UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESS MATERIALS AND RELATED TESTIMONY AND DECLARATIONS

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully move this Court for an order in limine precluding Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"), from introducing any exhibits to be used as a summary of or support for its experts' opinions that were not disclosed at the appropriate time pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) and precluding Conwood from eliciting testimony or providing declarations from its witnesses reflecting or relating to any of this previously undisclosed material or analysis.

Under this Court's February 18, 1999 Scheduling Order, Conwood was required to disclose its initial expert reports by August 1, 1999. On August 1, Conwood submitted five expert reports. The Scheduling Order also provided Conwood with an opportunity to supplement its initial expert reports on October 1, 1999. On October 1, Conwood submitted five expert rebuttal reports.

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e), Conwood was "under a duty to supplement" the expert reports it provided on August 1 and October 1. Conwood did not supplement its expert reports.

Now, on the eve of trial, Conwood is apparently reacting to a full realization that USTC's pending Daubert motion is likely to result in the preclusion of Dr. Leftwich's damages testimony. First, on Friday, January 21, 2000, under the guise of exchanging exhibit lists, and then, boldly, this afternoon, Friday, January 28, 2000, in the form of a so-called "Supplemental Declaration of Richard Leftwich," Conwood has revealed the results of a new surprise expert report on alleged damages, among other things. The best we can tell, these new expert "exhibits" and the "Supplemental Declaration" are based on previously undisclosed data and previously undisclosed methodologies and analyses, which result in completely new and previously undisclosed conclusions. Because of Conwood's impermissible, last-ditch tactics to cure its fatally flawed damages "proof," we are procedurally back to square one with an equally defective new damages approach now on the table. Just as this new work is a confession by Conwood that USTC's overwhelming Daubert motion should be granted, it is a desperate attempt to resurrect Dr. Leftwich that seeks to circumvent the disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(2)(B) and 26 (e)(1).

The new or modified expert exhibits, whether offered as Conwood's intended trial exhibits, or as demonstrative aids or exhibits, should be excluded on this motion along with all related testimony, and the "Supplemental Declaration" should be rejected and stricken. These submissions are untimely; they deprive USTC of a meaningful opportunity to cross-examine the information and analysis; they deprive USTC's expert witnesses of a meaningful opportunity to respond to the information and analysis; they are made with the intent and purpose of "sandbagging"

USTC and making an end-run around the disclosure requirements for expert witnesses clearly set forth in the Federal Rules.

Should there be any remaining doubt that, beyond continuing to fail to submit proper damages proof, Conwood has also strung USTC and the Court along, consider these obvious and irrefutable facts:

- The "analysis" behind Dr. Leftwich's Supplemental Declaration must have been completed before Conwood could supply the new expert exhibits relating to the analysis on January 21, 2000, yet we did not receive the Supplemental Declaration itself explaining the analysis until a full week later, on January 28, 2000, the very day motions in limine are due in this case and this memorandum is filed.

- To the extent the Supplemental Declaration is purportedly based upon so-called "information that recently became available" to Dr. Leftwich, see Supp. Decl. ¶ 1, the copy of the "recently" acquired information at Appendix A to the Supplemental Declaration shows on its face that Dr. Leftwich's assistant at Lexecon Inc. was faxed the new information on December 9, 1999, some 50 days ago.

- The "recently" acquired information received on December 9, 1999 apparently represents a correction of faulty data originally received by Dr. Leftwich on July 23, 1999, shortly after he was hired and a mere 10 days before he relied upon it in submitting his original expert report on August 2, 1999. Leftwich Dep. at 13-14, 217, Tab 1. In contrast, with trial bearing down on USTC, Conwood and Dr. Leftwich waited 50 days, more than a month and exactly five times as long as Dr. Leftwich needed the first time, before submitting the surprise "Supplemental Declaration" at the eleventh hour.

- USTC filed its Daubert motion on November 15, 1999. Conwood responded on December 9, 1999, the very day Dr. Leftwich received the "recently" acquired data. USTC replied on December 22, 1999, and the motion stood submitted to the Court. Even though Conwood had begun revamping its damages approach and Dr. Leftwich's testimony at least as early as December 9, 1999, at no point before today, 50 days later, did Conwood advise USTC or the Court of the fact that Conwood intended to rely upon different damages proof at trial. This failure of candor and forthrightness left USTC and the Court to spin their wheels dealing with Conwood's and Dr. Leftwich's now-abandoned first damages effort while Conwood secretly and belatedly prepared a new and different damages approach for trial.

Under these circumstances, there is no basis for allowing Conwood even to attempt to cure, to the unfair prejudice of USTC, what Conwood now has belatedly, but correctly, determined to be unusable expert damages testimony. Accordingly, USTC asks the Court in this motion to reject in its entirety this new damages approach by Conwood and Dr. Leftwich. Separately, unless this motion and USTC's pending Daubert motion are both granted in the meantime, USTC intends to supplement and extend its Daubert motion to Conwood's and Dr. Leftwich's latest, but still unusable, damages work.

ARGUMENT

Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) requires a party to submit a report for each expert witness that is retained to testify in the matter. Specifically, the Rule requires, inter alia, that the report contain "any exhibits to be used as a summary of or support for the opinions" of the witness.[1] The rule does not suggest that some exhibits need not be disclosed or that additional exhibits may nevertheless be created and used at trial. Conwood should not be allowed to do so now. Accordingly, USTC respectfully moves this Court for an order in limine precluding Conwood from using any demonstrative exhibit with its expert witnesses that was not disclosed to USTC at the appropriate time and further precluding Conwood from eliciting from its witnesses any testimony related to the contents of the excluded demonstrative exhibits.

I. CONWOOD HAS MADE UNTIMELY SUBMISSIONS OF DEMONSTRATIVE EXHIBITS TO BE USED WITH ITS EXPERT WITNESSES

Conwood's intended trial exhibits (specifically, those exhibits grouped under Exhibit Nos. 326 and 327) includes 131 charts and graphs that summarize and support the opinions of its experts. These exhibits cover a myriad of information regarding market shares, prices, costs, revenues, purported "effects" of USTC's allegedly exclusionary conduct, and Conwood's claimed damages. Although some of these exhibits appear to be duplicative of materials that were properly disclosed,[2] the vast majority of the exhibits are new information not properly disclosed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B).[3]

16diii003294

II. CONWOOD SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO USE EXHIBITS AND TESTIMONY THAT WERE NOT PROPERLY DISCLOSED TO USTC

Conwood's failure to comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) (or to timely supplement its disclosures under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1)), deprived USTC of the opportunity to conduct a complete cross-examination of Conwood's experts -- the very purpose of the Rule's disclosure requirements. Conwood should be precluded from using these exhibits or any related testimony at trial.

In United Phosphorus, Ltd. v. Midland Fumigant, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 675 (D.Kan. 1997), plaintiffs moved in limine to preclude the defendants' use of expert materials that were not produced until the exhibit marking session. Id. at 677. Plaintiffs argued that defendants' failure to disclose the new exhibits until the exhibit-marking session resulted in prejudice because the exhibits "recast[ed] and restat[ed]" the expert's opinion and would, if admitted, defeat the purpose of the disclosure requirements and would encourage "sandbagging". Id. The court agreed. Citing the defendants' failure to disclose the exhibits under Rules 26(a)(2)(B) or supplement its previous

P. 26(a)(2)(B)); see also Ex. 326, pages 2- 4, 11-16, 18-19, 26-29, 32; Ex. 327, pages 1-14, 17-24, 26-27, 30-31 (charts and graphs that have been modified and supplemented).

disclosure under Rule 26(e)(1), the court precluded defendants' use of the additional exhibits. Id. at 677-68. See also Boardman v. National Medical Enterprises, 106 F.3d 840, 843 (8th Cir. 1997) (precluding introduction of undisclosed evidence and noting that "[t]he power of the trial court to exclude exhibits and witnesses not disclosed in compliance with its discovery and pretrial orders is essential" to the judge's control over the case); Pride v. Bic Corp., 54 F.Supp.2d 757, 759 (E.D.Tenn. 1998) (excluding late-disclosed expert witness information).[4]

Here, allowing Conwood to use these additional expert materials at trial clearly would defeat the purpose of the disclosure requirements, and like in United Phosphorous, would encourage "sandbagging," and unfairly prejudice USTC. Conwood had ample opportunity to retain experts, to conduct a study of the industry and of the evidentiary record, and to provide full disclosures, either at the time Conwood's initial expert reports were due, at the time Conwood's rebuttal expert reports were due, or, at a minimum, at any reasonable time pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e). Accordingly, because Conwood made no such disclosures – at any time – USTC respectfully requests that this Court issue an order precluding the use of the non-disclosed exhibits at trial.

III. INTRODUCTION OF CONWOOD'S DEMONSTRATIVE EXHIBITS AND ITS NEW DAMAGES APPROACH WOULD UNFAIRLY PREJUDICE USTC

Conwood's intended trial exhibits contain summaries and graphs of data that is entirely different than that disclosed with its expert reports.[5] These new materials are based on data

[4] See also United Phosphorus, 173 F.R.D. at 677 (materials excluded because disclosure one week before Daubert hearing resulted in prejudice); Ridder v. City of Springfield, 108 F.3d 1377, 1997 WL 117024, at *2 (striking expert testimony because reports did not comply with Rule 26(a)(2)).

[5] Most notably, Ex. 326, pages 1, 5-10, 17, 20, 22, 33-39, 42, 55; Ex. 327, pages 15-16, 28-40, 47-76.

that was not disclosed and for which no foundation has been laid. Furthermore, Dr. Leftwich now employs an entirely new methodology, apparently designed to reinflate damage numbers substantially deflated by the substitution of new, untested, but supposedly reliable sales data. Conwood's failure to disclose these materials during expert discovery, or at least when they were received in December 1999, has deprived USTC of the opportunity to challenge, during expert discovery or at a reasonable time, the foundation of these summaries, the accuracy of the underlying data, and the extent and degree of Conwood's experts' reliance upon thereon. Moreover, Dr. Leftwich's new methodology is revealed too late to allow it to be appropriately explored, tested, challenged and refuted by USTC.

Conwood will most likely argue that USTC would have an opportunity to challenge Conwood's new damages approach at trial. This is, at best, a non-argument. USTC will be unfairly prejudiced if forced, on the eve of trial (and five months after Conwood's required 26(a)(2)(B) disclosures), to rush to verify the foundation and accuracy of literally dozens of charts that rely upon newly disclosed data. This is exacerbated by the fact that the vast majority of the charts contained in Exhibits 326 and 327 do not contain source information. It would fly in the face of the intent and purpose of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B), as well as the intent and purpose of having expert discovery at all, if cross examination at trial were the first opportunity USTC had to explore the basis of any charts and information and the appropriateness of newly employed methodology. Accordingly, these materials should be excluded.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should enter an order in limine precluding Conwood from introducing at trial its intended group trial Exhibits 326 and 327, any portion of the Supplemental Declaration or its attachments, or any related testimony.

AFFIRMED.

Before: SUHRHEINRICH and MOORE, Circuit Judges; McKINLEY, District Judge. [FN*]

OPINION

MOORE, Circuit Judge.

1 Plaintiff-Appellant Stephen M. Ridder appeals the magistrate judge's entry of summary judgment for all defendants in this 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. For the reasons that follow, we affirm. [FN1]

FN1. This panel also addresses in a published opinion, No. 95-4220, Ridder's appeal of sanctions imposed after judgment by the magistrate judge pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 11 and 28 U.S.C. § 1927.

I

From January 1986 through July 1988, a series of rapes occurred in and around Springfield, Ohio. In July 1988, Stephen Ridder's hand was nearly severed in an industrial accident. While physicians reattached his hand, a hospital employee identified Ridder's voice as that of her attacker. Police began investigating Ridder. He could be placed in the general area for several of the incidents and five of eight victims identified him in a lineup. Pursuant to a fourteen-count indictment, the Springfield Police Department arrested Ridder on September 8, 1988. From then until January 4, 1989, Ridder was detained in the Clark County Jail.

As of the date he was arrested, the surgical incisions on Ridder's hand had healed and there was no drainage or infection. Nonetheless, he was going to physical therapy three times a week at Miami Valley Hospital, a fact noted on Ridder's detention screening form. On September 14, 1988, Ridder was examined by Dr. Walter R. Lawrence. It is disputed whether Ridder verbally told Dr. Lawrence about his therapy, but, in any event, Dr. Lawrence saw no need for physical therapy. From mid-September through mid-October, Ridder did not attend any physical therapy sessions. In mid-October, Ridder obtained a letter from his treating physician addressing Ridder's need for therapy and follow-up surgery. Subsequent to the letter and corresponding court order, Ridder was transported to all scheduled surgical procedures and therapy sessions and was provided pain medication drugs.

On January 4, 1989, DNA tests exonerated Ridder. He was released from jail that day, and all charges against him were later dropped.

On January 4, 1990, Ridder filed a complaint against the City of Springfield, Clark County, Prosecutor Stephen A. Schumaker, [FN2] Clark County Sheriff Gene A. Kelly, Springfield Chief of Police Roger Evans, Sergeant Robert Marcum, Detectives Ronald Mendah and Robert Kerr, and Dr. Walter Lawrence alleging several causes of action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (deliberate indifference to serious medical needs, denial of due process, and subjection to cruel and unusual punishment), 42 U.S.C. § 1985, and state law (medical malpractice, conspiracy, and defamation). The assigned magistrate judge, Michael R. Merz, noted several pleading deficiencies and gave Ridder the opportunity to amend the complaint. The magistrate judge subsequently dismissed most claims in the amended complaint as failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted or as barred by qualified immunity. Ridder obtained leave and filed a second amended complaint. For this complaint, the magistrate judge granted a defense motion for a more definite statement, noting that several earlier pleading deficiencies remained. Ridder sought leave to file a third amended complaint and filed it on August 17, 1993. The magistrate judge found that complaint sufficient to proceed to discovery.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. Ridder voluntarily dismissed the appeal as to Schumaker on May 5, 1995.

2 The scheduling order, dated February 15, 1994, specified that Ridder was to furnish expert reports to opposing counsel and the court by May 15, 1994. The magistrate judge expressly reminded counsel about the recent amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and directed that the expert reports "shall comply with Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(a)(2) (as amended December 1, 1993)." Scheduling Order, ¶ 5 n. 2; J.A. at 668.

On May 16, 1994, Ridder purported to comply with the required expert report disclosure, stating that for his fourteen-plus expert witnesses ("each defendant" was listed as an expert for the plaintiff), some reports had already been furnished while others would be forthcoming. The magistrate judge found that Ridder's disclosure failed to comply with Rule 26(a)(2) with respect to every witness. As no expert reports had yet been filed, the magistrate judge ordered Ridder to furnish copies of the supposedly completed reports and warned that nonconforming reports would be stricken and witnesses not permitted to testify. At that time the magistrate judge struck six names from Ridder's expert list for which no reports had been actually or supposedly filed. Ridder then filed reports as to the eight remaining experts. Again, the magistrate judge determined that the reports did not comply with Rule 26(a)(2) and consequently struck those experts. The effect was to bar the testimony of all of Ridder's non-defendant experts.

On July 8, 1994, Ridder requested an additional thirty days to comply with Rule 26(a)(2). The magistrate judge denied the request without prejudice to renewal if Ridder made an actual showing of excusable neglect and attached complying expert reports. The issue of expert testimony then lay dormant for over six and a half months, while the discovery completion date passed. On January 23, 1995, Ridder renewed his effort to allow his experts to testify. The magistrate judge, however, disapproved of the delay and denied Ridder's renewed motion. The magistrate judge found that ignorance of amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, especially after repeated reminders, did not amount to excusable neglect, and that Ridder's counsel had been given ample time to come into compliance. When Ridder finally resurrected the expert testimony issue, none of Ridder's proposed expert witnesses had been deposed, discovery had been completed, defendants had filed their summary judgment motions, and the trial date was only forty-two days away.

In December 1994, all defendants filed summary judgment motions. The magistrate judge struck some of Ridder's evidence in opposition of summary judgment, namely the unsworn letters of two physicians and inadmissible opinion testimony of Ridder. On February 28, 1995, the magistrate judge granted summary judgment in full to all defendants. Ridder timely appealed.

II

Ridder alleges several errors in the magistrate judge's handling of this protracted litigation. [FN3] First, Ridder asserts that the magistrate judge erred by dismissing claims against the individual police officers, the Chief of Police, and the Sheriff pursuant to the doctrine of qualified immunity. [FN4] The application of qualified immunity to a particular defendant is a question of law; our review is de novo. Long v. Norris, 929 F.2d 1111, 1114 (6th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Jones v. Long, 502 U.S. 863 (1991). The ultimate burden of proof is on Ridder to show that defendants are not entitled to qualified immunity. See Rich v. City of Mayfield Heights, 955 F.2d 1092, 1095 (6th Cir.1992). "[W]hether an official protected by qualified immunity may be held personally liable for an allegedly unlawful official action generally turns on the 'objective legal reasonableness' of the action ... assessed in light of the legal rules that were 'clearly established' at the time it was taken." Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639 (1987) (citing Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 819

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(1982)). Ridder makes vague allegations that police officers failed to investigate fully the possibility that Ridder might not have been involved in the rapes (although they did question Ridder and make some follow-up calls), and that they withheld from a search warrant affidavit inconsistent information given by the rape victims. Ridder fails to demonstrate what clearly established law created a duty for a police officer to conduct an alibi investigation in a particular manner, or how the claimed affidavit omissions would have negated the search warrant's probable cause. Based upon the proffered evidence, it cannot be said that the officers' conduct in procuring the warrant and partially investigating Ridder's alibis violated clearly established constitutional rights.

FN3. Some defendants assert that Ridder failed to preserve his appeal properly as to orders of the magistrate judge other than the one dated February 28, 1995, due to Ridder's failure to list other orders in his notice of appeal. This argument is not well-taken. Ridder expressly appeals from the "judgment." See Notice of Appeal; J.A. at 406. Such language is construed generally to represent the ultimate resolution of the case. Thus, Ridder preserved appellate review as to all non-moot orders rendered by the magistrate judge previously in the litigation.

FN4. The section of Ridder's appellate brief discussing qualified immunity is entirely based on the magistrate judge's order dated March 4, 1992--an order that never took final effect. Subsequent to this order, Ridder obtained leave and filed a second amended complaint. Counsel is admonished to be mindful of which orders in the course of litigation become final and which are later superseded.

3 Ridder is also unable to sustain his claims against the Sheriff and Chief of Police. The record provides no basis to conclude that either supervisor was personally involved in Ridder's case, or that either supervisor encouraged or knowingly acquiesced in a constitutional deprivation. Thus, the magistrate judge properly dismissed the claims against the Sheriff, the Chief of Police, and the individual officers on the basis of their qualified immunity from suit.

The magistrate judge was also correct in granting summary judgment as to all other claims and defendants. [FN5] We review a district court's granting of summary judgment de novo, viewing all facts and inferences in a light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Dole v. Elliott Travel & Tours, Inc., 942 F.2d 962, 965 (6th Cir.1991). "[T]he nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings but must present some 'specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.' " Id. (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 324 (1986)).

FN5. As Ridder's appellate brief makes no mention of summary judgment as to Clark County, we conclude that Ridder has waived appellate review of this issue.

As to the City of Springfield, a municipality will be liable under § 1983 only if a person was deprived of constitutional rights pursuant to a custom, usage, or policy of that entity. See Monell v. Department of Social Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 690-91 (1978). Ridder alleges that Springfield had a policy of consistently procuring defective search warrants. Yet, Ridder puts forth no evidence of a written policy or a decision of the person with ultimate authority to establish municipal policy. Nor does Ridder present affidavits or other evidence of other persons similarly violated, which would tend to show a pattern or custom. Even after benefitting from full discovery, Ridder failed to evince a custom, usage, or policy of the City that deprived him of constitutional rights. Thus, Ridder's claim against the City of Springfield was properly dismissed.

As to Dr. Lawrence, Ridder's evidence in opposition to summary judgment is manifestly lacking. Undoubtedly, Ridder's counsel is aware that unsworn, and even unsigned, letters do not amount to admissible evidence. Ridder has thus failed to show facts giving rise to a genuine issue concerning Dr. Lawrence's deliberate indifference to serious medical needs or medical malpractice.

While this litigation was running its course, Rule 26 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure was amended, with the amended rule taking effect on December 1, 1993, and governing actions then pending insofar as just and practicable. See 146 F.R.D. 404. Ridder argues that the application of amended Rule 26(a)(2)(B) to his case was unjust and unworkable, thereby prejudicing him to the extent that he was unable to utilize any expert testimony. [FN6] We hold otherwise. It was certainly feasible to apply the amended rule in this case, for discovery had not yet commenced when the new rule took effect. It was also just, considering that the magistrate judge alerted counsel twice to the changes in the rule and allowed Ridder two opportunities to comply. Because changes in the federal rules will be applied to pending cases to the fullest extent possible, we stress that Ridder's counsel had the responsibility to stay abreast of such changes, especially when all he had to do in this case was read the scheduling order.

> FN6. Rule 26(a)(2)(B), as amended, requires, with respect to a witness who is retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony, the disclosure of a report containing a statement of all opinions, data, exhibits, qualifications (including publications authored in the preceding ten years), compensation, and a listing of any other cases in which the witness has testified within the preceding four years.

4 Ridder also objects to the magistrate judge's application of Rule 26(a)(2)(B) to treating physicians. We find no error with the magistrate judge's order. The plain language of the order permits Ridder's treating physicians to testify without Rule 26(a)(2)(B) expert report disclosures "so long as they do not purport to testify beyond the scope of their own diagnosis and treatment." Decision and Order; J.A. at 383. Thus, nothing precluded Ridder from submitting, in opposition to summary judgment, a properly sworn affidavit by a treating physician detailing Ridder's treatment.

We review the magistrate judge's decision to invoke Rule 37 discovery sanctions for abuse of discretion. Taylor v. Medtronics, 861 F.2d 980, 985 (6th Cir.1988). Among the factors to be considered are: (1) whether the adversary was prejudiced by the failure to cooperate in discovery; (2) whether the sanctioned party was warned; and (3) whether less drastic sanctions than dismissal were imposed or considered. Id. at 986. Here, the magistrate judge struck the expert testimony only after repeated failure to produce adequate expert reports. Ridder had been given ample warning that noncompliance with expert report disclosures would result in striking the testimony. Under the circumstances, had the magistrate judge granted Ridder's late request to renew the expert testimony issue after a six-and-a-half-month delay, the non-offending parties would likely be prejudiced. At that point, Ridder's experts had not been deposed, the trial date was six weeks away, and summary judgment motions had already been filed. We cannot hold that, by sanctioning a party who had repeatedly failed to comply with discovery provisions, the magistrate judge abused his discretion in the instant action.

Ridder raises other issues dealing with his ability to amend further the complaint, the alleged partiality of the magistrate judge, and what Ridder asserts to be a denial of substantial justice. We have considered those arguments and hold them to be without merit.

As to Ridder's argument that the magistrate judge erroneously held him to a heightened pleading requirement for his § 1983 claims against individual defendants, we direct counsel to Veney v. Hogan, 70 F.3d 917, 919 (6th Cir.1995) (holding that a plaintiff bringing a § 1983 action against individual government officials must satisfy a heightened standard of pleading when the defense of qualified immunity is raised), which remains the law in this circuit. Moreover, we cannot discern how Ridder was prejudiced if such a pleading error occurred, as Ridder's third amended complaint enabled the case to progress beyond the pleadings.

III

We are unable to find fault with the magistrate judge's handling and disposition of Ridder's case. Quite the contrary, we believe that the magistrate judge gave Ridder every reasonable opportunity to litigate these claims. Ridder's counsel simply failed to follow through. We will not countenance holding the magistrate judge accountable for what were, in all respects, Ridder's counsel's shortcomings. The judgment of the magistrate judge is AFFIRMED.

DEPOSITION OF RICHARD LEFTWICH

(Taken by Defendants)

Chicago, Illinois

Tuesday, November 2, 1999

Reported by: Robin Tokarz-Chimniak, CSR No. 084-001999

10

Q. The same one you just mentioned?
A. No, that was a different --
Q. Different one?
A. Different one.
Q. What was the conduct at issue in that case, if you recall?
A. The conduct in that case was price collusion.
Q. So it was a price fixing case?
A. Price fixing essentially, yes.
Q. Did you address issues of causation in that case?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Have you ever been qualified by a court as an expert witness to offer an opinion on antitrust damages?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. In the two cases you had mentioned, did you find that there were damages in those cases, in your expert view?
MR. GORSUCH: The two that you're talking about -- I just want the record to be clear -- is the carbon dioxide case and the chemical industry case?
MR. KEYTE: Yes.

MR. GORSUCH: Okay.
THE WITNESS: I don't specifically recall on the chemical industry case. I do recall on the carbon dioxide case.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. And?
A. That I did.
Q. You did. And what was the result of that case?
A. Both cases were settled.
Q. So in both cases, the plaintiff didn't go through a trial and win at trial; is that correct?
A. In the particular parts of the case I testified -- I prepared -- I was consulted in, no. That's correct.
Q. Have you given expert testimony in any judicial proceeding on prior occasions concerning antitrust damages?
A. If you could define what you mean by "judicial proceeding."
Q. How about in a federal court in the United States?
A. No, I have not.
Q. What experience do you have in assessing antitrust damages in the retail industry?

A. As I've testified, I have not -- I have not previously -- I have not previously consulted in that area of antitrust damages.
Q. So am I correct that you have no experience in assessing damages relating to marketing practices by suppliers in a retail industry?
A. I believe that was my previous -- that's the -- that's consistent with my previous answer, yes.
Q. What experience as an expert witness do you have in the moist snuff industry, if any?
A. None previous to this case.
MR. GORSUCH: You don't use the product? I'm sorry.
MR. KEYTE: That's all right.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. How about with respect to other tobacco products? Any experience as an expert?
A. I have -- if you could repeat the question.
Q. What experience do you have as an expert witness in other tobacco products?

A. I have -- I have consulted on occasion on some other tobacco products.
Q. In an antitrust case?
A. Not in an antitrust case.
Q. Who contacted you about potentially testifying in this case?
A. Chip Bamberger.
Q. Who is he?
A. He's a person who works at Lexecon, L-e-x-e-c-o-n.
Q. And when did he contact you?
A. Sometime in the late summer.
Q. Of?
A. 1999.
Q. What do you mean by "late summer"?
A. I was thinking July, somewhat optimistic about when the summer starts in Chicago.
Q. And approximately when in July?
A. I don't specifically recall.
Q. When were you first retained as an expert witness in this case?
A. If you could clarify what you mean by "retained."
Q. Do you understand what that means, to be retained, engaged?

MR. GORSUCH: How about "hired"?
MR. KEYTE: "Hired," that's fine, even though I will ask the questions.
MR. GORSUCH: I'm just trying to help.
MR. KEYTE: I know, but sometimes that may move into different areas down the road.
THE WITNESS: My recollection is within one week of my initial contact with -- within -- following shortly within a week of the initial contact with Chip.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Do you recall if this was after the July 4th holiday?
A. No, I don't specifically.
Q. Do you recall whether any parts of the analysis in your report was worked on or prepared before you were retained?
A. Yes, I do recall.
Q. And?
A. The answer is none of it. All of the work was done subsequent to my being engaged. At least to the extent to which -- at least -- if I could -- I have no awareness of some work I referred to, in particular the work by Professor

Kamien. I have knowledge only of my direct work product.
Q. Did Mr. -- is it Mr. Vandenberger?
A. Bamberger, B-a-m-b-e-r-g-e-r.
Q. Do you know whether Mr. Bamberger had done any work related to damages in this case prior to you being retained?
MR. GORSUCH: Asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: My understanding is he had not.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Do you know whether anybody at Lexecon had done any work, prior to your retention, on the subject of antitrust damages?
MR. GORSUCH: Asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: My understanding is that nobody had done any work relating to damages. Nobody at Lexecon, excuse me.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. How about Kellogg, Huber? Is it your understanding that Kellogg, Huber had done any work relating to damages prior to your being retained?
A. You asked was it. It wasn't -- at the time it was my understanding that no work had

Q. Did you come to learn at some point that work had been done by Kellogg, Huber?
A. I subsequently learned of a calculation that had been performed by Kellogg, Huber.
Q. What was that calculation?
A. I have an inartful description of the legal document, but it seemed to be an affidavit or a complaint or something like that.
Q. Did you see work by Kellogg, Huber of the calculation they did, prior to your retention, relating to antitrust damages?
MR. GORSUCH: Objection, misstates prior testimony.
Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: After I was retained, I saw a document that contained some calculations that I was told were performed by Kellogg, Huber.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. And did you review that document as part of your analysis?
A. I read the document. If by "review" that's what you mean, I read the document.
MR. KEYTE: I'll just ask, for the record, whatever that is, if we could have that.

MR. GORSUCH: I don't know what it is. I assume it's the complaint. He's talked about a pleading or whatever.
MR. KEYTE: The complaint, I don't believe, has a calculation.
MR. GORSUCH: It talks about $48 million in damages.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Was this a calculation or a narrative description? I think you said calculation.
A. It was a calculation of some --
Q. With numbers?
A. With some numbers. It was a legal document. I don't specifically remember what type of legal document.
MR. GORSUCH: If you can establish more precisely what it is, but I think whatever it is, it's been produced.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. What is your relationship with Lexecon?
A. I have an understanding with Lexecon that if I am contacted to do expert witness testimony, that I will use Lexecon to provide litigation support services --
MR. GORSUCH: I know what it is. It's

by the regression.
Q. Would you agree with me that the relative change in share in some of the relatively low states was higher than the relative change in share in Maine?
MR. GORSUCH: Objection to the characterization -- or mischaracterization of the document.
Go ahead, if you can, Professor, one more time.
THE WITNESS: The regression measures the absolute change, not the relative change. Some of the states have longer names than others, too. I don't see the relevance of that.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Do you see the relevance of knowing why California, for example, had a higher rate of growth than Maine, even though it was a small state? Do you see the relevance of that, sir?
A. Even if California was a --
MR. GORSUCH: Small state?
MR. KEYTE: Low-share state, excuse me.
THE WITNESS: That observation affects the regression. It's included in the regression because I want -- those observations are all included in the regression and given the appropriate weight by the regression.

BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Shouldn't the result of your regression conform, at least, or at least be consistent with the reality of what is going on in each state?
A. The regression reflects the reality of what's going on in each state.
Q. Would that last statement you make depend on the data you use? Correct?
MR. GORSUCH: Vague and ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: The regression are based on the inputs to the regression.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Now, Table 1 is based on Conwood summaries of Peat Marwick reports, correct?
A. It's based on a document provided to me by -- provided to me by Conwood.
Q. And these -- you say Conwood summaries of Peat Marwick reports, correct?
A. We have -- we have produced the documents. If -- I mean, I don't specifically recall that Conwood summarized them, but the documents speak for themselves.
Q. If you look at the second page, Table

1, under "Source, Conwood Summaries of Peat Marwick Reports," what does it mean, "Conwood Summaries"?
A. As I testified, I took the data from the documents provided to us. If -- the documents speak for themselves. I don't specifically recall why I chose to call it Conwood summaries. There may have been other Peat Marwick documents that I used. There may have been other Conwood-Peat Marwick documents I use -- provided I didn't use. I just don't know why I chose to call it a summary.
Q. Do you know whether Conwood used Peat Marwick reports in the ordinary course of its business?
A. I'm not aware -- I'm not aware one way or the other.
Q. Did you ask anybody?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. You asked whether they did?
A. I asked -- I asked whether they used them in the business purpose of the Peat Marwick documents.
Q. I'm sorry, I'm a little confused.
A. I asked for business purposes of the

Peat Marwick documents.
Q. Did you ask whether they used the Peat Marwick reports in the day-to-day operation of their business?
A. No, I did not ask that question.
Q. You also used these summaries for the share data used in the regression model that led to your damages estimates, correct? Again, the Peat Marwick reports.
A. I used them -- if we want to characterize them as a summary. I accept that representation for now. But I used those data in the regression model, yes.
Q. Those summaries were dated July 23, 1999. Do you recall that?
A. I don't specifically recall that.
MR. GORSUCH: That's actually the date of the fax, if you look at the source.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. It was faxed to you around July 23rd, 1999, right?
A. That's right.
Q. What date did you submit your report?
A. I believe I submitted it, as we've already talked about, on August 2nd, I believe.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE PROFESSOR GUNDLACH'S "STUDY" OF PURPORTED "EXCLUSIVE AGREEMENTS" AND RELATED TESTIMONY

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully request that the Court preclude Professor Gundlach's "study" of USTC's purported "exclusive agreements" as well as any related testimony.

As described below, Professor Gundlach's "study" (see Tab 1) and any related testimony should be excluded on several grounds. First, by his own admission, Professor Gundlach did not conduct a "study" of the specific type of exclusive arrangements the antitrust law clearly defines as forbidden exclusive dealing agreements -- i.e., those which preclude a competitor's products from the market. The record contains no evidence of such arrangements by USTC. Nor, indeed, did Professor Gundlach even "study" any other type of "exclusive agreement" (whether involving products, racks or point of sale ("P.O.S.") materials). While the antitrust law does not forbid exclusive rack or P.O.S. agreements, Professor Gundlach cannot even point to record evidence of such agreements by USTC. Indeed, applying the proper legal criteria, Professor Gundlach's study and related testimony completely lacks foundation in the record and should therefore be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Second, it is clear from discovery that Professor Gundlach intends to characterize various documents in this case as "exclusive agreements" with retailers. Under long-established authority, however, any such testimony should be disallowed because it contains a legal conclusion -- i.e., it improperly conveys a legal standard to the jury -- and thereby invades the province of this Court.[1] Finally, Professor Gundlach's "study" and related testimony should be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 403 because, if allowed, it would likely mislead the jury into thinking that just because a retailer does not carry all Conwood products or does not use Conwood racks, an "exclusive agreement" exists between USTC and the retailer.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"), allege that USTC entered into a number of exclusive agreements with retailers with the purpose and effect of excluding Conwood's products, display racks, and P.O.S. materials from retail stores. See Compl. ¶ 28. It is now indisputably clear, however, that Conwood cannot present evidence of a single agreement or contract between USTC and any retailer that excludes all of Conwood's moist snuff products from the store; that prohibits Conwood from having its P.O.S. materials in the store; or that contractually binds the retailer – in writing or otherwise – to use only USTC racks.

[1] The analysis is no different if, as we suspect, Professor Gundlach will disavow the wording of his expert report (and study) and now purport to tabulate "exclusionary" agreements rather than exclusive agreements.

16diii003309

Having failed completely to establish an "exclusive dealing" claim of any kind, Conwood has resorted to filling in the evidentiary gaps with the conclusory testimony of its expert witnesses. Thus, rather than even attempting to establish its exclusive dealing claim by offering evidence of actual agreements entered into by USTC, Conwood intends to offer, through one or more of its expert witnesses, the "results" of a "study" put together by Professor Gundlach with the assistance of Conwood's counsel. Essentially, the "study" is little more than a tabulation of stores that Conwood's counsel and Professor Gundlach believe contain "an indicia of some form, type of exclusion." See Gundlach Dep. at 151-52, Tab 2 (emphasis added). Upon examination, however, Professor Gundlach readily admitted that "indicia of some form, type of exclusion" included indicia that a retailer simply implemented a plan-o-gram, see id. at 156, Tab 2, or even where a retailer chooses to use multiple display racks from the different moist snuff companies, but chooses to place USTC's display rack in the number one position, see id. at 156-57, Tab 2.[2] The resulting "study" of 22,000 retail locations with so-called "exclusive agreements" was then disseminated to and relied upon by Conwood's other expert witnesses.

As described below, this Court should preclude any expert testimony relating to or based upon this study as improper expert testimony and thus inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 702. In addition, such testimony would be misleading to the jury and unfairly prejudicial to USTC, and therefore should be precluded under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

[2] Professor Gundlach reasoned that this would be an exclusive agreement because the other moist snuff companies were "excluded" from the number one position. See Gundlach Dep. at 77, Tab 2.

16diii003310

ARGUMENT

Under Fed. R. Evid. 702, expert testimony is admissible only if it assists the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue. The Gundlach "study," and any testimony related to or based thereon, would do neither.

I. THE GUNDLACH STUDY IS NOT PROPER EXPERT TESTIMONY BECAUSE IT IS NOT SUPPORTED, AND IS IN FACT CONTRADICTED, BY THE RECORD EVIDENCE

The law is well established that where proposed expert testimony is unsupported by the record evidence, it is inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 702. See Tyger Construction Company, Inc. v. Pensacola Construction Co., 29 F.3d 137, 143 (4th Cir. 1994) (reversing district court's denial of motion in limine forbidding admission of expert testimony based on assumptions not supported by the record); Hoban v. Grumman Corp., 717 F. Supp. 1129, 1134 (E.D. Va. 1989) ("[a]n expert's opinion must be based on the evidence; he may not speculate in fashions unsupported by, and in this case indeed in contradiction of, the uncontroverted evidence in the case") (citations omitted).

Based on the record in this case, there is absolutely no foundation for Professor Gundlach to conclude that USTC has any exclusive agreements with any retailers, including the retailers included in his "study." The Gundlach "study" is nothing more than a table of retailers with whom USTC purportedly has had exclusive agreements since 1995. See Tab 1. The table references the documents and testimony from which Professor Gundlach concluded that USTC had these exclusive agreements. Even a cursory review of the cited record evidence, however, demonstrates that Professor Gundlach's opinion testimony that USTC has "exclusive agreements" with the listed retailers is completely baseless.[3]

For example, Professor Gundlach cites one page of a 22-page document and concludes that USTC has an "exclusive agreement" covering 2,400 Wal-Mart stores. The page cited is a letter from Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., indicating that Wal-Mart decided to use USTC product merchandisers and also to work with USTC in a "joint venture for the further development of the best possible merchandising selection for the Wal-Mart planograms." See USTC/CWD 274518, Tab 3. From this letter, Professor Gundlach concludes that USTC has an exclusive agreement with Wal-Mart despite the following undisputed record facts: (i) Robert Carlson, National Director of Wal-Mart Business for McLane's, Wal-Mart's distribution subsidiary, testified that Wal-Mart could decide tomorrow to use another company's display racks or to use display racks from more than one company, see Carlson Dep. at 24-25, Tab 4; (ii) he testified that USTC did not compensate Wal-Mart in any way for "vendor exclusivity," see id., Tab 4; (iii) he testified that Wal-Mart was not pressured or coerced in any way to accept the USTC display racks, see id., Tab 4; (iv) he testified that other moist snuff manufacturers have offered to provide customized display racks for the moist snuff products, see id. at 20, Tab 4; and (v) he testified that Wal-Mart's objective in selecting the USTC display rack was to provide a uniform look in all Wal-Mart stores for the moist snuff products, see id. at 22, Tab 4. Indeed, during his deposition, Professor Gundlach did not recall even reviewing the [3] Professor Gundlach does not even purport to suggest that USTC had any exclusive dealing agreements with retailers. But, in any event, any exclusive agreement that would possibly implicate the antitrust laws would also require a contractual commitment not to deal with competitors. Thus, for example, the unilateral decision of a retailer to use only USTC racks could not be an "exclusive" agreement.. See Jones v. Bordon, 430 F.2d 568, 571 (5th Cir. 1970); A-Barr Sales Co. v. Coca-Cola Co., No. 77 C 295, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14166, at 11-17 (N.D. Ill. 1981).

Carlson deposition and was unaware whether the deposition was taken. See Gundlach Dep. at 20-23, Tab 2.

Similarly, Professor Gundlach purports to rely on the testimony of Timothy Entwistle and on documents USTC/CWD 157844-46 and USTC/CWD 157849-50 to conclude that USTC had an exclusive agreement with K-Mart. See Tab 5. The documents cited, however, indicate on their face that the K-Mart program was a proposal made by K-Mart, not USTC, and the documents are plainly phrased as a report using the conditional: "if [USTC] participated." Professor Gundlach made no effort to determine whether USTC did in fact participate in the K-Mart program, or whether the program was ever implemented at K-Mart. Indeed, when asked if it would change his opinion if he were to discover that USTC never participated in the K-Mart program, Professor Gundlach testified that it would not. See Gundlach Dep. at 284-86, Tab 2; see also Stanke Dep. at 250-51, Tab 6 (testifying that the K-Mart program at issue was rejected by USTC). Nevertheless, Professor Gundlach includes all 2,160 K-Mart stores as locations where USTC has an "exclusive agreement."

As another example, Professor Gundlach concludes that USTC has an "exclusive agreement" with the Circle K (Tosco) chain, relying on a single document sent by Tosco Marketing Company, authorizing USTC to replace "current smokeless vending system," and informing the stores that USTC had developed a Circle K header card as the only P.O.S. authorized to be placed on the new vending system, not in the entire store. Thus, the only suggestion of exclusivity is the fact that Tosco preferred to have its own header card on the smokeless tobacco merchandiser. This is not an "exclusive agreement" as defined by the antitrust laws.

Likewise, Professor Gundlach concludes that USTC had an exclusive agreement with the 2,500 Southland (or "7-Eleven") stores despite the fact that the document cited clearly states that competitive products were in the stores, and that "upon request" of Southland division managers, USTC would provide additional rack facings for competitors' products. See USTC/CWD 025956-64, Tab 7. Moreover, the same document clearly indicated that Swisher-Helme racks would be used in all 7-Eleven stores. See id. These documents, therefore, do not even remotely suggest any "exclusive agreement."

These are just a few of the more obvious examples where the record in no way supports Professor Gundlach's "study." Yet these examples account for over 43% of the so-called exclusive agreements referenced in that "study." And it is equally true of all of the retailers listed by Professor Gundlach's "study" -- there is no evidence that any of these retailers were contractually bound to deal only with USTC regarding products, racks or P.O.S. Therefore, Conwood should not be allowed to try and have its void in evidence filled by Professor Gundlach's legally irrelevant and factually unsupported tabulation.

II. THE GUNDLACH STUDY IS NOT PROPER EXPERT TESTIMONY BECAUSE IT CONTAINS A LEGAL CONCLUSION

Even if Conwood could overcome the total lack of foundation for the exclusive agreements "study," the proposed testimony should still be precluded because it improperly assumes a legal conclusion which Conwood would have Professor Gundlach impart to the jury. Indeed, the essence of the proposed study and testimony is that USTC has "exclusive agreements" with over 22,000 retail locations. See Gundlach Study, Tab 1. Such testimony is improper expert testimony under Fed. R. Evid. 702 because it necessarily incorporates a legal conclusion -- i.e., that certain documents comprise "exclusive agreements." (Again, the point would remain the same if Professor Gundlach now attempts to change the word "exclusive" to "exclusionary.")

The Sixth Circuit has instructed that "the problem with testimony containing a legal conclusion is in conveying the witness' unexpressed, and perhaps erroneous, legal standards to the jury. This invades the province of the court to determine the applicable law and to instruct the jury as to that law.'" Torres v. County of Oakland, 758 F.2d 147, 150 (6th Cir. 1985) (citations omitted). The Sixth Circuit also has instructed that the relevant inquiry is "whether the terms used by the witness have a separate, distinct and specialized meaning in the law different from that present in the vernacular." Id. at 151; see also Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342, 1353-54 (6th Cir. 1994).

There can be no doubt that such testimony would convey Professor Gundlach's clearly erroneous legal standards to the jury. Professor Gundlach's deposition testimony reveals that, in order to reach the 22,000-location number, he used a rather inventive standard for "exclusive agreement." Critically, Professor Gundlach paid little attention to the duration of any so-called "exclusive agreement" (including whether or not it was terminable at will), see Gundlach Dep. at 133-35, Tab 2, or even to whether the terms of any so-called agreement were ever actually implemented at retail. See id. at 282-86, Tab 2 (Gundlach included K-Mart's 2,100 retail locations in the 22,000 total despite the fact that K-Mart's proposal to USTC was rejected). Indeed, according to Professor Gundlach, if a document suggested that a retailer placed the USTC display rack in the "number one" position and the Conwood display rack in the number two position, this would be an "exclusive agreement" in Professor Gundlach's view. See Gundlach Dep. at 77, 156-57, Tab 2; see also id. at 38-44, Tab 2 (testifying that exclusive vending could include situations where multiple racks from different companies were used by a given retailer). To refer to these "exclusive" or "exclusionary" agreements would clearly be a gross misstatement of the law. See supra n.3.

Moreover, any other Conwood expert who adopts the Gundlach "study" -- which, thus far, is each and every one of them -- will be offering legal conclusions as to whether certain documents comprise "exclusive agreements." These experts, as well, will be improperly using terms that have a "separate, distinct and specialized meaning in the law." Accordingly, under clear Sixth Circuit law, any expert testimony based on the Gundlach "study" is improper expert testimony and inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 702.

III. THE GUNDLACH STUDY AND RELATED TESTIMONY SHOULD BE EXCLUDED UNDER FED. R. EVID. 403

Finally, there are several reasons why the likely prejudice of the Gundlach "study" and testimony far outweighs any potential probative value.

First, Professor Gundlach's methodology, analysis and conclusions are highly suspect and of little probative value. It does not take a professor, or an expert of any kind, to sit down with plaintiff's counsel and tally up stores which, in counsel's view, contain an "indicia" of exclusivity. Further, as discussed above, the indicia used by Conwood's counsel and Professor Gundlach cannot, as a matter of law, be probative of the existence of exclusive agreements between USTC and the subject retailers. See Jones v. Bordon, 430 F.2d 568, 571 (5th Cir. 1970).

Second, the "study" and testimony is highly misleading and unfairly prejudicial. A jury could easily be misled into concluding that, because of these purported "exclusive agreements," Conwood is precluded from seeking to place moist snuff products, racks or P.O.S. in these retail stores. That is indisputably not the case. Moreover, the jury will likely be told that the "agreements," even if not exclusive, are "exclusionary" because they make it more difficult for Conwood to place products, racks and P.O.S. in these stores. That, too, would be nothing other than an attempt to mislead the jury into thinking that the antitrust laws are to protect Conwood from too much competition from USTC, which of course is not the law.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should enter an order precluding the introduction of any part of the Gundlach "study" as well as any related testimony.

OPINIONBY: GETZENDANNER

OPINION: MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Susan Getzendanner, District Judge:

Plaintiff A-Barr Sales Co. ("A-Barr") brought this action against the Coca-Cola Co. ("Coca-Cola") alleging violations of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act and Section 3 of the Clayton Act, as well as common law actions for breach of contract and tortious interference with a business relationship. Coca-Cola has moved for summary judgment as to all counts.

Before discussing the contentions of the parties regarding the antitrust claims, a brief comment on the role of summary judgment adjudication in antitrust actions is in order. In Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. 368 U.S. 464, 473 (1961), the Supreme Court reiterated the generally strict standard that must be met in order for a court to grant a motion for summary judgment; the Court then enunciated even greater concern regarding the propriety [*2] of summary judgment in antitrust cases:

> We believe that summary procedures should be used sparingly in complex antitrust litigation where motive and intent play leading roles, the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged conspirators, and hostile witnesses thicken the plot. (Footnote omitted.)

This case, however, is not a complex antitrust action. The facts and the alleged violation of the antitrust laws are relatively simple. Poller also does not preclude use of summary judgment in antitrust cases. Summary disposition remains appropriate particularly where genuine issues of fact and subjective states of mind are not at issue. Lupia v. Stella D'Oro Biscuit Co., Inc. 586 F.2d 1163, 1166 (7th Cir. 1978); Modern Home Institute, Inc. vs. Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co., 513 F.2d 102, 109 (2d Cir. 1975). Nonetheless, this Court has approached the pending motions with an awareness of the Supreme Court's directive to use summary judgment "sparingly" and of the precedents in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals which generally disfavor summary judgment.

Section 1 of the Sherman Act

A-Barr is a wholesale distributor and manufacturer of soft drink syrups, commonly known [*3] as "post-mixes." n1 It also leases and sells fountain syrup dispensing equipment to post-mix customers. Coca-Cola manufactures post-mixes in various flavors for sale to wholesale distributors, who in turn resell post-mixes to retail accounts.

> n1 Post-mixes are carbonated soft drinks mixed and dispensed on retail outlet premises through fountain syrup dispensing equipment. Syrups are combined with CO-2 in the equipment, so that the carbonated soft drinks are dispensed in drinkable form. The fountain equipment generally contains a number of valves, with a different flavor dispensed through each.

A-Barr alleges that Coca-Cola engaged in verticle price fixing by coercing wholesalers to resell the post-mixes within a range of 7%-9% over the wholesaler's cost. A-Barr further argues that Coca-Cola enforced this policy by informing retailers of every change in Coca-Cola's price to the wholesaler and by recommending to retailers only those wholesalers who complied with Coca-Cola's price guidelines. These actions, according to A-Barr, constitute a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

Coca-Cola contends that summary judgment is appropriate for the following reasons: (1) plaintiff [*4] is unable to show any joint action sufficient to constitute a contract, combination, or conspiracy as required under Section 1; (2) Coca-Cola's policy of notifying retailers regarding the price that Coca-Cola charges wholesalers serves to encourage rather than discourage competition; and (3) the damages which plaintiff seeks from the alleged price fixing are speculative and without proper foundation.

Although it is true that in order to succeed in proving price fixing under Section 1 of the Sherman Act plaintiff must show some joint action, such action may be evidenced by express, implied or inferred understandings. United States v. Parke, Davis & Co., 362 U.S. 29 (1960); Albrecht v. Herald Co., 390 U.S. 145 (1968). Coca-Cola asserts that it has shown through deposition testimony that the facts relied upon by A-Barr to support its allegations are not susceptible of the interpretation which A-Barr gives them, and that A-Barr consequently is obligated to offer evidence supporting its inference of joint action under Rule 56(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Lupia, supra, 586 F.2d at 1166; Modern Home Institute, supra, 513 F.2d at 109. Contrary to Coca-Cola's assertions, [*5] the Court finds that A-Barr has provided facts regarding defendant's policy of notifying retailers of prices charged to wholesalers which raise material questions of fact as to defendant's motive, and which raise an inference of joint action important to the price fixing allegation. Since material questions of fact have been raised, summary judgment is inappropriate.

Defendant also contends that A-Barr's price fixing allegation is an attempt to reduce competition rather than encourage it, and as such is an improper use of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc. 429 U.S. 477 (1977). While it is true that A-Barr's complaint is based upon its inability to charge higher prices and to make greater profits because of the maximum resale price allegedly set by Coca-Cola, it is clear that agreements imposing either minimum or maximum resale prices are illegal under Section 1. Albrecht, supra, n2 Keifer-Stewart Co. v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, 340 U.S. 211 (1951). If, as plaintiff claims, Coca-Cola did set a price range and forced wholesalers to set retail prices within that range, this would plainly have a deletrious effect on the free flow of competition, [*6] regardless of the ultimate effect on retail prices.

n2 The Supreme Court decision in Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania, Inc., 433 U.S. 36 (1977), may well threaten the viability of the Albrecht rule, which held maximum price fixing to be a per se violation of Section 1. However, even if maximum price fixing is to be judged under a rule of reason analysis rather than as a per se violation, summary judgment remains an inappropriate method of disposition of the claim.

Defendant's contention that A-Barr's price fixing claim is so speculative with respect to damages as to require summary judgment, is likewise without merit. The Supreme Court has established a relaxed standard for proof regarding the amount of damages once an antitrust violation has been shown. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc. 395 U.S. 100, 123-125 (1969). Moreover, even if plaintiff's proof of damages was no more than sheer speculation, the appropriate response would be for the Court to award nominal damages, not summary judgment. Newberry v. Washington Post Co. 438 F.Supp. 470, 483 (D.D.C. 1977).

Section 2 of the Sherman Act

Plaintiff alleges that Coca-Cola has monopolized the sale of [*7] post-mix colas in the Chicago area in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. Plaintiff bases its claim on the fact that, according to certain discovery documents, Coca-Cola accounted for 83% of the total sales of post-mixes in the Chicago area in 1974. n3 Plaintiff further alleges that Coca-Cola continues to take actions that serve to maintain its monopoly. These actions include Coca-Cola's equipment and marketing program, whereby Coca-Cola salesmen offer promotional and marketing programs directly to retailers. As part of this program, retail customers receive equipment and promotional signs n4 rent-free from Coca-Cola on the condition that the retailer uses Coca-Cola post-mixes on some of its fountain equipment. Plaintiff does not allege any illegality in Coca-Cola's requirement that retailers use Coca-Cola post-mixes in its equipment. Rather, plaintiff claims that as a result of Coca-Cola's alleged monopolization of the cola post-mix market, it was prevented from selling fountain dispensing equipment and from obtaining income through servicing of such equipment.

n3 Plaintiff's concept of the relevant market area is at best vague and at worst contradictory. In its complaint, A-Barr alleges that Coca-Cola has 90-95% of the cola post-mix market in Northern Illinois and Indiana. In its brief, however, A-Barr appears to argue that the relevant geographic area is "the Chicago area" and that the relevant product is post-mixes, rather than cola-post-mix. For purposes of this motion only, Coca-Cola has conceded that post-mix colas in the Chicago area are a relevant line of commerce and product market under Section 2.

n4 A-Barr does not allege any injury with respect to Coca-Cola's free distribution of signs to retailers. [*8]

Coca-Cola argues that it is entitled to summary judgment with respect to the monopolization claim on two grounds: (1) that there is no evidence of Coca-Cola's monopolization of the relevant market, and (2) that plaintiff's damage claim is legally insufficient to give it standing to assert a claim against Coca-Cola for violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

The offense of monopolization consists of two elements: the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power. United States v. Grinnel Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-571 (1966). Defendant has failed to convince the Court that genuine issues of fact and subjective states of mind are not at issue on the question of whether Coca-Cola monopolized the relevant market, and therefore, summary judgment cannot be granted on that ground.

Coca-Cola's second argument, however, does not involve any genuine issue of material fact or any question regarding motive or intent. The issue is whether plaintiff has alleged any facts demonstrating a violation that "fits" within the requirements for antitrust recovery under Section 2 of the Sherman Act--a question of law that can be answered [*9] by the Court. Lupia, supra, 586 F.2d at 1166. In simple terms, the law demands, either in terms of a standing doctrine, Multidistrict Vehicle Air Pollution M.D.L. No. 31 v. Automobile Manufacturers Ass'n, Inc., 481 F.2d 122 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Morgan v. Automobile Mfr. Ass'n, 414 U.S. 1045 (1973), or in terms of a requirement of antitrust damages, Brunswick, supra, that recovery be confined to those who have been injured by restraints imposed by defendant on competitive forces in the economy. Lupia, supra, 586 F.2d at 1168.

A-Barr grounds its claim for treble damages on Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, which reads:

Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in any district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit including a reasonable attorney's fee. (Emphasis added.)

The antitrust violation upon which plaintiff hinges its Section 4 claim is the monopolization proscription in Section [*10] 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. n5 Plainly, to recover damages A-Barr must prove more than that Coca-Cola violated Section 2, since such proof establishes only that injury may result. In order to bring its treble damage action, plaintiff must show that it was injured by reason of defendant's monopolization of the cola post-mix market.

n5 Section 2 reads as follows:

> Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor....

In Section 2 of the Sherman Act, Congress was not merely concerned with size, but with the obstruction to free trade and open competition that so frequently accompanies monopoly situations. U.S. v. Yellow Cab Co., 332 U.S. 218 (1947). This Section is aimed, not so much at improper conduct, as at a pernicious market structure where concentration of power saps the salubrious influence of competition. Berkey Photo, Inc. vs. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263 (2d Cir. 1979). Thus, assuming for purposes of this motion that Coca-Cola has monopolized the cola [*11] post-mix market in the Chicago area n6 and that A-Barr has suffered economic loss due to its inability to sell fountain dispensing equipment, the remaining question is whether A-Barr was injured "by reason of" defendant's monopoly and the anticompetitive forces arising therefrom.

n6 In its brief A-Barr also states that Coca-Cola has a monopoly in the fountain dispensing equipment market. However, since A-Barr has made no such allegation in its complaint and presents no support for this rather casual remark, the Court must ignore the claim, as it would any other unsupported assertion of fact.

A review of the uncontroverted facts indicates that plaintiff's difficulty in competing in the fountain dispensing equipment market is wholly unrelated to Coca-Cola's alleged monopolization of the cola post-mix market. A-Barr's problem arises, not because Coca-Cola has a monopoly of the post-mix market, but because the major producers of post-mix colas, Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, and Royal Crown Cola, all offer retailers fountain equipment free of charge on the condition that the products of those companies be used in the equipment. n7 Plaintiff finds difficulty in selling and servicing [*12] fountain equipment because it is attempting to sell a product that retailers already receive for free. Plaintiff's injury bears no relationship to the size of either Coca-Cola or its competitors. If Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, and Royal Crown Cola each controlled one-third of the cola post-mix market, plaintiff would suffer an identical loss. Thus, plain-the goods of the manufacturer does not run afoul of the section.

Defendant's characterization of the facts puts this case on all fours with the Meyberg decision, where one party terminated an agreement in order to impose a new contract that would include an exclusive dealing provision. No new contract was executed. [*17] The court held that it was manifest that there could be no violation of Section 3 since the old contract did not contain an exclusive dealing provision and no new contract was agreed upon. 215 F.2d at 100.

A-Barr's version of the facts does not compel a different outcome. A-Barr argues that its contract with Coca-Cola was not terminable at will, but rather that Coca-Cola's attempt to include an exclusive dealing provision constituted a breach of the existing contract. In making this argument, A-Barr effectively concedes that the existing contract did not include an exclusive dealing provision. (Complaint PP14, 15, 17). Moreover, nowhere does A-Barr allege that it complied with Coca-Cola's request for such a provision.Accordingly, even under A-Barr's characterization of the facts, A-Barr has not alleged any facts that show a completed contract with an exclusive dealing provision. As such, A-Barr cannot, as a matter of law, prove a violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act, and summary judgment will be entered against it on that claim.

Common Law Counts

Finally, A-Barr alleges in Counts II and III of the complaint that Coca-Cola's failure to reappoint A-Barr as its repackager [*18] constituted a breach of contract and that Coca-Cola tortiously interfered with a business relationship between plaintiff and a company called Beverage Dispensers. Coca-Cola has moved for summary judgment on both these common law claims.

In support of a motion for summary judgment, the moving party has the burden of showing that as a matter of law there is no dispute as to any genuine issue of fact material to a judgment in his favor. Cedillo v. International Association of Bridge & Structural Iron Workers, Local Union No. 1, 603 F.2d 7, 10 (7th Cir. 1979). The non-moving party is entitled to all reasonable inferences that can be made in its favor from the evidence in the record, United States v. Diebold, Inc. 369 U.S. 654, 655 (1962), and as a general rule, questions of motive and intent have been held to be particularly inappropriate for disposition on a motion for summary judgment. Conrad v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. 494 F.2d 914, 918 (7th Cir. 1974).

While the record clearly favors the defendant's position, the Court believes that at this stage of the case summary judgment is inappropriate. There appears to be a genuine issue of face as to whether or not there was a binding [*19] contract between the parties and plaintiff's tort action clearly involves questions of intent which are not properly resolvable upon the papers.

In summary, with respect to Count I of plaintiff's complaint, the Court grants Coca-Cola's motion for summary judgment as to the claims arising out of Section 2 of the Sherman Act and Section 3 of the Clayton Act, and denies its motion as to the claim arising under Section 1 of the Sherman Act. With respect to Counts II and III of plaintiff's complaint alleging contract and tort claims, defendant's motion for summary judgment is denied. It is so ordered.

Deposition of GREGORY T. GUNDLACH, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at

Q. Let's just stick to moist if you don't mind?

A. I actually think it's important to characterize the retail settings.

Q. Why is that?

A. Well, there's differences, buyer behavior, moist snuff customer in a convenience store versus a Wal-Mart varies, the price of the products vary whether or not you're in a mass merchandiser or convenience retailer or a gas mini-mart, the promotions available to some stores, the resources to those stores vary as well.

Q. Let's get back to Wal-Mart. What other factors did you look at? So far I have type of store and the products and I think you alluded to pricing in your last answer. Anything else?

A. The type of vendor arrangement. I'm speaking of housing of the product, the arrangement as it speaks to the exclusion of that vendor or particulars regarding the vendor, the type of POS available or constricted in the arrangement, the nature of the plan-o-gram and the current product mix prior to the agreement, the understanding that or assumption regarding how the product and the role of the product inside the store of a mass merchandiser, the type of vendor rack that was used. Have I missed any of the earlier ones that I had mentioned?

Q. What about the objectives of the retailer?

A. Oh, certainly in the Wal-Mart case being a low price provider, being a mass merchandiser, their more global objectives of being price competitive in the marketplace as well as the objectives of how the product category itself work within the other categories.

Q. Did you consider the actual objectives of Wal-Mart according to Mr. Carlson, the director of Wal-Mart sales?

A. I don't recall actually reading information directly from Mr. Carlson, but most of the promotional materials surrounding Wal-Mart and general knowledge and their role in the mass merchandise industry strongly suggest what their objectives are.

Q. So you did not read the deposition of Robert Carlson?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, that misstates his testimony.

THE WITNESS: I read quite a few depositions. As I sit here today I don't recall whether I did or did not read Mr. Carlson's deposition.

MR. ATHANASIA: Can you read back the previous answer, please?

THE REPORTER: "Answer: I don't recall actually reading information directly from Mr. Carlson --"

MR. ATHANASIA: Thanks.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. As you sit here today, can you tell me what Mr. Carlson testified Wal-Mart's objectives are as to the moist snuff category?

A. As I sit here today I have trouble recalling his particular specific objectives that characterize his testimony regarding moist snuff.

Q. As you sit here today can you give me a general idea as to what his testimony was to that effect?

A. It's difficult again to recall the specifics. I wouldn't want to characterize his particular objectives as I sit here today, not able to recall what his particular objectives were for the moist snuff category.

Q. Well, I think Mr. Carlson testified as to Wal-Mart's objectives for the moist snuff category, not his personal. Do you understand that's what I'm asking you?

MR. GUZMAN: Can we have that question read back, please?

THE REPORTER: "Question: Well, I think Mr. Carlson testified as to Wal-Mart's objectives for the moist snuff category, not his personal. Do you understand that's what I'm asking you?"

MR. GUZMAN: Again, I object to the question as ambiguous. It lacks time frame among other things.

MR. ATHANASIA: The testimony doesn't lack time frame.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Go ahead. You can answer.

A. Well, if I were provided -- if you have the information available I'd be glad to look at it particularly as we sit here today. I'm sure I could make some derivations from his testimony if you're speaking of the deposition.

Q. I assumed you had already read the Wal-Mart deposition, sir, but we'll move on.

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. Is there a question pending?

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

probably conclude that exclusive vending meant exclusive arrangement with regard to the vending system which would then mean that only UST racks were allowed inside the store.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. So your recollection and understanding, what you base your opinion on, Swisher was not allowed to place racks in the 7-Eleven stores under the agreement you're talking about?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, mischaracterizes his testimony.

THE WITNESS: Again as I interpret the arrangement that was discussed in that memorandum, I would have to infer from the use of the term exclusive vending that probably to mean that that was a state of objective that was desired on the part of Mr. Bonfiglio characterizing the agreement for the Southland stores.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. And that would in your opinion mean in your understanding that Swisher was not allowed to place racks in the 7-Eleven stores?

A. The extent of my understanding would be that that would be Mr. Bonfiglio's instructions in the characterization of the arrangement.

Q. If Swisher was in fact allowed, even under Mr. Bonfiglio's instructions, to place racks in 7-Eleven stores, would you still consider that to be an exclusive rack arrangement with United States Tobacco?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, misstates the testimony.

THE WITNESS: I suspect you're offering that as a hypothetical?

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Absolutely.

A. Given that type of hypothetical, I certainly want to have access to additional information to understand whether or not that's an exclusionary arrangement.

Q. If under the agreement you're referring to from Mr. Bonfiglio to his organization allows for Swisher to place racks in 7-Eleven stores, do you still consider that to be an exclusive rack arrangement between Southland and United States Tobacco?

A. Again without knowing more and using the term exclusionary or exclusive in the way that I am today, having additional information would help me to make further determination of that, but as we sit here without that information knowing what the vending arrangement was and the impact on consumers, what the prior arrangement was in terms of whether or not the exclusive arrangement meant a portion of a rack without understanding the specifics with regard to what it allowed Swisher to do, it's difficult to characterize. Exclusive vending to me means exclusive vending.

Q. Well, is it possible if a store uses a United States Tobacco rack and a Swisher rack that that's an exclusive rack, exclusive vending?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: If we're inferring what Mr. Bonfiglio stated in terms of exclusive vending and that's where I'm --

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. That's not my question really, sir, and I don't care if you answer for any store in the whole country. If a store is using a United States Tobacco rack and a Swisher rack, do you consider that to be exclusive vending in your definition?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: Again I'd have to know more additional details to determine whether or not it was exclusionary.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Exclusive, sir, exclusive.

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: With regard to Southland, my inferences are based on the use of the term exclusive vending.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. I believe my question was any store in the United States not limited to Southland, can we understand that?

MR. GUZMAN: Chris, he was giving an answer and you interrupted him. You want his answer or you want to raise a new question?

MR. ATHANASIA: I was hoping to get an answer to my question.

MR. GUZMAN: Why don't you ask a new question and then maybe he'll answer it if you let him. Is there a question pending?

MR. ATHANASIA: Yes.

MR. GUZMAN: Could you read the question back, please?

MR. ATHANASIA: I'll take care of it.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Any store in the country, if that store uses a United States Tobacco rack and a Swisher rack, do you consider that to be an exclusive rack?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, the question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: You're asking me whether or not one store?

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Any store.

A. In the large 2,200 chain of Southland --

Q. No, sir, I'm asking you any store in the 300,000 stores that sell moist snuff, any store, pick one, any one you like, if it uses a United States Tobacco rack and a Swisher rack, do you consider that exclusive vending?

A. If I'm looking at Southland, looking at that arrangement, and you recognize one store for me that contains a Swisher rack, all 99 point odd percent of the others contain only UST racks and the basis of that one store using a Swisher rack is in conflict with instruction from Mr. Bonfiglio to have exclusive vending, I don't know that my opinion would vary that would be exclusionary or exclusive, one store out of 2,200 stores.

Q. What if every single 7-Eleven store used a United States Tobacco rack and a Swisher rack for the moist snuff products, would you consider that exclusive vending?

A. Well, when we use the term exclusive vending, my use of the term, my inference for the term doesn't necessarily mean an exclusive rack, exclusive vending, and this is interesting in terms of the use of the term on the part of UST, exclusive vending could mean exclusive POS on a vendor. Could mean exclusive rack, could be some form of vending arrangement that characterizes the placement of the products point of sale on the products, the entire configuration of the set. I'd have to distinguish that from the exclusive use of a rack to determine whether or not that's exclusive vending.

Q. With regard to your report, when you use the word exclusive as in paragraph 15 of your rebuttal report, UST has an exclusive agreement, what do you mean by the word exclusive as an expert?

A. Exclusive would include the ability to constrain the competitive strategies including placement of product, display of product, pricing of product, promotion of product, brands carried, this would include some form of constriction of competition, constriction of a competitor's desired strategies.

Q. What degree of constraint in your mind, in your opinion as an expert would you need to call something an exclusive agreement?

A. I think we'd have to look at the impact that the arrangement agreement would have on competition to determine the nature of its exclusion.

Q. Did you ever look at this issue from the perspective of the retailer, whether the retailer is constrained from making decisions?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, the question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: Sure, the retailer signs an agreement dictating what they can or can't do and they are limited in terms of what they desire to do with their marketing strategies constrained in their ability to do them.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. And if a retailer is not constrained in any way, is that an exclusive in your opinion?

A. I think the most important focuses should be on the consumer in terms of implications of the arrangement in terms of the forms of competition.

Q. So with that focus on the consumer if a

Q. What if that competitor's display was simply moved to the number two position but the U.S. Tobacco vendor was moved into the number one position as a result of the payments and/or promotions to obtain the best display space?

A. Well, again I mean if you're characterizing it as the number one and two space, there's obviously been an exclusion from the number one space.

Q. So you still consider that to be exclusive?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, it misstates his testimony.

THE WITNESS: I like to use the term exclusionary.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. That's fair. Do you still consider that to be exclusionary?

A. Again I think it could be where you have a circumstance where that second display space happens to be located in the back of the store out of the view and traffic of customers, and the inducement on the part of in this case since we're talking about CAP, UST being the dominant player, the retailer chooses to remove that competitor's display to a retail industry. Did you do any work to quantify the number of retailers that are affected by these exclusionary programs?

A. Yes, attempted to look at the documents as they were in the record both the primarily the UST documents either in the form of contracts or other forms of retailer incentive programs including the CAP and ascertain then the number of retail locations that were generated or covered by these particular agreements. My findings were somewhere in the vicinity of 22,000 arrangements or agreements that fall under that broad continuum of the different programs that UST used that result in exclusion and upwards towards as I recall 35,000 CAP contracts, interpreting the plain meaning of the contracts, interpreting the plain meaning of how they've been described by UST employees, provide the basis for making those inferences, a number of retailers were identified based on UST documents or reference to secondary sources.

Q. And of the 22,000 retailers that you say you identified were part of exclusive dealing arrangements, what was the average duration of these arrangements in those 22,000 chains you analyzed, time duration?

A. As I recall looking at some of the -- and again let me clarify one thing. The term that I'm using is exclusionary versus exclusive dealing. You seem to be using exclusive dealing I'm using exclusionary. Exclusionary in my mind references competitive implications. That's really my interest. Now in terms of the numbers and the durations as I recall some of the contracts that I examined, the agreements did not specify duration. I can only assume that one side those are binding for whatever period of time is desired on the part of the parties. I'm not here to render a legal opinion as to whether or not the contract that's signed doesn't include some type of reference to a temporal time duration, is binding for a certain period. By inference plain interpretation would mean that they could be binding for a quite lengthy period of time or in perpetuity.

Q. Could they be terminable at will?

A. I don't recall seeing specific reference to that use of the term in many of those contracts.

Q. Did you see any time duration term in any of the exclusive contracts as you call them that you reviewed?

A. I think the CAP contract contains a clause that references time or term.

Q. Why don't you go ahead and look through that and find that for me.

A. I don't recall reference in the other documents though to duration or time. I have found now the term renewal and termination reference in the CAP contract that you provided me. I have read the term and renewal and termination --

Q. Can you read the last sentence of that paragraph for the record?

A. According to the document here it appears to reference the formal part of the Customer Alliance Program. Whether or not this reference is the informal dimension of the CAP contract, it does read either party may terminate this agreement without cause and at any time upon 30 days written notice.

Q. Refer you back to that, your report where you write, numerous CAP worksheets, that's on rebuttal paragraph 19.

A. Yes, I do see that.

Q. You use the term exclusive, am I correct, not exclusionary?

A. Yes, I do use the term exclusive.

Q. Paragraph 20 of your original report Exhibit 1 --

MR. GUZMAN: Pardon me, what was the

A. Well, again I didn't necessarily attempt to determine as a counting criteria the number of particular forms of exclusion, but more or less I was looking to the end result of whether or not exclusion was occurring as a result of the -- as represented by the documents that I had looked at.

Q. And what kind of quantitative analysis did you do to assess the number of CAP participants that had exclusive United States Tobacco point-of-sale materials in their stores?

A. Again I looked at the various representations as evidence in the contracts themselves, UST documents, UST memoranda, and derived from there an understanding of the overall level of exclusion, and my criteria more focused on that level than trying to make a distinction between whether or not it was a rack or whether or not it was POS on a rack or whether or not it was a rack and POS or whether or not it was a display versus a rack versus a modular. My focus was mainly on the exclusionary forms of agreements.

Q. Is it fair to say that you did not do anything quantitatively to separate out the different exclusionary features you identify in your report?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, ambiguous, you're still referring to exclusive in the CAP?

MR. ATHANASIA: Uh-huh.

THE WITNESS: Again I looked at the different documents that were available to me in the contracts as they represented the number of retail institutions where these features if one assumes that when one signs a contract the parties agree to the particular attributes of the arrangement, felt in rendering my opinion that was sufficient enough to be an indicia of some form, type of exclusion.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. I'm just trying to get a sense of if I were to separate exclusive vending from exclusive point-of-sale materials from what you call adherence to plan-o-grams, what work did you do within the CAP universe, CAP participants, did you do to separate those out and quantify each?

A. Well, as I mentioned I focused mainly on the level of exclusion and accepted the particular documents as they related to different forms of exclusion. After all the criteria of interest here is not whether or not a competitor has been injured by exclusion of a competitor's rack or POS. The important criteria is whether or not exclusionary outcomes have impacted competition.

exclusionary features but merely to determine whether or not exclusion was present or not.

Q. And would that be the same answer for if I tried to ask you just the number that had exclusive possible features?

A. Yes, it would.

Q. And also the third thing you described, adherence to require plan-o-grams?

A. Yes, it would.

Q. How about what we talked about earlier about a company getting the number one position and as you said excluding the -- another company from the number one position, would that be included in this 22,000?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: To the extent that I've characterized three major themes, the positioning of an exclusive display as you characterize it or a display in the number one position or the number two position, to the extent that I would view that as being exclusionary, it may or may not have been considered to be exclusionary. I would have to look at the, you know, the context of the specific circumstance and this gets to your point of identifying the particular features segregating them into components because in this particular case what we're looking at is often a combination of a variety of exclusionary features that in isolation may mean one thing but in aggregate may mean something entirely different.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. The third common theme you referred to is adherence to required plan-o-grams. Can you tell me what you mean by that? Are you referring to a retailer who cedes control of the product mix decisions in the stores to United States Tobacco?

A. What I'm describing here in terms of adherence to exclusionary plan-o-grams would be through some mechanism through some approach or process the -- UST is able to obtain the agreement of the retailer to utilize and implement a plan-o-gram that results in exclusionary outcomes.

Q. And can you just describe to me what you mean by exclusionary outcomes?

A. These would be arrangements where the number of products were reduced in terms of facings for a competitor product where the number of total products may have been reduced along with and part of the reduction of the number of facings of the

DEPOSITION OF GREGORY T. GUNDLACH

(Taken by Defendants)

Reported by: Robin Tokarz-Chimniak, CSR No. 084-001999

to attempt to obtain UST documents that provided information as to the agreement, as well as to provide further explanation of the nature of the agreement. So in that respect, the deposition of Mr. Entwistle in paragraphs 57 and 58, I think, provides additional explanatory as to the nature of the earlier-cited documents in the listing. 11:08:48 AM 11:08:59 AM 11:09:02 AM 11:09:05 AM 11:09:38 AM 11:09:38 AM 11:09:38 AM

Q. Can you tell me what specific testimony you're referring to on those pages? 11:09:38 AM 11:09:38 AM

A. I'm referring to all of the testimony on page 57 and 58, as providing further explanation as to the nature of the agreement. 11:09:38 AM 11:09:38 AM 11:09:41 AM

Q. So you're including the testimony about Wal-Mart on page 58 to -- as a citation for exclusivity about the Kmart stores? 11:09:42 AM 11:09:44 AM 11:09:49 AM

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. Can I see that for a second before you answer? 11:09:52 AM 11:10:04 AM

Could you read back his answer, too, please? 11:10:04 AM 11:10:04 AM

THE REPORTER: "Answer: I'm referring to all of the testimony on page 57 and 58, as providing further explanation as to the nature of the agreement." 11:09:38 AM 11:09:38 AM 11:09:41 AM 11:09:41 AM

MR. GUZMAN: I think that answer answers your question. Objection, asked and 11:10:23 AM 11:10:23 AM

answered. 11:10:25 AM
MR. ATHANASIA: Could we mark as 11:10:38 AM
Gundlach 7 another document cited. 11:10:40 AM (Whereupon Gundlach Exhibit
No. 7 was marked for identification.)
(Witness examines document.) 11:13:23 AM
THE WITNESS: I've reviewed Exhibit 7. 11:13:23 AM (Discussion off the record.)
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Professor Gundlach, on that document in 11:14:01 AM front of you, the first bullet point in the 11:14:04 AM memorandum, can you read that for the record, 11:14:08 AM please? 11:14:10 AM
A. "Kmart position" -- I believe, as it's 11:14:14 AM spelled p-o-s-t-i-o-n -- ":they need $50,000 from 11:14:20 AM USTSM to help subsidize the cost of the rack for 11:14:27 AM this new tobacco set. They are at this point 11:14:31 AM NEGOTIABLE," in capital letters. 11:14:33 AM
Q. Now, if you could turn to page 2 of the 11:14:37 AM document, do you see several bullet points that 11:14:45 AM say "if we participated"? 11:14:47 AM
A. Yes, I do. I see 1, 2, 3 of 13 bullet 11:14:50 AM points on the page. 11:15:02 AM
Q. Now, what is your understanding of who 11:15:05 AM

"we" refers to when it says "if we participated"? 11:15:07 AM
A. Well, the author of the memo is Mike 11:15:20 AM Stanke. My sense is that is referring to United 11:15:22 AM States Tobacco. 11:15:37 AM
Q. Now, did you do anything to determine 11:15:40 AM whether United States Tobacco participated in the 11:15:42 AM program that is outlined in that document? 11:15:47 AM
A. Again, Chris, it's hard. 11:16:16 AM
MR. GUZMAN: I'm sorry, let me object 11:16:16 AM before you answer. 11:16:16 AM
The question is ambiguous, and again, I 11:16:16 AM note there are more documents cited with respect 11:16:16 AM to the Kmart entry on the table. We're looking 11:16:16 AM at one of three documents, one of multiple pages 11:16:16 AM cited. 11:16:16 AM
THE WITNESS: I would find difficulty 11:16:19 AM in answering your question without having the 11:16:19 AM additional materials in front of me as well. 11:16:20 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA: 11:16:22 AM
Q. Aside from reading the additional 11:16:23 AM materials listed on the table, did you do 11:16:25 AM anything to determine whether United States 11:16:27 AM Tobacco participated in the program, as outlined 11:16:29 AM on that memorandum? 11:16:32 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Which memorandum are you 11:16:34 AM referring to, Chris? 11:16:35 AM

THE WITNESS: Again, we reviewed the 11:16:46 AM entire body of evidence in the case, and this 11:16:47 AM matter is ongoing. That would include documents 11:16:52 AM such as the one characterized in Exhibit 7, which 11:16:56 AM would be an internal memoranda of UST, as well as 11:17:01 AM depositions, Conwood employee depositions, 11:17:05 AM internal Conwood documents. 11:17:13 AM So if by your question do you mean did 11:17:18 AM we refer to those that, body of evidence, yes. 11:17:22 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Who is the author of that document? 11:17:28 AM
A. As it's characterized on page 3, 11:17:36 AM
Michael R. Stanke. 11:17:38 AM
Q. Did you read the deposition of 11:17:41 AM
Mr. Stanke to determine if US Tobacco 11:17:42 AM participated? 11:17:44 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, the question is 11:17:47 AM ambiguous. 11:17:48 AM
THE WITNESS: I believe I did, but I 11:17:54 AM can't recall either way whether or not, for this 11:17:55 AM particular question, if I did or did not. 11:17:57 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Do you recall Mr. Stanke testifying 11:18:05 AM that Kmart asked for $50,000 from USTSM for 11:18:07 AM exclusive vending? 11:18:11 AM

MR. GUZMAN: Are you asking if that's 11:18:16 AM his understanding?
MR. GUZMAN: He's characterizing 11:18:18 AM evidence. We have no way of knowing whether he's 11:18:18 AM characterizing correctly or incorrectly. It's a 11:18:22 AM hypothetical; potentially an incomplete 11:18:25 AM hypothetical. Without the documents, it's 11:18:28 AM impossible to answer that. 11:18:30 AM
THE WITNESS: Without looking at the 11:18:31 AM document -- and my sense is that you have it in 11:18:32 AM front of you -- it would be difficult to be able 11:18:36 AM to answer whether or not Mr. Stanke actually used 11:18:40 AM those words within the context of the deposition. 11:18:43 AM I'd be happy to look at it, if you have 11:18:48 AM
it. 11:18:50 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Let me ask you this. If Mr. Stanke 11:18:53 AM testified that United States Tobacco declined 11:18:55 AM Kmart's offer that US Tobacco pay $50,000 for 11:18:59 AM exclusive vending, would that change your opinion 11:19:03 AM or change this chart in any way? 11:19:05 AM
A. I don't know that it would. 11:19:14 AM
Q. You also said that you reviewed the 11:19:15 AM deposition testimony of Conwood personnel, 11:19:17 AM

Dear Rich,

I would like to take this opportunity to respond back to the letter that was sent to Beth Schommer on October 1st, 1996 regarding the "New Moist Smokeless Tobacco Merchandising System". I have discussed all the different points that were covered in the letter with Beth. Our McLane Category Merchandising Group will continue to work together with U. S. Tobacco in a joint venture for the further development of the best possible merchandising selection for the Wal*Mart planograms.

Together we recognize the following points:

1. U. S. Tobacco owns the moist merchandising racks.
2. U. S. Tobacco agrees to replace any shop-worn or damaged fixtures on a timely basis.
3. Wal*Mart will feature their store name on the large message area on this display, and U. S. Tobacco will be allowed to feature their brand names in a repeating manner in the background area of the pricing billboard.
4. Only Wal*Mart and U. S. Tobacco will be allowed to place point-of-sale material or any other type of communication on this merchandising system. All point-of-sale material must be approved by Wal*Mart.
5. The placement of these merchandising systems will begin February 17, 1997, and will include all the Wal*Mart stores with 8 foot, 12 foot, 16 foot, and 20 foot sections.

The conditions stated above will allow us jointly to enhance the growth of moist smokeless tobacco sales, and bring a greater level of satisfaction to the Wal*Mart customer.

Thank you,

MR. GORSUCH: I'm -- I'm sorry. I apologize, Mr. Carlson. If you'll just leave me one little second to get in there --

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

MR. GORSUCH: -- I'll be grateful. Objection, vague and ambiguous, misstates prior testimony. Go ahead.

A. When a promotion is presented and approved to the home office, at that time, that section is also approved for the use of POS to communicate the promotion.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Okay. So in fact, have Conwood promotions been -- been communicated through use of this promotion strip in Wal-Mart stores?

A. Conwood has been approved -- To my knowledge, Conwood has been approved through -- in the annual calendar to use that section.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned earlier, when I asked you if the -- if the vendor designed by U.S. Tobacco met Wal-Mart needs, you said it does currently. Let me ask you with respect to the future, does con -- does Wal-Mart -- do Wal-Mart and McLane's re-evaluate periodically the way that vendors such as this one are meeting Wal-Mart's needs?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. Have other manufacturers of moist snuff offered to provide customized racks to Wal-Mart for moist snuff?

A. Yes, they have.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Prior to the adoption of the current vendor designed by U.S. Tobacco, was there -- what was the status of point-of-sale advertising on the racks in Wal-Mart stores?

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, lack of foundation.

A. To my knowledge, there wasn't. Excuse me. No. Prior to the cabinet, it was whatever was available in the particular rep's car, and that was hung throughout the department or put up throughout the department.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) And so with the adoption of this cabinet and the use of the Wal-Mart header card, was that part of the objective to make each one look the same from store to store, each rack look the same from store to store?

A. To my knowledge, yes.

MR. GORSUCH: I'm sorry. I wasn't able to get in there.

THE WITNESS: I didn't pause.

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, lack of foundation. Thanks.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) In choosing -- Excuse me. In continuing to work with U.S. Tobacco in connection with the cabinet that you're currently using, what factors with regard to U.S. Tobacco's resources are important to Wal-Mart and McLane's?

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, vague and ambiguous.

A. Can you repeat that for me, please?

Q. Has U.S. Tobacco been able to provide a customized cabinet that accommodates all moist snuff products?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, currently, with the cabinets that are in place in the Wal-Mart stores around the country, are you aware of any problems with those racks, those cabinets?

A. I'm not aware of any problems as far as structurally. In some cases, the cabinet may be too big for the store's needs. As you know, the environment changes constantly in the category, but besides that, it's -- there's no problems that I'm aware of.

Q. Has U.S. Tobacco been open to suggestions that Wal-Mart has had on how to make the cabinets better or how to -- for example, how to deal with the concern that the cabinets be the proper size for each store?

A. Yes, they have.

Q. Can Wal-Mart and McLane's make a decision at any time to -- to change the vending system in the Wal-Mart stores?

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, lack of foundation.

A. Yes, they can, to my knowledge.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Is there anything at all about the relationship between United States Tobacco Company and McLane's and Wal-Mart that would prevent McLane's and Wal-Mart, for example, from making a decision tomorrow to use multiple racks; in other words, a rack from U.S. Tobacco and a rack from Conwood and a rack from Swisher?

MR. GORSUCH: Same objection.

A. There's nothing that I know of today.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Did United States Tobacco pay either Wal-Mart or McLane's for any vendor exclusivity in Wal-Mart stores?

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, vague and ambiguous.

A. Can you repeat that question, please?

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Yes. Did United States Tobacco pay anything to Wal-Mart or McLane's in exchange for an agreement by Wal-Mart and McLane's not to use, for example, a Conwood rack?

MR. GORSUCH: Same objections.

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Mr. Carlson, are you aware of Wal-Mart or McLane's having felt any pressure from United States Tobacco as a result of any threat by U.S. Tobacco that it would remove its racks from the Wal-Mart stores if certain conditions weren't met?

MR. GORSUCH: Objection, lack of foundation, vague and ambiguous.

A. No, I'm not.

Q. (Mr. Reed continued.) Now, could you describe what a planogram is?

A. A planogram is a schematic or an outline for the stores to follow to set their departments.

Q. And does Wal-Mart use planograms?

K-MART NOTES FROM SEPTEMBER 25, 1996 MEETING

(K-MART A TIGER OF AN ACCOUNT)

Enclosed are some notes regarding our discussion with Bill Burgess Senior buyer at K-Mart corporation. These notes are my interpretation of the meeting and will be listed in bullet point form. If you have any questions regarding any of this information please feel free to contact me .

* K-Mart postion:they need $50,000 from USTSM to help subsidize the cost of the rack for this new tobacco set. They are at this point NEGOTIABLE.

* This is the first consistent plan-o-gram the K-Mart has ever participated in which will cover all 2200 location and will provide consistency, integrity, merit, and a reference point to manage the category on an ongoing basis.

* On October 2, 1996 they are moving the cigarettes from the front wall to register #2 in all locations improving their positioning.

* Implementation of the new OTP and smokeless plan-o-gram to become effective January 2, 1996 and set that week.

* Current estimate according to the Nielsen figures is that K-mart does approximately 18 million dollars in moist smokeless sales with no real consistency in terms of product mix or merchandising to their current sets.

* K-Mart is looking to implement an automatic replenishment system in 1997. Currently they are working out some bugs and until everything is running smooth they will not begin execution of this program.

* Currently Bill Burgess stated that we are the only company that has not agreed to cost share the building of this fixture and none of the other consumer product companies have even blinked an eye.

USTC/CWD 157844
CONFIDENTIAL
16dii003565

* Of the 2200 location 83-90% of them will have a 10 foot set and 7-10% will have a 15 foot set with this new plan-o-gram.

* Bill mentioned that he would discuss the possibility of pushing out FOUR promotions during the 1997 year if that is what it takes to get us to participate in this cost share. Details must be specific and worked out prior. He said bring the information to the table.

* If we participated we could have exclusive vending for the single and roll units it that is what it takes.

* If we participated we could negotiate exclusive advertising on the smokeless brands and category. The possibility of a specialty header card or advertising was entertained as well.

* If participated we would have some control as to the initial set in terms of product mix including non tobacco products.

* The money for the cost of this fixture is going directly to the manufacturer Bill mentioned.

* K-Mart is going to execute a training program in regard to this category. We will have a specific contact at store level to discuss any concerns with and that has some specific knowledge of this category. He would allow us to participate.

* The Nielsen information that we just provided him with he would like the sample size of the survey and a list of locations that this information came from.

* Bill mentioned that the spend rate of current manufactures that deal with K-Mart is a minimum of 5% of total business dollars.

* This is a one time investment and the commitment time could be negotiated anywhere form one to five years. We need to define this clearly if we are going to participate. We could negotiate future store openings, new product introductions, etc.

* Bill would provide us an opportunity to review the category on an on going basis.

 K-Mart is putting this program in a Space Man which possibly could be linked directly to UST(with negotiations) to receive data an a daily basis about K-Marts. We would then have the capabilities to have not only Wal-Mart information but K-Marts as well encompassing over 3/4 of the mass merchandise trade class.(Similar to retail link)

* We could work all the details out in a contractual for payment over a period of time with holding any monies for non compliance issues as a check and balance.

* He mentioned they are going to start a direct mail program exclusive to tobacco consumers and he would consider letting us get involved. Possibly at a cost but he did say bring it to the table and we will discuss it.

* If we do not participate the result mentioned could be: Conwood house and control the merchandising , and some of the distribution of our products, or just not including us in the plan-o-gram. These two point were mentioned.

* Execution at store level would be communicated down and we would have a contact. If at any time we encountered a deviation of the plan-o-gram we would just call Bill and he would take care of it. As well as any unethical behavior would not be tolerated and those involved would be disciplined so that we wouldn't have to police this in the field.

These are just some of the note that I did take during the meeting and spelled out accordingly. This information is just to let you all know what took place and the direction K-Mart is taking in regards to this category. Feel free to make any suggestion or comments regarding this situation.

Best of Luck,

Michael R. Stanke

March 19, 1998

Dear Bill,

It has been almost a year since K-Mart and U. S. Tobacco entered into an agreement to turn K-Mart's tobacco departments into a destination category. I wanted to take this opportunity to reflect on the reasons why U. S. Tobacco was chosen to be the Moist Snuff Category Captain.

The top 15 moist items in the mass merchandiser trade channel account for more than 86% of dollar sales. U. S. Tobacco brands account for 81.2% of these dollars with 12 of the top 15 brands being U. S. Tobacco.

U. S. Tobacco is the only Company in the moist smokeless industry to complete an opportunity study specifically for K-Mart. Highlights of this presentation included:

* Moist Snuff was underdeveloped in K-Mart by 10.6 share points, with U. S. Tobacco brands specifically underdeveloped by 13.1% share points.

* In a 13-week period, Moist Snuff in K-Mart was the only segment posting an increase, +2.2% in the oral segment.

* Moist space share is underdeveloped in K-Marts by 22.9% relative to the dollar share of market.

* In a 52 week period moist smokeless tobacco generated $290,000,904. Of this, one (1) product Copenhagen single can commands 34.6% or $100,387,819 share.

Bill, I could continue on with many facts relating to brand strength and performance, however, U. S. Tobacco brings even more to the table. We have the largest field sales force in the smokeless tobacco industry. This enabled us to provide the manpower required to undertake a reset program the size of K-Mart. Additionally, in good faith, we agreed to be true category partners in providing merchandising for all round can products, not just U. S. Tobacco brands.

USTC/CWD 157849
CONFIDENTIAL
16diii003369

The cost of producing single can vendors was a sizeable investment, let alone the 2 for 1 slots that had to be specially manufactured. This project, overall has been a big commitment for U. S. Tobacco, however, we did not ask for our competitors to share the cost.

A few weeks ago, we met and reflected on what we had learned from the 1997 store reset. We were excited about the development of the OTP 2 1/2 foot rack and what it would do for the category both short and long term. Now, however, we are somewhat disillusioned with the decision to exclude U. S. Tobacco from this space, due to our unwillingness toshare the cost. It is with disappointment that U. S. Tobacco must step away from this project. We have decided not to ship any more merchandising systems to K-Mart Stores. Our sales representatives will continue to make retail calls and during the call, if a new merchandiser is needed, one will be placed.

Bill, we feel the decision that you have made will answer only short term objectives. Long term, you are giving up the opportunity to participate in the only retail incentive program in the smokeless industry. As we first discussed October 14, 1997, the Customer Alliance Program C.A.P., would have paid K-Mart up to 8¢ per roll for performance. We believe that, as U. S. Tobacco sells 8 out of every 10 cans, K-Mart in a year period would have had the opportunity to generate more than $4.85 per SKU.

At your earliest convenience, please call so that we can discuss the outstanding issues.

Sincerely,

Sherry

RE: 7-Eleven

We have had a positive breakthrough with Tom Bonfiglio, the new buyer at Southland. After Don Blackburn and Dave Untiedt held two meetings with him, we won exclusive vending for all single can brands and received permission to feature our faceplate on these vending systems.

Strategically it would make sense for us to produce "2 for 1" slots for all our vending systems in order to support our category management efforts, disrupt the competitive message and have the ability to dominate retail with the newly proposed Chain Retail Incentive Program.

Attached please find a recap from Don and a letter from Tom. Thanks for your consideration.

SUBJECT: THE SOUTHLAND CORPORATION / 7 ELEVEN
SMOKELESS MERCHANDISING & MARKET STATUS

The purpose of this letter is to outline and deliver an agreement that we have reached with the Southland Corporation, as it pertains to merchandising smokeless tobacco and to provide you with updated information on Southland's marketing strategies. Enclosed please find a letter from Tom Bonfiglio, Category Manager and a listing of Southland division offices that includes a cross reference of U. S. Tobacco field contacts and Southland's "All Market Core List."

Merchandising:
* Key points of the agreement as listed on Tom Bonfiglio's letter.

1. This agreement provides us with vendor exclusivity.
2. There are to be no double facings for either Conwood or Pinkerton products.
3. The only POS allowed on our vendors for competitive products will be the product vendor label U. S. Tobacco can reinstate the use of color graphics header cards, exclusively to the single can merchandiser.
4. We will continue to supply the use of #1619 vendors as needed as Southland would like to maintain self serve as long as possible. Additionally we have introduced the #3103 as an alternative to accommodate possible self serve regulations. For your information we are also working with Southland Corporate to include the #3103 into a couple of back bar re-merchandising tests currently underway
5. Swisher will continue to provide their own merchandiser.
6. Southland understands that we can not supply facings for non-tobacco products.
7. All competitive management has been copied with Tom Bonfiglio's letter.

The attached letter from has been sent to their Division offices I think you will agree that it will be in our best interest to follow up with these divisions as soon as possible. Historically speaking we have not had such an opportunity in quite some time with Southland. I am confident that together as a team we can get this done and prove our partnership value. We recommend that you gain a specific letter of authorization from your respective Southland division contacts before you forward this correspondence to the field for action Please keep in mind that the Southland corporate office can provide only a recommendation to the franchise operations If at all possible we would like for contact to be made with the Southland division offices by May 15, 199" For your information we have a scheduled appointment with Southland on May 2, 199" to discuss other business and to follow up on our progress with merchandising to date.

All Market Core List:

The Southland Corporation does not do strict planograms. They do layouts only, as it relates to their All Market Core List. (See attached list and key reference) N = National (must be there) R = Regional (must be there) All other brands not listed on the Core list are optional.

Division Contacts:

According to the input I have received from each of you and Southland the attached cross reference contact list should be correct. Primary contacts for Cigarettes and Tobacco outside of the Non-Foods Merchandising Manger in each of the divisions are identified with an (*) asterisk. We know that the Central, Chesapeake and Florida divisions are comprised of all corporate locations and account for 1,989 stores of Southland's approximate 2,100 total corporate locations

Corporate Strategies:
Notes taken from meeting with Tom Bonfiglio 3-19-97

* Typical consumer. 34 year old, white, male
* They want to build transactions with existing consumer base
* Store growth is directed to white collar positioning
* 40% of sales are accounted for by 60-70% of their shoppers
* Franchises are provided recommendations on all strategies
* 150 - 200 new store openings in 1997 (will have new Rouston back bar fixture)
* 2,000 will be remodeled in 1997
* Division personnel will communicate store openings and remodels to us
* Developing 5 year plan
    - will include a 5 year financial plan model (size, profits, spending)
    - Wants to receive as much data available to determine whether category is viable
    - Wants to see how 7 Eleven performs - compared to category
* Have interest in a multipack or roll offer

Scanning:

* Installation of systems starts by June 1997 (1 yr. to completion)
* Once system is in, they may eliminate product retail exchanges to eliminate possibilities of vendors bringing in unauthorized items
* Southland believes it is their job to order and rotate
* Project that a handful of franchise locations will not participate
* They want to eliminate distractions to clerks from servicing vendors
* Could move to eliminate vendor activity in stores altogether
* Scanning will make pricing programs more effective- includes implementation of price book management

Thank you in advance for your assistance with this important project with a very important customer. Should anyone have any questions, concerns or ideas please give me a call. (Audix: 6539#) (Phone: 871-831-8171)

SUBJECT Smokeless Moist Snuff Display

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I would like to explain an agreement that has been reached with U. S. Tobacco regarding display of single can smokeless tobacco.

We have product recommended in this sub-category from a number of manufacturers:

U. S. Tobacco	-	Copenhagen and Skoal products.
Conwood	-	Kodiak and Hawken products.
Pinkerton	-	Timberwolf (Value Price).
Swisher	-	Redwood / Silver Creek (Value Price Twin Packs).

There seems to be some confusion as to how to merchandise this product. Do we use the rack provided by U. S. Tobacco exclusively for their product? How do we get racks from the other companies? What kind of Point of Purchase do we allow on the racks? These are some questions I have already heard.

USTC/CWD 025962
CONFIDENTIAL

16diii003381

I have met with U. S. Tobacco and have come to the following understanding with them.

1. They will provide, upon request, additional channels to their basic fixtures which can be used to merchandise product from Conwood and Pinkerton.

2. The channels that a store utilizes to display Conwood and Pinkerton products are to be labeled with the brands by Conwood/Pinkerton Reps at the store. Only one channel per SKU should be allocated (no double facings of Conwood/Pinkerton products).

3. There will be no other signage for Conwood/Pinkerton products on the display, and the front facsia of the fixture will be fully utilized for U. S. Tobacco graphic as shown on the attachments.

4. Be sure to have a store pricing gun sticker on each channel with current retail. This is important for customer communication and also provides some identification of the value price brand.

5. A by-Division listing of U. S. Tobacco contacts has been prepared and is provided to you along with this letter. These will be the individuals to contact for all fixturing needs.

6. There are two basic U. S. Tobacco fixtures now available.

   #1619 - 7 WIDE FIXTURE - (see attached)

   This is the in-line fixture currently in use in many of our stores.
   In addition, there are three different size channel extenders available,
   #1953 - One can wide extender
   #1953 - Two can wide extender
   #1953 - Three can wide extender

   #3103 - 10 WIDE FIXTURE - (see attached)

   This is a new design that is wider and higher than the #1619, but is not as deep, 6 1/2 " as opposed to 11 1/2 " on the #1619. This may be a better option for some stores, particularly if regulations require us to relocate smokeless product to a clerk-serve location.
   Extenders are also available,
   #3104 - One can wide extender
   #3104 - Two can wide extender
   #3104 - Three can wide extender

   So each store can be provided the numbers of channels they need to accommodate the exact number of items in this sub-category they carry. If they delete or add items, they can delete or add channels.

SN[illegible]

U. S. Tobacco is making the use of their fixtures available to merchandise all three brands in the effort to support Southland Corporation, as we are a key retailer of this product. They cannot provide unlimited fixturing to the whole retail world in this manner, so the fixtures and extenders will not be stocked at McLane. They have committed to promptly deliver anything we request to either Division or Market location, and could deliver directly to store if you desire.

Swisher "Buy One Get One" Package

For those stores who carry the Redwood / Silvercreek packages, there are no U. S. Tobacco racks that will accommodate this product. Swisher has display racks for this product. We only recommend one, the PV2T-4F, an illustration of this is attached. If these are needed, contact your local Swisher Rep, and if you do not have a contact, let me know and I will put someone in touch with you.

Non-Tobacco Moist Chew

There are two brands of these products that pretty much own this business, Smokey Mountain Chew and Oregon Mint. Oregon Mint is strong in the Northwest, while Smokey Mountain is capturing shares in the Midwest and Southwest.

These products are NOT to be merchandised in the smokeless tobacco fixture. Both of these products come in a inner pack display carton that should be used, as it identifies the product as a non-tobacco alternative to regular roll tobacco. This is also a product that can remain as self-serve on a gondola display if and when the tobacco products are required to be clerk-serve.

I am meeting with suppliers in an effort to develop a listing of display fixture options that will be available if the FDA regulations scheduled for August 28, 1997, are not put on hold. This would require all cigarettes, chewing and plug tobacco and dry/moist snuff to all be clerk-serve. It does NOT include cigars or pipe tobacco. However we are starting to see local ordinances being enacted which are even more restrictive than the FDA, and do include cigars and pipe tobacco.

As soon as I have this display fixture listing completed, I will provide it to you along with the information on how to obtain them.

If there are any questions on this issue, please let me know. If we use this opportunity to take control of the way we display smokeless tobacco, we can eliminate the "turf wars" that go on between the vendors in our stores.

Thank you,

Tom Bonfiglio

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE FOR AN ORDER SIMPLIFYING THE ISSUES AT TRIAL AND FACILITATING THE DISPOSITION OF THIS LAWSUIT

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully move this Court for an order in limine formulating and simplifying the issues to be decided at trial, including the elimination of redundant or unnecessary claims. As described below, Conwood set forth in its trial brief claims and related evidentiary theories that either: (i) were not pursued in discovery and are unsupported by any record evidence; or (ii) would be duplicative and confusing to any jury. Accordingly, USTC respectfully requests that this Court issue an order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, to ensure the "just, speedy and inexpensive disposition of the action." Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(16).

ARGUMENT

In its trial brief Conwood in effect asks this Court to transplant its Lanham Act claim and certain of its state law claims straight from the Complaint into the trial without Conwood having pursued these claims in discovery. It would be a waste of judicial resources, as well as confusing for the jury, to burden any trial with claims by Conwood that were essentially (and understandably) ignored for almost two years. Conwood's trial brief and proposed jury instructions also reveal an intent to pursue an attempted monopolization claim that is, at best, duplicative of and encompassed by its monopolization claim, and, at worse, contradicted by its claim that it is USTC's use of actual monopoly power that is harming Conwood. Either way, it would serve no purpose to burden this Court and the jury with duplicative evidence and argument, as well as significantly more jury instructions, when any Section 2 theory by Conwood will rise or fall with its actual monopolization claim. Accordingly, this Court should issue a pretrial order eliminating all but the central claims of this lawsuit.

I. There Are No Triable Issues of Fact In Four of Conwood's Claims

In the twenty-one month history of this litigation, Conwood has failed to gather or present any evidence that would support its claims against USTC under (1) the Lanham Act; (2) the Kentucky state law standard for product defamation; (3) the Kentucky state law standard for tortious interference with contract/tortious interference with prospective business relations; or (4) Kentucky Revised Statute 365.050 (Unfair Competition) ("KRS 365.050"). Accordingly, these claims should be precluded by an appropriate pretrial order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 16.

