trading on the Nation's stock exchanges and securities trading markets. The 1933 Act is a far narrower statute chiefly concerned with disclosure and fraud in connection with offerings of securities—primarily, as here, initial distributions of newly issued stock from corporate issuers. 1 L. Loss, Securities Regulation 130–131 (2d ed. 1961). Respondent, who derives no entitlement from the antitrust consent decree and does not otherwise possess any contractual rights relating to the offered stock, stands in the same position as any other disappointed offeree of a stock offering registered under the 1933 Act who claims that an overly pessimistic prospectus, prepared and distributed as required by §§ 5 and 10 of the 1933 Act, has caused it to allow its opportunity to purchase to pass.

There is strong evidence that application of the Birnbaum rule to preclude suit by the disappointed offeree of a registered 1933 Act offering under Rule 10b–5 furthers the intention of Congress as expressed in the 1933 Act.[15] Congress left little doubt that its purpose in imposing the prospectus and registration requirements of the 1933 Act was to prevent the "[h]igh pressure salesmanship rather than careful counsel," causing inflated [15] Blue Chip did not here present the question of whether an implied action under § 10 (b) of the 1934 Act and Rule 10b–5 will lie for actions made a violation of the 1933 Act and the subject of express civil remedies under the 1933 Act. We therefore have no occasion to pass on this issue. Compare Rosenberg v. Globe Aircraft Corp., 80 F. Supp. 123 (ED Pa. 1948), with Thiele v. Shields, 131 F. Supp. 416 (SDNY 1955). Cf. 3 L. Loss, Securities Regulation 1787–1791 (2d ed. 1961); 6 L. Loss, Securities Regulation 3915–3917 (1969); Bromberg § 2.4 (2).

new issues, through direct limitation by the SEC of "the selling arguments hitherto employed." H. R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess., 2, 8 (1933).

> "Any objection that the compulsory incorporation in selling literature and sales argument of substantially all information concerning the issue, will frighten the buyer with the intricacy of the transaction, states one of the best arguments for the provision." Id., at 8.

The SEC, in accord with the congressional purposes, specifically requires prominent emphasis be given in filed registration statements and prospectuses to material adverse contingencies. See, e. g., SEC Securities Act Release No. 4936, Guides for the Preparation and Filing of Registration Statements 6, ¶ 6 (1968); In re Universal Camera Corp., 19 S. E. C. 648, 654–656 (1945); Wheat & Blackstone, Guideposts for a First Public Offering, 15 Bus. Law. 539, 560–562 (1960).

Sections 11 and 12 of the 1933 Act provide express civil remedies for misrepresentations and omissions in registration statements and prospectuses filed under the Act, as here charged, but restrict recovery to the offering price of shares actually purchased:

> "To impose a greater responsibility, apart from constitutional doubts, would unnecessarily restrain the conscientious administration of honest business with no compensating advantage to the public." H. R. Rep. No. 85, supra, at 9.

And in Title II of the 1934 Act, 48 Stat. 905–908, the same Act adopting § 10 (b), Congress amended § 11 of the 1933 Act to limit still further the express civil remedy it conferred. See generally James, Amendments to the Securities Act of 1933, 32 Mich. L. Rev. 1130, 1134 (1934). The additional congressional restrictions, contained in Title II of the 1934 Act, on the already limited express civil remedies provided by the 1933 Act for misrepresentations or omissions in a registration statement or prospectus reflected congressional concern over the impact of even these limited remedies on the new issues market. 78 Cong. Rec. 8668–8669 (1934). There is thus ample evidence that Congress did not intend to extend a private cause of action for money damages to the nonpurchasing offeree of a stock offering registered under the 1933 Act for loss of the opportunity to purchase due to an overly pessimistic prospectus.

Beyond the difficulties evident in an extension of standing to this respondent, we do not believe that the Birnbaum rule is merely a shorthand judgment on the nature of a particular plaintiff's proof. As a purely practical matter, it is doubtless true that respondent and the members of its class, as offerees and recipients of the prospectus of New Blue Chip, are a smaller class of potential plaintiffs than would be all those who might conceivably assert that they obtained information violative of Rule 10b–5 and attributable to the issuer in the financial pages of their local newspaper. And since respondent likewise had a prior connection with some of petitioners as a result of using the trading stamps marketed by Old Blue Chip, and was intended to benefit from the provisions of the consent decree, there is doubtless more likelihood that its managers read and were damaged by the allegedly misleading statements in the prospectus than there would be in a case filed by a complete stranger to the corporation.

But respondent and the members of its class are neither "purchasers" nor "sellers," as those terms are defined in the 1934 Act, and therefore to the extent that their claim of standing to sue were recognized, it would mean that the lesser practical difficulties of corroborating at least some elements of their proof would be regarded as sufficient to avoid the Birnbaum rule. While we have noted that these practical difficulties, particularly in the case of a complete stranger to the corporation, support the retention of that rule, they are by no means the only factor which does so. The general adoption of the rule by other federal courts in the 25 years since it was announced, and the consistency of the rule with the statutes involved and their legislative history, are likewise bases for retaining the rule. Were we to agree with the Court of Appeals in this case, we would leave the Birnbaum rule open to endless case-by-case erosion depending on whether a particular group of plaintiffs was thought by the court in which the issue was being litigated to be sufficiently more discrete than the world of potential purchasers at large to justify an exception. We do not believe that such a shifting and highly fact-oriented disposition of the issue of who may bring a damages claim for violation of Rule 10b–5 is a satisfactory basis for a rule of liability imposed on the conduct of business transactions. Nor is it as consistent as a straightforward application of the Birnbaum rule with the other factors which support the retention of that rule. We therefore hold that respondent was not entitled to sue for violation of Rule 10b–5, and the judgment of the Court of Appeals is Reversed.

Although I join the opinion of the Court, I write to emphasize the significance of the texts of the Acts of 1933 and 1934 and especially the language of § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5.

I

The starting point in every case involving construction of a statute is the language itself. The critical phrase in both the statute and the Rule is "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security." 15 U. S. C. § 78j (b); 17 CFR § 240.10b–5 (1975) (emphasis added). Section 3 (a) (14) of the 1934 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 78c (a) (14), provides that the term "sale" shall "include any contract to sell or otherwise dispose of" securities. There is no hint in any provision of the Act that the term "sale," as used in § 10 (b), was intended—in addition to its long-established legal meaning—to include an "offer to sell." Respondent, nevertheless, would have us amend the controlling language in § 10 (b) to read:

> "in connection with the purchase or sale of, or an offer to sell, any security."

Before a court properly could consider taking such liberty with statutory language there should be, at least, unmistakable support in the history and structure of the legislation. None exists in this case.

Nothing in the history of the 1933 and 1934 Acts supports any congressional intent to include mere offers in § 10 (b). Moreover, as the Court's opinion indicates, impressive evidence in the texts of the two Acts demonstrates clearly that Congress selectively and carefully distinguished between offers, purchases, and sales. For example, § 17 (a), the antifraud provision of the 1933 Act, 15 U. S. C. § 77q (a), expressly includes "offer[s]" of securities within its terms while § 10 (b) of the 1934 Act and Rule 10b–5 do not. The 1933 Act also defines "offer to sell" as something distinct from a sale. § 2 (3), 15 U. S. C. § 77b (3).

If further evidence of congressional intent were needed, it may be found in the subsequent history of these Acts.

As noted in the Court's opinion, the Securities and Exchange Commission unsuccessfully sought, in 1957 and again in 1959, to persuade Congress to broaden § 10 (b) by adding to the critical language: "or any attempt to purchase or sell" any security. See ante, at 732.

This case involves no "purchase or sale" of securities.[1] Respondent was a mere offeree, which instituted this suit some two years after the shares were issued and after the market price had soared. Having "missed the market" on a stock, it is hardly in a unique position. The capital that fuels our enterprise system comes from investors who have frequent opportunities to purchase, or not to purchase, securities being offered publicly. The market prices of new issues rarely remain static: almost invariably they go up or down, and they often fluctuate widely over a period far less than the two years during which respondent reflected on its lost opportunity. Most investors have unhappy memories of decisions not to buy stocks which later performed well.

The opinion of the Court, and the dissenting opinion of Judge Hufstedler in the Court of Appeals, correctly emphasize the subjective nature of the inevitable inquiry if the term "offer" were read into the Act and some arguable error could be found in an offering prospectus: "Would I have purchased this particular security at the time it was offered if I had known the correct facts?" Apart from the human temptation for the plaintiff to answer this question in a self-serving fashion, the offeror

[1] It is argued that the language "in connection with" justifies extending § 10 (b) to include offers which necessarily precede a purchase or sale. The short answer is that the statute requires a purchase or a sale of a security, and no offer was made to respondent in connection with either. Its complaint rests upon the absence of a sale to or purchase by it.

of the securities—defendant in the suit—is severely handicapped in challenging the predictable testimony.[2] The subjective issues would be even more speculative in the class actions that inevitably would follow if we held that offers to sell securities are covered by § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5.

In this case respondent was clearly identifiable as an offeree, as here the shares were offered to designated persons.[3] In the more customary public sale of securities, identification of those who in fact were bona fide offerees would present severe problems of proof. The 1933 Act requires that offers to sell registered securities be made by means of an effective prospectus. § 5 (b), 15 U. S. C. § 77e (b). Issues are usually marketed through underwriters and dealers, often including scores of investment banking and brokerage firms across the country. Copies of the prospectus may be widely distributed through the dealer group, and then passed hand to hand among countless persons whose identities cannot be known. If § 10 (b) were extended to embrace offers to sell, the number of persons claiming to have been

[2] Proving, after the fact, what "one would have done" encompasses a number of conjectural as well as subjective issues: would the offeree have bought at all; how many shares would he have bought; how long would he have held the shares; were there other "buys" on the market at the time that may have been more attractive even had the offeree known the facts; did he in fact use his available funds (if any) more advantageously by purchasing something else?

[3] It is argued that the special facts of this case justify extending the benefit of § 10 (b) to this respondent, even if the statute ordinarily requires a purchase or a sale. But this resolution also would require judicial extension of the terms of the statute. The mere fact that securities are offered to a limited class of offerees may eliminate some of the problems of proof but it does not avoid the fatal objection that no offer of securities, absent a purchase or sale, is covered by the statute.

offerees could be legion with respect to any security that subsequently proved to be a rewarding investment.

We are entitled to assume that the Congress, in enacting § 10 (b) and in subsequently declining to extend it, took into account these and similar considerations. The courts already have inferred a private cause of action that was not authorized by the legislation. In doing this, however, it was unnecessary to rewrite the precise language of § 10 (b) and Rule 10b–5. This is exactly what respondent—joined, surprisingly, by the SEC—sought in this case.[4] If such a far-reaching change is to be made, with unpredictable consequences for the process of raising capital so necessary to our economic well-being, it is a matter for the Congress; not the courts.

[4] It is more than curious that the SEC should seek this change in the 1934 Act by judicial action. The stated purpose of the 1933 Act was "[t]o provide full and fair disclosure of the character of securities sold in interstate and foreign commerce . . . ." See preamble to Act, 48 Stat. 74. The evil addressed was the tendency of the seller to exaggerate, to "puff," and sometimes fraudulently to overstate the prospects and earning capabilities of the issuing corporation. The decade of the 1920's was marked by financings in which the buying public was oversold, and often misled, by the buoyant optimism of issuers and underwriters. The 1933 Act was intended to compel moderation and caution in prospectuses, and this is precisely the way that Act has been administered by the SEC for more than 40 years. Precise factual accuracy with respect to a corporate enterprise is frequently impossible, except with respect to hard facts. The outcome of pending litigation, the effect of relatively new legislation, the possible enactment of adverse legislation, the cost of projected construction or of entering new markets, the expenditures needed to meet changing environmental regulations, the likelihood and effect of new competition or of new technology, and many similar matters of potential relevancy must be addressed in registration statements and prospectuses. In administering the 1933 Act, the SEC traditionally and consistently has encouraged and often required offerors to take conservative postures in prospectuses, especially with respect to judgmental and possibly unfavorable matters. If a different philosophy now were to be read into the 1934 Act, inviting litigation for arguably misleading understatement as well as for overstatement of the issuer's prospects, the hazard of

MR. JUSTICE BLACKMUN's dissent charges the Court with "a preternatural solicitousness for corporate well-being and a seeming callousness toward the investing public." Our task in this case is to construe a statute. In my view, the answer is plainly compelled by the language as well as the legislative history of the 1933 and 1934 Acts. But even if the language is not "plain" to all, I would have thought none could doubt that the statute can be read fairly to support the result the Court reaches. Indeed, if one takes a different view—and imputes callousness to all who disagree—he must attribute a lack of legal and social perception to the scores of federal judges who have followed Birnbaum for two decades.

The dissenting opinion also charges the Court with having "no heed to the unremedied wrong" arising from the type of "fraud" that may result from reaffirmance of the Birnbaum rule. If an issue of statutory construction is to be decided on the basis of assuring a federal remedy—in addition to state remedies—for every perceived fraud, at least we should strike a balance between the opportunities for fraud presented by the contending views. It may well be conceded that Birnbaum does allow some fraud to go unremedied under the federal securities Acts. But the construction advocated by the dissent could result in wider opportunities for fraud. As the Court's opinion makes plain, abandoning the Birnbaum construction in favor of the rule urged by the dissent would invite any person who failed to purchase a newly offered security that subsequently enjoyed substantial market appreciation to file a claim alleging that the offering prospectus understated the company's potential. The number of possible plaintiffs with respect to a public offering would be virtually unlimited. As noted above (at 758 n. 2), an honest offeror could be confronted with subjective claims by plaintiffs who had neither purchased its securities nor seriously considered the investment. It frequently would be impossible to refute a plaintiff's assertion that he relied on the prospectus, or even that he made a decision not to buy the offered securities. A rule allowing this type of open-ended litigation would itself be an invitation to fraud.[5]

"going to market"—already not inconsequential—would be immeasurably increased.

MR. JUSTICE BLACKMUN, with whom MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS and MR. JUSTICE BRENNAN join, dissenting.

Today the Court graves into stone Birnbaum's[1] arbitrary principle of standing. For this task the Court, unfortunately, chooses to utilize three blunt chisels: (1) reliance on the legislative history of the 1933 and

[5] The dissent also charges that we are callous toward the "investing public"—a term it does not define. It would have been more accurate, perhaps, to have spoken of the noninvesting public, because the Court's decision does not abandon the investing public. The great majority of registered issues of securities are offered by established corporations that have shares outstanding and held by members of the investing public. The types of suits that the dissent would encourage could result in large damage claims, costly litigation, generous settlements to avoid such cost, and often—where the litigation runs its course—in large verdicts. The shareholders of the defendant corporations—the "investing public"—would ultimately bear the burden of this litigation, including the fraudulent suits that would not be screened out by the dissent's bare requirement of a "logical nexus between the alleged fraud and the sale or purchase of a security."

1934 Securities Acts, conceded as inconclusive in this particular context; (2) acceptance as precedent of two decades of lower court decisions following a doctrine, never before examined here, that was pronounced by a justifiably esteemed panel of that Court of Appeals regarded as the "Mother Court" in this area of the law,[2] but under entirely different circumstances; and (3) resort to utter pragmaticality and a conjectural assertion of "policy considerations" deemed to arise in distinguishing the meritorious Rule 10b–5 suit from the meretricious one. In so doing, the Court exhibits a preternatural solicitousness for corporate well-being and a seeming callousness toward the investing public quite out of keeping, it seems to me, with our own traditions and the intent of the securities laws. See Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U. S. 128, 151 (1972); Superintendent of Insurance v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 404 U. S. 6, 12 (1971); SEC v. National Securities, Inc., 393 U. S. 453, 463 (1969); Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U. S. 332, 336 (1967); SEC v. Capital Gains Bureau, 375 U. S. 180, 195 (1963).

The plaintiff's complaint—and that is all that is before us now—raises disturbing claims of fraud. It alleges that the directors of "New Blue Chip" and the majority shareholders of "Old Blue Chip" engaged in a deceptive and manipulative scheme designed to subvert the intent of the 1967 antitrust consent decree and to enhance the value of their own shares in a subsequent offering. Although the complaint is too long to reproduce here, see App. 4–22, the plaintiff, in short, contends that the much-negotiated plan of reorganization of Old Blue

[2] Just this Term, however, we did not view with such tender regard another decision by the very same panel. See United States v. Feola, 420 U. S. 671 (1975), and its treatment of an analogy advanced in United States v. Crimmins, 123 F. 2d 271 (CA2 1941).

Chip, pursuant to the decree and approved by the District Court, was intended to compensate former retailer-users of Blue Chip stamps for damages suffered as a result of the antitrust violations. Accordingly, the majority shareholders were to be divested of 55% of their interest; Old Blue Chip was to be merged into a new company; and 55% of the common shares of the new company were to be offered to the former users on a pro rata basis, determined by the quantity of stamps issued to each of these nonshareholding users during a designated period. Some 621,000 shares were thus to be offered in units, each consisting of three shares of common and a $100 debenture, in return for $101 cash.

It is the plaintiff's pleaded position that this offer to the former users was intended by the antitrust court and the Government to be a "bargain," since the then reasonable market value of each unit was actually $315. The plaintiff alleged, however, that the offering shareholders had no intention of complying in good faith with the terms of the consent decree and of permitting the former users of Blue Chip stamps to obtain the bargain offering. Rather, they conspired to dissuade the offerees from purchasing the units by including substantially misleading and negative information in the prospectus under the heading "Items of Special Interest." The prospectus contained the following statements, allegedly false and allegedly made to deter the plaintiff and its class from purchasing the units: (1) that "[n]et income for the current fiscal year will be adversely affected by payments aggregating $8,486,000 made since March 2, 1968 in settlement of claims" against New Blue Chip; (2) that net income "would be adversely affected by a substantial decrease in the use of the Company's trading stamp service"; (3) that net income "would be adversely affected by a sale of one-third of the Company's trading stamp business in California"; (4) that "Claims or Causes of Action (as defined) against the Company, including prayers for treble damages, now aggregate approximately $29,000,000"; and (5) that, based upon "statistical evaluations," "the Company presently estimates that 97.5% of all stamps issued will ultimately be redeemed." App. 56, 66.

Plaintiff alleged that these negative statements were known, or should have been known, by the defendants to be false since, for example, the $29,000,000 in purported legal claims were settled for less than $1,000,000 only three months later, and, as a historical fact, less than 90% of all trading stamps are redeemed. Importantly, when the defendants offered their own shares for sale to the public a year later, the prospectus issued at that time made no reference to these factors even though, to the extent that they were relevant on the date of the first prospectus, one year earlier, they would have been equally relevant on the date of the second. As a result of the defendants' negative statements, plaintiff claims that it and its class were dissuaded from exercising their option to purchase Blue Chip shares and that they were damaged accordingly.

From a reading of the complaint in relation to the language of § 10 (b) of the 1934 Act and of Rule 10b–5, it is manifest that plaintiff has alleged the use of a deceptive scheme "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security." To my mind, the word "sale" ordinarily and naturally may be understood to mean, not only a single, individualized act transferring property from one party to another, but also the generalized event of public disposal of property through advertisement, auction, or some other market mechanism. Here, there is an obvious, indeed a court-ordered, "sale" of securities in the special offering of New Blue Chip shares and debentures to former users. Yet the Court denies this plaintiff the right to maintain a suit under Rule 10b–5 because it does not fit into the mechanistic categories of either "purchaser" or "seller." This, surely, is an anomaly, for the very purpose of the alleged scheme was to inhibit this plaintiff from ever acquiring the status of "purchaser." Faced with this abnormal divergence from the usual pattern of securities frauds, the Court pays no heed to the unremedied wrong or to the portmanteau nature of § 10 (b).

The broad purpose and scope of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are manifest. Senator Fletcher, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, in introducing S. 2693, the bill that became the 1934 Act, reviewed the general purposes of the legislation:

> "Manipulators who have in the past had a comparatively free hand to befuddle and fool the public and to extract from the public millions of dollars through stock-exchange operations are to be curbed and deprived of the opportunity to grow fat on the savings of the average man and woman of America. Under this bill the securities exchanges will not only have the appearance of an open market place for investors but will be truly open to them, free from the hectic operations and dangerous practices which in the past have enabled a handful of men to operate with stacked cards against the general body of the outside investors. For example, besides forbidding fraudulent practices and unwholesome manipulations by professional market operators, the bill seeks to deprive corporate directors, corporate officers, and other corporate insiders of the opportunity to play the stocks of their companies against the interests of the stockholders of their companies." 78 Cong. Rec. 2271 (1934).

The Senator went on to describe the function of each of the many provisions of the bill, including § 9 (c) which, without significant alteration, became § 10 (b) of the Act. He said, as to this section, in terms that surely are broad:

> "The Commission is also given power to forbid any other devices in connection with security transactions which it finds detrimental to the public interest or to the proper protection of investors." Ibid.

Similarly, the broad scope of the identical provision in the House version of the bill was emphasized by one of the principal draftsmen, in testimony before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Summing up § 9 (c), he stated:

> "Subsection (c) says, 'Thou shalt not devise any other cunning devices.'
>
> . . . . . .
> ". . . Of course subsection (c) is a catch-all clause to prevent manipulative devices[.] I do not think there is any objection to that kind of a clause. The Commission should have the authority to deal with new manipulative devices." Testimony of Thomas G. Corcoran, Hearing on H. R. 7852 and H. R. 8720 before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 115 (1934).

In adopting Rule 10b–5 in 1942, the Securities and Exchange Commission issued a press release stating: "The new rule closes a loophole in the protections against fraud administered by the Commission by prohibiting individuals or companies from buying securities if they engage in fraud in their purchase." SEC Release No. 3230 (May 21, 1942). To say specifically that certain types of fraud are within Rule 10b–5, of course, is not to say that others are necessarily excluded. That this is so is confirmed by the apparently casual origins of the Rule, as recalled by a former SEC staff attorney in remarks made at a conference on federal securities laws several years ago:

> "It was one day in the year 1943, I believe. I was sitting in my office in the S. E. C. building in Philadelphia and I received a call from Jim Treanor who was then the Director of the Trading and Exchange Division. He said, 'I have just been on the telephone with Paul Rowen,' who was then the S. E. C. Regional Administrator in Boston, 'and he has told me about the president of some company in Boston who is going around buying up the stock of his company from his own shareholders at $4.00 a share, and he has been telling them that the company is doing very badly, whereas, in fact, the earnings are going to be quadrupled and will be $2.00 a share for this coming year. Is there anything we can do about it?' So he came upstairs and I called in my secretary and I looked at Section 10 (b) and I looked at Section 17, and I put them together, and the only discussion we had there was where 'in connection with the purchase or sale' should be, and we decided it should be at the end.
> "We called the Commission and we got on the calendar, and I don't remember whether we got there that morning or after lunch. We passed a piece of paper around to all the commissioners. All the commissioners read the rule and they tossed it on the table, indicating approval. Nobody said anything except Sumner Pike who said, 'Well,' he said, 'we are against fraud, aren't we?' That is how it happened." Remarks of Milton Freeman, Conference on Codification of the Federal Securities Laws, 22 Bus. Law. 793, 922 (1967).

The question under both Rule 10b–5 and its parent statute, § 10 (b), is whether fraud was employed—and the language is critical—by "any person . . . in connection with the purchase or sale of any security." On the allegations here, the nexus between the asserted fraud and the conducting of a "sale" is obvious and inescapable, and no more should be required to sustain the plaintiff's complaint against a motion to dismiss.

The fact situation in Birnbaum itself, of course, is far removed from that now before the Court, for there the fundament of the complaint was that the controlling shareholder had misrepresented the circumstances of an attractive merger offer and then, after rejecting the merger, had sold his controlling shares at a price double their then market value to a corporation formed by 10 manufacturers who wished control of a captive source's supply when there was a market shortage. The Second Circuit turned aside an effort by small shareholders to bring this claim of breach of fiduciary duty under Rule 10b–5 by concluding that the Rule and § 10 (b) protected only those who had bought or had sold securities.

Many cases applying the Birnbaum doctrine and continuing critical comments from the academic world [3] followed in its wake, but until today the Court remained serenely above the fray.

To support its decision to adopt the Birnbaum doctrine, the Court points to the "longstanding acceptance by the courts" and to "Congress' failure to reject Birnbaum's reasonable interpretation of the wording of § 10 (b)." Ante, at 733. In addition, the Court purports to find support in "evidence from the texts of the 1933 and 1934 Acts," although it concedes this to be "not conclusive." Ibid. But the greater portion of the Court's opinion is devoted to its discussion of the "danger of vexatiousness," ante, at 739, that accompanies litigation under Rule 10b–5 and that is said to be "different in degree and in kind from that which accompanies litigation in general." Ibid. It speaks of harm from the "very pendency of the lawsuit," ante, at 740, something like the recognized dilemma of the physician sued for malpractice; of the "disruption of normal business activities which may accompany a lawsuit," ante, at 743; and of "proof . . . which depend[s] almost entirely on oral testimony," ibid., as if all these were unknown to lawsuits taking place in America's courthouses every day. In turning to, and being influenced by, these "policy considerations," ante, at 737, or these "considerations of policy," ante, at 740, the Court, in my view, unfortunately mires itself in speculation and conjecture not usually seen in its opinions. In order to support an interpretation that obviously narrows a provision of the securities laws designed to be a "catch-all," the Court takes alarm at the "practical difficulties," ante, at 754, 755, that would follow the removal of Birnbaum's barrier.

Certainly, this Court must be aware of the realities of life, but it is unwarranted for the Court to take a form of attenuated judicial notice of the motivations that defense counsel may have in settling a case, or of the difficulties that a plaintiff may have in proving his claim.

Perhaps it is true that more cases that come within the Birnbaum doctrine can be properly proved than those that fall outside it. But this is no reason for denying standing to sue to plaintiffs, such as the one in this case, who allegedly are injured by novel forms of manipulation. We should be wary about heeding the seductive call of expediency and about substituting convenience and ease of processing for the more difficult task of separating the genuine claim from the unfounded one.

Instead of the artificiality of Birnbaum, the essential test of a valid Rule 10b–5 claim, it seems to me, must be the showing of a logical nexus between the alleged fraud and the sale or purchase of a security. It is inconceivable that Congress could have intended a broad-ranging antifraud provision, such as § 10 (b), and, at the same time, have intended to impose, or be deemed to welcome, a mechanical overtone and requirement such as the Birnbaum doctrine. The facts of this case, if proved and accepted by the factfinder, surely are within the conduct that Congress intended to ban. Whether this particular plaintiff, or any plaintiff, will be able eventually to carry the burdens of proving fraud and of proving reliance and damage—that is, causality and injury—is a matter that should not be left to speculations of "policy" of the kind now advanced in this forum so far removed from witnesses and evidence.

Finally, I am uneasy about the type of precedent the present decision establishes. Policy considerations can be applied and utilized in like fashion in other situations. The acceptance of this decisional route in this case may well come back to haunt us elsewhere before long. I would decide the case to fulfill the broad purpose that the language of the statutes and the legislative history dictate, and I would avoid the Court's pragmatic solution resting upon a 20-odd-year-old, severely criticized doctrine enunciated for a factually distinct situation.

In short, I would abandon the Birnbaum doctrine as a rule of decision in favor of a more general test of nexus, just as the Seventh Circuit did in Eason v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 490 F. 2d 654, 661 (1973), cert. denied, 416 U. S. 960 (1974). I would not worry about any imagined inability of our federal trial and appellate courts to control the flowering of the types of cases that the Court fears might result. Nor would I yet be disturbed about dire consequences that a basically pessimistic attitude foresees if the Birnbaum doctrine were allowed quietly to expire. Sensible standards of proof and of demonstrable damages would evolve and serve to protect the worthy and shut out the frivolous.

time of payment—even if the claim is unliquidated, unfixed or contingent. Energy Co-op, Inc. v. SOCAP Int'l, Ltd. (In re Energy Co-op, Inc.), 832 F.2d 997, 1001 (7th Cir. 1987).

22. When determining whether a claim for unpaid taxes existed before payment, a special rule applies: "[a] debt for a tax is incurred [for preference purposes] on the day when such tax is last payable without penalty, including any extension." 11 U.S.C. § 547(a) (1995).

23. As previously concluded, Pullman can only seek to recover $149,197.44 of the $610,143.64 it originally sought to recover from the IRS because it could not establish an identifiable property interest in the remaining $460,946.19. To recover under § 547(b), Pullman must further demonstrate that the taxes satisfied by transfer of the $149,197.44 were "last payable without penalty" before the payments were made.

24. Pullman has not demonstrated by a preponderance that its non-trust fund taxes were last payable without penalty before it made the four payments to the IRS which included the $149,197.44 previously identified. Unlike income and social security taxes withheld, Pullman was not compelled under penalty by IRS regulation to deposit non-trust fund taxes with a qualified federal tax depository institution. Rather, Pullman's social security taxes were not due until the respective date on which Pullman was required to file its quarterly tax return (Form 941). See 26 U.S.C. § 6151 (1995). Pullman was not required to file its quarterly return for non-trust fund taxes until April 30, 1987. 26 U.S.C. §§ 6011, 6071, 6151 (1995); 26 C.F.R. §§ 31.6011(a)–4 (returns of income taxes withheld), 31.6071(a)–1 (time for filing returns), 31.6151–1 (time for paying tax). As previously found, all four payments in question were sent and received on or before that date. Thus, Pullman has failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that its payments of non-trust fund taxes were for or on account of antecedent debts as required by § 547(b)(3). It may be ironic, but because Pullman paid too early, it loses here.

CONCLUSION

Pullman has failed to satisfy its burden of demonstrating the elements of § 547(b) by a preponderance of the evidence. Accordingly, judgment is by separate order entered entirely in favor of the United States and against Pullman.

In re S.N.A. NUT COMPANY, an Illinois corporation, Debtor.

Bankruptcy No. 94 B 05993.

United States Bankruptcy Court, N.D. Illinois, Eastern Division.

Aug. 31, 1995.

