With respect to paragraph 9, this paragraph governs the procedures for disclosing Protected Information to a proposed witness, and requires a period of at least ten days written notice to the other party. In the event that either party believes that the application of paragraph 9 to the preparation for or taking of the deposition of any particular deponent creates a burden or a problem, that party may apply to the Magistrate Judge on a case-by-case basis for relief from the ten day period set out in paragraph 9. However, the Court does not read paragraph 9 as imposing a general ten day minimum notice rule related to the taking of depositions.

Other concerns were raised in the conference concerning the sequence of discovery where a third party witness produces documents and is simultaneously video taped for trial purposes. The Magistrate Judge is of the view that no special ruling is required for this problem, which is one which occurs with regularity in trial practice. The parties are urged to cooperate with each other with respect to making documents available cooperatively, to the extent possible, concerning depositions. However, in the event of a disagreement, the general principles of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure will apply to any deposition of a third party or of a deposition of a company employee.

The Magistrate Judge is of the view that the issues raised, at the present, are more hypothetical than actual and declines to rule prospectively with respect to depositions which have not even been scheduled yet.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, -against- UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	:	Civil Action No. 5:98 CV-108-R

AFFIDAVIT OF CHRIS ATHANASIA

I, Chris Athanasia, upon being duly sworn, do depose and state as follows:

1. I am an associate attorney with the law firm, Skadden, Arps, Slate Meagher & Flom LLP. I have been involved in the discovery process of this case from its inception, and I have been involved personally in the document collection and review process for Defendants' Rule 34 production to Plaintiffs. The statements made herein are based on my own personal knowledge as well as on interviews with computer systems personnel of Defendant companies and with the other attorneys participating in Defendants' document production.

2. Electronic mail. Each person whose office was searched, with the exception of USTC Sales Representatives, has access to the company e-mail system. The system is backed-up every night and all e-mails stored on network personal computers (i.e., not on laptops used by certain USTC personnel) are saved and stored on a backup tape. The tapes are on a five week rotation and are re-written after this five-week period. Beyond the five-week period, there is no central storage of e-mail.

3. Every person whose office was searched provided the attorneys access to his or her e-mail files, if any existed. In each instance, an attorney reviewed the index of e-mails in order to identify those e-mails containing information relevant to this case. Potentially relevant e-mails were printed out, reviewed and, if relevant and responsive, produced to Plaintiffs.

4. Other Documents Stored Electronically. The company's system drives operate in the same way as the e-mail system. The system is backed-up every night and all document files on network personal computers are saved and stored on a backup tape. Beyond the five-week period, there is no central storage of computer files.

5. Every person whose office was searched also provided the attorneys access to his or her computer files on the system drives. Attorneys reviewed the documents by file name to identify relevant subject matter. Potentially relevant documents were printed out, reviewed and, if relevant and responsive, produced to Plaintiffs.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and recollection.

AFFIDAVIT OF GARY MILANO

I, Gary Milano, upon being duly sworn, do depose and state as follows:

1. I am currently the Vice President of Sales for United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc. ("USTC"). The statements made herein are based upon my own personal knowledge of the structure and organization of the field sales organization, as well as the practices, policies, and procedures that apply to all field sales personnel in the ordinary conduct of their duties and responsibilities.

2. The entire sales force of USTC is comprised of over 600 individuals. Among these, there are five Regional Vice Presidents, 16 Department Managers, 95 Division Managers, and 448 Sales Representatives located in every state throughout the country. Sales Representatives do not maintain offices, and instead work out of their vehicles and/or homes. In each of the five regions, each USTC Department Manager supervises a number of Division Managers, each of whom, in turn, supervises the several USTC Sales Representatives operating within that Division. In the ordinary course of business, it is USTC's policy that each USTC Sales Representative regularly and systematically deliver to the appropriate Division Office those documents that are material to the assessment of the competitive environment in the marketplace, including USTC's own activity.

3. As a general matter, Sales Representatives, in the ordinary course of business, do not create or retain any such documents that are not sent to their direct supervisor at the division level. This is the very purpose of creating such documents. Although each region has different practices, most regions have some form of competitive activity report (or competitive incident report) that is periodically delivered to the Division Managers. In addition, every Sales Representative fills out Profile Activity Reporting scanner sheets and delivers the originals to Fastech, Inc. for processing, with a copy delivered to the Division Manager.

4. Within USTC's sales structure, it is neither the function nor the responsibility of Sales Representatives to enter into written agreements with resellers, and it would be rare for any such agreement to be created by a Sales Representative. Any agreements that are entered into with retailers, as a matter of policy, must be approved at the corporate level, and for this reason, any such agreements would typically be found at the Department Level and above -- although, from time to time, Division Managers may initially draft such agreements. Accordingly, even if a Sales Representative were asked by a retailer to enter into a written agreement with that retailer, it is USTC's policy that that request be forwarded to and considered by the Division Manager, and if appropriate, by the department level and above.

5. To the extent that any Sales Representative keeps calendars or day books, and retains them, these are not likely to reflect competitively significant information, which, as described above, is forwarded to the Division Managers through other means.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

AFFIDAVIT OF DONALD L. CERULLO

I, Donald L. Cerullo, upon being duly sworn, do depose and state as follows:

1. I am currently Vice President, Information Systems for Defendant United States Tobacco Company. The statements made herein are based on my own personal knowledge of the computer systems used by defendant companies.

2. The following is a list and general description of the Information Systems Department computer systems, used by defendant companies:

DCS II. DCS II is the order processing and fulfillment system for U.S. Tobacco Company's distribution of moist snuff product lines. As such, it manages orders taken by the Telemarketing Department and through Electronic Data Interchange (EDI), reserves inventory, validates credit, schedules shipments, controls the physical loading of the product onto the trucks, prints carriers' bills of lading, prints customer invoices, records customer receivables and records shipment information for use by other systems.

STARS II. STARS II is the Sales Tracking and Reporting System. Data is fed into the STARS II database by the DCS II Shipping System. The STARS II database is organized by time period and year, by geography and customer, and by product and by data type.

P.O.S. Point-Of-Sale (POS) material used by U.S. Tobacco Company's sales personnel is processed through this system. Requisitions for material are entered into this system by field sales. Packing and shipping paperwork is produced at the distribution center in Nashville, TN.

SIMS. The Sales Information Management System is a service provided by Fasteoh, Inc. of Broomall, Pennsylvania. The system forwards information via a dial network to the first line sales management group known as Division Managers. Information is in three categories:

a. Summary of Product/Customer shipment data from the DCS II described above.
b. Summary of the retail and distribution profile activity data, described below under "PAR."
c. The Division Manager's actual versus budgeted financial data described under the Financial General Ledger.

PAR. The Profile Activity Reporting system is used by the field sales representatives to record various data that they observed while making a retail account call.

RAD. The Retail Account Data system was developed for U.S. Tobacco Company by Management Science Associates, Inc. ("MSA") of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Through agreements with participating distributors, a weekly file of shipments from distributors to retail stores is sent to MSA. This file is edited for product, customer, data accuracy, and shipment consistency. Data is loaded into a database at the MSA site.

CAP. CAP is a service provided by IRM of Dallas, Texas. On a quarterly basis, IRM uses available data to distribute incentive checks to participants in the Customer Alliance Program.

MLS. The Mailing Label System provides generic printed labels and/or electronic labels for mailgrams.

EMS. Events Management System records materials, locations, attendance statistics, sales personnel requirements and costs associated with product sampling around scheduled events such as car races and county fairs.

PTST. The PTST system is an activity tracking mechanism that interfaces with the Payroll system for the Part Time Sales Trainees' weekly hours worked.

CONSUMER LETTERS. A server and network based system that is used to record any consumer correspondence regarding the product.

CA CAS - General Ledger, Accounts Payable and Purchasing.

The General Ledger (GL) system is the financial database that receives all revenue and expense data, organizes it by chart of account number, and provides reports on profit and loss and balance sheet accounts as well as numerous other financial statements.

The Accounts Payable (AP) system is responsible for cash disbursements and vendor payments via checks as well as the distribution of these expenses to the proper accounts within the GL.

The Purchasing system manages U.S. Tobacco Company's purchase orders to vendors, item specifications, and price files.

BUDGETS. The budget system is a series of spreadsheets that are used to develop a plan for the future year's profit and loss statements and capital project planning.

GELCO. The GELCO system is a service provided by GELCO to record travel expenses for Headquarters personnel and field sales expenses for all sales personnel.

FACTSYS. This system is PC based at Headquarters and is used to track capital items such as buildings, machinery or any other capital asset.

QUICKEN. A PC based system, similar to the financial systems described above, that is used at the regional offices to manage local payables and record those expenses.

FASTAX. A PC based system used by the Tax Department to develop income tax filing statements with the appropriate taxing authorities.

CHRIS. CHRIS is the Human Resource data base used to record personnel, compensation and benefits information on each employee.

GRANT MANAGER. A PC based system used to track corporate contributions by individuals through the company's matching contribution program.

AVIATION SCHEDULING. A PC based system used by the Travel Department to schedule the aircraft, limos and facilities for use by various departments and employees.

INVESTOR DATABASE. A PC based system that records stock owners and is used for mailing of any financial communications such as the Annual Report.

REGS DATA BASE. A server and network based system that records the regulations and restrictions of various states, counties and cities.

RELOCATION. A PC based system used to track specific moving expenses of individuals within the company.

PCS. A mainframe system used to track project requests of the IS Department and personnel time expended against those projects.

ORGANIZER. A server and network based system used by some individuals to schedule their time.

CC:MAIL. The company's e-mail system that connects certain employees through the company's network of computers.

MANUFACTURING. A series of PC based systems and mid-range AS/400 systems that is used to track expenses, pay vendors, monitor inventory, plan production and schedule shipments.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and recollection.

PROCEEDINGS

(February 16, 1999.)

THE COURT: Okay. This is the time fixed for a hearing on the motion of Management Science Associates Inc. to quash or modify a subpoena.

I have read the submissions of the parties, and I understand the MSA's position, and I'm going to call upon whoever is going to speak for the Conwood parties this morning. Which of you is going to speak on behalf of Conwood?

MR. GEIGER: Your Honor, I am William Geiger admitted to this bar. Neil Gorsuch is here who has far more knowledge than I on these issues. And, as I think you know, this arises from litigation in Kentucky. He's with the Washington D.C. law firm that is representing Conwood. He has attempted, Mr. Gorsuch, for some time to get the information that we are here today to discuss, first from the defendants in that case, U. S. Tobacco --

THE COURT: I understand the petition. I have a few questions that might help us here.

MR. GEIGER: May I refer you to Mr. Gorsuch.

THE COURT: Yes. And we will admit him PHV for the purpose of arguing this matter this morning. And I'm going to ask that you file a written motion. We usually require that for PHV pro hac vice admission. If you will do that, and we'll admit you.

MR. HOGUE: And I will have no objections.

THE COURT: Would you come forward, please.

MR. GORSUCH: Yes.

THE COURT: First of all, with regard to the five items that were or are in contention, the production in Pittsburgh is no problem. I think that is a given. I don't think you have any obligation to go to some other state.

With regard to the confidentiality, I'm going to require the parties to confer about that, but what I'm going to do is ask MSA to submit a proposed confidentiality order to Conwood in 20 days. Conwood can respond in 20 dates thereafter. If the parties do not agree, then each side within another 20 days shall submit a proposed order. And whichever order I deem most appropriate, I will adopt. That way there will be some impetus for you to not impose something unreasonable on the other side because you may not get it.

With regard to your document subpoena, I want to clarify this. This is one of the reasons I wanted to ask you questions. Essentially, and I don't know whether it is primarily that I read it differently, but you are seeking documents that you have the right to receive in the underlying discovery against the defendants in the pending action. It is my understanding that that discovery has been required.

MR. GORSUCH: Yes, Your Honor, that is correct.

THE COURT: Okay. However, when I read the documents requested, it would appear to me that you are going beyond that. For example, in item three of the documents requested, you are asking for: All documents, including but not limited to computer or electronic representations, records, databases or other data stored on any type of magnetic media, relating to the demand, supply, pricing, consumption and/or marketing of products offered by smokeless tobacco companies in the United States.

My reaction is that is beyond what documents pass between MSA and any of the defendants; is that correct?

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, actually, Judge Moyer has ordered UST, in the underlying litigation, ordered UST to produce all their computer sales data bases that are in their control. UST tells us go to MSA. MSA says go to UST. We want to close the loop, Your Honor. We are after the electronic sales data bases. We believe we are entitled to them, and Judge Moyer ordered them from UST.

THE COURT: Do they say they are not in their custody or control?

MR. GORSUCH: That is correct. They say they are in MSA's control and custody. And MSA in its papers say we do have physical possession, but they are in UST's control.

THE COURT: Do I take it item 3 of the documents requested is to be limited to the documents that pass between MSA and the defendant, and not beyond that?

MR. GORSUCH: That is what we are after, Your Honor. There has been no objection as to scope of this subpoena, none whatsoever. I don't think you need to address that issue at all, frankly.

THE COURT: There has obliquely insofar as the request for market value of that additional information. That is what they are seeking.

MR. GORSUCH: They are seeking compensation, Your Honor. And I will be happy to address that. As to the scope of production, the data bases are what we are after, and that is the most essential and critical component of the subpoena. And, Your Honor, that is what Judge Moyer has ordered. And there has been no objection as to the scope of that production.

THE COURT: Item four goes to that.

Item five deals with all manuals, instructions, field descriptions and other documents necessary to read, understand and manipulate any data described in number three above. Which again on its face goes beyond, by the very text, the documents that pass between them. That is why I want to clear this up.

What you are really seeking are documents that were exchanged or passed between MSA and any of the defendants, some of which one or all of the defendants say they don't have possession of at the present time; is that correct?

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, that is partially correct. In addition we are after anything that is maintained on behalf of the defendants that may or may not pass between MSA and the defendants, sales data bases that physically reside here in Pennsylvania, all of which may not all the time be passing back and forth. We are after the underlying data that is maintained on behalf of UST and any programs necessary to manipulate that information.

THE COURT: Have you received documents from any of the defendants as of this date?

MR. GORSUCH: We have received documents in discovery. We have received no sales data bases.

THE COURT: Have you received anything which is identified as having been generated, produced or otherwise involving MSA?

MR. GORSUCH: We have received a select number of printouts, computer printouts, Your Honor, a very few. That is why we sought the sales data bases in excess to them, and that is why Judge Moyer ordered them.

The answer I think is effectively no. I'm not going to deny there are not a couple of stray documents.

THE COURT: Are you able to identify them? What I want you to do is to submit to the court and MSA at least an itemization of those documents you already received.

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, I think the answer then is effectively nothing. I mean, you are talking about an enormous document production, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I understand that.

MR. GORSUCH: And I can point -- I might be able to point to a couple of printout reports that I'm not going to be able to attribute to Fastech or other vendors. That is simply because they are not our documents. We didn't produce them or manufacture them.

If I may raise one more point, Your Honor, with regard to the proposed protective order. We cannot wait 60 days for these documents. Discovery is closing April 1. This information is necessary for our expert reports which also must be prepared by April 1, and we have a November trial date, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Hogue, are you able to submit a proposed order to the Conwood parties within ten days?

MR. HOGUE: Your Honor, if I had until Monday, a week, I can do that. I have to file a Third Circuit brief by Friday. That will give me the weekend. Dr. Kuehn, who's the owner, and I have actually consulted and have one almost drafted.

THE COURT: I think the simple answer is if the parties confer perhaps you can resolve most of the issues. I understand you want to adopt the order that has already been entered by Judge Russell, is it?

MR. GORSUCH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And you want to incorporate that.

And you apparently, Mr. Hogue, on behalf of your client, want some additional provisions, and one of them is the identification of the parties to whom it is released; is that correct?

MR. HOGUE: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I've done that very thing, and I'll have to look at it. Within the last six months I have had that issue, and we have required that. I'm not saying I'm going to here. That may not be unreasonable. I am going to ask the parties to attempt to agree on that.

With regard to the compensation, I understand that Conwood is willing to pay the costs of reproduction. Is that reproduction only? What about assembling and identifying documents that are responsive to the motion?

MR. GORSUCH: That is fine, Your Honor. We are happy to pay for any of those kind of costs.

THE COURT: Okay. And with regard to the market value, if the documents go beyond what actually was prepared or generated or passed to any of the defendants, then I'll consider an order requiring compensation at market value, whatever you are charging there.

On that issue it seems to me, and this goes to the confidentiality order as well, if there is duplication between the documents that the defendants are producing and what MSA has in its care, custody or control, then it seems to me that Judge Russell really should control that part of it. With regard to any matters that you can identify, Mr. Hogue, that you think require some kind of special protection, we will consider. But on the compensation I would want you to identify by filing a statement of what MSA expects to receive as a market value of those items. And just so we make it clear, if you get a description from Conwood as to what documents have already been received, seems to me if they want those from you, duplicates, then you should only be able to charge the reasonable costs of assembling and photocopying.

MR. HOGUE: And I agree with that.

THE COURT: If you go beyond that, then that is the issue that remains in doubt.

Now, do you want to speak to that.

MR. GORSUCH: Yes, I do.

THE COURT: I will certainly give you that opportunity right now.

MR. GORSUCH: Thank you, Your Honor.

Your Honor hit the nail on the head. What we are after is what is created for, maintained for, is in the care of MSA for UST. We want to be placed in UST's shoes, Your Honor, and have the same access to the same information they do for purposes of this litigation. This data base information is critical to this case. I can't stress that enough.

THE COURT: Do you have anything from any of the defendants indicating or anything in writing that says we don't have possession of these items, go to MSA?

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, since January 14th, the court order by Judge Moyer, I can tell you they have produced nothing. They are now subject to a motion to compel compliance with the court's order which will be heard tomorrow I can tell you that. I would and I actually do have a letter. I don't have it here with me. I'm afraid -- yes, we do have a letter that says go to MSA. We do have that letter, yes.

THE COURT: Can you make that available to Mr. Hogue and to the court.

MR. GORSUCH: I will be happy to do that.

On the compensation point, we believe the law is very clear that we should pay the reasonable expenses. We are happy to do that to get the same information that UST has. If Your Honor is talking about going beyond the data bases maintained on behalf of UST, beyond software that is used for UST's products, fine, I understand the market value argument there, but I do not understand the market value argument to be placed in UST's shoes.

THE COURT: I'm not saying I'm going to award that.

MR. GORSUCH: Okay. Then we are fine. You and I are on the same wave length.

THE COURT: Then we have the issue of reasonable attorneys fees. And I know your position on that. And I understand MSA's position. It is something I will consider. I'm not going to make a decision at this point in time, but I would ask Mr. Hogue to submit a statement identifying the services and the fees which you have or will charge your client in that regard. And you will have a chance to look at them and respond as to what you think is inappropriate or whatever. But I think that might be the faster way to resolve this. But I think right now the confidentiality order is the most pressing issue.

MR. GORSUCH: What is the most pressing to us is getting production as fast as possible.

THE COURT: I'm not going to require it until we have an order in place. Do whatever you can.

MR. GORSUCH: I want to stress again -- I know you already heard it, and it doesn't --

THE COURT: The answer to that is you go to the judge who is handling the case and move for an enlargement, at least as to that point in time. And you can explain that I directed you to do that if that becomes a problem.

MR. GORSUCH: If I have to do that to Judge Russell, I will do that. I understand.

We have been seeking this information, Your Honor, for over a month from MSA alone. This was issued December 15; it is now February 15. We have filed for an extension of time. We offered to do a site visit to MSA to help reduce the amount of burden on MSA to identify that specifically which we need, and work with their employees in a congenial manner. All that has been rejected. Here we are two months later without anything.

I would respectfully ask that the parties be required to get to you within a week or ten days their proposed protective order for prompt resolution thereafter so we can facilitate production immediately, and an order that as soon as confidentiality is in place production will begin.

I would also ask on the compensation issue for an order saying if we go beyond that which UST enjoys the benefits from MSA's services, the court will reserve that issue, but as to the materials maintained on behalf of or for the benefit of UST, we'll pay costs. I think those two things will facilitate prompt disposition of this, Your Honor, which is so critical to my client.

THE COURT: Okay.

Mr. Hogue, this is your opportunity to respond.

MR. HOGUE: First of all, I have with me Dr. Alfred Kuehn who is the owner and Chairman of the Board sitting at the table, and Alec Boright who is the Vice-president and Director of Information Systems as fact witnesses if necessary.

But I would like to explain to Your Honor as best I can as a lawyer and somewhat of a computer techy, but not of their ilk, what is under this subpoena. MSA maintains a variety of data bases --

THE COURT: I think you explained that.

MR. HOGUE: -- only one of which is accessible by UST. The scope of the subpoena covers other data bases beyond those that are licensed for access to UST. So there is within the subpoena more than just UST.

In addition, the way this works is somewhat similar to WESTLAW or LEXIS. You have access to the data bases, but you don't own the data base. WESTLAW maintains ownership. MSA maintains ownership. You have the right to go in with software, and for each time you go in you pay a charge. For each time UST goes in to generate a report, we get cases, they get reports, they pay charges.

What Conwood wants is the right to take the UST license unilaterally and go in and run any report it wants to off of the data base which we grant access to UST and run their own set of reports. They are not just seeking what UST has or gets; they want more. They want to use this on their own. And that is why I believe they go beyond the normal thing of, UST give us the report you get from MSA. What they want is, MSA produce your data base for free to us and your softwear so we can access this proprietary data base you have, which is worth millions of dollars, on our own and for free. That is where they go beyond the normal steps and sequence of events under the subpoena. It is that point where we have legitimate concerns that they are essentially taking our product, our confidential product, and trying to use it for free. And I don't think that that is what the rule permits. So that is where I was making or trying to make that distinction in our moving paper; that is, they want more than what UST accesses. They want their own access and be able to run their own sets of reports, even though in the real word we offered them that right as a customer and they rejected it. So they are requesting more than just UST information; they want right of access. That is what distinguishes this from a normal communication.

THE COURT: That is the main issue that perplexed me, and I will tell you I don't really fully understand or comprehend the nature of your client's data base and what have you. But what I think you have to do is in responding you'll have to identify -- the subpoena required if you have some kind of privilege, to state certain information. Seems to me that is probably the way to go if you feel something is beyond the scope, the reasonable scope and proper scope of a subpoena duces tecum. I would want to know what market value, what compensation you seek for that as well. And that would give the Conwood parties an opportunity to respond as to whether or not this assertion is appropriate or not, and, secondly, whether the request for compensation is appropriate.

MR. HOGUE: Okay.

THE COURT: These are things I can't really decide at this point in time. I think if you two gentlemen can talk this morning about the proposed, if you have time, the confidentiality order, and at least try to identify the precise provisions where you disagree, that might expedite your getting this proposed order to me. You can use the courtroom if you wish, or jury room, or whatever. Okay?

MR. HOGUE: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Do you have anything else for Conwood?

MR. GEIGER: I was just going to propose that normally under our local rule the conference would have already taken place, the one that is taking take place today. Mr. Gorsuch is available today. I think the issues are actually straightforward and well understood by the two parties. It is really just a question of what they want to be compensated for what is beyond the scope --

THE COURT: Some sort of a confidentiality order.

MR. GEIGER: There is an excellent order already in place that I think addresses each one of these concerns. If the parties could sit down today and go through it and have MSA point out what they think the deficiencies are, I think we could make great progress and maybe cut down on that ten-day problem. I think Mr. Gorsuch proposed that. Unfortunately he has two judges to contend with.

THE COURT: One of whom is unreasonable.

MR. GEIGER: We don't know that. We know it can be no more than one. This court is certainly not unreasonable.

THE COURT: Flattery will get you everywhere.

MR. GEIGER: We are willing to make whatever reasonable accommodation that the court wishes. That is certainly how we practice in this bar. The parties might be put at a disadvantage in Kentucky where maybe they place a greater premium on meeting scheduled dates than on helping counsel. But this is something that was served a long time ago.

THE COURT: December, wasn't it? January 7 was the production time.

MR. HOGUE: 17th;

THE COURT: By agreement you extended to the 17th. The original date was the 7th, wasn't it?

MR. HOGUE: Yes.

THE COURT: That is not two months.

MR. GEIGER: Technically a motion to quash was not filed timely on the 7th or 17th or 19th or any other day.

THE COURT: He did respond by letter of January 18th.

MR. GEIGER: Without objection, I may point out, Your Honor. If we could be ordered to confer today as the local rule would have already required us to do, I wouldn't see why an order couldn't be in place either by the end of the day, or certainly by the end of the week, which may take some of the pressure off Mr. Gorsuch in this case. The judge in Kentucky places a great premium on meeting scheduled dates.

THE COURT: Mr. Hogue, you indicated you are available; is that correct?

MR. HOGUE: Through the noon hour.

MR. GEIGER: Any chance of shortening the return date to the court?

THE COURT: Well, I'm going to ask you to confer, and I'm unwilling to say at this point in time that we are going to shorten it. But if someone can convince me for cause that I should do it, I'll consider it. But as of now the ten-day limit is in place. Okay.

MR. GEIGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. GORSUCH: Your Honor, if I may be heard on -- and I apologize for multiple lawyers -- but I would just ask that the court does order that once a protective order is in place, that production begin. We can litigate over compensation issues or attorneys' fees at any time.

THE COURT: And with regard to those documents that go beyond the scope, as I have described it before, the matters that were transmitted, whatever, to the defendant, that is something I think has to be identified if there is going to be any disagreement on that.

MR. GORSUCH: We ask that that doesn't hold up production, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, I'm suggesting that MSA, once we get the order in place, can start producing those things to which apparently there would be no objection or within the scope, proper scope, according to MSA's standards, of the subpoena. And those matters that go beyond we may have to revisit them as to whether or not they should be produced or under what circumstances. Seems to me if MSA is willing to produce them at its regular retail cost or prices, then I understand it has certain confidentiality provisions, as I understand it, between it and its customers with regard to disclosure. Seems to me if it is willing to sell it to you, that the only issue then is the reasonable compensation.

MR. GORSUCH: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm going to order this record to be transcribed. 50 percent of the cost will be assessed to Conwood, and 50 percent to MSA. And we'll have that, because I made some rulings. And also in this record will be the reasons why I've entered preliminary orders.

Okay, gentlemen, thank you very much.

(Whereupon, the hearing was adjourned.)

I CERTIFY THE FOREGOING IS A CORRECT TRANSCRIPT FROM THE RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE ABOVE-ENTITLED MATTER.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. — PLAINTIFFS

v. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. — DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on February 17, 1999 for a teleconference to hear argument on the discovery issues raised in the parties' February 15, 1999 joint agenda.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, Ben Powell, Dick Roberts, David Simpson, Steven Benz, and Bill Cunningham, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: James Keyte, John Reed, Chris Athanasia, Neal Stoll, and Richard Verheij, counsel.

1. Pritzker documents. The objections by Conwood to furnishing documents for related Pritzker entities are overruled. Documents otherwise responsive to the UST discovery requests and which are in the custody or control of a Conwood related company, whether up the chain of ownership or down the chain of ownership, shall be furnished.

2. MSA. The parties have argued concerning the compliance by UST with court's prior order concerning the furnishing of databases. The court is of the view that UST has not promptly complied with the court's prior directives, notwithstanding the possible existence of issues unique to MSA and its software. Counsel for UST represented at the February 17 telephonic hearing that UST has in-house access to the database through computer connections at its headquarters, but that it is powerless to furnish source code or a usable program copy for the arguably proprietary database program created by MSA. Put another way, UST does not dispute that it owns the data, and asserts that it has corporate access to the data, but it does interpose the argument that it cannot turn over the database program in which MSA has arguable proprietary rights. Certainly if UST can use the data, Conwood can as well.

Accordingly, it is ordered that UST furnish full, complete, unhindered access to its data by providing immediately at its headquarters the use of computer equipment, of a kind and type comparable to the best used by UST personnel, with complete access to the UST database to which UST has in-house access. This shall be at UST expense. Further, UST shall furnish a confidential and secure conference room or similar, professional working area where Conwood, its counsel, experts, and computer consultants may have untrammelled access to the database, for the purpose of generating their own inquiries or queries of the database. UST shall further furnish access to all paper or other printouts of such data maintained by it. UST shall further provide access to Conwood, in the conference room, to all manuals and other documentation concerning the use of the database, and shall also provide access, for Conwood and its consultants, to UST personnel knowledgeable in the use of the database and the generation of queries, so that Conwood may begin full, immediate access to the data and may have any technical questions about the use of the database answered immediately by appropriately knowledgeable UST personnel. UST shall communicate the substance and spirit of this ruling to its chief information officer, who shall designate a high level MIS person to implement this ruling immediately and with full cooperation.

3. Fastech. With respect to the Fastech-maintained data, UST shall immediately communicate with Fastech and shall use its full and best efforts to cause Fastech to furnish immediate access to Conwood to any Fastech-maintained data on a priority, expedited basis. The court does not understand Fastech to have interposed any legal or technical objection to access by Conwood; rather it is represented that the process has gone from free-flowing to uncooperative.

Conwood has made disturbing allegations more than once in telephonic hearings to the effect that UST has "poisoned the well" at Fastech by discouraging Fastech from cooperation. Such an assertion, if true, would be very serious. UST has asserted that it has done nothing more than take steps to assure that any e-mail files maintained by Fastech be subject to appropriate reviews for privilege and confidentiality. Given the proliferation of discovery disputes in this case, the court is, for the moment, disinclined to pursue such allegations, preferring to see if Fastech data is made available promptly. The court takes no view at all concerning whether there is a sustainable factual basis for these assertions. Conwood is cautioned that making such allegations is most serious and should not be engaged in without a full basis for them; and UST is cautioned that impeding access to discovery from third parties raises equally serious concerns.

4. Any and all remaining discovery disputes will be heard and resolved in Louisville at the courthouse in an omnibus discovery hearing on Saturday, February 27, beginning at 9:00 a.m., and continuing throughout the day until all issues are addressed. The court will make every effort to rule that day on all issues presented there. A subsequent order will detail an abbreviated briefing schedule and procedures for argument and presentation.

5. The previously scheduled telephonic conference for February 24, 1999 at 2:00 p.m. shall remain on the court's calendar.

6. This civil case has been characterized by delay and disagreement rather than compliance and cooperation in discovery. The court's procedures for the prompt resolution of these issues will be guided accordingly.

16diii001504

ORDER

This matter has been referred to the Magistrate Judge by order of the District Court.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the court's scheduling order entered July 9, 1998, is amended as follows:

1. By August 1, 1999 the parties shall complete non-expert discovery, and plaintiffs shall make disclosure of expert testimony as provided by Fed. R.Civ.P. 26(a)(2).

2. By September 15, 1999 defendants shall make disclosure of expert testimony as provided by Fed. R.Civ.P. 26(a)(2).

3. By October 1, 1999 plaintiffs shall make disclosure of rebuttal expert testimony as provided by Fed. R.Civ.P. 26(a)(2).

4. By November 1, 1999 the parties shall complete depositions of expert.

5. By November 15, 1999 the parties shall file all dispositive motions.

6. By December 6, 1999 the parties shall file oppositions to dispositive motions.

7. By December 24, 1999 the parties shall file replies in support of dispositive motions.

8. By January 21, 2000 the parties shall:

(a) File a list of exhibits intended to be used at trial and produce said exhibits, marked for identification, for inspection of opposing counsel, provided, however, that by no later than 48 hours in advance of direct examination, and 24 hours in advance of cross-examination, the parties shall produce for inspection of opposing counsel all demonstrative aids intended to be used in such examination, including any charts displays, visual aide or other items that will be shown to the jury, but not offered into evidence.

(b) File a witness list.

(c) File a pretrial brief containing a succinct statement of facts of the case, the questions of fact and questions of law with citations.

(d) Designate all deposition excerpts intended to be used at trial. Opposing counsel shall have one week thereafter to make counter-designations.

9. By January 28, 2000 the parties shall:

(a) File agreed proposed jury instructions. If the parties cannot agree, counsel shall submit proposed instructions with supporting authority. The parties should submit both a hard copy and a diskette containing the instructions in either WordPerfect or ASCII format.

(b) File proposed jury voir dire questions.

(c) File motions in limine and any objections to the admission of exhibits and deposition excerpts identified in accordance with paragraph 12. Any exhibit or deposition excerpt so identified shall be admitted into evidence, if otherwise competent, where no such written objection has been filed.

10. Counsel shall provide at or prior to the final pretrial conference a pre-marked set of all proposed trial exhibits.

11. The final pretrial conference scheduled for October 12, 1999 is REMANDED from the court's docket and is rescheduled to February 17, 2000 at 3:30 P.M. prevailing local time, to be held in Chambers in Paducah, Kentucky. Counsel that will participate at trial shall be present with full settlement authority.

16diii001508

12. This case is set for a jury trial on November 1, 1999 is REMANDED from the court's docket and rescheduled to February 28, 2000 at 9:00 a.m in Paducah, Kentucky. Counsel shall meet in Chambers at 8:30 A.M. The expected length of trial is 2-3 weeks.