Tellingly, Conwood's trial brief does not represent that it will elicit evidence at trial to support these claims. Instead, Conwood simply lists "pertinent factual questions" without indicating how any answers can or will be reached:

- Lanham Act: "whether UST sales personnel misleadingly represented that Conwood products contain fiberglass, stems, or other imperfections . . . misleadingly represented that Conwood dating methods are unreliable . . .whether UST advertised its Copenhagen products with false or misleading "made on" dates to gain an advantage over rivals"

16diii003385

- Tortious Interference With Contract/Tortious Interference With Prospective Business Relations: whether "UST induced or otherwise caused a third person not to perform an existing contract with Conwood"

- Product Defamation: "whether UST misrepresented that Conwood products contain fiberglass, stems, and other impurities"

- Kentucky Revised Statute 365.05: "whether UST provided secret rebates and promotions to certain retailers (such as Wal-mart) that were not offered to other retailers . . . whether such secret rebates and promotions tended to harm competition."

Pls. Tr. Br. at 14, 15, and 16. These could have been "pertinent factual questions" during discovery, but they were not pursued with any success by Conwood. Instead, for the first time since Conwood drafted its Complaint, these claims have been resurrected and presented as claims to be pursued by Conwood at trial. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, this Court should issue a pretrial order eliminating these dormant claims at trial.

A. Conwood's Claims Utterly Lacking In Evidentiary Bases Should Be Eliminated From Trial

The law is well established that when issues such as these are raised "in an altogether off-hand manner, late in the trial proceedings," those issues should be eliminated "as unworthy of trial." Smith v. Gulf Oil Co., 995 F.2d 638, 642 (6th Cir. 1991) (affirming district court's preclusion of one of plaintiff's theories of liability before trial as a matter of law). "Conclusory allegations, if not supported by facts, do not create an issue which should be reserved for trial. Specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial must be set forth." Vincenty v. Eastern Air Lines, 528 F. Supp. 171, 173 (D.P.R.1981). Accordingly, an order in limine excluding these issues from trial is warranted. It would both simplify this proceeding and avoid unnecessary proof, in accordance with the purpose of Fed. R. Civ. P. 16. See Porter-Cooper v. Dalkon Shield Claimants Trust, 49

F.3d 1285, 1286 (8th Cir. 1995) (affirming district court's order in limine narrowing issues for trial under Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)).

As described below, these principles apply with full force to Conwood's Lanham Act claim and state law defamation claim. USTC is unaware, for example, of any evidence, in the record which even suggests that USTC sales representatives falsely represented that Conwood products contained fiberglass or stems; that USTC misled anyone that Conwood dating methods are unreliable; or that USTC misled anyone with respect to Copenhagen dating practices. Conwood simply never sought to develop these allegations in any fashion. Likewise, USTC is unaware of any evidence that any product defamation took place within the state of Kentucky.

With respect to Conwood's tortious interference with contract claim, USTC is similarly unaware of any evidence in any way suggesting that USTC intentionally and tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship or business relationship that Conwood may have had with anyone. Again, Conwood completely ignored this claim during discovery.

Accordingly, this Court should preclude Conwood from pursuing these claims at trial.

B. Conwood's Theory of A KRS 365.050 Violation Is Insufficient On Its Face To Merit Jury Consideration

With respect to Conwood's claim under KRS 365.050, USTC is unaware of any evidence that it entered into "secret" agreements with any retailers, or for that matter any relationships at all that meet the elements of KRS 365.050 -- i.e., payments or allowances that were not offered to other retailers and that tended to harm retailers. For the first time in this litigation, however, Conwood has presented the evidentiary theory in its trial brief under which it plans to accuse USTC of violating the Kentucky Unfair Competition Law. For this claim, Conwood states that it will put on evidence that USTC "[a]lloted Wal-Mart millions of dollars more in rebates and promotions to make up for Wal-Mart's losses." Pls. Tr. Br. at 6. This theory is apparently based on a "buy-down" promotional program offered to Wal-Mart. See Blackburn Dep. at 247-52, Tab 1. From this, Conwood very creatively recharacterizes this industry-wide "buy down" form of promotion as a "secret" payment and extrapolates to "millions of dollars in rebates and promotions." Interestingly, neither of the Wal-Mart witnesses who were deposed were asked any questions about these allegedly "secret" promotions. See Carlson Dep.; Renfro Dep.

For several independent reasons, Conwood should not be able to argue to the jury, in opening statements or otherwise, that USTC has violated KRS 365.050. First, the evidence Conwood relies on in its trial brief is insufficient on its face to constitute a claim. Under express Kentucky law, buy-downs, promotions and other marketing devices cannot constitute "secret payments" within the meaning of the statute. See Warfield Tobacco, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 34 F.Supp. 2d 1050, 1052 (E.D. Ky. 1999) ("Plaintiff's claim under KRS 365.050 must also be dismissed . . . Plaintiff has failed to show any secret payments or rebates on the part of RJR. RJR's buy-downs are not secrets, but rather simple marketing devices used to meet competition.") (emphasis added). Second, Conwood has failed to identify any conduct whatsoever within the state of Kentucky which could constitute a claim under KRS 365.050. Third, the clear purpose and intent of seeking to prosecute this claim is to gain the ability to argue to the jury that USTC made "secret payments" to retailers, thus allowing Conwood's lawyers to imply sinister conduct, lending credence to the rather thin evidentiary record it has developed in this case. Rule 403 is expressly intended to prevent just such a tactic.

II. Conwood's Duplicative Monopolization Claims Unnecessarily Complicate This Trial And Should Be Precluded

This Court also should enter a pretrial order precluding Conwood's superfluous attempted monopolization claim. Under both of Conwood's Sherman Act Section 2 claims -- attempted monopolization and monopolization -- Conwood must prove two common elements. First, Conwood must prove that USTC engaged in exclusionary conduct. If Conwood fails to prove that element at trial, both claims will fail. Conwood concedes as much in its trial brief. Pls. Tr. Br. at 10-13.

Similarly, under Conwood's attempted monopolization claim, Conwood must prove at least a "dangerous possibility of achieving monopoly power." If Conwood fails to prove that element at trial, both claims will fail. See United States v. Empire Gas Corp., 537 F.2d 296 (8th Cir. 1976) (a market that, based on non-market share factors, is not susceptible to monopolization, precludes a finding that there can be a dangerous probability of success in an attempted monopolization claim).[1] Indeed, where, as here, a plaintiff's theory of liability on its monopolization claim is that monopoly power is already being exercised to maintain a monopoly, an attempted monopolization claim, which implies that a defendant does not yet possess monopoly power, cannot exist. See Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1020-21 (6th Cir. 1999).

Accordingly, because the disputed issues of fact central to this lawsuit are coextensive in Conwood's monopolization and attempted monopolization claims, presenting both of these claims

[1] Moreover, if a jury were to find in this case that USTC lacks the power to control prices and exclude competition, any attempted monopolization claim based on the same conduct must likewise fail. See Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1431 (6th Cir. 1990) (explaining that an attempted monopolization claim rests on a determination of whether the defendant will likely obtain the capacity to control prices and exclude competition).

16diii003389

to the jury is unnecessary, confusing and a waste of judicial resources. It would require the jury to engage in deliberation and to decide factual issues that are, in effect, rendered moot once the issues to Conwood's monopolization claim is decided one way or the other. For these reasons, this Court should issuc an appropriate pretrial order "facilitat[ing] the just, speedy, and inexpensive disposition of the action" Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(16).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should preclude Conwood from presenting its Lanham Act, Kentucky state law, and attempted monopolization claims at trial.

Deposition of DONALD W. BLACKBURN, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Plaintiff, in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice, the witness being duly sworn by V. DARIO STANZIOLA, a Notary Public and Certified Shorthand Reporter, taken at the offices of SKADDEN, ARPS, SLATE, MEAGHER & FLOM, 919 Third Avenue, New York, New York on Thursday, July 8, 1999, commencing at 9:08 a.m., before V. DARIO STANZIOLA, CSR NO. 1918

MS. MARINER: All right.

Could we take just a short break.

MR. GORSUCH: Yes, Rachel, we can take a short break.

(A BRIEF RECESS WAS TAKEN.)

MR. GORSUCH: If you could mark this in the interim, I'd be grateful.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: It is 4:26 p.m. We're going off the record.

(BLACKBURN 12: A DOCUMENT DATED 3/29/98 BATES STAMPED USTC/CWD 321056 MARKED FOR IDENTIFICATION, AS OF THIS DATE.)

(A BRIEF RECESS WAS TAKEN.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: It is 4:34 p.m. We're going back on the record.

MR. GORSUCH: For the record, I've just handed Mr. Blackburn what's been marked by the court reporter as Exhibit No. 12.

Q. Mr. Blackburn, take your time and just let me know when you're finished.

A. Okay.

Q. Is this an e-mail you wrote to Mr. Untiedt and others on or about March 29, 1998?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did so in the ordinary course of your business?

A. Yes.

Q. And it concerns a meeting with HEB, which is a grocery chain headquartered in Texas; isn't that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you met with them in March 1998, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were upset by the March buydown program that U.S. Tobacco was offering Wal*Mart at that time, weren't they?

A. Mr. Callahan, who is the category manager, had expressed his concerns, yes.

Q. And why was he concerned?

A. Well, that he -- his company matched up in 72 markets with Wal*Mart, and that he wanted to be able to compete in those markets and that they looked at Wal*Mart as being a principal competitor.

Q. And they thought by being unable to offer the same buydown program, they were placed at a competitive disadvantage; isn't that correct?

MS. MARINER: Objection, calls for speculation.

Q. I'm asking if that's what they told you. I don't want your speculation, sir.

A. The quote was that they do not want to be placed at a retail disadvantage and want to be on par with Wal*Mart.

Q. And that's what they told you, isn't it?

A. That's what he said.

Q. And he also said that HEB feels that promotional offers must be equal and proportionate to all trade channels; isn't that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And he told you that the offer being available in Wal*Mart Super Center formats creates a basis for a lawsuit, being that they did not receive the same offer, didn't he?

A. He did.

Q. What did you do about it?

A. I wrote this letter.

Q. Other than writing this letter, did you take any action?

A. Personally?

Q. Um-hum.
A. No.
Q. Are you aware of the company taking any action with regard to this letter?
A. In the time frame that I was there, no.
Q. At any point in time were you aware of the company taking any action with regard to this matter?
A. I'm not sure, but I've heard that they have done something with promoting an HEB.
Q. When did you hear that --
A. I'm not aware of the details.
Q. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to interrupt.
When did you hear that, sir?
A. Within the last six months.
Q. Okay. Did you hear that Wal*Marts -- strike that.
Going back to Exhibit 11, which you've looked at already, after being put on notice by Mr. Callahan at HEB that he thought it was unfair that they weren't receiving the same buydown offers that Wal*Mart was, did you offer all competitors of Wal*Mart an opportunity to participate in the Skoal promotion in August 1998?

MS. MARINER: Objection, mischaracterizes prior testimony.

A. I don't understand your question, sir.

Q. All right. Well, Mr. Callahan indicated to you that he thought it was improper for U.S. Tobacco to offer a buydown program just to Wal*Mart, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what I'm asking you is as a result of that, did you take any efforts or do you know of any efforts taken by U.S. Tobacco to offer the Skoal promotion of August 1998 to other competitors?

MS. MARINER: I'm going to object to that question as confusing.

But go ahead.

A. Sir, there wasn't a Skoal promotion in August of '98.

Q. You see the Skoal promotion for August saw a 10.6 percent increase?

A. Let's see.

Okay. I apologize. I'm sorry.

Yes.

Q. Do you know of any efforts taken by U.S. Tobacco to make that promotion of August '98 available to other retailers?

MS. MARINER: I'm going to object, it's an unintelligible question.

A. I don't recall.

Q. How about the November '98 Copenhagen promotion, do you remember any efforts taken to make that available to other retailers?

MS. MARINER: Same objection.

A. I don't recall.

Q. How about the February through March 1999 Copenhagen buydown?

MS. MARINER: Same objection.

A. I don't recall.

Q. And the May Skoal buydown?

A. I don't recall.

Q. The August Skoal buydown?

A. August hasn't happened yet.

Q. Okay. Has there been any effort, though, to make it available to other competitors?

A. I don't know.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE CERTAIN INTENDED TRIAL EXHIBITS AND TESTIMONY OR OTHER REFERENCE TO SUCH MATERIALS

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully move this Court for an order in limine to exclude as evidence Pl. Exs. 204, 205, 251, 256, and 261, see Tab 1 – so-called "retail activity" and "unethical activity" reports. These documents are inadmissible for several reasons. First and foremost, they are themselves inadmissible hearsay, and, in addition, they also contain several layers of inadmissible hearsay. The documents also are not based on personal knowledge. Finally, the documents are misleading to the jury and unfairly prejudicial to USTC.

The five documents listed by Conwood as intended trial exhibits are samples of a larger collection of similarly inadmissible documents, including both the remainder of the "unethical activity reports" and the so-called "sworn declarations" of Conwood's sales personnel (which actually are the result of a survey conducted by Conwood's lawyers after this lawsuit was filed). Based on Conwood's opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment and on Conwood's trial brief, it has become apparent that Conwood's counsel will attempt to elicit testimony about other inadmissible documents as well, either through its own party witnesses or through the "back door" – i.e., any of its five expert witnesses. Accordingly, USTC also moves this Court for an order prohibiting Conwood from eliciting such testimony from any witness, including Conwood's experts.[1]

ARGUMENT

In its January 21, 2000 filings, Conwood listed five of its so-called "unethical activity reports." Generally, these reports purport not only to record incidents that occur at retail, but to characterize such incidents -- whether or not they actually occurred -- as "unethical activity" by USTC. Indeed, Terry Williams, Conwood's National Sales Manager, testified that these reports are used to:

> allow [Conwood] sales representatives to fill out the form when they came across anything unusual in their territories that might be different from information they had on their store classification cards that they track what's going on in the stores.

See Williams Dep. at 236, Tab 2 (emphasis added). When asked specifically whether the reports included any determination of whether the reported conduct was authorized by the retailer, Mr. Williams stated:

> The guidelines that we just talked about doesn't ask them to make a determination. You know, what's authorized or what's not authorized. They can write in there that this activity was authorized. They can write whatever they want. That's the guidelines that they have available to them when they can fill out that form.

[1] While an expert witness may rely on inadmissible hearsay evidence in arriving at his or her conclusions, a plaintiff may not simply offer otherwise inadmissible hearsay simply by asking an expert to describe that evidence to the jury. See Advisory Committee Notes to Fed. R. Evid. 703 (cautioning that the "enlargement of permissible data may tend to break down the rules of exclusion," and instructing by way of an example that the testimony of an "accidentologist" based on the hearsay statements of bystanders would not be admissible).

See id. at 238, Tab 2. When asked about the methodology used to gather the information to be reported, Mr. Williams testified that the reports were made with or without personal knowledge:

> Q. Are Conwood sales representatives, when filling out these forms, are they directed to only report activity that they see themselves?
> A. They are just given the guidelines that they can use that form to report anything. They see it. Hear about it. It's just a general form. It's called retail activity.

See id. at 239, Tab 2. Finally, when asked about the sources that Conwood sales personnel would "[h]car about it," Mr. Williams confirmed that Conwood does not have any contractual or business relationship with its retail customers that would ensure the accuracy of reported information. See id. at 240, Tab 2.

I. The Authors Of Documents Lack Personal Knowledge

Under Fed. R. Evid. 602, a "witness may not testify to a matter unless evidence is introduced sufficient to support a finding that the witness has personal knowledge of the matter." Web Communication Group, Inc. v. Gateway 2000, Inc., 1995 WL 21625,* (N.D. Ill. 1995) (granting defendants' motion in limine to exclude testimony of witness who lacked personal knowledge of the issues on trial). Personal knowledge admissible under Rule 602 may only include inferences if those inferences are "grounded in observation or first-hand personal experience as opposed to speculation, intuition or hunches." See id. at *3, citing Visser v. Packer Engineering Associates, Inc., 924 F.2d 655, 659 (7th Cir. 1991).

The Conwood unethical activity reports do not document what sales representatives know or sales representatives witnessed; rather, they record, at best, single, double, or even triple hearsay statements of retailers. Indeed, more often they simply record the sales representative's speculation as to what they think may have happened. It is precisely this sort of speculation that is prohibited by Rule 602.

II. These Documents Are Themselves Hearsay

Conwood's "unethical activity reports" are themselves inadmissible hearsay and do not fit within any hearsay exception.

For example, the Conwood unethical activity reports and "sworn declarations" are not business records within the hearsay exception because they were created in anticipation of potential litigation against USTC. See Dilley v. Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., 327 F.2d 249 (6th Cir. 1964). In Dilley, the Sixth Circuit reversed a plaintiff's verdict, ruling that the district court improperly admitted into evidence an "accident report" filled out by an employee who was not an eye-witness to the accident, but had observed the accident scene prior to filling out his report. The court reasoned that "the intra-company report of the accident made by the foreman of a work gang even though he was required by his employer to make it was not . . . admissible under any suggested rule of evidence." Id. at 253.[2] See also Scheerer v. Hardee's Food Systems Inc., 92 F.3d 702, 706-07 (8th Cir. 1996) (reversing verdict because incident report admitted into evidence "lacks reliability or trustworthiness because it was not made in the ordinary course of business but instead with the knowledge that the incident could result in litigation."); Trout v. Pennsylvania Railroad Co., 300 F.2d 826, 830 (3rd Cir. 1962) (reversing verdict for defendant; court improperly admitted into evidence a summary of car inspection reports and holding: "[F]or a document to come within the business record rule, it must be made in the systematic conduct of a business . . . . The document should not be calculated for use essentially in litigating a claim.").

---

[2] The "sworn declarations" were not even created in anticipation of litigation; rather, they were created four months after the Complaint in this matter was filed. See also Pl. Exs. 204 and 205, Tab 1 (both dated in April, 1999).

Here, Conwood could not reasonably suggest that these reports are the type of systematic reports filled out for actual business reasons that have qualified for the business record exception. To the contrary, the only possible reason for Conwood's "unethical activity" reports is to prosecute this action, or other lawsuits.

III. The Documents Contain Hearsay

Even if the reports themselves were not hearsay, they contain inadmissible hearsay. As stated by Mr. Williams, the information recorded on the unethical activity reports is often based on a conversation with the retailer.[3] Those conversations are being offered up through the Conwood chain of command for the truth of the matter asserted, namely, that USTC employees engaged in "dirty tricks." Accordingly, those unethical activity reports contain at least one level of hearsay and are properly excluded by an order in limine from trial. See Palmer v. Veco, Inc., 68 F.2d 481, 1995 WL 608497 (9th Cir.) (affirming district court's order in limine precluding plaintiff's evidence as inadmissible hearsay and entering judgment in favor of defendant before trial).

Moreover, the law is clear that, in order for hearsay statements incorporated into a business record to be admissible, there must be some business or contractual relationship between [3] According to a Conwood sales representatives deposed on the topic, rather than hear from the retailer, sometimes Conwood sales representatives would simply communicate their own interpretation of an unwitnessed event to the retailer and ask for a retailer signature. See Elliott Dep. at 119, Tab 3. In many instances, consistent with Mr. Williams' testimony, the Conwood sales representative filled out an unethical activity report with no knowledge as to whether the retailer had requested or authorized the change in the moist snuff display. See Elliot Dep. at 122, Tab 3 ("Q: Do you know whether or not Mr. Slabbekorn had authorization from the manager to put in U.S. Tobacco's new short profile rack and to put the Conwood products in that rack? A: I don't know; I wasn't present at that time.").

the declarant and the person creating the business record. According to the Advisory Committee Notes:

> Sources of information presented no substantial problem with ordinary business records. All participants, including the observer or participant furnishing the information to be recorded, were acting routinely, under a duty of accuracy, with employer reliance on the result, or in short "in the regular course of business." If, however, the supplier of the information does not act in the regular course, an essential link is broken; the assurance of accuracy does not extend to the information itself, and the fact that it may be recorded with scrupulous accuracy is of no avail.

See Fed. R. Evid. 803(6), Advisory Committee Notes. The "link" is broken where information is provided voluntarily.

> The reason underlying the business records exception fails if any of the participants is outside the pattern of regularity of activity... The mere fact that recordation of third party statements is routine, taken apart from the source of the information recorded, imports no guaranty of the truth to the statements themselves... The essential link is sometimes broken because the supplier of the data is not acting within the course of a regular business. A recurring situation is that of a "volunteer" offering information to persons conducting an inquiry or investigation. The person to whom the information is offered cannot qualify as the initial person in the chain because he does not have personal knowledge of the underlying event.

See 4 Weinstein's Evidence 803(6)[04] (1996) (emphasis added).

Here, independent retailers do not have a business duty to report accurate and reliable information to Conwood sales representatives. See Broadcast Music, Inc. v. Xanthas, Inc., 855 F.2d 233, 239 (5th Cir. 1988) ("[a]lthough the proprietors doubtless had incentives to keep accurate records of who owned jukeboxes in their establishments, we do not see how they had any incentive to fill out the questionnaires from BMI with precision or completeness."). In Xanthas, the court specifically noted that independent proprietors who complete questionnaires for manufacturers are not recording such information in the regular course of their business activities as proprietors. Both Mr. Williams and his predecessor, Mr. Hardy Taylor, testified that retailers provide information to Conwood sales personnel voluntarily and that there is not the requisite contractual or business relationship between Conwood and its retail customers. See Williams Dep. at 240, Tab 2; Taylor Dep. at 110-11, Tab 4 ("Q. You had no contract with the retailers where they are supposed to fill these things out, correct? A. No, no. Q. You didn't believe the stores had some business duty to you guys to fill these out, correct? A. That was voluntarily.")

Here, where independent retailers are acting voluntarily in providing information to Conwood sales representatives, without any contractual relationship or "business duty" to do so, reports based on retailer statements are inadmissible hearsay and should be excluded.

IV. Testimony Based On The Conwood Declarations And Unethical Activity Reports Is Similarly Inadmissible

Because the documents themselves are inadmissible evidence, testimony based solely on reading the documents must also be inadmissible. Based on discovery and pleadings to date, it has become apparent that Conwood's lawyers intend to "prove" Conwood's case by simply referring to inadmissible and unverifiable evidence as "proof" of a systematic campaign to injure competition. See, e.g., Pl. Opp. Summ. J. at 15 (citing "226 sworn declarations" of Conwood employees). Such references, whether made during opening statement, during argument, or elicited as testimony completely lacks foundation and is unfairly prejudicial to USTC.

For example, any explicit or implicit reference to "thousands" of reports of USTC's alleged misconduct or to "hundreds" of "sworn declarations" of USTC's alleged misconduct would mislead the jury and be unfairly prejudicial to USTC. This is not a situation where USTC can simply litigate the weight rather than the admissibility of the evidence. In contrast, USTC is faced with the very problem exclusion of hearsay is meant to prevent – the inability to confront and cross-examine the actual declarants as to their knowledge and perception, their bias, and their motive. Accordingly, this Court should preclude such testimony.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should issue an order in limine precluding the introduction of Conwood "unethical activity reports" and "sworn declarations," as well as any testimony or other reference to such materials.

WEB COMMUNICATIONS GROUP, INC., Plaintiff,
v.
GATEWAY 2000, INC., and Quebecor Printing (USA) Corp., Defendants.

No. 93 C 6821.

United States District Court, N.D. Illinois, Eastern Division.

Jan. 17, 1995.

MEMORANDUM ORDER

BOBRICK, United States Magistrate Judge.

*1 Before the court are the Motions in Limine of plaintiff Web Communications, Inc. ("Web") for an order precluding the admission of, use of, or reference to certain Dun & Bradstreet ("D & B") reports; and for an order precluding certain testimony of Melissa Montuori.

I. DUN AND BRADSTREET REPORTS

The D & B reports at issue contain false information about Web and its principal, Gary Jacobsen. The false information includes statements that:

1. Gary Jacobsen graduated with a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Illinois and attained an MBA from the University of Chicago; in fact, he attended Triton College but did not graduate;
2. Web holds certain foreign patents; in fact, it holds no such patents;
3. Gary Jacobsen's brother and wife are Web's executive vice president and vice president of finance, respectively; in fact, his brother has never been on the payroll and his wife has only done things, "here and there," on a subcontractor basis;
4. Gary Jacobsen's wife graduated with a degree in finance from the University of Illinois; in fact, she did not.

(Defendants' Response, at 1-2, Exs. A; B; C). There is also inaccurate information regarding the size of Web's staff and its office space, existence of regional sales offices, and Gary Jacobsen's relationship with Dixonweb Printing Company. (Id.). The reports were apparently prepared for an attorney at the firm of Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather & Geraldson. (See Final Joint Pretrial Order, C(1), PTE 211-212). At his deposition, Gary Jacobsen testified that he had seen the D & B reports and, at times, had provided the information upon which they were based. (Defendants' Response, Ex. A ("Jacobsen Dep.") at 87). In fact, he had seen the same editions of the reports that included the false information. (Jacobsen Dep. at 87-91). He testified that he "just didn't bother to take it off." (Id. at 88). At her deposition, Robin Gail Steames of D & B testified that information of this nature is generally obtained from the business principal, but that she had no specific knowledge as to how the Web report was compiled. (Defendants' Response, Ex. B; Reply Brief in Support of Plaintiff's Motion, Ex. A). It would appear that, when D & B attempted to verify the information through Gary Jacobsen, he deferred. (Defendants' Response, Ex. B at 29-30; Ex. C).

The parties have briefed the question of the admissibility of the D & B reports, but their efforts have confused, rather than resolved, the issue. First, the reports are listed as Web's trial exhibits--PTE 211 and 212--as opposed to defendants' trial exhibits. Thus, we have the incongruous situation--as defendants describe it--of Web moving to exclude its own proffered evidence. Web provides no explanation of this situation in its submissions. Second, there is no indication of the purpose for the documents' production--whether it was done for Seyfarth, Shaw for the purposes of this litigation or earlier negotiations between Web and Gateway. Third, neither party explains the reason behind the production of such reports in the context of the instant dispute. Ordinarily, it would appear they are intended to aid subscribers--business entities--in their dealings with the companies detailed in the reports. (Plaintiff's Motion in Limine, at 2). To that extent, the reports would appear intended to induce some reliance in those who read them.

*2 Web maintains that the reports are hearsay. Technically, however, they are not. Hearsay is defined as "a statement ... offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted." Fed.R.Evid. 801(c). Here, obviously, defendants will not use the reports to prove the truth of the statements therein, but to show that the statements were false. Used in this manner, the reports border on "verbal acts," which do not constitute hearsay. Courts find verbal acts not to be hearsay insofar as the truth of them is irrelevant. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. v. Country Mut. Ins. Co., 23 F.3d 1175, 1182 (7th Cir.1994). Here, the truth--or rather the falsity--of the statements is relevant, but the fact that they were made is more relevant. Defendants hope to use the statements to demonstrate Gary Jacobsen's character, especially as that character impinges on his reputation and that of his business. It would seem from the pretrial submissions of the parties that this would be relevant to this case. According to Web, it had a stellar reputation in the industry, and trust and confidentiality were significant aspects of its dealings with Gateway. According to Gateway, those dealings were based on certain misrepresentations on Web's part, especially the manner in which Web completed its assignments. (Final Joint Pretrial Order, I(1) at 1-3; I(2) at 1-4). In such a milieu, the reports should be admissible. Such a determination, however, is better left until trial, when questions of foundation, relevancy, and potential prejudice can be more accurately judged in a proper context. Hawthorne Partners v. AT & T Technologies, Inc, 831 F.Supp. 1398, 1400 (N.D.Ill.1993). Thus, given the manner in which defendants' claim they will use the D & B reports, and the somewhat curious situation involving the reports being part of the plaintiff's exhibit roster, it is best to deny plaintiff's motion at this time, allowing objections that might arise to be entertained at trial. Id. at 1401. [FN1]

II. TESTIMONY OF MELISSA MONTUORI

Plaintiff next moves to exclude certain testimony of Melissa Montuori. Ms. Montuori has been the director of creative services for Viewer's Choice, a pay- per-view television network, since July, 1990. Defendants intend to have Ms. Montuori testify that Viewer's Choice ran a stepped-insert guide in a perfect- bound magazine [FN2] from May 1988 to October 1990. (Defendants' Response to Web's Motion ("Def.Resp."), at 1). Such evidence, defendants argue, would directly refute Web's position that Gary Jacobsen was the initiator of the stepped-insert in the perfect-bound format. (Id.). Plaintiff contends that the evidence proffered is, in fact, irrelevant and inadmissible under Fed.R.Evid. 401 and 402, and that Ms. Montuori's testimony on the subject is based neither on her personal knowledge or perception and is inadmissible under Fed.R.Evid. 602 and 701. After review of Ms. Montuori's deposition testimony, we must agree.

*3 It is telling that, of all the factual assertions defendants make in their response to plaintiff's motion, the one that is unaccompanied by citation to the record is the one they claim Ms. Montuori's testimony proves: that Viewer's Choice began using a stepped insert guide in perfect-bound magazines in May 1988. (Def.Resp., at 2). Instead, defendants submit the following portion of Ms. Montuori's testimony:

Q: Has Viewer's Choice ever used a stepped guide?
A: Yes.
Q: When did Viewer's Choice first use a stepped guide?
A: May I look at my materials?
Q: Yes.
A: Viewer's Choice as Home Premier first began using the stepped guide in May 1988.

* * *

Q: When I asked you the question as to when Viewer's Choice first began using a stepped guide, you looked at a particular page in that notebook [Dep.Exh. 327]. Would you tell us which page that was?

Q: Why don't we go ahead and have this particular piece marked as Deposition Exhibit 327-A. What is Deposition Exhibit 327-A?
A: It is the Home Premier Television [the former name of Viewer's Choice] monthly guide was used?
Q: Do you know how this guide was used?
A: Yes, I do.
Q: How was it used?
A: It was bound into cable guides, monthly cable guides like TVSM Cable Guide.

* * *

Q: How did you learn that Pay-Per-View guides such as Deposition Exhibit 327- A were bound into magazines?
A: I saw them.
Q: When you began working at Viewer's Choice?
A: Yes.

* * *

(Def.Resp. at 3-4). Ms. Montuori would not have seen the guides in question until July of 1990. She did not actually see the guides bound in perfect-bound magazines prior to that. In fact, she testified elsewhere in her deposition:

Q: This last one was marked, looking at 327-A.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Had you seen this bound into a magazine?
A: No, I didn't see this one in particular, no.
Q: Do you know which ones you saw and which ones you didn't?
A: Everything from June 1990 on, at least, and scattered other ones.
Q: Everything from June 1990 on you recall seeing in a magazine?
A: Yes, and I gather others were prior to that I saw in the file.

(Reply Brief in Support of Plaintiff's Motion ("Pl.Reply ") at 3). Ms. Montuori's testimony regarding the use of stepped inserts prior to her arrival at Viewer's Choice in July of 1990, then, is not based on personal knowledge or perception, but speculation. Ms. Montuori can only gather how the inserts were used. Her supposed personal knowledge is further undermined by her admissions regarding Exhibit 327-A, which she claimed was bound in perfect-bound magazines:

Q: If 327-A was shipped to a bindery for insertion into a magazine, a perfect bound magazine--
A: Part of the schedule was cut off.
Q: What would happen if there was a grind-off on the calendar?
A: The schedule would be cut off. In other words--

* * *

Q: If 327-A was sent to a bindery for insertion into a perfect bound magazine, the calendar would be destroyed?
*4 A: Yes.

(Pl.Reply at 3-4). Given this testimony, the inserts of which Ms. Montuori claims to have personal knowledge could not be used in perfect-bound magazines. Her testimony, then, is not relevant to the issue at hand.

Both Fed.R.Evid. 602 and 701 require that witnesses base their testimony on personal knowledge. 3 Christopher B. Mueller & Laird C. Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence, § 343, at 580 (2d ed. 1994). While personal knowledge includes inferences and opinions, those inferences and opinions must be grounded in observation or first-hand personal experience, as opposed to speculation, intuition, or hunches. Visser v. Packer Engineering Associates, Inc., 924 F.2d 655, 659 (7th Cir.1991). Here, defendants proffer Ms. Montuori's testimony to prove that perfect-bound stepped inserts were in use at Viewer's choice as long ago as 1988. Ms. Montuori did not see any such use of inserts until the middle of 1990. Further, she admitted that the inserts that she actually did see could not have been perfect bound in magazines. There is no foundation to demonstrate that she has any personal knowledge of perfect-bound stepped inserts in use prior to July of 1990--she can only "gather" that there were. As such, we must find that defendants have failed to lay an adequate foundation for Ms. Montuori's testimony--at least at this time--and that plaintiff's motion in limine must be granted.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the plaintiff's motion in limine regarding the D & B reports is denied, and the plaintiff's motion in limine regarding the testimony of Ms. Montuori is granted.

FN1. We note that defendants also argue in favor of the use of the D & B reports under Fed.R.Evid. 608(b), which allows for the inquiry into specific instances of conduct probative of truthfulness or untruthfulness, for the purpose of attacking a witness' credibility. While the rule allows for inquiry, it does not allow the introduction of extrinsic evidence, which the D & B reports constitute. Thus, the reports themselves are not admissible on the issue of Gary Jacobsen's credibility as a witness. As discussed supra, however, the defendants may demonstrate that the reports bear on Gary Jacobsen's credibility as a substantive issue in this case, as opposed to an impeachment issue. In such an instance, Rule 608(b) would not be applicable. 3 Christopher B. Mueller & Laird C. Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence, § 268, at 191 (2d ed. 1994).

FN2. A perfect-bound magazine would be one in which the pages are glue- bound to a flat spine as opposed to staple-bound down the center.

MEMORANDUM [FN*]

FN* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and may not be cited to or by the courts of this circuit except as provided by 9th Cir. R. 36-3.

1 This action was instituted by Carroll Palmer on behalf of her now deceased husband Donald Palmer for injuries Mr. Palmer allegedly suffered in two separate accidents while working on the clean up of the Exxon Valdez oil spill. The district court granted three motions in limine excluding as inadmissible hearsay all of Ms. Palmer's evidence on key issues. It then denied as moot Mr. Kenyon's motion for summary judgment, but entered judgment in his favor. [FN1]

FN1. We note that the appeal as against three of the defendants- appellees (Seley Corporation, m/v Good News Bay, and m/v Little Pucker) was voluntarily dismissed by an order of this Court. Thus the only live issues surround the second accident, in which the remaining defendant-appellee, Mr. Kenyon, was involved.

Two issues remain for consideration on appeal. First, we consider whether the district court erred in granting appellee's motions in limine excluding the evidence. We hold that this evidence was hearsay not within any exception and affirm the district court. Second, we consider whether the district court erred by entering judgment in favor of appellees. Finding in the record no material fact in dispute, we affirm.

I.

Mrs. Palmer claims that her husband fell between Mr. Kenyon's boat, the Little Pucker, and another. Mr. Kenyon does not deny that Mr. Palmer fell from some boat, but claims that the boat involved was not his. Mrs. Palmer offered evidence to show the boat did belong to Mr. Kenyon and the court deemed this evidence inadmissible hearsay.

A.

Donald Palmer's June 13, 1990, Transcribed Statement: Mr. Palmer made this statement to an insurance adjuster for his employer, Veco, Inc., as a step towards compensation. Appellant admits that she would introduce the statement for its truth. The question then becomes whether the statement comes within a hearsay exception. We hold that it does not.

The statement is not within the exception for business records, Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). This exception may apply when the declarant (here, Mr. Palmer and not Veco) makes a statement "in the course of a regularly conducted business activity." Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). In other words, the exception covers only information supplied by a person with a business duty to speak with accuracy. See United States v. Pazsint, 703 F.2d 420, 424 (9th Cir. 1983); see also Rock v. Huffco, 922 F.2d 272, 279-83 (5th Cir. 1991). Mr. Palmer was not in the business of filing insurance claims nor did he have any business duty to speak accurately. The business records exception does not apply.

Appellant also argues that the statement is nevertheless admissible under the two residual exceptions for hearsay, Fed. R. Evid. 803(24) & 804(b)(5). Neither residual exception applies unless the statement "h[as] equivalent circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness." We find no such guarantees in the statement of Mr. Palmer. He did not speak under oath. More to the point, Mr. Palmer had a pecuniary interest in the outcome of the case about which he spoke. The district did not abuse its discretion in excluding this statement.

B.

2 The Accident Reports: After the September 1989 accident Mr. Palmer filed accident reports with Veco and the Department of Labor. Appellant admits that the reports are hearsay but argues that they nevertheless are admissible as statements against interest by an unavailable witness, under Fed. R. Evid. 804(b)(3). We find it difficult to see how a report that was to lead to Mr. Palmer's financial compensation worked against his interests. Appellant asserts that the reports threatened Mr. Palmer's employment prospects at Veco. Even if true, this remote possibility of adversity would not satisfy Rule 804(b)(3), which requires that the statement be "so far contrary to the declarant's ... interest that a reasonable person in the declarant's position would not have made the statement unless believing it to be true." See Donovan v. Crisostomo, 689 F.2d 869, 877 (9th Cir. 1982).

Appellant next argues that the reports qualify as business records within Rule 803(6). Again, that claim fails because Mr. Palmer was not in the business of filing accident reports and therefore had no business duty to speak accurately.

Finally, appellant argues that the reports qualify for the residual hearsay exceptions. She points to the signatures of four coworkers to demonstrate the trustworthiness of the report they signed. But it is not clear to us just what these signatures were meant to attest, nor do we know where the loyalties of the signatories lay. None of the signatures was a declaration under oath.

Palmer wrote in his statement that he was injured when he fell between the Good News Bay and the Little Pucker. Three of the four witnesses who cosigned Palmer's statement were deposed. Two of them, Hardy and Johnson, stated under oath that they never saw the alleged accident.

The third, Hoyt, stated that he did not recall the accident, but, unlike the other two, did not state that he never saw it. Hoyt testified at his deposition and verified his signature on Palmer's statement. Hoyt testified that he would not have signed the statement as a witness if he had not been at the accident, read the statement, and believed when signed it, some years prior to his deposition, that it was true. We do not reach the question of whether Hoyt's testimony created a genuine issue of fact, as Hoyt's past recollection recorded under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(5), because Palmer has not argued this proposition, so Kenyon and The Little Pucker have not had a fair opportunity to respond to it.

In our view the signatures do not rise to the level of a circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness as required by Rules 803(24) and 804(b)(3). We find no abuse of discretion in the district court's exclusion of the reports.

C.

Appellant Carroll Palmer's Deposition Testimony: In her deposition Appellant testified to several statements Mr. Palmer made in her presence. Appellant concedes that her deposition testimony of Mr. Palmer's out-of-court statements would be offered for the truth of what Mr. Palmer told her. This is hearsay within hearsay. She asks, nevertheless, that the testimony be admitted under Fed. R. Evid. 803(24), but directs us to no circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness. Finding no guarantee of trustworthiness ourselves, we affirm the district court.

II.

3 Having persuaded the district court to exclude the evidence offered by Mrs. Palmer, Mr. Kenyon filed a motion for summary judgment. The district court found "no admissible evidence to establish the occurrence of the two alleged accidents." Order of

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

July 7, 1994, at 4. It denied Mr. Kenyon's motion "as now being moot," but nevertheless entered judgment for him -- presumably under Fed. R. Evid. 54(c). Order of July 7, 1994, at 5. We treat this procedure as an entry of summary judgment for Mr. Kenyon, and review it de novo.

We take the facts in the light most favorable to Plaintiff-Appellant. Even if as between Mrs. Palmer and Mr. Kenyon there were no dispute about the occurrence of the second accident, the record discloses no admissible evidence that Mr. Kenyon's was the boat involved. Accordingly we have no basis upon which to reverse the district court, and we therefore AFFIRM.

Videotaped deposition of TERRY WILLIAMS, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by SUSAN L. CIMINELLI, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C.,

06:56:23 name has changed, but at what point were using 06:56:26 unethical activity reports, correct?
06:56:28 A. Correct.
06:56:28 Q. And that was a form created by 06:56:30 Conwood, correct?
06:56:32 A. Correct.
06:56:32 Q. And for the purpose of that form was 06:56:34 to report activities out in the field that your 06:56:36 sales representatives believed to be unethical?
06:56:40 A. That was a form that was put out there
06:56:43 in the field and it has been changed, the name
06:56:48 of it to retail activity form to allow our sales 06:56:51 representatives to fill out the form when they 06:56:54 came across anything unusual in their 06:56:56 territories that might be different from 06:56:59 information they had on their store
06:57:02 classification cards that they track what's 06:57:06 going on in the stores.
06:57:15 Q. What guidelines are they given to 06:57:19 determine whether a situation is, was different 06:57:24 than what they believed -- can you read back his 06:57:51 last answer, please?
06:56:40 THE REPORTER: Answer : That was a
06:56:41 form that was put out there in the field and it 06:56:46 has been changed, the name of it to retail

06:58:47 activity was authorized or unauthorized by the 06:58:49 retailer?
06:58:52 A. The guidelines that we just talked 06:58:56 about doesn't ask them to make a determination.
06:58:59 You know, what's authorized or what's not 06:59:02 authorized. They can write in there that this 06:59:05 activity was authorized. They can write 06:59:08 whatever they want. That's the guidelines that 06:59:10 they have available to them when they can fill 06:59:13 out that form.
06:59:14 Q. Okay. So whether or not the activity 06:59:16 is authorized or unauthorized, they can still 06:59:21 fill out the report, no matter what it's called,
06:59:25 to report that to someone in management?
06:59:28 A. Yes, sir.
06:59:39 Q. Well, if one of these reports had a
06:59:41 description of the events and did not say 06:59:43 whether the conduct was authorized or 06:59:44 unauthorized, how does management determine 06:59:47 whether the conduct was in fact authorized or 06:59:49 unauthorized?
06:59:53 A. We can ask for more investigation if 06:59:56 that form comes across our desk, and we wonder 07:00:00 whether, if there is not enough information that 07:00:03 we feel that there is something out there that

07:00:05 we would like, all we have to do is call back
07:00:08 the sales representative and ask him to clarify
07:00:11 the form.
07:00:17 Q. So if the reported activity does not 07:00:20 say in the report whether it was authorized or 07:00:23 unauthorized, there is no way to tell from the 07:00:26 face of the document whether the activity was 07:00:28 authorized or unauthorized, is that fair?
07:00:33 A. I guess I don't understand what you 07:00:38 are, what you are talking about, the face of the 07:00:42 document. If -- are you saying if it doesn't 07:00:46 say whether it was authorized or unauthorized 07:00:48 there is no way to tell whether it was?
07:00:51 Q. From the face of the document?
07:00:52 A. Yes, sir. I agree with that.
07:01:00 Q. Are Conwood sales representatives,
07:01:02 when filling out these forms, are they directed 07:01:05 to only report activity that they see 07:01:07 themselves?
07:01:08 A. They are just given the guidelines
07:01:10 that they can use that form to report anything.
07:01:15 They see it. Hear about it. It's just a 07:01:19 general form. It's called retail activity.
07:01:22 There is no guidelines on what you can or cannot 07:01:25 use that form to report information about.

07:01:30 Q. So if they are told by a retailer that 07:01:33 Pinkerton stole their header card, they could 07:01:36 write that up on a retail activity report?
07:01:40 A. If they wanted to, yes.
07:01:45 Q. Does Conwood have any, any kind of 07:01:50 contractual or business relationship with the 07:01:52 retailers that asks them to provide information 07:01:55 to the sales representatives for purposes of 07:01:58 making these reports?
07:02:02 A. We have a contract with the retailer
07:01:58 that we pay them to provide us -- 07:01:58 Q. Not necessarily pay, but that you have 07:01:58 an agreement with the retailers that they will 07:01:58 provide sales representatives with information
07:01:58 as reported on these forms?
07:02:20 A. None that I'm aware of.
07:02:20 Q. Do you have any type of business
07:02:20 relationship?
07:02:21 A. Not that I'm aware of.
07:02:27 Q. Now, to the extent you know, why was 07:02:29 the name of the report changed from an unethical 07:02:31 activity report to a retail activity report?
07:02:37 A. I'm not sure that I was there when the 07:02:39 name changed, but I have been told that we 07:02:43 changed the name on the form to retail activity

Q. Did you know at the time that you filled out this report whether or not Mr. Beyerlein had received authorization from the store manager to pull the three facing Conwood rack and put products in a short profile rack?

A. This particular account was, I addressed myself -- introduced myself and addressed the person that was in charge at the time, explained the situation that we did have a rack previously and that it had been replaced and we are now -- it's gone and now replacing the racks. She had no idea what had happened. I presented her the idea of having two racks for both companies and she was more than happy to accommodate both companies.

Q. Would this person with whom you spoke be the only person at Curtis Drug who could authorize the placement of a rack at retail?

A. I wouldn't have that knowledge.

Q. So you don't know one way or another whether Mr. Beyerlein received authorization at Curtis Drug before he placed his rack in that store?

A. All I know is that the person that I spoke to had no recollection of the situation happening and was fine with me rectifying it.

Q. So you don't know whether, just to answer locked in new short profile rack. Manager will not allow switch back. And then how the situation was resolved section says, manager allowed decals and Kodiak header card in front of our four facings; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether or not Mr. Slabberkorn had authorization from the manager to put in U.S. Tobacco's new short profile rack and to put the Conwood products in that rack?

A. I don't know; I wasn't present at that time.

Q. Is it fair to say you approached the manager about placing your own rack and the manager said that they preferred to keep the products in the U.S. Tobacco rack?

A. At the time I approached them with the idea of having a merchandiser to merchandise Conwood along with the competitors to do theirs, at the time she didn't want anyone to fuss with the rack at all; just to leave it as it is for now.

Q. Do you know whether or not Conwood lost any facings in this transition?

THE DEPOSITION OF HARDY C. TAYLOR

August 19th, 1999

02:53:14 Q. Do you recall receiving copies from 02:53:16 time to time of unethical activity reports
02:53:18 when they were called unethical activity
02:53:18 reports?
02:53:18 A. Yes, sir.
02:53:20 Q. And do you remember instances where 02:53:26 there was -- where it said "signature of 02:53:30 store employees" that there was no signature
02:53:32 at all?
02:53:32 A. Yes.
02:53:38 Q. Did it concern you that you were 02:53:40 getting unethical activity reports where the 02:53:42 store wouldn't sign them?
02:53:44 A. No, because that wasn't mandatory.
02:53:48 Or -- it was liked but not mandatory.
02:53:52 Q. Not mandatory. Obviously from the 02:53:54 store it wasn't mandatory?
02:53:54 A. No.
02:53:58 Q. You had no contractual relationships 02:53:58 with the store where they are supposed to 02:54:02 fill these out, correct?
02:54:02 A. Sir?
02:54:02 Q. You had no contract with the 02:54:06 retailers where they are supposed to fill 02:54:06 these things out, correct?

02:54:06 A. No, no.
02:54:08 Q. You didn't believe the stores had 02:54:10 some business duty to you guys to fill these 02:54:12 out, correct?
02:54:14 A. That was voluntarily.
02:54:22 Q. And yet your sales force, they were 02:54:24 instructed to try to get signatures, correct?
02:54:26 A. Yes.
02:54:38 Q. And did you have any procedure in 02:54:42 place that you recall to ensure that the 02:54:46 person trying to get a signature was talking 02:54:48 to the right person within that retail 02:54:48 organization?
02:54:50 A. I don't recall.
02:54:52 Q. How about in situations where you are 02:54:56 dealing with a chain store where the person
02:54:58 in charge is the buyer at the chain
02:55:02 headquarters, how would that work when a
02:55:04 Conwood sales rep is just showing up to a 02:55:08 store? Do you understand that question?
02:55:10 A. Not totally. Would you please repeat 02:55:10 it?
02:55:14 Q. Yeah. The Conwood sales rep shows up
02:55:18 to the store and wants to fill out a retail
02:55:28 activity report or unethical activity report,

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE ALL EVIDENCE CONCERNING CONDUCT PROTECTED BY NOERR-PENNINGTON IMMUNITY

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") respectfully move this Court for an in limine order precluding Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"), from introducing any evidence or making any argument concerning conduct by USTC that is protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.

Initially, in its Complaint, Conwood alleged that USTC violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act by participating in the legislative, judicial, and executive processes – conduct that has long been protected from antitrust scrutiny. Specifically, Conwood alleged that USTC:

- "sought to involve itself in the 'Global Settlement' of litigation between cigarette companies and various state attorneys general and plaintiffs' lawyers," ¶ 33;
- "sought to embed the Global Settlement with provisions that would cause disproportionate harm to its moist snuff rivals," id.;

- "promoted a variety of anticompetitive measures, such as a payment structure for the purported settlement amounts that was designed to impose substantial and punitive costs on nonparticipating firms," ¶ 34;

- "proposed an unprecedented blanket antitrust immunity for their private efforts to implement and enforce competitive restrictions," ¶ 36; and

- "sought to lobby in Congress for passage of a proposed federal law that would cost UST hundreds of millions of dollars per year, but would put its three competitors in moist snuff out of business." ¶ 39.

On June 12, 1998, USTC moved to dismiss these allegations under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim. In response to that motion, Conwood asserted that it did not intend to base liability on conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington. Throughout discovery, and in the pleadings to date, however, Conwood has continuously reintroduced purported testimony and argument based on conduct protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.[1]

Accordingly, USTC respectfully moves this Court to preclude all evidence and argument at trial concerning conduct by USTC that is so protected. Such evidence and argument is irrelevant to Conwood's claims and thus inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 402. Moreover, the introduction of such evidence and argument would be misleading to the jury and unduly prejudicial to USTC and thus inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

ARGUMENT

For nearly forty years, lobbying activities such as those allegedly engaged in by USTC have been immune from the antitrust laws. See Eastern Railroad Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 137-38 (1961) ("The right of petition is one of the freedoms

---

[1] Of course, such testimony and argument are unsupported by actual facts and evidence, but for purposes of this motion, USTC will assume arguendo that it petitioned the government with the intent of gaining an advantage in the alleged moist snuff market.

protected by the Bill of Rights, and we cannot, of course lightly impute to Congress an intent to invade these freedoms."). The Supreme Court also made clear that such immunity applies even when the participants have a financial interest in the outcome of the matter, reasoning that to hold otherwise would be to "deprive the people of their right to petition in the very instance in which that right may be of the most importance to them." Id. at 139. See also Gambrel v. Kentucky Board of Dentistry, 689 F.2d 612, 620-21 (6th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1208 (1983) (dentists who lobbied "the state legislature against any proposed changes in the law and [lobbied] to encourage the Board of Dentistry to enforce the state law" could not be liable under the antitrust laws).

Similarly, any belief that Noerr would not apply when a lobbying participant is alleged to have sought an anticompetitive result was specifically quelled four years later by the Court in United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 670 (1965) ("Noerr shields from the Sherman Act a concerted effort to influence public officials regardless of intent or purpose."). The Court elaborated that "[j]oint efforts to influence public officials do not violate the antitrust laws even though intended to eliminate competition." Id. (emphasis added). See also Westmac, Inc. v. Smith, 797 F.2d 313, 319-20 (6th Cir. 1986) (assuming anticompetitive intent and holding that defendants' conduct was immune under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine).

Finally, the Court in Noerr held that allegations of conduct protected by what is now known as the Noerr-Pennington doctrine cannot be unlawful "either standing alone or as part of a broader scheme itself violative of the Sherman Act." Id. See also City of Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., 734 F.2d 1157, 1163 (6th Cir. 1984) (even if lawsuit brought by defendant was "designed to eliminate the City as a competitor, such conduct is not illegal either standing alone or as part of a broader scheme") (citation omitted). See also Norcern Energy Resource Ltd. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co., 1994-2 Trade Cases ¶ 70,851 (N.D. Cal. 1994) (granting defendants' motion to dismiss with prejudice plaintiff's antitrust claims "to the extent they [we]re based on defendants' actions before" administrative agencies); Mountain Grove Cemetery Assoc'n v. Norwalk Vault Co. Of Bridgeport, Inc., 428 F. Supp. 951, 956 (D. Conn. 1977) (granting motion to dismiss plaintiff's claims "to the extent plaintiff's complaint alleges an antitrust violation on the basis of" protected conduct).

As described below, any evidence that purports to suggest that USTC had an anticompetitive intent in allegedly seeking laws that would require a non-self serve ("NSS") retail environment for moist snuff products is both irrelevant and prejudicial, and should therefor be precluded.

I. EVIDENCE OF PROTECTED CONDUCT IS IRRELEVANT AND THEREFORE INADMISSIBLE UNDER FED. R. EVID. 402

Evidence of conduct protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine is irrelevant and therefore inadmissible, unless a plaintiff can show that the evidence is directly relevant to demonstrate the "purpose and character" of conduct not protected by the First Amendment. See United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 670 n.3 (1965) (evidence of protected conduct "may . . . be introduced if it tends reasonably to show the purpose and character of the particular transactions under scrutiny") (emphasis added); MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1160 (7th Cir.) (evidence of protected conduct is admissible only if shown to prove purpose and character of non-protected conduct), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 891 (1983). Evidence of conduct protected by the First Amendment, however, is not admissible simply to show some general notion of "anticompetitive intent." As the Sixth Circuit instructed in City of Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., 734 F.2d 1157 (6th Cir. 1984):

16diii003443

> The City's effort to introduce the evidence was to show the anticompetitive character and nature of Cleveland Electric's conduct in this episode as a part of the alleged broader pattern of conduct condemned by the Sherman Act, and to cast the appellee and its counsel in the role of deceivers. This is not an admissible basis for its introduction in our view.

Id. at 1163 (emphasis added).

Nevertheless, Conwood's claim that USTC violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act by engaging in a regulatory and legislative campaign continues to resurface, even at this late date.[2] For example, Conwood's expert witnesses, most notably Dr. Popper, asserted as a basis for liability in this case that:

- "UST proposed regulations requiring placement of moist snuff in a non-selfserve environment in advance of legislative or administration action."
- "UST alone among smokeless companies chose to participate in the Global Settlement negotiations which resulted in a proposal, rejected by Congress, that would have required all moist snuff (but not all other forms of tobacco, such as cigars) to be placed in a non-self serve environment."

See, e.g., Popper Rebuttal Report, ¶ 11. Moreover, as recently as December 9, 1999, in opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment, Conwood argued that "UST also engaged in a regulatory and legislative campaign in conjunction with Philip Morris (still ongoing) to bring NSS to the tobacco industry. UST has engaged in these activities with the specific intent to thwart competition." See Pl. Opp. Mem. at 28 n.40. But, Conwood does not even suggest that evidence of protected conduct in any way proves the "purpose and character" of any alleged non-protected conduct.

Accordingly, Conwood has not made any prima facie showing that evidence of USTC's First Amendment activities is of any relevance to Conwood's Section 2 claims. Like the

[2] As indicated above, USTC will assume arguendo that it exercised its right to petition government with the purpose and effect of restricting competition despite the complete lack of support for this argument in the record.

16diii003444

plaintiff in City of Cleveland, Conwood merely attempts to cast USTC in the role of the anticompetitive monopolist. This Court, therefore, should preclude Conwood from offering such evidence at trial.

II. EVIDENCE OF PROTECTED CONDUCT IS UNFAIRLY PREJUDICIAL TO USTC AND IS THEREFORE INADMISSIBLE UNDER FED. R. EVID. 403

Even if evidence of protected conduct were marginally relevant to Conwood's claims – which it is not – such evidence would be unfairly prejudicial to USTC and is therefore inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 403. See City of Cleveland, 734 F.2d at 1163 (upholding district court's exclusion of evidence of defendant's petitioning activity as unfairly prejudicial, and confusing and misleading to the jury).

At least one court has held that evidence of conduct protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine is "presumptively prejudicial." USFL v. NFL, 634 F. Supp. 1155, 1180 (S.D.N.Y. 1986):

> Although Rule 403 requires that evidence should be excluded only if its probative value is "substantially outweighed" by its prejudicial effect, evidence which by its very nature chills the exercise of First Amendment rights . . . is properly viewed as presumptively prejudicial.

Id. at 1180; see also MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Corp., 708 F.2d 1081, 1160 (7th Cir. 1983) (evidence of protected conduct is admissible only if shown to be relevant and not overly prejudicial to defendants); Brand Name Prescription Drugs Antitrust Litig., No. 94C 897, MDL 997, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12039, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 1995) (admission of evidence of protected conduct raises "significant evidentiary concerns").

Here, the introduction of evidence or argument concerning USTC's petitioning activities would mislead the jury to believe that such conduct may be unlawful, resulting in unfair prejudice to USTC. Moreover, the introduction of such evidence would require USTC to offer evidence demonstrating the true character and purpose of its petitioning activity, requiring a trial within a trial. Introduction of voluminous evidence on such a collateral issue would tend to confuse the issues and mislead the jury. Accordingly, this Court should issue an order in limine precluding the introduction of such evidence and argument at trial.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, USTC respectfully requests that this Court issue an in limine order precluding the introduction of any evidence and any argument concerning conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington immunity.

OPINION: MEMORANDUM OPINION

CHARLES P. KOCORAS, District Judge:

This matter is before the Court on Class Plaintiffs' Motion for Reconsideration of this Court's Order of June 8, 1995 denying Production of certain documents from the Washington D.C. offices of CIBA-Geigy Corporation ("CIBA") and Bristol-Myers Squibb Corporation ("BMS"). For the reasons set forth below, Class Plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration is granted, as is their underlying motion to compel.

DISCUSSION

In April or May of this year the Class Plaintiffs filed a motion seeking to compel CIBA and BMS to produce lobbying documents and other responsive documents stored in the defendants' respective Washington D.C. office. Defendants objected to producing the lobbying documents on two grounds, claiming (1) that searches of the defendants' Washington D.C. offices were beyond the scope of the parties Rule 12(k) agreements; and (2) that the defendants' production of the documents should be made contingent upon the class plaintiffs' full reciprocal production [*2] of documents concerning lobbying activities conducted by them or on their behalf.

At the time we issued our ruling we failed to see-- as the parties failed to address-- the relevance of such a production. Disturbed by the Class Plaintiffs' failure to explain exactly why they needed these documents, we denied the motion in its entirety based on relevance.

The Class Plaintiffs now seek reconsideration of our decision based on the fact that neither CIBA nor BMS raised the issue of relevance. According to the plaintiffs, because neither of the defendants objected to the discovery request for its relevance, the Class Plaintiffs did not deem it necessary to expound upon the issue. While we do not look upon motions to reconsider favorably, under the circumstances we think that it would only be fair to address Class Plaintiffs' motion.

In moving for reconsideration, Class Plaintiffs do not argue that evidence of the defendants' lobbying activity constitutes a Sherman Act violation-- nor can they, for the United States Supreme Court has made it clear that a concerted effort to influence public officials does not violate antitrust laws, even if such conduct is intended to eliminate competition. [*3] Eastern R.R. Presidents Conf. v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464, 81 S. Ct. 523 (1961); United Mine Workers of America v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965). Rather, it is the Class Plaintiffs' position that evidence of the defendants' lobbying activity is both relevant and admissible for the purpose of showing that other non-protected activities had an unlawful purpose and character.

Indeed, courts have recognized that evidence of protected lobbying activity may be used to show the purpose and character of other activities, provided that such evidence is probative and not unduly prejudicial to the defendant. Pennington, 381 U.S. at 670-71 n.3; MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T, 708 F.2d 1081, 1159 (7th Cir. 1983). Thus, although evidence of CIBA and BMS' lobbying activities may not form the basis of this lawsuit, it may be used if it "tend[s] to reasonably show the purpose and character of the particular transactions under scrutiny." Pennington, 381 U.S. at 670-71 n.3. The admissibility or exclusion of such evidence is within the trial court's discretion. Id. In exercising its discretion the court must [*4] determine whether the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudicial effect. Weit v. Continental ILL. Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 641 F.2d 457 (7th Cir. 1981).

The defendants argue that documents related to their lobbying activities are not relevant because they could never serve as probative evidence of the "purpose and character" of other non-lobbying acts. However, the mere fact that the documents sought by the plaintiffs relate to or arise from lobbying activity is insufficient to bar their discovery. As the U.S. Supreme Court recognized, an absolute bar of the use of such evidence could have unbridled ramifications:

> We cannot agree with petitioner's absolutist position that the Noerr doctrine immunizes every effort that is genuinely intended to influence government action. If all such conduct were immunized then, for example, competitors would be free to enter into horizontal price agreements as long as they wished to propose that price as an appropriate level for governmental ratemaking or price supports.

Allied Tube Corp. v. Indian Head, 486 U.S. 492, 503, 100 L. Ed. 2d 497, 108 S. Ct. 1931 (1988) (citation omitted).

In light [*5] of the case law presented to us, we conclude that we cannot legally bar the Class Plaintiffs' from exploring CIBA and BMS' lobbying documents based on relevance grounds. While lobbying activity is afforded certain protections under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, probative evidence of such activity may be used to show the purpose and character of other activities, if such a use is not unduly prejudicial to the defendants. MCI Communications, 708 F.2d at 1159. Thus, we cannot hold that as a matter of law evidence lobbying activity can never be relevant to the prosecution of an anti-trust action. We remind the parties, however, that we are presently dealing with the documents' discoverability and not their admissibility. We note that if and when Class Plaintiffs seek to introduce evidence relating to or arising out of CIBA and BMS' lobbying activities, they will need to address significant evidentiary concerns, such as any undue prejudice to the defendants. n1 n1 In the underlying motion to compel, one of the defendants' main arguments in opposition to the motion was that a search of their respective Washington D.C. offices was beyond the scope of the search to which the parties had agreed. We have reviewed the parties' respective prior submissions on this issue and find the defendants' argument to be unavailing. Although the Class Plaintiffs initially agreed to limit their search to the defendants' principal offices, the Class Plaintiffs reserved, and occasionally successfully exercised, the right to insist upon production from other locations.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, Class Plaintiffs' motion to reconsider is granted, as is their underlying motion to compel.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE IRRELEVANT, MISLEADING AND UNFAIRLY PREJUDICIAL STATEMENTS AND REFERENCES

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully move this Court for an order in limine precluding Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"), from making references, either during questioning or during opening statement or in argument, to the well-publicized but legally and factually irrelevant United States v. Microsoft case. USTC also moves for an order in limine precluding Conwood from characterizing any of the alleged misconduct in this case in terms of violent or criminal behavior – such as "kneecapping" USTC's competitors or paying "kickbacks" to USTC's customers – something Conwood's counsel has already proven willing to do before this Court. Finally, USTC also moves for an order in limine precluding Conwood from, beyond legitimate legal argument, simply referring to or labeling USTC as a monopolist, a characterization that is highly disputed in this case and would be misleading and unfairly prejudicial before the jury.

ARGUMENT

Throughout its moving papers in this case, Conwood has employed various metaphors and analogies -- including inaccurate and misleading parallels to the well-publicized United States v. Microsoft case -- in an attempt to label USTC's alleged conduct as unfair, unlawful and exclusionary. Moreover, in an attempt to cast USTC in the worst of lights, Conwood has made references comparing the conduct challenged in this case to violent, criminal behavior. Conwood also has repeatedly characterized USTC as a "monopolist" of the moist snuff market. Specifically, Conwood has asserted that:

> (1) the evidence of USTC's exclusionary conduct is "far more compelling" than that in the Microsoft case, see Pl. Opp. Summ. J. at 3;
> (2) USTC's exclusionary acts are the equivalent of "kneecapping" its competitors, Nov. 18, 1999 Sett. Conf.;
>
> (3) USTC paid "kickbacks" to its customers, see Pl. Supp. Part. Summ. J. at 5; and
> (4) USTC is a monopolist of the moist snuff market.

Because such characterizations are of no probative value and are unfairly prejudicial to USTC, Conwood should be precluded from making these statements before the jury.

In J.T. Gibbons, Inc. v. Crawford Fitting Co., 565 F. Supp. 167 (E.D. La. 1981), the court commented at length with disapproval on analogous statements made by counsel:

> Defendants were repeatedly referred to, explicitly and implicitly, in terms connoting unsavory and illegal characteristics: "monopolists," "world-wide cartels," "conspiracies," "dominant," "powerful," and "huge company," "this Cleveland group of companies," "bosses," "the head man from Cleveland," and "secret councils of these monopolistic combines."
>
> Defendants were also repeatedly charged with having engaged in various activities wholly unsupported by the evidence in the record: seeking to "crush a little company," "to monopolize the market in the North Sea," "this is the way monopolists always act," "surveillance, espionage, spying on the young man," "boycott,"

16diii003453

> "monopoly pricing," pressing a "sham counterclaim," "tackling [plaintiff] from the sidelines illegally," possessing "arrogance of power," engaging in an "attempt to buy time so as to proceed at their leisure to throttle this young company," and "cutting off [plaintiff]."

Id. at 191.[1] With the objective being a fair and equitable trial based on admissible evidence as presented to the jury, similar commentary by Plaintiffs' counsel in this case should be precluded.

I. REFERENCES TO UNITED STATES V. MICROSOFT

First, Conwood's attempts to draw parallels between USTC and wholly unrelated entities that may have unfairly excluded or injured rivals should be excluded under Fed R. Evid. 403 as misleading to the jury and unfairly prejudicial to USTC. Conwood's repeated incorporation-by-reference strategy to the vast evidence and commentary in the well-publicized U.S. v. Microsoft case should be precluded. See, e.g., Pl. Opp. Summ. J. at 3 (suggesting that evidence of USTC's exclusionary conduct is "more compelling" than in Microsoft); id. at 43 n. 53 (stating that the government's conclusions of law could "almost be taken for a response" to USTC's arguments). Conwood has even stretched analogy to metaphor by block-quoting Judge Jackson's findings of fact but substituting "[USTC]" in the place of Microsoft. See Pl. Supp. Part. Summ. J. at 6 n.14. Thus, [1] Even if USTC had previously been adjudicated a monopolist, such evidence would properly be excluded as more prejudicial than probative under Fed. R. Evid. 403. See e.g., Lightwave Technologies, Inc. v. Corning Glass Works, No. 86 Civ. 759 (KC), 1991 WL 4737, *6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 1991) (probative value of such evidence -- though perhaps relevant of the defendant's intent -- is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice); United States Football League v. National Football League, 634 F. Supp. 1155, 1171-73 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (excluding evidence of prior antitrust conspiracy), aff'd, 842 F.2d 1335, 1371-73. Where, as here, there has been no past adjudication of antitrust violations, the basis for excluding Conwood's characterization of USTC as a "monopolist" is even more compelling. See Davis v. Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, 6 F.3d 367, 385-86 (6th Cir. 1993) (excluding evidence under Fed. R. Evid. 403 where probative value of evidence was "nil"); see also City of Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons Co., 624 F.2d 749, 756-60 (6th Cir. 1980) (reversing jury verdict because counsel repeatedly referred to defendant as "large" and as a "giant in the field.").

16diii003454

rather than attempt to prove to the jury that USTC has engaged in exclusionary practices, Conwood has shown that it will attempt to free-ride on the vast media coverage of Microsoft's allegedly exclusionary conduct. Analogizing USTC's alleged conduct to that in the Microsoft case serves no legitimate evidentiary purpose. Accordingly, such references are both legally and factually irrelevant and should be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 402. They are also misleading and unfairly prejudicial and should be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

II. REFERENCES TO CRIMINAL BEHAVIOR

Second, Conwood has -- most notably during a settlement conference before this Court -- referred to USTC's allegedly exclusionary conduct as "kneecapping" and has referred to ordinary promotional offerings as "kickbacks" to USTC's customers. Such loose metaphors -- while harmless as mere posturing during a settlement conference -- should not be heard by the jury. References to "kneecapping" or other violent or criminal behavior clearly would not assist the jury in resolving factual issues in this case. Nor would unsupportable suggestions of illegal payments and bribes. They would serve no purpose other than to mislead the jury into believing that USTC's alleged conduct in this case is inherently underhanded, deceitful or criminal in nature. Accordingly, such references should be excluded as irrelevant under Fed. R. Evid. 402 and as misleading and unfairly prejudicial under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

III. CHARACTERIZING USTC AS A "MONOPOLIST"

Finally, Conwood should be required to prove, rather than merely preach, its case to the jury. While it is clear that Conwood can and will argue that USTC is a monopolist, Conwood should be precluded from simply referring to USTC as a monopolist outside the bounds of legitimate legal argument. Clearly, references to USTC as a "monopolist" is unfairly prejudicial to USTC because it misleadingly assumes two disputed issues in this case: (i) definition of the relevant market; and (ii) USTC's ability to exclude competitors and control prices in that market. These are both issues that must be decided by the jury.

Further, Conwood's attempt merely to label USTC as a "monopolist" is of absolutely no probative value. Rather, the "monopoly" tag's value to Conwood rests only in its tendency to mislead the jury into assuming the validity of the very issues Conwood is required to prove at trial. Accordingly, such references are legally irrelevant and should be precluded under Fed. R. Evid. 402. Moreover, because the probative value of those characterizations, if any, would be substantially outweighed by the likelihood of misleading the jury to the prejudice of USTC, such characterizations are inadmissable under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should enter an in limine order precluding Conwood from drawing analogies to the United States v. Microsoft case, from referencing violent or criminal behavior such as "kneecapping" a competitor, and from simply referring to USTC as a "monopolist" beyond the bounds of legitimate legal argument.

LIGHTWAVE TECHNOLOGIES, INC., Plaintiff,
v.
CORNING GLASS WORKS, Defendant.

No. 86 Civ. 759 (KC).

United States District Court, S.D. New York.

Jan. 18, 1991.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

CONBOY, District Judge:

*1 Plaintiff Lightwave Technologies, Inc. ("Lightwave") brought this action against Corning Glass Works, now known as Corning, Inc. ("Corning"), alleging, inter alia, violations of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 and 2, [FN1] and a common law claim for tortious interference with prospective economic advantage. Corning counterclaimed for infringement of its United States patent 3,659,915 (" '915 patent") for optical waveguide fibers. The Court bifurcated the trial, so that the patent issues were tried first, followed immediately by the trial on the antitrust issues. After a five-week trial on the patent issues, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Corning, finding that its '915 patent was valid, enforceable and willfully infringed by Lightwave, and awarding damages in the amount of $403,915 plus interest to date. After a three-week trial on the antitrust issues, the jury again returned a verdict in favor of Corning, finding that it had not monopolized, attempted to monopolize nor conspired to monopolize the relevant market, and that it had not interfered with Lightwave's prospective economic advantage. The Court entered judgment in accordance with the verdicts.

Currently pending before the Court are (1) Lightwave's motion for a partial directed verdict based on Corning's alleged misuse of its patent; (2) Lightwave's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, for a new trial; and (3) Corning's motion for treble damages and attorneys' fees. Also remaining to be determined is the amount of sanctions to be awarded to Corning in connection with Lightwave's repeated efforts to introduce evidence of Corning's past antitrust violations.

I. MOTION FOR PARTIAL DIRECTED VERDICT

Lightwave moves for a partial directed verdict, finding Corning's '915 patent unenforceable, based on Corning's alleged patent misuse. In support of its motion, Lightwave alleges that

In licenses granted prior to [the expiration of the '915 patent], Corning enforced a mandatory patent package, under which it coupled the '915 patent with other patents and commodities.... The licenses provided for the payment of a continuing royalty, in the form of a percentage of the net selling price of the subject fibers sold by the licenses [sic].... The licenses extended beyond the expiration of the '915 patent.... They did not, however, provide for any reduction of the royalty amount upon the expiration of the '915 patent.

Memorandum in Support of Motion for Partial Directed Verdict ("L. Misuse Mem.") at 1-2. In other words, Lightwave argues that Corning's alleged practice of mandatory patent pooling, which assertedly did not allow for reduced royalty rates when the '915 patent expired, unlawfully extended the monopoly granted Corning by the '915 patent.

Were Lightwave's version of the facts accurate and supported by the record, it would be entitled to a partial directed verdict on its claim of patent misuse. "[C]onditioning the grant of a patent license upon payment of royalties on products which do not use the teaching of the patent does amount to patent misuse." Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 135 (1969). The same analysis applies to conditioning the grant of the license on payment of royalties on products which use the teaching of patents which have expired. Beckman Instruments, Inc. v. Technical Dev. Corp., 433 F.2d 55, 61 (7th Cir.1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 976 (1971). Thus, when direct or indirect conditioning, as opposed to sound business judgment, good faith bargaining, and mutual convenience, governs the grant of a license, the patentholder engages in patent misuse. See Zenith Radio, 395 U.S. at 135-38; Automatic Radio Mfg. Co. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 339 U.S. 827, 834 (1950).

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*2 As Corning convincingly demonstrates, however, Lightwave mischaracterizes the facts. See Corning's Memorandum in Opposition to Lightwave's Motion for Partial Directed Verdict ("C. Misuse Mem.") at 2-4. First, Corning did not engage in mandatory patent packaging; rather, its licensing agreements were the product of mutual negotiations in three unique sets of circumstances. Coercion, or attempted coercion, is an essential element of patent misuse by improper patent packaging. Hull v. Brunswick Corp., 704 F.2d 1195, 1199 (10th Cir.1983); Western Elec. Co. v. Stewart Warner Corp., 631 F.2d 333, 338-39 (4th Cir.1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 971 (1981); Beckman Instruments, 433 F.2d at 61; Leesona Corp. v. Varta Batteries, Inc., 522 F.Supp. 1304, 1341 (S.D.N.Y.1981). Because Lightwave failed to present any evidence that Corning's patent licensing practices were coercive, Lightwave cannot establish patent misuse.

Second, royalty payments to Corning are based not upon sales of "subject fibers" as Lightwave asserts (L. Misuse Mem. at 1), but rather upon sales of fibers "made, used or sold ... under the licenses granted." See, e.g., Ex. 93 at 8. [FN2] Thus, in sharp contrast to the arrangement in Rocform Corp. V. Acitelli-Standard Concrete Wall, Inc., 367 F.2d 678 (6th Cir.1966), a case upon which Lightwave relies heavily, royalties are not payable on each and every fiber made by the Corning licensees, but only on fibers made, used or sold under license, that is, on fibers that are covered by an unexpired licensed patent. Thus, after the expiration of the '915 patent, the royalty rate goes to zero unless the licensee chooses to use another licensed, royalty bearing patent. Such licensing practices are entirely appropriate and legal, particularly when they are not accompanied by conditioning or coercion. See Automatic Radio, 339 U.S. at 831, 834; Hull v. Brunswick Corp., 704 F.2d at 1199; Beckman Instruments, 433 F.2d at 61; McCullough Tool Co. v. Well Surveys, Inc., 343 F.2d 281, 409 (10th Cir.1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 933 (1966).

For the reasons stated above and for the reasons set forth in Corning's memorandum of law, Lightwave's motion for a partial directed verdict is denied.

II. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT OR A NEW TRIAL

On numerous grounds, Lightwave moves for judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("judgment n.o.v.") pursuant to Rule 50(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, or, in the alternative, for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59, in both the patent and antitrust phases of the trial. "Judgment n.o.v. may be entered only if, without weighing the credibility of the witnesses or otherwise considering the weight of the evidence, there can be but one conclusion as to the verdict that reasonable [persons] could have reached." Heller v. Champion Int'l Corp., 891 F.2d 432, 434 (2d Cir.1989) (quotation marks and citations omitted); see also Orthokinetics, Inc. v. Safety Travel Chairs, Inc., 806 F.2d 1565, 1571 (Fed.Cir.1986). Thus, a motion for judgment n.o.v. should be granted when:

*3 "(1) there is such a complete absence of evidence supporting the verdict that the jury's findings could only have been the result of sheer surmise and conjecture, or

(2) there is such an overwhelming amount of evidence in favor of the movant that reasonable and fair minded men [and women] could not arrive at a verdict against him."

Katara v. D.E. Jones Commodities, 835 F.2d 966, 970 (2d Cir.1987) (quoting Mattivi v. South African Marine Corp., "Huguenot", 618 F.2d 163, 167-68 (2d Cir.1980)). In ruling on a judgment n.o.v. motion, we must "consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the motion was made and ... give that party the benefit of all reasonable inferences that the jury might have drawn in his favor from the evidence." Smith v. Lightning Bolt Productions, 861 F.2d 363, 367 (2d Cir.1988).

A trial court is empowered to grant a new trial to prevent a miscarriage of justice resulting from a jury verdict. Katara v. D.E. Jones Commodities, 835 F.2d at 970. The standard for granting a new trial is considerably less stringent than that applied on a motion for judgment n.o.v. Id. Thus, the court may order a new trial if it believes that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence, Ismail v. Cohen, 712 F.Supp. 416, 419 (S.D.N.Y.1989), although "a court may not substitute its own view for that of the jury's." United States v. Burger, 717 F.Supp. 245, 247 (S.D.N.Y.1989). A new trial may also be appropriate if evidence has been excluded or admitted improperly, to the prejudice of the moving party. See, e.g., Marx & Co. v. Diners' Club, Inc., 550 F.2d 505 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 861 (1977). Further, the giving of an erroneous jury instruction or the failure to give a proper requested instruction, if prejudicial, may also be a ground for a new trial. See, e.g., Callen v. Pennsylvania R.R., 332 U.S. 625 (1948); Bentley v. Stromberg-Carlson Corp., 638 F.2d 9 (2d Cir.1981). In general, however, the trial court should " 'abstain from interfering with the verdict unless it is quite clear that the jury has reached a seriously erroneous result.' " Bevevino v. Saydjari, 574 F.2d 676, 684 (2d Cir.1978) (quoting 6A J. Moore & J. Lucas, Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 59.08[5] at 59-161 (1973)); see also Fonar Corp. v. Johnson & Johnson, 821 F.2d 627, 633 (Fed.Cir.1987) (new trial obtainable only on showing that error affected substantial rights), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1027 (1988).

With these standards in mind, we turn to the grounds for Ligtwave's motion for judgment n.o.v. or for a new trial.

A. PATENT PHASE

Lightwave raises eleven grounds for its motion for judgment n.o.v. or for a new trial on the patent issues. These grounds are: (1) admission into evidence of decisions in other cases involving the validity of the '915 patent; (2) exclusion of the Nelson-Barber fibers; (3) exclusion of the Harrington documents; (4) bifurcation of the trial so as to permit Corning to proceed first with its patent infringement counterclaim, prior to the trial of Lightwave's antitrust claims; (5)-(10) insufficiency of the evidence on questions of infringement, best mode, adequacy of disclosure, anticipation, obviousness, and willfulness; and (11) patent misuse. [FN3]

*4 As to the evidentiary issues, the first three grounds listed above, Lightwave presents essentially the same arguments and objections as were made, carefully considered and rejected during the trial. Because the trial record adequately reflects the reasons for the Court's rulings, and because Corning's Memorandum in Opposition to Lightwave's Alternative Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict or For a New Trial ("C. JNOV Mem.") adequately summarizes those reasons, id. at 6-26, we will address Lightwave's arguments only briefly.

First, the Court is satisfied that the prior adjudications of the '915 patent's validity were relevant on the question of whether Lightwave willfully infringed the '915 patent, the only ground on which they were admitted. Lightwave suggests that, because a prior adjudication of validity is not binding on a jury in a subsequent infringement action, Lightwave was free to ignore the prior adjudications of validity. That a prior adjudi-cation of validity is not binding in a subsequent action, however, has no bearing on whether an infringer should exercise due care in the face of such an adjudication of validity, especially when the facts and circumstances of that adjudication closely parallel those of the infringer. The fact that Lightwave continued to infringe the '915 patent, despite its awareness of prior adjudications in which most of Lightwave's own affirmative defenses were considered and rejected, is relevant to the issue of whether Lightwave willfully infringed. The prior adjudications were thus properly admitted, solely on the issue of willfulness, with cautionary instructions to the jury to limit their prejudicial impact. We assume, as we must, that the jury heeded these instructions. See United States v. DeLillo, 620 F.2d 939, 947 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 835 (1980); United States v. Levy, 578 F.2d 896, 900 (2d Cir.1978); Lifetime Siding, Inc. v. United States, 359 F.2d 657, 661 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 921 (1966).

Second, the Nelson-Barber fibers were properly excluded under 35 U.S.C. § 102 and Rules 402 and 403. Lightwave's evidence concerning the availability of the fibers to the public was extremely marginal and uncorroborated, and was therefore entitled to little or no weight. See In re Reuter, 670 F.2d 1015, 1021 n. 8, 1022 (C.C.P.A.1981); Washburn & Mean Mfg. Co. v. Beat 'Em All Barber-Wire Co., 143 U.S. 275, 284 (1892). Thus, Lightwave did not meet its burden of establishing, by clear and convincing evidence, that the Nelson-Barber fibers qualified as prior art under 35 U.S.C. § 102. In addition, there was no persuasive evidence that the fibers had ever been or could be used for practical telecommunications. The fibers therefore did not teach the solution to the problem which was solved by the '915 invention, nor were they ever addressed to that problem. Thus, the fibers did not anticipate the '915 patent and were properly excluded as irrelevant. Even if the fibers were marginally relevant, their probative value was outweighed by the prejudice and confusion which would have resulted from the admission of the fibers into evidence.

*5 For similar reasons, the fibers were not admissible on the question of obviousness under 35 U.S.C. § 103. Specifically, because the fibers were not prior art under Section 102, they could not be considered under Section 103. See 2 D. Chisum, Patents § 5.02[3] (1990). Moreover, the result achieved by Dr. Nelson--a glowing, luminescent fiber that exhibits a loss of 75,000-100,000 dB/km--tends to support the non-obviousness, rather than the obviousness, of proceeding with doped fused silica.

Third, the foreign Harrington documents were properly excluded. None of the Harrington patents and applications were published more than a year prior to the filing date of the application for the '915 patent. They are thus not prior art under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b). Nor do they describe the invention of another, that is, someone other than Dr. Maurer, prior to the invention of the '915 patent, so as to qualify as prior art under 35 U.S.C. § 102(a). See C. JNOV Mem. at 24-26. Nor do the Harrington documents, for the reasons set forth by Corning, id. at 26, represent "prior inconsistent statements" by Corning.

Fourth, Lightwave once again challenges the Court's decision, based upon the Federal Circuit's decision in In re Innotron Diagnostics, 800 F.2d 1077 (Fed.Cir.1986), to bifurcate the trial and try the patent issues first. It is not necessary to repeat the reasons for the decision to bifurcate. See C. JNOV Mem. at 27.

Lightwave's fifth through tenth grounds for its motion for judgment n.o.v. or a new trial, as indicated above, are arguments that various parts of the jury's verdict were unsupported by the trial record. As Corning demonstrates, see C. JNOV Mem. at 28-47, the jury's findings with respect to infringement, best mode, adequacy of disclosure, anticipation, obviousness, and willfulness of infringement were more than adequately supported by the evidence presented at trial.

Eleventh and finally, as we have indicated in connection with our discussion of Lightwave's motion for a partial directed verdict, see Part I, supra, Corning's licensing practices did not constitute patent misuse.

B. ANTITRUST PHASE

With regard to Lightwave's antitrust and common law claims against Corning, Lightwave moves for judgment n.o.v. or, in the alternative, for a new trial, on the following grounds: (1) Lightwave's entitlement to judgment n.o.v. or a new trial on Corning's patent claims; (2) insufficiency of the evidence in support of the verdict that Corning did not monopolize, attempt to monopolize, or conspire to monopolize in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act; (3) insufficiency of the evidence in support of the verdict that Corning did not interfere with Lightwave's prospective economic advantage; (4) exclusion from evidence of Corning's prior violations of the antitrust laws through the misuse of valid patents, and refusal to instruct the jury with regard to Corning's past violations; (5) Corning's alleged misuse of its patent, in the form of patent grantback arrangements and agreements restricting the output and territories of its licensees; (6) the giving of three assertedly erroneous jury instructions; and (7) the failure to give three jury instructions requested by Lightwave.

*6 As to the first ground, we have already determined that Lightwave is not entitled to judgment n.o.v. or a new trial on the patent issues.

Second, the evidence more than adequately supports the jury's findings that Corning did not monopolize, attempt to monopolize or conspire to monopolize, in violation of the antitrust laws. In support of its arguments to the contrary, Lightwave reviews only evidence that was favorable to it; indeed, Lightwave's review of the facts closely parallels the closing arguments of Lightwave's counsel. On a motion for judgment n.o.v., however, the Court must examine the evidence in a light most favorable to the party against which the motion was made. Smith v. Lightning Bolt Productions, 861 F.2d 363, 367 (2d Cir.1988). Moreover, the court may order a new trial only if the verdict was against the weight of all of the evidence. Ismail v. Cohen, 712 F.Supp. 416, 419 (S.D.N.Y.1989). As set forth in Corning's memorandum of law (C. JNOV Mem. at 48-64), the evidence at trial, considered as a whole, giving Corning the benefit of all reasonable inferences that the jury might have drawn in its favor, supports the jury's verdict on Lightwave's antitrust claims.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Third, there was ample support in the record for the jury's determination that Corning did not tortiously interfere with Lightwave's prospective economic advantage. As the jury was instructed, Lightwave had to establish, inter alia, that Corning interfered with Lightwave's business relations "for the sole purpose of harming Lightwave or by means that were fraudulent, deceitful or illegal," that "the contract or business relation would have been entered into but for Corning's conduct," and that "Lightwave suffered damages as a direct result of Corning's action." The evidence permitted the jury to conclude that Corning notified Lightwave of its good faith belief that Lightwave was infringing its patent for the legitimate purpose of protecting Corning's patent rights, not for the sole purpose of harming Lightwave. The evidence further permitted the jury to find that Corning's conduct, even if improper, was not the cause of Lightwave's business failures and that Lightwave did not suffer damages from Corning's actions. Accordingly, the jury's finding on Lightwave's tortious interference claim was proper.

Fourth, the Court properly refused to admit evidence of Corning's prior antitrust violations and to instruct the jury with regard to Corning's past violations. As Corning points out, this is Lightwave's fourth attempt to reargue the decision of Judge Weinfeld, in an order dated January 13, 1987, to exclude Hartford-Empire Co. v. United States, 323 U.S. 386 (1945), a case in which Corning was found to have violated the antitrust laws, from this action. [FN4] Lightwave relies heavily on Justice Cardozo's observation that "size carries with it an opportunity for abuse that is not to be ignored when the opportunity is proved to have been utilized in the past." United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U.S. 106, 116 (1932). That observation, however, was initially made in connection with the approval of a consent decree, not a decision to exclude highly prejudicial, marginally relevant (if relevant at all) evidence in a jury trial. More directly on point is United States Football League v. National Football League, 634 F.Supp. 1155, 1171-73 (S.D.N.Y.1986), in which Judge Leisure excluded evidence of the NFL's prior antitrust violations offered as proof of a "long-standing antitrust conspiracy dating back to the 1940's, which casts light on the current antitrust conspiracy." Id. at 1173. The Second Circuit affirmed the decision. 842 F.2d 1335, 1371-73 (2d Cir.1988). In support of our decision to exclude evidence of and all references to Corning's antitrust violations in the 1940's, we simply repeat, once again, the words of Judge Weinfeld: "Actions taken in the distant past are more prejudicial than probative as to Corning's likely intent in August 1984." Order, dated January 13, 1987.

*7 Fifth, Lightwave alleges that, as a matter of law, three provisions included in some of Corning's license agreements violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act and constituted patent misuse: (1) grantbacks of non-exclusive licenses; (2) geographically limited licenses; and (3) quantity limited licenses. As Corning explains and as the jury was instructed, however, these provisions are not per se unlawful. Thus, whether or not Corning used grantbacks, geographically limited licenses, and quantity limited licenses as part of an overall scheme to monopolize the relevant market was a question for the jury about which the jury was fully instructed. Notwithstanding Lightwave's frequent references to the words of Chief Judge Knox and Judge Rifkind, in United States v. General Elec. Co., 80 F.Supp. 989, 1006 (S.D.N.Y.1948) and United States v. National Lead Co., 63 F.Supp. 513, 524 (S.D.N.Y.1945), aff'd, 332 U.S. 319 (1947), respectively, the jury was permitted to find, on the facts before it, that Corning had not engaged in an "industry-wide cartel" in violation of the antitrust laws.

Sixth, Lightwave argues that three of the Court's jury instructions in the antitrust phase of the trial were improper. With respect to the Court's instruction No. 22 that "[y]ou have ... found that Lightwave has willfully infringed Corning's 915 patent" (Tr. 5614), [FN5] we cannot imagine that Lightwave was unfairly or improperly prejudiced by the Court's reminding the jury, by way of introduction, of its finding in the patent phase. With regard to the Court's instruction No. 23 that "as long as a patent holder uses his patents in a lawful manner he will not violate the antitrust laws" (Tr. 5617), the instruction was drawn from the court's language in SCM Corp. v. Xerox Corp., 645 F.2d 1195, 1206 (2d Cir.1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1016 (1982). In the context of lengthy instructions which repeatedly distinguished between lawful and unlawful uses of a patent monopoly, the Court's instruction was neither improper nor prejudicial. Likewise, the instruction No. 30 that "[Monopoly power] may be shown by evidence of a company's reducing or restricting the share of the market held by competitors by means other than through the unilateral and lawful exercise of rights granted by a lawful patent" (Tr. 5623), was proper and fair.

Seventh, Lightwave contends that the Court erred in refusing to give three jury instructions requested by Lightwave. With respect to Lightwave's proffered instruction on sham litigation, it was rejected in part because its content was adequately addressed by other instructions relating to Corning's notice of infringement. Moreover, as set forth by Corning, C. JNOV Mem. at 74- 75, Lightwave's instruction was not entirely sound. As to Lightwave's proposed charge on grantbacks, the Court incorporated most of Lightwave's proposal into the Court's charge on grantbacks by eliminating from the charge all references to the exclusiveness or non-exclusiveness of grantbacks as an indication of their legality. The Court's charge on grantbacks was thus fair and accurate, despite its failure to incorporate verbatim the words of Chief Judge Knox. Finally, with regard to Lightwave's suggested charge on misuse of size, this instruction was properly rejected because it invited the jury to find, based merely on Corning's size, that Corning had violated the antitrust laws. [FN6]

*8 C. COURT'S CONDUCT AT TRIAL

Lightwave's final ground for its motion for a new trial is "the bias shown by the [Court] in conducting the trial." Memorandum of Lightwave in Support of Alternative Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict or New Trial ("L. JNOV Mem.") at 92, 95. Lightwave charges that the "trial record is replete with instances where the trial judge acted as Corning's advocate" (L. JNOV Mem. at 94) and "took an active role in the presentation of Corning's case" (L. JNOV Mem. at 95). Lightwave further argues that the Court treated Lightwave's president and chief executive officer, Dr. Dabby, "with animosity" and "berated Lightwave's counsel in front of the jury." (L. JNOV Mem. at 95.)

Corning argues that, because this ground for a new trial was not identified as an issue in Lightwave's initial "Alternative Motion ... for Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict or a New Trial," dated May 24, 1990, it must be rejected as untimely under Rule 59(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. C. JNOV Mem. at 84. Although it appears to be the rule in the Third Circuit that a court cannot properly consider newly assigned grounds for a new trial raised after the elapse of the ten day filing period, see Shushereba v. R.B. Industries, Inc., 104 F.R.D. 524, 529-30 (W.D.Pa.1985), this is not the rule in all circuits. See, e.g., Pate v. Seaboard R.R., Inc., 819 F.2d 1074, 1085 (11th Cir.1987) (district court may, in its discretion, consider new grounds raised in amendments to timely new trial motions); Roy v. Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft, 781 F.2d 670, 671 (9th Cir.1985) (same). In Meriwether v. Coughlin, 879 F.2d 1037 (2d Cir.1989), the Second Circuit determined that a litigant's oral indication at the conclusion of a trial that he wished to move for judgment n.o.v., without specifying any grounds, sufficiently preserved the litigant's rights under Rule 59(b) to submit briefing papers setting forth the grounds of the motion at a later date. We therefore conclude that either we must consider Lightwave's initially unspecified ground for a new trial, or that it is within our discretion to consider it.

Turning to the merits of Lightwave's argument, we note at the outset that the grounds for Lightwave's bias charge are refuted in detail by Corning. C. JNOV Mem. at 88-101. Accordingly, the Court will address Lightwave's arguments only briefly here.

Lightwave presents, in support of its charge of bias, a laundry list of supposed improprieties and abuses of discretion by the Court. Indeed, it seems as if Lightwave has combed the lengthy trial record (nearly 6,000 pages) to locate rulings, comments, or actions by the Court that were in some sense adverse to Lightwave. During an eight week trial, each side unavoidably incurs a number of unfavorable rulings. A charge of bias is not established, however, simply by identifying and comparing the number and significance of rulings adverse to each side. "[A] trial judge must rule on countless objections, and a simple numerical tally of those sustained and overruled, ... is not enough to establish that the scales of justice were tipped...." United States v. Pisani, 773 F.2d 397, 402 (2d Cir.1985). Moreover, Lightwave's examples of alleged abuses by the Court are taken out of context, ignoring preceding testimony or lines of questioning which justified the Court's actions. "[I]f defense counsel pursues an objectionable line of questioning, he can hardly cry 'foul' when the judge sustains a [plaintiff's] objection or even excludes the testimony sua sponte." Id. A balanced view of the entire record reveals that the Court's conduct of the trial was fair and appropriate.

*9 Lightwave suggests that the Court in effect acted as Corning's advocate by soliciting objections from Corning's counsel and by unnecessarily and prejudicially clarifying testimony or questioning witnesses. "It is well settled," however, "that a judge is authorized to ask questions of a witness which may aid the understanding of the jury." Johnson v. Celotex Corp., 899 F.2d 1281, 1290 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 111 S.Ct. 297 (1990); United States v. Lamont, 565 F.2d 212, 220 (2d Cir.1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 914 (1978). A judge may therefore properly question witnesses for "purposes of clarifying ambiguities, correcting misstatements, or obtaining information needed to make rulings...." United States v. Bronston, 658 F.2d 920, 930 (2d Cir.1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 915 (1982). Lightwave's characterization of the record, not surprisingly, gives the impression that the Court's efforts to expedite the trial and clarify the issues for the jury were uniformly unfavorable to Lightwave. This characterization, as Corning illustrates, is inaccurate. See C. JNOV Mem. at 88-92. In a complex and lengthy trial, the Court acted within its discretion to "insure that the issues [were] clearly presented to the jury." Pisani, 773 F.2d at 403.

Lightwave's attempt to compare Drs. Duke and Dabby, and the Court's treatment of them, is similarly misplaced. Whereas Dr. Duke was generally a cooperative, forthcoming witness, Dr. Dabby was uncooperative and evasive, often giving expansive and nonresponsive answers. Any perceived difference in the Court's treatment of these two witnesses, therefore, stemmed not from the Court's attitude toward them but from the difference between the two witnesses.

In support of its charge that the Court "berated" Lightwave's counsel in front of the jury, Lightwave cites two brief comments (from an eight-week trial) the Court directed at Lightwave's counsel. L. JNOV Mem. at 121. The context of the Court's remarks reveals that they were appropriate under the circumstances.

Even if any of the Court's actions, rulings, and comments were improper, for reasons the Court is unable to fathom, Lightwave does not, and cannot, establish that the Court's behavior was so prejudicial that it denied Lightwave a fair, as opposed to a perfect, trial. See United States v. Pisani, 773 F.2d at 402 (citing United States v. Robinson, 635 F.2d 981, 984 (2d Cir.1980)). Moreover, the members of the jury were instructed numerous times that they were the sole judges of the facts. They were further instructed that the Court had no view or opinion as to the outcome of the trial, and that they were therefore to disregard any perceived indication of the Court's view.

In short, the Court's conduct did not deprive Lightwave of a fair and impartial trial. Because the jury's verdicts were fully supported by the record and because the trial record is free of prejudicial error, Lightwave's motion for judgment n.o.v. or in the alternative for a new trial is denied in all respects.

III. MOTION FOR TREBLE DAMAGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES

*10 Corning moves, pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 284, for the damages awarded by the jury to be trebled and, pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 285, for an award of attorneys' fees with interest.

A. INCREASED DAMAGES

"[T]he court may increase the damages up to three times the amount found or assessed [by the jury]." 35 U.S.C. § 284. In exercising its discretion to increase damages, a Court should consider the policies of the patent laws, as well as the circumstances of the litigation at hand. S.C. Johnson & Son, Inc. v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 781 F.2d 198, 201 (Fed.Cir.1986). Various policies are furthered by increasing damages, such as the deterrence of deliberate infringement in the future and the consequent protection of the integrity of the patent system. Avia Group Int'l v. L.A. Gear California, 853 F.2d 1557, 1566 (Fed.Cir.1988); Shiley, Inc. v. Bentley Laboratories, Inc., 601 F.Supp. 964, 969 (C.D.Cal.1985), aff'd, 794 F.2d 1561 (Fed.Cir.1986). Such an award is also proper to reflect equitable considerations regarding how best to "recompense the successful litigant." S.C. Johnson & Son, 781 F.2d at 201.

As we have noted, the jury found that Lightwave had willfully infringed the '915 patent. In response to the question, "has Corning proven by clear and convincing evidence that Lightwave's infringement has been willful?", the jury answered "yes" on the verdict sheet. A jury's finding of willful infringement is sufficient grounds for an increase in damages. Shiley, 794 F.2d at 1568. Lightwave argues, however, that because "the jury was instructed that it may find for Corning on the issue of willful infringement upon a preponderance of the evidence" (Lightwave's Memorandum in Opposition to Corning's Motion for Treble Damages and Award of Attorney's Fees ("L. Damages Mem.") at 6), the Court must independently assess whether Corning has established, by clear and convincing evidence, entitlement to increased damages and attorney fees. Id. at 6-7, 23.

Although Lightwave correctly states that clear and convincing evidence is required in support of increased damages, E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 849 F.2d 1430, 1440 (Fed.Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 986 (1988), the jury was not instructed in the charge on willfulness that Corning must establish willful infringement by a preponderance of the evidence. (Tr. 2855-56) The charge itself did not refer to a burden of proof, id, and Lightwave did not object to the charge. (Tr. 2416-17) Earlier in the jury instructions, however, the jury was instructed that Corning "has the burden of proving its claims to you by a preponderance of the evidence" while Lightwave "has the burden of proving its affirmative defenses to you by clear and convincing evidence." (Tr. 2815) Thus, it is possible that the jury inferred from the charge that Corning had to establish willfulness by a preponderance of the evidence.

Nevertheless, the verdict sheet clearly required the jury to find willfulness only if Corning established it by clear and convincing evidence. Each juror was given a copy of the verdict sheet for use during deliberations. The jury never asked the Court to clarify any perceived discrepancy between the verdict sheet and the charge, indicating that the jury understood that it should apply the clear and convincing standard of proof to the willfulness issue. In addition, the jury was fully instructed as to the meaning of the clear and convincing standard of proof. (Tr. 2817) Thus, the jury's verdict on willfulness is a sufficient ground to support increased damages (and attorneys' fees).

*11 Even if the jury overlooked the "clear and convincing" language in the question on the verdict sheet, the Court is satisfied that clear and convincing evidence supports the jury's finding of willfulness. Although Lightwave was fully aware of the '915 patent before it began producing its optical waveguide fibers, it did not exercise due care in deciding whether to begin production despite the '915 patent. The test of due care is "whether, under all the circumstances, a reasonable person would prudently conduct himself with any confidence that a court might hold the patent invalid or not infringed." State Indus., Inc. v. Mor-Flo Indus., Inc., 883 F.2d 1573, 1581 (Fed.Cir.1989), cert. denied, 110 S.Ct. 725 (1990). The duty of care "includes ... the duty to seek and obtain competent legal advice from counsel before initiation of any possible infringing activity." Underwater Devices Inc. v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 717 F.2d 1380, 1390 (Fed.Cir.1983). The degree of requisite care required is heightened when, as here, the infringer appreciates the "technological and commercial significance" of the patented invention and seeks but is denied a license. Spindelfabrik Suessen-Schurr Stahlecker & Grill GmbH v. Schubert & Salzer Maschinen Fabrik Aktiengesellschaft, 829 F.2d 1075, 1084 (Fed.Cir.1987).

Lightwave obtained no written opinion whatsoever before embarking upon its infringing conduct in 1982. The earliest written opinion introduced at trial was not prepared until December 1983. The written opinions Lightwave obtained thereafter were inadequate. Two opinions addressed only validity, not infringement (Exs. 759, 999; Tr. 2149-50) and relied heavily upon art previously considered and rejected by the Patent Office during prosecution of the '915 patent (Tr. 2115-37). A validity and infringement opinion "would generally include an analysis of the file history of the patent." Underwater Devices, Inc. v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 717 F.2d at 1390. Lightwave's subsequent noninfringement opinion (Ex. 878), which relied on an "off the wall" interpretation (according to Corning's expert, Professor Adelman (Tr. 2541)) of the "on at least an elemental basis" language of the patent claims, was contradicted by an earlier opinion (Ex. 751; Tr. 2138-42). It was therefore not competent. See Shiley, Inc. v. Bentley Laboratories, Inc., 601 F.Supp. at 968 (opinion not competent where it is undercut by another opinion).

Lightwave also obtained the opinion of its antitrust counsel that it had "a submissible antitrust case against Corning, and that a verdict for Lightwave on its antitrust claims would render the '915 patent unenforceable." L. Damages Mem. at 2. Given the complexity of antitrust law, having a "submissible antitrust case" is hardly a sound basis for proceeding with patent infringing activities. In any event, conclusory oral opinions do not discharge the duty of care. Bott v. Four Star Corp., 807 F.2d 1567, 1572 (Fed.Cir.1986). Moreover, Lightwave's failure to articulate in clear, specific and concrete terms its patent misuse claims--indeed, Lightwave never asserted a patent misuse defense in any of its pleadings--until the conclusion of the antitrust phase of the trial leads us to doubt that Lightwave seriously considered a defense of patent misuse in deciding whether to infringe the '915 patent.

*12 More damaging to Lightwave's position is its failure to obtain any new opinion of counsel or any written reevaluation of the 1983 opinion, and its failure to cease infringing the '915 patent, despite numerous decisions upholding the validity of the '915 patent. After Lightwave's December 1983 opinion, four different tribunals found the '915 patent or its Canadian counterpart valid, enforceable and infringed by products differing in no material respect from those of Lightwave: the Federal Court of Canada, the United States International Trade Commission, this Court (Judge Conner in Corning Glass Works, Inc. v. Sumitomo Elec. U.S.A., Inc., 671 F.Supp. 1369 (S.D.N.Y.1987)), and the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit (affirming Judge Conner's decision, 868 F.2d 1251 (Fed.Cir.1989). The duty of care includes an obligation to obtain a further competent opinion of counsel once an adjudication of validity and/or infringement is entered. International Mfg. Co. v. Landon, Inc., 336 F.2d 723, 728 (9th Cir.1964) (prior adjudication involved different infringer); Bott v. Four Star Corp., 229 U.S.P.Q. 241, 253 (E.D.Mich.1985) (prior adjudication involving same infringer "should have at least raised a yellow flag"), aff'd in relevant part, 807 F.2d 1567 (Fed.Cir.1986).