Unsuccessful bidder in sale of Chapter 11 debtor's assets applied for reimbursement of costs and expenses incurred in unsuccessful bidding. The Bankruptcy Court, Erwin I. Katz, J., held that: (1) bankruptcy court would not award break-up fees absent compelling circumstances clearly indicating that payment of fees would be in best interest of estate, and (2) bidder could not recover costs and expenses either as break-up fee or as administrative expense.

Application denied.

1. Corporations ⇐582

Agreements to provide break-up fees or reimbursement of fees and expenses are meant to compensate potential acquirer who serves as catalyst or "stalking horse" which attracts more favorable offers.

2. Corporations ⇐582

Generally, break-up fees for failure to consummate transactions in context of merger and acquisition are allowed as long as they "enhance" bidding and are reasonable in relation to bidder's efforts and size of transaction; as long as procedural safeguards accompanied approval of bidding incentive by corporate board of directors, those bidding incentives will not be disturbed by courts.

3. Corporations ⇐582

Agreements made by parties to corporate combination are deferentially reviewed by nonbankruptcy courts under business judgment rule.

4. Corporations ⇐320(11)

Under "business judgment rule," there is presumption that, in making business decision, directors of corporation acted on informed basis, in good faith and in honest belief that action taken was in best interests of company.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

5. Bankruptcy ⇐3072(1)

In bankruptcy context, proper standard for evaluating break-up fee, or fee payable as incentive payment to prospective purchaser with which debtor fails to consummate transaction, should be whether interests of all concerned parties are best served by break-up fee and whether payment of fee is in best interests of estate, including whether revenues will be maximized for estate; business judgment rule is applied by courts when decision being reviewed is within ordinary course of decision-maker's business, but, when break-up fee comes before bankruptcy court as part of motion to sell estate assets, it is necessarily outside ordinary course of debtor's or trustee's business. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 363(b)(1).

6. Bankruptcy ⇐3067.1

When debtor or trustee conducts sale of estate assets, it has obligation to maximize revenues for estate. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 363(b).

7. Bankruptcy ⇐3072(1)

Absent compelling circumstances which clearly indicate that payment of fee would be in best interests of estate, break-up fees should not be awarded to unsuccessful bidder in bankruptcy auction sales. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 363(b)(1).

8. Bankruptcy ⇐3072(1)

Because Chapter 11 debtor was seeking liquidation rather than reorganization, no particular deference was to be given debtor's business decision to allow bidder to apply for break-up fees after unsuccessful bid for debtor's assets, and bankruptcy court would not award break-up fees absent compelling circumstances clearly indicating that payment of fees would be in best interest of estate; unsecured creditors committee, which was entitled to more deference in context of liquidation, opposed payment of break-up fees, and, regardless of whether sale of assets was usually within ordinary course of business, debtor was not in business of liquidating. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 363(b)(1).

9. Bankruptcy ⇐2872, 3072(1)

Unsuccessful bidder in sale of Chapter 11 debtor's assets could not recover costs and expenses incurred in unsuccessful bidding, either as break-up fee or as administrative expense, since recovery was not in best interests of the estate, and reimbursement was not appropriate to reward substantial contribution to estate; unsuccessful bidder may have lured in other bidders, but no offer received was reasonable, no sale was consummated, and estate received no benefit from unsuccessful bid. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 363(b)(1), 503(b)(3)(D).

10. Bankruptcy ⇐2871

Administrative expenses are priority claims, and thus are subject to strict scrutiny by court. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 503(b).

11. Bankruptcy ⇐2872

For entity to recover on administrative expense claim for having made substantial contribution in Chapter 11 case, it must show that services were rendered to benefit all parties in case and not just applicant, services provided direct, significant and demonstrable benefit to estate and unsecured creditors, and services were not duplicative. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 503(b)(3)(D).

12. Bankruptcy ⇐2872, 2926

13. Bankruptcy ⇐2871

Compensation on administrative expense claim must be preserved for those rare occasions when creditor's involvement truly fosters and enhances administration of estate. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 503(b)(3)(D).

14. Bankruptcy ⇐3072(1)

Goal of bankruptcy auction is to maximize return to estate, and costs of bidding should be borne by those who are best able to bear them, the bidders who have voluntarily entered bidding process, and who are bidding for company with title free and clear of liens and with all advantages provided by Bankruptcy Code. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 363(b)(1).

15. Bankruptcy ⇐2872

Unsuccessful bidder in sale of Chapter 11 debtor's assets was not among entities described by statute as having standing to bring administrative expense claim incurred by making substantial contribution to case. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 503(b)(3)(D).

MEMORANDUM OPINION

ERWIN I. KATZ, Bankruptcy Judge.

This matter comes before the Court on the Application of Alimenta (U.S.A.), Inc. ("Alimenta") For Reimbursement of Costs and Expenses Incurred in Unsuccessful Bidding ("Application"). Alimenta seeks to recover $206,544.21 in costs and expenses arising out of its unsuccessful bid for the assets of S.N.A. Nut Company ("SNA" or "Debtor"). In support of its Application, Alimenta relies on the July 6, 1994 order ("Order") in which this Court stated that in the event Alimenta "is not the successful bidder, the Court may allow reimbursement of Alimenta's out-of-pocket costs and expenses not to exceed $350,000 ("Costs and Expenses")." As an alternative basis, Alimenta seeks recovery as an administrative expense claim under 11 U.S.C. § 503(b). In response, the Debtor argues that Alimenta has no contractual right to reimbursement and, in the alternative, cannot meet its burden of proof for allowance of an administrative expense claim under § 503(b). Having considered the arguments, pleadings and exhibits, the Court finds that Alimenta is not entitled to reimbursement of its costs and expenses.

BACKGROUND

SNA filed a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 11 on March 25, 1994. Subsequently, SNA and Alimenta entered into negotiations for the sale of all of Debtor's assets. SNA received a written offer from Alimenta to purchase substantially all of its assets, free and clear of all liens, claims and encumbrances, for $28.8 million. On June 27, 1994, the Debtor filed a Motion for Leave to Sell Assets and To Set Sale Procedures ("Sale Motion"). That Motion referred to the Alimenta offer which included the provision requiring that it be paid a "breakup fee." The Creditors' Committee took the position that it did not object to a sale for an adequate price but was not endorsing the sale at the price, or under the terms, offered. The Court ordered that an auction sale be held without prejudging the question of whether Alimenta would be entitled to a breakup fee.

On July 6, 1994, an order was entered setting forth the procedures for the sale, which provided that in the event Alimenta was not the successful bidder it may apply for reimbursement which the Court may allow, in its discretion. Attached to the Order was a "Notice of Hearing on Debtor's Motion to Sell Assets" ("Notice").[1]

Paragraph 5 of the Notice set forth two alternative possibilities for recovery by Alimenta. The first was reimbursement to Alimenta of its out-of-pocket costs and expenses not to exceed $350,000 if it was outbid at the sale. The second alternative applied if this Court did not authorize Debtor to sell its assets. In that instance, the Notice provided that the Court may consider whether reimbursement would be appropriate as an administrative expense.

Although at least two other bids were filed with the Court, none of the bids received, including Alimenta's, were adequate. Neither the Debtor nor the Creditors' Committee recommended Alimenta's bid. No sale occurred, and Debtor withdrew its Sale Motion. The Debtor eventually liquidated various of its assets via a liquidating plan. Alimenta now applies for reimbursement of its costs and expenses.

JURISDICTION

This Court's jurisdiction derives from 28 U.S.C. § 1334 and General Rule 2.33(A) of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. This matter is a core proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 157(e)(2)(A).

DISCUSSION

Alimenta argues that the "breakup fee" was intended to apply even if no sale was consummated. It is clear from the Notice, however, that the parties contemplated both scenarios. The Court finds that the intent and agreement were that if Alimenta was outbid it was entitled to apply for a breakup fee, but if no sale was approved Alimenta could attempt to qualify itself under 11 U.S.C. § 503(b) as an administrative expense claimant.

Breakup Fee:

[1] "A break-up fee, or more appropriately a termination fee, is an incentive payment to a prospective purchaser with which a company fails to consummate a transaction." In re Integrated Resources, Inc., 147 B.R. 650, 653 (S.D.N.Y.1992), app. dismissed on jurisdictional grounds, 3 F.3d 49 (2nd Cir.1993). "Agreements to provide breakup fees or reimbursement of fees and expenses are meant to compensate the potential acquirer who serves as a catalyst or 'stalking horse' which attracts more favorable offers." In re Marrose Corp., 1992 WL 33848, *5 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.1992). See Bruce A. Markell, The Case Against Breakup Fees in Bankruptcy, 66 Am.Bankr.L.J. 349, 352 (1992) ("Breakup fees are post-sale payments made to bidders who fail to acquire the target sought.")

Non-Bankruptcy Treatment of Breakup Fees:

Outside of bankruptcy, the courts have dealt with the concept of breakup fees and other bidding incentives in merger and acquisition cases.[2] Because the acquirer is taking the risk that "another party will come in and outbid you and all that time and money will have been spent for naught," Beebe v. Pacific Realty Trust, 578 F.Supp. 1128, 1150 n. 7 (D.Or.1984) (quoting A Leveraged Buyout. What It Takes, Business Week, July 18, 1983, at 104, 108), breakup fees are often part of the deal. "[A] potential acquirer's task is not finished when it signs its deal with manage-

1. The Court noted at the hearing on July 6 that the drafters of the Notice had erred in its use of the term "will allow" in lieu of "may allow" regarding the breakup fee. Alimenta agreed that the word should be "may."

2. These cases generally come to court when a shareholder of one party to a deal is dissatisfied. They are really not similar to the bankruptcy cases since most involve allegations of breach of fiduciary duty by the directors. The Board Of Directors favors one bidder due to the Board's self interest. The Board grants a favorable penalty clause to the favored bidder as a bar to competing bids. In Conte v. Storer Communication, Inc., 849 F.2d 570 (11th Cir.1988), for example, after a dissident stockholders' group announced it wanted to implement a liquidation and distribution of the assets of Storer Communication, Inc., ("Storer") the Storer board of directors solicited potential purchasers. Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Company ("KKR") eventually acquired Storer after a bidding contest with Comcast Corporation, the Storer board of directors had granted KKR a lock-up option. The plaintiff shareholder in Conte alleged that the Storer directors had abused their discretion when the lock-up option was granted. Samjens Partners I v. Burlington Industries, Inc., 663 F.Supp. 684 (S.D.N.Y.1987) involved another dissatisfied shareholder, who was also making a hostile tender offer. Samjens Partners I ("Samjens") commenced a tender offer for Burlington Industries, Inc. ("Burlington"). Burlington subsequently entered a merger agreement with Morgan Stanley Group, Inc. ("Morgan"), which included a $25 million break up fee and up to $25 million as reimbursement for expenses. This agreement was approved by Burlington's board of directors. Samjens filed a cause of action which alleged, inter alia, that Burlington's board breached its fiduciary duty to Samjens a Burlington shareholder, by agreeing to pay the break up fee to Morgan.

ment: it could lose to a better bid if shareholders fail to approve its bid. The breakup fee is designed in part to compensate for the risk of losing a signed deal." Markell, Case Against Breakup Fees, at 353.

[2] Generally, breakup fees are allowed as long as they "enhance" the bidding, CRTF, 683 F.Supp. at 440; Samjens, 663 F.Supp. at 624–625; Joseph Samet & Donald J. Kravet, "Use of Break-up and Topping Fees in Asset Sales," Basics of Bankruptcy and Reorganization, 1993, and are reasonable in relation to the bidder's efforts and the size of the transaction, Cottle, 849 F.2d at 578. As long as procedural safeguards accompanied the approval of the bidding incentive by the board of directors, those bidding incentives will not be disturbed by the courts.

[3, 4] Agreements made by parties to a corporate combination are deferentially reviewed by non-bankruptcy courts under the business judgment rule. Cottle, 849 F.2d at 578; CRTF Corp. v. Federated Dept. Stores, Inc., 683 F.Supp. 422 (S.D.N.Y.1988). Under the business judgment rule, there "is a presumption that in making a business decision the directors of a corporation acted on an informed basis, in good faith and in the honest belief that the action taken was in the best interests of the company." Smith v. Van Gorkom, 488 A.2d 858, 872 (Del.1985). Nonbankruptcy courts inquire into the procedures followed by the board of directors. If the process was fair, then the courts do not inquire into the substance of the transaction. The courts have, essentially, limited their review to a due process type of inquiry. The board of directors is in the business of running the corporation. If the procedures utilized by the directors are applied fairly, and if the directors do not violate any of their fiduciary duties, then, under the business judgement rule their decision will not be second-guessed.[3]

By contrast, when a bankruptcy court is reviewing proposed actions under § 363(b), those actions are necessarily outside of the ordinary course of business.[4]

Bankruptcy Treatment of Breakup Fees:

Some bankruptcy cases have followed the lead of nonbankruptcy courts and applied the business judgment rule to the use of bidding incentives in bankruptcy asset sales. In Integrated Resources, 147 B.R. 650, at 657 the Court looked for key factors, including the time and resources invested by the acquirer, the complexity of the transaction, and whether other bidders were attracted, but excluding the presence of an agreement which was binding on the parties pending court approval. In that case there were multiple bidders for the assets. In In re Crowthers McCall Pattern, Inc., 114 B.R. 877, 888 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.1990), a break-up fee was approved without discussion. The Court in In re 995 Fifth Avenue Associates, L.P., 96 B.R. 24, 28 (Bankr.S.D.N.Y.1989), held that principles used outside bankruptcy to evaluate bidding incentives "have vitality by analogy in the chapter 11 context." (footnote omitted). See Paul B. Lackey, An Empirical Survey and Proposed Bankruptcy Code Section Concerning the Propriety of Bidding Incentives in a Bankruptcy Sale of Assets, 93 Colum.L.Rev. 720, 730 (1993) ("Empirical Survey").

Two bankruptcy courts have explicitly rejected the use of the business judgment rule for evaluating breakup fees in bankruptcy. In re Hupp Industries, Inc., 140 B.R. 191 (Bankr.N.D.Ohio 1992); In re America West Airlines, Inc., 166 B.R. 908, 911 (Bankr. D.Ariz.1994). In Hupp, the court cautioned that these fees must be "carefully scrutinized in § 363(b) asset sales to insure that the debtor's estate is not unduly burdened and that the relative rights of the parties in interest are protected." Id. at 196 (footnote omitted). The Hupp court listed seven factors to be considered in a determination of whether a breakup fee would be appropriate,[5] and suggested that breakup fees should "be highly scrutinized in view of the uncertainty of dividends, if any, to be received by claimants of the debtor's estate." Id. at 195.[6]

The America West court warned that bankruptcy courts should not blindly follow non-bankruptcy courts' application of the business judgment rule to break-up fees. America West rejected the business judgment rule because bankruptcy courts must determine what is in the best interests of the estate, and deference to the debtor's business judgment will not always produce the result which is best for the estate.[7] In rejecting the earlier line of bankruptcy cases which followed the business judgment rule, America West adopted and approved of the reasoning articulated by Markell in The Case Against Breakup Fees (supra). America West, 166 B.R. at 912.

Markell refutes the argument that breakup fees are a necessary inducement to draw bidders into the asset sale process. From an economic standpoint, he suggests that the debtor can eliminate the need for a breakup fee by increasing the available information about itself and standardizing bidding procedures. By doing so, the debtor would eliminate much of the cost associated with the bidding process and increase the marginal gain available to bidders. Further, providing more information to bidders enables them to more accurately determine the value of the debtor, so that they will be more likely to submit higher bids. Thus, the debtor can take certain actions which reduce or eliminate the need for a breakup fee and increase its chances of maximizing revenue for the estate.

Markell distinguishes the use of breakup fees outside of bankruptcy, noting that "non-bankruptcy courts focus on procedure in their review of breakup fees, while § 363(b) instructs bankruptcy courts to look at substance.... Bankruptcy courts look at process as well, but also have the ability and the responsibility to ask if the proposed transaction makes economic sense for all concerned." Id. at 374. Further distinctions between non-bankruptcy corporate combinations and § 363 asset sales include the inability of the trustee or debtor-in-possession to bind the estate without court approval, the obligation of debtor's management to sell the assets or reorganize, and the rights of the ultimate beneficiaries—not shareholders, but creditors.[8]

Finally, Markell argues that breakup fees are unnecessary to ensure that bidders get fair treatment in a bankruptcy asset sale. He refutes the theory that a breakup fee is liquidated damages for breach of an acquisition agreement. Liquidated damages are inappropriate because an enforceable contract for a sale of assets does not exist until court approval has been obtained. It is not a reverse option price since similar treatment is not given to the other bidders. Breakup fees should not be paid as compensation for

3. Query: Can a sale of all the assets of a business corporation ever really be "ordinary course" as to the directors' business judgement? Most Business Corporation Acts would seem to require shareholder approval before disposing of all of the assets of a corporation.

4. "The trustee after notice and a hearing, may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 363(b)(1) (emphasis added).

5. 1) Whether the fee requested correlates with a maximization of value to the debtor's estate;
2) Whether the underlying negotiated agreement is an arms-length transaction between the debtor's estate and the negotiating acquirer;
3) Whether the principal secured creditors and the official creditors committee are supportive of the concession;
4) Whether the subject break-up fee constitutes a fair and reasonable percentage of the proposed purchase price;
5) Whether the dollar amount of the break up fee is so substantial that it provides a "chilling effect" on other potential bidders;
6) The existence of available safeguards beneficial to the debtor's estate;
7) Whether there exists a substantial adverse impact upon unsecured creditors, where such creditors are in opposition to the break up fee.
Hupp, 140 B.R. at 194.

7. As one court noted, the best interests of the estate and the best interests of the debtor "do not always coincide." In re Clark, 1995 WL 495951, *5 (N.D.Ill 1995)

8. It must be noted, however, that non bankruptcy settings may have similar restrictions. A corporate sale of substantially all the assets of the corporation requires shareholder approval. Further, it has been held that the directors owe an increased fiduciary duty to creditors as insolvency approaches use by other bidders of the benefit of the initial bidder's due diligence, because bidders can adjust their bids to compensate for the cost of due diligence.

The estate has a better chance to maximize revenues when a significant amount of information is available to bidders. These "[i]ncreased revenues, in turn, translate into increased creditor dividends, a specific bankruptcy goal. If bidders suffer some loss that is made up by gains to creditors, we might very well accept that result on a policy basis." Id. at 379. In a free market, no-one is forcing these bidders to play the game; they choose to enter the bidding arena presumably because a profit is to be made. Why should the estate, and ultimately the creditors, pay the entry fee? Id. at 377–380.

In fact, as a later article notes, bidders in a § 363 asset sale enjoy several benefits not available to bidders operating outside of the Code.

> An initial advantage to acquiring a bankrupt company is that the investor knows that the company is in 'play.' In other words, a bankruptcy sale is not like a hostile takeover in which a company attempts to fend off potential acquirers.
>
>
> Additionally, a company in bankruptcy has certain powers that make it more attractive than nonbankrupt companies. Under the Bankruptcy Code, a debtor can reject executory contracts and leases and limit the damage claims that arise from the breach caused by this rejection. . . Buyers are thus particularly interested in purchasing companies that are in bankruptcy: there is little risk of being saddled with onerous obligations of the old company.

Lackey, Empirical Survey, at 736 (footnotes omitted).[9]

Additionally, as here, the bulk of the costs incident to the initial bid are incurred far in advance of the motion seeking approval of a breakup fee. Those due diligence costs are incurred for the benefit of the bidder, enabling that bidder to make an informed bid, irrespective and independent of the consideration of whether that bid should be an initial bid.

[5, 6] The America West court adopted Markell's reasoning on all these points, and proposed a new test to replace the business judgment rule in evaluating the use of bidding incentives in bankruptcy. The America West test "is not whether a break-up fee is within the business judgment of the debtor, but whether the transaction will 'further the diverse interests of the debtor, creditors and equity holders, alike.' " America West, 166 B.R. at 912 (quoting In re Lionel Corp., 722 F.2d 1063, 1071 (2nd Cir.1983)). This Court agrees with America West that the proper standard for evaluating a breakup fee should be whether the interests of all concerned parties are best served by such a fee. The test is whether the payment of a breakup fee is in the best interests of the estate. As previously discussed, the business judgment rule is applied by courts when the decision being reviewed is within the ordinary course of the decision-maker's business. By virtue of the fact that the breakup fee comes before this Court as part of a motion to sell assets pursuant to § 363(b), it is necessarily outside the ordinary course of the debtor's (or trustee's) business.[10] When a debtor or trustee conducts a sale under § 363(b), it has an obligation to maximize revenues for the estate. See, e.g., In re Atlanta Packaging Products, Inc., 99 B.R. 124, 131 (Bankr. N.D.Ga.1988); Thomas J. Salerno, et al., Advanced Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Practice Vol. I at § 7.139 (April 1994). Therefore, bankruptcy courts should carefully scrutinize breakup fees to be sure that, following the underlying policy guiding § 363, revenues will be maximized. As stated by another court, in another context, defining best interests of the estate, "The prime criterion for assessing the interests of the estate is the maximization of its value . . . ," In re Clark, 1995 WL 495951 (N.D.Ill.1995).

9. It should be noted that the Seventh Circuit has held that a sale under a liquidating plan is not always free of successor liability. Chicago Truck Drivers v. Tasemkin, 59 F.3d 48 (7th Cir.1995).

10. See note 5, supra.

[7, 8] Further, this debtor is no longer being reorganized; instead, this is a liquidating Chapter 11. This is of note for two reasons. First, regardless of whether a sale of assets is usually within the ordinary course of business, in this instance the debtor is not in the business of liquidating. Therefore, no particular deference should be given to the debtor's business decision. Second, the unsecured creditors' committee opposes payment of this breakup fee. In a liquidating Chapter 11, more deference is shown to the unsecureds' viewpoint than in a reorganization case "because the principle [sic] underlying rationale for the 'business judgment rule', i.e., that a DIP is entitled to some free reign in fulfilling its perceived mission of aiding the economy . . . is lacking in such circumstances." In re After Six, Inc., 154 B.R. 876, 882 (Bankr.E.D.Pa.1993) (citations omitted). Therefore, absent compelling circumstances which clearly indicate that payment of the fee would be in the best interests of the estate, breakup fees should not be awarded in bankruptcy auction sales.[11]

Administrative Expense:

[9–13] Alimenta requests that it be granted an administrative expense claim pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b). In order to recover costs and expenses as a § 503(b)(3)(D) administrative expense claim, Alimenta must show a substantial contribution to the estate. Administrative expenses are priority claims, and thus are subject to strict scrutiny by the court. Matter of Jack Winter Apparel, Inc., 119 B.R. 629, 632 (E.D.Wis.1990). Although "substantial contribution" is not defined in the Code, case law has established that for an entity to recover under § 503(b) it must show that (1) the services were rendered to benefit all parties in the case and not just the applicant; (2) the services provided a direct, significant and demonstrable benefit to the estate and the unsecured creditors; and (3) the services were not duplicative. In re Envirodyne Industries, Inc., 176 B.R. 815, 819 (Bankr. N.D.Ill.1995). See Jack Winter, 119 B.R. at 633. The burden is on the applicant to prove its substantial contribution. In re Lister, 861 F.2d 55, 57 (10th Cir.1988); Envirodyne, 176 B.R. at 819. "Compensation under § 503(b) must be preserved for those rare occasions when the creditor's involvement truly fosters and enhances the administration of the estate." Envirodyne, 176 B.R. at 819.

Best Interests Of The Estate:

Under either the breakup fee or administrative expense analysis, this Court must determine whether reimbursing Alimenta's costs and expenses is in the best interests of the estate. Alimenta has argued that as the initial bidder, it rendered a benefit to the estate. Although no sale was completed, it created an opportunity for bidding at higher prices, and an increased value was placed on the Debtor's assets. In addition, Alimenta notes that it would not have made the initial bid if a breakup fee were not contemplated.

The Court rejects Alimenta's statement that a benefit was rendered to the estate by its bid. Since "any money that a bidder receives through a bidding incentive comes out of the pockets of the creditors of the estate . . there should be a direct relationship between the reimbursement an unsuccessful buyer receives and the benefit to the estate from the unsuccessful buyer's bid." [12]

11. There may be a setting in which due diligence and audit type costs resulting from an auction sale of assets may be reimbursable as an administrative expenses. This opinion is not meant to anticipate all the unique settings in which such recovery might be appropriate, nor to rule in advance on proposed scenarios. A court may conclude, prior to the sale, that full disclosure by way of an audit report to be filed and made available to interested parties could constitute a meaningful incentive to the maximization of the sale process. Should a creditors committee request that such a report be prepared, that expense could conceivably be an administrative expense. So too, if there are insufficient funds for the audit an interested potential bidder may be willing to advance the cost on condition of reimbursement as an administrative expense. Such a timely disclosure may be demonstrated to benefit the estate even if the assets are not eventually sold.

12. The Court notes, without deciding the issue, that if an initial bidder is to be rewarded with a breakup fee the minimum increment which the next bidder may acceptably bid over the initial bidder must be the amount of the fee if such to equalize the benefit to the estate.

Lackey, Empirical Survey, at 738 (footnotes omitted). An opportunity for other bidders to bid higher than Alimenta without a subsequent sale is of no benefit to the estate.

[14] The ultimate question becomes, who pays the costs of investigating the potential subject of an auction? If Debtor agrees to reimburse a bidder or to pay the opportunity cost of bidding, then the creditors are paying those costs. The goal of a bankruptcy auction, however, is to maximize the return to the estate. The costs of bidding should be borne by those who are best able to bear them—the bidders who have voluntarily entered the bidding process, and who are bidding for a company with title free and clear of liens and with all the advantages provided by the Bankruptcy Code. Markell, Case Against Breakup Fees, at 374 (footnote omitted); Lackey, Empirical Survey, at 736 (footnotes omitted). This court rejects the line of cases which hold that break-up fees and bidding incentives in general are analyzed under the business judgment rule, and finds the reasoning of Hupp and America West persuasive. When the break-up fee before this Court is carefully scrutinized to determine whether it is in the best interests of the estate, and whether such reimbursement is appropriate to reward a substantial contribution to the estate, the answer is clearly no. Alimenta's bid may have lured in other bidders, but none of the offers received were reasonable. No sale was consummated and the estate received no benefit from Alimenta's bid.

Standing

[15] Finally, as Debtor noted for the Court, Alimenta is not one of the entities described in 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(3)(D) which has standing to bring an administrative expense claim incurred by making a substantial contribution to the case. (July 12, 1995 Tr. at 12).[13]

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, Alimenta's Application for Reimbursement of Costs and Expenses Incurred in Unsuccessful Bidding will be denied.

13. Only creditors, indenture trustees, equity security holders, and committees representing creditors or equity security holders other than as appointed under 11 U.S.C. § 1102 may proceed under § 503(b)(3)(D). 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(3)(D)

United States Bankruptcy Court, W.D. Missouri.

Sept. 6, 1995.

Chapter 7 trustee who objected to "tool of the trade" exemption claimed by Chapter 7 debtor-wife in transmission cords and rebuild kits used in her and her husband's automotive repair business. The Bankruptcy Court, Arthur B. Federman, J., held that debtor-wife did not have to personally use transmission cords and rebuild kits in conduct of automotive repair business to be entitled to exemption in articles as necessary tools of the trade actually used, by someone, in conduct of business.

Objection overruled.

1. Exemptions ⇐45

Debtor-wife was entitled to Missouri "tools of the trade" exemption in transmission cords and rebuild kits used in her and husband's automotive repair business, though debtor-wife did not personally use such equipment, but performed work for business only in her capacity as bookkeeper and manager; debtor-wife was dependent upon automotive repair business for her livelihood, and equipment in question was undisputedly used in that business, albeit not by debtor-wife personally. V.A.M.S. § 513.430(4).

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

2. Exemptions ⇐45

"Tools of the trade," within meaning of Missouri exemption, are tools or other mechanical instruments or appliances necessary to practice of debtor's trade, business or profession and used in practice thereof. V.A.M.S. § 513.430(4).

3. Exemptions ⇐45

Under Missouri law, debtor may remove property from reach of creditors as exempt "tools of the trade" only if property is needed for reasonable conduct of debtor's trade and is so used. V.A.M.S. § 513.430(4).

4. Exemptions ⇐45

Although article must actually be used in conduct of trade or business, in order to qualify as exempt "tool of the trade" under Missouri law, there is no requirement that debtor personally use tool, only that tool is actually used in debtor's trade. V.A.M.S. § 513.430(4).

5. Exemptions ⇐4

Exemption statutes are enacted for relief of debtor and are to be liberally construed.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

ARTHUR B. FEDERMAN, Bankruptcy Judge.

The Chapter 7 Trustee, Robert A. Pummill (the "trustee") objects to the tools of the trade exemption claimed by debtor Kathy Ann Carrell with respect to certain transmission cords and rebuild kits used in the operation of a business owned by herself and her husband, debtor Richard Glen Carrell. This is a core proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(B) over which the Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b), 157(a), and 157(b)(1). For the reasons set forth below, the trustee's objection is OVERRULED.

The facts here are straightforward. The debtors own an automotive repair shop. Debtor Richard Glenn Carrell is himself a mechanic. Debtor Kathy Ann Carrell performs other work at the shop on a part-time basis. Neither of the debtors is paid a salary by such shop, but they instead take a draw for payment of their living expenses as such funds are available.

Debtors own, as tenants by the entirety, certain tools used in the auto shop. Both debtors claim a tools of the trade exemption as to such tools. The issue here is whether debtor Kathy Ann Carrell is entitled to claim such an exemption. Mo.Stat.Ann. § 513.430(4) (Supp.1995). For these purposes, I assume that she does not actually use such tools to repair vehicles, but that her livelihood is derived from the ownership of such tools.