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

Upon consideration,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that no later than Wednesday, February 15, 1999, Conwood and UST shall simultaneously file abbreviated, tabbed sets of argument papers concerning the outstanding discovery disputes as identified on the most recent joint agenda. Thus, e.g., plaintiffs identified four issues a prioritized list, and defendants identified seven issues (with some subparts) on their prioritized list.

Each party shall file with the court its abbreviated argument papers, in the following format:

A. Each set of papers will contain a set of tabs, correlating to plaintiffs' issues numbers one through four, and defendants issues numbers one through seven. The papers will consist principally or exclusively of excerpts of already exchanged correspondence relating to the issues, so that the court can readily refer to the exchange of prior communications as it relates to each of the issues. The court discourages the parties from drafting new arguments or briefs, as the proceedings will be expedited and the court does not have the resources to review extensive pleadings. If a party wants to add a paragraph or a brief citation to an issue, that is acceptable, but significant new briefing will not be accepted and may well be stricken from the record on the courts on motion for failure to comply with the letter and spirit of this order.

B. If either party believes that there are additional issues beyond those identified in the February 15 prioritized joint agenda, it must clearly communicate those in writing to its adversary by the close of business on Monday, February 22.

The concept of this order is merely to have each party prepare a set of tabbed, previous correspondence as it relates to the issues enumerated in the joint, prioritized agenda of February 15.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises.. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	'99 APR -9 A9:58 FILED U.S. DISTRICT COURT CLERK WESTN. DIST. KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION CONCERNING UST SALES FORCE FILES

This motion is being filed now in the interest of time.

Although just six UST sales representatives have been deposed so far, each deponent has confirmed that entire categories of responsive sales force documents remain unproduced. UST has not fully produced sales force files despite Conwood's document requests outstanding for nearly a year, a December 16, 1998 court order requiring production of division office files (Exh. A), and a court order, entered after a lengthy evidentiary hearing, mandating production from sales representatives' files (Exh. B).

The six UST sales representatives deposed to date have testified that they keep unproduced day books recording their sales activities.[1] They have conceded that they use home computers for business purposes and that these computers have not been searched.[2] They have testified that they generate unproduced "Retail Transaction Forms" recording agreements with retailers.[3] They have testified that they keep or send to division managers "noncompliance reports" on retailers who fail to meet UST demands.[4] They have testified that they have completed unproduced forms discontinuing credit to stores that fail to comply with UST policies.[5] They have confirmed the existence of unproduced training materials.[6] They have admitted that they received unproduced documents concerning a key sales incentive program.[7] They have testified to the existence of unproduced daily voice mail messages between themselves and their supervisors.[8] Some sales representatives testified that they have written "monthly competitive reports" or "daily call reports," and maintain "marketing books."[9] See Exh. C (attaching deposition pages).[10]

In all, UST has produced documents from fewer than ten percent of its 448 sales representatives. Its entire sales representative production fills less than 1 box and is less than 1000 pages. Meanwhile, in response to our subpoenas three former UST representatives alone have produced an equal quantity of material. And Conwood sales representatives have produced over 450,000 pages.

We twice sought to resolve this matter without court intervention (Exhs. D & E). Both times, UST rebuffed our overtures (Exhs. F & G).

There is no good reason for UST's refusal to heed the Court's months-old rulings. Further production delay seriously prejudices Conwood's ability to conduct depositions and complete fact discovery by the Court's August 1 deadline. To remedy UST's persistent refusal to supply reasonable discovery of these materials, the Court should order Conwood full and unfettered review of UST division and sales representative files. The Court should further order UST barred from using in its defense the few documents it has selectively chosen to produce from sales representative and division files. See Rule 37(b)(2)(B).

vs. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC. — DEFENDANTS

ORDER

This matter is before the Court on motions of plaintiff to compel production of discovery materials. (Docket Nos. 29 and 35). Defendant has responded, (Docket Nos. 31 and 36), and plaintiff has replied. (Docket Nos. 32 and 37). The matter was referred to the Magistrate Judge for decision pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A), (Docket No. 39), and a hearing was held on the motions on December 11, 1998.

I.

Plaintiffs have moved to compel a broader range of discovery from defendants. More particularly, plaintiffs seek to compel the production of weekly and other regular reports from sales representatives, most especially at the district office level, but also at the regional office level. These reports, in the view of Conwood, may well document the alleged exclusionary conduct of UST carried out, inter alia, through actions of UST sales representatives with respect to distribution racks in stores. UST argues that, if any conduct is to be attributable to the corporation, it must be centrally directed and not merely the unauthorized or spontaneous actions of sales representatives. This argument is unavailing. The Court is of the view that, even if it were true that for there to be liability such conduct must be centrally directed, there could well exist documentation at a "grassroots" level which would corroborate or document the implementation of a centrally planned policy. To say that the policy is directed from above does not mean it may not be documented from below.

In addition, UST also argues that, in addition to its contention that the documents are of "weak relevance," the collection of the data would be burdensome. However, it has not particularized this objection, and in view of the significant scope of the claims and the apparent gravity of the litigation, the Court finds no reason based on burden to deny the request. Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that UST's objection to the production of documents from the district level is without merit and UST shall produce responsive documents from district and regional offices.

II.

The next issue taken up at the hearing involved disagreements over the format and other technical details with respect to CD-ROM's used by the plaintiffs to store its multiple boxes of documents. Based on the discussion on the record between counsel, it appears that the differences between the parties are being narrowed and may be eliminated. Accordingly, the Court defers any ruling on this issue.

III.

Defendant UST objects to the designation as confidential by plaintiff of the identity of all persons identified as knowledgeable pursuant to Rule 26. Plaintiff counters that, while it did not initially designate all these individuals as confidential, arguably improper contacts have been made by UST employees with respect to Conwood personnel. Accordingly, plaintiffs have designated the entire list as confidential in order to prevent further contacts.

The purpose of the confidentiality order, however, is not to prevent witness tampering or improper contacts; the purpose of the confidentiality order is rather to protect trade secrets and other confidential material from disclosure. In the view of the Court, the use of the confidentiality designation to prospectively protect against improper contacts is not a proper use of the protective order. Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the motion of UST to remove the designation is GRANTED. However, the Court notes that, should there be any inappropriate contact with witnesses or potential witnesses, the Court would view that matter most seriously and would wish to review any details, where appropriate. The Court is not making any ruling at all as to whether improper contact has occurred, but reminding the parties it has the authority and the readiness to resolve such issues if it becomes necessary.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all issues contained in the pending motions which are not decided in this order are reserved for future rulings.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY,

COMPANY INC. and UST INC. — DEFENDANTS

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

The undersigned Magistrate Judge conducted a hearing on January 19, 1999, concerning the issue of whether the scope of search for documents by defendant UST should extend to documents retained by sales representatives. For the reasons set forth on the record, in more detail,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that defendant UST shall extend its search for responsive documents previously requested to the following categories of documents in the possession, custody or control of sales representatives:

1. Any notes, correspondence, memoranda, day-planner, calendar, journal, or other similar written summary of activities prepared by or retained by a sales representative which relates in any way to any of the alleged anti-competitive activities asserted by the plaintiff in paragraphs 22-31 of the complaint.

2. Any regularly maintained corporate documents, including so-called PAR's and any other related reports, memoranda, summaries, and the like, in the possession, custody or control of the sales representatives for calendar year 1995 or earlier, and responsive to the previously filed document requests.

3. The Magistrate Judge set out in some detail on the record the reasons for the ruling. Briefly, the scope of Rule 26 is broad, and the plaintiff is entitled to discovery documents which are either relevant or may lead to the discovery of relevant evidence. While the testimony at the hearing from the corporate representative was clear that sales representatives should send official documentation "up the chain" to the regional office, the representative did not deny that it was possible that additional documents were individually prepared and maintained by sales representatives. Given the allegations of the complaint, in which some or many of the anti-competitive activities alleged against UST are supposedly carried out by sales representative personnel, it would be an extraordinary result to deny discovery into the files of the sales representatives who are claimed to have implemented supposedly illegal policies.

The assertions of burden by the defendant are essentially conclusory. Defendant did no more than to argue that there are 448 sales representatives, a fact which is not disputed. Defendant presented no evidence concerning the amount of time which it would take to conduct such a search, and given defendant's position that few such documents are maintained, the task of compliance would not be unduly burdensome. Moreover, to the extent that diaries, journals, individual notes, and the like may document or reflect actions alleged by the plaintiff to be anti-competitive or illegal, such individual records would potentially be of considerable significance in plaintiff's attempt to prove its case.

In short, given the indisputable relevance of the documents, to the extent that they are found to exist, and the generalized assertions of burden, the motion to compel will be GRANTED to the limited extent set out above.

The testimony of the corporate representative was uncontradicted that corporate documents are not retained indefinitely (they are "purged," in the language of one of the memoranda), and given the uncontradicted assertion of plaintiff's counsel that some sales representatives do keep corporate reports longer than the period of time for which the corporate document policy extends, it is not illogical to extend the search for relevant documents to a level of the company where documents no longer retained at the corporate level still may exist.

Finally, while merely pleading an antitrust case is not an authorization for discovery without limits, it is also apparent to the Magistrate Judge that the complaint is one brought by one established competitor against a larger, arguably dominant firm, and given the experience and resources of counsel on both sides of the dispute, and the scope of the case, it cannot be said that a thorough search for documents which may be of considerable significance should be limited to exclude a search at the sales representative level.

10:08:32 21 Q. What did you receive?

10:08:34 22 A. Pretty much the same thing that I

10:08:34 23 recall.

10:08:38 24 Q. And did the regional marketing plan

10:08:40 25 was it about the same volume of materials

* * * * *

10:08:42 1 3/eight of an inch?

10:08:42 2 A. I believe so.

10:08:46 3 Q. And what did you do with those

10:08:46 4 materials?

10:08:48 5 A. I still have those.

10:08:50 6 Q. Did anyone ask you to produce those

10:08:54 7 in connection with this litigation?

10:08:54 8 A. No.

10:08:56 9 Q. Did anyone review those materials

10:08:58 10 in connection with this litigation?

10:09:02 11 A. Not that I know of.

* * * * *

10:09:30 21 Q. Did you receive materials at these

10:09:32 22 regional sales meetings?

10:09:34 23 A. I am sure we did.

* * * * *

10:10:40 3 Q. Okay. Let's say how about prior to

10:10:44 4 195 how frequently did you receive a department
10:10:44 5 meetings?
10:10:44 6 A. An.
10:10:46 7 Q. I what material did you receive in 10:10:48 8 file at these meetings?
10:10:48 9 A. I don't recall.
10:10:52 10 Q. Did you receive a department
10:10:52 11 marketing plan for instance,?
10:10:56 12 A. I don't know.
10:11:04 13 Q. Did you receive an agenda for those
10:11:04 14 meetings?
10:11:06 15 A. I assume we did.
10:11:06 16 Q. Any other materials that you
10:11:08 17 received at those meetings?
10:11:12 18 A. I don't recall what they would have 10:11:14 19 been.
10:11:16 20 Q. Do you maintain any documents from 10:11:16 21 those meetings?
10:11:18 22 A. No do I not.
10:11:20 23 Q. Any documents you received in those 10:11:22 24 meetings have come from the department office;
25 is that correct?

* * * * *

10:11:24 1 A. Assume.
10:11:26 2 MR. GORSUCH: John we have received
10:11:28 3 no documents concerning any of Mr. Anundson
10:11:30 4 department meetings and we ask that they be

10:11:34 produce used we will take it under advisement.

10:11:36 Q. How about division sales meetings

10:11:38 did you ever ever attend division sales

10:11:40 meetings?

10:11:40 A. Occasionally.

* * * * *

10:11:56 Q. Do you receive any materials at 10:11:58 these meetings?

10:12:06 A. That's usually when we get the 10:12:08 promotional handouts.

* * * * *

10:12:14 A. Promotions plan of work.

10:12:14 Q. Anything else?

10:12:28 A. There maybe other handouts if the 10:12:30 division manager has something to hand out.

* * * * *

10:12:32 Q. So, would you get materials

10:12:34 concerning any promotions that are running over

10:12:38 that quarter or the next several months is that

10:12:38 the idea?

10:12:38 A. Yes.

10:12:42 Q. And anything -- and you may have

10:12:44 received other materials as well you just don't

10:12:48 remember what they are. Is that your

10:12:48 testimony?

10:12:54 A. If it is pertinent then he would

10:12:54 hand that out.

10:12:56 12 Q. Do you retain any of these
10:12:58 13 materials?
10:13:00 14 A. Only the promotional plan of work.
10:13:02 15 Q. Have you produced any of these in 10:13:04 16 conjunction with this litigation?
10:13:06 17 A. No.

* * * * *

11:09:50 22 Q. When you fill out one of these 11:09:54 23 forms, do you give a copy to the retailer?
11:09:54 24 A. Yes.
11:09:58 25 Q. Do you keep a copy for yourself?

* * * * *

11:09:58 A. Yes.

11:10:00 Q. Do you send a copy to your division manager?

11:10:00 A. No.

11:10:04 Q. Do you send a copy to anyone other than the retailer?

11:10:04 A. No.

11:10:08 Q. So, no one at U.S. Tobacco other than you knows about this issue is that your testimony?

11:10:12 A. Yes.

11:10:18 Q. Do you have any of these forms in your possession presently?

11:10:22 A. Yes.

11:10:26 Q. Did anyone review them for possible production in this case?

11:10:32 A. They are blank.

11:10:36 Q. Sir I'm asking you about ones that you filled out?

11:10:36 A. No.

* * * * *

11:15:16 Q. Do you keep anything else in your van?

11:15:18 A. Just my marketing book.

11:15:26 Q. How big is that?

11:15:28 A. A loose leave binder.

11:15:30

11:15:32 8 Q. The size of this note book here on 11:15:32 9 the table?
11:15:34 10 A. Yes.
11:15:36 11 Q. Can you hold that up so weak have 11:15:38 12 that reflected on the record?
11:15:40 13 A. Marketing.
11:15:44 14 Q. Okay.. How thick is that would you
11:15:46 15 approximate for the record?
11:15:48 16 MR. REED: Are you referring to the
11:15:50 17 one here or the one in his van.
11:15:52 18 MR. GORSUCH: The one in his van?
11:15:54 19 A. Probably about as full as that one.
11:15:58 20 Q. How thick is that in inches would 11:15:58 21 you say?
11:16:00 22 A. Oh an inch and a half.
11:16:04 23 Q. Has anyone ever reviewed either
11:16:06 24 that note book are your file in your van for 11:16:10 25 production -- possible production of materials

11:16:10 1 in this case?
11:16:10 2 A. No.

11:16:16 5 A. No.

28

09:47:06 20 Q. Do you use a retail transaction
09:47:06 21 form?
09:47:08 22 A. Rarely.
09:47:10 23 Q. When would you use a retail
09:47:10 24 transaction form?
09:47:14 25 A. I would use a retail transaction

29

09:47:18 1 form in a case where I would have to sell the
09:47:24 2 store some smokeless tobacco.
09:47:30 3 Q. Is that the only case that you use
09:47:32 4 a retail transaction form?
09:47:34 5 MS. MARINER: Objection. He says
09:47:40 6 he rarely uses a retail transaction form.
09:47:42 7 A. Yes in my area, yes.

10:22:54 24 A. To the best much my recollection.
10:22:58 25 Q. And did you receive periodic

10:23:18 5 Q. How did you know what points you
10:23:22 6 had and what success you had achieved under the
10:23:22 7 A.I.M. program?
10:23:38 8 A. Towards the end of the year you
10:23:42 9 would have an update I am thinking.
10:23:42 10 Q. A written update?
10:23:46 11 A. I think so. , but I'm not positive.

* * * * *

10:24:02 19 Q. What years did the A.I.M. program
10:24:04 20 was it in effect?
10:24:18 21 A. I am not real sure. I am not real
10:24:36 22 sure the years, but I do believe, but I do
10:24:42 23 believe 1992 to 1994. 19 is '91 to 1994. It
10:24:44 24 could have been 12 or three years. Right in 21 week.

10:30:14 22 Q. Six to 10 a week?
10:30:14 23 A. Yeah.
10:30:16 24 Q. To whom are these voice mails
10:30:18 25 directed?

10:30:22 1 A. They are directed to clay u len
10:30:24 2 hag.
10:30:26 3 Q. That is your division manager?
10:30:26 4 A. Right.
10:30:30 5 Q. Did you ever leave voice mail
10:30:32 6 messages for anyone else in the company?
10:30:40 7 A. Sometimes.
10:30:42 8 Q. Who would that be?
10:30:50 9 A. It could be the department
10:31:06 10 manager. Chain manager, that would be about
10:31:08 11 it.
10:31:10 12 Q. How frequently would you say you
10:31:12 13 leave messages for your department manager?

10:31:14 14 A. Once a month.

10:31:16 15 Q. And how about for your chain

10:31:18 16 manager?

10:31:22 17 A. Similar to less. Once a month.

10:31:24 18 Three, five weeks.

10:31:24 19 Q.

10:31:30 20 MR. GORSUCH: None of these voice

10:44:24 7 A. Yes.
10:44:26 8 Q. Can you describe those documents
10:44:26 9 please?
10:44:34 10 A. They are documents -- they would
10:45:00 11 include maybe my past appraisal. Maybe chain
10:45:16 12 a cone authorization letter, files with chain
10:45:18 13 head quarter calls.
10:45:18 14 Q. Anything else?
10:45:24 15 A. From what I can tell you at the top
10:45:26 16 of my head that would be pretty much it.
10:45:30 17 Q. How about your day book, did you
10:45:32 18 copy your day books and send them up?
10:45:32 19 A. No.
10:45:36 20 Q. Is there any correspondence in your
10:45:38 21 possession at your house or in your car that
10:45:42 22 you did not copy and send up?
10:45:42 23 A. Yes.
10:45:44 24 Q. Can you describe that?
10:45:50 25 A. It would be material that I

10:45:54 1 received that originateed from other people
10:45:58 2 within U.S. tobacco. Or information that
10:46:04 3 would be in division manager bill Rhodes files.

10:46:10 4 Q. Do you have any manuals UST manuals
10:46:12 5 in your possession?
10:46:12 6 A. At home.
10:46:14 7 Q. Correct.
10:46:14 8 A. Yes.
10:46:18 9 Q. Those were not provided for 10:46:20 10 production in the litigation?
10:46:20 11 A. By me?
10:46:22 12 Q. Correct.
10:46:22 13 A. Correct.

14:19:30 13 Q. By properly display does that mean
14:19:34 14 you have to have the UST product displayed in a
14:19:36 15 prominent location?
14:19:38 16 A. Not necessarily.
14:19:38 17 Q. What does it mean?
14:19:42 18 A. What does it mean is every brand
14:19:48 19 that they order that they have, in their store
14:19:54 20 in their inventory should been properly
14:20:00 21 identified in the slot. What I mean by that 14:20:06 22 is they can't expect to get returns if they
14:20:10 23 have Skoal band mint and physical bond winter
14:20:14 24 green in the same spots because it is 14:20:18 25 impossible for the vendor oh heck he can.

14:21:04 22 Q. What is the procedure if a store is
14:21:14 23 not (COMPLYING) do you fill out a form?
14:21:16 24 A. Eventually yes. My personal
14:21:20 25 experience is that I work with the proper

14:21:24 1 persons nel. I say way look this is the 14:21:30 2 situation. I back it up with what I am
14:21:34 3 seeing. If I am going to tell you that they 14:21:38 4 are not ordering properly. I am going to tell
14:21:40 5 you why they are not ordering properly and what
14:21:44 6 happened. I am going to know that before I
14:21:46 7 tell you so when you do ask me I can give you
14:21:50 8 an answer. I am going to work with you on 14:21:54 9 this and it may be coming back to the store
14:21:56 10 next week and taking the product out instead of 14:22:00 11 you placing an order and issuing a credit
14:22:04 12 then. I'm going to do everything. If the 14:22:06 13 mem continues here is your warning. If the 14:22:08 14 problem continues here is your warning. If
14:22:10 15 the problem continues you are done. No credit
14:22:12 16 from me.
14:22:14 17 Q. And that's the point when you fill
14:22:16 18 out the none come my answer form?
14:22:20 19 A. Actually I first give a verbal
14:22:22 20 warning and then in possible two written
14:22:24 21 warnings.

15:41:32 4 Q. These were the only retail
15:41:38 5 transaction forms from your documents set that 15:41:42 6 were produced. To the best of your knowledge
15:41:44 7 are there any other retail transaction forms in 15:41:48 8 existence from your files?
15:41:48 9 A. Sure.
15:41:50 10 Q. Where are they?

15:41:52 11 A. I had -- they are hat home.

16:22:24 6 Q. Do you still have day planners your 16:22:26 7 possession Mr. McCarthy?
16:22:28 8 A. No I don't. Just the current
16:22:28 9 year.
16:22:30 10 Q. What happened to the other ones?
16:22:30 11 A. I though them out.
16:22:32 12 Q. You got the ones for the current
16:22:34 13 year, correct?
16:22:38 14 A. Correct. 1999.
16:22:40 15 Q. So, do you have the one for 1998?
16:22:42 16 A. No, I don't.
16:22:42 17 MR. BENZ: Still would I ask that
16:22:44 18 the day planner for 1999 be produced.
16:22:46 19 MR. REED: I take it under 16:22:46 20 advisement.

26

09:53:32 24 Q. Do you use a retail transaction

09:53:36 25 form in your duties as a sales representative?

09:53:36 1 A. Yes.

09:53:40 2 Q. When did you use a retail

09:53:40 3 transaction form?

09:53:48 4 A. When I sale a customer a role of a

09:53:54 5 product. Or transactions made in the store.

09:55:32 4 Q. Are you familiar with a

09:55:32 5 noncompliance form?

09:55:34 6 A. Yes.

09:55:36 7 Q. What is a noncompliance form?

09:55:50 8 A. It is a form used to control

09:55:52 9 damaged goods.

09:56:00 10 Q. How do you use the noncompliance

09:56:04 11 form to control damaged goods?

09:56:10 12 A. As I would use it in my work?

09:56:14 13 Because I don't use it.

09:56:18 14 Q. Have you ever filled out a none

09:56:20 15 come my answer form on a retail account?

09:56:20 16 A. Yes.

09:56:22 17 Q. Why did you fill out the

09:56:24 18 noncompliance form?

09:56:28 19 A. After talking with store personnel

09:56:32 20 about a damage mem and they did not do anything

09:56:36 21 to correct it. They forced me to sign a

09:56:40 22 noncompliance form.

12:01:22 22 vending system in an E-Z Mart you remove that

12:01:24 23 competitive easy system?

12:01:26 24 A. I show the management the picture

12:01:30 25 and they decide what to do with the vendor.

87

12:01:34 1 Q. What if they decide to do nothing

12:01:34 2 with the vendor?

12:01:38 3 A. I try to show them who the 12:01:42 4 authorization kind by. And it is from their

12:01:52 5 own chain. And if they don't go by the

12:01:56 6 assigned Plan-o-gram then I can't force them to 12:01:56 7 do anything.

12:02:00 8 Q. Do you bring it to the attention of 12:02:02 9 your division manager?

12:02:02 10 A. Sometimes.

12:02:06 11 Q. How do you bring it to the

12:02:08 12 attention of your division manager?

12:02:14 13 A. Sometimes I may voice mail him.

09:37:54 23 Q. What happened to the materials from
09:37:56 24 these meetings over the years that you
09:37:58 25 accumulated?

09:38:00 1 A. I don't act late materials.
09:38:04 2 Materials that I have gotten from years passed
09:38:06 3 I don't keep it.
09:38:10 4 Q. These were generateed by your --
09:38:14 5 well by whom were they generated the materials?
09:38:16 6 A. I really couldn't tell you who
09:38:16 7 generated them.
09:38:20 8 Q. Let me ask you where they came from
09:38:22 9 then. In the case of your division meetings
09:38:24 10 they did come from your division mer?
09:38:26 11 A. In the case ever a division
09:38:30 12 mountain, for example, yes.
09:38:30 13 Q. So in a department meeting they
09:38:32 14 come from your department manager right?
09:38:34 15 A. I don't know who puts out the
09:38:36 16 material. They are there on the table to pick
09:38:40 17 up or pass out on the table. It may be
09:38:42 18 generated by the department manager or his
09:38:44 19 secretary or whoever.
09:38:46 20 Q. It comes out of the department's
09:38:48 21 office though isn't that right?
09:38:48 22 A. I believe so.
09:38:50 23 Q. And in the case of the regional

09:38:52 24 meetings it comes out of regional offers
09:38:54 25 doesn't it?

09:38:54 1 A. I believe so.
09:38:58 2 Q. Again, we have received none of
09:39:02 3 these materials and I would ask that they been
09:39:02 4 produced?
09:39:02 5 MR. REED: I understand the
09:39:08 6 request.
09:39:10 7 MR. GORSUCH: Does that mean you
09:39:14 8 would take it under advisement to produce it or
09:39:16 9 you merely understand the question.
09:39:18 10 MR. REED: Neil we will always

10:25:42 12 Q. Let me ask you is do you keep a
10:25:46 13 calendar or diary or day book?
10:25:48 14 A. I keep a day planer.
10:25:50 15 Q. And do you keep that day planner
10:25:52 16 can you use it in conjunction with your 10:25:54 17 business activities as a sales representative?
10:25:56 18 A. Yes, I do.
10:25:58 19 MR. GORSUCH: I ask that that be
10:26:00 20 produced we have not seen that either.
10:26:02 21 MR. REED: I understand the
10:26:04 22 question. Request. We take it under 10:26:06 23 advisement.

10:26:54 Q. Do you maintain or keep Retail Transaction Forms?
10:26:56 A. I don't keep any.
10:26:58 Q. Is what do you do with them?
10:27:06 A. In some cases I send them onto my division manager very few. And my copy of the retail transaction I through away.
10:27:18 Q. And there is a copy for you, there is a copy for the retailer and a copy for you your divsion manager; is that right?
10:27:26 A. There is on the form, but is it not required to send them?
10:27:32 Q. But do you send some into your division manager isn't that right?
10:27:38 A. I sent some in the past I believe.
10:27:40 Q. How many would you say you would

10:27:42 send in a year or a month or any period of time?
10:27:46 A. Well, maybe five, 10 a year.
10:27:52 MR. GORSUCH: We asked that these be produced we have not seen any retail transaction formation for Mr. Zahrt.
10:28:00 MR. REED: Take it under advisement.
10:28:06 Q. Is how about noncompliance reports, do you keep copies of those?
10:28:14 A. I have kept copies of them in the 10:28:18 12 past. I may even have a couple of copies now.

10:28:22 13 Q. And do you also forward copies of 10:28:24 14 none come plains reports to your division
10:28:24 15 manager?
10:28:28 16 A. To my division manager correct.
10:28:28 17 Q. How many reports would you forward
10:28:34 18 to him in a year or a month or any given period
19 of time?
10:28:38 20 A. It varies. It could be zero. It
10:28:42 21 could be three or four or five. Again I don't 22 know.
10:28:46 23 Q. Somewhere between zero and five a
10:28:48 24 year though you think you send?
10:28:50 25 A. It could well be.

10:28:52 1 Q. Could it be more?
10:28:54 2 A. It could be a few more. Not
10:28:56 3 probably too many more.
10:28:58 4 Q. So, it may be between zero and
10:28:58 5 eight a year?
10:29:04 6 A. I would say zero to 10 probably.
10:29:08 7 MR. GORSUCH: I would ask that these
10:29:12 8 be produced. We have not seen any compliance
10:29:14 9 reports from Mr. Zahrt or his division

10:35:12 10 A. There is no set amount of time.
10:35:14 11 Q. Just as a matter of course sir?
10:35:16 12 A. At least once a week.
10:35:18 13 Q. At least once a week. Thank you?
10:35:18 14 MR. GORSUCH: Is we have received no
10:35:22 15 voice mail either I asked that they be produced
10:35:24 16 to the extent that they still exist.
10:35:26 17 MR. REED: I will take it under

10:35:32 19 Q. Did other sales representatives
10:35:36 20 report to your division manager using voice
21 mail?
10:35:36 22 MR. REED: Objection. To the
10:35:38 23 extent it calls for speculation.
10:35:42 24 Q. Go ahead and answer it if you know?

10:35:44 25 A. I believe they do.

10:35:46 1 Q. Do you know how frequently they
10:35:50 2 leave voice mail reports for their division
10:35:50 3 manager?
10:35:50 4 A. No, I do not.
10:36:02 5 Q. Did your division manager ever tell
10:36:04 6 you as a group, sales representatives in the 10:36:08 7 division, to leave him regular voice mail
8 messages?
10:36:14 9 A. He asked me to call him every 10:36:20 10 Friday evening. And I believe that that's the 10:36:22 11 entire division.
10:36:24 12 Q. The same rule applies to the other
10:36:26 13 sales representatives?
10:36:28 14 A. I believe so.

10:42:06 15 MR. REED: Objection asked and
10:42:10 16 answered.
10:42:12 17 A. I answered that yes, I got a letter
10:42:16 18 from my boss from my division manager.

10:42:16 19 Q. Setting your goals right?
10:42:18 20 A. We set the goals together.
10:42:22 21 Q. And you also got to being uments
10:42:28 22 how you sucessed or failed on those goals
10:42:28 23 haven't you?
10:42:34 24 A. I believe at the end of the program
10:42:40 25 we get a statement saying you ahead of four out

10:42:44 1 of whatever goals so you got so many points.
10:42:50 2 Q. You also got documents about the
10:42:52 3 merchandise, isn't that right?
10:42:54 4 A. Of merchandise.
10:42:56 5 Q. And you got written information
10:42:58 6 about how many points you would spend in that
10:43:00 7 catalog; isn't that right?
10:43:02 8 A. We got a thing that said how many
10:43:04 9 points we had right.
10:43:04 10 MR. GORSUCH: We received no
10:43:06 11 information from Mr. Zahrt or any other sales

15:14:28 11 Q. And when you do discontinue it do

15:14:30 12 you create a form fill out a form I'm sorry?

15:14:32 13 A. Yes we do.

15:14:36 14 Q. And what happens to those forms?

15:14:42 15 A. They get sent onto my supervisor.

15:14:44 16 Q. How many of those do you fill out a

15:14:44 17 year?

15:14:48 18 A. I have no idea.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Gentlemen:

While we are still reviewing defendants' most recent document productions, there are a few issues we would like to raise.

1. Agreements with Retailers/Distributors

It appears that many responsive agreements with retailers or distributors are missing. For example:

- You have produced documents that expressly reference approximately 20 different agreements with large retail chains that cannot be located in your production. We list some examples in Exhibit A.

- At USTC/CWD 173906 you will find a copy of a form UST agreement entitled "Free Standing Display #2908 Placement Agreement." The two pages following the form agreement suggest its widespread use in the marketplace. However, we see no executed copies in your production.

- The "Copenhagen Incentive Program" appears to be another form UST-retailer agreement. We have not found any executed versions in your production.

- Documents produced to you reflect an agreement between UST and the Uncle Willie's chain. See Complaint Exh. I. We have not found copies of this agreement in your production.

For at least 8 months, we have sought a complete production of all responsive agreements, yet production is still not complete. Please make a prompt and complete production.

2. Sales Representative Files

You have produced documents from fewer than 10% of your 443 sales representatives. In total, these documents fill less than 1 box (i.e., constitute fewer than 1000 pages). Yet you represent that your sales representative production is substantially complete.

This representation is difficult to understand, especially given the volume of documents that have been produced by three former UST representatives in response to our subpoenas. Mr. Carter has produced 74 documents dated 1995 or earlier. Mr. Welsh has produced 364 pages, many dated 1995 or earlier. Ms. Weatherly has produced 547 pages, almost all of which are dated 1995 or earlier. These three ex-UST sales representatives alone have produced nearly as many documents as defendants have for all of their 448 representatives combined.

Please undertake a full and complete production of your sales representatives' files and explain how you have conducted your search to date.

3. MSA Production

We have received what defendants represent is a machine-readable version of "USTC data on MSA systems." We have not received the software USTC uses to access such data. We are prepared to proceed without such software so long as the USTC data proves readable and searchable -- and so long as it is understood that defendants will not seek to exploit the fact that the plaintiffs do not have access to the unproduced software. In this regard, we believe it would be appropriate for defendants to enter into a written stipulation in which they explicitly waive their right to make any argument, contention, representation, or claim to the court or jury, or elicit any testimony, that is based, directly or indirectly, on the fact that plaintiffs did not have access to this software. Please advise us whether this is acceptable so that we may know how to proceed.

Similarly, defendants' explanation that they are providing "USTC data on MSA systems" raises the question whether defendants can access other, non-USTC data on MSA systems. Please advise us whether defendants have such a capacity, what kinds of data they can access, and whether defendants plan to make use of such data in this lawsuit.

Do not hesitate to call if you would like to discuss any of the above.