Lightwave's efforts to minimize the importance and relevance of these prior decisions are unavailing. It emphasizes that the Canadian decision was not binding in the United States and that the ITC's findings were eventually vacated, on technical grounds, by the Federal Circuit in 1986, but these facts do not diminish the "yellow flag" Lightwave should have seen after these decisions. Lightwave laments the fact that its trial against Corning did not proceed prior to the Sumitomo trial, but this fact also does not alter the effect Judge Conner's decision should have had on Lightwave, particularly because Lightwave attended the trial before Judge Conner and consulted with representatives of Sumitomo during the trial, and because Judge Conner rejected the affirmative defenses Lightwave planned to offer at its own trial. Lightwave's hope that it could persuade a jury to accept defenses rejected by Judge Conner constituted either "outright defiance or baseless optimism." Corning Glass Works v. Sumitomo, 671 F.Supp. at 1401.

Instead of seeking competent legal advice from patent counsel and/or ceasing infringement of the '915 patent, Lightwave continued to produce infringing fibers. The jury was therefore entitled to find, by clear and convincing evidence, that Lightwave had willfully infringed the '915 patent.

For the same reasons, an increase in the damages awarded by the jury is required. An increase would operate "partly as a deterrent--an economic deterrent to the tort of infringement--and partly as a basis for making economically whole one who has been wronged...." Rite-Hite Corp. v. Kelley Co., 819 F.2d 1120, 1126 (Fed.Cir.1987). The jury was instructed that it should award damages in an amount no "less than the amount of money Corning would have received if Lightwave had been paying a reasonable royalty to them for the use made by Lightwave during the period of infringement." Patent Jury Instruction No. 44. The jury's damage award, $403,915, is based on an 8% royalty rate. If this amount were not increased, Lightwave and other willful infringers would have no incentive not to infringe. To the contrary, knowing that either they would not be held liable or that they could simply pay a reasonable royalty after a finding of infringement, infringers would find it desirable and profitable to infringe.

*13 In addition to acting as a deterrent, an increased amount would more adequately compensate Corning. The unrebutted expert testimony established that the value of the '915 patent is greater than the 8% royalty rate employed by the jury, but exactly how much greater is unavoidably a matter of speculation. (Tr. 1341) Increased damages can properly redress such a situation. Kori Corp. v. Wilco Marsh Buggies and Draglines, Inc., 561 F.Supp. 512, 533 (E.D.La.1982) (doubling damages as compensation for expenses not susceptible of determination), aff'd, 761 F.2d 649 (Fed.Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 902 (1985).

At the same time, however, an increased award may also take into account the financial ability of the losing party to pay an increased damage award. Id.; see also Bott, 229 U.S.P.Q. at 254 (infringer was "no financial giant" and "a threefold increase in damages would severely affect [infringer's] financial condition"); 5 D. Chisum, Patents § 20.03[4][b][vi] (1990) (the amount of the increase should be a function of the size and wealth of the infringer). According to Dr. Dabby, Lightwave's president, Lightwave may not be able to make arrangements for payment of the jury's $403,915 verdict. Affidavit of Franklin W. Dabby, sworn to on May 17, 1990 ("Dabby Aff."), ¶ 4. As Corning points out, however, Dabby does not mention Lightwave's insurance policies or Dabby's own financial resources. [FN7] Corning's Reply Memorandum in Support of Its Motion for Treble Damages and Attorney Fees ("C. Damages Reply") at 14-15. We conclude that Lightwave can withstand some increase in damages, but not treble damages.

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the jury's award of damages to Corning in the amount of $403,915 should be doubled, so that Corning is awarded $807,830 plus interest to date in damages.

B. ATTORNEY FEES

A court is authorized to award attorney fees to the prevailing party in a patent infringement suit "in exceptional cases." 35 U.S.C. § 285. "Allowance of fees only in exceptional cases is based on the premise that courts should attempt to strike a balance between the interest of the patentee in protecting his statutory rights and the interest of the public in confining such rights to their legal limits." Machinery Corp. of America v. Gullfiber AB, 774 F.2d 467, 471 (Fed.Cir.1985). The court may consider many factors in exercising its discretion to award attorney fees, including inequitable conduct, willful infringement, misconduct during litigation, vexatious or unjustified litigation, or a frivolous suit. Rite-Hite Corp. v. Kelley Co., 819 F.2d at 1126 (citing Standard Oil Co. v. American Cyanamid Co., 774 F.2d 448, 449 (Fed.Cir.1985)).

Although a finding of willful infringement is a sufficient basis for finding a case exceptional, it does not compel such a finding. Avia Group Int'l v. L.A. Gear California, 853 F.2d 1557, 1567 (Fed.Cir.1988). Indeed, the purpose of an increase in damages is different from that of an award of attorney fees: whereas an increase in damages based on willful infringement is based on the need to compensate the patentee and to deter and punish infringers, an award of attorney fees is based more appropriately on the conduct of the parties during the litigation. Moreover, "[e]ven an exceptional case does not require in all circumstances the award of attorney fees." S.C. Johnson & Son, Inc. v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 781 F.2d 198, 201 (Fed.Cir.1986). The trial judge must "weigh considerations such as the closeness of the case, the tactics of counsel, the conduct of the parties, and any other factors that may contribute to a fair allocation of the burdens of litigation as between winner and loser." Id.

*14 Despite the jury's finding that Lightwave's infringement was willful, several considerations persuade us that this is not an exceptional case in which attorney fees should be awarded. First, Lightwave did not, as Corning repeatedly suggests, litigate in bad faith. Rather, Lightwave's trial tactics were the result, we believe, of an aggressive litigation strategy. Second, Lightwave did not present frivolous claims; to the contrary, its claims survived summary judgment and directed verdicts. To the extent that the lack of precision and the substance of the papers on summary judgment prevented the Court from granting summary judgment, the problem lay not only with Lightwave's submissions. Third, Lightwave's patent misuse and antitrust claims had never been presented in any previous litigation. These claims turned on Corning's intent, that is, whether Corning had an "overall scheme to monopolize" or a plan to force "competitors" into becoming "collaborators" (Ex. 437). In presenting these claims, Lightwave's counsel made effective use of numerous documents from which the jury could have drawn inferences in Lightwave's favor.

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the balance between the interest of the patentee and that of the public weighs against awarding attorney fees. Accordingly, Corning's motion for attorney fees is denied.

IV. SANCTIONS ISSUES

Two sanctions issues must be addressed: (1) the amount of sanctions to be awarded to Corning in connection with Lightwave's repeated efforts to introduce evidence of Corning's past antitrust violations; and (2) whether to award additional sanctions for Lightwave's "attempt to reargue the admissibility of Hartford-Empire in the guise of an impermissibly omitted jury instruction." C. JNOV Mem. at 81, n.*.

The Court initially awarded sanctions in connection with Lightwave's attempt, in its "Memorandum on Issues of Trial Evidence," to reargue Judge Weinfeld's decision, in an order dated January 13, 1987, to exclude all evidence of and references to United States v. Hartford-Empire Co. from this litigation. See Order dated February 27, 1990. Sanctions were appropriate in light of Lightwave's failure to cite, let alone distinguish, controlling Second Circuit authority, United States Football League v. National Football League, 842 F.2d 1335, 1371-73 (2d Cir.1988).

In its application for attorneys' fees, Corning requested $11,084, which represents the work of three associates, who spent 29.5 hours preparing Corning's response, two partners, who spent 15.5 hours reviewing and editing that response, and one legal assistant who spent 4.5 hours preparing the response for filing. Affidavit of Jeremy G. Epstein in Support of Application for Sanctions ("Epstein Aff."), ¶ 4. Lightwave argues that the amount requested by Corning is excessive, particularly in light of the fact that only one of Lightwave's attorneys spent only three hours preparing Lightwave's argument on the Hartford-Empire issue for its Memorandum on Issues of Trial Evidence. Affidavit of Daniel R. Shulman, dated March 17, 1990 ("Shulman Aff."), ¶ 2.

*15 While we agree with Corning that the amount of time spent by Lightwave's counsel is an inappropriate "yardstick" for measuring the reasonableness of Corning's application (see Letter, dated March 19, 1990, from Jeremy G. Epstein to the Court), Corning's application is unreasonable and excessive. Corning submitted an eleven-page memorandum on the Hartford- Empire issue, a relatively straightforward issue not requiring extensive research or thought because controlling Second Circuit authority was readily available and because Corning had addressed the issue in the past. Having three associates and two partners spend 45 hours on the memorandum may have satisfied Corning's desire to treat the matter thoroughly and seriously. Lightwave need not, however, shoulder the entire burden of that desire. Accordingly, we find that $1,000 is an appropriate sanction.

With respect to Lightwave's requested charge on misuse of size, which made reference to size having been "utilized in the past" and to Corning's past violations of the antitrust laws, Corning's motion for sanctions is denied. Although Lightwave's proposed instruction was rejected in light of the Court's prior rulings, Lightwave was entitled to preserve for appeal the issue of the appropriateness of such an instruction. Moreover, because the issue had been addressed several times, neither Corning nor the Court were burdened by Lightwave's request to its charge on misuse of size.

V. CONCLUSION

Lightwave's motion for a partial directed verdict is denied. Lightwave's motion for judgment n.o.v. or in the alternative for a new trial is denied. Corning's motion for attorneys' fees is denied. Corning's motion for increased damages is granted; Corning is awarded double damages in the amount of $807,830 plus interest to date. Corning is also awarded $1,000 as a sanction for Lightwave's repeated efforts to introduce evidence of Corning's past antitrust violations.

Corning is to submit an amended judgment on notice within 10 days of the date of this order.

SO ORDERED.

FN1. The Section 1 claims were dismissed in an order dated December 29, 1989.

FN2. "Ex. ____" refers to a trial exhibit.

FN3. The question of whether Corning misused its patent, thereby making the patent unenforceable and entitling Lightwave to a directed verdict on the patent issues, is the subject of a separate motion addressed in Part I, supra.

FN4. In an order dated February 28, 1990, the Court sanctioned Lightwave for its second attempt to introduce evidence on Corning's prior antitrust violations. The Court has not yet fixed a dollar amount for the sanction. Corning also moves for sanctions in connection with Lightwave's "attempt to reargue the admissibility of Hartford-Empire in the guise of an impermissibly omitted jury instruction."

C. JNOV Mem. at 81, n.*; see also L. JNOV Mem. at 91-92 (Lightwave's seventh ground for judgment n.o.v. or a new trial on the antitrust issues is the Court's refusal to instruct jury on past misuse of size). We address these sanctions issues in Part IV, infra.

FN5. "Tr. _____" indicates a reference to the trial transcript.

FN6. As discussed earlier, see supra footnote 4, Corning moves for sanctions in connection with Lightwave's "attempt to reargue the admissibility of Hartford-Empire in the guise of an impermissibly omitted jury instruction." Corning JNOV Mem. at 81, n.*. This motion is addressed, along with the other outstanding sanctions issue, in Part IV, infra.

FN7. Corporate officers may be held "personally liable for 'participating in, inducing, and approving acts of patent infringement' by a corporation." Fromson v. Citiplate, Inc., 886 F.2d 1300, 1303-04 (Fed.Cir.1989) (citing Orthokinetics, Inc. v. Safety Travel Chairs, Inc., 806 F.2d 1565, 1578-79 (Fed.Cir.1986)). The parties have not addressed, nor do we consider, however, whether Dr. Dabby may be added as a party after trial.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS

Pursuant to the Court's February 18, 1999 Scheduling Order, Defendants respectfully submit the following objections to Plaintiffs' Proposed Exhibits. Defendants reserve the right to amend, modify or supplement the attached objections in response to: (i) the manner and method of introduction of any exhibit; (ii) rulings of the Court on any motions, either now pending or made prior to or during the course of trial; and/or (iii) upon resolution of certain inconsistencies between Plaintiffs' Exhibits as described in Plaintiffs' List of Trial Exhibits and the copies of Plaintiffs' Proposed Exhibits provided to Defendants.

January 28, 2000

Respectfully submitted,

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED DEMONSTRATIVE EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants three sets of demonstrative exhibits: (1) to be used during opening; (2) to be used during the direct testimony of William Rosson; and (3) to be used during the direct testimony of Dr. Morton Kamien. Defendants object to certain of these exhibits as detailed below:

1. Demonstratives For Opening Statement (Tab 1)

Plaintiffs propose to use 16 demonstrative exhibits during their opening statement to the jury. Defendants object to six of these exhibits as follows:

Exhibit 5: "Monopoly Power." Defendants object to the use of this exhibit and any comments like it because it would invade the province of this Court by instructing the jury on the law.

Exhibit 12: "UST's Exclusionary Agreements Cover The Entire United States." Defendants object to this exhibit because it would mislead the jury by suggesting that any so-called exclusionary agreements are pervasive throughout the United States. Even Plaintiffs' own expert witness has asserted that US Tobacco has so-called exclusive agreements with only 22,000 retail locations out of 300,000 retail locations that sell moist snuff products. Further, this Court has ruled that Professor Gundlach's study must retain the term "Exclusive Agreements," rather than exclusionary agreements. This exhibit is presumably based on Professor Gundlach's study and, at a bare minimum, should conform to that study.

Exhibit 13: "UST Illegal Tactics." Defendants object to this exhibit because the title is unfairly prejudicial and its use would be legal argument during Plaintiffs' opening statement.

Exhibit 15: "Results of UST Control." Defendants object to this exhibit because it would be misleading to the jury to suggest that "competitors sell less" when it is undisputed in this case that U.S. Tobacco has lost sales share while "competitors" have gained sales shares and that all "competitors" have increased sales over the time period covered by the allegations.

Exhibit 16: "Why Stores Don't Stop UST's Monopolistic Tactics." Defendants object to this exhibit because the title is unfairly prejudicial and its use would be legal argument during Plaintiffs' opening statement.

2. Demonstratives For Use During The Direct Examination of W. Rosson (Tab 2)

Exhibits 1-6: Defendants object to the use of these demonstrative exhibits during the direct examination of William Rosson, a fact witness in Plaintiffs' case. The exhibits represent prepared analyses based on FTC reports to Congress, as well as US Tobacco documents produced in this litigation. All such exhibits are beyond the personal knowledge of Mr. Rosson as a fact witness.

3. Proposed Exhibits For Use During The Direct Examination of Dr. Kamien (Tab 3)

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants that they intent to offer PX 326 into evidence during the direct examination of Dr. Kamien. PX 326, however, is a collection of 55 different exhibits, some of which are directly related to Dr. Leftwich's testimony. Defendants requested that Plaintiffs provide Defendants with a narrowed list from PX 326, designating the exhibits Plaintiffs actually intend to use with Dr. Kamien. Plaintiffs did not respond. Defendants, therefore, object to the following exhibits collected under PX 326 because neither the exhibits, nor the information contained in the exhibits, was included in Dr. Kamien's expert report or his rebuttal report, or any supplemental report. Like the new version of Professor Gundlach's "study," Defendants have had no opportunity to conduct any investigation or to cross examine Dr. Kamien on any of these exhibits, or with respect to any opinions represented by these exhibits.

PX 326-1: "Moist Snuff Product And Design Introductions Plotted Against UST's Market Share and Moist Snuff Prices." This exhibit purports to demonstrate the relationship between various introductions and USTC's market share and moist snuff prices. Dr. Kamien offered no such opinions, or any basis therefor, at any time.

PX 326-22: "Snuff and All-Item PPIs 1986-1998." This exhibit purports to demonstrate the relationship between moist snuff PPI and all-item PPI. Dr. Kamien offered no such opinion, or any opinion based on PPIs, at any time.

PX 326-39: "UST Moist Snuff Prices Over Time - Key Pricing Events." This exhibit purports to demonstrate the relationship between USTC price increases and certain events. Dr. Kamien offered no such opinions, or any basis therefor, at any time.

PX 326-55: "Growth Rate of Moist Snuff Sales." This exhibit purports to demonstrate the relationship between the growth rate of moist snuff sales and certain variables. Dr. Kamien offered no such opinions, or any basis therefor, at any time.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

Respectfully submitted,

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED DEMONSTRATIVE EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants additional demonstrative exhibits for use during the direct examination of Dr. Morton Kamien. Defendants object to the use of these exhibits as described below.

1. Demonstratives For Use During The Direct Examination of Dr. Kamien Attached

Plaintiffs propose to use a 14-page exhibit entitled as an outline of the direct examination of Dr. Kamien. Defendants object to certain pages of the exhibit as follows.

Pages 7 & 8: "Cross Elasticity" and "No Cross-Elasticity: Moist Snuff And Loose Leaf." Defendants object to the use of these exhibits. Dr. Kamien offered no opinion on the cross-elasticity of demand in either his expert report or his rebuttal report, or in any supplemental report. In fact, Dr. Kamien testified during his deposition (p. 31) as follows:

"Q. Did you attempt to calculate the cross-elasticities of demand that exist between moist snuff and any other tobacco product?
A. No."

Dr. Kamien should not now be allowed to offer an opinion based on cross-elasticity of demand, either by showing an exhibit or by offering any testimony that there is "no cross-elasticity" between moist snuff and loose leaf products.

Page 11: "UST exclusionary conduct widespread across US." Defendants object to the use of this exhibit because it is an unfair attempt to introduce inadmissible evidence to the jury through an expert witness. Simply listing all documents and statements that are precluded by the rules of evidence is not proper expert testimony under Fed. R. Evid. 702. Moreover, permitting Dr. Kamien to describe or discuss this "evidence" will require cross-examination, which in turn will only exacerbate the problem by bringing more attention to this inadmissible hearsay. Specifically:

- "More than 60 retailer witnesses (live and by declaration)." The jury will see the deposition testimony of certain retailers who have been subject to cross examination. The jury will not see the inadmissible declarations of other retailers who have not been subject to cross-examination. Dr. Kamien may reference the fact that he relied on various retailer declarations for certain exclusionary conduct. It would be unfair to allow him to characterize this as "evidence" or to display this item as part of a list of purportedly proven misconduct.

- "More than 400 signed retailer statements." Defendants assumes that this item refers to 400 of Conwood's "Unethical Activity Reports" purportedly signed by retailers. These reports, however, are misleading (and often inaccurate) on their face. More importantly, they are inadmissible hearsay (which Conwood has conceded numerous times). Permitting Dr. Kamien to discuss this as "evidence" or list it in a demonstrative exhibit unfairly suggests that there is proof in the record that this activity actually took place and that is "unethical." In fact, Conwood's employees have admitted that these reports are filled out for all activity -- authorized or not, "unethical" or not.

- "Testimony from Swedish Match." Plaintiffs could bring Mr. Price as a live witness or could have taken his deposition testimony. Instead, rather than subject Mr. Price to cross-examination, Plaintiffs now attempt to present his declaration through Dr. Kamien.

- "Sworn Declarations of 226 Employees." Even more so that than the "Unethical Activity Reports," this reference leaves the false impression that the "declarations" were part of this proceeding providing rather than a post-litigation survey conducted by Conwood's counsel. We believe it would be more fair to refer to them as a survey of employees conducted after the case was filed.

- "1200 Unethical Activity Reports In Recent Years." First, these reports are objectionable for the same reasons as the Unethical Activity Reports. Second, the descriptive term "in recent years" is untruthful and misleading. Conwood's "Unethical Activity Reports" date back to the late 1980's, over 10 years ago. Finally, the exhibit as a whole double counts these reports, listing the 400 that have retailers' names on them and then listing the total number of reports, 1,200.

Page 14: "7-11: largest US convenience store (15,400 outlets worldwide)." Defendants object to this exhibit because the title over-inflates the number of relevant 7-11 stores. The stipulated geographic market in this case is the United States. Plaintiffs should modify this exhibit to speak to the number of relevant stores, and to conform it to the study of Professor Gundlach, upon which Dr. Kamien relied.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

FIRST STIPULATIONS OF FACT

Pursuant to the Court's Order of February 18, 1999, the parties hereby stipulate and agree that, for the purpose of this case, the following statements may be accepted as undisputed facts. These stipulations are subject to the rights of the parties to introduce other and further evidence not inconsistent with such stipulated facts. Further, the parties preserve their rights to object, at the time of trial, to any and all portions of such stipulated facts as they may deem to be irrelevant, but not on other grounds.

The parties intend to supplement this filing with further stipulations.

1. United States Tobacco Company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of UST Inc. United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc., and United States Tobacco Manufacturing Limited Partnership are wholly-owned subsidiaries of United States Tobacco Company. These three companies are engaged in the manufacture and sale of moist and dry snuff products. UST Inc. is a publicly traded corporation.

2. Dry snuff is responsible for less than 1% of defendants' tobacco sales volume.

3. The Copenhagen brand was first sold in 1822.

4. U.S. Tobacco introduced its first Skoal product in 1934.

5. In January 1984, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Long-Cut and Skoal Long-Cut Wintergreen.

6. In May 1984, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Bandit Mint.

7. In May 1985, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Long-Cut Mint.

8. In March 1986, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Bandit Straight.

9. In March 1987, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Long-Cut Classic.

10. In May 1989, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Bandit Classic.

11. In May 1993, U.S. Tobacco introduced Skoal Long-Cut Cherry and Skoal Long-Cut Spearmint.

12. In March 1997, U.S. Tobacco introduced Copenhagen Long Cut.

13. The relevant geographic market in this case is the United States of America.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' PROPOSED VOIR DIRE

Defendants respectfully submit the following questions and request that they be asked of prospective jurors during their voir dire examination. Defendants further request that this Court question prospective jurors as to their background, employment and involvement in other juries.

1. Are you familiar with either of the parties in this case, U.S. Tobacco Company or Conwood Company?

2. Conwood is part of a group of companies owned by the Prizker family of Chicago. Another of these companies is Hyatt Hotels. Have you or anyone in your family ever been employed by Hyatt or any other company you believe may have been affiliated in any way with the Prizker family?

3. There are a number of lawyers in this case whose homes and offices are located outside the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Has anyone ever been represented by or worked with any attorneys from New York, Memphis or Washington DC?

4. There are several lawyers in this case who are from Kentucky. Mr. Richard Roberts representing Conwood is from Paducah. He is with the law firm of Whitlow, Roberts, Houston & Straub. Are any of you familiar with Mr. Roberts or any members of his firm?

Is anyone here acquainted with Mr. Roberts either through club or church membership or otherwise?

5. John Reed, Ridley Sandidge and Lynn Fieldhouse are with the Reed, Weitkamp Schell & Vice law firm in Louisville. Are any of you familiar with any of those attorneys or their firm?

6. The majority of the potential witnesses in this case live and work outside the Commonwealth of Kentucky. However, there are a number of potential witnesses from Kentucky. Is anyone here acquainted with any of the following people?

   [List of Kentucky witnesses to be provided]

7. U.S. Tobacco is a corporation involved in the tobacco business. U.S. Tobacco has been sued here for alleged antitrust violations. Do you believe either because U.S. Tobacco is a large corporation or the fact that it has been sued here for alleged antitrust violations that U.S. Tobacco is entitled to anything less than a fair trial?

8. Have you, has any family member or close friend ever been a plaintiff or defendant in a lawsuit (other than a divorce case)?

9. Have you or any member of your family been involved in any way in tobacco farming or the tobacco industry?

10. Does anyone have a negative opinion about tobacco products in general? about any specific tobacco products?

11. Would that opinion prevent you from giving a fair hearing to both sides?

12. Have you or anyone close to you ever been employed by or the owner of a convenience store? a discount tobacco store? a grocery store?

13. Have you or anyone close to you ever been employed by a mass merchandiser, such as K-Mart?

14. Does anyone here have any special knowledge of retailing by education, training, experience or otherwise?

15. Have you or anyone close to you ever been employed as a salesperson?

16. Have you or anyone close to you consumed loose leaf tobacco?

16diii003752

17. Have you ever heard of Copenhagen? Skoal? Kodiak? Rooster? Silvercreek? Timberwolf? Cougar? Red Seal? Levi Garrett? Taylor's Pride? H.B. Scott?

18. Have you or anyone who close to you consumed any of these brands?

19. Have you or anyone close to you ever had a job that required that you learn about any antitrust law for purposes of compliance or another purpose?

20. Do you think that manufacturers have to compete for display space in retail stores?

21. Do you believe that smaller companies should be given some advantages or special treatment in order to compete with larger companies?

22. Do you agree fairness requires jurors to wait until all of the evidence has been presented by both sides before deciding a case?

23. Do you think you would be able to follow the judge's instructions in this case, even if you do not necessarily agree with the law behind the instruction?

24. Would you be able to decide to award the plaintiffs zero money damages in this case if the evidence and the judge's instructions in this case led you to believe that this was the correct result?

DEFENDANTS' REQUEST FOR JURY
INSTRUCTIONS TO BE GIVEN AT THE CLOSE OF EVIDENCE

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 51 and the case management order, defendants request that the Court instruct the jury at the close of evidence in accordance with the attached proposed instructions. Defendants respectfully request and reserve the right to submit additional instructions and to amend the attached instructions in response to instructions submitted by Plaintiffs, the submission of evidence at trial, and/or the rulings of the Court on any motions, either now pending or made prior to or during the course of trial.

Defendants intend to request a special verdict pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a). Defendants submit herewith a proposed form of verdict with special interrogatories, but respectfully request and reserve the right to amend the proposed form at the conclusion of the case.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 1

Charge of the Court

Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury:

You have now heard all of the evidence in the case as well as the final arguments of the lawyers for the parties.

My duty at this point is to instruct you as to the law that will guide your deliberations. It is your duty to accept these instructions of law and apply them to the facts as you determine them, just as it has been my duty to preside over the trial and decide what testimony and evidence is relevant under the law for your consideration.

On these legal matters, you must accept the law as I give it to you. If any lawyer has stated a legal principle different from any that I state to you in my instructions, it is my instructions that you must follow. You should not single out any instruction as alone stating the law. Instead, you should consider my instructions as a whole when you retire to deliberate in the jury room.

You should not, any of you, be concerned about the wisdom of any rule that I state. Regardless of any opinion that you may have as to what the law may be -- or ought to be -- it would violate your sworn duty to base a verdict upon any other view of the law than that which I give you.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 2

The Parties

Conwood Company, L.P. (or "Conwood") is a privately held limited partnership. Conwood, in turn, through various entities, is owned by the Pritzker Organization.

United States Tobacco Company ("U.S. Tobacco") is a wholly-owned subsidiary of UST Inc., a publicly traded corporation.

16diii003758

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 3

Equality of the Parties

You should consider and decide this case as an action between persons of equal standing in the community, of equal worth, and holding the same or similar station in life. It is irrelevant whether a party to a lawsuit is a public corporation, a privately held company, an individual, or something else. All persons, including public corporations and privately held businesses, stand equal before the law, and are to be dealt with as equals in a court of justice.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 4

Role of the Jury

As members of the jury, you are the sole and exclusive judges of the facts. You determine which witnesses to believe. You resolve any conflicts there may be in the testimony. You decide what conclusions to reach from the facts as you have determined them. And you determine what evidence is important to you.

Because you are the sole and exclusive judges of the facts, I do not mean to suggest my opinion of the facts or what the verdict should be. The rulings I have made during the trial are not any suggestion of my views of whether or not Conwood has met its burden of proving its claims against U.S. Tobacco or whether U.S. Tobacco has proven its counterclaims against Conwood.

You should not read anything into the fact that I may have asked questions of certain witnesses. These questions were intended only for clarification or to move things along, and were not intended to suggest any opinions on my part as to the verdict you should reach, or whether any witness may have been more believable than any other witnesses. The Court has no opinion as to the verdict you should render in this case.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 5

Burden of Proof

In a civil case such as this, the company asserting a claim has the burden of proving that claim by a preponderance of the evidence. In other words, the company asserting the claim must persuade you that each and every fact necessary to establish that claim is more probably true than not true.

I want to emphasize to you that whenever a claim contains a number of different parts or elements, the company asserting the claim must prove each and every part by a preponderance of the evidence.

If you find that each and every part of a particular claim has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence, then the company asserting the claim is entitled to a verdict in its favor on that claim. If, however you find that each and every part or element of a claim has not been proven by a preponderance of the evidence, even if some parts of it have been proven, then you must find for the party opposing that claim.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 73.01 at 73-2 (1997); Ramsey v. United Mine Workers, 401 U.S. 302 (1971); Continental T. V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania. Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 40 (1977).

16diii003761

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 6

Preponderance of the Evidence

Now I need to instruct you on what constitutes "a preponderance of the evidence."

The term "preponderance of the evidence" means the type of evidence that, when compared with opposing evidence, still makes you believe that what is being proposed is more likely true than not true. It is a question of quality and not of quantity, which is to say that the number of witnesses or documents relating to a certain version of the facts should not determine your answer. Rather, you should consider the believability of the evidence in determining whether each part of a claim has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence.

If you find that the credible evidence on a given issue is evenly divided, or if you find that the credible evidence favors the company opposing the claim, then you must reject the claim. Only if you find that, when all of the evidence is weighed, the scales tip in favor of the company asserting the claim on each and every element of its claim has that company have proven that particular claim by a preponderance of the evidence.

In determining whether any fact in issue has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence, you may, unless otherwise instructed, consider the relevant testimony of all witnesses, regardless of who called them, and all the relevant exhibits received in evidence, regardless of who may have introduced them.

3 E. Devitt, C. Blackmar, and M. Wolff, Federal Jury Practice and Instructions § 72.01, at 31 (1997); 3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 73.01 at 73.4 (1997).

16diii003762

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 7

Evidence

Your duty is to decide the case based on the evidence. Now let me explain to you what I mean by "evidence":

Evidence is the sworn testimony given by the witnesses, including testimony given by what is called a deposition, as well as documents and other exhibits presented to you at trial. The evidence also includes any stipulations that have been agreed to and received into evidence by the Court. A stipulation is an agreed statement of facts between the parties, and you may regard such stipulated facts as undisputed evidence.

Many statements and actions during the proceeding are not evidence. For example, the statements of the lawyers are not evidence and should not be considered as evidence unless the statements were made as admissions or stipulations confirming the existence of a fact. This includes lawyers' arguments and comments, as well as the tone of their voices and their facial expressions when showing acceptance, approval, belief, disbelief or disdain, whether directed to a witness or to the jury itself during the course of the trial, are not evidence.

In addition, a lawyer's question is not evidence. A question is only significant with respect to evidence when the witness answers the question and the answer incorporates some part of the question. A question that calls for a yes or no answer requires that you look at the question to see what the answer means. In other words, it is the answer of the witness taken together with the question that constitutes evidence.

During the course of the trial, from time to time, counsel have made objections. It is the duty the lawyers on each side of a case to object when the other side offers testimony or other evidence which the lawyers believe is not proper under the applicable legal rules. As judge, I must rule on each objection. You are to read nothing into the fact that a lawyer has made an objection or from my ruling sustaining or overruling the objection. However, if, during the course of the trial, I sustained an objection by one lawyer to a question asked by the other lawyer, you are to disregard the question, and you must not speculate as to what the answer would have been. If, after a question was asked and an answer given by the witness, I ruled that the answer should be stricken from the record, you are to disregard both the question and the answer in your deliberations.

Also, if certain testimony was received for a limited purpose – such as for the purpose of considering the believability of a witness – you must follow the limiting instruction I have given.

Exhibits which were marked for identification may not be considered by you as evidence unless they were received in evidence by the Court. If I sustained an objection to an exhibit, or ordered it stricken, it is not evidence and you may not consider it.

I stress the fact that the rulings I made during the trial are not to be taken as an indication of my views, or as to what your decision should be as to Conwood's claims or U.S. Tobacco's counterclaims. Such rulings dealt with matters of law with which you have no concern. Indeed, lawyers not only have a right, but also have a duty, to present whatever legal objections there may be to the admissibility of evidence. The lawyers also have the right to ask for conferences at the bench out of the hearing of the jury. These deal with questions of law which must be decided by me, the Judge. No inferences should be drawn because a lawyer asked for a conference at the bench, out of the hearing of the jury.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 74.01 at 74-3, 74-4 (1997).

16diii003764

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 8

Direct and Circumstantial Evidence

There are two types of evidence that may be considered in your determinations – direct and circumstantial evidence. Direct evidence is the testimony of one who testifies to having actual knowledge of an event, such as the testimony of an eyewitness as to what he saw. Circumstantial evidence is proof of facts and circumstances based on what is implied by the existence or nonexistence of other facts.

Let me give you an example:

If you looked out the window and saw that it was raining, you would have direct evidence that it was raining. If the blinds were drawn but a man came through a door with a wet umbrella, you would have circumstantial evidence that it was raining.

Both types of evidence are equally entitled to your consideration. The law makes no distinction between the weight to be given to either direct or circumstantial evidence presented to you. You should weigh all the evidence in the case and make your determinations based on a preponderance of all the evidence.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 74.01 at 74-2 (1997); 3 E. Devitt, C. Blackmar, and M. Wolff, Federal Jury Practice and Instructions § 72.03, at 35 (1997); Michalic v. Cleveland Tankers Inc., 364 U.S. 325, 330 (1960); Ellis Fischel State Cancer Hosp. v. Marshall, 629 F.2d 563 (8th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1040 (1981).

16diii003765

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 9

Evidence – Inferences

You are to consider only the evidence in the case. But in your consideration of the evidence you are not limited solely to exhibits and the statements of witnesses. You are permitted to make reasonable inferences based on facts that have been established by a preponderance of the evidence. An inference is a conclusion that, common sense, experience or logic leads you to make based on other facts that have been proved.

An inference, however, is not a suspicion or a guess. It is a reasoned, logical conclusion that a fact exists based on another fact which has been shown to exist.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 75.01 at 75-1 (1997); Schulz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 350 U.S. 523, 526 (1956); Lavender v. Kurn, 327 U.S. 645 (1946).

16diii003766

Defendant's Proposed Instruction No. 10

Sequence of Events Not Circumstantial Evidence

As I just described to you, circumstantial evidence of a factual issue allows you to reach conclusions of one fact based on other facts and circumstances represented by that evidence. However, evidence of facts and circumstances that do not reasonably lead to a conclusion about a different fact is not circumstantial evidence. For example, evidence that one event occurred in a retail store before a second event cannot, by itself, support a conclusion that the first event caused the second event to occur. It would be improper for you to draw such a conclusion in the absence of other evidence establishing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the first event caused the second event.

16diii003767

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 11

Evidence – Charts and Summaries

In connection with the testimony of a witness, charts or summaries may be presented to you for the purpose of explaining or illustrating facts that are disclosed by the evidence. Some of these charts or summaries may also be admitted into evidence. The weight you choose to give such charts or summaries should reflect how accurately charts or summaries portray the materials they are supposed to illustrate or explain.

Publicity – Reminder

You must disregard any and all reports about this trial or about events discussed during the trial which you may have read, seen or heard through the news media or from others outside the courtroom. Such matters are not facts in evidence in this case because they are not relevant to the issues which have been developed in this courtroom. You must not permit such matters to influence your judgment in arriving at a true verdict in this case.

16diii003769

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 13

Evidence: Deposition Testimony

During the trial of this case, certain testimony has been read or shown to you by way of deposition. Depositions consist of sworn answers under oath to questions asked of the witness in advance of the trial. That testimony is recorded either by a court reporter, who creates a written transcript, or by video camera. The deposition testimony of a witness who, for some reason, cannot be present to testify from the witness stand may be presented either by written transcript or, if it has been recorded on videotape, by videotape. Such testimony is entitled to the same consideration, in terms of credibility and weight, as if the witness had been present and had testified from the witness stand. You are not to discount it merely because it comes to you in the form of a deposition.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 74.07 at 74-14 (1997); 3 E. Devitt, C. Blackmar, and M. Wolff, Federal Jury Practice and Instructions § 73.02, at 52 (1997).

16diii003770

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 14

Witness Credibility

You are the sole judges of the credibility of the witnesses who have appeared before you. In other words, you alone are to determine the extent to which each witness is to be believed. If there is any conflict in the testimony, it is your role to resolve the conflict and to determine where the truth lies.

In reaching a conclusion as to the believability of any witness, and in weighing the importance of any testimony, you may consider the demeanor and the behavior of the witness on the witness stand; the witness's manner of testifying; whether the witness impresses you as a truthful individual; whether the witness impresses you as having an accurate memory and recollection; whether the witness has any motive for shading the truth or not telling the truth; whether the witness had the full opportunity to observe the matters that he testified about; and whether the witness, or anyone affiliated with the witness, has any interest in the outcome of the case or has any friendship or animosity toward other persons involved in this case.

If you believe that any witness has shown himself to be biased or prejudiced, either for or against either side in this trial, you may consider and determine whether such bias or prejudice has affected the desire and capability of that witness to tell the truth. That does not mean necessarily that a witness whose credibility has been questioned is to be wholly disbelieved. It only means that you are to take into account factors like the ones I just mentioned in determining whether you will believe that witness.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 76.01 at 76-1 (1997); 3 E. Devitt, C. Blackmar, and M. Wolff, Federal Jury Practice and Instructions

16diii003771

§ 71.01, at 17 (1997); Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S. 308 (1974); Sartor v. Arkansas Natural Gas Corp., 321 U.S. 620, 627-29 (1944).

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 15

Inconsistent Testimony

You have heard evidence of inconsistencies or discrepancies in the testimony of certain witnesses, and the attorneys have argued that such inconsistencies are a reason for you to reject the testimony of those witnesses.

You are instructed that evidence of inconsistencies may be a basis to disbelieve a witness's testimony. On the other hand, inconsistencies in a witness' testimony, or between his testimony and that of others, do not necessarily mean that the witness' entire testimony should be discredited.

People sometimes forget things and even a truthful witness may be nervous and contradict himself or herself. It is also a fact that two people witnessing an event may see or hear it differently. Whether a discrepancy pertains to a fact of importance, or only to a trivial detail, should be considered in weighing the significance of the discrepancy. But a willful falsehood is a matter of great importance and should always be considered seriously.

It is for you to decide, based on your total impression of the witness, how to weigh the discrepancies in his or her testimony. You should, as always, use common sense and your own good judgment.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 76.01 at 76-4 (1997).

16diii003773

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 16

Impeachment/Prior Statements

In this case, some of the witnesses were confronted with prior statements they made under oath, including testimony given in depositions before the trial. The testimony of a witness may be discredited or "impeached" by showing that the witness has previously made statements that are inconsistent with his or her testimony in court.

Except where you have been specifically instructed otherwise, evidence of a prior inconsistent statement is admitted in evidence solely for the limited purpose of helping you decide whether to believe the trial testimony of the witness.

On the other hand, if the witness adopts the prior statement, that statement may be considered by you just as if it were testified to on the witness stand in the first instance.

It is up to you to determine if the witness has been impeached and discredited. If you believe the witness has been impeached and discredited, it is your sole right to give his or her testimony the weight, if any, that you believe it deserves.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 76.01 at 76-5 (1997).

16diii003774

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 17

Experts

Some of the evidence you have heard is what is called expert testimony. The law provides that if a person's specialized knowledge might assist the jury in understanding the evidence or in determining a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, training, experience or education may give his opinion on such matters. It is commonplace for an expert to be hired and paid for his time in studying and testifying regarding the subject of his expertise. The mere fact that an expert is paid for his services -- and even the fact that he may be handsomely paid -- should not be held against the expert or against the party. Nor should you read anything into the fact that one party may have used more experts than the other at trial. You should consider each expert opinion and give it the weight you believe it deserves.

In deciding what weight to accord to an expert's testimony, and in resolving conflicts between the experts of the two companies, you may look at the background, knowledge, training, and experience of the expert; the soundness and thoroughness of the expert's reasoning; the expert's prior statements on the issues in dispute; and whether other evidence supports, contradicts, supports, or outweighs his expert testimony. In addition, you may consider the method and analysis used by the expert witness to arrive at his conclusions, and assess the reasonableness and reliability of that method.

In this case, experts have reviewed and expressed opinions on each others' work. You are entitled to accept and give weight to one expert's review of another expert's opinion. How much of an expert's opinion you accept and what weight you give to it are decisions for you to make based on your evaluation of the testimony, your observation of the witness at trial, and facts about each witness' background, experience and each witness' method of study which were brought out at trial.

The credibility of an expert witness is to be evaluated in the same manner as the testimony of any other witness, and in accordance with the instructions I have previously given you. You may give the expert testimony whatever weight, if any, you find it deserves in light of all the evidence in this case.

You should not, however, accept any witness's testimony merely because he is an expert. Nor should you substitute an expert's view of the facts for you own reason, judgment, and common sense. The determination of the facts in this case rests solely with you.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 18

Contentions of the Parties

1. Conwood

Conwood contends that U.S. Tobacco has violated the antitrust laws by maintaining a monopoly through exclusionary practices in the alleged market for moist snuff products. Conwood contends that U.S. Tobacco's exclusionary practices include exclusive dealing arrangements with retailers, abuses of various marketing practices, and the routine and systematic removal of Conwood products, racks and point-of-sale advertising material without retailer authorization and at the direction of U.S. Tobacco headquarters.

Conwood has also sued U.S. Tobacco under the Lanham Act, which makes it illegal for a competitor to make false statements about another competitor in commercial advertising or promotion that is widely disseminated. Conwood also has sued U.S. Tobacco for violation of state law for allegedly stealing, defacing or destroying Conwood moist snuff products, racks and point-of-sale advertising materials.

2. U.S. Tobacco

U.S. Tobacco denies Conwood's antitrust allegations. First, it contends that Conwood has not proven that moist snuff products is a relevant market by itself or that U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power in such a market. Second, U.S. Tobacco contends that it does not engage in any exclusive dealing arrangements regarding moist snuff products and that Conwood is free to compete for placing products, rack and point-of-sale advertising materials. Third, U.S. Tobacco contends that it only engages in ordinary marketing practices that retailers desire, and that it has a policy of obtaining retail authorization for any removal of a competitor's rack for replacement with a new U.S. Tobacco rack. Further, U.S. Tobacco asserts that there are only sporadic instances of unauthorized removal of racks and point-of-sale materials, and that the sales forces of all competitors, including Conwood, engage in such conduct from time to time.

Finally, U.S. Tobacco contends that competition in the moist snuff industry is as vigorous as ever, and that any harm Conwood is suffering results not from exclusionary conduct by U.S. Tobacco, but from the lawful competition of U.S. Tobacco, Swedish Match and others, as well as from Conwood's own business decisions and lack of success in the marketplace.

U.S. Tobacco has also sued Conwood. U.S. Tobacco first claims that Conwood has violated the Lanham Act by widely disseminating false promotional material attacking U.S. Tobacco's category management services that it offers retailers. Second, U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood has violated state law by removing or destroying U.S. Tobacco racks and point-of-sale materials without retailer authorization.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 19

Antitrust Claims/Purpose of the Sherman Act

As I told you at the outset, this case involves one of the federal antitrust laws -- the Sherman Act. I instruct you that you should not be prejudiced against U.S. Tobacco merely because Conwood has alleged that U.S. Tobacco violated the Sherman Act. The mere fact that Conwood sued U.S. Tobacco, and the mere fact that the suit has been brought to trial, is no indication that U.S. Tobacco has in fact violated the law.

The purpose of the Sherman Act is to preserve and advance our system of free enterprise by encouraging free and open competition in the marketplace. The antitrust laws do this by protecting the competitive process itself. In other words, the antitrust laws attempt to ensure that all companies have the opportunity to compete against other companies in the marketplace.

It is not the purpose of the antitrust laws to inhibit or to interfere with legitimate business operations, or to force every type of business into a common mold. Nor is it the purpose of the antitrust laws to protect any one participant in the marketplace or to ensure that all competitors succeed or make a profit. The antitrust laws are concerned with the overall competitive process rather than the success of individual competitors.

Purpose of the Sherman Act: Does Not Cover Overaggressive or Unfair Competition

The antitrust laws recognize that competition is a ruthless process in which companies aggressively attempt to take business away from each other. They are aimed at ensuring that the process of competition is open to all competitors, not that competitors treat each other fairly when engaging in that process. For this reason, the antitrust laws are not directed at preventing competition that is unsavory, unfair or even deceptive. There are other laws that deal directly with overly-aggressive or unfair means of competition.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 21

Elements of Monopolization Claim

The specific law that U.S. Tobacco has violated is called Section 2 of the Sherman Act. It states in relevant part:

> Every person who shall monopolize . . . any part of commerce . . . [has committed an unlawful act].

Section 2 of the Sherman Act makes it unlawful to use monopoly power as a way to avoid having to compete with other companies in the marketplace. As you will see from the instructions that follow, Section 2 of the Sherman Act does not make illegal the fact that a business may, by virtue of its business success, enjoy what is called monopoly power.

Conwood claims that it was injured by U.S. Tobacco's unlawful monopolization of an alleged national market for the sale of moist snuff products. To win on its claim of monopolization, Conwood must prove each of the following elements by a preponderance of the evidence:

First, that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power in a relevant market;

Second, that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained that power through means that were not ordinary business practices, but instead were a use of monopoly power to prevent competitors from taking part in the competitive process. In legal terms, this is called "exclusionary" conduct;

Third, that U.S. Tobacco's exclusionary conduct actually harmed the overall competitive process in the relevant market; and Fourth, that U.S. Tobacco's exclusionary conduct -- as opposed to its lawful competition or other factors -- was in fact a direct and material cause of Conwood's alleged injury.

16diii003781

If you find that the evidence is insufficient to prove any one or more of these elements, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on its monopolization claim.

16diii003782

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 22

Monopoly Power Defined

Monopoly power is the power to control prices in, and exclude competition from, the relevant market.

The "power to control prices" means the power of a company to establish significantly higher prices for its products than those charged by competitors without a substantial loss of business. In deciding whether U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power, you should consider whether Conwood has proven that U.S. Tobacco can raise its prices well above the prices charged by Conwood and other competitors without losing significant sales. You should also take into consideration whether there is vigorous price competition in the relevant market, such as promotions and price discounting. The absence of price and promotional competition in the market may indicate the presence of monopoly power, while the presence of such competition indicates a lack of monopoly power.

The "power to exclude competition" means the power of a company to prevent existing competition from taking place in the market or to keep new competition from entering the market, whether from a completely new competitor or from the introduction of new products by existing competitors. The power to exclude competition also means the power to impose your will on customers -- in this case retailers. For example, if U.S. Tobacco has the power to force retailers, against their wishes, not to accept a competitor's products, then that would be an indication that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power. If, however, U.S. Tobacco does not have the power to force retailers to act against their wishes, then this indicates a lack of monopoly power.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 23

Relevant Market - General

In order to determine whether U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power, you must first decide what is called the "relevant market." Only after you make that determination can you decide whether Conwood has proven that U.S. Tobacco has the power to control prices and prevent competition in the relevant market.

There are two aspects you must consider in defining a relevant market. The first is the relevant product market; the second is the relevant geographic market. I instruct you that the parties have agreed that the geographic market is the United States.

Conwood contends that the relevant product market should be limited to all moist snuff products. In other words, Conwood claims that other smokeless tobacco products should not be included in the same relevant market as moist snuff products. It also contends that the relevant market should not be broken into smaller groups of products such as separate types of moist snuff in the same market. U.S. Tobacco disputes Conwood's proposed definition of the relevant market. U.S. Tobacco asserts that the relevant market should either be defined more broadly to include other smokeless tobacco products, such as chewing tobacco or divided into separate types of moist snuff products.

I wish to remind you that Conwood has to prove its proposed market by a preponderance of the evidence. U.S. Tobacco challenges that market, but does not itself have to prove what the relevant market should be.

16diii003785

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 24

Relevant Product Market/Factors

The basic idea of a relevant product market is that it should include all products that may be substitutes from a consumer's point of view. This does not mean that products must be the same to compete against each other. It means that, as a matter of practical fact and the actual behavior of consumers, the products are reasonable substitutes.

There are a number of factors you should consider in determining whether products are reasonable substitutes for each other. One factor is whether changes in the price of one product over time cause a considerable number of consumers to use one product instead of the other. If so, the products should be included in the same relevant market. You should also consider how people in the industry and the public at large view the products; whether the products have the same or similar characteristics or uses; whether the products have similar prices; whether changes in the price of one product are related to changes in the price of the other product; whether the products are sold to similar customers; and whether they are distributed and sold by the same kinds of distributors or dealers.

In sum, to determine the relevant product market, you must decide which products compete with each other. This is a practical determination.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 25

Relevant Market - Necessity of Proof

If, after considering all the evidence, you find that Conwood has proved that the relevant product market is all moist snuff products, then you must find that it has established the relevant market requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. If you find that Conwood has not proven that all moist snuff, alone, constitutes the relevant market, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on its antitrust claim.

ABA, Sample Jury Instructions in Civil Antitrust Cases, C-13 (1999).

16diii003787

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 26

Monopoly Power/Factors to Consider

If you find that Conwood has proven the relevant market, you should then determine whether Conwood has also proven that U.S. Tobacco in fact has monopoly power in that market. There are a number of factors you should consider in making this determination, none of which by itself necessarily proves this element of Conwood's claim.

For example, you have heard evidence about U.S. Tobacco's market share. Market share is a firm's share of sales of the products in the relevant market given as a percentage of the whole market. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is 80 percent or higher, that suggests the existence of monopoly power. If you determine that defendant's market share is somewhere between 50 percent and 80 percent, you may, but do not have to, infer the existence of monopoly power from that share.

Another factor you should consider is the trend in U.S. Tobacco's market share. A declining market share indicates the absence of monopoly power, while an increasing market share indicates the presence of monopoly power.

Another factor to consider is the number and size of U.S. Tobacco's moist snuff competitors. If U.S. Tobacco's competitors are few, weak, or have small or decreasing market shares, this indicates that U.S. Tobacco may possess monopoly power. If, on the other hand, U.S. Tobacco's competitors are numerous, vigorous, or have increasing shares in that market, this indicates that U.S. Tobacco may not have monopoly power.

You should also consider the history of new entry into the relevant market. By entry, I mean either the entry of a new competitor or the introduction of new moist snuff brands by existing competitors. Entry of companies or the introduction of new brands into the market indicate that U.S. Tobacco lacks monopoly power.

The existence of monopoly power also may be shown by evidence that U.S. Tobacco had the power to raise prices well above its competitors without a substantial loss of business to competitors or by evidence that U.S. Tobacco had profit margins that are extraordinarily high and are not justified by the quality of its products. In assessing profit margins, you should consider whether firms with smaller market shares also have high prices or profit margins, which would indicate that U.S. Tobacco is not exercising monopoly power in its pricing.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. If you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have monopoly power, then you must find that U.S. Tobacco did not violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act, and you accordingly must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on its monopolization claim.

16diii003789

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 27

Maintenance of Lawfully Acquired Monopoly Power

There is no claim in this case that U.S. Tobacco became a monopolist through unlawful methods. And I instruct you that the mere possession of monopoly power, if you find that U.S. Tobacco has such power, does not violate the antitrust laws.

But it is unlawful for a company that has lawfully obtained monopoly power to use that power to exclude competitors from participating meaningfully in the competitive process. To be considered exclusionary, the conduct in question does not necessarily have to be unlawful by itself. But it does have to be a use of monopoly power. Conwood may show a use of monopoly power by proving that U.S. Tobacco engaged in conduct that makes sense only because it harmed competition rather than because it satisfies retailers. You should not find, however, that U.S. Tobacco is using monopoly power if it merely engages in conduct that is used (or could be used) by other firms in the marketplace.

U.S. Tobacco has not acted unlawfully if it simply has engaged in ordinary competitive behavior, even if it has done so in an aggressive manner. U.S. Tobacco may also engage in conduct that simply takes advantage of its size and efficiency. Such competition, including by firms with large market shares, is encouraged by the antitrust laws and cannot be considered exclusionary even if it harms competitors. To find U.S. Tobacco liable for monopolization, you must determine that U.S. Tobacco actually wielded its monopoly power against retailers to exclude its competitors from participating meaningfully in the competitive process.

Competition on the Merits Defined

It is important to keep in mind that competition on the merits, which the antitrust laws encourage, is not limited simply to the price and quality of the products themselves. In the circumstances of this case, competition on the merits includes providing retailers with related products and services they may desire, such as racks, point of sale advertising materials, suggestions about use of shelf space and products assortment, as well as what you have heard referred to as category management services. It is not the object of the antitrust laws to mold the type of competition that companies engage in, but rather to ensure that companies are not unreasonably prevented from participating in that process.

Role of Intent Evidence

During the trial, you have heard evidence about U.S. Tobacco's alleged intent in engaging in various practices. In a case alleging monopolization such as this, you should assume that U.S. Tobacco willfully engaged in any acts you find occurred. But I instruct you that it is not unlawful, standing by itself, for U.S. Tobacco to have a desire to injure Conwood or take as much business away from Conwood as possible; vigorous competitors using ordinary marketing methods often have that intent, and it is lawful. What you should consider is not U.S. Tobacco's state of mind, but whether its practices were an exercise of monopoly power that excluded competitors from the competitive process.

16diii003793

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 30

Exclusionary Conduct/Exclusive Dealing

One form of potentially exclusionary conduct is called exclusive dealing. Under an exclusive dealing arrangement, a customer -- here retailers -- agrees to purchase all of a product for a period of time just from one company. Exclusive dealing arrangements are not unusual or unlawful in and of themselves. Under certain specified circumstances, however, a company with monopoly power can restrict the competitive process using exclusive dealing agreements.

In order for Conwood to establish that U.S. Tobacco has unreasonably excluded competition through the use of exclusive dealing arrangements, it must prove three things:

First, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco in fact has entered into contractual agreements with retailers that prevent the retailers from being able to purchase moist snuff products from any one other than U.S. Tobacco. I should emphasize that exclusive dealing relates only to exclusive agreements for the purchase of products as opposed to displays, racks or in-store advertising materials that support the product. If you find that U.S. Tobacco does not have exclusive dealing agreements with retailers that completely preclude retailers from purchasing competitor's products, then Conwood has not established this type of exclusionary behavior;

Second, Conwood must also prove that any exclusive dealing agreements were for a long period of time – usually two or more years – so that Conwood and other moist snuff competitors had no opportunity to compete for agreements with retailers from time to time or as any U.S. Tobacco agreements expired. If you find that any exclusive dealing agreements that existed were for a relatively short period of time, or were terminable at any time or on short notice by the retailers, then Conwood has not proven that any such agreements are exclusionary; and

Third, Conwood must also prove that there are so many long-term exclusive dealing agreements between U.S. Tobacco and retailers throughout the country that Conwood and other moist snuff competitors had a limited ability to generate enough profits to remain in the market.

If you find that Conwood has failed to prove anyone of these three elements, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco on Conwood's exclusive dealing allegations.

Evidence of Unfair Competition Or Alleged "Dirty Tricks"

You have heard evidence in this case of alleged unfair competition or so-called "dirty tricks" by U.S. Tobacco, Conwood and others. As I have instructed you, the antitrust laws are not intended to provide a remedy for this type of conduct; other laws, which I will tell you about later, deal with this type of activity. This is because the antitrust laws are concerned with the overall competitive process rather than unfair or tortious acts directed at individual competitors.

Accordingly, I instruct you that alleged instances of U.S. Tobacco being over-aggressive, unfair, or engaging in "dirty tricks" in the field cannot, alone, constitute a use of monopoly power or exclusionary conduct in violation of the Sherman Act.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 32

Antitrust Injury/General

Even if Conwood has proven that U.S. Tobacco engaged in conduct that violates the antitrust laws, Conwood must still prove that it has suffered the type of injury that the antitrust laws care about. In legal terms, this type of harm is called "antitrust injury." Only a certain type of injury matters under the antitrust laws because, as I earlier instructed you, the antitrust laws are intended to protect the competitive process rather than individual competitors.

In practical terms, the "antitrust injury" requirement means that Conwood must first prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct harmed the overall competitive process. Conwood must then also prove that the alleged injury to its business flowed directly from the harm to the competitive process rather than from conduct that simply hurt its sales.

Therefore, you should ask yourself two questions: First, whether Conwood has established an injury to the overall competitive process. If you find that U.S. Tobacco's conduct has not had such an effect, there can be no antitrust injury. Only if you find injury to the overall competitive process, do you then have to ask a second question -- whether Conwood's alleged harm to its business results directly from harm to the overall competitive process as opposed to other factors.

Antitrust Injury/Factors in Assessing Injury to Overall Competition

In considering whether any U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct has harmed the competitive process in a relevant market, there are a number of factors you should consider.

For example, it is important to consider whether U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct has prevented its moist snuff competitors from having access to retailers to attempt to sell products, place racks or place point of sale advertising material. If U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct substantially prevents competitors from access to retailers, this suggests harm to the overall competitive process. If, however, U.S. Tobacco's competitors have access to retailers, this indicates that competition has not been substantially harmed in the market.

Another factor you should consider in assessing harm to overall competition is the success of U.S. Tobacco's competitors. If U.S. Tobacco's competitors have not been successful in placing new products, or if their sales and profits have been decreasing, this indicates that harm to competition may have taken place. If, however, Conwood and other competitors have been successful in placing new products, or if their sales and profits have been increasing, this indicates that harm to competition has not taken place as a result of any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct.

Nynex Corp. v. Discon, Inc., 119 S. Ct. 493, 498 (1998); Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1428 (6th Cir. 1990); Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 394 (7th Cir. 1984).

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 34

Antitrust Injury/Harm to Competition, Not to a Competitor

I want to emphasize to you that the antitrust laws were not meant to benefit individual competitors, including Conwood, or protect businesses from the rigors of competition. To show antitrust injury, Conwood must demonstrate that U.S. Tobacco's exclusionary conduct caused an injury to the competitive process in a relevant market. Harm to individual competitors, even through alleged unsavory or unfair tactics, cannot by itself constitute harm to the competitive process.

Injury in Fact

If you find that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct has harmed the competitive process, then you must determine whether that harm to overall competition was the cause of Conwood's claimed damages. This is known as "injury-in-fact."

In order to prove that Conwood's harm is sufficiently related to any harm you find to the competitive process of competition, Conwood must prove three things, and the law requires that it prove each with reasonable certainty:

First, Conwood must prove that "but for," or in the absence of, U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, Conwood would actually have done better than it did in the market;

Second, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct was the direct cause of Conwood's harm. If, for example, you find that Conwood's harm more directly resulted from lawful competition by U.S. Tobacco or other competitors, from the decisions of retailers, or from Conwood's own decisions and lack of success in the marketplace, then Conwood has not proven that U.S. Tobacco's conduct is directly responsible for its injury.

Third, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, as opposed to one or more other reasons, was a material or substantial reason for Conwood's lack of success in the relevant market. I will now describe in greater detail how each of these factors relate to this case.

ABA, Sample Jury Instructions in Civil Antitrust Cases, F-2 (1999); Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-A-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489 (1977); Valley Products Co. v. 16diii003800

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 36

Injury in Fact/"But For" Causation

The first element of injury-in-fact requires Conwood to demonstrate that any U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct, and its effects on the market, were a "but for" or actual cause of its claimed injury.

To prove "but for" causation, Conwood must demonstrate that, in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's illegal conduct, Conwood would have sold more moist snuff. In other words, Conwood must prove with reasonable certainty that, all other things being equal, Conwood's share of sales of its moist snuff brands would have increased significantly "but for" U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct and the alleged resulting harm to overall competitive conditions. Conwood cannot recover damages simply because it sold less moist snuff than it hoped to sell or because U.S. Tobacco's lawful competitive conduct took business away from Conwood. If you find that Conwood has not proven by a preponderance of the evidence that U.S. Tobacco's illegal conduct had any significant impact on Conwood sales, then Conwood has not established injury in fact.

Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-A-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489 (1977); Valley Products Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398, 403 (6th Cir. 1997); Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36, 38-39 (6th Cir. 1994); Baum Research & Development Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998).

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 37

Injury in Fact/Direct or "Proximate" Causation

The second element of injury-in-fact requires Conwood to demonstrate that U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct was a direct cause of its injury. In legal terminology, this is called "proximate causation."

Conwood contends that U.S. Tobacco, contrary to retailers' wishes, caused retailers not to carry as many of the Conwood brands as retailers wanted to carry and not to use as many Conwood racks or P.O.S. material as retailers desired. U.S. Tobacco, on the other hand, contends that retailers were free to choose which products, racks and P.O.S. they wanted, and that these retailer decisions, rather than U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, are directly responsible for any injury to Conwood.

If Conwood cannot prove with reasonable certainty that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, as opposed to the decisions of retailers, was a direct and proximate cause of Conwood's injury, then Conwood has not proven injury in fact caused by an antitrust violation.

ABA, Sample Jury Instructions in Civil Antitrust Cases, F-2 (1999); Valley Products Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398, 403 (6th Cir. 1997); Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36, 38-39 (6th Cir. 1994); Baum Research & Development Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998).

16diii003802

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 38

Injury in Fact/"Material" Causation

The third element of injury-in-fact requires Conwood to demonstrate that U.S. Tobacco's illegal conduct was a material or substantial cause of Conwood's alleged injury in relation to other causes you have heard about at trial.

Conwood alleges that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, and any alleged resulting harm to the overall competitive process, was a material and substantial reason for its alleged slow down in growth for moist snuff in the 1990's.

U.S. Tobacco contends that Conwood's market share performance in the 1990's was primarily, if not solely, caused by other factors, such as retailer decisions regarding space allocation and product selection; Conwood's inability to produce a product to compete directly against U.S. Tobacco's Copenhagen brand; Conwood's decision not to offer innovative racks and P.O.S. to retailers, and its decision, prior to the lawsuit, not to offer a incentive program or category management services to retailers. In relation to these other factors, U.S. Tobacco contends that any alleged exclusionary conduct by it was not a material or substantial cause of Conwood's injury.

If you find that Conwood has proven, with reasonable certainty, that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, as opposed to other factors, was a material cause of Conwood's claimed injury, then Conwood has proven this aspect of injury in fact. If you find that Conwood has not made that showing with reasonable certainty, then you must find that U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct was not a material cause of its claimed injury.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 39

Antitrust Damages -- Measure and Purpose

If you find that Conwood has proven each element of its antitrust claim against U.S. Tobacco, you must then measure in dollars and cents the extent, if any, of the injury that Conwood has suffered as a result of the violation of the law. This measurement in dollars and cents is what I shall refer to as "damages." Please note that the fact that I instruct you on "damages" does not indicate any opinion on my part as to whether or not Conwood has satisfied its burden of proving its claim or that I believe Conwood is entitled to any damages.

You should keep in mind the purpose of awarding damages. The purpose of awarding damages in a case like this one, should you determine any damages are warranted, is to put Conwood in as good a position as it would have been in had the unlawful activity not occurred, but in no better position. You should take into consideration, therefore, only the actual injury to Conwood's business caused solely by the U.S. Tobacco conduct, if any, that you find to be exclusionary under the antitrust laws.

3 L. Sand, J. Siffert, W. Loughlin, S. Reiss, and N. Batterman, Modern Federal Jury Instructions ¶ 79.02, at 79-56 (1997).

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 40

Plaintiff Must Prove the Causation Aspect of Damages with Reasonable Certainty

I will instruct you in a moment that an antitrust plaintiff is given some leeway in calculating the amount of damages, as long as speculation and guesswork is not involved.

That leeway is not given to Conwood, however, with respect to the requirement that Conwood only be awarded damages that stem solely from any U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct. That is, the causation aspect of damages must still be established with reasonable certainty. Accordingly, Conwood is not allowed to recover lost sales that result from lawful competition by U.S. Tobacco and other moist snuff competitors, however vigorous; from the independently lawful decisions of retailers; or from Conwood's own business decisions or lack of success in the marketplace.

I therefore instruct you that, in offering a damages calculation for your consideration, Conwood and its damages expert must still show with reasonable certainty that it is seeking money for lost sales that result solely from U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct rather than other factors.

Greater Rockford Energy & Tech. Corp. v. Shell Oil, 998 F.2d 391, 395 (7th Cir. 1993); Argus v. Eastman Kodak Co., 801 F.2d 38, 42-46 (2d Cir. 1986); Van Dyk Research Corp. v. Xerox Corp., 631 F.2d 251, 254-56 (3d Cir. 1980).

16diii003806

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 41

Plaintiffs' Damages Must Be Based on the Specific Unlawful Conduct of the Defendant

In considering whether Conwood, through its damages expert, is seeking damages solely for U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct, you should consider whether Conwood's damages expert connected his calculations to the specific alleged exclusionary practices asserted by Conwood. If you find that Conwood's damages expert has not related his calculations to specific alleged illegal practices, then you should find that Conwood has not proven, with reasonable certainty, that it is seeking damages only for harm caused solely by any conduct that you find to be exclusionary.

McGlinchy v. Shell Chem. Co., 845 F.2d 802, 806 (9th Cir. 1988); City of Vernon v. Southern Cal. Edison Co., 955 F.2d 1361, 1372-73 (9th Cir. 1992); Greater Rockford Energy & Tech. Corp. v. Shell Oil Co., 998 F.2d 391, 395 (7th Cir. 1993).

16diii003807

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 42

Disaggregation/Antitrust Damages Only For Unlawful Conduct

Conwood is only entitled to recover those damages to its business that were a direct result of the conduct by U.S. Tobacco that you find to harm overall competition. You must remember that you can award plaintiff damages only for injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws -- not for the injuries or losses caused by other factors, including lawful competition by U.S. Tobacco and others, the lawful decisions of retailers or Conwood's own business decisions or lack of success in the marketplace.

If Conwood and its damages expert has not provided you with a reasonable basis to determine how much of Conwood's profits were reduced by any other factors you have heard about and that you credited in this case, then you may not award any damages to Conwood.

ABA, Sample Jury Instructions in Civil Antitrust Cases, F-8 (1999); 3 E. Devitt & C. Blackmar, Federal Jury Practice and Instructions ¶ 86.04, at 361-62 (3d ed. 1977); Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, 327 U.S. 251, 264-65 (1946).

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 43

Damages Calculation/Certainty and Amount

If you find that Conwood has established with reasonable certainty, that it is only seeking damages to its business that were a direct result of any U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct, then you must assess Conwood's proposed calculation of damages. Conwood's right to be fairly compensated should not be affected by any difficulty you may have in determining the precise amount of the recovery so long as there is a reasonable basis in the evidence for your award. You may not, however, calculate damages based only on speculation or guesswork, and you must remember that you can only award Conwood damages for injuries caused solely by a violation of the antitrust laws.

ABA, Sample Jury Instructions in Civil Antitrust Cases, F-8 (1999).

16diii003809

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 44

Damages - Lost Profits

If you find that U.S. Tobacco did not commit an antitrust violation, or that Conwood's expert did not satisfy the causation aspects of damages I have described to you above, then you need not consider any further instruction on damages. If you find that U.S. Tobacco did commit an antitrust violation and that Conwood has met the causation requirements of proving damages, then you must calculate the profits, if any, that Conwood lost as a result of the U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. Profit means net profit: the amount by which Conwood's gross revenues would have exceeded all of the costs and expenses that would have been necessary to produce those revenues.

You have heard evidence of the market share that Conwood contends it would have achieved in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. You may calculate Conwood's loss of profit by considering market share, evidence of the size of the market, and evidence relating to the profit margin Conwood would have secured on such sales.

I remind you, however, that Conwood must establish that its projected market share, in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct, is based in reality and must still account for other factors affecting Conwood's success that are unrelated to U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct.

I also instruct you that Conwood's expert must offer his own independent analysis of how the market would function in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct, and how, why, and to what extent Conwood's market share would improve, if at all, in such a market. Conwood's expert may not merely rely on the beliefs of Conwood executives and employees to determine what Conwood's market share would have been without the presence of U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary dealing.

16diii003810

If you find that Conwood's expert relied solely on Conwood's beliefs as to its likely market share in the absence of U.S. Tobacco exclusionary conduct, of if you find that any study or analysis of Conwood's damages expert is not based in reality, then you may not award Conwood any lost profits.

U.S. Tobacco's Lanham Act Claim

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised concerning U.S. Tobacco in violation of that same law.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for "any person . . . in commercial advertising or promotion . . . [to] misrepresent[] the nature, characteristics . . . or qualities . . . of another person's goods, services or commercial activities." U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

First, that Conwood made false statements concerning Conwood's (U.S. Tobacco's) products or services offered to retailers;

Second, that the false statements were disseminated to the relevant purchasing public sufficiently to constitute "advertisement," rather than isolated occurrences; and

Third, that those statements would likely influence a retailers' purchasing decisions;

Otherwise, you must find for Conwood.

The Parties' State Law Conversion Claims

Both parties have brought a claim of conversion against the other party: Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco wrongfully took its property from retail locations. U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood wrongfully took its property from retail locations. You will find for the party bringing the claim if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:

(a) that U.S. Tobacco (Conwood) representatives took Conwood (U.S. Tobacco) advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

(b) that some or all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to Conwood (U.S. Tobacco); and

(c) the U.S. Tobacco (Conwood) representatives did not have retailer permission to do so.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco (Conwood).

Rules for Deliberations

You will begin your deliberations in a few minutes. To return a verdict you must be unanimous -- all of you must agree.

Each juror is entitled to his or her own opinion. Each should, however, exchange views with fellow jurors. The very purpose of jury deliberation is to discuss and consider the evidence, to listen to the arguments of fellow jurors, to present your individual views, and to reach your determination based solely and wholly on the evidence.

In the end, each one of you must decide the case for himself or herself. But you should not hesitate to change your opinion, which, after discussion with your fellow jurors, appears incorrect in the light of the discussion and viewed against the evidence and the law that I have instructed you on.

If, after carefully considering all evidence and arguments of your fellow jurors, you entertain a conscientious view that differs from others, you are not to yield your position simply because you are outnumbered or outweighed.

I further instruct you that you should deliberate without bias or prejudice as to any party. The law does not permit jurors to be governed by sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion. All the parties to this lawsuit and the public expect that you will carefully and impartially consider all the evidence in the case, follow the law as stated by me, and reach a just verdict regardless of the consequences.

When you retire, you should elect one member of the jury as your foreperson. That person will preside over deliberations and speak for you here in open court.

I will provide you with a form on which to record your verdicts on each of Conwood's claims and each of U.S. Tobacco's counterclaims. That form is prepared to enable you to record any verdict that you could possibly reach. You should not regard the inclusion of the particular questions as any suggestion of what your decision should be. You must answer each question on the form carefully, so we may know the basis of your decisions.

After you have reached a verdict, your foreperson will fill in the form that has been given to you, sign and date it, and advise the marshal outside your door that you are ready to return to the courtroom.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTIONS IN LIMINE

Defendant United States Tobacco Company et al. ("USTC"), respectfully respond to all of the motions in limine filed by Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"). Conwood's motions in limine are not only baseless as a matter of the evidence, they in fact reconfirm that summary judgment should be granted in this case.

1. Conwood's Motion to Preclude Evidence of "Retailer Permission Evidence" (Pl. Br., No. 4, p. 4)

Conwood has made the inappropriate request to preclude USTC from offering evidence that retailers authorized USTC to remove Conwood products or racks and point of sale ("P.O.S.") materials -- including, presumably, as part of routine store resets requested by retailers -- unless offered to rebut specific alleged instances of unauthorized conduct offered into evidence by Conwood. Apparently, Conwood's theory is that it is irrelevant whether a retailer in fact wanted USTC-suggested plan-o-grams, USTC racks or USTC P.O.S. because (i) any agreements with retailers are not a "defense" to a Section 2 violation, and (ii) the only "competition" that should be relevant in this case is lower prices and better products for ultimate consumers – i.e., competition to satisfy retail customers is itself irrelevant. Pl. Br. at 4. This in limine request is not only specious on its face, it demonstrates precisely why summary judgment should be granted in this case.

(a) USTC's Retailer Evidence, or Lack Thereof from Conwood, Will Indisputably Demonstrate That USTC Does Not "Control" The Market With Exclusive Agreements

Conwood has apparently forgotten that its theory in this case is that USTC effectively precludes competition in the market through exclusive dealing agreements. (And even that theory would require the Court to extend exclusive dealing principles beyond exclusive product placements to alleged exclusive racks and rack-P.O.S. agreements). Thus, the terms of any agreements between USTC and specific retailers are not only relevant to Conwood's Section 2 claim, Conwood must in fact prove that the terms of any such agreements are exclusionary under exclusive dealing principles. Conversely, if Conwood cannot make that showing, summary judgment should be granted.

Indeed, United States v. United Shoe Mach. Corp., 110 F. Supp. 295, 344-45 (D. Mass. 1953), the most relevant case relied on by Conwood in its motion, actually demonstrates USTC's point. In United Shoe, the evidence established that 90% of all customers – lessees of shoe making machinery – were subjected to 10 year lease agreements that were "not terminable cheaply," and effectively gave United Shoe "control of the market." Id. at 343-45. Unremarkably, the court held that those agreements could violate Section 2, even if desired by the customers themselves, because they resulted in United Shoe controlling the market.

Critically for purposes of this case, however, the court in United Shoe contrasted those exclusionary agreements with the type of contracts that could not harm competition at all under

16diii003891

Section 2 because they were terminable at will. Thus, in dismissing the government's claim alleging "restrictive agreements" with manufacturers of shoe machinery, the court found that there either was no evidence of exclusive agreements or the agreements were "at will" and therefore of no antitrust concern:

> So far as appears, these arrangements are at will, and do not preclude [the seller] from giving any would-be competitor of United [Shoe] the right to sell hooks or service machines. In short, the arrangement has not excluded, and does not exclude, competition.

Id. at 313. (emphasis added). Accordingly, the only case cited by Conwood that discusses the issue of "retailer consent" confirms that the terms of any alleged exclusionary agreements are, in fact, critical (not just relevant), and that any "at will" contracts or agreements cannot violate Section 2 as a matter of law.[1]

In the face of these legal principles, Conwood cannot argue that retailer approval (or the terms of any alleged retailer agreements) is irrelevant. Conwood must itself prove that USTC has agreements with specific retailers that preclude Conwood from offering products, racks and P.O.S. to retailers. The fact that Conwood cannot offer any evidence establishing any such agreements should compel summary judgment for USTC. And, given the burden that Conwood must meet in this case (a burden it cannot meet), it is odd at best for Conwood to argue that it would

[1] The other purported customer consent cases cited by Conwood are well off the point. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, (1985) and Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843 (6th Cir. 1979), do not involve customer consent at all. Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568 (6th Cir. 1986), expressly involved the "coercion" of customers. Le Page's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ. A. 97-3983, 1999-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 72, 538, 1999 WL 346223, at *4-6 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999), involved economic coercion through the bundling of discounts, a form of tying. Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), expressly found that a non-coercive incentive program could not harm competition as a matter of law under Section 1, and did not address the conduct element of Section 2 because Frito-Lay only moved for summary judgment on that claim only on market definition grounds, and eventually prevailed.

16diii003892

be irrelevant for USTC to present retailer testimony confirming that they are free to choose whatever moist snuff products, racks and P.O.S. they desire at any time.

(b) Retailer Evidence Will Demonstrate That Competition On the Merits is Not Limited to Price and Product Quality, and That USTC Engages In Ordinary Marketing Methods

Although it is unclear, Conwood also appears to be arguing that retailers should be excluded from testifying that moist snuff suppliers (like suppliers in other categories) compete on a number of fronts – recommendations regarding plan-o-grams, space allocation, racks, P.O.S., category strategies and tactics – and that these are ordinary marketing methods which retailers welcome or, in fact, require from suppliers in various categories. Contrary to the undisputed evidence already in the record and to be offered at trial by retailers, Conwood's argument is premised on the proposition that the only type of "competition" that is relevant under the Sherman Act is "lower prices" or "better products" for ultimate consumers. See Pl. Br. at 4.

A similar argument was expressly rejected in Stearns Airport Equipment Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F3d 518, 522-24 (5th Cir. 1999). In granting summary judgment for the defendant, the court held that the competitive process cannot be limited to price and quality, but instead must include the process of competition approved by the customers themselves. Id. at 524. Likewise, as numerous courts have recognized, there can be no question in this case that the competitive process includes competition among suppliers to persuade retailers to place products, racks and P.O.S. on the retail shelf or elsewhere in the store. See e.g., Bayou Bottling, Inc. v. Dr. Pepper Co., 725 F.2d 300, 304 (5th Cir. 1984); Jays Foods Inc. v. Frito-Lay, Inc., 664 F. Supp. 364, 371 (N.D. Ill. 1987); Frito-Lay Inc. v. Bachmann Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129, 1133-36 (S.D.N.Y. 1986); Beverage Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp. 1144, 1146-47 (S.D. Ohio 1986).

Indeed, Conwood's own experts agree that these are the parameters of competition among moist snuff suppliers.[2] Without exception, distributors and retailers of moist snuff products who were deposed, and who will testify at trial, confirm these are the real-world parameters of competition for moist snuff suppliers.

In sum, Conwood is asking this Court, by motion in limine, to preclude retailer testimony about the very scope of the competitive process itself. Not only should this attempt be rejected out of hand, it is a clear reminder that retailers, not Conwood or USTC, define the scope of the competitive process in the industry, including what they desire and expect from all suppliers seeking to place products, racks and P.O.S. in their stores.

2. Conwood's Motion to Preclude Evidence of the Unauthorized Conduct of Conwood and Other USTC Competitors (Pl. Br., No. 3, p. 3)

Conwood's motion to preclude evidence of its own unauthorized conduct in retail stores, as well as that of USTC competitors, is equally baseless and equally revealing of the fundamental flaw in Conwood's monopolization claim.

Conwood's initial theory in this case, including up through expert reports and the end of discovery, was that any unauthorized rack or P.O.S. removal by USTC was a "use" of monopoly power because only a monopolist could get away with such conduct. See, e.g., Gundlach Report ¶ 9; Gundlach Rebuttal Report ¶ 4. Conwood had to take this position, of course, because absent of use of monopoly power, any such activity by USTC – even if proven – would only constitute potential state law torts that are common in the retail field and inappropriate for treble damages actions.

As a result of discovery, Conwood has now come clean, actually conceding before this Court that its sales force tampers with authorized USTC racks in order to "restore their own racks for their own products." Pl. Br. at 3. This admission – no doubt precipitated by a landslide of Conwood admissions in documents and depositions – has several serious implications, none of which supports granting Conwood's motion in limine; on the contrary, Conwood's motion is truly unbelievable.

First, Conwood has now conceded the undisputed fact that Conwood and other USTC competitors remove USTC racks and P.O.S. (as well as each others') without retailer authorization. This confirms USTC's argument on summary judgment that any such conduct by USTC is not a use of monopoly power, but instead is indeed a "tit for tat" that occurs at times in the field among all moist snuff competitors. See Def. Mem. Supp. Summ. J. at 14-15, 33-34. The idea that the unauthorized conduct in retail stores by Conwood and other USTC competitors is now somehow "irrelevant" to a monopolization claim based on USTC's alleged unique campaign of "dirty tricks" is, to say the least, a bold reversal of position to offer the Court on the eve of trial.

Second, Conwood's concession that its sales force somehow feels entitled to "restore" its products or its racks contrary to the retailers' wishes also is highly relevant proof on USTC's state law conversion claim. It would be ridiculously one-sided for Conwood to put on evidence that USTC personnel removed Conwood's racks from retail locations, but have USTC precluded from putting into evidence that Conwood had placed its racks by removing USTC racks, or hacksawing them, the week before. While Conwood warmly embraces its purported victim status in other contexts, it cannot erase the record on "relevance" grounds when it concedes that its sales force rips USTC racks apart across the country just because Conwood disagrees with the retailers' choices on how to run their moist snuff sections.

Finally, evidence of unauthorized conduct of other competitors must be presented to the jury so they are able to assess whether Conwood has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that there was any tampering with Conwood racks and that the tampering was done by USTC, rather than Swedish Match or Swisher. Thus, USTC is entitled to introduce evidence of conduct of other competitions in order to defend against Conwood's claims on liability, causation and damages grounds.

3. Evidence as to Conwood's Owners and Their Alleged Wealth (Pl. Br. No. 1, p.1)

Consistent with Conwood's apparent plan to mischaracterize itself as a "David" up against a "Goliath" in USTC, Conwood wishes to keep the jury from knowing who in fact Conwood really is as a company. Thus, Conwood has moved to exclude all evidence that Conwood is owned by one of America's wealthiest families, the Pritzker family. While conceding that evidence about Conwood's profits is relevant, Conwood asserts, without any supporting explanation or authority, that "information about the ultimate beneficiaries of these profits would be inflammatory and prejudicial." Pl. Br. at 1.

Plaintiffs' motion should be rejected for a number of obvious reasons. First, Conwood has directly placed its size and financial strength at issue in this case by attempting to portray itself as a "victimized small competitor" (Pl. Br. at 3) -- the veritable small, independent company just out to make a living for its employees. Accordingly, USTC should be allowed to inform the jury of the contrary and undisputed facts, which include that Conwood is part of a Pritzker conglomerate that, should it choose even to reinvest rather than milk Conwood's profits, could bring enormous wealth to bear on Conwood's competitive efforts and programs in the marketplace.[3]

Second, Conwood is apparently attempting to leave this Court with the impression that the Pritzker organization is a remote and disinterested owner of Conwood. The record evidence, [3] Similarly, Conwoods' experts will suggest to the jury that because of its "small" size, Conwood cannot afford to offer category management services. See Blattberg Report ¶ 26. Thus, it is reasonable and fair to allow USTC to inform the jury as to the financial strength of Conwood's actual owner.

16diii003897

however, establishes that the Pritzker organization -- the ultimate entity -- serves as an active participant in key management decisions regarding the operation and funding of Conwood, and, in fact, was directly involved in the decision to bring this lawsuit. See Stevens Dep. at 24-30, Ingram Dep. at 23-25 (Tab 2). Indeed, as the Court is aware, the Pritzker family, through their representative Harold Handelsman, has taken an active role in the litigation itself.

For these reasons, and because Conwood has failed to offer any support for its belief that the truth regarding the identity and wealth of Conwood would be prejudicial, USTC should be allowed to present the jury with an accurate and complete picture of Conwood. It should be for the jury, not Conwood's counsel, to determine whether Conwood is, as it has pointedly and repeatedly claimed, a "victimized small competitor" unable because of USTC's actions -- rather than unwilling through Conwood's and its owners' own independent decisions -- to compete against USTC.

4. Conwood's Motion to Preclude the Testimony of Dr. Scheffman (Pl. Br., No. 2, p. 2)

Conwood has moved to preclude the testimony of Dr. David T. Scheffman, claiming that Dr. Scheffman submitted a "materially untruthful report about his compensation in this matter." Pl. Br. at 2. Conwood's motion should be denied for at least two reasons.

First, contrary to Conwood's bluster, Dr. Scheffman fully complied with the disclosure requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) and was also fully examined on the issue during his deposition. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) requires that a witness submit an expert report that includes, inter alia, "the compensation to be paid for the study and testimony." (Emphasis added). Pursuant to Rule 26(a)(2)(B), Dr. Scheffman disclosed the rate at which he is paid, and will be paid, for his study and for his time testifying at trial. Dr. Scheffman also disclosed the number of hours he worked on this matter as of the date of his Rule 26(a)(2)(B) report. During Dr. Scheffman's deposition, Conwood inquired into a "finder's fee" arrangement Dr. Scheffman has with a consulting firm, Navigant Consulting, Inc. In response to that inquiry, Dr. Scheffman disclosed his finder's fee rate. Accordingly, Dr. Scheffman fully complied with the disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(2)(B), and also provided information beyond those disclosure requirements.

Second, Conwood cites no authority whatsoever to gain further discovery or to support its wish that Dr. Scheffman be precluded from testifying at trial. Indeed, Conwood's request for such discovery is currently before Magistrate Judge James D. Moyer.[4] Now, again without citing any authority, Conwood essentially has moved this Court to preclude the testimony of Dr. Scheffman unless Magistrate Judge Moyer rules in Conwood's favor on the prior motion. There is no factual or legal basis for this unorthodox game of judicial leapfrog. Moreover, the very arguments Conwood now makes to by-pass Magistrate Judge Moyer's consideration of the pending discovery motion confirm that Conwood's only purpose in attempting to obtain more information on Dr. Scheffman's compensation than Rule 26 requires is to attack Dr. Scheffman personally, mislead the jury, and avoid having to deal with the substantive testimony that Dr. Scheffman will offer at trial.

5. Conwood's Motion To Exclude Evidence In Support Of USTC's Counterclaims (Pl. Br., No. 5, pp. 4-5)

In what is essentially a repeat of its prior motion for partial summary judgment, Conwood has moved to exclude all evidence of USTC's counterclaims. USTC hereby incorporates its opposition to Conwood's motion, including the itemization of admissions by Conwood personnel

---

[4] The parties recently were informed by Magistrate Judge Moyer that the issue was under submission and was actively being researched.

16diii003899

concerning removal and utter destruction of USTC moist snuff display racks. See Defendants' Motion In Opposition To Plaintiffs' Motion For Partial Summary Judgment.

6. Conwood's Motion To Exclude Hearsay Deposition Testimony And Documents (Pl. Br., No. 6, p. 5)

Without citing any authority, Conwood has moved to exclude the designated deposition testimony of 25 USTC employees. Conwood also has offered the Court its own judicial determination that these witnesses are "available to testify at trial." Pl. Br. at 5. Even a cursory review of the case law, however, indicates that Conwood's motion (and its effort to redefine the availability requirement of Fed. R. Civ. P. 32) are without merit. For example, in Carey v. Bahama Cruise Lines, 864 F.2d 201 (1st Cir. 1988), the court considered the precise issue Conwood raises here. The deponents in question in that case were more than 100 miles from the place of trial. Nevertheless, plaintiff argued that because the deponents were employees of the defendant, deposition excerpts should not have been allowed at trial. The court rejected this argument:

> Under the case law interpreting Rule 32, the mere fact that the deponents are employed by the defendant and that there is an identity of interest between the deponents and their employer is not enough to trigger exclusion. . . .

Id. at 204.

Similarly, in Daigle v. Maine Medical Center, 14 F.3d 684, 691 (1st Cir. 1994), the court rejected plaintiff's contention that deposition testimony should be excluded because the witness "with reasonable efforts [by defendant hospital] might be persuaded to attend." Id. at 691. The court stated that under Fed. R. Civ. P. 32, distance (100 miles) is the decisive criterion: "So long as a witness is shown to be more than one hundred miles from the place of trial, the admissibility of deposition testimony under the aegis of Rule 32(a)(3)(B) is not contingent upon a showing that the witness is otherwise unavailable." Id. at 691-92.

Accordingly, the law is clear that, under Fed. R. Civ. P. 32, if a witness is more than 100 miles from the place of trial, the witness is unavailable and his or her deposition may be used at trial. Plaintiffs make no claim that any of the 25 USTC employees in question are within 100 miles of the place of trial. Plaintiffs' motion should therefore be denied.[5]

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Conwood's motions in limine should be denied.

Deposition of ROBERT BLATTBERG, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at

A. Having worked with both retailers and manufacturers, almost everybody seems to offer it.
Q. It's common practice?
A. It's common practice but not by everybody.
Q. What is the basis for your statement that it's a common practice for manufacturers to use in-store -- I'm sorry, in-store displays as push vehicles, just to make that complete?
A. Maybe I'm -- since you've worded it, kept moving around, can you just reword your question?
Q. Yeah. Let me do it more -- try to be more precise. What is the basis for your statement that most consumer good manufacturers use in-store displays such as push vehicles?
A. Well, most try to doesn't mean the retailer will automatically use it. But if they can they offer funds to get in-store displays, but it doesn't happen in every segment, doesn't happen with every single company. But most do.
Q. It's common in the industry?
A. It's commonplace.
Q. And what is -- is it commonplace for consumer good manufacturers to make payments for the best display space and increased product facings?
A. It's done.

Q. You say most consumer good manufacturers do that.
A. They do it in some form but not all do it.
Q. In what categories have you seen that --
A. That being what?
Q. -- done? Payments for the best display space and increased product facings?
A. They use slotting fees because the retailers require slotting fees. They use payments for displays because they want to pay -- because the retailer demands payments for those displays in some situations.
Q. What, if you recall specifically, what types of categories within a retail store do that, where retailers require those things?
A. Paper.
Q. And how about beer?
A. Beer may be an exception.
Q. How about chips?
A. Probably in chips.
Q. How about cigarettes?
A. Cigarettes. There may be legal requirements in some of these categories.
Q. Is it your understanding that given that environment, that competitors compete with each other on payments for the best display space and increased product facings?

A. It's one way to compete. It may not be an effective tool for some manufacturers in some circumstances.
Q. But that's a common way that competitors compete?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. Mischaracterizes testimony.
THE WITNESS: I just answered it by saying it is used but there may be some special circumstances where it doesn't make sense for that manufacturer to do it.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. I understand that. I'm trying to understand if that is a common basis for competition, to pay for display space, for the best display space and increased product facings; that's all.
A. It's used and it's fairly common.
MR. KEYTE: Why don't we take a break for lunch.
(Whereupon, at 12:30 p.m., the deposition in the above-entitled matter was recessed, to reconvene at 1:30 p.m., this same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION
(1:30 p.m.)
Whereupon,
ROBERT BLATTBERG,
the witness on the stand at the time of recess, having been previously duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows:
EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR DEFENDANTS (RESUMED)
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Professor, I think you testified before, I believe, that you will not work with Wal-Mart; is that correct?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. That misstates his testimony.
THE WITNESS: As of now.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Yeah as of now. Why is that?
A. Because of conflicts.
Q. Business conflicts?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. What is the nature of the business conflicts?
A. Do I have to divulge this?
Q. Yes. Actually you could do it in general for display space placement or rack placement within the CAP program -- how small would it have to be for you to conclude that it was not in any way economically coercive to a retailer?

MR. GUZMAN: Object to the form. It's ambiguous. The hypothetical is incomplete.
THE WITNESS: Well, as I said it's a function of the policies of the retailers. Retailers have certain policies regarding the way they take payments.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. I understand that. And is it correct, your testimony is if it's there they'll take it; that's their policy?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. Totally misstates his testimony.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. Is that what you're talking about?
A. What I'm saying is, is that the retailers ask their category managers, buyers et cetera to take these kinds of allowances.
Q. Has anybody to the best of your knowledge testified in this case that if they do not take the CAP payment they cannot compete effectively with other retailers?

Page 155

A. I don't remember seeing testimony to that effect.
Q. And am I correct that that was part of the premise in the RJR case, correct?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. Misstates testimony.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. That retailers and I believe there is affidavits, believe they had to take those payments in order to compete effectively against other retailers; correct?
MR. GUZMAN: Same objection.
THE WITNESS: And without those payments the retailers would be at a disadvantage. In that case I think that's partially correct.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. I think you also state in paragraph 12 that manufacturers often provide retailers with fixtures for display, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. So is it your experience is that -- it's customary or common for retailers to provide fixtures?
A. I probably shouldn't have said often.
Q. I'm sorry and I misspoke. Suppliers to supply fixtures for retailers?

Page 156

A. I think the word often actually overstates it.
Q. Well, you don't want -- you want to put never?
A. I didn't say that.
Q. What do you want to put there?
A. Sometimes.
Q. Sometimes. It's a lot different than often; isn't it?
A. I agree.
Q. Did you write often?
A. I probably wrote often.
Q. Do you know whether anybody from Kellogg Huber wrote that word instead of you?
A. No.
Q. Do you ever advise suppliers to provide fixtures for retailers?
A. In some very special circumstances, yes.
Q. When have you done that?
A. With a dog food retailer -- pet food.
Q. What kind of fixture was that?
A. Fixture for their brand.
Q. In your view do suppliers compete in providing fixtures that meet the needs and wishes of retailers?

A. Not necessarily.
Q. Do they ever?
A. There may be some special circumstances where they do.
Q. Do you think they do in the moist snuff category?
A. I think that they compete to have their own displays, UST competes to exclude the competitors of having their displays.
Q. Let me talk about the displays themselves.
A. I'm sorry; the vendors?
Q. The vendors themselves. Have you -- did you, in reading this record, did you reach any conclusion as to whether U.S. Tobacco satisfies retailers more than Conwood with respect to providing new types of displays for moist snuff products?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: What I just said was that competitors can each provide fixtures for vendors and that in a lot of categories where that's done multiple manufacturers can provide it, okay.
BY MR. KEYTE:
Q. I understand that. My question is did you

Deposition of GREGORY T. GUNDLACH, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at within the context of the retail store.

Q. And do you find that different manufacturing companies compete for that space by using these payments in promotions for the best display space?
A. Yes, they do in some instances, yes.
Q. Due to the special aspects of say a cooler like you described the refrigeration, would you say that competition is more vigorous -- we were talking about retail space like cooler space that requires refrigeration, special features, something like that, would you say that competition among manufacturers is more vigorous to compete and offer promotions for that display space than in other places in the retail store that don't have the special aspects?
A. Well, I think it depends on the -- it depends more on the individual players who are competing, on one level that particular space is limited and a special type of space, but an instance where there might be only one supplier of that product there wouldn't be a lot of competition obviously, but if you were speaking in terms of an intensely concentrated category of buying for that space, that would be higher levels of competition, yes.

Q. And what happens to the firms that sort of lose that competition and don't get the space?
A. Well, generally limits their access to consumers and their chosen retailer environments.
Q. What happens if a particular firm chooses not to offer payments and promotions and as a result they don't get the display space and the cooler or the endcap?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous. What do you mean by what happens?
THE WITNESS: Well, it's not clear that these incentive payments are used as a basis for solely choosing allocating space in the retail environment. It's merely one factor. If under those circumstances that you contemplate they are not able to obtain space as a result of whatever their abilities including these incentive arrangements, I imagine as I mentioned before, probably are limited constraints in terms of their chosen retail vendor.
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Is moist snuff a category that has one of these special or more premium spaces as you described, I think you described cooler space, endcap space or prominent display space. Would moist snuff be a category that's in a prominent display space?

Page 68

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: I wouldn't characterize it as one of those areas in the store where -- I'm sorry. I wouldn't characterize the typical arrangement for moist snuff -- I'm sorry. Could you read the question back, please?
THE REPORTER: "Question: Is moist snuff a category that has one of these special or more premium spaces as you described, I think you described cooler space, endcap space or prominent display space. Would moist snuff be a category that's in a prominent display space?"
THE WITNESS: I guess I'd have to answer that by trying to ascertain where the particular space is, if it's a counter display, there obviously is limited space available there. If it's a, for example, a freestanding display unit that might be sitting or housed somewhere in the store in various locations, it could be premium. It may not be.
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. From your review of the materials in this case, what does Conwood do to obtain the best display space in the stores, what types of programs do they use?

A. Well, I think when you think of what manufacturers do, including those in moist snuff, to obtain the best space it has to start with the types of products they offer, whether or not consumers desire those products. That's certainly important consideration on the part of the retailer. If you're speaking in terms of particular incentive payments that Conwood provides, I think through my review of the materials I've been able to determine that I know they are contemplating an incentive program in the near future in response to the environment that they're experiencing. I imagine in the past they've used basic forms of payments to secure some type of promotional -- the other ones that I spoke of earlier that involved general payments, not along the lines of commercial bribery but just generally payments to reserve some display for signage or POS, not familiar with -- or I can't recall that they're using any type of formalized program along the lines of other manufacturers in the industry at this time.
Q. In your opinion as a marketing and trade channel expert, has that hurt Conwood that they have not had a formal program to use like the other manufacturers in the industry as you just stated?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, mischaracterizes

the question without understanding what you mean 09:44:47 AM by "tobacco," whether or not you're referring to 09:44:49 AM the various varieties of tobacco products, how 09:44:55 AM you're using those specific terms. If you have a 09:45:02 AM document where those terms have been used, we 09:45:07 AM certainly all can look at that document and 09:45:10 AM answer your question more pointedly. 09:45:12 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Let me try to clarify my question. 09:45:23 AM
By "tobacco products," I mean all 09:45:23 AM tobacco products, such as cigarettes, moist 09:45:23 AM snuff, other tobacco products, cigars. Okay? 09:45:25 AM Okay? 09:45:33 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Is there a question? 09:45:34 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Are you all right with that as a term, 09:45:36 AM the use of the word "tobacco"? 09:45:38 AM
MR. GUZMAN: If you have a question, 09:45:40 AM ask him. 09:45:41 AM
THE WITNESS: I think the term 09:45:42 AM
"tobacco" can be used to define all of those 09:45:42 AM categories. 09:45:45 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA: 09:45:45 AM
Q. Do you understand that's how I'm using 09:45:46 AM that term "tobacco products"? 09:45:49 AM

A. I understand you're using it in a very, 09:45:50 AM very general sense, yes. 09:45:52 AM
Q. Now, are the purchases of tobacco 09:45:55 AM products generally considered specifically 09:45:58 AM planned purchases, generally planned purchases, 09:46:00 AM or switch purchases? 09:46:03 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, the question is 09:46:05 AM ambiguous. We don't know whose terms those are. 09:46:06 AM
THE WITNESS: Again, you're lumping a 09:46:10 AM variety of different tobacco products into one 09:46:11 AM term. You are using specific terms that 09:46:14 AM characterize purchase decision processes without 09:46:20 AM providing meaning to and definition of those 09:46:24 AM terms. As a result, I hesitate to respond to 09:46:27 AM your convoluted question. 09:46:31 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Do you know what the term "brand 09:46:41 AM loyalty" means? 09:46:42 AM
A. I know the common use of the term, yes. 09:46:43 AM
Q. Can you describe for me your 09:46:45 AM understanding of the use of the term "brand 09:46:47 AM loyalty"? 09:46:49 AM
A. It refers to a consumer's desire to 09:46:50 AM repeatedly purchase the same brand over time. 09:46:55 AM
Q. How did the effect of brand loyalty on 09:47:26 AM consumers' decisions figure into the results of 09:47:28 AM the Point of Purchase Advertising Institute 09:47:32 AM study? 09:47:34 AM

A. I don't recall their specific 09:47:39 AM definition associated with brand loyalty. So as 09:47:41 AM I sit here today, it's difficult for me to recall 09:47:44 AM how or if it did have an implication for that 09:47:47 AM study. 09:47:50 AM
Q. When you were reviewing the Point of 09:47:52 AM Purchase Advertising Institute study, were you 09:47:55 AM interested in determining how brand loyalty 09:47:58 AM affected those results? 09:48:02 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection to form. 09:48:04 AM
THE WITNESS: When I reviewed that 09:48:07 AM study, I was interested in its ability to 09:48:08 AM substantiate my statement that POS communications 09:48:10 AM have power because many consumers make their 09:48:13 AM brand decisions while physically in the store. 09:48:16 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Make their decisions about all 09:48:23 AM different categories of products? 09:48:25 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, miscategorizes 09:48:27 AM his testimony. 09:48:30 AM
THE WITNESS: Just as it is read here, 09:48:31 AM
Chris, POS communication have power because many 09:48:32 AM

241 consumers make their brand decisions while 09:48:35 AM physically in the store. 09:48:38 AM

BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. And "make their brand decisions," as 09:48:41 AM it's written there, refer to all different 09:48:44 AM categories of products? 09:48:46 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, asked and 09:48:48 AM answered. 09:48:49 AM
THE WITNESS: It refers to consumers' 09:48:50 AM brand decisions and would include across 09:48:52 AM different categories. 09:48:54 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Do you know who Greg Ellis is? 09:49:26 AM
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, the question is 09:49:35 AM ambiguous. 09:49:36 AM
THE WITNESS: I may or may not. I 09:49:39 AM don't recall the name at this moment. 09:49:40 AM
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Do you recall that he's a regional 09:49:44 AM sales manager for Conwood? 09:49:45 AM
A. I don't recall either way. 09:49:51 AM
Q. Did you review his deposition in this 09:49:53 AM case, if you recall? 09:49:54 AM
A. I don't recall. As I understand it, 09:50:00 AM you have a list of materials that I considered. 09:50:02 AM question.

A. When I left my store my Conwood rack had 18 slots. I had Copenhagen, Copenhagen Long Cut. I had all my Skoals, and I had all of the Conwood products stocked in my Conwood rack. 18 slots, one flavor per slot.
When I came back from vacation I had a 12-slot UST rack, which carried all of the previous Skoal and Copenhagen products I had in the store the week before, but my Copen -- or my Cougar, which I had six slots for, was now reduced down to three. And they were sitting in individual dispensers behind a cigarette display. They were not visible to the public.
Q. Apart from the -- so there were three facings for slots of Cougar that were no longer displayed in the U.S. Tobacco rack; is that correct?
A. There was no Conwood product displayed in the UST rack.
Q. Where was the Conwood -- the rest of the Conwood product?
A. I had six slots before I went on vacation, six Conwood products displayed. When I got back from vacation I had three Conwood products displayed, but they were not visible to the public. They were in individual dispensers behind the cigarette display.

Q. Were those the three slots of -- of Cougar?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. What happened to --
A. Cougar.
Q. What happened to the Kodiak?
A. There was one Cougar, there was a Cougar Long Cut, and there was a Kodiak sitting behind, I believe they were, the new brand of Kool cigarettes that were out.
Q. And were those Conwood products displayed in a three-facing rack then behind the cigarette counter?
A. No.
Q. How were they displayed?
A. They were in three upright, individual dispensers.
Q. Were they cardboard dispensers?
A. They were plastic.
Q. And when you came back into your store, what hap -- were there any products -- I'm sorry. Strike that.
What happened to the products that had previously been in the Conwood rack that weren't in the upright dispenser?

Page 24

MR. SANDIDGE: Don't you need to establish whether she knows what happened to them?
MR. BENZ: Is that an objection?
MR. SANDIDGE: Yeah.
MR. BENZ: Well, I'd appreciate it if you made a clear, crisp objection and let me move on.
MR. SANDIDGE: Excuse me. I object, clearly and crisply.
BY MR. BENZ:
Q. Ms. Stevens, what -- were there any Conwood products that were placed under the counter in a box, that you remember?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you describe your recollection of what had happened.
A. When I came back in the store from vacation and I noticed the changes had been done, there was a box -- we kept a box of back stock under our Till 1. Now, inside of this larger box of back stock there was a smaller box for returns for staled out product. And I found three Conwood products in that box, in the returns box; the three that were in the display when I left to go on vacation.
Q. Do you remember which three products were in the return box?