[1-5] The Bankruptcy Code (the "Code") permits a debtor to exempt certain property, unless the state of residence has "opted out" of the Code exemption provisions. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(2)(A). The State of Missouri has "opted out" of the Code provisions by providing that any person seeking relief under Title 11 shall be allowed to exempt property that is exempt from attachment and execution under the laws of Missouri or under Federal law other than Title 11. Mo.Stat.Ann. § 513.427 (Supp.1995). In Missouri, a person may exempt from attachment and execution, to the extent of that person's interest, "[a]ny implements, professional books or tools of the trade of such person or the trade of a dependent of such person not to exceed two thousand dollars in value." Mo.Stat. Ann. § 513.430(4) (Supp.1995). Tools of the trade are defined as "the tools or other mechanical instruments or appliances necessary to the practice of any trade, business or profession and used in the practice thereof." Steward v. Commerce Bank of Blue Hills (In re Steward), 7 B.R. 121, 123 (Bankr.W.D.Mo. 1980). In Steward the Court held that in order to exempt certain property as a tool of

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

GORTON, District Judge.

On June 19, 2001, petitioner, now incarcerated at the Franklin County Jail, submitted for filing his self-prepared pleading entitled "Motion to Vacate Judgement & Sentence" accompanied by an Application to Proceed Without Prepayment of Filing Fees. Although it appears petitioner intended to file this motion in his criminal action, C.R. 97–40032–NMG, the clerk assigned this motion a separate civil action number. Petitioner does not provide a jurisdictional basis for this motion and the court will not construe this motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255.

On March 13, 2001, petitioner entered a guilty plea pursuant to a plea agreement and was sentenced on May 21, 2001. See United States v. Dias, C.R. No. 97–40032–NMG. Petitioner now complains that at the time of his guilty plea, the court and his attorney did not provide him with a warning that his guilty plea could result in his deportation.[1] Petitioner contends (Motion, ¶ 2) "removal proceedings were instituted against [petitioner] when the Immigration and Naturalization Service ['INS' or 'Service'] issued a 'Notice to Appear' in order to show cause of non-deportability." It is clear petitioner seeks to have his conviction set-aside in order to avoid being considered deportable.

[1] To the extent petitioner seeks to file this motion pursuant to Rule 32(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the court cannot permit withdrawal of the plea because petitioner failed to file such motion before sentencing. Rule 32(e) provides that after sentencing "a plea may be set aside only on direct appeal or by motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255."

[2] Petitioner's claim, that he was not advised of the adverse immigration consequences of entering a guilty plea, cannot provide the basis for Section 2255 relief. The application of the collateral-consequences doctrine "bar[s] any ineffective assistance claims based on an attorney's failure to advise a client of his plea's immigration consequences." United States v. Gonzalez, 202 F.3d 20, 28 (1st Cir.2000). Because deportation is a collateral consequence of a guilty plea, district courts are not obliged to grant plea withdrawal motions filed by defendants who realize, post-plea, the immigration implications of their conviction. Id. at 28. (citations omitted).

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED, petitioner's Application to Proceed Without Prepayment of Fees is ALLOWED; and it is further ORDERED, the pro se Motion to Vacate Judgement and Sentence is DENIED.

SO ORDERED.

1. The warning, which is required in state court proceedings in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts pursuant to G.L. ch. 278, § 29D, provides in pertinent part. v.

Floyd D. PERKINS, in his official capacity as Assistant Attorney General, State of Illinois, Defendant.

No. 01 C 4976.

United States District Court, N.D. Illinois, Eastern Division.

June 29, 2001.

Arts foundation and three of its directors brought Section 1983 action against assistant state attorney general charged with enforcing state's charitable institution laws, alleging that attorney violated their federal due process and free speech rights by intimidating two other directors into voting to change foundation's by-laws. Plaintiffs moved for temporary restraining order (TRO), seeking to prevent either the vote from taking place or the two other directors from participating in the vote. The District Court, Bucklo, J., held that: (1) two pending state court cases warranted abstention under the Younger doctrine; (2) plaintiffs did not have standing to seek TRO against assistant state attorney general; and (3) neither joint action theory nor state compulsion test applied to allow liability under Section 1983.

Motion denied.

312 984 7700 MAE CHICAGO 01/04/02 14:26 P.077/080
16di-004839

1. Federal Courts ⇐49

Pursuant to Younger abstention doctrine, federal courts cannot enjoin ongoing state criminal proceedings unless extraordinary circumstances are present.

2. Federal Courts ⇐41, 46

Federal court abstention is appropriate, due to pending state proceedings, under the Younger doctrine if the impacted state proceedings satisfy the following requirements: (1) the judicial or judicial-in-nature state proceedings are ongoing; (2) the proceedings implicate important state interests; and (3) there is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise constitutional challenges.

3. Federal Courts ⇐47.1

Federal court's abstention from deciding whether arts foundation was entitled to temporary restraining order (TRO) against state attorney general, who allegedly intimidated two directors into voting to change foundation's by-laws in violation of due process, was warranted under the Younger doctrine due to two pending cases in state court involving same parties and subject matter; state had important interest in its ability to regulate charitable institutions, and there was ample opportunity to raise any constitutional challenges in the state court proceedings.

4. Federal Civil Procedure ⇐103.2, 103.3

In order for a party to establish standing to bring suit in federal court, three requirements under Article III of the Federal Constitution must be met: (1) the party must have personally suffered an actual or threatened injury caused by the defendant's illegal conduct; (2) the injury must be fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury must be one that is likely to be redressed by a favorable decision. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 3, § 1 et seq.

5. Civil Rights ⇐201

Arts foundation did not have standing to seek temporary restraining order (TRO) preventing directors from voting on proposed change in foundation by-laws, in Section 1983 action against assistant state attorney general charged with enforcing state's charitable institution laws alleging that attorney violated federal due process by intimidating two directors into voting to change by-laws; attorney was out of the country at the time vote was being taken and did not even know that he had been sued. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

6. Civil Rights ⇐198(4)

The "joint action" theory, which allows private action to be linked with state action for purposes of subjecting private actors to liability under Section 1983, says that a private defendant acts under color of state law when he is a willful participant in joint action with the State or its agents. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

7. Civil Rights ⇐198(4)

A charge of joint action, which allows private action to be linked with state action for purposes of subjecting private actors to liability under Section 1983, amounts to alleging some agreement between private and public actors to violate plaintiff's constitutional rights. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

8. Civil Rights ⇐198(4)

A requirement of the joint action theory, which allows private action to be linked with state action for purposes of subjecting private actors to liability under Section 1983, is that both public and private actors share a common, unconstitutional goal. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

9. Civil Rights ⇐198(3.1)

Arts foundation could not establish "joint action" between two foundation directors and assistant state attorney general charged with enforcing state's charitable institution laws, based on allegations that the directors were coerced into changing their votes on a settlement by attorney general, and therefore, directors could not be held liable for due process violation under Section 1983; directors did not invoke any state authority. U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 14; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

10. Civil Rights ⇐198(3.1)

To state a §1983 claim against a private actor, plaintiffs must show that the defendant invoked state authority in such a way that the defendant should be considered a state actor. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

11. Civil Rights ⇐198(3.1)

The "state compulsion test" allows a §1983 claim to be stated against a private defendant when the state has so implicated itself in the defendant's action that the state has in effect compelled the action. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

12. Civil Rights ⇐198(3.1)

"State compulsion theory" did not apply to allow arts foundation to state a Section 1983 claim against two of its directors, alleging due process violations resulting from directors changing their votes due to alleged intimidation by assistant state attorney general, despite attorney general's conduct of naming one director as a defendant in a lawsuit and investigating the school of which the other director was head; such actions did not require directors to change their votes. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

BUCKLO, District Judge.

Plaintiffs, The Terra Foundation for the Arts, Paul Hayes Tucker, Alan K. Simpson, and Judith Terra, the latter three all directors of the Terra Foundation, have sued Floyd D. Perkins, an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Illinois who is charged with enforcing the State's charitable institution laws, alleging that Mr. Perkins violated their federal constitutional rights to due process and freedom of speech by intimidating two other Terra Foundation directors who, as a result of the intimidation,[1] are about to vote to substantially change the by-laws of the Terra Foundation and take other acts that will force the Terra Foundation to keep its valuable art collection in Illinois for many years. Plaintiffs seek a temporary restraining order that would prevent either the vote that is expected to take place tomorrow, June 29, 2001, from taking

1. Dr. Stephanie Marshall is head of the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, an elite but public high school in Illinois. The other director in question, Dr. Theodore Siebens, is curator of the Fogg Museum at Harvard University and has no ties to public institutions in Illinois but was allegedly intimidated by proposed changes of conflict of interest in an amended complaint drafted but never filed by the State of Illinois in related state litigation place, or would prevent the two allegedly intimidated directors from taking part in that vote. Plaintiffs have not sued the two directors.[2] Plaintiffs nevertheless say that an injunction against the Attorney General will prevent either any vote from taking place or the two directors' participation in that vote on the ground that because of the intimidation the two directors have become de facto agents of the Attorney General. They argue therefore that an injunction against the defendant will be binding on the directors.

There are at least two problems with plaintiffs' attempted resolution of their conflict in this court. First, there is an ongoing lawsuit (two actually) presently pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County in which the present plaintiffs are defendants and involving the same subject matter raised in their federal court complaint. It is actually a proposed resolution of those lawsuits through a settlement which is expected to be voted on tomorrow that plaintiffs seek to stop. Plaintiffs say that neither the Rooker–Feldman doctrine, see Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413, 44 S.Ct. 149, 68 L.Ed. 362 (1923); District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462, 103 S.Ct. 1303, 75 L.Ed.2d 206 (1983), nor the Anti-Injunction Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2283, prohibit this court from acting so long as it acts before the anticipated consent decree is entered in state court, but assuming that is so, principles of comity and federalism call for abstention where the issues raised can be litigated in the ongoing state action and where action by the federal court would interfere in the state proceeding.

[1] The State of Illinois, representing Mr. Perkins, invokes Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 91 S.Ct. 746, 27 L.Ed.2d 669 (1971), in support of abstention. Younger holds that federal courts cannot enjoin ongoing state criminal proceedings unless extraordinary circumstances are present. In a companion case, Samuels v. Mackell, 401 U.S. 66, 91 S.Ct. 764, 27 L.Ed.2d 688 (1971), the Court applied a similar result to actions for declaratory judgment because they would also interfere with state prosecutions. Younger has been extended widely, including to civil contexts. For example, the State of Illinois likens this case to Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1, 107 S.Ct. 1519, 95 L.Ed.2d 1 (1987) (Younger abstention appropriate when the relief sought by the federal plaintiff was an injunction against the party that had prevailed in state court to prevent it from executing its judgment prior to an appeal to a state appellate court). That case is not precisely on point because there, judgment had been entered, whereas in the case before me the goal is to prevent judgment from being entered. However, judgment need not have been entered for Younger abstention to be appropriate.

[2, 3] The Seventh Circuit states that abstention is appropriate "if the impacted state proceedings satisfy the following requirements: (1) the judicial or judicial-in-nature state proceedings are ongoing; (2) the proceedings implicate important state interests; and (3) there is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise constitutional challenges." AFSCME v. Tristani, 898 F.2d 1302, 1305 (7th Cir.1990). These requirements are satisfied here. The state court proceedings are obviously judicial. The State of Illinois has set forth what it believes to be, and what I agree are, important state interests in its ability to regulate charitable institutions. It is not necessary that I endorse the policy adopted by the state to recognize that the interests it invokes are important. Finally, there was—and as far as I know still is—ample opportunity to raise any constitutional challenges in the state court proceedings.

The plaintiffs respond that section 1983 provides an exception to the usual application of Younger because federal protection is needed in such cases to vindicate plaintiffs' rights against state abuses. This is not in general true. For example, in Simpson v. Rowan, 73 F.3d 134, 138 (7th Cir.1995), the court affirmed the use of Younger abstention in a § 1983 case seeking civil relief for constitutional violations of a man convicted of a crime; accord State of Indiana v. Hicks, 131 F.3d 1205, 1210 (7th Cir.1997)(quoting from Barichello v. McDonald, 98 F.3d 948, 954 (7th Cir.1996): "Younger has come to mean that absent unusual circumstances, a federal court must refrain from entertaining injunctive relief which might interfere with the ... judicial process of state courts ....'"). Section 1983 is not a magic key into federal court, especially when, as here, there is ample opportunity to litigate the constitutional issues in state court. Moreover, there is no reason to think that the plaintiffs require the special protections of federal court even though the state is a party to the state court action. The only basis that the plaintiffs give for thinking there may be a problem with the state court is that the very able state court judge is elected. That is not a reason to think that she cannot fairly resolve charges of misconduct made against the state and its officers, such as Mr. Perkins.

[4] Even if I were not to abstain, however, I could not grant the temporary restraining order sought by the plaintiffs. In the first place, plaintiffs do not appear to have standing. In order for a party to bring suit in federal court, three constitutional requirements under Article III must be met: "(1) the party must have personally suffered an actual or threatened injury caused by the defendant's illegal conduct; (2) the injury must be fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury must be one that is likely to be redressed by a favorable decision." United Transp. v. Surface Transp. Board, 183 F.3d 606, 611 n. 2 (7th Cir.1999). In this case, the last requirement is missing.

[5] The only defendant named is Mr. Perkins. It would do no good to enjoin him from interfering in Board business or intimidating the directors with respect to the meeting at question. The State of Illinois says that he is in Canada, and does not even know that he has been sued. As the State says, with respect to his involvement, tomorrow is the best time to hold the meeting.

The plaintiffs really want me to enjoin Drs. Marshall and Stebbins from voting or coming to the meeting, but they are not defendants. If they were named, however, they could not be sued under section 1983, the basis for my jurisdiction. The plaintiffs suggest that they can be enjoined as persons acting "in consort" with the defendant, or as his agents. But they offer no authority that persons who have been intimidated or influenced by a state actor are acting in consort with them or as agents of those who intimidate them, or indeed that they could be named as section 1983 defendants at all. That section requires state action. And that is hard to show.

The Supreme Court has articulated several tests for when private action is state action: the "public function" test, the "state compulsion" test, the "nexus" test,

2. Plaintiffs did offer to add them as defendants but the addition of Dr. Marshall would almost certainly prevent diversity jurisdiction, alleged presently, and unless they are state actors, could not form a basis for subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3), the second basis on which plaintiffs allege subject matter jurisdiction. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Whether they can plausibly be considered to be acting under color of state law is discussed further in this opinion.

and the "joint action" test. Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 939, 102 S.Ct. 2744, 73 L.Ed.2d 482 (1982). Of these, only the "joint action" and "state compulsion" tests are worth considering. The tests are fact-specific. "Only by sifting facts and weighing circumstances can the nonobvious involvement of the State in private conduct be attributed its true significance." Burton v. Wilmington Parking Auth., 365 U.S. 715, 722, 81 S.Ct. 856, 6 L.Ed.2d 45 (1961); Dunham v. Frank's Nursery & Crafts, Inc., 919 F.2d 1281, 1284 (7th Cir.1990).

[6–8] The "joint action" theory, articulated in cases like Dennis v. Sparks, 449 U.S. 24, 27, 101 S.Ct. 183, 66 L.Ed.2d 185 (1980), says that a private defendant acts under color of state law when he is "a willful participant in joint action with the State or its agents." A charge of joint action amounts to alleging "some agreement between private and public actors to violate plaintiff's constitutional rights," Cunningham v. Southlake Center for Mental Health, Inc., 924 F.2d 106, 107 (7th Cir.1991) (citing Fonda v. Gray, 707 F.2d 435, 438 (9th Cir.1983) ("To prove a conspiracy between private parties and the government under § 1983, an agreement or 'meeting of the minds' to violate constitutional rights must be shown.")). "A requirement of the joint action charge therefore is that both public and private actors share a common, unconstitutional goal." Id. If the directors in question are unwillingly intimidated, however, they are not willful joint actors who share Mr. Perkin's hypothetically unconstitutional goals. See Moore v. Marketplace Restaurant, Inc., 764 F.2d 1336, 1352 (7th Cir.1985).

[9] I suppose one could be an unwilling co-conspirator, but what is alleged here is not that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins share any unconstitutional goals or have conspired, however unwillingly, to deprive the plaintiffs of their rights, but that they were somehow coerced into changing their votes on the settlement, basically to see Mr. Perkins off their backs, which change will have the effect of furthering Mr. Perkin's unconstitutional goals. That is not what is required.

[10] But the situation for the plaintiffs is worse than this analysis suggests. "To state a § 1983 claim against a private actor, plaintiffs must show that the defendant invoked state authority in such a way that the defendant should be considered a state actor." Davis v. Union National Bank, 46 F.3d 24, 25 (7th Cir.1994). For example in Del's Big Saver Foods, Inc. v. Carpenter Cook, Inc., 795 F.2d 1344 (7th Cir.1986), the court held that a private person became a state actor for purposes of the state action requirement when he repossessed collateral on the strength of an ex parte order issued by a court. The ex parte order instructed the sheriff to assist the private person if need be to carry out the order. In that case it was not necessary to call the sheriff. The court held that "[t]he fact that the sheriff remained in the background and hence could not be joined as a defendant does not deprive Carpenter Cook's action in enforcing a judicial order of its character as state action." Id. at 1346. Here, it would not be possible to say that Drs. Marshall and Stebbins invoked the power of the Illinois Attorney General's office, which remains in the background: they are not argued to invoke any power; they have no court or administrative order to carry out, and they could not call in Mr. Perkins to back them up if they wanted to, which, the plaintiffs argue, they do not.

[11] The plaintiffs' best shot is the "state compulsion" test, under which a § 1983 claim may be stated "when the state has so implicated itself in the defendant's action that the state has in effect compelled the action." Stearns v. Clarity Media, Inc., 39 F.3d 1394, 1398 (7th Cir.1994). This test originated in Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 170, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970). There the Court held that a "state is responsible for the [unconstitutional] act of a private party when the state, by its law, has compelled the act." "When the State has commanded a particular result, it has saved to itself the power to determine that result and thereby 'to a significant extent' has 'become involved' in it." Id. (citation omitted). However the command has to involve action under color of some "statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of a State," in the language of § 1983 itself. Id.

[12] The actions challenged here are not analogous to the facts in Adickes, where a white woman was denied restaurant service (and subsequently arrested for vagrancy) because she was in the company of African-Americans. The Supreme Court held that it would satisfy state action if she showed that she was refused service by the defendant restaurant as the result of a state enforced custom compelling segregation of the races in Mississippi restaurants. Adickes, 398 U.S. at 171, 90 S.Ct. 1598. In this case, there are two actions alleged to force the directors to change their votes. One is proposing to name Dr. Stebbins as a defendant in a lawsuit. The other is investigating Dr. Marshall's school. These are both official practices, but in the first place, neither of these involve a "command." They do not require the conduct they are supposed to induce—that these directors change their votes. The difference between inducement and requirement is a matter of degree, but not every incentive and disincentive is coercive. For example, in Mendoza v. United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, 487 F.2d 311, 312 (9th Cir.1973) (per curiam), the court rejected the idea that a union shop agreement that grows out of the "normal give and take of collective bargaining and labor-management relations," is coercive, although anyone must recognize that it involves various threats and unwelcome inducements. It might be different if Mr. Perkins had held a gun to the heads of Drs. Marshall and Stebbins, but all he did was to name one in a proposed amendment to a lawsuit and allegedly investigate the school of another.

Moreover, the conduct being induced (a changed vote) is not itself unlawful, unlike the racial discrimination involved in Adickes. Essentially the plaintiffs argue that Mr. Perkins used his undoubtedly legitimate authority to name Dr. Stebbins in a complaint and to investigate Dr. Marshall's school in order to get them to do something lawful, which the plaintiffs argue will have unfortunate effects. If the directors had just changed their minds, the plaintiffs would just have to live with it. What difference, as far as their status as potential § 1983 defendants goes, does it make if they changed their votes because of the inducements by Mr. Perkins? Even if Mr. Perkin's intentions were to violate the plaintiffs' constitutional rights by getting these directors to vote to approve the settlement, the plaintiffs do not explain, either with authority or with logic, how the directors can be charged with violating the plaintiffs' rights even under compulsion if they do what they had a lawful right to do in any event.

Since enjoining Mr. Perkins would be pointless, and Drs. Marshall and Stebbins are not state actors and cannot be sued under Section 1983, there is no relief that I can give that would redress plaintiffs' complaint. They lack standing. I abstain in any event. The plaintiffs' motion for a temporary restraining order must therefore be denied. The action is dismissed.

WINSTON & STRAWN'S MOTION TO DISMISS

Winston & Strawn moves to dismiss Count III of Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker ("Tucker"), Judith Terra ("Terra"), and Alan Simpson ("Simpson") as follows:

1. On November 20, 2001, this Court granted Plaintiffs Tucker, Terra, and Simpson leave to add Winston & Strawn as a named defendant in the First Amended Complaint.

2. Under 735 ILSC 5/2-615, Winston & Strawn's Motion to dismiss should be granted for the following reasons:

(1) The dissenting directors fail to state a colorable claim against Winston & Strawn;

(2) Courts frown upon disqualifying counsel as a litigation ploy;

(3) The dissenting directors have no standing to sue Winston & Strawn;

(4) The dissenting directors also fail to state a claim against Winston & Strawn with the requisite specificity; and

(5) The dissenting directors' claim for declaratory relief is non-justiciable.

3. Winston & Strawn submits herewith a Memorandum in Support of its Motion to Dismiss outlining these points further.

4. In addition, to the extent that Tucker, Terra, or Simpson assert that other issues remain against Winston & Strawn, it adopts by reference the memoranda of the other defendants on those other purported remaining issues and where they further support Winston & Strawn's position discussed herein.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons stated herein and in the supporting memoranda, Winston & Strawn prays that its motion to dismiss be granted, and that it be awarded such other relief as just and appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

Winston & Strawn

WINSTON & STRAWN'S MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS

Defendant Winston & Strawn moves to dismiss the purported claim of Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker ("Tucker"), Judith Terra ("Terra"), and Alan Simpson ("Simpson") in the First Amended Complaint ("Complaint" or "Cmpt") filed against it. In short, Plaintiff's Complaint fails to allege any colorable claim against Winston & Strawn. As such, under 735 ILCS 5/2-615, Winston & Strawn's motion to dismiss should be granted.

Background Facts

Defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts ("Terra Foundation") is a not-for-profit corporation which oversees an American art collection and other assets. Cmpt, ¶1. Plaintiffs Tucker, Terra, and Simpson, and are non-resident directors of the Terra Foundation. Id., ¶¶7-9. Defendant Winston & Strawn is an Illinois partnership and counsel to the Terra Foundation. Id., ¶24. Winston & Strawn has not filed an appearance for any defendant in this lawsuit other than itself.

The Buntrock Lawsuit, Mediation, And The Consent Judgment And Order

In September 2000, Terra Foundation Directors Dean Buntrock and Ron Gidwitz filed a lawsuit against the Terra Foundation and certain of its directors, Tucker, Simpson, and Terra in Buntrock v. Terra Foundation, Circuit Court of Cook County, Chicago, Illinois alleging certain breaches of fiduciary duty regarding a possible move of the Terra Foundation and its assets out of Chicago. Id., ¶41. Thereafter, the Attorney General of the State of Illinois (the "State") intervened. Id., ¶43. After a mediation, established by the presiding judge, the Honorable Dorothy Kirie Kinnaird, among the directors, the State, and the mediator, a proposed settlement was reached.

On June 29, 2001, the Terra Foundation Board met to consider the proposed settlement. Id., ¶67. A quorum being present, by a vote of 6-2, the directors approved the Consent Order and Judgment providing, in part, that the Terra Foundation must remain headquartered in Illinois for 50 years, must exhibit its American Art collection in the Chicago area during that time, and must have elections for five new Board members. Id., ¶¶67, 73. While Terra and Tucker voted against the proposal, Simpson did not bother to attend this Board meeting. Id. (Tucker, Terra, and Simpson hereafter will sometimes be referred as the "dissenting directors.") On July 26, 2001, Judge Kinnaird entered the Consent Judgment and Order memorializing this settlement. On August 22, 2001, Tucker, Simpson, and Terra filed a notice of appeal from Judge Kinnaird's July 26 Order.

The Tucker, Terra, and Simpson Lawsuit

On July 31, 2001, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson sued the Terra Foundation, certain of its directors, the State's Attorney General and his assistant, Floyd Perkins. On November 20, 2001, this Court granted the dissenting directors' leave to file its First Amended Complaint and sue the five new members of the Terra Foundation's Board, Sidley & Austin, now Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood ("Sidley"), and Winston & Strawn.

According to the Complaint, contrary to the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct, Winston & Strawn "continues to engage in the concurrent, adverse representation of the Foundation and at least one of the defendant directors." Id., ¶¶87-88. That director is unidentified. Allegedly, Winston & Strawn has a "hopelessly conflicted representation" because it acts as "corporate" counsel for the Terra Foundation and this unidentified director client. Id., ¶88. Allegedly, Winston & Strawn provides substantive legal counsel regarding litigation tactics and outcomes, resulting in a breach of fiduciary obligations to the Terra Foundation and its directors. Id. Tucker, Terra, and Simpson further allege that Winston & Strawn compounds these purported breaches and violations of ethical rules -- Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct, Rules 1.1, 1.3, 1.4, and 1.7 -- by failing to challenge Sidley's representation in the Buntrock case. Id., ¶90. The dissenting directors claim that Winston & Strawn knew that: serious breaches of alleged fiduciary duties were asserted against one or more of the Board members; the mediator was allegedly conflicted; and the State's intervention was improvident. Id., ¶91. The dissenting directors fail to state or allege that: breaches of fiduciary duty were first alleged against themselves in the Buntrock case; Winston & Strawn was not part of the mediation sessions and did not recommend or appoint the mediator (Judge Kinnaird did); and Winston & Strawn had no authority to stop the State from intervening in the Buntrock case. The dissenting directors further allege that Winston & Strawn's inaction and conduct (and that of Sidley) has purportedly compromised the interests of the Terra Foundation because certain legal fees would have been avoided through the retention of independent counsel. ¶92. The Complaint does not allege how or what actions "independent counsel" would have taken which would have persuaded Judge Kinnaird not to enter the July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order, especially since Winston & Strawn did not represent a party in the Buntrock lawsuit. The Complaint further does not allege that the dissenting directors ever made a proposal before the Terra Foundation Board (much less voted on one) not to have Winston & Strawn continue as "corporate" or outside counsel. Moreover, the Complaint does not allege that the dissenting directors permitted Winston & Strawn to continue as general counsel. Finally, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson allege that Winston & Strawn continue to cause damage to them personally because it purportedly is "aiding and abetting" further actions of the defendant directors. Id., ¶ 93. The Complaint alleges no specific actions which Winston & Strawn has allegedly "aided and abetted."

Tucker, Terra, and Simpson only allege one prayer for relief against Winston & Strawn -- Count III dealing with declaratory relief. See Cmpt, ¶¶ 104-107. Specifically, the dissenting directors seek a "declaration that the representation of the Foundation by Winston & Strawn . . . is, and has been, tainted by conflicts of interest in violation of Winston & Strawn's fiduciary duties and is inconsistent with applicable provisions of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct; and that, as a result of such obvious and foreseeable conflicts of interest, Winston & Strawn . . . [is] disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." Cmpt, Prayer for Relief. Again, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson fail to list one defendant for whom Winston & Strawn has filed any appearance in this case, except itself.

Argument

I. THE DISSENTING DIRECTORS FAIL TO STATE A COLORABLE CLAIM AGAINST WINSTON & STRAWN.

Winston & Strawn is in an anomalous position. Winston & Strawn did not represent any of the parties in the litigation before Judge Kinnaird during the alleged critical events: at the time of the mediation in the Buntrock case; at the time that the Terra Foundation Board voted 6-2 to adopt the mediator's proposed settlement; and at the time Judge Kinnaird entered the Consent Judgment and Order. Equally noteworthy, on June 29, 2001, Winston & Strawn even counseled the directors not to vote on the mediator's proposal if they had a concern about their own potential conflict of interests. Yet somehow, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson trumped up a claim against it in this lawsuit. This purported claim is frivolous. The dissenting directors' lawsuit against Winston & Strawn should be summarily dismissed under 735 ILCS 5/2-615.

A. Courts Frown Upon Disqualifying Counsel As A Litigation Ploy.

Since Winston & Strawn was not counsel of record for any litigant in the Buntrock case at the time of the alleged critical events, the dissenting directors have tried a novel approach. Tucker, Terra, and Simpson have sued the general counsel of the Terra Foundation without so much as submitting a resolution before the Terra Foundation to remove Winston & Strawn as its general counsel, much less to have the Board vote on such a proposal. In essence, the dissenting directors seek to disqualify the firm by naming Winston & Strawn as a party defendant. The courts in Illinois frown upon such a litigation ploy.

In Schwartz v. Cortelloni, 177 Ill. 2d 166, 178, 685 N.E.2d 871, 877 (1997), the Illinois

Supreme Court emphasized that "caution must be exercised to guard against motions to disqualify being used as tools for harassment." Similarly, in Weil, Freiburg & Thomas v. Sara Lee Corp., 218 Ill. App. 3d 383, 396, 577 N.E.2d 1344, 1354 (1st Dist. 1991), the First District Appellate Court stressed: "our courts disapprove of the use of disqualification motions as a tactical weapon in litigation insofar as such motions can be misused for purposes of harassment." Accord, Guillen v. City of Chicago, 956 F. Supp. 1416, 1421 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (stating that cases and the Rules of Professional Conduct recognize that motions for disqualification should be viewed with extreme caution for they can be misused as techniques of harassment.) Attorney disqualification is a "drastic measure" which "destroys the attorney-client relationship by prohibiting a party from representation by counsel of his or her choosing." Schwartz, 177 Ill. 2d at 178, 685 N.E.2d at 877. Clearly, the dissenting directors seek to destroy the attorney-client relationship of Winston & Strawn and the Terra Foundation.