Very truly yours,

Neil Gorsuch/jms

Gentlemen:

We wrote you March 16, 1999 concerning the apparent incompleteness of defendants' sales representative production. We asked you to undertake a more thorough search. On March 18 you responded by insisting that your production was already thorough and complete.

In subsequent depositions UST sales representatives have testified to the existence of category after category of unproduced documents. We ask that the materials identified at deposition be produced. We also ask that you undertake a new, more thorough search of sales representative and division files.

Please advise us of your position on these requests by April 5, 1999. Likewise, please do not hesitate to call should you like to discuss the above or have any questions.

Very truly yours,

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We received Mr. Gorsuch's letter of March 16, 1999, which purports to raise issues concerning Defendants' document production. A review of the letter and the referenced documents indicates that Plaintiffs seek to raise issues where none exist. Accordingly, as explained below, further discussion of these "issues" between counsel will serve no worthwhile purpose.

1. Agreements With Retailers/Distributors

Syllogistically, the existence of the documents listed in Exhibit A is not sufficient to support Plaintiffs' conclusion that any written agreements were not produced by Defendants in the course of discovery. Not one of these documents indicates that any further written agreements exist. In fact, several of the documents listed on Exhibit A clearly are memorializations of prior conversations -- which, as you must know, would not have been created if any written agreement had existed.

Plaintiffs also refer specifically to the "Free Standing Display #2908 Placement Agreement" as well as two additional pages that "suggest its widespread use in the marketplace." Nothing in these documents proves that there exist "executed copies" of any written agreement.

Plaintiffs speculate that the Copenhagen Incentive Program "appears to be another form UST-retailer agreement," and based on that speculation, state that there are no "executed versions" in Defendants' production. Once again, Plaintiffs' assumptions are simply wrong, as are the conclusions that follow. This same pattern of speculation followed by faulty conclusion also holds true for Plaintiffs' reference to Complaint Ex. I.

In contrast to Plaintiffs' speculative assertions, please note the following concrete indications of deficiencies in Plaintiffs' production:

- Defendants have brought to Plaintiffs' attention several documents from Plaintiffs' production that unequivocally indicate that Conwood sales representatives communicate about subject matter pertinent to this lawsuit via e-mail. No e-mails have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also have brought to Plaintiffs' attention documents that unequivocally indicate that higher level sales personnel were provided with computer equipment and software for the purpose of providing sales reports to Conwood management. No such computer documents have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also brought to Plaintiffs' attention that it was difficult to believe that Conwood did not maintain any sales databases. While at USTC's Greenwich facilities, Mr. Conyngham represented to me that a mainframe computer system is, in fact, maintained by Conwood and that Mr. Conyngham would provide me with a list of the types of sales documents stored on that system. Now, over two weeks later – in which time Plaintiffs took it upon themselves to complain that Defendants did not need two weeks to produce an entire 15-Gigabyte STARS II database – no list has been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also brought to Plaintiffs' attention that no work-product immunity attached to the complete set of video tapes used to create the obviously-edited Complaint Exhibit C video tape. Plaintiffs withdrew their baseless work-product objection and represented that all video tapes would be produced. No video tapes have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

Please provide all of the information Plaintiffs have failed to provide thus far no later than Friday, March 26, 1999, so that we will know what issues need to be resolved by Magistrate Judge Moyer.

2. Sales Representative Files

Pursuant to the Court's Order, Defendants have made a full and complete production of documents from the files of USTC sales representatives.

3. MSA Production

As noted in Plaintiffs' letter, Plaintiffs have received the information contained on the RAD database in machine-readable format. Plaintiffs now suggest that Defendants should enter into a stipulation that would limit Defendants' ability to examine the way in which this data is used by Plaintiffs. Defendants will entertain no such stipulation.

Plaintiffs also "raise[] a question" based on language from a letter memorializing an agreement between and among USTC, Plaintiffs, and MSA, Inc. With respect to Plaintiffs' inquiry as to what other data Defendants have access to, Defendants respond as follows: Defendants have provided Plaintiffs with a complete list of the computer systems used by USTC; Plaintiffs have sought the production of certain databases that Plaintiffs selected from the provided list; Defendants have provided Plaintiffs with complete access to the requested databases. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have obtained all discovery from USTC to which it is entitled.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call me.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We received Mr. Gorsuch's letter of April 1, 1999, which, once again, presumes deficiencies in Defendants' document production from USTC sales representatives. As we informed you by letter on March 18, 1999, Defendants' document production is in full compliance with the Court's January 20, 1999 Order.

Mr. Gorsuch's letter states that USTC sales representatives have testified in depositions as to "category after category of unproduced documents." This assertion is unsupported by the record. A review of the deposition transcripts will make it readily apparent that Defendants have complied in full with the Court's Order. In order for Defendants to address your stated concerns, however, please provide specific transcript cites to any testimony that concerns categories of documents called for by the Court's January 20, 1999 Order that were not produced. Should Plaintiffs identify any such testimony, Defendants, of course, will produce any and all referenced documents to the extent they exist.

If you have any questions or would care to discuss these issues further, please do not hesitate to call.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION CONCERNING UST SALES FORCE FILES

This motion is being filed now in the interest of time.

Although just six UST sales representatives have been deposed so far, each deponent has confirmed that entire categories of responsive sales force documents remain unproduced. UST has not fully produced sales force files despite Conwood's document requests outstanding for nearly a year, a December 16, 1998 court order requiring production of division office files (Exh. A), and a court order, entered after a lengthy evidentiary hearing, mandating production from sales representatives' files (Exh. B).

The six UST sales representatives deposed to date have testified that they keep unproduced day books recording their sales activities.[1] They have conceded that they use home computers for business purposes and that these computers have not been searched.[2] They have testified that they generate unproduced "Retail Transaction Forms" recording agreements with retailers.[3] They have testified that they keep or send to division managers "noncompliance reports" on retailers who fail to meet UST demands.[4] They have testified that they have completed unproduced forms discontinuing credit to stores that fail to comply with UST policies.[5] They have confirmed the existence of unproduced training materials.[6] They have admitted that they received unproduced documents concerning a key sales incentive program.[7] They have testified to the existence of unproduced daily voice mail messages between themselves and their supervisors.[8] Some sales representatives testified that they have written "monthly competitive reports" or "daily call

In all, UST has produced documents from fewer than ten percent of its 448 sales representatives. Its entire sales representative production fills less than 1 box and is less than 1000 pages. Meanwhile, in response to our subpoenas three former UST representatives alone have produced an equal quantity of material. And Conwood sales representatives have produced over 450,000 pages.

We twice sought to resolve this matter without court intervention (Exhs. D & E). Both times, UST rebuffed our overtures (Exhs. F & G).

There is no good reason for UST's refusal to heed the Court's months-old rulings. Further production delay seriously prejudices Conwood's ability to conduct depositions and complete fact discovery by the Court's August 1 deadline. To remedy UST's persistent refusal to supply reasonable discovery of these materials, the Court should order Conwood full and unfettered review of UST division and sales representative files. The Court should further order UST barred from using in its defense the few documents it has selectively chosen to produce from sales representative and division files. See Rule 37(b)(2)(B).

vs. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC. — DEFENDANTS

ORDER

This matter is before the Court on motions of plaintiff to compel production of discovery materials. (Docket Nos. 29 and 35). Defendant has responded, (Docket Nos. 31 and 36), and plaintiff has replied. (Docket Nos. 32 and 37). The matter was referred to the Magistrate Judge for decision pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A), (Docket No. 39), and a hearing was held on the motions on December 11, 1998.

I.

Plaintiffs have moved to compel a broader range of discovery from defendants. More particularly, plaintiffs seek to compel the production of weekly and other regular reports from sales representatives, most especially at the district office level, but also at the regional office level. These reports, in the view of Conwood, may well document the alleged exclusionary conduct of UST carried out, inter alia, through actions of UST sales representatives with respect to distribution racks in stores. UST argues that, if any conduct is to be attributable to the corporation, it must be centrally directed and not merely the unauthorized or spontaneous actions of sales representatives. This argument is unavailing. The Court is of the view that, even if it were true that for there to be liability such conduct must be centrally directed, there could well exist documentation at a "grassroots" level which would corroborate or document the implementation of a centrally planned policy. To say that the policy is directed from above does not mean it may not be documented from below.

In addition, UST also argues that, in addition to its contention that the documents are of "weak relevance," the collection of the data would be burdensome. However, it has not particularized this objection, and in view of the significant scope of the claims and the apparent gravity of the litigation, the Court finds no reason based on burden to deny the request. Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that UST's objection to the production of documents from the district level is without merit and UST shall produce responsive documents from district and regional offices.

II.

The next issue taken up at the hearing involved disagreements over the format and other technical details with respect to CD-ROM's used by the plaintiffs to store its multiple boxes of documents. Based on the discussion on the record between counsel, it appears that the differences between the parties are being narrowed and may be eliminated. Accordingly, the Court defers any ruling on this issue.

III.

Defendant UST objects to the designation as confidential by plaintiff of the identity of all persons identified as knowledgeable pursuant to Rule 26. Plaintiff counters that, while it did not initially designate all these individuals as confidential, arguably improper contacts have been made by UST employees with respect to Conwood personnel. Accordingly, plaintiffs have designated the entire list as confidential in order to prevent further contacts.

16diii001640

The purpose of the confidentiality order, however, is not to prevent witness tampering or improper contacts; the purpose of the confidentiality order is rather to protect trade secrets and other confidential material from disclosure. In the view of the Court, the use of the confidentiality designation to prospectively protect against improper contacts is not a proper use of the protective order. Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the motion of UST to remove the designation is GRANTED. However, the Court notes that, should there be any inappropriate contact with witnesses or potential witnesses, the Court would view that matter most seriously and would wish to review any details, where appropriate. The Court is not making any ruling at all as to whether improper contact has occurred, but reminding the parties it has the authority and the readiness to resolve such issues if it becomes necessary.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all issues contained in the pending motions which are not decided in this order are reserved for future rulings.

vs. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY,
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING
COMPANY INC. and UST INC. — DEFENDANTS

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

The undersigned Magistrate Judge conducted a hearing on January 19, 1999, concerning the issue of whether the scope of search for documents by defendant UST should extend to documents retained by sales representatives. For the reasons set forth on the record, in more detail,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that defendant UST shall extend its search for responsive documents previously requested to the following categories of documents in the possession, custody or control of sales representatives:

1. Any notes, correspondence, memoranda, day-planner, calendar, journal, or other similar written summary of activities prepared by or retained by a sales representative which relates in any way to any of the alleged anti-competitive activities asserted by the plaintiff in paragraphs 22-31 of the complaint.

2. Any regularly maintained corporate documents, including so-called PAR's and any other related reports, memoranda, summaries, and the like, in the possession, custody or control of the sales representatives for calendar year 1995 or earlier, and responsive to the previously filed document requests.

3. The Magistrate Judge set out in some detail on the record the reasons for the ruling. Briefly, the scope of Rule 26 is broad, and the plaintiff is entitled to discovery documents which are either relevant or may lead to the discovery of relevant evidence. While the testimony at the hearing from the corporate representative was clear that sales representatives should send official documentation "up the chain" to the regional office, the representative did not deny that it was possible that additional documents were individually prepared and maintained by sales representatives. Given the allegations of the complaint, in which some or many of the anti-competitive activities alleged against UST are supposedly carried out by sales representative personnel, it would be an extraordinary result to deny discovery into the files of the sales representatives who are claimed to have implemented supposedly illegal policies.

The assertions of burden by the defendant are essentially conclusory. Defendant did no more than to argue that there are 448 sales representatives, a fact which is not disputed. Defendant presented no evidence concerning the amount of time which it would take to conduct such a search, and given defendant's position that few such documents are maintained, the task of compliance would not be unduly burdensome. Moreover, to the extent that diaries, journals, individual notes, and the like may document or reflect actions alleged by the plaintiff to be anti-competitive or illegal, such individual records would potentially be of considerable significance in plaintiff's attempt to prove its case.

In short, given the indisputable relevance of the documents, to the extent that they are found to exist, and the generalized assertions of burden, the motion to compel will be GRANTED to the limited extent set out above.

The testimony of the corporate representative was uncontradicted that corporate documents are not retained indefinitely (they are "purged," in the language of one of the memoranda), and given the uncontradicted assertion of plaintiff's counsel that some sales representatives do keep corporate reports longer than the period of time for which the corporate document policy extends, it is not illogical to extend the search for relevant documents to a level of the company where documents no longer retained at the corporate level still may exist.

Finally, while merely pleading an antitrust case is not an authorization for discovery without limits, it is also apparent to the Magistrate Judge that the complaint is one brought by one established competitor against a larger, arguably dominant firm, and given the experience and resources of counsel on both sides of the dispute, and the scope of the case, it cannot be said that a thorough search for documents which may be of considerable significance should be limited to exclude a search at the sales representative level.

* * * * *

09:43:34 25 A. Yes.

09:43:36 1 Q. Notes concerning your meetings with 09:43:42 2 retailers and distributors amongst others; is 3 that correct?

09:43:42 4 A. No.

09:43:44 5 Q. Sir you have testified notes about

09:43:46 6 when you were to meet with people; is that

7 correct?

09:43:50 8 A. Yes.

09:43:52 9 Q. Some of those meetings included

09:43:56 10 meetings with retailers and distributors didn't

09:43:56 11 they?

09:43:56 12 MR. REED: Objection. Misstates

09:44:10 13 the testimony.

09:44:14 14 A. The notes may say I need to schedule an

09:44:18 15 appointment with a contribute tor a retail

09:44:18 16 chain.

09:44:20 17 Q. As well as notes about scheduling

09:44:36 25 A. No.

* * * * *

09:44:36 1 Q. Why not?
09:44:40 2 A. They schedule meetings with me.
09:44:42 3 Q. Wouldn't you reflect that in your
09:44:44 4 day planner?
09:44:50 5 A. Possibly.
09:44:54 6 Q. And did any layer ever review your 09:44:54 7 day planner?
09:44:56 8 A. No.
09:44:58 9 Q. So, you just made the unilateral
09:45:02 10 judgment that those entries in your 1999 day
09:45:06 11 planner were not relevant to this lawsuit
09:45:06 12 didn't?
09:45:06 13 MR. REED: Objection.
09:45:10 14 Q. Go ahead and answer it.
09:45:10 15 A. Yes.

10:08:30 19 the 1998 national sales meeting?

10:08:30 20 A. Yes.

10:08:32 21 Q. What did you receive?

10:08:34 22 A. Pretty much the same thing that I

10:08:34 23 recall.

10:08:38 24 Q. And did the regional marketing plan

10:08:40 25 was it about the same volume of materials

* * * * *

10:08:42 1 3/eight of an inch?

10:08:42 2 A. I believe so.

10:08:46 3 Q. And what did you do with those

10:08:46 4 materials?

10:08:48 5 A. I still have those.

10:08:50 6 Q. Did anyone ask you to produce those

10:08:54 7 in connection with this litigation?

10:08:54 8 A. No.

10:08:56 9 Q. Did anyone review those materials

10:08:58 10 in connection with this litigation?

10:09:02 11 A. Not that I know of.

* * * * *

10:09:30 21 Q. Did you receive materials at these

10:09:32 22 regional sales meetings?

10:09:34 23 A. I am sure we did.

* * * * *

10:10:40 3 Q. Okay. Let's say how about prior to

10:10:44 4 195 how frequently did you receive a department
10:10:44 5 meetings?
10:10:44 6 A. An.
10:10:46 7 Q. I what material did you receive in 10:10:48 8 file at these meetings?
10:10:48 9 A. I don't recall.
10:10:52 10 Q. Did you receive a department
10:10:52 11 marketing plan for instance,?
10:10:56 12 A. I don't know.
10:11:04 13 Q. Did you receive an agenda for those
10:11:04 14 meetings?
10:11:06 15 A. I assume we did.
10:11:06 16 Q. Any other materials that you
10:11:08 17 received at those meetings?
10:11:12 18 A. I don't recall what they would have 10:11:14 19 been.
10:11:16 20 Q. Do you maintain any documents from 10:11:16 21 those meetings?
10:11:18 22 A. No do I not.
10:11:20 23 Q. Any documents you received in those 10:11:22 24 meetings have come from the department office;
25 is that correct?

* * * * *

10:11:24 1 A. Assume.
10:11:26 2 MR. GORSUCH: John we have received
10:11:28 3 no documents concerning any of Mr. Anundson
10:11:30 4 department meetings and we ask that they be

10:11:34 produce used we will take it under advisement.

10:11:36 Q. How about division sales meetings

10:11:38 did you ever ever attend division sales

10:11:40 meetings?

10:11:40 A. Occasionally.

* * * * *

10:11:56 Q. Do you receive any materials at

10:11:58 these meetings?

10:12:06 A. That's usually when we get the 10:12:08 promotional handouts.

* * * * *

10:12:14 A. Promotions plan of work.

10:12:14 Q. Anything else?

10:12:28 A. There maybe other handouts if the 10:12:30 division manager has something to hand out.

* * * * *

10:12:32 Q. So, would you get materials

10:12:34 concerning any promotions that are running over

10:12:38 that quarter or the next several months is that

10:12:38 the idea?

10:12:38 A. Yes.

10:12:42 Q. And anything -- and you may have

10:12:44 received other materials as well you just don't

10:12:48 remember what they are. Is that your

10:12:48 testimony?

10:12:54 A. If it is pertinent then he would

10:12:54 hand that out.

10:12:56 12 Q. Do you retain any of these
10:12:58 13 materials?
10:13:00 14 A. Only the promotional plan of work.
10:13:02 15 Q. Have you produced any of these in 10:13:04 16 conjunction with this litigation?
10:13:06 17 A. No.

11:06:56 14 concerning the A.I.M. Program?
11:06:58 15 A. No.
11:07:02 16 Q. Where did you receive these 11:07:04 17 documents from?
11:07:12 18 A. The division manager I believe.
11:07:14 19 MR. GORSUCH: We have received none
11:07:18 20 of Mr. Anundson's AIM documents or from other 11:07:22 21 places I ask for it to be produced.

11:10:12 A. Yes.

11:10:18 Q. Do you have any of these forms in your possession presently?

11:10:22 A. Yes.

11:10:26 Q. Did anyone review them for possible production in this case?

11:10:32 A. They are blank.

11:10:36 Q. Sir I'm asking you about ones that you filled out?

11:10:36 A. No.

* * * * *

11:15:16 Q. Do you keep anything else in your van?

11:15:18 A. Just my marketing book.

11:15:26 Q. How big is that?

11:15:28 A. A loose leave binder.

11:15:30

11:15:32 8 Q. The size of this note book here on 11:15:32 9 the table?
11:15:34 10 A. Yes.
11:15:36 11 Q. Can you hold that up so weak have 11:15:38 12 that reflected on the record?
11:15:40 13 A. Marketing.
11:15:44 14 Q. Okay.. How thick is that would you
11:15:46 15 approximate for the record?
11:15:48 16 MR. REED: Are you referring to the
11:15:50 17 one here or the one in his van.
11:15:52 18 MR. GORSUCH: The one in his van?
11:15:54 19 A. Probably about as full as that one.
11:15:58 20 Q. How thick is that in inches would
11:15:58 21 you say?
11:16:00 22 A. Oh an inch and a half.
11:16:04 23 Q. Has anyone ever reviewed either
11:16:06 24 that note book are your file in your van for 11:16:10 25 production -- possible production of materials

11:16:16 5 A. No.

28

09:47:06 20 Q. Do you use a retail transaction
09:47:06 21 form?
09:47:08 22 A. Rarely.
09:47:10 23 Q. When would you use a retail
09:47:10 24 transaction form?
09:47:14 25 A. I would use a retail transaction

29

09:47:18 1 form in a case where I would have to sell the
09:47:24 2 store some smokeless tobacco.
09:47:30 3 Q. Is that the only case that you use
09:47:32 4 a retail transaction form?
09:47:34 5 MS. MARINER: Objection. He says
09:47:40 6 he rarely uses a retail transaction form.
09:47:42 7 A. Yes in my area, yes.

09:55:02 17 Q. , in fact, it was a binder of 09:55:04 18 materials that you received at the national 09:55:06 19 sales meeting; is that right?

09:55:08 20 A. Yes, it was something like a
09:55:08 21 binder.
09:55:10 22 Q. It was in a binder was it not sir?
09:55:12 23 MS. MARINER: Objection. Asked and
09:55:12 24 answered?

10:22:20 11 Q. How did you know what your 10:22:22 12 objectives were under the A.I.M. program?
10:22:34 13 A. There had to be a communication
10:22:36 14 prepare, yes.

* * * * *

10:22:48 21 Q. But to the best of your
10:22:50 22 recollection were there A.I.M. program
10:22:52 23 documents?
10:22:54 24 A. To the best much my recollection.
10:22:58 25 Q. And did you receive periodic

10:23:18 5 Q. How did you know what points you
10:23:22 6 had and what success you had achieved under the
10:23:22 7 A.I.M. program?
10:23:38 8 A. Towards the end of the year you
10:23:42 9 would have an update I am thinking.
10:23:42 10 Q. A written update?
10:23:46 11 A. I think so. , but I'm not positive.

* * * * *

10:24:02 19 Q. What years did the A.I.M. program
10:24:04 20 was it in effect?
10:24:18 21 A. I am not real sure. I am not real
10:24:36 22 sure the years, but I do believe, but I do
10:24:42 23 believe 1992 to 1994. 19 is '91 to 1994. It
10:24:44 24 could have been 12 or three years. Right in 10:24:44 25 there.

10:24:46 1 MR. GORSUCH: Counsel we have 10:24:50 2 received no documents either pertaining to this

10:28:06 7 Q. Fair enough. Did you receive any 10:28:08 8 materials at these training courses?
10:28:14 9 A. I am sure we did.
10:28:18 10 Q. And did these materials pertain to 10:28:20 11 your activities as a sales representative?
10:28:24 12 A. I am sure it did.
10:28:24 13 Q. I?
10:28:26 14 MR. GORSUCH: I would ask that these
10:28:30 15 be produced as well we have received anything
10:28:32 16 from the act one or act two programs from U.S.
17 Tobacco.
10:28:34 18 MS. MARINER: Counsel we'll take it

10:29:44 14 Q. But on a weekly basis let's say
10:29:46 15 approximately how many voice mail messages
10:29:48 16 would you leave for your superiors?
10:29:50 17 MS. MARINER: Same objection.
10:29:52 18 A. It varies. It varies.
10:29:54 19 Q. Can you give me a low and a high?
10:30:12 20 A. Six or seven, eight. Six to 10 a
21 week.
10:30:14 22 Q. Six to 10 a week?
10:30:14 23 A. Yeah.
10:30:16 24 Q. To whom are these voice mails
10:30:18 25 directed?

10:30:22 1 A. They are directed to clay u len
10:30:24 2 hag.
10:30:26 3 Q. That is your division manager?
10:30:26 4 A. Right.
10:30:30 5 Q. Did you ever leave voice mail
10:30:32 6 messages for anyone else in the company?
10:30:40 7 A. Sometimes.
10:30:42 8 Q. Who would that be?
10:30:50 9 A. It could be the department
10:31:06 10 manager. Chain manager, that would be about
10:31:08 11 it.
10:31:10 12 Q. How frequently would you say you
10:31:12 13 leave messages for your department manager?

10:31:14 14 A. Once a month.

10:31:16 15 Q. And how about for your chain

10:31:18 16 manager?

10:31:22 17 A. Similar to less. Once a month.

10:31:24 18 Three, five weeks.

10:31:24 19 Q.

10:31:30 20 MR. GORSUCH: None of these voice

10:31:32 21 mail messages have been produced. We ask that

10:39:00 4 A. No.

10:39:02 5 Q. You have never written a letter?

10:39:04 6 A. I will take it back. I have 10:39:06 7 written a letter on it.

10:39:08 8 Q. You have written?

10:39:10 9 A. And it is an old computer.

10:39:12 10 Q. Have you written just one letter on 10:39:14 11 it or have you written more than a letter on

10:39:16 12 it?

10:39:16 13 A. I have written more than a letter

10:39:18 14 on it.

10:39:52 9 Q. To whom are these letters directed

10:39:52 10 sir?

10:39:58 11 A. They would be to clay.

10:40:00 12 Q. Your division manager?

10:40:00 13 A. Yes.

10:40:18 14 Q. Okay. Who else.

10:40:22 15 A. Tom Kemper the department manager

10:40:24 16 and chain accounts representative.

10:40:26 17 Q. Is has anyone searched your 10:40:28 18 computer for responsive materials in this case?

10:40:32 19 MS. MARINER: I am going to object

10:40:34 20 to that as vague.

10:40:36 21 Q. Let me ask you this, has anyone

10:40:38 22 asked to you produce or to look for any

10:40:42 23 responsive documents on your computer there

10:40:42 24 this case?

10:40:44 25 MS. MARINER: Objection. Same

10:40:44 1 socks.

10:40:46 2 Q. Go ahead and answer it?

10:40:46 3 A. No.

10:40:48 4 Q. Would you be willing to do so if 10:40:50 5 you were asked?

10:41:00 6 A. I have nothing to hide.

10:41:02 7 MR. GROSUCH: I ask that that 10:41:06 8 computer be searched and produced pursuant to 10:41:08 9 the courts orders.

10:14:20 16 Q. A port from the PAR scanner do you
10:14:22 17 fill in any other documents?
10:14:26 18 A. It all depends on what went on in 10:14:26 19 the store.
10:14:30 20 Q. How about a retail transaction
10:14:32 21 form?
10:14:36 22 A. If a retail transaction form needs
10:14:38 23 to be filled out, yes.
10:14:40 24 Q. What would be the circumstances
10:14:42 25 under which a retail transaction form would

10:14:44 1 have to be filled out?
10:14:58 2 A. Well, you might have product
10:15:02 3 exchange. You could have a bill through.
10:15:10 4 You could have a count ter payment.

10:26:58 1 A. Yes.
10:27:00 2 Q. What are those?
10:27:06 3 A. Those are reports dealing with 10:27:08 4 competitive activity.
10:27:10 5 Q. Who prepares the monthly
10:27:12 6 competitive reports?
10:27:16 7 A. I don't know how it is handled.
10:27:18 8 All I know is I take my competitive activity
10:27:22 9 and I forward it up through the proper channel
10:27:24 10 he is. What happened there I have no idea.
10:27:28 11 Q. How do you forward your competitive
10:27:32 12 activity up through the proper channels?
10:27:34 13 A. Put it in an envelope and mail
10:27:36 14 it.

10:43:38 16 Q. Apart from the documents you just 10:43:42 17 described, did you comply any other documents
10:43:44 18 for production in this litigation?
10:43:46 19 A. No, I didn't.
10:43:48 20 Q. So, it is fair to say you didn't 10:43:52 21 provide any retail transactions forms for 10:43:52 22 production?

10:43:56 23 A. There may have been I believe there 10:44:00 24 was some retail transaction forms in the 10:44:04 25 competitive file that was sent up.

10:44:16 3 Q. Do you have any other documents
10:44:20 4 either in your car or at your house in your 10:44:22 5 possession that was not gathered together for 10:44:24 6 production in the litigation?
10:44:24 7 A. Yes.
10:44:26 8 Q. Can you describe those documents
10:44:26 9 please?
10:44:34 10 A. They are documents -- they would
10:45:00 11 include maybe my past appraisal. Maybe chain
10:45:16 12 a cone authorization letter, files with chain
10:45:18 13 head quarter calls.
10:45:18 14 Q. Anything else?
10:45:24 15 A. From what I can tell you at the top
10:45:26 16 of my head that would be pretty much it.
10:45:30 17 Q. How about your day book, did you
10:45:32 18 copy your day books and send them up?
10:45:32 19 A. No.
10:45:36 20 Q. Is there any correspondence in your
10:45:38 21 possession at your house or in your car that
10:45:42 22 you did not copy and send up?
10:45:42 23 A. Yes.
10:45:44 24 Q. Can you describe that?
10:45:50 25 A. It would be material that I

10:45:54 1 received that originateed from other people
10:45:58 2 within U.S. tobacco. Or information that
10:46:04 3 would be in division manager bill Rhodes files.

10:46:10 4 Q. Do you have any manuals UST manuals
10:46:12 5 in your possession?
10:46:12 6 A. At home.
10:46:14 7 Q. Correct.
10:46:14 8 A. Yes.
10:46:18 9 Q. Those were not provided for 10:46:20 10 production in the litigation?
10:46:20 11 A. By me?
10:46:22 12 Q. Correct.
10:46:22 13 A. Correct.

14:19:30 13 Q. By properly display does that mean
14:19:34 14 you have to have the UST product displayed in a
14:19:36 15 prominent location?
14:19:38 16 A. Not necessarily.
14:19:38 17 Q. What does it mean?
14:19:42 18 A. What does it mean is every brand
14:19:48 19 that they order that they have, in their store
14:19:54 20 in their inventory should been properly
14:20:00 21 identified in the slot. What I mean by that 14:20:06 22 is they can't expect to get returns if they
14:20:10 23 have Skoal band mint and physical bond winter
14:20:14 24 green in the same spots because it is 14:20:18 25 impossible for the vendor oh heck he can.

14:21:04 22 Q. What is the procedure if a store is
14:21:14 23 not (COMPLYING) do you fill out a form?
14:21:16 24 A. Eventually yes. My personal
14:21:20 25 experience is that I work with the proper

148

14:21:24 1 persons nel. I say way look this is the 14:21:30 2 situation. I back it up with what I am
14:21:34 3 seeing. If I am going to tell you that they
14:21:38 4 are not ordering properly. I am going to tell
14:21:40 5 you why they are not ordering properly and what
14:21:44 6 happened. I am going to know that before I
14:21:46 7 tell you so when you do ask me I can give you
14:21:50 8 an answer. I am going to work with you on 14:21:54 9 this and it may be coming back to the store
14:21:56 10 next week and taking the product out instead of 14:22:00 11 you placing an order and issuing a credit
14:22:04 12 then. I'm going to do everything. If the 14:22:06 13 mem continues here is your warning. If the 14:22:08 14 problem continues here is your warning. If
14:22:10 15 the problem continues you are done. No credit
14:22:12 16 from me.
14:22:14 17 Q. And that's the point when you fill
14:22:16 18 out the none come my answer form?
14:22:20 19 A. Actually I first give a verbal
14:22:22 20 warning and then in possible two written
14:22:24 21 warnings.

15:41:32 4 Q. These were the only retail
15:41:38 5 transaction forms from your documents set that 15:41:42 6 were produced. To the best of your knowledge
15:41:44 7 are there any other retail transaction forms in 15:41:48 8 existence from your files?
15:41:48 9 A. Sure.
15:41:50 10 Q. Where are they?

15:41:52 11 A. I had -- they are hat home.

16:22:24 6 Q. Do you still have day planners your
16:22:26 7 possession Mr. McCarthy?
16:22:28 8 A. No I don't. Just the current
16:22:28 9 year.
16:22:30 10 Q. What happened to the other ones?
16:22:30 11 A. I though them out.
16:22:32 12 Q. You got the ones for the current
16:22:34 13 year, correct?
16:22:38 14 A. Correct. 1999.
16:22:40 15 Q. So, do you have the one for 1998?
16:22:42 16 A. No, I don't.
16:22:42 17 MR. BENZ: Still would I ask that
16:22:44 18 the day planner for 1999 be produced.
16:22:46 19 MR. REED: I take it under

09:53:32 24 Q. Do you use a retail transaction

09:53:36 25 form in your duties as a sales representative?

27

09:53:36 1 A. Yes.

09:53:40 2 Q. When did you use a retail

09:53:40 3 transaction form?

09:53:48 4 A. When I sale a customer a role of a

09:55:32 4 Q. Are you familiar with a

09:55:32 5 noncompliance form?

09:55:34 6 A. Yes.

09:55:36 7 Q. What is a noncompliance form?

09:55:50 8 A. It is a form used to control

09:55:52 9 damaged goods.

09:56:00 10 Q. How do you use the noncompliance

09:56:04 11 form to control damaged goods?

09:56:10 12 A. As I would use it in my work?

09:56:14 13 Because I don't use it.

09:56:18 14 Q. Have you ever filled out a none

09:56:20 15 come my answer form on a retail account?

09:56:20 16 A. Yes.

09:56:22 17 Q. Why did you fill out the

09:56:24 18 noncompliance form?

09:56:28 19 A. After talking with store personnel

09:56:32 20 about a damage mem and they did not do anything

09:56:36 21 to correct it. They forced me to sign a

09:56:40 22 noncompliance form.

12:01:18 21 Q. So, if you see a competitive

12:01:22 22 vending system in an E-Z Mart you remove that

12:01:24 23 competitive easy system?

12:01:26 24 A. I show the management the picture

12:01:30 25 and they decide what to do with the vendor.

87

12:01:34 1 Q. What if they decide to do nothing

12:01:34 2 with the vendor?