A. No, I don't.
Q. Because I just want to make sure the testimony is clear, after the U.S. Tobacco representative had visited the store and removed the Conwood rack, there were -- there was a UST rack in place, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And previously there had been 18 slots for moist products, is that correct, in the Conwood rack?
A. Yes.
MR. SANDIDGE: She testified about that.
BY MR. BENZ:
Q. And now there were --
MR. SANDIDGE: Objection. Leading the witness.
BY MR. BENZ:
Q. And then there were 12 slots in the U.S. Tobacco rack, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And there were no Conwood products in the U.S. Tobacco rack; is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. And three Conwood products were in an upright dispenser behind the cigarette --

A. Not yet I don't. I don't even know about them.
Q. When you say "not yet," is there a plan to change that kind of structure of the way business is done at Conwood in terms of assessing whether the budget is going to meet the objectives of increasing sales at Conwood?
A. No, I didn't mean that.
Q. Who do you report to in your responsibilities as president?
A. I report to Mr. Rossen.
Q. And for the record, what is his title?
A. He's the chairman.
Q. And what is your understanding of his responsibilities at Conwood?
A. I am not sure I can tell you what his responsibilities are.
Q. On what matters do you report to him?
A. On -- I keep him informed of just things that I feel like he needs to be aware of. He is definitely informed about things that might have a big dollar consequence.
Q. These primarily again having to do with budgeted numbers that we have been discussing?

A. Yeah.
Q. Anything other than in a sense the numbers, do you talk to him about in terms of, you know, company strategy?
A. No.
Q. Have you discussed the lawsuit with him?
A. We have -- we have not discussed -- we discussed it to the extent that it is happening.
Q. Who was involved in the discussions about whether to bring the lawsuit?
MR. CRADDOCK: Now, let me object at this point. Obviously there were attorneys involved in the decision process to bring the lawsuit. I want to instruct him not to answer to the extent his answer would require that he reveal discussions that took place in the presence of the attorneys for the companies.
Q. (BY MR. KEYTE) Right. All I'm asking is -- I'm not asking what was said. I'm asking who was involved in the decision to bring the lawsuit as far as you know?
A. The -- who was involved by --

Page 24

Q. Within Conwood?
A. By name?
Q. Yeah, by name.
A. The name of the individuals?
Q. Yeah.
A. That were involved?
Q. Yeah.
A. I would say myself, Ed Roberson and Mr. Rossen and Scott Stevens.
Q. What is Mr. Stevens' position?
A. He's one of the committee of managers.
Q. And what is that committee?
A. What is the committee of managers?
Q. Yeah.
A. Committee of managers is the group that has responsibility of Conwood Company and Conwood sales goals.
Q. And does Mr. Stevens have any other role within the company?
A. Not that I'm aware of.
Q. And just so I'm clear, who is Mr. Stevens employed by?
A. I'm not sure who his employer is.
Q. And to the best of your knowledge, was anybody within the Pritzker organization involved in the decision to bring the lawsuit?

A. It's my understanding -- it's not my understanding. It was the committee of managers.
Q. Are there any representatives from the Pritzker organization on the committee of managers?
A. Not that I'm -- you know, I know Mr. Rossen is not, I know I'm not, I know Ed is not. I don't know about Scott Stevens. I don't even know who he reports to or who he works for.
Q. He doesn't work for Conwood to the best of your knowledge?
A. That's correct.
Q. What were -- to the best of your knowledge, what were Conwood's approximate profits in 1998?
MR. CRADDOCK: Let me object on the basis that is vague. I don't know, profits can be defined in a number of ways, and I don't know exactly how you're asking him to define profits.
Q. You may answer the question.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR AN APPROPRIATE TRIAL EXHIBIT LIST AND APPROPRIATE DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS

Plaintiffs have moved this Court for an order requiring Defendants to submit what Plaintiffs say are "appropriate" trial exhibit lists and deposition designations. Plaintiffs' motion should be denied for two reasons.

- First, as a practical matter, Conwood over-inflates the number of potential trial exhibits submitted by Defendants and, as a matter of trial practice, confuse the designation of deposition testimony as part of the record with the actual introduction by videotape of such testimony.

- Second, Conwood's strategy of trial-by-surprise has left Defendants somewhat in the dark concerning Conwood's case. Accordingly, Defendants must be prepared to rebut assertions by any number of Conwood witnesses about any number of retail stores and about particular USTC conduct. Similarly, both the nature of Conwood's case and Conwood' continuous strategy of baseless extrapolation make it necessary for Defendants to include several "groups" of documents and a large volume of deposition testimony that, if necessary, will make clear to the jury that Conwood's "evidence" of so-called "exclusive dealing" and USTC "dirty tricks" are sporadic at best in relation to the size of the market and the volume of USTC sales activities.

I. PLAINTIFFS' MOTION IS MISLEADING

Conwood claims that Defendants "threw in the kitchen sink" by listing 4,250 exhibits. See Pls. Mem. at 1. Conwood fails to point out that over 3,000 of the listed exhibits are uniform CAP contracts with retailers and wholesalers, the inclusion of which could not possibly undermine Plaintiffs' "reasonable notice" or "prejudice Conwood's ability to prepare," as Conwood claims.[1] As described below, the remaining 1,000 listed exhibits -- less than 2 boxes of material -- are primarily deposition exhibits which may be needed to defend a lawsuit that, even at this late date, is largely undefined in terms of its scope and its theory of proof. Contrary to its implication, Conwood is intimately familiar with all of these documents, which have been the subject of nearly two years of intensive discovery.

Similarly, Defendants designated relevant testimony from its own employees, from Conwood's employees, and from third party retailers deposed during discovery. Conwood estimates – inaccurately – that "playing UST's 123 video deposition designations would alone consume several weeks." See id. at 1. Conwood fails to note that many factors -- obviously yet to unfold -- will affect whether the designated testimony will actually be introduced at trial, including whether or not a witness is available for trial, and especially whether the designated testimony is necessary to rebut points Conwood may make during their case in chief.[2] In short, Defendants are in a wait-and-see posture with no choice but to cover all bases.

[1] As explained below in Section III, it was necessary for Defendants to include all of its CAP contracts should the need arise to introduce the one or more CAP contracts that may be required to rebut Conwood's case.

[2] Conwood's ambiguous asterisk system for disclosing its intended trial witnesses -- leaving unclear whether they are to appear "live" at trial -- illustrates the moving target that USTC faces in preparing for trial.

16diii003921

II. DEFENDANTS' EXHIBIT LIST AND DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS MUST ACCOUNT FOR PLAINTIFFS' IMPROPER EXTRAPOLATION THEORIES AND SELECTIVE PRESENTATION OF FACTS

In its motion, Conwood does not claim that any of the deposition testimony designated by Defendants or any of the documents listed by Defendants are cumulative, nor could they.[3] Conwood's only argument appears to be that Defendants' exhibit list is too long and that Defendants' deposition designations are too voluminous. These are curious assertions, at best, considering Conwood's apparent strategy of asserting nationwide misconduct and effects with little, if any, evidentiary support. If this Court permits Conwood to proceed based on the meager evidentiary record, USTC is prepared to respond with proof that Conwood employee witnesses have no knowledge whatsoever of Conwood's own business practices beyond each employee's particular territory or district[4]; that Conwood's expert witnesses read only a handful of documents, yet concluded that USTC has "exclusive agreements" with retailers throughout the country[5]; that Conwood in fact has its own racks and POS in 80-90% of stores; and that Conwood asserts that USTC has engaged in a systematic campaign of rack removals, yet offers only a literal handful of [3] Moreover, in this motion Conwood completely ignores the fact that Defendants' trial exhibit list and deposition designations are subject to any specific and proper objections made by Plaintiffs.

[4] For example, each Conwood field employee who was deposed testified that he or she had no knowledge of Conwood's business practices – including what brands Conwood sold – beyond his or her particular district or territory. This "defense" strategy by Conwood required Defendants to gather testimonial evidence for each different geographical area from a different Conwood employee witness. Conwood's current claim that this evidence should be effectively excluded from trial because Defendants designation are too voluminous is simply untenable.

[5] For example, Plaintiffs' experts, most notably Professor Gundlach, conclude that USTC's CAP contract constitutes "exclusive dealing" based on a handful of CAP worksheets. USTC should retain the ability to confront Professor Gundlach and other witnesses with any number of CAP contracts, as well as evidence that Conwood products, racks, and POS remain in the signatory retail stores.

isolated instances of unauthorized conduct. Again, much of this evidence may be unnecessary if Conwood is required to meets its burden of actually proving that USTC engaged in exclusionary conduct at specific retail establishments, and that such conduct, as opposed to other factors, in fact caused Conwood injury in those retail stores and chains.[6] At this stage, however, Defendants must be prepared to defend against Conwood's nebulous, shifting case.

In sum, this is no ordinary commercial litigation with some pre-set conception of what number of exhibits or deposition designations is reasonable at this stage of the litigation. Instead, this is a case involving four moist snuff competitors, hundreds of thousands of retail stores across the country, and thousands of company sales personnel. While Conwood has taken every opportunity to spin the scant evidence they have collected into an illusion of systematic misconduct and "exclusive dealing," it is an illusion which, if allowed to be conjured up before the jury, can only be rebutted by introduction of record evidence that tells the true story. Given Defendants' position, Conwood should have to contend with the evidentiary record that its own sales force and executives have created and, accordingly, their motion should be denied.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Conwood's motion should be denied.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO PRECLUDE "UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESS MATERIALS"

Defendants' latest attempt to preempt injury and damages testimony from Richard Leftwich of the University of Chicago, Graduate School of Business,[1] is a motion in limine seeking to bar (i) demonstrative exhibits relating to the testimony of plaintiffs' experts, and (ii) the supplemental report filed by Leftwich pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e) on January 27, 2000 (the "Supplement").

There is no basis for preclusion of either the exhibits or the Supplement. Both were timely filed under Rule 26(e) and the [1]Defendants previously moved to preclude his testimony on the ground that this recognized authority, whose expertise they do not dispute, fails the Daubert test because of alleged infirmities in his rigorous and well-supported study.

Court's Scheduling Order of February 18, 1999 ("Scheduling Order"). Moreover, defendants concede that the Supplement contains no new opinions[2] and attempt to show no prejudice resulting from either the Supplement or the expert demonstratives.

Defendants also cite no precedent -- and plaintiffs are aware of none -- in which a court has precluded an expert from introducing demonstrative exhibits at trial on the ground that such exhibits were not attached to his or her initial Rule 26 report. And the appropriate supplementation by Leftwich, based on newly-available data, was arguably required by Rule 26(e); it certainly provides no basis to preclude him from giving his opinions at trial. The Supplement does not even contain a new opinion, though courts have permitted even that where the opposing party cannot demonstrate prejudice. Here there is no prejudice; defendants have not even attempted to show that the matter cannot be resolved by a further deposition of Leftwich on the material in his four-page Supplement. That alone should suffice to deny the motion to preclude.

[2]At the February 4 discovery conference, counsel for defendants freely admitted that the supplemental report contained no new opinions.

16diii003933

BACKGROUND

Leftwich filed his initial report on August 2, 1999. Based on a detailed study and using accepted econometric techniques to estimate Conwood's market share absent UST's anticompetitive conduct, he concluded Conwood had been damaged in the amount of $291 to $483 million. Leftwich Report at 11.

UST's expert, David Scheffman, filed his report on September 15, 1999, taking issue with Leftwich's use of accepted methodology and his conclusions. He claimed, based on studies described in his report (using methodologies similar to those used by Leftwich), that Conwood had not been damaged, or that any harm was trivial. Scheffman Report at 101.

Leftwich filed a timely rebuttal report on October 1, 1999, defending his methodology and conclusions. In addition, he explained in this report how Scheffman's methodology (with appropriate refinements, which he also described) not only failed to disprove plaintiffs' damages, but instead corroborated Leftwich's conclusions. Leftwich Rebuttal at 8-12.

Leftwich was deposed on November 2, 1999. During the deposition, counsel for defendants questioned the accuracy of moist snuff sales data that he had used in his analysis: industry-wide information generated annually by Peat Marwick and published by the Smokeless Tobacco Council ("STC"). This information is generally recognized as the industry standard.

After his deposition, Leftwich asked researchers working under his direction to contact the STC to confirm the accuracy of the published data. The STC confirmed that the data he had used were in fact those published by the STC in its 1997 annual report. The STC also agreed to ask Peat Marwick to further examine the published data.

Upon review, Peat Marwick determined that there were errors in the published data relating to certain states. Peat Marwick provided another set of data. Upon review, however, it appeared that data were still incorrect. Accordingly, Peat Marwick again provided corrected data to Leftwich's assistant on December 9, 1999. Because of the uncertainty surrounding the data and the importance of ensuring their accuracy, a researcher working under Leftwich's direction spent considerable time ensuring that the corrected data were in fact accurate. In January 2000, after confirming the accuracy of the corrected 1997 sales data, Leftwich repeated his prior analyses using the corrected data. Plaintiffs then filed and served the Leftwich supplemental report on January 27, 2000. In this report, Leftwich set forth the results of his analyses using the new data and reaffirmed his previous opinions.

As part of this analysis, Leftwich incorporated the newly available data into his previously described application of the Scheffman model. The output of this analysis -- again, using an economic model he had described in his rebuttal report -- produced the described range of damages. Supplement at 3. This further corroborated Leftwich's opinion on the range of damages.

On January 21, 2000, plaintiffs filed and served expert demonstrative exhibits for introduction into evidence at trial, in accordance with the Court's scheduling order. These demonstratives consisted of textual or graphic summaries of opinions and analysis from the reports of all of plaintiffs' experts. Like the supplemental report, the proposed demonstrative exhibits contain no new opinions.

ARGUMENT

A. The Demonstrative Exhibits Were Timely Filed

The expert demonstratives are both timely and admissible.[3] Defendants cite no authority for their construction of Rule 26(a) -- that any demonstrative exhibits intended to be used during the expert's trial testimony must have been filed months before trial and concurrent with the expert reports. Plaintiffs are likewise unaware of any case in which demonstrative exhibits, otherwise admissible, were precluded on the theory adopted by defendants. On the contrary, the Scheduling Order set forth the operative

[3]Defendants' motion seeks to exclude the exhibits relating to all five of plaintiffs' designated experts. UST thus seeks to enmesh the Magistrate Judge in the minutiae of trial management.

deadline,[4] requiring that all "exhibits intended to be used at trial" be filed and produced by January 21. See Order of February 18, 1999. Conwood filed and produced on January 21, and thus complied fully.[5]

In any event, defendants do not even attempt to show prejudice arising from Conwood's compliance with the Court's Order. The proposed demonstratives contain no new opinions, methodologies or analysis. They simply summarize for the jury, in textual and graphic form, salient points that were explained in the expert reports. Defendants seek to preclude materials that will permit efficient presentation of the evidence, make the evidence clearer for the jury, and thus streamline the trial.

B. The Supplemental Report Affords No Basis for Preclusion

The Supplement was an appropriate and timely correction. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e). Indeed, Leftwich arguably was required to provide this additional information after his post-deposition inquiries led to corrected STC data.

[4]In the absence of a scheduling order, Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(3) provides the operative mechanism, requiring "identification of each document or other exhibit, including summaries of other evidence . . . . at least 30 days before trial."

[5]Defendants apparently believe the Court-ordered deadlines are more elastic as applied to their own exhibits. They filed approximately fifty additional trial exhibits on February 4, 2000 -- two weeks after the ordered deadline and on the very day they were pressing their untimeliness claims with respect to plaintiffs' supplemental expert report and expert demonstratives.

Defendants cite no authority for their claim of untimeliness. Rule 26(e) provides that "supplemental expert information should be disclosed by the time the pretrial disclosures are made under Rule 26(a)(3)" – January 28, 2000 in this case. The Supplement, filed on January 21, 2000, was therefore timely under Rule 26(e).

Defendants' speculation that the supplemental report could have been filed a week or two earlier, because Leftwich received new data on December 9, is both unfounded and irrelevant. Given the initial confusion surrounding the STC data, it was entirely appropriate for Leftwich and his staff to spend all the time necessary to ensure that the corrected data were accurate before making a supplemental report. Defendants cite to no instance where a court has precluded an expert's testimony based on a supplement under Rule 26(e), more than a month before trial, to account for new data and without a change of opinion. The cases cited by defendants simply do not support their argument.[6]

[6]In United Phosphorus, Ltd v. Midland Fumigant, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 675, 677 (D. Kan. 1997), defendant had never supplemented under Rule 26(e) when it "attempt[ed] to recast and restate" expert opinion less than one week before the scheduled Daubert hearing and less than thirty days before trial. Id. That effort to change opinions, after plaintiff had prepared for a hearing to challenge the old opinions, bears no relation to Leftwich's supplement to account for corrected data. Likewise, in Boardman v. National Medical Enterprises, 106 F.3d 840 (8th Cir. 1996), the court excluded plaintiffs' expert because no report had ever been submitted and no explanation had been proffered for missing either of the two applicable deadlines.

While defendants -- mindful of their Daubert challenge -- call the Supplement "sandbagging," their concession that Leftwich's opinions are unchanged strips that argument of any merit. Indeed, defendants have not claimed unfair prejudice from either of the points made in the Supplement.[7] The use of corrected data affords no basis for complaint; the echoing of Leftwich's prior conclusion that Scheffman's work, properly applied, also supports his damages range is likewise no surprise. Nor have defendants even sought to explain why a supplemental deposition cannot serve whatever legitimate interests they seek to protect. Defendants received the Supplement more than five weeks before trial and with ample time to conduct such examination (though they had no interest in doing so until the Magistrate Judge suggested it last Friday). Courts have routinely rejected attempts to strike even new opinions where, as here, the opposing party has failed to demonstrate serious prejudice. E.g., Tucker v. Ohtsu Tire & Rubber Co., 49 F. Supp. 2d 456 (D. Md. 1999) (denying motion to exclude supplemental expert report containing two new opinions because the report was [7]Their claim is that if Leftwich could be restricted to only some of his prior analyses, and specifically to a single regression based on new data, that might reduce their potential exposure. Because they understand that Leftwich's opinion is to the contrary, and the reasons why, they can fairly challenge Leftwich's conclusions at trial; they cite no authority that supports the drastic remedy of precluding an expert from giving his actual opinions based on newly-discovered data.

16diii003939

filed timely and defendant had no credible claim of prejudice); State of New York v. Westwood-Squibb Pharmaceutical Co., 981 F. Supp 768, 779 (W.D.N.Y 1997) (denying motion to exclude new opinion that contradicted the expert's previous deposition testimony and was revealed only four days before trial).

16diii003940

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, UST's Motion in Limine to Preclude Undisclosed Expert Witness Materials should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTIONS IN LIMINE

1. The Court should preclude reference to the alleged wealth of Conwood's owners. Conwood does not dispute the relevance of Conwood's financial performance; UST is free to argue -- whether wisely or not -- that Conwood (with about 13% of the market) is no "David" or "victimized competitor" up against the "Goliath" UST (with its 77% market share). See UST Mem. in Opp'n at 8. But it is not free to argue that Conwood's ultimate owners are rich from unrelated businesses (through what UST terms the "Pritzker conglomerate," id.).[1] Stated simply, the alleged wealth of Conwood's owners has no bearing on whether Conwood was damaged by UST's Section 2 violations, or the amount of damages that should be awarded to compensate Conwood.

[1]UST's factual characterization of Conwood's ownership is wrong on all counts, and they have no witness with personal knowledge to explain it. The accurate description of ownership would require far more time and explanation before the jury than this irrelevant matter could possibly justify.

The fact that representatives of Conwood's owners may have taken an interest in this litigation is likewise of no consequence to the jury. See id. at 8-9. The wealth and identity of Conwood's owners is no more relevant to this lawsuit than the identity and wealth of UST's owners. The parties in this case are corporations, and their shareholders have nothing to do with the issues to be decided by the jury.[2]

As for the prejudicial nature of the evidence UST seeks to introduce, UST's Memorandum speaks for itself: UST seeks to argue that "Conwood is owned by one of America's wealthiest families," and that the "Pritzker conglomerate" simply "milk[ed]" Conwood's profits. Id. at 8. Such characterizations point out precisely the prejudicial nature of the (irrelevant and unsupported) allegations UST seeks to make.

2. UST's expert Scheffman should be permitted to testify only upon condition that he disclose his entire compensation for work on this case. The Court has ruled on this issue by Order dated February 9, 2000 (Magistrate Judge Moyer).

3. The Court should preclude "tit for tat" evidence that companies other than UST engaged in misconduct at stores. UST admits that it seeks to defend its misconduct at trial by claiming "everyone does it." UST Mem. in Opp'n at 6. This is the same (misguided) argument it made on summary judgment. But as a monopolist, UST cannot engage in exclusionary conduct and

[2]There is, moreover, no evidence in the record (or otherwise) to support the bold claim that Conwood's owners decided to "milk" the company of cash needed to invest in the business. Id. at 8. On the contrary, the evidence is uniformly that Conwood's management made all decisions regarding expenditures, investment, and distributions.

cannot defend itself by claiming that Conwood "did it too." Indeed, courts have routinely rejected such a defense. See, e.g., Paschall v. Kansas City Star Co., 695 F.2d 322, 333 (8th Cir. 1982) (discussing caselaw concerning exclusion effected by publisher and cooperating carriers), rev'd on other grounds, 727 F.2d 692 (8th Cir. 1984); Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 274-75 (2d Cir. 1979).[3]

UST's efforts to tar even smaller moist snuff sellers (Swisher and Swedish Match), is just as farfetched and irrelevant. UST Mem. in Opp'n at 7. There is no record evidence, and UST can cite none even outside the record, that those companies could or did engage in a systematic campaign of exclusionary conduct that harmed competition. There is no evidence that these companies could or did seek "exclusive vending," in order to constrict space for moist snuff and eliminate rivals' point of sale advertising ("POS"). There is no evidence that either of these sellers could or did use "category management" to skew the stores' product mix to their advantage. Were this a case about isolated acts of vandalism, the conduct of their representatives might be examined.[4] Because the case is

[3]Moreover, Conwood did not "do it too." While UST trumpets the supposed admission that "[Conwood's] sales force tampers with authorized USTC racks," UST Mem. in Opp'n at 6 (emphasis in original), it does so by distorting the record. Conwood made no such statement. Conwood simply restored its racks when and where it was able legitimately to do so. Conwood's response to UST's exclusion in violation of the antitrust laws has no bearing on the issues the jury must decide. It is UST's exclusion the jury must consider, not Conwood's efforts to maintain its presence in the face of that exclusion.

[4]Conwood is aware of little, if any, evidence that representatives of Swedish Match or Swisher excluded Conwood racks, brands or POS from stores.

about something entirely different -- systematic exclusion practiced by a monopolist -- the introduction of evidence regarding field misconduct by the excluded UST rivals can only confuse the issues and waste the jury's time.

4. The Court should exclude "retailer permission" evidence. UST argued in its Motion for Summary Judgment that Conwood must "make a specific and competent showing that [its] racks were removed

. . . without authorization of retailers." UST Mem. in Supp. of Mot. for Summ. J. at 36. Conwood's Motion in Limine explained that, as a matter of law, retailer authorization is irrelevant to Conwood's claims under Section 2. All that matters is UST's exclusion, with or without retailer consent.

UST articulates two arguments in opposition to Conwood's motion. First, UST claims that "the terms of any agreements . . . are relevant to Conwood's Section 2 claim" in that "Conwood must . . . prove that the terms of any agreements are exclusionary." UST Mem. in Opp'n at 2. This virtually concedes Conwood's motion. UST here admits that the proper legal test is whether its conduct was exclusionary; whether UST succeeded in obtaining unlawful exclusion with or without the consensual involvement of a third party is wholly immaterial. UST should therefore have no objection to Conwood's motion on this score.

Second, UST argues that the concern of Section 2 is not solely to promote "lower prices" or "better products" for consumers, but "to satisfy" retailers. Id. This argument betrays a profound misunderstanding of antitrust law. The Supreme Court has declared with unmistakable clarity that "Congress designed the Sherman Act as a 'consumer welfare prescription.'" Reiter v. Sonotone Corp., 442 U.S. 330, 343 (1979) (citation omitted). "A restraint that has the effect of reducing the importance of consumer preference in setting price and output is not consistent with this fundamental goal of antitrust law." NCAA v. Board of Regents, 468 U.S. 85, 107 (1984). As the Sixth Circuit recognized, competition is about "reduc[ing] costs" and "expand[ing] sales." Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1422 (6th Cir. 1990) (internal quotation marks omitted). UST's remarkable defense -- that it may conspire with retailers to inflict deliberate harm on consumers, so long as the retailers welcome such an arrangement -- sets antitrust law on its head, and reinforces Conwood's point that evidence of retailer consent is irrelevant to the issue before the jury -- that is, whether UST's conduct was exclusionary.

Indeed, many retailers may welcome exclusionary arrangements, because they may keep retail prices high (and thus increase profits for the retailer) and may also provide an opportunity to share in monopoly rents. For example, in LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ. A. 97-3983, 1999-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 72,538, 1999 WL 346223, at *4-6 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999), retailers consented to 3M's exclusionary rebate program, because it provided them with a share of the manufacturer's monopoly profits. Because the arrangement did not benefit consumers, it was held to state a triable claim. Likewise, in R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999), there was no doubt that retailers would "choose to sign a Retail Leaders contract" because of the scope of "promotional payments." Id. at 507. The arrangement was enjoined, however, because it posed "a serious threat to interbrand competition" and would "have an adverse effect on consumer choice." Id. at 511 (emphasis added). Conwood will prove to the jury that UST's activities have had the same effect, and the question whether retailers like or dislike them is beside the point.

UST's Opposition places defendants' theory of the case in sharp relief: UST may deliberately harm consumers and competition so long as its retail distributors are kept happy, through maintenance of high retail prices or with a share of monopoly profits kicked back by UST. Precisely because this position is antithetical to the deepest values of the antitrust laws, and because the jury should not be misled as to the supposed curative power of retailer consent to UST exclusion, the Court should grant Conwood's motion and preclude evidence of retailer permission from the case.

5. The Court should exclude any evidence offered in support of UST's counterclaims. UST mischaracterizes Conwood's motion as entirely tied to the resolution of Conwood's motion for partial summary judgment. UST Mem. in Opp'n at 10. Not so. Here, Conwood seeks only to preclude certain evidence based on UST's disregard of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and direct Court orders concerning disclosure of its damages and witnesses. See Feb. 5, 1999 Order (Magistrate Judge Moyer); May 11, 1999 Order at 3 (Magistrate Judge Moyer).

Under settled law, failure to provide a Rule 26(a)(1)(C) computation of damages routinely results in the exclusion of related testimony. See, e.g., Indiana Ins. Co. v. Hussey Seating Co., 176 F.R.D. 291, 293 (S.D. Ind. 1997); Salgado v. General Motors Co., No. 93C1427, 1996 WL 284971, at *1 (N.D. Ill. May 24, 1996); Moore v. Kaye Ins. Assocs., No. 94CV6559, 1995 WL 600244, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 8, 1995). Likewise, under Rule 37(c)(1) "[a] party that without substantial justification fails to disclose [witnesses as] required by Rule 26(a) . . . shall not, unless such failure is harmless, be permitted to use as evidence at trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness . . . not so disclosed." And, it goes without saying that UST's disregard of direct court orders requiring production of damages calculations and witness lists provides yet another basis for excluding unproduced testimony or evidence. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2); Carlson v. Grobman, 133 F.R.D. 5, 7-8 (D.N.H. 1990) ("The Magistrate's Scheduling Order is not a frivolous piece of paper, idly entered, which can be cavalierly disregarded by counsel without peril.") (internal quotation marks omitted).

6. The Court should exclude hearsay deposition testimony and documents. Under Rule 32, UST should not be permitted to procure the absence of its senior employees in order to avoid cross examination and play their discovery depositions instead. Instead, UST should be permitted to introduce deposition testimony of its own senior employees only upon a proper showing that the witness is genuinely unable to board the UST jet for the trip from Greenwich to Paducah. As the Fifth Circuit has noted, "[a] deposition is an acceptable substitute for oral testimony when in-court observation of the witness is extremely difficult or virtually impossible." Jauch v. Corley, 830 F.2d 47, 50 (5th Cir. 1987). The trial court "may consider all the circumstances of why the party is away from the trial and determine in light of these factors whether to allow use of the deposition." 8A Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2147, at 181-82 (2d ed. 1994). There are no circumstances in this case indicating that defendants' senior employees are unable to testify live at the trial.[5]

Similarly, UST cannot identify any basis for the introduction into evidence of its own hearsay documents. See UST Mem. in Opp'n at 12 n.5. In fact, one of UST's motions in limine seeks the exclusion of five Conwood business records on hearsay grounds; there is certainly no basis for treating the hundreds of self-serving hearsay documents on UST's exhibit list any differently. See Def. Exhs. 147-166, 171-281, 303-386.

[5]The cases cited by UST are distinguishable. In Carey v. Bahama Cruise Lines, 864 F.2d 201, 204 (1st Cir. 1988), the court explained that the deposed defense employees were sailors at sea and their depositions had been noticed by defendants, a fact that should have signaled to plaintiffs that their depositions were likely to be used at trial. In Daigle v. Maine Medical Center, 14 F.3d 684, 691 (1st Cir. 1994), the witness expressly stated during his deposition that he was moving to another state and would be unavailable for trial.

JEFFREY A. APPERSON, CLERK
BY DEPUTY CLERK

SUPPLEMENTAL DECLARATION OF RICHARD LEFTWICH

1. I am the Fuji Bank/Heller Professor of Accounting and Finance at the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago. I previously filed an expert report and an expert rebuttal report on behalf of Conwood Company, L.P. and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") in this litigation. In this supplemental declaration, I report the results of analyses based on information that recently became available to me.

2. At my deposition, counsel for UST raised questions about the reliability of some of the information I relied on in my expert report. In particular, I was asked about the reliability of information on total moist snuff sales in 1997 for several states. The information I relied on is contained in annual reports of the Smokeless Tobacco Council ("STC"). The information contained in these reports was compiled for the STC by Peat Marwick. Shortly after my deposition, an employee of Lexecon Inc., a consulting firm that assisted me in the collection of information for my analysis, contacted, at my request, the STC and inquired about the reliability of the 1997 information on moist snuff sales by state. I understand that the STC confirmed that the information I used was derived from an STC report that was disseminated to its members. The STC also agreed to ask Peat Marwick to confirm the reliability of the information.

3. I understand that when Peat Marwick reviewed the 1997 information, it discovered that the information it had provided to the STC contained errors. On learning this, I asked for and recently received the revised 1997 information.[1]

1. A copy of the information I received is attached as Appendix A.

4. Using the revised 1997 information, I repeated the damage analysis contained in my expert report.[2] Based on the revised 1997 information, I estimate that Conwood suffered damages of between $155 million and $238 million as a result of UST's misconduct.[3]

5. As I explained in my expert report, my analysis is based on a variety of conservative assumptions. (See, for example, Leftwich Report ¶¶ 3, 9, 12.) In particular, my analysis is based on the assumption that UST misconduct in 1997 did not affect Conwood's 1997 sales. However, as I discussed in my rebuttal report, information relied on by Professor David Scheffman, UST's economic witness, allows me to estimate the effect of UST's misconduct on Conwood's sales in a recent year. (Leftwich Rebuttal, ¶¶ 23-26.) (Professor Scheffman's information was not available to me at the time I filed my expert report.)

6. In particular, I used Professor Scheffman's data and model – supplemented by a more reliable measure of UST's "bad acts" (conduct with the purpose and effect of excluding rivals) – to estimate the impact of UST's misconduct in a recent year on Conwood's share by state. These results were reported in Tables 1-3 of my rebuttal report.[4]

2. Tables 1 – 10 in Appendix B correspond to the tables in my expert report.
3. This estimate does not include pre- or post-judgment interest, attorneys' fees, or statutory trebling. These estimates are based on the same regression model as in my expert report. As in my expert and rebuttal reports, I also analyze the extent to which the change in Conwood's share of moist snuff sales by state between 1990 and 1997 was associated with regional differences; changes in certain demographic variables; or measures of Conwood's marketing presence in a state. I find no statistically significant relation between the change in Conwood's share of moist snuff sales by state between 1990 and 1997 and regional differences, or changes in demographic variables; I also do not find a positive and statistically significant relation between the change in Conwood's state share and Conwood's marketing presence in a state.
4. As I explained in my rebuttal report, I do not endorse the use of certain "area" dummies that Professor Scheffman includes in his model. I have repeated my analysis after excluding these variables from the analysis. The results of this analysis are reported in Appendix C.

7. This information allows me to incorporate information on the effect of UST's misconduct by state in a recent year into my analysis. In particular, I repeat my analysis under the assumption that, absent UST's recent misconduct, Conwood's state share of moist snuff sales in 1997 would have equaled its actual share in 1997 plus the effect of UST's recent misconduct. For example, Conwood's share of moist snuff sales in Georgia was 10.3 percent in 1990 and 12.4 percent in 1997. If UST's recent misconduct reduced Conwood's share by 1.2 share points in Georgia (see Table 2 of Appendix C), then I assume that Conwood's Georgia share in 1997 would have been 13.6 (i.e., 12.4 plus 1.2) absent UST's recent misconduct.[5] That is, Conwood's share in Georgia would have increased from 10.3 in 1990 to 13.6 in 1997 absent UST's recent misconduct.[6]

8. I repeat my damage analysis based on these estimates of Conwood's share by state in 1997 – that is, Conwood's share by state in 1997 absent UST's recent misconduct. Based on these estimates, I estimate that Conwood suffered damages of between $313 million and $488 million as a result of UST's misconduct.[7]

5. For a few states, information on bad acts is not available. For the purpose of this analysis, I assume that UST committed no bad acts in those states.
6. These estimates may not, however, reflect the effect on Conwood of all UST actions that Conwood claims are exclusionary (e.g., these estimates may not reflect the effect of UST's "CAP" program on Conwood).
7. See Tables 1-2 – 10-2 in Appendix D. These estimates are based on bad acts "measure 2" in a model that excludes the Scheffman "area" dummies. If I include the Scheffman area dummies, my estimates are $464 million for "scenario 1" and $288 million for "scenario 2." Using the other measures of bad acts ("measure 1" or "measure 3") and excluding the Scheffman "area" dummies, my estimates vary between $461 million and $537 million for "scenario 1." For "scenario 2" and the other bad acts measures, my estimates vary between $299 and $344 million. If the Scheffman "area" dummies are included in the analysis, my damages estimates for "scenario 1" vary between $442 million and $623 million. For "scenario 2," my estimates vary between $275 million and $382 million for "scenario 2" if the Scheffman "area" dummies are included.

   All of these results are based on the same regression model as used in my expert report – a model that excludes regional effects. In these analyses (i.e., where I take account of UST's recent misconduct), I find a statistically significant relation between a measure of regional effects (i.e., based on four Census regions) and the change in Conwood's share between 1990 and 1997. However, I find no such relation using a second measure of regional effects (based on nine Census divisions). If I include the first measure of regional effects in my regression model, my estimate of the damages suffered by Conwood as a result of UST's misconduct falls by roughly $140 million for "scenario 1" and roughly $80 million for "scenario 2." The regressions underlying each damage estimate are attached as Exhibit E.

Under penalty of perjury, I declare that the foregoing is true and correct.

Intercept	0.01 (8.40)
1990 Share (b)	0.22 (2.68)
Adjusted R^2	0.1139
F Statistic	7.168

(a) The dependent variable is equal to the difference in shares in 1997 and 1990.

(b) 1990 Share is equal to Conwood's sales of moist snuff, in pounds, divided by total U.S. sales, in pounds.

Actual World ($)	8.61	8.64	8.58	8.65	9.01	9.38

(a) Scenario one assumes that Conwood's share increased by 5.31 share points between 1990 and 1997 in states with a 1990 share of less than 15 percent.

(b) Conwood's share is calculated using Conwood's summary of Peat Marwick Reports, as attached to a fax addressed to Chip Bamberger from Edward Foster dated July 23, 1999. 1997 total moist snuff sales in pounds were faxed directly by Peat Marwick on December 9, 1999 to Deborah Dobrusin.

(c) Average price per pound is calculated using Conwood financial statements titled, using 1996 as an example: "Conwood Company, L.P., Moist Snuff Division, Period Ending December 31, 1996, Actual Vs. Planned Statement of Operations." Average price per pound is equal to Net Sales divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source in (b)).

(d) Incremental costs per pound comes from the same source as described in (c). The costs are calculated as Net Sales minus Operating Profit, divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source described in footnote (b)).

(e) 1998 and 1999 figures are projections. Conwood's But-For share is projected to grow at .82% a year, based on actual 1990 to 1997 growth. Conwood's Actual share is projected to equal 1997 share. Average price per pound is projected to grow at 7.0% for the Actual and 6.42% for the But-For Worlds (based on historical growth of 6.2% per year, but allowing But-For price to equal 95% of Actual price by 1999).

Incremental Costs Per Pound (d)
But-For World ($)	8.61	8.64	8.58	8.65	9.01	9.38
Actual World ($)	8.61	8.64	8.58	8.65	9.01	9.38

(a) Scenario two assumes that Conwood's share increased by 4.19 share points between 1990 and 1997 in states with a 1990 share of less than 20 percent.

(b) Conwood's share is calculated using Conwood's summary of Peat Marwick Reports, as attached to a fax addressed to Chip Bamberger from Edward Foster dated July 23, 1999. 1997 total moist snuff sales in pounds were faxed directly by Peat Marwick on December 9, 1999 to Deborah Dobrusin.

(c) Average price per pound is calculated using Conwood financial statements titled, using 1996 as an example: "Conwood Company, L.P., Moist Snuff Division, Period Ending December 31, 1996, Actual Vs. Planned Statement of Operations." Average price per pound is equal to Net Sales divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source in (b)).

(d) Incremental costs per pound comes from the same source as described in (c). The costs are calculated as Net Sales minus Operating Profit, divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source described in footnote (b)).

(e) 1998 and 1999 figures are projections. Conwood's But-For share is projected to grow at .7% a year, based on actual 1990 to 1997 growth. Conwood's Actual share is projected to equal 1997 share. Average price per pound is projected to grow at 7.0% for the Actual and 6.42% for the But-For Worlds (based on historical growth of 6.2% per year, but allowing But-For price to equal 95% of Actual price by 1999).

(b) 1998 and 1999 are projections. Based on the assumptions described in table 4A, Conwood's sales are calculated as projected share multiplied by projected total moist snuff pounds. Conwood's revenues are calculated as projected Conwood sales (pounds) multiplied by projected price per pound. Conwood's costs are calculated as projected Conwood sales multiplied by projected cost per pound. Conwood's profits are calculated as projected revenues less projected costs. Finally, lost profits are calculated as projected But-For World profits less projected Actual World profits.

(a) Scenario one assumes that Conwood's But-For World share in 1997 was 15.9 percent.

(b) Conwood's share for the Actual World is projected to grow at a rate of .47% per year in order to reach the But-For World share of 17.53 percent by 2009.

(c) Assuming prices grow at a rate of 6.2 percent per year, as explained in the text, the average price per pound in 2009 would be 46.79. The But-For price in 1999 is assumed to equal 95% of the predicted Actual 1999 price. The But-For price then grows at a rate of 6.72 percent per year in order to equal the Actual price by 2009.

(d) Incremental costs per pound are assumed to grow at the historical (1990-1997) real rate of 2.1% per year, plus the expected future inflation rate of 2% per year, for a total of 4.1% per year.

(a) Past lost profits are in nominal dollars because prejudgement interest is not included.

(b) Future lost profits are present value as of December 31, 1999.

(c) Scenario one assumes that Conwood's But-For World share in 1997 was 15.9 percent.

(d) Scenario two assumes that Conwood's But-For World share in 1997 was 15.0 percent.

Intercept	0.02 (1.44)
1990 Share (b)	0.31 (3.06)
Adjusted R^2	0.1481
F Statistic	9.347

(a) The dependent variable is equal to the 1997 share, adjusted using Scheffman-type analysis, minus the 1990 share.

(b) 1990 Share is equal to Conwood's sales of moist snuff, in pounds, divided by total U.S. sales, in pounds.

Actual World ($)	8.61	8.64	8.58	8.65	9.01	9.38

(a) Scenario one assumes that Conwood's share increased by 8.06 share points between 1990 and 1997 in states with a 1990 share of less than 15 percent.

(b) Conwood's share is calculated using Conwood's summary of Peat Marwick Reports, as attached to a fax addressed to Chip Bamberger from Edward Foster dated July 23, 1999. 1997 loal moist snuff sales in pounds were faxed directly from Peat Marwick on December 9, 1999 to Deborah Dobrusin.

(c) Average price per pound is calculated using Conwood financial statements titled, using 1996 as an example: "Conwood Company, L.P., Moist Snuff Division, Period Ending December 31, 1996, Actual Vs. Planned Statement of Operations." Average price per pound is equal to Net Sales divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source in (b)).

(d) Incremental costs per pound comes from the same source as described in (c). The costs are calculated as Net Sales minus Operating Profit, divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source described in footnote (b)).

(e) 1998 and 1999 figures are projections. Conwood's But-For share is projected to grow at 1.2% a year, based on actual 1990 to 1997 growth. Conwood's Actual share is projected to equal 1997 share. Average price per pound is projected to grow at 7.0% for the Actual and 6.42% for the But-For Worlds (based on historical real growth of 6.2% per year, allowing But-For price to equal 95% of Actual price by 1999).

(a) Scenario two assumes that Conwood's share increased by 6.49 share points between 1990 and 1997 in states with a 1990 share of less than 20 percent.

(b) Conwood's share is calculated using Conwood's summary of Peat Marwick Reports, as attached to a fax addressed to Chip Bamberger from Edward Foster dated July 23, 1999. 1997 total moist snuff sales in pounds were faxed directly by Peat Marwick on December 9, 1999 to Deborah Dobrusin.

(c) Average price per pound is calculated using Conwood financial statements titled, using 1996 as an example: "Conwood Company, L.P., Moist Snuff Division, Period Ending December 31, 1996, Actual Vs. Planned Statement of Operations." Average price per pound is equal to Net Sales divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source in (b)).

(d) Incremental costs per pound comes from the same source as described in (c). The costs are calculated as Net Sales minus Operating Profit, divided by Conwood's moist snuff sales in pounds (as taken from the source described in footnote (b)).

(e) 1998 and 1999 figures are projections. Conwood's But-For share is projected to grow at .93% a year, based on actual 1990 to 1997 growth. Conwood's Actual share is projected to equal 1997 share. Average price per pound is projected to grow at 7.0% for the Actual and 6.42% for the But-For Worlds (based on historical growth of 6.2% per year, but allowing But-For priceto equal 95% of Actual price by 1999).

Summary of Conwood's Lost Profits

1997 Share Adjusted Using Scheffman-Type Analysis
(Bad Acts Measure 2)

	Lost Profits
	Past (a)	Future (b)	Total
Scenario One (c)	204,751,593	282,911,997	487,663,590
Scenario Two (d)	127,093,820	186,315,210	313,409,030

(a) Past lost profits are in nominal dollars because prejudgement interest is not included.

(b) Future lost profits are present value as of December 31, 1999.

(c) Scenario one assumes that Conwood's But-For World share in 1997 was 18.6 percent.

(d) Scenario two assumes that Conwood's But-For World share in 1997 was 16.7 percent.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 FEB -8 A10:27 FILED US DISTRICT COURT Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' CONDITIONAL OBJECTIONS AND COUNTERDESIGNATIONS TO CERTAIN OF DEFENDANTS' DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") previously filed a motion in limine to preclude defendants from using the depositions of their own employees at trial on hearsay grounds. Plaintiffs' Motions in Limine ¶ 6. At that time, plaintiffs expressly reserved the right to provide objections and counterdesignations in the event the motion is denied. To provide defendants as much advance notice as possible, however, plaintiffs herewith submit conditional objections and counterdesignations to defendants' proposed employee deposition excerpts in the event the Court permits them. Plaintiffs reserve the right to make additional objections and counterdesignations as review continues.

Respectfully submitted,

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P.
CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

vs. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

The Magistrate Judge held a teleconference at 9:00 a.m. on Tuesday, February 8, 2000, with counsel in this matter. Present on behalf of Conwood were Neil Gorsuch, and Messrs. Guzman, Powell, and Roberts. Present on behalf UST were Neal Stoll, John Reed, Messrs. Athanasia and Keyte, and Ms. Weiss.

The Magistrate Judge announced the following rulings:

1. UST is granted leave to file a supplemental brief today with respect to the Leftwich in limine issues.

2. UST is granted leave to depose Dr. Leftwich with respect to his supplemental declaration, but such deposition should not await a definitive ruling by Judge Russell on the pending Daubert motions. Instead, it should proceed as soon as reasonably possible.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the court on oral motion of plaintiff Conwood to compel defendant UST to produce the full compensation received by defense expert Dr. David Scheffman for his work on this case.

According to plaintiff, Dr. Sheffman stated in his expert report that he is compensated at a rate of $400 per hour. At his deposition he testified that he also received approximately 14% of the billing from LECG/Navigant staff members who work on this case. LECG/Navigant is a non-testifying expert employed by defendant to assist testifying experts, collect and analyze information, and perform other services.

Under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), a testifying expert, such as Dr. Sheffman, must the disclose the "compensation to be paid for the study and testimony" that he renders. Plaintiff argues that it is entitled to the following information: (i) all compensation received in this matter for any source; (ii) any and all remuneration he has or may receive as a result of his "affiliation" with Navigant; and, (iii) his total income from litigation consulting work.

Defendant relies on a number of decisions of the Sixth Circuit which hold that the work of non-testifying experts, such as LECG/Navigant, is not discoverable except for certain specific exceptions, not alleged to be present in the this case. Rule 26(b)(4)(B). See, e.g., Zvolensky

v. Ametek, Inc., 142 F.3d 438, 1998 WL 124047 (6th Cir. 1998); USM Corp. v. American Aerosols, Inc., 631 F.2d 420, 424-25 (6th Cir. 1980); Toledo Edison Co. v. G.A. Technologies, Inc., 847 F.2d 335, 340 (6th Cir. 1988). Defendant contends that the work product, scope of work, and, most important, the compensation received by LECG/Navigant is not discoverable. To require Dr. Sheffman to reveal his income from LECG/Navigant will, in effect, reveal the compensation received by LECG/Navigant. Defendant also argues that the compensation received by Dr. Sheffman from LECG/Navigant is not compensation for Dr. Sheffman's "study and testimony" and therefore is not covered by the disclosure requirement of Rule 26(a)(2)(B).

Dr. Sheffman has greater financial income from this case than merely his hourly rate of compensation. If his hourly compensation is relevant and discoverable, his financial stake in other aspects of the case is also relevant and discoverable. His total benefit from the litigation is a factor which the jury and the trial court may properly take into account in weighing the credibility of his testimony. To permit disclosure of only the hourly fee income would be incomplete and possibly misleading as to Dr. Sheffman's stake in the controversy and his objectivity in rendering his opinions.

The fact that disclosure of his income from LECG/Navigant attributable to this case may implicitly disclose the compensation received by LECG/Navigant for its services in this matter is unfortunate but unavoidable. It is not plaintiff who set up the financial relationship between Dr. Sheffman and LECG/Navigant or plaintiff that chose Dr. Sheffman to serve as an expert in this case. Plaintiff's legitimate discovery requests should not be denied because of decisions made by defendant or Dr. Sheffman.

Plaintiff has not shown that information regarding Dr. Sheffman's total annual income from consultation work or his total income from his affiliation with LECG/Navigant is necessary or warranted in this instance.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that plaintiff's motion to compel is GRANTED to the extent that, within 7 days of the entry of this order, defendant shall provide plaintiff with information regarding Dr. Sheffman's total income generated from this litigation, either directly or indirectly through LECG/Navigant.

'00 FEB -9 A10:00 FILED US DISTRICT COURT CLERK WESTN. DIST. KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO PRECLUDE UST EMPLOYEES FROM TESTIFYING LIVE IF UST REFUSES TO MAKE THEM AVAILABLE DURING PLAINTIFFS' CASE-IN-CHIEF

Central among the issues in this litigation is the decision defendants made at the highest corporate levels to engage in practices designed to hamper competitive distribution. Since this case focuses on the intentionally anticompetitive corporate policies of defendants, it is not surprising that certain officers and employees of United States Tobacco ("UST") will be important witnesses in plaintiffs' case-in-chief. More than one court has noted the reality that "[i]n complex antitrust litigation where motive and intent play leading roles, the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged conspirators, and hostile witnesses thicken the plot." Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 368 U.S. 464, 473 (1961). See also A-Barr Sales Co. v. Coca-Cola Co., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14166*2 (N.D.IL.

January 13, 1981) (same). The demeanor and comportment of these individuals at trial will be as critical as the substance of their testimony.

Conwood, accordingly, included the key UST officers and employees on its trial witness list. Conwood then requested that defendants accept service of trial subpoenas on behalf of certain of these individuals.[1] Counsel for defendants have categorically refused to accept service -- even though these same employees appear on UST's witness list.[2]

Conwood now asks this Court to exercise its authority under Federal Rule of Evidence 611(a) to order defendants' key employees to testify live during plaintiff's case-in-chief or, in the alternative, forgo their right to testify live for the defense. To require plaintiffs to impart UST employee testimony through depositions, yet allow UST the luxury of rebutting that testimony live would impede the jury's ability to evaluate the

---

[1]Conwood made the request by a letter to counsel for defendants dated January 26, 2000. See Attachment "A". Defendants respond by a letter to Magistrate Judge Moyer dated February 1, 2000 stating, "[b]y copy of this letter, we advise Conwood's counsel that we will not accept service of trial subpoenas." See Attachment "B". Upon receipt of the letter stating UST's position, Conwood began serving trial subpoenas directly on thirteen UST employees who are listed on Attachment "C". Conwood will, of course, make every effort to be solicitous of the schedules and commitments of these thirteen individuals in the event that they testify live during plaintiffs' case-in-chief.

[2]Each of these individuals appears on defendants' trial witness filed on January 21, 2000 and on plaintiffs' trial witness list filed the same date.

16diii004120

credibility, demeanor and quality of these witnesses to the likely detriment of Conwood.

ARGUMENT

The Court should use its inherent authority over the conduct of the trial to ensure a balanced and efficient presentation of the evidence by requiring the key UST officers and employees to testify live at trial for both parties or for neither. It is well established that Rule 611(a) provides broad authority to control when and how a witness may testify.[3] See Martin v. Weaver, 666 F.2d 1013, 1020 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 962 (1982) (As the "governor of the trial for the purpose of assuring its proper conduct," the district court exercises broad powers.); United States v. Dent, 984 F.2d 1453, 1463 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 875 (1993) ("The district court has substantial discretion in its control of the presentation of evidence at trial.").

Relying on this authority, courts have repeatedly held that defendants may be precluded from calling defense witnesses during their own presentations, if defendants failed to produce those witnesses during plaintiff's case-in-chief. In Matthews, Inc. v. Transamerica Transportation Services, Inc., 945 F.2d 269, 272-73, 9th Cir. 1991), for example, the Ninth Circuit upheld a trial court's refusal to allow two of defendant's employees to testify live in the defense case when the defendant had earlier refused to make them available for use in the plaintiff's case-in-chief. Expressing a clear preference for live testimony, the court condemned defendant's "gamesmanship," stating "[i]f [defendant] had truly wished to present the live testimony of [its employees], it could have done so by making those witnesses available when [plaintiff] requested that they be produced." Id. at 273. Likewise, in Maran Coal Corp. v. Societe Generale de Serveillance S.A., No. 92 CIV. 8728, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 172 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 10, 1996), defendant asserted that it would not make available certain nonparty witnesses "affiliated with" the defendant until its own case-in-chief. Id. at *2. The defendant argued that these witnesses were foreign nonparty witnesses not subject to the court's subpoena power. Id. at *1-2. The court however invoked its authority under Rule 611(a) to order defendants to "produce [the witnesses] for plaintiff's case or be precluded from calling them as live witnesses in their own case." Id. at *7. The court expressly tied its holding to the purposes of Rule 611(a): "[The defendant's] gamesmanship will not assist the ascertainment of truth and will needlessly consume the jury's time by requiring [plaintiff] to read to the jury the witnesses' deposition testimony." Id. at *5 (footnote omitted). See also In re Gulf Oil/Cities Service Tender Offer Litigation, 776 F. Supp. 838, 839 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (Ordering defendant under 611(a) to produce former officer and director live for plaintiffs' case or forgo his live testimony entirely; "[i]f he elects to absent himself during plaintiffs' case, he will not testify at all, and plaintiffs will be free to comment upon his absence.").

[3]Federal Rule of Evidence 611(a) grants a court the power to control "the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence so as to (1) make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of truth, (2) avoid needless consumption of time, and (3) protect witnesses from harassment or undue embarrassment."

16diii004121

The Manual for Complex Litigation -- written by a panel of the nation's most distinguished jurists -- endorses the course of action adopted by these courts. The Manual states that to prevent "substantial interference with the conduct of the trial," "courts have used their discretion under Fed. R. Evid. 611 to preclude parties who refuse to honor a reasonable request for production of a key witness subject to their control, and thereby force an opponent to use a deposition, from calling the witness to testify personally during their presentation of evidence." Manual for Complex Litigation 2d § 22.23, at 132 (2d ed. 1985).[4]

The Court should follow the practice of these courts in the present case. These witnesses are integral to plaintiffs' presentation of corporate policy. In addition, it would deprive the jury of the ability to see the witnesses' demeanor and assess their credibility during this critical testimony, while at the same time oppressing the jury with the monotony of viewing videotaped depositions (some of which suffer from poor sound or

[4]The Manual's Third Edition reiterates the point:

> A party may . . . be unwilling to make available employees who are beyond the court's subpoena power. Though the court probably lacks authority to compel their appearance, it may encourage cooperation by precluding that party from later calling such witness itself.

Manual for Complex Litigation 3d § 22.23, at 134 (3d ed. 1995).

16diii004123

visual quality for reasons entirely beyond the control of the parties). To effectuate the "ascertainment of truth" and "avoid needless consumption of time," the Court should grant plaintiff's motion to preclude these witnesses from testifying if they refuse to testify during plaintiff's case-in-chief.

16diii004124

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, Conwood's Motion to Preclude UST Employees from Testifying Live if UST Refuses to Make Them Available During Plaintiffs' Case-in-chief should be granted. A proposed order is attached.

Defendants shall make every effort to facilitate the appearance of the specified UST officer and employee witnesses at trial during the plaintiffs' case-in-chief. Any of the specified witnesses who does not appear live during plaintiffs' case-in-chief, if called, shall not appear live during defendants' case.

SO ORDERED.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al. - Acceptance of Service of Process

Gentlemen:

Will you please let me know, by next Wednesday, whether you are authorized to accept service of process for the following witnesses: Vincent Gierer, Gary Milano, Gary Smith, Arlie Annundson, Tom Berkebile, Michael Beyerlein, Donald Blackburn, Robert Chiaradio, Richard Cutler, Tim Entwistle, Doug Faas, Richard Fasanelli, Bob Fitzmaurice, Lonnie Funk, Howard Heylmun, Harvey Jaffer, David Lund, James McCarthy, Donald Nabi, Byron Parish, Donald Segelstrom, Mike Slabbekorn, Mike Stanke, David Untiedt, James Wheatley, Gregory Zahrt, and UST Custodian of Records.

We understand, of course, that each of these witnesses has a busy schedule, and we will work to accommodate them so that their attendance at trial does not cause any unnecessary disruption. When you respond you can tell us about any scheduling conflicts that we should try to work around.

If you do not advise that you can accept service by next Wednesday, we will effect service through other means. Please note that we will seek to compel the attendance of each of the above-listed current employees of UST, as they are party witnesses subject to the Court's power. Alternatively, we will seek to preclude any UST employee who was not made available for testimony during plaintiffs' case from testifying during defendants' case.

Very truly yours,

Mark C. Hansen

Re: Conwood Co., et al. v. United States Tobacco Co., et al.
February 4, 2000 Telephone Conference Issues

Dear Magistrate Judge Moyer:

In anticipation of our scheduled telephone conference on Friday, February 4, 2000, and in light of the numerous pretrial issues raised by and in the parties' filings on January 21 and 28, 2000, we wish to call to the Court's attention several matters of particular and more immediate concern to Defendants.

(1) Conwood's damages expert.

The testimony of Conwood's proffered damages expert, Dr. Richard Leftwich, is the subject of a Daubert motion which was fully briefed in December 1999. One of Defendants' motions in limine seeks to exclude, as too late and unfairly prejudicial to Defendants, a new damages approach that Conwood and Dr. Leftwich have been preparing since at least early December 1999 in apparent response to Defendants' criticism and Daubert motion. This new approach was revealed to Defendants and the Court only in Conwood's proposed exhibit list on January 21, 2000 and the "Supplemental Declaration of Richard Leftwich" we received a week later on January 28, 2000. We will be prepared, if necessary, to supplement the Daubert motion to show why Dr. Leftwich's latest approach is equally defective as a matter of law. We will seek the Court's guidance on Friday as to whether it is now necessary or appropriate to make such a supplemental filing. For obvious reasons, it is imperative, in light of Conwood's latest tack, for us to understand as soon as possible how the Court wishes to handle this matter.

(2) Conwood's previously undesignated field witnesses.

Conwood's January 21, 2000 trial witness list contains the names of ten persons who, we learned on January 27, 2000, include three sportsman's show promoters, two former employees of a private investigation firm that worked for Kellogg Huber in this case, two Kellogg Huber paralegals, a Conwood key account manager, and two Conwood sales representatives.

By copy of this letter, we are asking Conwood to confirm that none of these persons will be called at trial as witnesses with "alleged direct personal knowledge of UST's 'in the field' anti-competitive behavior" as outlined in the Court's May 11, 1999 Order (Dkt. 100) requiring listing of such trial witnesses by September 21, 1999. None of the ten were so listed at that time. To the extent we have not been satisfied by the time of the Friday telephone conference call that none of these witnesses will be called to so testify, we plan to raise this matter with the Court and seek enforcement of the May 11, 1999 Order.

(3) Conwood's efforts to preclude or coopt live trial appearances of Defendants' employees.

Defendants plan to respond expeditiously to Conwood's motions in limine filed January 28, 2000. One matter does require even more immediate attention.

In one of its motions in limine, Conwood seeks to preclude Defendants from showing or reading to the jury in Defendants' case in chief the deposition testimony of any of Defendants' employees from anywhere in the country on the unsupported theory that all such persons are in the control of Defendants and should, therefore, be compelled to appear live at trial.

In a related ploy, on January 26, 2000, Conwood's counsel sent us the attached letter identifying 27 of Defendants' employees or officers from around the country, asking if we will accept service of trial subpoenas for them, and stating Conwood's intention to compel their appearance at trial. The letter further announced Conwood's intention to seek to preclude the testimony in Defendants' case not only of these enumerated persons but "any UST employee who was not made available for testimony during plaintiffs' case." Conwood sought a response by Wednesday, February 2, 2000.

By copy of this letter, we advise Conwood's counsel that we will not accept service of trial subpoenas. Defendants also oppose any such attempt as outlined in the January 26, 2000 letter or the referenced Conwood motion in limine to complicate the trial and interfere with Defendants' right to organize and present their case as they deem appropriate. Indeed, Defendants' strategy may very well depend upon how Conwood's case goes into the record.

REED WEITKAMP

We believe that this matter can and should be resolved by the summary rejection of Conwood's motion and the contents of its attached letter. Accordingly, we will seek the Court's guidance at the Friday conference on how this matter may be most expeditiously put to rest.

* * *

We welcome a dialog with Conwood's counsel to focus or resolve these issues between now and Friday. Given the lateness of the hour and the urgency of these issues to an entire range of trial preparation activities, we have taken the liberty of advising the Court of these matters now so as to be sure to have them at the top of the agenda for Friday as necessary.

Sincerely,

John S. Reed

MARAN COAL CORPORATION, Plaintiff, -v- SOCIETE GENERALE DE SURVEILLANCE S.A.; COMMERCIAL TESTING & ENGINEERING CO., Defendants.

92 CIV. 8728 (DLC)

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 172

January 9, 1996, Dated
January 10, 1996, FILED

COUNSEL: [*1] For MARAN COAL CORPORATION, plaintiff: Michael G. Davies, Coudert Brothers, New York, NY.

For SOCIETE GENERALE DE SURVEILLANCE S.A., defendant: Charles B. Updike, Schoeman, Marsh & Updike, New York, NY. For COMMERCIAL TESTING & ENGINEERING CO. dba SGS Commercial Testing & Engineering Co., defendant: Kenneth Y. Choy, Buxbaum & Choy, New York, NY.

JUDGES: DENISE COTE, United States District Judge

OPINIONBY: DENISE COTE

OPINION: MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

DENISE COTE, District Judge:

Plaintiff Maran Coal Corp. ("Maran") seeks an order that defendant Societe Generale de Surveillance, S.A. ("SGS") make Messrs. Kailas Chati and John Walker, witnesses who were responsible for overseeing inspections of cargo that [illegible] the subject of the litigation, available for examination at trial during [illegible]intiff's case in chief. In the alternative, if the Court declines to order SGS to produce the witnesses and Maran is therefore forced to introduce their deposition testimony in lieu of live testimony, Maran seeks an Order precluding SGS from introducing the live testimony of the witnesses. SGS, on the other hand, argues that Messrs. Chati and Walker are foreign nonparty witnesses not subject to the [*2] subpoena power of the court, that it is not required to produce these witnesses because they are not officers, directors or managing agents of SGS, and that it produced the two witnesses for deposition and plaintiff is therefore free to introduce their depositions if it wishes in lieu of live testimony. At a conference call on January 7, 1995, and after review of the parties' written submissions of that date, the Court notified the parties that it would preclude SGS from introducing the live testimony of Messrs. Chati and Walker if they are not produced to testify live for Maran. The reasons for that ruling follow.

In this case, Maran has sued SGS over tests conducted by SGS on Maran's behalf in Pakistan on 4 shiploads of coke prior to their transportation to Europe. Maran contends that SGS failed to conduct the tests in a workmanlike manner. Messrs. Chati and Walker were the bulk commodity inspectors affiliated with SGS responsible for supervision and direction of the tests in Pakistan.

As SGS described in its trial memorandum, Mr. Chati travelled from India on behalf of SGS to oversee the inspection of the two cargoes at issue in this lawsuit. Also according to SGS's memorandum, [*3] Mr. Walker travelled from [redacted] and on behalf of SGS to oversee the inspection of the two additional cargoes.

Neither party disputes that testimony from Messrs. Chati and Walker is critical to this case. By a letter dated August 17, 1995, counsel for SGS sought and received an adjournment of this trial from October 16, 1995 to now based in large measure on the unavailability of Mr. Walker. In the letter, counsel for SGS represented to the Court that two of the coke shipments at issue were inspected under the supervision of John Walker. Mr. Walker is listed as a witness by both sides. Mr. Walker was responsible for planning and executing the inspections properly and, with minor exceptions, will be the only eyewitness to the manner in which the inspections were conducted . . . . Although Mr. Walker's deposition has been taken, his importance as a witness is such that it would be fairer to both sides to have him appear live.

In the Joint Pretrial Order, Maran listed Messrs. Chati and Walker as trial witnesses it intended to call. In December 1995, Maran notified SGS that it would want the two witnesses available to testify during the first three days of trial. Maran asserts that [*4] it learned for the first time on January 4, 1996 that SGS would not produce these two witnesses until its own case. The trial would have started on January 8, 1996 but for the closing of the courthouse due to a winter storm.

Under Rule 611(a) of the Federal Rules of Evidence, trial judges shall exercise reasonable control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence so as to (1) make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of truth, [and] (2) avoid needless consumption of time . . . .

[redacted]rts have used their discretion under this Rule to preclude parties who refuse to honor a reasonable request for production of a key witness subject to their control, and thereby force an opponent to use a deposition, from calling the witness to testify personally during their presentation of evidence.

In re Gulf Oil/Cities Service Tender Offer Litigation, 776 F. Supp. 838, 839 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (MBM) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Mere, although the testimony of these two witnesses is critical to the jury's understanding of the issues, SGS wishes to hold back their live testimony, from which [*5] the jury will be able to evaluate their demeanor and better assess their credibility, until its own case. This gamesmanship n1 will not assist the ascertainment of truth and will needlessly consume the jury's time by requiring Maran to read to the jury the witnesses' deposition testimony.

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -Footnotes- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - n1 In opposing this application, SGS notes "there is nothing plaintiff would like to know better than whether defendants will or will not be able to produce Mr. Walker and Mr. Chati at trial."

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - End Footnotes- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

Although SGS argues that it does not have control over the witnesses, control over the witnesses is not dispositive of the issue presented in the instant motion. Gulf Oil, 776 F. Supp. at 839. SGS further argues that these witnesses are beyond the 100 mile radius of the subpoena power of the Court under Rule 45(b)(2), Fed.R.Civ.P., and that, because they are neither officers nor managing agents of SGS, the Court lacks the power to compel SGS to produce the witnesses at trial. As to Mr. Walker, SGS represents to the Court that he [*6] is a British citizen who was a consultant for SGS at the time of the testing, was a semiretired consultant at the time of his deposition in January of 1995, and that it is SGS's understanding that he is now fully retired. SGS maintains that Mr. Walker's contract with SGS ended in 1991. According to SGS, Mr. Chati is the area manager of an SGS affiliate, SGS India Limited, and was retained as an outside consultant in connection with the inspections at issue in this litigation.

SGS's arguments ring hollow in light of its own representation to the Court in its letter of August 17, 1995 that "although Mr. Walker's deposition has been taken, his importance as a witness is such that it would be fairer to both sides to have him appear live." The Court agrees with SGS's assessment of Mr. Walker's importance as a witness, and that fairness requires his production as a live witness for both sides. The same analysis of importance and fairness applies to the production of Mr. Chati. To the extent that the defendants lack the power to produce the witnesses at trial, Maran will have to rely on their deposition testimony. To the extent defendants are able to produce them as trial witnesses, however, [*7] defendants should not be allowed to withhold from the jury testimony from such critical witnesses the two men who managed the entirety of SGS's work on behalf of Maran until the defense case. Therefore, under the Court's inherent power to control the conduct of trials, as well as Rules 1 and 611(a), Fed.R.Civ.P., it is hereby ORDERED that defendants must produce Messrs. Chati and Walker for plaintiff's case or be precluded from calling them as live witnesses in their own case.

WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MOTION AND MEMORANDUM TO COMPEL WITHDRAWAL OF TRIAL SUBPOENAS ISSUED TO DEFENDANTS' EMPLOYEES AND TO PRECLUDE ISSUANCE OF ADDITIONAL SUBPOENAS

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), respectfully move this Court for an order, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 45, compelling Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P. et al. ("Conwood"), to withdraw the trial subpoenas that were improperly issued to USTC employees who are beyond the subpoena power of this Court. Defendants also move this Court to preclude Conwood from issuing further improper and harassing subpoenas or, in the alternative, to order Conwood to pay all reasonable expenses incurred by USTC and its employees as a result of Conwood's improper trial subpoenas issued to witnesses who reside and work outside Kentucky and more than 100 miles from Paducah.

BACKGROUND

By January 26, 2000 letter, Conwood: (i) inquired whether USTC would voluntarily accept service of trial subpoenas on behalf of twenty-seven USTC employees who are beyond the subpoena power of this Court; and (ii) disclosed its intention to compel their attendance at trial "through other means" should USTC refuse to accept service. By letter to the Court on February 1, 2000, USTC declined Conwood's invitation to accept service on behalf of those employees. On February 7 and 8, 2000, Plaintiffs attempted to serve at least nine trial subpoenas on USTC employees -- all of whom reside and work outside Kentucky and more than 100 miles from Paducah. At least seven of those subpoenas -- one served on Byron "Todd" Parish, a USTC sales representative in Oklahoma and six attempted to be served on USTC employees working in Greenwich, Connecticut -- were issued from a court without power under Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(2) (first sentence) to issue subpoenas for a trial in this Court. In these particular cases, the subpoenas issued from the United States District Courts for the Western District of Oklahoma and for Connecticut. See Tab A.

ARGUMENT

1. Plaintiffs' Subpoenas Are Invalid Under Federal Rule 45

Plaintiffs' attempted service of trial subpoenas upon USTC's officers and employees -- all of whom are beyond the subpoena power of this Court -- are invalid and must be withdrawn for several reasons. First, under Federal Rule 45(a)(2), "[a] subpoena commanding appearance at trial or hearing shall issue from the court for the district in which the hearing or trial is to be held." This rule must be read in conjunction with Federal Rule 45(b)(2), which limits a court's subpoena power to any place within the state or within 100 miles of the place of trial (see infra). Plaintiffs obviously cannot avoid the limitations of Rule 45(b)(2) by issuing trial subpoenas from another district. Such subpoenas would be valid only to compel attendance of witnesses at a trial within that district, e.g., the Western District of Oklahoma, not the Western District of Kentucky. Amgen Inc. v. Kidney Center of Delaware County, 879 F. Supp. 878, 882 (N.D. Ill. 1995), case dismissed on other grounds, 101 F.3d 110 (7th Cir. 1996) (under rule, trial subpoena shall issue from trial court); Steel, Inc. v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry., 41 F.R.D. 337, 339 (D. Kan. 1967) (even plaintiff cannot be compelled to testify at trial in court where he filed suit unless he is within the Rule 45 geographical range of subpoena issued from that trial court). See also Kupritz v. Savannah College of Art & Design, 155 F.R.D. 84, 88-89 (E.D. Penn. 1994) (holding invalid under Rule 45(a)(2) a subpoena issued by court outside of district where deposition is to be taken.

Second, even if Plaintiffs have attempted to comply with Rule 45(a)(2) by issuing trial subpoenas from this Court, they also must be withdrawn because the Federal Rules simply do not provide this Court with the power to compel attendance of witnesses that neither live nor work within the Western District of Kentucky or within 100 miles of Paducah. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b)(2), "a subpoena may be served at any place within the district of the court by which it is issued, or at any place without the district that is within 100 miles of the place of the hearing, trial, production or inspection specified in the subpoena . . . ."[1] Rule 45(b) clearly does not enable the issuance of subpoenas to persons not within Kentucky or within 100 miles of the place of trial. See, e.g., Johnson v. Land O' Lakes, Inc., 181 F.R.D. 388, 396-97 (N.D. Iowa 1998) (invalidating subpoena to defendants' officer who lived and worked outside 100-mile bulge); In re Air Crash Disaster at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, 130 F.R.D. 647, 650-51 (E.D. Mich. 1989) ("a nonparty witness outside the state in which the district court sits, and not within [the] 100-mile bulge, may not

[1] In addition, Rule 45(b)(2) allows service of a trial subpoena "at any place within the state where a state statute or rule of court permits service of a subpoena issued by a state court of general jurisdiction sitting at the place of the ... trial." Ky. R. Civ. P. 45.05(1) allows such service any place within the state of Kentucky.

be compelled to attend a hearing or trial"); Price Waterhouse v. First American Corp., 182 F.R.D. 56 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (quashing subpoenas to plaintiff's partners and employees who did not live or work in New York). Accordingly, any trial subpoena served on a USTC employee not within Kentucky, or within 100 miles of Paducah, must be withdrawn under Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(b).[2]

2. This Court Should Compel Plaintiffs to Withdraw the Subpoenas

Plaintiffs' subpoenas to USTC employees and officers clearly are invalid under the Federal Rules. In fact, Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii) expressly mandates that courts quash subpoenas that would compel a non-party witness to travel from outside the state of Kentucky and more than 100 miles to testify.[3] However, Plaintiffs should not be allowed -- with frivolous subpoenas served on the eve of trial -- to force Defendants to move to individually quash twenty-seven improperly subpoenas in myriad district courts across the nation.[4] Rather, this Court should, in the interests of [2] Plaintiffs' attempt to extend the subpoena power of the Court would render meaningless the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and rules of evidence expressly providing for the unavailability of witnesses that are more than 100 miles from the place of trial. See, e.g., Regents of University of California v. Kohne, 166 F.R.D. 463, 464 (S.D. Cal. 1996) (nonparty witness is "unavailable" for purposes of Federal Rule of Evidence 804(a)(5) and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 32(a)(3) if one neither resides, is employed or conducts business within 100 miles of place of trial).

[3] Although Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(c)(3)(A)(ii) expressly excepts "a party or an officer of a party," that rule does not, by negative implication, extend the subpoena power of the Court under Rule 45(b)(2). Accordingly, courts also have invalidated trial subpoenas to parties and officers of parties that are beyond the 100-mile provision of Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii). See Land O' Lakes, 181 F.R.D. at 397 ("There simply is no 'negative implication' . . . that Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii) subjects to subpoena officers of parties who are more than 100 miles from the place of trial whether or not they are within the range of the subpoena power defined in Rule 45(b)(2)"); Smith v. Chason, No. 96-10788-PBS, 1997 WL 298254, *9 & n.4 (D.Mass. Apr. 10, 1997) (no power to compel appearance of party who neither resides nor works within 100 miles from place of trial); Steel, Inc. v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry., 41 F.R.D. 337, 339 (D.Kan. 1967).

[4] In fact, "where a subpoena purports to require [attendance of] a non-party beyond the territorial limits of Rule 45, witnesses can disobey the subpoena 'without any preliminary motion for (continued...)

fairness and efficiency, compel Plaintiffs to withdraw all subpoenas improperly issued to USTC employees and officers from both this Court and other district courts throughout the nation.[5]

3. This Court Should Preclude Plaintiffs From Obtaining Trial Subpoenas For Additional Witnesses Beyond This Court's Subpoena Power

Plaintiffs' misdirected attempts to serve trial subpoenas upon USTC employees and officers has been extremely disruptive of USTC's business. Several of USTC's employees already have been contacted by process servers and have been forced to expend valuable time and resources to determine how to respond.[6] Further, of the additional eighteen USTC officers and employees whom Conwood apparently intends to serve, none lives or is employed within Kentucky or within 100 miles of the place of trial. Accordingly, to prevent Conwood from abusing the subpoena process and further harassing USTC's employees who are beyond this Court's subpoena power, this Court should enter an order precluding Conwood from improperly serving trial subpoenas and further a court ruling on the matter.'" McAuslin v. Grinnell Corp., No. 97-775 & 97-803, 1999 WL 24617 (E.D.La. Jan. 19, 1999); see Kupritz, 155 F.R.D. at 88. Defendants make this motion in an exercise of caution, and to avoid further disruptions to its employees and officers.

[5] Alternatively, Plaintiffs should be forced to pay the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of its improperly issued subpoenas, including attorneys fees. See Rule 45(c)(1) (court shall impose sanctions that may include reasonable attorneys fee and lost earnings); see also 1991 Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 45(c)(1) ("Paragraph (c)(1) give specific application to the principle stated in Rule 26(g) and specifies liability for [damages] by a non-party witness as a result of a misuse of the subpoena.").

[6] Conwood already has attempted to serve trial subpoenas upon at least nine USTC employees who neither live nor work in the Western District of Kentucky or within 100 miles of Paducah: Tom Berkebile (West Virginia resident), Don Blackburn (Arkansas resident), Byron "Todd" Parish (Oklahoma resident), Gary Smith, Gary Milano, Richard Fasanelli, David Untiedt, Robert Fitzmaurice (Connecticut residents) and Tim Entwistel (New Jersey resident). See, e.g., Declaration of Thomas Berkebile (a chain account manager from West Virginia); Copy of Subpoena served on Byron "Todd" Parrish (a sales representative from Oklahoma), Tab A.

harassing any USTC employees not within the subpoena power of this Court.[7] Because the Federal Rules afford Conwood absolutely no basis for compelling the attendance of these USTC employees at trial, all of the subpoenas thus far issued should be withdrawn. Apparently, Conwood's counsel is issuing subpoenas from United States District Courts in other states for all of these twenty-seven witnesses,[8] but even if issued from this Court, subpoenas to these witnesses should still be withdrawn because they are beyond the geographic subpoena power of this Court.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, USTC respectfully requests that this Court compel Plaintiffs to withdraw all outstanding trial subpoenas issued to USTC employees who neither reside nor work in Kentucky or within 100 miles of the Court, and preclude the issuance of any further trial subpoenas to USTC employees not within this Court's subpoena power.

[7] Conwood's abuse of this Court's subpoena power is an actionable tort and a potential violation of Model Rule of Professional Conduct 4.4. See 1991 Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 45(c).

[8] The one subpoena that was actually served on a USTC employee and is in the possession of USTC's counsel was issued out of the United States District Court in the Western District of Oklahoma, purporting to compel the employee's attendance at trial in the Western District of Kentucky. See Tab A. A process server appeared at USTC's Greenwich, Connecticut facility on February 8, 2000 with six subpoenas (not served there) which were reported to be from the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut. All these subpoenas are so drastically at odds with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that USTC seeks the Court's guidance on how to proceed.

ORDER

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") having moved the Court for an order directing Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood") to withdraw the trial subpoenas that were improperly issued to USTC employees and any other persons who are beyond the subpoena power of this Court and precluding Conwood from issuing further improper and harassing subpoenas, and the Court being fully and sufficiently advised:

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1. Conwood shall cease and desist from:

(a) serving trial subpoenas issued under authority of courts other than this Court, and

(b) serving trial subpoenas on witnesses who live and work beyond the geographical trial subpoena power of this Court, defined as the Commonwealth of Kentucky and 100 miles from Paducah; and

2. Conwood shall:

(a) formally withdraw all trial subpoenas it has caused to be issued from any court and served upon any witness beyond the geographic trial subpoena power of this Court; and

(b) provide the Court and USTC notice and proof of such withdrawal within 24 hours after issuance of this Order; and

3. To the extent that Conwood shall fail to comply with paragraph 2 of this Order, Conwood shall pay all reasonable legal fees and expenses incurred by USTC and any nonparty in seeking in other courts to quash, or obtain protective orders or other relief against, such subpoenas.

Declaration of Thomas Berkebile

1. My name is Thomas Berkebile. I am employed as a chain account manager for U.S. Tobacco in Weirton, West Virginia. I was deposed in the matter Conwood Company, L.P., et al v. U.S. Tobacco Co., et al.

2. Today February 7, 2000, I was working in my office in Weirton, West Virginia when, at approximately 2:30 p.m., I checked the messages on my home answering machine by calling the machine from my office. Sometime today, I received a message from Juliet Hoffman. Her message stated that she had something to deliver to me and asked that I call her. She left a number, 412.531.8966.

3. I called the number. I asked what she had to deliver and she said it was a subpoena and that it had something to do with the Conwood lawsuit, but that she did not know specifics. She asked for directions to my home so that she could go there to deliver it. I gave her directions, and told her that I would be home around 7:00 p.m. tonight.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 FEB 14 A10:00 Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R FILED JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE CERTAIN INTENDED TRIAL EXHIBITS AND TESTIMONY OR OTHER REFERENCE TO SUCH MATERIALS

Under the guise of asking for an inch, defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("UST") want to take a mile. They ask the Court to preclude five of plaintiffs' retail activity reports, yet their motion is devoid of any discussion of the specifics of each report. That is because what UST truly seeks is to preclude Conwood's experts from testifying about the basis for their opinions where those opinions rely on field reports of misconduct and/or Conwood representatives' sworn declarations. Defs.' Proposed Order at 2. The Court should not countenance UST's overreaching.

In fact, Conwood agrees with UST that Conwood's internal documents are inadmissible hearsay when offered by Conwood -- a point that applies with equal force to hundreds of UST's intended exhibits. (Point I, infra). However, it is well-settled that an expert may not only rely on documents containing inadmissible hearsay in forming his or her opinions, but that such documents may be put before the jury to explain the basis of the expert's opinion. (Point II, infra). UST cannot cite a single case suggesting otherwise. Indeed, UST's designated expert, David Scheffman, relied on thousands of such documents in developing his own opinions. In addition, Scheffman relied on documents for his regression model that he does not understand and cannot explain. UST's suggested double standard for Conwood's experts should be rejected. (Point III, infra).

I. The Five Exhibits Will Not Be Offered in Evidence

UST claims that Conwood intends to offer in evidence a supposedly large collection of "unethical activity reports" and sworn declarations, which constitute hearsay when offered by Conwood. Defs.' Mem. at 1. Conwood agrees. Conwood placed five such exhibits on its exhibit list because these five documents were the subject of extensive deposition testimony (of third-party witnesses) that the jury may not understand without having the documents before them -- with appropriate limiting instruction. Conwood will not offer these documents into evidence, just as UST cannot offer into evidence the hundreds of UST hearsay documents listed on defendants' trial exhibit list. See, e.g., DXs 147-66, 171-281, 303-86.

II. Experts Are Permitted to Rely on Inadmissible Hearsay

UST demands preclusion of any testimony by any witness, including Conwood's experts, regarding "unethical activity reports" or sworn declarations from over 200 Conwood sales representatives. UST cites no authority in support of this argument. In fact, it concedes (in a footnote) that such testimony is permissible. UST Mem. at 2 n.1.[1] Instead, UST

[1]UST's Motion makes no challenge to the documents under Rule 703. Apparently, UST chose to place that argument in its supplemental briefing concerning Conwood's damages model — thus allowing it to challenge the same documents over and over. In makes unfounded, speculative charges that Conwood will seek to "back-door" such documents — despite the fact that both Conwood's and UST's own experts are completely open about their reliance on such documents as part of the basis of their opinions. Id. at 2.

It is well-settled that (a) an expert may rely on documents containing hearsay — even inadmissible hearsay — in forming his opinions[2]; and (b) such documents are admissible to explain the basis of the expert's opinion. See, e.g., Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999) (abuse of discretion requiring reversal where district court precluded experts from testifying about the basis of their opinions, even though basis was inadmissible hearsay). UST's expert made extensive use of, and relies on, the very same kind of Conwood reports. See Expert Report of David T. Scheffman ¶¶ 99, 100 at 30 (Sept. 15, 1999) (referring to Scheffman's review of 1,171 Conwood unethical activity reports).

UST asserts that any reference to declarations or activity reports will be unfairly prejudicial because UST has not cross-examined the declarants or the experts. This is simply wrong. UST had full opportunity to cross-examine and confront both the declarants and the experts regarding the retail activity reports and declarations. Indeed, UST deposed virtually every Conwood sales manager. Tellingly, UST decided to refrain from any any event, Conwood will respond to that argument in its response to UST's supplemental brief.

[2] 4 Weinstein's Federal Evidence § 703.4, at 703-10 (Matthew Bender 2d ed. 1999) ("Under Rule 703, the facts or data on which the expert bases his or her testimony need not be admissible in evidence. Therefore, an expert opinion will not be excluded solely because the expert has relied on hearsay or other evidence generally inadmissible in court proceedings.").

16diii004161

questions regarding its exclusionary conduct, the declarations, or the retail activity reports, in its day-long depositions of over 50 Conwood witnesses.

III. UST's Expert Relies on Inadmissible Mystery Documents

While demanding that the Court enter an unprecedented order precluding any reference by Conwood's experts to clearly identified and detailed retail reports and declarations, UST fails to note that its own expert relies on documents that, quite literally, he knows nothing about.

For example, Scheffman rests one of his central analyses on a one-page document (from Conwood's production). He claims in his report that this represents Conwood's belief about states where the most "bad acts" occurred over some unspecified period. See, e.g., Scheffman Report, Attach. 76. But when asked about this document, Scheffman could not explain, e.g., who wrote it, what anything on the page meant, or whether the data had anything to do with Conwood:

> Q. Do you understand what the reference in the columns to numbers is? For example, what 35 -- negative 35.6 for New Mexico is in 1987?
> A. In New Mexico?
> Q. In the column of red states. Tell me what that means. [Obj. omitted]
> A. This is -- I don't -- my guess was, and I don't have a basis, my guess is this was probably a measure of -- attempt to estimate change in market share. Or maybe it was -- it's my -- you know, it's what I -- most likely it is. But I don't know for sure what it is . . .
>
>
> Q. How do you know it's a business document?
> A. I don't.
> Q. You don't know who prepared it, right?
> A. Correct.
>
> * * * *
>
> Q. You don't know what the numbers refer to, correct?
> A. Correct.
> * * * *

Q. And what is your basis for saying this is Conwood's belief?
A. I said, I don't know whether it's Conwood's belief.

Scheffman Dep. at 324-30.

For UST, an expert can rely on almost anything; for Conwood, however, the rules require the suppression of clearly identified and explained data from across the country, which Conwood's experts understood and relied upon. UST is, of course, free to challenge any expert's opinions at trial. Conwood is free to challenge UST's expert. That is the proper course here.

16diii004163

Conclusion

The Court should deny UST's motion. A proposed order is attached.

Respectfully submitted,

Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTIONS IN LIMINE

1. The Court should preclude reference to the alleged wealth of Conwood's owners. Conwood does not dispute the relevance of Conwood's financial performance; UST is free to argue -- whether wisely or not -- that Conwood (with about 13% of the market) is no "David" or "victimized competitor" up against the "Goliath" UST (with its 77% market share). See UST Mem. in Opp'n at 8. But it is not free to argue that Conwood's ultimate owners are rich from unrelated businesses (through what UST terms the "Pritzker conglomerate," id.).[1] Stated simply, the alleged wealth of Conwood's owners has no bearing on whether Conwood was damaged by UST's Section 2 violations, or the amount of damages that should be awarded to compensate Conwood.

[1]UST's factual characterization of Conwood's ownership is wrong on all counts, and they have no witness with personal knowledge to explain it. The accurate description of ownership would require far more time and explanation before the jury than this irrelevant matter could possibly justify.

The fact that representatives of Conwood's owners may have taken an interest in this litigation is likewise of no consequence to the jury. See id. at 8-9. The wealth and identity of Conwood's owners is no more relevant to this lawsuit than the identity and wealth of UST's owners. The parties in this case are corporations, and their shareholders have nothing to do with the issues to be decided by the jury.[2]

As for the prejudicial nature of the evidence UST seeks to introduce, UST's Memorandum speaks for itself: UST seeks to argue that "Conwood is owned by one of America's wealthiest families," and that the "Pritzker conglomerate" simply "milk[ed]" Conwood's profits. Id. at 8. Such characterizations point out precisely the prejudicial nature of the (irrelevant and unsupported) allegations UST seeks to make.

2. UST's expert Scheffman should be permitted to testify only upon condition that he disclose his entire compensation for work on this case. The Court has ruled on this issue by Order dated February 9, 2000 (Magistrate Judge Moyer).

3. The Court should preclude "tit for tat" evidence that companies other than UST engaged in misconduct at stores. UST admits that it seeks to defend its misconduct at trial by claiming "everyone does it." UST Mem. in Opp'n at 6. This is the same (misguided) argument it made on summary judgment. But as a monopolist, UST cannot engage in exclusionary conduct and

[2]There is, moreover, no evidence in the record (or otherwise) to support the bold claim that Conwood's owners decided to "milk" the company of cash needed to invest in the business. Id. at 8. On the contrary, the evidence is uniformly that Conwood's management made all decisions regarding expenditures, investment, and distributions.

cannot defend itself by claiming that Conwood "did it too." Indeed, courts have routinely rejected such a defense. See, e.g., Paschall v. Kansas City Star Co., 695 F.2d 322, 333 (8th Cir. 1982) (discussing caselaw concerning exclusion effected by publisher and cooperating carriers), rev'd on other grounds, 727 F.2d 692 (8th Cir. 1984); Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 274-75 (2d Cir. 1979).[3]

UST's efforts to tar even smaller moist snuff sellers (Swisher and Swedish Match), is just as farfetched and irrelevant. UST Mem. in Opp'n at 7. There is no record evidence, and UST can cite none even outside the record, that those companies could or did engage in a systematic campaign of exclusionary conduct that harmed competition. There is no evidence that these companies could or did seek "exclusive vending," in order to constrict space for moist snuff and eliminate rivals' point of sale advertising ("POS"). There is no evidence that either of these sellers could or did use "category management" to skew the stores' product mix to their advantage. Were this a case about isolated acts of vandalism, the conduct of their representatives might be examined.[4] Because the case is

[3]Moreover, Conwood did not "do it too." While UST trumpets the supposed admission that "[Conwood's] sales force tampers with authorized USTC racks," UST Mem. in Opp'n at 6 (emphasis in original), it does so by distorting the record. Conwood made no such statement. Conwood simply restored its racks when and where it was able legitimately to do so. Conwood's response to UST's exclusion in violation of the antitrust laws has no bearing on the issues the jury must decide. It is UST's exclusion the jury must consider, not Conwood's efforts to maintain its presence in the face of that exclusion.

[4]Conwood is aware of little, if any, evidence that representatives of Swedish Match or Swisher excluded Conwood racks, brands or POS from stores.

16diii004169

about something entirely different -- systematic exclusion practiced by a monopolist -- the introduction of evidence regarding field misconduct by the excluded UST rivals can only confuse the issues and waste the jury's time.

4. The Court should exclude "retailer permission" evidence. UST argued in its Motion for Summary Judgment that Conwood must "make a specific and competent showing that [its] racks were removed

. . . without authorization of retailers." UST Mem. in Supp. of Mot. for Summ. J. at 36. Conwood's Motion in Limine explained that, as a matter of law, retailer authorization is irrelevant to Conwood's claims under Section 2. All that matters is UST's exclusion, with or without retailer consent.

UST articulates two arguments in opposition to Conwood's motion. First, UST claims that "the terms of any agreements . . . are relevant to Conwood's Section 2 claim" in that "Conwood must . . . prove that the terms of any agreements are exclusionary." UST Mem. in Opp'n at 2. This virtually concedes Conwood's motion. UST here admits that the proper legal test is whether its conduct was exclusionary; whether UST succeeded in obtaining unlawful exclusion with or without the consensual involvement of a third party is wholly immaterial. UST should therefore have no objection to Conwood's motion on this score.

Second, UST argues that the concern of Section 2 is not solely to promote "lower prices" or "better products" for consumers, but "to satisfy" retailers. Id. This argument betrays a profound misunderstanding of antitrust law. The Supreme Court has declared with unmistakable clarity that "Congress designed the Sherman Act as a 'consumer welfare prescription.'" Reiter v. Sonotone Corp., 442 U.S. 330, 343 (1979) (citation omitted). "A restraint that has the effect of reducing the importance of consumer preference in setting price and output is not consistent with this fundamental goal of antitrust law." NCAA v. Board of Regents, 468 U.S. 85, 107 (1984). As the Sixth Circuit recognized, competition is about "reduc[ing] costs" and "expand[ing] sales." Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1422 (6th Cir. 1990) (internal quotation marks omitted). UST's remarkable defense -- that it may conspire with retailers to inflict deliberate harm on consumers, so long as the retailers welcome such an arrangement -- sets antitrust law on its head, and reinforces Conwood's point that evidence of retailer consent is irrelevant to the issue before the jury -- that is, whether UST's conduct was exclusionary.

Indeed, many retailers may welcome exclusionary arrangements, because they may keep retail prices high (and thus increase profits for the retailer) and may also provide an opportunity to share in monopoly rents. For example, in LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ. A. 97-3983, 1999-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 72,538, 1999 WL 346223, at *4-6 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999), retailers consented to 3M's exclusionary rebate program, because it provided them with a share of the manufacturer's monopoly profits. Because the arrangement did not benefit consumers, it was held to state a triable claim. Likewise, in R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999), there was no doubt that retailers would "choose to sign a Retail Leaders contract" because of the scope of "promotional payments." Id. at 507. The arrangement was enjoined, however, because it posed "a serious threat to interbrand competition" and would "have an adverse effect on consumer choice." Id. at 511 (emphasis added). Conwood will prove to the jury that UST's activities have had the same effect, and the question whether retailers like or dislike them is beside the point.

UST's Opposition places defendants' theory of the case in sharp relief: UST may deliberately harm consumers and competition so long as its retail distributors are kept happy, through maintenance of high retail prices or with a share of monopoly profits kicked back by UST. Precisely because this position is antithetical to the deepest values of the antitrust laws, and because the jury should not be misled as to the supposed curative power of retailer consent to UST exclusion, the Court should grant Conwood's motion and preclude evidence of retailer permission from the case.

5. The Court should exclude any evidence offered in support of UST's counterclaims. UST mischaracterizes Conwood's motion as entirely tied to the resolution of Conwood's motion for partial summary judgment. UST Mem. in Opp'n at 10. Not so. Here, Conwood seeks only to preclude certain evidence based on UST's disregard of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and direct Court orders concerning disclosure of its damages and witnesses. See Feb. 5, 1999 Order (Magistrate Judge Moyer); May 11, 1999 Order at 3 (Magistrate Judge Moyer).

Under settled law, failure to provide a Rule 26(a)(1)(C) computation of damages routinely results in the exclusion of related testimony. See, e.g., Indiana Ins. Co. v. Hussey Seating Co., 176 F.R.D. 291, 293 (S.D. Ind. 1997); Salgado v. General Motors Co., No. 93C1427, 1996 WL 284971, at *1 (N.D. Ill. May 24, 1996); Moore v. Kaye Ins. Assocs., No. 94CV6559, 1995 WL 600244, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 8, 1995). Likewise, under Rule 37(c)(1) "[a] party that without substantial justification fails to disclose [witnesses as] required by Rule 26(a) . . . shall not, unless such failure is harmless, be permitted to use as evidence at trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness . . . not so disclosed." And, it goes without saying that UST's disregard of direct court orders requiring production of damages calculations and witness lists provides yet another basis for excluding unproduced testimony or evidence. See, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2); Carlson v. Grobman, 133 F.R.D. 5, 7-8 (D.N.H. 1990) ("The Magistrate's Scheduling Order is not a frivolous piece of paper, idly entered, which can be cavalierly disregarded by counsel without peril.") (internal quotation marks omitted).

6. The Court should exclude hearsay deposition testimony and documents. Under Rule 32, UST should not be permitted to procure the absence of its senior employees in order to avoid cross examination and play their discovery depositions instead. Instead, UST should be permitted to introduce deposition testimony of its own senior employees only upon a proper showing that the witness is genuinely unable to board the UST jet for the trip from Greenwich to Paducah. As the Fifth Circuit has noted, "[a] deposition is an acceptable substitute for oral testimony when in-court observation of the witness is extremely difficult or virtually impossible." Jauch v. Corley, 830 F.2d 47, 50 (5th Cir. 1987). The trial court "may consider all the circumstances of why the party is away from the trial and determine in light of these factors whether to allow use of the deposition." 8A Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2147, at 181-82 (2d ed. 1994). There are no circumstances in this case indicating that defendants' senior employees are unable to testify live at the trial.[5]

Similarly, UST cannot identify any basis for the introduction into evidence of its own hearsay documents. See UST Mem. in Opp'n at 12 n.5. In fact, one of UST's motions in limine seeks the exclusion of five Conwood business records on hearsay grounds; there is certainly no basis for treating the hundreds of self-serving hearsay documents on UST's exhibit list any differently. See Def. Exhs. 147-166, 171-281, 303-386.

[5]The cases cited by UST are distinguishable. In Carey v. Bahama Cruise Lines, 864 F.2d 201, 204 (1st Cir. 1988), the court explained that the deposed defense employees were sailors at sea and their depositions had been noticed by defendants, a fact that should have signaled to plaintiffs that their depositions were likely to be used at trial. In Daigle v. Maine Medical Center, 14 F.3d 684, 691 (1st Cir. 1994), the witness expressly stated during his deposition that he was moving to another state and would be unavailable for trial.

US DISTRICT COURT
W.D. KENTUCKY

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO PRECLUDE INTENT EVIDENCE ("NOERR-PENNINGTON")

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("UST") argue that evidence of UST's efforts to secure legislation designed to destroy competition in the moist snuff industry is inadmissible at trial. UST contends first that these allegations are irrelevant to the claims made by plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"). Next, UST argues that the evidence of its anticompetitive litigation and lobbying efforts is unduly prejudicial.

Both points are incorrect. Evidence of this activity is admissible to prove that UST acted with anticompetitive intent. Here, the evidence of UST's lobbying and litigation effortswill provde that UST had the intent to suppress competition in the market for moist snuff. (Point I). Moreover, there is no risk that the evidence of UST's activity will be prejudicial. UST's effort to secure anticompetitive legislation through promotion of a "Global Settlement" that would have locked in its dominant market share ultimately failed. There is thus no risk that the jury will wrongly infer that any of Conwood's damages flowed from UST's lobbying or legislation. (Point II).

ARGUMENT

I. EVIDENCE OF UST'S EFFORTS TO SUPPRESS COMPETITION THROUGH LEGISLATION WILL HELP TO SHOW THE ANTICOMPETITIVE CHARACTER OF ITS MARKETPLACE ACTIVITY AND IS THEREFORE HIGHLY PROBATIVE

Under law as old as the Noerr and Pennington themselves, "petitioning activity" may be admitted in evidence to show anticompetitive intent:

> [U]nder the 'established judicial rule of evidence that testimony of prior or subsequent transactions, which for some reason are barred from forming the basis for a suit, may nevertheless be introduced if it tends reasonably to show the purpose and character of the particular transactions under scrutiny.'

United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 670 n.3 (1965) (emphasis added) (citations omitted). "While not illegal because of the [Noerr-Pennington] exemption," the Eighth Circuit has explained, petitioning activity "does have evidentiary value as to the purpose and concerted character of [defendants] contemporaneous non-exempt activities." Alexander v. National Farmers Org., 687 F.2d 1173, 1196 (8th Cir. 1982). See also, e.g., MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T, 708 F.2d 1081, 1160 (7th Cir. 1983) (petitioning activity shows "purpose and character of business decisions which had already been made"); United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, 439 F. Supp. 29, 47 (N.D. Ga. 1977) ("court may consider all of defendants' arguably exempt activities associated with the petitioning process which are relevant and admissible as purpose and character evidence to prove the anticompetitive intent of defendants' nonexempt conduct as well as the overall anticompetitive scheme").

In this case, Conwood will prove at trial that UST succeeded in preserving its monopoly share of the moist snuff market by choking competitive distribution and by restricting competitors' opportunities to promote their products at the point of sale; in addition, UST systematically raised rivals' costs. UST's efforts to promote the "Global Settlement" of litigation among cigarette manufacturers, state attorneys general, and plaintiffs' lawyers were designed to pursue these same anticompetitive ends through legislative means. For example:

- UST sought legislation restricting distribution of moist snuff products to a "non-self-service" environment — that is, behind the counter — in order to limit distribution space available to competitors;
- UST sought legislation restricting competitors' promotional opportunities by limiting the types and number of advertisements permitted, even as it sought to preserve greater opportunities for itself;
- UST sought to enact a settlement payment structure that would impose disproportionate costs on its competitors.

UST admits for purpose of this motion that these measures were sought with the intent of gaining an advantage in the moist snuff market. UST Mot. at 2 n.1. And the measures it sought to impose are directly parallel to its systematic exclusionary conduct in the marketplace. UST's contrary assertion that evidence of its lobbying and legislative campaign does not "in any way prove[] the 'purpose and character' of any alleged non-protected conduct" (Id. at 5) is flatly wrong.

16diii004179

UST's claim that City of Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., 734 F.2d 1157 (6th Cir. 1984) makes this evidence inadmissible (because irrelevant) is wholly misplaced. In that case, the Court ruled that evidence of anticompetitive litigation was inadmissible where a plaintiff sought to introduce "this episode as a part of the alleged broader pattern of conduct condemned by the Sherman Act." Id. at 1163. This simply follows the rule that anticompetitive litigation is generally not unlawful "'either standing alone or as a part of a broader scheme.'" Id. (quoting Pennington, 381 U.S. at 670). But the Court did not and could not rule that the evidence was irrelevant to the defendants' anticompetitive intent.

UST's relevance challenge to its effort to enact anticompetitive legislation at the same time that it systematically excluded rivals, is thus contrary to common sense and without support in law.

II. EVIDENCE OF UST'S EFFORTS TO SUPPRESS COMPETITION THROUGH LEGISLATION WILL NOT BE UNDULY PREJUDICIAL

UST argues that evidence of its efforts to cripple its competitors by promoting anticompetitive legislation would be unfairly prejudicial because it "would mislead the jury to believe that such conduct may be unlawful." UST Mot. at 6. But courts have routinely admitted such evidence in circumstances like these — including in at least one case prominently relied upon by UST.

See MCI Communications, 708 F.2d at 1160; National Farmers Org., 687 F.2d at 1196; Webb v. Utah Tour Brokers Ass'n, 568 F.2d 670, 672 (10th Cir. 1977) (evidence of petitioning conduct had "evidentiary value"); Household Goods Carriers' Bureau v. Terrell, 452 F.2d 152, 158 (5th Cir. 1971) (evidence concerning efforts to influence government agencies "properly admissible" as intent evidence). Here, there is no risk that a jury might improperly impose liability based on protected petitioning activity, for the simple reason that UST's lobbying efforts have not borne fruit.[1]

In some cases, introduction of anticompetitive petitioning activity may risk unfair prejudice because a jury might mistakenly impose liability based on activity that is immune from antitrust liability. In this case, however, there is no risk of unfair prejudice, since UST's efforts to secure passage of the "Global Settlement" legislation were unsuccessful. Conwood does not argue that it has been harmed by UST's petitioning activity and will present no evidence to that effect. There is thus no risk that the [1] This case is unlike United States Football League v. National Football League, 634 F. Supp. 1155 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) ("USFL"), where the court ruled that the lawsuit would likely "become dominated by a digressive element" if the plaintiff were permitted to introduce evidence of defendant's petitioning activity. Id. at 1181. There is no similar possibility here: the evidence of UST's "Global Settlement" activities will not consume disproportionate trial time. Moreover, in USFL — and in the only other case cited by UST in which evidence was excluded under Rule 403 — the plaintiff had sought to introduce the evidence of petitioning activity to support its claims of unlawful behavior, not merely to prove anticompetitive intent. See id at 1176-80; City of Cleveland, 734 F.2d at 1161-63. Here, UST concedes that Conwood has made clear that it does not seek to establish substantive liability based on protected conduct. See UST Mot. at 2 (recognizing that Conwood has stated that it does not "intend to base liability on conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington").

16diii004181

jury will erroneously conclude that UST's petitioning activity caused actionable harm. Where a plaintiff refers to a defendant's petitioning activity "only as evidence of the purpose and character of business decisions which had already been made and which were relevant to charges other than" the petitioning activity, such evidence should be admitted. MCI Communications, 708 F.2d at 1160 (cited in UST Mot. at 4, 6).

16diii004182

Conclusion

The Court should deny UST's Motion in Limine to Preclude All Evidence Concerning Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Immunity. A proposed order is attached.