Such a litigation ploy has already been rejected by an Illinois court. In Hannan v. Watt, 147 Ill. App. 3d 456, 461, 497 N.E.2d 1307, 1310 (1st Dist. 1986), the Appellate Court affirmed the denial of a preliminary injunction motion and dismissal of a complaint against a defendant law firm which had previously represented the plaintiff airline pilots. The court underscored that the Illinois Code of Professional Responsibility (the predecessor to the existing Rules of Professional Conduct) does not by its own terms "create independent rights of action." Id. The court saw the ploy for what it was: "[T]his case is nothing more than an action to disqualify . . . [the law firm] from partaking in the current proceedings." Id. As a result, the court rejected the attempt by one company's airline pilots to disqualify the law firm representing another airlines' pilots. The court also decried attempts to disqualify counsel which are used as tactical weapons for harassment. Id.

B. The Dissenting Directors Have No Standing To Sue Winston & Strawn.

The dissenting directors also do not have standing to raise the purported claim against Winston & Strawn. As such, Winston & Strawn's motion to dismiss should be granted.

Specifically, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson have failed to make a proper "demand" on the Terra Foundation Board to remove Winston & Strawn as general counsel.[1/] As stated, they themselves have failed to make any proposal to remove Winston & Strawn as the Board's general counsel, and they have failed to call for a vote on this issue. Accordingly, the dissenting directors' attempt to interfere in the attorney-client relationship should be rejected. Renard v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 126 Ill. App. 3d 563 568, 467 N.E.2d 1090, 1094 (1st Dist. 1984) ("Absent a complaint by the affected party, a party has no status to object to the representation of an adverse party by an attorney of his choice."); see Schwartz, 177 Ill. 2d at 173-74, 685 N.E.2d at 875 (stating that only a client can bring a Rule 1.9 conflict claim). Accordingly, this Court should reject the dissenting directors' attempt to bring this claim against Winston & Strawn.

II. THE DISSENTING DIRECTORS ALSO FAIL TO STATE A CLAIM AGAINST WINSTON & STRAWN WITH THE REQUISITE SPECIFICITY.

A plaintiff is required by Illinois law to plead a complaint with sufficient facts to bring a claim within the cause of action asserted, Vernon v. Schuster, 179 Ill. 2d 338, 344, 688 N.E.2d 1172, 1175 (1997). A well-pleaded complaint must allege more than "mere conclusions." Martin v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 109 Ill. App. 3d 596, 608, 440 N.E.2d 998, 1007 (1st Dist. 1982). Under Illinois' fact-pleading requirements, Vernon, Id., the dissenting directors' Complaint against Winston & Strawn fails.

1/ Cf: 805 ILCS 5/7.80 (Under the Illinois Business Corporation Act, a shareholder must generally make a demand upon the corporation before filing a lawsuit.)

While citing certain purported applicable rules of the Rules of Professional Conduct,[2/] the dissenting directors' conclusory allegations simply belie their unhappiness with the mediation process itself, the mediator's settlement proposal, the Terra Foundation Board's 6-2 vote on the settlement proposal, and Judge Kinnaird's Judgment Consent and Order, all of which Winston & Strawn was not involved with and for which it can have no legal liability. Tucker, Terra, and Simpson have not alleged, and cannot allege (much less with the requisite specificity), that Winston & Strawn controlled these processes. Accordingly, under Illinois law, the Complaint against Winston & Strawn should be dismissed.

III. THE DISSENTING DIRECTORS' CLAIM FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF IS NON-JUSTICIABLE.

Under Count III of the Complaint, the dissenting directors seek a declaratory judgment that Winston & Strawn's representation has been so "tainted by conflicts of interest" in violation of the firm's fiduciary duties and ethical responsibilities to the Terra Foundation that the firm should be disqualified from "any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." Cmpt, Count III, Prayer for Relief. The dissenting directors' claim is non-justiciable, and as such, the Complaint against Winston & Strawn should be dismissed.

To prevail on a claim for declaratory judgment, (1) a plaintiff must have a tangible legal

---

[2/] Even a cursory review of the Rules of Professional Conduct reveals their inapplicability here. Rule 1.1 deals generally with the competency of counsel, Rule 1.3 deals generally with a lawyer's diligence in representing a client, and Rule 1.4 deals generally with communicating with a client. The dissenting directors fail to allege any colorable claim against Winston & Strawn under these rules and for which they have standing. See text, Section IB, supra. Moreover, the dissenting directors fail to allege anything at all, much less with sufficient specificity, what a purported "independent counsel" would have done or advised the Terra Foundation different than Winston & Strawn did. They fail to specify what substantive "litigation tactics and outcomes" Winston & Strawn allegedly advised the Terra Foundation. See Complaint, ¶88. They conspicuously fail to allege that Judge Kinnaird repeatedly rejected the dissenting directors' attempts to disqualify Sidley, which, Winston & Strawn submits, means that it cannot, as a matter of law, be deemed to have violated any purported duty regarding the continued representation of Sidley as litigation counsel in the Buntrock case. See Complaint, ¶91. The dissenting directors' last claim involving Rule 1.7 (representing clients with adverse interests) also has no specificity nor merit. Again, if Tucker, Terra, and Simpson truly believed this was a legitimate issue, and not a "fishing expedition" and litigation ploy (see Complaint, ¶90), this undoubtedly would have been raised in interest; (2) a defendant must have an adverse interest; and (3) an actual controversy regarding that interest must exist. AG Farms, Inc. v. American Premier Underwriters, Inc., 296 Ill. App. 3d 684, 689, 695 N.E.2d 882, 887 (4th Dist. 1998). An actual controversy exists if there is a legitimate dispute requiring an immediate and definite determination of the parties' rights, the resolution of which would help terminate all or part of the dispute. Village of Maywood Bd. of Fire & Police Comm'rs v. Dep't of Human Rts., 296 Ill. App. 3d 570, 575, 695 N.E.2d 570, 575 N.E.2d 873, 877 (1st Dist. 1998). The ripeness doctrine precludes entry of a declaratory judgment unless an actual controversy exists. Id. Under the Complaint, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson cannot prevail on their claim because no actual controversy worthy of declaratory relief exists.

First, the dissenting directors, as previously discussed, do not have a tangible legal interest (or standing to bring a claim) against Winston & Stawn. Second, until the filing of the First Amended Complaint, Winston & Strawn has not had an adverse interest to the dissenting directors. Most assuredly, the dissenting directors cannot seriously believe that they can sue Winston & Strawn and thereby create a disqualifying conflict. Hannan v. Watt, 147 Ill. App. 3d 456, 461, 497 N.E.2d 1307, 1310 (1st Dist. 1986). Third, Winston & Strawn has not represented the Terra Foundation "in this litigation." As the Court knows, the law firm of Mulroy, Scandaglia, Marrinson, Ryan has taken over from Sidley as litigation counsel for the Terra Foundation here. Clearly, there is no actual controversy that is justiciable. Thus, the dissenting directors' attempt to obtain such a declaratory judgment would be a prohibited advisory opinion. CGE Ford Heights, L.L.C., v. Miller, 306 Ill. App. 431, 441, 714 N.E.2d 35, 42 (1st Dist. 1999).

In short, Tucker, Terra, and Simpson's claim for declaratory relief has no basis in fact or law.

a Board resolution and put to a Board vote.

IV. CONCLUSION

Wherefore, for the reasons stated herein, Winston & Strawn prays this Court grant its motion to dismiss under 735 ILCS 5/2-615 and such other relief as deemed appropriate by the Court.[3/]

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE TERRA AFFIDAVIT UNDER SEAL

Plaintiffs move this Honorable Court for the entry of an Order allowing the Terra Affidavit attached as Exhibit "A" to Plaintiff's Consolidated Response In Opposition To Defendants' Motions To Dismiss to be filed under seal.

In support of this motion, Plaintiffs note that at least one of the exhibits attached to the Terra Affidavit was prepared in connection with the earlier mediation. In an abundance of caution given Judge Kinnaird's earlier ruling, we believe that the interests of the parties are served by maintaining the Terra Affidavit under seal.

PLAINTIFFS' CONSOLIDATED RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS TO DISMISS

Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson, by their attorneys, hereby respond in opposition to Defendants' motions to dismiss as follows:[1]

Preliminary Statement

Defendants' contention that Judge Kinnaird's July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order fully resolves Plaintiffs' claims is without merit. Neither Tucker, Terra nor Simpson were parties to that settlement agreement. Moreover, Judge Kinnaird made no findings of fact or law that bar this action. Indeed, when the Court refused to permit Tucker, Terra and Simpson to file counterclaims in Buntrock v. Terra, Judge Kinnaird directed Plaintiffs to pursue a separate action. This is precisely what Plaintiffs have done.

Counter-Statement of Facts

Defendants' statements of fact are incomplete and inaccurate. Rather than repeat the litany of allegations Plaintiffs have asserted, Plaintiffs simply refer the Court to the First Amended Complaint for a complete description of the factual background. The heart of Plaintiffs' claims is [1]For the convenience of the Court and the parties, we will refer to Buntrock, Gidwitz, Daley, Hartman, Marshall and Stebbins as the "director defendants." We will refer to Donnelley, Field, Foster, Hamada and Krehbiel as the "new directors."

16di-004873

that Defendants have improperly frustrated and abandoned the mission of the Foundation and the intent of its founder, Daniel J. Terra. In further support of those allegations, Plaintiffs submit the Verified Declaration of Judith F. Terra, widow of Daniel J. Terra.[2] This declaration includes two attachments: the handwritten notes of the late Mr. Terra further demonstrating the mission of the Foundation and Sidley's February 14, 2001 memorandum recognizing that mission.

In the Buntrock v. Terra litigation, Judge Kinnaird explicitly held that Tucker, Terra and Simpson were not parties to that settlement[3] and that no factual findings of any kind were made.[4] These elemental facts are critical to understanding why Defendants' motions to dismiss lack merit. Namely, Plaintiffs' claims have neither been released nor adjudicated. They derive from the illegal conduct of the Foundation, the directors, the Attorney General and certain law firms during and after the Buntrock settlement. Plaintiffs have properly alleged claims and those claims deserve to be heard.

Argument

A. Defendants' Motions To Dismiss Must Be Denied.

A cause of action should not be dismissed on the pleadings unless it clearly appears that no set of facts could be proven which would entitle the pleader to relief. See Illinois Graphics Co. v. Nickum, 159 Ill.2d 469, 639 N.E.2d 1282 (1994). Thus, a motion to dismiss concedes that all well-pleaded facts in the pleading under attack are true. See Miner v. Gillette, 87 Ill.2d 7, 428 N.E.2d 478

---

[2]Mrs. Terra's Verified Declaration is attached as Exhibit A and is filed under seal.

[3]The transcript from the July 24, 2001 hearing could not be clearer. Simply stated – and as Judge Kinnaird repeatedly did – the "situation here [i.e. in the Buntrock settlement] is somewhat different. These folks [i.e. Tucker, Terra and Simpson] aren't settling. They are not part of the settlement." See Tr., July 24, 2001, vol. I at 120.

[4]Again, Judge Kinnaird's statements cannot be disputed. For example, she states at the end of five hours of argument, "I am not putting any Findings of Fact in the order that I am signing." See Tr., July 24, 2001, vol. II at 132.

16di-004874

(1981). Moreover, the court must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the pleader. See Your v. Mid-Town, 150 Ill. App. 3d 421, 501 N.E.2d 805 (1st Dist. 1985). The court must consider all possible conclusions supported by the allegations.

Moreover, pleadings must be liberally construed with a view toward doing substantial justice between the parties. See, e.g., Bowie v. Evanston, 168 Ill. App. 3d 101, 522 N.E.2d 669 (1st Dist. 1988). Thus, no pleading is bad in substance if its sets forth sufficient information reasonably to inform the opposite party of the nature of the claim or defense which he is called upon to meet. See 735 ILCS 5/2-612(b). If the trial court is adequately informed of the issues presented by the pleadings, the parties are likewise so informed. See Kita v. YMCA, 47 Ill. App. 409, 198 N.E.2d 174 (1st Dist. 1964). For these reasons, an action should not be dismissed unless the court is prepared to conclude that there is no possible set of facts in support of the allegations in the complaint that would entitled the plaintiff to relief. There need be only a possibility of recovery. See Johnson v. North American, 100 Ill. App. 2d 212, 241 N.E.2d 332 (5th Dist. 1968).

B. Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint Properly States Claims Against The Foundation And The Other Directors.

Simply stated, the arguments of the Foundation, the director defendants and the new directors are without merit. These defendants raise three core objections: that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring this lawsuit; that no cognizable claims have been asserted; and that the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel defeat Plaintiffs' allegations. None of these arguments is correct. The plain language of the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act, 805 ILCS 105/101.1 et seq. (the "Act"), upholds the right to sue both the Foundation and its directors. In addition, given the proceedings in the Buntrock litigation, none of Plaintiffs' claims are barred.

1. Plaintiffs Have Standing.

Defendants' assertion that Tucker, Terra and Simpson lack standing is belied both by Illinois statutory law and by Defendants' own conduct. First, Defendants' arguments about standing are difficult to take seriously in light of the fact that the Buntrock litigation involved claims brought by directors against the Foundation and other directors. Indeed, similar to the complaint in Buntrock, Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint in this action seeks, inter alia, declaratory and statutory relief under the Act. To argue that Terra, Tucker and Simpson lack standing to assert claims against the Foundation and its directors represents a "perversion of the judicial process" where at least some of Defendants play "fast and loose with the courts." See In re Cassidy, 892 F.2d 637, 641-42 (7th Cir. 1990).

Second and more fundamentally, the plain direction of the Act provides that charitable corporations and their directors may be sued. Defendants' statements that "nothing in the [Act] . . . provides standing to these plaintiffs to sue" are simply wrong.[5] The Act explicitly contemplates actions against charitable foundations and their directors. Like the plaintiffs in the Buntrock litigation, Tucker, Terra and Simpson bring suit under section 103.15 of the Act which entitles a director or member to seek to enjoin a foundation from committing ultra vires acts. The Act also sets forth "the liability of directors in certain cases" and surely contemplates suits against directors.[6]

[5]See, e.g., Memorandum of Law in Support of Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Motion to Dismiss, Or In the Alternative For A Stay at 6.

[6]For instance, the Act explicitly states that directors who support unauthorized distributions "shall be jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the amount of such distribution." See 805 ILCS 105/108.65. The Act describes the circumstances of a director's conflict of interest and apportions the burdens of proof in proceedings testing the validity of a corporate transaction. See 805 ILCS 105/108.60. The Act even provides for limited liability of directors and officers when they serve without compensation, see 805 ILCS 105/108.70, and permits not for profit corporations to indemnify directors and officers. See 805 ILCS 105/103.10(p) and 108.75.

2. The Claims Against The Foundation and Directors Are Legally Sufficient.

Counts I (Declaratory Relief), II (Declaratory and Injunctive Relief), IV (Ultra Vires Acts under 805 ILCS 105/103.15) and V (Breach of Fiduciary Duty) are directed against the Foundation and the directors. Count I seeks a declaration that the Buntrock settlement violates Illinois law because it was the product of, inter alia, conflicts of interest and breaches of duty. Count II seeks a declaration that the new directors have not been properly elected and therefore may not act on the Foundation's behalf. Count II also seeks an injunction to prevent these new directors from so acting. Count IV – which constitutes perhaps the heart of Plaintiffs' claims – asserts an ultra vires claim against the Foundation and its directors under section 103.15 of the Act. Lastly, Count V asserts breaches of fiduciary duty. Each of these counts properly sets forth claims against the Foundation, the director defendants and the new directors for a number of reasons:

– The counts are sufficiently specific.

The First Amended Complaint is sufficiently specific and reasonably informs both the Court and Defendants about the claims asserted against them. Do Defendants genuinely contend that they are not so informed? In their thirty-seven pages of allegations, Plaintiffs describe the history and mission of the Foundation and how certain directors, government officials and others have acted to pervert that mission. The First Amended Complaint even spells out the debilitating conflicts of interest that have burdened certain directors as well as the law firm defendants during the Buntrock litigation. The allegations against the new directors are similarly straightforward: Plaintiffs contend that these new directors have not been properly elected and, as a result, cannot exercise authority on the Foundation's behalf.

– The counts properly state claims under Illinois law.

Plaintiffs' claims are guileless and properly state claims under the Act and under Illinois common law governing the fiduciary duties of corporate directors. See 805 ILCS 105/103.15(a) (permitting a director to sue and seek injunctive relief). See also Sawko v. Dominion Plaza One Condominium Assoc., 218 Ill. App. 3d 521, 578 N.E.2d 621 (2nd Dist. 1991) (Ultra vires provision of the Act is not the exclusive means for member to enjoin association from alleged ultra vires acts.).

In no uncertain terms, the First Amended Complaint alleges that each board member who voted in favor of the Buntrock settlement violated their duties and engaged in ultra vires acts. See, e.g., First Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 78-80. Plaintiffs also explicitly describe how the so-called election of the new directors was both procedurally and substantively defective such that any exercise of authority reserved solely for properly elected directors also constitutes ultra vires conduct. See, e.g., First Amended Complaint at ¶ 85. Moreover, Plaintiffs specifically allege the conflicts and disqualifying interests confronting certain directors during the Buntrock litigation that poisoned the vote in favor of settlement. Given these allegations, plaintiffs' claims for declaratory and other relief are wholly appropriate. Defendants' contentions to the contrary are without merit.

C. The Claims Are Not Barred by Res Judicata or Collateral Estoppel.

Having secured entry of the Consent Judgment by assuring Judge Kinnaird that her decision would not affect Plaintiffs' rights, Defendants now claim that the Consent Judgment forecloses this litigation in its entirety. Defendants are wrong.

First, res judicata and collateral estoppel do not apply because Plaintiffs are not parties to the Consent Judgment. Second, collateral estoppel only precludes litigation of issues that were actually decided, and Judge Kinnaird made no findings in connection with entry of the Consent Judgment. Third, Judge Kinnaird's refusal to permit Plaintiffs' discovery denied them an opportunity to litigate.

Fourth, the issues presented in this case are different. Fifth, res judicata only precludes litigation of issues that could have been litigated in a prior action; none of the issues in this case could have been litigated in the action before Judge Kinnaird. Finally, applying collateral estoppel or res judicata to the facts of this case would be inequitable.

1. Plaintiffs Are Not Parties to the Consent Judgment

Res judicata and collateral estoppel only preclude litigation by a party to a prior judgment. See, e.g., Nowak v. St. Rita High School, 197 Ill. 2d 381, 757 N.E.2d 471, 477 (2001). Throughout the hearing before Judge Kinnaird, Defendants confirmed that Plaintiffs were not parties to the Consent Judgment, calling them "strangers to the agreement." Tr., 7/24/01 Vol. II at 16. As counsel for the Foundation emphasized, "the [Plaintiffs] have chosen not to join the settlement agreement, that's their legal right. They cannot be forced to relinquish whatever legal rights they may have." Tr. 7/24/01, Vol. I at 46.[7] But that's precisely what Defendants now argue — that Plaintiffs "relinquish[ed] whatever legal rights they [had]" when the Court entered the Consent Judgment.

2. Judge Kinnaird Made No Findings

Defendants' suggestion that Judge Kinnaird decided the issues raised by Plaintiffs' Complaint ignores her clear statement to the contrary. Judge Kinnaird could not have been more clear — she made no findings. Tr., 7/24/01, Vol. II at 132 (Court: "I am not putting any Findings of Fact in the order that I am signing"); id. at 133 (Court: same).

Nor did Judge Kinnaird need to make any findings. Defendants argued that (1) Plaintiffs had no standing to challenge the Consent Judgment, and (2) even if they had standing, they only could overcome their "very high burden of proof" with "clear and convincing evidence" of impropriety.

[7] See id., Vol. II at 81 (Ms. Stone: "[Plaintiffs] are not releasing any legal rights they may have.").

See, e.g., id., Vol. I at 81. Judge Kinnaird appeared to accept these assertions. See id. Vol. II at 56 (asking Plaintiffs' counsel "Is there any case where a party in a . . . nonderivative case or a non-class-action case or a nonparty to a settlement that has had an opportunity to get . . . discovery before the Court approves the settlement?").

It is impossible to know whether Judge Kinnaird did, in fact, accept Defendants' assertions. Where, as here, it is not clear whether a factual determination was necessary to a judgment, no preclusive effect is given to any findings. See, e.g., Hexacomb Corp. v. Corrugated Systems, Inc., 287 Ill. App. 3d 623, 678 N.E.2d 765 (1st Dist. 1997).[8]

3. Plaintiffs Did Not Have an Opportunity to Litigate

Plaintiffs' opportunity to argue — without the benefit of any discovery — against entry of the Consent Judgment did not constitute an opportunity to litigate any issue decided by Judge Kinnaird.

Collateral estoppel only applies when the targeted party has "had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding." Fred Olson Motor Service v. Container Corp. of America, 81 Ill. App. 3d 825, 830, 401 N.E.2d 1098, 1101 (1st Dist. 1980). Whether a "full and fair opportunity to litigate" existed "is dependent upon whether [the party being estopped was] denied a procedural, substantive or evidentiary opportunity to be heard on the issue." Id.[9] There can be no more fundamental denial of an "evidentiary opportunity to be heard" than the refusal to permit any discovery – no depositions were permitted, no documents produced, and no interrogatories

[8] Accord Restatement (Second) of Judgments, § 27, comment h ("If issues are determined but the judgment is not dependent upon the determinations, relitigation of those issues in a subsequent action between the parties is not precluded.").

[9] See also Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 331 n.15 (1979) (If the party being estopped "was unable to engage in full scale discovery or call witnesses, application of offensive collateral estoppel may be unwarranted").

answered.[10] Tr., 7/24/01 Vol. II at 131.[11] Because Plaintiffs were refused discovery before Judge Kinnaird, her decision does not preclude litigating any issue in this case.[12]

Under such circumstances, a prior decision is not afforded preclusive effect. In Sprecher v. Graber, 716 F.2d 968 (2nd Cir. 1983), the court held that a claim of misconduct in a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation was not precluded by resolution of a challenge to the propriety of an investigatory subpoena. For both the plaintiff in that case and Plaintiffs here, the opportunity to litigate in the prior proceeding "was considerably narrower than the opportunity available in a plenary civil action." Id. at 972. This was so because, among other things, the opponent of a SEC subpoena "has a 'heavy burden'[13] of proving that the subpoena is sought for an invalid purpose . . . and a substantial factual showing must be made even to receive an evidentiary hearing. This evidentiary showing must be made, moreover, without the aid of discovery." Id.[14] Under such circumstances, the court concluded that the prior litigation did not enjoy preclusive effect.

[10]While Assistant Attorney General Perkins did sit for an interview, he was not under oath and was free not to answer questions (a right he exercised). This does not constitute discovery.

[11]The additional evidence that Plaintiffs' sought was crucial to resolution of the issues presented. It is hard to imagine what could have been more central to the question of coercion by the Attorney General than the right to depose the involved parties.

[12]The suggestion that Judge Kinnaird denied Plaintiffs "additional discovery," Foundation Motion at 8, incorrectly suggests that Plaintiffs had some discovery concerning their objections.

[13]Compare Tr., 7/24/01 Vol. I at 81 (the Consent Judgment was "presumptively valid," and Plaintiffs only could overcome that "very high burden of proof" with "clear and convincing evidence" of impropriety) (Ms. Stone).

[14]Judge Kinnaird recognized the difficulty created by denying discovery. Tr., 7/24/01, Vol. I at 104-05 (to Ms. Stone; "You keep saying they haven't shown. Well part of what they want to be able to do is be able to show. And part of what they want to be able to do is get discovery. . . . Well, how can they show, if they don't get discovery?"). That she held a hearing and said that she would "seriously consider" Plaintiffs' objections, Foundation's Memorandum at 1, 6, do not remedy the denial of discovery, which crippled Plaintiffs' ability to present evidence.

16di-004881

4. The Issues Here Are Different Than Those Before Judge Kinnaird

Collateral estoppel only precludes relitigation of issues "identical" to those decided in an earlier lawsuit. See, e.g., Nowak, 197 Ill. 2d 381, 757 N.E.2d at 480. It is not enough that the two issues arise out of the same facts. See, e.g., Benton v. Smith, 157 Ill. App. 3d 847, 855, 510 N.E.2d 952, 957 (1st Dist. 1987) ("Two causes of action are not necessarily the same merely because they arise out of the same set of facts").[15]

The issues presented here are not identical to any considered by Judge Kinnaird. For example, in the instant case, Plaintiffs seek a declaration that the Foundation's approval of the Consent Judgment is a breach of fiduciary duty. That issue never was before Judge Kinnaird.[16]

5. The Issues Could Not Have Been Litigated Before Judge Kinnaird

Certain issues that Defendants claim are precluded by the Consent Judgment did not even arise until after entry of that judgment. For example, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs are barred from making any claim concerning the failure to elect the new directors. First Am. Compl. ¶ 85. See, e.g., Foundation Memorandum at 16-17. But that failure did not occur until after entry of the Consent Judgment. It would have been impossible for Plaintiffs to raise this issue during the hearing on the motion to approve the Consent Judgment. Plaintiffs sought leave to file counterclaims but Judge Kinnaird denied that motion.

[15]See, e.g., Hexacomb, 287 Ill. App. 3d at 631, 678 N.E.2d at 771 ("The party asserting the preclusion bears the burden of showing with clarity and certainty what was determined by the prior judgment. This is a heavy burden.") (citations omitted).

[16]Even the burdens of proof in the two cases differ significantly. In this action, Plaintiffs must prove their claims by a preponderance of the evidence. In Buntrock, the Consent Judgment was "presumptively valid," Tr. 7/24/01 at 81, and Plaintiffs only could overcome their "very high burden of proof" with "clear and convincing evidence" of impropriety. Id. See, e.g., U.S. Aluminum Corp. v. Alumax, Inc., 831 F.2d 878 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 822 (1988) (collateral estoppel does not apply where burden in first action was clear and convincing and burden in second action is preponderance of the evidence).

Since the issues here could not have been litigated previously, res judicata does not preclude their assertion here. See, e.g., Robinson v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 315 Ill. App. 3d. 1086, 735 N.E.2d 724 (1st Dist. 2000) (res judicata does not bar claim that could not have been raised in prior proceeding).

6. Application of Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel Would be Inequitable

Even when the necessary elements are satisfied, neither collateral estoppel or res judicata will apply when to do so would be unfair. See, e.g., Nowak, 197 Ill. 2d 381, 757 N.E.2d at 478 ("Even where the threshold elements of the doctrine are satisfied, collateral estoppel must not be applied to preclude parties from presenting their claims or defenses unless it is clear that no unfairness results to the party being estopped.").

Where a defendant tells a plaintiff to proceed in another forum, it cannot later claim that the party is precluded from asserting its claims there. Benton, 157 Ill. App. 3d at 856-57, 510 N.E.2d at 958 ("Defendants advised [plaintiff that] . . . she could pursue legal action through the courts," and "[w]hen [plaintiff] followed that advice, defendants . . . . argued that she was barred from pursuing legal action"). But that is what Defendants seek to do here. Having secured entry of the Consent Judgment by assuring Judge Kinnaird that Plaintiffs "are strangers to the agreement," Tr., 7/24/01 Vol. II at 16 (Mr. Quinlan), who "cannot be forced to relinquish whatever legal rights they may have," id., Vol. I at 46 (Ms. Stone), who "are not releasing any legal rights they may have," id., Vol. II at 81 (Ms. Stone), and who "could very well seek out another venue and try to institute some sort of lawsuit against someone there," it is fundamentally unfair for Defendants now to claim that by entering the Consent Judgment, the Court extinguished any of Plaintiffs' rights.

D. Plaintiffs Properly State A Claim Against Defendants Sidley & Austin and Winston & Strawn.

Count III of Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint seeks declaratory relief against Defendant law firms, Winston and Sidley. The allegations supporting this count are straightforward.[17] Throughout the fight over the Foundation's future, the Foundation has been represented by Winston and Sidley. This representation has continued despite their obvious conflicts of interest. Specifically, Winston continues to engage in concurrent, adverse representation of the Foundation and at least one of the defendant directors. Sidley has engaged in similar misconduct. Indeed, Sidley has already been accused by two defendant directors of breaching its responsibilities to the Foundation throughout the Buntrock litigation. These defendant directors even submitted an expert affidavit that concludes that Sidley is unable to provide independent professional advice as a result of its conflicts. That neither Winston nor Sidley has entered an appearance (other than for themselves) in this litigation does not end this dispute. As long as their hopelessly conflicted representation of the Foundation continues, the claims for declaratory judgment are appropriate. Thus, Winston's and Sidley's motions to dismiss should be denied.[18]

E. The Attorney General and Defendant Perkins Are Not Immune.

Neither Perkins nor the Attorney General is protected from any liability on immunity grounds. Public official immunity does not apply when an official acts with "malicious motives." See Janes v. Albergo, 154 Ill. App. 3d 951, 957 (1st Dist. 1993) (to be protected under the public official immunity doctrine, the actions must not result from "malicious motives"). Plaintiffs allege that the [17]The allegations specifically addressing Winston's and Sidley's conduct are found at ¶¶ 87-93, 104-107.

---

[18]When Sidley withdrew before this Court rather than give testimony regarding its conflict, Sidley tacitly admitted its conflicted status.

Attorney General launched sham investigations to coerce certain board members into approving the settlement that they wanted. Compl. ¶¶ 53-66. This is a textbook example of malicious conduct that strips a public official of his immunity. See Tcherepnin v. Franz, 570 F.2d 187, 191-92 (7th Cir. 1978) ("[I]t is our conclusion that Joseph Knight, as Director of the Department of Financial Institutions for the State of Illinois, owed a statutory duty to the depositors of City Savings; that the intentional breach of that duty would constitute a malicious act; and that such malicious conduct would override his qualified immunity as a public official.").

Nor are defendants entitled to sovereign immunity. Where an officer acts "beyond his delegated proper authority or abuses his discretion, then such actions will be against the officer and not the State and therefore will not offend the sovereign immunity statute." See Nichols v. Bd. of Educ. of Chicago, 236 Ill. App. 3d 522, 527 (1st Dist. 1992). Such are the allegations here.