12:01:38 3 A. I try to show them who the

12:01:42 4 authorization kind by. And it is from their

12:01:52 5 own chain. And if they don't go by the

12:01:56 6 assigned Plan-o-gram then I can't force them to 12:01:56 7 do anything.

12:02:00 8 Q. Do you bring it to the attention of 12:02:02 9 your division manager?

12:02:02 10 A. Sometimes.

12:02:06 11 Q. How do you bring it to the

12:02:08 12 attention of your division manager?

12:02:14 13 A. Sometimes I may voice mail him.

* * * * *

09:37:54 23 Q. What happened to the materials from
09:37:56 24 these meetings over the years that you
09:37:58 25 accumulated?

09:38:00 1 A. I don't act late materials.
09:38:04 2 Materials that I have gotten from years passed
09:38:06 3 I don't keep it.
09:38:10 4 Q. These were generateed by your --
09:38:14 5 well by whom were they generated the materials?
09:38:16 6 A. I really couldn't tell you who
09:38:16 7 generated them.
09:38:20 8 Q. Let me ask you where they came from
09:38:22 9 then. In the case of your division meetings
09:38:24 10 they did come from your division mer?
09:38:26 11 A. In the case ever a division
09:38:30 12 mountain, for example, yes.
09:38:30 13 Q. So in a department meeting they
09:38:32 14 come from your department manager right?
09:38:34 15 A. I don't know who puts out the
09:38:36 16 material. They are there on the table to pick
09:38:40 17 up or pass out on the table. It may be
09:38:42 18 generated by the department manager or his
09:38:44 19 secretary or whoever.
09:38:46 20 Q. It comes out of the department's
09:38:48 21 office though isn't that right?
09:38:48 22 A. I believe so.
09:38:50 23 Q. And in the case of the regional

09:38:52 24 meetings it comes out of regional offers
09:38:54 25 doesn't it?

09:38:54 1 A. I believe so.
09:38:58 2 Q. Again, we have received none of
09:39:02 3 these materials and I would ask that they been
09:39:02 4 produced?
09:39:02 5 MR. REED: I understand the
09:39:08 6 request.
09:39:10 7 MR. GORSUCH: Does that mean you
09:39:14 8 would take it under advisement to produce it or
09:39:16 9 you merely understand the question.
09:39:18 10 MR. REED: Neil we will always

10:25:42 12 Q. Let me ask you is do you keep a
10:25:46 13 calendar or diary or day book?
10:25:48 14 A. I keep a day planer.
10:25:50 15 Q. And do you keep that day planner
10:25:52 16 can you use it in conjunction with your
10:25:54 17 business activities as a sales representative?
10:25:56 18 A. Yes, I do.
10:25:58 19 MR. GORSUCH: I ask that that be
10:26:00 20 produced we have not seen that either.
10:26:02 21 MR. REED: I understand the
10:26:04 22 question. Request. We take it under 10:26:06 23 advisement.

10:26:54 Q. Do you maintain or keep Retail Transaction Forms?
10:26:56 A. I don't keep any.
10:26:58 Q. Is what do you do with them?
10:27:06 A. In some cases I send them onto my division manager very few. And my copy of the retail transaction I through away.
10:27:18 Q. And there is a copy for you, there is a copy for the retailer and a copy for you your divsion manager; is that right?
10:27:26 A. There is on the form, but is it not required to send them?
10:27:32 Q. But do you send some into your division manager isn't that right?
10:27:38 A. I sent some in the past I believe.
10:27:40 Q. How many would you say you would

10:27:42 send in a year or a month or any period of time?
10:27:46 A. Well, maybe five, 10 a year.
10:27:52 MR. GORSUCH: We asked that these be produced we have not seen any retail transaction formation for Mr. Zahrt.
10:28:00 MR. REED: Take it under advisement.
10:28:06 Q. Is how about noncompliance reports, do you keep copies of those?
10:28:14 A. I have kept copies of them in the 10:28:18 12 past. I may even have a couple of copies now.

10:28:22 13 Q. And do you also forward copies of
10:28:24 14 none come plains reports to your division
10:28:24 15 manager?
10:28:28 16 A. To my division manager correct.
10:28:28 17 Q. How many reports would you forward
10:28:34 18 to him in a year or a month or any given period
19 of time?
10:28:38 20 A. It varies. It could be zero. It
10:28:42 21 could be three or four or five. Again I don't 22 know.
10:28:46 23 Q. Somewhere between zero and five a
10:28:48 24 year though you think you send?
10:28:50 25 A. It could well be.

10:28:52 1 Q. Could it be more?
10:28:54 2 A. It could be a few more. Not
10:28:56 3 probably too many more.
10:28:58 4 Q. So, it may be between zero and
10:28:58 5 eight a year?
10:29:04 6 A. I would say zero to 10 probably.
10:29:08 7 MR. GORSUCH: I would ask that these
10:29:12 8 be produced. We have not seen any compliance
10:29:14 9 reports from Mr. Zahrt or his division
10:29:16 10 manager. We will take it under advicement.

10:34:40 22 Q. Sir I'm not asking a directive.
10:34:44 23 I'm asking your practice. Have you still from 10:34:46 24 time-to-time submit written reports to your 10:34:46 25 division manager?

10:34:48 1 A. I have sent him different things
10:34:50 2 from time-to-time.
10:34:52 3 MR. GORSUCH: We received none of 10:34:56 4 these either I asked that they bee produced Mr.

10:35:04 8 Q. How frequently do you leave voice
10:35:06 9 mail for your division manager?
10:35:12 10 A. There is no set amount of time.
10:35:14 11 Q. Just as a matter of course sir?
10:35:16 12 A. At least once a week.
10:35:18 13 Q. At least once a week. Thank you?
10:35:18 14 MR. GORSUCH: Is we have received no
10:35:22 15 voice mail either I asked that they be produced
10:35:24 16 to the extent that they still exist.
10:35:26 17 MR. REED: I will take it under

10:35:36 22 MR. REED: Objection. To the
10:35:38 23 extent it calls for speculation.
10:35:42 24 Q. Go ahead and answer it if you know?

10:35:44 25 A. I believe they do.

10:35:46 1 Q. Do you know how frequently they
10:35:50 2 leave voice mail reports for their division
10:35:50 3 manager?
10:35:50 4 A. No, I do not.
10:36:02 5 Q. Did your division manager ever tell
10:36:04 6 you as a group, sales representatives in the 10:36:08 7 division, to leave him regular voice mail
8 messages?
10:36:14 9 A. He asked me to call him every 10:36:20 10 Friday evening. And I believe that that's the 10:36:22 11 entire division.
10:36:24 12 Q. The same rule applies to the other
10:36:26 13 sales representatives?
10:36:28 14 A. I believe so.
10:36:30 15 MR. GORSUCH: We have not pro
10:36:32 16 received any of those voice mails either Mr.

10:42:06 15 MR. REED: Objection asked and
10:42:10 16 answered.
10:42:12 17 A. I answered that yes, I got a letter
10:42:16 18 from my boss from my division manager.

10:42:16 19 Q. Setting your goals right?
10:42:18 20 A. We set the goals together.
10:42:22 21 Q. And you also got to being uments
10:42:28 22 how you sucessed or failed on those goals
10:42:28 23 haven't you?
10:42:34 24 A. I believe at the end of the program
10:42:40 25 we get a statement saying you ahead of four out

10:42:44 1 of whatever goals so you got so many points.
10:42:50 2 Q. You also got documents about the
10:42:52 3 merchandise, isn't that right?
10:42:54 4 A. Of merchandise.
10:42:56 5 Q. And you got written information
10:42:58 6 about how many points you would spend in that
10:43:00 7 catalog; isn't that right?
10:43:02 8 A. We got a thing that said how many
10:43:04 9 points we had right.
10:43:04 10 MR. GORSUCH: We received no
10:43:06 11 information from Mr. Zahrt or any other sales

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Gentlemen:

While we are still reviewing defendants' most recent document productions, there are a few issues we would like to raise.

1. Agreements with Retailers/Distributors

It appears that many responsive agreements with retailers or distributors are missing. For example:

- You have produced documents that expressly reference approximately 20 different agreements with large retail chains that cannot be located in your production. We list some examples in Exhibit A.

- At USTC/CWD 173906 you will find a copy of a form UST agreement entitled "Free Standing Display #2908 Placement Agreement." The two pages following the form agreement suggest its widespread use in the marketplace. However, we see no executed copies in your production.

- The "Copenhagen Incentive Program" appears to be another form UST-retailer agreement. We have not found any executed versions in your production.

- Documents produced to you reflect an agreement between UST and the Uncle Willie's chain. See Complaint Exh. I. We have not found copies of this agreement in your production.

For at least 8 months, we have sought a complete production of all responsive agreements, yet production is still not complete. Please make a prompt and complete production.

2. Sales Representative Files

You have produced documents from fewer than 10% of your 443 sales representatives. In total, these documents fill less than 1 box (i.e., constitute fewer than 1000 pages). Yet you represent that your sales representative production is substantially complete.

This representation is difficult to understand, especially given the volume of documents that have been produced by three former UST representatives in response to our subpoenas. Mr. Carter has produced 74 documents dated 1995 or earlier. Mr. Welsh has produced 364 pages, many dated 1995 or earlier. Ms. Weatherly has produced 547 pages, almost all of which are dated 1995 or earlier. These three ex-UST sales representatives alone have produced nearly as many documents as defendants have for all of their 448 representatives combined.

Please undertake a full and complete production of your sales representatives' files and explain how you have conducted your search to date.

3. MSA Production

We have received what defendants represent is a machine-readable version of "USTC data on MSA systems." We have not received the software USTC uses to access such data. We are prepared to proceed without such software so long as the USTC data proves readable and searchable -- and so long as it is understood that defendants will not seek to exploit the fact that the plaintiffs do not have access to the unproduced software. In this regard, we believe it would be appropriate for defendants to enter into a written stipulation in which they explicitly waive their right to make any argument, contention, representation, or claim to the court or jury, or elicit any testimony, that is based, directly or indirectly, on the fact that plaintiffs did not have access to this software. Please advise us whether this is acceptable so that we may know how to proceed.

Similarly, defendants' explanation that they are providing "USTC data on MSA systems" raises the question whether defendants can access other, non-USTC data on MSA systems. Please advise us whether defendants have such a capacity, what kinds of data they can access, and whether defendants plan to make use of such data in this lawsuit.

Do not hesitate to call if you would like to discuss any of the above.

Very truly yours,

Neil Gorsuch/jms

Gentlemen:

We wrote you March 16, 1999 concerning the apparent incompleteness of defendants' sales representative production. We asked you to undertake a more thorough search. On March 18 you responded by insisting that your production was already thorough and complete.

In subsequent depositions UST sales representatives have testified to the existence of category after category of unproduced documents. We ask that the materials identified at deposition be produced. We also ask that you undertake a new, more thorough search of sales representative and division files.

Please advise us of your position on these requests by April 5, 1999. Likewise, please do not hesitate to call should you like to discuss the above or have any questions.

Very truly yours,

Neil Gorsuch

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We received Mr. Gorsuch's letter of March 16, 1999, which purports to raise issues concerning Defendants' document production. A review of the letter and the referenced documents indicates that Plaintiffs seek to raise issues where none exist. Accordingly, as explained below, further discussion of these "issues" between counsel will serve no worthwhile purpose.

1. Agreements With Retailers/Distributors

Syllogistically, the existence of the documents listed in Exhibit A is not sufficient to support Plaintiffs' conclusion that any written agreements were not produced by Defendants in the course of discovery. Not one of these documents indicates that any further written agreements exist. In fact, several of the documents listed on Exhibit A clearly are memorializations of prior conversations – which, as you must know, would not have been created if any written agreement had existed.

Plaintiffs also refer specifically to the "Free Standing Display #2908 Placement Agreement" as well as two additional pages that "suggest its widespread use in the marketplace." Nothing in these documents proves that there exist "executed copies" of any written agreement.

Plaintiffs speculate that the Copenhagen Incentive Program "appears to be another form UST-retailer agreement," and based on that speculation, state that there are no "executed versions" in Defendants' production. Once again, Plaintiffs' assumptions are simply wrong, as are the conclusions that follow. This same pattern of speculation followed by faulty conclusion also holds true for Plaintiffs' reference to Complaint Ex. I.

In contrast to Plaintiffs' speculative assertions, please note the following concrete indications of deficiencies in Plaintiffs' production:

- Defendants have brought to Plaintiffs' attention several documents from Plaintiffs' production that unequivocally indicate that Conwood sales representatives communicate about subject matter pertinent to this lawsuit via e-mail. No e-mails have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also have brought to Plaintiffs' attention documents that unequivocally indicate that higher level sales personnel were provided with computer equipment and software for the purpose of providing sales reports to Conwood management. No such computer documents have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also brought to Plaintiffs' attention that it was difficult to believe that Conwood did not maintain any sales databases. While at USTC's Greenwich facilities, Mr. Conyngham represented to me that a mainframe computer system is, in fact, maintained by Conwood and that Mr. Conyngham would provide me with a list of the types of sales documents stored on that system. Now, over two weeks later – in which time Plaintiffs took it upon themselves to complain that Defendants did not need two weeks to produce an entire 15-Gigabyte STARS II database – no list has been produced. No explanation has been provided.

- Defendants also brought to Plaintiffs' attention that no work-product immunity attached to the complete set of video tapes used to create the obviously-edited Complaint Exhibit C video tape. Plaintiffs withdrew their baseless work-product objection and represented that all video tapes would be produced. No video tapes have been produced. No explanation has been provided.

Please provide all of the information Plaintiffs have failed to provide thus far no later than Friday, March 26, 1999, so that we will know what issues need to be resolved by Magistrate Judge Moyer.

2. Sales Representative Files

Pursuant to the Court's Order, Defendants have made a full and complete production of documents from the files of USTC sales representatives.

3. MSA Production

As noted in Plaintiffs' letter, Plaintiffs have received the information contained on the RAD database in machine-readable format. Plaintiffs now suggest that Defendants should enter into a stipulation that would limit Defendants' ability to examine the way in which this data is used by Plaintiffs. Defendants will entertain no such stipulation.

Plaintiffs also "raise[] a question" based on language from a letter memorializing an agreement between and among USTC, Plaintiffs, and MSA, Inc. With respect to Plaintiffs' inquiry as to what other data Defendants have access to, Defendants respond as follows: Defendants have provided Plaintiffs with a complete list of the computer systems used by USTC; Plaintiffs have sought the production of certain databases that Plaintiffs selected from the provided list; Defendants have provided Plaintiffs with complete access to the requested databases. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have obtained all discovery from USTC to which it is entitled.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call me.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

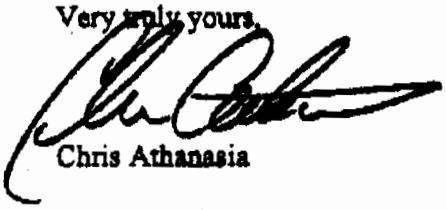
Gentlemen:

We received Mr. Gorsuch's letter of April 1, 1999, which, once again, presumes deficiencies in Defendants' document production from USTC sales representatives. As we informed you by letter on March 18, 1999, Defendants' document production is in full compliance with the Court's January 20, 1999 Order.

Mr. Gorsuch's letter states that USTC sales representatives have testified in depositions as to "category after category of unproduced documents." This assertion is unsupported by the record. A review of the deposition transcripts will make it readily apparent that Defendants have complied in full with the Court's Order. In order for Defendants to address your stated concerns, however, please provide specific transcript cites to any testimony that concerns categories of documents called for by the Court's January 20, 1999 Order that were not produced. Should Plaintiffs identify any such testimony, Defendants, of course, will produce any and all referenced documents to the extent they exist.

If you have any questions or would care to discuss these issues further, please do not hesitate to call.

Very truly yours,



Chris Athanasia

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on April 12, 1999 for a teleconference to consider discovery matters.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, and Dick Roberts, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: James Keyte, Chris Athanasia, Neal Stoll, and Martha Weiss, counsel.

The parties identified the following outstanding discovery issues:

a) Plaintiff Conwood has requested defendant UST to identify the distributors and retailers with whom it has or had an agreement affecting the distribution of moist snuff products.

b) Plaintiff Conwood has filed a motion regarding sales documents.

c) Plaintiff Conwood seeks information from UST to assist it in analyzing MSA data.

d) Defendant UST has requested plaintiff to produce Pritzker documents.

e) Defendant UST identified an unresolved discovery issue regarding third party declaration.

The parties reported that the first of these issues is full submitted and ready for a decision by the court, the second issue is not yet fully submitted, and the remaining three issues do not yet require court intervention.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) Defendant UST shall respond to plaintiff's pending motion regarding sales documents no later than Friday, April 16, 1999 and shall provide a copy of its response to plaintiff and the magistrate judge's chambers by facsimile on that date. The merits of the motion will be discussed at the next teleconference.

2) Plaintiff's motion regarding agreements with distributors and retailers is taken under advisement.

3) The next telephonic status conference is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. EDT, Tuesday, April 20, 1999. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter is before the court on plaintiffs' request for additional information about documents already produced by defendant. Nearly a year ago, plaintiffs served an interrogatory asking defendant UST to identify the distributors and retailers with whom it has or had an agreement affecting the distribution of moist snuff products. Defendant responded that all such agreements could be found in its voluminous document production. Plaintiffs request guidance as to where those agreements can be found in defendant's document production.

On January 14, 1998, this matter was argued and the Magistrate Judge ordered defendant UST to provide "a detailed narrative description ... where in the overall document production agreements ... would be found. ... I want you to in a narrative way give [plaintiffs] the best reasonable road map that somebody can, and if the answer is that it is utterly random and no one knows where they are, ... you can say that."

UST has provided an affidavit from Mr. Gary Milano, Vice-President of UST, indicating that there is no systematic way in which these contract or agreements are stored. This assertion merely repeats the contention of counsel at the previous hearing, a contention which the court accepted at face value. What the court directed UST to do at the hearing was to provide detailed, useful, practical information about where these documents may be found.

Businesses regularly need to retrieve information, files and documents which are not cataloged in a "Dewey decimal" system of perfect precision. UST must do more than reaffirm that there is no overall, structured system of filing these agreements.

Imagine the following scenario. Hypothesize that the president of UST sent an e-mail to Mr. Milano, asking Mr. Milano to gather all these agreements, for some business reason unrelated to litigation, by the end of the week. What would Mr. Milano do? What instructions would be given to subordinates as to where to look for and how to find these documents? This is the information which needs to be provided.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that defendant UST shall provide the requested information no later than Monday, April 26, 1999.

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on April 20, 1999 for a teleconference to consider discovery matters.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, Ben Powell, and Trip Wilson, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: John Reed, Rachel Mariner, Chris Athanasia, Neal Stoll, and Martha Weiss, counsel.

The court heard arguments on plaintiff's motion regarding the production of files from UST sales representatives. The matter has been fully briefed. The court also heard brief arguments on an issue raised by UST regarding witness statements.

The following orders were orally announced by the court.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that

1) The issue regarding the production of files from UST sales representatives is taken under advisement. No later than Thursday morning, April 22, 1999, the parties shall jointly produce to the court the relevant portions of the sales representative depositions regarding document production. There will be no further briefing on the issue.

2) UST shall submit to the court, no later than April 21, 1999, a one or two page letter outlining its position on the issue regarding witness statements. Plaintiff may respond with a one or two page letter to the court by Friday morning, April 23, 1999.

3) The next telephonic status conference is scheduled for 2:00 p.m. EDT, Friday, April 23, 1999. Defendant UST shall initiate the teleconference.

FILED
WESTN. DIST. KENTUCKY

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION CONCERNING UST SALES FORCE FILES

Despite the Court's January 20, 1999 Order, undisputed record testimony establishes that UST has conducted no meaningful review of its sales representative files. Point I, infra. UST responds by pressing a technical reading of the Court's Order that would require plaintiffs to prove the existence of relevant documents in the possession of a particular sales representative before UST will conduct a search of his files. That cannot be right. Point II, infra.

Argument

I. UST HAS NOT CONDUCTED THE SEARCH ORDERED BY THE COURT

Despite the Court's January 20 Order, deponent after deponent has testified under oath that he has forwarded no documents to UST for review and that no one from UST has bothered to visit his home or van to search business documents retained there. See, e.g., Funk Depo. 38 (Q: "Has anyone asked you to send in any paper . . . for possible production in this case?" A: "No sir."); id. at 39 (Q: "has anyone ever come to your house and your vehicle to look for documents or paper that might be produced in this case?" A: "No sir."); Anundson Depo. 103-04 (Q: "Has anyone ever reviewed either that note book or your file in your van for production -- possible production of materials in this case?" A: "No."); Lund Depo. 79-80 (Q: "[After testimony that witness uses a home computer to generate work-related correspondence], Let me ask you this, has anyone asked you to produce or to look for any responsive documents on your computer in this case?" . . . A: "No."); McCarthy Depo. 60 (Q: "How about your day book, did you copy your day books and send them up [for review]?" A: "No."); Anundson Depo. 29-30 (Q: "And did any lawyer ever review your day planner?" A: "No." Q: "So, you just made the unilateral judgment that those entries in your 1999 day planner were not relevant to this lawsuit didn't you?" . . . A: "Yes.").

Additional undisputed facts underscore the lack of any meaningful search. It is undisputed that UST has produced documents for fewer than 10 percent of its 448 sales representatives, that its entire sales representative production fills less than one box, and that Conwood's comparable production is over 450,000 pages. It is undisputed, too, that three subpoenaed former UST representatives have alone produced more documents than UST has for all of its 448-member sales force combined.[1]

II. UST OFFERS NO BASIS FOR FAILING TO COMPLY WITH THE COURT'S ORDER

Unable to represent that it has conducted a thorough search of its sales representative files, UST dismisses the fact it has produced so little as "specious" (UST Opp. 9) and argues that "plaintiffs ignore the import" of the January 20, 1999 Court Order (UST Opp. 2). As UST apparently reads that Order, it was entitled to forego reviewing individual sales representative files for two reasons. Neither can withstand scrutiny.

A. The "Paragraphs 22-31" Argument

Under the January 20 Order, UST was obligated to produce documents relevant to allegations raised in paragraphs 22-31 of the Complaint. UST argues no further production is warranted in part because "[n]o testimony elicited in depositions demonstrates that any of the documents in the deponents' possession relate to Paragraphs 22-31 of the Complaint." UST Opp. 2. See also id. 3 (complaining plaintiffs' depositions do not "prove" that day books contain "substantive notes"); id. 5 (same argument for

[1]UST fleetingly argues these witnesses' productions "included irrelevant materials." UST Opp. 9, n.9. This argument, however, suggests only that UST must have a cramped view of relevance: Welsh, Carter and Weatherly produced their performance evaluation forms (which confirm that UST sales representatives must meet certain facings, point of sale, and rack targets), promotional material, calendars, and notes -- all of which Conwood believes are highly relevant information and should be produced by UST for all sales representatives pursuant to the January 20 Order.

retail transaction forms and noncompliance reports); id. 6 (same argument for "forms discontinuing credit").[2]

This argument, however, simply bypasses the fact that the Court assigned UST the task of reviewing sales representatives' documents to assess their relevance and that UST's own witnesses have repeatedly testified that no one has bothered to do so. See testimony cited at Point I, infra. Under the Court's Order, it is not up to plaintiffs to establish that each deponent has relevant documents before becoming entitled to production. It was up to UST to conduct a thorough review of each representative's files. And that has not been done.

UST asserts that it knows various kinds of sales representative documents -- including daybooks, calendars, retail transaction forms, noncompliance forms, forms discontinuing credit or other "corporate documents" -- "have nothing to do with the subject matter" of this case or are "rarely retained." See,

[2]UST representatives have testified that voice mail is one of the primary means by which they receive instructions from, and report their activities to, supervisors. See Plaintiffs' Motion Concerning UST Sales Force Files at 2 n.8; Exh. A (excerpts from Funk deposition, taken after we filed our April 8, 1999 motion papers). Yet, it is undisputed that their voice mail has not been searched or produced. UST responds by asserting that voice mail is saved for only 15 days. UST Opp. 8, n.8. But UST does not dispute that it has taken no steps to gather and retain these electronically-saveable messages despite the Court's June 9, 1998 document retention order. Nor does it dispute that it has taken no steps to review these messages for possible production. Given the importance of voice mail within the company, UST should be instructed as part of the Court's order to take both steps immediately.

16diii001717

e.g., UST Opp. at 5, 6. Under the Court's Order, however, UST was not free to disregard category after category of materials on the basis of such a fortiori speculation. UST was obligated to examine any materials still in existence and make a considered judgment about their relevance. See Jan. 20, 1999 Order ¶ 1 (ordering review of "any notes, correspondence, memoranda, day-planner, calendar, journal, or other similar written summary").[3] According to the testimony of its own personnel, UST has not done so. See Point I. And, quite in contrast to UST's speculation about the relevance of these documents, the few that have emerged to date do contain highly material evidence. See, e.g., Exh. B (UST retail transaction form bearing warning to Conwood sales

[3]UST further resists producing day books unless they contain "substantive notes." UST Opp. 3. Under the Court's Order, however, UST was expressly ordered to produce any relevant information from day-books. Jan. 20, 1999 Order ¶ 1. And, as UST well knows, even a sales representative's notation that he appeared at a certain store is potentially probative evidence when linked to Conwood unethical activity reports documenting the removal of its racks from that store on or about the same date.

UST suggests that unproduced "PAR scanners" in the possession of its sales representatives need not be produced because 93 boxes of scanners from division, department, or regional offices were produced and remain "untouched" by plaintiffs. Id. Under the Court's Order, however, UST was not free to make such unilateral decisions: it was expressly ordered to make full production of all sales representative PAR scanners dated 1995 or earlier. Jan. 20, 1999 Order ¶ 2. Besides, UST is simply wrong on the facts. PAR scanners produced from district, department, and regional offices were reviewed by plaintiffs and returned to defense counsel's Washington office over a month ago.

representative to "keep your POS off my rack or die!"); Exh. C (noncompliance form tasking retailer for failure to comply with restrictive counter display and point of sale advertising requirements).[4]

B. The "1995" Argument

Under the Court's January 20 Order, UST was required to produce all "regularly maintained corporate documents" from sales representative files generated prior to 1996. UST argues that plaintiffs "have failed to establish that any 'regularly maintained corporate documents' in the deponents possession were dated 1995 or earlier." UST Opp. 2.

UST does not (and cannot) dispute that its sales representatives do possess "regularly maintained corporate documents." Undisputed testimony reveals that they maintain retail transaction forms, noncompliance reports, credit withdrawal forms, training materials, sales incentive program documents, and monthly report forms. See Plaintiffs' Motion

[4]UST also repeatedly claims that plaintiffs are not entitled to discovery from sales representatives' files because the documents they seek are sent "up the chain" and, thus, can be located in division, department, or regional files. See UST Opp. 5, 6, 8, 9. The Court, however, heard and rejected this argument three months ago. See Jan. 20, 1999 Order ¶ 3 (noting that while "sales representatives should send official documents 'up the chain' . . . [UST] did not deny that it was possible that additional documents were individually prepared and maintained by sales representatives. Given the allegations of the complaint . . . it would be an extraordinary result to deny discovery into the files of the sales representatives"). UST should not be heard to reargue that settled point at this late date.

Concerning UST Sales Force Files at 2 nn. 3-7; 9 (citing deposition excerpts); Exh. A (Funk deposition excerpts).

Instead, UST again argues only that plaintiffs have not "established" the exact date of documents admittedly in the possession of UST sales representatives that UST has never bothered to inspect. See, e.g., UST Opp. 4 ("[p]laintiffs make[] no attempt to establish the date" of unreviewed home computer documents). However, it is not up to plaintiffs to ask every UST representative the date of every document he possesses. Under the Court's Order, it was UST's task to conduct a thorough review of sales representative files and produce all corporate documents dated 1995 or earlier. Uniform deposition testimony and UST's own production confirm that no such review took place.

Conclusion

Despite the Court-recognized importance of "documentation at the 'grassroots' level" (Dec. 16, 1998 Order at 1-2), UST continues to resist the "fairly obvious point" that such material must be produced (Feb. 5, 1999 Order at 5). Nearly six months have passed since the Court first addressed the issue, yet UST still has not undertaken any meaningful search. Under these circumstances, the Court should order UST to provide plaintiffs full access to sales representative files in a central location (as it did UST computer files) so that a proper search can be conducted in a timely manner; bar UST from using the few self-serving sales representative documents it has chosen to produce (Rule 37(b)(2)(B)); and enter such other relief as it deems just and proper.

ORDER (WITNESS STATEMENTS)

This matter is before the court on defendant's discovery request for information regarding witness statements obtained by plaintiffs. Plaintiffs contend that the information is protected by the work product doctrine and is not discoverable.

Specifically, defendants seek copies of all signed statements, affidavits, or declarations obtained by plaintiffs as well as any other documents or notes of statements made by third parties. Defendant also seek: 1) the names and addresses of the persons from whom statements were taken; 2) the dates on which such statements were taken; and, 3) the names of each person involved in taking or recording each statement.

Under Rule 26(b)(3), Fed.R.Civ.P., "documents and tangible things ... prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's representative" are discoverable "only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of the party's case and that the party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. ... A party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that party."

In other words, a statement by a party to the action is discoverable without any showing of particularized need. If, however, the statements sought were given by non-parties, the party seeking the statements must show: 1) "substantial need," which requires a showing of more than mere relevance; 2) the party would suffer "undue" hardship, which is not merely some expense or inconvenience; 3) in order to obtain the "substantial equivalent."

Statements by non-parties are covered by the work product doctrine and Rule 26(b)(3) "creates no right in a party to the litigation to obtain a copy of a statement of an ordinary witness without the usual showing required for work product." Wright, Miller & Marcus, Federal Practice and Procedure: Civil 2d § 2028 at 414 (1994).

The statements at issue in this case include statements given by defendant's current or former employees to plaintiffs' representatives. Defendants have not shown that they are unable to obtain statements from their own employees which would be substantially equivalent to the statements obtained by plaintiffs' counsel. The desire on the part of defendant to insure that it is not overlooking anything does not satisfy the "substantial need" requirement. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 513 (1947).

In addition to the statements themselves, defendant also seeks the names of the non-parties who gave statements, the dates on which the statements were taken, and the names of individuals involved in collecting the statements. This information is also protected by the work product doctrine. As stated by professors Wright and Miller:

> Wholesale access to all witness statements taken by a party could impinge important work-product protections. Surely an interrogatory asking a party to identify all persons interviewed would contravene work product. Yet automatic disclosure of witness statements would require revelation of the identities of all witnesses from whom the attorney decided to take a statement, thereby intruding into the heart of attorney trial preparation.

Wright, Miller & Marcus, Federal Practice and Procedure: Civil 2d § 2028 at 415 (1994).

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that defendant's motion to compel production of non-party witness statements and information regarding those statements is DENIED.

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER (DAY PLANNERS)

This matter is before the court on plaintiffs' motion for production of additional documents from defendant UST sales representatives. (Docket No. 87). Defendant has responded, (Docket No. 91), and the court has heard oral arguments on the motion.

The parties have argued extensively concerning whether UST is required to go further with the production of documents from field representatives. To some extent, the parameters of this argument are set by the specific language of paragraph one of the court's order of January 20, 1999, which required the production from the field of certain documents, including day-planners, which related to paragraphs 22-31 of the complaint. These are the paragraphs which specify the allegedly anticompetitive activity in which plaintiff claims UST engaged.

UST, on its own initiative, forwarded to the court under seal a copy of the written instructions from UST's corporate counsel to the field representatives, calling in broad and appropriate language for the forwarding to UST of materials such as day-planners which document field activities. UST has thus produced only those day-planners which were forwarded by the representatives to counsel.

The court stated in the telephonic hearing, and repeats, that UST's course of action in communicating with field representatives was fully professional. Conwood, however, continues to press for more disclosure. There are, apparently, two issues. First, the issue is whether a field sales representative, even in response to the best and clearest written instructions, will know what to forward. Field representatives are sales people of no more than ordinary education, certainly not trained in reviewing documents in commercial litigation. Second, Conwood asserts that information in the day-planners may be discoverable and important, either because it corroborates other information which Conwood counsel has concerning dates of visits when allegedly anticompetitve actions were taken by UST representatives, or because it provides a second source of data concerning sales personnel visits and a cross-check to the so-called PAR reports.

The court views this as a close question and each side has vigorously and thoroughly argued its points. Given the scope of this litigation, and the specific usefulness of the day-planners articulated by Conwood counsel, the court will modify its prior order of January 20 to also require the production by UST of all day-planners, daybooks, or calendars maintained by UST sales representatives. The full production of the planners is consistent with the policies of civil discovery and is most likely to lead to a just result based on full information. Moreover, while the burden point has not been raised as a principal objection by UST, UST has clearly represented that many field representatives do not keep these daybooks and planners for lengthy periods, leading to the inference that the scope and volume of production is not that great, even though there are some 448 field representatives.