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO PRECLUDE PROFESSOR GUNDLACH'S STUDY OF EXCLUSIONARY AGREEMENTS AND RELATED TESTIMONY

Defendants seek to preclude the study of exclusionary contracts prepared by Professor Gregory Gundlach of the University of Notre Dame and all related evidence. Gundlach determined that UST's various agreements excluding competitive racks and POS cover more than 28,000 retail outlets across the United States.[1] The motion is UST's the latest attempt to sweep this evidence under the rug. Throughout discovery, UST fought to hide those agreements -- claiming that it had no idea how many there were or even where they might be found.

[1]As of October 1, 1999, the study listed approximately 22,000 stores; Gundlach continued to review UST's voluminous document production, however, and has determined that UST's exclusionary reach exceeded his earlier estimates.

Gundlach has demonstrated the widespread exclusion UST achieved through those rack and POS restrictions.[2] UST's assertion that his analysis lacks foundation is specious. And UST's insistence that the agreements are not archetypal "exclusive dealings" contracts is irrelevant. The Gundlach study is powerful evidence that UST willfully sought to maintain its monopoly through the exclusion of rivals.

BACKGROUND

From the earliest stages of discovery, Conwood sought a listing of all UST's agreements with retailers relating to racks, slot allotment or point-of-sale material. Defendants resisted, first denying the existence of any such "agreements" and later claiming that there was no such list. (See, e.g., Transcript of Hearing of January 14, 1999 at 20-28 (Attachment "A"). Conwood pressed the point, and UST was ordered to disclose whether and how such agreements were kept in an effort to facilitate their discovery and compilation. See id. at 26:2-27:14.

Defendants responded with the affidavit of Gary Milano, Vice President of Sales, who swore that UST had no idea which agreements it had or even where the agreements could be located.[3]

[2]UST's own documents candidly acknowledge that: "Our objective with exclusive vending rights . . . is to control expanded competitive distribution and competitive POS." PX 4. Indeed, how well its sales representatives achieved exclusive vending often became an item of evaluation in their performance reviews. See, e.g., PX 186 (Attachment "D")("Continue to offer vendor exclusivity and category management where feasible").

[3]In relevant part, Mr. Milano's affidavit states, "[a]fter a diligent and thorough search of the files of all personnel who

16diii004187

Mr. Milano further averred that to compile a listing of existing agreements, "[d]efendants would have to research the documents already produced from the files" of any UST employee who may have had dealings with retailers. Milano Aff. of January 26, 1999, at ¶4. Under these circumstances, defendants argued, Conwood could create the list just as easily as UST.

So Conwood did. Conwood asked Gundlach to study UST's exclusionary agreements with retailers. After the agreements were extracted from among the hundreds of thousands of UST-produced documents, Gundlach compiled and analyzed them. He concluded that UST had exclusive vending and/or restrictive POS agreements with retailers covering approximately 22,000 stores (now up to approximately 28,000 stores). Professor Gundlach made that compilation available to UST, and was examined about it extensively during his deposition. Professor Gundlach has since continued his review to ensure its accuracy.

may have such a list, and after all reasonable inquiries were made concerning Plaintiffs' request, Defendants have determined that a list of retailers with whom USTC has or has had an 'agreement,' within the meaning of Plaintiffs' request, does not exist." Milano Aff. of January 26, 1999, at ¶3. See Attachment "B".

16diii004188

ARGUMENT

A. UST's Claim that the Study Lacks Foundation Flies in the Face of the Record

In the first instance, UST argues that Gundlach's compilation must be excluded for lack of foundation. This argument is baseless. UST miscites Gundlach's testimony about what he included on his list. UST claims he included agreements in the compilation if they contained "an indicia of some form, type of exclusion." UST Memo at 3 (citing Gundlach Dep. at 151-52). In fact, the cited testimony refers Gundlach's view of UST's Customer Alliance Program Agreements ("CAP") -- entirely different agreements, none of which is listed in his study.[4] Likewise, UST mischaracterizes Gundlach's testimony by claiming he "readily admitted" that an agreement was put in his listing "where a retailer chooses to use multiple display racks from the [4] Q: Is it fair to say that you did not do anything quantitatively to separate out the different exclusionary features you identify in your report? Mr. Guzman: Objection, ambiguous, you're still referring to exclusive in the CAP? Mr. Athanasia: Uh-huh. The Witness: Again I looked at the different documents that were available to me in the contracts as they represented the number of retail institutions where these features if one assumes that when one signs a contract the parties agree to the particular attributes of the arrangement, felt in rendering my opinion that was sufficient enough to be an indicia of some form, type of exclusion. (Emphasis added). Tr. at 151:22-152:10. Gundlach testified that UST's CAP contracts also contain numerous exclusionary features, as UST has also admitted. See, e.g., PX 113b (United Dairy Farmers reset "calls for exclusive UST vending and POS as part of the Customer Alliance Program"); PX 120 (CAP "has become a great incentive in securing space for our vendors and for the elimination of competitive products"). But Gundlach did not include UST's approximately 35,000 CAP agreements in his study.

different moist snuff companies, but chooses to place USTC's display rack in the number one position." UST Memo at 3. Professor Gundlach's cited answer says nothing of the sort.[5]

In truth, Gundlach carefully included only agreements for which there was clear evidence that UST had secured exclusive vending rights and/or significant POS restrictions. See Gundlach Depo. 154:18-155:8 (Oct. 15, 1999)("The common themes that come through in these arrangements and agreements generally are exclusive vending . . . and exclusive POS on that rack and typically also adherence to required plan-o-grams for use in those racks."). See Attachment "C". In many cases, the agreements secured both.

UST's attempt to suggest that it does not have exclusive vending agreements at Wal-mart or 7/11 stores, as examples, is disingenuous -- and belied by its own documents. UST picks at the supposed thinness of the proof upon which Professor Gundlach relied before concluding that UST has an exclusive vending agreement with significant POS restrictions at Wal-mart. Tellingly, however, UST never flatly denies that since mid-1997 it has provided the only vendors to Wal-marts nationwide. Nor [5]Instead, he simply states, "I would have to look at the, you know, the context of the specific circumstance and this gets to your point of identifying the particular features segregating them into components because in this particular case what we're looking at is often a combination of a variety of exclusionary features that in isolation may mean one thing but in aggregate may mean something entirely different." Jan. 14, 1999 Tr. at 156:23-157:6.

16diii004190

could it. The fact has been proved beyond dispute.[6]

B. Whether Each and Every Agreement Meets the Legal Requirements of an Exclusive Dealing Contract is Irrelevant

UST continues to insist that Conwood must show pure "exclusive dealing" under Clayton Section 3 in order to prevail on its monopolization claims under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. In an extension of this logic, UST argues that Professor Gundlach's study necessarily assumes a legal conclusion and therefore must be stricken under Fed. R. Evid. 702. According to UST, none of Conwood's experts can reference the term "exclusive agreements" without "improperly using terms that have a 'separate, distinct and specialized meaning in the law.'" Memo at 9.

The only term that has a separate and specialized meaning at law is the irrelevant concept of "exclusive dealing." See, e.g., Conwood's Opposition to UST's Motion for Summary Judgment at 48-53 (explaining why UST's "exclusive dealing" argument is a straw man). Gundlach will not improperly tell the jury how to decide the ultimate issues in the case by his description of the exclusionary effects of UST's agreements. Gundlach's expertise in marketing makes his opinion that UST's rack and POS agreements tend unnecessarily to exclude competition entirely appropriate.

[6]See, e.g., PX 47 at 041350(UST/Wal-mart reset program installation guidelines: after installing UST vendor, "remove all competitive vendors and place in the back room"); PX 232 (UST e-mail: with the Wal-mart reset, "[w]e have severely cut back on their ability to market products."). Attachment "D".

16diii004191

In any event, the most basic problem with UST's argument is that its own documents and employees make regular use of the term "exclusive." To take just one example, Rich Fasanelli, a UST vice president, reports to Gary Smith, UST's president, that after two meetings with Southland's new buyer, "we won exclusive vending . . . ." See USTC/CWD 025956 (attached as tab 7 to UST Memo.). UST cites no authority for the proposition that Conwood's experts cannot use the same words in the same sense.[7]

C. No Unfair Prejudice Will Result from an Exposition of the Facts Regarding UST's Agreements

Finally, UST argues that the study should be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 403 because its "unfair prejudice" exceeds its probative value. This argument is based yet again on a mistaken notion that only "exclusive dealing" contracts can serve as evidence of anticompetitive behavior. UST, however, identifies no unfair prejudice; the study is powerful only because it is probative. It further proves the extent of UST's efforts to exclude. See UST Memo. at 9-10.

[7] Torres v. County of Oakland, 758 F.2d 147 (6th Cir. 1985), on which UST principally relies, is inapposite. In Torres, the court found it inappropriate to ask a lay witness a question that tracked precisely the statutory standard for liability. Id. at 151. The narrow circumstances of that case do not provide authority to neuter mention of terms like "exclusive" and "exclusionary" -- particularly since UST employees and documents repeatedly use the same terms.

CONCLUSION

UST's Motion in Limine to Preclude Professor Gundlach's Study of Exclusive Agreements should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

Now, on the issues to be argued -- by the way, I don't know whether it was easy or hard to put the joint agenda together. It's a useful document for me. So I thank you for doing that.

Under issues to be argued, item number 1 is agreements. Mr. Gorsuch, you want to tell me what that encompasses? Then I'll hear from the UST side.

MR. GORSUCH: Very briefly, Your Honor, it pertains to Interrogatory Number 4 where we have asked UST to list their agreements that they have with retailers and distributors.

THE COURT: Okay. I've got it right in front of me.

MR. GORSUCH: Now, I'm happy to report that some progress has been made, and I'm very pleased about that. We understand what agreements we are talking about now.

MR. KEYTE: Well, I'll respond later.

MR. GORSUCH: I thought we did. Agreements affecting racks and --

MR. KEYTE: Right, in terms of scope.

MR. GORSUCH: In terms of scope. We know what an agreement is.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GORSUCH: So that we don't have to argue about it. We also have received a list of participants in one of defendant's programs called a Customer Alliance Program, CAP program. We have gotten a partial list.

There's also no dispute between the parties that additional agreements between UST and retailers and distributors exists. As to those additional agreements, here are the parties' positions. UST has said we reference 33(d), the option to produce business records, go look at our document production. That's their position with regard to all agreements.

Our position, Your Honor, very succinctly is that you can rely on 33(d) only if two conditions are met: One, you produce all the agreements; and two, you specify where they are in your production. As it is, UST has not so far done either one of those two things.

There are agreements that have not been produced in their production so far. I can hand up a dozen different kind of agreements, different species of agreements with retailers and distributors. I've appended them to my motion. I've appended them to my December 16th letter. They know what I'm talking about. There's not any question anymore about those agreements. They're unproduced agreements, and there's no specificity. You can't say go fish in a hundred box production. You have to specify by Bates number and location where they are.

In the 1980 amendments, Your Honor, I see you are going to the book --

THE COURT: Shocking.

MR. GORSUCH: 33(d) is at page 164.

THE COURT: You're right.

MR. GORSUCH: The 1980 amendments are at 167. Subdivision (c) talks about --

THE COURT: It says here the parties occasionally respond by directing the interrogating party to a mass of business records.

MR. GORSUCH: That's our problem. That's our problem. It specifically says such practices are an abuse of the option.

So if they're going to rely on this option, Your Honor, we think you should order them to do two simple things: One, provide all the contracts; two, specify by Bates number where they're located. I'm prepared to hand up a half dozen different cases which say if you are going to do 33(d), you got to produce all and you got to specify by Bates number where they're at. So that's the ruling we are after, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Keyte.

MR. KEYTE: Yes, a couple of things. First, what is an agreement of course will I think be saved for another day. Second, I think we obviously have a different view of both the facts here and as well as Rule 33.

We are not taking the -- first of all, we have produced what lists are available and what lists we could practically derive from information we have. We have made those inquiries, and there is no practical way to derive lists of anything other than from the CAP program. These agreements, and I will again use that word in quotes, are often on an ad hoc basis. There's not a set group of you sign up to this agreement and then we have a list.

So we are faced with the issue under Rule 33 of how then -- if they need a list and want a list, how is it put together. Under Mr. Gorsuch's suggestion now, he's essentially asking for an order that we review our entire document production to identify the Bates numbers of where agreements are found within the document production. That is no different than simply saying you put the list together -- even though you have no way of putting the list together, it's not a, quote, option, you have no way of putting it together other than this way we would put it together, and they no doubt will put it together anyway, we want you to do that for us.

The burden issue is the same under Rule 33 with respect to having to specify where they are as it would be to put the list together from the beginning. And so what we are really talking about is a very simple question of in a large document production, if the only way of putting a list together is to review the entire document production, which the plaintiffs are going to do anyway, should the defendant have to do that for them and provide them with a list. I think it fits squarely within the burden exception in Rule 33, and I think it's a very simple proposition that they are going to do it anyway, we are in no different position to do it, and that it's unduly burdensome to have us review our entire document production to make such a list.

THE COURT: Tell me what lists, if any, you have produced. I'm starting from ground zero on this.

MR. KEYTE: We have produced the CAP list, which is --

THE COURT: CAP stands for what?

MR. KEYTE: The Customer Alliance Program. We have produced that list. That is the only list that exists or can be derived to produce them with respect to, quote, agreements.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. KEYTE: I should also note, Your Honor, we are producing the documents as they are kept. With respect to the point of all documents, we of course are in the process of producing documents from the division and department levels, but they are being produced as they are kept. There is no practical way to derive another list for them.

THE COURT: Let me ask this. Let's assume that there's some agreements sprinkled in various places. You say that the only way to tell for sure exactly where they are is to look at every document. Is there some intermediate way of searching for them that is neither a specific list nor a document-by-document search, such as we know that these documents are generally filed in the following areas and that they would be in the regional marketing files or they would be in the sales managers' quarterly report files, so that even if there's not a list and even if you couldn't say with ultimate specificity exactly where they are, you could point them to areas that would allow them to search intelligently, just as your business people would know generally where to go, even if they didn't know exactly where it was? Am I being clear?

MR. KEYTE: I understand. Our inquiries are that there is no -- whether you call it a central depository of agreements, whether within a region, our understanding is that that is not the case. If it is the case, of course they do already have those produced and kept that way, which would be -- one thing we have to step back and say here is -- there's no magic to, quote, having a list if one doesn't exist. They're looking for the agreements, which we are producing. We don't believe as a practical matter there is any intermediate step here and they believe we should have to go piece-by-piece through our production and create a list for them, and I think that's not --

THE COURT: In the spirit of moving along, I'm going to give you a ruling. My ruling is that an appropriately knowledgeable higher level sales or marketing executive of UST provide a detailed narrative description in affidavit form to counsel for Conwood within the next week that would provide a description to the best of that person's ability of where in the overall document production agreements, in quotes, as the parties understand it, would be found and that would be as helpful as one could reasonably expect to the other side.

I see Chris shaking his head. My point is that you probably have somebody who can provide some assistance as to where to look rather than saying look at every piece of paper.

MR. ATHANASIA: We should be clear about what kind of things we are talking about here. We are talking about authorization letters and ad hoc is the -- they're all over. They're scattered. There's no systematic --

THE COURT: If some of them are scattered and some of them are somewhat more systematic, describe it that way. I just want -- I want you to in a narrative way give them the best reasonable road map that somebody can, and if the answer is that it is utterly random and no one knows where they are, if that's factually true, you can say that. I have a hunch that business people have some practical sense of I know where to go to look for that, and just as they might tell you where to go to look for that, I want someone in a forthright way to tell them where they can go to look for it, even if it's not either a list or a specific Bates number.

MR. KEYTE: For example, Your Honor, if at the regional office a certain custodian -- if this is the case -- collects or if they go to them, we will --

THE COURT: That might be the way to do it. My point is you people know where to go to look for information. What I'm ordering is that you all provide an appropriate narrative that will be helpful to them in knowing where to look. I think it's a practical recordkeeping problem. Let's try that.

MR. KEYTE: We will do that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: If that proves to be either impossible for your people or useless to Neil, then we can talk some more about what to do.

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, by way of clarification, that solves half my problem. My two problems with relying on 33(d), one is I didn't know where to look, and this helps on that. The other part of the problem, though, is if you are going to rely on 33(d), you have to make all the documents available. That's still unresolved here. There are agreements that have not been produced.

From my point of view, they can either give me a list, or if they're going to rely on 33(d), if they're going to use their business records, they got to make sure they give me them all. I would just ask as an addendum to that order that you order production of all agreements, all of them, just very simply that.

THE COURT: I'm going to hold off on doing that. I want the narrative description to describe where they all are. Let's see what that narrative -- I'm giving them a week to do this. That's not a huge amount of time. If that narrative description comes back and says that -- I don't know what it's going to say about where all of them are. Let's see what it says about where all of them are. If it says that we don't know where all of them are or they are in just a huge number of places that are impossible to find, then let's take that up. I don't want to order them in a vacuum to produce them all when I don't know what they're going to say about how difficult that is. I'm going to bird dog this. I'm going to stay on top of it. If there are problems, I'll take them up.

MR. KEYTE: If I could note, Mr. Gorsuch's kind of last request seemed to be an attempt to sidestep the dispute we are having now with respect to the sales rep search. As you know, we provided --

THE COURT: I'm not sure it was a sidestepping,

AFFIDAVIT OF GARY MILANO

I, Gary Milano, upon being duly sworn, do depose and state as follows:

1. I am currently the Vice President of Sales for United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc. ("USTC"). The statements made herein are based upon my own personal knowledge of the structure and organization of the sales organization, as well as the practices, policies, and procedures that apply to all sales personnel in the ordinary conduct of their duties and responsibilities.

2. As I understand, Plaintiffs have requested a list of retailers with whom USTC allegedly has or has had an "agreement" that affects moist snuff racks, slot allotment, or point of sale advertising. It also is my understanding that Plaintiffs intend to include within the meaning of this request all store authorization letters, plan-o-grams, and other routine documents permitting placement of moist snuff products, racks, and/or point of sale advertising.

3. After a diligent and thorough search of the files of all personnel who may have such a list, and after all reasonable inquiries were made concerning Plaintiffs' request, Defendants have determined that a list of retailers with whom USTC has or has had an "agreement," within the meaning of Plaintiffs' request, does not exist.

4. In order to create such a list, Defendants would have to research the documents already produced from the files of each person who may have communications or dealings with each direct or indirect retail customer, or of all those persons who may have received copies of documents containing information within the meaning of Plaintiffs' request. Such documents, however, are not systematically collected in any one central location; rather, they may be kept by different personnel according to the type of retailer, the location of the retailer, and other factors differentiating one retail account from another.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and recollection.

earlier you made a distinction and corrected me because you said you used the term exclusionary while I was using the term exclusive. Do you see the term exclusive agreements in the sentence I just read?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you want to change that to exclusionary?

A. No. As I mentioned earlier in the beginning of our day today that the term is used somewhat interchangeably. The distinction might be viewed something along these lines. Exclusive would refer to the mechanism through which the outcome is derived with that outcome being exclusionary. So in a sense they're hand in glove type of terminology with some loose use of both in particular areas. So here I'm referring to the particular agreements and the fact that they contain exclusive features.

Q. And what exclusive features do these exclusive agreements include? I'd just like a complete list of what you're talking about, exclusive features.

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: Common theme -- and again what we're talking to here now apart from the CAP are a variety of different types of agreements that are obtained by UST and arrangements with retailers. The common themes that come through in these arrangements and agreements generally are exclusive vending referring to the rack or vending modular and exclusive POS on that rack and typically also adherence to required plan-o-grams for use in those racks.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Now out of the 22,000 retail locations, just let me clarify that would include if there were say 2,000 locations in a retail chain would that be -- count as one or as 2,000 in this 22,000 number?

A. That would count as a retail location meaning one.

Q. So a whole chain of 2,000 stores would count as one out of this 22,000?

A. No. Clarification.

Q. Each store would be one location?

A. Each store would count as one of that 22,000, each retail location.

Q. Out of the 22,000 retail locations, how many have exclusive vending from your study?

A. Again my point of reference was not necessarily to characterize the different types of

UNITED STATES TOBACCO
SALES and MARKETING COMPANY INC.
100 WEST PUTNAM AVENUE, GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT 06830

DATE: May 8, 1997

TO: All Field Sales Personnel

FROM: Gary Smith, Senior Vice President

SUBJECT: Walmart

As you are aware, United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc. (USTSM) has formed an agreement with Wal-Mart to reset their stores in conjunction with Philip Morris and Swisher during the months of June, July and August.

Wal-Mart has agreed to allow USTSM personnel to place either a custom Wal-Mart vending unit or a #3101 vendor with the in-line roll facings. The vendor selection was based upon the size and sales velocity of each OTP section.

Set-Up\Placement:

1. Cabinets have been shipped in advance and will be in the back room.
2. Each unit should be inspected for damages.
3. Our new vendors will always be placed directly next to the left or right of the Philip Morris Cigarette units (see attached photos).
4. Once placement has been determined, shelving must be affixed and should be no higher than 35" from the floor, due to adequate leverage for loading capability.
5. Instruction sheets are included with each unit.
6. Complete the job sheet checklist provided with this Plan of Work.

Any questions or problems should be communicated as follows:

1. General program questions: Contact your immediate supervisor.
2. Installation issues: Contact Tim Entwistle at National Accounts at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3426).
3. Replacement parts: call Sales Administration (i.e. header card damaged, etc.).

WHEN? INSTALLATION DATES

Your department manager and supervisor have been forwarded the installation and reset schedules for all Wal-Mart store locations. The start date for resets is June 9th and continues through the middle of August. Your supervisor will be contacting you to communicate this information and help you to organize and meet the schedules guidelines. All of your support and enthusiasm in helping to make this reset come to life is greatly appreciated. Please direct all install date issues to your supervisor.

WHO? RESET TEAMS

- U.S. Tobacco - Co-captain of OTP reset. Arrival time requested is 8:00 a.m. Responsibility includes completion of the moist smokeless category reset by removing and replacing both product and vendors according to the authorized Wal-Mart Corporation planogram. Again, our job is exclusively to complete the moist section only!

- Philip Morris - Third party installers will be arriving at each store location between 6:00 a.m and 7:00 a.m. They will be installing new cigarette racks for the entire cigarette category.

- Swisher/Helme - Co-captains of OTP reset. They are instructed to work jointly with U.S. Tobacco in resetting the OTP section. Their specific responsibilities include cigars, loose-leaf, pipe tobacco, lighter fluid, and other miscellaneous items included in the set. They will be arriving at 8:00 a.m.

WHAT? INSTALLATION INSTRUCTIONS

- All vending cabinets for moist smokeless products will be shipped in advance, directly to the store approximately 5 business days prior to the actual reset date. It is suggested that you call a few days in advance or stop by to verify delivery.

- Any Wal-Mart store showing a 4 foot OTP section or one that does not meet volume requirements for the large cabinets, will have installed a custom #3101 vendor, including roll vendors and 2 for 1 systems. All components will come shipped in one master carton and will have the header card included.

- The volume stores requiring larger OTP sets will be using the new custom cabinets. Again, cabinets will only be shipped to stores that show sufficient volume.

HOW? STORE PROCEDURES

- Upon arrival at each store, locate the other reset teams and introduce yourself. Locate the cartons in the back room and bring the boxes out front to where the reset is in progress. You will need to find a cart to help with the move. Open the fold-away cartons and inspect each unit for quality. (See photos attached).

- Philip Morris installers should be well into their reset, and you will need to verify with one of the installers where the cigarette racks will end, as this will be the point where our rack placement will begin. The cabinets will always be placed on either the right or left side of the finished cigarette racks, for maximum exposure. (See photos attached).

- Once the location point is confirmed, find a straight shelf and place into position. The placement should be no higher than 35" from the floor to the base of the cabinets (for adequate height when stocking product). (See enclosed pictures for better visual). Two additional shelves will need to be placed below the cabinet shelf for loose leaf products.

- Set and lock shelf into position and begin to place cabinets accordingly. Please read the installation directions thoroughly prior to implementation. A trouble shooting guide is in the back of this booklet for easy reference questions.

- The customized header cards come already equipped on the units. Next, find the designated planogram selection for your region and OTP size and begin to label accordingly.

- Always keep in mind while the reset is in progress, that the customer still needs to shop the tobacco category. Your help in keeping an orderly surroundings will eliminate unnecessary friction from both customers and store personnel.

- Find the Wal-Mart Telzon Gun with label printer, and print out both single can and roll pricing labels for all brands (competitive included).

- Bag any additional products that are not included in the planogram, and remove to the back room. Also, remove all competitive vendors and place in the back room at direction of Wal-Mart department head.

- An Installation Job Checklist is included for each of you to fill out for each reset. This was created to help you organize your responsibilities and for us to track and ensure program uniformity. Please make sure all steps have been accomplished before leaving the store. A comment section is included and highly advised to be filled in. Distribute form copies according to the distribution at the bottom of the form. Checklists should be distributed as each reset is complete - do not hold them until all are completed.

EDUCATION

- An important step in the process is to demonstrate the use of, and educate the appropriate Wal-Mart personnel regarding the operation of the cabinets. Please find the tobacco manager, store manager and other key personnel who work the department and fully explain all operational functions. This includes door latch locations (see example 4 in setup procedures), inventory rotations, planogram assignments, etc. Please discuss and define with the tobacco manager specific inventory levels and how much inventory to initially set in new vending system. Post/tape planogram copy on inside door to help with compliance.

AUTHORIZATION LETTERS

- Included in this booklet, are two Wal-Mart authorization letters. One specifies that the new customized vending units are the only authorized units allowed to market Wal-Mart's moist smokeless products. The second letter qualifies that only U.S. Tobacco is allowed to place point-of-sale material on this merchandising system. The only authorized items, at this time, is the Wal-Mart header card and the Cope/Skoal embossed face plate included with cabinets. Please keep these copies as documentation should non-compliance situations occur.

PLANOGRAMS

- There are 8-regional planograms inside this booklet, each with its own OTP size planogram. Please use the colored map enclosed, to locate your stores specific region, and then pick from the assigned OTP size for specific planogram. Remember, this is the only authorized planogram from Wal-Mart Corporate, and U.S. Tobacco products have high visibility (65% share on single can and 80% share of roll facings). Please do not allow for any non-compliance to occur. Refer always to your booklets documentation letters and plans for reference should any deviations from the controlled plan occur. Should situations arise, please address the store management with this documentation prior to phoning National Accounts.

TROUBLE SHOOTING GUIDE

Question
What if you are unable to make the scheduled set for what ever reason?
Answer...
Someone must be there...Call your Division Manager as soon as possible to work out a replacement to take your place.

Question
What if upon arrival the cabinets are not in the store?
Answer...
Call UST Logistics Department at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 5278) for tracking.

Question
What if upon arrival you find a cabinet broken and not useable?
Answer...
Call Sales Administration at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3426).

Question
What if upon arrival you find a cabinet broken, but still useable?
Answer...
Install, make notation on Installation Job Check List, call Sales Administration at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3426) to order a replacement part to be installed during your next routine visit.

Question
What if store management refused to allow you to place the cabinets?
Answer...
Keep Cool and Calm...Call National Accounts at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3462).

Question
What if there are disagreements with the set up parties in reference to the location or space for the cabinets?
Answer...
Call National Accounts Greenwich...for consultation.

Question

What if there is no peg board to back up section?

Answer...

Contact the store manager for assistance. If there is none in the store, call 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3462).

Question

What if you have difficulties with the Cabinet Installation or are Missing Hardware or anything that prevents you from completing the installation?

Answer...

Be sure that you have read the instructions packed with each cabinet thoroughly. If you still have problems, call National Accounts at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3462).

Question

What if you would like to make minor adjustments to the USTSM brand placements in the plan-o-gram?

Answer...

You can make minor adjustments to the amount of facings for each brand, as long as you work with the authorized brands listed and keep within the authorized number of plan-o-gram USTSM facings.

Question

What if the Wal-Mart Department Manager is not in agreement with the Wal-Mart corporate plan-o-gram and the changes that they request are not in the best interest of USTSM?

Answer...

Tell them that you were instructed to set the section by the approved Wal-Mart Corporate Plan-O-Gram. If they still want to make the changes, tell them that you will check into it for further clarification and instructions. Call National Accounts at 1-800-243-8536 (ext. 3462) for assistance.

Question

What if the new shelf tags have not been made and 960 Unit (Telzon unit) with label printer is not available for tagging the smokeless?

Answer...

You should not leave without all moist smokeless tagged properly. Ask the store's management to assist you in tagging the section.

DATE: April 4th, 1997
TO: Department 01/Department 82 Tobacco Manager, Assistant Manager, and Store Manager
FROM: Debbie L. Huskey, Cigarette and Tobacco Buyer
SUBJECT: New Moist Smokeless Tobacco Racks

As you are aware, during the months of June, July, and August of this year, each store will be receiving a new tobacco modular.

Within this modular, U. S. Tobacco will be providing the new fixtures that will house all cans and rolls of moist smokeless tobacco (i.e. Skoal and Copenhagen). These fixtures have been especially designed for Wal*Mart in order to maximize sales, profits, and to greatly reduce out of stocks. Based on the modular size that your store will be traited, you will be approved for one of the following types of fixtures:

a) 4 ft. modular: U. S. Tobacco plastic vendor rack
b) 8 ft. modular: U. S. Tobacco 2- door cabinet rack
c) 12 ft. or 20 ft. modular: U. S. Tobacco 3-door cabinet rack

THESE 3 TYPES OF RACK FIXTURES, WILL BE THE ONLY APPROVED RACKS BY THE WAL*MART HOME OFFICE FOR MOIST SMOKELESS TOBACCO.

All other current plastic vending racks, that have been provided in the past by Conwood, Pinkerton, Smokey Mountain Chew, or Swisher International, will need to be picked up from your store by these other vendor partners after the completion of your new modular.

As a continuing effort, after your modular has been completed, please do not allow any additional plastic vendor racks to be placed or added to your new existing moist smokeless tobacco section.

Thank you in advance, for your cooperation, support, and joint effort in reorganising your tobacco department.

Thank you,

Debbie L. Huskey

Dear Rich,

I would like to take this opportunity to respond back to the letter that was sent to Beth Schommer on October 1st, 1996 regarding the "New Moist Smokeless Tobacco Merchandising System". I have discussed all the different points that were covered in the letter with Beth. Our McLane Category Merchandising Group will continue to work together with U. S. Tobacco in a joint venture for the further development of the best possible merchandising selection for the Wal*Mart planograms.

Together we recognize the following points:

1. U. S. Tobacco owns the moist merchandising racks.

2. U. S. Tobacco agrees to replace any shop-worn or damaged fixtures on a timely basis.

3. Wal*Mart will feature their store name on the large message area on this display, and U. S Tobacco will be allowed to feature their brand names in a repeating manner in the background area of the pricing billboard.

4. Only Wal*Mart and U. S. Tobacco will be allowed to place point-of-sale material or any other type of communication on this merchandising system. All point-of-sale material must be approved by Wal*Mart.

5. The placement of these merchandising systems will begin February 17, 1997, and will include all the Wal*Mart stores with 8 foot, 12 foot, 16 foot, and 20 foot sections.

The conditions stated above will allow us jointly to enhance the growth of moist smokeless tobacco sales, and bring a greater level of satisfaction to the Wal*Mart customer.

Thank you,

Debbie L. Huskey

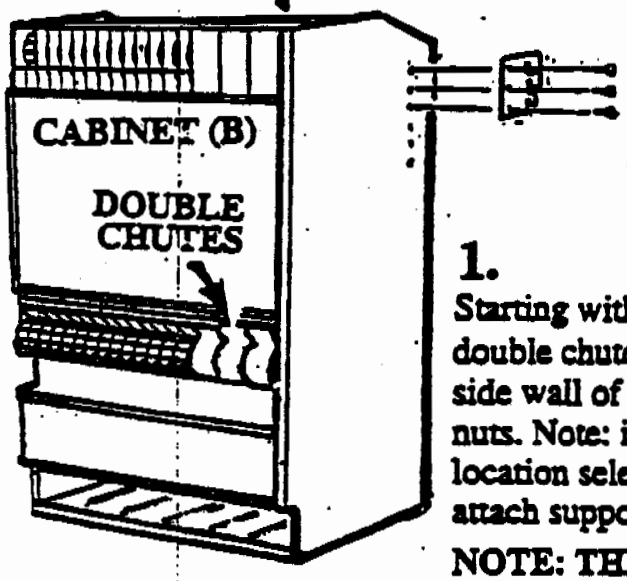
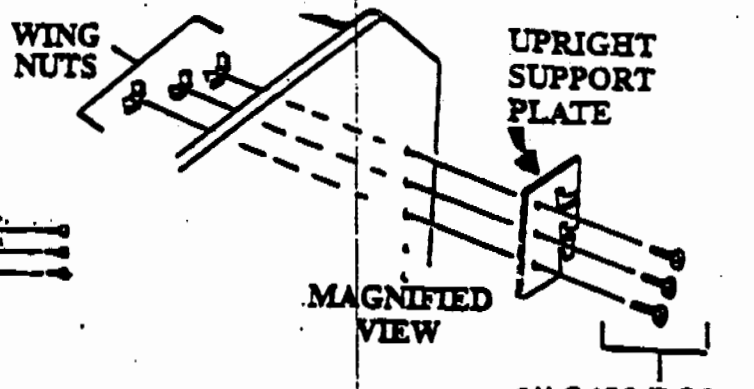
HOW TO SET UP THE U. S. T. WAL-MART FIXTURE PROGRAM

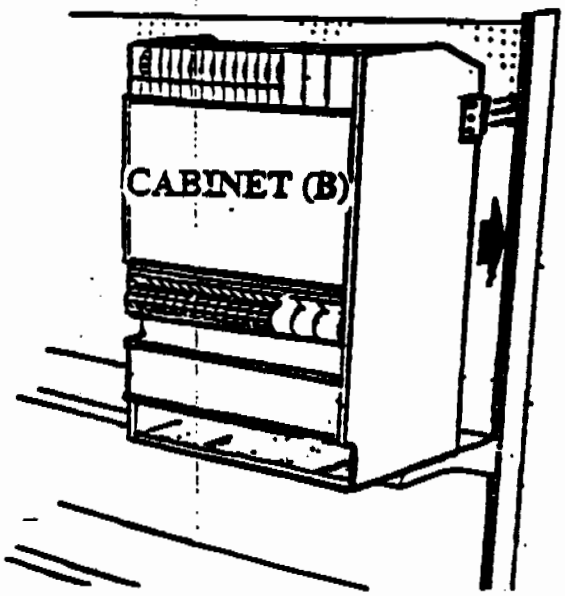




1.

Starting with the right hand cabinet (B) (cabinet with three double chutes) attach gondola upright support plate to side wall of cabinet using three 1" 8/32 bolts and wing nuts. Note: if a neighboring shelf interferes with plate location select the most convient other hole location to attach support plate.

NOTE: THE SUPPORT PLATE IS ALWAYS PLACED ON THE HINGED SIDE OF CABINET !



MAGNIFIED VIEW

2.

Lift cabinet and place on gondola shelf inserting tabs of support plate into slots of gondola upright. BE SURE ALL TABS OF SUPPORT PLATE ARE ALL THE WAY IN AND SEATED IN SLOTS OF GONDOLA UPRIGHT. See magnified view.

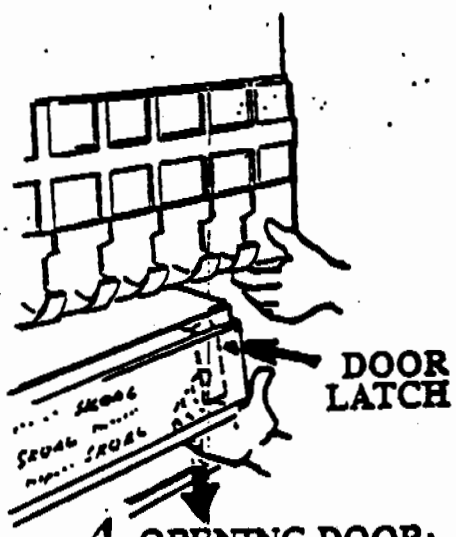
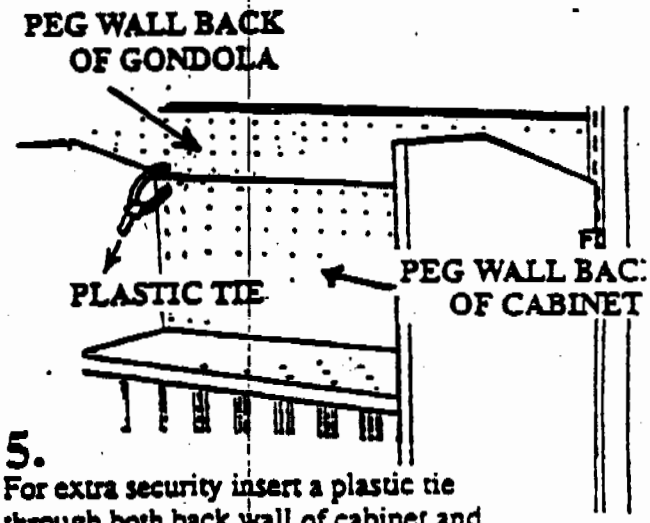
Next attach another upright support plate to the hinge side of the left hand cabinet A. see Illustration #1. Using wood screws attach two spacers on the outside right wall of this cabinet in the locations shown. Make sure center hole of spacer lines up with hole of side wall see Illustration #2
NOTE: IF SPACERS ARE NOT USED DOOR OF CABINET WILL NOT CLOSE PROPERLY.
Lift and place this cabinet on shelf next to cabinet already in place. Insert tabs of support plate into slots of gondola upright as shown in step #1. Be sure all tabs of support plate are all the way in and seated in slots of gondola upright.



4. OPENING DOOR;
Reach under product feed tray and gently pull down hidden door latch while at the same time pull door outward.



5.
For extra security insert a plastic tie through both back wall of cabinet and peg wall of gondola, bring tie back through both surfaces and pull to secure.
Note: The door section was left out of drawing so a clearer view can be shown.

6. With cabinets A and B next to each other (against the spacers adjust the front facade plate of each cabinet so they are lined up. Insert a 2" 1/4-20 bolt through top hole of both cabinet side walls, secure with washer and wing nut. Repeat with bottom side wall holes by reaching under facade panel. This is the easiest way to make this bottom connection see drawing (A).

THREE CABINET WIDE CONFIGURATION

to align the third cabinet (cabinet C) to the left of cabinet (A).

NOTE 1: Cabinets will not share the same mounting holes in the gondola, please make the proper adjustments (see step #1) so that the two brackets are aligned one on top of the other see illustration.

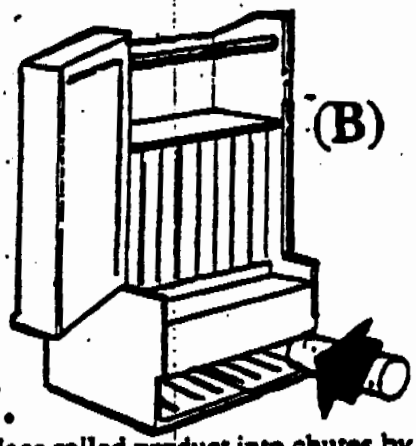
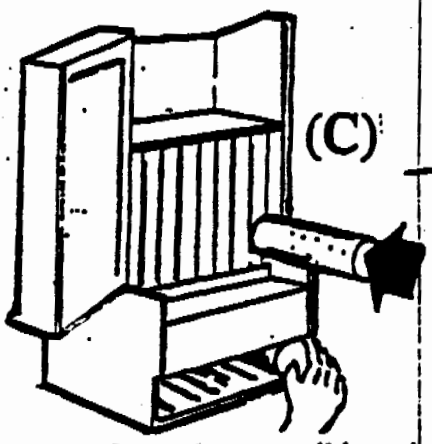
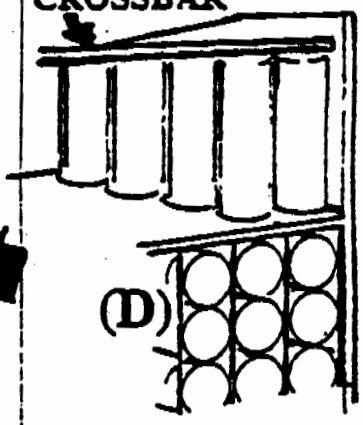
ROLL PRODUCT LOADING:







7.

Place rolled product into chutes by inserting the first or bottom roll into chute from the front see (B). While holding the first roll in place insert the second roll into chute from top see (C). Make sure the second roll falls flat on top of the roll already in place. HOLD THE FIRST ROLL ALREADY IN PLACE WHEN INSERTING THE SECOND ROLL FROM TOP. (IF NOT HELD, THE FIRST ROLL MAY BE PUSHED OUT OF CHUTE. Load all remaining rolls into chutes from top, top shelf is for additional stock. Product should be placed upright on ends, do not store above the cross bar of cabinet see (D). Product will not dispence properly if door is not closed. Periodically check rolled product inside chutes for any misfeeding.

SINGLE CAN PRODUCT LOADING

Single Can product = Once door is closed insert cans of product into top openings. Place product I. D. labels below openings.
Place UPC price labels on front side of cabinets in the locations shown.

II. CONDITION OF MARKETPLACE, EVALUATION OF PROGRAMS

Division Manager Jim Pearson and I had a very good meeting with Ray Kostrycki, Director of Marketing with Cogo's this week. Cogo's was up 2.3% in 1997 with over 400,000 units sold. These stores are high volume outlets, averaging 133 cans / wk / store. During our meeting Ray agreed to continue the Frequent Buyer Program through 1998, including the quarterly consumer incentive drawing that was previously set up. An issue was raised about the inconsistency of program support materials in some stores. Part of the problem has been lack of store level coverage due to vacancies. This problems is being addressed with Jim's new hires and we agreed to report back to Ray on locations that are not properly supporting the program. We addressed the "over merchandising" of smokeless tobacco products. Cogo's has 30 moist items with the top 15 accounting for over 95% cumulative share. Ray made it clear that he wants all customer's to have their brand of choice despite the additional carrying costs of slow moving products. We recommended exclusive UST vending, along with eliminating products with 0.7 share or lower. This will be incorporated into our CAP contract that will be revisited at our next meeting on March 16. Ray did accepted the second quarter promotion for all his stores.

Pat, Susan and I had an excellent meeting with Tobacco Discount - Supervisor Randy Milam and G.M. Wholesale Jim Bretz. Tobacco Discount has been in business for only 2 years and have grown to 11 stores, with at least 3 more scheduled to open this year. During our meeting we received approval to ship the second quarter promotion and place our roll knockdown displays. Also, we agreed to test the cabinet rack two stores stores and received neon sign placement approval (if these pieces are available). A request was made for direct status. They now receive direct shipment from Lane Ltd., some smaller cigar companies and have applications pending for Swisher, Middleton and General. They will pursue cigarette direct status at a later date. Pat discussed with you the pro's and con's of placing this account on direct. We agreed the benefits of a lower price and fresher dates, along with their willingness to work with us will benefit both our companies. Pat will inspect the ship-to facility and review invoices before submitting the application. The potential of this account is tremendous and we have laid the groundwork for an excellent working relationship.

II. FOLLOW UP PLANS

Jay Scherer, Category Manager at United Dairy Farmers finally signed off on a chain wide reset. This reset calls for exclusive UST vending and POS as part of the Customer Alliance Program. Discontinued products include S/B Straight, Kodiak Choice and Hawken. Kodiak and Kodiak Straight are the only competitive products now authorized. Also, UST reps. have the flexibility to eliminate our slower movers at store level at the time of the reset. We have secured premium back bar locations in the majority of their stores. This reset may take time away from the normal routing of our reps. with no area PTSTs, but the benefits at store level are worth the effort.

IV. COMPETITIVE ACTIVITY

Nothing to report.

V. OPPORTUNITIES AND RECOMMENDATIONS

It would be very helpful to have a MF sheet for the cabinet rack.

White House cautions against cigarette-ad ban

By The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The White House is raising a red flag to deter Congress from imposing sweeping restrictions on cigarette advertising, arguing in a memorandum scheduled for release today that broad legislative curbs would "raise significant constitutional problems."

The memo, a copy of which was obtained Sunday by the Los Angeles Times, casts doubt on the legality of legislating new curbs on industry advertising practices in the absence of a comprehensive settlement acceptable to both sides. It implicitly tells lawmakers that a broad ban on advertising is possible only if tobacco companies voluntarily agree to it.

Therein lies a legislative dilemma. The industry has made clear that the price of a voluntary agreement to curtail advertising is legislation shielding tobacco companies from future class-action lawsuits brought by people who claim their health has been harmed by the companies' products.

If Congress rejects that quid pro quo and maintains the right to allow such legal actions, lawmakers may have to settle for passage of more modest advertising restrictions that would not infringe on the industry's free speech rights.

The White House memo provides detailed answers to questions on tobacco advertising and marketing submitted by Arizona Republican Sen. John McCain, chairman of a committee with jurisdiction over tobacco legislation.

On another key issue, the Clinton administration said it would oppose any effort by Congress to exempt the industry from antitrust laws so tobacco companies could consult with each other about cigarette prices.

"An antitrust exemption that allowed tobacco firms to set prices jointly could be used by firms to increase prices beyond what is necessary to deter youth smoking and thereby increase profits at the expense of consumers," the memo states.

In addition, the memo says the administration strongly supports the right of states to enact tobacco marketing and advertising restrictions stronger than federal curbs approved by Congress.

Both points undermine the legislative objectives of the industry, which has been seeking a broad antitrust exemption as well as the pre-emption of state tobacco laws.

The memo largely ignores McCain's repeated invitation to make suggestions that would help Congress craft legislation that would move beyond current Food and Drug Administration regulation of tobacco advertising and marketing. Lawmakers have repeatedly criticized the White House for refusing to say specifically what it would accept in a tobacco bill.

Neither McCain nor the White House would comment on the memo.

Congressional interest in new tobacco regulation ... s prompted by a proposed settlement reached last summer between the industry and the attorneys general of 40 states. The agreement, if adopted, would require tobacco companies to pay the states hundreds of billions of dollars over 25 years and accept a virtual moratorium on tobacco advertising, especially ads aimed at teen-agers. In exchange, the industry would receive protection from future class-action lawsuits and limits on the amount of future liability payments.

Ever since the tobacco settlement, trial lawyers have been salivating

By Doug Bandow
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

You'd think a few hundred million dollars would be enough. But not for attorneys in the ongoing tobacco litigation. Mississippi trial lawyer Richard Scruggs says the fees could run as much as $18 billion, which might look "a little obscene." And he's right. Yet the liability sweepstakes keeps expanding: legislators in Maryland and Vermont are pushing to rig the law to hold cigarette-makers liable for Medicaid costs. And, not so incidentally, to give local attorneys a huge windfall.

Two years ago, state attorneys general, mostly governor wannabees who never let principle stand between them and higher office, began filing lawsuits against tobacco companies over the Medicaid costs of providing tobacco-related health care for the poor. But the odds didn't look good. Only one lawsuit against cigarette-makers had ever resulted in a judgment, and that case is on appeal.

SHARE IN THE SPOILS

So states signed up leading trial lawyers and promised them a share in the spoils — 25 percent of the take in Florida, Maryland and Texas. States also began changing the rules in order to improve their chance of victory. Florida blazed the trail, approving legislation that denied cigarette companies the right to assert any of the usual defenses, authorized the use of aggregate statistics to "prove" causation and allowed damages to be assessed based on a company's market share.

In essence, Florida said: The tobacco companies have money, we want it, and we aren't going to let traditional liability rules or due process protections stand in the way. Short of ordering the courts to rule in its favor, Florida did all that it could to guarantee the result.

Which helped push the tobacco companies to settle nationally for $368.5 billion. The roughly 300 attorneys involved in the litigation have been salivating over their potentially obscene fees ever since.

In essence, Florida said: The tobacco companies have money, we want it, and we aren't going to let traditional liability rules or due process protections stand in the way.

Then states began reconsidering their generosity. For example, the lawyers who represented Florida stood to collect an astonishing $2.8 billion — about $14,000 per hour, assuming they spent every hour since they filed the suit working on the case. Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles decided that his state had done most of the heavy lifting by rewriting the law, so he suggested renegotiating the fees. The lawyers sued. A state judge declared that the requested $200 million per attorney shocked "the conscience of this court."

A similar squabble has erupted in Texas, where the lawyers want $2.3 billion. Gov. George Bush is resisting their demands, arguing that too much money, supposedly collected to promote Texans' health, will go to the trial bar.

The biggest battle, however, is at the national level. President Bill Clinton, generously supported by plaintiffs' attorneys, does not object to obscene legal fees. But several GOP House members, led by Rep. Chris Cox, R-Calif., propose holding payments to $150 per hour, with a maximum payout of 0.01 percent of any settlement. Sen. Lauch Faircloth, R-N.C., wants to limit the fees to $125 an hour.

The lawyers are naturally screaming about the sanctity of contracts, but there's no reason Congress should rubber-stamp a tobacco deal that is bad on every count. There's certainly no reason to approve a massive welfare payment for trial attorneys.

Going after lawyers' fees after deals are struck isn't enough, however. States like Maryland and Vermont should not seek easy money by perverting state tort law. Such proposals violate due process and property rights. They ratify government-organized looting of unpopular companies and industries. And they establish a principle that has no end point.

After all, why not sue the alcohol industry for the ravages of alcoholism? Why not blame ski producers for skiers' accidents? Why not hit the makers of cholesterol-, fat-, and sugar-rich foods? Make the Mars Co. pay its fair share of Medicaid costs resulting from M&M's consumption!

The potential for abuse is real. The American Legislative Exchange Council has inaugurated a program to warn state lawmakers of the dangerous Pandora's box they are opening.

POSSIBILITIES ARE ENDLESS

For instance, private attorneys in Florida have sued alcohol-makers, trial lawyers involved in Maryland's cigarette litigation are targeting chemical manufacturers for the harm suffered by children who ate lead paint and legislators in Missouri have considered introducing a measure to allow the state to sue over the health effects of any "hazardous" product. Additional possibilities are endless, especially when profit-minded trial attorneys team up with ambitious state attorneys general.

The tobacco-makers are a convenient target, but that doesn't justify states twisting their laws to grab cash to which they aren't entitled. Nor does it warrant allowing entrepreneurial lawyers to loot literally everyone — consumer, industry and government — in the name of health. Lawmakers at both the state and federal levels should shut down the liability sweepstakes.

If approved, the tobacco deal will trample business, individual rights

By James K. Glassman
The Washington Post

Having just about completed its No. 1 legislative task of the year — providing nearly $200 billion to the states in a pork-greased transportation bill — Congress is now ready to tackle task No. 2: the tobacco settlement.

Watch out. Politicians see the $368.5 billion deal as a huge pile of cash for new spending projects. But far worse is the idea on which the settlement is founded: that individuals aren't responsible for their own actions. They are too stupid or crazed or manipulated to realize that smoking is dangerous.

FLAT-OUT WRONG

This view, so satisfying to elitists of all political stripes, is flat-out wrong. Americans know that smoking kills, as Kip Viscusi of Harvard meticulously shows in his book, "Smoking: Making the Risky Decision." In fact, they think that smoking is worse than it really is.

Lifetime risks of getting lung cancer through smoking are roughly 1 in 10, but smokers see them as 3.7 in 10, Viscusi found. The risk of dying prematurely from smoking is between 18 percent and 36 percent, but survey respondents put it at 54 percent. Also, he writes, "There is certainly no evidence of greater neglect of smoking risks by the very young. Indeed, the opposite is the case."

Viscusi has also found that, far from costing the rest of us money, "smokers save society 32 cents a pack," mainly through reduced nursing home and Social Security costs (since they die earlier), plus another 53 cents in taxes.

But for anti-smoking zealots, it's not enough. President Clinton put the case perfectly and chillingly last September: "This is about changing the behavior of the United States ... the behavior of the American people."

Fully informed for many years that smoking can kill, about one-fourth of Americans smoke, anyway. Are they nuts? No, they are making what they believe is a reasonable decision — the pleasures of smoking outweigh its dangers.

> There is not the slightest doubt that, after they have finished with smokers, the health police will proceed to drinkers, chubbies, sport-utility drivers and on and on.

We make decisions all the time that seek to balance pleasure with the risk of harm — having another piece of pecan pie even though it will raise cholesterol and perhaps kill us quicker, skipping exercise to watch a TV show, drinking more coffee or alcohol than we should.

Speaking of drink, the Centers for Disease Control calculates that alcohol, since it kills people in their prime, deprives Americans of 1.5 million years of life before age 65, compared with 1.2 million years for smoking. Worse, drinking kills and injures other people.

Smoking, like drinking, can be addictive, and some people have a hard time quitting. But people do it. There are now as many ex-smokers as active smokers. It seems to be easier to stop smoking than to lose weight and keep it off.

There is not the slightest doubt that, after they have finished with smokers, the health police will proceed to drinkers, chubbies, sport-utility drivers and on and on.

Sure, there's a role for government in protecting the public health, but as the Economist said Dec. 20, "Smoking is not like tuberculosis or air pollution or drunken driving; it is not, strictly speaking, a public-health or public-safety problem at all. Rather, like motorcycling or overeating or skiing, it is a private health problem."

In his superb new book "For Your Own Good," Jacob Sullum writes: "The true nature of the crusade for a smoke-free society is an attempt by one group of people to impose their tastes and preferences on another." No matter what Congress decides, he writes, the crusade will continue "because it is aimed at the behavior of individuals, not the behavior of corporations."

Exactly. I have no sympathy for the companies. First they dissembled; now they're acting in a cowardly fashion. Rather than standing up for the principle of individual choice and responsibility, they are leaping to pay a finite penalty, however huge, so they can boost their languishing stock prices.

CHANGED THE RULES

Meanwhile, the anti-smoking hysteria is laying waste to basic protections and principles. For example, juries for decades denied claims against tobacco companies, since smokers knew what they were doing was risky. So the states, led by Florida, simply changed the rules.

"In a stroke," writes Sullum, "the (Florida) law eliminated the industry's most effective defenses. The state did not have to prove that a single case of illness was actually caused by a defendant's product, and the tobacco companies could not point out that people voluntarily choose to smoke." Maryland is pushing similar changes.

But where's the outrage? Every business in America is threatened by the precedent of the tobacco settlement. Every individual is threatened, too, as the liberal ideals on which this country was founded — freedom of choice, personal accountability, limited government — are trampled in a stampede by some to get others to behave the way they want.

Let's kill the settlement and end the hysteria now.

Mission Statement

The Mission and Vision of US Tobacco Company is to Grow the Smokeless Tobacco Business and Become the Primary Type of Tobacco Consumed by Adults in the 21st Century.

The overall sales goal for 1998 is to Grow our Unit Volume by 5%.

The sales force will pursue the following strategies to accomplish our organizational goal.

- Develop the market segment share of adult smokers who consume our products.
- Develop the market segment share of 20-25 year old adults who consume our products.
- Implement retention strategies to recognize and reward our most loyal adult consumers.
- Effectively manage national/key accounts in order to maximize the impact of our products and services in the marketplace.
- Demonstrate effective selling skills for product promotions, programs and concepts.

As a U.S. Tobacco Company sales team member, you play a critical role in the accomplishment of our organizational objectives.

This performance plan and review document represents the key responsibility areas for your position and the objectives and core competencies we agree to pursue in support of our organizational strategies and goals.

Performance Objectives

The manager and employee should use this section of the Performance Plan and Review to record key objectives that they have agreed to within each key responsibility area and to comment on the performance of those objectives. Good performance objectives describe the what of performance and are established in a collaborative discussion between manager and employee. They clarify what needs to be accomplished and by when and should be quantifiable and measurable in some way. Objectives should be relevant to the specific job assignment and focused on what needs to be done within each key responsibility area to achieve organizational strategic goals.

Sampling Building brand awareness and generating trial among adults consumers is a key focus area of all sales employees. Identifying new opportunity sites to generate consumer interest, quality one-on-one sampling, and sponsoring events, are just some of the ways we generate trial and build brand awareness with our adult consumers. Below are some key sampling objectives that we agree will help grow the business in your job assignment

Objectives

1. Identify Retail Sampling Sites from MSA data, where strongest competitive sales are evident and focus adult sampling efforts in and around these accounts.

2. Identify and set up 8 Bar Events for signage and/or possible event promotions.

3. Utilize adult consumer survey cards while conducting opportunity or event adult sampling. Report distribution of cards during opportunity sampling accurately on PAR, and on week ending voice mail recaps.

4. Demonstrate team work by participating in a minimum of 3 Division Special Events (excludes bar events).

5. Follow 1998 adult sampling plan of work.

Comments on Performance

During the course of the review period, the manager should use this section to record observations and data to describe performance on each objective. It is important to include dates to document significant discussions and milestones regarding performance. Following completion of a specific objective or at the end of the review period, the manager should comment on the performance results achieved in the space provided. The manager should summarize results for each objective by assigning one of the following descriptors: Exceeds Expectations (E), Meets Expectations (M), or Below Expectations (B). This results summary should be supported by the manager's comments.

Retail Merchandising

The work we do at retail helps insure that our products are always fresh and available to adult consumers. It is also important to insure that distribution goals are achieved, displays are well designed, and POS materials are current and effectively utilized to maximize our sales and the customers' profits. Below are some key retail merchandising objectives we agree will help you grow the business in your Job assignment.

Objectives

1. Utilize retail promotion monies to secure highly visible counter displays and preferential retail pricing. Preferential pricing goal of 10 retail accounts per week. Budget of $500 per month.

2. Consistently place quarterly and new brand POS at vendor and elsewhere in retail accounts.

3. Obtain 85% distribution on Rooster, with permanent facings.

4. Adjust product facings and distribution to meet local demand. Optimize shelf space with top producing brands.

Performance Competencies

The Manager and Employee should use this section of the Performance Plan and Review to clarify and measure performance competencies for the position. Performance Competencies describe the how of performance: the skills, behaviors, and attitudes that must be applied in accomplishing objectives in key responsibility areas.

Managers can also use this section throughout the year to provide feedback and coaching on the skills and behaviors that drive performance. At the end of the review period, the manager should consider the extent to which each performance competency was demonstrated.

Managers should summarize performance in each competency area by assigning one of the following descriptors: Exceeds Expectations (E), Meets Expectations (M), or Below Expectations (B). An overall results summary should be recorded for each competency area. The manager should also document any comments about demonstrated strengths development needs.

Adult Sampling: The extent to which this Sales Representative follows USTSMC sampling guidelines in approaching adult consumers to generate interest and trial of our smokeless tobacco products.

E = Exceeds Expectations
M = Meets Expectations
B = Below Expectations

M Seeks out new sampling opportunities to attract new adult consumers through normal retail activities.

M Uses effective sampling tools and techniques describing product attributes and demonstrating product use.

M Effectively qualifies consumers and their preferences through appropriate questions.

M Demonstrates a thorough understanding of USTSMC sampling guidelines.

E Identifies/supports event opportunities to reach 20-25 year old adult consumers.

Comments on Performance:

- Results with the 21+ program are outstanding Mike set up and worked 9- 21+ events in his assignment.

Selling Skills: Extent to which this Sales Representative applies professional selling skills toward the accomplishment of his/her objectives.

E = Exceeds Expectations
M = Meets Expectations
B = Below Expectations

E Applies effective sales techniques (POPS and Presentation Skills).

E Cultivates enthusiasm for USTSMC programs and promotions.

M Demonstrates ability to sell programs, promotions and concepts to customers (Caps, Multican Promotions and Pricing, Freshness).

E Follows through to ensure customer satisfaction

Comments on Performance:

Mike's enthusiasm is ever-present when working retail. Retailers and chain contacts are always receptive to his ideas and sales techniques. He shows great pride in promoting USTSMC products

Action Planning and Employee Comments

The manager should use this section to summarize and clarify key developmental actions that need to be taken to enhance performance on objectives or within particular competency areas. The manager and employee should discuss these developmental areas, agree on specific action steps that need to be taken, and establish time frames for those actions. At the end of the review period, the manager should summarize performance by assigning one of the following descriptors: Exceeds Expectations (E), Meets Expectations (M), Below Expectations (B).

Developmental Objectives/Action Plan	Target Dates	Results
Augment Booster Distribution to 35% on both Hunts & Whitecross	ongoing
Use Retail Promotions Budget more liberally to gain counter space and preferential pricing	ongoing
Increase opportunity sampling sites and usage of Survey Cards. Record correctly on PAR	ongoing

Employee Comments on Performance

My reviews for 1998 was fair and accurate. Most of my client sampling is done at retail sites during lunch hours where adult consumers don't have the time to fill out survey cards. Close to 1,200 completed survey cards have been filled out during five events and of 21 events this I received no credit because they aren't tracked on PAR.

I think the appropriate tools have been included in the plan of work booklet for our guys to police and secure our positions.

Swisher management has already been reprimanded and warned of non-compliance to this project.

I encourage hearing about any non-compliance issues in the field, as I will strongly demand attention by Walmart on disciplines and actions.

If I'm the competition, I would take the same approach -- so lets recognize this up front, and be prepared to go to war. We have severely cut back on their ability to market products.

Remember one thing, McLanes is behind us to keep policy. Should the project and controls go too far.... we can and will stock only US Tobacco products in the cabinets, and also put up a huge Copenhagen header card. I do not envision this happening. Beth Schommer , the VP at Walmart is very much in favor of eliminating the extra vendors and garbage POS that exist today, and she will be continually communicated on which specific manufacturers do not seem to adhere to her policy on the new merchandising racks. Let the competition cut off their own heads I say.

I'm ready for war--- how 'bout you?

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 FEB 14 A10:01 FILED US DISTRICT COURT CLERK WESTN. DIST. KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO PRECLUDE PLAINTIFF FROM USING CERTAIN "IRRELEVANT, MISLEADING AND UNFAIRLY PREJUDICIAL" WORDS

Defendants ("UST") seek an advance ruling to preclude plaintiffs ("Conwood") from using certain words at trial that they deem "irrelevant, misleading, and unfairly prejudicial." But defendants identify no authority for the pre-trial adoption of a prior restraint on the speech of counsel or witnesses; the few cases they cite distinguish themselves at a glance.[1] Trials

[1]Some of defendants' cases merely recite the rule that past antitrust violations, like past criminal convictions, are not generally admissible in a new case about different conduct. See Lightwave Technologies, Inc. v. Corning Glass Works, No. 86 Vic. 759, 1991 WL 4737, *6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 1991); United States Football League v. National Football League, 634 F. Supp. 1155, 1171-73 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (same). In another of UST's cases, the court found that counsel (Joseph Alioto) made arguments in closing not supported by the record, but the court never issued an advance restraint against counsel's speech and it found his arguments harmless because the jury was adequately instructed about the difference between evidence and argument. Nor was any objection to counsel's closing apparently ever made. J.T. Gibbons, Inc. v. Crawford Fitting Co., 565 F. Supp. 167 (E.D. La. 1981). From outside the antitrust context, defendants purport to are about persuasion and allegory. Metaphors, similes and adjectives all play a legitimate role.

Some of the words defendants dislike, moreover, were used in the November 18, 1999 settlement conference at which Magistrate Judge Moyer admonished the parties that nothing said was to be used by either side in the litigation. Tellingly, the word defendants seem most perturbed about is actually an element in this case. How Conwood could possibly be expected to prove that UST is a "monopolist" (as it must under Section 2) without ever mentioning the word is unfathomable. No doubt, that is exactly why UST brings this motion. But if something looks like a duck, walks like a duck, and quacks like a duck, justice is hardly served by an unprecedented prior restraint against calling it a duck.

rely on the familiar rule that hearsay not relevant to any issue or element in dispute generally should not be admitted, see Davis v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 6 F.3d 367, 385-86 (6th Cir. 1993), and the rule that the wealth of the defendant is not relevant in a negligence action, City of Cleveland v. Peter Kiewitt Sons & Co., 624 F.2d 749, 760 (6th Cir. 1980).

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 FEB 14 A10:01 FILED U.S. DISTRICT COURT CLERK PADUCAH, KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO REQUIRE PLAINTIFFS TO PROVE EXCLUSIONARY CONDUCT AND FACT OF INJURY ON A STORE-BY-STORE BASIS

Defendants ("UST") argue that plaintiffs ("Conwood") must prove with minute particularity each individual store from which they were excluded, and that Conwood may recover damages only for those specific stores and no others. As there are some 300,000 outlets nationwide (according to UST's expert), the motion seeks an endless trial with stupefying detail. Defendants base their demand, moreover, on a factual assertion contradicted by overwhelming record evidence and on a single, 1979 California trial court decision contradicted by subsequent Sixth Circuit and other uniform authority.

There is No Requirement of Store-by-Store Proof

Defendants argue their motion is justified because Conwood has just "one example" of each species of misconduct it has alleged -- e.g., "[one] unauthorized rack removal"; "[one] instance of a purported 'ruse' to remove a rival's rack through seeking permission." Def. Mem. at 2-3. This is no more than wishful thinking. The evidentiary record adduced on summary judgment is replete with evidence of defendants' systematic exclusionary conduct; no amount of rhetoric otherwise can make it vanish. See Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 7-29.

Defendants' motion also rests on a misperception of antitrust law, particularly in the Sixth Circuit. Under the "broad" and "expansive" antitrust standing statute, Conwood need only show that it has been "'injured in [its] business or property'" as a result of defendants' exclusionary conduct. County of Oakland v. City of Detroit, 866 F.2d 839, 847 (6th Cir. 1989) (quoting 15 U.S.C. § 15), cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1003 (1990). Once Conwood shows the existence of any such injury, "it will be enough if the evidence show[s] the extent of the damages as a matter of just and reasonable inference, although the result be only approximate." Story Parchment Co. v. Paterson Parchment Paper Co., 282 U.S. 555, 563 (1931) (emphasis added).

As the Supreme Court has put it, "[plaintiff's] burden of proving the fact of damage under § 4 of the Clayton Act is satisfied by its proof of some damage, . . . inquiry beyond this minimum point goes only to the amount and not the fact of damages." Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 114 n.9 (1968).

The Sixth Circuit has driven the point home in a case that applies here foursquare. In Elyria-Lorain Broadcasting Co. v.

Lorian Journal Co., 358 F.2d 790 (6th Cir. 1966), plaintiff radio station proved at trial that the defendant had induced retailers in Lorain, Ohio to stop advertising on plaintiff's station in violation of the Sherman Act. At trial, 16 retailers admitted that they had been induced by defendant to cancel their agreements with plaintiff. The trial court awarded compensatory damages for these 16 canceled contracts. But, as UST proposes here, the court refused to award any further damages. It did so despite a damages model prepared by plaintiff's expert (one not nearly as rigorous as Dr. Leftwich's) showing that plaintiff had lost substantially more (eight times) in advertising marketwide based on a benchmark comparison with plaintiff's contemporaneous advertising performance in a nearby unaffected market, Elyria, Ohio.

The Sixth Circuit reversed. Plaintiff was entitled not just to "specific" damages established by the sixteen trial witness retailers; the Court held that "general damages" were also "clearly shown by the evidence" from plaintiff's expert. Id. at 791. Indeed, the Sixth Circuit explained that > [i]t is not the rule that in an action for damages for violation of the antitrust laws plaintiff is limited to recover only the specific items of damage which he can prove with reasonable certainty. On the contrary, the trier of the facts may make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data and may act upon probable and inferential as well as direct and positive proof. the wrongdoer should bear the risk of the uncertainty which his own wrong has created.

Id. at 793.

UST's motion overlooks similar antitrust precedent. For example, in Rossi v. Standard Roofing, Inc., 156 F.3d 452, 484-85 (3rd Cir. 1998), plaintiff presented evidence showing that it lost five transactions as a result of defendant's exclusionary conduct; in addition, plaintiff presented an expert witness who estimated total marketwide lost profits using accepted economic modeling techniques. Defendant argued that plaintiff failed to prove injury in fact and the trial court threw out plaintiff's case. Id. at 484. The Third Circuit reversed. The court of appeals explained that this was hardly a case where plaintiff "could not show that it lost even a single contract based upon the alleged unlawful practices of the defendant." Id. Instead, the court "f[ou]nd two sources of evidence sufficient . . . to demonstrate fact of injury": the five "specific lost transactions" plus the expert's "damage report" estimating marketwide losses. Id. The Second Circuit likewise affirmed the use of an economist's damages model to estimate marketwide losses in Litton Systems, Inc. v. AT&T, 700 F.2d 785, 822-26 (2d Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1073 (1984), and nowhere suggested that customer-by-customer proof of injury was required.

UST not only bypasses such precedent, it relies on a single 20 year-old California trial court decision that, to our knowledge, no later court has even mentioned -- much less cited favorably -- for the proposition that a plaintiff can recover antitrust damages only where it proves each specific transaction. See In re Airport Car Rental Antitrust Litig., 474 F. Supp. 1072, 1110 (N.D. Cal. 1979). And even that case is readily distinguishable on its facts.

First, Conwood's experts (as in Elyria-Lorain, Rossi and Litton) have used accepted econometric techniques to measure the marketwide impact of UST's exclusionary conduct; no such evidence was presented in In re Airport.[1] Second, "voluminous" evidence there suggested that plaintiff's exclusion was caused by factors having nothing to do with defendants' behavior. Id. at 1110. Here, by contrast, there is no evidence that other factors caused Conwood's exclusion; in fact, Dr. Leftwich ruled out other potential explanations of Conwood's losses. Third, In re Airport involved rental car operations at just 140 airports, and the alleged exclusion in each case was embodied in a written contract; the best and simplest evidence was, thus, held to be the written contracts themselves. Here, by contrast, hundreds of thousands of outlets are implicated and there is no single document that tells the tale of them all.[2] What may have been possible in In re Airport is impossible here; no doubt that is why UST suggests it.

[1]There, plaintiff sought damages by simply extrapolating from a handful of specific airports in which it lost a franchise. No such crude approach has been offered in this case.

[2]Even where UST has used written contracts to perfect its exclusion of rivals, its demands for exacting proof about their terms are ironic at best. UST previously admitted that it has failed to retain pertinent records (Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 26) and it is long settled law that, in such circumstances, "[t]he wrongdoer should bear the risk of the uncertainty which his own wrong has created." Elyria-Lorain Broadcasting Co., 358 F.2d at 793.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 FEB 14 A9:56 FILED IN DISTRICT COURT CLERK WESTERN DIST. KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE FOR AN ORDER SIMPLIFYING THE ISSUES AT TRIAL AND FACILITATING THE DISPOSITION OF THIS LAWSUIT

Having failed to seek summary judgment on Conwood's attempted monopolization, Lanham Act and state law claims, UST belatedly submits a summary judgment motion in the guise of a motion in limine seeking to "simplify" issues at trial. Tellingly, UST makes no mention of eliminating its "me-too" state law counterclaims despite demanding a separate trial of Conwood's state law claims. Apparently, the "simplification" is a one way street.

Once untimely summary judgment arguments are stripped from UST's motion,[1] all that is left of the motion is an assertion that a single trial for Conwood's claims would somehow waste judicial resources. But UST cannot explain how multiple trials

[1]If the Court wants summary judgment briefing on these issues, Conwood stands ready to respond with specific evidence in contrast to UST's bare assertions. UST essentially seeks summary judgment against Conwood's pretrial brief. However, as the Court Order made clear, the pretrial brief was to "succinct[ly]" discuss Conwood's claims, not function as a brief in opposition to an (unfiled and unknown) summary judgment motion. Order of Feb. 18, 1999.

would be more efficient.

The same facts and witnesses support Conwood's federal and state law claims and therefore a single trial is appropriate. (Point I, infra). A single trial is also appropriate on Conwood's attempted monopolization claim. The claim is not duplicative and it is routine to try monopolization and attempted monopolization claims together. (Point II, infra).

I. A Single Trial is Appropriate for Conwood's Claims

Conwood diligently pursued persuasive evidence of UST's misconduct under the Lanham Act and state law, and this pursuit bore fruit. Conwood's case of monopolization includes evidence of top-down instructions by the officers of UST to exclude competitors by myriad means. Among those means — but far from the only means — were UST's disparaging of Conwood's products and removing Conwood's racks, products, and advertising. This same evidence supports Conwood's claims pursuant to the Lanham Act and state law. The only "just, inexpensive, and speedy" option is a single trial, not multiple trials involving the same parties and overlapping evidence. UST Mot. at 7 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(16)).

A. Conwood Diligently Pursued its Lanham Act and State Law Claims

Conwood exerted great effort and funds to gather evidence of UST's violations of the Lanham Act and state law. Indeed, one need look no further than one of the first depositions in this case for evidence of UST employees misrepresenting to consumers that Conwood's products contain stems and other imperfections.[2] Similarly wrong is the claim that Conwood abandoned its state law claims, such as the claim that UST violated Kentucky Revised Statute § 365.050. A number of non-party and party witnesses testified that, in substance, UST's payoffs to Wal-Mart allowed UST to continue to exclude competitors' facings, racks, and advertising. See Pls.' Mem. Opp. Summ. J. at 24-25.

[2]Carter Dep. at 104-06 (attached as Exh. A).

It is ironic that UST argues that the payments to Wal-Mart were not "secret" given the uniform failure of its employees to recall the purpose of the payments or whether they were offered to other retailers (even though these same employees authored documents discussing the danger of other retailers becoming aware of the payments).[3] Indeed, even the best testimony UST could find to attach to its motion undercuts its assertion that its payments to Wal-Mart were standard "industry-wide buy-downs." UST Mot. at 5. The excerpt confirms that a major retailer competing against Wal-Mart in 72 markets threatened a lawsuit when it learned of the payments to Wal-Mart.[4] On this and all other issues surrounding these state law claims, there are [3]See UST Mot., Exh. 1 at 252 (UST key account manager "can't recall" or "do[esn't] know" if other retailers were offered payments despite authoring e-mail documenting retailer threat of lawsuit over the illegal activity); Entwistle Dep. at 117-19 (attached as Exh. B).

[4]See UST Mot., Exh 1 at 248; PX 121 (e-mail discussing retailer threat of lawsuit)(attached as Exh. C). UST seeks blanket immunity for its payoffs to Wal-Mart in reliance on Warfield Tobacco, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 34 F. Supp. 2d 1050 (E.D. Ky. 1999). This summary judgment argument has no place in a motion in limine. In any event, the plaintiff in Warfield "failed to show any secret payments or rebates on the part of RJR" — an issue of hotly disputed fact in this case. Id. at 1052. The deposition excerpt submitted by UST only serves to demonstrate the corporate-wide amnesia at UST with respect to every issue in this case — in this particular situation a lack of recall with respect to whether UST's so-called "industry-wide" buy-downs were actually offered to any other retailers. See UST Mot., Exh 1.

disputed issues of fact, as UST recognized when it chose not to seek summary judgment.

B. A Single Trial is Appropriate and UST Failed to Satisfy the Requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(b)

Separate trials on Conwood's Lanham Act and state law claims would waste judicial resources. Separate trials are appropriate under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(b) only in furtherance of convenience, avoiding prejudice, or when conducive to expedition and economy. UST does not even attempt to satisfy the requirements of Rule 42(b). Instead, UST relies on Rule 16(c)(16) — a catch-all rule for what may be considered at pretrial conferences — ignoring the fact that Rule 16(c)(13) expressly states that the Court should consider under Rule 42(b) whether a separate trial is appropriate.

"The piecemeal trial of separate issues in a single lawsuit . . . is not to be the usual course." 9 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2388, at 474 (2d ed. 1995). If a separate trial requires "extensive proof and substantially the same facts or witnesses as [] other issues, or if any saving in time and expense is wholly speculative, a separate trial will be denied." Id. at 477. In this case, many of the same facts and witnesses support Conwood's federal and state law claims. For example, facts concerning UST's payoffs to Wal-Mart to maintain its exclusionary position are relevant to Conwood's monopolization claims and Kentucky § 365.050 claim. UST simply fails to explain how separate, duplicative trials involving the same witnesses and facts would promote judicial economy. Separate trials would only impose great expense on the parties and consume additional judicial resources.

II. There is No Basis for a Separate Trial on Conwood's Attempted Monopolization Claim.

UST also asks the Court to "preclud[e] Conwood's superfluous attempted monopolization claim." UST Mot. at 6. But, as UST virtually concedes, the claim is not superfluous, and UST has no grounds for barring Conwood from pursuing it.

First, UST argues that the exclusionary conduct that supports Conwood's monopolization claim also supports Conwood's attempted monopolization claim. Id. Fine: the evidence that UST has engaged in a pattern of exclusionary conduct is thus relevant to both claims; this strongly supports trying the claims together rather than separately. Second, UST argues that both monopolization and attempted monopolization involve proof of market power. Id. Again, this observation supports trying both claims together. Moreover, UST tacitly concedes that the offense of attempted monopolization requires a lower degree of market power than the offense of monopolization: a "dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power" rather than actual monopoly power. Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456 (1993). Under the uncontested legal standards, UST may be liable under section 2 for the attempt offense, even if it is absolved of monopolization.[5]

As for UST's argument that presentation of both claims could be confusing or waste judicial resources, this is hollow rhetoric. Monopolization and attempted monopolization claims are routinely tried together. See, e.g. Arthur S. Langenderfer,

[5]Nor is this case like Re/Max, where the defendant's anticompetitive strategy depended on having already achieved direct control over prices. See Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1020-21 (6th Cir. 1999).

Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1416 (6th Cir. 1990); Litton Sys., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., CV 90-4823-MRP (D.C. Cal. 1996) (Instruction no. 13) (on file with Court); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. 97-3983 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (Instructions at 22) (on file with Court). By contrast, UST cannot cite a single case in which a court has granted the type of relief that UST seeks here.

Conclusion

The Court should deny UST's motion and permit Conwood to present its claims in a single trial. A proposed order is attached.

(Taken by Plaintiffs)

Dallas, Texas

March 1, 1999

Reported by: Charity J. Parker, CSR No. 6610

but you seem to suggest to talk about Conwood products being stemmy as commonplace, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. And I'm just asking you, in your commonplace discussions with consumers at sampling events, did you ever mention that you thought Conwood products were stemmy?

A. I probably did.

Q. Okay. And did other U.S. Tobacco representatives make similar comments?

A. If I would have to make something, they probably did.

Q. Okay. I mean, you were around them at various sampling events and you've heard other U.S. Tobacco rep --

MR. GORSUCH: If I could just finish my question, and you make your objection.

MR. REED: Okay. Sorry.

BY MR. GORSUCH:

Q. You attended other sampling events with many other U.S. Tobacco representatives, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And that was a common part of your job, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. In the course of those sampling events, you heard other U.S. Tobacco representatives call Conwood products stemmy, right?

A. I don't know --

MR. REED: Object to the form of the question.

BY MR. GORSUCH:

Q. Okay. Go ahead and answer it.

MR. REED: Mr. Carter, if you'll pause just a moment after Mr. Gorsuch's question if there's an objection, then we won't be talking over each other.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. REED: Thank you.

MR. GORSUCH: I apologize, Mr. Carter, and I apologize, Mr. Reed.

BY MR. GORSUCH:

Q. That's one of my instructions that I neglected to mention at the outset of the deposition. We all have to let each other finish speaking. And Mr. Reed and your counsel obviously have to have an opportunity to get in there before you do.

Just to back up, when you attended these sampling events and called the products stemmy to other consumers, did other U.S. Tobacco representatives make similar comments?

A. I'm sure they did. As far as if they said it was stemmy, you know, I don't know. I don't know if I've ever used that word or not, but that would be a word today that I'd use to describe the product.

Q. Okay. So they might have used other words to the same effect?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. But they did use -- they did try to communicate that idea to consumers?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Did you ever talk to consumers about the date codes on Conwood cans?

A. No, because I'll be honest with you, I still can't read it, but I do know, and I have told people out in the field, Conwood's product on the back says no date needed, and I know good and well that there's a code to it and they pick their product up, so it's not always fresh.

Q. Okay. I move to strike that as non-responsive, Mr. Carter.

11:45:18 Q. Were you aware of it being offered
11:45:20 to anyone other than Wal-Mart?
11:45:22 A. I don't know.
11:45:24 Q. Did you provide points that other 11:45:28 people at U.S. Tobacco might use to cool off
11:45:32 irate wholesalers and retailers who weren't 11:45:34 being offered the same program?
11:45:36 A. I remember speaking to some 11:45:38 department managers on their concerns.
11:45:40 Q. When was that?
11:45:42 A. During the promotion.
11:45:42 Q. And what did you say?
11:45:52 A. To what?
11:45:54 Q. To the department managers, Mr.
11:45:56 Entwistle?
11:46:04 A. I explained the program again to 11:46:08 them to help them understand what we were 11:46:10 testing at Wal-Mart.
11:46:12 Q. And what were the points that you
11:46:16 offered that could be used to cool off irate
11:46:18 wholesalers and retailers?
11:46:20 MR. STOLL: I'm going to object to 11:46:20 the form of the question and the 11:46:22 characterization.
11:46:24 A. Could I have that repeated,

11:46:24 please?
11:46:32 Q. What points did you make that were 11:46:32 used to cool off irate wholesalers and 11:46:32 retailers?
11:46:32 MR. STOLL: Object to the form of 11:46:36 the question. It characterizes testimony that 11:46:38 hasn't even been given.
11:46:40 A. Could I have that repeated one more 11:46:40 time?
11:46:42 Q. Sure.
11:46:44 What did you say that could be used
11:46:48 to cool off irate wholesalers and retailers
11:46:50 subject to Mr. Stoll's objections?
11:46:56 A. My conversations with any of the 11:47:04 department managers involved the explanation of 11:47:06 the program as it was happening.
11:47:08 Q. Why were the department managers
11:47:08 concerned?
11:47:40 A. I think the sales were -- being the 11:47:42 first time that we were doing a promotion with 11:47:44 Wal-Mart created a tension.
11:47:46 Q. It created a tension because other 11:47:50 wholesalers and retailers weren't being offered
11:47:52 the same promotion, correct?
11:47:52 A. I don't know.

11:47:54 Q. Why did it create a tension then, 11:47:56 sir?
11:48:00 A. Because Wal-Mart is the most 11:48:02 visible retailer in the country.
11:48:04 Q. And they were getting a promotion
11:48:06 that no one else was getting, right?
11:48:06 A. No.
11:48:08 Q. Who else was getting that program?
11:48:10 A. I don't know.
11:48:12 Q. You testified earlier that it was a 11:48:12 quote "test program," right?
11:48:14 A. That's correct.
11:48:16 Q. Are you aware of any other 11:48:18 participants in the test program?
11:48:22 A. No.
11:48:24 Q. Isn't it true that the department
11:48:28 managers -- some department managers may have 11:48:30 come to you because they were concerned that 11:48:34 other wholesalers and retailers weren't 11:48:36 participating in the test program?
11:48:38 A. Could have.
11:48:40 Q. And isn't it true that the 11:48:42 wholesalers and retailers were concerned 11:48:46 because four dollars off per roll would provide 11:48:50 Wal-Mart with a competitive advantage over

Subject: K-E-B MEETING : 3-20-98

Dave,

In follow up to our discussion on Monday, March 23, I am writing to provide you with details of my meeting with Bob Callahan, Category Manager, H. E. Butt Grocery, Company, San Antonio, Texas on March 20.

Mr. Callahan voiced his company's concern of the $4.00 roll savings on Copenhagen brands and the Red Seal, 10 cents savings programs currently in Wal-Mart locations and the lack of availability of the same to his company.

Here are the facts:

- K-E-B considers Wal-Mart to be their principal competitor as they match up store locations in 72 markets.

- Quote- " They do not want to be placed at a retail disadvantage and want to be on par with Wal Mart"

- Quote- " They feel promotional offers must be equal and proportionate to all trade channels"

"Quote -" These offers being available in Wal-Mart Supercenter formats creates a basis for a law suit being they did not receive the same offer"

Mr. Callahan went on to say that they are currently suing General Electric for similar practices and have removed their light bulb selections from their stores. Additionally he mentioned they are in the process of suing another company over same practices, but he would not divulge this companies name.

He went on to threaten a discontinuance of the Red Seal brands at this point. However with further discussion and information on Red Seal and the introduction of the 10 cents Instant Redeemable Coupon offer now on their inventories he seemed satisfied with our efforts and dropped the threat. Our only concern here will be this threat could resurface based on the fact that plans to run the Wal-Mart buydown run to August and as you know IRC's are set to go through mid May.

Concerning the roll savings program. They currently do not offer a significant roll savings in any of their locations (Core or Pantry). The savings is only a few pennies. They have been reluctant to offer roll savings in the past based on my experiences because we did not offer dollars to support an offer. One of the issues we have to overcome is their lack of authorizing a roll facing and vendor. We were able to overcome this in there 72 Pantry locations in Houston this summer as a roll facing and vendor for Copenhagen was authorized in a new planogram execution. Field Sales force did a great job in securing our vendor facing. He told me that he would go ahead and authorize appropriate roll facings and vendor for the Core stores and Smoke Shops (150) as plans are underway to develop new planograms at this time. We are schedule to participate in a vendor meeting to develop this planogram in April.

To make this happen and based on his comments I feel we must come to some arrangement to support savings on a proportionate basis. I recommend we get back to him with a plan as soon as possible. No promises were made. I only mentioned to him that I would recommend consideration to his concerns.

Thank you for your consideration of these concerns. Please advise.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
PADUCAH DIVISION
CIVIL ACTION NO. 5:98-CV-108-R

v.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, ET AL. DEFENDANTS

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This matter is before the court on Plaintiffs' motion to preclude UST employees from testifying live if UST refuses to make them available during Plaintiffs' case-in-chief (doc. # 283).

A telephonic conference was held on Wednesday, February 9, 2000 at 10:00 AM. Appearing for the parties were:

Plaintiffs: David Simpson
Richard Roberts
Mark Hansen
Hank Handlesman

Defendants: John Reed
Neal Stoll
James Keyte
Martha Wiess

Conwood claims that several officers and employees of UST are key witnesses to its antitrust claims. Conwood requested the UST accept service of trial subpoenas on behalf of those employees. UST refused to accept service. Plaintiffs then attempted to serve trial subpoenas on several UST employees who reside and work outside of Kentucky and more than 100 miles from Paducah. UST then filed a motion to compel withdrawal of trial subpoenas and to preclude issuance of additional subpoenas (doc. #284) on the grounds that those witnesses are beyond the subpoena power of the court, pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 45. Conwood filed its motion to preclude UST employees from testifying live if UST refuses to make them available for Plaintiffs' case in chief.

Fed.R.Evid. 611 gives courts the authority to control the presentation of evidence and the interrogation of witnesses so as to "make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of the truth." UST's refusal to produce witnesses for Conwood's case-in-chief and then calling those witnesses for live testimony during its own case does not promote the ascertainment of truth. It is merely gamesmenship on the part of UST, and will not be allowed in this trial. See Matthews, Inc. v. Transamerica Transportation Services, Inc., 945 F.2d 269, 273 (9th Cir. 1991).

IT IS ORDERED:

Plaintiff's have agreed to withdraw their subpoenas. Therefore, Defendants' motion to compel withdrawal of trial subpoenas and to preclude issuance of additional subpoenas (doc. #284) is MOOT.

Plaintiffs' motion to preclude UST employees from testifying live if UST refuses to make them available during Plaintiffs' case-in-chief (doc. # 283) is GRANTED. UST is precluded from calling their current employees to testify live during their case-in-chief if UST refuses to produce those same employees to testify during Conwood's case-in-chief. This holding is subject to the following conditions:

This holding applies only to the twelve UST employees named in the motion, the designated UST records custodian, and five other UST employees whose names are to be submitted to UST by Monday, February 14, 2000.

Conwood shall give notice to UST of the employee they wish to call live three days prior to that employee's testimony.

Conwood shall present the witness on the day which it has identified to UST .

Within 24 hours of notice, UST shall inform Conwood whether it will produce the employee or not. If UST does not produce that employee, then it is precluded from calling that witness during its case in chief, and must rely on the deposition. If UST does not respond to Conwood's notice within 24 hours, then it is precluded from calling that witness and must use his or her deposition testimony. UST is bound by its decision.

The same rules also apply to Conwood's current employee witnesses.

Conwood shall pay all costs of any UST employee's appearance during its case-in-chief, including normal per diem and travel costs.

UST shall pay all costs of any Conwood employee's appearance during its case-in-chief, including normal per diem and travel costs.

The final pre-trial conference is rescheduled to 1:00 P.M. CST, Thursday, February 17, 2000.

This is the 11 day of February 2000.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY TO DEFENDANTS' SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE DAMAGES STUDY AND FUTURE TESTIMONY OF DR. RICHARD LEFTWICH

BACKGROUND

As Conwood has previously explained in its Opposition to UST's Motion to Preclude "Undisclosed Expert Witness Materials," Dr. Leftwich filed a Supplemental Report on January 27, 2000 in order to correct data upon which he had relied in his original and rebuttal reports.[1] In full compliance with the ongoing duty imposed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26 to update expert testimony when necessary, Leftwich filed a Supplemental Report with the Court in a timely fashion.[2] Rhetoric aside, UST in fact concedes that it has no legitimate complaint that Leftwich's Supplemental Report was disclosed to the Court in an untimely fashion. See UST Suppl. Mem. at 5 (conceding that UST would have no claim of delay under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(e)).

[1]UST appears to fault Leftwich for not confirming the data independently from the outset. UST Suppl. Mem. at 4. There was no reason for Leftwich to do so, given that the data was generated by a highly regarded accounting firm, Peat Marwick, for publication by the primary industry organization, the Smokeless Tobacco Council ("STC"). UST recognizes that it cannot challenge Leftwich's reliance upon such data as a general principle, instead framing its complaint as an assertion that Leftwich should have second-guessed the data at an earlier date. In questioning the data as soon as the issue arose and making prompt modifications through his Supplemental Report, Leftwich fully complied with the Federal Rules and this Court's discovery orders.

Instead, UST attempts to parse Leftwich's Supplemental Report into two segments — the correction and an alleged "new Leftwich damages opinion." Id. at 5. This view entirely misses the fact that, in his Supplemental Report, Leftwich has done nothing more than update the statistical analyses found in his original and rebuttal reports in order to fully incorporate the revised data, and reaffirm his prior opinions as to the nature and extent of Conwood's damages. UST has had full knowledge of the methodologies incorporated into Leftwich's Supplemental Report throughout the discovery period.[3] Leftwich's Supplemental Report presents nothing new, is timely, and has not caused any delay that prejudices UST. There is therefore no ground for its exclusion.

[2]The full circumstances surrounding Leftwich's search for and receipt of revised data are discussed in Plaintiffs' Opposition to Motion to Preclude "Undisclosed Expert Witness Materials," which was filed on February 6, 2000. In the interest of brevity, Conwood will not repeat the details in this pleading, but will note that Leftwich promptly sought verification of the data after his deposition on November 2, 1999, and filed his supplemental report shortly after confirming that revised data received from Peat Marwick and the STC were correct.

[3]Leftwich filed his initial Report on August 2, 1999. His Rebuttal Report was filed on October 1, 1999. On November 2, 1999, UST deposed Leftwich, and had ample opportunity to question him about all information and analyses contained in his reports, including his critique of Scheffman's study. Moreover, Conwood has repeatedly offered to make Leftwich available for further deposition, an offer UST accepted only yesterday.

16diii004336

UST also, for the fourth time, attacks Leftwich's methodology under Daubert v. Merrill Dow Pharmaceuticals, 509 U.S. 579 (1993). That issue has already been fully briefed to the Court. UST tries to make old arguments seem new by referencing Federal Rule of Evidence 703 and asserting that Leftwich has now used different and assertedly unreliable data to support his damages opinion. But that is incorrect: UST admits that Leftwich used the same data in analyses incorporated in his Rebuttal Report. UST Suppl. Mem. at 2 n.1. As plaintiffs have previously argued, there is no ground to exclude Leftwich's testimony and reports under Daubert. Nothing in his Supplemental Report changes that conclusion.

UST should not prevail on either of its asserted grounds for the exclusion of Leftwich's Supplemental Report in Conwood's case-in-chief. In any event, this controversy is essentially a sideshow of UST's creation, because Leftwich should be allowed to testify in rebuttal to UST's expert, David Scheffman, at which time the same data will be presented to the jury.

ARGUMENT

I. Leftwich Has Not Presented a New Damages Opinion

UST devotes six pages of its Memorandum to arguing why Leftwich's Supplemental Report should be considered late. The fact is that Leftwich promptly corrected his report after receiving revised data, consistent with the requirements of Rule 26(e). And contrary to UST's assertions, Leftwich did not present a new opinion.

In his Supplemental Report, Leftwich repeated the analyses found in his initial and rebuttal reports. See Leftwich Suppl. Rep. ¶¶ 4-8; Leftwich Rebuttal Rep. ¶¶ 23-26; Leftwich Rep.

¶¶ 18-25. Upon recomputation with the revised data from the STC, estimated damages using one methodology were reduced. But the analysis based on the Scheffman model and data was not affected by the revised data.

While Leftwich did not specifically quantify -- in dollars -- the damages from the analysis of Scheffman's methodology in his Rebuttal Report, Leftwich did provide detailed information regarding the methodology he used and the results he obtained. See Leftwich Rebuttal Rep. ¶¶ 20-27 & Tables 1-3. He provided detailed information about changes in market shares (which are the basis for his ultimate quantification of damages). See id. Leftwich also made clear that Scheffman's analysis, when correctly applied, supported the damages that Leftwich found Conwood to have suffered. See, e.g., id. ¶ 24 ("Scheffman's data . . . and methodology show that UST's exclusionary conduct has precisely the effect that Conwood claims.").

There are, therefore, no new opinions in Leftwich's Supplemental Report -- and there is no reason to exclude any portion of the report. None of the cases cited by UST support its position. In Tucker v. Ohtsu Tire & Rubber Co., 49 F. Supp. 2d 456 (D. Md. 1999), an expert mentioned that he had formulated new opinions at his deposition and sought to support them with evidence that he disclosed approximately six months later, shortly before the discovery cutoff. Id. at 459. The court allowed the evidence and expert testimony, because the defendants were aware of the expert's opinions and the supporting evidence was proper supplementation under Rule 26(e). Id. at 459, 461-63. Moreover, defendants had time to depose the expert before trial. Id. at 461. The situation here is analogous:

16diii004338

- UST was aware from Leftwich's Rebuttal Report (filed before Leftwich's deposition) that his opinions incorporated an application of Scheffman's methodology to demonstrate the harm inflicted on Conwood;
- Leftwich's Supplemental Report does nothing more than provide support for that previous opinion in light of Rule 26(e); and
- UST had the opportunity to question Leftwich about his application of Scheffman's methodology at Leftwich's deposition (an opportunity that UST took some advantage of), and Conwood offered to make Leftwich available for additional questioning on the Supplemental Report.

Under these circumstances, UST has no claim of prejudice or violation of the Federal Rules.[4]

This case is also very different from those in which expert opinions have been excluded. See, e.g., Reliance Ins. Co. v. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co., 110 F.3d 253, 256-58 (5th Cir. 1997) (expert not allowed to present new opinion as to causation of accident after deadline for expert reports); Shalley v. City of Philadelphia, No. 94-5883, 1996 WL 210795, at *2 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 30, 1996) (excluding supplemental expert report that contained "many detailed test results, opinions, and statements" not in initial report); Shelter Mut. Ins. Co. v. Culbertson's Ltd., No. 97-1609, 1999 WL 135297, at *4 (E.D. La. Mar. 11, 1999) (excluding supplemental expert opinion that improperly opined as

[4]New York v. Westwood-Squibb Pharmaceutical Co., 981 F. Supp. 768 (W.D.N.Y. 1997), also does not support UST's claims. There, the court found no prejudice in an expert's opinion that was completely changed at trial, based on information that the expert obtained while preparing for trial. Id. at 779. The court found no prejudice -- even though the expert had not supplemented his opinion under Rule 26(e) -- because the changed testimony was adequately explored on cross-examination and did not prejudice the opposing party. Id. In this case, UST cannot assert any prejudice -- not only has it had Leftwich's opinion for several months, but it also has had particular reason to explore that opinion because it directly criticizes UST's own expert.

to an ultimate legal issue in the case and "touche[d] upon nothing . . . even mentioned in the first report"); Schweizer v. DEKALB Swine Breeders, Inc., 954 F. Supp. 1495, 1509-10 (D. Kan. 1997) (striking portions of expert report that were untimely supplements under Rule 26(e) and were fundamentally different from the expert's previous reports).

Here, Leftwich has provided no new opinion, but rather a bottom-line quantification of the results of part of his analysis in dollars, as opposed to market share. He has consistently criticized Scheffman, for the same reasons, in both his Rebuttal and Supplemental Reports, as well as at his deposition. His revisions constitute a timely supplementation under Rule 26(e), not a means to present a new opinion to the Court.[5]

Moreover, even if UST's argument had some merit, the Court should decline to impose the harsh sanction of exclusion of Leftwich's testimony for two reasons. See K.M.C. Co. v. Irving Trust Co., 757 F.2d 752, 765 (6th Cir. 1985) ("[W]e observe that exclusion of evidence is a drastic sanction."). First, UST has suffered no prejudice. Conwood has offered to make Leftwich available for a supplemental deposition and, in fact, the Magistrate Judge has ordered UST to take Leftwich's deposition at the earliest possible date. Second, Scheffman's model, which is the underpinning of Conwood damages of approximately $560 million, will be explored during cross-examination of Scheffman.

[5]UST also asserts that the basis of the alleged new opinion is particularly "outrageous." UST Suppl. Mem. at 11. But UST is fully aware that Leftwich's criticism of Scheffman in his Rebuttal Report was based on the same information. See UST Suppl. Mem. at 2 n.1. It is UST's complaint regarding that information that is tardy in this instance.

16diii004340

Thus, the same information may be adduced from UST's expert. Alternatively, if Scheffman declines to acknowledge the damages consequences of his own model, Leftwich's application of UST's own proof to support Conwood's damages can be used in Conwood's rebuttal case. See, e.g., K.M.C., 757 F.2d at 765 (rejecting argument that testimony of plaintiff's expert should have been excluded; noting defendant's cross-examination of expert and presentation of rebuttal expert evidence that was "repeatedly emphasized to the jury"). Conwood submits that it will be fairer to all parties, and easier for the jury to understand, if Leftwich is permitted fully to explain his analysis in plaintiffs' case-in-chief. Therefore, little but confusion and delay will be accomplished by the exclusion of Leftwich's testimony demanded by UST.

II. There Is No Basis To Exclude Leftwich's Testimony or Reports Under Federal Rule of Evidence 703 or Daubert

Despite much briefing on the application of Daubert to Leftwich's methodology, UST now seeks one more bite of that apple, throwing in a claim under Federal Rule of Evidence 703 for good measure.[6] Since Leftwich's Rebuttal Report (and deposition) months ago, it has been clear that he relied on Conwood's reports of UST's anticompetitive acts in critiquing Scheffman's analysis. UST never complained about that. Indeed, it is particularly curious that UST would now make such a complaint, in light of their own expert's reliance on a single page of information of [6]UST refers to Daubert throughout its Memorandum, but fails to articulate a basis for the exclusion of any part of Leftwich's Supplemental Report under that decision. It is Conwood's position that Leftwich's reports, testimony, and methodology are admissible under Daubert, and that the relevant issues have already been fully briefed to this Court.

---

16diii004341

unidentified origin that, according to his own testimony, he did not understand. See Scheffman Dep., 319-31; Plaintiffs' Opp'n to Mot. to Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 10-11 & n.7.[7]

A. The Fact That the Anticompetitive Acts Reports May Be Hearsay Does Not Preclude Leftwich's Reliance on Them

The Sixth Circuit has made clear that experts must be permitted to rely on hearsay statements to support their opinions. See Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.2d 708, 716-17 (6th Cir. 1999). This is the case even when the statements are made by an interested party. See Mannino v. International Mfg. Co., 650 F.2d 846, 853 (6th Cir. 1981) (approving expert's reliance on "information furnished him by plaintiff's attorney"); see also Kingsley Assocs., Inc. v. Del-Met, Inc., 918 F.2d 1277, 1287 (6th Cir. 1990) (approving of Mannino). The comments to Fed. R. Evid. 703 also contemplate such reliance. See Fed. R. Evid. 703 Advisory Committee's Notes ("a physician in his own practice bases his diagnosis on information from numerous sources and of considerable variety, including statements by patients and relatives").

Thus, UST errs in saying that there is a blanket prohibition on potentially biased survey data. See, e.g., Slaughter v. Southern Talc, 919 F.2d 304, 306-07 & nn. 1 & 5 (5th Cir. 1990) (expert's use of medical survey data received from plaintiffs was "not questioned," but particular data were excluded because they were sloppily compiled and refuted by the expert who relied on them); Soden v. Freightliner Corp., 714 F.2d 498, 503 (5th Cir. 1983) ("standing alone," the fact that statistics relied upon by expert that were unpublished, not given to the adverse party, "prepared strictly in anticipation of litigation," and "based on information received from a sister company" did not "suffice to impugn the reliability of the statistics;" additional circumstances supported exclusion, including lack of memorialization of what expert had relied on).[8]

[7]A copy of this document is attached at Exhibit A.

16diii004342

Contrary to UST's assertion (UST Suppl. Mem. at 16), the Sixth Circuit's opinion in Dallas & Mavis Forwarding Co. v. Stegall, 659 F.2d 721, 722 (6th Cir. 1981), does not support the proposition that experts may never rely on "biased eyewitnesses." In Stegall, an accident victim sought to introduce the testimony of a state trooper, as an accident expert, about what a biased eyewitness had reported. Id. at 722. In a brief opinion, the court rejected the proposed opinion of the trooper, noting that "[t]he trial process is better served when a biased eyewitness declarant is required to testify directly," and that permitting the eyewitness's "opinion to be heard through the testimony of an official would cloak it with an undeserved authority that could unduly sway a jury." Id. Although the court referenced Federal Rule of Evidence 703 in its opinion, its holding also stemmed from other concerns.[9]

[8]UST cites In re Agent Orange Product Liability Litigation, 611 F. Supp. 1223 (E.D.N.Y. 1985), for the proposition that surveys completed by plaintiffs that constitute "specific anecdotal evidence" cannot be relied upon by experts. UST Suppl. Mem. at 16. That summary oversimplifies the court's holding, in which the court noted that the medical expert could "have obtained more persuasive medical and other records" and that the plaintiffs had no incentive to fill out the surveys truthfully. Agent Orange Litig., 611 F. Supp. at 1247.