Defendants' claim that they enjoy immunity from Plaintiffs' Section 1983 claims also is baseless. Absolute immunity is only available "to members of quasi-judicial adjudicatory bodies when they perform functions comparable to those of a judicial officer." Tobin v. Illinois State Bd. of Elections, 268 F.3d 517, 521 (7th Cir. 2001). The Attorney General performed no such functions. Qualified immunity is unavailable because Defendants could not have reasonably thought that their actions were "consistent with the rights they are alleged to have violated." Anderson v. Creighton, 438 U.S. 635, 639 (1987).

F. Plaintiffs Have Standing To Assert the Section 1983 Action

The Attorney General's claim that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring Count VII, a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, on behalf of the Foundation ignores the settled law concerning the right of directors of not-for-profit corporations to assert claims on behalf of their respective corporations.

Given the unique nature of not-for-profit corporations, courts around the country have repeatedly held that directors of not-for-profit corporations have standing to assert claims on behalf of their respective corporations. For example, in Kirby v. Kirby, Civil Action No. 8604, 1989 Del. Ch. LEXIS 117 (Del. Ch. Sept. 12, 1989), several directors filed complaints alleging that the defendant directors had breached their duties to the foundation. Id. at *2. The defendant directors moved to dismiss, claiming that the plaintiff director lacked standing to assert claims on behalf of the foundation. Id. Framing the issue presented as whether "directors of charitable corporations have standing to maintain in action on behalf of the corporation," id. at *3, the court answered with an unequivocal "yes." The court reasoned that standing requires that a litigant must have a sufficient interest in the outcome to vigorously litigate the dispute, and "[a]s a fiduciary . . . the director of a charitable corporation has a sufficiently concrete interest in the outcome of litigation . . . that he has standing." Id. at 5-6 ("[t]his principle . . . has been recognized in other jurisdictions and by legal scholars").[19] See also In Morgan v. Robertson, 609 S.W.2d 662, 665 (Ark. Ct. App. 1980) (the standing of a director of a non-profit corporation to assert claims on behalf of the corporation "does not seem open to question," even where the corporation is not named as a plaintiff) (collecting cases).

Plaintiffs brought their action in their capacity as directors of the Foundation, and seek to vindicate the Foundation's rights. It is clear under settled law that they have standing to do so, and the Attorney General's motion to dismiss on this ground must therefore be dismissed.

Conclusion

For all the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker, Judith Terra and Alan K. Simpson respectfully submit that Defendants' motions to dismiss should be denied.

---

[19]As here, the plaintiff in Kirby did not name the foundation as a plaintiff in his complaint.

The cost -- the cash deficit is about $2,000,000 per year. The building being used has a value in excess of $25 million -- is just much more than can ever be overcome and supported by the public.

Stuart thinks he can run the museum for fiscal 1996 (starting July 1, 1995) on $1,500,000 perhaps more effectively for more people than any time since the 2nd year after its opening.

The committee has concluded that the Museum on North Michigan Avenue just will never achieve much of its support by the public of Chicago. Even though

The Education department is doing well -- it gets better each year. Hence, the Committee recommends that we close the museum on N. Michigan Ave. effective December 31, 1995.

The committee recommends that we announce the closing by September 1, 1995.

Concurrently with the closing period, the Committee is to study the feasibility of maintaining a presence in Chicago, an Educational building of American Art in Chicago. It is believed the Foundation can develop a viable Educational program of American Art in Chicago at a cost of less than $600,000^{00}$ per year. It should be, if at all at some Central city location (other than north Michigan Avenue)

The Committee will try to do whatever the Board decides, concerning the new educational program. There are several inexpensive buildings which could be used for this purpose.

Chairman to call for a vote and discussion.

1. To close Terra Museum of American Art effective December 31, 1995.
2. Study options for a new location to create a viable learning institution for American Art.

Re: Buntrock et al. v. Terra et al., Circuit Court No. 00 CH 13859

Dear Mr. Hilliard:

Factual Background

The Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") is a private Illinois not-for-profit corporation established under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act, 805 ILCS 105/103 et seq., by Ambassador Daniel J. Terra in 1978. Ambassador Terra was born and raised in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He later moved to Chicago and maintained a residence for many years in both Washington D.C. and the Chicagoland area. The Foundation has been almost entirely sustained by the contributions made by Ambassador Terra during his life and from his estate. The Foundation has never received any public funding of any kind.

As stated in the Foundation's original Articles of Incorporation, the Foundation was established for the stated purpose of, among other things, to "expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public . . . operate a museum . . . and any and all other purposes permitted by law to such a not-for-profit corporation." (See original Articles of Incorporation (Ex. A to Buntrock Complaint). Nothing in the original Articles of Incorporation imposed any geographic limitation on the Foundation's activities. In 1994, the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation were amended to expressly provide for the operation of "museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad" (See Memorandum from Bell, Boyd & Lloyd to the Foundation's Board attaching amended version of Articles of Incorporation, attached hereto as Ex. A). Those changes were unanimously approved by the Board of Directors which included the

Enclosure # 2

Ambassador's son, James Terra, at the July 18, 1994 Board meeting. (See Minutes of July 18, 1994 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Ex. B).

In 1980, the Foundation opened the original Terra Museum in Evanston, Illinois. In an effort to increase attendance and the Museum's exposure, in 1987, the Terra Museum was relocated to 664 North Michigan Avenue in Chicago, Illinois. In the early 1990s, in furtherance of the Foundation's purpose of propagating American art, expanding artistic horizons and operating museums in the United States and abroad, the Foundation opened the Museé d'Art Americain Giverny in Giverny, France. Today, the Foundation owns roughly one-third of the Village of Giverny and its Giverny operations are a substantial part of its overall operations.

As early as 1989 Ambassador Terra realized that the Terra Museum in Chicago was not the success that he had hoped it would be and began considering alternatives. In a memorandum dated October 6, 1989, then counsel for the Foundation, Richard Sevcik, explored the "various options available" to the Foundation. (See Memorandum from Richard L. Sevcik to James W. Collins, attached hereto as Ex. C). Those options included "merg[ing] the Museum into the Whitney Museum", or "mov[ing] the Museum's collection to either Philadelphia or Houston" or "sell[ing] the real estate and the collection." (Id.) Counsel for the Foundation specifically stated that "[s]uch a move would be permitted under the Museum's charter and bylaws." (Id.) Following up on these options, James Collins, then general counsel to the Foundation wrote to Ambassador Terra in a letter dated December 6, 1989 stating that "Chicago does not seem to support museums such as Terra to the extent it should" and suggesting that the Ambassador consider "better markets to showcase American Art, namely New York, Washington D.C., Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Boston, Philadelphia, and perhaps even Atlanta." (See Dec. 6, 1989 letter from James Collins to Ambassador Terra, attached hereto as Ex. D). Additionally, in a statement presented to the Foundation's Board of Directors at its April 25, 1990 meeting, the Ambassador himself proposed "clos[ing] the North Michigan Avenue Museum, [and] sell[ing] the real estate . . . ." (See April 25, 1990 Statement by Daniel J. Terra to the Board of Directors, attached hereto as Ex. E). In that statement, the Ambassador estimated that the Foundation would spend approximately $5,000 per visitor to the Terra Museum in fiscal year 1991 and detailed many other problems with the Michigan Avenue museum. (Id.) Ambassador Terra encouraged the Board members to also consider and recommend strategic planning solutions to the current problems with the Terra Museum in Chicago. (Id.)

Based upon his frustration over the lack of enthusiasm for the Terra Museum in Chicago as well as other difficulties with the Michigan Avenue location, between 1991 and 1993, Ambassador Terra pursued the formation of a strategic alliance between the Foundation, the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., and the Whitney Museum in New York City. (See letter from David Levy to Mr. and Mrs. Terra dated Feb. 26, 1992, attached hereto as Ex. F). The strategic alliance between the three major institutions of American Art would have resulted in a pooling of the Foundation's collection with those of the other two museums and moving the emphasis of the Foundation's work from Chicago to Washington, D.C. Unfortunately the partnership between the three museums was abandoned when issues relating to the Whitney Museum's involvement became insurmountable.

After the failure of the proposed Terra-Corcoran-Whitney alliance, Ambassador Terra began pursuing a strategic alliance with yet another institution. Between 1993 and 1995, Ambassador Terra pursued an alliance with the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of the Arts, both located in Philadelphia. These negotiations led to an agreement by the Foundation to contribute up to $22 million to the University of the Arts in Philadelphia. (See Affiliation Agreement, attached hereto as Ex. G). The University named one of its key buildings after Ambassador Terra in recognition of his generosity. Peter Solmssen, President of the University of the Arts knows of Ambassador Terra's intent to conduct the affairs of the Foundation over a broad geographic range not limited at all to Chicago. (See March 27, 1997 letter from Peter Solmssen to Mme. Ahrweiler, attached hereto as Ex. H, stating "the museum in Chicago should not continue in its present form or location. This is also in accord with many conversations I had with Ambassador Terra on the subject.").

Finally, in 1996 the year of his death, Ambassador Terra began making preparations to move the Foundation's headquarters out of Chicago all together. Ambassador Terra worked with a Washington, D.C. real estate agent toward the purchase of three pieces of property located in Washington, D.C.: (1) a transitional office for the Foundation at 1072 Thomas Jefferson Street in Georgetown; (2) a "small museum" and future home for the Foundation's offices at the corner of Connecticut and Calvert streets in Cleveland Park; and (3) a future one million square foot structure, to be called "The Terra Foundation for the Arts," in Foggy Bottom. (See Plans for the Terra Foundation's offices and a gallery by Archetype dated May 30, 1996, attached hereto as Ex. I). The Georgetown and Cleveland Park properties were actually purchased. Belinda C. Reeder of Archetype was hired, drew up plans for the Cleveland Park property, obtained a zoning permit, and phone lines, nameplates, furniture as well as other purchases were made for the property. The Foggy Bottom property was not purchased prior to the Ambassador's death in June of 1996.

During the time following the Ambassador's death, the Foundation was consumed with issues relating to his estate. After settlement of the estate, the Foundation's Board of Directors returned to its normal functions and revisited the consideration of a strategic plan for the Foundation that the Ambassador began in April 1990 and continued to pursue actively until his death in 1996. At the Foundation's November 6, 1998 Board of Directors meeting Dean Buntrock, one of the plaintiffs in this action, recommended that the Board form a Strategic Planning Committee to consider the options for the future of the Foundation and the Terra Museum on Michigan Avenue. (See Minutes for Nov. 6, 1998 Board of Directors Meeting, attached hereto as Ex. J). Ronald Gidwitz, the other plaintiff in this lawsuit, was elected as the chairman of the Strategic Planning Committee.

The Strategic Planning Committee met several times between March, 1999 and September, 2000. At the March 13, 2000 meeting plaintiff Gidwitz himself raised several options for the future of the Foundation such as "[b]uild a new museum facility, either on the present site or a new site; affiliate with another museum; [or] focus on education and building the collection and not run our own museums." (See Strategic Planning Committee minutes for March 13, 2000 meeting, attached hereto as Ex. K (emphasis added)). During the August 7, 2000 Strategic Planning Committee meeting various options for alliances with other institutions were discussed and a poll was taken as to whether the Foundation should remain as a stand-alone museum. (See Strategic Planning Committee minutes for August 7, 2000 meeting, attached hereto as Ex. L). Six of the seven Directors present at the meeting (including plaintiff Gidwitz) voted that the Foundation should not maintain a stand-alone museum in Chicago – only plaintiff Buntrock voted "no." (Id.) However, plaintiff Buntrock later also considered closing the Terra Museum in Chicago and aligning the Foundation with another institution. In his September 2000 "Proposal" plaintiff Buntrock stated, "[i]f we close the Chicago Museum and partner with a museum that will embrace our programs, we could bring a traveling exhibition to many people who would otherwise never to exposed to the Arts ... ." (See Buntrock Proposal, attached hereto as Ex. M (emphasis added)).

On September 22, 2000, plaintiffs Buntrock and Gidwitz filed this action against the Foundation, three of the Foundation's Directors, Judith Terra, Dr. Paul Hayes Tucker and Senator Alan K. Simpson, as well as another third party, Naftali Michaeli. On September 25, 2000 the Attorney General intervened in the action by filing an unverified complaint which incorporated by reference all of the allegations contained in the Buntrock and Gidwitz complaint.

Plaintiffs' and the Attorney General's Ultra Vires Claims

There is no question that any decision by the Foundation to close the Terra Museum or move the Foundation out of Illinois is squarely within the rights and powers granted to the Foundation by the Illinois General Not for Profit Corporation Act, the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation and its By-Laws. An ultra vires act is one that is expressly prohibited and beyond the powers of the corporation. Sherrard State Bank v. Vernon, 243 Ill. App. 122 (2nd Dist. 1926). The powers and limitations of a corporation are found in its articles of incorporation, its by-laws and in applicable constitutional and statutory provisions. Stroh v. Blackhawk Holding. Corp., 48 Ill. 2d 471, 475 (1971). A not-for-profit corporation is no different in this regard – its charter, articles of incorporation and by-laws control whether a corporate action is ultra vires. See Scott v. Harding Museum, 58 Ill. App. 3d 408, 410 (1st Dist. 1978) ("The purposes of the [museum] are set forth in its articles of incorporation."); Southern Illinois Univ. Foundation v. Booker, 98 Ill. App. 3d 1062, 1064 (5th Dist. 1981) (court determined the purpose of a not-for-profit corporation by looking to its by-laws); Bertram v. Berger, 1 Ill. App. 3d 743, 746 (1st Dist. 1971) (court looked only to the charter of a not-for-profit corporation to determine whether action was ultra vires); Harrison v. Barker Annuity Fund, 90 F.2d 286, 289 (7th Cir. 1937) (holding the character and purpose of charitable corporation must be ascertained by reference to the terms of its charter).

The Illinois Supreme Court has held that articles of incorporation are a contract and must be construed the same as any contract – in accordance with the document's clear language. Stroh v. Blackhawk Holding Corp., 48 Ill. 2d 471, 474-75 (1971). Both the meaning of the contract and the intent of the parties is to be gathered from the face of the document without assistance from any extrinsic evidence. Air Safety, Inc. v. Teachers Realty Corp., 185 Ill. 2d 457, 462 (1999) citing Rakowski v. Lucente, 104 Ill. 2d 317, 323 (1984). Courts must look solely to the plain and ordinary meaning of the language of the contract to determine the intent of the parties, unless the contract is ambiguous. In re Estate of Powless, 248 Ill. Dec. 403; 734 N.E.2d 111, 115 (Ill. App. Ct. 5th Dist. 2000). However, where no ambiguity exists, construction of the instrument is a matter of law. Hurd v. Wildman, Harrold, Allen & Dixon, 303 Ill. App. 3d 84, 89 (1st Dist. 1999); Powless, 734 N.E.2d at 116 (holding a court will not find an ambiguity in contractual language where none exists).

There is nothing ambiguous about the purpose of the Foundation. It is specifically and clearly laid out in both the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws. If Ambassador Terra had intended the Foundation to forever operate a museum in Chicago and only in Chicago, he certainly and simply could have included such limiting language in the Foundation's incorporating documents. To the contrary, however, Ambassador Terra expressly stated in the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation that the purpose of the Foundation was far broader than the narrow and parochial interpretation plaintiffs and the Attorney General are seeking to impose. As the Articles of Incorporation make clear, the purpose of the Foundation is to reach a broadly-based public without regard to city or state borders:

> [T]he purposes of the corporation are to form, preserve, and exhibit collections of paintings, sculpture, graphic arts, architecture, and design representing American art; expand the artistic horizons of a growing art public through such activities which will include lectures, symposia, talks, demonstrations, films, concerts and related educational programs designed to further these purposes; establish, conduct, operate, and maintain or provide funds for schools of instruction and . . . build, erect, maintain, equip, manage, lease, and operate museums and schools, both in the United States and abroad and . . . engage in any and all other activities . . . permitted by law.

(See Foundation's current Articles of Incorporation, Ex. N)(emphasis added)). The Foundation's By-Laws echo this language. Ambassador Terra amended the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws to include this extremely broad purpose clause in 1994 "to avoid any confusion regarding the purposes of the Foundation." (See Ex. A).

Neither the City of Chicago nor the State of Illinois are mentioned anywhere in any of the Foundation's creating documents. Rather, both its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws unequivocally give the Foundation the power to establish a museum anywhere inside or outside the United States.

It would be absurd to construe the Foundation's governing documents to mean that the Foundation must operate exclusively in Chicago, when the Foundation itself and its first museum were originally based outside of Chicago. It would be similarly absurd to construe the documents in such a way as to deem operating a museum outside of Chicago ultra vires, when plaintiffs admit themselves in their complaints and do not object to the fact that the Foundation has for years owned and operated another museum in Giverny, France – outside not only Chicago and the State of Illinois but the United States. (Buntrock Complaint at ¶ 16). This interpretation cannot possibly be reconciled with either a plain reading of the documents or the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. That Act specifically authorizes the Foundation to conduct activities and operations, maintain offices and exercise any of its powers outside of not only the State of Illinois but the United States, and does not require that there be any museum here at all. See 805 ILCS 105/103.10(j) (permitting any not-for-profit corporation to "conduct its affairs, carry on its operations, and have offices within and without this State . . . and to exercise in any other state . . . or in any foreign country, the powers granted by this Act.").

Plaintiffs and the Attorney General have attempted to characterize the Foundation as a "public trust" established for the benefit of the People of Illinois and claim therefore it may never leave the state of Illinois. The Terra Foundation is not a legal trust – it is a private Illinois not-for-profit corporation with all the rights and powers of such a corporation which have been conferred upon the Foundation by the General Assembly of the State of Illinois through the General Not For Profit Corporation Act, along with all the powers that have been granted to the Foundation by its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws. The fact that the Foundation is a not-for-profit rather than a for-profit corporation makes no difference. The statutory provision governing ultra vires acts of an Illinois not-for-profit corporation is essentially identical to the provision governing ultra vires acts of any other Illinois corporation. See 805 ILCS 5/3.15; 805 ILCS 105/103.15; 19 C.J.S. § 576 (Corporations) n. 19 (The defense of ultra vires for a nonprofit corporation is the same as that of a corporation for profit).

While the Foundation may be defined as a "trustee" for purposes of the reporting requirements of the Charitable Trust Act, this does not transform the Foundation into a trust. See 760 ILCS 55/3. The purpose of the Charitable Trust Act is to assist the Attorney General in carrying out his powers to enforce "charitable trusts" as broadly defined in that Act and to see to the application of their funds to their intended uses, primarily through certain reporting and disclosure requirements. See Scott, 58 Ill App. 3d at 413. However, this Act neither turns all "charitable" not-for-profit corporations into trusts, nor allows the Court to disregard the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation issued by the State of Illinois and "pretend" the Foundation is actually a trust. Nor does the Charitable Trust Act allow the Court to disregard the Foundation's own By-Laws or the rights and powers conferred upon it by the General Assembly through the Illinois General Not for Profit Corporation Act.

Plaintiffs have not and cannot allege the necessary elements to prove that Ambassador Terra intended to create a trust when he explicitly created the Foundation as a private Illinois not-for-profit corporation. The elements of an express trust are: (1) intent of the parties to create a trust; (2) a definite subject matter or trust property; (3) ascertainable beneficiaries; (4) a trustee; (5) specification of trust purpose and how the trust is to be performed; and (6) delivery of the trust property to the trustee. In re Estate of Zuckerman, 218 Ill. App. 3d 325, 329, 578 N.E.2d 248 (1st Dist. 1991). Ambassador Terra prepared Articles of Incorporations and By-Laws, not a trust document. Plaintiffs themselves chose to file their complaint supposedly based upon those Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, which they attached as exhibits to their complaint. Plaintiffs did not file suit upon and did not attach to their complaint any declaration of trust or other trust document.

The Illinois Appellate Court has previously addressed this very issue in Scott v. Harding Museum, 58 Ill. App. 3d 408 (1978). In that case, the court found that because the purpose of the George F. Harding Museum, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, as stated in the museum's articles of incorporation, constituted a "charitable" purpose, the museum was subject to the Charitable Trust Act. Id. at 415-16. However, in determining the purpose of the museum, the court looked solely to the museum's articles of incorporation. Id. The court quoted the language of the articles of incorporation in holding that in "the establishment of this museum, the express intent of the donor was the 'collection, preservation and exhibition of . . . art'." Id. Moreover, the court specifically rejected the "sophistical reading of the purpose clause of the articles of incorporation suggested by the defendants" and instead based its holding on a plain and ordinary reading of the articles of incorporation. Id. at 416.

The intent of Daniel Terra must be determine by looking solely to the Foundation's founding documents, just as the court did in Scott. Id. Even if the Court chooses to ignore the operative documents governing the Terra Foundation – a not-for-profit corporation – and decides to treat the Foundation as a "trust," plaintiffs still cannot demonstrate that it was the intent of Ambassador Terra to limit the scope of the Foundation to operating exclusively within the geographical limits of Chicago, and exclusively for the benefit of the residents of Chicago. Even the case law cited by plaintiffs for the proposition that the Court may look to "surrounding circumstances" hold that in determining the intent of a trust settlor, "the court must consider the plain and ordinary meaning of the words used." First Nat'l Bank of Chicago v. Canton Council of Campfire Girls, Inc., 85 Ill. 2d 507, 514 (1981); see also Northern Ill. Med. Ctr. v. Home State Bank of Crystal Lake, 136 Ill. App. 3d 129, 144 (2nd Dist. 1985); Stuart v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, 68 Ill. 2d 502, 528 (1977). If the intent may be gathered from the language of the "trust" documents themselves, there is no need for extrinsic evidence. In the absence of ambiguity, which does not exist here, extrinsic evidence is impermissible. Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 85 Ill. 2d at 514; see also In re Estate of Mendelson, 298 Ill. App. 3d 1, 3-4 (1st Dist. 1998) (holding that courts should attempt to determine the settlor's intent solely by reference to the plain language of the trust agreement); Mitchell v. Snyder, 402 Ill. 279, 284 (1949) (finding that the intent of the testator is to be drawn from the language of the document itself, and surrounding circumstances will not be permitted to import a different meaning from that expressed, unless there exists such an ambiguity as to require a construction by the court).

As a matter of law this issue must be decided on the face of the documents and not result in an evidentiary hearing. However, even if the Court chooses to hold an evidentiary hearing on this issue, neither the plaintiffs nor the Attorney General can prove that Ambassador Terra intended that the Terra Museum and the Foundation forever remain in Chicago, Illinois. Presumably, plaintiffs attached their best evidence to support their claims to their complaint. Such "evidence" consisted solely of a few magazine articles in which the Ambassador touts the uniqueness of his museum at around the time of its opening. In contrast, the Foundation has overwhelming evidence suggesting that Ambassador Terra was a man with a broad international vision who became disenchanted with Chicago when his museum was not the success he had hoped. As a result, Ambassador Terra actively sought out other options for his museum, including the alliances with the Corcoran Gallery, the Whitney Museum and the University of the Arts as previously described above. Those efforts are documented in the exhibits attached to this letter and would be testified to by all of the witnesses who participated with Ambassador Terra in those activities. Moreover, other individuals close to the Ambassador also agreed that it would be in the Foundation's best interest to close the Terra Museum in Chicago. (See Ex. D, 1989 letter from long-time Foundation counsel, James Collins, to Ambassador Terra (stating that Chicago has not sufficiently supported the Terra Museum and suggesting that the Ambassador consider other cities to showcase his art); see also April 2, 1997 letter from Dorrance H. Hamilton, a former Foundation Director, to Mme Arhweiler, attached hereto as Ex. O (stating "[e]ven without a firm plan I agree that the Museum in Chicago should be closed, and the Michigan Avenue real estate sold")).

As a matter of law, the Foundation is in no way restricted to the boundaries of the State of Illinois, and is entitled to choose to conduct its operations anywhere. Tellingly, on the very first day that the parties were before the Court, Floyd Perkins, Assistant Attorney General, was specifically asked by the Court whether there existed any case law where a "charitable organization[] in Illinois wish[ed] to move outside the state and [was] stopped by force from doing so." (See Tr. of Proceedings 9/22/00 at p. 17). Mr. Perkins could not at that time or any time thereafter provide any such authority to the Court – because no such authority exists. (Id. at 17-19). Moreover, even if the intent of Ambassador Terra's vision reached far beyond the City of Chicago and State of Illinois, there is no evidence suggesting that Ambassador Terra intended for the Terra Museum or the Foundation to forever remain in Illinois, in fact, the evidence shows that just the opposite is true.

Plaintiffs' and Attorney General's Allegations Regarding "Waste and Mismanagement"

As the Court has read the complaints, the second category of allegations in the complaints are directed toward the individual defendants. Plaintiffs and the Attorney General allege that the three individual defendant directors have breach some sort of claimed fiduciary duties to the people of Illinois by engaging in alleged waste and mismanagement. While the Foundation has not conducted a formal investigation into any such allegations, due in large part to the fact that the plaintiffs have filed numerous motions attempting to enjoin the Foundation's Independent Litigation Committee and Sidley & Austin from conducting any such investigation, the Foundation currently has no reason to believe that there is any merit in any such allegations.

First, neither the plaintiffs nor the Attorney General have alleged any specific acts of waste or mismanagement on the part of any of the defendant directors.[1] Rather, the complaints contain purely general allegations that the individual defendants have engaged in "mismanagement of the Terra Museum" and "plans" to remove plaintiff Buntrock as a director as part of some sort of "scheme" to move the Foundation to Washington, D.C. Obviously, the three individual defendant directors as a minority of the eleven-member Board could never succeed in moving the Foundation out of Illinois if a majority of the Board did not also agree that this was in the best interest of the Foundation.

These "allegations" appear to be nothing more than a commentary on staffing and other administrative minutia of the Foundation, much of which reflects matters which took place prior to October, 1999 when Dr. Tucker became president of the Foundation after Mr. Gidwitz, Ambassador Hartman and Mrs. Daley had blocked the hiring of a full-time professional president. In fact, any waste or mismanagement surely should have been detected by the Foundation's treasurer and chairman of the Finance and Investment Committee, plaintiff Buntrock, who was charged with maintaining and managing the Foundation's finances. Plaintiff Buntrock held these positions during the time period covered by the complaint and until September 2000. However, Buntrock never mentioned that he thought the defendants might be wasting or mismanaging the Foundation's assets until just prior to the annual September, 2000 Board meeting when it looked like he might not be reelected to the Foundation's Board. Moreover, every year the Foundation received audited financial statements.

Plaintiffs appear to have brought their complaint (upon which the Attorney General relies and admits that he has no independent knowledge of any of the allegations contained therein) for the sole purpose of keeping the Foundation in the City of Chicago – where their loyalties lie – and removing any director who disagrees with them despite what is in the Foundation's best interest.

Settlement Proposals

[1] The only arguably specific allegation contained in either complaint, is a reference that Judith Terra supposedly appropriated art from the Foundation for her own personal use. As the plaintiffs very well know, after appropriate approval, security and insurance was secured, a few works from the Foundation's Giverny museum were brought to Mrs. Terra's nearby residence at the request of a British television production company in order to film a program promoting the Giverny museum. Officials from the Giverny museum transported the paintings to Mrs. Terra's home, waited during the three hour taping of the program, and immediately and safely returned the paintings back to the museum thereafter.

Any settlement of this matter must first recognize that the Foundation has the right to govern itself. Anything less would have a chilling effect on all not-for-profit corporations and private foundations or trusts established in Illinois, suggesting that once such an entity is formed in Illinois it belongs to the people of the State of Illinois and may never leave.

There are many issues which need to be addressed before the Foundation can agree to any plan for its future. The Foundation proposes that the plaintiffs and the Attorney General voluntarily dismiss their complaints and permit the Board of Directors to continue considering, formulating and seeking out options for a future plan for the Foundation and its museums. We believe that the Attorney General, in his February 1, 2001 letter to Judge Kinnaird, accurately addresses the multitude of issues that the Foundation was considering and would like to continue to consider without the barrier of the current lawsuit in determining the best strategic plan for the Foundation. The Attorney General noted that many of the strategic planning issues include:

> What are the missions and goals of the Foundation? What consideration must be given to Dan Terra's visions in formulating the missions and goals? What was being done right? What could be improved? Is the current location a barrier to the missions and goals? Are stand alone small museums efficient, effective, and economically justified? Will partnering with another museum create a synergy to further the missions and goals? Specifically in this regard, will a world class collection, which will create a destination for people who wish to enjoy American Art, result from the partnering? Will the current highly successful school children's education programs be enhanced by the partnering? What role will Giverny museum play within the partnering? Will a partner be in a position to make relevant art works available for display in Giverny or otherwise assemble exhibitions for display there?

All of these questions are very important ones that must be considered by the Foundation's Board of Directors. The Foundation may wish to hire consultants or analysts to assess its options. Prior to the filing of this lawsuit, the Board was at the initial stages of considering the various options available and has not been given the opportunity to fully consider each of the factors expressed by the Attorney General. The Foundation is also willing to use this time to solicit proposals from institutions, other than those already under consideration, located in Illinois.

Additionally, the Foundation would also consider agreeing that it will not close the Terra Museum or move the Foundation out of Illinois without first consulting with the Attorney General on its findings and basis for its decisions.

Finally, the Foundation would like to resolve this matter without the expense of further litigation or a trial; however, the Foundation is confident that it has an absolute right to choose to close the Terra Museum and/or move the Foundation outside of Illinois if a majority of the Board so decides. Accordingly, the Foundation is not interested in any kind of settlement that would result in a finding to the contrary.

Re: Tucker v. Buntrock, 01 L 9112

Dear Judge Nowicki:

Enclosed is a copy of our consolidated response to the various motions to dismiss. We've made every effort to keep it short.

Also enclosed is a courtesy copy of our motion for leave to file the Terra affidavit under seal. Although we do not believe the attachments to that affidavit are necessarily "confidential," at least one of them relates to the earlier mediation.

Respectfully,

Robert P. Cummins

Re: Tucker v. Buntrock (01 L 009112)
Courtesy papers filed with defendants' motions to dismiss

Dear Judge Nowicki:

To better facilitate the Court's handling of this case, the Terra Foundation encloses herewith a courtesy set of the papers filed in support of the defendants' various motions to dismiss plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint at Law. As set out more completely in the Table of Contents (attached to this letter), the Terra Foundation is sending you: (1) a copy of the First Amended Complaint; (2) the defendants' motions to dismiss along with the memoranda, exhibits, and case law filed in support thereof; and (3) a copy of plaintiffs' response brief.