Therefore,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the motion is GRANTED to the limited extent that defendant shall produce (without the limitations set out in the January 20, 1999 order) day-planners, daybooks, and calendars from its sales representatives, no later than May 24, 1999.

16diii001728

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

In a teleconference on May 10, 1999, counsel for UST raised two related issues: whether doubletracking of depositions should be permitted, and whether there should be an earlier deadline for disclosure of trial witnesses, with an accompanying opportunity to do "clean up" depositions of anyone designated as a witness and not already deposed.

First, with respect to doubletracking, there is no prohibition against simultaneous depositions in either the civil rules or any pretrial order of this court. Moreover, by the magistrate judge's count, Conwood had six lawyers in attendance at yesterday's teleconference, and UST had six lawyers in attendance. UST is represented by a very large, national law firm, and by Kentucky counsel. Conwood is represented by a smaller, District of Columbia litigation law firm, as well as a Paducah law firm, and by Wyatt, Tarrant, and Combs, the largest law firm in Kentucky and Tennessee. Each side seems to have more than adequate resources. To the extent that the position of Conwood in yesterday's hearing amounts to a request for a protective order forbidding doubletracking, the request is denied.

This is not an invitation to triple tracking or to any of the wily methods of vexatious deposition scheduling which sometimes have occurred in the heat of battle in other cases with which the court is familiar. Counsel for both sides are urged to continue to schedule cooperatively, bearing in mind the old litigation adage that "what goes around, comes around."

Next, the court will address the suggestion that the pretrial order be modified to require earlier disclosure of trial witnesses. Currently, the trial date is set for February 28, 2000, and the final witness list is required to be disclosed by each side on January 21, 2000. UST argues that there are potentially hundreds or even thousands of potential witnesses who may have personal knowledge of alleged "in the field" activities which Conwood contends are illegal. Conwood argues that UST could have started discovery earlier and that if it doesn't depose every trial witness, "that's the way the world works."

The court has previously given Conwood the benefit of deeper discovery than might be afforded in a run-of-the-mine case, requiring the production of a broad range of calendars, planners, and day-timers from field personnel as well as other lower level documents. Part of the rationale of the court was that, in a case of this scope and importance to each party, discovery should be deeper and more probing than in a simpler case. Moreover, the court has, under a rather ordinary reading of Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 513 (1947), denied UST access to Conwood's witness statements, reasoning that such statements constitute attorney work product shielded from disclosure except under compelling circumstances. (Docket No. 94, Order of April 23, 1999). The combination of the very broad pool of potential trial witnesses, together with UST's inability to get witnesses statements, may have the result of leaving UST in the dark as to who will be the fact witnesses against whom it must defend at trial

Therefore, the court will amend the previous pretrial order to require the disclosure by Conwood by September 21, 1999 of its trial witnesses who are "field personnel," meaning witnesses who have alleged direct personal knowledge of UST's "in the field" anti-competitive behavior. Such field personnel witnesses would include UST field sales personnel and former sales personnel, Conwood field sales personnel, convenience store owners, managers, and employees, and others who may have directly, personally observed "in the field" activity which Conwood alleges to be anti-competitive.

Likewise, no later than September 21, 1999, UST shall disclose its "field personnel" trial witnesses who have direct personal knowledge regarding the allegations contained in UST's counterclaim.

In addition, the court will allow the parties until October 21, 1999 to do "clean up" discovery of field witnesses.

This amendment of the witness disclosure requirement is meant to be highly limited, and is not considered by the court to "open the door" to massive discovery after the field personnel witness lists are revealed. Neither is it intended to invite either party to bide its time and take minimal discovery now and to wait to the disclosure of the field personnel witness list for a barrage of multitrack depositions. Nor is it meant to suggest that the trial date can or should or will be changed. It most certainly is not a signal to either party that it should defer the deposition of any field personnel until later.

The parties can avoid a later field personnel discovery crunch by making disclosures now of those field personnel whom it reasonably anticipates as trial witnesses. While many seasoned trial lawyers attempt to "save the good stuff for the jury," given the amount of damages at issues in this case and the very large pool of potential field fact witnesses, the court can and will fashion appropriate orders to assure meaningful discovery by both parties.

This amendment of the witness disclosure requirements does not in any apply to any witness who is not in the limited category of "field personnel," and will not authorize depositions after the normal discovery cutoff of management personnel, experts, and other witnesses. The previously ordered discovery cutoff of August 1, 1999 otherwise remains in full force.

16diii001754

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Dear John:

Enclosed is a subpoena for Mr. Leroy Keil. As you will see, the deposition is noticed for Friday, May 28, 1999 at 2:00 p.m. or such other time and date as is mutually agreeable. May 28 was chosen by the witness for his convenience.

If you are unable to appear that date, please let me know immediately so that we can promptly reschedule. Mr. Ratcliff (Mr. Keil's attorney) has indicated that he may also be available the afternoon of June 1, or the morning of June 2, 1999, if another date is needed, but Mr. Ratcliff has not checked these dates with his client.

Please do not hesitate to call if you would like to discuss this matter.

Very truly yours,

Steven F. Benz

CONFIDENTIALITY ORDER

WHEREAS Management Science Associates, Inc. ("MSA") is engaged in the disclosure of documents and information to Conwood Company, L.P. and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively "Conwood") pursuant to a subpoena duces tecum served on MSA by Conwood on December 16, 1998 ("Subpoena");

16diii001780

WHEREAS this matter arises through discovery in the action styled Conwood Company, L.P. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R, in the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, where a confidentiality order was entered on July 22, 1998 by District Judge Thomas B. Russell (the "Kentucky Protective Order"), and where some of the information, documents, and data sought by Conwood through this Subpoena are subject to court orders compelling production to the extent they are within the possession, custody, or control of the defendants;

WHEREAS, MSA's disclosure involves, among other things, the production of documents or information that MSA deems confidential, including proprietary commercial information;

WHEREAS Conwood has a legitimate interest in protecting the identity of its non-testifying experts,

IT IS ORDERED THAT:

1. This Protective Order shall apply to materials produced by MSA in response to the Subpoena except to the extent they duplicate materials which have been produced or which are subject to orders compelling production by defendants in the underlying litigation with Conwood in the Western District of Kentucky. See Feb. 16, 1999 Tr. at p. 9, lines 3-8 (attached hereto as Exhibit "A"). The Kentucky Protective Order shall apply, exclusively and without modification by this order, to materials which have been produced to date or which are presently subject to orders compelling production by defendants directly. Any further confidentiality concerns with regard to such materials should be addressed to the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky.

2. As to non-duplicative documents produced by MSA pursuant to the Subpoena, the Kentucky Protective Order (attached hereto as Exhibit "B") is incorporated in this Order by reference and modified as follows:

a. Any application with respect to a dispute concerning this Stipulation and Order of Confidentiality shall be made only to United States District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania.

b. Within five days of this Order's execution Conwood shall provide to MSA's counsel, Jon Hogue, for review by MSA's chairman, Alfred A. Kuehn and Mr. Hogue only, a numbered list of all persons or entities (including all non-testifying experts), to whom it proposes to disclose information designated by MSA pursuant to this Order and the Kentucky Protective Order as Highly Confidential/Tier 1 Information or Confidential/Tier 2 Information ("Conwood's List").

c. Mr. Hogue and Dr. Kuehn shall treat the identities of all persons or entities (including all non-testifying experts) on Conwood's List as confidential and shall protect and not disclose to any other person or entity, without limitation but especially including the defendants in the underlying action, their representatives or any person or entity acting in concert with them, the identities of all persons or entities on Conwood's List

d. Dr. Kuehn, through MSA's attorney, Jon Hogue, shall notify Conwood's counsel within five days if a person or entity on Conwood's List is viewed by MSA as a competitor.

e. In the event that MSA notifies Conwood's counsel that a person or entity on Conwood's list is viewed as a competitor, Conwood shall make no disclosure to such person or entity until Conwood's counsel notifies MSA's counsel of Conwood's desire to do so and for 10 days thereafter or such shorter time as is required for the parties to make application to the Court for an order allowing or precluding disclosure of MSA's Highly Confidential/Tier 1 Information or Confidential/Tier 2 Information to the contested person or entity. If the matter is not resolved by agreement of the parties, no disclosure shall be made to such person or entity until the dispute is resolved by the court. To prevent disclosure of the identity of Conwood's non-testifying experts, the Court's order shall not refer to any person or entity on Conwood's List by name, but shall instead refer only to the corresponding number provided on Conwood's List, pursuant to the form provided herein (see attached Exhibit "C").

f. Before any disclosure is made, Dr Kuehn and each non-testifying expert to whom disclosure of MSA's confidential information is to be made by Conwood shall sign a confidentiality acknowledgement in the form attached as Exhibit "D".

g. Either MSA or Conwood may apply for relief or modification of the Court's order concerning disclosure of MSA's Highly Confidential/Tier 1 Information or Confidential/Tier 2 Information.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. — PLAINTIFFS

v. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on May 24, 1999 for a teleconference to consider discovery matters.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, David Simpson, Dick Roberts, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: John Reed, Neal Stoll, Rachel Mariner, Chris Athanasia, James Keyte, counsel.

The following orders were orally announced.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) No later than Wednesday, May 26, 1999, each side shall submit a status report to chambers, via facsimile, which includes the following information: witnesses whose depositions have been noticed; witnesses the parties intend to depose but have not yet noticed for deposition; and a list of depositions, scheduled and unscheduled.

2) Defendant requested that in instances where a video-taped trial deposition is conducted, any prior written statement of the deponent obtained by the party who noticed the deposition should be made available to the opposing party in order to allow for a more complete cross-examination. Before the court addresses this issue, the parties are to confer and attempt to come to a resolution on their own – they have not yet done so. If the parties are unable to work out a solution, they are to contact the Magistrate Judge's staff and so report.

3) When noticing deposition, in addition to providing the name and address of the deponent, the noticing party shall disclose the deponent's business affiliation.

4) The next telephonic status conference is scheduled for 1:00 p.m. EDT, Wednesday, June 2, 1999. Defendant shall initiate the teleconference.

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on May 26, 1999 for a telephonic discovery conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, David Simpson, Dick Roberts, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Rachel Mariner, Matt Barnett, counsel.

At issue is whether defendant can discover, pursuant to Rule 612, Fed.R.Evid., the third-party witness statements obtained by plaintiff. The court previously determined that such statements are generally protected by the attorney work product doctrine and the court has been given no reason to reconsider that opinion.

Rule 612, however, opens the door to production of the statements if they are used to refresh a witness' memory prior to testifying. If a statement consists of factual recitations by the witness and is used to refresh the witness' memory prior to testifying, the interests of justice require its production. See, In re Comair Air Disaster Litigation, 100 F.R.D.350 (E.D.Ky. 1983). If, however, the statement contains attorney opinions, analysis, or conclusions, the interests of justice do not require the statement to be produced. See, Parry v. Highlight Industries, Inc., 125 F.R.D. 449 (W.D. Mich. 1989).

The phrase, "to refresh memory," as contained in Rule 612, is given a broad definition and is not limited to the situation where a prior statement is physically handed to the witness to read and review. However, the initial taking of the statement does not constitute refreshing the witness' memory unless the statement is taken immediately prior to the deposition and is part of the deposition preparation.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that third-party witness statements, otherwise protected by the work product doctrine, are discoverable if the statement was used to refresh the witness' memory prior to testifying. Such statements shall be produced at the time the witness testifies.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. PLAINTIFFS

v. NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on May 27, 1999 for a telephonic discovery conference to discuss the scheduling of depositions.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, David Simpson, Dick Roberts, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Martha Weiss, James Keyte, Chris Athanasia, counsel.

The following orders were orally announced at the teleconference.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) The court's prior order authorizing double-tracking of depositions contemplated two depositions per day, not two depositions per party (which would mean four depositions per day).

2) No later than the close of business on May 27, 1999, the parties shall fax to chambers a list of the categories of witnesses they intend to depose and a good faith estimate of the number of witnesses in each category. This list refers to depositions that have not yet been taken.

3) The court will fax to the parties a proposed order dealing with the depositions schedule. That proposed order will be discussed with the parties in a teleconference at 1:00 p.m., Friday, May 28, 1999. Also under discussion will be the possibility of limiting the number of depositions each party may take. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on May 28, 1999 for a telephonic discovery conference to discuss the scheduling of depositions.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, Dick Roberts, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, counsel.

The following orders were orally announced at the teleconference.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) The court's prior scheduling order (Docket No. 73) is amended in that the deadline for completion of non-expert discovery is moved from August 1, 1999 to September 1, 1999. All other deadlines remain unchanged.

2) From this date on, each party is permitted to take up to, but no more than, three hundred hours of deposition testimony, with a maximum number of 60 additional witnesses. This includes witnesses noticed or identified but not yet taken. Depositions previously concluded will not count toward either the hour or the witness limit.

3) The telephonic conference previously scheduled for Wednesday, June 2, 1999 is rescheduled for 2:00 p.m., EDT, Monday, June 7, 1999. Defendant shall initiate the teleconference.

16diii00179

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Gentlemen:

Enclosed is a subpoena for Ms. Georgia Gill-Elkins, of the Berreth Oil Mini-A-Mart in Mishawaka, Indiana. As you will see, the deposition is noticed for Thursday, June 24, 1999 at 2:00 p.m. or at such other time and date as is mutually agreeable. June 24 was chosen by the witness and her counsel for their convenience.

If you are unable to appear that date, please let me know immediately so that we can promptly reschedule. Ms. Pope (Ms. Gill-Elkins' attorney) has indicated that they may also be available on June 25.

Please do not hesitate to call if you would like to discuss this matter.

Very truly yours,

Steven F. Benz

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL. — PLAINTIFFS

v. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC. — DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on June 7, 1999 for a telephonic discovery conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, David Simpson, Dick Roberts, Ben Powell, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Martha Weiss, James Keyte, Chris Athanasia, John Reed, counsel.

Plaintiff raised two issues for the court's consideration. The court issued oral orders in regard to both issues.

I.

First, plaintiff seeks production of CAP worksheets that accompany the CAP form contracts entered into between defendant UST and retailers. The worksheets provide the details of the retailers' marketing and display obligations. According to plaintiff, UST has such agreements with 2700 retailers but has produced only 100 worksheets. Defendant states that its corporate records do not contain copies of any more worksheets. Plaintiff seeks an order requiring defendant to contact its approximately 450 sales representatives to locate copies of additional worksheets.

In response, defendant UST denied that all CAP contracts have accompanying received 6/14 92 16dili001828

worksheets and there is no need to contact sales representatives because copies of all worksheets would be forwarded up the corporate chain of command.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that, no later than Monday, June 14, 1999, defendant shall contact fifteen randomly chosen sales representatives and inquire if they have copies of any CAP worksheets. Defendant shall convey the names of the sales representatives to plaintiff along with the results of the request. Plaintiff may raise this issue again at a later conference with the court if plaintiff believes that the results of this limited search warrant further action.

II.

The second issue raised by plaintiff relates to the disclosure of trial witnesses. By prior order, the court ordered the plaintiff to disclose, no later than September 21, 1999, its trial witnesses who are "field personnel" who have direct knowledge of UST's "in the field" anti-competitive behavior. Defendant UST was likewise ordered to disclose, by the same date, its field personnel trial witnesses who have direct personal knowledge regarding the allegations contained in UST's counterclaim. (Docket No. 100, May 11, 1999).

Plaintiff argues that this order requires the disclosure of both offensive and defensive field personnel witnesses – defendant must not only disclose the names of field personnel who will testify regarding its counterclaim but also those who will testify defensively regarding the allegations in plaintiff's complaint.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that plaintiff's motion is DENIED. The order of May 11, 1999 only requires each party to disclose the names of field personnel witnesses who have direct knowledge of facts regarding that party's claim against the other party. Plaintiff need only disclose the names of the field personnel witnesses who will testify regarding the claims in plaintiff's complaint and defendant need only disclose the names of the field personnel witnesses who will testify regarding the claims in defendant's counterclaim.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the next teleconference will be held at 10:30 a.m., EDT, Wednesday, June 16, 1999. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on June 16, 1999 for a telephonic discovery conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Neil Gorsuch, Steve Benz, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Martha Weiss, James Keyte, Chris Athanasia, Rachel Mariner, counsel.

The following orders were orally announced at the hearing.

I.

Defendant seeks the production of a third-party statement given by Ms. Gayleen Rusk. The facts show that Ms. Rusk signed a written statement at the request of plaintiff's counsel and then sometime later was deposed by defendant. At the deposition, defense counsel asked for a copy of the statement but plaintiff refused. Defendant now moves the court to compel the production of the statement.

Defense counsel questioned Ms. Rusk about the circumstances of her giving the written statement. She testified that plaintiff's counsel came to her place of employment and, after discussion, drafted the statement on a laptop computer. At the deposition, defense counsel asked if she had a chance to edit the statement. She testified that she made changes in the statement before received

6/22/99 9am CHT

signing it. Defense counsel then asked, at the deposition, "Did you review it before you gave your deposition today?" Ms. Rusk answered, "yes."

By prior order, (Docket No. 106, May 26, 1999), the court ruled that "third-party witness statements, otherwise protected by the work product doctrine, are discoverable if the statement was used to refresh the witness' memory prior to testifying. Such statements shall be produced at the time the witness testifies."

In the present situation, the deposition testimony fails to establish two key elements. First, when the deponent testified that she had reviewed her written statement prior to being deposed, it is not at all clear whether she meant that she reviewed it as a part of the editing process when she gave the statement or whether she reviewed it immediately prior to giving her deposition. Second, there is no indication that she used the written statement to refresh her memory.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that defendant's motion for an order compelling the production of Ms. Gayleen Rusk's witness statement is DENIED.

II.

In the second issue, plaintiff argues that defendant should be prohibited from using at trial that which it has been ordered to produce in discovery but has not yet done so. Some of defendant's business records are stored in a database maintained by non-party MSA. Defendant owns the data but MSA owns the software that allows the data to be read and manipulated. Plaintiff has received the data from this database in a readable format but contends that without the MSA software it is unable to manipulate the data in ways that defendant can. Plaintiff also contends that defendant has access to other databases maintained by MSA which contain additional data not available to plaintiff.

Plaintiff makes a two-pronged request: 1) that defendant not be allowed to use, for trial purposes, its data contained in the MSA maintained database; and, 2) that defendant not be allowed to use or rely on the additional MSA databases not available to plaintiff.

In response, defendant states that it is not able to produce the MSA software or the other databases because they are owned by MSA. If plaintiff wants access to those items, it should purchase a license from MSA or otherwise negotiate with MSA for the right to use its property. Regardless of what plaintiff chooses to do, defendant intends to make full use of all resources legally at its disposal.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that plaintiff's request is DENIED. At this point, the need for any relief is hypothetical and speculative. Plaintiff may raise this issue again if a more concrete problem arises.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the next teleconference is scheduled for Tuesday, July 6, 1999 at 10:30 a.m., EDT. Defendant shall initiate the teleconference.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al., United States District Court, Western District of Kentucky at Paducah, Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

Gentlemen:

Enclosed is a subpoena directed to Bobby Carlson, an employee of McLane Company, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. The deposition is noticed for 8:00 a.m. Monday, August 9, 1999, in Bentonville, Arkansas. We are advised that Mr. Carlson's schedule is rather full and his time is limited. The noticed time was selected by Mr. Carlson in the hope that the deposition could be completed by noon. We want to do everything possible to honor this particular request, but if this presents a problem, please let me know immediately.

I am advised by Blake Clardy, counsel at Wal-Mart, that one should fly into the Northwest Arkansas Regional Airport (XNA) in Fayetteville and that Bentonville is within half an hour of the airport. Mr. Clardy also recommends making a hotel reservation for Sunday evening as early as possible. He suggests the Clarion or the Courtyard by Marriott.

Sincerely,

John S. Reed

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C & D:

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v. United States Tobacco Company, et al.

Dear Mr. Clardy:

Thank you for speaking with me earlier this afternoon.

As we discussed, this morning I received a notice from U.S. Tobacco Company indicating that it has subpoenaed Mr. Carlson for deposition. To allow us to prepare adequately for the deposition, we would very much appreciate the opportunity to review certain documents in advance. Accordingly, I am enclosing two subpoenas outlining the materials we require. I would be pleased to discuss any questions you may have about our requests at your convenience.

In the interest of avoiding inconvenience to Mr. Carlson, we also discussed the possibility of postponing his deposition until after documents are produced. This would prevent any chance Mr. Carlson might be deposed a second time, after documents raising additional questions come to light. I have spoken with counsel for U.S. Tobacco, John Reed. He has agreed with this approach.

I look forward to working with you on this matter.

Very truly yours,

Neil M. Gorsuch

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

At a telephonic status conference on Monday, August 9, 1999, counsel for defendant UST brought to the court's attention a recently served 30(b)(6) deposition notice filed by counsel for plaintiff. At a further teleconference on Tuesday, August 10, 1999, the parties argued the propriety of the 30(b)(6) notice, and the court will treat the argument in that telephonic conference as an oral motion for protective order by UST seeking to quash the 30(b)(6) notice. Following the teleconference, each party served by facsimile on the court case law summaries on the topic of the propriety of the 30b(6) notice.[1]

The 30(b)(6) notice under consideration is extraordinarily broad, and comes at the end of a lengthy period of factual discovery in a hotly contested antitrust case where both sides have expended very significant legal resources. Even though deposition discovery has been going on for months, and even though documents have been produced and interrogatories propounded even longer, at this late hour, Conwood has filed a 30b(6) notice which seeks, with three weeks left in the

[1]The Magistrate Judge must observe that the parties were specifically directed not to file briefs, but to file case summaries. Conwood counsel asked for an extension of time because of personnel and travel reasons to file the case law summary, which the court readily granted. The court was surprised to find that a brief and then a supplemental brief were filed by plaintiff. A listing of cases, not a brief, was requested.

fact discovery period, the depositions of unnamed corporate representatives on very broad topics, essentially encompassing the entirety of this complex litigation.

For instance, one of the eleven requests, number one, seeks a 30(b)(6) deponent or deponents knowledgeable about the history of twenty years worth of moist snuff price increases, including the amount and date and reasons for each price increase. Also dramatically overbroad is number five, which seeks corporate representatives to testify about "any evidence concerning the facts testified to by non-parties in this case." The notice then goes on to list fifteen deponents about whose testimony witnesses would be demanded. The list of deposition topics goes on, and the court will not repeat each and every one of them. Plaintiff seeks, at the eleventh hour, to require the defendant to put forth deponents knowledgeable about every aspect of the litigation which the plaintiff finds material, even though plaintiff has been very actively taking discovery for months and months.

This is plainly an abuse of the Rule 30(b)(6) process, and the court will not allow such a tactic. Rule 30(b)(6) does not require a corporate party to "marshal all of its factual proof" and prepare one or more witnesses to respond to what are essentially a form of contention interrogatories. In Re Independent Service Organizations Antitrust Litigation, 168 F.R.D. 651, 654-55 (D.Kansas 1996). This is particularly true when the information appears to be discoverable by other means. E.E.O.C. v. HBE Corp., 157 F.R.D. 465, 466-67 (E.D.Mo. 1994). The use of 30(b)(6) depositions has been justly criticized when the information sought can be obtained through by other discovery means such as Rule 33 interrogatories to persons with knowledge of facts or through contention interrogatories. Securities and Exchange Commission v. Rosenfeld, 1997 WL 576021, *3 (S.D.N.Y.)

Such a last minute maneuver on the part the plaintiff strikes the court as an attempt to accomplish one of two objectives. One possible objective is to extend the discovery period without having to make a motion for such an extension. Another possible strategy is to require, in effect, the production of a trial witness list through indirect means by forcing the identification through 30(b)(6) of knowledgeable individuals whom Conwood may have neglected to depose during the discovery period. Whatever the reason for the requested discovery, it will not be allowed.

Conwood has long had available to it a broad range of discovery devices, included among them Rule 26 disclosures, contention interrogatories, and more tightly focused 30(b)(6) deposition notices. It is far too late now to serve such an overbroad deposition notice in this case, and the Magistrate Judge believes such a request would properly have been quashed even if it had been filed on the first day of discovery. To file it at the end of discovery is all the more reason to quash it.

This issue is so clear that no further argument or conference with counsel is necessary and, as a result, this afternoon's teleconference, set for 3:30 p.m., is REMANDED from the court's docket. The 30(b)(6) deposition notice is hereby QUASHED.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C & D:

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3)(A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C & D:

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

In their "Summary of Cases in Support of Protective Order Against Plaintiffs' Notice of a Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition," defendants for the first time take the position that Conwood's notice "intrude[s] upon attorney work product." Even if the Court were to entertain this last-minute argument -- never raised in the parties' Court-ordered consultations or in two conference calls with the Court over the last two days -- it cannot save defendants' motion.

Plaintiffs' notice does not seek work product, but facts about defendants' pricing, marketing efforts, vending system designs, and the like.[1] Even paragraph 11, which defendants seem to target as invading their "strategies concerning allegations made, [and] affirmative defenses raised," does no such thing. By its express terms it seeks only the "factual basis" of defendants' pleading allegations. Under long-settled law, such factual information is not protected from discovery and is information organizational witnesses must be prepared to discuss at deposition.[2]

[1]For example, paragraph 1 seeks the history of UST price increases, and paragraph 2 seeks information concerning the impact on moist snuff sales of different vending systems and point of sale advertising.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C & D:

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3)(A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C&D:

(C) Protection of Persons Subject to Subpoenas

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall stake reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2) (A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d) (2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3) (A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(D) Duties in Responding to Subpoena.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3)(A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

OBJECTION OF GOLDEN PANTRY FOOD STORES, INC. TO SUBPOENA

COME NOW, Golden Pantry Food Stores, Inc. (the "Objecting Parties"), and, pursuant to Rule 45, of the Fed. R. Civ. P., serves upon Plaintiffs this their Objection to the subpoena issued by the Clerk of the Middle District of Georgia on August 12, 1999.

The Objecting Parties object to the subpoena on the following grounds:

1. The subpoena was not served in accordance with Rule 45 of the Fed. R. Civ. P;

2. The subpoena calls for the production of documents at a location which is in excess of 100 miles from the location of the objecting party;

3. The subpoena is unduly burdensome in that it calls for the production of documents which cannot be gathered reviewed and collated, if they exist, within the time for response. Further, if the documents exist the objecting party will incur significant expense in preparing the documents for production.

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on August 23, 1999 for a telephonic status conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Ben Powell and David Simpson, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Martha Weiss, Chris Athanasia and Rachel Mariner, counsel.

Also participating in the teleconference was Hon. Thomas B. Russell, U.S. District Judge.

Defendant alleged that plaintiff had not properly identified documents in at least one deposition but stated that court action is not needed at this time.

Plaintiff reported that in depositions of defendant's employees, defendant has improperly instructed the deponent not to read documents into the record. Defendant responded that it has only does this when the deponent was not the author or recipient of the document in question but has offered to have someone else, such as one of defendant's counsel, read the document into the record instead of the deponent.

received
8/30/99 AT 10am

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the circumstances under which counsel may instruct a client not to answer a question in a deposition are generally limited to invocations of a privilege. Counsel shall make their objections on the record in the deposition and the court will address the objections at the appropriate time. If this issue arises again in depositions of defendant's employees, defense counsel shall make its objection in some form other than instructing the deponent not to answer the question.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the next teleconference is scheduled for Tuesday, September 7, 1999 at 2:00 a.m., EDT. At that time, the parties shall report when they believe a settlement conference might be productive. Defendant shall initiate the teleconference.

Rule 45, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Parts C & D:

(c) PROTECTION OF PERSONS SUBJECT TO SUBPOENAS.

(1) A party or an attorney responsible for the issuance and service of a subpoena shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to that subpoena. The court on behalf of which the subpoena was issued shall enforce this duty and impose upon the party or attorney in breach of this duty an appropriate sanction, which may include, but is not limited to, lost earnings and a reasonable attorney's fee.

(2)(A) A person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents or tangible things, or inspection of premises need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless commanded to appear for deposition, hearing or trial.

(B) Subject to paragraph (d)(2) of this rule, a person commanded to produce and permit inspection and copying may, within 14 days after service of the subpoena or before the time specified for compliance if such time is less than 14 days after service, serve upon the party or attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials or of the premises. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials or inspect the premises except pursuant to an order of the court by which the subpoena was issued. If objection has been made, the party serving the subpoena may, upon notice to the person commanded to produce, move at any time for an order to compel the production. Such an order to compel production shall protect any person who is not a party or an officer of a party from significant expense resulting from the inspection and copying commanded.

(3)(A) On timely motion, the court by which a subpoena was issued shall quash or modify the subpoena if it

(i) fails to allow reasonable time for compliance;

(ii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to travel to a place more than 100 miles from the place where that person resides, is employed or regularly transacts business in person, except that, subject to the provisions of clause (c)(3)(B)(iii) of this rule, such a person may in order to attend trial be commanded to travel from any such place within the state in which the trial is held, or

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter and no exception or waiver applies, or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) If a subpoena

(i) requires disclosure of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information, or

(ii) requires disclosure of an unretained expert's opinion or information not describing specific events or occurrences in dispute and resulting from the expert's study made not at the request of any party, or

(iii) requires a person who is not a party or an officer of a party to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial, the court may, to protect a person subject to or affected by the subpoena, quash or modify the subpoena or, if the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship and assures that the person to whom the subpoena is addressed will be reasonably compensated, the court may order appearance or production only upon specified conditions.

(d) DUTIES IN RESPONDING TO SUBPOENA.

(1) A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents shall produce them as they are kept in the usual course of business or shall organize and label them to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(2) When information subject to a subpoena is withheld on a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial preparation materials, the claim shall be made expressly and shall be supported by a description of the nature of the documents, communications, or things not produced that is sufficient to enable the demanding party to contest the claim.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

NOTICE OF DISCLOSURE AND FILING OF EXPERT TESTIMONY UNDER SEAL

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc., United States Tobacco Manufacturing Company Inc. and UST Inc. give notice that they have made the disclosures required of them under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(20(A) and (B). The expert reports of Winston Weber and David T. Scheffman filed simultaneously with this notice have previously been served upon Plaintiffs. As explained in the reports, it is anticipated that the reports will be supplemented at a time consistent with the requirements of Rule 26(e)(1) to cover matters that may hereafter be revealed in the course of further examination of relevant materials and further proceedings in this case.

Defendants have designated the reports of Winston Weber and David T. Scheffman as CONFIDENTIAL under the Court's Protective Order except for paragraphs 50, 55 and 115 of the report of David T. Scheffman, together with all attachments referenced therein, which have been designated as HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL under the Court's Protective Order. Accordingly, the reports of Messrs. Weber and Scheffman are filed under seal pursuant to paragraph 13 of the Protective Order.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL.	PLAINTIFFS
v.	NO. 5:98CV-108-R
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on October 13, 1999 for a telephonic status conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Mark Hanson, Ben Powell, and David Simpson, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Chris Athanasia, James Keyte, Martha Weiss, and John Reed, counsel.

Plaintiff Conwood raised one issue at the teleconference which will be dealt with by separate order. Defendant UST raised two issues at the teleconference and rulings were orally announced.

On September 29, 1999, UST requested certain information about plaintiff's experts that UST contends it needs in order to be fully prepared to depose those experts. Plaintiff responded that the information could be sent to defendant by October 15, 1999, at the latest.

In its second issue, defendant sought clarification that 45 declarations from non-party retailers, produced by plaintiff after the deadline for identifying trial witnesses, will not be offered in plaintiff's case-in-chief.

The following rulings were orally announced at the teleconference.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) Plaintiff shall produce the requested information regarding its experts no later than Friday, October 15, 1999. If the information can be produced earlier, plaintiff is encouraged to do so.

2) Plaintiff clearly stated that it would not be offering the declarations from the 45 non-party retailers in its case-in-chief but would reserve them for its rebuttal case, if necessary.

3) The next teleconference is scheduled for Wednesday, October 27, 1999 at 2:00 p.m., EDT. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL.	PLAINTIFFS
v.	NO. 5:98CV-108-R
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on October 13, 1999 for a telephonic status conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Mark Hanson, Ben Powell, and David Simpson, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Chris Athanasia, James Keyte, Martha Weiss, and John Reed, counsel.

Plaintiff Conwood raised one issue at the teleconference which will be dealt with by separate order. Defendant UST raised two issues at the teleconference and rulings were orally announced.

On September 29, 1999, UST requested certain information about plaintiff's experts that UST contends it needs in order to be fully prepared to depose those experts. Plaintiff responded that the information could be sent to defendant by October 15, 1999, at the latest.

In its second issue, defendant sought clarification that 45 declarations from non-party retailers, produced by plaintiff after the deadline for identifying trial witnesses, will not be offered in plaintiff's case-in-chief.

The following rulings were orally announced at the teleconference.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) Plaintiff shall produce the requested information regarding its experts no later than Friday, October 15, 1999. If the information can be produced earlier, plaintiff is encouraged to do so.