[9]Likewise in Law v. NCAA, 185 F.R.D. 324 (D. Kan. 1999), in which a proffered expert called people throughout the industry to

B. The Anticompetitive Acts Reports Are Reliable

UST also asserts that the reports used by Leftwich are inherently unreliable. But UST errs as a matter of fact and law. Factually, there were no built in assumptions in Conwood's survey: in reporting misconduct by UST, "never" and "none" were options; indeed, UST purports to point to eleven such examples (out of 226). See UST Suppl. Mem. at 14-15 & App. D. As the declarations indicate on their face, moreover, all reported misconduct is based upon the declarant's knowledge or belief.

More significantly still, even assuming UST's (unsupported) suggestion that Conwood representatives "overreported" UST's misconduct to be true, see UST Suppl. Mem. at 12, that has no bearing on Leftwich's analysis. Leftwich used the Conwood survey only to show that a statistical correlation exists between UST's level of exclusionary conduct in a state and Conwood's market share. In states with high levels of reported UST exclusionary activity, Conwood's share is lower, and vice versa. For UST's theory about misreporting to call into question Leftwich's study, UST would have to show that Conwood representatives systematically overreported UST misconduct in states where Conwood share is low and underreported UST misconduct in states where Conwood share is high. There is simply no way that Conwood representatives could have skewed their anticompetitive conduct seek their input for his damages computations. The court concluded that no evidence was presented to indicate that the proffered expert had behaved like an expert economist and upheld a ruling that he could only testify as a lay witness. Id. at 341. Here, Leftwich is providing expert analysis of many factors, including data he received from Conwood, using standard economic methodologies. There is no basis for excluding his opinions because of that data.

reports in such a baroque manner, and certainly no record basis for suggesting they did. To the contrary, the testimony of another Conwood expert, Morton Kamien, and Scheffman's own analysis, confirm that where Conwood had fewer facings -- such as in areas subject to more anticompetitive conduct -- Conwood's sales were lower.

Legally, UST cites no decisions that support the conclusion it seeks. As is explained above, Slaughter and Soden did not exclude evidence for the reasons that UST asserts in this case -- just because it is survey evidence prepared by a potentially interested party. Ricciardi v. Children's Hospital Medical Center, 811 F.2d 18, 25 (1st Cir. 1987), concerned an expert's reliance on "a handwritten comment from an unknown source buried in a three-page [medical] consultation report" that was so unusual that the expert himself "characteriz[ed]" it "as `bizarre.'" That accurately characterizes the obscure handwritten note relied on by Scheffman, but it does not apply to Leftwich's survey data. In Marcel v. Placid Oil Co., 11 F.3d 563, 567-68 (5th Cir. 1994), the court's major complaint with the worklife expectancy study upon which defendant's expert relied was that it provided no comparison by which to judge if plaintiff's worklife was average. The opinion cannot be read to suggest that the survey itself was inherently inadmissible. See id. at 567 (noting that if defendant had adequately developed expert's "discussion of the . . . study in the context of relevant general economic evidence," there would be a "closer question" whether the district court abused its discretion in excluding the survey).

The Conwood sales force survey is reliable for the purpose for which Leftwich has employed it. UST has presented no valid argument why Leftwich's Supplemental Report should not be admitted. Therefore, Conwood requests that UST's Motion in Limine to exclude portions of Leftwich's Supplemental Report be denied, and that the Court also deny UST's requests that Leftwich's testimony or reports be excluded under Federal Rule of Evidence 703 and Daubert. Conwood has previously submitted Proposed Orders to this effect. See Pls.' Opp'n to Mot. to Preclude "Undisclosed Expert Witness Materials" (filed Feb. 6, 2000); Pls.' Opp'n to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich (filed Dec. 10, 1999).

Dear Mr. Bryant:

I found two insects (beetles) in the four pieces of tape and the tobacco in the can of Kodiak brand smokeless tobacco which you sent for examination. One beetle is larger than the other and may represent a male and female of the same species. They are a species of weevil not known as a stored product pest. They probably normally are found on flowers and probably fly to lights. I will send these insects to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. as soon as I obtain the required paperwork which must accompany them. The paperwork will state that the insects were sent by a buyer in the northeastern U.S. as contaminants of a product made in Tennessee, and will request the identification and information on the geographic distribution of the species involved. It often takes a while to receive the information back. I will notify you as soon as I receive it.

If you have any questions, call me at 601-977-8000.

Sincerely,

9/27 - these insects are from the complaint that's attached. RB

To Whomit May Ccern,

I wrote to you about two weeks Ago in regards to finding 4 Beatles in my tin of Chewing tobacco. I was very impressed at your immediate reply to the situation. Your Sales Representative was in my business one day after telephone Contact with you. However after further thought I feel the matter was not properly handled by your company. I feel there was no consideration on your company's behalf for the mental anguish I have suffered from the fact that I had Live Tobacco beatles in my tin of Chewing tobacco. This incident has not only caused me to vomit, and have an upset Stomach, It has made me not only question what I put In mouth, I constantly check my food or drink for fear of Eating bugs. I do not think it is fear for your company to feel that by giving free samples of Chewing tobacco that I will forget about this matter. In fact your free samples went into the trash. I have no desire to Chew tobacco anymore. This was something I once enjoyed but how can I enjoy it anymore knowing that there may be beatle eggs or beatle fragments in the chewing tobacco. Please try and picture what it would be like to have a live insect crawl out of your mouth, then to remove the contents of the chewing tobacco from your mouth and find 3 large beatles that were between my cheek and gum. No where on your tin does it state that this product may contain insects. I feel a monetary settlement would be appropriate for me to get over this incident which occured to me. I have spoken to my attourney in regards to this incident and he suggested to write you again in this incident to settle this matter. If we can settle this matter amongst ourselves that will be fine with me. However if you choose not to, he would be more than happy to resolve this matter for me. This incident is by no means understandable it is just Disgusting.

RE: Consumer complaint

Tommy,

I visited with Mr. Davis this week about the problem he had with Kodiak long cut. He said that the ten cans he purchased all tasted the same. He said that the product tasted like burnt wood and it made his tongue swell up and he had to go to the hospital emergency room. He didn't say how long his tongue stayed swollen. He gave me two can of this back and he said that he purchased this at Rhodes 101 there in St. Gen.
This gentleman dips two cans a day and his only concern was that there was a problem with our Kodiak and we were going to change this or take it off the market.
I told Mr. Davis that I appreciated his letter and that we were not going to take this off the market. I also gave Mr. Davis some samples of Kodiak to take care of the ones that he sent in to the office and the ones that he gave me.

After I visited with Mr. Davis I visited the convenience store that he purchased this at. I talked with the Debbie the manager and she said that Mr. Davis brought back eight cans of this back and she had these under the counter in a sack. The two cans that I got from him do not match the eight cans in the sack at the store. I picked all eight cans up and I am sending this to the office along with the two cans from Mr. Davis.

If you need something else on this please let me know.

Sincerely,

G.W. Ryan

Gentlemen:

My name is Patrick Hale. I'm an avid chewer of Kodiak snuff and have been chewing this product for approximately 10 years. I average a can a day. I am a vendor for Central Dairy Company of this city. Today while I was on my route and just finished eating my lunch and my mouth was watering for a chew of Kodiak, like it always does, (I opened a new can of Kodiak this morning and had two chews out of the can) but when I reached for my third, I felt something in the bottom of my can of Kodiak. I dug around and found this horrifying object. I still don't know what it is. That's why I'm sending it to you. Hopefully I won't find objects like this anymore or I'll be forced to switch brands of snuff.

Sincerely,

Patrick Hale

Dear Sir/Ma'am;

I am a long time user of your KODIAK brand wintergreen smokeless tobacco. I have used this brand with total satisfaction for ten years now. None of the other brands of wintergreen smokeless have as good a flavor or texture, or satisfy as well.

However, today I found what appeared to be part of a worm in my can of KODIAK. Now, I am a farmer and necessarily not squeamish, but I found this just a bit disagreeable. Knowing as I do where tobacco comes from, I can see the possibility of this happening. Nonetheless, maybe a little more care needs to be taken in the sorting process.

Now before you get alarmed, I don't want any compensation, and am not going to sue anyone. Personally, I consider people who react to everything with a lawsuit or a demand for money to be crazy as a pet 'coon and good candidates for the loony bin. I just wanted to bring a potential problem to your attention.

Thank you for your kind consideration.

Cordially,
Dennis Nevins, Brazil, IN.

Dear Mr. Shuler:

Thank you for your letter regarding the problem you encountered with our chewing tobacco. Complaints are quite disturbing; however, we sincerely appreciate the interest you have shown by bringing this problem to our attention.

We certainly regret that you experienced a problem with stems in our tobacco. Your complaint has been forwarded to our Quality Control Department. We use both special leaf processing machines and highly skilled tobacco graders to remove stems. We are continuing to take every practical measure possible to eliminate this problem. We want you know that we will do our best to see that the tobacco you receive is as free of stems as we can possibly make it.

We believe that our experience over many years in the tobacco industry justifies our belief that we produce the highest quality tobacco products available. We are, nevertheless, continually reevaluating and upgrading our quality control program. Reports from consumers like you are of great assistance in this effort.

If you will be kind enough to write us again and tell us which of our tobacco brands you were referring to in your letter, we will be happy to send you some complimentary samples of that brand. Your comments are always welcomed.

Dear Mr. Combs,

This is a written follow-up to our telephone conversation on Tuesday, June 11, 1996. This is in reference to your letter dated May 30, 1996 regarding a consumer complaint. The consumer's name is Mr. Gerald Duane Blanks, Rte. 1 Box 1745, Spout Spring, Va.

I contacted Mr. Blanks by telephone on June 5, 1996 and visited with him on Monday, June 10, 1996. Mr. Blanks told me that there were some small pieces of what appeared to be wood mixed in with the snuff. He said that it caused some discomfort, but he really did not pay much attention to it until the last can. He said that this can had a couple of pieces that were approximately one half of an inch long and one quarter of an inch wide. That was when he decided to write his letter of complaint. He discarded all but one can, which I am forwarding to you. He said that he sent in the two pieces of wood in a plastic bag along with his letter to Memphis.

I gave Mr. Blanks some samples and he was very appreciative. He said that he was not upset with Conwood, just concerned with the problem and thought Conwood would like to know. He assured me that he will continue to use Kodiak Straight and enjoys it greatly.

This was a very pleasant conversation.

Sincerely,

Larry Steele

To Whom It May Concern;

I am writing on behalf of myself, and my boyfriend. He chews 3-4 cans of Kodiak a week. He has done this for the past six years.

Up until now Kodiak has been a good brand. His last three cans has had substances like twigs in them. It tears his inner lip and hurts. We have purchased four cans in the past day and a half. I am very disappointed. We consider our-selves valued customers, and are very let down.

Please respond soon!

To Conwood Company,

I am a long time user of your product, Kodiak smokeless tobacco, and I don't usually complain but I feel a need to here. Enclosed is a sharp stick found in my can of tobacco that cut my lip pretty good. I know that sometimes things get by but this is the second time its happened with in a month. I don't know if the cans serial number will help in solving the problem I've never had a problem before with your product, I hope I just got a couple of unlucky cans. serial # :422941

Dear Mr. Ganz:

We received your letter of May 11 concerning our Kodiak smokeless tobacco and we certainly appreciate your taking the time to write. It is always a pleasure to hear from one of our fine loyal customers like you.

I will attempt to answer the question you have posed regarding the contents of our Kodiak smokeless tobacco. While I am not familiar with all of the ingredients of Kodiak since the formulation is of a confidential nature, I can assure you that Kodiak contains no Fiberglas particles. Our manufacturing process consists of many stringent procedures to eliminate foreign materials. Our efforts, therefore, are directed toward removing foreign materials and certainly do not include the addition of any foreign materials.

I would be most appreciative if you could provide me with any information as to the original source of this rumor.

Again, I certainly want to stress to you that our Kodiak product does not contain Fiberglas and also, extend to you our appreciation for your loyalty and interest in Kodiak.

To whom it may concern,

Concerning your product "Kodiak Smokeless Tobacco", I was wondering what goes into each tin. I have an outstanding bet going with a friend that Kodiak contains fiberglass particles to enhance the chewing pleasure. We are very satisfied with your product, regardless of contents, but could you please help us solve this dispute? Also I am very pleased with the fullness of each tin, many other companies only partially fill the tins, ripping me off. Keep up the good work.

Dear Hardy:

On Thursday September 26, 1996, I got a call from Ken Washer, my DSM. He informed that Mr. Tommy Combs had contacted him about a compliant that he had received from a consumer. I took all the information and phoned that gentleman on Thursday night and spoke with him and set up a time to meet him on Friday morning.

I meet with Mr. Michael Bishop in his home town on Friday September 27, 1996. The complaint that he had was on Garrett Moist snuff. He had several cans that he had saved for me. The cans were coded 122H6. The product has a slight ammonia smell to them and the taste has a bad after taste. I took a dip out of some of the cans and confirmed that it did have a bad after taste. He claims that he has been having this problem for a little while. I am sending you one of the cans so the lab can run a test or do whatever they do to it, to help find the problem.

This man likes the product but, he does not like finding these problems. This is the second time this year that I have talked to this man about this problem.

He would like for the office to contact him and tell him what they have found. He does not know if it just a string of bad luck finding these cans or if his taste buds are failing him. I am sending you one of his business cards, in case Mr. Combs or you need to speak to him.

Sincerely;

Re; Consumer complaint on Kodiak

Dear Hardy,

Today, I was making calls in Emmett Idaho, while making my first call a consumer came into the store and asked for a can of Kodiak. The store was out of stock and I told the consumer to hold up while I went to get a roll out of my van so the store would not lose the sale. When I came back in the store, the consumer asked me if I worked for Kodiak, which I replied I did. He said what great timing. He said he had purchased a can of Kodiak down the street at the Maverick Store yesterday. and took a chew and noticed that it didn't taste or smell the same as past cans. He said with in a few minutes, he felt something wasn't right with the can of chew so he proceeded to spit the chew out and became light headed and felt like he was going to get sick to his stomach. He said he took the can home and did not chew any more that day. He told me he had planned to send the can to us to see if there was a problem with the product and was wondering if we had changed the formulation on Kodiak. He proceeded to open the can of chew which he just purchased from this store I was in and didn't take a dip, but smelled it and said that it smells exactly the same as the can from yesterday that almost made him sick.

I asked him for the can he had purchased yesterday at Maverick and he said it was at home. I asked him if we could go get it and I would send it in and have it checked. He said he was on his way to Boise. I said I would really appreciate it if we could go to your home and pickup the can in question. I offered to drive him back to his house to get it and he said that was okay, he would run home and get it. He seemed as if he didn't want me to go with him, so I told him I would wait for him at this store and finish my call while he went and got the can of Kodiak. He was gone about five minutes and then returned with the can. I met him outside at my van and got the can. He wanted me to smell it and see if I could tell if something was wrong. I smelled it and did notice a different smell compared to the can he had just purchased, but I didn't let him know I thought anything was different between the two cans. He said it had a vitamin E type of smell to it. In smelling it I felt it had a strong ammonia smell to it, which I didn't smell in the other can. He was afraid to take a dip of the new can he had just purchased because he felt that both cans had the same smell. I opened up my van because I knew I had some saleable manufactured in January and opened up a can and had him see if he could tell the difference. He said the January product smelled right and then proceeded to take a dip and said now this is the Kodiak I'm used to. He said I think you guys have changed the formulation haven't you. I assured him we didn't change the formulation on Kodiak. I explained that Kodiak is the top selling Wintergreen and as the old saying goes "If it ain't broke don't fix it". I had about 6 cans of the January saleable and gave it all to him in exchange for the two cans in questions and for his troubles. I also gave him my business card and assured him that I would send the cans in question to our office today to have them checked out. I got his name, address and telephone number and also told him I would put a Kodiak T-Shirt and Coffee Mug in the mail to him.

Throughout this entire ordeal he was very pleasant and was not upset, just more concerned that maybe we had changed the formulation on Kodiak. He said he had chewed Kodiak for years and this was the first time he had ever had a can that made him feel sick. I told him I was not aware of any other consumer complaints but I appreciated him giving me the can and letting me now of his concern and I would defiantly send the product in today and have it checked out. I told him he had my name and number and if he had any further problems to please let me now.

His name, address and phone number is: Steve Kono, 2246 E Locust, Emmett Idaho, (208) 365-1582. I would say he was in his middle to late 40's in age and his demeanor was very pleasant and cooperative.

The can that he said made him almost sick to his stomach, I have placed a black X by the K in Kodiak on top of the can and the code on the bottom of the can reads 2 Y A28C6, the can he purchased today from stock I took into the store that he says smells the same, has a code of 2 Y B21C6. I'm also sending you a can of the same code as the 6 cans I gave him which he said was ok, and that code is 1 C31A6.

If you have or need any additional information, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Ed Caron III

Dear Management:

A recent purchase of your Kodiak Wintergreen Smokeless Tobacco was quite disappointing. It was purchased about a month ago at the Seventh Street Stationary store in Garden City, Long Island. Unfortunately, I didn't get the lot number off the product.

Kodiak has been a brand favorite of mine for six years and I've always enjoyed the consistency in the product. This particular tin had it's seal intact, but upon opening it, I noticed it was only about three quarters full and smelled and tasted like rubbing alcohol.

Since distribution on Long Island is so limited, and just finding Kodiak is an accomplishment, then to have the tin I bought be so bad, I now consider purchasing one of the more widely available Skoal products.

Please be more attentive over quality control and try to increase distribution here on the island. Thank you for your time.

CASE NO. 5:98CV-108-R

CONWOOD COMPANY L.P., ET AL. — PLAINTIFFS

v. MEMORANDUM, OPINION AND ORDER

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. — DEFENDANTS

INTRODUCTION

This antitrust case is before the court on the motion for summary judgment of defendant United States Tobacco ("UST") (Docket#208) and the cross-motion for partial summary judgment of Conwood Company (Docket #207). In this extensively litigated case, Conwood has challenged the moist snuff marketing practices of its rival UST. For the reasons set out below, the court concludes that only through the development at trial of a full factual record can there be an appropriate determination of whether UST's practices concerning exclusive racks and exclusive point-of-sale advertising constitute the illegal maintenance of monopoly power through anticompetitive practices. Likewise, market definition issues cannot be decided without a trial. Accordingly, the court will deny the motions for summary judgment.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND OF THE ANTITRUST LITIGATION

This case involves moist snuff,[1] a form of tobacco used orally by consumers by placing a small amount between the cheek and gum. The product is generally sold in round cans in retail stores, including convenience markets, mass merchandisers such as Wal-mart, and other outlets where snacks, sodas, cigarettes, and other convenience items can be readily bought. The cans are typically kept by the retailer in a gravity-fed rack, so that cans drop down through slots, also called "facings." These racks are often located by the check-out counter. The racks, in addition to storing the cans, also provide a place for point-of-sale advertising, sometimes referred to as "header cards." The number of slots in a rack is significant, as it affects not only the overall of the rack but the number of products which a customer will see. As is common in cons product merchandising, the placement of the rack, the arrangement of the point-of-sale advertising, and the display of competing products within the racks are all areas of co among moist snuff manufacturers. Each manufacturer wants its product displayed most prominently and strategically, and wants to maximize its point-of-sale advertising.

Point-of-sale advertising is commonplace in convenience merchandising, whether it involves colas, beer, snack foods, or other products. According to Conwood, however, it assumes an unusual importance in the tobacco industry, because of the significant limitations which state and federal law place on media advertising of tobacco products. While consumers can enjoy the antics of the Budweiser lizards or the Energizer bunny, there is no comparable television and radio exposure for tobacco companies. Thus, in the Conwood theory, point-of-sale advertising is especially critical because it represents the principal means of communicating with consumers. In the plaintiff's view, any restrictions on point-of-sale advertising are likely to have a seriously dampening effect on competition.

Conwood asserts that it moved from being a small player in the moist snuff market to presenting a significant challenge to UST, through the introduction of new "rough-cut" and "long-cut" products, through the introduction of different product packaging in the form of plastic cans with longer shelf lives, and through the introduction of price-competitive "price-value" products. These facts, if proven at trial, would tend to show the kind of "merits" competition which markets ideally provide, in which price and product innovation drive competition and provide benefits to consumers.

Conwood's proof developed in discovery, to some extent, tends to show that, in response to growth in the price-value market, UST engaged in a campaign, directed by high-level management, to "actively pursue strategies to limit the growth of the price-value market." Arguably, the strategy selected by UST management was not to compete on price (a strategy which apparently caused a stunning one-day drop in the market valuation of Philip Morris stock when it cut cigarette prices), but to limit the distribution at retail outlets of competing brands of moist snuff. This strategy, as Conwood paints it, was designed to "eliminate competitive distribution" and to seek "exclusive vending" and "vendor exclusivity."

Of course, generalized statements by corporate executives in internal documents do not by themselves constitute antitrust law violations. However, the proof which Conwood has developed through discovery could show that a highly focused UST campaign sought to have its vending racks be the exclusive outlet for all moist snuff in retail stores. The effect of such rack exclusivity would be to give UST control over the point-of-sale advertising, since all header cards would have to be displayed on UST racks. In addition, such an arrangement, in which all products from all manufacturers are dispensed from UST racks, would tend to allow UST to reduce significantly the kinds and numbers of competitive products displayed by the retailer.

Conwood's discovery proof arguably demonstrates that UST's efforts to eliminate competing racks were significantly successful. This elimination of competing racks was accomplished through a variety of sophisticated techniques, including "crew drives," the use of the alleged subterfuge of "category management" services to small retailers as a method to elbow out Conwood and other competing products, and unilateral conduct such as UST sales personnel "cleaning up" the display areas. Conwood has developed evidence that it was the practice of UST sales personnel to obtain nominal permission to remove racks from harried and inexperienced convenience store employees who might lack the knowledge or gumption to resist the control which UST sales personnel exerted over the displays. Conwood also used explicit contractual agreements with retailers.

Conwood's proof further tends to demonstrate that the effect of these "exclusive vending" practices was to reduce the space allocated to moist snuff in retail outlets, to exclude competing advertisements at the point-of-sale, to increase slot width in the racks so as to make fewer consumer choices available, and to manage the presentation of products in the UST racks so that slow-moving UST products would "crowd out" price-value products by occupying scarce slots in the racks. In addition to an organized category management program, UST also pursued a Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") which arguably required preferred positioning for UST products and POS advertising.

The court emphasizes that it does not here find that Conwood will succeed in proving that these events occurred, or that they occurred to the extent alleged, but only that Conwood has raised sufficient factual basis for the issues to be presented at trial rather than rejected through summary judgment.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE PARTIES' ARGUMENTS

In a carefully and vigorously argued series of pleadings which focus on certain specific antitrust issues, UST asserts that Conwood has failed to make out a triable § 2 antitrust case against it. For purposes of the summary judgment motion only, UST does not challenge many of Conwood's factual predicates. UST, for example, does not contest in this motion that it possesses monopoly power, although it seriously disputes that it has acquired and maintained it willfully. (UST memorandum in support of summary judgment at p. 14.) Likewise, in its reply memorandum, UST does not contest that it has acted with the intent to eliminate as much competitive distribution as possible; that it has acted to obtain exclusive rack and rack-P.O.S. agreements with retailers; or that its conduct has made it difficult for Conwood to place its products and to increase its sales. (UST reply memorandum at pp. 5-6).

Instead of contesting directly many of the principal factual assertions, UST rather argues that, even under the best view of these facts which Conwood might prove, Conwood cannot establish either an antitrust violation or antitrust injury. UST contends that Conwood cannot establish any "exclusionary" conduct in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act. (UST memorandum at p. 14). Rather than directly meet Conwood's factually detailed assertions of willful exercise of monopoly power, UST characterizes its practices as failing to meet a narrow test of § 2 violations. For example, UST argues that its exclusionary rack practices cannot be illegal because they do not constitute the kind of exclusive dealing which would be condemned under other sections of the antitrust laws (see memorandum in opposition at pp. 17-21), and asserts that the other misconduct is nothing more than "ordinary business practices" (UST memorandum in opposition at pp. 25-37). UST continues this line of argument in its reply memorandum, contending that Conwood's case is a fatally thin "monopoly broth" which fails to prove any independent antitrust violation (UST reply memorandum at pp. 18 et seq.).

Conwood, in response to the UST motion, has prepared a highly detailed and possibly credible factual case based on extensive discovery, both documentary and by deposition. While it remains to be seen whether Conwood's assertion of the facts will be proven persuasively at trial to the jury, its factual chronology, if true, appears to assert an abuse – a willful exercise – of monopoly power by UST.

Conwood's case centers on a variety of interrelated practices which, in its view, constitute a coordinated, effective course of action by a monopolist which already enjoys a very high market share, profit margins among the highest in American industry, and limited competition without new market entrants. Most importantly, Conwood's version of the facts, if proven, could be interpreted by the jury to constitute a serious effort by a monopolist to suppress a competitor, not through competition on price, product innovation, or other merits, but based on exclusionary practices which are uniquely available to UST because of its longstanding market dominance.

Moreover, Conwood contends, UST's practice of excluding Conwood from point-of-sale advertising is unusually effective because of the many restrictions which federal and state law place on the advertising of tobacco products; thus, restricting or eliminating point-of-sale advertising by Conwood arguably has an unusually restrictive impact on Conwood's ability to compete based on price, product innovation and design, and the like.

The court is very careful to note that it does not adopt or endorse Conwood's view of the facts. Whether Conwood can persuade a jury, after a trial with witnesses and experts, of the truth of its case theory is not for the court to say on summary judgment. The issue before the court now is whether a trial is the appropriate procedure to resolve these factually intensive and hotly disputed claims.

LEGAL STANDARDS AND ANALYSIS

Both Conwood and UST point to the same general standard to applied to § 2 claims, stemming from the venerable Grinnell decision of the Supreme Court. As the Sixth Circuit recently observed,

> The offense of monopolization under Section 2 has two elements: "(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 86 S.Ct. 1698, 16 L.Ed.2d 778 (1966).

Re/Max International, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995 (6th Cir. 1999). Only the "willful acquisition or maintenance" part of the test is at issue, as UST assumes arguendo for summary judgment purposes that it possesses monopoly power. (UST memorandum at p. 14.)

It is the application of the Grinnell-Re/Max standard to these facts which is in dispute. UST vigorously argues that Conwood falls far short of the mark, and that its "monopoly broth" is really nothing more than "stone soup." In pressing this argument, UST repeatedly asserts that

16diii004438

Conwood has not proven exclusive dealing by UST, that isolated incidents of bad behavior and "dirty tricks" in handling Conwood racks are not the stuff of antitrust lawsuits, and that Conwood has pointed to nothing more than vigorous competition of the kind invited, not condemned, by the antitrust laws.

There are two shortcomings in UST's argument. First, its abstract treatise on antitrust laws sidesteps the carefully developed, thoroughly documented record which Conwood has amassed. Whether Conwood can prevail at trial on its theories is uncertain, but Conwood has marshalled a significant amount of proof that UST engaged in a concerted campaign, directed from the highest levels of UST, designed to shut Conwood out from effective competition at retail outlets through the elimination of Conwood racks, the elimination of Conwood point-of-sale advertising, all in an unusual market for tobacco products where point-of-sale is the central marketplace battleground. Second, as discussed below, UST's attempts to pick apart Conwood's arguments would have the court examine the leaves and ignore the forest, something not mandated by the antitrust laws.

"'Anticompetitive conduct' can come in too many forms, and is too dependent upon context, for any court or commentator ever to have enumerated all the varieties." Carribean Broadcasting System, Ltd. v. Cable & Wireless, 148 F.3d 1080, 1087 (D.C. Cir. 1998). Thus, UST's "deconstruction" of the Conwood claims into a series of discrete antitrust theories, which UST then individually seeks to knock down, does not compel the summary judgement dismissal of this case. Caldera , Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., Case No. 2:96-CV-645(B), 1999 WL 1067490 (D. Utah Nov. 3, 1999). Instead, the court should use as its touchstone well-accepted principles of § 2 law.

The key to the second prong of the Grinnell test is the use by a defendant of anticompetitive conduct "to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor." Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Services, Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 482-83

(1992) (quoting United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 107 (1948)). The Supreme Court has directed the trial courts to condemn "exclusionary" or "anticompetitive" or "predatory" conduct, see, Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 602 (1985); the court must distinguish the improper "exclusionary" conduct from the permitted competition by a monopolist based on "superior product" and "business acumen," as permitted by Grinnell.

The distinction between the impermissible anticompetitive conduct by a monopolist and the lawful maintenance of its market share is based on determining if the defendant "has been 'attempting to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency.'" Aspen, 472 U.S. at 605, (quoting R. Bork, The Antitrust Paradox 138 (1978)). The Supreme Court in Aspen went on to quote from Professors Areeda and Turner:

> Thus, 'exclusionary' comprehends at the most behavior that not only (1) tends to impair the opportunities of rivals, but also (2) either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way.

III P. Areeda & D. Turner, Antitrust Law 78 (1978). An important part of the inquiry, as directed by the Eastman Kodak Court, is whether conduct which impairs a rivals' opportunities can be justified by "valid business reasons." Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 483, (quoting Aspen, 472 U.S. at 605). In Eastman, the Court held that there were triable issues of monopolization where there were reasons to doubt the validity and sufficiency of the business justifications asserted for the conduct.

Here, UST does not, at the summary judgment stage of the proceedings, attempt to show conclusively that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. This falls short of the proof which would be required to prevail on the § 2 claims, particularly in view of the numerous record comments from high level UST personnel which arguably show an anticompetitive intent rather than a business justification for the exclusionary POS practices.

Other circuits have focused on the issue whether the defendant's conduct served a legitimate purpose and whether it impaired the opportunity of rivals more than necessary to serve such a legitimate purpose. See, e.g., Data General Corp. v. Grumman Syst. Support Corp., 36 F. 3d 1147 (1st Cir. 1994); Instructional Syst. Devel. Corp. v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., 817 F.2d 639 (10th Cir. 1987).

At a minimum, these issues require the development of proof at trial, not summary disposition. While UST is correct that there is no rule which makes summary judgment improper in all circumstances in antitrust cases, their factual nuances and complexity may require a full rather than a truncated inquiry, for monopolization as well as other claims.

Recent Sixth Circuit case law demonstrates the need of the district court to apply careful restraint in using summary judgment to reject antitrust claims. In Re/Max Int'l. Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995 (6th Cir. 1999), the court overturned a grant of summary judgment to the defendants which had been entered by the trial court.. The challenged trade practice in the Re/Max decision was significantly different from this case; the plaintiff realty firm disputed the "adverse split" policy of the defendants with respect to the division of real estate commissions between buyers' agents and sellers' agents. The lengthy opinion discusses a number of § 1 problems, but also addresses the issue whether summary judgment was appropriately entered on behalf of the defendants on plaintiff's § 2 monopolization claim. In a detailed discussion of the factors which may be used to prove the relevant geographic market and what a plaintiff must show alternatively to prove exclusion of competition in a monopolization case , the Sixth Circuit held that there was a question of fact whether there had been "actual, sustained adverse effects on competition." Id. at 1019. Similarly, the present case presents complex questions of fact, which can be resolved only through trial, as to whether the sustained effects on competition which are preliminarily suggested by plaintiff's proof in the discovery record can be proven sufficiently before a jury.

16diii004441

One recent decision is worth particular mention. In R.J. Reynolds Tobacco v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999), the trial court granted a motion for preliminary injunction in a case involving a challenge to a Philip Morris promotional program which gave preferred position to Philip Morris products in retail outlets. In ruling that this program likely constituted exclusionary conduct, the trial court lent significance to the advertising restrictions in the tobacco industry, which apply to moist snuff as well as to cigarettes:

> [V]isibility and advertising at the point of purchase are uniquely critical to competition in the cigarette industry as competitors lack significant alternative advertising channels to compensate for the lack of visibility at the point of purchase.

Id. at 511. Thus, other trial courts have found that point-of-sale restrictions may have an unusually strong exclusionary effect in the tobacco industry because of restrictions on broadcast media advertising.

UST also argues that summary judgment is appropriate in its favor because Conwood's case is flawed in its attempt to prove that antitrust injury flowed from the supposed violations of the Sherman Act; alternatively, it argues that the damages asserted are speculative and are not caused by the actions of UST.

This theory, like the summary judgment argument on the question whether the Sherman Act was violated, must fail because of the fact-intensive nature of the dispute at bar. Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these topics are the issue whether the damage claimed by Conwood is caused by UST, or instead is the result of independent, uncoerced decisions by retailers; whether the damage theory of Professor Leftwich, plaintiff's expert, can withstand challenge under Daubert v. Merrill Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), or other antitrust damage law principles; whether the effects on competition and on Conwood which plaintiff claims are the result of actions by UST at all, or other market forces; and other matters.

None of these topics is susceptible to resolution on the current record, without the testing of facts which a jury trial presents. The law in the Sixth Circuit does not require the district court to "short circuit" such a potentially complex inquiry without a trial. Plaintiff need only show an injury of the type which the antitrust laws were drafted to prevent and which flows from defendant's unlawful practices. See, e.g., Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477 (1977); Arthur S. Lengenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 729 F.2d 1050 (6th Cir.1984); Chrysler Corp. v. Fedders Corp., 643 F.2d 1229 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 893 (1981). The court does not wish to underemphasize the burden which plaintiff must meet at trial, but only to indicate that the detailed record on discovery prevents the summary disposition of issues.

The court re-emphasizes that the questions of whether these practices took place, how extensive they were, how much they were orchestrated by top management and how much by sporadic local efforts by "rogue" sales personnel, how effective they were in restraining or eliminating competition, whether they were eagerly sought by retailers or imposed by fast-talking, experienced UST representatives on sleepy seventeen year old nighttime sales clerks – all these are issues which can be resolved only by a jury. The court does not presume to determine how they will be resolved – only that they present serious issues of material fact.

CONWOOD MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Conwood itself has moved for partial summary judgment with respect to the issues of whether the relevant market is moist snuff in the United States, and whether UST possesses monopoly power in that market. In addition, Conwood seeks summary disposition of UST's counterclaims under the Lanham Act and state law.

Just as there are many "hotly disputed" questions of fact on the § 2 liability claims of Conwood, so too are there many "hotly disputed" questions of fact on market definition which prevent a summary ruling. (See UST memorandum in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment at p. 3.) While UST agrees that the relevant geographic market is the entire

United States (see fn. 2 at p. 2 of its memorandum in opposition), UST seriously disputes the product definition offered by Conwood. UST asserts that there are questions of fact for the jury as to whether the relevant product market is broader than Conwood asserts, perhaps including all smokeless tobacco products, such as loose leaf chewing tobacco; alternatively, UST suggests that the product market could be segmented into separate product markets for natural and flavored moist snuff.

It is undisputed that Conwood, as plaintiff, has the burden of proving market definition. Given the extensive nature of discovery and conflicting factual accounts of the marketplace, the prevalence of serious expert opinion disagreements, and the obvious factor that the court is denying UST's summary judgment motion and setting the matter for trial, it would be unwarranted (and inconsistent) for this court to rule in a summary fashion on the product market. See Telecomm. Tech. Servs., Inc. v. Siemens Rolm Communications, Inc., 66 F. Supp.2d 1306 (N.D.Ga. 1998). Indeed, virtually everything about this litigation is, in UST's accurate characterization, "hotly disputed," and only a trial can resolve these issues.

Finally, in light of the denial of summary judgment both on the section two liability and product market motions, there is no basis for granting summary judgment to Conwood on UST's Lanham Act and state law claims. They may indeed prove out to be minor "tag along" theories, but the court will overrule Conwood's motion and permit them to proceed to trial with the vastly more extensive antitrust issues.

Ultimately, the present issue for the court is whether it should step into this complex, extensive litigation and call it to a halt without a trial. In order to do so, the court would have to conclude that there is no dispute of material fact. UST's argument concedes, for summary judgment purposes only, many of the facts which Conwood would have to prove at trial, thus nimbly taking many disputed issues out of the analysis. Instead, argues UST, taking the best version of the facts which the record might show for Conwood, there still is lacking any antitrust violation. However, this is simply too narrow a view of this dispute, and the court cannot say with certainty that no trial should take place in order to measure the extent, purpose, effect, and competitive impact of the broad exclusionary campaign which Conwood seeks to prove. Whether Conwood can carry this significant burden at trial is not for the court to say on summary judgment; however, the court concludes that on a cold summary judgment record it cannot resolve this matter fairly or within the meaning of Rule 56 and applicable case law on summary judgment practice. Likewise, the issues of product market definition cannot be determined summarily.

A trial is unavoidable; indeed, a trial is the very device which the law contemplates for the resolution of this kind of dispute.

CONCLUSION

Skillful counsel for both sides have vigorously presented the court with a broad range of briefing on critical issues in this case. While each case is unique on its facts, the factual bases asserted by Conwood here are sufficiently within the range of conduct which, if proven at trial, may form the basis for a jury determination of § 2 liability. Whether a jury, with the benefit of a full factual presentation, will assess UST's conduct as justified, vigorous competition in the marketplace, or an impermissible, unjustified series of exclusionary acts by a monopolist, is an issue which this court cannot decide on summary judgment. The case abounds with material factual issues, it presents an adequate legal foundation to withstand motion practice, and it will be judged at trial and not on briefs alone. The motions for summary judgment of both UST and Conwood are denied. (Docket #s207 & 208)

The number of slots in a rack is significant, as it affects not only the overall of the rack but the number of products which a customer will see. As is common in cons product merchandising, the placement of the rack, the arrangement of the point-of-sale advertising, and the display of competing products within the racks are all areas of co among moist snuff manufacturers. Each manufacturer wants its product displayed most prominently and strategically, and wants to maximize its point-of-sale advertising.

Point-of-sale advertising is commonplace in convenience merchandising, whether it involves colas, beer, snack foods, or other products. According to Conwood, however, it assumes an unusual importance in the tobacco industry, because of the significant limitations which state and federal law place on media advertising of tobacco products. While consumers can enjoy the antics of the Budweiser lizards or the Energizer bunny, there is no comparable television and radio exposure for tobacco companies. Thus, in the Conwood theory, point-of-sale advertising is especially critical because it represents the principal means of communicating with consumers. In the plaintiff's view, any restrictions on point-of-sale advertising are likely to have a seriously dampening effect on competition.

Conwood asserts that it moved from being a small player in the moist snuff market to presenting a significant challenge to UST, through the introduction of new "rough-cut" and "long-cut" products, through the introduction of different product packaging in the form of plastic cans with longer shelf lives, and through the introduction of price-competitive "price-value" products. These facts, if proven at trial, would tend to show the kind of "merits" competition which markets ideally provide, in which price and product innovation drive competition and provide benefits to consumers.

Conwood's proof developed in discovery, to some extent, tends to show that, in response to growth in the price-value market, UST engaged in a campaign, directed by high-level management, to "actively pursue strategies to limit the growth of the price-value market." Arguably, the strategy selected by UST management was not to compete on price (a strategy which apparently caused a stunning one-day drop in the market valuation of Philip Morris stock when it cut cigarette prices), but to limit the distribution at retail outlets of competing brands of moist snuff. This strategy, as Conwood paints it, was designed to "eliminate competitive distribution" and to seek "exclusive vending" and "vendor exclusivity."

Of course, generalized statements by corporate executives in internal documents do not by themselves constitute antitrust law violations. However, the proof which Conwood has developed through discovery could show that a highly focused UST campaign sought to have its vending racks be the exclusive outlet for all moist snuff in retail stores. The effect of such rack exclusivity would be to give UST control over the point-of-sale advertising, since all header cards would have to be displayed on UST racks. In addition, such an arrangement, in which all products from all manufacturers are dispensed from UST racks, would tend to allow UST to reduce significantly the kinds and numbers of competitive products displayed by the retailer.

Conwood's discovery proof arguably demonstrates that UST's efforts to eliminate competing racks were significantly successful. This elimination of competing racks was accomplished through a variety of sophisticated techniques, including "crew drives," the use of the alleged subterfuge of "category management" services to small retailers as a method to elbow out Conwood and other competing products, and unilateral conduct such as UST sales personnel "cleaning up" the display areas. Conwood has developed evidence that it was the practice of UST sales personnel to obtain nominal permission to remove racks from harried and inexperienced convenience store employees who might lack the knowledge or gumption to resist the control which UST sales personnel exerted over the displays. Conwood also used explicit contractual agreements with retailers.

Conwood's proof further tends to demonstrate that the effect of these "exclusive vending" practices was to reduce the space allocated to moist snuff in retail outlets, to exclude competing advertisements at the point-of-sale, to increase slot width in the racks so as to make fewer consumer choices available, and to manage the presentation of products in the UST racks so that slow-moving UST products would "crowd out" price-value products by occupying scarce slots in the racks. In addition to an organized category management program, UST also pursued a Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") which arguably required preferred positioning for UST products and POS advertising.

The court emphasizes that it does not here find that Conwood will succeed in proving that these events occurred, or that they occurred to the extent alleged, but only that Conwood has raised sufficient factual basis for the issues to be presented at trial rather than rejected through summary judgment.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE PARTIES' ARGUMENTS

In a carefully and vigorously argued series of pleadings which focus on certain specific antitrust issues, UST asserts that Conwood has failed to make out a triable § 2 antitrust case against it. For purposes of the summary judgment motion only, UST does not challenge many of Conwood's factual predicates. UST, for example, does not contest in this motion that it possesses monopoly power, although it seriously disputes that it has acquired and maintained it willfully. (UST memorandum in support of summary judgment at p. 14.) Likewise, in its reply memorandum, UST does not contest that it has acted with the intent to eliminate as much competitive distribution as possible; that it has acted to obtain exclusive rack and rack-P.O.S. agreements with retailers; or that its conduct has made it difficult for Conwood to place its products and to increase its sales. (UST reply memorandum at pp. 5-6).

Instead of contesting directly many of the principal factual assertions, UST rather argues that, even under the best view of these facts which Conwood might prove, Conwood cannot establish either an antitrust violation or antitrust injury. UST contends that Conwood cannot establish any "exclusionary" conduct in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act. (UST memorandum at p. 14). Rather than directly meet Conwood's factually detailed assertions of willful exercise of monopoly power, UST characterizes its practices as failing to meet a narrow test of § 2 violations. For example, UST argues that its exclusionary rack practices cannot be illegal because they do not constitute the kind of exclusive dealing which would be condemned under other sections of the antitrust laws (see memorandum in opposition at pp. 17-21), and asserts that the other misconduct is nothing more than "ordinary business practices" (UST memorandum in opposition at pp. 25-37). UST continues this line of argument in its reply memorandum, contending that Conwood's case is a fatally thin "monopoly broth" which fails to prove any independent antitrust violation (UST reply memorandum at pp. 18 et seq.).

Conwood, in response to the UST motion, has prepared a highly detailed and possibly credible factual case based on extensive discovery, both documentary and by deposition. While it remains to be seen whether Conwood's assertion of the facts will be proven persuasively at trial to the jury, its factual chronology, if true, appears to assert an abuse – a willful exercise – of monopoly power by UST.

Conwood's case centers on a variety of interrelated practices which, in its view, constitute a coordinated, effective course of action by a monopolist which already enjoys a very high market share, profit margins among the highest in American industry, and limited competition without new market entrants. Most importantly, Conwood's version of the facts, if proven, could be interpreted by the jury to constitute a serious effort by a monopolist to suppress a competitor, not through competition on price, product innovation, or other merits, but based on exclusionary practices which are uniquely available to UST because of its longstanding market dominance.

Moreover, Conwood contends, UST's practice of excluding Conwood from point-of-sale advertising is unusually effective because of the many restrictions which federal and state law place on the advertising of tobacco products; thus, restricting or eliminating point-of-sale advertising by Conwood arguably has an unusually restrictive impact on Conwood's ability to compete based on price, product innovation and design, and the like.

The court is very careful to note that it does not adopt or endorse Conwood's view of the facts. Whether Conwood can persuade a jury, after a trial with witnesses and experts, of the truth of its case theory is not for the court to say on summary judgment. The issue before the court now is whether a trial is the appropriate procedure to resolve these factually intensive and hotly disputed claims.

LEGAL STANDARDS AND ANALYSIS

Both Conwood and UST point to the same general standard to applied to § 2 claims, stemming from the venerable Grinnell decision of the Supreme Court. As the Sixth Circuit recently observed,

> The offense of monopolization under Section 2 has two elements: "(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 86 S.Ct. 1698, 16 L.Ed.2d 778 (1966).

Re/Max International, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995 (6th Cir. 1999). Only the "willful acquisition or maintenance" part of the test is at issue, as UST assumes arguendo for summary judgment purposes that it possesses monopoly power. (UST memorandum at p. 14.)

It is the application of the Grinnell-Re/Max standard to these facts which is in dispute. UST vigorously argues that Conwood falls far short of the mark, and that its "monopoly broth" is really nothing more than "stone soup." In pressing this argument, UST repeatedly asserts that

Conwood has not proven exclusive dealing by UST, that isolated incidents of bad behavior and "dirty tricks" in handling Conwood racks are not the stuff of antitrust lawsuits, and that Conwood has pointed to nothing more than vigorous competition of the kind invited, not condemned, by the antitrust laws.

There are two shortcomings in UST's argument. First, its abstract treatise on antitrust laws sidesteps the carefully developed, thoroughly documented record which Conwood has amassed. Whether Conwood can prevail at trial on its theories is uncertain, but Conwood has marshalled a significant amount of proof that UST engaged in a concerted campaign, directed from the highest levels of UST, designed to shut Conwood out from effective competition at retail outlets through the elimination of Conwood racks, the elimination of Conwood point-of-sale advertising, all in an unusual market for tobacco products where point-of-sale is the central marketplace battleground. Second, as discussed below, UST's attempts to pick apart Conwood's arguments would have the court examine the leaves and ignore the forest, something not mandated by the antitrust laws.

"'Anticompetitive conduct' can come in too many forms, and is too dependent upon context, for any court or commentator ever to have enumerated all the varieties." Carribean Broadcasting System, Ltd. v. Cable & Wireless, 148 F.3d 1080, 1087 (D.C. Cir. 1998). Thus, UST's "deconstruction" of the Conwood claims into a series of discrete antitrust theories, which UST then individually seeks to knock down, does not compel the summary judgement dismissal of this case. Caldera , Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., Case No. 2:96-CV-645(B), 1999 WL 1067490 (D. Utah Nov. 3, 1999). Instead, the court should use as its touchstone well-accepted principles of § 2 law.

The key to the second prong of the Grinnell test is the use by a defendant of anticompetitive conduct "to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor." Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Services, Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 482-83

(1992) (quoting United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 107 (1948)). The Supreme Court has directed the trial courts to condemn "exclusionary" or "anticompetitive" or "predatory" conduct, see, Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 602 (1985); the court must distinguish the improper "exclusionary" conduct from the permitted competition by a monopolist based on "superior product" and "business acumen," as permitted by Grinnell.

The distinction between the impermissible anticompetitive conduct by a monopolist and the lawful maintenance of its market share is based on determining if the defendant "has been 'attempting to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency.'" Aspen, 472 U.S. at 605, (quoting R. Bork, The Antitrust Paradox 138 (1978)). The Supreme Court in Aspen went on to quote from Professors Areeda and Turner:

> Thus, 'exclusionary' comprehends at the most behavior that not only (1) tends to impair the opportunities of rivals, but also (2) either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way.

III P. Areeda & D. Turner, Antitrust Law 78 (1978). An important part of the inquiry, as directed by the Eastman Kodak Court, is whether conduct which impairs a rivals' opportunities can be justified by "valid business reasons." Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 483, (quoting Aspen, 472 U.S. at 605). In Eastman, the Court held that there were triable issues of monopolization where there were reasons to doubt the validity and sufficiency of the business justifications asserted for the conduct.

Here, UST does not, at the summary judgment stage of the proceedings, attempt to show conclusively that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. This falls short of the proof which would be required to prevail on the § 2 claims, particularly in view of the numerous record comments from high level UST personnel which arguably show an anticompetitive intent rather than a business justification for the exclusionary POS practices.

Other circuits have focused on the issue whether the defendant's conduct served a legitimate purpose and whether it impaired the opportunity of rivals more than necessary to serve such a legitimate purpose. See, e.g., Data General Corp. v. Grumman Syst. Support Corp., 36 F. 3d 1147 (1st Cir. 1994); Instructional Syst. Devel. Corp. v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., 817 F.2d 639 (10th Cir. 1987).

At a minimum, these issues require the development of proof at trial, not summary disposition. While UST is correct that there is no rule which makes summary judgment improper in all circumstances in antitrust cases, their factual nuances and complexity may require a full rather than a truncated inquiry, for monopolization as well as other claims.

Recent Sixth Circuit case law demonstrates the need of the district court to apply careful restraint in using summary judgment to reject antitrust claims. In Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995 (6th Cir. 1999), the court overturned a grant of summary judgment to the defendants which had been entered by the trial court.. The challenged trade practice in the Re/Max decision was significantly different from this case; the plaintiff realty firm disputed the "adverse split" policy of the defendants with respect to the division of real estate commissions between buyers' agents and sellers' agents. The lengthy opinion discusses a number of § 1 problems, but also addresses the issue whether summary judgment was appropriately entered on behalf of the defendants on plaintiff's § 2 monopolization claim. In a detailed discussion of the factors which may be used to prove the relevant geographic market and what a plaintiff must show alternatively to prove exclusion of competition in a monopolization case , the Sixth Circuit held that there was a question of fact whether there had been "actual, sustained adverse effects on competition." Id. at 1019. Similarly, the present case presents complex questions of fact, which can be resolved only through trial, as to whether the sustained effects on competition which are preliminarily suggested by plaintiff's proof in the discovery record can be proven sufficiently before a jury.

One recent decision is worth particular mention. In R.J. Reynolds Tobacco v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999), the trial court granted a motion for preliminary injunction in a case involving a challenge to a Philip Morris promotional program which gave preferred position to Philip Morris products in retail outlets. In ruling that this program likely constituted exclusionary conduct, the trial court lent significance to the advertising restrictions in the tobacco industry, which apply to moist snuff as well as to cigarettes:

> [V]isibility and advertising at the point of purchase are uniquely critical to competition in the cigarette industry as competitors lack significant alternative advertising channels to compensate for the lack of visibility at the point of purchase.

Id. at 511. Thus, other trial courts have found that point-of-sale restrictions may have an unusually strong exclusionary effect in the tobacco industry because of restrictions on broadcast media advertising.

UST also argues that summary judgment is appropriate in its favor because Conwood's case is flawed in its attempt to prove that antitrust injury flowed from the supposed violations of the Sherman Act; alternatively, it argues that the damages asserted are speculative and are not caused by the actions of UST.

This theory, like the summary judgment argument on the question whether the Sherman Act was violated, must fail because of the fact-intensive nature of the dispute at bar. Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these topics are the issue whether the damage claimed by Conwood is caused by UST, or instead is the result of independent, uncoerced decisions by retailers; whether the damage theory of Professor Leftwich, plaintiff's expert, can withstand challenge under Daubert v. Merrill Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), or other antitrust damage law principles; whether the effects on competition and on Conwood which plaintiff claims are the result of actions by UST at all, or other market forces; and other matters.

16diii004454

None of these topics is susceptible to resolution on the current record, without the testing of facts which a jury trial presents. The law in the Sixth Circuit does not require the district court to "short circuit" such a potentially complex inquiry without a trial. Plaintiff need only show an injury of the type which the antitrust laws were drafted to prevent and which flows from defendant's unlawful practices. See, e.g., Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477 (1977); Arthur S. Lengenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 729 F.2d 1050 (6th Cir.1984); Chrysler Corp. v. Fedders Corp., 643 F.2d 1229 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 893 (1981). The court does not wish to underemphasize the burden which plaintiff must meet at trial, but only to indicate that the detailed record on discovery prevents the summary disposition of issues.

The court re-emphasizes that the questions of whether these practices took place, how extensive they were, how much they were orchestrated by top management and how much by sporadic local efforts by "rogue" sales personnel, how effective they were in restraining or eliminating competition, whether they were eagerly sought by retailers or imposed by fast-talking, experienced UST representatives on sleepy seventeen year old nighttime sales clerks – all these are issues which can be resolved only by a jury. The court does not presume to determine how they will be resolved – only that they present serious issues of material fact.

CONWOOD MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Conwood itself has moved for partial summary judgment with respect to the issues of whether the relevant market is moist snuff in the United States, and whether UST possesses monopoly power in that market. In addition, Conwood seeks summary disposition of UST's counterclaims under the Lanham Act and state law.

Just as there are many "hotly disputed" questions of fact on the § 2 liability claims of Conwood, so too are there many "hotly disputed" questions of fact on market definition which prevent a summary ruling. (See UST memorandum in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment at p. 3.) While UST agrees that the relevant geographic market is the entire

United States (see fn. 2 at p. 2 of its memorandum in opposition), UST seriously disputes the product definition offered by Conwood. UST asserts that there are questions of fact for the jury as to whether the relevant product market is broader than Conwood asserts, perhaps including all smokeless tobacco products, such as loose leaf chewing tobacco; alternatively, UST suggests that the product market could be segmented into separate product markets for natural and flavored moist snuff.

It is undisputed that Conwood, as plaintiff, has the burden of proving market definition. Given the extensive nature of discovery and conflicting factual accounts of the marketplace, the prevalence of serious expert opinion disagreements, and the obvious factor that the court is denying UST's summary judgment motion and setting the matter for trial, it would be unwarranted (and inconsistent) for this court to rule in a summary fashion on the product market. See Telecomm. Tech. Servs., Inc. v. Siemens Rolm Communications, Inc., 66 F. Supp.2d 1306 (N.D.Ga. 1998). Indeed, virtually everything about this litigation is, in UST's accurate characterization, "hotly disputed," and only a trial can resolve these issues.

Finally, in light of the denial of summary judgment both on the section two liability and product market motions, there is no basis for granting summary judgment to Conwood on UST's Lanham Act and state law claims. They may indeed prove out to be minor "tag along" theories, but the court will overrule Conwood's motion and permit them to proceed to trial with the vastly more extensive antitrust issues.

Ultimately, the present issue for the court is whether it should step into this complex, extensive litigation and call it to a halt without a trial. In order to do so, the court would have to conclude that there is no dispute of material fact. UST's argument concedes, for summary judgment purposes only, many of the facts which Conwood would have to prove at trial, thus nimbly taking many disputed issues out of the analysis. Instead, argues UST, taking the best version of the facts which the record might show for Conwood, there still is lacking any antitrust violation. However, this is simply too narrow a view of this dispute, and the court cannot say with certainty that no trial should take place in order to measure the extent, purpose, effect, and competitive impact of the broad exclusionary campaign which Conwood seeks to prove. Whether Conwood can carry this significant burden at trial is not for the court to say on summary judgment; however, the court concludes that on a cold summary judgment record it cannot resolve this matter fairly or within the meaning of Rule 56 and applicable case law on summary judgment practice. Likewise, the issues of product market definition cannot be determined summarily.

A trial is unavoidable; indeed, a trial is the very device which the law contemplates for the resolution of this kind of dispute.

CONCLUSION

Skillful counsel for both sides have vigorously presented the court with a broad range of briefing on critical issues in this case. While each case is unique on its facts, the factual bases asserted by Conwood here are sufficiently within the range of conduct which, if proven at trial, may form the basis for a jury determination of § 2 liability. Whether a jury, with the benefit of a full factual presentation, will assess UST's conduct as justified, vigorous competition in the marketplace, or an impermissible, unjustified series of exclusionary acts by a monopolist, is an issue which this court cannot decide on summary judgment. The case abounds with material factual issues, it presents an adequate legal foundation to withstand motion practice, and it will be judged at trial and not on briefs alone. The motions for summary judgment of both UST and Conwood are denied. (Docket #s207 & 208)

PLAINTIFFS' REVISED LIST OF TRIAL EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully submit the attached revised list of exhibits plaintiffs may offer in evidence during their case-in-chief ("Exhibit "A"). The sole new addition to this list is PX332, a business record of defendants that was transmitted today to counsel for defendants.

Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify or supplement this list as they continue to prepare their case for trial, to offer enlargements of exhibits in evidence, to offer additional exhibits identified and discussed during deposition testimony designated by plaintiffs for potential use at trial (which designations are incorporated herein by reference), and to modify demonstrative exhibits plaintiffs expect to offer during testimony by expert witnesses in order to conform such exhibits to the proof. Plaintiffs further reserve their right to offer additional exhibits, not listed herein, in rebuttal.

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO PRE-ADMIT EXHIBITS FOR USE IN OPENING STATEMENT

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully request the admission at the pretrial conference of proposed plaintiffs' exhibits 4, 5, 7, 9, 14, 16, 19, 20, 24, 28, 32, 33, 39, 45, 51, 53, 61, 63, 68, 79, 84, 96, 104, 113a, 120, 124a, 130, 139, 140, 143, 144, 148, 149, 156, 173, 208, and 270. Plaintiff wishes to use these exhibits in its opening statement. These exhibits are business records of the defendant produced in this litigation. Plaintiffs also request the admission at the pretrial conference of the following deposition excerpts for use in its opening statement:

1. Deposition of L. Borrowdale - Page 17, line 20 to page 18, line 14.

2. Deposition of G. Smith - Page 420, line 10 to line 25; page 421, line 2 to line 7; page 421, line 9; and page 421, line 20 to page 422, line 6.

3. Deposition of G. Milano - Page 289, line 2 to line 6; page 293, line 8 to line 10; page 293, line 14 to line 23; page 294, line 11 to line 15; and page 294, line 17 to line 20.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Motion in Limine for an Order Simplifying the Issues at Trial and Facilitating the Disposition of this Lawsuit (Doc. #264). This Court DENIES that motion.

Defendants move that this Court utilize Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 to remove four of Plaintiffs' claims from this action: (1) Lanham Act; (2) Kentucky state law standard for product defamation; (3) Kentucky state law standard for tortious interference with contract/tortious interference with prospective business relations; and (4) Kentucky Revised Statute 365.050. It is Defendants' position that Plaintiffs have failed to pursue and develop these claims and that some are duplicative and would confuse the jury.

This Court has carefully considered well drafted memoranda from both parties on motions for summary judgment. This motion is an attempt to circumvent that process and to reassert claims that were or should have been made in those motions. Parties should not use the rules to relitigate issues already decided or to present evidence which could have been previously submitted through the exercise of reasonable diligence. See Keweenaw Bay Indian Community v. State of Mich., 152 F.R.D. 562 (W.D.Mich.1992), aff'd 11 F.3d 1341 (6th Cir. 1993). Contrary to Defendants assertion, even if these claims could not have been made, the elimination of these issues would do little to ensure the "just, speedy, and inexpensive disposition of the action." Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 16(c)(16). These claims are obviously tag along claims and by the end of the day some may well perish. However, the claims will not be dismissed in a motion in limine that is no more than a thinly veiled alternative motion for summary judgment.

Accordingly, the motion is DENIED.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

This is the 23 day of February, 2000.

CIVIL ACTION NO. 5:98-CV-108-R

v.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, ET AL. DEFENDANTS

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This matter is before the court on Defendants' motion to exclude the damages study and future testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich (doc. #210). This motion is closely related to Defendants' motion in limine to preclude undisclosed expert witness materials and related testimony and declarations (doc. #260 and #261).

I.

Defendants want the court to exclude Leftwich's testimony pursuant to Fed.R.Evid. 104(a), 403 and 702. Defendants do not challenge Leftwich's qualifications as an expert, but they argue that his testimony on damages is too speculative and unreliable. Plaintiffs claim that Defendants' antitrust violations reduced Conwood's market share after 1990. Plaintiffs argue that UST's conduct was more effective in reducing the growth of Conwood's market share in those states where Conwood had a relatively low market share in 1990.

Leftwich applied a regression analysis to test Conwood's hypothesis. He determined that Conwood's share in a state in 1990 is statistically significantly related to the change in Conwood's market share between 1990 and 1997. The regression model predicts that where

16diii004474

Conwood had a higher market share (e.g., 15-20 %) in 1990, Conwood's market share grew during the period from 1990 to 1997. In contrast, in states where Conwood had a lower market share, the regression predicts that its share would grow very little. He concluded that but for UST's exclusionary conduct, Plaintiff's market share would have grown between 5.7% and 8.4% from 1990-1997 in low share states, as it did in states where Plaintiff had an estimated market share of 15-20% in 1990. Leftwich considered other factors to rule out the possibility that statistical relationship was caused by other factors than UST's conduct. He considered changes in average per capita income in the states and regional differences and found no association between Conwood's market share and these factors. In his rebuttal he also found no statistically significant relationship between market growth and median age, racial composition, educational levels, and unemployment rates in the states. He also used the same methodology to analyze Conwood's share growth in the seven-year period prior to 1990 and determined that correlation for the 1990-1997 period was not present in the earlier period. This methodology is referred to as a "before and after" test. He also applied a "yardstick" measurement, by analyzing the analogous market for looseleaf tobacco, in which UST did not interfere. Conwood competes in this market using the same sales force as for moist stuff. He found that Conwood's growth in the looseleaf market was not positively associated with its share in 1990. Leftwich concluded that the statistical analysis supported Conwood's factual allegations. Leftwich estimated the amount of damages in lost profits as a result of UST's misconduct to be between $313 million and $488 million.

II.

Defendants argue that Leftwich's analysis is fatally flawed as a mater of law for several reasons. First, he relied on the opinions of Conwood personnel, based on their "general experience," for the critical assumptions underlying his analysis, without doing any economic analysis of the evidence in the case. Second, Leftwich does not relate the alleged loss to specific allegedly unlawful acts. Also, he does not account for or explain away in any respect other factors having an adverse effect on Conwood's sales during the time period, including UST's lawful competitive activities and competition from other competitors. Finally, his "before and after" and "yardstick" models are not useful in assisting the jury because they fail to control for significant factors affecting the marketplace.

The admissibility of Leftwich's testimony under Fed.R.Evid. 702 is governed by the Supreme Court's opinion in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993). Although Daubert applied to scientific expert testimony, its principles apply to all scientific testimony, to the extent relevant. Kumho Tire Co. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137 (1999). Under Daubert and Rule 702, the court must "decide if the proffered testimony is based upon valid economic, statistical or econometric methodologies and reasoning that can properly be applied to the facts of this case." Ohio ex rel Montgomery v. Louis Trauth Dairy, Inc., 925 F. Supp. 1247, 1252 (S.D. Ohio 1996).

In Ohio ex rel Montgomery v. Louis Trauth Dairy, Inc., supra, the state filed suit against 13 dairies alleging a price-fixing and market-allocation conspiracy in violation of §1 of the Sherman Act. For its principal evidence against the dairies, the state relied upon expert testimony regarding statistical and econometric analyses of the Ohio milk market and the defendants' bidding practices. Defendants sought to exclude, under Daubert, the state's experts on the grounds that they were not qualified to testify, their methodologies were flawed, and their conclusions were not relevant. The court denied the plaintiff's motion and held that the experts, all of whom were economists or statisticians, had conducted econometric and regression analyses that were testable, generally acceptable, and reproducible. Moreover, the court noted that the claimed deficiencies in the databases prepared by the experts "bear on the weight of the testimony, not its admissibility." Id. at 1253.

Leftwich's testimony satisfies Daubert. His methodologies are generally acceptable. See id. at 1252. Defendant's expert also used them. Leftwich relied on data that was compiled by the Smokeless Tobacco Council, an independent industry trade association, and that was assembled by the accounting firm of Peat Marwick. The methodologies are testable. UST argues that Leftwich did not account for other significant causal factors that may have affected Conwood's sales, such as the success of other competitor's products. Leftwich claims that those other factors are reflected in the real world market. The credibility of the expert and his opinions is an issue for the jury.

UST also argues that Leftwich's testimony should be excluded under Fed.R.Evid. 403 because it does not have any probative value and would be misleading and confusing to a jury. Defendants challenge the factual assumptions that Leftwich tested. A damage theory may be based on assumptions so long as the assumptions are reasonable in light of the record evidence. Only where there is no basis for critical assumptions or the assumptions are shown to be false, should the damage evidence be excluded. See McGlinchy v. Shell Chemical Co., 845 F.2d 802, 806 (9th Cir. 1988). At this time the court cannot say that Leftwich's assumptions have no basis, especially in light of the fact that the court overruled Defendants' motion for summary judgment. Defendants may prove differently at a full trial. At this time, Dr. Leftwich's testimony survives a preliminary Daubert analysis

III.

Defendants filed a motion in limine to preclude the supplemental testimony and exhibits of Leftwich. Leftwich filed his initial report on August 2, 1999. UST's expert filed his report on September 15, 1999, drawing the opposite conclusion of Leftwich. Leftwich filed a timely rebuttal report prior to his deposition. Leftwich later discovered that the data contained errors. On December 9, 1999, Peat Marwick provided updated, and allegedly more accurate, data to Leftwich. He repeated his prior analysis using the corrected data. Plaintiffs then filed a supplemental report on January 27, 2000. The supplement was appropriate under Fed.R.Civ.P. 26 (e). Plaintiffs claim that Leftwich did not present new opinions. He merely analyzed corrected data, using the same methodologies. Defendants object to paragraphs 5 through 8 of Leftwich's supplemental report, claiming that it contains new opinions. Those opinions are not new, and were discussed in Leftwich's rebuttal report. Likewise, the exhibits related to Leftwich's supplemental memorandum were timely filed and are admissible.

However, to avoid any possible prejudice to Defendants, Defendants may take Leftwich's deposition again prior to his testimony at trial. In his February 8, 2000 order, Magistrate Judge Moyer already granted leave for Defendants to take Leftwich's deposition.

IV.

In conjunction with their motion in limine, Defendants also supplement their motion to exclude Leftwich's testimony to challenge paragraphs 5-8 of his supplemental report. They claim that the new damages figure is based on unreliable data and should be excluded under Fed.R.Evid. 703. Leftwich updated his damages estimate by using the results of approximately 200 surveys completed by Conwood salespeople. The surveys asked the salespeople if they had observed or experienced rack removal by UST and where it occurred. These surveys are inadmissible hearsay. Defendants argue that they are highly biased and are not reliable.

An expert may rely on data that is inadmissible "[i]f of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field." Rule 703.

> The trial court is to use "[g]reat liberality" in determining the basis of an expert's opinions, and the trial court may not decide whether the opinion itself should be accepted. Rule 703 permits experts to testify without personal knowledge of the underlying facts or data and permits them to testify on the basis of hearsay or unadmitted evidence, as long as the evidence is of a kind reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field. The rule has been interpreted as merely requiring that experts' scientific knowledge be based on sound methodology.

United States v. Bonds, 12 F.3d 540, 566 (6th Cir. 1993)(citations omitted). It is for the jury to decide any weight to give to the testimony of these experts, along with all the other evidence. Clearly, economists and statisticians often rely on evidence that is not based on their own observations. Merely because there may be bias in the data does not exclude Leftwich's testimony. The surveys are not "replete with so many obvious errors as to be of no value to the trier of fact." See Slaughter v. Southern Talc Co., 919 F.2d 304, 306 (5th Cir. 1990).

Leftwich's testimony passes the admissibility test, even though Defendants have raised legitimate arguments concerning his deficiencies. "Vigorous cross-examination, presentation of contrary evidence, and careful instruction on the burden of proof are the traditional and appropriate means of attacking shaky but admissible evidence." Daubert, 509 U.S. at 596.

IT IS ORDERED:

Defendants' motion to exclude the damages study and future testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich (doc. #210) is DENIED.

Defendants' motion in limine to preclude undisclosed expert witness materials and related testimony and declarations (doc. #260 and #261) is DENIED.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, ET AL. DEFENDANTS

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This matter is before the court on Defendants' motion in limine to preclude Professor Gundlach's "study" of purported "exclusive agreements" and related testimony (doc. #260 and #263). This Court DENIES that motion.

Gundlach determined that UST's various agreements excluded competitive racks and POS cover at more than 28,000 retail outlets in the United States. He relied on documents provided by UST.

UST objects to Conwood's use of Gundlach's testimony for several reasons. First, UST complains that Gundlach did not study the specific type of exclusive dealing agreements that are forbidden by antitrust law– those which preclude a competitor's products from the market. Nor did he study any other type of exclusive agreement. They argue that Gundlach's testimony lacks foundation in the record and should be excluded under Fed.R.Evid. 702. Second, UST argues that Gundlach makes a legal conclusion by characterizing documents as "exclusive agreements" with retailers. Finally, UST claims that the testimony should be excluded under Rule 403, because it would mislead the jury into thinking that just because a retailer does not carry all Conwood products or does not use Conwood racks, an exclusive agreement exists between UST and the retailer. The underlying argument to all of these points is that Conwood must show "exclusive dealing" under Clayton § 3 to prevail on its Sherman § 2 claim. UST's argument that only "exclusive dealing" contracts can serve as evidence of anticompetitive behavior was rejected by the denial of Defendant's motion for summary judgment.

Furthermore, Defendants mischaracterize Gundlach's testimony regarding the agreements. Gundlach did not include the types of agreements that contained merely "an indicia of some form, type of exclusion" in his study. (See Gundlach Deposition pp. 151-52)

UST does not challenge Gundlach's qualifications. His testimony is probative and will assist the jury in understanding the alleged widespread anticompetitive behavior of UST. UST's remaining arguments go to the weight of Gundlach's testimony, not its admissibility.

THEREFORE, IT IS ORDERED:

Defendants' motion in limine to preclude Professor Gundlach's "study" of purported "exclusive agreements" and related testimony (doc. #260 and #263) is DENIED.

This is the 23 day of February 2000.

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Motion in Limine to Preclude Certain Intended Trial Exhibits and Testimony or Other Reference to Such Material (Doc. #265). This Court DENIES that motion.

Defendants urge this Court to enter an order excluding Plaintiffs' Exhibits 204, 205, 251, 256 and 261 and like documents from evidence and to exclude any witness from mentioning or discussing them. The documents at issue include retail activity reports taken at various retail establishments by investigators and list comments made by store employees to the investigators. Defendants claim that the documents are themselves hearsay and contain additional hearsay. Plaintiffs respond that the exhibits will not be offered into evidence and that their experts are permitted to rely on inadmissible evidence to explain the origin of their opinions to the jury.

Experts may rely on documents containing hearsay, even inadmissible hearsay, in forming their opinions. See Trepel v. Roadway Express Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999). Rule 703 of the Federal Rules of Evidence states that if facts or data are the type that are "reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence." The Sixth Circuit has interpreted this rule to allow into evidence hearsay statements. See id. Such evidence is not admitted for the truth of the matter asserted, but to establish the basis for the expert's opinion. Id. The court should focus on whether the material sought to be introduced is of the type reasonably relied upon by experts in the field. Id. Neither party argues in this motion that the documents here are not the type reasonably relied upon by experts in this field. Here, it appears that experts for both sides have relied on documents similar to those at issue.

Defendants also argue that the evidence should be excluded as it is highly prejudicial and unfair as Defendants have not had an opportunity to confront and cross-examine the actual declarants as to their knowledge and perception, their bias, and their motive. The loss of an opportunity to confront witnesses is a key concern any time hearsay testimony is allowed at trial. The Sixth Circuit was certainly aware of this consequence when it allowed expert witnesses to rely upon and discuss hearsay. Accordingly, this Court finds little merit in Defendants' argument. Furthermore, this Court does not find that the probative value of the evidence is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Fed. R. Ev. 403.

Upon Defendants' Motion in Limine to Preclude Certain Intended Trial Exhibits and Testimony or Other Reference to Such Material (Doc. #265) and this Court being sufficiently advised,

IT IS ORDERED that Defendants' motion is DENIED.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Motion in Limine Requiring Plaintiffs to Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury at Specific Retail Stores and Chains (Doc. #262). This Court DENIES that Motion.

DISCUSSION

Defendants urge this Court to require Plaintiffs to "offer evidence sufficient for a jury to conclude that USTC engaged in 'exclusionary' conduct with respect to specific retail establishments and that any such conduct in fact caused injury to Conwood." (Doc. #262 at 1). Defendants maintain that "where the alleged misconduct and resulting injury is nationwide, an antitrust plaintiff may not make that showing through purported representative sampling." Essentially, Defendants maintain that Plaintiffs must demonstrate specific injury and specific damages at each retail location from which they seek to recover damages. (Doc. #262 at 4). To support their position, Defendants cite In re Airport Car Rental Antitrust Lit, 474 F.Supp. 1072 (N.D.Cal. 1979).

Airport involved allegations that Hertz and Avis had violated antitrust laws by obtaining exclusive contracts with airports across the country through acts of misrepresentation, bribery and inducements. One of the plaintiffs attempted to prove damages through a representative sampling of airports. The court rejected the plaintiff's assertion that it could meet its burden by establishing a national conspiracy and a resulting pattern of exclusion. Rather, the court held that before the plaintiff could recover damages for losses incurred at a specific airport, the plaintiff would have to prove damages at that airport. Defendants argue that this Court adopt a similar position.

The facts of this case are quite dissimilar from those in Airport and Airport is not binding on this Court. Airport involved contracts with roughly 140 airports. The scope of the suit made obtaining and analyzing those contracts a reasonable and effective manner of proving damages in light of the varying conduct that allegedly occurred at different airports. This case involves more than 300,000 retail establishments and allegations more difficult to substantiate than by the cursory review of a contract. Both Plaintiffs and Defendants would incur astronomical expenses if this Court required them to investigate 300,000 separate retail establishments. Indeed, each side would expend $30 million if each investigation cost only $100. This is neither prudent nor reasonable and such a requirement would effectively end this suit. Denying damages because they are of the nature that cannot be easily measured would encourage the very behavior antitrust suits seek to deter. See Story Parchment Co. v. Paterson Parchment Paper Co., 282 U.S. 555, 564, 51 S.Ct. 248, 251, 75 L.Ed. 544 (1931). It is the allegedly widespread activity of the defendants that has made proving specific damages unreasonable to measure. "[J]ustice and public policy alike require that [they] should bear the risk of the uncertainty thus produced." Id.

Based on these factual distinctions, the Sixth Circuit does not limit an antitrust plaintiff to specific damages or prohibit the use of estimates and inferences. See Elyria-Lorain Broadcasting Co. v. Lorain Journal Co., 358 F.2d 790, 792 (6th Cir. 1966). The nature of antitrust litigation often produces situations where one party would be unable to reasonably determine specific damages. See id. at 792.

> It is not the rule that in an action for damages for violation of the antitrust laws plaintiff is limited to recover only the specific items of damage which he can prove with reasonable certainty. On the contrary, the trier of facts may make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data and may act upon probable and inferential as well as direct and positive proof. The wrongdoers should bear the risk of the uncertainty which his own wrong has created. Bigelow v. RKO Radio-Pictures, 327 U.S. 251, 66 S.Ct. 574, 90 L.Ed. 652 (1945); Story Parchment Co. v. Paterson Parchment Co., 282 U.S. 555, 51 S.Ct. 248, 75 L.Ed. 544 (1931); Eastman Kodak Co. v. Souther Photo Materials Co., 273 U.S. 359, 47 S.Ct. 400, 71 L.Ed. 684 (1927); Haverhill Gazette Co. v. Union Leader Corp., 333 F.2d 798 (1st Cir. 1964).

Id. at 793.

Plaintiffs' expert has utilized various calculations and theories to project the damages in this suit. It is the responsibility of the parties to argue the merits of these damages and to offer alternative explanations for their origin. The Court has no doubt each side can provide the jurors with the information necessary for them to exercise good sense and sound judgment to determine an amount, if any, that will produce adequate compensation and that will, in turn, remove speculation and guesswork from the decisionmaking process. Simply put, Plaintiffs are not required to prove what damage occurred at each of the 300,000 separate retail establishments in order to prove the fact of injury. Defendants argument to the contrary is not well taken.

CONCLUSION

Upon Defendants' Motion in Limine Requiring Plaintiffs to Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury at Specific Retail Stores and Chains (Doc. #262) and this Court being sufficiently advised,

IT IS ORDERED that Defendants' Motion is DENIED.

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Motion in Limine to Preclude All Evidence Concerning Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Immunity (Doc. #266). Assuming Plaintiffs' accusations as true, this Court finds that admission of such evidence to show the purpose and character of other activity would be cumulative, likely to confuse the jury and overly prejudicial to the defendants. Accordingly, this Court GRANTS Defendants' motion.

DISCUSSION

Eastern Railroad Presidents Conf. v. Noeer Motor Freight, Inc., served as the springboard for four decades of judicial efforts to define the circumstances in which courts grant private efforts to elicit rivalry-suppressing government action antitrust immunity. 365 U.S. 127 (1961). The Supreme Court expanded this doctrine to include efforts to influence government administrative processes and judicial or adjudicatory processes in United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657 (1965), and California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508 (1972). It is activity protected by this body of caselaw that is now before the Court.

Although not actionable, courts have admitted Noerr-Pennington evidence to establish the defendant's anticompetitive intent in engaging in other behavior that may be actionable, provided that any prejudicial effect does not outweigh the probative value of the evidence. See Alexander v. National Farmers Org., 687 F.2d 1173, 1197-98 (8th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 461 U.S. 937 (1983).

> It would of course still be within the province of the trial judge to admit this evidence, if he deemed it probative and not unduly prejudicial, under the "established judicial rule of evidence that testimony of prior or subsequent transactions, which for some reason are barred from forming the basis for a suit, may nevertheless be introduced if it tends reasonably to show the purpose and character of the particular transactions under scrutiny."

Pennington, 381 at 670 n.3.. Under the probative/prejudice inquiry, a court looks at the prejudice to a party's First Amendment rights. See Feminist Women's Health Center, Inc v. Mohammad., 586 F.2d 530, 543 n.7 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 924 (1979).

At trial, Plaintiffs hope to show that UST preserved its "monopoly share of the moist snuff market by choking competitive distribution and by restricting competitors' opportunities to promote their products at the point of sale." (Pls.' Opp'n to Mot. To Preclude Intent Ev. at 3). Plaintiffs assert that "UST's efforts to promote the 'Global Settement' of litigation among cigarette manufacturers, state attorneys general, and plaintiffs' lawyers were designed to pursue these same anticompetitive ends through legislative means." Id. Plaintiffs seek to introduce Noeer-Pennington evidence in this case to show intent including evidence that Defendants sought (1) legislation restricting the sale of moist-tobacco to a non-self-service environment (behind the counter); (2) legislation restricting competitors' promotional opportunities by limiting the type and number of advertisements permitted; and (3) a settlement payment structure that would impose disproportionate costs on its competitors. In support of admission, Plaintiffs contend that the information may be admitted to show intent and will not be unduly prejudicial. Since the legislation did not pass, Plaintiffs argue the jury could not infer damages arose from this activity and, accordingly, that Defendants will suffer no punishment for protected activity. Defendants argue that all Noeer-Pennington activity should be barred from admission in this case.

Courts subject the introduction of protected Noeer-Pennington evidence to illustrate the purpose or character of unprotected conduct to analysis under Fed. R. Evid. 403. See City of Cleveland v. Cleveland Elec. Illuminating Co., 734 F.2d 1157, 1163 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 884 (1984). Since Noeer-Pennington aims to protect the exercise of a defendant's First Amendment rights, "admissibility should be governed by a test that weighs the probativeness of and the plaintiff's need for the evidence against the danger that admission of the evidence will prejudice the defendant's first amendment rights." Feminist Women's Health Center, 586 F.2d at 543 n.7.

Excluding "purpose and character" evidence consisting of conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington should be the rule rather than an exception. See United States Football League v. National Football League, 634 F.Supp. 1155, 1181 (S.D.N.Y. 1986). Some courts have gone as far as to note that "evidence which by its very nature chills the exercise of First Amendment rights" should be presumed prejudicial under Fed. R. Ev. 403. See id. Although the Court here would be required to instruct the jury that the Noeer-Pennington conduct is entirely lawful, the instruction may be quickly overwhelmed by the admission of "purpose or character" evidence designed to place Defendants in the harshest light. See Cleveland, 734 F.2d at 1163. "This is not an admissable basis for its introduction. . . . Judicial self-restraint is appropriate in these circumstances." Id.

After reviewing the evidence and performing a Fed. R. Ev. 403 analysis, this Court believes that admitting the evidence would be unfairly prejudicial to Defendants' First Amendment Rights. Plaintiffs attempt to introduce this evidence, in part, for the improper purpose of disparaging Defendants. See id. at 1163. Plaintiffs have survived hard-fought dispositive motions by demonstrating the existence of ample evidence to present their case. Noeer-Pennington evidence would only be cumulative in its efforts to demonstrate intent and would ultimately create an unnecessary risk of exposing the jury to the danger of considering that proof for the improper purpose of an anti-competitive act. See Id. at 1165. If the parties' and court's estimations are correct, this trial will be both long and complicated. An inquiry into the protected activity and the true motives behind it will add an unnecessary layer to the trial. Even though the legislation was not passed and no recoverable damage could extend from the protected activity, the danger is too great that the jury will believe that Defendants can be punished for this protected activity. Admitting the evidence would chill Defendants' First Amendment rights.

Upon Defendants' Motion in Limine to Preclude All Evidence Concerning Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Immunity (Doc. #266) and this Court being sufficiently advised,

IT IS ORDERED that Defendants motion is GRANTED. Noeer-Pennington evidence should be excluded under Fed. R. Ev. 403. The evidence's probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, misleading the jury and by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, and needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

This is the 23 day of February, 2000.

PLAINTIFFS' REVISED LIST OF TRIAL EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully submit the attached revised list of exhibits plaintiffs may offer in evidence during their case-in-chief ("Exhibit "A"). The sole new addition to this list is PX332, a business record of defendants that was transmitted today to counsel for defendants.

Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify or supplement this list as they continue to prepare their case for trial, to offer enlargements of exhibits in evidence, to offer additional exhibits identified and discussed during deposition testimony designated by plaintiffs for potential use at trial (which designations are incorporated herein by reference), and to modify demonstrative exhibits plaintiffs expect to offer during testimony by expert witnesses in order to conform such exhibits to the proof. Plaintiffs further reserve their right to offer additional exhibits, not listed herein, in rebuttal.

Respectfully submitted,

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
PADUCAH DIVISION
CIVIL ACTION NO. 5:98CV-108-R

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. PLAINTIFFS,

v.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY,
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING
COMPANY INC., and UST INC. DEFENDANTS.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defandants' Motion in Limine to Preclude Irrelevant, Misleading and Unfairly Prejudicial Statements and References (Doc. #267). This Court grants that motion in part and denies that motion in part. Plaintiffs are prohibited from analogizing to United States v. Microsoft, using the word "kneecapping" and are admonished from using similar language that is argumentative and connotative of violent behavior.

DISCUSSION

I. United States v. Microsoft Case

This Court grants Defendants request for an order in limine precluding Plaintiffs from referencing the highly publicized United States v. Microsoft case. Fed.R.Evid. 403 allows a court to exclude relevant evidence on grounds of prejudice, confusion and waste of time. Reference to the Microsoft case serves no probative value and the Court can imagine no legitimate harm Plaintiffs' counsel will suffer by being unable to mention the case. Conversely, the reference is highly prejudicial to Defendants. Accordingly, Plaitiffs' counsel should not reference this case before the jury.

307

16diii004511

II. "Kneecapping"

Like reference to the Microsoft case, highly charged words of violence serve no probative value and can only stand to prejudice Defendants; they are argumentative. Plaintiffs can reach the same result by describing the activity in which they allege Defendants engaged. The use of loaded buzzwords is not crucial. Accordingly, this Court grants Defendants' motion.

III. "Kickbacks"

Although quite similar to the word "kneecapping," this Court finds a distinction nonviolent criminal words like "kickbacks." Here, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants used underhanded tactics in achieving their goals. Kickbacks merely refers to those tactics and, therefore, has probative value. Although it may be prejudicial, it is only prejudicial in the sense that it describes activities a jury would find reprehensible. If a jury believes that Defendants engaged in this activity, it is their own activity, not the word that describes it, that will ultimately impact Defendants.

IV. Monopolist

This Court denies Defendants' request to prohibit Plaintiffs' from referring to Defendants as "monopolists." It is this very activity that is at issue. The Court believes the use of "monopolist" at trial will not unfairly prejudice Defendants and that it does have probative value.

CONCLUSION

Upon Defendants' Motion in Limine to Preclude Irrelevant, Misleading and Unfairly Prejudicial Statements and References,

IT IS ORDERED that Defendants' motion is DENIED in part and GRANTED in part. Plaintiffs are prohibited from analogizing to United States v. Microsoft, using the word [illegible] are prohibited from analogizing to United States v. Microsoft, using the word "kneecapping" and are admonished from using similar language that is argumentative and connotative of violent behavior.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

v.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY,
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND
MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING
COMPANY INC., and UST INC. DEFENDANTS.

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This case is before the Court on Plaintiffs' Motions in Limine (Doc. #255). Plaintiffs bring six motions in limine before the Court. This Court GRANTS motion 1, DENIES motions 3, 4 and 6 and finds motions 2 and 5 MOOT.

DISCUSSION

1. Evidence as to Conwood's Owners and Their Wealth

Plaintiffs move that this Court prohibit evidence regarding the owners of Conwood and their individual wealth. Plaintiffs argue the evidence is irrelevant and prejudicial. Defendants maintain that Plaintiffs' case rests, in part, on its David versus Goliath portrayal and that the owners and their wealth break down this facade. Furthermore, they argue that the owners' participation in preparation for this trial opens their individual ownership and wealth into issue. This Court disagrees. Even if ownership and wealth are somehow relevant, a Fed.R.Evid. 403 analysis demonstrates that the probative nature of the inquiry is substantially outweighed by the potential prejudice to Plaintiffs, while causing no harm to Defendants' case. Evidence of Plaintiffs' profits and size can be fairly offered without revealing information about the ultimate beneficiaries of the profits. Accordingly, this Court grants Plaintiffs' motion to exclude evidence of Conwood's owners, the Pritzker family, and their wealth.

2. Testimony of Expert Sheffman

This motion was made moot by the Court order dated February 9, 2000.

3. Evidence That Companies Other than UST Engaged in Misconduct at Stores

Plaintiffs move the Court to prohibit the introduction of alleged evidence that Plaintiffs and others engaged in inappropriate behavior at stores in addition to the alleged behavior of Defendants. This Court denies that motion.

The definition of monopolizing conduct necessarily implies that not all conduct deemed unlawfully exclusionary for the party with substantial market power is improper for the party that does not have a strong market share. See 3A, Phillip E. Areeda and Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law, 337 (1996). Conduct that would have significant anticompetitive behavior when coupled with substantial market power may have little or no effect when the market power is slight. See id. Here, the Court is faced with that situation. The behavior used by Defendants is allegedly unlawfully exclusionary. The behavior of Plaintiffs, however, is not. As such, Plaintiffs' behavior is not an affirmative defense. In a vacuum, the evidence would not be proper.

This case presents the Court with broader issues. Much of Defendants alleged behavior paints Defendants in a very negative light aside from its allegedly monopolistic aspect. Excluding evidence of similar actions by Plaintiffs and others would unfairly prohibit Defendants from defending their corporate character. If true, evidence of other actions tends to show that the activity was not localized to Defendants, but is reflective of a corporate culture that permeates the moist tobacco industry. Although it may not show that the actions were lawful for Defendants, it may show that unethical behavior is not exclusive to Defendants. Because the evidence has some probative value as to characterizing the nature of the conduct, it is permissible.

4. "Retailer Permission" Evidence

Plaintiffs move this court to exclude evidence that retailers permitted or agreed to UST's exclusion of rival racks, products, and advertising, except as necessary to rebut any claim by Plaintiffs that, in specific instances, Defendants effect such exclusion against the wishes of the retailer. This Court denies that motion

Plaintiffs have taken this motion out of context. They seem to argue that permitting the evidence condones the activity and holds it lawful. It does not. Allowing Defendants to present evidence of retailer consent or of specific agreements does not mean that evidence demonstrates lawful activity. Rather, the evidence paints a picture of the overall atmosphere and activity of Defendants. Plaintiffs are alleging a widespread pattern of activity that cumulatively resulted in unlawful, anticompetitive behavior. It would be unfair for this Court to allow Plaintiffs to piece together various aspects to show a complete picture while holding Defendants to a stricter and more restrictive standard. Defendants should be allowed to develop their case in the same fashion, to rebut allegations of an intent to monopolize, and to demonstrate how their behavior was or was not unlawful.

Plaintiffs maintain that introduction of the evidence will serve only to confuse jurors. The Court disagrees. This evidence will serve to provide jurors a complete picture. Counsel for both Defendants and Plaintiffs have already exhibited excellent advocacy skills. These same skills will serve counsel well in explaining and advocating both the factual and legal portions of this case.

5. Any Evidence Offered in Support of UST's Counterclaims

This motion is mooted by this Court's order discussing summary judgment.

6. Hearsay Deposition Testimony and Documents

Plaintiffs argue that Defendants should not be allowed to have any of the 25 listed employees testify by deposition. They assert this serves only to prevent the jury from making an accurate evaluation of their credibility. Plaintiffs also argue that Defendants should be prohibited from introducing hundreds or thousands of hearsay statements. This Court denies both portions of this motion.

Plaintiffs blanket request for a prohibition on deposition testimony is denied. This Court has already ruled that if a witness appears live for one party that party must ensure that the witness is live for the other party. Plaintiffs have failed to identify any specific portion of Fed.R.Civ.P. 32 that prohibits deposition testimony here and have not moved regarding the specific circumstances of any particular witness. A blanket ruling would be inappropriate considering the various factors that determine when a witness should or should not be allowed to testify by deposition. Similarly, Plaintiffs have not identified any specific documents or identified the hearsay portions of those documents. As both parties are surely aware, hearsay is a broad and complicated doctrine. It is not the responsibility of this Court to cull through hundreds or thousands of documents searching for hearsay and then determining whether applicable exceptions exist. In light of Plaintiffs' generalist approach, this Court holds that hearsay issues will be more appropriately raised when a party seeks to introduce hearsay evidence at trial.

CONCLUSION

Upon Plaintiffs' Motions in Limine (Doc.#255) and this Court being sufficiently advised,

IT IS ORDERED that this Court GRANTS motion 1, DENIES motions 3, 4 and 6 and finds motions 2 and 5 MOOT.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO PRECLUDE PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED NEW VERSION OF THE THE GUNDLACH "STUDY" OF "EXCLUSIONARY" AGREEMENTS AND ANY RELATED EXHIBITS OR TESTIMONY

Discovery in this case began with document production in December of 1998, followed by deposition discovery beginning in April of 1999. Plaintiffs hired five experts and submitted expert reports under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B), which requires a party to disclose "a complete statement of all opinions to be expressed and the basis and reasons therefor . . . ." (emphases added). Pursuant to this Court's February 18, 1999 Scheduling Order, those reports were due and were filed on August 1, 1999.

Subsequently, Plaintiffs had a second opportunity to meet the requirements of Rule 26(a)(2)(B) when, again pursuant to this Court's Scheduling Order, Plaintiffs submitted rebuttal expert reports on October 1, 1999, a full eight weeks after their original expert reports were submitted. For the first time, on rebuttal, Plaintiffs included Professor Gundlach's "study" of so-called "exclusive agreements," a "study" that was simultaneously incorporated by reference into several of Plaintiffs' other expert rebuttal reports. Expert depositions were taken, and despite Plaintiffs' disclosure on "rebuttal" of that which should have been disclosed in their affirmative expert reports, Defendants were able to take meaningful discovery and to create a deposition record for trial.

Now, at 10:30 at night, on February 21, 2000 -- less than one week before this trial is scheduled to begin -- Plaintiffs have offered a new version of Professor Gundlach's "study" of so-called "exclusive agreements," as well as a new basis for the study -- both under the guise of a "proposed demonstrative exhibit for use in Professor Gundlach's testimony."[1] (Tab A) This time, the new version of the so-called "study": (1) includes 9,318 new retail locations (48 new chains), (2) eliminates -- without explanation -- approximately 1,000 retail locations (14 retail chains) previously listed as having "exclusive agreements" with U.S. Tobacco,[2] and (3)

[1] Plaintiffs' cover letter maintains that the new study results and new bases are not even "clarifications" of Gundlach's earlier study. That transparency is resolved by the fact that Plaintiffs are offering a proposed "demonstrative" exhibit one week before trial even though the parties are only obligated to provide potential demonstrative exhibits 48 hours before the witness will be called.

[2] Tellingly, several retail chains were apparently eliminated from Professor Gundlach's original "study" because Plaintiffs – and presumably Professor Gundlach – reviewed U.S. Tobacco's Trial Witness List and discovered that the retailer that purportedly had an "exclusive agreement" with U.S. Tobacco (according to Professor Gundlach's original "study") would be offers completely new bases for Professor Gundlach's conclusions -- apparently, more expert (or Plaintiffs' counsel) phone calls with Conwood personnel summarized under the headings "Cwd. Sales Force Comment" and "Cwd. Contact." This is after Plaintiffs proclaimed to this Court less than two weeks ago that Professor Gundlach "carefully included only agreements for which there was clear evidence that UST had secured exclusive vending rights and/or significant POS restrictions." Pl. Opp. Mem. at 5. Apparently, Plaintiffs were not referring to "clear evidence" for the Bradford Oil, Buy N Fly, CV's IGA, CWX Max Mart, Exit 76 Corp. (Mobil Mart), Express Mart, Express Mart (FINA), EZ Mart, Fill Zone, Gate Food Post/Gate Petroleum, Kroger (Dallas Division), Mapco (Memphis), Meijer, and Toot N Scoot chains, all of which have inexplicably been dropped from Professor Gundlach's "study" less than one week before trial.[3]

The first hint of a modified study came on February 11, 2000, when Plaintiffs responded to Defendants' motion in limine to preclude the Gundlach "study." It was only then that Defendants learned for the first time that Professor Gundlach's "study" had taken on new and different dimensions. See Pl. Opp. Mem. at 1 (disclosing that Professor Gundlach's study now encompassed 29,000 rather that 22,000 retail locations, but not disclosing that the new "study" coming to Paducah to tell a different story.

[3] The Toot N Scoot chain was included in original study despite the existence of a Conwood letter – a record evidence document – recording the fact that Mr. McGuire, owner of the Toot N Scoot chain, "was emphatic about not being on a U.S. Tobacco program," hardly "clear evidence" of an agreement. Gundlach Dep. at 322-24, Ex. 12. The Toot N Scoot chain was dropped from the study after Plaintiffs learned that Mr. McGuire would be offering testimony at trial.

eliminated 14 of the original 81 retail chains on the list and added 48 completely new retail chains). Defendants requested an immediate Rule 26(e) disclosure of any modification to Professor Gundlach's "study," and the reasons and bases therefor. See Letter of February 17 (Tab B). Plaintiffs informed Defendants by letter that Plaintiffs did not have a duty to make any disclosures under Rule 26(e) because Professor Gundlach's "further work is neither clarification nor correction of prior data relied on by Professor Gundlach, and contains no new opinion." See Letter of February 22. (Tab A) To the contrary, the addition of 48 retail chains and the deletion of 14 retail chains constitute at least a "correction" or "clarification" of his opinion.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs have offered, on the eve of trial, a proposed demonstrative exhibit that is not only highly and unfairly prejudicial on its face as a "demonstration," but also encompasses new opinions, new bases and reasons therefor, and new data or other information considered by Professor Gundlach. Defendants have no opportunity to subject Professor Gundlach's new "study" and new "bases" to any type of cross-examination, and Defendants have no opportunity to interview personnel from any of the 48 retail chains added to Professor Gundlach's new list to procure their attendance at trial. If Rule 26(a)(2)(B) was meant to do anything, it was meant to prevent this type of sandbagging and to prevent the admission of unexamined, and highly prejudicial, expert testimony (and accompanying demonstrative exhibits) at trial.

ARGUMENT

One thing is clear at this point – a key issue in this case is whether retailers are subject to coercive agreements with U.S. Tobacco resulting in the exclusion of U.S. Tobacco's competitors from the stores or whether retailers make "independent, uncoerced decisions." See Summ. J. Opp. at 10. Conwood has spent almost two years attempting to gather retailer testimony. Now, after the dust from the discovery trail has settled, Conwood will be able to show a video tape of a single-store retailer from Liberty, Texas who testified about a single incident involving the removal of a Conwood rack (which was replaced within 15 minutes). Conwood also will be able to show a video tape of a single-store retailer from Mishawaka, Indiana to testify about a tussle she got into with the U.S. Tobacco sales representative over faulty product ordering procedures. This is the type of evidence the jury will hear.

What Conwood cannot do, however, is bring a single retailer to testify that it has entered into an exclusive agreement of any kind with U.S. Tobacco rather than make its own, uncoerced decisions about what product, rack and P.O.S. are best for its stores. Because the new version of the Gundlach study is untimely, however, it should be precluded under Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c) and Fed. R. Evid. 702. At a minimum, the "demonstration" should be excluded as demonstrably inaccurate and misleading to the jury in violation of Rule 403.

I. THE NEW GUNDLACH "STUDY" IS UNTIMELY AND SHOULD BE PRECLUDED

Defendants previously have moved to preclude Plaintiffs' use of expert exhibits and related testimony that were not properly disclosed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) or as part of a timely supplementation under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e). See Def. Mot. to Preclude Undisclosed Expert Witness Materials. Today, the Court denied Defendants' motion, reasoning that the proposed expert exhibits did not contain new opinions and were timely filed.

The same is not true here. As discussed below, Professor Gundlach's study includes new evidence and new conclusions. Accordingly, Plaintiffs should not be allowed to use the new version of Professor Gundlach's "study." See United Phosphorous, Ltd. v. Midland Fumigant, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 675, 677 (D. Kan. 1997) (failure to disclose exhibits resulted in prejudice because the exhibits "recast[ed] and restat[ed]" the expert's opinion and would, if admitted, defeat the purpose of the disclosure requirements and would encourage "sandbagging").

There can be no doubt that the new version of the Gundlach "study" recasts and restates Professor Gundlach's opinion -- to the tune of minus 1,000 retail stores, but plus 9,318 stores. It also relies on previously undisclosed "commentary" from numerous Conwood sales people. In these circumstances, there is no doubt that the admission of the "study" would reward and encourage sandbagging to the unfair prejudice of U.S. Tobacco. Accordingly, this previously undisclosed "study," as well as any related testimony, previously undisclosed sources, and exhibits, should be precluded.

16diii004527

II. THE GUNDLACH "STUDY" – EITHER VERSION – IS NOT PROPER EXPERT TESTIMONY BECAUSE IT IS NOT SUPPORTED, AND IS IN FACT CONTRADICTED, BY THE RECORD EVIDENCE

Defendants moved in limine to exclude the Gundlach "study" that was initially proffered by Plaintiffs. Defendants established that, based on the record evidence in this case, there is absolutely no foundation for Professor Gundlach to conclude that U.S. Tobacco has any exclusive agreements with any retailers. Defendants demonstrated – using several of the larger chains such as Wal-Mart, K-Mart, Circle-K, and 7-Eleven – that the cited documentary evidence did not even remotely suggest any "exclusive agreements" with these or any other retailers as opposed to the unilateral decisions of the retailers themselves.

The new version of the Gundlach study attempts to buttress Professor Gundlach's shaky foundation. First, it changes the title of the document to "exclusionary" rather than "exclusive" agreements in an apparent attempt to lower the bar. Second, it adds references to anecdotes of Conwood sales personnel with no reference to how, when or on what basis that commentary originates. These comments themselves are of highly questionable probative value and are very misleading. For example, observations by Conwood sales personnel that a particular retail chain "went UST exclusive in Spring 1997 for 1 year" does nothing to support Professor Gundlach's "study" because it says nothing about why the retailer chose to use U.S. Tobacco racks and whether the choice was the result of an agreement or was an uncoerced, unilateral retailer decision.

Plaintiffs only hope of persuading a jury otherwise is to present misleading expert testimony and "demonstrations" that will leave the jury guessing as to what is really going on in these relatively few retail chains.

III. THE NEW GUNDLACH "STUDY" IS MISLEADING TO THE JURY AND UNFAIRLY PREJUDICIAL TO U.S. TOBACCO

Professor Gundlach's methodology, analysis and conclusions are highly suspect and of little probative value. But, perhaps more significantly, there can be no doubt that however effective U.S. Tobacco is at cross-examining Professor Gundlach at trial and proving the negative with respect to each retailer on Professor Gundlach's list, allowing Plaintiffs to present the new Gundlach "study," either through direct examination testimony or by displaying an exhibit to the jury that reads "UST Exclusionary Agreements" will mislead the jury and be highly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

Moreover, allowing counsel for Plaintiffs to walk Professor Gundlach through his recall of the previously undisclosed anecdotes from Conwood sales personnel that are summarized and listed on the new version of the Gundlach "study" would put before the jury unsworn and self-serving testimony that can never and will never be cross-examined. Indeed, the use of such expert testimony would render completely unnecessary the introduction of documents and the offer of sworn testimony about alleged conduct of U.S. Tobacco and alleged agreements of any sort – precisely Plaintiffs' goal.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should preclude the use of the new version of the Gundlach "study" and any related exhibits or testimony.

Re: Professor Gundlach's compilation of UST exclusionary agreements

Gentlemen:

Enclosed please find a proposed demonstrative exhibit for use in Professor Gundlach's testimony. This reflects additional exclusionary agreements he has identified based on his continuing review of documents produced by UST in this action.

Because this further work is neither clarification nor correction of prior data relied on by Professor Gundlach, and contains no new opinion, we disagree with your suggestion that he has a duty to provide a Rule 26(e) supplemental report. We believe the enclosed demonstrative provides the additional information developed by Professor Gundlach since his deposition.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Guzman

Re: Conwood Company L.P., et al. v. U.S. Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

Thank you for your letter of yesterday. We do seem to be in agreement on most issues, but we do have minor differences of opinion on the following.

U.S. Tobacco Employee Witnesses. We did not mean to modify the Court's Order in any way, or suggest that the parties proceed otherwise.

Trial Exhibits. Our suggestion was meant to enable the parties to present issues to the Court the night before, as the Court requested. We understand that any identification of exhibits will be subject to modification, but we have no reason to believe that the majority of exhibits to be used during the direct examination of a party's own witnesses cannot be disclosed (again, subject to modification) two days before a witness will be called. However, if Plaintiffs believe this is unreasonable, we propose that such disclosures be made by 2:00 p.m. on the preceding day. This will enable opposing counsel to determine what objections will be made and to present any issues to the Court the night before the exhibit will be used.

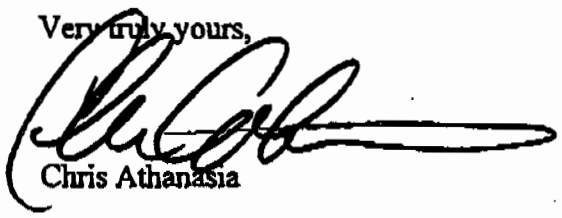
Opening Statement Exhibits And Testimony. Our prior agreement regarding demonstrative aids is fine. We look forward to specific designations for Mr. Borrowdale and Mr. Smith.