As you know, the defendants' reply briefs are due February 1, 2002. The Terra Foundation will forward you courtesy copies of these reply briefs (along with any supporting documents) as soon as it receives them. Accordingly, you should have a complete set of all the papers filed in connection with these pending motions to dismiss well in advance of the February 13, 2002 hearing in this matter.

Very truly yours,

Eric J. Muñoz

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF SECTION 2-619.1 MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V OF AMENDED COMPLAINT

Defendants, Dean L. Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, by and through their attorneys, Quinlan & Carroll, Ltd., hereby state as follows as their reply in support of their section 2-619.1 motion to strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of amended complaint:

INTRODUCTION

By their motion and memorandum, defendants move this Court to dismiss counts I, IV and V of plaintiffs' amended complaint. Plaintiffs' amended complaint is simply an improper effort to relitigate and further challenge the entry of the consent judgment and order ("consent judgment") approved by the court in Terra I. In their response to defendants' motion, plaintiffs fail to address the majority of the arguments raised by defendants in support of their motion. Indeed, plaintiffs do not mention that the claims and issues of Terra II are subject to plaintiffs' pending appeal in Terra I in the First District, Appellate Court. Not only do plaintiffs fail to address the pending appeal in Terra I, plaintiffs fail to even mention the appeal. Notwithstanding this "omission," the fact that the same claims are pending on appeal warrants dismissal of plaintiffs' claims pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3).

Moreover, plaintiffs' attempt to avoid the clear applicability of collateral estoppel and res judicata falls short. Plaintiffs cannot reasonably dispute that Terra II is a clear relitigation of the objections to the consent judgment that plaintiffs litigated and the court resolved in Terra I.

Finally, plaintiffs are unable to support their claims that the approval of the consent judgment was an ultra vires act or a breach of fiduciary duty by defendants. Plaintiffs cannot allege that the consent judgment is prohibited or in violation of the Foundation's governing documents. Moreover, plaintiffs cannot state a claim that defendants breached fiduciary duties by simply approving the consent judgment. Plaintiffs' claims are premised entirely on their unhappiness with the consent judgment — claims that are not only at issue before the Appellate Court, but also without support in Illinois law. Thus, this Court should dismiss counts I, IV and V of the first amended complaint.

ARGUMENT

I. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT DISPUTE THAT DISMISSAL IS APPROPRIATE IN LIGHT OF THE PENDING APPEAL.

Plaintiffs fail to address in their response — and, in fact, completely omit to mention — that they are currently appealing Terra I and that their appeal is "another action pending between the same parties for the same cause" that requires dismissal of counts I, IV and V pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3). 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(3). Plaintiffs' "omission" is telling. Defendants have moved this Court for dismissal pursuant to section 2-619(a)(3) because Terra II is an improper attempt to appeal Terra I to this Court while concurrently pursuing the same relief before the Appellate Court. As set forth in defendants' motion, section 2-619(a)(3) is equally applicable when the "same claim" is pending on appeal. Wheatley v. International Harvester Co., 166 Ill. App. 3d 775, 520 N.E.2d 975 (5th Dist. 1998); In re Ordinance Requesting the Annexation of Certain Territory to the Village of Willowbrook, 62 Ill. App. 2d 45, 210 N.E.2d 25 (2nd Dist. 1965).

Plaintiffs do not dispute — because they cannot — that the requirements of section 2-619(a)(3) are satisfied here. Specifically, the pending appeal in counts I, IV and V involves the "same parties" because, as required by section 2-619, the litigants' interests are sufficiently similar. Id. at 318, 653 N.E.2d at 828. There is no requirement that the parties be identical in name or number and thus, the addition of individual defendant directors Daley, Hartman, Stebbins and Marshall to this action does not limit the applicability of section 2-619(a)(3).

Moreover, the "same cause" requirement is also satisfied because the relief sought is requested on substantially the same set of facts. Schnitzer v. O'Connor, 274 Ill. App. 3d 314, 319, 653 N.E.2d 825, 829 (1st Dist. 1995). Specifically, the "same cause" requirement is satisfied if, as here, the two actions arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, regardless of the legal theory or relief sought. Id.

As noted above, plaintiffs fail to even mention their pending appeal in Terra I. Yet, plaintiffs spend a great deal of time arguing that they cannot be bound by the consent judgment of Terra I because they were not parties to that consent judgment. This argument illustrates a clear inconsistency in plaintiffs' position. On one hand, plaintiffs argue, as they must, that they have standing and rights to challenge the consent judgment before the Appellate Court, yet here, although seeking the same relief, plaintiffs' claim is based entirely on the position that they are not bound by the consent judgment. This inconsistency is fatal to plaintiffs' claims.

Defendants have demonstrated that plaintiffs' pending appeal in Terra I is for the "same cause" and between the "same parties" for purposes of section 2-619(a)(3). Plaintiffs do not dispute this argument and, accordingly, counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint should be dismissed due to the pendency of the appeal in Terra I.

II. COUNTS I, IV AND V SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO THE DOCTRINES OF COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL AND RES JUDICATA.

As set forth in defendants' motion and memorandum, this Court should dismiss counts I, IV and V pursuant to section 2-619(a)(4) under the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. Defendants' motion illustrates that the requisite elements of res judicata and collateral estoppel are satisfied here. As set forth below, plaintiffs' effort to argue against the applicability of res judicata and collateral estoppel is insufficient.

A. Res Judicata And Collateral Estoppel Bar Plaintiffs' Claims — Regardless Of Whether Plaintiffs Were Parties To The Consent Judgment.

Plaintiffs argue that res judicata and collateral estoppel are not applicable because plaintiffs are not parties to the consent judgment of Terra I.[1] Plaintiffs rely on Nowak v. St. Rita High School, 197 Ill. 2d 381, 757 N.E.2d 471 (2001), to suggest that res judicata and collateral estoppel would only apply if plaintiffs were parties to the consent judgment. Nowak does not support plaintiffs' position. Indeed, res judicata and collateral estoppel do not impose a strict requirement of identity of parties and are, in fact, applicable if there is an identity among parties "or their privies." See River Park, Inc. v. City of Highland Park, 184 Ill. 2d 290, 302, 703 N.E.2d 883 (1998); DuPage Forklift Service, Inc. v. Material Handling Service, Inc., 195 Ill. 2d 71, 744 N.E.2d 845 (2001). Thus, even if this Court were to adopt plaintiffs' erroneous contention that res judicata and collateral estoppel require that plaintiffs be parties to the consent judgment, under Illinois law, the Foundation, by its Board of Directors, is already, in fact, a party to the consent judgment and plaintiffs, as board members, are in privity with the parties to the consent judgment.

More importantly, plaintiffs were parties to Terra I from the onset and withdrew from the consent judgment after being unhappy with the result. Illinois law does not require that plaintiffs have been a party to the consent judgment. Indeed, the consent judgment was entered only after the court in Terra I resolved the issues and claims now presented in Terra II. The resolution of the identical issues raised in Terra II, the entry of the final judgment on the merits in Terra I, and the fact that plaintiffs were parties in Terra I, satisfy the elements of collateral estoppel. See DuPage Forklift Service, 195 Ill. 2d 71, 741 N.E.2d 845. In addition, the fact that the court entered a final judgment on the merits in Terra I after ruling on plaintiffs' objections to the consent judgment, that the claims in Terra II result from the same group of operative facts as Terra I, and that plaintiffs were parties in Terra I, satisfy the requirements of res judicata. River Park, 184 Ill. 2d 290, 703 N.E.2d 883.

[1] Of course, this argument is totally inconsistent with plaintiffs' efforts to appeal the consent judgment of Terra I.

Indeed, had Judge Kinnaird in Terra I not ruled on plaintiffs' claims and resolved their specific objections to the consent judgment, the consent judgment would not have been entered. The mere entry of the consent judgment in Terra I satisfies the requirement of res judicata and collateral estoppel that there be an identity of parties "or their privies" because plaintiffs were parties in Terra I. See River Park, Inc., 184 Ill. 2d at 302, 703 N.E.2d 883 (1998); DuPage Forklift, 195 Ill. 2d 71, 744 N.E.2d 845. Following plaintiffs' reasoning, there could be no preclusive effect from Terra I unless all the directors of the Board reached a unanimous decision to enter into the consent judgment. Of course, had there been a unanimous decision, there would be no Terra II. This circular reasoning is not the law in Illinois nor was a unanimous decision required by the Foundation's bylaws.

B. Res Judicata And Collateral Estoppel Apply Notwithstanding That There Were No Express Findings Of Fact In Terra I.

Plaintiffs also argue that the preclusive effect of res judicata and collateral estoppel is not applicable because Judge Kinnaird made no findings of fact in Terra I. Plaintiffs miss the point. Defendants have never contended that Judge Kinnaird made express findings of fact; however, as noted above, the mere entry of the consent judgment over plaintiffs' objections was a ruling and resolution of plaintiffs' claims and the issues raised in Terra II. Moreover, the consent judgment eliminates the need for findings of fact because, by its very nature, the consent judgment is a settlement of a controversy that did not necessitate fact findings.

Plaintiffs cite no authority to support their contention that the absence of express findings of fact prevents the application of res judicata or collateral estoppel to the present circumstances. Moreover, although plaintiffs argue that there were no express findings, plaintiffs totally disregard the clear rulings of the court in Terra I that the consent judgment was not "antithetical to the Foundation's purposes" or that despite the allegations of a conflict of interest, Stebbins and Marshall "could properly participate in this decision . . ." See Exhibit F to defendants' motion, pp. 127-28, 133-34. Accordingly, the court expressly rejected plaintiffs' claims without entering specific fact findings.

C. Discovery On The Objections To The Consent Judgment Was Not Required.

Plaintiffs argue that Terra I should not have a preclusive effect because plaintiffs were denied the opportunity to conduct discovery on their objections to the consent judgment. Notably, plaintiffs' request for discovery was made after the consent judgment was reached in mediation and approved by the Board. Plaintiffs have failed to offer any authority to support the proposition that such discovery was required, especially when plaintiffs were participants in the long-standing mediation. Plaintiffs' suggestion that they were denied an "evidentiary opportunity" in Terra I is undermined by the undisputed fact that the Court in Terra I considered voluminous exhibits and documents presented by plaintiffs in support of their objections to the consent judgment, as well as lengthy arguments (over 5 hours) on the objections.

Plaintiffs' reliance on Sprecher v. Graber, 716 F.2d 968 (2nd Cir. 1983), is unavailing. In Sprecher, the court held that collateral estoppel would not apply to certain claims alleging individual and official misconduct by the SEC. Sprecher, 716 F.2d 968, 972. The SEC argued that collateral estoppel barred plaintiffs' claims of official misconduct against the SEC because another court enforced the subpoena in enforcement proceedings. Id. at 972. The court held that collateral estoppel did not apply because subpoena enforcement proceedings are summary proceedings without discovery and so long as the SEC complied with statutory prerequisites, a party opposing a subpoena has a "heavy burden" to prove that the subpoena is based on an invalid purpose. Id. Thus, in light of the substantial disparate opportunities for discovery and different burdens in the proceedings, collateral estoppel was not permitted. Id.

Sprecher has limited applicability here because the SEC's subpoena, investigation, and enforcement powers are part of a statutory framework. Here, there was no governing statutory procedure. In fact, despite holding that collateral estoppel did not apply to certain claims in Sprecher, the court held that collateral estoppel barred other claims because the plaintiff had a full opportunity to litigate the merits of those claims in the enforcement proceeding. Id. at 973. The court held that so long as there was a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue, collateral estoppel applied. Id.

Sprecher does not limit this Court's ability to apply collateral estoppel or res judicata to plaintiffs' claims. As recognized in Sprecher, so long as plaintiffs had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issues in Terra I, collateral estoppel bars the relitigation here. The court in Terra I considered voluminous documents in exhibits that allegedly supported plaintiffs' objections to the consent judgment. Accordingly, the lack of discovery in Terra I does not preclude the applicability of collateral estoppel.

D. The Issues Of Terra II Are Identical To Those Resolved In Terra I.

Plaintiffs, in conclusory fashion, suggest that collateral estoppel does not apply because "the issues presented here are not identical to any consideration by Judge Kinnaird." Plaintiffs make no effort to dispute the clear identity of the issues set forth in detail in defendants' motion and memorandum in support thereof. As set forth in the motion, Judge Kinnaird expressly found that the consent judgment was not "antithetical to the Foundation's purposes," that the Foundation was "going to be able to pretty much operate the way it has," and that it would "be able to conduct its mission of providing education in and throughout the world . . ." Id., pp.127-28. Thus, contrary to plaintiffs' argument, the court in Terra I expressly found that the consent judgment was consistent with the director's fiduciary duties and the Foundation's purpose.

Indeed, plaintiffs' argument that a different burden of proof applied in Terra I than is applicable in Terra II only serves to illustrate that the identical issues presented in Terra II were resolved in Terra I. Plaintiffs essentially admit that the causes of action and the issues are identical, but that plaintiffs should be given a "second bite of the apple" under a different burden of proof. Plaintiffs are unable to provide this Court with any authority to support such a proposition.[2]

[2] Instead, plaintiffs mistakenly rely on U.S. Aluminum Corp. v. Alumax, Inc., 831 F.2d 878 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 822 (1988), which involved different causes of action in different proceedings, one proceeding involved federal law and the other, state law. U.S. Aluminum is readily distinguishable because here, plaintiffs are simply relitigating the same claims and issues resolved in Terra I, by a court of concurrent jurisdiction to this Court.

E. Application Of Collateral Estoppel Or Res Judicata Is Not Inequitable.

Finally, plaintiffs argue that it would be inequitable for this Court to apply res judicata or collateral estoppel. This argument must be rejected. Plaintiffs make much of the fact that the Court in Terra I told plaintiffs that it was not barring them from bringing another action. Yet, the Court never directed or authorized — nor could it — plaintiffs' refiling of identical claims and relitigating the same issues. Moreover, application of res judicata and collateral estoppel would not be inequitable because plaintiffs are currently pursuing a review of the consent judgment in the Appellate Court. Plaintiffs are not entitled to review in two forums. Thus, for this additional reason, this Court should dismiss counts I, IV and V pursuant to res judicata and collateral estoppel.

III. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT DISPUTE THAT COUNT I FAILS TO STATE A CLAIM FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF.

Plaintiffs fail to address in any way that the claim for declaratory relief in count I fails to satisfy section 2-701 of the Code of Civil Procedure. As set forth in defendants' motion, section 2-701 provides that "[t]he court shall refuse to enter a declaratory judgment or order if it appears that the judgment or order, would not terminate the controversy or some part thereof, giving rise to the proceeding." 735 ILCS 5/2-701. Dismissal of claims for declaratory judgments is appropriate when the relief sought would lead to "impermissible piecemeal litigation." Marlow v. American Suzuki Corp., 222 Ill. App. 3d 722, 584 N.E.2d (1st Dist. 1994); Schlossberg v. E.L. Trendall and Associates, Inc., 63 Ill. App. 3d 939, 942, 380 N.E.2d 950 (1st Dist. 1978). Moreover, dismissal of a declaratory judgment will avoid piece-mail litigation in situations where, as here, the claim is essentially a collateral attack on another action. See Tait v.

Sangamon County, 138 Ill. App. 3d 169, 485 N.E.2d 558, 560 (4th Dist. 1985); see also Coles-Moultrie Electric Co-op v. City of Charleston, 8 Ill. App. 3d 441, 289 N.E.2d 481 (4th Dist. 1972).

In count I, plaintiffs seek a declaration that the consent judgment and order is invalid.[3] Invalidation of the consent judgment and order would not only be a collateral attack on Terra I, but it would also lead to additional litigation in Terra I, as well as impact the proceedings before the Appellate Court. For this reason, count I should be dismissed.

IV. COUNT IV SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615.

Plaintiffs' response to defendants' motion to dismiss count IV, which purports to state a claim against defendants for alleged ultra vires acts, consists of conclusory statements that the claims are "sufficiently specific" and "properly state claims." Such conclusory allegations, relying on solely the allegations of the amended complaint that defendants challenge as defective, are insufficient. As set forth below, plaintiffs have failed to specifically address defendants' arguments.

Plaintiffs fail to respond to the argument that plaintiffs have not alleged the necessary elements for injunctive relief. The relief sought in count IV is for this Court to issue an injunction to "enjoin the doing of such acts." Plaintiffs do not attempt to allege any clearly ascertainable right or inadequate remedy at law. Moreover, by claiming damages, plaintiffs [3] As discussed in defendants' motion and memorandum, by seeking to invalidate the consent judgment, plaintiffs are, in essence, seeking to rescind the consent judgment without alleging any of the required elements of rescission or without seeking relief pursuant to section 2-1401 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure. Plaintiffs fail to dispute defendants' argument and, for this additional reason, count I should be dismissed.

totally undermine the ability to allege that there is no adequate legal remedy. Accordingly, for this reason, count IV should be dismissed.

In addition, plaintiffs do not address that the requested injunction to "enjoin such acts" is impermissibly vague. Illinois law requires that injunctions be specific and as "definite, clear and precise as possible." Hartlett v. Dahm, 94 Ill. App. 3d 1, 5, 418 N.E.2d 44, 47 (2nd Dist. 1981). For this additional reason, count IV should be dismissed.

Moreover, plaintiffs completely ignore defendants' argument that they have failed to allege sufficient facts to support a claim for punitive damages. Under Illinois law, to be entitled to punitive damages, one must allege outrageous conduct, acts perpetrated by evil motive or with reckless indifference to the rights of others. Guice v. Sentinel Tech., Inc., 294 Ill. App. 3d 97, 689 N.E.2d 355, 365 (1st Dist. 1997). Plaintiffs do not refute that such factual allegations are lacking and count IV should be dismissed.

Finally, plaintiffs fail to address the fact that they are unable to state a claim that the Board's approval of the consent judgment was ultra vires because Stebbins and Marshall had an alleged conflict of interest. Conflicts of interest are governed by section 108.60 of the Not for Profit Act that provides that a director has a conflict of interest if he is directly or indirectly a party to a disputed transaction. 805 ILCS 105/108.60. Plaintiffs' response fails to address the applicability of section 108.60. Plaintiffs' sole response is that as directors, they have a right to pursue ultra vires claims. Notwithstanding such rights, plaintiffs must still allege facts sufficient to show that an ultra vires act did occur. Here, since the ultra vires act is based on a conflict of interest, plaintiffs must allege facts that show a violation of section 108.60. Plaintiffs' failure to do so requires dismissal of count IV.

V. COUNT IV SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-619(a)(9).

The consent judgment itself bars plaintiffs' claim that the Board's approval of the consent judgment was an ultra vires act. In fact, plaintiffs' submission of the letter from Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood ("Sidley letter"), submitted to the mediator in Terra I in preparation for the mediation, and attached as an exhibit to plaintiffs' response, further supports that the consent judgment was not an ultra vires act. As stated in the Sidley letter, Illinois law provides that an ultra vires act is one that is expressly prohibited and beyond the powers of the corporation. Sherrard State Bank v. Vernon, 243 Ill. App.122 (2nd Dist. 1926). Moreover, as noted in the Sidley letter, the powers and limitations of a corporation are found in its articles of incorporation, its bylaws, and in applicable constitutional and statutory provisions. Stroh v. Blackhawk Holding Corp., 48 Ill. 2d 471, 475 (1971). As the bylaws and the articles of incorporation illustrate (though plaintiffs fail to attach these documents to the amended complaint), the Foundation is not expressly prohibited from entering into an agreement that provides that the Terra Collection of Art shall be maintained and exhibited in Chicago or in partnership with another institution in the Chicago area for 50 years. Plaintiffs fail to direct this Court to any express prohibition provided in the bylaws or articles. Moreover, the consent judgment does not limit the Foundation's ability to exhibit its collection in Giverny and for other programs and scholarly use outside of Chicago, as noted by the court in Terra I. Clearly, Judge Kinnaird reached the same conclusion in approving the consent judgment. Accordingly, the terms of the consent judgment bar plaintiffs' claim that it is ultra vires.

VI. COUNT V SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-615.

Despite plaintiffs' conclusory statements that they have adequately alleged a breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiffs do not address the clear requirements of Illinois law that provide that in the absence of allegations of fraud, illegality, or conflict of interest, decisions made by corporate directors are protected by the business judgment rule, and may only be attacked by factual allegations that show a lack of due care in the making of those decisions. Stamp v. Touche Ross & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 636 N.E.2d 616 (1st Dist. 1993). Plaintiffs have not alleged any fraud, illegality or conflict of interest on the part of defendants, Buntrock, Daley, Gidwitz and Hartman. There are no facts that establish that the business judgment rule should not apply or that defendants' approval of the consent judgment was the result of lack of due care. Id.[4] For these reasons, plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, and count V should be dismissed.

VII. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT DISPUTE THAT THEIR CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES IN COUNTS IV AND V MUST BE STRICKEN.

Plaintiffs make no effort to address defendants' contention that they have not alleged facts that support their claim for individual damages. It is undisputed that defendants owe a fiduciary duty to the Foundation, not plaintiffs. Thus, plaintiffs' claim for individual damages, in the absence of any facts or authority to support such claims, must be stricken.

---

[4] Plaintiffs' entire claim for breach of fiduciary duty lacks any specific factual allegations against any director, as evidenced by the fact that defendants purport to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty against all directors.

VIII. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT DISPUTE THAT THIS COURT SHOULD DISMISS COUNTS I, IV AND V PURSUANT TO SECTION 2-606.

Finally, plaintiffs do not address that their failure to attach the consent judgment, the Foundation's articles, or the Foundation's bylaws to the amended complaint violates section 2-606. The amended complaint is entirely premised on these documents. Section 2-606 requires that when a claim is founded on a written instrument, such instrument must be attached to the pleading or cited therein. See 735 ILCS 5/2-606. Failure to comply with section 2-606 is grounds for dismissal. Plocar v. Dunkin Donuts of America, 103 Ill. App. 3d 740, 431 N.E.2d 1175 (1st Dist. 1981). For this additional reason, dismissal of counts I, IV and V is appropriate.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for all the foregoing reasons, defendants Dean Buntrock, Margaret Daley, Ronald Gidwitz and Arthur Hartman, respectfully request that this Court strike and dismiss counts I, IV and V of the amended complaint and enter any other relief that this Court deems fair and just.

Respectfully submitted,

DEAN BUNTROCK, MARGARET DALEY,
RONALD GIDWITZ, and ARTHUR HARTMAN,

Dear Judge Nowicki:

Enclosed please find a courtesy copy of the Section 2-619.1 Motion to Strike and Dismiss Counts I, IV, and V of the Amended Complaint and Memorandum of Law in Support Thereof filed on January 4, 2002 on behalf of defendants Dean Buntrock, Ronald Gidwitz, Margaret Daley, and Arthur Hartman in the above-referenced matter. Pursuant to the briefing schedule set by this Court, this motion is scheduled for hearing on February 13, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

All counsel of record have received a copy of the documents enclosed herein.

Very truly yours,

William R. Quinlan

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS
COUNTY DEPARTMENT, CHANCERY DIVISION

PAUL HAYES TUCKER, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al.,	)
Plaintiffs,	)
v.	)	No. 01 L 009112
DEAN BUNTROCK, a Director of the Terra Foundation for the Arts, et al.,	)	Judge Julia M. Nowicki
Defendants.	)	Transferred from Law Division

THE TERRA FOUNDATION'S REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE TO STAY, COUNTS I, II, AND IV OF PLAINTIFFS' AMENDED COMPLAINT

In its opening brief, defendant Terra Foundation for the Arts (the "Foundation") demonstrated that Counts I, II, and IV of the Amended Complaint ("Complaint") filed by Directors Tucker, Terra and Simpson ("plaintiffs" or "dissenting directors") should be dismissed on three independent grounds: (1) that those counts involve the "same parties" and "same cause" as the pending appeal of Buntrock I and therefore should be dismissed under 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(3) (Opening Br. at 18-19); (2) that those counts are barred under the doctrines of both res judicata and collateral estoppel, and therefore should be dismissed under 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4) (Id. at 10-18); and (3) that those counts fail to allege facts sufficient to state valid causes of action against the Foundation and therefore should be dismissed pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 (Id. at 18-25). Plaintiffs' response brief does not meet the substance of the Foundation's three arguments for dismissal. Instead, plaintiffs rest on conclusory assertions unsupported by argument or pertinent authority, omit critical facts, and avoid several of the Foundation's arguments entirely.

I. Counts I, II and IV Should Be Dismissed or Stayed in Light of the Dissenting Directors' Pending Appeal of Buntrock I.

In their response brief, plaintiffs do not address the Foundation's contention that Counts I, II and IV should be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3) because the issues raised in those counts are the subject of their pending appeal of Buntrock I. (Opening Br. at 18-19[1].) In fact, plaintiffs do not mention anywhere in their response brief that they are appealing Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. (See Exh. V, Notice of Appeal.) Plaintiffs ignore this fact for good reason: they cannot plausibly deny that their appeal of Buntrock I constitutes "another action pending between the same parties for the same cause" and therefore should be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3). This is so for three reasons.

First, plaintiff simply cannot reasonably contest that they are parties to an appeal they filed. (Exh. V at 1-2.)

Second, there is no question that the Buntrock I appeal and Counts I, II and IV in this litigation involve the "same cause." Two "causes" are the same for purposes of Section 2-619(a)(3) if they "arise out of the same transaction or occurrence," or, put another way, "where relief is requested on substantially the same set of facts." See Terracom Develop. Group v. Village of Westhaven, 209 Ill. App. 3d 758, 762. Here, Tucker, Terra and Simpson state in their Notice of Appeal that they will:

16di-004936

> . . . ask the Appellate Court to vacate the [Consent Judgment and Order] of July 26, 2001. In the alternative, they will ask the Court to vacate the order and remand this cause of a new hearing, or will seek such other relief as that that Court shall deem just and proper.

(Exh. V, at 2.) Necessarily, in the Appellate Court, plaintiffs will rely on the same objections they raised in front of Judge Kinnaird:

- Directors Marshall and Stebbins breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation by participating in the vote on the settlement despite supposed conflicts of interest (Opening Br. at 7, 13-14; Exh. O at 15-18; Exh. T at 133-34);
- The settlement was the product of the Attorney General's unlawful interference (Opening Br. at 7, 14-15; Exh. O at 10-13, 22-23; Exh. T at 126-27, 130); and
- The directors who supported the settlement breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation because, in plaintiffs' opinion, the settlement was incompatible with the Foundation's purposes or ultra vires (Opening Br. at 7, 15-16; Exh. O at 18-22, 24-25; Ex. T at 127-28.)

Likewise, in this action, Counts I, II and IV ask this Court to review and to vacate the July 26, 2001 Consent Judgment and Order based on those same objections. Accordingly, this case and the Buntrock I appeal constitute the "same cause" under Section 2-619(a)(3).

Third, dismissal of Counts I, II and IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3) is proper because it furthers that section's purpose of promoting judicial economy. See, e.g., Illinois Central Gulf R.R. v. Goad, 168 Ill. App. 3d 541, 544 (4th Dist. 1988). Specifically, plaintiffs' appeal of Buntrock I has only three possible outcomes: (1) an affirmance of Judge Kinnaird's decision to enter the Consent Judgment and Order over the dissenting directors' objections; (2) a complete reversal of Judge Kinnaird's decision; or (3) a remand with instructions to allow the dissenting directors discovery and an evidentiary hearing on their objections. Thus, once the Appellate Court renders its decision, whatever it is, there will no longer be any basis or need to litigate the validity of the Consent Judgment and Order in this lawsuit and to do so now would be a waste of limited judicial resources. Moreover, it is for the Appellate Court – not a different Judge of the same Court – to determine if Judge Kinnaird erred in entering the Consent Judgment and Order over the dissenting directors' objections. Accordingly, to further Section 2-619(a)(3)'s purpose of fostering orderly procedure by avoiding a multiplicity of actions, Counts I, II and IV should be dismissed.

II. Counts I, II and IV Are Barred By the Doctrine of Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel (735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4)).

In their response brief, plaintiffs advance six "arguments" in support of their contention that Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order over their objections should not bar them from relitigating those objections in this proceeding. For the reasons set forth fully below, each of plaintiffs' "arguments" is meritless and should be rejected.

A. Plaintiffs Were Parties in Buntrock I.

Plaintiffs' assert that they were not parties in Buntrock I for purpose of res judicata/collateral estoppel analysis. However, plaintiffs were named defendants in Buntrock I and were granted an opportunity to present objections to the Consent Judgment and Order. Indeed, several hundred pages in briefing documents (including legal memoranda, exhibits, and case law) were submitted to Judge Kinnaird in anticipation of the July 24th hearing on the dissenting directors objections – a hearing which lasted five hours. (See Opening Br. at 7-8.)

Moreover, plaintiffs have appealed Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order over their objections. (Exh. V.) This appeal is conclusive proof (1) that plaintiffs were parties in Buntrock I and (2) that Judge Kinnaird ruled on their objections to the Consent Judgment and Order. Indeed, if plaintiffs were not parties to Buntrock I or if Judge Kinnaird did not issue a ruling on those objections as plaintiffs contend, there would be nothing for them to appeal.

B. Judge Kinnaird Rejected Each of the Dissenting Directors' Objections on the Record and Entered the Consent Judgment Over Those Objections.

Plaintiffs' next argue that Judge Kinnaird's ruling has no preclusive effect merely because she elected not to put written "findings of fact" in the Consent Judgment and Order. In fact, plaintiffs go as far as to say that it is "impossible to know" how Judge Kinnaird ruled on their objections. (Response Br. at 8.) However, as set forth in detail in the Foundation's opening brief (pages 13-16), Judge Kinnaird clearly made the following rulings with respect to the dissenting directors' objection on the record:

- Directors Stebbins and Marshall did not suffer from a conflict of interest and properly took part in the Board vote on the proposed settlement (Exh. T at 133-34).
- Assistant Attorney General Perkins did not coerce Directors Stebbins and Marshall into supporting the settlement or otherwise act unlawfully (Exh. T at 126-27, 130).
- The settlement was not "antithetical to the Foundation's purpose" or ultra vires (Exh. T at 127-28).