2) Plaintiff clearly stated that it would not be offering the declarations from the 45 non-party retailers in its case-in-chief but would reserve them for its rebuttal case, if necessary.

3) The next teleconference is scheduled for Wednesday, October 27, 1999 at 2:00 p.m., EDT. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on October 27, 1999 for a telephonic status conference.

PARTICIPANTS:
FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Dick Roberts, Eddie Foster, Mark Hanson, and Ben Powell, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Martha Weiss, John Reed, and James Keyte, counsel.

Defendant UST raised two issues for discussion.

I.

Plaintiff recently produced a written declaration of Harold Price, Senior Vice President of Sales & Marketing, Swedish Match North America, dated October 12, 1999. In the declaration, Mr. Price alleges that defendant UST has engaged in the same sort of anti-competitive activities against Swedish Match as it is alleged to have committed against plaintiff. Plaintiff has indicated that it intends to call Mr. Price to testify at trial in conformity with his written declaration.

Defendant argues that Mr. Price is a "field witness" and should have been disclosed as such prior to the September 21, 1999 deadline for disclosure of "field witnesses." In response, plaintiff makes two arguments. First, that defendants did not know precisely what Mr. Price's testimony would be until October 13, 1999 and, second, that Mr. Price is not a "field witness" as that term is defined in the court's order of May 11, 1999. (Docket No. 100).

Upon consideration,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the issue is taken under advisement.

II.

Defendant contends that it is entitled to all materials relied upon by plaintiff's experts in arriving at their expert opinions, including communications with plaintiff's counsel. Defendant alleges that not all such communications between plaintiff's counsel and plaintiff's experts have been produced.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that, upon agreement of the parties, defendant shall file a brief, no more than five pages long, on the issue no later than Thursday, October 28, 1999. Plaintiff shall file its response no later than Monday, November 1, 1999.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the issue will be included on the agenda of the November 2, 1999 meeting with counsel. The date and time of the next teleconference will be set at the November 2, 1999 meeting.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL.	PLAINTIFFS
v.	NO. 5:98CV-108-R
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

By letter to the court, dated October 25, 1999, defendant informed the court of an issue it intended to raise at the scheduled telephonic conference on October 27, 1999. At the conference the issue was discussed and taken under advisement by the court.

On October 15, 1999 plaintiff produced a written declaration of Harold Price, Senior Vice President of Sales & Marketing for Swedish Match North America. In the declaration, Mr. Price alleges that defendant UST has engaged in the same sort of anti-competitive activities against Swedish Match as it is alleged to have committed against plaintiff. Shortly after producing the declaration, plaintiff indicated that it intends to call Mr. Price to testify at trial in conformity with his written declaration.

Defendant argues that Mr. Price is a "field witness" and should have been disclosed as such prior to the September 21, 1999 deadline for disclosure of "field witnesses." In response, plaintiff makes two arguments. First, defendants did not know precisely what Mr. Price's testimony would be until October 13, 1999 and, second, Mr. Price is not a "field witness" as that term is defined in the court's order of May 11, 1999. (Docket No. 100).

The argument that the testimony of Price should be allowed because he was not firmly identified as a witness until after the September 21 cutoff is not persuasive. First, there is nothing in the order which suggests that witnesses who suddenly become known after the cutoff could be listed; the purpose of the cutoff was to set a clear and firm deadline for the disclosure of such field witnesses. In any event, Conwood has certainly known of the existence of Swedish Match and its executives for a very long time, and the firming up of the testimony after the cutoff would hardly excuse a delay in witness identification.

However, there is a serious question whether Mr. Price is a member of the category of "field personnel" trial witnesses required to be identified early by the court's order of May 11, 1999. The pertinent paragraph of that order states the following:

> Therefore, the court will amend the previous pretrial order to require the disclosure by Conwood by September 21, 1999 of its trial witnesses who are "field personnel," meaning witnesses who have direct personal knowledge of UST's "in the field" anti-competitive behavior. Such field personnel witnesses would include UST field sales personnel and other former sales personnel, Conwood field sales personnel, convenience store owners, managers, and employee, and others who may have directly, personally observed "in the field" activity which Conwood alleges to be anti-competitive.

(Docket No. 100). Thus, the May 11 order created a limited category of "field personnel" witnesses who had to be disclosed well in advance of the pretrial order's trial witness disclosure requirement.

The early disclosure was meant to prevent unfairness to UST which could arise from its inability to identify and depose store managers, retail employees, and former UST and Conwood salesmen who could have direct knowledge from personal observation of UST in-the-field practices which Conwood challenges, such as the removal of racks, or the elimination of point of sale advertising provided by Conwood for display in stores. Because this group of potential "field personnel" witnesses would be so large, in the absence of the early identification of the actual trial witnesses, UST would likely never know which of the hundreds or more potential field witnesses might testify against them.

However, the order was limited in its scope. Certainly there are many other categories of witnesses who might appear at trial whose early identification was not required by the May 11 order. The question here is whether Mr. Price is member of the "field personnel" category.

Mr. Price's declaration, attached to the October 25 letter from UST counsel, asserts that his knowledge of UST practices is based on "personal knowledge." See paragraph 2. However, it is not clear whether his knowledge is based on his actual, personal in-the-field observations from his individual travel to retail outlets, whether it is based on reports which he receives in his capacity as senior vice president of sales and marketing, or a combination. It certainly is possible that he has received information both ways.

To the extent that Mr. Price's proposed testimony would be based on his direct, personal, immediate in-the-field observations, his testimony would be properly categorized as that of a "field personnel" witness, and he should have been accordingly identified in the September 21 disclosures of Conwood. Conwood's failure to identify him then will bar him from testifying as a "field personnel" witness. His identification on October 15 rather than on September 21 is more than an inconsequential failure to comply (as might have occurred had he been identified on September 22, for example). The proffered suggestion that his testimony "firmed up" after the deadline is unavailing, particularly since Swedish Match is very well known to Conwood.

However, much of his knowledge may be derivative from his capacity as a corporate executive rather than the result of what he saw on personal travels. To that extent, he would not be a "field personnel" witness, but a business executive whose knowledge comes to him from working in corporate offices, based on the reports and input of others. In this regard, his testimony would not be barred since it is not from a field personnel but an executive perspective. Whether such testimony runs afoul of evidentiary rules such as the provisions of the Federal Rules of Evidence governing hearsay is not an issue which this order will attempt to address, and likely would be a determination for the trial judge in the context of the jury trial.

Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that, to the extent that Price's testimony is based on his direct, personal in-the-field observations, it is barred as he was not timely identified in accordance with the court's May 11 order. To the extent that his testimony is based on other knowledge, it is not barred by the May 11 order, but still must pass muster under applicable Federal Rules of Evidence.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
PADUCAH DIVISION

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, -against- UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98 CV-108-R

MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION
OF DOCUMENTS PURSUANT TO RULE 26

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") respectfully request that this Court, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B), require Plaintiffs' counsel, and each of its five testifying expert witnesses, to produce all documents or information (in any form) considered by Plaintiffs' experts, including but not limited to documents or information created by or at the direction of Plaintiffs' counsel or created by plaintiffs' experts with input or assistance from the plaintiffs' counsel. Under the 1993 amendment to Rule 26(a)(2)(B), this is information USTC is entitled to prior to expert depositions in order to explore the extent to which Plaintiffs' expert opinions and analyses were based on an objective consideration of the facts or, instead, were influenced by Conwood's counsel advocating a particular position. Indeed, in light of Professor Gundlach's recent testimony, it is readily apparent that Plaintiffs' counsel did not just send "transmittal" letters to its experts; and, under well established case law, we do not have to accept Conwood's representations to the contrary.

BACKGROUND

On October 15, 1999, Defendants deposed Professor Gregory Gundlach – one of Plaintiffs' testifying experts in this case – and learned that, in the course of forming his opinions, he used Conwood's legal counsel as his "staff," jointly created documents with Kellog Huber that "summarized various aspects of the case," and routinely received e-mails that, among other things not yet known to us, "summarized" testimony in this case.

By letter dated October 18, 1999, USTC requested that Plaintiffs produce all documents considered by Professor Gundlach as required pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 26(a)(2)(B). (Attached as Appendix A) On October 21, 1999, Defendants further requested that all documents created by Plaintiffs' counsel and considered by any of Plaintiffs' experts be produced as required by Rule 26. (Attached as Appendix B) In response, on October 26, 1999, Plaintiffs produced a chart apparently created by Plaintiffs' counsel and adopted by Professors Gundlach and Blattberg. (Attached as Appendix C) Remarkably, Plaintiffs' letter provided no explanation for the failure to produce this document concomitantly with the filing of Professor Gundlach's expert report (or rebuttal report) as is required by Rule 26. Indeed, the belated production of the chart – which purports to list the retailers that have some undefined "exclusive" agreements with USTC – ensured that USTC may need another day of deposition with Professor Gundlach. Further, Plaintiffs letter averred, contrary to Professor Gundlach's plain, sworn testimony, that "Dr. Gundlach does not have any additional responsive material."[1]

ARGUMENT

Pursuant to Rule 26 the report of an expert witness "shall contain . . . the data or other information considered by the [expert] witness in forming the opinions" contained in the expert report. The requirement that this information be provided concurrently with the filing

---

[1] Significantly, Plaintiffs' letter does not argue, nor did Mr. Hansen assert in the telephonic conference of October 27, 1999, that the material requested by Defendants is privileged or otherwise protected from discovery.

16diii002251

of the report is fundamental to the purpose of Rule 26. "Indeed, the very purpose of the comprehensive disclosures required from retained experts by Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) is to afford opposing counsel sufficient information to prepare for cross-examination." Musselman v. Phillips, 176 F.R.D. 194, 200 (D.Md. 1997).

The Commentary to the 1993 amendments to Rule 26 make clear that the Rule applies to documents and information furnished by counsel that are subsequently shown to, and considered by, expert witnesses: "Given this obligation of disclosure, litigants should no longer be able to argue that materials furnished to their experts to be used in forming their opinions – whether or not ultimately relied upon by the expert – are privileged or otherwise protected from disclosure when such persons are testifying or being deposed." Commentary to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B). See also Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Richard L. Marcus, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2016.2 at 252 (1994) ("At least with respect to experts who testify at trial, the disclosure requirements of rule 26(a)(2), adopted in 1993, were intended to pretermit further discussion and mandate disclosure despite privilege."); Musselman, 176 F.R.D. at 199 (holding "when an attorney communicates otherwise protected work product to an expert witness retained for the purposes of providing opinion testimony at trial – whether factual in nature or containing the attorney's opinions or impressions – that information is discoverable if it is considered by the expert"); B.C.F. Oil Refining, Inc. v. Consolidated Edison Company of N.Y., Inc., 171 F.R.D. 57, 65-67 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (same). Accordingly, Plaintiff's counsel in this case is not – at least not yet – attempting to hide behind a work product privilege to avoid the required disclosure under Rule 26.

Further, a party resisting production may not, as here, rely on bald claims that production is not required because the expert witness received, but did not "consider," the documents and information at issue. See B.C.F. Oil, 171 F.R.D. at 62 (requiring production of materials despite Plaintiff's claim that documents at issue did not relate to the expert's testimony, because "[d]efendant should not have to rely on plaintiff's representation that these documents were not considered by the expert in forming his opinion"). Moreover, the production of documents received and considered by an expert witness is required by the fundamental purpose of Rule 26(a)(2)(B). See Musselman, 176 F.R.D. at 200 ("it is essential that parties be able to discover not only what an opposing expert's opinions are, but also the manner in which they were arrived at . . . and whether this was done as a result of an objective consideration of the facts, or directed by an attorney advocating a particular position") (emphasis added).

The record here demonstrates why USTC should not have to rely on Conwood's counsel's representation that no "responsive" documents exist. Indeed, Mr. Hanson's implicit representation that Dr. Gundlach only has transmittal or scheduling communications is starkly belied by Dr. Gundlach's sworn testimony just last week.[2]

Thus, Professor Gundlach testified that Kellog Huber acted as his "staff" in conducting his expert analysis, (Gundlach Deposition Transcript, attached hereto as Appendix D, pp. 82-85, 89), and that he relied on – not just considered – the work they did with or for him. (Id., p. 86) Further, counsel worked with Dr. Gundlach to identify serious factual mistakes in his analysis (though the origination of these mistakes remains unclear on the current record). (Id., pp. 87-88). Moreover, Dr. Gundlach plainly testified that he was sent "summaries" of testimony as part of the e-mails he "often" received from Plaintiffs, which he retained in his files. (Id., pp. 91-93) This is precisely the type of information that can lead to less than objective consideration of the record by a testifying expert – and it appears to be the tip of the iceberg here.

[2] Significantly, Plaintiffs October 26 letter does not discuss whether the offices and e-mail system of Plaintiffs' counsel were searched for responsive documents. In light of the testimony given by Professor Gundlach, such a search would seem to be both required and reasonable.

16diii002253

Finally, Plaintiffs' argument that requiring production of documents sent by Plaintiffs' counsel to testifying experts in this case is premature – because Defendants have not yet heard testimony from each expert that such documents exist – entirely misses the point. Rule 26 requires the production of such documents at the time the expert reports are served because, without such "access to attorney-expert communications, opposing counsel may not be able to effectively reveal the influence that counsel has achieved over the expert's testimony." Kahn v. Rand, 168 F.R.D. 633, 640 (N.D.Ind. 1996).[3]

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that Plaintiffs' testifying experts and Plaintiffs' counsel (including in-house counsel, if relevant) be ordered to produce all documents or information (in any form) created, or caused to be created by or with counsel for Plaintiffs, that was reviewed by any of Plaintiffs' testifying experts that in any way relate to the evidence or theories in this case, as well as all communications between Plaintiffs' counsel and Conwood's testifying expert witnesses regarding the substance of expert reports or potential testimony at trial.

[3] Similarly, whether we ask any of the other experts about this type of material in no way relieves Conwood of producing all such material so that we may decide whether re-deposing Conwood's experts on such information is warranted.

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

As we discussed on Friday, October 15, 1999, please provide dates when Professor Gunlach will be made available for the continuation of his deposition.

In addition, please provide the following materials as soon as possible and prior to the dates given for the continuation of Professor Gunlach's deposition:

- All documents created, or caused to be created, by counsel for Plaintiffs that were sent to Professor Gunlach and that summarize, characterize, or reference in any way, any record evidence in this case, including any documents and/or testimony;

- All materials relating to Professor Gunlach's purported study of "exclusive agreements" with respect to 22,000 retail locations whether those materials were created, or caused to be created, by Professor Gunlach or by counsel for Plaintiffs; and

- All communications between Plaintiffs' counsel and Professor Gunlach regarding his expert reports or potential testimony at trial.

If you would care to discuss these request further, please do not hesitate to call.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia (CSL)

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We did not receive any response to our letters of October 18 and 19, 1999.

With respect to our October 18 letter, please provide the requested materials and a date in time for a second day of Professor Gundlach's deposition. In addition, Defendants request that, for each of Plaintiffs' remaining four expert witnesses, Plaintiffs provide the following materials:

- All documents created, or caused to be created, by counsel for Plaintiffs that were sent to the expert and that summarize, characterize, or reference in any way, any record evidence in this case, including any documents and/or testimony;
- All materials relating to any purported study of "exclusive agreements" with respect to 22,000 retail locations whether those materials were created, or caused to be created, by the expert witness or by counsel for Plaintiffs; and
- All communications between Plaintiffs' counsel and the expert witness regarding his expert reports or potential testimony at trial.

With respect to our October 19 letter, we see no reason why Plaintiffs were unable or unwilling to respond to a simple inquiry by the date requested. Defendants merely seek Plaintiffs' position with respect to Mr. Harold Price so that we are able to determine whether there is an issue that may require Judge Moyer's attention. We do not wish to bring issues before the Court unnecessarily; however, if we do not receive a response to out inquiry by noon on Friday, October 22, 1999, we intend to bring the issue before Judge Moyer at his earliest convenience.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia

Re: Conwood Co., et al. v. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We received your letters of October 18 and 21, 1999, seeking a second day for the deposition of Professor Gundlach and requesting additional materials regarding Plaintiffs' experts.

Further Gundlach Testimony

Professor Gundlach is available to provide a second day of testimony on Monday November 1, 1999 at 9:00 a.m. in our offices. Please advise us immediately if this date is not acceptable to you.

Extent of Coverage of UST Exclusionary Agreements

Enclosed please find a table that shows UST exclusionary agreements covering approximately 22,000 retail locations that Professor Gundlach mentioned at his deposition. Please note that Professor Blattberg also makes reference to the same analysis in his rebuttal report.

KELLOGG, HUBER, HANSEN, TODD & EVANS, P.L.L.C.

Additional Materials Requested

In August, we provided you with a listing of materials considered by each of Plaintiffs' experts in connection with their initial reports. Recently, we supplemented those disclosures with an additional list of materials considered by Plaintiffs' experts in connection with their rebuttal reports. We have also provided you with many specific items upon your request, including articles, citations, and the above-referenced table.

Notwithstanding those disclosures, in your letters of October 18 and 21, 1999, you now seek additional materials from the experts. Under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), you are entitled only to materials considered by the experts in forming their opinions. To the best of our knowledge, all such materials have already been produced to you. We note that you have already taken the depositions of two of plaintiffs' five experts, and will depose the remaining three this week and next. You will thus have an opportunity to make the same inquiry of the remaining experts that you have already made of Drs. Popper and Gundlach regarding specific materials they may have considered in connection with forming their opinions.

At the Gundlach deposition, you requested that we attempt to identify and produce certain materials which Dr. Gundlach testified that he may have received from us in connection with his reports. We have consulted with Dr. Gundlach, and, with the exception on the table referenced above, Dr. Gundlach does not have any additional responsive material. Of course, to the extent that any additional materials are identified in future depositions we will make full inquiry.

Request for Clarification of Materials Considered by Winston Weber

Attachment 2 of the report of Winston Weber purports to list all of the materials he considered in connection with the writing of his expert report. At his deposition, however, it became clear that the list was in error. First, Mr. Weber testified that he did not attempt to verify the listing of documents considered prior to the filing of his report. (pages 89-90). Moreover, he testified that he had reviewed materials sent to him after the filing of his report (page 276; lines 9-10). Finally, he testified that attachment 2 is inaccurate (page 276; lines 14-18 ("just . . . because it's not listed here [attachment 2] doesn't mean I haven't seen it"). Please provide us with an accurate list of materials that Mr. Weber considered in connection with his work as an expert in this matter as soon as possible.

KELLOGG, HUBER, HANSEN, TODD & EVANS, P.L.L.C.

Also, please provide us with a copy of the unnamed study referred to in Mr. Weber's report on page 20. As his deposition, Mr. Weber testified that the study was authorized by Ernst & Young.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Guzman

Deposition of GREGORY T. GUNDLACH, a witness herein, called for examination by counsel for Defendants in the above-entitled matter, pursuant to notice and agreement, the witness being duly sworn by FERNITA R. FINKLEY, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, taken at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., 1301 K Street, N.W., Suite 1000 West, Washington, D.C., at on a lot of different venues of evidence that I've talked about.

Q. How many retail CAP participants are there throughout the country?

A. I've been able to ascertain in working with Conwood counsel, their support staff, that number ranges in the vicinity of 33,000 retail locations as I recall.

Q. And do you recall reviewing any testimony from any of the 33,000 CAP participants who testified that the number of Conwood brand offerings declined sharply as a result of the CAP program?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection, that misstates testimony.

THE WITNESS: I can't recall specific people, specific documents, but I do recall considerable discussion of reduced number of faces for competitors, discussion of reducing competitors' facings through the incentive program.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. I'm sorry, were you answering with respect to retailer testimony?

A. No. I was answering with regard to the entire body of evidence.

Q. I'm sorry. Were you answering with specific reference to retailers?

A. Yes.
Q. Any of the 33,000 retailers that participate in the CAP program?
MR. GUZMAN: Objection, again misstates testimony.
THE WITNESS: I wasn't really -- retailers are one portion of the evidence that I looked at, more telling I think is the information regarding the CAP itself, the contracts and the internal memoranda in UST. As I sit here today I don't know if I recall particular retailers, and of course there was only ten depositions that I looked at, retailers who provided that information. I'd have to say I can't recall.
BY MR. ATHANASIA:
Q. Do you know how many depositions of retailers were taken in this case?
A. I can't recall a specific number.
Q. Sir, you referred to working with counsel for Conwood and their support staff. Did you employ your own support staff in your study in this case?
A. I had available to me the Conwood personnel -- I'm sorry, the Conwood counsel staff, and I employ within my position in the college three research assistants. I have access to them.

Q. Did you employ three research assistants -- strike that. You employed three research assistants in your position as Professor at Notre Dame?
A. They're available to me, yes.
Q. Did any of those three research assistants work on this case?
A. All three of them may have helped organize documents and assisted me in general cursory organization.
Q. Are those research assistants paid?
A. Yes, they're paid by the department.
Q. By the university?
A. Yes.
Q. Did the University of Notre Dame pay research assistants to do work organizing documents in this case?
A. I think the university appreciates my research interests in the area, so finds it well within the objectives of the university to assist me in this type of activity.
Q. So that would be a yes, the university paid these research assistants to do work on this case?

A. No. I think the university pays them to assist me in my work.
Q. And in that role assisting you in your work they worked on this case?
A. Under my direction they may have provided organization of the documents, carried boxes of documents in, moved them around my office.
Q. Did they review any documents, do any substantive work on this case?
A. No, not to the degree of reviewing particular documents, no.
Q. Any substantive work whatsoever other than carry boxes?
A. Mainly their assistance was in the context of gathering secondary data regarding the moist snuff industry, OTP category, and each of the differing organizations' involved competitors, Swedish Match, Swisher, Conwood, UST.
Q. Can you describe to me what Conwood and their staff did to assist you in this case?
A. Well, my objection was to try to understand the extent of the realm of the different exclusive arrangements. They participated in identifying the -- as well as myself, in identifying documents that contained particular evidence of exclusionary arrangements between UST and particular retailers. They then assisted me in terms of identifying the number of retailers they were represented through those particular arrangements, typically identifying the number of retailers which would be -- fall within those agreements and then helping me to count up the number to arrive at the figure that I used.

Q. Did you rely on this work in quantifying your analysis in this case?

A. To the extent that it had formed my opinions, yes.

Q. Do know how many boxes of documents were produced in this litigation?

A. I'd have to know how many pieces of paper you put inside a box, Chris, but I understand it would be in the vicinity of 1.5 million, copies.

Q. You didn't review all those documents, did you?

A. I reviewed a fair amount, not 1.5 million.

Q. How were the documents you reviewed selected out of the 1.5 million documents?

A. I requested some particular documents regarding particular dimensions of the case that I was interested in. Conwood supplied me with documents. I obtained additional documents on my own based on secondary research. There's a give and take in terms of accumulation and identification of documents.

Q. In terms of -- why don't you identify the dimensions of documents you were looking at. Did you rely on the Conwood counsel staff to select those documents and provide them to you?

A. Not all the time. They may have helped me locate particular documents, but the substantive realm of the documents I was interested in I had free ranging access to any document that I desired.

Q. Can you tell me the process, how you would go about selecting a document that you wanted to review?

A. Give you an example, I mean there's numerous occasions where developed basis for desiring to review a particular document, for example I was interested in the most recent CAP contract when it became available, asked for a copy of the 1999 version. I was provided it. I asked for specific other documents at times based on reading documents, furthering my understanding of those particular documents. I asked about particular areas where I felt the documents may not have been comprehensive given that there was an area of my interest or a lot of motivations that incented me to ask for specific documents in the process of research.

Q. Let me ask you about a specific, who did the work selecting and collecting the documents that led you to determine that U.S. Tobacco had an exclusive with its five top customers?

A. I think it was probably a joint effort given my interest in identifying the top retail institutions that UST dealt with, and supplying of those documents on the part of Conwood personnel, and some of those documents were even provided before I arrived at a point in my research where I was interested in reviewing those particular details.

Q. And who discovered that that was a mistake?

A. Well, I think probably we both realized it at the same time separately. In reviewing the final version of the second report I think I was just alerted in my mind that it may not have been a proper allocation of the number of products ascribed to the top five retailers, and I think we may have been jointly calling one another. I don't know that it was -- I can't discern a specific point in time when they arrived at it or I arrived at it or it was a joint simultaneous occurrence.

Q. Can you tell me who you worked with on the Conwood counsel's staff to assist you in this case?
A. Sure, Michael Guzman of course, Steven Benz, Ben Powell, Neil Gorsuch. Gosh, there have been several members of the Conwood counsel that I've interacted with but I hate to be embarrassed to say that I don't recognize and remember all the names.
Q. And who said that United States Tobacco had an exclusive rack arrangement with the top five customers?
A. I said that.
Q. What did you base that on?
A. Well, again, I corrected it through the errata sheet, but as I recall there was an internal activity report or sales analysis on the part of a UST member that listed the various retailers and the amount of moist snuff sales to those retailers in order descending order. I used that as my basis for identifying Wal-Mart, Southland, Circle K, Sams and Emco. I'm not sure if it's referred to as Emco. I think it's Erco. I used that document as the basis of my findings. I do recall seeing some secondary information that led me to believe that document was correct.

Q. That document spoke to those were the top five customers, correct, not --

A. If you mean retail institutions or customers, I recall the -- merely a listing of the different accounts specifying the top level of sales. I don't know that it described whether or not they were wholesalers or whether or not they were retailers.

Q. My question is what did you use to determine that there was an exclusive rack arrangement with any of these top accounts?

A. Those led me to be able to identify the top accounts. If your question is with regard to the documents that led me to understand there was exclusionary arrangements, typically these were UST documents. They may have been the depositions of people inside the UST organization. They may have been actually copies of the CAP contracts themselves. They may have been copies of other retail incentive programs, 2908 agreements, included various different types of incentive programs, they're far ranging across the different documents that were available to me.

Q. Is Emco a distributor?

A. As I sit here today I can't recall if their operations stretch into the retail realm or stretch up into the retail or the wholesale realm. Given they didn't have an exclusionary arrangement, I moved on to other arrangements that informed me about the exclusionary agreements during that process.

Q. Did anyone from counsel or Conwood or that staff prepare any fact memos for you?

A. I guess I have to know what a fact memo is in your mind.

Q. Did they create any document whatsoever that summarized any facts or any evidence in this case?

A. I may have received e-mails and other information that may have identified the particular case, they may have summarized -- not necessarily summarized but put declarations in front of me that included excerpts of those declarations, in other words the information was provided in a variety of ways, but mainly the raw documents themselves, the ones that I requested.

Q. Did you ever receive any documents prepared by counsel or counsel's staff that summarized the actual documents?

A. We prepared documents together that summarized the various aspects of the case, yes.

Whether or not I received those -- I may have received those based upon the interplay, sure.

Q. Which counsel -- is it fair to say you did that with all counsel that you named earlier?

A. I'm sorry, your reference to accounts meaning --

Q. Counsel. Counsel.

A. Well, it's hard to tell where I may have received those from, they may play a role in the development of those so it's difficult for me to say I received -- I had e-mail contact and received documents from the firm in general. Oftentimes they did not have a signature on them in terms of personnel.

Q. How about did you ever receive any documents prepared by counsel or counsel's staff that summarized deposition testimony?

A. Yes, I do recall receiving some. I often would receive an e-mail of a -- at times received e-mails that may have contained -- referenced the deposition testimony, particular excerpt that may have been of interest to me across a far ranging variety of areas.

Q. Where are those documents and e-mails today?

A. They're -- the ones that are retained in my files are retained in my office at the university.

MR. ATHANASIA: I'm going to ask for production of all those communications in between counsel and Mr. Gundlach or any of his assistants that referred to or summarized evidence in this case in any way.

MR. GUZMAN: Let me just interject here. Chris, if you would be so kind as to send us a letter, we'd be happy to respond.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. We were talking about the CAP program and your assertion that it is related to a decline in brand offering of Conwood brands, correct?

MR. GUZMAN: Objection. That misstates the testimony.

THE WITNESS: I believe we were talking in that vicinity, yes.

BY MR. ATHANASIA:

Q. Did you read the deposition of Dan Walden? Just to refresh your recollection a little bit, he is a retailer of a chain of stores in Georgia and Florida.

A. I remember several retailers but I can't tell you as I sit here today whether I remember that

U.S. DISTRICT COURT CLERK
W.D. OF KENTUCKY

Civil Action No.
5:98CV-108-R

Plaintiffs' Opposition to Motion to Compel Production of Documents

Defendants' Motion to Compel demands production beyond the requirements of the Federal Rules. Pursuant to Rule 26(a)(2)(B), Plaintiffs have already identified the factual material considered by the experts in forming their opinions. Indeed, Plaintiffs have gone beyond the Rule in many instances by re-producing hundreds of pages of documents -- even though these items were already in Defendants' possession. Now Defendants demand a further, all-encompassing search and production simply because one of Plaintiffs' five experts, Dr. Gundlach, suggested at his deposition that he may have reviewed some additional material from counsel. This demand exceeds the scope of the Federal Rules. Moreover, as the attached affidavit from Dr. Gundlach makes clear, there is no factual basis for requiring an additional review of the materials the experts have considered. See Attachment A.

Background

On August 20, 1999, Plaintiffs provided Defendants with lists of materials considered by each of their five experts. See Attachment B. Prior to the depositions of each expert, Plaintiffs supplemented those initial lists to include additional materials the experts considered in preparing their rebuttal reports. See Attachment C. In total, the materials identified by Plaintiffs would fill dozens of boxes.

To date, three of Plaintiffs' five experts have been deposed. At their depositions, experts Dr. Popper and Dr. Kamien stated plainly that their disclosure lists were complete and accurate. Dr. Gundlach made a similar representation, though in an abundance of caution added that he "may" have reviewed additional materials. From this "may" Defendants now manufacture a demand that Plaintiffs' re-search all five of their experts' files and search counsel's opinion work product files too.

It bears mention in this context that the lists produced by Defendants appear to be underinclusive and/or inaccurate. For example, when questioned about his list of materials considered, defense expert Winston Weber testified that he had reviewed a variety of materials not included in his disclosure and observed "just . . . because it's not listed here doesn't mean I haven't seen it." Weber Tr. at p. 276; lines 9-18. Mr. Weber's Report also refers explicitly to a study that Plaintiffs have requested but still have not received. Weber Report at 20. Similarly, Dr. Scheffman testified at his deposition that his disclosure was not complete. Scheffman Tr. at 74-75. Plaintiffs have raised this issue with Defendants, but to date Defendants have not responded.

Argument

Defendants seek an order requiring production of "all communications" between Plaintiffs' counsel and their five experts. This demand lacks foundation legally and factually.

Legally, Defendants are not entitled to "all communications" with experts as they suppose. Instead, under the Federal Rules, they are entitled only to "factual information considered by the expert" in forming his or her opinion. Haworth, Inc. v. Herman Miller, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 289, 295 (W.D. Mich. 1995) (court held that it was error to compel production of all communications between counsel and the expert witness).[1] Indeed, as to Defendants' passing (and unprecedented) suggestion that counsel should search their own opinion work product files, the "Sixth Circuit holds such opinion work product absolutely privileged." Id. at 295 (citing Toledo Edison Co. v. G.A. Technologies, Inc., 847 F.2d 335, 340-41 (6th Cir. 1988)). Moreover, Defendants' reading of Rule 26 would modify an evidentiary privilege, which would conflict with the Rules Enabling Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2074(b).[2]

Factually, Defendants' motion rests entirely on a mischaracterization of the deposition testimony of Dr. Gundlach. Defendants represent that Dr. Gundlach testified he has previously-undisclosed materials in his possession, that "Kellogg Huber acted as his 'staff' in conducting his expert analysis," and that "he was sent 'summaries' of testimony as part of e-mails he 'often' received from Plaintiffs." Motion to Compel at 4. In fact, however, Defendants overstate Dr. Gundlach's testimony.

Dr. Gundlach never testified that he possesses additional, undisclosed factual information considered in forming his opinions. Instead, in an abundance of caution, at his deposition he testified merely that he "may" have such materials. Tr. at 91-92. A Mass. 1999) ("Based on this Court's review of the relevant cases, the text of the rule and the accompanying Advisory Committee comment, this Court concludes that the required disclosure under 26(a)(2)(B) & (b)(4)(A) does not include core attorney work product"); Magee v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 172 F.R.D. 627, 642-43 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) ("Rule 26(a)(2)(B) extends only to factual materials, and not to core attorney work product . . . . Rule 26(a)(2) should not be construed as vitiating the attorney work product privilege, and the laudable policies behind it, in the absence of clear and unambiguous authority under the [F.R.C.P.]"); Ladd Furniture, Inc. v. Moore et al., Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.80[1][a] (3rd ed. 1999) ("The Haworth holding is meritorious, because nothing in the advisory committee notes to the 1993 amendments suggests that Rule 26(b)(4)(A) was intended to abrogate the enhanced protection for opinion work product recognized [in] Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 401 (1981)").