Deposition Designations. We look forward to your narrowed deposition designations; we will provide counter-designations and any objections in response, and we will follow the same procedure when we begin our defense and affirmative case.

Professor Gundlach. Plaintiffs provided U.S. Tobacco with a compilation of documents and testimony that Professor Gundlach relied on for his opinion that U.S. Tobacco had "exclusive agreements" with 22,000 retail locations. You state in your letter that "his opinion has not changed in any respect." We were recently informed, however, that Professor Gundlach now believes that U.S. Tobacco has "exclusive agreements" with 28,000 retail locations. It is our opinion that this is a material change in his opinion, and we again request that the complete basis for this opinion be provided consistent with Plaintiffs' obligations under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e) -- presumably Dr. Gundlach completed his analysis before asserting this new number, therefore, there should be no reason why Dr. Gundlach cannot provide the underlying data and analysis for this change immediately.

Professor Leftwich. Please provide additional and more reasonable dates and times for Professor Leftwich's deposition. There can be no doubt that the materials provided to U.S. Tobacco on January 28, 2000, as well as the knowledge that such materials would be forthcoming, was in Plaintiffs' (and presumably in Professor Leftwich's) possession long before any disclosures were made to U.S. Tobacco. Accordingly, the offer to make Professor Leftwich available only on Monday beginning at 6:30 p.m. is patently unreasonable.

Very truly yours,



Chris Athanasia

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' EX PARTE DISCLOSURE OF WITNESSES AND EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs respectfully submit the instant disclosure of the witnesses they presently intend to call, the exhibits they intend to introduce through each such witness, the anticipated order of witnesses, and the estimated length (in very rough approximation) of direct examination for each witness. These represent plaintiffs' best current estimates and are subject to modification as trial proceeds.

1. Conwood's "Will Call" List

Conwood presently expects to call the following witnesses in the following order:

Witness	Length of Direct	Anticipated Testimony	Exhibits Anticipated to be Introduced*
Lou Marano Conwood Sales Rep. (PA)	1-2 hours Live	Mr. Marano will explain, from perspective of field representative, how moist snuff is sold and advertised. He will discuss importance of point of sale advertising ("POS"), and the effect of "exclusive vending" and "category management." He will testify to his experiences with these UST practices, and about admissions made to him by his UST counterpart. This UST sales representative admitted, in substance, that if he wanted to be promoted he would have to exclude Conwood racks.	None expected at this time. May use PX 290-304 (retail counter, racks, POS)
William Rosson Chairman, Conwood	1-2 hours Live	Mr. Rosson will, based on 45 years experience in the smokeless tobacco business, testify about the different smokeless products, Conwood's history and entry into the moist snuff market, and the problems created for Conwood by UST's systematic and nationwide practices of exclusive vending and category management to impair Conwood's distribution. He will contrast that with Conwood's relative ease in obtaining distribution for its other smokeless products, which take up more space than moist snuff.	Demonstrative comparing smokeless products - e.g., differences between markets for loose leaf, plug, twist, and moist snuff; demonstrative concerning relative spending of UST and Conwood on competitive activities

*Introduced documents may also be used by subsequent witnesses.

16diii004556

Morton Kamien Professor, Northwestern University Kellogg Graduate School of Business	1 1/2 days Live	Professor Kamien will testify, as an expert, that in his opinion (1) moist snuff constitutes the relevant product market for this case; (2) UST has monopoly power in this market; and (3) UST has used its power to exclude competitors and hurt consumers. He will show, inter alia, that there is no evidence of switching away from moist snuff to other products in response to price increases, and that UST has demonstrated its power through regular price increases, exclusion of competitors and the maintenance of a high market share. He will discuss the various practices UST has used to harm competition, and the economic evidence demonstrating the harm to consumers in the form of higher prices, restricted choices, and reduced output. Professor Kamien's testimony will be lengthy because he has relied upon numerous UST business records in forming his opinions, and plaintiffs expect that he will assist the jury in understanding most if not substantially all of the most important documents supporting plaintiffs' claims.	PX: 4,5,6,9,13,14,16,19, 20,23,24,28,32,33,35, 38,39,40,42,44,45,47, 48,49,53,55,59,61,63, 68,69,70,71,72,76,79, 80,84,85,86,88,94,96, 101,103,104,106,107, 108,112c,113a,113b, 114,117,120,124a,124f, 126,127,128,129,130, 136,137,139,140,141, 143,144,147,149,152, 156,157,158,159,173, 176,177,178,180,187, 188,189,191,194,196, 197,199,208,220,221, 223,230,232,235,245, 258,266,267,268,270, 274,280,285,288,313, 314,315,326
James Wheatley UST Dept. Manager	1 hour Video-UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Wheatley will discuss his attempts to obtain exclusive vending, including efforts through UST's Customer Alliance Program ("CAP"). He will be unable to give any explanation for the report, made to him, that at a meeting he and his subordinates had "stressed the importance of cutting competitive distribution."	PX 5, 6, 9, 28, 71, 106, 113b & Dep. Exhs. 3, 7

Richard Fasanelli UST Vice President	1 hour Video-UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Fasanelli is the author of many key documents: trade channel strategy of exclusive vending; retail incentive for chains with exclusive vending. Also he suggested producing larger slots to limit the number of brands carried by retailers.	PX 14, 63, 68, 69, 149 & Dep. Exhs. 4, 16
Robert Fitzmaurice UST Vice President	1 hour Video-UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Fitzmaurice will testify about documents -- that he prepared or assisted in preparing -- that establish UST's efforts to prevent price-value competition, its unwillingness to reduce prices to meet competition, and its fear of "Marlboro Friday" -- on which Philip Morris reduced price in response to competition and sustained a market capitalization loss of $13 billion.	PX 45,55
Timothy Entwistle UST Director of National Accounts	1 hour Video-UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Entwistle will testify about UST's exclusionary agreement with Walmart. He will testify about efforts to enforcee Walmart's compliance with the exclusionary terms of the agreement, the payments (in form of promotions) made to Walmart after Walmart complained about the reduced moist snuff sales it sustained after implementing UST's exclusionary agreement. He will also testify about his recommended deletion of competitive price/value brands in Walmart despite evidence about their high growth rates.	PX 47,85,88,126,127, 157,187,191,230, 232,235

Don Blackburn UST National Key Account Manager	45 minutes Video-UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Blackburn will testify that he recommended deleting competitive and price/value brands from 7/11, Walmart and other stores, and that he can't remember ever recommending the addition of adding competitors' racks or products when he served as "category captain." He will also testify that he sought to gain exclusive vending and often succeeded -- "I was glad I could meet some of the job descriptions in my job performance evaluations." He will describe how Walmart sales went down after Walmart entered into exclusionary UST agreement. He will also testify about UST's similarly exclusionary agreement with Southland ("7-11").	PX 38,44,68,101,147, 194,196,197,199,221 & Dep. Exh. 21
Tom Berkebile UST Chain Account Manager	1 hour Video	Mr. Berkebile will testify that he obtained exclusive vending in numerous stores (specified and identified by name/chain). This resulted in the "de-listing" of competitive products. He made presentations to suggest this to stores. He will also testify that the CAP worksheet sometimes is used to reflect exclusive vending arrangements, but that UST has no system of keeping them or forwarding them to headquarters. He wrote that (re: obtaining exclusive vending) "by doing this, we can restrict competitive distribution to two products." He denied knowledge regarding statements in documents sent or received by him. He received monthly letter stating "I feel it is better for them [competitors] to be lost in our vending then to have their own and no point of sale on the vendor," but did not know what this meant. He will testify that Conwood "may" sell less if in UST vending and not able to place POS.	PX 35,176,177,178,180

Gayleen Rusk Retailer	1/2 hour Video	Manager of the Amoco Pronto Express, an Iowa gas and convenience store. Ms. Rusk will testify that every time UST representative Ken Drass serviced her store, about four times a year, he removed Conwood racks and point-of-sale and reduced Conwood facings. Ms. Rusk will testify that Mr. Drass committed these acts without her approval. Mr. Drass threatened that if Ms. Rusk removed him from her store then he would make sure that her wholesaler did not accept her outdated products.	None expected at this time.
Gary Milano UST Vice President of Sales	1 hour Live	Mr. Milano will testify about the practices of UST's sales force, including use of the CAP contract. He will also be asked about UST documents, which he wrote or received, indicating the exclusionary purpose and/or effect of UST's exclusive vending and category management. He will also be asked about his direction to the field, two weeks before this lawsuit was filed, that accurate descriptions of exclusionary conduct no longer be memorialized.	PX 8,23,28,37, 82,108,124A
Gary Smith President, U.S. Tobacco	1 hour Video- UST would not provide witness live	Mr. Smith will testify about the importance of header cards (as the most effective form of POS), UST's high market share and profits, and lack of product innovation. He will be asked about documents, written or received by him, concerning UST's exclusionary conduct. Mr. Smith will claim lack of understanding about many such documents.	To be provided

Glen O'Neal Conwood District Manager (KY)	45 mins. Live	Mr. O'Neill will discuss Conwood's relative success in Kentucky, where UST's tactics have not resulted in widespread exclusion of Conwood's racks and/or POS. He will further testify that, where Conwood has managed to maintain its racks and POS, it often has a high market share (as in Kentucky, where its share is approximately 30%). He will also testify, however, that in Walmart, Conwood sales have been decreased dramatically as a consequence of UST's exclusionary agreement. The chain was responsible for 40% of his sales before it entered into its contract with UST; presently Conwood sales in Walmarts located in his territory are minimal.	None expected at this time.
Gary Ryan Conwood Sales Rep. (MO)	45 mins. Live	Mr. Ryan will discuss the exclusionary UST tactics he encountered, including conduct of former UST representative Alan Hart. He will also testify that Hart and another UST representative admitted that their supervisors made them exclude Conwood racks from stores.	None expected at this time.
Alan Hart Former UST Sales Rep. (MO)	30 mins. Video	Mr. Hart will testify that he excluded Conwood racks and POS pursuant to his supervisor's instructions. He was ordered by supervisors in the field and at department and regional meetings (including G. Milano, currently Executive Vice President of Sales, UST) to control the moist section by using exclusive vending and/or remove Conwood racks. He will further testify that decreased shelf space and exposure for Conwood brands hurt their sales; that he witnessed his supervisors removing Conwood racks; that he was evaluated by his supervisors based on his success in obtaining 90% of the shelf space; that during a "crew drive," UST representatives would remove and replace (with UST exclusive vending) as many Conwood racks as possible.	To be provided

Doug Hynek Conwood District Manager (MN)	45 mins. Live	Mr. Hynek will testify about systematic UST efforts in his district to exclude Conwood from stores. He will also testify about admissions made to him by UST employees, and about his suggestions to Conwood management for ways to improve performance.	None expected at this time.
John Bonnoffski Former UST Sales Rep. (PA)	15 mins. Video	Mr. Bonnoffski will admit that he removed Conwood racks, with and without store permission, during his employment at UST	None expected at this time.
Ronald Piatek Former UST Sales Rep (GA)	15 mins. Video	Mr. Piatek will testify that, at a regional sales meeting in 1993, a UST Department Manager instructed the sales representatives to dismantle Conwood's sales racks and give them to the store manager and then replace them with UST's racks. He was also instructed to remove Conwood's POS, and to place Conwood products on the shelves but not in UST's rack. Since he left in 1995, he has spoken with UST representatives who have told him that they are now more aggressive.	To be provided
Guy Wilding Conwood Sales Rep (AR)	45 mins. Live	Mr. Wilding will testify about UST practices in his sales territory, including an incident in which UST eliminated all Conwood racks in a town. He will also testify about admissions made by his UST counterpart, who told him he removed racks because his supervisor required him to do so.	None expected at this time.

John Naifeh Former UST Sales Rep (TN)	30 mins. Video	Mr. Nafieh will testify that, while a UST sales representative, he was instructed by his Division Manager, Tom Buie, to remove Conwood POS if "it was in our way." This was done usually without store authorization. UST representatives were evaluated on their success in increasing UST facings/decreasing Conwood facings. Mr. Naifeh will also testify that it was UST's highest priority to have its fixtures installed -- with competitors' products in inconvenient locations inside UST's fixtures.	PX 160
Don Foster Conwood Regional Vice President (Western Region)	1 hour Live	Mr. Foster will testify about the pervasive and systematic UST efforts to exclude Conwood from his region through exclusive vending and related UST tactics. He will also testify about his suggestions to Conwood management that, to combat such tactics, Conwood should attempt to offer "category management" services, among other things.	None expected at this time.
Sean Ulizio Former UST Division Manager (CA)	45 mins. Video	Mr. Ulizio will testify about his efforts and those of his division manager to remove Conwood POS and facings. He did so in part to reduce Conwood's market exposure. He will also testify about the benefits to UST of having Conwood products in UST racks.	PX 167
Joseph Marconi Former UST Sales Rep.	15 minutes Video	Mr. Marconi will testify that, with the permission of the store owner, he would place the Conwood vendor in the back room and merchandise all products in a UST rack; that this was encouraged by his supervisor; that he was encouraged by his supervisors to increase UST facings at the expense of competitors; and that he told his Conwood counterpart that he was removing racks only because he was following orders.	To be provided

Gregory Gundlach Professor, Notre Dame Business School	3 hours Live	Professor Gundlach will testify about the heightened importance of POS in tobacco marketing in light of the pervasive governmental restrictions on tobacco advertising. He will also testify about UST exclusionary agreements, providing for UST exclusive vending and other restrictions on competition at approximately 21,000 retail locations. Finally, Professor Gundlach will testify about UST's Customer Alliance Program ("CAP"), which also contains exclusionary features and is used to create or perpetuate exclusive vending.	PX 25,31,75,82,105, 122,123,169,171,175, 183,226,249,264,278, 281,287,289,329, Affidavit of Gary Milano (1/26/99), and other demonstratives
Robert Blattberg Professor, Northwestern Graduate Business School	3 hours Live	Professor Blattberg, one of America's leading experts on category management for retail outlets, will testify as an expert about proper standards for category management, and the requirement that it be used to increase overall sales for the category. He will testify that, in his opinion, moist snuff is an underdeveloped category, in that it requires more space rather than less in stores in light of its high level of profitability and minimal space needs. He will further testify that UST's actions were inconsistent with category management, and represented an effort to benefit the dominant firm at the expense of its smaller rivals. UST efforts to limit shelf space for moist snuff hurt the category. Similarly, UST efforts to prevent competitive POS hurt the category, as the information is critical to consumers in the ad-restricted retail environment for tobacco.	PX 65,66,83,86,89,93, 105,112,150,169, 184,193,211,230, 232,262,263,311f, 332,328,329,330 and powerpoint demonstratives

Terry Williams, Conwood National Sales Manager	1 hour Live	Mr. Williams will testify about the systematic nature and pervasiveness of the problems created for Conwood's sales force by UST's exclusionary practices. He will testify that Conwood has a constant problem with distribution for moist snuff, when its other products (all of which require more space in stores than moist snuff) have no such problems. He will further testify that Conwood field representatives report these problems on a daily basis, and that a survey of the approximately 240 Conwood sales representatives revealed that the representatives spend up to half their time on efforts to remediate the exclusion effected by UST. Mr. Williams will also testify about his own experience with UST's exclusionary tactics during his years in the field.	None expected at this time.
Paul Naseth, Conwood Sales Rep. (ND)	45 mins. Live	Mr. Naseth will testify that, in his territories, he encounters pervasive rack removal and exclusive vending problems. He will further testify that his counterpart UST representative taunted Naseth by telling him that if he was not able to get around to the stores in a reasonable time, UST would remove Conwood's racks.	None expected at this time.

Andy Carter Former UST Sales Rep. (TX)	30 minutes Video	Mr. Carter will testify that he was notified of job openings at UST after he let his former boss know that we had contacted him regarding the suit. He will also testify that he often removed Conwood racks after asking the store if it wanted a "new look," and would put old Conwood racks in the dumpster. He placed Conwood products in a UST rack without POS; recalls his supervisor instructing him to put Conwood racks in the back room. He will testify that it was normal practice for other UST reps to remove racks; that POS is important for sales, especially in a tobacco-restrictive environment; that by placing all products in one UST rack, he could dictate how many facings competitive products would receive; that he cut down Pinkerton (Swedish-Match) facings; that he and other UST reps told consumers Conwood products were "stemmy;" and that he threatened to revoke retailer credit when he was displeased with retailers.	None expected at this time.
Richard Leftwich Professor, University of Chicago Graduate School of Business	1.5 hours Live	Professor Leftwich will testify that, in his opinion, Conwood has been damaged in an amount of lost profits in the range of $280-480 million, as set forth in his original, rebuttal and supplemental reports.	PX 316, 317, 327
Jeff Dring Conwood Sales Rep. (SD)	45 mins. Live	Mr. Dring will testify about pervasive and systematic UST exclusive vending and rack removal in his district. He will also testify to particular incidents, including one in which UST representative Stanke and UST then-Department Manager (now Regional VP) Segelstrom removed Conwood racks at Lewis Drug store. Mr. Dring will also testify that, when he succeeded on one occasion in getting exclusive Conwood racks in one chain, UST responded by refusing to call on that account, and Mr. Dring's UST counterpart admitted that to him.	None expected at this time.

Don Segelstrom, UST Regional Vice President	5 mins. Video	Mr. Segelstrom will testify that he is unable to recall or to deny above-recounted incident at Lewis Drug.	None expected at this time.
Lawrence Borrowdale Former UST Part Time Sales Rep (NM)	30 mins. Video	Mr. Borrowdale will testify, based on his 27 years as a tobacco representative, that UST's actions harmed competition; that his supervisor removed Conwood racks two or three times a day when they were together, which hurt Conwood sales; that his boss removed Conwood POS on nearly every store call, reduced competitive facings, bagged fresh Conwood product, and engaged in other pervasive misconduct. UST representatives competed to remove the most competitive POS; they could do this because store managers didn't care what was going on. Store clerks are often young and inexperienced, which allows UST to engage in these forms of misconduct.	PX 165

William McClure Retired CEO of Swedish Match and/or Harold Price Vice President -Sales, Swedish Match	1 hour Live	Mr. McClure and/or current Mr. Price will testify that the practices of UST (specifically exclusive vending and category management) caused Swedish Match significant problems, and impaired distribution for its products. They will corroborate the testimony of Conwood executives and sales personnel, and demonstrate that the UST practices harm competition in moist snuff and not just a single competitor. They will testify that, in their view, UST's action limited the growth of Swedish Match's moist snuff products, and specifically Timberwolf. Without UST's interference, Swedish Match has been able to obtain adequate distribution and fair opportunity to sell its products in the loose leaf market, but in moist snuff the presence and the monopolist, and its exclusionary tactics, has restricted the ability of the smaller firms to compete. Mr. McClure will also testify that he chose not to have his company join this action as a plaintiff, because he feared that vindictive and anticompetitive retaliation by UST might put Swedish Match's moist snuff division out of business, and he was unwilling to bear the risk.	None expected at this time.
David Untiedt UST Director of National Accounts	45 mins. Video	Mr. Untiedt will testify about UST activities with national chain stores. He will testify that he cannot explain many of the documents regarding UST elimination of competitive brands and exclusive vending. In general, he will testify that he doesn't know or recall in response to almost every question.	To be provided

Rob Engster Majority owner of six Discount Tobacco shops in Fort Smith and Little Rock, Arkansas.	20 mins. Video	UST offered Engster exclusive vending. Engster believes that POS does affect a customers choice of moist snuff brands. He states that a customer will either be looking for a specific brand or they will be looking for the best price and POS will help them find the cheapest snuff. On one occasion Vincent Gierer, CEO of UST, visited Engster in one of his shops. Gierer asked him whether he'd be interested in a contract that would pay him to allow UST to have the number one moist snuff position in the store. Gierer went on to inquire if Engster would consider not carrying some of his slower moving brands such as Kodiak Choice or Timberwolf Long Cut Straight in exchange for a payment from UST.	PX 225
Nell Renfro Former Wal-Mart category manager.	30 mins. Video	Opposed Wal-Mart exclusive with UST, because she thought it would hurt overall sales, which turned out to be true. She thought that each manufacturer should be permitted POS and adequate space in Wal-Marts, and UST should not be given preference. UST fought her over this. Moist snuff is very profitable for Wal-Mart, and deserves plenty of space. It's a separate product category unlike any other form of smokeless.	PX 125, 133, 319
Patricia Leinen Convenience store clerk at Dave's Country Store in Dunlap, Iowa for nine years.	20 mins. Video	Witnessed persistent removal by UST of Conwood racks without authorization, She witnessed Conwood racks being thrown in the dumpster by UST. She witnessed Conwood header card removal by UST at least twice a year. She believes that increased advertising leads to higher moist retail sales.	None expected at this time.

16diii004569

David Waller Owner of Pelcian State Wholesale serving 650 stores in northeastern Louisiana.	15 mins. Video	He feels that UST uses national Nielsen figures to skew statistics away from local trends. He knows that UST has the local figures since he supplies that same data to UST under CAP. "If you use Nielsen data you're not going to have true tracking and a true picture of what's going on in northeast Louisiana." Waller says UST's report to HardeMart is misleading to the extent that it deletes Cougar and other price value brands with triple digit growth rates, while Skoal's growth rate is minus 9%. UST's portion packs are moist snuff items. Part of the category, as are mint and cherry brands, and should not be placed in their own category for ranking purposes. Any business review that ignores growth rates does not present a complete picture for the retailer and is not to the retailer's advantage. The success of price value brands has caused Copenhagen overstocks and Waller faces credit problems with UST as a result. He cannot afford to lose $2000 credit each week on Copenhagen. Loss of distribution on price value brands causes brand-loyal customers to go to another store, causing an unexpected out-of-stock at that new location. At his warehouse, Waller faces out-of-stock problems on price value brands due to their gaining popularity. Prior to the introduction of competitive price value brands, UST never competed on price. Waller had been excluded recently from buy-downs and B1G1F promotions that place him at a competitive disadvantage with his competitor Roy Jones. POS and header cards are important for price value customers and for new product introductions.	PX 262, 263

Georgia Gill-Elkins Manager of Berreth Oil, located at 12495 McKinley Highway, Mishawaka, Indiana.	20 mins. Video	Within her store UST, Conwood and Swedish Match all sell product in their own vendors, with their own POS. In approximately November 1998, a UST sales rep rearranged the moist snuff section, removing a number of Conwood and UST facings. When Gill-Elkins questioned the sales reps' actions, she was told that the products were in UST racks, and that they were outdated. The rep proceeded to place the product in a box. The UST rep reduced the number of Kodiak Wintergreen facings from 3 to 1, despite the fact that this brand was her number one seller. During this reset, the UST rep placed two facings of Rooster, despite the fact that Gill-Elkins had said that she did not want the product in the store. Gill-Elkins observed that as a result of UST's unauthorized set changes that the store lost sales throughout the moist snuff category. However, since the set was returned to the proper arrangement, Conwood snuff products have been really moving. This she attributes to more Kodiak facings, product visibility and advertising. She believes that the UST rep hurt sales of moist snuff, and was not acting in the best interest of the customers.	PX 244

Tommy Latta Owner of two tobacco stores in Texas.	20 mins. Video	Point of sale advertising is important to the sale of tobacco products. Latta participated in the UST Copenhagen Incentive Program and indicates that one of the guidelines of the program involved not participating in a competitor's promotion that offered more savings than the Copenhagen Incentive Program. In addition, UST had primary POS positioning and Mr. Latta could not take on any additional competitive sampling or programs. As compensation for the Copenhagen Incentive Program, Mr. Latta was paid approximately $150 to $200 per week by UST Division Manager Mr. Thibodeaux on Mr. Thibodeaux's personal checks. Mr. Latta states that a UST representative also pitched what he thinks was the Customer Alliance Program to him in which money would be given to Mr. Latta in exchange for UST rack and POS exclusivity. Mr. Latta indicates he turned this program down because he felt that there would be no place for generic products, which are strong in his area, on the UST rack. Mr. Latta believes that if Conwood products were placed in a UST rack this would have a major impact on Conwood's ability to promote buy-downs of its products. Finally, when asked about the relationship of freshness to sales, Mr. Latta states that UST is the only company to use a manufactured date on the can and that he does not understand UST's method of dating as the manufactured date is usually the date that the cans are already in his stores. Patricia Leinen	30 mins. video	Convenience store clerk at Dave's Country Store in Dunlap, Iowa for nine years (1987-1997) and witnessed persistent removal by UST of Conwood racks without authorization, She witnessed Conwood racks being thrown in the dumpster by UST. She witnessed Conwood header card removal by UST at least twice a year. She believes that increased advertising leads to higher moist retail sales.	PX 255, 256
Carolyn Ballard Manager at D & R Grocery for eleven years.	20 mins. Video	It is her responsibility to order moist snuff for the store. As manager, she has the authority to decide which racks may be placed in the store. Ballard recalls at least three instances when UST representatives removed Conwood racks without permission. The racks were removed, they were placed in storage room with POS material still attached to them. Ballard prefers the Conwood rack because it allows her to display other merchandise on top of the rack.	None expected at this time.

Albert Ianuzzi Owner of a Citgo gas station in Springfield, MA.	20 mins. Video	UST paid $10/month for putting UST rack on counter. The UST rep's boss visited his store, saw a Conwood rack next to the UST rack, told him he would have to stop paying him unless the Conwood rack went back-bar, and then the UST mgr took the Conwood rack and moved it back bar. Ianuzzi didn't approve it, but he was very busy at the time and didn't have time to deal with it, so he just let him move the Conwood rack. Resulted in lower Conwood sales and lower overall moist sales. "It deterred sales." Testified "it is critical" for each company to advertise on its own racks and it "increases sales." Testified moist sells better in its own racks. He also explained that it was critical to have the header card and price "all together" in moist section because a sign on the door or in another area was not as effective. There is a "big impact" on sales if you can't put ads on rack.	None expected at this time.
Maudie Rushing Owner of the Rushing Tobacco Shop near Liberty, Texas since 1995.	20 mins. Video	She witnessed removal of Conwood's rack by the UST rep. Her sales clerk called and the rack was returned. Outdoor Cougar promotional banner was taken at the same time but she did not see who removed it. She testified that POS is important for price comparison shoppers. The UST rep reduced Kodiak facings by one, causing out of stock problems for the most popular Conwood product in early-1995 without authorization. The UST rep removed Cougar facings at a time when Cougar sales were accelerating in 1995 without authorization. He removed Conwood POS when UST had a large promotion underway without authorization. UST removed POS from only the better-selling competitive products, Conwood and Timberwolf, leaving the slow-selling Superior brand alone.	None expected at this time.

Robert Jansing EZ-Mart store manager in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.	10 mins. Video	Vendors are not allowed to change the store without his permission. In 1997 Jansing recalls UST representative Todd Parish coming into his store and placing Kodiak and Kodiak Straight into the UST rack. Parish also put other Conwood products beneath the counter. Jansing says this occurred two or three times over two or three months. This resulted in lost sales for the store. He knows this because he orders the moist snuff, and the moist snuff order went down.	None expected at this time.
Bonnie Townsend Store manager for EZ-Mart in Oklahoma City, OK and has sixteen years experience in c-store business	10 mins. Video	She testified that Todd Parish showed an old schematic in 1997 and removed Cougar racks and bagged Cougar product. The bagged product was the most-recently introduced competitive product, including Cougar and Timberwolf. This happened four or five times. Conwood had been attempting to use the correct planogram which deleted a number of slow-selling Skoal Bandit products, making room for the new competitive brands. POS is very important, particularly to get the price point message across. She lost sales when this product was bagged and out of view in the cigarette room.	PX 261
Marti Stevens KwikWay convenience store in Billings, MT	20 mins. Video	The UST rep, Terry Idstrom, removed the Conwood rack without authorization and hid Conwood product behind a cigarette display. Stevens testified that customers like to see the product, POS and price information. UST's removal of the Conwood rack was not in the store's interest, it was in UST's interest.	None expected at this time.
Robert Weckman Front-end manager, Super Saver (NE)	20 mins. Video	UST repreesntatives removed Conwood racks, POS, and products wihtout permission and placed remaining Conwood products in an exclusive UST rack.	None expected at this time.

Robert Chiaradio UST National Key Account Manager	20 minutes Video	In role as "category captain", never recommended adding competitor racks or POS (except vendor labels) Retailers put a lot of trust in cat captains. Generally retailers want 'top dog' running the category. Adding facings can create freshness and overstock problems, esp. for Copenhagen. Recommended deleting all price/value brands in Dairy Mart in 1997 despite internal UST docs showing they had highest growth rates of all moist products there. Cannot explain recommendation now. Sought more space in Sheetz when it already had 97% share. Unable to explain why 97% share wasn't enough. UST tries to obtain exclusive vending. Underlings report success in "eliminating comp brands" and he has no idea what this means.	PX 24, 83, 207, 208, 212, 214, 215, 216, 218, 219, 222
Byron Todd Parrish UST Sales Rep.	10 mins. Video	Admits there was "plenty of room" for competitor products/racks. Documents show he was ordered to, and rated on, "control[] competition" through, e.g., category management. Supposed to "increase share of space and cut down on competitive facings." No idea what this meant.	None expected at this time.
Michael Beyerlein UST Sales Rep.	15 mins. Video	Admits exclusive agreement (Admiral Petroleum stores, 1995 or 1996), testified he cut Conwood slots in the 4 Perky Pantry stores in his area in 1996. He was following an old buyer's direction even though the stores had a new buyer who had authorized the additional Conwood slots. He admitted he didn't discuss the cutting of the slots with anyone at the stores prior to doing it.	None expected at this time.

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED DEMONSTRATIVES AND EXHIBITS

Defendants ("UST") object to three of Dr. Kamien's proposed demonstrative aids and three of his proposed exhibits on the grounds that they reflect "new" opinions. Plaintiffs respectfully respond as follows:

Demonstratives

Pages 7 & 8. "Cross Elasticity" and "No Cross-Elasticity: Moist Snuff and Looseleaf." These demonstratives illustrate Dr. Kamien's opinion that "consumers have not responded to moist snuff price increases by shifting to other types of smokeless tobacco." Report ¶ 17. See also id. ¶¶ 18-24 (explaining evidence that moist snuff users do not switch to looseleaf when moist snuff prices rise); Rebuttal ¶¶ 6-12; Depo. at 130:15-23

(using almost identical language as demonstrative).[1]

Page 11. "UST Exclusionary Conduct Widespread Across US." The Court overruled UST's objections to this demonstrative.

Page 14. "7-Eleven: Largest US Convenience Store." To avoid needless dispute, Conwood will revise the demonstrative to reflect the number of 7-Eleven outlets nationwide, rather than worldwide.

Exhibits

PX 326-1. "Moist Snuff Product and Design Introductions Plotted Against UST's Market Share and Moist Snuff Prices." This graph illustrates three background facts all referenced in Dr. Kamien's reports and deposition:

- the history of moist snuff prices (see Report ¶¶ 18, 20 ("between 1986 and 1997, the average price per pound of moist snuff increased by 109.5 percent"), 29, 37, Tab 2 at Tables 3A-3D, Tab 12 at Table 5; Depo. at 37, 53, 260-262);
- the history of UST's moist snuff market share (see Report ¶¶ 7, 26, 36; Rebuttal Report ¶¶ 14-15; Depo. at 197-200);
- a few prominent events in industry history - e.g., Conwood's entry, the advent of the plastic can and J rack, Swedish Match's entry and Conwood's introduction of a price value brand (see Report ¶ 7-11; Depo. at 52 (plastic can, J-rack), 55, 185 (Swedish Match entry)).

[1]UST miscites Dr. Kamien's deposition testimony. Dr. Kamien stated merely that he did not calculate the exact cross-elasticities of demand between moist and looseleaf -- i.e., run a regression model to estimate precisely how many consumers will switch to looseleaf products in response to a given incremental increase in moist snuff prices. Depo. at 131. But immediately before and after the passage UST cites Dr. Kamien expresses his opinion, fully explained in his report, that the economic evidence shows that moist users do not switch to looseleaf even in the face of UST's disproportionate moist snuff price increases. Id. at 129-135 (discussing Report ¶¶ 17-24).

PX 326-22 & PX 326-39 "Snuff and All-Item PPIs, 1986-1998"; "UST Moist Snuff Prices Over Time - Key Pricing Events." These graphs illustrate Dr. Kamien's opinion that UST's ability to sustain large and frequent price increases is evidence of, inter alia, (i) UST's market power and (ii) the fact that moist snuff is a distinct product market. See Report ¶¶ 18, 20, 29-33, 37-38, 52-55; Rebuttal Report ¶¶ 18-20, 32; Depo. at 37, 53, 216, 260-62. To avoid needless dispute and juror confusion, Conwood will delete text entries along the graph line in PX 326-39.

In this, the second annual Convenience Store News Category Captains supplement, industry retailers, suppliers and distributors nominated companies they view as exemplary practitioners of category management. In a questionnaire sent to industry players, retailers nominated supplier and distributor Category Captains, while suppliers and distributors nominated their most proficient retail partners.

Congratulations to all of this year's Category Captains. As a group and individually, these companies have taken a leadership position in the industry with an eye toward excellence. They believe in category management, they practice and implement category-management strategies and they are reaping the rewards in the form of increased sales, profits and turns, reduced out-of-stocks and improved operational efficiency.

This year we especially recognize three suppliers who received Top Honors, based on the overwhelming number of nominations they received from retailers. This year's top honorees are Anheuser-Busch Inc., The Coca-Cola Co. and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The entire staff of Convenience Store News salutes this year's Category Captains for their vision, hard work and leadership, and for sharing their successes and lessons learned with the industry in the pages of this supplement. Not only are these companies the Best of Class, they're a class act.

Top Honorees

In the eyes of retailers who voted for this year's Category Captains, three manufacturers—Anheuser Busch Inc., Coca-Cola Co. and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.—stand head and shoulders above the rest. These Best-of-Class companies received the most nominations from retailer respondents, making them this year's top honorees.

Anheuser-Busch Inc.

As category leader, Anheuser-Busch works to facilitate category management in two ways, according to Joe Patti, senior director, retail planning and category management. The first is to support industry initiatives such as Anheuser-Busch's active sponsorship of the National Association of Convenience Stores' (NACS) category-management work. The company was also a sponsor of the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study. The second element is working closely with retail customers to address their category management needs.

"On both levels, we take our direction from the retailers themselves," said Patti. "Especially when working directly with our retail customers. Our role is to take the best of what we've learned across the country and across channels, drill down to the consumer and industry insights to apply to a particular retailer's needs, and create a plan that helps them achieve their goals. The bottom line is that it's their plan."

Step one in Anheuser-Busch's process is to identify the convenience store retailer's goals and objectives, as well as the issues relevant to their operations. This is determined by dedicated Anheuser-Busch personnel and its wholesaler network. The brewer's extensive resources and tools are then applied to the process. One such tool is Eagle Eye, a micro-marketing system built around the Spectra program. A customized version of the Spaceman program is also used for creating planograms.

Anheuser-Busch, based in St. Louis, brings added value to the process in the form of data. In addition to market-level syndicated data, the company supplies proprietary research on cross-channel shopping behavior. "Anheuser-Busch expends many resources to understand the dynamics of the category, the marketplace and the convenience store shopper. We have developed detailed insights into how shoppers think and behave when shopping in and outside the convenience channel," Patti explained. "This helps us identify things that will drive profitability for the retailer."

Larry Lytle, buyer for Salem, N.C.-based A.T. Williams Oil Co., said he values Anheuser-Busch for its extensive resources. "[The company] has brought in the needed manpower and resources to analyze our total category and assist in implementation," he said. "It's a total effort."

Patti acknowledged that while the increasing availability of convenience store data drives more efficient and effective category management in the channel, Anheuser-Busch approaches the process as sound business practice. "With or without data, at the end of the day, you have to make sound business decisions. We focus our efforts on how

> "Anheuser-Busch doesn't monopolize the case with their products when they develop a set. They compile all the relevant information and develop fair layouts. It's truly a partnership."
>
> Silvio Federighi
> Convenient Food Mart

16diii004601

to make the best business decisions to reach the defined goals and objectives of the retailer. With that position, the process becomes intuitive and logical, rather than intimidating," he said.

An element of the Anheuser-Busch category management process lauded by retailers is objectivity. "The company is very fair in the layouts it develops," said Silvio Federighi, general manager of Convenient Food Mart of Painesville, Ohio. "Anheuser-Busch doesn't monopolize the case with their products when they develop a set. They compile all the relevant information and develop fair layouts. It's truly a partnership."

"Anheuser-Busch understands that the whole category must grow to sustain growth of their products," said Jeff DeJesse, category manager for ARCO am/pm stores. "They've been very responsive, and provide the necessary resources for all our projects."

"We realize that we're in this for the long run, so we're not looking to make a quick hit at a cost to our retail customers," Patti said. "This approach allows us to be objective and focus on the quality of our products and our information."

The most important step in the category-management process, according to Patti, is to begin. "It's really important for retailers to get started, no matter where they are in terms of their own automation and data-collection capabilities. Talk to your lead suppliers, start the dialogue and start the process. The sales results and profit increases will show your return on the investment."

The Coca-Cola Co.

Dr. Glen Stoops

"Category management is all about opportunity—the ability to locate it, plan for it, execute it and capture it," observed Dr. Glenn Stoops, managing director, market research and category management for The Coca-Cola Co. "The category-management mission of the Coca-Cola system is to help convenience store operators locate opportunities for growing the size and value of the beverage category."

To assist retailers in capitalizing on the opportunities within the non-alcohol beverage segment, Coca-Cola provides an extensive category-management toolbox. However, the company emphasizes the expertise of its category-management personnel as a crucial element of the process. "Tools within themselves are not very powerful. It is the people behind them who release the tools' full potential," said Stoops.

> "The company has a department within its organization set up specifically for category management. They have the resources in place to analyze and recommend specific sets as they relate to our business."
>
> -- Stephen Monaco
> Tedeschi Food Shops Inc.

Coca-Cola category managers combine their personal base of knowledge and experience with market research insights to assist retailers in developing appropriate plans. Consumer insights are the key to achieving profitable growth, according to Stoops. To speed the delivery of such insights to retail, Coca-Cola's market research and category-management functions are linked. Coca-Cola's bottling system is also an important component of the process. "Our commitment to retail is clearly seen in the increasing number of Coca-Cola bottlers who are designating more category-management personnel solely to the convenience side of the business," Stoops said.

That commitment is evident to retailers doing business with Coca-Cola. "The company has a department within its organization set up specifically for category management," said Stephen Monaco, buyer at 130-store Tedeschi Food Shops Inc., based in Rockland, Mass. "They have the resources in place to analyze and recommend specific sets as they relate to our business."

Rather than focus solely on software systems and tools, Coca-Cola identifies eight areas of category-management expertise that are applied to the process. They include advanced consumer insights, market analysis, financial analysis, pricing analysis, promotional analysis, efficient assortment, advanced merchandising and efficient replenishment.

In addition to applying the NACS process and utilizing syndicated research, Coca-Cola employs proprietary systems that enable activity-based-costing studies, basket-level analysis of scan data and store services, as well as profitability recaps. The market-basket analysis capability has been implemented over the past year, and reveals beverage purchase dynamics. "The retailer is able to gain insights to important areas such as the interaction between categories, between different gasoline grades and store purchases. We'll also use it as a new approach in determining out-of-stock situations," Stoops explained. "This allows the retailer to look at other categories outside of non-alcohol beverages and apply fact-based decision-making."

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola also assists retailers in maintaining and measuring the effectiveness of category-management programs. A detailed process of conducting assortment review has been developed that is based in obtaining the proper buy-in to ensure the set's longevity and provides the ability to track progress, Stoops said. "Assortment is the backbone of any successful beverage business and must be done to satisfy the needs of the consumer."

Mapco Express Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., has had positive experiences with Coca-Cola's process, according to Larry Pedigo, category manager for the 256-store chain. "Our Coca-Cola representative was willing to not only wear a Coca-Cola hat, but when necessary put on a Mapco hat. The company is very good at doing what is best for the consumer, and has data that can be trusted," he said. "Coca-Cola works to grow the entire category."

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Jim Maguire

Mary McCombs, category manager for the 200-unit Sheetz Inc., based in Altoona, Pa., had this to say about R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.'s category-management support: "R.J. Reynolds's [representatives] keep their finger on the pulse of the [tobacco] industry, as well as the convenience store industry. They consider the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They work with customized programs that fit our needs as well as theirs. Top-down personnel are readily available at all hours. They provide us with the detailed data we request in a timely manner. Also, they are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize space or developing direct mailers for our markets."

That type of involved, unbiased, total-store approach is the backbone of R.J. Reynolds's category-management process for convenience stores. "A category advisor is a manufacturer that understands the values of all brands in the category, as well as how the category affects other product sales, and structures all of their recommendations accordingly," explained Jim Maguire, senior vice president of sales.

The total-store strategy for the tobacco category is important for the success of convenience stores, Maguire said. "Adult smoker foot traffic is critical to the c-store industry's profits. According to the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study, the average adult smoker visits a convenience store 5.6 times per week and spends an average of $5.12 per visit," he noted. "This $28.67 in sales per week, per adult smoker speaks for itself relative to the importance of maximizing store profitability."

R.J. Reynolds, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., brings a range of resources to the tobacco category-management process. "We use real-time data provided by direct accounts on shipments to each retail outlet and, whenever we can, retail scan data to provide our total category recommendation," Maguire said.

Field personnel are equipped with automated tools that enable them to advise retailers in three important areas. The first is determining the brand-style selection required to satisfy a target percentage of adult smokers in a specific geography. The second is identifying the manufacturer programs that should be combined to maximize adult smoker needs relative to promotion levels and maximizing the number of brands that can be promoted. The third area is merchandising the category from the standpoint of "presentation to the consumer," said Maguire. "What is the ideal capacity for maximum turns/minimal out-of-stocks? How can the manufacturer-program requirements be incorporated into the available space?"

> "R.J. Reynolds considers the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize our space or direct mailers for our markets."
>
> Mary McCombs
> Sheetz Inc.

Determining product selection and developing the appropriate SKU mix for a convenience store outlet requires examination of all brands. "We would point out that several smaller share brands—those that are seldom, if ever, promoted—have the highest level of brand loyalty. Consequently, adult smokers who can no longer find their brand will quickly take their $28.67 per week contribution to another store that carries their brand," Maguire explained. "Reducing inventory costs has to start with getting proper inventory levels on each brand style in line versus simply discontinuing everything that doesn't sell a carton a week."

R.J. Reynolds has also studied the impact of tobacco products on other categories. Maguire outlined that retailers must consider the impact of increased cigarette sales on their five other top sales/margin items. Another question to ask is whether the retailer can afford to trade off margin on cigarettes to drive foot traffic on higher-margin items and drive a higher overall profit for the store.

"We'd like to thank the retailers who have valued our contribution enough to nominate R.J. Reynolds for this recognition," Maguire said. "We will continue to provide all of our expertise to those business partners who are truly committed to growing their total business and to providing R.J. Reynolds a fair chance in their stores to grow our business. It's a win-win situation!"

Best-of-Class Suppliers

The following Best-of-Class category-management partners nominated by convenience store retailers share their experience and some of the secrets of their success.

Convenience Marketing Inc.

Convenience Marketing has a department dedicated to category management, according to vice president, sales development, Bill Price, who added that the Austin, Texas-based food broker's entire organization assists in the process. "The organization provides a resource to facilitate linking manufacturers and retailers," said Price.

Utilizing syndicated data and industry resources, Convenience Marketing determines core-item selection that can be customized by market. State-of-the-art planogram systems are then used to develop photo-quality shelf sets for retailer implementation. Business development managers oversee each project and provide support in the form of consumer research and brand information. The field sales organization works with buyers and category managers to finalize the product-selection process and ensure implementation of the planograms. "It's a team effort in partnership with the customer," said Price.

"Convenience Marketing has consistently and promptly offered assistance," said Rebekah Ensley, category management analyst at H.T. Hackney Co., a wholesale distributor based in Knoxville, Tenn. "They provide complete, live-image planograms and their recommendations are valid and supported."

Core-Mark International

Core-Mark International is committed to objective category management, according to Chris Walsh, vice president of merchandising. "We start with fact-based, consumer-driven schematics," he said. But that is only the foundation of the company's category-management process.

"We partner with retailers in maximizing their real estate," said Walsh. "Especially with the recent dynamics of the tobacco industry, we try to help retailers understand measurements of profitability, how certain categories are driven more by impulse and the value of activity-based costing."

> "If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits."
>
> Chris Walsh
> Core Mark International

While manufacturers and distributors have made considerable gains in ECR-driven logistical efficiencies in recent years, Walsh stated that the benefits of the processes for retailers are largely untapped. "One consultant estimated it 'costs' a retailer $35 per week to transact business with each supplier. If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits," he explained, adding that savings can be realized on the bottom line or used to increase customer service and store cleanliness.

Core-Mark's primary program for achieving these objectives is SmartStock, which enrolled 3,000 retailers in 1998. The results have been positive. "For example, we worked with Quik Stop Markets [Freemont, Calif.], which has over 100 franchisees making independent buying decisions at every store. We utilized SmartStock and our category-merchandising tools to provide consistency, increase sales across commodities and eliminate 500 transactions per week from the stores," Walsh said.

Van Tarver, president of Quik Stop Markets Inc., acknowledged Core-Mark's contribution. "The company really cooperated with us in our recent remerchandising program. Core-Mark helped to eliminate slow-moving items through category management and improved the out-of-stock situation in our stores," he said. "The result has been a positive move in sales. One store, in fact, experienced sales increases at double the rate of stores that had not yet been remerchandised. Core-Mark has been a flexible and cooperative partner."

Based in South San Francisco, Core-Mark's approach is to go beyond the textbook definition of category management. "Whether it's helping to implement POS, reduce tobacco inventories or stimulate sales through promotion or merchandising, we are committed to partnerships that assist retailers in being more profitable operators," said Walsh.

Douglas Distributing

Ron Feulner

For family-owned Douglas Distributing, based in Salt Lake City, Utah, keeping up with coffee trends and the specific needs of its convenience store customers is the key to successful category management. "Our strength lies in maintaining a complete focus in one convenience store category—coffee," said Ron Feulner, owner. "We can focus directly on this category in this market [Utah and surrounding states]."

Douglas Distributing utilizes a sophisticated computer system to track retail customer activity at the store level, and combines that up-to-the-minute information with its local store knowledge. "We have six people in the field, and hold fast to a hands-on approach to serving our customers and creating programs that serve their needs best," said Feulner, who himself visits stores twice a month. "I want to rub shoulders with the people who work the stores every day. It's a great way to measure customer satisfaction and find out exactly what the consumer wants."

"Douglas accepts responsibility for equipment, service and product," said Bill McGregor, foodservice director of 140-store Maverik Country Stores in Afton, Wyo. "They offer unbiased, professional advice, current category information, price protection and rapid response. Douglas Distributing is my coffee category expert."

Eby-Brown Co. L.P.

"Eby-Brown services retailers of all sizes, from the mega-chain to the individually owned store," observed Tom Oktavec, vice president, marketing of Kocolene Marketing Corp., operator of 43 Fast Max stores, based in Seymour, Ind. "Each of their customers is treated with care and respect. Eby-Brown is a true partner to our industry."

That ability to service both large and small retailers stems from Eby-Brown's approach to customer service, and also its technical capabilities. Convenience store operators that are scanning benefit from Eby-Brown's item-information database and assistance in POS setup, and ongoing support in the format of the POS software selected by the retailer, according to Ron Coppel, vice president, business development. For retailers who are not scanning or do not have data-mining capabilities, Eby-Brown has developed IRIS (Intelligent Reporting Information System), which provides subscribers with secured access to their velocity information 24 hours a day, seven days a week via the Internet.

Naperville, Ill.-based Eby-Brown also has developed category-management practices to maximize consumer value and category asset performance, said Coppel. "We assist retailers by integrating our category expertise into our customers' strategic business process, providing the exchange of information and the willingness to share pertinent data, and jointly identifying with retailers and manufacturers opportunities to grow category sales and profits," he said. Eby-Brown then utilizes Spaceman tools to develop planograms.

Frito-Lay Inc.

"Frito-Lay is progressive and cooperative on category management," observed Arnold Kimmel, CEO of Quickie Convenience Stores of Ottawa, Canada. "They have the tools and execute their commitments and obligations well. Frito-Lay has a complete product line, but respects their competitors."

That depth of commitment, resources and objectivity stems from Frito-Lay's approach to category-management for convenience stores. "Category management is a journey, an evolving and ongoing process," said Dave Boissevain, director of category management for the Dallas-based company. "We take a fact-based, results-oriented approach. We work with retailers to build an integrated category-management plan that maximizes the key drivers and fits into the retailer's overall strategy. Partnership with the retailer is critical in developing a category plan that can be implemented."

Frito-Lay's category-management process is grounded in the consumer, and Boissevain defined several channel-specific drivers: Right Assortment, variety optimization; Right Presence, landmark merchandising; Rich Promotion, bundled tie-ins; and Right Service, direct-store-delivery (DSD) system. A proprietary software program, Right Set, has been developed to maximize the assortment and landmark merchandising drivers.

"Right Set is a consumer-centered, fact-based approach that maximizes salty-snack sales and profits for convenience stores," said Linda Seatvet, convenience store channel category manager. "The flexibility and targeted nature of the Right Set program is key because it reflects retailing realities. The population diversity across a chain's marketing area can be enormous, running the gamut from highly affluent suburbs to blue-collar neighborhoods, and c-store chains may have a wide variety of store formats. Right Set assortment and merchandising solutions can be custom targeted on a store-by-store basis."

Frito-Lay continues to be committed to fact-based, consumer-led, ECR-smart category management. "Our approach is grounded in the consumer, with the objective to build a category plan that leverages the expandable nature of snacks," said Boissevain.

Gatorade North America

Gatorade North America's proprietary category-management system, Cooler P.R.O., is gaining wide acceptance by convenience store retailers, according to Jim Brooks, assistant manager, capability development. The system incorporates analysis of consumer insights with a review of convenience store retailers' promotions, pricing, product assortment and available space to develop assortment recommendations and planograms for the non-alcohol beverage segment.

Adding to the strength of the system, Gatorade, a division of Chicago-based Quaker Oats Co., recently initiated a new structure that enables more field support for category management in convenience stores. Six regional customer business centers and a national accounts customer business center have been established, and the manpower behind Cooler P.R.O. has been tripled in the past year.

"The category-management expertise for Cooler P.R.O. really lies in our field-based category-management teams," said Brooks. "Our strategy is to sit down with the retailer, determine their goals and source their data across the beverage category. Then, we use the Cooler P.R.O. system to develop unbiased recommendations to maximize retailer sales through the cooler door."

"We completed a major cold-vault reset in 1997, and Gatorade was the category partner for the entire non-alcohol cooler," said Tamara Fowler, associate category manager at Wawa Inc., a 470-store chain based in Wawa, Pa. "Gatorade is one of the most knowledgeable and dedicated category-management companies in the industry."

Syndicated data on consumers and convenience stores, as well as custom market reports on the local competitive set, are utilized by Gatorade in the category management process. Custom consumer audits and assessments of out-of-stock situations are another tool.

Gatorade's process focuses mainly on the cooler door and addresses all non-alcohol beverages, not just sports drinks, Brooks explained. "Cooler P.R.O. is designed to analyze and create recommendations for the entire category. Taking a broad approach is the best way for convenience retailers to maximize sales and profitability of all non-alcohol beverages."

H.T. Hackney Co.

Rebekah Ensley

"Our role is to provide our customers with the best data resources and space-management tools to identify efficient product assortments and develop strategies to effectively compete in their marketplace," said Nancy Tucker, director of marketing. "Our goal is to provide category information, recommendations and customized planograms."

H.T. Hackney, based in Knoxville, Tenn., utilizes several tools in the process, including syndicated and internal data, Spaceman planogram systems and store-level reports. Planogram development is supported by product-mix analysis, pricing analysis and programs focused on increasing total category sales and profitability.

A full-time category-management analyst, Rebekah Ensley, is dedicated to administering the process for retail customers. Each of Hackney's 24 distribution centers is provided a complete category planogram guide and is staffed with merchandising experts to conduct analysis of store activity.

"H.T. Hackney has formed a great partnership with both its customers and manufacturers, and bridges that partnership on a win-win basis," said Dan Fleming, director of operations for Knoxville, Tenn.-based Pilot Corp. "Their strength is in customer service. They also have a wealth of information at easy access and are current with the latest and greatest."

Keebler Co.

"Keebler has provided good support and been very active in the category. Theirs is a comprehensive category-management program that looks at the entire category, and the Keebler people are always available to conduct analysis, create planograms and do resets," said Randy Meyer, senior vice president of Krause Gentle Corp., operator of 158 Kum and Go stores based in West Des Moines, Iowa. "We've enjoyed an excellent long-term relationship with Keebler. It's a positive partnership."

Krause Gentle's experience is the result of Keebler's efforts to focus on the goals of the convenience retailer in the cookie and cracker category. "We work closely with the retailer to understand their objectives and establish plans that meet those objectives," said Mark Clark, business development manager for the convenience division at Keebler. "In light of the number of categories and nature of the convenience store business, we simplify the process and attempt to make it easy for the retailer to execute against."

Elmhurst, Ill.-based Keebler deploys more than 35 field personnel and a broker sales force of 600 to facilitate category management with its convenience store partners. Culling data from syndicated and proprietary resources, Keebler then applies its own knowledge of the cookie and cracker category and develops planograms using state-of-the art space-management tools.

Cookies and crackers present a unique challenge to convenience store operators that Keebler assists retailers in addressing, according to Clark. "In convenience stores, this category is not the top-of-mind snack option for the consumer entering the store. There's a big opportunity to grab the consumer, however, with placement and pricing," he said. "Cookies and crackers are typically merchandised in the center aisles. By adding secondary placements and offering attractive value pricing, you can move the consumer to the category as they make their snacking decision."

To that point, Keebler's two-for-$1 program is merchandised with counter and floor racks. "Two-for-$1 can increase the purchase frequency by as much as 32 percent because it creates multiple purchases," said Clark. "The rack and value offer makes these products top-of-mind because the consumer anticipates the availability. The presentation drives impulse sales as well."

Clark explained that Keebler's category-management strategy involves developing solid working relationships with retailers and objective analysis and recommendations. "While it may drive immediate results, our category management strategy is very long-term focused," he said.

McLane Co. Inc.

"McLane Co.'s approach to category management is to give the consumer what they are looking for: well-known, well-recognized, high-quality products at a retail that allows them to purchase now and repurchase in the future," said Bill Fendrick, vice president, merchandising for Temple, Texas-based McLane. "The consumers' needs have to be focused on in a way that enables them to choose and purchase the key, core items within a category. Our focus is to make the retailer aware of the key national and regional core items within each category, and then offer these items with sound, fair pricing backed up by retail support from the vendor."

To facilitate that strategy, McLane has developed a decision-support system (DSS) that allows its merchandising experts to zero in on each category. "We then use this information in conjunction with our demographic-profiling system to present fact-based recommendations," said Fendrick. "Using these tools, we are able to work with and support both the vendor and the retailer in their businesses."

Each of McLane's 15 distribution centers has a merchandising team dedicated to providing category-management support. The merchandising teams are supported by merchandising managers located at the McLane corporate-support center. "Our role is to be an unbiased presenter of the facts and category statistics that are now available in the industry," added Fendrick.

In conjunction with the DSS system, McLane has developed its Stars and Star Gazer programs to allow retailers quick and convenient access to their item and category information. The commitment to category management and sophistication of the tools utilized in the process has made fans of convenience store retailers.

"The use of McLane's Stars and Star Gazer tools allows us great ability to look at all McLane product categories," sa Artie Smith, marketing manager for Ke Oil Inc., a 25-store operator based Midland, Texas. "We can reset muc faster to adjust to trends and change pro lem areas quickly. We feel McLane support really gives us the advantage front and/or back of the cooler. "One of the biggest issues we've identified is the failure to follow up and implement the plans." Schouten explained. "Tag Manager enables implementation at the store level so that the set meets the plan volumes."

All Miller chain account managers are trained in category-management analysis and plan development, a valued resource for retailers. "Jim Ebert [our Miller representative] put talk into action by implementing five crucial category-management steps in one of our major markets to pilot the program," said Gregg Wingert, senior vice president of marketing for Houston-based Coastal Mart Inc. "He succinctly summarized and documented each step, applying top-notch category management activity. It is an excellent effort!"

Miller's approach is to customize the category-management process to objectively meet the business needs of the individual retailer. "Objectivity is a big issue," Schouten explained. "When we're objective, we're gaining sales for the category. We all win."

M&M/Mars

M&M/Mars works with its retail partners to better understand consumer shopping behavior, an effort that proved vital in identifying opportunities within the confection category at Equilon Enterprises' stores. "With innovation and participation in our 1998/1999 advertising promotion, M&M/Mars helped increase our candy category sales by 12 percent," said Robb Harling, Ohio ETD franchise representative, Equilon Enterprises. "The company's representatives call on our stores frequently and they participate in our monthly special programs. M&M/Mars provides excellent planogram support, and they are very involved and active in our markets."

Harling's 140 stores in the Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio regions are enjoying the benefits of M&M/Mars's comprehensive approach to category management. "We're striving to be the primary source for confectionery category management in convenience stores," explained Steve Collins, national sales director, category leadership for M&M/Mars, based in Hackettstown, N.J. "We work as a true partner with retailers, helping them identify and capitalize on opportunities to grow their confectionery sales and profits."

M&M/Mars brings a wealth of resources to the process. First and foremost is its category leadership team, whose 45 field associate members are certified through a 38-day training program. Ten members of the team are dedicated to collecting consumer information, conducting trade-channel research and developing category-management tools, which the teams' field associates then customize to meet the needs of retail customers. "The quality of our certification process and the significant size of our Category Leadership Team speaks to the commitment M&M/Mars has to this ECR initiative," said Collins.

M&M/Mars soon will expand its portfolio of category-management tools with the addition of a major proprietary convenience store study. "We conducted a statistical analysis of the conditions in the marketplace to identify top-performing stores and determine what distinguishes them from average and below-average performing stores," Collins explained.

More than 600 convenience and petroleum stores were involved in the study. M&M/Mars investigated several issues. Where should the primary confectionery selling location be? What items should be carried? How should they be merchandised? What is the role of promotion in increasing confection sales? "The findings will cover some impactful best practices, and we'll share those and more during this year's NACS convention," Collins said.

M&M/Mars's category-management strategy is based in its commitment to partnering with its retail customers. "Success in category management is realized when joint efforts between our customers and us result in improved category sales, profits, return on investment and consumer satisfaction," Collins explained. "Each customer has specific objectives they need to meet to optimize category productivity and meet the needs of their consumer, and we're dedicated to assisting in that effort."

Nabisco Inc. (Planters Inc. and Lifesavers Co.)

Nabisco's dedicated convenience store channel marketing teams have a singular goal —to help operators maximize total store profitability and productivity. The strategy for achieving that involves a hands-on approach that leverages Nabisco's understanding of consumer behavior in convenience stores against its category management and merchandising expertise, according to Billy Henry, director of marketing for Planter's immediate consumption and Cornnuts businesses. "The approach is to transform data into actionable solutions that drive total store productivity for the retailer," he said.

Those actionable solutions involve increasing transaction size by applying Nabisco's extensive consumer insights. "We focus on shopper tendencies versus demographics," Henry said, adding that Nabisco has developed insights into shopper behavior based on frequency of visits to convenience stores and traffic patterns. From this, Nabisco has developed what it calls its "Double D" strategy of linking destination categories—such as beverages and the checkout station—with discretionary categories, which include snacks and confections.

that foundation of applying consumer insights to driving increased transactions. The first is Lifesavers Co.'s SMART (Successful Merchandising Assures Rapid Transactions). SMART addresses the confections category with learnings garnered from alliances with eight convenience store companies, combined with Nabisco's understanding of shopper behavior. "We link the high-traffic zones with consumer behavior indicative of that zone," said Mary Jean Longo, senior manager, category management for Lifesavers Co. "For example, beverage is a destination category, and we know 70 percent of beverages are purchased in combination with a snack. So we advocate placing confections next to destination categories such as beverages to drive that impulse sale and increase transaction size."

Secondary placements play a key role the process, and Nabisco studies show that sales of confections can increase as much as 43 percent when the products are moved from the aisle to the checkout. An increasingly important destination/discretionary product match is the coffee station and breath-freshening mints and gum. "The value of placing confections in high-traffic and destination locations is unmistakable," Longo said.

Placing salty snacks in high-traffic retail locations is also a key strategy for the Planters' Pacesetter 2000 program. In tests, front-end merchandising units for Planters products generated a 62 percent increase in sales for Planters and an 8-percent increase for the total snack category overall, according to Henry. "Pacesetter 2000 focuses on reducing duplication and adding variety. The next step is to increase transaction size by linking the category with destination categories in cross-promotional activity and secondary placements," said Henry.

Retailers such as Kendra Kuehl, buyer/merchandising manager at Bosselman's Pump & Pantry, based in Grand Island, Neb., have found Nabisco's category-management personnel and programs to be valuable. "[Nabisco representatives] are willing to come in and evaluate the categories with us, looking at our movement and national numbers, and put together planograms accordingly," she said. "They set up the section with us and we continually evaluate the area. [Nabisco personnel] are objective and include all products [participating] in the category in the evaluation and planograms."

Nabisco's cross-promotional strategy is now being taken to the next level through two 1999 promotions with The Coca-Cola Co. This spring and summer, the Ice Breakers gum brand will be linked with Nestea Cool in a promotional tie-in program called "Cool to the Core." Ice Breakers will be merchandised in custom display units near beverage coolers. Nestea Cool bottles will include instant win sweepstakes pieces. Prizes include 35 cents off Ice Breaker products. Planters products will join Coca-Cola in the "Refreshing Combo" program, which brings together Planters Super Tube nuts packages with 32-ounce fountain Coca-Cola drinks. A pre-pack display and in-store signage will support the "Refreshing Combo" promotion at retail.

"These elements all come out of our ongoing research and efforts to stay in touch with the convenience store consumer," said Henry. "Then we build plans that satisfy their needs and the needs of the retailer."

Nestle USA Ice Cream Division

The category-management process undertaken by the Nestle USA Ice Cream Division begins with a solid understanding of the convenience store customer obtained through independent research, secondary research and syndicated data. "Key components of our program include use of our powerful Nestle brand name and its lineup of premium-quality products, careful selection of products that are well-suited for the individual store locations, strong advertising and promotional support, as well as an impactful merchandising program," explained Kelly Atkins, director of impulse marketing.

Nestle sales teams, including the impulse or "alternative channel" team, work closely with convenience store retailers to tailor product selection to meet their shoppers' needs and their business needs. Nestle's exclusive distributor network also plays a crucial role. "Part of the process involves joint development of a planogram, which helps to target kids, teens, adults and the entire family. Distributors are adept at managing the process in a comprehensive fashion," said Atkins. "We also address opportunities through a variety of programs, including account-specific promotions."

Dick Kolberg, sales consultant for Houston-based Equilon Enterprises, has experienced a productive partnership with his Nestle sales representative, John Artesi. "He does a great job assessing appropriate product selection and helping determine the most effective location for the freezer box. And, he is a master at promotions," he said. "We have come up with some ideas, and he has just run with them. The full Nestle merchandising program, as John implemented it, drove a sales increase in one location of 300 percent. We also have an excellent Nestle distributor in Rock Island. Few companies do as good a job. Nestle is a first-class operation."

Nestle prides itself on a hands-on approach to category management. "We view our role as that of a partner with the retailer," said Atkins. "Our mutual goal is to optimize ice cream category sales and profits."

their franchise partners, whether you are an independent or a multistore chain operator," he explained. "Orion provides us with excellent operational support through knowledgeable people, practices and ideas. They have developed high-quality marketing materials to build brand identity from in-store POS to exterior signage, while still allowing us to 'own' our food-court concept. All of this, and a great return, results in excellent category management."

Retailer satisfaction with the five Orion foodservice brands stems not only from the product quality but also from operations support. A key point of differentiation for Orion, according to executive director of marketing Greg Breukelman, is its guaranteed operational support system.

"We have territory consultants assigned to each Orion location, and we guarantee that they will visit that location every 21 days or we will issue the retailer a check for $1,000," he explained. "Convenience retailers have a complex business to run, and need support every step of the way, so we make sure they get it."

In addition to field personnel support, Orion develops training videos, operations manuals and POS systems for their retail franchise partners. Another resource is promotion, which occurs on the national level and via local store marketing. "Part of the role of the territory consultant is to develop local store marketing that helps the retailer get involved with their community," Breukelman said.

The foundation of Orion's category management is its vertically integrated structure. The company manufactures, warehouses and ships all product. "This gives us incredible control of product quality, and enables us to be flexible in introducing new products," said Breukelman. "We take a lot of pride in our products so our retail partners can do the same."

Pepsi-Cola Co.

Pepsi-Cola took its commitment to consumer-based programming to the next level when the company integrated its customer marketing and category management efforts into one business practice last year. "Historically, suppliers have helped develop category plans in isolation of marketing program, which are developed on an opportunistic basis," said Greg McIntee, vice president, customer marketing and category management. "We've brought these two functions together. As result, the category plan, which must reflect and support the retailer's overall business plan, and the customer marketing solution we build can effectively address the strategic needs of that business."

The organizational change reflects Pepsi-Cola's position that category management must be focused against the consumer. "We have a fundamental belief that satisfied consumers drive category growth," McIntee said. "This new structure allows us to work against that principle."

> "Pepsi has been proactive with new concepts and quick response to our needs. The company goes the extra mile to offer competitive intelligence."

> Chevron Products Co.

"Pepsi has been proactive with new concepts and quick response to our needs," said Tony Bandiera of Chevron Products Co. Inc., based in San Francisco. "The company goes the extra mile to offer competitive intelligence."

Pepsi-Cola's consumer-insights toolbox includes E-Lab, a video study of consumer behavior, and frequent merchandising audits of convenience stores. "We have a real dedication to really understanding the c-store shopping experience. Then, we work objectively with customers in partnership to develop consumer-based solutions to drive the entire category," said McIntee. "The approach is to wed consumer insights with technology to optimize the cold vault."

The Right Choice is the primary optimization tool applied by the soft-drink marketer, and is utilized by category managers and sales representatives in the field, according to Jodi Rumble, channel strategy and marketing manager, convenience stores. "Research tells us that 75 percent of consumers know what brand of soft drink they want before they walk into the store. Knowing that, we look to maximize the cold-vault area—optimizing it against the SKUs that turn the greatest profit—so consumers can find what they want quickly," she explained.

Product and package development is another element of category management that is consumer driven. Pepsi-Cola's recent introduction of Pepsi One is an example of the company applying consumer insights and an understanding of retailer needs, according to McIntee. "Pepsi One shows our understanding of what consumers want, and developing a product that creates an opportunity for retailers," he said. "The majority of the sales achieved thus far by the brand have been incremental."

Retailers are appreciative of Pepsi-Cola's consumer-focused approach. "Pepsi's service and promotions have led this company to a leadership position in this market," observed Steve Hayward, retail supervisor for Salt Lake City, Utah-based Sinclair Marketing.

Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice

Identifying retail customer goals and developing recommendations and product matches to help them meet those needs is the strategy employed by Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice in assisting convenience store operators with category management. "We look at their approach across foodservice categories and determine where they are trying to grow and where the opportunities lie," explained Keith Dozier, marketing manager. "Then we identify the products, training and equipment that will facilitate that strategy."

16diii004619

Pillsbury personnel provide analysis of profits and margins, and serve as consultants for proprietary foodservice program development efforts. One area of concentration is controlling labor costs. "Often, additional labor is not needed to develop new and profitable programs," Dozier said. "For example, we might recommend to a retailer several ways to use the same product to generate additional revenue without increasing labor costs."

Much of Pillsbury's new product development is geared toward helping retailers hold down operating costs. For example, the recently introduced freezer-to-oven cinnamon rolls do not have to be thawed or proofed, reducing the prep process by two steps, Dozier said.

"Pillsbury offers quality products, promotional support and reliable technical knowledge and assistance," observed Bill McGregor, foodservice director for Maverik Country Stores, based in Afton, Wyo. "The company is an excellent partner."

Procter & Gamble

"We see our role as an objective facilitator of the NACS category-management process," said David Lane, corporate convenience industry representative for customer business development at Procter & Gamble. "We bring proprietary tools for analysis, resources in the form of people and expertise, and benchmarks industry-wide and outside the convenience channel."

Procter & Gamble was nominated as a Category Captain in both the grocery and health and beauty aids categories.

Grocery

Procter & Gamble's Grocery College is a workshop that walks retailers through the NACS six-step category-management process, assisting them in identifying the role of grocery and develop strategies and tactics for improving performance. According to Bill Traywick, operations manager, category management, 80 percent of grocery volume typically comes from 170 to 200 items. "However, most convenience retailers have 500 to 800 SKUs on the grocery shelves," he explained. "Consumer data shows 10 categories drive fill-in shopping. What Grocery College does is focus retailers on the fill-in shopping products, their role and the strategies and tactics to drive growth."

Nice N Easy Grocery Shoppes Inc. of Canastota, N.Y., realized immediate results after attending Procter & Gamble's Grocery College, according to Matt Paduano, director of purchasing. "Bill Traywick helped us focus and develop a mission statement for grocery. We developed power categories," he explained. Nice N Easy has reduced grocery SKUs by increasing facings of power category items, and is the in the process of re-merchandising its 100 stores. "We've seen faster turns within a week or two. The results are positive."

Procter & Gamble is working with Kellogg's and also the dairy industry to provide retailers with additional data to drive the milk, bread and cereal categories. "Milk and bread are immediate indicators of the grocery business a retailer is doing and can do," said Lane. "But those are problematic categories, so we are bringing in fullness of data to help retailers maximize the entire opportunity." The company is now developing College programs for the cooler door and salty snacks.

Health & Beauty Aids

"This is a category that has not been maximized by convenience operators through the years. Procter & Gamble has moved it ahead light years for convenience retailers," said Fran Duskiewicz, vice president of operations for Nice N Easy.

The chain has utilized the Procter & Gamble HBA College program to increase the efficiency and productivity of the health and beauty aids category. Using a workbook format, HBA College is based on the NACS six-step category management program, and provides guidelines for retailers to manage the category.

HBA College assists retailers in addressing key issues for the category —identifying its role, assortment, item duplication and pricing strategies. "For example, if you have eight different versions of pain relievers, HBA College asks if you should have such duplication or look to variety," explained Traywick. "Then we look at the fact that consumers are aware of cross-channel pricing on HBA. We look at the appropriate pricing strategy."

"HBA is an arena most in the industry is not comfortable with and has little knowledge of because there are so many SKUs and so much competition," said Lane. "If it is strategically correct for the retailer to develop the category, they can attract consumers with selection and competitive pricing. The opportunity exists."

S&D Coffee

"For years, vendors to this industry were salespeople. At S&D Coffee, we're now consultants. When you sell the account, that's when the work really begins," said Dale Lozier, vice president of the convenience store division at S&D Coffee. "Our job today is to aid in the development of programs designed to grow the coffee category, continually interjecting new life and keeping the interest of the convenience store customer."

16diii004620

S&D Coffee's category-management efforts are supported by an interactive approach to the process. According to Lozier, a task force comprised of S&D Coffee sales and marketing managers conduct evaluations of each account's coffee program as the basis of program development. "We survey the store owners and managers, analyze the customer base and competitive environment, evaluate the various footprints in a chain and determine the appropriate program for each type of store involved," Lozier said. "Using our own sales and marketing team's expertise, we develop programs that address issues and opportunities unique to that operation."

Areas examined include the total hot beverage program, coffee-product selection, merchandising, branding, coffee-station logistics and traffic flow in the store. "Convenience store retailers constantly ask, 'How can I improve my coffee sales?' You can provide the best coffee in the world, but if the station is set up inefficiently or the traffic flow from the station to the register is not easy, you can lose that customer," Lozier explained. "We work to make the entire coffee program work efficiently and with impact."

Equipment is a crucial element of successful coffee programs, and S&D Coffee extends its expertise to equipment selection and maintenance. That complete approach to managing the coffee category has proved beneficial to convenience retailers. "S&D Coffee has worked with us on store-specific promotions, and assists with equipment calibrations to provide a consistent product profile," said Ernie Howard, director of marketing for Favorite Markets, a 121-store chain based in Dalton, Ga. "We are very proud of our program—The Coffee Corner—and S&D has helped us maintain quality and grow the program."

Swisher International Inc.

As changes in tobacco product retailing regulations continue to restrict merchandising options, convenience store retailers must be vigilant in managing the category, according to Bill Dunn, director of national accounts for Swisher International. "Category management of cigars, moist snuff and chewing tobacco is now playing a bigger role in the success of the category. It's crucial that the selection, pricing and presentation is right, because space is increasingly limited," said Dunn.

To maximize the profitability of the space devoted to tobacco products, Swisher International's field sales force takes a very hands-on approach to assisting convenience retail customers. Analysis of syndicated data, supplier sales movement and retail account data, when available, is combined with Swisher representatives' knowledge of the local market and the retailer's needs to develop a customized planogram, utilizing the Spaceman program. Key elements of the program are developing the appropriate product mix for the store's customer base, maintaining inventory levels to prevent out-of-stocks, establishing competitive pricing and developing strategic product placement, according to Dunn. Another element supplied by Swisher is merchandising racks.

Swisher International continues to assist retailers well beyond planogram implementation, which has proved beneficial to retailers. "Swisher conducts a quarterly review based on our sales so we can see what's working and what's not," said Richard Mione, director of marketing of Worsley Cos. Inc., based in Wilmington, N.C. "With that review, we can make adjustments to the planogram or product selection to keep the category fresh. This has been an extremely important part of our category-management program."

In today's environment, aggressive category management of tobacco products is the most effective means of ensuring category profitability and productivity, said Dunn. "There really is no room for mistakes today, and that's how we approach the process," he said.

Tropicana North America

James Powers

"To be a powerful resource to the retailer, we must be impartial and let the consumer dictate the basis for our recommendations," said James Powers, vice president, retail sales for the immediate consumables division at Tropicana North America. "In-store real estate is very valuable, and allocating that space with the right SKU's to maximize the retailer's profits is the appropriate focus."

Tropicana's hands-on approach begins with the interaction between retailers and the company's customer managers and broker account managers. Manager of category-management Jamie Reid is then brought in to develop category-management plans based on the needs of the retailer. Reid applies the proprietary TrueView system to the process, which incorporates retailer data, syndicated data and Tropicana's channel expertise. The process involves six phases: information gathering and goal setting; cooler space to sales evaluation; SKU optimization model development; planogram development; consumer demographic analysis against the planogram; and finally, store resets by the field personnel. The process takes 60 to 90 days to complete.

Tropicana TrueView process is constantly evolving with the industry. "Today's TrueView is not tomorrow's TrueView. Retailers are automating at a

Best-of-Class Retailers

Nominated for their category management prowess and program-execution skills by industry suppliers, the Best-of-Class retailers highlight the reasons for their success.

7-Eleven Inc.

"We take a macro-to-micro approach regarding category management," said David Podeschi, vice president of processed foods and non-foods for 7-Eleven. "We start with national industry consumer trends and seasonal change, and their impact on product sales. From there we drill down to individual item sales on an average per-store basis, also taking into account our internal analysis of category trends."

The benefits for 7-Eleven are a direct, positive impact on sales; reduced out-of-stocks; and improved display. "It makes the store easier to shop," he said. "Customers can find the fast-selling items easier. It also reduces out-of-stocks, because you're focusing your efforts on the fast-selling items."

Dallas-based 7-Eleven Inc. operates approximately 5,600 stores in the United States and Canada and, like most retailers, it has stepped up its use of scan data, especially over the past year. According to Podeschi, vendor alliances are also integral to an effective category-management model. The company doesn't establish "category captains" in the traditional sense, rather it partners with each supplier in a category. "For example, with soft drinks," Podeschi said, "we take our scan data, then we work with Pepsi-Cola, Coca-Cola and Cadbury to analyze results and develop appropriate action plans."

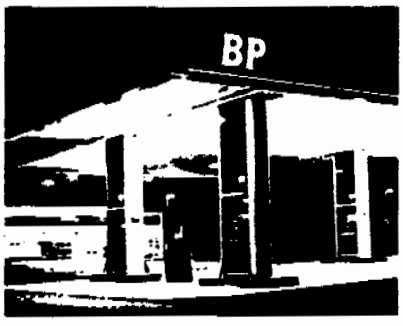
Podeschi added, "Forming supplier alliances provides you with a broader perspective on industry and consumer trends. We can identify certain trends that we might not have been able to see with just our own data, for example, if a certain subsegment is growing in the industry or if consumer trends show that a certain flavor type is trendy."

Establishing a network of suppliers also facilitates one of the most difficult aspects of category management: accommodating regional differences in product selection. "Through a combination of our centralized category managers working with our field merchandising staff and suppliers, we've been able to analyze the data centrally and regionally to implement the most effective strategies," Podeschi said.

A.T. Williams Oil Co.

A.T. Williams, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., is the parent company of Wilco Convenience Stores, operator of 120 stores. A.T. Williams devotes extensive energy to its market development and looks at every opportunity and profit center. That philosophy led one supplier to applaud A.T. Williams for its efforts in category management: "With several different store formats, the company is constantly changing. The company uses information from brokers and manufacturers' effectively to design planograms depending on each store's format."

BP Amoco Plc.



The recent merger between BP Oil and Amoco Corp. resulted in the formation of a new company—BP Amoco Plc.—but when it comes to category management, the proven rules still apply. "Our method combines the customer's point of view with a fact-based approach," said Marla Braswell, a manager of convenience store marketing at BP Amoco. "Each category is viewed as a strategic business unit, but there is also a strong focus on the customer, not solely on products."

16diii004626

The company has implemented several techniques for performing effective category management, including the use of scan data, syndicated data and vendor-supplied data for its 2,500 convenience stores.

BP Amoco also holds regular partnership meetings with its suppliers, bringing together each company's category managers, merchandisers and field personnel in an effort to develop effective, ongoing relationships. According to Braswell, establishing these alliances is invaluable. "Only suppliers can inform you about what your competition is doing and what the industry landscape is like," she said. "We only have our data, so if we're doing something wrong, we're going to continue to do it wrong. They are able to show us missed opportunities."

According to Braswell, since this category-management process was put in place, significant sales and margin increases have been realized, as well as a reduction in out-of-stocks. "Essentially, you're giving the right products the space they deserve for peak period sales."

Casey's General Stores Inc.

Casey's General Stores is making the most of all resources available in its approach to category management. According to one of the company's key suppliers, "Casey's has implemented a complex system to disseminate both its internal and industry data in order to make more effective category decisions.

"They believe in using as many proof sources as possible when adding a new item or promoting an existing one, and they believe in carrying a limited number of SKUs that turn very quickly. This approach helps keep inventory dollars to a minimum, while also maximizing turns." Headquartered in Ankeny, Iowa, Casey's operates 1,175 stores.

Chevron Products Co.

Data analysis and vendor alliances are the keys to Chevron Product Co.'s category-management approach. A division of Chevron Corp., based in San Francisco, the company owns and operates approximately 670 Chevron Food Marts, and views category management as an effective way to manage its c-store product offerings from a promotion, pricing and product selection standpoint.

The company rolled out POS scanning in 1998 and the information it collects is fed into a data warehouse, allowing category managers, category buyers and field merchandisers to analyze it and then develop recommendations. "Using this method, we can monitor movement of a specific item in a store," said Carlton B. Dallas, manager of convenience store retailing for Chevron. "We can carve out specific areas to analyze and we can also overlay a matrix of space allocation in terms of return on inventory investment."

According to Dallas, Chevron's approach has resulted in an upward sales trend. "Since implementing scanning last year, we've seen nearly 20 percent same-store gains in gross profit sales and dollars," he said.

Chevron also relies heavily on vendor partnerships. "Vendors are key elements of our category-management strategy," Dallas said. "Forming alliances allows for the mutual sharing of ideas to improve the efficiency of the supply chain. For example, we can begin to take a much broader look at what opportunities exist to increase both consumer service and sales."

Chevron works closely with the National Distributors Alliance and key partners such as Core-Mark and, according to Dallas, these relationships are constantly being strengthened. "The integration of data throughout the organization and between the vendors and Chevron is something that can always improve," he said. "It's also very important that we, as a retailer, develop alliances with key suppliers, and that there's an element of trust and mutual intention to develop strategies that work best for both companies, and for the consumer."

Conoco Inc.

Category management is not something you do once and then walk away, according to Jim Macari and Sam Farace, who are responsible for category management at 275-store Conoco Inc., Houston. "For Conoco, it comes down to defining who we want to be in the marketplace, what categories are going to drive our business and what strategies we're going to put in place to achieve the desired results," said Farace.

A key element of the company's market strategy was developing a centralized approach to category management and, according to Conoco's suppliers, this helps the company consistently carry the right product mix in a particular region. Conoco's category-management team in Houston monitors store operations, inventory and product movement. "There are some things we still handle on a local field level, but it just makes sense to manage a vast majority of category management from a centralized location," said Farace. "For example, if we're doing a planogram for candy, we can do that more effectively from Houston using our regional scan data. We don't need to do it six different times out in the field."

The result has been a more effective link between corporate headquarters and the field, as well as a more streamlined process for analyzing data and sending it back out to the stores. Since Conoco first started down this centralized path three years ago, the company has seen strong double-digit growth in both revenue and margin dollars on a same-store basis.

In 1998, Conoco also conducted monthly "supplier roundtables," bringing together 15 of its key suppliers. "We spent a day with them, asking them where they saw the industry headed and where they saw consumer trends moving in the next three to five years," said Macari.

Conoco also is driving continuous improvement in its stores. A "mystery shopper" is sent to stores once a month, monitoring customer service, merchandising, cleanliness and out-of-stocks. Also, the company's market merchandisers survey Conoco stores quarterly for planogram compliance, promotional implementation and correct pricing. "As of late 1997, when we implemented this program, our in-stock rate was 78 percent," said Macari. "We're now approaching 90 percent as of fourth quarter of 1998."

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores Inc.

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores is celebrating its 60th anniversary with a variety of events, among them a renewed focus on category management. Headquartered in Hudson, Ohio, Dairy Mart operates 600 convenience stores in seven states. According to Jay Ross, vice president of marketing and merchandising, as the company keeps growing, "we have to become more proactive in how we approach category management if we're going to continue to be successful."

A key element of this strategy, according to Ross, is spending more time listening to Dairy Mart customers in an effort to learn what they want from a convenience store, why they shop there and what categories are driving the business. To help accomplish this objective, the company has conducted several customer focus groups during the past year. Ross noted that maintaining an emphasis on customer needs and buying habits will help keep the company on the right track as it develops its category-management model for the future.

Ross also added that since the company presently does not scan, it relies heavily on its supplier partners to provide direction as far as category and product trends. One such supplier is Heinz Frozen Foods, which is working with Dairy Mart to develop store-specific planograms for the frozen-food category.

"Dairy Mart is very active in pursuing frozen-food sales and marketing opportunities," said Mark Kroll, associate product manager, channel development at Heinz Frozen Foods. "They are working to put together demographically specific planograms which are appropriate to their stores."

Equiva Services LLC

"Our category-management model centers on several elements," said Bill Pitocco, category manager, grocery, for Houston-based Equiva Services, operator of approximately 1,000 c-stores. "We analyze market-share data, consumer trends, competitive pressures, our information-technology capabilities and the financial realities of putting the right products in the stores."

Equiva Services uses space-management software to set its stores, including Spectra and InterCept. Suppliers noted that the company is very active in working with wholesalers and manufacturers to gather fact-based information for the development of planograms. Equiva acknowledges that it taps its supplier relationships for input. "Suppliers offer their own unique category-management expertise, especially regarding subcategories," Pitocco said. "I use the top two or three suppliers in a particular category to help me formulate strategies and to bounce planogram ideas off them."

Ultimately, however, retail turns are the deciding factor. "Category managers have to control their share of the company's assets," Pitocco said. "But they also have to be tied into what's happening with our operations personnel at the store level and with the customer. The customers' needs have to be fulfilled, from a product and inventory standpoint. I've got to be carrying the products the customer wants, with enough space dedicated to those products so they're in stock. The ultimate result is increased sales and margin."

Giant Industries Inc.

Giant Industries, headquartered in Scottsdale, Ariz., is taking a branded approach to category management, according to Pam Brady at Convenience Marketing Inc., a grocery wholesaler that works closely with the company. Giant operates 54 stores under the banners Giant, Giant Express and Mustang.

"It's a very different approach," she said. "Over the course of three months, I spent a lot of time working with Giant to analyze and carefully plan out a 3-foot-by-4-foot section for all the stores operated by the company. They are taking each category one by one, and making an effort to manage categories in such a way that will achieve the maximum impact."

According to Brady, the end result will be a more pleasant shopping experience for the customer. "By making the top-selling brands more visible throughout every category, Giant is making its stores easier to shop," said Brady. "This will lead to an overall increase in customer service and sales."

Marsh Village Pantry

Marsh Village Pantry, a division of Marsh Supermarkets, based in Indianapolis, operates approximately 180 Village Pantry convenience stores. Recently, Village Pantry was very active in implementing more effective methods of driving customer traffic. According to Bob Dalton, regional sales manager for Modern Aids, one of Village Pantry's suppliers, the chain is a very active partner as far as working to continually update its shelf sets.

"They ask us for industry data, and for other companies' success stories," said Dalton. "They're also very interested in staying current with family pricing, as well as adding new items

Mobil Corp.

Mobil relies on a comprehensive, fact-based decision-making process when implementing category management at its 400 Mobil Marts and 226 On The Run convenience stores.

"A product must justify its space in a store in order to remain in the store, in terms of both retail sales and gross profit," said Barry Shull, group category director for Mobil, based in Fairfax, Va. "From Mobil's perspective, that should all be predicated on fact-based decision-making. We look at market-share data in all retail channel segments and our own internal data, as well as data gathered by the major vendors in each category segment. The goal is to implement balanced category strategies that aren't biased toward any one product and that allow us to paint an accurate picture of the marketplace."

Key to developing this picture clearly is Mobil's recently established "Beverage Vendor Category Captain" program. Mobil's criteria for awarding this status is based on a vendor's category-management philosophy, as well as having a process that "covers all the key components required for us to make a fact-based decision about putting the right products in the right slots," said Shull. For example, in the non-carbonated beverage segment, Mobil's selection for category captain is Coca-Cola Co., which in turn noted Mobil's "consumer-engineered" category approach and its understanding of the power of its brands as keys to building the entire beverage category.

For Mobil, the main benefits of working with its category captains are having access to that company's market data, as well as receiving invaluable feedback from an industry standpoint. Mobil works closely with its chosen vendors to do field and store surveys, develop timelines, make assortment presentations to its field merchandising staff and hold regular briefings regarding store-layout resets. This is all to ensure that the right products are displayed effectively to improve store operations—for both Mobil and the supplier.

The Pantry Inc.

At The Pantry, product facings are not necessarily determined by scientific analysis of the number one, two or three items in a particular market. "The items you select and the programs you execute in the stores are ultimately judged by the customer," said Kent Raphael, director of purchasing for The Pantry Inc., based in Sanford, N.C. "In the convenience store industry, your customers are somewhat of a captive audience. You need to carry branded, quality items, but not necessarily the number-one item. For example, people shop at a c-store usually out of a fairly definite need. If somebody comes in to buy air freshener, as long as a quality, brand item is in stock they'll be satisfied."

The company operates approximately 1,200 stores under the banners The Pantry, Quick Stop, Zip Mart, Dash-N, Express Stop, Lil' Champ, Quick Mart and Handy Way. Raphael noted that with such a large network of stores, he finds it useful to implement a four-tiered approach, tying together the manufacturer, broker, store and customer.

"After you select an item to carry, and you know the level of support from the manufacturer or broker, the next step is getting the product into the stores and getting the planogram done," he said. "With 1,200 locations, it's difficult to make that all happen effectively. That's why having supplier alliances is important, almost as important as what products you select."

Raphael noted that establishing alliances also provides the ability to more easily make changes at store level mid-year. "If you want to change two items in a particular section, how do you go to eight states and change that item? With a network of alliances in place, it's not as difficult," he said. "Without it, you would be stuck doing it annually or twice a year."

R.R. Morrison & Sons

At R.R. Morrison & Sons, the Vicksburg, Miss.-based operator of Fast Lane stores, the approach to category management is closely connected to its overall initiatives in customer service and store design, as well as its supplier and vendor relationships. This philosophy has helped Fast Lane realize several benefits, such as reduced out-of-stocks and the elimination of unnecessary SKUs.

"We view category management from a broad, industry perspective first, and then we narrow our approach by partnering with particular suppliers in particular categories," said Mark Tate, marketing manager of Fast Lane's 53 stores in Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee. "For example, in our juice set, we look at which supplier is leading the market in our area, and we work with them to make sure we have the right mix and the right amount of space dedicated to whatever product they carry."

One company upon which Fast Lane relies heavily is McLane Co. Inc.'s southern division. "They provide updated purchase information through their warehouse, and that tells me what other retailers are pulling," said Tate. "It's not chain-specific, but rather, they tell me, 'We're moving 400 cases of Tropicana grape juice a week and you're not carrying that in your mix so you might want to consider it.' That information is very helpful."

Ken Hudson, area sales manager for McLane Southern, noted Fast Lane's use of technology to set its stores as one example of effective category management. "They're actually tied into our mainframe," said Hudson. "From their headquarters, they can download data by category or item to see what was sold in a certain period. Then they can analyze that data, and compare the stores that are doing well against the ones that aren't and actually update their schematics in real time."

Looking forward, Tate noted that the company's goal is to further improve its use of technology to be able to make more accurate category decisions on a store-by-store basis. As part of this initiative, Fast Lane recently updated its point-of-sale equipment, and also upgraded its store registers to better capture its scan data.

Spectrum Stores Inc.

Spectrum Stores is moving into the new century with a new approach to category management. With 56 stores in eastern Alabama and western Georgia, the West Point, Ga.-based company is currently in the process of upgrading its stores to capture scan data. The rollout started in April, and Spectrum expects to have all stores completed by the end of the year.

> Spectrum Stores Inc.

"Currently, our main method of reviewing category performance is through the use of purchase information," said Chuck Vires, vice president of marketing. "We're looking forward to having scanning data, which will allow us to make more effective decisions on categories and specific items within categories."

As Spectrum continues to revise its category management methodology, the company is relying heavily on its wholesalers and suppliers to provide support and guidance. Spectrum also is following the NACS category management guidelines, tailoring them to meet its stores' specific needs. Having such a varied approach is important, according to Vires, to accommodate different store layouts and different customer buying habits in various regions.

Spectrum's long-term goal is ultimately to serve its customers better by having a better understanding of their needs and simply having product available when they're ready to buy. "Obviously, the more we know about a category, the better we can decide which stores should or should not carry a certain product," Vires said. "Then, by eliminating products that we now know won't sell in a certain store, more space can be allocated for the appropriate product sets. As a result, out-of-stocks are reduced, products turn faster and the customers' needs are more closely met."

Speedway SuperAmerica LLC

Based in Enon, Ohio, Speedway SuperAmerica operates 2,220 stores. One of Speedway SuperAmerica's key suppliers cited the company as an early user of scan data to drive the implementation of Apollo planograms. Speedway SuperAmerica and the supplier worked in concert to communicate that information in the planograms to the store level.

Speedway SuperAmerica is comprised of the downstream assets of Marathon Ashland Petroleum LLC, which includes the former SuperAmerica Group and Marathon Oil's Enro Marketing Co.

Tosco Marketing Co.

"Category management is an ongoing process that involves how you go about your day-to-day business with a strong consumer focus," said John Zikias, vice president of field and corporate marketing for Tosco Marketing Co., the retail marketing division of Tosco Corp., and operator of 2,200 Circle K stores. "Simply setting up the process is not enough. You need to continually review information."

Headquartered in Phoenix, Tosco Marketing Co.'s category management approach is based on the NACS guidelines. Through this process, Tosco and suppliers share internal category sales data, customer knowledge and their corporate marketing strategies, as well as ways to optimize market information and supply-chain efficiencies.

"We are in the process of tailoring the NACS category-management templates to meet our specific needs, for example, modifying the vendor questionnaires to fit Tosco's model," Zikias said. "We're really trying to work within the framework, however. It makes it easier for the suppliers if they know that the information they have to provide is similar and consistent with other convenience retailers."

Tosco has also established several strategic partnerships with key suppliers such as Coca-Cola, Anheuser-Busch and Dean Foods. According to Zikias, these alliances help streamline the data-gathering process. "They provide a consistent form of data," he said. "As an example, for categories with products that are direct-store-delivered, without scanning you're heavily reliant on suppliers to provide you with information. The suppliers have been able to help us organize our data in a consolidated form that's easier to work with, and they've also given us valuable category information from a total market perspective."

Turkey Hill Minit Markets

Each of the 232 Turkey Hill Minit Markets is designed from the perspective of the customer, according to Victoria Paul, business development manager, eastern region for broker Convenience Marketing Inc. By working closely with Turkey Hill and its wholesale distributor, Miller-Hartman, Paul is eyewitness to the positive changes taking place within the company.

"They are building state-of-the-art stores, from the concept of what the customer sees when they walk in," she said. "Everything is arranged in the most effective manner for the customer in a particular region."

Turkey Hill, based in Lancaster, Pa., is a division of Dillon Cos. Paul describes the way she and Turkey Hill's Brian Kurtz work together as a true partnership. "For example, if they don't have one of our retailer programs in their stores, I explain why they should," she said. "In turn, Brian has a background in buying for a wholesaler, which is very valuable to us. Ultimately, we're all partnering to get the best products in the stores and to serve the customer better.

Defendants' Response to Plaintiffs' Objections To Gary Milano's Exhibits and Demonstratives

Defendants respectfully respond to Plaintiffs' objections as follows:

DX 146	Convenience Store News is a business periodical regularly relied upon by manufacturers to convey information about convenience store sales practices. Under Fed. R. Evid. 803(17), DX 146 is not excluded by the hearsay rule because it is a commercial publication "generally used and relied upon by the public or by persons in particular occupations."
DX 4192-4237	No response is required.
DX 4330-4385	Defendants may show Mr. Milano these exhibits in order to demonstrate his knowledge of the different ways moist snuff is marketed; Defendants will lay the foundation for admission of these photographs with other witnesses.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al.,
Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Dear Judge Russell:

Attached is a copy of Defendants' Response to Plaintiffs' Objections to Defendant's Proposed Exhibits and Demonstratives for Gary Milano.

Respectfully,

Rachel A. Mariner

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS FOR GARY MILANO

Defendants respectfully object to 11 of 72 of Plaintiffs' proposed exhibits for Gary Milano as follows:

PX 37	Hearsay.
PX 38	Hearsay.
PX 92	Hearsay.
PX 97	Hearsay.
PX 107 - PX 109	Defendants object to PX 107-109 as three pages selected from the U.S. Tobacco Sales Procedure Manual that mischaracterize the manual and are necessarily incomplete. Defendants have marked the complete Sales Operation Manual as DX 4386 and have no objection to Plaintiffs showing pages of DX 4386 to Mr. Milano.

PX 112 a-112p	PX 112a and 112m are objectionable only because the copies provided are illegible.
PX 122	Defendants seek clarification on this exhibit. Plaintiffs indicated that they may introduce PX 122 "and subnumbers". PX 122 does not have subnumbers.
PX 152	PX 152 is an undated draft of "1999 CAP Goals". In both instances, the documents do not reflect the position ultimately adopted by the Defendants. It is therefore insufficiently trustworthy to fall within Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). See Lloyd v. Professional Realty Services, 734 F.2d 1428 (11th Cir. 1984) (affirming exclusion of a draft document under Rule 803(6) because the document "was quite different from the final copy . . . which had been previously entered into evidence.") PX 146 is a final copy of the 1999 CAP Contract. We have no objection to the use of that document. "The reason for the unusual reliability of business records is invariably said 'to be supplied by systematic checking, by regularity and continuity which produce habits of precision, by actual experience of business in relying upon them, or by a duty to make an accurate report as a part of a continuing job or occupation.'" Thomas P. Egan, Admission of Business Records Into Evidence: Using the Business Record Exception and Other Techniques, 30 Duq. L. Rev. 205, 209 (1992). This document does not record facts reliably, in fact, it is by its nature speculative. For this reason they are not "statements" of a party opponent. Finally, given the number of documents available in this litigation, their probative value is outweighed by unfair prejudice. Any presumption Plaintiffs chose to draw from them cannot be rebutted by the testimony of Mr. Milano, who has not seen one of them before, and has not likely seen the other. See Milano Dep. 330-331 (Mr. Milano does not remember seeing PX 152 before).
PX 279	Hearsay.

Copies of the exhibits for which objections are made are attached.

Defendants respectfully seek to raise an additional issue for the Court. A number of exhibits Plaintiffs have listed do not have any indication on their face that they are documents

16diii004699

Mr. Milano has ever seen before, or would have reason to see in the scope of his job responsibilities at the time the document was created. These exhibits include the following:

PX 2	PX 2 is a March 11, 1987 Memorandum from the Director of Product Development and Research to an Executive Vice President about national sales figures. In 1987, Mr. Milano was the Eastern Field Sales Manager.
PX6	PX 6 is a letter from a Regional Chain Account Manager in Region I written in 1992. In 1992, Mr. Milano was the Director of Sales in the Midwest, Region V.
PX 15	PX 15 is a letter from the Senior V.P. Sales to Bob Rothenberg in 1994, both in Greenwich. In 1994, Mr. Milano was Regional VP for Region V.
PX 25	PX 25 is apparently a letter from a Region 1 employee received in 1995. In 1995, Mr. Milano was Regional VP for Region V.
PX 26	Same as PX 25.
PX 27	Same as PX 25.
PX 30	Same as PX 25.
PX 31	David Untiedt testified that he put together this document along with an intern to illustrate the character of some chain retailers who sold U.S. Tobacco products in 1996. (Untiedt Dep. at 196-97). Mr. Milano was at that time a Regional VP and did not have national responsibility.
PX 35	Same as PX 25.
PX 38	This document, which is otherwise objectionable, concerns a national account and was written in 1996. Mr. Milano at that time was Regional VP and did not have national responsibility.
PX 41	Same as PX 38.
PX 44	Same as PX 38.
PX 46	Same as PX 38.

16diii004700

PX 55	Same as PX 38.
PX 218	Same as PX 25.
PX 228	Same as PX 38.

While we do not object to the admission of these documents into evidence (except as otherwise noted), we expect to object to questions concerning these documents, subject to Plaintiffs establishing a foundation, as lacking in sufficient probative value to be of use to the jury during an adverse direct examination. In fact, of the 72 documents plaintiffs seek to introduce into evidence through Gary Milano, only 7 have his name on them as a recipient, sender, or copied recipient.

Don, I appreciate your perspective on the importance of utilization of fact based information in accomplishing blocking of competitive price/value distribution. You're using consumer, sales, and profitability information to present the real perspective in helping these retailers to make the right decision to maintain a win-win partnership approach to building the business. Thanks. Herb

Subject: PRICE VALUE PRESENTATION
Author: Donald W. Blackburn at UST-Dial_In

Bob, The purpose of this note is two fold, first to say thank you for your support in preparing the Price Value presentation and second to let you know how it is working.

As you know, last year you initially prepared this report for us to use in a presentation with Casey's General Stores (980) to hopefully dampen their interest in taking on a price value or generic brand as the buyer had expressed concern over our price increase. At that time they were also in the process of testing a generic brand in selected locations. The results of their test apparently were not positive enough for them to be convinced that they needed an alternative for their customers. At the time of their test on the generic we went in with the PV presentation. To date, they have not shown additional interest in PV brands. Naturally I would like to think that this presentation played an instrumental part in affecting this continued attitude.

Additionally last year we went on to use this presentation with Kum & Go convenience stores, Des Moines, Iowa (125) at the prompting of interest shown by their buyer of taking on a PV. To date they have not taken on a PV brand. Again we would like to think that this presentation played a big part in this decision.

Recently in a meeting with the buyer at Kwik Trip, Lacrosse, Wisconsin (245) she told me that Conwood and Pinkerton had presented respective PV brands. Kwik Trip had declined both but indicated they would revisit if they felt necessary to meet their customers needs. This presented an opportunity to get in with an updated version of the PV presentation. The plan was to share what information was available with hopes of ultimately dampening their interest in reconsidering future PV offers.

Currently Kwik Trip does not offer a PV but at one time had BIG I Swisher line. I felt the buyer showed an interest in the information and assured me she would present to their buying committee. Again based on the buyers response I would like to think we have done what we can to influence their thinking.

We plan on representing this updated version to Casey's and Kum & Go in the near future. Additionally we are currently scheduled to present this to three other customers which include: Oneida Indian Smokeshops, Green Bay, Wisconsin (7), Oasis Markets, Mpls/St.Paul (72) and Auto Stop, Hudson, Wisconsin (37).

I feel the combination of a consumer and retailer perspective on PV's contained in this presentation is impactful. The content of the presentation is not lengthy and overwhelming. In my opinion it is an effective proactive selling tool.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Don

Bob: The purpose of this note is two fold, first to say thank you for your support in preparing the Price Value presentation and second to let you know how it is working.

As you know, last year you initially prepared this report for us to use in a presentation with Casey's General Stores (980) to hopefully dampen their interest in taking on a price value or generic brand as the buyer had expressed concern over our price increase. At that time they were also in the process of testing a generic brand in selected locations. The results of their test apparently were not positive enough for them to be convinced that they needed an alternative for their customers. At the time of their test on the generic we went in with the PV presentation. To date, they have not shown additional interest in PV brands. Naturally I would like to think that this presentation played an instrumental part in affecting this continued attitude.

Additionally last year we went on to use this presentation with Kum & Go convenience stores, Des Moines, Iowa (125) at the prompting of interest shown by their buyer of taking on a PV. To date they have not taken on a PV brand. Again we would like to think that this presentation played a big part in this decision.

Recently in a meeting with the buyer at Kwik Trip, Lacrosse, Wisconsin (245) she told me that Conwood and Pinkerton had presented respective PV brands. Kwik Trip had declined both but indicated they would revisit if they felt necessary to meet their customers needs. This presented an opportunity to get in with an updated version of the PV presentation. The plan was to share what information was available with hopes of ultimately dampening their interest in reconsidering future PV offers.

Currently Kwik Trip does not offer a PV but at one time had BIG I Swisher line. I felt the buyer showed an interest in the information and assured me she would present to their buying committee. As we discussed I will only be able to supply you with information covering the first two points below. We will isolate competitors Conwood, Pinkerton and Helme and limit the anlysis to moist smokeless.