These clear rulings preclude plaintiffs from relitigating the validity of the Consent Judgment here regardless of Judge Kinnaird's decision not to include written findings of fact in the Consent Judgment and Order.

Moreover, res judicata and collateral estoppel apply not only findings of fact, but also questions of law. See Du Page Forklift Serv., Inc. v. Material Handling Servs., 195 Ill. 2d 71, 78 (2001). Accordingly, even if Judge Kinnaird's rulings on the record do not technically constitute "findings of fact," res judicata and collateral estoppel nonetheless bar Counts I, II and IV because Judge Kinnaird – at a minimum – made a legal determination that plaintiffs' objections were insufficient to prevent the entry of the Consent Judgment and Order. Indeed, given the plaintiffs' are appealing Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order over their objections, they cannot plausibly contend that she made no determination of fact or law with respect to their objections. Otherwise, plaintiffs would have nothing to appeal.

C. Plaintiffs Had Ample Opportunity to Raise Their Objections to the Consent Judgment and Order in Buntrock I.

Plaintiffs' assert that they did not have a full opportunity to litigate their objections in Buntrock I because Judge Kinnaird did not allow discovery or conduct a full-blown evidentiary hearing. Contrary to plaintiffs' assertions, "the full and fair opportunity to litigate" element of the collateral estoppel doctrine does not require a full-blown evidentiary hearing. Indeed, "actually litigated" does not mean "thoroughly litigated," but only that the parties "disputed the issue and the trier of fact resolved it." Taylor v. Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., 275 Ill. App. 3d 655, 663 (1st Dist. 1995).[2]

Here, it cannot be disputed that the parties vigorously disputed the validity of the Consent Judgment and Order in Buntrock I and that the Court resolved that dispute by entering that Order over the dissenting directors' objections. In fact, as set forth in detail in the Foundation's opening brief (pages 4-8), the dissenting directors had ample opportunity to present their objections on several occasions during Buntrock I, including in their June 29 motion for a temporary restraining order (Exh. G, H), at the July 2, 2001

[2] Plaintiffs' reliance on Fred Olson Motor Service v. Container Corp. of Am., 81 Ill. App. 3d 825, 830 (1st Dist. 1980) and Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 332, 331 n.15 (1979) is misplaced as both these cases involved the stricter standard applied to "offensive collateral estoppel" whereas this case involves the more liberal standards applied to res judicata and "defensive" collateral estoppel. Moreover, the Fred Olson case clearly states that a party had a full opportunity to litigate an issue so long as it had "a procedural, substantive or evidentiary opportunity to be heard." Here, there is no doubt that the dissenting directors had an opportunity to be heard in Buntrock I.

hearing before Judge Kinnnaird (Exh. M), in their written objections which were submitted along with 35 exhibits of supporting evidence including several affidavits (Exh. O), in their reply brief in support of their objections (Exh. P), and at the five hour hearing before Judge Kinnaird on July 24, 2001 (Exhs. S and T). In light of the foregoing, there can be no dispute that plaintiffs had ample opportunity to litigate their objections in Buntrock I.[3]

D. The Claims and Issues Raised By Counts I, II and IV Are The Same Claims and Issues That Were Before Judge Kinnaird.

Plaintiffs next assert that Counts I, II and IV of their Amended Complaint are not barred by res judicata and collateral estoppel because "the issues here are different than those before Judge Kinnaird." (Response Br. at 10.) Plaintiffs' assertion is wrong for at least two reasons.

First, plaintiffs address only the narrower "identity of issues" standard applicable to collateral estoppel and completely ignore the liberal "transactional" test used by Illinois courts to determine if a subsequent lawsuit is based on the "same claim" for res judicata purposes. In Illinois, "separate claims will be considered the same cause of action for purposes of res judicata if they arise from a single group of operative facts, regardless of whether they assert different theories of relief." River Park v. City of Highland, 184 Ill. 2d 290, 302 (1998). Moreover, the "same claim" includes "not only those contentions that were offered and rejected in the first proceeding, but includes any other contentions that might have been raised in the first proceeding." See LaHood v.

[3] Moreover, plaintiffs continue to litigate those objections in their appeal of Buntrock I. If the plaintiffs are entitled to any further process (i.e., an evidentiary hearing or discovery), the Appellate Court will remand the case to Judge Kinnaird for further proceedings. If the Appellate Court affirms Judge Kinnaird's entry of the Consent Judgment and Order, then plaintiffs have received all the process to which they are entitled. Either way, there is no need to re-litigate the validity of the Consent Judgment and Order in this proceeding.

Couri, 236 Ill. App. 3d 641, 645 (3rd Dist. 1992) (emphasis added.) Here, Counts I, II and IV of their Amended Complaint are based on the same "group of operative facts" which formed the basis of the objections they presented in Buntrock I. Accordingly, for purposes of res judicata, those counts assert the same claims that were raised and rejected by Judge Kinnaird in Buntrock I, including the issue of director breaches of fiduciary duty.

Second, even if the narrower collateral estoppel standard is applied, it is clear that the issues raised by Counts I, II and IV are identical to those raised by Tucker, Terra and Simpson in Buntrock I. Indeed, nowhere in their response brief do plaintiffs dispute that those Counts are based on the conflict of interest, unlawful interference and ultra vires contentions they raised in Buntrock I.[4] Instead, plaintiffs only assert that that they did not raise their "breach of fiduciary claim" before Judge Kinnaird. (Response Br. at 10.) This assertion is false. In their written "objections" to the proposed settlement filed before Judge Kinnaird on July 19, 2001, plaintiffs asserted (1) that Directors Stebbins and Marshall breached their fiduciary duty by voting on the proposed settlement when they had a personal interest in the outcome in the vote (Exh. O at 14-18); and (2) that "the proposed settlement requires the abandonment of fiduciary obligations to beneficiaries to honor corporate purpose and prevent waste" (Exh. O at 18-22). Moreover, plaintiffs argued that "[t]he Court cannot approve this Proposed Settlement . . . without countenancing an obvious breach of fiduciary duty owed to the Foundation's beneficiaries by its Board members." (Id. at 2.) Accordingly, as demonstrated by [4] The Foundation's opening brief sets forth in detail – complete with record citations -- how each of these issues were raised and resolved in Buntrock I. (Opening Br. at 7-8, 13-16.)

plaintiffs' own filings in Buntrock I, there can be no doubt that Counts I, II and IV raise the identical issues litigated in Buntrock I.

E. Count II Is Barred By Res Judicata Because Plaintiffs' Could Have Brought their Objections to The Election of the New Directors in Buntrock I; or in the Alternative, It Should Have Been Brought as an Action To Enforce the Consent Judgment and Order Before Judge Kinnaird.

Plaintiffs next assert that their claim that the five new directors (Donnelley, Field, Foster, Hamada and Krehbiel) were not properly elected to the Foundation's Board did not arise until after entry of the Consent Judgment and Order and thus cannot be barred by res judicata. Plaintiffs are wrong for at least two reasons.

First, plaintiffs' contention that the addition of the new directors is contrary to the Foundation's bylaws is barred by res judicata because whatever that objection is – plaintiffs have failed to explain how the election of the new directors violated the by-laws in either their Amended Complaint or their response brief – it either was or could have been raised as part of their objections to the proposed settlement in Buntrock I. Indeed, plaintiffs cannot dispute that the new directors were elected as part of the Board's approval of the proposed settlement on June 29, 2001 (Exh. U ¶ 9), well before plaintiffs filed their written objections to the proposed settlement on July 19.

Second, plaintiffs' assertion that the addition of the new directors was not "in compliance with the Consent Judgment and Order" (Am. Cmplt. ¶ 103(a)) is not properly brought before this Court because Judge Kinnaird expressly retained jurisdiction over the parties for purposes of enforcing the Order. (Exh. U ¶ 13.) Thus, plaintiffs' remedy is not the initiation of a new lawsuit, but rather an action asking Judge Kinnaird to enforce the terms of that order.

16di-004943

F. Justice, Equity and Judicial Efficiency Will Be Served By Application of Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel in This Case.

Plaintiffs' final argument against the application of res judicata and collateral estoppel as a bar to Counts I, II and IV is that the applications of those doctrine in this matter would be "inequitable." This is wrong for at least two reasons.

First, contrary to plaintiffs' contentions, this is not a case where plaintiffs were denied an opportunity to raise their objections in the original forum. Indeed, as discussed in detail above, plaintiffs had ample opportunity to raise their objections to the proposed settlement before Judge Kinnaird and are now appealing their loss. (See supra at 7-8.) If anything, it would unjust to require the Foundation and the other litigants to re-litigate the validity of the Consent Judgment and Order here, not to mention a waste of limited judicial resources.

Second, plaintiff's argument that it would be unjust to apply the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel because the other litigants in Buntrock I "directed" them to proceed in another forum is baseless. Nobody "directed" the plaintiffs to file another lawsuit in lieu of pressing their objections in Buntrock I. The statements made by former counsel for the Foundation do not prove otherwise. Rather, those statements simply reflect the reality that the plaintiffs opposed the underlying settlement and that plaintiffs were free to press whatever legal rights they might have in a different forum. In no way do the statements pointed to by plaintiffs constitute an admission that plaintiffs had viable legal claims to bring or that plaintiffs were not barred from re-litigating certain contentions raised before Judge Kinnaird. Moreover, even if such a "directive" was given, plaintiffs disregarded it and proceeded with their objections before Judge Kinnaird (see supra at 7-8) thereby precluding them from relitigating those matter here.[5]

III. Counts I, II and IV Fail To State Viable Causes of Action (735 ILCS 5/2-615).

In their response brief, plaintiffs make the conclusory assertion that the Counts I, II and IV fail to state viable claims upon which relief can be granted, but do not support those assertions with argument or pertinent authority that responds to the substance of the Foundation's arguments. As argued in the Foundation's opening brief, Counts I, II and IV fail to allege viable causes of action for a variety of reasons:

- Counts I and II fail to allege sufficient facts to establish that Directors Marshall and Stebbins suffered from a conflict of interest within the meaning of the Illinois General Not For Profit Act, 805 ILCS 105/108.60. Indeed, plaintiffs fail to allege any facts demonstrating that Marshall or Stebbins were directly or indirectly a party to the proposed settlement within the meaning of the Act. (Opening Br. at 20-21.)

- Count I fails to allege facts sufficient to set aside the Consent Judgment and Order based on coercion or unlawful interference by the Attorney General because its fails to allege that the Assistant Attorney General Perkins engaged in any unlawful conduct. (Opening Br. at 21-23.)

- Counts I and IV fail to allege sufficient facts to establish that the Foundation's settlement of Buntrock I was ultra vires. Indeed, in both their Amended Complaint and response brief, plaintiffs do not – and indeed cannot -- point to any particular provision of the Foundation's Articles of Incorporation or By-Laws that expressly prohibits the Foundation from agreeing to the terms of the Consent Judgment and Order. (Opening Br. at 23-25.)

---

[5] Plaintiffs reliance on Benton v. Smith, 157 Ill. App. 3d 847 (1st Dist. 1987) is misplaced. In Benton, defendants deliberately led plaintiff – a pro se litigant living in public housing – to file her claim in a certain forum and then attempted to argue that she was precluded from proceeding in the forum they directed her to. Moreover, if the Benton court precluded the plaintiff from proceeding in that forum, plaintiff would be left without any forum to bring her claims. Here, unlike Benton, plaintiffs did not forego raising their claims before Kinnaird but argued their objections to the Consent Judgment and Order vigorously in Buntrock I and continue to do so on appeal. Plaintiffs had their day in Court and may have another before the Appellate Court. Moreover, unlike the pro se plaintiff in Benton, plaintiffs have been represented throughout these proceedings by a total of six law firms, including a former Judge of this Court, former counsel to President Nixon and a former Assistant United States Attorney and Iran-Contra prosecutor.

IV. Count V Should Be Dismissed As To the Foundation.

In their response brief, plaintiffs assert that Count V of the Amended Complaint states a cause of action for breach of fiduciary not only against certain of the Foundation's directors but also against the Foundation itself. (Response Br. at 5.) However, nowhere in plaintiffs' Complaint do they allege that the Foundation owed a fiduciary duty to anyone or that it breached such a duty. In fact, Count V contains no allegations against the Foundation, but rather contains allegations aimed only at the defendant directors (Stebbins, Marshall, Buntrock, Gidwitz, Hartman and Daley). (Am. Cmplt. ¶¶ 111-115.) Indeed, the gravamen of Count V is the allegation that all defendant directors breached their fiduciary duties to the Foundation and that the Foundation "suffered injury" as a result of those alleged breaches. (Id.) Accordingly, because Count V does not even purport to state a breach of fiduciary duty claim against the Foundation, much less allege sufficient facts to state such a claim, that count should be dismissed as to the Foundation.

V. The Court Should Disregard the Terra Declaration and Accompanying Materials As They Have No Bearing on the Foundation's Motion To Dismiss Counts I, II and IV.

Finally, plaintiffs attempt to counter the Foundation's motion to dismiss by attaching to their response brief the "Verified Declaration of Judith F. Terra" and two attachments: (1) a document that purports to be the handwritten notes of the late Daniel J. Terra, and (2) a letter drafted by Sidley & Austin on the Foundation's behalf and submitted to the mediator during settlement negotiations in Buntrock I. The Court should disregard these documents as they have no relevance whatsoever to the Foundation's Motion to Dismiss Counts I, II and IV of the Amended Complaint.

First, the Terra declaration and accompanying documents are irrelevant to the Foundation's motion to dismiss Counts I, II and IV pursuant to Sections 2-619(a)(3) (pending appeal) and 2-619(a)(4) (res judicata/collateral estoppel). Indeed, the Terra declaration and accompanying documents do not address the question of whether the claims and issues raised in Buntrock I and the pending appeal are the same as those raised in this lawsuit.

Second, "it is well established that evidentiary matters outside the pleadings may not be considered in ruling on a section 2-615 motion." Carroll v. Faust, 311 Ill. App. 3d 679, 683-84 (2nd Dist. 2000). Thus, this Court should not consider the Terra declaration and accompanying materials in ruling on the Foundation's Section 2-615 Motion to Dismiss Counts I, II and IV and instead should look only to the allegations in the Amended Complaint. Moreover, Counts I, II and IV do not even purport to seek relief based on Daniel Terra's intent (Am. Cmplt. at pp. 31, 32, 34); accordingly, even if this Court did consider the Terra declaration and accompanying materials at this juncture (and it should not), those materials are irrelevant to the relief sought in the counts that are subject of the Foundation's motion to dismiss.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons and those stated in the Foundation's opening brief, this Court should dismiss Counts I, II and IV of plaintiffs' Amended Complaint with prejudice, thereby dismissing the Foundation as a party to this litigation and allowing it to return to the business of art, as opposed to the business of litigation.

WINSTON & STRAWN'S REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS

Defendant Winston & Strawn replies to the Memorandum of Plaintiffs Paul Hayes Tucker ("Tucker"), Judith Terra ("Terra"), and Alan Simpson ("Simpson") ("Pltfs Mem.") opposing its Motion To Dismiss the First Amended Complaint ("Complaint"), and Memorandum in Support thereof ("Mem.").

Overview of the Reply

Plaintiffs spend less than one-half page on its claim for declaratory relief against Winston &

Strawn, and for good reason. Plaintiffs' claim under Count III of the Complaint is devoid of legal and factual merit.

I. PLAINTIFFS FAIL TO ADDRESS NUMEROUS ARGUMENTS OF WINSTON & STRAWN, AND THEREBY CONCEDE THEM AND A LACK OF LIABILITY OF THE FIRM.

In their one-half page argument, Plaintiffs assert that: (1) Plaintiffs' allegations are "straightforward"; (2) Winston & Strawn "continues to engage in concurrent, adverse representation of the [Terra] Foundation and at least one of the directors"; (3) the absence of an appearance by Winston & Strawn on behalf of another defendant "does not end this dispute"; and (4) Winston & Strawn is "hopelessly conflicted." Plaintiffs' assertions are all conclusory and all lack factual and legal merit. (Pltfs Mem., at 12) Accordingly, Winston & Strawn's motion to dismiss under 735 ILCS 5/2-615 should be granted.

To best understand the failings of Plaintiff's Memorandum, a review of the points to which Plaintiffs failed to respond is appropriate. Specifically, Plaintiff's failed to address the arguments of Winston & Strawn that:

- Courts frown upon disqualifying counsel as a litigation ploy (Mem., at 5-6);
- The dissenting directors have no standing to sue Winston & Strawn (Mem., at 7);
- The dissenting directors fail to state a claim against Winston & Strawn with the requisite specificity (Mem., at 7- 9); and
- The dissenting directors' claim for declaratory relief is non-justiciable (Mem., at 8-10).

The total failure of Plaintiffs to refute these arguments or the cases cited by Winston & Strawn demonstrates the lack of merit of Plaintiffs' claims.

Even assuming, arguendo, Plaintiffs' allegations are "straightforward," Plaintiffs have not pleaded sufficient facts, much less demonstrated a legal basis, to make a claim against Winston & Strawn. No matter how many times Plaintiffs assert that a conflict exists, they cannot meet the pleading requirements of Illinois law to demonstrate the existence of such a purported conflict, much less establish that they have standing to bring such an action against Winston & Strawn. There simply is no claim or justiciable issue here against Winston & Strawn. Plaintiffs' failure to cite even a single case against Winston & Straw also speaks volumes about the absence of any claim against the firm.

In short, as other courts have done, this Court should frown upon Plaintiffs' litigation ploy of seeking to disqualify the Terra Foundation's general counsel by suing it, even though the firm has not appeared in court to represent any named party (except itself) on a material issue. Accordingly, this Court should dismiss this action against Winston & Strawn.

II. CONCLUSION

Wherefore, for the reasons stated herein, Winston & Strawn prays that this Court grant its motion to dismiss under 735 ILCS 5/2-615 and grant such other relief as deemed appropriate.[1/]

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S MOTION TO DISMISS, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE FOR A STAY

This reply memorandum is submitted by Director defendants Dr. Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr. ("Dr. Stebbins") and Dr. Stephanie Pace Marshall ("Dr. Marshall") in further support of their Motion to Dismiss the claims asserted against them in the First Amended Complaint (hereafter "Complaint"), or in the Alternative to Stay the Proceedings.

I. INTRODUCTION

In Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's opening memorandum, we showed that the claims asserted by plaintiffs against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall personally must be dismissed for several reasons. First, and most importantly, as a matter of irrefutable law, plaintiffs have no standing under either the Illinois General Not for Profit Corporation Act of 1986, 805 ILCS 105/101.01, et seq. (hereafter "the Act"), or under the common law to bring an action on their own behalf against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Indeed, as we showed, an essential element of standing, i.e., that a plaintiff must have suffered distinct and palpable injury to himself or herself, is entirely absent from any allegation in the Complaint. It is, therefore, not surprising that plaintiffs failed in their opposing memorandum to cite to any language in the Act which could provide them with standing. Nor did plaintiffs attempt to distinguish, or even mention, the dispositive case law on standing cited in our opening memorandum.

Standing is a threshold, gatekeeper issue. Without standing, the doors to the Court are simply not open to these plaintiffs, at least in respect to their claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Accordingly, the Court can, and we respectfully suggest the Court must, dismiss plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall without further analysis.

However, should the Court proceed further, and review the adequacy of plaintiffs' allegations against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, we showed in our opening memorandum that those claims must be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-615 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure for several, independent reasons. First, as we explained, plaintiffs' failure to allege facts which show any actual injury and damage to themselves is doubly fatal to their claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, because it deprives plaintiffs not only of standing, but also of an essential element of each of their claims. In addition, plaintiffs have failed to set forth any well pleaded facts, as distinguished from bald conclusions, which would support any claim for relief against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall personally.

Still further, we showed that pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3), plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall must be dismissed because a prior action, the Buntrock proceeding, remains pending before the Illinois Appellate Court. Plaintiffs were unable to refute this argument. We relied primarily upon, and incorporated on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall, the arguments on this issue made by the Foundation and the other defendants. To avoid duplication, we continue to do so.

We also showed in our opening memorandum that plaintiffs' claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are barred by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(4). We highlighted certain dispositive rulings by the two other courts that previously dealt with plaintiffs' claims in our opening memorandum. Plaintiffs have failed to refute them. Once again, to eliminate unnecessary duplication, we incorporated by reference and asserted on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall all of the arguments and authorities on these points set forth by the Foundation and the other defendants, and we do so again here.

Finally, we explained in our opening memorandum that if any aspect of the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should somehow survive their Motion to Dismiss, the Court should stay the proceedings in this case and await the outcome in the Illinois Appellate Court of the appeal filed by these plaintiffs in the previously filed Buntrock litigation. Plaintiffs failed even to address this issue in their opposing memorandum. It stands unrefuted.

II. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFFS HAVE NO STANDING TO ASSERT THEIR CLAIMS PERSONALLY AGAINST DR. STEBBINS AND DR. MARSHALL.

In our opening memorandum, we showed that the Act provides no standing to plaintiffs to sue Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall personally. Section 103.15, on which plaintiffs purport to rely (see Plfs. Mem., p. 4), specifically and unambiguously permits a director to bring an action only "against the corporation." Section 105/103.15(a)(emphasis added). We also cited dispositive Illinois case law on this subject, Brown Leasing, Inc. v. Stone, 284 Ill. App. 3d 1035, 1047, 673 N.E.2d 430, 438 (1st Dist. 1996). In Brown, a plaintiff sued a bank's directors under the Illinois Business Corporation Act of 1993, claiming that he had standing under Section 805 ILCS 5/3.20 of that Act because that section provided for liability of "all persons who assumed to exercise corporate powers without authority to do so." That very same language appears in Section 105/103.20 of the Not For Profit Act. The Court in Brown held that this language did not provide standing to sue a director unless the alleged absence of authority to act occurred because the defendant's action occurred either "before incorporation or after a corporation was dissolved." Id. at 1047, 673 N.E.2d at 438. Other jurisdictions with similar statutes are entirely in agreement that standing to assert personal liability against directors is available only in the circumstance where the director acts on behalf of a non-existent corporation. Id. Plaintiffs do not, and cannot, allege that the conduct of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall (or any other Foundation director) occurred at a time when the Foundation was non-existent. Significantly, plaintiffs do not even mention, much less respond to, our discussion of Brown Leasing.[1]

Plaintiffs' only response to Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's showing that plaintiffs have no standing under the Act is to state the conclusion (presumably with their eyes closed) that "[t]he plain language of the [Act] upholds the right to sue both the Foundation and its directors." Plfs. Mem., p. 3 However, plaintiffs' do not quote one statutory word, plain or otherwise, which purports to provide them with standing to sue Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall personally. Plaintiffs conclude that the Act "explicitly contemplates actions against charitable foundations and their directors" (Plfs. Mem., p. 4), but they do not cite to one word which supports this purported "contemplation." Plaintiffs admit that they are proceeding in this action under Section 103.15 of the Act, but that section permits actions only to enjoin "a foundation," not the Foundation's directors.[2] As we showed in our opening memorandum, only the corporation, acting either (1) directly on its own, or (2) derivatively through a receiver or other legal representative, may sue directors personally on a claim of lack of authority. See 805 ILCS 105/103.15(b). The Foundation has brought no such action and plaintiffs have not brought this action derivatively. Moreover, as we have shown, no claim based on lack of authority may be brought against directors personally by anyone under the Act unless the claim is based on the non-existence of the corporation.

[1] Plaintiffs cite two out-of-state decisions at page 14 of their memorandum in purported support of their standing to bring their Section 1983 claim in Count VII against the Illinois Attorney General. However, plaintiffs concede that Count VII is not asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. See Pltfs. Mem., p. 5. Furthermore, those cases deal primarily with the right to bring an action derivatively, and in any event, they do not purport to interpret the Illinois Act, which is dispositive of this case.

Plaintiffs also failed to refute Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's showing that plaintiffs have no standing to assert their claims against them under traditional standing analysis. Under well-settled common law, a plaintiff must allege facts showing that the plaintiff suffered a distinct and palpable injury to himself or herself. However, the Complaint is devoid of any factual allegations that plaintiffs have suffered a distinct and palpable injury to themselves. See Stebbins and Marshall Mem., pp. 7-8, 15. In their opposing memorandum, plaintiffs do not contest, or even respond to, this showing. It stands unrefuted.

Instead, plaintiffs merely assert the empty rhetoric that Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's standing arguments "are difficult to take seriously." Plfs. Mem., p. 4. Citing In re Cassiday, 892 F.2d 637, 641-42 (7th Cir. 1990), a case which bears no resemblance to this one, plaintiffs claim that the assertion they do not have standing is inconsistent with a previously taken position in Buntrock and, therefore, represents a "perversion of the judicial process." Id.

[2] Plaintiffs argue in their footnote 6 that the Act sets forth "the liability of directors in certain cases" (Plf. Mem., p. 4), but they cite no provision which makes the claims in this case one of those "certain cases." To the contrary, the sections to which plaintiffs refer, Section 105/108.65 (directors who cause unauthorized distributions shall be jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the amount of such distribution), Section 105/108.60 (describing, according to plaintiffs, "the circumstances of a director's conflict of interest and apportion[ing] the burdens of proof in proceedings testing the validity of a corporate transaction"), Section 105/108.70 (providing for limited liability of directors when they serve without compensation) and Sections 105/103.10(p) and 105/108.75 (permitting not-for-profit corporations to indemnify directors), have nothing to do with any claim asserted by plaintiffs in their Complaint, nor do they purport to provide standing to plaintiffs to bring any claims against their fellow directors.

However, plaintiffs failed to disclose to this Court that the motions to dismiss filed in the Buntrock case were never decided, because that case was instead referred to mediation, and thereafter settled, before the Court had to reach the then-pending motions. Revealingly, plaintiffs cite no decisions, from Buntrock or any other case, which provide them with any support on the issue of standing. Furthermore, no claims were filed against Dr. Stebbins or Dr. Marshall in the Buntrock case. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall have always, consistently argued that the director plaintiffs in this case have no standing to sue them personally. As we have shown, the law permits no other conclusion.

In sum, plaintiffs are utterly, irrefutably without standing to pursue their claims personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Respectfully, the Court need go no further to dismiss those claims.

III. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO ALLEGE SUFFICIENT FACTS TO STATE ANY CLAIM AGAINST THEM.

In our opening memorandum, we showed that plaintiffs' claims are also fatally defective pursuant to Section 2-615 for several reasons. They remain unrefuted.

A. Plaintiffs Concede that Counts III, VI and VII Must Be Dismissed as Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall.

As we explained, the Complaint is not sufficiently clear to permit an understanding as which Counts are being asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. In response, plaintiffs state that only Counts I, II, IV and V "are directed against the Foundation and the directors." Plfs. Mem., p. 5. Accordingly, plaintiffs concede that Counts III, VI and VII are not asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. To the extent that plaintiffs' imprecise use of the word "defendants" in these claims could permit a contrary conclusion, this ambiguity has now been removed. The Court's dismissal order should so reflect this clarification.

B. Counts I and II Seek No Relief Against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall and Must Be Dismissed As Against Them.

The above concession by plaintiffs did not remove the ambiguity in the Complaint insofar as Counts I and II are concerned. As we explained in our opening memorandum, Counts I and II seek solely declaratory and injunctive relief against the Foundation. No relief is sought or needed against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall in these claims, because any order by the Court which would enjoin the conduct of the Foundation would also bind the Foundation's directors. Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall should not be required to defend themselves personally against claims in which they are not proper or necessary parties. See Stebbins and Marshall Mem., p. 9. Plaintiffs failed to contest, or even address, this showing. It stands unrefuted.

Moreover, Counts I and II must also fail because, as we have shown previously and further discuss below, Counts IV and V, for ultra vires conduct and purported breach of fiduciary duty on which Counts I and II are predicated, fail. Dismissal of Counts IV and V requires, a fortiori, dismissal of Counts I and II as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Accordingly, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall are entitled to dismissal of Counts I and II as against them.

C. Plaintiffs Failed to Refute Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Showing that Count IV, For Purported Ultra Vires Conduct, Fails to State a Claim Against Them.

In our opening memorandum, we showed that the ultra vires claim asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall is deficient for several reasons. First, no such action against fellow directors is authorized or permitted under the Act or the common law. In other words, and as we have shown, there is no standing for these plaintiffs to bring this claim personally against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Plaintiffs failed even to address this showing. It stands unrefuted.

Second, plaintiffs did not state sufficient facts to support their ultra vires claim against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. The sum total of the ultra vires allegations asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall is that they voted to approve the proposed Consent Judgment and Order that was intended to put an end to the bitter Buntrock litigation. There is no viable basis for asserting that their vote was ultra vires. Indeed, as we explained, Judge Bucklo already held that these plaintiffs have failed to "explain, either with authority or with logic, how the directors can be charged with violating the plaintiffs' rights even under compulsion if they do what they had a lawful right to do in any event," i.e., vote. Terra v. Perkins, 151 F. Supp. 2d 931, 937 (N.D. Ill. 2001). In their opposing memorandum, plaintiffs failed even to respond to this showing.[3]

We also explained that plaintiffs failed in the Complaint to cite to any Foundation by-law or other rule which would prohibit Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall from voting to approve a Consent Judgment which provides that the Foundation, which has always been located in Illinois, would remain in Illinois for the next fifty years. In response, plaintiffs do not contend that we overlooked some by-law or other rule. Instead, plaintiffs merely assert the conclusion that a vote to keep the Foundation in Chicago was contrary to the intent of the Foundation's founder, Daniel Terra, just before he died in 1996. However, this allegation, even if true, does not state a basis for an ultra vires claim. This is because plaintiffs do not, and cannot, cite facts that would support the contention that Daniel Terra had the unilateral right to decide where the Foundation and Museum would be located, or that he could have overruled the decision of the other ten members of the Board as to where the Foundation should be located. Plaintiffs could never show that such a fictional power existed, survived Daniel Terra's death, and required the [3] Plaintiffs' citation to Sawko v. Dominion Plaza One Condominium Association, 218 Ill. App. 3d 521, 578 N.E.2d 621 (2d Dist. 1991), is entirely inapt. In Sawko, no directors were even named as defendants.