[2] Any "rule . . . modifying an evidentiary privilege shall have no force or effect unless approved by an Act of Congress."

further check by Dr. Gundlach confirms that he has no undisclosed materials considered in forming his opinions. See Attachment A.

Defendants' claim that Dr. Gundlach used Kellogg Huber as his staff to conduct his expert analysis likewise misstates his testimony. Dr. Gundlach explained that counsel for Conwood and their staff typically assisted him by providing him with requested documents from the record. Tr. at 86, lines 21-25; 87, lines 1-4. Indeed, Dr. Gundlach described a process whereby he "had free ranging access to any document that [he] desired." Tr. at 87, lines 5-12.[3]

Finally, Defendants' assertion that Dr. Gundlach testified he "often" received "summaries" of depositions via e-mail again overstates the record. At his deposition, Dr. Gundlach merely (and as it turns out overcautiously) testified that he may have received such factual documents from counsel. Tr at 91-92. Dr. Gundlach initially stated: "Yes, I do recall receiving some. . . ." Tr. at 92, line 8. In the same answer, however, Dr. Gundlach qualified that statement by noting "I often would receive an e-mail of a - at times received e-mails that may have contained - reference the deposition testimony, particular excerpt that may have been of interest to me across a far ranging variety of areas." Tr. at 92, lines 18-23 (emphasis added). Made after an additional review of his files, Dr. Gundlach's declaration makes clear that all of the factual materials he has considered have been disclosed.[4]

[3] Dr. Gundlach also related one instance where counsel and their staff assisted him by tallying up the number of retail locations covered by UST contracts with exclusionary features. Tr. at 85, lines 19-25; 86, lines 1-12. Dr. Gundlach relied on that tally - approximately 22,000 retail locations. The document underlying the count was provided to Defendants.

[4] Counsel in this case often received "rough drafts" of deposition testimony via e-mail from the court reporters weeks before the official copy, and such depositions may have been forwarded to Dr. Gundlach via e-mail for his consideration. Dr. Gundlach's consideration of these depositions has been disclosed to Defendants. See Attachments B & C.

Conclusion

Defendants' motion should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

DECLARATION OF GREGORY T. GUNDLACH

1. I, Gregory T. Gundlach, am over the age of eighteen and make this declaration voluntarily. I am a professor at the College Business at the University of Notre Dame University. I have also been serving as an expert on behalf of Plaintiffs in the above- captioned matter. I make this declaration based on my personal knowledge and on review of documents that are under my custody and control.

2. On Friday, October 15, 1999, I gave a deposition in this matter in my capacity as an expert witness. At the deposition I was asked several questions regarding whether I had ever received materials created by or at the direction of counsel for Conwood that analyzed or summarized evidence in the case. In response to those questions, I stated that I may have such documents. I gave a qualified answer because at the deposition I was unsure about exactly what I had received in light of the large volume of materials I have considered. In light of the ambiguity in my mind at the time, I decided it would be better to give a qualified answer than to state categorically that I had nothing responsive.

3. On Tuesday, October 19, 1999, Michael Guzman, counsel for Conwood, asked me whether I had in my files documents created by or at the direction of counsel that analyze or summarize evidence in the record or otherwise contain substantive discussions relating to my reports or potential testimony at trial. After searching my files, I responded that same day that I did not have any such materials, except for the analysis underlying the statement in my Rebuttal Report that United States Tobacco has exclusive agreements with retailers covering approximately 22,000 retail locations.

4. I understand that the analysis showing United States Tobacco exclusive agreements covering approximately 22,000 retail locations has been provided to Counsel for Defendants. I further understand that Counsel for Defendants have renewed their requests and are inquiring now whether I have any documents that were "created or caused to be created, by counsel for Plaintiffs that were sent to [me] and that summarize, characterize, or reference in any way, any record evidence in this case, including any documents and/or testimony." I also understand Defendants seek "all communications between Plaintiffs' counsel and [me] regarding [my] expert reports or potential testimony at trial."

5. I have reviewed my files again for information responsive to those requests. I have found nothing.

I hereby declare that the foregoing is true and correct under penalty of perjury.

Re: Conwood Co., et al. v. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Dear Counsel:

We have your letter of August 9, 1999 requesting certain information related to our expert reports.

First, Professor Kamien has spent 30 hours on this matter to date; Professor Leftwich has spent 62.25 hours; Professor Popper has spent 64 hours; Professor Gundlach has spent 186.7 hours; and Professor Blattberg has spent 47 hours. The work of all experts is, of course, ongoing and we cannot determine the total number of hours each will ultimately spend on this case.

Second, all of our experts have been permitted access to the entire collection of documents and depositions in this case. Nonetheless, we asked them to identify any particular information they have considered to date. The results can be found in the attached binders; we have Bates-numbered these materials for your convenience (CWD-EXP 00001 through CWD-EXP 01135). With regard to your specific question about the 225 declarations "purportedly submitted by Conwood employees," I would refer you to documents already in your possession Bates-numbered CWD 1027001795 through CWD 1027005362.

Please feel free to call with any questions you might have about this matter.

Very truly yours,

FILED
U.S. DISTRICT COURT
W.D. DIST. KY

Plaintiffs' Opposition to Motion to Compel Production of Documents

Defendants' Motion to Compel demands production beyond the requirements of the Federal Rules. Pursuant to Rule 26(a)(2)(B), Plaintiffs have already identified the factual material considered by the experts in forming their opinions. Indeed, Plaintiffs have gone beyond the Rule in many instances by re-producing hundreds of pages of documents -- even though these items were already in Defendants' possession. Now Defendants demand a further, all-encompassing search and production simply because one of Plaintiffs' five experts, Dr. Gundlach, suggested at his deposition that he may have reviewed some additional material from counsel. This demand exceeds the scope of the Federal Rules. Moreover, as the attached affidavit from Dr. Gundlach makes clear, there is no factual basis for requiring an additional review of the materials the experts have considered. See Attachment A.

Background

On August 20, 1999, Plaintiffs provided Defendants with lists of materials considered by each of their five experts. See Attachment B. Prior to the depositions of each expert, Plaintiffs supplemented those initial lists to include additional materials the experts considered in preparing their rebuttal reports. See Attachment C. In total, the materials identified by Plaintiffs would fill dozens of boxes.

16diii002303

To date, three of Plaintiffs' five experts have been deposed. At their depositions, experts Dr. Popper and Dr. Kamien stated plainly that their disclosure lists were complete and accurate. Dr. Gundlach made a similar representation, though in an abundance of caution added that he "may" have reviewed additional materials. From this "may" Defendants now manufacture a demand that Plaintiffs' re-search all five of their experts' files and search counsel's opinion work product files too.

It bears mention in this context that the lists produced by Defendants appear to be underinclusive and/or inaccurate. For example, when questioned about his list of materials considered, defense expert Winston Weber testified that he had reviewed a variety of materials not included in his disclosure and observed "just . . . because it's not listed here doesn't mean I haven't seen it." Weber Tr. at p. 276; lines 9-18. Mr. Weber's Report also refers explicitly to a study that Plaintiffs have requested but still have not received. Weber Report at 20. Similarly, Dr. Scheffman testified at his deposition that his disclosure was not complete. Scheffman Tr. at 74-75. Plaintiffs have raised this issue with Defendants, but to date Defendants have not responded.

Argument

Defendants seek an order requiring production of "all communications" between Plaintiffs' counsel and their five experts. This demand lacks foundation legally and factually.

Legally, Defendants are not entitled to "all communications" with experts as they suppose. Instead, under the Federal Rules, they are entitled only to "factual information considered by the expert" in forming his or her opinion. Haworth, Inc. v. Herman Miller, Inc., 162 F.R.D. 289, 295 (W.D. Mich. 1995) (court held that it was error to compel production of all communications between counsel and the expert witness).[1] Indeed, as to Defendants' passing (and unprecedented) suggestion that counsel should search their own opinion work product files, the "Sixth Circuit holds such opinion work product absolutely privileged." Id. at 295 (citing Toledo Edison Co. v. G.A. Technologies, Inc., 847 F.2d 335, 340-41 (6th Cir. 1988)). Moreover, Defendants' reading of Rule 26 would modify an evidentiary privilege, which would conflict with the Rules Enabling Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2074(b).[2]

Factually, Defendants' motion rests entirely on a mischaracterization of the deposition testimony of Dr. Gundlach. Defendants represent that Dr. Gundlach testified he has previously-undisclosed materials in his possession, that "Kellogg Huber acted as his 'staff' in conducting his expert analysis," and that "he was sent 'summaries' of testimony as part of e-mails he 'often' received from Plaintiffs." Motion to Compel at 4. In fact, however, Defendants overstate Dr. Gundlach's testimony.

Dr. Gundlach never testified that he possesses additional, undisclosed factual information considered in forming his opinions. Instead, in an abundance of caution, at his deposition he testified merely that he "may" have such materials. Tr. at 91-92. A

[1] See also The Nexxus Products Co. v. CVS New York, Inc., 188 F.R.D. 7, 10 (D. Mass. 1999) ("Based on this Court's review of the relevant cases, the text of the rule and the accompanying Advisory Committee comment, this Court concludes that the required disclosure under 26(a)(2)(B) & (b)(4)(A) does not include core attorney work product"); Magee v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 172 F.R.D. 627, 642-43 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) ("Rule 26(a)(2)(B) extends only to factual materials, and not to core attorney work product . . . . Rule 26(a)(2) should not be construed as vitiating the attorney work product privilege, and the laudable policies behind it, in the absence of clear and unambiguous authority under the [F.R.C.P.]"); Ladd Furniture, Inc. v. Ernst & Young, 1998 WL 1093901, at *12, *13 (M.D.N.C. 1998) (same); All West Pet Supply Co. v. Hill's Pet Prods. Div., 152 F.R.D. 634, 639 n.9 (D. Kan. 1993) (same); 6 James Wm. Moore et al., Moore's Federal Practice, § 26.80[1][a] (3rd ed. 1999) ("The Haworth holding is meritorious, because nothing in the advisory committee notes to the 1993 amendments suggests that Rule 26(b)(4)(A) was intended to abrogate the enhanced protection for opinion work product recognized [in] Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 401 (1981)").

[2] Any "rule . . . modifying an evidentiary privilege shall have no force or effect unless approved by an Act of Congress."

further check by Dr. Gundlach confirms that he has no undisclosed materials considered in forming his opinions. See Attachment A.

Defendants' claim that Dr. Gundlach used Kellogg Huber as his staff to conduct his expert analysis likewise misstates his testimony. Dr. Gundlach explained that counsel for Conwood and their staff typically assisted him by providing him with requested documents from the record. Tr. at 86, lines 21-25; 87, lines 1-4. Indeed, Dr. Gundlach described a process whereby he "had free ranging access to any document that [he] desired." Tr. at 87, lines 5-12.[3]

Finally, Defendants' assertion that Dr. Gundlach testified he "often" received "summaries" of depositions via e-mail again overstates the record. At his deposition, Dr. Gundlach merely (and as it turns out overcautiously) testified that he may have received such factual documents from counsel. Tr at 91-92. Dr. Gundlach initially stated: "Yes, I do recall receiving some. . . ." Tr. at 92, line 8. In the same answer, however, Dr. Gundlach qualified that statement by noting "I often would receive an e-mail of a - at times received e-mails that may have contained - reference the deposition testimony, particular excerpt that may have been of interest to me across a far ranging variety of areas." Tr. at 92, lines 18-23 (emphasis added). Made after an additional review of his files, Dr. Gundlach's declaration makes clear that all of the factual materials he has considered have been disclosed.[4]

[3] Dr. Gundlach also related one instance where counsel and their staff assisted him by tallying up the number of retail locations covered by UST contracts with exclusionary features. Tr. at 85, lines 19-25; 86, lines 1-12. Dr. Gundlach relied on that tally - approximately 22,000 retail locations. The document underlying the count was provided to Defendants.

[4] Counsel in this case often received "rough drafts" of deposition testimony via e-mail from the court reporters weeks before the official copy, and such depositions may have been forwarded to Dr. Gundlach via e-mail for his consideration. Dr. Gundlach's consideration of these depositions has been disclosed to Defendants. See Attachments B & C.

Conclusion

Defendants' motion should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

DECLARATION OF GREGORY T. GUNDLACH

1. I, Gregory T. Gundlach, am over the age of eighteen and make this declaration voluntarily. I am a professor at the College Business at the University of Notre Dame University. I have also been serving as an expert on behalf of Plaintiffs in the above- captioned matter. I make this declaration based on my personal knowledge and on review of documents that are under my custody and control.

2. On Friday, October 15, 1999, I gave a deposition in this matter in my capacity as an expert witness. At the deposition I was asked several questions regarding whether I had ever received materials created by or at the direction of counsel for Conwood that analyzed or summarized evidence in the case. In response to those questions, I stated that I may have such documents. I gave a qualified answer because at the deposition I was unsure about exactly what I had received in light of the large volume of materials I have considered. In light of the ambiguity in my mind at the time, I decided it would be better to give a qualified answer than to state categorically that I had nothing responsive.

3. On Tuesday, October 19, 1999, Michael Guzman, counsel for Conwood, asked me whether I had in my files documents created by or at the direction of counsel that analyze or summarize evidence in the record or otherwise contain substantive discussions relating to my reports or potential testimony at trial. After searching my files, I responded that same day that I did not have any such materials, except for the analysis underlying the statement in my Rebuttal Report that United States Tobacco has exclusive agreements with retailers covering approximately 22,000 retail locations.

4. I understand that the analysis showing United States Tobacco exclusive agreements covering approximately 22,000 retail locations has been provided to Counsel for Defendants. I further understand that Counsel for Defendants have renewed their requests and are inquiring now whether I have any documents that were "created or caused to be created, by counsel for Plaintiffs that were sent to [me] and that summarize, characterize, or reference in any way, any record evidence in this case, including any documents and/or testimony." I also understand Defendants seek "all communications between Plaintiffs' counsel and [me] regarding [my] expert reports or potential testimony at trial."

5. I have reviewed my files again for information responsive to those requests. I have found nothing.

I hereby declare that the foregoing is true and correct under penalty of perjury.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., ET AL. — PLAINTIFFS

vs. — NO. 5:98CV-108-R

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC. — DEFENDANT

REPORT

The undersigned Magistrate Judge held a conference with counsel on November 2, 1999, in the court library, for the principal purpose of discussing the agenda for the upcoming settlement conference on November 18, 1999.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR PLAINTIFF: David Simpson, Edward J. Foster, Dick Roberts, Ben Powell, and Mark Hanson, counsel.

FOR DEFENDANT: Neal R. Stoll, Martha Weiss, and John Reed, counsel.

The settlement conference will begin at 9:30 a.m. (not 9:00 a.m.), and the Magistrate Judge has reserved the court library for the entire day for the conference.

In addition, the Magistrate Judge heard oral argument on the pending motion to compel filed by defendant UST with respect to information claimed to have been furnished through counsel to Conwood experts. The Magistrate Judge took the matter under advisement pending a teleconference with one of the experts, which has yet to be scheduled.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

There are two genuinely contested elements of plaintiffs' antitrust claim: (a) whether UST's[1] long-standing and multifaceted campaign of predatory and exclusionary acts — choking competitors' distribution channels through, e.g., coercive agreements and outright criminal acts — constitutes anticompetitive conduct remediable under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, and, (b) if so, the amount of damages that Conwood suffered as a result of UST's conduct.

The other elements — specifically (a) definition of the relevant market as the United States market for moist smokeless tobacco ("moist snuff") and (b) UST's possession of monopoly power in that market — are so well-established (and effectively uncontested by UST) as to present no genuine issue of material fact.

Accordingly, it is in the interest of justice and sound judicial economy to grant Conwood's motion for partial summary judgment. (Point I, infra.) In addition, because UST will be unable to offer any proof to establish either liability or damages with respect to any of its counterclaims, the Court should also dismiss them under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56. (Point II, infra.)

Statement of the Case

UST springs from the American Tobacco Company, which engaged in decades of predation before being broken up by judicial decree, first in 1911, then again in 1946.[2] Steeped in this culture of antitrust abuses, UST continued to sustain its near-100% monopoly on moist snuff through anticompetitive acts and the erection of high barriers to entry. UST, for example, combined the promotion of cardboard cans (which promoted rapid product staleness) with refunds to retailers for unsold, stale product. To enter the market, therefore, any potential entrant had to be prepared to withstand crushing costs while its products were being introduced (and hence were slow in selling) to the public.

In 1979, Conwood managed to break UST's stranglehold by first introducing its innovative Hawken™ brand in a plastic can — which preserved freshness longer and thereby reduced returns of stale product. Conwood also pioneered better value for the consumer by providing more tobacco (1.2 ounces versus the 1.0 ounce sold by UST) at a price competitive with UST's.

At first, UST tolerated Conwood as a small and insignificant competitor.[3] Several years ago, however, UST realized that innovative and "value priced" moist snuff sold by Conwood and the two other small competitors in the market[4] threatened its dominant market share and corresponding monopoly profits. UST had grown accustomed to decades of increasing prices (more than doubling the price in the last ten years)[5] and increasing profit margins (among the very highest of U.S. public companies).[6]

[3] UST's internal documents establish that UST will tolerate a competitor gaining no more than 5% of the market before UST will begin a campaign of systematic exclusion. See, e.g., USTC/CWD 173407 ("5% market share is a point at which a serious response to Helme is warranted") (Exh. 1); USTC/CWD 173421 ("Competition . . . at what market segment share point should USTC respond? 5% Hold back until the[n]") (Exh. 1).

[4] There are four moist smokeless manufacturers of any size. In 1997, UST had approximately 78.1% of the total U.S. market; Conwood had 13.1%; Swedish Match of North America ("Swedish Match") had 3.3%; and Swisher International Group Inc. ("Swisher") had 4.4%. See USTC/CWD 028432 (Exh. 2).

[5] USTC/CWD 093837 (UST wholesale price per can was $1.00 in 1987, $2.06 in 1997) (Exh. 3).

[6] By its own forecast, UST has earned a gross profit margin in excess of a staggering 82% for more than a decade. USTC/CWD 032346 (showing UST yearly increase in gross margins from 82.6% in 1989 to 88.6% in 1997) (Exh. 4). This amounts to approximately $1 billion in 1998 profits. See John P. Renwick,

Afraid that unrestrained competition would erode its premium pricing and hence deflate its unparalleled profits, UST decided to use what it described as its "market power"[7] to stifle competition by (again, its own words) "eliminat[ing]" or "cutting competitive distribution" and taking competitors' advertising from stores.[8]

UST's scheme to abuse its acknowledged market power involved, among other things: (1) systematic and outright elimination of competitors' product "facings"[9] and point-of-sale advertising ("POS");[10] and (2) inducing retailers — through exercise of market power, false information, kick-backs of monopoly profits, and other inducements — to permit UST "exclusive vending" and "exclusive POS" with the same exclusionary effect.[11] By removing facings and POS — with or without consent — UST squelched competition from fast-growing brands that had not yet achieved a foothold in the market, and marginalized the few competitive brands that had gained acceptance (such as Conwood's Kodiak™). UST forced rivals to devote their resources to counteract the effects of UST's unlawful conduct, rather than actively promoting their products.

UST leveraged its "must carry" Skoal™ and Copenhagen™ to get stores to accede — wittingly or unwittingly — to UST's

[9] Moist snuff is displayed in retail stores in a plastic rack. The rack typically contains multiple brands with each brand being fed into one or more gravity-fed slots or "facings" in the rack. See USTC/CWD 568166 (Exh. 14); USTC/CWD 529168 (Exh. 15).

[10] "Point-of-sale advertising" or "POS" are advertising materials that are displayed on or near the moist snuff rack. The principal form of POS is sometimes called a "header card." Because of heavy restrictions on almost all forms of tobacco marketing, POS advertising, which was always important, has now become the most effective means to communicate with consumers and to advertise the price advantages of the non-UST brands. See Blattberg Report at ¶¶ 13, 14.

[11] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 1144417 ("Eliminate Comp[etitors] Distribution" and obtain "Exclusive Vending") (Exh. 11); USTC/CWD 888480 ("exclusive UST vending and POS as part of the Customer Alliance Program") (Exh. 16); USTC/CWD 734373 ("UST exclusive vending") (Exh. 17); USTC/CWD 109185 ("Category Management" requires that "U.S. Tobacco has exclusive permanent point of sale placement.") (Exh. 18); USTC/CWD 556853 ("vendor exclusitivity"; "only POS allowed on our [UST's] vendors for competitive products will be the product vendor label.") (Exh. 19).

suppression of competition. For example, UST sought and obtained "vendor exclusivity" and exclusive POS in roughly 8,000 Wal-Mart and 7-11 stores.[12] This led to increases in sales for UST, even as UST prices continued to rise; at the same time, sales for UST's rivals fell sharply. Through these agreements, UST reduced overall sales of moist snuff.[13] Nor are Wal-Mart and 7-11 alone: UST has entered into such anticompetitive agreements with retailers and wholesalers that sell roughly 80% of UST's moist snuff.[14]

This multifaceted campaign of exclusion has been pervasive, systematic, and nationwide. Almost a dozen former UST sales representatives from across the country testified that they were trained — indeed pressured — to exclude competition by [13] A study by A.C. Nielsen Co., an independent marketing firm that surveys and publishes market share data relied on by competitors, indicates that, after the implementation of the UST/Wal-Mart agreement, overall unit sales decreased by 19%. CWD1011022966 (Exh. 22). The findings of that study were confirmed by former Wal-Mart employee, Waynell Renfro, who testified that, as a result of the UST's vending agreement, overall moist sales at Wal-Mart fell. Deposition of Waynell Renfro at 26-28 (Exh. 23).

eliminating competitors' product racks, facings, and advertising. They received these instructions from UST's senior executives, including Executive Vice President Gary Milano.[15] Many other UST representatives have admitted to store employees and their Conwood counterparts that they were required by their supervisors to remove competitors' product racks and POS from stores.[16]

Despite a well-justified fear of UST retaliation, more than 55 retail-store employees have also provided sworn testimony and statements about repeated and pervasive acts of exclusion in their stores by UST sales representatives.[17]

[15] Alan Hart, a former UST sales representative, testified that Gary Milano, then a regional manager, instructed Mr. Hart and approximately 125 other UST employees "to put the competitors' products in UST racks so that UST could control the shelf space and the advertising in the stores"; "to remove Conwood racks from the stores' shelves but not to remove the racks from the stores' premises"; and "to dominate the shelf space with UST racks in those areas where Kodiak was gaining market share." Deposition of Alan Hart at 28, 29 (Exh. 26). According to Mr. Hart, "Mr. Milano emphasized that when Conwood and other competitors lost their racks, they would lose their advertising." Id. at 28. Mr. Hart further testified that "UST executives from headquarters in Connecticut also attended these meetings and observed Mr. Milano giving these instructions." Id. at 29; see also id. at 31 ("Mr. Griffen [UST's Division Manager] also on occasion instructed me to remove Conwood's advertising banners and other point-of-sale materials.").

(Exh. 31); CWD-EXP-00001145-222 (sworn declarations) (Exh. 32). the field by UST's more than 600 representatives. This pervasive predation consumes the time and attention of Conwood's representatives, raises Conwood's costs, and substantially impedes Conwood's efforts to compete.

UST uses all of these tools for the purpose (in its words) of "provid[ing] a barrier to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market" and "support[ing] [UST's] market share expansion objectives."[19] Indeed, UST details in scores of documents its intention to exclude rivals by restricting distribution of competitors' products and advertising. UST's expert acknowledged that UST officials intended to pursue these activities in order to "control the retailer," fully expecting to succeed.[20]

When UST officials provided sworn testimony in this case, however, they could not recall even the simplest facts regarding what they had previously said and done.[21] The executives — with

Q. In the next sentence you write, "we have severely cut back on their ability to market products." What did you mean by that?
A. I don't know.

Deposition of Tim Entwistle at 305-09 (Exh. 36).

[22] For instance, when Gary Smith, the President of UST's Sales and Marketing subsidiary, was presented with a memorandum that he admittedly read and on which he admittedly wrote "excellent job," he claimed not to know what the words "exclusive vending" meant, as used by the author in reporting that UST "won exclusive vending for all single can brands" in 7-11 stores. Indeed, Mr. Smith testified that there was nothing in the entire memorandum (which also reported that UST should introduce a particular policy in order to "disrupt the competitive message and have the ability to dominate retail with [a] newly proposed" program, USTC/CWD 025956 (emphasis added)) that he understood. Deposition of Gary Smith at 422-26 & Exh. 11 (Exh. 37). UST's Executive Vice President of Sales, Gary Milano, had a similar problem with his recollection:

Q. . . . [S]itting here today, . . . what do you understand the words . . . "category management intensified (control competition/SOF equal SOM)" to mean?

* * * *

A. I don't know.
Q. Do you have any understanding of what those words mean?
A. No.

Deposition of Gary Milano at 151 (Exh. 38). See also Deposition of David Untiedt, UST, Director of National Accounts, at 104 (Mr. Untiedt claims that he "do[es]n't know" what "vendor exclusivity" means, although he concedes using the term in a memo) (Exh. 39);

While UST's senior managers now claim to have no idea what their own words meant, they previously boasted that their exclusionary tactics had worked. "We [UST] have severely cut back on [competing firms'] ability to market products."[23]

Not content with "go[ing] to war"[24] in the marketplace, UST also sought to enlist other tobacco companies and even Congress in the entrenchment of dominant tobacco firms at the expense of smaller firms. In the proposed Global Tobacco Settlement ("GTS"), UST was the only moist snuff producer involved in crafting a "voluntary proposal" to further narrow competitors' distribution channels through such devices as requiring that product racks be placed behind store counters — where space and visibility are limited — and further limiting advertising. In commenting upon the proposal (which ultimately failed), the FTC concluded that such devices were patently anticompetitive.[25]

UST's monopolization of the market has reduced moist snuff output, raised prices, and reduced choices for consumers,[26] and has also caused Conwood between $291 million and $483 million in damages.[27]

While UST disputes the prevalence and effect of its anticompetitive behavior, it cannot genuinely dispute that U.S. moist snuff is a relevant market or that UST has monopoly power in that market. With its distinct pricing, packaging, consumers, and production equipment, moist snuff is universally recognized as a distinct market by the industry (including UST), market researchers, and the FTC. Consumers of moist snuff simply do not switch to any other product in response to even substantial price increases — as would be expected if those products were ready substitutes. UST, with its more than 77% market share, is — in its words — "dominant."[28] It has repeatedly and consistently demonstrated its ability to raise prices to supracompetive levels. By definition, therefore, UST has monopoly power.

entry and innovation, including the development of alternative products") (Exh. 81). Recognizing the anticompetitive nature of their effort, proponents of the GTS sought a broad antitrust exemption for their conduct. Id.

Argument

Summary judgment is appropriate where "'there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and . . . the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.'" Humphress v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1004, 1009 (W.D. Ky. 1997) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)), aff'd, 172 F.3d 48 (6th Cir. 1998) (Table), cert. denied, 119 S. Ct. 1576 (1999).[29] The Court may enter judgment on "all or any part" of a claim. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a) (emphasis added); Gooch v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 40 F. Supp. 2d 857 (W.D. Ky. 1998) (granting partial summary judgment); Midwest Aluminum Mfg. Co. v. General Elec. Co., No. 4:90-CV-143, 1993 WL 724870, at *1 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 5, 1993) ("the same summary judgment standard under Fed.R.Civ.P. 56 applies" "[i]n evaluating a motion for partial summary judgment") (citing Boyd v. Ford Motor Co., 948 F.2d 283 (6th Cir. 1991)) (Exh. 42).

In Count I of its Complaint, Conwood alleges unlawful monopolization and attempted monopolization by UST, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. "The offense of monopolization under § 2 has two elements: '(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or [29] "The moving party must carry the initial burden by 'informing the district court of the basis for its motion' and identifying the matter that 'it believes demonstrate[s] the absence of a genuine issue of material fact.' . . . If the moving party meets its burden, the burden then shifts to the nonmoving party to present 'specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.' Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e)." Humphress, 31 F. Supp. 2d at 1009.

maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.'" Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1016 (6th Cir. 1999) (quoting United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71 (1966)); Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849 (6th Cir. 1979) (same).[30]

Here, the first element — both relevant market (Point A) and UST's power in that market (Point B) — is so clearly proven by undisputed facts that Conwood is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.[31]

[30] Plaintiffs must also prove "'antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful.'" Valley Prods. Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398, 402 (6th Cir. 1997) (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489 (1977)). To establish attempted monopolization, Conwood must prove that UST "engaged in anticompetitive conduct with a specific intent to monopolize and that there was a dangerous probability that the attempt would be successful." United States v. Dairymen, Inc., 660 F.2d 192, 194 (6th Cir. 1981). To prove there is a "dangerous probability of monopolization," Conwood must establish a relevant market and UST's "ability to lessen or destroy competition in that market." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456 (1993).

[31] Courts have not hesitated to enter judgment on market definition and power in appropriate cases. See, e.g., In re Super Premium Ice Cream Distrib. Antitrust Litig., 691 F. Supp. 1262, 1268 (N.D. Cal. 1988) (summary judgment that "relevant product market [wa]s all ice creams" and not "all frozen desserts"), aff'd sub nom. Haagen-Dazs Co. v. Double Rainbow Gourmet Ice Creams, Inc., 895 F.2d 1417 (9th Cir. 1990) (Table); Remington Prods., Inc. v. North Am. Philips Corp., 717 F. Supp. 36, 43-44 (D. Conn. 1989) (summary judgment that market for electric shavers was a viable submarket for purposes of antitrust analysis), on reconsideration on other grounds, 755 F. Supp. 52 (D. Conn. 1991).

I. UST HAS MONOPOLY POWER IN THE MOIST SNUFF MARKET

UST has admitted that its "80% market share gives UST 'market power'" and that the company cannot "legally use that market power to prevent competition from selling their products."[32] UST has thus conceded that it has "monopoly power in the relevant market." Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016.

A. The Relevant Market Is Moist Snuff Sold in the United States

The relevant market is the "area of effective competition" within which a single firm holding a dominant share can raise prices above the competitive level without losing sales to other products. Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 324 (1962); Smith v. Multi-Flow Dispensers of Ohio, Inc., No. 96-4185, 1999 WL 357784, at *3 (6th Cir. May 14, 1999) (Exh. 43). The relevant market "must be determined by reference to a product market . . . and a geographic market." Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 324.

1. Moist Snuff Is the Relevant Product Market

Moist snuff is the only tobacco product sold in significant quantities by UST.[33] It is also the only tobacco product that has grown in sales over the past decade, and is far and away the

[33] UST also sells a negligible amount of dry snuff, which constitutes, in UST's CEO's view, a "minuscule part of [UST's] business" — less than $10 million per year. See Deposition of Vincent Gierer at 133 (Exh. 44); Smith Dep. at 72-73 (Exh. 37). This constitutes less than 1% of UST's retail sales dollars. most profitable tobacco product.[34] UST's profit margins on this product make UST one of America's most profitable corporations.[35] There is no evidence that other companies or products constrain UST's ability to charge ever-increasing prices. As UST has stated, "UST is the pricing leader in the market — others will follow."[36]

"The essential test for ascertaining the relevant product market involves the identification of those products or services that are either (1) identical to or (2) available substitutes for the defendant's product or service." White & White, Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp., 723 F.2d 495, 500 (6th Cir. 1983).[37]

To apply that test, courts "'examin[e] such practical indicia as (1) industry or public recognition of the [market] as a separate economic entity, (2) the product's peculiar characteristics and uses, (3) unique production facilities, (4) distinct customers, (5) distinct prices, (6) sensitivity to price changes, and (7) specialized vendors.'" Id. at 501 (quoting Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325).[38] Courts also consider barriers to entry and the cross-elasticity of supply. Virtual Maintenance v. Prime Computer, Inc., 11 F.3d 660, 665 (6th Cir. 1993).

In this case, all factors point to the same conclusion: the relevant product market is moist snuff.

a. Moist Snuff Is a Recognized Market

The moist snuff market is universally recognized as a distinct product market, by UST and others. UST regularly prepares internal reports estimating its share of this market.[39] Its business records plainly and regularly reference this market:

- "We [UST] have defined our market as round can snuff."[40]
- "the moist snuff market"[41]

[38] This practical analysis is sometimes called the "submarket analysis." White, 723 F.2d at 500. This test, however, is not a new test in determining the relevant market for purposes of Section 2. Id. Rather, the submarket inquiry "merely adds new factors to [the traditional] test so as to more precisely define the market affected by the defendant's actions." Id.

[39] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 078583-84 (UST describes its "Market Share" or "% Share of Market" in 1996 as 80.7%, which was its market share in moist snuff) (Exh. 48).

meeting a consumer need."[46] This is the legal definition of a relevant product market. See White, 723 F.2d at 500.