You mentioned that you would like to have this info by 5/1/97. I don't see a problem with that. Please call with any questions.

Martin

Just to follow up on our conversation of yesterday morning. Manufacturing Engineering has requested my assistance in compiling a report for upper management for the purpose of comparing our manufacturing capabilities with those of our competitors. With this in mind, we are searching for the following types of public information:

1. Sales in $, units and pounds sold
2. Brands manufactured including can sizes, type of packaging, sales volumes etc. Also, products being manufactured to compete directly with one or more of our products.
3. Estimated number of employees - production and total.
4. Plant locations and estimated capacities
5. What is commonly known about their manufacturing processes.
6. What is known, if anything, about future plant expansions, brand introductions etc

I realize that you can't provide all of this, but any information that you can provide will be helpful. Thanks coupon, we cannot track actual sales from this promotion. However, we can trend Kodiak sales over a period of time to see if there is any correlation between their running the promotion and increased sales

Let's discuss when you have a chance

In addition to $.30 off promotion couponing, I believe Kodiak has also implemented a lot of $.55 off couponing.

While I can't recall hard and true data off the top of my head, it seems logical to think that it has helped them grow or at least limit their vulnerability to the price/value brands.

I'll check with Bob Novack to see if he has any data on hand that shows any correlation between growth rates and couponing activity

If nothing specific is on hand, we will need to discuss priority and timing

Martin,

Has the $.30 off a can promotional units that Conwood has utilized over the past few years helped to increase their share? Helped to stop the erosion of Kodiak share?

Any thoughts you might have

Thanks.

Subject: Wal-Mart Competitive Product and Racks

I just got a call from Wal-Mart corporate complaining that our reprs were taking out competitive racks from Wal*Mart stores stating that they were not authorized.

They have asked us to please Stop this practice. Timberwolf, Cougar and Silver Creek Cherry have been authorized Nationally since the plan-o-gram was issued and also they are allowed to place their fixtures in their allotted space for those brands. Just as we are allowed to place Flavor Packs and our Vendors in our allotted space.

If a repr finds that a competitive company has infringed on our space in Wal*Mart as per the plan-o-gram they need to call it to the attention of the Department One Manager and they (Wal*Mart) should be the ones to make the adjustments. Or if they want us to remove the competitors rack, I would suggest that they ask the Department One Manager to sign a transaction form stating that they gave us permission. That way when our friendly competitor complains, the Department One Manager at Wal-Mart can't blame us saying that they knew nothing about it. I also can assist in getting problems corrected in this area through the Wal*Mart corporate office's.

Most of our problems have arisen since new brands both competitive and ours have come out since the plan-o-gram was issued last year. A new plan-o-gram is being considered and we are making recommendations for changes that should eliminate most of these issues.

As always, if I can be of assistance, please do not hesitate to let me know.

Thanks,,

Janice

Furrs Supermarkets, Alb, NM (70 stores) - I met with Jack Brannock and presented the Copenhagen 175th promotions. I also did a business review. Mr. Brannock accepted the 48 can Cope FC promotion and the 24 can Cope LC promotion. He will ship one display of each to all stores. I have attached a copy of the business review. UST is 81.3% of the units and 84.2% of the profits. UST has nine of the top ten and thirteen of the top fifteen items. The top fifteen is 89.9% of his business. Mr. Brannock agreed to delete the following items, Kodiak Straight, Cougar LC Wintergreen, Cougar LC Natural, Flavor Pack Cinnamon, Cougar FC Natural, Cougar FC Wintergreen and Kodiak Choice. He told me he would notify General Distributing and inform them these items are not authorized any longer. This could present some problems. General has never been very cooperative and they may fight this. I mentioned this to Jack and he said he would handle this. I talked to Division Manager David Todd and he agreed. If we can get General to cooperate, we will be resetting the stores and getting more shelve space for UST brands. David will be working closely with General to help this process along.

Jack told me Pinkerton had been in and bought down his inventory of Timber Wolf. His retail is now $1.39. He just deleted all Cougar brands. Timber Wolf products are new to Furr's. Even though they did not show well in the business review, Jack did not want to delete them now. We will do another review in a few months and hopefully get them deleted at that time. With the price value brands being reduced at retail all over the country, this is a situation we need to watch closely. David Todd pointed out in his activity letter, the price difference between price value and premium brands is around $2.00 a can in New Mexico. If we start to see these items pick up we made need to think about getting Red Seal in these places. In Allsup's and Giant we could probably lock Timber Wolf out by getting Red Seal in. I will monitor the situation closely and notify you if I feel we need to act.

Git-N-Go, Tulsa Ok. (110 stores) - As I mentioned last week, these guy's were upset they were not going to get Red Seal. Their major concern was the Indian Smokeshop's in Oklahoma having this product and they would not. I have talked to Dave McCaslin and I am going to take him and Duff Thompson, Vice President of Operatious to lunch next week. I will talk to them again and present both sides of the coin and see what they say. The bottom line is I would rather see them with Red Seal than put Timber Wolf back in their stores. My gut feeling is we will need to put Red Seal in this account. I will let you know what happens.

Hy-Vee Food Stores 238 locations-Met with Bernerd Beary Tobacco buyer at Hy-Vee Food Stores. Presented him up to date industry data on smokeless tobacco and the food store trade class. Bernerds main purpose for setting up the meeting was to inquire about going on direct. Currently they order from five different distributors and have no set planogram and have not taken any consumer promotions from a headquarter standpoint. They have nobody in place as a category manager but intend to have somebody in place in the next month. Bernerd mentioned he was going to go on direct that it was just a matter of time before this happens. He has no initial intention of reducing price, addressing promotions, or developing a planogram. He even mentioned charging the same costs as distributors charge to the stores making money at both the distributor level and retail level keeping the money in the same company. I plan on sitting on this to see if he is really interested in growing the business.

The purpose of this letter is to follow up with my voice mail of this afternoon regarding Southland smokeless tobacco merchandising.

Mr Tom Bonfiglio, Corporate Category Manager called today to express his concern with reports from his stores regarding merchandising. Effective immediately please instruct your respective Consumer Marketing Representative with 7 Eleven responsibility, to discontinue any activity related to altering a smokeless tobacco vendor. This also applies regardless of a store managers request. Specifically leave all product facings as is. do not add facings or delete facings of any manufacturers brand, including ours until further notice.

Please have CMR's continue with routine coverage and servicing of Southland accounts as it relates to product exchanges, rotation and vendor cleaning.

Your cooperation is appreciated.

TERRITORY MANAGEMENT

What If?

A retailer asks why should I give you increased facings and shelf space?

- Increase sales.
- Increase profits.
- Eliminate O.O.S. potential.
- Refer to Partners in Profit/Neilsen information.

What If?

A retailer wants to merchandise competitive products in our vending systems?

- Merchandise only products that are selling.
- Gain an agreement to control the display.
- Cooperation must be secured for POS exclusivity.
- Utilize Plan-O-Gram Vendor decal.

What If?

A competitive company tampers with our displays in a retail outlet?

- Advise retailer.
- Re-establish appropriate merchandising for Company products.
- Ensure adequate Company facings.
- Report incidents through Regional Office/Chain Manager.
- Refer to Fair Competition Policy.

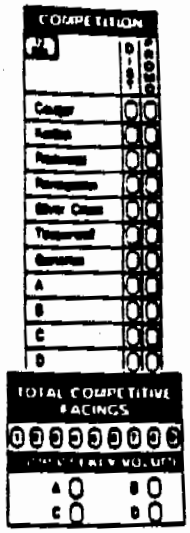
COMPETITION - BLOCK 13-R/M



- Marking Requirements:
  - ➤ Not a required response. Can be marked for retail and management accounts.
- Competition
  - Distribution: Mark this section to indicate distribution of competitive products listed.
  - Promotion: Mark this section to indicate that a competitive promotion is present in the account. If promotion is marked, you must mark distribution.
- Total Competitive Facing: Mark this block to indicate number of total facings for competitive brands. Multiple bubbles can be marked, with a range 1 through 9. (Beginning October 1, 1997)

  Facings can be defined as a slot (row) in a vending system, not the total # of products.

  Exception: In the case of no vending systems: If no permanent vendor is used but the product is permanently carried in the store (window shelf, cooler), please consult your immediate supervisor for proper determination of facings.
- Competitive Weekly Volume: Mark this section to indicate competitive volume of product being sold in the account.
  - A = High Volume Accounts: 21 Rolls or more per week or 201 Cans or more per week
  - B = Medium/High Volume Accounts: 11-20 Rolls per week or 101 to 200 Cans per week
  - C = Medium Volume Accounts: 5-10 Rolls per week or 41 to 100 Cans per week
  - D = Low Volume Accounts: 4 Rolls or less per week or 40 Cans or less

Note: On management chain or distributor accounts volume and facings are not required. On retail accounts, a response should be indicated for volume and facings.

- Error Conditions:
  - ➤ If promo is marked dist must be marked. If it is not, an * will show in this section of the callbook.
  - ➤ Only one volume (A, B, C, or D) may be selected at a time. If more than one is selected an * will show in this section of the callbook.
  - ➤ If facings or volume are not marked on a management account, a blank will show on a retail account an * will show in this section of the callbook.

DRAFT

1999 CAP GOALS

The goals that are currently under consideration are shown in the grid below. It is our belief that these represent goals that are achievable with the current program. They have been listed in what we perceive as priority order for retailers and wholesalers and, of course, are subject to input from management and legal.

	WHOLESALE	RETAIL
– DISPLAY - SHARE OF SPACE	N/A	1
– SHARE of SALES*	2	2
–PRICE MIX	3	3
– DATA COMPONENTS	1	N/A

DISPLAY

The display goal would be to make sure that USTSM's share of fixture was in proportion to its share of sales in the account.

SHARE OF SALES

The share of sales goals would be based upon the greater of either the retailer's historical percentage of USTSM sales or the goal for USTSM sales in the area that the retailer is located.

Share of sales was chosen as the primary benchmark for accounts, because it provides the most fair and flexible way to determine goals for an account. This approach allows us to ask the retailer to be the best that he can be with the things that he can control. There are many things that are beyond a retailer's control that could affect its performance in achieving a volume goal:

An increase in competition - A new store opens across the street.

A downturn in the local economy - A factory closes.

These could affect a retailer's volume and are caused by factors that are beyond the retailers control. Goals based on a retailer's share of sales would automatically and fairly compensate for these changes in the environment that are beyond the retailers control.

We want the retailer to focus on improving the things that are in his control.

PRICE MIX

Price mix would be a sales ratio of Premium Products (PP) V. Price Value (PV) products.

The target PP/PV ratio might be something like 85/15 (85% PP sales and 15% PV sales).

DATA COMPONENT

The primary focus for wholesalers would be to make sure that they are providing quality data in a timely fashion. This includes all aspects of the data reporting requirements including units, dollars, promotional units, inventories.

*DETERMINATION SHARE OF SALES PERCENTAGES

A) Accounts with 1 year of history

Share goal will be the greater of an accounts share of sales for the same period of time in the previous year or the area's goal for share of sales.

B) Accounts with less than 1 year of history

Share goal will be the greater of the accounts share of sales for the last quarter or the area's goal for share of sales.

C) Accounts with less than 1 quarter of history

Share goal will be the goal for the area the account is in. This will be the average share for the area during the same time period of the previous year.

FOR EXAMPLE:

In department COO the average share of USTSM sales is XX.X%. This would be the percentage that an account without an established benchmark would have to achieve until they had established one for themselves

D) Chain Accounts

The average for the chain would be used.

The same criteria as above would be used to establish share of sales goals for the chain. In the case of a chain that had less than a quarter of history, the average share for all of the areas that the chain operates retail stores in would be used.

Retail Work

I have been selling promos 477 and 467. People are taking it but do not seem to be to excited about them Because 4 packs did not do that well and Cope long cut is not a good seller.

I have been cutting products along with updating PAR. I will need a print out of my distribution to see how many products I have to cut in order to achieve my objective. The stores in my territory are not in good shape due to my absence.

Red Barrel and Tier 1 Stop are doing very well with the frequent buyer program. I will start a mystery shopper program with both in the summer. I would like to run a program with Quickway. They want to work with us in any way they can to increase sales. Quickway has picked up a lot of competitors brands. As soon as we can get some reading off cap I will start to address the situation. Velocity reports will not work because they used to be with herkimer. I will most likely keep the top 12 brands in the stores. It depends who is 11 and 12.

I will have a problem with product for the next two weeks because Alan did order for my return. I have talked with him and he bumped up his order.

Sampling

Sampling has been going well. I have had two Bar night already and I am working on setting up my third at the Dark Horse in Cortland.

Competitive

Conwood reps have been doing a good job. There are 3 conwood reps in my new Territory. Dan has Cortland county the new rep out of Binghamton has Broome and Chenango. The rep out of Utica has Otego and Delaware. I am getting hit from all sides. I have never seen their work look this good.

Cougar natural is starting to sell in my rural areas. I was also told by Alan that Kodiak Ice (mint) is on its way and the packaging is very appealing.

I sampled a customer in Cortland and he said he has been alternating between long cut wintergreen and timber wolf. He asked me why it is so expensive and I really was lost for words.

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY TO DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS FOR GARY MILANO

Plaintiffs respectfully respond as follows to defendants' objections to the introduction in evidence of certain exhibits through Gary Milano:

PX 37	Internal UST memo. Plaintiffs intend to introduce this document for the purpose of showing UST's self-described plan to "block[] competitive price/value distribution," not for the truth of any incidental hearsay.
PX 92	Same.
PX 107	Already admitted.
PX 112a-p	Copies are as produced by defendants. Plaintiffs will substitute any clearer copies provided by UST.
PX 122	There are no sub-numbers.
PX 38, 97, 108, 109, 152, 279	After further consideration, plaintiffs do not intend to offer these documents through Mr. Milano. While plaintiffs believe there to be no basis for excluding these UST business records, no ruling is required at this time. As to PX 152, plaintiffs would further note that it is already admitted in evidence.

Defendants object to the use of certain additional documents with Mr. Milano. They do not contest the admissibility of these documents, but argue only that the use of these materials with Mr. Milano lacks "sufficient probative value." However, Mr. Milano is an officer who speaks for the company and serves as Executive Vice President in charge of defendants' sales operation and field sales force; the materials plaintiffs seek to use with him involve the activities of his subordinates and colleagues and were, in many instance, circulated to him. Mr. Milano is, moreover, the sole witness UST has agreed to supply live to explain the company's plans, actions, and documents. Any supposed lack of "sufficient probative value" can be assessed only in the context of plaintiffs' examination.

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants certain demonstrative and trial exhibits for use during the direct examination of Dr. Richard Leftwich. Defendants object to a collection of exhibits that purport to demonstrate the relationship between Conwood's claimed damages and U.S. Tobacco's "gross profits" from 1994-1998. See Attachments.

First, these exhibits represent entirely new opinions, never before offered by Plaintiffs or by Dr. Leftwich at any time, including in Dr. Leftwich's initial, rebuttal and supplemental expert reports.

Second, and more importantly, these exhibits represent information that is irrelevant and would be unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco if shown to the jury. Dr. Leftwich is offered as a damages expert to quantify Conwood's alleged lost sales that resulted from U.S.

Tobacco's alleged misconduct. Under Fed. R. Evid. 702, it would not assist the jury for Dr. Leftwich to ~~them~~ compare his damages estimates to U.S. Tobacco's profits. That comparison is irrelevant to the issue. Plaintiffs' clear intent for the use of the exhibits is to Robin Hood the jury into taking money from the "big, wealthy monopolist" and give it to the "small, victimized company." That is not a measure of damages; it is not relevant to any measure of damages; and it would be unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco, especially in light of Plaintiffs' continued efforts to represent Conwood as a small company with limited resources, rather than a highly-profitable arm of a huge multi-national conglomerate that dwarfs U.S. Tobacco.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants demonstrative and trial exhibits for use during the direct examinations of Dr. Gregory Gundlach. Defendants object to certain of these exhibits, as described below See Attachments.

Memorandum In Support of Defendants' Motion For Summary Judgment.

Plaintiffs intend to have Dr. Gundlach, a marketing professor, discuss a memorandum of law filed by U.S. Tobacco in support of their motion for summary judgment. Any such discussion is irrelevant to Dr. Gundlach's opinions (primarily that U.S. Tobacco has "exclusive agreements" with certain retailers), and would not assist the jury in deciding any factual issues. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. The obvious intent of this tactic is to put before the jury those facts that U.S. Tobacco assumed arguendo for purposes of arguing for summary judgment, a distinction that may be lost on the jury. Such disclosure would be misleading and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

Choking Competitive Distribution. Defendants object to this exhibit because the title is unduly inflammatory and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

The Gundlach Study. Plaintiffs also submitted a third version of Dr. Gundlach's study, this time including a column entitled "details of agreement," under which Dr. Gundlach describes the purported agreement with terms such as "x vendor" or "x header." Plaintiffs also submit separate charts tabulating the number of each type of agreements. During his deposition, however, when asked which agreements listed in his study pertained to exclusive vending, which pertained to exclusive POS, and which pertained to exclusive planograms, Dr. Gundlach testified that he did not "characterize the different types of exclusionary features." See Gundlach Dep. 155-56. Dr. Gundlach should not be allowed to avoid a question, effectively preventing cross-examination, and then present the opinion to the jury.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

Deposition of GREGORY T. GUNDLACH, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at

A. Well, if the CAP contract calls for exclusive vending and both parties had signed the CAP contract, agreed to those terms, I imagine normal course that's what would happen in the retail institution. I would say probably utilize a somewhat conservative approach based on the documents that were provided and also representations made by UST employees. If the contract says exclusive vending that would be in my mind sufficient to suggest that that's what's going to occur in the marketplace given UST's dominant position ability to enforce that contract.

Q. Is it your testimony today that 35,000 locations have a CAP contract that require exclusive vending?

A. It's my understanding that upwards towards that vicinity have exclusionary features, yes.

Q. That wasn't quite my question. I was talking about exclusive vending specifically.

A. Again I haven't focused my -- in deriving that number I was focusing mainly on exclusionary features, not necessarily just the use of exclusive vending.

Q. What did you do to determine the number of CAP participants that had exclusive racks?

A. Well, again I didn't necessarily attempt to determine as a counting criteria the number of particular forms of exclusion, but more or less I was looking to the end result of whether or not exclusion was occurring as a result of the -- as represented by the documents that I had looked at.

Q. And what kind of quantitative analysis did you do to assess the number of CAP participants that had exclusive United States Tobacco point-of-sale materials in their stores?

A. Again I looked at the various representations as evidence in the contracts themselves, UST documents, UST memoranda, and derived from there an understanding of the overall level of exclusion, and my criteria more focused on that level than trying to make a distinction between whether or not it was a rack or whether or not it was POS on a rack or whether or not it was a rack and POS or whether or not it was a display versus a rack versus a modular. My focus was mainly on the exclusionary forms of agreements.

Q. Is it fair to say that you did not do anything quantitatively to separate out the different exclusionary features you identify in your report?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, ambiguous, you're still referring to exclusive in the CAP?

MR. ATHANASIA: Uh-huh.

THE WITNESS: Again I looked at the different documents that were available to me in the contracts as they represented the number of retail institutions where these features if one assumes that when one signs a contract the parties agree to the particular attributes of the arrangement, felt in rendering my opinion that was sufficient enough to be an indicia of some form, type of exclusion.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. I'm just trying to get a sense of if I were to separate exclusive vending from exclusive point-of-sale materials from what you call adherence to plan-o-grams, what work did you do within the CAP universe, CAP participants, did you do to separate those out and quantify each?

A. Well, as I mentioned I focused mainly on the level of exclusion and accepted the particular documents as they related to different forms of exclusion. After all the criteria of interest here is not whether or not a competitor has been injured by exclusion of a competitor's rack or POS. The important criteria is whether or not exclusionary outcomes have impacted competition.

Q. So if I'm understanding you is aggregate all of the different types of exclusion as sort of one limit of exclusionary feature?

A. In a sense I looked at the various arrangements, identified whether or not they contained exclusionary features and considered various indicia to make that determination including agreements, contracts, memoranda, discussing those agreements, I used that as my basis then as far as obtaining whether or not exclusion was present. I then identified the number of retail locations of which those particular features would apply.

Q. In paragraph 15 of your rebuttal report I think you refer to this number you have alluded to of 22,000 retail locations?

A. Find my rebuttal report here.

Q. You see that reference to the 22,000?

A. I actually see two references, which one are you speaking to.

Q. The one on page 7?

A. I do see that.

Q. Actually the first reference, the 22,000, I'm sorry you state based upon the available record it appears that UST has exclusive agreements with retailers representing nearly 22,000 locations. Now earlier you made a distinction and corrected me because you said you used the term exclusionary while I was using the term exclusive. Do you see the term exclusive agreements in the sentence I just read?

A. Yes. I do.
Q. Do you want to change that to exclusionary?
A. No. As I mentioned earlier in the beginning of our day today that the term is used somewhat interchangeably. The distinction might be viewed something along these lines. Exclusive would refer to the mechanism through which the outcome is derived with that outcome being exclusionary. So in a sense they're hand in glove type of terminology with some loose use of both in particular areas. So here I'm referring to the particular agreements and the fact that they contain exclusive features.
Q. And what exclusive features do these exclusive agreements include? I'd just like a complete list of what you're talking about, exclusive features.
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: Common theme -- and again what we're talking to here now apart from the CAP are a variety of different types of agreements that are obtained by UST and arrangements with retailers. The common themes that come through in these arrangements and agreements generally are exclusive vending referring to the rack or vending modular and exclusive POS on that rack and typically also adherence to required plan-o-grams for use in those racks.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Now out of the 22,000 retail locations, just let me clarify that would include if there were say 2,000 locations in a retail chain would that be -- count as one or as 2,000 in this 22,000 number?
A. That would count as a retail location meaning one.
Q. So a whole chain of 2,000 stores would count as one out of this 22,000?
A. No. Clarification.
Q. Each store would be one location?
A. Each store would count as one of that 22,000, each retail location.
Q. Out of the 22,000 retail locations, how many have exclusive vending from your study?
A. Again my point of reference was not necessarily to characterize the different types of exclusionary features but merely to determine whether or not exclusion was present or not.

Q. And would that be the same answer for if I tried to ask you just the number that had exclusive possible features?
A. Yes, it would.
Q. And also the third thing you described, adherence to require plan-o-grams?
A. Yes, it would.
Q. How about what we talked about earlier about a company getting the number one position and as you said excluding the -- another company from the number one position, would that be included in this 22,000?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: To the extent that I've characterized three major themes, the positioning of an exclusive display as you characterize it or a display in the number one position or the number two position, to the extent that I would view that as being exclusionary, it may or may not have been considered to be exclusionary. I would have to look at the, you know, the context of the specific circumstance and this gets to your point of identifying the particular features segregating them into components because in this particular case what we're looking at is often a combination of a variety of exclusionary features that in isolation may mean one thing but in aggregate may mean something entirely different.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. The third common theme you referred to is adherence to required plan-o-grams. Can you tell me what you mean by that? Are you referring to a retailer who cedes control of the product mix decisions in the stores to United States Tobacco?
A. What I'm describing here in terms of adherence to exclusionary plan-o-grams would be through some mechanism through some approach or process the -- UST is able to obtain the agreement of the retailer to utilize and implement a plan-o-gram that results in exclusionary outcomes.
Q. And can you just describe to me what you mean by exclusionary outcomes?
A. These would be arrangements where the number of products were reduced in terms of facings for a competitor product where the number of total products may have been reduced along with and part of the reduction of the number of facings of the competitive product. Those would be two examples of what I mean by plan-o-gram that contains exclusionary features.

Q. Do you know of any retailer that has implemented a plan-o-gram that completely excluded all Conwood products from the store?

A. If I recall correctly and I'm having to reach here because there's so many different retailers, but I believe Eckerd drugs has and does carry only UST product. As I sit here today whether or not my recollection is as based on some derived plan-o-gram or some other arrangement reflective of the number of products being reduced, I think that's a representation of a circumstance that's resulted in a plan-o-gram that has excluded other competitive product.

Q. Now would it surprise you if I told you that Eckerd Drugs actually carries only Conwood products?

A. It would be informative and it would be in contrast to what my understanding of the record was. It would be useful information, sure.

Q. Now have you ever seen a plan-o-gram that did in fact reduce the total number of products carried in the store?

Page 159

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: I do recall documents, internal memoranda discussing on the part of UST representatives their ability to obtain plan-o-grams that did in fact reduce the number of products in the store, product facings. As I recall I do or did or have seen plan-o-grams that resulted in the reduction of a number of facings for all products and reduction in the number of facings for Conwood's products. There's a variety of evidence that has led me to believe that there are plan-o-grams, many instances that have reduced -- I'll say this, I haven't seen one that asked for a number of increases in the number of facings.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Have you seen evidence of plan-o-grams that reduce the number of United States Tobacco facings?

A. Yes. I have, yes, I have.

Q. Is that exclusionary to United States Tobacco?

A. Again I think the -- to determine whether or not it's exclusionary, here's where we keep getting confused, we need to determine what the result is in the competitive marketplace. What we're focusing on now is the mechanism. The determination of exclusionary really refers to what's happening in terms of competition, so we focus on a particular plan-o-gram is really half the story.

Q. Well, if a plan-o-gram reduces the number of United States Tobacco products in the rack and a consumer can't find, I don't know, Skoal Key, is that exclusionary?

A. Again if we use the term exclusionary to mean what is the competitive result and whether or not competition has been dampened or constrained or limited, it's difficult to tell without characterizing the entirety of the circumstance.

Q. Are all plan-o-grams that reduce the total number of products that are available on the shelf exclusionary?

A. Again to make a general statement that all plan-o-grams that reduce the number of facings in the entire universe of plan-o-grams, I imagine not. I imagine there are some instances where they're not.

Q. Are all plan-o-grams that are recommended by U.S. Tobacco exclusionary?

A. Again, without looking at the particular plan-o-gram that you're prescribing and the circumstances. I can envision a plan-o-gram on the part of UST that expands the number of brands and adds competitive product, not necessarily being anticompetitive or exclusionary.

Q. Well, are all plan-o-grams recommended by U.S. Tobacco that reduce the total number of facings and reduce competitive products exclusionary?

A. I think given UST's market dominance we can make that assumption here, and considering that a plan-o-gram that resulted in the number of facings of a competitor's products were reduced and UST's products were preserved in terms of prior to that plan-o-gram, if that plan-o-gram resulted in preservation of the status quo of UST's dominant position without some acceptable business justification, might find that to be an exclusionary arrangement.

Q. With all those factors you still might find that to be exclusionary?

A. Again we'd need to know what were the particular effects for competition. That certainly is a mechanism by which UST could accomplish an exclusionary outcome. Instances where that has occurred where competitors' products have been reduced does result in exclusion and can have exclusionary outcomes.

Q. When you refer to business justifications, can you describe to me what you mean or give me some examples of business justification?
A. UST often will offer its programs as a basis for a retailer to freshen up their rack, present a more uniform appearance and a variety of proposed advantages to the retailer that are presented in a way that are suggested to enhance the competitive implications for consumers.
Q. And based on those business justifications the retailer makes the decision to implement the plan-o-gram, that would indicate to you that it would not be exclusionary?
A. I mean after all what the retailer does certainly is their decision. My interest would be in focusing on what the competitive implications are to the consumer. Whether or not that's retailer's acquiescence to that arrangement was based on the fact that they were provided information that they accepted about what the future would hold or simply felt as though they were compelled to accept the plan-o-gram that restricted the number of brands, competitor brands because of UST's dominance, there would be a variety of reasons I can think of as to why a retailer would accept something so -- not necessarily that we understand certainly one factor, it's one particular piece of information that more important is the competitive implications.

Q. Want to talk a little bit about those 22,000 locations just with respect to exclusive vending. You refer to exclusive agreements, just so we're clear are you referring to agreements between U.S. Tobacco and the retailer?
A. Yes, with retailers.
Q. Now assuming that United States Tobacco has an agreement with a retailer for exclusive vending, do you know of instances where Conwood racks were removed pursuant to those agreements?
A. I know of instances where Conwood racks were removed, yes. The particulars of whether or not they were pursuant to a specific agreement it's hard for me to recall, there's so many different agreements that I've considered. If one does call for an exclusive rack agreement or exclusive vendor agreement, I have understood that Conwood racks have been removed.
Q. And have you done any work to quantify the number of Conwood racks that had been removed as a result of these exclusive vending agreements between

U.S. Tobacco and retailers?
A. Well, the evidence is quite pervasive, suggest a widespread removal of those racks. The quantification is very difficult given the nature of evidence, for example, I recall one particular ex-UST rep Art Hale describing.
Q. I'm sorry I didn't catch the name?
A. Art Hale. I'm sorry it's Al Hart. What am I thinking. It's Al Hart, describing a circumstance where he was part of a crew drive to remove upwards towards 500 racks in his area, interesting enough this was corroborated by a Conwood rep who was working in the vicinity who indicated he had spent upwards toward 50 percent of his time replacing those racks. So the evidence does suggest some numbers but oftentimes that type of quantification isn't offered in the record. So to extrapolate those numbers to come up with a quantity is quite difficult given the evidence at hand.
Q. What was the name of the Conwood rep that you just referred to?
A. You know I think I actually made reference to this individual inside my report, might be useful for me to look to refresh my memory there, but as I sit here I don't recall exactly the name of that individual.

Q. I'll save you some time. You do not refer to the Conwood rep by name in your report. You did refer to Alan Hart by name. That's okay. Now did you review the testimony of Alan Hart in his deposition?
A. I did review I recall I reviewed his declaration and I believe he also was deposed. I believe he was.
Q. And as you sit here today do you know what his testimony was regarding whether those rack removals you referred to on the crew yard were with store authorization or not?
A. As I recall he spoke of not only engaging in unauthorized rack removal being encouraged to engage if that rack removal on the part of his supervisors, those supervisors being with him and participating in that rack removal, his being instructed to remove racks while operating as a regional sales manager, his feeling and sentiment that removal of racks was common, frequent, and something that was made part of his role as a UST representative. I remember Al Hart because of his -- no longer with UST but I think as a result of injury and I think what struck me being at the University of

UST Knows the Retailer Is Too Busy

"One thing is certain, however. Key supermarket and convenience chains do not have the time to properly manage categories on their own. They need the assistance of their key manufacturer."

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants certain demonstrative and trial exhibits for use during the direct examination of Dr. Richard Leftwich. Defendants object to a collection of exhibits that purport to demonstrate the relationship between Conwood's claimed damages and U.S. Tobacco's "gross profits" from 1994-1998. See Attachments.

First, these exhibits represent entirely new opinions, never before offered by Plaintiffs or by Dr. Leftwich at any time, including in Dr. Leftwich's initial, rebuttal and supplemental expert reports.

Second, and more importantly, these exhibits represent information that is irrelevant and would be unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco if shown to the jury. Dr. Leftwich is offered as a damages expert to quantify Conwood's alleged lost sales that resulted from U.S.

Tobacco's alleged misconduct. Under Fed. R. Evid. 702, it would not assist the jury for Dr. Leftwich to ~~them~~ compare his damages estimates to U.S. Tobacco's profits. That comparison is irrelevant to the issue. Plaintiffs' clear intent for the use of the exhibits is to Robin Hood the jury into taking money from the "big, wealthy monopolist" and give it to the "small, victimized company." That is not a measure of damages; it is not relevant to any measure of damages; and it would be unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco, especially in light of Plaintiffs' continued efforts to represent Conwood as a small company with limited resources, rather than a highly-profitable arm of a huge multi-national conglomerate that dwarfs U.S. Tobacco.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO
PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs disclosed to Defendants demonstrative and trial exhibits for use during the direct examinations of Dr. Gregory Gundlach. Defendants object to certain of these exhibits, as described below See Attachments.

Memorandum In Support of Defendants' Motion For Summary Judgment.

Plaintiffs intend to have Dr. Gundlach, a marketing professor, discuss a memorandum of law filed by U.S. Tobacco in support of their motion for summary judgment. Any such discussion is irrelevant to Dr. Gundlach's opinions (primarily that U.S. Tobacco has "exclusive agreements" with certain retailers), and would not assist the jury in deciding any factual issues. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. The obvious intent of this tactic is to put before the jury those facts that U.S. Tobacco assumed arguendo for purposes of arguing for summary judgment, a distinction that may be lost on the jury. Such disclosure would be misleading and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

Choking Competitive Distribution. Defendants object to this exhibit because the title is unduly inflammatory and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

The Gundlach Study. Plaintiffs also submitted a third version of Dr. Gundlach's study, this time including a column entitled "details of agreement," under which Dr. Gundlach describes the purported agreement with terms such as "x vendor" or "x header." Plaintiffs also submit separate charts tabulating the number of each type of agreements. During his deposition, however, when asked which agreements listed in his study pertained to exclusive vending, which pertained to exclusive POS, and which pertained to exclusive planograms, Dr. Gundlach testified that he did not "characterize the different types of exclusionary features." See Gundlach Dep. 155-56. Dr. Gundlach should not be allowed to avoid a question, effectively preventing cross-examination, and then present the opinion to the jury.

CONCLUSION

Defendants respectfully request an order excluding each of the above-referenced exhibits.

Deposition of GREGORY T. GUNDLACH, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at

A. Well, if the CAP contract calls for exclusive vending and both parties had signed the CAP contract, agreed to those terms. I imagine normal course that's what would happen in the retail institution. I would say probably utilize a somewhat conservative approach based on the documents that were provided and also representations made by UST employees. If the contract says exclusive vending that would be in my mind sufficient to suggest that that's what's going to occur in the marketplace given UST's dominant position ability to enforce that contract.

Q. Is it your testimony today that 35,000 locations have a CAP contract that require exclusive vending?

A. It's my understanding that upwards towards that vicinity have exclusionary features, yes.

Q. That wasn't quite my question. I was talking about exclusive vending specifically.

A. Again I haven't focused my -- in deriving that number I was focusing mainly on exclusionary features, not necessarily just the use of exclusive vending.

Q. What did you do to determine the number of CAP participants that had exclusive racks?

A. Well, again I didn't necessarily attempt to determine as a counting criteria the number of particular forms of exclusion, but more or less I was looking to the end result of whether or not exclusion was occurring as a result of the -- as represented by the documents that I had looked at.

Q. And what kind of quantitative analysis did you do to assess the number of CAP participants that had exclusive United States Tobacco point-of-sale materials in their stores?

A. Again I looked at the various representations as evidence in the contracts themselves, UST documents, UST memoranda, and derived from there an understanding of the overall level of exclusion, and my criteria more focused on that level than trying to make a distinction between whether or not it was a rack or whether or not it was POS on a rack or whether or not it was a rack and POS or whether or not it was a display versus a rack versus a modular. My focus was mainly on the exclusionary forms of agreements.

Q. Is it fair to say that you did not do anything quantitatively to separate out the different exclusionary features you identify in your report?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, ambiguous, you're still referring to exclusive in the CAP?

MR. ATHANASIA: Uh-huh.

THE WITNESS: Again I looked at the different documents that were available to me in the contracts as they represented the number of retail institutions where these features if one assumes that when one signs a contract the parties agree to the particular attributes of the arrangement, felt in rendering my opinion that was sufficient enough to be an indicia of some form, type of exclusion.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. I'm just trying to get a sense of if I were to separate exclusive vending from exclusive point-of-sale materials from what you call adherence to plan-o-grams, what work did you do within the CAP universe, CAP participants, did you do to separate those out and quantify each?

A. Well, as I mentioned I focused mainly on the level of exclusion and accepted the particular documents as they related to different forms of exclusion. After all the criteria of interest here is not whether or not a competitor has been injured by exclusion of a competitor's rack or POS. The important criteria is whether or not exclusionary outcomes have impacted competition.

Q. So if I'm understanding you is aggregate all of the different types of exclusion as sort of one limit of exclusionary feature?

A. In a sense I looked at the various arrangements, identified whether or not they contained exclusionary features and considered various indicia to make that determination including agreements, contracts, memoranda, discussing those agreements, I used that as my basis then as far as obtaining whether or not exclusion was present. I then identified the number of retail locations of which those particular features would apply.

Q. In paragraph 15 of your rebuttal report I think you refer to this number you have alluded to of 22,000 retail locations?

A. Find my rebuttal report here.

Q. You see that reference to the 22,000?

A. I actually see two references, which one are you speaking to.

Q. The one on page 7?

A. I do see that.

Q. Actually the first reference, the 22,000, I'm sorry you state based upon the available record it appears that UST has exclusive agreements with retailers representing nearly 22,000 locations. Now earlier you made a distinction and corrected me because you said you used the term exclusionary while I was using the term exclusive. Do you see the term exclusive agreements in the sentence I just read?

A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you want to change that to exclusionary?
A. No. As I mentioned earlier in the beginning of our day today that the term is used somewhat interchangeably. The distinction might be viewed something along these lines. Exclusive would refer to the mechanism through which the outcome is derived with that outcome being exclusionary. So in a sense they're hand in glove type of terminology with some loose use of both in particular areas. So here I'm referring to the particular agreements and the fact that they contain exclusive features.
Q. And what exclusive features do these exclusive agreements include? I'd just like a complete list of what you're talking about, exclusive features.
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: Common theme -- and again what we're talking to here now apart from the CAP are a variety of different types of agreements that are obtained by UST and arrangements with retailers. The common themes that come through in these arrangements and agreements generally are exclusive vending referring to the rack or vending modular and exclusive POS on that rack and typically also adherence to required plan-o-grams for use in those racks.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Now out of the 22,000 retail locations, just let me clarify that would include if there were say 2,000 locations in a retail chain would that be -- count as one or as 2,000 in this 22,000 number?
A. That would count as a retail location meaning one.
Q. So a whole chain of 2,000 stores would count as one out of this 22,000?
A. No. Clarification.
Q. Each store would be one location?
A. Each store would count as one of that 22,000, each retail location.
Q. Out of the 22,000 retail locations, how many have exclusive vending from your study?
A. Again my point of reference was not necessarily to characterize the different types of exclusionary features but merely to determine whether or not exclusion was present or not.

Q. And would that be the same answer for if I tried to ask you just the number that had exclusive possible features?
A. Yes, it would.
Q. And also the third thing you described, adherence to require plan-o-grams?
A. Yes, it would.
Q. How about what we talked about earlier about a company getting the number one position and as you said excluding the -- another company from the number one position, would that be included in this 22,000?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.
THE WITNESS: To the extent that I've characterized three major themes, the positioning of an exclusive display as you characterize it or a display in the number one position or the number two position, to the extent that I would view that as being exclusionary, it may or may not have been considered to be exclusionary. I would have to look at the, you know, the context of the specific circumstance and this gets to your point of identifying the particular features segregating them into components because in this particular case what we're looking at is often a combination of a variety of exclusionary features that in isolation may mean one thing but in aggregate may mean something entirely different.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. The third common theme you referred to is adherence to required plan-o-grams. Can you tell me what you mean by that? Are you referring to a retailer who cedes control of the product mix decisions in the stores to United States Tobacco?
A. What I'm describing here in terms of adherence to exclusionary plan-o-grams would be through some mechanism through some approach or process the -- UST is able to obtain the agreement of the retailer to utilize and implement a plan-o-gram that results in exclusionary outcomes.
Q. And can you just describe to me what you mean by exclusionary outcomes?
A. These would be arrangements where the number of products were reduced in terms of facings for a competitor product where the number of total products may have been reduced along with and part of the reduction of the number of facings of the competitive product. Those would be two examples of what I mean by plan-o-gram that contains exclusionary features.

Q. Do you know of any retailer that has implemented a plan-o-gram that completely excluded all Conwood products from the store?

A. If I recall correctly and I'm having to reach here because there's so many different retailers, but I believe Eckerd drugs has and does carry only UST product. As I sit here today whether or not my recollection is as based on some derived plan-o-gram or some other arrangement reflective of the number of products being reduced, I think that's a representation of a circumstance that's resulted in a plan-o-gram that has excluded other competitive product.

Q. Now would it surprise you if I told you that Eckerd Drugs actually carries only Conwood products?

A. It would be informative and it would be in contrast to what my understanding of the record was. It would be useful information, sure.

Q. Now have you ever seen a plan-o-gram that did in fact reduce the total number of products carried in the store?

Page 159

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. The question is ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: I do recall documents, internal memoranda discussing on the part of UST representatives their ability to obtain plan-o-grams that did in fact reduce the number of products in the store, product facings. As I recall I do or did or have seen plan-o-grams that resulted in the reduction of a number of facings for all products and reduction in the number of facings for Conwood's products. There's a variety of evidence that has led me to believe that there are plan-o-grams, many instances that have reduced -- I'll say this, I haven't seen one that asked for a number of increases in the number of facings.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Have you seen evidence of plan-o-grams that reduce the number of United States Tobacco facings?

A. Yes. I have, yes, I have.

Q. Is that exclusionary to United States Tobacco?

A. Again I think the -- to determine whether or not it's exclusionary, here's where we keep getting confused, we need to determine what the result is in the competitive marketplace. What we're focusing on now is the mechanism. The determination of exclusionary really refers to what's happening in terms of competition, so we focus on a particular plan-o-gram is really half the story.

Q. Well, if a plan-o-gram reduces the number of United States Tobacco products in the rack and a consumer can't find, I don't know, Skoal Key, is that exclusionary?

A. Again if we use the term exclusionary to mean what is the competitive result and whether or not competition has been dampened or constrained or limited, it's difficult to tell without characterizing the entirety of the circumstance.

Q. Are all plan-o-grams that reduce the total number of products that are available on the shelf exclusionary?

A. Again to make a general statement that all plan-o-grams that reduce the number of facings in the entire universe of plan-o-grams, I imagine not. I imagine there are some instances where they're not.

Q. Are all plan-o-grams that are recommended by U.S. Tobacco exclusionary?

A. Again, without looking at the particular plan-o-gram that you're prescribing and the circumstances, I can envision a plan-o-gram on the part of UST that expands the number of brands and adds competitive product, not necessarily being anticompetitive or exclusionary.

Q. Well, are all plan-o-grams recommended by U.S. Tobacco that reduce the total number of facings and reduce competitive products exclusionary?

A. I think given UST's market dominance we can make that assumption here, and considering that a plan-o-gram that resulted in the number of facings of a competitor's products were reduced and UST's products were preserved in terms of prior to that plan-o-gram, if that plan-o-gram resulted in preservation of the status quo of UST's dominant position without some acceptable business justification, might find that to be an exclusionary arrangement.

Q. With all those factors you still might find that to be exclusionary?

A. Again we'd need to know what were the particular effects for competition. That certainly is a mechanism by which UST could accomplish an exclusionary outcome. Instances where that has occurred where competitors' products have been reduced does result in exclusion and can have exclusionary outcomes.

Q. When you refer to business justifications, can you describe to me what you mean or give me some examples of business justification?
A. UST often will offer its programs as a basis for a retailer to freshen up their rack, present a more uniform appearance and a variety of proposed advantages to the retailer that are presented in a way that are suggested to enhance the competitive implications for consumers.
Q. And based on those business justifications the retailer makes the decision to implement the plan-o-gram, that would indicate to you that it would not be exclusionary?
A. I mean after all what the retailer does certainly is their decision. My interest would be in focusing on what the competitive implications are to the consumer. Whether or not that's retailer's acquiescence to that arrangement was based on the fact that they were provided information that they accepted about what the future would hold or simply felt as though they were compelled to accept the plan-o-gram that restricted the number of brands, competitor brands because of UST's dominance, there would be a variety of reasons I can think of as to why a retailer would accept something so -- not necessarily that we understand certainly one factor, it's one particular piece of information that more important is the competitive implications.

Q. Want to talk a little bit about those 22,000 locations just with respect to exclusive vending. You refer to exclusive agreements, just so we're clear are you referring to agreements between U.S. Tobacco and the retailer?
A. Yes, with retailers.
Q. Now assuming that United States Tobacco has an agreement with a retailer for exclusive vending, do you know of instances where Conwood racks were removed pursuant to those agreements?
A. I know of instances where Conwood racks were removed, yes. The particulars of whether or not they were pursuant to a specific agreement it's hard for me to recall, there's so many different agreements that I've considered. If one does call for an exclusive rack agreement or exclusive vendor agreement, I have understood that Conwood racks have been removed.
Q. And have you done any work to quantify the number of Conwood racks that had been removed as a result of these exclusive vending agreements between

Page [illegible]

U.S. Tobacco and retailers?
A. Well, the evidence is quite pervasive, suggest a widespread removal of those racks. The quantification is very difficult given the nature of evidence, for example, I recall one particular ex-UST rep Art Hale describing.
Q. I'm sorry I didn't catch the name?
A. Art Hale. I'm sorry it's Al Hart. What am I thinking. It's Al Hart, describing a circumstance where he was part of a crew drive to remove upwards towards 500 racks in his area, interesting enough this was corroborated by a Conwood rep who was working in the vicinity who indicated he had spent upwards toward 50 percent of his time replacing those racks. So the evidence does suggest some numbers but oftentimes that type of quantification isn't offered in the record. So to extrapolate those numbers to come up with a quantity is quite difficult given the evidence at hand.
Q. What was the name of the Conwood rep that you just referred to?
A. You know I think I actually made reference to this individual inside my report, might be useful for me to look to refresh my memory there, but as I sit here I don't recall exactly the name of that individual.

Q. I'll save you some time. You do not refer to the Conwood rep by name in your report. You did refer to Alan Hart by name. That's okay. Now did you review the testimony of Alan Hart in his deposition?
A. I did review I recall I reviewed his declaration and I believe he also was deposed. I believe he was.
Q. And as you sit here today do you know what his testimony was regarding whether those rack removals you referred to on the crew yard were with store authorization or not?
A. As I recall he spoke of not only engaging in unauthorized rack removal being encouraged to engage if that rack removal on the part of his supervisors, those supervisors being with him and participating in that rack removal, his being instructed to remove racks while operating as a regional sales manager, his feeling and sentiment that removal of racks was common, frequent, and something that was made part of his role as a UST representative. I remember Al Hart because of his -- no longer with UST but I think as a result of injury and I think what struck me being at the University of

SALES INCENTIVE PROGRAM

CONWOOD FIELD SALES FORCE

FISCAL YEAR FEBRUARY 1, 1996, THROUGH JANUARY 31, 1997

OBJECTIVES

This Sales Incentive Plan ("The Plan") has been designed to achieve three specific goals; to generate more sales and profits for the company, to serve as an incentive for our field salespeople, and to give our management personnel another tool to derive the best possible performance from their salespeople.

The Plan will allow sales representatives, district sales supervisors, or district sales managers, through his or her performance in all areas of work, to impact the amount of incentive monies they will make. They are assured of always making incentive monies if the company makes profits, but they can certainly determine how much by their personal performance.
Top performance by all sales personnel throughout the year, as well as balanced selling is encouraged and rewarded on an individual basis by the Plan.

This performance is determined by annual appraisals of each sales representative, district sales manager, and district sales supervisor. The district sales managers will appraise each sales representative for whom they are responsible. The district sales manager and regional sales manager will perform jointly the appraisals of the district sales supervisors for whom they are responsible. The regional sales manager will appraise the district sales managers for whom they are responsible.

ELIGIBILITY

All district sales managers, district sales supervisors, and sales representatives will be participants in the Plan. To be eligible each participant must be on active duty the last day of the fiscal year, or have taken early retirement, disability retirement, or normal retirement during the year. Should a normal retirement occur effective December 31st of the Fiscal year, the participant will receive credit for the full year.

DEFENDANT'S EXHIBIT 680

12274229

Those employed less than 31 days prior to the end of the fiscal year will not be eligible. Proportionate payments computed to the nearest day service will be paid to retirees and participants employed over 31 days but less than one year. The Plan Year will start Febraury 1, 1996, and end January 31, 1997.

APPRAISALS

1. Sales representatives will be appraised by their district sales manager prior to the end of each fiscal year. The attached Sales Representative Appraisal Form will be used by the district sales manager for the purpose of this appraisal.

2. The sales representative will be appraised on each area of performance listed in the Sales Representative Appraisal Form. Each district sales manager must make a maximum effort to be accurate, fair, and impartial in the appraisal of his or her sales representatives.

3. Each appraisal will be discussed with the sales representative privately, prior to being sent to the regional sales manager.

4. It is mandatory that each sales representative be appraised, and the appraisal forms mailed to the regional sales manager prior to the last working day of JANUARY.

5. District sales managers will be appraised by their regional sales manager prior to the end of the fiscal year. The attached District Sales Manager Appraisal Form will be used by the regional sales manager for the purpose of this appraisal.

6. The district sales managers will be appraised on each area of performance listed in the District Sales Manager Appraisal Form.

7. The regional sales managers must make a maximum effort to be accurate, fair, and impartial in appraising their district sales managers. They are also responsible for determining and assuring the accuracy, fairness, and impartiality of the appraisals performed by the district sales managers for whom they are responsible.

8. District sales supervisors will be appraised jointly by their regional sales manager and their district sales manager prior to the end of the fiscal year. The attached District Sales Supervisor Appraisal Form will be used for the purpose of this appraisal.

9. A district sales supervisor who has the total responsibility of a district should be appraised using the District Manager Appraisal Form.

16diii004817

10. Each appraisal will be discussed with the district sales manager and district sales supervisor, and signed by them prior to being sent to the national sales manager.

11. The regional sales managers must complete all appraisals of the district sales managers and the joint appraisal of the district sales supervisors for whom they are responsible.

12. All District Sales Manager Appraisal Forms, District Sales Supervisor Appraisal Forms, and Sales Representative Appraisal Forms must be in the mail no later than the 10th day of FEBRUARY.

13. Each time a district sales manager works with a sales representative, or each time a regional sales manager works with a district sales manager or sales supervisor, a trip appraisal will be completed. The appropriate Trip Appraisal Form will be used for this purpose. Weaknesses will be identified and training methods suggested on the trip appraisal form. This trip appraisal will be discussed with the person who is being appraised prior to leaving the assignment or district, giving him or her a copy of the trip appraisal. The district sales manager will send copies of all appraisals which he performs to his regional manager.

The annual appraisals mentioned above should be based on the good, fair and impartial judgment of the appraisers, and the accumulated trip appraisals. It is mandatory that the trip appraisals be completed each time the sales person or district sales manager has been worked with. The appraisal form should be discussed, in person, with each one who is being appraised prior to leaving the assignment or district.

14. All personnel involved in performing appraisals must carry out their duties with integrity and in such a manner that the incentive plan serves as motivation to our salespeople.

STANDARD OF PERFORMANCE

15. When the appraisal forms are received in the Memphis office, the scores will be entered into the computerized incentive program, computed and recorded into the data file under each district sales manager's, district sales supervisor's, and sales representative's record.

16. The score for each sales representative will be divided by the combined scores of all salespeople in the district, to determine the percentage of the total score contributed by each sales person to the entire district.

16diii004818

17. The score for each district sales manager and district sales supervisor will be divided by the combined scores of all district sales managers and district sales supervisors in the region, to determine the percentage of the total score contributed by each person to the entire region.

AMOUNT OF INCENTIVE MONIES

18. When the total incentive monies have been established, as described in the FUNDING section, it will be divided equally to all employees participating in the plan according to the following share schedule:

District Sales Managers	2 shares each
District sales Supervisors	1 1/2 shares each
Sales Representatives	1 share each

The share or shares for each participant will be placed into their district or region, according to their title.

19. The employees who will receive proportionate payments will have their shares reduced according to their time of service during the year. The shares of anyone having less than 31 days service at the end of the bonus period will be removed. Those participants having greater than 31 days service, but less than 365 days service, will receive 1/365 of their allotted share or shares for each days service. Those participants which have greater than 364 days service will receive their full amount of shares.

20. The following procedures will be used to determine the amount of bonus monies to be received by salespeople who have been promoted, transferred or otherwise moved between districts. The transferred or promoted people will be appraised by the district sales manager or regional sales manager with whom they spent the longer amount of time during the fiscal year. They will be included in the district or region in which they were evaluated. One half of the share which their title receives will be added to the District or Region where they were evaluated. The single evaluation will then be compared with the others in that district or region, giving them half of their bonus monies from each place. In the case of transferred people being in their past and present district the exact same amount of time during the fiscal year, they will be evaluated and compared in the district in which they finish the fiscal year.

21. Once the proper amount of shares have been time adjusted using the procedures outlined in paragraphs 19 and 20, each individual's share will be multiplied by his or her score percentage as outlined in paragraphs 16 and 17. This will determine the share percentage of the district monies the individual sales person should receive, and the share percentage of the region monies the individual district sales manager or district sales supervisor should receive.

22. At this time the total monies available to the plan as described in paragraph 27 should be divided by the combined share percentages of all participating employees. This will determine the value of one share.

23. To determine the bonus monies for each individual sales person the following steps are taken: All share percentages in the district are combined and multiplied by the share dollar value. This places the correct amount of dollars into the district. Those same dollars are now divided by the total share percentages of the district to determine the value of one share percentage. The value of one share percentage is then multiplied by the share percentage contributed by each sales person to determine the bonus dollars that individual is to receive, rounded to the nearest cent.

24. To determine the bonus monies for each individual district sales manager and district sales supervisor the following steps are taken: All management share percentages in the region are combined and multiplied by the share dollar value. This places the correct amount of dollars into the region. Those same dollars are now divided by the total share percentages of the region to determine the value of one share percentage. The value of one share percentage is then multiplied by the share percentage contributed by each district sales manager and district sales supervisor to determine the bonus dollars that individual is to receive, rounded to the nearest cent.

FUNDING

25. At the completion of the fiscal year, the COMPANY'S INDEPENDENT AUDITORS will determine the amount of dollars of profit which was contributed by the following product lines: DRY SNUFF, PLUG, TWIST, LOOSE LEAF, AND FINE CUT. These profits will be combined, and .89 percent of them will be allocated to fund this sales incentive program.

16diii004820

PAYMENT

26. One payment will be made after the end of the fiscal year, when the Dollars Per Pound Contribution numbers are made available. The payment should be made approximately April 1, 1997.

AMENDMENT AND TERMINATION

27. The Company reserves the full right, in its sole discretion at any time and from time to time, to amend, revise, or alter the plan in any manner, or to terminate it at any time.

Subject:	Modular 1998 Update

Instead of faxing to you the paper changes that have been made,(there are no hard copy proofs available) until late next week, I will spell it out to you as simply as possible. The only changes made on moist at this time are as follows.

All Regions:
We have deleted the Skoal Flavor Packs from the single can spacing, and in it's place have added 1 single can space each Local Sales Discretion for UST and Conwood. Also the Bowie Natural and Bowie Wintergreen have been deleted and 1 single can space for Local Sales Discretion for Swisher and Conwood have been added.
Region 1: 4Ft High and Low, 8Ft low all changes are mentioned above.
Region 1: 8Ft High
We have moved the roll of Skoal Bandit Wintergreen into the place of the Skoal FC Straight , deleted the Skoal FC Straight and replaced it with Kodiak Straight..... The Kodiak Straight was a better mover in this region.
Region 1: 12Ft:
Same changes on the Skoal Flavor Packs, and the Bowie Moist and Wntrg.
Deleted can and roll on Skoal Straight for Kodiak Straight.
Region 1: 20Ft:
Same as above >>>>>Changes are made on the 8ft High, 12Ft, and 20Ft on the Skoal Straight for the Kodiak Straight.....

Region 2: 4Ft Low and 4Ft High, Deleted Flvr Pks, added 1 single can space for Local Sales Discretion ,1 can space for UST and Conwood.
Region 2: 8Ft High and Low,same as above.....
Region 2: 12 and 20Ft. Delete Flvr Pks, add (LSD) 1 single can facing each UST and Conwood. Deleted Bowie Natural and Bowie Wntrg.single can facing add 1 single can space (LSD), Swisher and Conwood. Delete 1 Roll facing Skoal Flvr Pks Mint, add 1 roll facing Conwood (LSD), delete Skoal LC Spearmint add 1 UST (local sales discretion) Roll.
Region 3: Moist changes are only on the flavor pk deletion adding (LSD) and the Bowie Moist deletion adding (LSD). Same Local Sales Discretion will be used throughout the plan-o-gram.
Region 4: 4Ft low ,4Ft High ,Flvr Pk Changes to Local Sales Discretion. Also deleted Single can facing of Skoal Key and added 1 can facing for Conwood (LSD). 8ft High and 8ft Low..... Same changes.....12Ft. Deleted the Flvr Pks Cinnamon single facing and added 1 single can facing UST (LSD). Also keep in mind the Local sales discretion added in place of the wie Moist items. These will be done on all of the flavor pks and all of the Bowie moist items on all sets.
All remaining regions 5,6,7 and 8 will only have the local sales discretion changes. Another change reflected on the moist category. All Oregon Mint Product has been deleted and Smokey Mountain Chew has been expanded... This of course will be the Non-Nicotine changes.

Dear Bobby:

Please find enclosed, the new 1998 Customer Alliance Program pamphlet, including contract and programming details.

The program itself is very simple and easy to understand. The benefits are all customer focused:

A. Optimize inventory through focused store level activity
B. Build store specific merchandise and promotional strategies
C. Provide incentive payments to reward participation and build profits
D. Build your smokeless tobacco volume

Here's how:

Earn up to .08 cents a roll for meeting established marketing, product handling and display performance goals.

We analyze the category and make business building recommendations.

By signing the enclosed contract (MSA), Walmart agrees to allow McLanes (wholesaler) to provide USTSM with Walmarts store by store data on all moist smokeless tobacco snuff sold in round cans purchased by Walmart.

McLanes has provided US Tobacco with a verbal commitment of the program, as we anticipate receiving their signed contract before the first of the year.

Other elements of the program are more clearly defined inside the booklet enclosed. A potential dollar value to Walmart would be over $350,000. . based upon a review of '97 numbers on 1st and 2nd quarter statistics.

Bobby, please feel free to call me should you have any further questions, concerns, or anything with regards to the above program. We are excited to be offering the first of its kind program in the smokeless business, and hope that you can see the real benefits it has to offer.

I would like to wish you and your family a special Holiday Season.

Thankas for all your continued support.

Dear Mr. Carlson,

Per your phone discussion with Tim Entwistle on Friday, January 8, 1999 I am writing to provide for your review and approval, the attached monthly calendar of proposed U. S. Tobacco promotional and awareness Point of Sale.

The promotional and awareness Point of Sale will be custom printed, replacing the custom POS strips currently being used. These are to be placed on the smokeless cabinet areas we have been discussing and in place of the standard header card on the #3201 white custom four-foot vendor set (low profile vendor).

Please note that with the attached formulation we have remained consistent regarding our current space share in all smokeless modulars, which is 67 %. This is well below our overall market share. We hope that this fair and equitable approach meets with your approval.

Thank you for your consideration, should you have any questions please give me a call. In the meantime I am looking forward to discussing this with you or Rob Frederking . I will give you or Rob a call to follow up on Wednesday, January 13.

RE: Texas T-set stores

Attached are copies of graphs showing POS sales data retrieved from Retail Link for the two T-set stores in Texas. Store #381 has been reset for a full 8 weeks but store #1129 in Austin was not set until 5/6/98 and will not have a full 8-week post-reset comparison until wk 9823.

In the comparison both stores have shown increases in their quantities after the reset. Store #381 in Copperas Cove has increased 10.3% and store #1129 in Austin has increased 4.8% in the 5 weeks time. The graphs show the weekly totals for the stores and the dates that they were reset marked with an arrow.

We will continue to monitor the sales for these stores and update you with the results.

II. DIRECT ACCOUNTS

We got the news this week that we have four direct accounts in KS. that have merged with Harrison Co. out of Bossier City, LA. Three Hagmans and FS Edwards which is also considered a Hagmans account will completely shut down. Two houses will close in mid Sept. and two at the end of Sept. I have sent a four-week order broken down by house, week and brand to department manager Mark Lawson as well as other UST personnel. These four houses have a combined weekly average of approximately 32,000 cans per week. Division manager Nancy Kenner explained that Harrison Co. has a large minimum order per account and that the majority of the Hagmans accounts will not meet their minimum order. Unless Harrison Co. lowers their minimum we will more than likely keep a good part of this business that will simply shift to other area jobbers. DM's have been directed to follow the schedule that was given to us by Riccio so that this is a smooth transition and returns are processed beforehand. Due to the fact that one house is a CSJ we are in the process of looking at options for the SR. Lamone Candy and Tobacco out of Salina, KS. currently delivers product to two cigarette reps. in Hays, KS. Therefore, we will set up the same process with the SR. We are also getting a storage facility set up to receive shipments of pos. and vendors for this SR. Mark Lawson stated that Harrison Co. does carry both RS and Rooster which will be important for the GOO accounts. Mark is in the process of getting the item numbers to me.

We have recently added the following direct accounts for RS distribution:
*Center Dist. Topeka, KS.
*AB Coker Inc. Lawrence, KS.
*Barber & Sons KC, MO.

Merchants Who. returns for the four week period were as follows: 10,632 total cans of which 3,708 or 35% were from promotional units. These units did not die on the floor, they were shipped back from retail. Merchants is not a CSJ. Rick Davis is in the process of trying to find out what retail accounts are responsible for sending back promo. units.

McLanes Midwest returns were down considerably for the last four week period. We were averaging 8,700 cans per month. For the month of August returns were 4,700 cans of which 14% were from promotional units. YTD promo. units account for 12% of McLanes Midwest returns. This is not a CSJ and units did not die on the floor, they were shipped back from retail.

III. CHAIN ACTIVITY

Wal-Mart: SR's report that there has been no OOS on RS. During the conversion from a ten can to a five can roll we were experiencing many OOS situations. However, those have been corrected for sometime now.

IV. MARKETING

Rooster Wintergreen continues to move well throughout GOO. Mint continues to be slow at best. There are only a few isolated instances where Mint is moving fairly well. At this point we still don't have a handle on where the Rooster business is coming from. Due to the lower price point in most accounts we would like to think that some is coming from competitive PV and some from competitive premium. However, we all know that a good part of it is also coming from trial usage from our consumers as well.

Lou Brockman of Brockman Who. reports that Rooster is moving much better than he expected. He has had to bump up his order on straight stock. We have also ordered him some additional #470 units. The movement is primarily on Rooster Wintergreen with Mint being much slower.

V. COMPETITIVE

SR Barry Wentz reports that Conwood reps. have started buying down Kodiak Wint. an additional .40 cents per can on top of the original .40 cents off. They are only doing this in selected accounts and their focus is to combat Rooster.

Conwood reps. continue to blitz the placement of Kodiak Ice pos. throughout GOO. They continue to place this pos. in accounts whether they carry Ice or not. They also continue to use unethical practices in getting Ice distribution at retail. For the most part they are trying to discontinue one or two of our brands so that there is room for Ice placement. We have been successful in getting most of these corrected. Their reps. have also been asked not to return to some accounts due to this practice.

TW FCST continues to move well in pockets throughout GOO. They still do not have high distribution on this brand. They have lost several reps. over the past few months and have a manpower shortage at this time.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS/SUGGESTIONS/COMMENTS

Rooster: We are in need of Rooster special event materials, event wear, giveaway items, sample tent covers, etc. We have college students returning at this time but are told that these materials are either not available or are in very limited quantities. In the interim we have instructed college PTST's to bag sample bars, frat. parties, campus events, campus retail, etc.

II. DIRECT ACCOUNTS

Phil Rinkoski and I called on QT to check #470 shipments. Units were shipping out to retail and should be completed by the end of this week. Due to the recent problem with the vendor shipments going into the wrong areas we have all reset info. going out to all DM's, also faxed a copy to Tom Ventimiglia for his info.

So far so good on our shipper change from Holmes Freight Lines to Clark Bros. Transfer for Iowa & Nebraska. We have had no complaints from jobbers. Wayne Greenwood also stated that they have received no negative comments. So far this has been a very smooth transition.

III. CHAIN ACTIVITY

Due to the fact that both QT and Cum & Go accounts in Kansas (GJO) were shipped Rooster #470 units, we are going to have to have SR's in Kansas carrying Rooster car stock. I would say that this opens up Rooster to all of GJO. I'm sure that we are going to have additional accounts contacting us for distribution. I think that we all knew that it would work its way into GJO, just not this soon.

Wal-Mart LCW & FCW buydown program is going good. SR's report that product is scanning properly. Accounts have experienced sales increases from a few rolls of each brand per week to double the normal sales. SR's also point out that Wal-Mart personnel are very pleased with the program. At this point the only problems have been very minor and easily corrected. Hope to see programs such as this in the future with Wal-Mart. At this point we have not received any negative reaction to the Wal-Mart buydowns from our discount tobacco accounts. When we ran the buydown earlier in the year we received negative responses from both retailers as well as jobbers.

IV. MARKETING

Rooster movement is about the same throughout the department. Wintergreen sales are good throughout while Mint sales are slow at best. For those accounts that have had the displays since the first shipment, Wintergreen is sold out and Mint is still full or partially full. SR's are conducting a good deal of adult sampling on this brand which should begin to show some positive signs in the future.

Due to the large number of buydown programs that we are implementing at this time it's very important that we have an ample supply of pricing ovals on hand for SR use. These have become a very necessary part of the program.

V. COMPETITIVE

We continue to get reports that Conwood reps. are defacing our vendors, getting retailers to discontinue our brands so that they can gain distribution on Ice, placing their pos. on top of ours and tearing down our pos. DM's as well as SR's have been instructed to document all occurrences on competitive incident reports as well as send examples to region office.

It looks as though Conwood has stepped up their efforts on Ice. Product continues to show very poor movement throughout GOO. They are giving retailers five to ten cans of free Ice to gain distribution at retail. Ice pos. is very prevalent throughout GOO.

Swedish Match reps. are adult sampling TW on a weekly basis at the Red X account in KC. This is a high volume discount tobacco shop. TW sales continue to do very well in many areas of GOO.

Swisher Helme: Single can format is now showing up in the Kansas market. This was about the last market in GOO to go to the single can format. However, we are still seeing both BIG1 as well as single can format throughout department.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS/SUGGESTIONS/COMMENTS

SR Todd Griffin purchased one case of Rooster Wintergreen regular stock from Guy Chicon in Marion, IL. this week that had sample cans inside of case instead of regular product. We have the situation handled with both Todd and the jobber. I instructed Todd to hand onto the original box in case someone might want to take a look at it. Product was dated 28/8.

II. DIRECT ACCOUNTS

Dave Carr and I met new general warehouse manager of Amcon, St. Louis, Mike Lamone. Seems like he will be a good person to deal with in the future.

Randy Kreisel has been successful in getting RS distribution in the AWG warehouses in KC and OKC. RS is already in the Springfield house. This could help solve the problem of the KC reps. not having access to RS for car stock.

III. CHAIN ACTIVITY

Phil Rinkoski and I met with Linda Watts of Amcon concerning the Schnucks resets. Phil was successful in getting Rooster distribution in all stores. We will have to give up LCC in order to do so.

All GOO personnel have been successful in using movement reports to get the slower moving brands discontinued from some chain accounts. This has already been a great help in the area of returned goods. In certain areas brands such as LCC & SK. FCST simply don't need a high distribution. This has also helped in freeing up slots for Rooster.

IV. MARKETING

Rooster pos. has arrived and looks to be great pos. Reps. will began placing at retail soon. This should remain our primary piece for the remainder of 98.

DEFENDANT'S EXHIBIT 281

USTC-CWD 277579
HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL

We are doing our best to move around some #477 promotions at this time. No matter how much we try to preplan and make sure that made dated promotions get out to retail the first week we always seems to run into various problems. In some cases we have had to cancel the chain order and get the promos. on the reps. vans so that we can get them into the higher volume accounts before dating becomes a big issue. We should think long and hard before putting another made dated product into a prepacked promotion.

V. COMPETITIVE

Swisher Helme moist brands have now shown up in the KC market in the single can format. Single can format showed up in Nebraska a couple of weeks ago. In most cases they have both single can and two packs available. They are utilizing free goods to try to get the single can price down to that of the PV brands. In the KC market it looks as if they are only targeting the very high volume accounts at this time.

There is no doubt that Conwood has taken off the gloves and are being very aggressive at the retail level. In some cases they have become down right dirty. SR Kenny Wall was approached by a Conwood division manager at a retail call this past week at a Breaktime chain store. The store manager of Breaktime wrote up a signed statement stating how rude and unprofessional the Conwood manager acted in her store and that she never wanted him back in her account. Conwood reps. are also discontinuing our brands in selected accounts and replacing them with their brands. These reports are being documented and sent to the RS office.

Presta Oil in Garden City, KS. (21 stores) received a one year payment of $38.00 per store from Conwood for a four facing vendor. Before this payment we had the only authorized vendor in the accounts.

Conwood has also placed their free standing floor display in the J&J Fastrac C store chain in KS. We had just finished placing our 2908's in all stores. They now have two free standing displays in all stores.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS/SUGGESTIONS/COMMENTS

We have been able to utilize Rooster samples at several recent events. Rooster has been very well received by the Kodiak consumers. We have had several adult consumers state that they would seriously consider making the switch, especially with a price advantage. Retailers are also starting to get requests for Rooster. We have received several reports that retailers are calling their jobbers and asking how they can get the product. We are going to stir up the marketplace with this one.

We have already received comments from a few jobbers that the new returned goods shipment schedule would not work in their houses. During inventory time in several of these houses they want the returned goods shipped directly prior to their inventory. This will not always fit our schedule. I have instructed the DM's to let us know well in advance when these situations arise.

Terry:

Most of the problems that we have had with our competitors paying for space or their racks only, has been in the independent type stores. This has mainly been down in the Waco, TX. area. Only a few other individual stores in other territories has been noticed.

Listed below are some of the chains of 10 stores or more that UST paid to get their racks in or space bought.

Minyards - Dallas TX. 85 stores. Minyards cut their sections down when the new law went into effect. When resetting the stores, UST had went to their office and paid Minyards for 50% of the space. In most cases, the stores were three foot racks. This means everyone else lost space. Before the resets, we had 2 facings on Kodiak, 1KST, 1H., 1KC, 1CN, 1CW. We now have 1K, 1H, 1KST, 1CN, 1CW. We lost 1 facing on Kodiak and Kodiak Choice deleted. Some stores Kodiak Straight or Hawken was deleted based on sales and space.

Krogers - Dallas TX. - Kroger no longer has their office here in Dallas. They moved all operations to Houston. When they were here, UST went in during the reset period for the new regulations, and got their racks only approved. They have all of their brands authorize including the new Red Seal. The only items authorize for Conwood were 1Facing on Kodiak and 1facing on Cougar Natural. The moist rack size was different in each store before the resets based on the size of section. We had at least 2 facings on Kodiak in each store, 1KST, 1KC, 1H, 1CN, 1CW. We lost 4 brands plus 5 or more facings including our racks.

The only other chain we lost products and racks were in the E-Z Mart chain. They have a total of 414 stores. They have roughly 150 here in Texas. UST has their racks only approved for the Texas stores. The only items kept in the sets where, Kodiak, K ST. and Hawken. We lost Kodiak Choice and a extra slot on Kodiak. Some stores, K. ST. and Hawken was taken out.

Current Situation: 5 facings in UST rack, premium's only

We were notified in December that we had lost racks in this chain. The buyer was concerned about upcoming FDA legislation and reset all stores to non self-serve. He made decisions about merchandising and product mix, then asked manufacturers to help pay for the new set fixtures. The idea of payment was brought up after the new set was decided upon. It was rumored that UST had offered to pay $400 per store to help offset reset costs. Word on the street is that they may have paid $200 per store, which is what Dairy Mart requested. I'm sure that the $400 original offer was tied in to an exclusive merchandising agreement. The buyer for Dairy Mart, Rich Frank, would not give us any specific details about UST's role. Another concern of his was not having too many vendors involved in the reset, which may have been a UST selling point.

racks in their stor s up until two years ago, when the Express locations only were remodeled. This reset did not effect the other 300 stores, where w still have rack and premium distribution. When the Express Marts w-re remodeled, snuff vendors were removed in favor of a store supplied shelf with wire dividers. At this time, we lost all brands except one facing of Kodiak on the new shelf. With the prodding of myself nd UST, the buyer realized that this new system wasted space. Thus six months after the reset, the stores were reset again. The only reason the buyer went with a one rack system was ease of set implementation (see above-could be a trend). However, in order to accomodate our wishes, Conwood P.O.S. is allowed above our facings in the UST rack, and this has worked surprisingly well. Moreover, the new set provided optional facings, with Long Cut Cougar's being a store manager option. Thus, we went from one facing of Kodiak to 2 Kodiak, 1 each of other premiums, optional Cougar, and P.O.S. I am sure that this is not what UST intended, but this was one situation where a strong chain buyer got exactly what she wanted, and we didn't come out of it too badly.

United Dairy Farmers (200 stores)

Racks Lost: 5 Facings Lost: 1
Distribution Lost: Choice P.O.S Lost: All
Current Situation: 1-4 facings in UST rack, no P.O.S.

UDF just informed us of their new set last month. Choice and Hawken were eliminated originally, but we managed to get Hawken back in. The reset was done to accomodate a cigarette reset, which ate up some space. Thus, the buyer had to eliminate some facings and brands. Since the UST racks already in the store were about the right size, he threw our snuff in the UST rack. We are still negotiating with the buyer about getting our racks back in, and I am hopefull. UST pitched him on the fact that P.O.S. was no big deal. Since speaking with me, he is starting to realize that burying his number one brand (Kodiak has 38% market share in this chain) was not the best idea. Now with Ice in the mix, he is going to have to make a decision.

Englefield Oil (85 stores)

We have never had official authorization for racks in this chain, although we have worked them in. However, we were just informed that they were going to all UST fixtures, and Kodiak is the only Conwood brand on the set. Some of these stores carried Hawken , Straight, and Choice, but distribution was sporadic. UST has been in their corner forever, working the frequent buyer program and other promotions. The buyer told us that the main decision for going to a specific set is that UST is providing floor racks to all stores. In return, Englefield granted UST exclusive merchandising. The buyer wanted the floor racks because they are on wheels, and if a settlement takes place he can just wheel the whole section behind the counter.

Big Bear (60 grocery stores)

This is one chain where we have never had racks. Snuff sales are extremely poor, and the buyer is anti-tobacco. They just carry a few brands as a convenience. We are trying to get some of our leaf items off the set because they sell so poorly, and they return most of it to the distributor. Lack of racks in this chain has no effect.

Handy Dandy (28 stores)

This is another chain where we have never had racks for any period of time. About two years ago, we got racks back in for a brief time, but UST had a fit and they came back out. We do have some sopradic distribution on our secondary brands, but not much. Our biggest problem here is that UST is extremely aggressive with promotions with this chain, and they threaten to stop if our merchandisers are allowed. UST does the frequent buyer program, pump top advertising, local event partnering, etc. Through it all, Kodiak is still the number one selling brand in the chain, but the buyer just can't afford to break ties with UST.

Thus, these are the major chains where we have either lost racks, or have not had success getting racks authorized in the first place. There seems to be two major tools UST uses to prevent Conwood merchandising; threatening to stop promotions in accounts where they do more promotion than usual, and stressing that resets are easier to implement when you do not have too many vendors involved. Our biggest problem is not having a set quarterly promotion schedule to use as bait. When we threaten to pull Kodiak Displays, buyers act like it is no big deal since it only effects the stores twice a year. Please contact me if you have questions, I hope that this is helpful.

Respectfully, Paul A Pallen

In this, the second annual Convenience Store News Category Captains supplement, industry retailers, suppliers and distributors nominated companies they view as exemplary practitioners of category management. In a questionnaire sent to industry players, retailers nominated supplier and distributor Category Captains, while suppliers and distributors nominated their most proficient retail partners.

Congratulations to all of this year's Category Captains. As a group and individually, these companies have taken a leadership position in the industry with an eye toward excellence. They believe in category management, they practice and implement category-management strategies and they are reaping the rewards in the form of increased sales, profits and turns, reduced out-of-stocks and improved operational efficiency.

This year we especially recognize three suppliers who received Top Honors, based on the overwhelming number of nominations they received from retailers. This year's top honorees are Anheuser-Busch Inc., The Coca-Cola Co. and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The entire staff of Convenience Store News salutes this year's Category Captains for their vision, hard work and leadership, and for sharing their successes and lessons learned with the industry in the pages of this supplement. Not only are these companies the Best of Class, they're a class act.

Top Honorees

In the eyes of retailers who voted for this year's Category Captains, three manufacturers—Anheuser Busch Inc., Coca-Cola Co. and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.—stand head and shoulders above the rest. These Best-of-Class companies received the most nominations from retailer respondents, making them this year's top honorees.

Anheuser-Busch Inc.

As category leader, Anheuser-Busch works to facilitate category management in two ways, according to Joe Patti, senior director, retail planning and category management. The first is to support industry initiatives such as Anheuser-Busch's active sponsorship of the National Association of Convenience Stores' (NACS) category-management work. The company was also a sponsor of the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study. The second element is working closely with retail customers to address their category management needs.

"On both levels, we take our direction from the retailers themselves," said Patti. "Especially when working directly with our retail customers. Our role is to take the best of what we've learned across the country and across channels, drill down to the consumer and industry insights to apply to a particular retailer's needs, and create a plan that helps them achieve their goals. The bottom line is that it's their plan."

Step one in Anheuser-Busch's process is to identify the convenience store retailer's goals and objectives, as well as the issues relevant to their operations. This is determined by dedicated Anheuser-Busch personnel and its wholesaler network. The brewer's extensive resources and tools are then applied to the process. One such tool is Eagle Eye, a micro-marketing system built around the Spectra program. A customized version of the Spaceman program is also used for creating planograms.

Anheuser-Busch, based in St. Louis, brings added value to the process in the form of data. In addition to market-level syndicated data, the company supplies proprietary research on cross-channel shopping behavior. "Anheuser-Busch expends many resources to understand the dynamics of the category, the marketplace and the convenience store shopper. We have developed detailed insights into how shoppers think and behave when shopping in and outside the convenience channel," Patti explained. "This helps us identify things that will drive profitability for the retailer."

Larry Lytle, buyer for Salem, N.C.-based A.T. Williams Oil Co., said he values Anheuser-Busch for its extensive resources. "[The company] has brought in the needed manpower and resources to analyze our total category and assist in implementation," he said. "It's a total effort."

Patti acknowledged that while the increasing availability of convenience store data drives more efficient and effective category management in the channel, Anheuser-Busch approaches the process as sound business practice. "With or without data, at the end of the day, you have to make sound business decisions. We focus our efforts on how

> "Anheuser-Busch doesn't monopolize the case with their products when they develop a set. They compile all the relevant information and develop fair layouts. It's truly a partnership."
>
> —Silvio Federighi
> Convenient Food Mart

16diii004862

to make the best business decisions to reach the defined goals and objectives of the retailer. With that position, the process becomes intuitive and logical, rather than intimidating," he said.

An element of the Anheuser-Busch category management process lauded by retailer is objectivity. "The company is very fair in the layouts it develops," said Silvio Federighi, general manager of Convenient Food Mart of Painesville, Ohio. "Anheuser-Busch doesn't monopolize the case with their products when they develop a set. They compile all the relevant information and develop fair layouts. It's truly a partnership."

"Anheuser-Busch understands that the whole category must grow to sustain growth of their products," said Jeff DeJesse, category manager for ARCO am/pm stores. "They've been very responsive, and provide the necessary resources for all our projects."

"We realize that we're in this for the long run, so we're not looking to make a quick hit at a cost to our retail customers," Patti said. "This approach allows us to be objective and focus on the quality of our products and our information."

The most important step in the category-management process, according to Patti, is to begin. "It's really important for retailers to get started, no matter where they are in terms of their own automation and data-collection capabilities. Talk to your lead suppliers, start the dialogue and start the process. The sales results and profit increases will show your return on the investment."

The Coca-Cola Co.

Dr. Glen Stoops

"Category management is all about opportunity—the ability to locate it, plan for it, execute it and capture it," observed Dr. Glenn Stoops, managing director, market research and category management for The Coca-Cola Co. "The category-management mission of the Coca-Cola system is to help convenience store operators locate opportunities for growing the size and value of the beverage category."

To assist retailers in capitalizing on the opportunities within the non-alcohol beverage segment, Coca-Cola provides an extensive category-management toolbox. However, the company emphasizes the expertise of its category-management personnel as a crucial element of the process. "Tools within themselves are not very powerful. It is the people behind them who release the tools' full potential," said Stoops.

> "The company has a department within its organization set up specifically for category management. They have the resources in place to analyze and recommend specific sets as they relate to our business."
>
> — Stephen Monaco
> Tedeschi Food Shops Inc.

Coca-Cola category managers combine their personal base of knowledge and experience with market research insights to assist retailers in developing appropriate plans. Consumer insights are the key to achieving profitable growth, according to Stoops. To speed the delivery of such insights to retail, Coca-Cola's market research and category-management functions are linked. Coca-Cola's bottling system is also an important component of the process. "Our commitment to retail is clearly seen in the increasing number of Coca-Cola bottlers who are designating more category-management personnel solely to the convenience side of the business," Stoops said.

That commitment is evident to retailers doing business with Coca-Cola. "The company has a department within its organization set up specifically for category management," said Stephen Monaco, buyer at 130-store Tedeschi Food Shops Inc., based in Rockland, Mass. "They have the resources in place to analyze and recommend specific sets as they relate to our business."

Rather than focus solely on software systems and tools, Coca-Cola identifies eight areas of category-management expertise that are applied to the process. They include advanced consumer insights, market analysis, financial analysis, pricing analysis, promotional analysis, efficient assortment, advanced merchandising and efficient replenishment.

In addition to applying the NACS process and utilizing syndicated research, Coca-Cola employs proprietary systems that enable activity-based-costing studies, basket-level analysis of scan data and store services, as well as profitability recaps. The market-basket analysis capability has been implemented over the past year, and reveals beverage purchase dynamics. "The retailer is able to gain insights to important areas such as the interaction between categories, between different gasoline grades and store purchases. We'll also use it as a new approach in determining out-of-stock situations," Stoops explained. "This allows the retailer to look at other categories outside of non-alcohol beverages and apply fact-based decision-making."

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola also assists retailers in maintaining and measuring the effectiveness of category-management programs. A detailed process of conducting assortment review has been developed that is based in obtaining the proper buy-in to ensure the set's longevity and provides the ability to track progress, Stoops said. "Assortment is the backbone of any successful beverage business and must be done to satisfy the needs of the consumer."

Mapco Express Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., has had positive experiences with Coca-Cola's process, according to Larry Pedigo, category manager for the 256-store chain. "Our Coca-Cola representative was willing to not only wear a Coca-Cola hat, but when necessary put on a Mapco hat. The company is very good at doing what is best for the consumer, and has data that can be trusted," he said. "Coca-Cola works to grow the entire category."

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Jim Maguire

Mary McCombs, category manager for the 200-unit Sheetz Inc., based in Altoona, Pa., had this to say about R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.'s category-management support: "R.J. Reynolds's [representatives] keep their finger on the pulse of the [tobacco] industry, as well as the convenience store industry. They consider the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They work with customized programs that fit our needs as well as theirs. Top-down personnel are readily available at all hours. They provide us with the detailed data we request in a timely manner. Also, they are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize space or developing direct mailers for our markets."

That type of involved, unbiased, total-store approach is the backbone of R.J. Reynolds's category-management process for convenience stores. "A category advisor is a manufacturer that understands the values of all brands in the category, as well as how the category affects other product sales, and structures all of their recommendations accordingly," explained Jim Maguire, senior vice president of sales.

The total-store strategy for the tobacco category is important for the success of convenience stores, Maguire said. "Adult smoker foot traffic is critical to the c-store industry's profits. According to the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study, the average adult smoker visits a convenience store 5.6 times per week and spends an average of $5.12 per visit," he noted. "This $28.67 in sales per week, per adult smoker speaks for itself relative to the importance of maximizing store profitability."

R.J. Reynolds, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., brings a range of resources to the tobacco category-management process. "We use real-time data provided by direct accounts on shipments to each retail outlet and, whenever we can, retail scan data to provide our total category recommendation," Maguire said.

Field personnel are equipped with automated tools that enable them to advise retailers in three important areas. The first is determining the brand-style selection required to satisfy a target percentage of adult smokers in a specific geography. The second is identifying the manufacturer programs that should be combined to maximize adult smoker needs relative to promotion levels and maximizing the number of brands that can be promoted. The third area is merchandising the category from the standpoint of "presentation to the consumer," said Maguire. "What is the ideal capacity for maximum turns/minimal out-of-stocks? How can the manufacturer-program requirements be incorporated into the available space?"

> "R.J. Reynolds considers the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize our space or direct mailers for our markets."
>
> —Mary McCombs
> Sheetz Inc.

Determining product selection and developing the appropriate SKU mix for a convenience store outlet requires examination of all brands. "We would point out that several smaller share brands—those that are seldom, if ever, promoted—have the highest level of brand loyalty. Consequently, adult smokers who can no longer find their brand will quickly take their $28.67 per week contribution to another store that carries their brand," Maguire explained. "Reducing inventory costs has to start with getting proper inventory levels on each brand style in line versus simply discontinuing everything that doesn't sell a carton a week."

R.J. Reynolds has also studied the impact of tobacco products on other categories. Maguire outlined that retailers must consider the impact of increased cigarette sales on their five other top sales/margin items. Another question to ask is whether the retailer can afford to trade off margin on cigarettes to drive foot traffic on higher-margin items and drive a higher overall profit for the store.

"We'd like to thank the retailers who have valued our contribution enough to nominate R.J. Reynolds for this recognition," Maguire said. "We will continue to provide all of our expertise to those business partners who are truly committed to growing their total business and to providing R.J. Reynolds a fair chance in their stores to grow our business. It's a win-win situation."

Best-of-Class Suppliers

The following Best-of-Class category-management partners nominated by convenience store retailers share their experience and some of the secrets of their success.

Convenience Marketing Inc.

Convenience Marketing has a department dedicated to category management, according to vice president, sales development, Bill Price, who added that the Austin, Texas-based food broker's entire organization assists in the process. "The organization provides a resource to facilitate linking manufacturers and retailers," said Price.

Utilizing syndicated data and industry resources, Convenience Marketing determines core-item selection that can be customized by market. State-of-the-art planogram systems are then used to develop photo-quality shelf sets for retailer implementation. Business development managers oversee each project and provide support in the form of consumer research and brand information. The field sales organization works with buyers and category managers to finalize the product-selection process and ensure implementation of the planograms. "It's a team effort in partnership with the customer," said Price.

"Convenience Marketing has consistently and promptly offered assistance," said Rebekah Ensley, category management analyst at H.T. Hackney Co., a wholesale distributor based in Knoxville, Tenn. "They provide complete, live-image planograms and their recommendations are valid and supported."

Core-Mark International

Core-Mark International is committed to objective category management, according to Chris Walsh, vice president of merchandising. "We start with fact-based, consumer-driven schematics," he said. But that is only the foundation of the company's category-management process.

"We partner with retailers in maximizing their real estate," said Walsh. "Especially with the recent dynamics of the tobacco industry, we try to help retailers understand measurements of profitability, how certain categories are driven more by impulse and the value of activity-based costing."

> "If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits."
>
> — Chris Walsh
> Core-Mark International

While manufacturers and distributors have made considerable gains in ECR-driven logistical efficiencies in recent years, Walsh stated that the benefits of the processes for retailers are largely untapped. "One consultant estimated it 'costs' a retailer $35 per week to transact business with each supplier. If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits," he explained, adding that savings can be realized on the bottom line or used to increase customer service and store cleanliness.

Core-Mark's primary program for achieving these objectives is SmartStock, which enrolled 3,000 retailers in 1998. The results have been positive. "For example, we worked with Quik Stop Markets [Freemont, Calif.], which has over 100 franchisees making independent buying decisions at every store. We utilized SmartStock and our category-merchandising tools to provide consistency, increase sales across commodities and eliminate 500 transactions per week from the stores," Walsh said.

Van Tarver, president of Quik Stop Markets Inc., acknowledged Core-Mark's contribution. "The company really cooperated with us in our recent remerchandising program. Core-Mark helped to eliminate slow-moving items through category management and improved the out-of-stock situation in our stores," he said. "The result has been a positive move in sales. One store, in fact, experienced sales increases at double the rate of stores that had not yet been remerchandised. Core-Mark has been a flexible and cooperative partner."

Based in South San Francisco, Core-Mark's approach is to go beyond the textbook definition of category management. "Whether it's helping to implement POS, reduce tobacco inventories or stimulate sales through promotion or merchandising, we are committed to partnerships that assist retailers in being more profitable operators," said Walsh.

Douglas Distributing

Ron Feulner

For family-owned Douglas Distributing, based in Salt Lake City, Utah, keeping up with coffee trends and the specific needs of its convenience store customers is the key to successful category management. "Our strength lies in maintaining a complete focus in one convenience store category—coffee," said Ron Feulner, owner. "We can focus directly on this category in this market [Utah and surrounding states]."

Douglas Distributing utilizes a sophisticated computer system to track retail customer activity at the store level, and combines that up-to-the-minute information with its local store knowledge. "We have six people in the field, and hold fast to a hands-on approach to serving our customers and creating programs that serve their needs best," said Feulner, who himself visits stores twice a month. "I want to rub shoulders with the people who work the stores every day. It's a great way to measure customer satisfaction and find out exactly what the consumer wants."

"Douglas accepts responsibility for equipment, service and product," said Bill McGregor, foodservice director of 140-store Maverik Country Stores in Afton, Wyo. "They offer unbiased, professional advice, current category information, price protection and rapid response. Douglas Distributing is my coffee category expert."

Eby-Brown Co. L.P.

"Eby-Brown services retailers of all sizes, from the mega-chain to the individually owned store," observed Tom Oktavec, vice president, marketing of Kocolene Marketing Corp., operator of 43 Fast Max stores, based in Seymour, Ind. "Each of their customers is treated with care and respect. Eby-Brown is a true partner to our industry."

That ability to service both large and small retailers stems from Eby-Brown's approach to customer service, and also its technical capabilities. Convenience store operators that are scanning benefit from Eby-Brown's item-information database and assistance in POS setup, and ongoing support in the format of the POS software selected by the retailer, according to Ron Coppel, vice president, business development. For retailers who are not scanning or do not have data-mining capabilities, Eby-Brown has developed IRIS (Intelligent Reporting Information System), which provides subscribers with secured access to their velocity information 24 hours a day, seven days a week via the Internet.

Naperville, Ill.-based Eby-Brown also has developed category-management practices to maximize consumer value and category asset performance, said Coppel. "We assist retailers by integrating our category expertise into our customers' strategic business process, providing the exchange of information and the willingness to share pertinent data, and jointly identifying with retailers and manufacturers opportunities to grow category sales and profits," he said. Eby-Brown then utilizes Spaceman tools to develop planograms.

Frito-Lay Inc.

"Frito-Lay is progressive and cooperative on category management," observed Arnold Kimmel, CEO of Quickie Convenience Stores of Ottawa, Canada. "They have the tools and execute their commitments and obligations well. Frito-Lay has a complete product line, but respects their competitors."

That depth of commitment, resources and objectivity stems from Frito-Lay's approach to category-management for convenience stores. "Category management is a journey, an evolving and ongoing process," said Dave Boissevain, director of category management for the Dallas-based company. "We take a fact-based, results-oriented approach. We work with retailers to build an integrated category-management plan that maximizes the key drivers and fits into the retailer's overall strategy. Partnership with the retailer is critical in developing a category plan that can be implemented."

Frito-Lay's category-management process is grounded in the consumer, and Boissevain defined several channel-specific drivers: Right Assortment, variety optimization; Right Presence, landmark merchandising; Rich Promotion, bundled tie-ins; and Right Service, direct-store-delivery (DSD) system. A proprietary software program, Right Set, has been developed to maximize the assortment and landmark merchandising drivers.

"Right Set is a consumer-centered, fact-based approach that maximizes salty-snack sales and profits for convenience stores," said Linda Seatvet, convenience store channel category manager. "The flexibility and targeted nature of the Right Set program is key because it reflects retailing realities. The population diversity across a chain's marketing area can be enormous, running the gamut from highly affluent suburbs to blue-collar neighborhoods, and c-store chains may have a wide variety of store formats. Right Set assortment and merchandising solutions can be custom targeted on a store-by-store basis."

Frito-Lay continues to be committed to fact-based, consumer-led, ECR-smart category management. "Our approach is grounded in the consumer, with the objective to build a category plan that leverages the expandable nature of snacks," said Boissevain.

Gatorade North America

Gatorade North America's proprietary category-management system, Cooler P.R.O., is gaining wide acceptance by convenience store retailers, according to Jim Brooks, assistant manager, capability development. The system incorporates analysis of consumer insights with a review of convenience store retailers' promotions, pricing, product assortment and available space to develop assortment recommendations and planograms for the non-alcohol beverage segment.

Adding to the strength of the system, Gatorade, a division of Chicago-based Quaker Oats Co., recently initiated a new structure that enables more field support for category management in convenience stores. Six regional customer business centers and a national accounts customer business center have been established, and the manpower behind Cooler P.R.O. has been tripled in the past year.

"The category-management expertise for Cooler P.R.O. really lies in our field-based category-management teams," said Brooks. "Our strategy is to sit down with the retailer, determine their goals and source their data across the beverage category. Then, we use the Cooler P.R.O. system to develop unbiased recommendations to maximize retailer sales through the cooler door."

"We completed a major cold-vault reset in 1997, and Gatorade was the category partner for the entire non-alcohol cooler," said Tamara Fowler, associate category manager at Wawa Inc., a 470-store chain based in Wawa, Pa. "Gatorade is one of the most knowledgeable and dedicated category-management companies in the industry."

Syndicated data on consumers and convenience stores, as well as custom market reports on the local competitive set, are utilized by Gatorade in the category management process. Custom consumer audits and assessments of out-of-stock situations are another tool.

Gatorade's process focuses mainly on the cooler door and addresses all non-alcohol beverages, not just sports drinks, Brooks explained. "Cooler P.R.O. is designed to analyze and create recommendations for the entire category. Taking a broad approach is the best way for convenience retailers to maximize sales and profitability of all non-alcohol beverages."

Rebekah Ensley

"Our role is to provide our customers with the best data resources and space-management tools to identify efficient product assortments and develop strategies to effectively compete in their marketplace," said Nancy Tucker, director of marketing. "Our goal is to provide category information, recommendations and customized planograms."

H.T. Hackney, based in Knoxville, Tenn., utilizes several tools in the process, including syndicated and internal data, Spaceman planogram systems and store-level reports. Planogram development is supported by product-mix analysis, pricing analysis and programs focused on increasing total category sales and profitability.

A full-time category-management analyst, Rebekah Ensley, is dedicated to administering the process for retail customers. Each of Hackney's 24 distribution centers is provided a complete category planogram guide and is staffed with merchandising experts to conduct analysis of store activity.

"H.T. Hackney has formed a great partnership with both its customers and manufacturers, and bridges that partnership on a win-win basis," said Dan Fleming, director of operations for Knoxville, Tenn.-based Pilot Corp. "Their strength is in customer service. They also have a wealth of information at easy access and are current with the latest and greatest."

Keebler Co.

"Keebler has provided good support and been very active in the category. Theirs is a comprehensive category-management program that looks at the entire category, and the Keebler people are always available to conduct analysis, create planograms and do resets," said Randy Meyer, senior vice president of Krause Gentle Corp., operator of 158 Kum and Go stores based in West Des Moines, Iowa. "We've enjoyed an excellent long-term relationship with Keebler. It's a positive partnership."

Krause Gentle's experience is the result of Keebler's efforts to focus on the goals of the convenience retailer in the cookie and cracker category. "We work closely with the retailer to understand their objectives and establish plans that meet those objectives," said Mark Clark, business development manager for the convenience division at Keebler. "In light of the number of categories and nature of the convenience store business, we simplify the process and attempt to make it easy for the retailer to execute against."

Elmhurst, Ill.-based Keebler deploys more than 35 field personnel and a broker sales force of 600 to facilitate category management with its convenience store partners. Culling data from syndicated and proprietary resources, Keebler then applies its own knowledge of the cookie and cracker category and develops planograms using state-of-the art space-management tools.

Cookies and crackers present a unique challenge to convenience store operators that Keebler assists retailers in addressing, according to Clark. "In convenience stores, this category is not the top-of-mind snack option for the consumer entering the store. There's a big opportunity to grab the consumer, however, with placement and pricing," he said. "Cookies and crackers are typically merchandised in the center aisles. By adding secondary placements and offering attractive value pricing, you can move the consumer to the category as they make their snacking decision."

To that point, Keebler's two-for-$1 program is merchandised with counter and floor racks. "Two-for-$1 can increase the purchase frequency by as much as 32 percent because it creates multiple purchases," said Clark. "The rack and value offer makes these products top-of-mind because the consumer anticipates the availability. The presentation drives impulse sales as well."

Clark explained that Keebler's category-management strategy involves developing solid working relationships with retailers and objective analysis and recommendations. "While it may drive immediate results, our category management strategy is very long-term focused," he said.

McLane Co. Inc.

"McLane Co.'s approach to category management is to give the consumer what they are looking for: well-known, well-recognized, high-quality products at a retail that allows them to purchase now and repurchase in the future," said Bill Fendrick, vice president, merchandising for Temple, Texas-based McLane. "The consumers' needs have to be focused on in a way that enables them to choose and purchase the key, core items within a category. Our focus is to make the retailer aware of the key national and regional core items within each category, and then offer these items with sound, fair pricing backed up by retail support from the vendor."

To facilitate that strategy, McLane has developed a decision-support system (DSS) that allows its merchandising experts to zero in on each category. "We then use this information in conjunction with our demographic-profiling system to present fact-based recommendations," said Fendrick. "Using these tools, we are able to work with and support both the vendor and the retailer in their businesses."

Each of McLane's 15 distribution centers has a merchandising team dedicated to providing category-management support. The merchandising teams are supported by merchandising managers located at the McLane corporate-support center. "Our role is to be an unbiased presenter of the facts and category statistics that are now available in the industry," added Fendrick.

In conjunction with the DSS system, McLane has developed its Stars and Star Gazer programs to allow retailers quick and convenient access to their item and category information. The commitment to category management and sophistication of the tools utilized in the process has made fans of convenience store retailers.

"The use of McLane's Stars and Star Gazer tools allows us great ability to look at all McLane product categories," said Artie Smith, marketing manager for Kent Oil Inc., a 25-store operator based in Midland, Texas. "We can reset much faster to adjust to trends and change problem areas quickly. We feel McLane's support really gives us the advantage."

Miller Brewing Co.

Jeff Schouten

"Miller has re... ly teamed ... with c-stores in T... Miller Advantage," said Kendra Kuehl, buyer/merchandising manager for Bosselman's Pump & Pantry, Grand Island, Neb. "Miller is publishing information on category management for us, the retailers. The know that without category management, we will not be viable competitors in the future."

The Miller Advantage, a publication featuring consumer insights and key category-management issues, positions the brewer to collaborate with retailers on solid business strategies and objective plans, according to Jeff Schouten, Miller's director of category management. "Category management is something we do with, not for, the retailer," he said. "That type of collaborative effort becomes a win-win-win, benefiting the manufacturer, the retailer and the consumer."

Milwaukee-based Miller not only brings category-planning expertise to the process, but also several tools to speed analysis and deliver insights, including the CoolerMAX multi-category cooler simulation software. Recently, a price elasticity model was created to demonstrate effective pricing in a given market. A proprietary outlet-level analysis tool identifies distribution voids and ensures core items are stocked in each store.

A new element of the brewer's repertoire is Miller Tag Manager. The proprietary program generates precut shelf tags displaying the shelf set developed for the space that can be affixed to the front and/or back of the cooler. "One of the biggest issues we've identified is the failure to follow up and implement the plans," Schouten explained. "Tag Manager enables implementation at the store level so that the set meets the plan volumes."

All Miller chain account managers are trained in category-management analysis and plan development, a valued resource for retailers. "Jim Ebert [our Miller representative] put talk into action by implementing five crucial category-management steps in one of our major markets to pilot the program," said Gregg Wingert, senior vice president of marketing for Houston-based Coastal Mart Inc. "He succinctly summarized and documented each step, applying top-notch category management activity. It is an excellent effort!"

Miller's approach is to customize the category-management process to objectively meet the business needs of the individual retailer. "Objectivity is a big issue," Schouten explained. "When we're objective, we're gaining sales for the category. We all win."

M&M/Mars

M&M/Mars works with its retail partners to better understand consumer shopping behavior, an effort that proved vital in identifying opportunities within the confection category at Equilon Enterprises' stores. "With innovation and participation in our 1998/1999 advertising promotion, M&M/Mars helped increase our candy category sales by 12 percent," said Robb Harling, Ohio ETD franchise representative, Equilon Enterprises. "The company's representatives call on our stores frequently and they participate in our monthly special programs. M&M/Mars provides excellent planogram support, and they are very involved and active in our markets."

Harling's 140 stores in the Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio regions are enjoying the benefits of M&M/Mars's comprehensive approach to category management. "We're striving to be the primary source for confectionery category management in convenience stores," explained Steve Collins, national sales director, category leadership for M&M/Mars, based in Hackettstown, N.J. "We work as a true partner with retailers, helping them identify and capitalize on opportunities to grow their confectionery sales and profits."

M&M/Mars brings a wealth of resources to the process. First and foremost is its category leadership team, whose 45 field associate members are certified through a 38-day training program. Ten members of the team are dedicated to collecting consumer information, conducting trade-channel research and developing category-management tools, which the teams' field associates then customize to meet the needs of retail customers. "The quality of our certification process and the significant size of our Category Leadership Team speaks to the commitment M&M/Mars has to this ECR initiative," said Collins.

M&M/Mars soon will expand its portfolio of category-management tools with the addition of a major proprietary convenience store study. "We conducted a statistical analysis of the conditions in the marketplace to identify top-performing stores and determine what distinguishes them from average and below-average performing stores," Collins explained.

More than 600 convenience and petroleum stores were involved in the study. M&M/Mars investigated several issues. Where should the primary confectionery selling location be? What items should be carried? How should they be merchandised? What is the role of promotion in increasing confection sales? "The findings will cover some impactful best practices, and we'll share those and more during this year's NACS convention," Collins said.

M&M/Mars's category-management strategy is based in its commitment to partnering with its retail customers. "Success in category management is realized when joint efforts between our customers and us result in improved category sales, profits, return on investment and consumer satisfaction," Collins explained. "Each customer has specific objectives they need to meet to optimize category productivity and meet the needs of their consumer, and we're dedicated to assisting in that effort."