Foundation's directors to vote as Daniel Terra would have voted (if indeed his intent under these current circumstances could be divined), and that the failure of the Board to comply with this hypothetical is ultra vires conduct. The mere statement of these absurd propositions is to refute them. Yet this is what plaintiffs would have to show to sustain their ultra vires claim. Accordingly, the ultra vires claim fails as a matter of law as against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. It must be dismissed.[4]

D. Plaintiffs Failed to Refute Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Showing that Count V, for Breach of Fiduciary Duty, Fails to State a Claim Against Them.

In our opening memorandum, we showed that plaintiffs' purported breach of fiduciary duty allegations fail to state a claim against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall for several additional reasons. First, an essential requirement of a claim for breach of fiduciary duty is that the plaintiff must demonstrate that the defendant owed a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff. In this case, plaintiffs have not alleged, nor can they truthfully allege, that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall owed fiduciary duties to them. To the contrary, Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall owed fiduciary duties to the Foundation. Only the Foundation could bring a claim for breach of those duties, and it has not done so. Plaintiffs failed even to respond to this argument. It stands unrefuted.

[4] We note that plaintiffs have attached to their opposing memorandum some handwritten notes purportedly prepared by Daniel Terra. As an initial matter, these materials are not competent to be considered in opposition to Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Section 2-615 Motion to Dismiss, for the notes are extraneous to the Complaint. Nevertheless, because motions to dismiss are pending pursuant to both Sections 2-615 and 2-619, we understand that the Court may consider these notes for some purpose. What is most instructive about these notes is that they conclusively refute plaintiffs ultra vires claim. This is because they show that even Daniel Terra understood he did not have the unilateral authority to move the Foundation. According to the notes, Daniel Terra headed a committee that was studying the issue and "recommends" the closing of the Museum in Chicago. Daniel Terra planned to "call for a vote and discussion" concerning the "options for a new location" for the Foundation's collection. In other words, even Daniel Terra understood that the ultimate decision was for the Board to make. In fact, these notes demonstrate why no set of facts could ever be proved which would permit a finding that the Board's ultimate vote to retain the collection in Illinois for fifty years was ultra vires.

We also showed that plaintiffs failed to allege they were personally injured or damaged in any way. This failure not only deprives them of standing, but it is also a fatal defect in their allegations of breach of fiduciary duty, for injury and damage are essential elements of that claim. See Stebbins and Marshall Mem., pp. 7-8, 15. Plaintiffs do not contest, or even make reference to, this showing.

In addition, we showed that plaintiffs failed in the Complaint to allege facts which demonstrate that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall breached any fiduciary duty. Plaintiffs' entire claim is that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall voted to approve the Consent Judgment and Order. However, plaintiffs pleaded no facts which demonstrate that the act of voting was, or could be, a breach of fiduciary duty. Moreover, plaintiffs have an even higher pleading burden, because Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's conduct is protected by the Business Judgment Rule. Stebbins and Marshall Mem., pp. 15-16. Plaintiffs failed to respond to this argument as well. It stands unrefuted.

We also showed that the Act permits a transaction in which a director has a direct or indirect interest to be ratified by a vote of the disinterested directors, and that that is exactly what occurred here. Id., pp. 16-17. This further underscored plaintiffs' failure to plead adequate facts to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Plaintiffs ignored this argument, too. It stands unrefuted.

In purported response, plaintiffs ignore the irrefutable law and the absence of factual allegations. Instead, they assert the false platitude that the Complaint reasonably informs the Court and the defendants "about the claims asserted against them." Plfs. Mem., p. 5. According to plaintiffs, the Complaint "describe[s] the history and mission of the Foundation and how certain directors, government officials and others have acted to pervert that mission" and "spells out the debilitating conflicts of interests that have burdened certain directors. . . ." However, these are conclusions, not well-pleaded facts, and they do not support a claim for breach of fiduciary duty. The "history and mission" of the Foundation does not provide a basis for claiming that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall breached their fiduciary duties by voting to approve a proposed settlement of pending litigation against the Foundation. Moreover, the only purported conflict which plaintiffs have asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall is that the Illinois Attorney General threatened to undertake certain proceedings against them. This does not describe a breach of fiduciary duty by Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. To the contrary, plaintiffs' "facts" show nothing more than that Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall voted on a proposal that was properly put to a vote before the Foundation's entire Board. This does not state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty by Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. The claim must be dismissed as against them.

IV. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO STATE A CLAIM FOR PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

We showed in our opening memorandum that plaintiffs failed to allege any facts whatsoever which would support a claim for punitive damages against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall. Indeed, plaintiffs have gone far beyond the bounds of zealous advocacy by making such a claim. Stebbins and Marshall Mem., pp. 17-18. Plaintiffs failed to address this showing in their opposing memorandum. It stands unrefuted.

V. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT THE CLAIMS AGAINST THEM MUST BE DISMISSED BECAUSE OF THE PRIOR PENDING ACTION.

In our opening memorandum, we showed that the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall also must be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(3), because of the existence of the prior action before Judge Kinnaird, i.e., the Buntrock case, which is now pending in the Illinois Appellate Court. Once again, plaintiffs ignore this argument. It, too, stands unrefuted.[5]

VI. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT THE CLAIMS AGAINST THEM MUST BE DISMISSED BASED ON THE DOCTRINES OF RES JUDICATA AND COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

We showed in our opening memorandum that the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall must also be dismissed pursuant to Section 2-619(a)(4), because they are barred by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. As we explained, all of the issues and claims asserted by plaintiffs in the Complaint were dealt with, and decided against them, by Judge Kinnaird in the Buntrock case. To avoid duplication, we adopted and asserted on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall the arguments set forth in the Motions to Dismiss and supporting memoranda of the Foundation and the other directors in connection with these issues. We do so again herein and similarly adopt and incorporate the arguments on these issues made by the Foundation and the other defendants in their reply memoranda being filed contemporaneously herewith. However, before proceeding on, we point out an additional, fatal, inconsistency on this subject in plaintiffs' opposing memorandum.

Plaintiffs claim in their opposing memorandum that they were not parties to the Consent Judgment and Order, and that they were not permitted to file counterclaims in the case before Judge Kinnaird. As a result, conclude plaintiffs, the issues raised in their current Complaint could not have been decided against them. However, plaintiffs own litigation conduct reveals that this analysis must be wrong. As plaintiffs concede, they appealed all aspects of [5] In our opening memorandum, to avoid duplication, we relied on and incorporated on behalf of Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall the arguments on this subject made by the Foundation and the other defendants in their Motions to Dismiss and supporting memoranda. We similarly adopt and incorporate herein the arguments and authorities set forth in the reply memoranda of the Foundation and the other director defendants that are being filed contemporaneously herewith.

Judge Kinnaird's decision in Buntrock, pursuant to which Judge Kinnaird approved and entered the Consent Judgment and Order. This includes Judge Kinnaird's overruling of their objections to the Consent Judgment, which were based on the same purported breach of fiduciary duty and ultra vires conduct that are at the center of their Complaint in this Court, and Judge Kinnaird's denial of their request for leave to file a counterclaim. In other words, plaintiffs have already conceded that these issues have been decided against them, for they have appealed them to the Illinois Appellate Court. Accordingly, they are judicially estopped from arguing to the contrary in this case.

VII. PLAINTIFFS FAILED TO REFUTE DR. STEBBINS' AND DR. MARSHALL'S SHOWING THAT THE COURT SHOULD STAY THIS CASE IF ANY CLAIMS AGAINST THEM SURVIVE THIS MOTION TO DISMISS.

We showed in our opening memorandum that if any of the claims against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall survive their Motion to Dismiss, the Court should stay all proceedings in this case pending a resolution by the Illinois Appellate Court of the appeal filed by these very same plaintiffs in the Buntrock litigation. This would be the only sensible way to proceed, for plaintiffs are impermissibly asking this Court to act as a collateral, lateral Court of Appeals. They are asking this Court to reverse the rulings made by Judge Kinnaird. Such a request is not only improper, but entirely unnecessary. If the Appellate Court affirms Judge Kinnaird's rulings, this case is moot. If the Appellate Court reverses, the case before Judge Kinnaird will be reinstated and will proceed on these same issues. To permit this case to proceed while the appeal in Buntrock is pending would cause enormous waste of assets and unnecessary duplication of effort. It would also create a substantial risk that two courts will issue conflicting rulings.

Plaintiffs failed to respond to this showing. Once again, it stands unrefuted.

VIII. CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons set forth in Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Motion to Dismiss and opening memorandum, and for the reasons set forth in the memoranda and reply memoranda filed by the Foundation and the other defendants in support of their respective motions to dismiss, the Court should grant Dr. Stebbins' and Dr. Marshall's Motion to Dismiss all of plaintiffs' claims asserted against them, with prejudice. In the alternative, any claim asserted against Dr. Stebbins and Dr. Marshall which survives their Motion to Dismiss should be stayed pending resolution of the Buntrock case on appeal.

SIDLEY AUSTIN BROWN & WOOD'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS THE FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT AS AGAINST IT

Plaintiffs' failure to respond in any meaningful way to Sidley Austin Brown & Wood's ("Sidley") Motion to Dismiss is a clear admission that they have not stated, and cannot state, any viable claim against Sidley. Plaintiffs have not offered this Court a single reason why their unsubstantiated, baseless complaint against Sidley should not be dismissed with prejudice.

In their 15-page response to the Motions to Dismiss filed by the various Defendants, Plaintiffs spend a mere one paragraph jointly addressing the Motions to Dismiss separately filed by Sidley and Winston & Strawn. (See Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 12). In that short paragraph, Plaintiffs do not cite a single case or any other authority to support their claim against Sidley seeking a declaration that "Sidley & Austin is, and has been, tainted by conflicts of interest . . . and that, as a result . . . Sidley & Austin [is] disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." (First Am. Complaint, pp. 33-34). Plaintiffs do not attempt to distinguish any of the cases cited by Sidley in support of its Motion to Dismiss. Plaintiffs do not attempt to counter or even acknowledge the arguments advanced in support of Sidley's motion. Such failure is a clear admission by Plaintiffs of the obvious defects in their complaint and reason enough for this Court to grant Sidley's Motion to Dismiss.

I. PLAINTIFFS FAIL TO STATE A COGNIZABLE CAUSE OF ACTION.

Plaintiffs totally ignore the case law which makes clear that Plaintiffs' claim against Sidley for a supposed "conflict of interest" does not state a cognizable cause of action. (See Sidley's Motion to Dismiss, pp. 4-6). In the similar case of Hannan v. Watt, the Illinois Appellate Court affirmed the dismissal of the very same type of claim that the Plaintiffs are attempting to bring here. The Hannan Court held that a violation of the ethical rules "do[es] not by [its] own terms, create independent rights of action," and dismissed the plaintiffs' complaint as being "nothing more than an action to disqualify [opposing counsel]." 147 Ill. App. 3d 456, 461, 497 N.E.2d 1307, 1310 (1st Dist. 1986). Plaintiffs' attempt to sue Sidley for an alleged conflict of interest is exactly what the plaintiffs attempted to do in Hannan and is exactly the type of cause of action that was specifically rejected by the Appellate Court. See id. Plaintiffs' failure to distinguish the Hannan case which is both squarely on-point and binding is an obvious admission that they have no claim.

II. PLAINTIFFS FAIL TO PLEAD SUFFICIENT SPECIFIC FACTS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION.

Rather than attempting to defend their patently inadequate allegations, Plaintiffs' "Response" simply restates the meaningless and conclusory assertion that:

> "Sidley has already been accused by two defendant directors of breaching its responsibilities to the Foundation throughout the Buntrock litigation. These defendant directors even submitted an expert affidavit that concludes that Sidley is unable to provide independent professional advice as a result of its conflicts."

(Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 12; see First Am. Complaint, ¶ 89 (emphasis added)). As demonstrated in Sidley's initial motion, this is not the type of specific factual allegation required to properly state a claim under Illinois law. See Martin v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 109 Ill. App. 3d 596, 608, 440 N.E.2d 998, 1007 (1st Dist. 1982). The legal sufficiency of a complaint requires more than "mere conclusions." Id. Whether other directors in a different lawsuit "accused" Sidley of suffering from an unfounded conflict of interest in no way sets forth any specific facts establishing that Sidley has a conflict of interest in this case. Moreover, Plaintiffs have absolutely nothing to say about the fact, as pointed out in Sidley's motion, that the "accusations" in the Buntrock litigation that Sidley suffered from a "conflict of interest" as well as the purported "expert affidavit," were repeatedly found by both Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court to be without any merit whatsoever. (See J. Kinnaird's 9/25/00, 10/20/00, and 1/2/01 Orders; 1/19/01 and 2/16/01 Appellate Court Orders).[1]

III. THE UNCONTROVERTED CASE LAW ESTABLISHES THAT PLAINTIFFS' CLAIM IS MOOT.

Plaintiffs make only one statement in their "Response" that suggests that they might have actually read Sidley's Motion to Dismiss. Specifically, Plaintiffs assert, "That neither Winston nor Sidley has entered an appearance (other than for themselves) in this litigation does not end this dispute." (Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 12). This appears to be an attempt to deal with the fact that their action for declaratory judgment is moot. (See Sidley's Motion to Dismiss, pp. 11-13). Plaintiffs fail to offer a single reason why their "claim" is not moot or to cite a single case in support of their position. Their suggestion that they may properly seek a declaratory judgment that "Sidley & Austin [is] disqualified from any further representation of the Foundation or its directors in this litigation" (First Am. Complaint, pp. 33-34), despite the fact that Sidley does not represent the Foundation or any of its directors in this litigation flies directly in the face of the well established requirements to obtain a declaratory judgment. See AG Farms, Inc. v. American Premier Underwriters, Inc., 296 Ill. App. 3d 684, 689, 695 N.E.2d 882, 887 (4th Dist. 1998).

In order to state a cause of action for declaratory relief, a plaintiff must establish that an "actual controversy" exists. Id. The "ripeness" doctrine prevents courts "from entangling

[1] Additionally, Plaintiffs have obviously failed to allege any facts to establish that they personally even have standing to bring any claim against Sidley. See Blanchard v. Edgemark Financial Corp., 1998 WL 988958, p. 21 (N.D. Ill.); Renard v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 126 Ill. App. 3d 563, 567, 467 N.E.2d 1090, 1094 (1st Dist. 1984) ("Absent a complaint by the affected client, a party has no status to object to the representation of an adverse party by an attorney of his choice."). Plaintiffs are, at best, minority shareholders of a private, not-for-profit corporation and have not established, and could not establish, any right to bring any claim arising out of any supposed breach of "responsibilities to the Foundation."

themselves in abstract disagreements." Village of Maywood Bd. of Fire and Police Comm'rs v. Dep't. of Human Rights, 296 Ill. App. 3d 570, 575, 695 N.E.2d 873, 877 (1st Dist. 1998). Plaintiffs' complaint against Sidley is nothing but an "abstract disagreement." As Plaintiffs are well aware and even admit (see Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 12), Sidley does not represent any party in this lawsuit, yet Plaintiffs insist on seeking a declaration from this Court that Sidley "is disqualified from [representing] the Foundation or its directors in this litigation." The issuance of any such judgment could be nothing but an improper advisory opinion based upon a dispute and a set of facts that simply do not exist. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' claim against Sidley must also be dismissed as moot.[2]

IV. PLAINTIFFS DO NOT DENY THAT COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL PRECLUDES THEIR PURPORTED CLAIM AGAINST SIDLEY.

Plaintiffs additionally fail to address the fact that collateral estoppel precludes them from bringing their purported claim against Sidley. (See Sidley's Motion to Dismiss, pp. 10-11). Plaintiffs spend a considerable amount of time responding to the Defendant Directors' arguments that Plaintiffs are collaterally estopped from relitigating the validity of the Consent Judgment entered in the Buntrock case. Those collateral estoppel arguments are, however, separate and apart from the collateral estoppel effect of Judge Kinnaird's earlier Orders addressing the wholly different issue of Sidley's alleged conflict of interest. As Plaintiffs

---

[2] In footnote 18 of their response, Plaintiffs wishfully claim that because Sidley withdrew from representing the Foundation in this case, "Sidley tacitly admitted its conflicted status." (Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 12, n. 18). Sidley did no such thing and there is no basis whatsoever for Plaintiffs' statement. Rather than be drawn into a protracted side-show of lengthy discovery, motions and hearings attendant to the kind of baseless claims of conflicts of interest that plagued the Buntrock litigation, for purely economic reasons the Terra Foundation simply chose to employ different counsel to represent it in this case in order to allow this matter to be resolved on its merits as swiftly as possible. (See Terra Foundation for the Arts' Response to Plaintiffs' Motion to Conduct Limited Expedited Discovery, pp. 2-3, filed on 10/30/01).

themselves admit, collateral estoppel "precludes litigation of issues that were actually decided." (Plaintiffs' Consolidated Response, p. 6). Plaintiffs do not dispute that they were all parties to the Buntrock case where the claims of Sidley's alleged "conflict of interest" and inability to continue to represent the Foundation were fully litigated, actually decided and rejected by Judge Kinnaird and the Appellate Court on at least six occasions. (See J. Kinnaird's 9/25/00, 10/20/00, and 1/2/01 Orders; 1/19/01 and 2/16/01 Appellate Court Orders). Plaintiffs also do not quarrel with the conclusion that they are therefore collaterally estopped from wasting this Court's time and resources in an attempt to re-litigate that issue yet again in this Court. As such, Plaintiffs' complaint cannot withstand a motion to dismiss pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(4).

Conclusion

Sidley Austin Brown & Wood respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order dismissing the First Amended Complaint against it with prejudice pursuant to 735 ILCS 5/2-615 and 5/2-619(a)(4), and grant such other relief that this Court deems appropriate.

STATE DEFENDANTS' REPLY MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS

The Defendants, James Ryan, Attorney General of the State of Illinois and Floyd Perkins, Assistant Attorney General, submit the following reply memorandum in support of their motion to dismiss and state as follows:

I. PLAINTIFFS LACK STANDING UNDER ILLINOIS LAW

In the State Defendants motion to dismiss the State Defendants raised the issue of standing, by stating that the individual Plaintiffs do not claim that their own property rights or contract rights were damaged. (State Defendant's Mem. of law p. 15). The Plaintiffs do not appear to disagree with this contention but have responded by stating that they have brought this action as a derivative action, asserting claims on behalf of the Corporation. Plaintiffs response fails in several respects. Nowhere in the complaint does it state that it is being brought as a derivative action nor is the caption of the complaint styled as a derivative action. However assuming arguendo that the court reads into the complaint that this is indeed a derivative action under Illinois law the case must be dismissed. The derivative form of action permits an individual shareholder to bring "suit to enforce a corporate cause of action against officers, directors, and third parties." Ross v. Bernhard, 396 U.S. 531, 534 (1970). Devised as a suit in equity[1], the purpose of the derivative action was to place in the hands of the individual shareholder a means to protect the interests of the corporation from the misfeasance and malfeasance of "faithless directors and managers." Cohen v. Beneficial Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 548 (1949). To prevent abuse of this remedy, however, equity courts established as a "precondition for the suit" that the shareholder demonstrate that "the corporation itself had refused to proceed after suitable demand, unless excused by extraordinary conditions." Ross v. Bernhard,396 U.S. at 534. Under Illinois law, "[a] complaint in a proceeding brought in the right of a corporation must allege with particularity the demand made, if any, to obtain action by the directors and either why the complainant could not obtain the action or why he or she did not make the demand. . . ." 805 Ill. Comp. Stat. 5/7.80(b); see also Schnitzer v. O'Connor, 274 Ill. App. 3d 314 (1st. Dist. 1995). Having failed to plead in their complaint that a demand was made on the Board of Directors or why a demand was not made, the complaint against Attorney General Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Perkins must be dismissed.

II. PLAINTIFFS HAVE FAILED TO ADDRESS AND OVERCOME ALL OF DEFENDANTS' IMMUNITY DEFENSES

In their motion to dismiss the Defendants Ryan and Perkins (State Defendants) raised the defenses of public official immunity, sovereign immunity, absolute prosecutorial immunity, and qualified immunity. Each immunity is a separate and absolute defense to the Plaintiffs' complaint, any of which would terminate (with prejudice) the State Defendants from this law suit.

a. Qualified Immunity

Plaintiffs only response to the defense of qualified immunity is to state that "[q]ualified immunity is unavailable because Defendants could not have reasonably thought that their actions were consistent with the rights that they are alleged to have violated." (Pl. reply p. 13). In order to overcome a defense of qualified immunity, the plaintiff must establish that the defendants' acts violated the plaintiff's clearly established rights of which a reasonable official would have known. Harlow v Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982); see also Lawshe v Simpson, 16 F.3d 1475, 1483 (7th Cir 1994) (plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that law was clearly established at time defendant acted). The Harlow standard is specifically designed to "avoid excessive disruption of government and permit the resolution of many insubstantial claims on summary judgment." The plaintiffs may not simply assert that the right of freedom of speech (Comp. ¶ 96), restraint of interstate commerce (Comp. ¶ 97), impairment of contract (Comp. ¶ 98) is clearly established. "If the test of 'clearly established law' were to be applied at this level of generality, it would bear no relationship to the 'objective legal reasonableness' that is the touchstone of Harlow." Anderson v Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639 (1987). Rather, to satisfy the test of Harlow, the plaintiff must point to closely analogous cases demonstrating that the right allegedly violated was clearly established. Moreover, one case recognizing the right in question does not render the law "clearly established" for the purposes of Harlow (unless the case is binding). See Kikimura v Turner, 28 F.3d 592, 596 (7th Cir 1994), cert. denied, 131 L. Ed. 2d 198, 115 S. Ct 1317 (1995). Alternatively, the plaintiff may attempt to argue that the defendant's conduct was so patently violative of the constitutional right in question that a reasonable official would be aware of the violation without guidance from the courts. Lawshe, 16 F.3d at 1483. Plaintiffs have done neither.

In Burns v. Reed, 44 F.3d 524 (7th Cir. 1994), the plaintiff sued a state prosecutor who authorized plaintiff's interrogation while she was under hypnosis and later advised police officers that they had probable cause to arrest her. The charges were later dropped. In seeking to demonstrate that hypnosis violated her constitutional rights, plaintiff offered a range of case law that proscribes in no uncertain terms the extraction of coerced confessions as a constitutional violation. The Seventh Circuit even agreed with the plaintiff that psychological as well as physical pressure can overbear a suspect's will such that a resulting statement violates due process. However in dismissing the case based on the doctrine of qualified immunity the court held "Plaintiff thus would need to cite more specific precedent than the basic line of coercion cases to persuade this Court that the United States Constitution clearly proscribed hypnosis of a suspect at the time of her interrogation." Burns 44 F. 3d at 528.

In the case at bar the plaintiffs have failed to cite any precedent or case law clearly establishing the proposition that initiating an investigation which is fully authorized by law pursuant to 760 ILCS 55/9[2], is violative of the rights of the Terra Foundation. This statute gives

[2]§ 760 ILCS 55/9. [Investigations by Attorney General]
The Attorney General may investigate transactions and relationships of trustees subject to this Act for the purpose of determining whether the property held for charitable purposes is properly administered. He may require any agent, trustee, fiduciary, beneficiary, institution, association, or corporation, or other person to appear, at a named time and place, in the county designated by the Attorney General, where the person resides or is found, to give information under oath and to produce books, memoranda, papers, documents of title and evidence of assets, liability, receipts, or disbursements in the possession or control of the person ordered to appear.

the attorney general broad authority to determine if property that is being held for charitable purposes is being properly administered. Unlike the initiation of charges which can be the subject of a malicious prosecution action, the Plaintiffs have failed to cite one case where the initiation of an investigation that is clearly authorized and required by statute was found to be a violation of any civil right. Accordingly, the State Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity.

b. Absolute Prosecutorial Immunity

Plaintiffs are incorrect when they state in their response that absolute immunity only applies to members of quasi- judicial adjudicatory bodies. (Response P. 13). Plaintiff's response totally ignores the line of cases cited in the State Defendants' motion to dismiss[3]. The State defendants therefore stand on their initial motion to dismiss and supporting memorandum. Accordingly, Attorney General James Ryan and Assistant Attorney General Floyd Perkins are entitled to are entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity.

c. Sovereign Immunity

The Court of Claims Act provides that the Court of Claims shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine all claims against the State for damages in cases sounding in tort. 705 ILCS 505/8.

The determination of whether an action is in fact against the State, and therefore one that must be brought in the Court of Claims, "turns upon an analysis of the issues involved and the relief sought, rather than the formal designation of the parties. Currie v. Lao, 148 Ill. 2d 151, 158

[3] Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 U.S. 409 (1976). Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478 (1978) and People v. Patrick J. Gorman Consultants, 111 Ill App. 3d 729 (1st Dist 1982).

(1992), citing Healy v. Vaupel, 133 111. 2d 295, 308 (1990). Simply naming an employee or servant of the State of Illinois as a defendant will not bypass the doctrine of sovereign immunity when the State of Illinois is the party vitally interested. Healy, 133 Ill.2d at 308.

Illinois case law has established three criteria to determine whether an action is really against the State:

> "(1) no allegations that an agent or employee of the State acted beyond the scope of his authority through wrongful acts; (2) the duty alleged to have been breached was not owed to the public generally independent of the fact of State employment; and (3) where the complained of actions involve matters ordinarily within that employee's normal and official functions of the State."

Robb v. Sutton, 147 Ill. App. 3d 710, 716 (4th Dist. 1986) see also Healy, 133 Ill. 2d at 309. Where all the above criteria are met, the doctrine of sovereign immunity will apply as if the action had been brought against the State directly. Id. With respect to the first criteria, the plaintiff has not shown that the defendants acted beyond the scope of his authority. Moreover Illinois law grants the attorney general the unique responsibility to investigate transactions and relationships of trustees subject to the Charitable Trust Act for the purpose of determining whether the property held for charitable purposes is properly administered[4]. Further even if he had, an employee's violation of policy, regulation or even statute does not necessarily avert the application of sovereign immunity. See Campbell v. White, 207 111. App. 3d 541, 552 (4th Dist. 1991) (A state trooper allegedly violated a statute and a regulation while answering an emergency call, and the court found that he was within the scope of his authority because he did not act for a purpose unrelated to his employment). Second, unlike cases involving physicians or operators of motor vehicles upon a public highway[5], there was no duty owed to the Plaintiffs outside of the State Defendant's employment. Madden v. Kuehn, 56 Ill App. 3d 997, 1001 (2nd Dist. 1978), Bartholomew v. Crockett, 131 Ill. App. 3d 456, 462-63 (1st. Dist. 1985) see generally Healy, 133 Ill.2d at 312-13.

[4] Plaintiff has not alleged that any individual so investigated was not subject to the Charitable Trust Act. Accordingly, Defendants could not have acted beyond the scope of their authority.

In this case, the Attorney General's and his assistant's duty to investigate transactions and relationships of trustees exists by virtue of statutory authority granted to the Attorney General. Moreover, Assistant Attorney General Perkins was expressly charged with investigating transactions and relationships to trustees and involved actions taken within Mr. Perkins normal and official functions.

As the State Defendants are being sued for actions taken in their capacity as government lawyers, and for actions uniquely related to their state employment, the complaint against them must be dismissed on the grounds of sovereign immunity.

c. Public Official Immunity

Public official immunity is a common law doctrine which "rests on the theory that government officials should not be impeded from acting in ways they perceive are in the public's best interest because of fears of personal liability. Janes by First Nat'l Bank v. Albergo, 254 Ill. App. 3d 951, 957 (1st. Dist 1993). Plaintiffs claim that the Defendants are stripped of public official immunity because they acted with malicious motives. In support of this proposition the Plaintiffs' response cites to their complaint ¶¶ 53-66. These paragraphs reveal the Mr. Perkins was not acting out of malicious motives but was working in ways that were in the public's best interests. According to the Plaintiffs' complaint "the attorney general maintained that a not for profit corporation established for charitable purposes in a particular jurisdiction, simply because of its place of incorporation, becomes a public trust for the people of that jurisdiction that may not relocate without violating its fiduciary duties to that population" (Comp. ¶ 42). Protection of a public trust and ensuring that fiduciary duties are followed is the antithesis of malicious motives. Moreover even if the Attorney General or his assistant were incorrect in his interpretation of his duty to protect public assets he would still be cloaked with public officials' immunity. C.f. Kinzer v. City of Chicago, 128 Ill. 2d 437 (1989). Accordingly, the State Defendants are protected by the doctrine of public official immunity.

Plaintiffs' citation to Tcherepnin v. Franz, 570 F. 2d 187 (7th Cir. 1978) completely misses the point. In Tcherepnin the Director of the Department of Financial Institutions was found to have owed a statutory duty to the depositors of City Savings. There the court found nothing in the Savings and Loan Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. Ch. 32 par. 701et. Seq., recodified and amended 205 ILCS 105/1-1 et seq-now known as the Savings and Loan Act of 1985) to suggest the statutory duties of the director were only owed to the State of Illinois. The court reasoned that repeated references to the 'protection of the Association" in defining the directors duties indicated that these duties were owed the depositors. As contrasted with the former Illinois Savings and Loan Act, the Charitable Trust Act (765 ILCS 55/1 et seq.) does not contain references to the protection of trustees. On the contrary the Charitable Trust Act is in place to protect the public from the malfeasance and misfeasance of trustees. Moreover, as contrasted with the former Illinois Savings and Loan Act the duties are owed to the State of Illinois and not to private individuals or corporations. Therefore since no specific statutory duty was owed to the Terra Foundation no cause of action can lie against the Attorney General or his assistant on behalf of the Terra Foundation.

Respectfully Submitted,
James Ryan, Attorney General