What UST does, as well as what it says, reveals that moist snuff is a distinct market. UST pays retailers to collect and report relevant sales data. Tellingly, UST requires information only on sales of moist snuff. It makes no effort to obtain similar sales data from retailers for any other product.

UST's view of the relevant market is shared by competitors, outside market researchers, and government regulators. For example, Swedish Match (the third ranking producer) considers moist snuff to be a distinct market.[47] Nielsen tracks "moist snuff" as a distinct market.[48] See Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 472 (the fact that Nielsen "maintains its data separately for sales of latex condoms to U.S. retail outlets" "support[s] the proposition that the industry participants view this as an economically distinct market segment"); Tasty Baking Co. v. Ralston Purina, Inc., 653 F. Supp. 1250, 1263 (E.D. Pa. 1987) (same). And the FTC recognizes "moist snuff" to be a distinct market: for years it has prepared a biennial report to Congress on developments in the "moist snuff market."[49]

b. Moist Snuff's Peculiar Characteristics, Including Specialized Vending, Set It Apart from Other Products

It is undisputed that moist snuff has peculiar characteristics that distinguish it from other tobacco products.[50] Moist snuff, alone among tobacco products, is sold in a round, flat can; the cans, again unlike any other product, are displayed on their sides in gravity-fed dispensers for retail sale.[51] As UST has stated, moist snuff also "requires a different system of handling and replenishment" and "differen[t]"

"vending" and "merchandising" than other forms of tobacco.[52] Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 473 (distribution and "packaging differences do distinguish . . . products" and help define the relevant market).

c. Moist Snuff Requires Specialized Production Equipment and Facilities

It is similarly undisputed that the equipment used to produce and package moist snuff is separate and distinct from that used for other tobacco products.[53] See United States v. Mrs. Smith's Pie Co., 440 F. Supp. 220, 228-29 (E.D. Pa. 1976) (distinctive equipment supported finding of relevant market); Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 473 ("requirement of additional packaging equipment is sufficient to differentiate the production facilities").

d. Moist Snuff Has Distinct Customers

UST recognizes, and instructs its sales representatives to educate retailers, that "the moist smokeless consumer" has "unique characteristics" that set him or her apart from the user of pipes, cigars, or other tobacco.[54] In addition, far more

[54] USTC/CWD 101822 (Exh. 61). The demographic profile of the typical moist snuff consumer differs from that of consumers of other tobacco products. Moist snuff users, for example, tend to be younger than users of loose leaf and cigarettes, are less consumers use moist snuff than use any other smokeless tobacco product.[55] See International Boxing Club of New York, Inc. v. United States, 358 U.S. 242, 250 (1959) (difference in number of viewers supported court's finding that relevant market was championship boxing contests and not all professional boxing events).

e. Moist Snuff Has Distinct Pricing and Profits

There is no evidence that UST — or any other moist snuff producer — considers the price of any other product in setting prices for moist snuff. See Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 229 (lack of consideration of other product prices supported court's finding that relevant market was frozen dessert pies).

The empirical evidence, moreover, demonstrates that moist snuff prices have increased dramatically over the last ten years, while the prices of other tobacco products have increased at a much slower pace.[56] And profit margins on moist snuff far exceed

[55] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 028426 (comparing 1996 and 1997 dollar sales for moist snuff, loose leaf, plug, dry, and twist) (Exh. 2); FTC, 1997 Smokeless Tobacco Report, Tables 8A-8I, <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/reports /smokeless97.htm> (Exh. 45) (for years 1986 to 1995; using FTC data to compare sales of moist snuff, dry snuff, plug/twist, and loose leaf).

those of loose leaf, dry snuff, plug, twist, or any other tobacco product — indeed, moist snuff profits exceed those of any analogous consumer product.[57] See id.; International Boxing, 358 U.S. at 250 (higher pricing to consumers and higher profits for defendants on championship boxing matches supported relevant market limited to championship boxing contests).

f. Consumers Have Not Been Sensitive to Regular Price Increases in Moist Snuff

Despite substantial annual UST price increases,[58] users of moist snuff have not responded by switching to other products.[59] UST sales volume has continued to increase, year after year.[60]

USTC/CWD 032339-40 (Exh. 65).

[57] UST's gross profit margin has been greater than 82% for the past ten years. USTC/CWD 032346 (showing UST yearly increase in gross margins from 82.6% in 1989 to 88.6% in 1997) (Exh. 65). Such margins are among the highest — if not the highest — reported by any U.S. public company. Merrill Lynch Report ("UST boasts one of the highest profit margins . . . in all of corporate America.") (CWD-EXP-00228-41) (Exh. 6). Margins on other tobacco products, such as loose leaf, are far less impressive. See Gierer Dep. at 134-35 (confirming that the "profit margins" are "substantially higher in moist" than loose leaf) (Exh. 44); UST/CWD40158A (at 7) (same) (Exh. 46).

[58] For example, UST increased wholesale prices per can 106% from 1987 through 1997, for an average yearly increase of just under 8%. USTC/CWD 028565-66 (Exh. 66). For the period from 1989 through 1994, UST's price increases averaged 9.3% per year. USTC/CWD 106965 (Exh. 67). Despite these substantial and regular price increases, consumers have tended not to switch to other forms of tobacco.

[59] Expert Report of Morton I. Kamien ¶ 17 (Oct. 1, 1999).

[60] USTC/CWD 118338 (Exh. 68); USTC/CWD 077603 (Exh. 69). UST's price increases, for example, have caused no material switch to loose leaf. While moist snuff prices climbed dramatically during the 1990s, prices of loose leaf climbed only half as fast. Yet, during this period, consumption of moist snuff increased while

UST recognized that it had the power to increase prices for moist snuff without losing sales to other products. It commissioned a study based on Nielsen data to determine price elasticity.[61] The study concluded that "the moist smokeless business is price inelastic or price insensitive — i.e., the percentage change in price (up or down) will result in a lower percentage change in sales."[62] As UST has observed, "pricing does not influence [the] ordering behavior" of UST's customers.[63]

g. Moist Snuff Has High Barriers to Entry and Corresponding Low Cross-Elasticity of Supply

"The relevant market cannot be determined without considering the cross-elasticity of supply." Virtual Maintenance, 11 F.3d at 665. Cross-elasticity of supply considers "the extent to which producers of one product would be consumption of loose leaf fell — directly contrary to what would have occurred if consumers had switched from moist to loose leaf in response to the moist price increases. The same is true for all other forms of smokeless tobacco. FTC, 1997 Smokeless Tobacco Report, Tables 8H-8I, <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/reports/smokeless97.htm> (Exh. 45); Kamien Report ¶¶ 17, 20. See also Gierer Dep. 108-09 (despite increasing prices, no loss in sales volume in ten years except for possible drop of 1/2% in 1997) (Exh. 44).

62 USTC/CWD 189497 (emphasis added) (Exh. 70).

63 USTC/CWD 052113 (Exh. 9). This UST conclusion is fully supported by the empirical evidence and echoed by industry analysts and executives. See USTC/CWD 431882 (industry analyst agrees that "[m]oist snuff users are generally price insensitive") (Exh. 71); Price Decl. ¶¶ 1, 3 (Senior Vice President of Swedish Match and a 17-year veteran of the tobacco industry: "consumers of moist snuff do not switch to other forms of smokeless tobacco (for example, loose leaf) in response to price increases of moist snuff" (Exh. 34).

willing to shift resources to producing another product in response to an increase in the price of the other product." AD/SAT v. Associated Press, 181 F.3d 216, 227 (2d Cir. 1999). Here, there has been no entry in response to UST's ever-increasing prices and remarkable profits. Two tobacco giants — R.J. Reynolds and Brown & Williamson — tried and failed, and no one has even tried to enter since 1991.[64]

This failed entry (as well as the lack of any new entry) is explained by the barriers to entry that define the moist snuff market. See Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 229 (barriers to entry, which may be proved by an "unsuccessful attempt . . . to enter," are "'practical indicia'" of the relevant market) (quoting Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325); Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 474-75 (failures evidence entry barriers).

These barriers take many forms. First, government regulation, tobacco litigation, and general anti-tobacco sentiment make the moist snuff market — high profits

[64] Expert Report of David T. Scheffman ¶¶ 27-28; Gierer Dep. at 163 (Exh. 44); USTC/CWD 145051, 163106, 163112 (Exh. 72). Brown & Williamson's entry failed even though it already has a strong foothold in smokeless tobacco. It is the third largest supplier of plug and the fourth largest supplier of dry snuff. John C. Maxwell, The Maxwell Report -- The Smokeless Tobacco Industry in 1998, Table 3 (Mar. 31, 1999) (CWD-EXP-00074-75) (Exh. 73). Swedish Match in 1990 acquired an existing moist snuff manufacturer, Pinkerton. To the extent other firms have begun to sell moist snuff since that time, they constitute less than 1/3 of 1% of the market, id., CWD-EXP-00071, and are apparently irrelevant to UST in any event, see Smith Dep. at 51-54 ("Q. As vice president of sales, were you interested in who was selling moist snuff to the public? A. Not really. . . . Q. Did U.S. Tobacco follow what its competitors did in the marketplace . . . ? A. I don't ever remember doing that.") (Exh. 37).

16diii002366

notwithstanding — forbidding. UST's CEO testified that entry by a domestic firm not already producing tobacco products is "highly unlikely."[65] Second, entry would require substantial investments of time and money. There is a limited supply of Dark Fire Tobacco Leaf — the tobacco used to make moist snuff.[66] In addition, a new entrant would need at least two years of preparation (and tens of millions of dollars) to purchase specialized equipment and to allow the tobacco to age before it could expect to sell a product.[67] A prospective entrant would also be required to spend substantial sums on product testing, formula development, and marketing.[68] See United States v. Ivaco, Inc., 704 F. Supp. 1409, 1416 (W.D. Mich. 1989) ("[f]irms in related industries could not quickly enter . . . to discipline a significant price increase, because entry . . . would require an extensive investment in research and development as well as production facilities").

Third, UST's dominance of advertising and distribution raise more daunting barriers. As the Supreme Court has observed, in tobacco "advertising . . . is . . . a widely published warning 66 Government regulators limit the amount of Dark Fire that can be produced in a given year, and each year the supply of usable tobacco is essentially depleted. that [a monopolist] possess[es] and know[s] how to use a powerful offensive and defensive weapon against new competition. New competition dare not enter such a field, unless it be well supported by comparable national advertising." American Tobacco, 328 U.S. at 797. Even though federal and state regulations have sharply curtailed tobacco advertising — and consequently made it more difficult for a new entrant to win customers — UST has asserted its dominance here as elsewhere. It consistently spends more than $65 million per year on advertising.[69] And, through its exclusionary conduct, it has obtained a choke-hold on the single most effective form of advertising for moist snuff: POS.

UST's effective campaign to eliminate the distribution and advertising of rival firms is more chilling still. Through its "category management" ruses, UST has achieved the complete exclusion of brands that have not yet achieved a substantial market share — including new and growing brands.[70] By demanding that its "share of fixture" equal or exceed its share of market, and by inducing retailers to restrict the total number of brands carried in the store, the entrenched monopolist has served notice to new entrants that it will be difficult and costly to get their products on store shelves. Even if they make it to the shelves, new brands can expect only to sit unnoticed where UST has obtained "POS exclusivity." All this is "further [to] emphasize the effectiveness of a well financed monopoly in this field against potential competitors if there merely exists an intent to exclude such competitors." American Tobacco, 328 U.S. at 797.

That "intent to exclude" plainly exists. UST has an announced "[b]usiness [s]trateg[y]" to "[p]rotect our market share by creating barriers to competition."[71] It has, for example, stated its goal to "[s]top the growth" of competitors' price-value brands "in order to protect our market share (80%)."[72] And it has instituted policies that create "barrier[s] to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market," barriers designed to "support[] [UST's] market share expansion objectives."[73]

It is telling that UST has not even attempted to define a relevant market other than moist snuff. Its expert offers a critique of the market analysis performed by Professor Morton Kamien of Northwestern University and Dean Edward Popper of

Bellarmine College, but has steadfastly refused to offer any alternative definition.[74]

2. Geographic Market Is the United States

The relevant geographic market is the "'area of effective competition.'" White, 723 F.2d at 501 (quoting Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 327 (1961)). That area is "'charted by . . . select[ing] . . . the market area in which the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practicably turn for supplies.'" Id. (quoting Tampa Elec., 365 U.S. at 327); see also Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (the geographic market "is the locale in which consumers of a product or service can turn for alternative sources of supply").

Applying that rule, the geographic market in this case is the United States. UST and other suppliers of moist snuff distribute their products across the country; purchasers can turn to a supplier in any area of the country to obtain an alternative source of supply.[75] UST proclaims itself "as a national company"[76] and adheres to a "pricing strategy of nation-wide delivered pricing."[77] Because "[p]roducers of [moist snuff] compete for customers throughout the United States, and [UST] sell[s] [its moist snuff brands] nationally," "the entire country is a proper geographic market." Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 230 (citing United States v. Pabst Brewing Co., 384 U.S. 546 (1966)); see also Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 328 ("relevant geographic market is the entire Nation" because "[t]he relationships of product value, bulk, weight and consumer demand enable manufacturers to distribute their shoes on a nationwide basis"). UST has not even attempted to contend otherwise.

B. UST Has Monopoly Power in the Moist Snuff Market

UST has admitted that its "80% market share gives UST 'market power.'"[78] UST also understands that its monopoly power "means [that it] cannot legally use that market power to prevent [the] competition from selling their products."[79]

"There are two ways to establish . . . that [UST] holds monopoly power. The first is by presenting direct evidence

[79] USTC/CWD 186414 (Exh. 8). Yet that is precisely what UST has done — it has prevented its competitors from freely advertising and effectively distributing their products and has erected barriers to prevent new entry into the moist snuff market. The extent and effect of UST's anticompetitive conduct will be the focus of trial. For purposes of this motion, the relevant issue is UST's admission that it has "market power," and the objective evidence that substantiates that admission.

16diii002371

'showing the exercise of actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors.' The second is by presenting circumstantial evidence of monopoly power by showing a high market share within a defined market." Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (internal citation omitted) (quoting Byars, 609 F.2d at 850).

"In recent years, parties and courts have increasingly moved toward utilizing the circumstantial method as a 'shortcut.'" Id. However, the Sixth Circuit has cautioned that "this does not undercut the continued viability of the first avenue of establishing monopoly power." Id. UST's exclusionary conduct has shaped a market in which UST can consistently charge — and has consistently charged and sustained — prices far above the competitive level. UST thereby has, in its words, "define[d] the market" for moist smokeless tobacco.[80] See Virtual Maintenance, 11 F.3d at 665 ("true market power" is the "power sufficient to change and sustain anticompetitive prices").

1. UST's Current 77% Market Share Establishes Its Monopoly Power

The Supreme Court has stated that, if a manufacturer produces "almost 75%" of a product sold in the United States, "it may be assumed it does have monopoly power over that 'market.'" E.I. du Pont, 351 U.S. at 379, 391; PSI Repair Servs., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir.) ("the Supreme Court has concluded that . . . over two-thirds of the market . . .

constitute[s] monopoly power under § 2"), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1265 (1997).

It is undisputed that UST manufactured at least 77% of the moist snuff sold in the United States in 1998.[81] UST has sustained that self-proclaimed "dominant share of the market" for decades.[82] This evidence is itself conclusive; the Court should find that UST holds monopoly power as a matter of law.

2. UST Has the Power To Control Prices

"[E]vidence that the defendant has actually exercised price leadership control over the industry" "can be particularly compelling evidence that [the defendant] has monopoly power."[83] See Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1018 (plaintiff can "'show[] monopoly power [by] marshal[ling] evidence showing the exercise of actual control over prices'") (quoting Byars, 609 F.2d at 850). Such evidence is irrefutable in this case. UST has boasted about its "price leadership" in just those words. "UST is the pricing leader in the market — others will follow."[84] "UST pricing 'leads' and defines the market."[85]

Every January 1 and July 1 since at least 1989, UST has, like clockwork, raised prices on its moist snuff products.[86] These increases have been exacted without reference to external factors, and have always exceeded any increase in the consumer price index. A 1996 analyst report shows that, between 1990 and 1996, UST imposed an average increase in the price of a can of moist snuff of about 8.2% per year.[87]

UST's ability to earn unusually high profits, year after year, provides still further evidence of monopoly power. The prices set by UST have provided the company with profits almost unimaginable for any other U.S. public company. According to the latest annual statistics, UST's profit margin exceeds 84.8%, compared to an S&P 500 average of 47.8% and a tobacco industry average of 29.3%.[88] Such UST profit, sustained for more than a

In re Brand Name Prescription Drugs Antitrust Litig., 123 F.3d 599, 603 (7th Cir. 1997) ("power to raise price above cost without losing so many sales as to make the price rise unsustainable" is evidence of "monopoly power"), cert. denied, 118 S. UST's ability to charge undeniably supracompetitive prices is, by definition, market power. See Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde,

UST's operating margin on moist snuff increased every year between 1990 and 1996, rising from 56.0% to 63.1%. That is, the evidence shows that UST consistently increased its prices by more than its operating costs during an extended period of time. During this period, UST's operating margin increased by 12.7% (i.e., (63.1-56.0)/56.0). The 1996 analyst report forecast that UST would be able to continue to increase its operating margin, from 63.1% in 1996 to 63.7% in 1997 and 64.3% in 1998. See Morgan Stanley Report, Table 5 (CWD-EXP-00211) (Exh. 5). UST's return on assets in its tobacco division was reported to have ranged between 120.3% and 168.0% between 1990 and 1996 (moist snuff accounted for almost all of UST's tobacco sales). Id.

466 U.S. 2, 27 n.46 (1984) ("As an economic matter, market power exists whenever prices can be raised above the levels that would be charged in a competitive market.").[89]

II. BECAUSE UST CANNOT OFFER ANY EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT ITS COUNTERCLAIMS, THEY SHOULD BE DISMISSED

UST asserted five counterclaims against Conwood.[90] All five allegedly stem from misconduct by Conwood sales representatives, similar to the misconduct alleged in support of Conwood's claims against UST. UST developed no evidence through discovery to support these me-too claims. It has failed to list a single witness with personal knowledge of any claimed actionable misconduct by Conwood; and it cannot claim damages from any such alleged misconduct. For both of these reasons, the counterclaims should be dismissed.

[89] UST's intent and ability to exclude competitors — a third way to prove monopoly power — is equally clear. See Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (monopoly power can be established through "direct evidence showing . . . the actual exclusion of competitors" (internal quotation marks omitted). As explained in Part I(A)(1)(g), supra, UST has successfully executed its "business strategy" to create "barriers to entry" and to exclude competitors from the moist snuff market and thereby "protect its market share." USTC/CWD 052106 ("Protect our market share by creating barriers to competition") (Exh. 9); see also id. (UST activities "provide a barrier to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market" and "support [UST's] market share expansion objectives").

See Answer and Affirmative Defenses (June 12, 1998).

16diii002376

A. UST Has No Witness with Personal Knowledge of Actionable Misconduct by Conwood

On May 11, 1999, the Court (by Magistrate Judge Moyer) ordered UST to disclose "no later than September 21, 1999 . . . 'field personnel' trial witnesses who have direct personal knowledge regarding the allegations contained in UST's counterclaim."[91] UST has not disclosed any witness in compliance with that Order. Accordingly, UST has no competent evidence to support any of its claims, and will be unable at trial to prove any actionable misconduct by Conwood.

B. UST Has No Evidence of Damages

In its initial disclosures under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26, UST failed to provide any "computation of any category of damages claimed" (Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C)) or identify supporting documents with respect to its counterclaims, as required by the rules. Conwood brought UST's default to the Court's attention, and by Order dated February 5, 1999, Magistrate Judge Moyer required UST to provide the requisite damages disclosure.[92] UST never complied with that Order.

[91] May 11, 1999 Order at 3. Magistrate Judge Moyer defined these trial witnesses to include "witnesses who have direct personal knowledge" of the parties' "'in the field'" anti-competitive behavior. Such field personnel would include UST field sales personnel and former sales personnel, Conwood field sales personnel, convenience store owners, managers and employees, and others who have directly, personally observed 'in the field' activity" that the parties allege "to be anti-competitive." Id. at 2-3.

[92] Magistrate Judge Moyer issued an Order directing UST to provide a Rule 26(a)(1)(C) counterclaims damages calculation: "Conwood's motion to compel a response by UST under Rule 26(a)

16diii002377

Nor did UST make any disclosure of damages evidence in its expert reports submitted pursuant to Rule 26. Neither of UST's two experts offered any opinion on damages to UST — nor even made any reference to UST's counterclaims. UST therefore has no expert testimony to support its contentions.

Plainly, UST has no damages evidence of any kind; alternatively, if it has such evidence but failed to disclose it, its failure to comply with Court Orders and Rule 26(a) should preclude any attempt by UST to offer damages evidence at trial.[93] In either case, the absence of any evidence of damages requires entry of judgment on UST's counterclaims.

CONCLUSION

The Court should enter partial summary judgment on the issue of defendants' power in the relevant U.S. product market (moist snuff), and should grant summary judgment in favor of plaintiffs on Counts I through V of defendants' counterclaims.

with respect to UST's counterclaim is sustained." Feb. 5, 1999 Order at 8.

[93] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(1) provides that "[a] party that without substantial justification fails to disclose information required by Rule 26(a) . . . shall not, unless such failure is harmless, be permitted to use as evidence at a trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed." Rule 37(c)(1) is "a self executing sanction for failure to make a disclosure required by Rule 26(a), without need for a motion under Rule 37(2)(A)." Commentary to Fed. R. Civ. CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

There are two genuinely contested elements of plaintiffs' antitrust claim: (a) whether UST's[1] long-standing and multifaceted campaign of predatory and exclusionary acts — choking competitors' distribution channels through, e.g., coercive agreements and outright criminal acts — constitutes anticompetitive conduct remediable under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, and, (b) if so, the amount of damages that Conwood suffered as a result of UST's conduct.

The other elements — specifically (a) definition of the relevant market as the United States market for moist smokeless tobacco ("moist snuff") and (b) UST's possession of monopoly power in that market — are so well-established (and effectively uncontested by UST) as to present no genuine issue of material fact.

Accordingly, it is in the interest of justice and sound judicial economy to grant Conwood's motion for partial summary judgment. (Point I, infra.) In addition, because UST will be unable to offer any proof to establish either liability or damages with respect to any of its counterclaims, the Court should also dismiss them under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56. (Point II, infra.)

Statement of the Case

UST springs from the American Tobacco Company, which engaged in decades of predation before being broken up by judicial decree, first in 1911, then again in 1946.[2] Steeped in this culture of antitrust abuses, UST continued to sustain its near-100% monopoly on moist snuff through anticompetitive acts and the erection of high barriers to entry. UST, for example, combined the promotion of cardboard cans (which promoted rapid product staleness) with refunds to retailers for unsold, stale product. To enter the market, therefore, any potential entrant had to be prepared to withstand crushing costs while its products were being introduced (and hence were slow in selling) to the public.

In 1979, Conwood managed to break UST's stranglehold by first introducing its innovative Hawken™ brand in a plastic can — which preserved freshness longer and thereby reduced returns of stale product. Conwood also pioneered better value for the consumer by providing more tobacco (1.2 ounces versus the 1.0 ounce sold by UST) at a price competitive with UST's.

At first, UST tolerated Conwood as a small and insignificant competitor.[3] Several years ago, however, UST realized that innovative and "value priced" moist snuff sold by Conwood and the two other small competitors in the market[4] threatened its dominant market share and corresponding monopoly profits. UST had grown accustomed to decades of increasing prices (more than doubling the price in the last ten years)[5] and increasing profit margins (among the very highest of U.S. public companies).[6]

[3] UST's internal documents establish that UST will tolerate a competitor gaining no more than 5% of the market before UST will begin a campaign of systematic exclusion. See, e.g., USTC/CWD 173407 ("5% market share is a point at which a serious response to Helme is warranted") (Exh. 1); USTC/CWD 173421 ("Competition . . . at what market segment share point should USTC respond? 5% Hold back until the[n]") (Exh. 1).

[4] There are four moist smokeless manufacturers of any size. In 1997, UST had approximately 78.1% of the total U.S. market; Conwood had 13.1%; Swedish Match of North America ("Swedish Match") had 3.3%; and Swisher International Group Inc. ("Swisher") had 4.4%. See USTC/CWD 028432 (Exh. 2).

[5] USTC/CWD 093837 (UST wholesale price per can was $1.00 in 1987, $2.06 in 1997) (Exh. 3).

[6] By its own forecast, UST has earned a gross profit margin in excess of a staggering 82% for more than a decade. USTC/CWD 032346 (showing UST yearly increase in gross margins from 82.6% in 1989 to 88.6% in 1997) (Exh. 4). This amounts to approximately $1 billion in 1998 profits. See John P. Renwick,

Afraid that unrestrained competition would erode its premium pricing and hence deflate its unparalleled profits, UST decided to use what it described as its "market power"[7] to stifle competition by (again, its own words) "eliminat[ing]" or "cutting competitive distribution" and taking competitors' advertising from stores.[8]

UST's scheme to abuse its acknowledged market power involved, among other things: (1) systematic and outright

elimination of competitors' product "facings"[9] and point-of-sale advertising ("POS");[10] and (2) inducing retailers — through exercise of market power, false information, kick-backs of monopoly profits, and other inducements — to permit UST "exclusive vending" and "exclusive POS" with the same exclusionary effect.[11] By removing facings and POS — with or without consent — UST squelched competition from fast-growing brands that had not yet achieved a foothold in the market, and marginalized the few competitive brands that had gained acceptance (such as Conwood's Kodiak™). UST forced rivals to devote their resources to counteract the effects of UST's unlawful conduct, rather than actively promoting their products.

UST leveraged its "must carry" Skoal™ and Copenhagen™ to get stores to accede — wittingly or unwittingly — to UST's

[9] Moist snuff is displayed in retail stores in a plastic rack. The rack typically contains multiple brands with each brand being fed into one or more gravity-fed slots or "facings" in the rack. See USTC/CWD 568166 (Exh. 14); USTC/CWD 529168 (Exh. 15).

[10] "Point-of-sale advertising" or "POS" are advertising materials that are displayed on or near the moist snuff rack. The principal form of POS is sometimes called a "header card." Because of heavy restrictions on almost all forms of tobacco marketing, POS advertising, which was always important, has now become the most effective means to communicate with consumers and to advertise the price advantages of the non-UST brands. See Blattberg Report at ¶¶ 13, 14.

[11] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 1144417 ("Eliminate Comp[etitors] Distribution" and obtain "Exclusive Vending") (Exh. 11); USTC/CWD 888480 ("exclusive UST vending and POS as part of the Customer Alliance Program") (Exh. 16); USTC/CWD 734373 ("UST exclusive vending") (Exh. 17); USTC/CWD 109185 ("Category Management" requires that "U.S. Tobacco has exclusive permanent point of sale placement.") (Exh. 18); USTC/CWD 556853 ("vendor exclusitivity"; "only POS allowed on our [UST's] vendors for competitive products will be the product vendor label.") (Exh. 19).

suppression of competition. For example, UST sought and obtained "vendor exclusivity" and exclusive POS in roughly 8,000 Wal-Mart and 7-11 stores.[12] This led to increases in sales for UST, even as UST prices continued to rise; at the same time, sales for UST's rivals fell sharply. Through these agreements, UST reduced overall sales of moist snuff.[13] Nor are Wal-Mart and 7-11 alone: UST has entered into such anticompetitive agreements with retailers and wholesalers that sell roughly 80% of UST's moist snuff.[14]

This multifaceted campaign of exclusion has been pervasive, systematic, and nationwide. Almost a dozen former UST sales representatives from across the country testified that they were trained — indeed pressured — to exclude competition by [13] A study by A.C. Nielsen Co., an independent marketing firm that surveys and publishes market share data relied on by competitors, indicates that, after the implementation of the UST/Wal-Mart agreement, overall unit sales decreased by 19%. CWD1011022966 (Exh. 22). The findings of that study were confirmed by former Wal-Mart employee, Waynell Renfro, who testified that, as a result of the UST's vending agreement, overall moist sales at Wal-Mart fell. Deposition of Waynell Renfro at 26-28 (Exh. 23).

[14] USTC/CWD 121118 (82.78% "locations signed to contract") (Exh. 24). The same words used by Judge Jackson in the recent antitrust case against Microsoft can be used against UST. eliminating competitors' product racks, facings, and advertising. They received these instructions from UST's senior executives, including Executive Vice President Gary Milano.[15] Many other UST representatives have admitted to store employees and their Conwood counterparts that they were required by their supervisors to remove competitors' product racks and POS from stores.[16]

Despite a well-justified fear of UST retaliation, more than 55 retail-store employees have also provided sworn testimony and statements about repeated and pervasive acts of exclusion in their stores by UST sales representatives.[17]

[15] Alan Hart, a former UST sales representative, testified that Gary Milano, then a regional manager, instructed Mr. Hart and approximately 125 other UST employees "to put the competitors' products in UST racks so that UST could control the shelf space and the advertising in the stores"; "to remove Conwood racks from the stores' shelves but not to remove the racks from the stores' premises"; and "to dominate the shelf space with UST racks in those areas where Kodiak was gaining market share." Deposition of Alan Hart at 28, 29 (Exh. 26). According to Mr. Hart, "Mr. Milano emphasized that when Conwood and other competitors lost their racks, they would lose their advertising." Id. at 28. Mr. Hart further testified that "UST executives from headquarters in Connecticut also attended these meetings and observed Mr. Milano giving these instructions." Id. at 29; see also id. at 31 ("Mr. Griffen [UST's Division Manager] also on occasion instructed me to remove Conwood's advertising banners and other point-of-sale materials.").

Rep. take our rack out of a Circle K store in his Territory this week. the field by UST's more than 600 representatives. This pervasive predation consumes the time and attention of Conwood's representatives, raises Conwood's costs, and substantially impedes Conwood's efforts to compete.

UST uses all of these tools for the purpose (in its words) of "provid[ing] a barrier to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market" and "support[ing] [UST's] market share expansion objectives."[19] Indeed, UST details in scores of documents its intention to exclude rivals by restricting distribution of competitors' products and advertising. UST's expert acknowledged that UST officials intended to pursue these activities in order to "control the retailer," fully expecting to succeed.[20]

When UST officials provided sworn testimony in this case, however, they could not recall even the simplest facts regarding what they had previously said and done.[21] The executives — with

> Q. You don't know what that means?

> A. I don't know.

Deposition of Tim Entwistle at 305-09 (Exh. 36).

[22] For instance, when Gary Smith, the President of UST's Sales and Marketing subsidiary, was presented with a memorandum that he admittedly read and on which he admittedly wrote "excellent job," he claimed not to know what the words "exclusive vending" meant, as used by the author in reporting that UST "won exclusive vending for all single can brands" in 7-11 stores. Indeed, Mr. Smith testified that there was nothing in the entire memorandum (which also reported that UST should introduce a particular policy in order to "disrupt the competitive message and have the ability to dominate retail with [a] newly proposed" program, USTC/CWD 025956 (emphasis added)) that he understood. Deposition of Gary Smith at 422-26 & Exh. 11 (Exh. 37). UST's Executive Vice President of Sales, Gary Milano, had a similar problem with his recollection:

> Q. . . . [S]itting here today, . . . what do you understand the words . . . "category management intensified (control competition/SOF equal SOM)" to mean?
> * * * *
> A. I don't know.
> Q. Do you have any understanding of what those words mean?
> A. No.

16diii002400

While UST's senior managers now claim to have no idea what their own words meant, they previously boasted that their exclusionary tactics had worked. "We [UST] have severely cut back on [competing firms'] ability to market products."[23]

Not content with "go[ing] to war"[24] in the marketplace, UST also sought to enlist other tobacco companies and even Congress in the entrenchment of dominant tobacco firms at the expense of smaller firms. In the proposed Global Tobacco Settlement ("GTS"), UST was the only moist snuff producer involved in crafting a "voluntary proposal" to further narrow competitors' distribution channels through such devices as requiring that product racks be placed behind store counters — where space and visibility are limited — and further limiting advertising. In commenting upon the proposal (which ultimately failed), the FTC concluded that such devices were patently anticompetitive.[25]

UST's monopolization of the market has reduced moist snuff output, raised prices, and reduced choices for consumers,[26] and has also caused Conwood between $291 million and $483 million in damages.[27]

While UST disputes the prevalence and effect of its anticompetitive behavior, it cannot genuinely dispute that U.S. moist snuff is a relevant market or that UST has monopoly power in that market. With its distinct pricing, packaging, consumers, and production equipment, moist snuff is universally recognized as a distinct market by the industry (including UST), market researchers, and the FTC. Consumers of moist snuff simply do not switch to any other product in response to even substantial price increases — as would be expected if those products were ready substitutes. UST, with its more than 77% market share, is — in its words — "dominant."[28] It has repeatedly and consistently demonstrated its ability to raise prices to supracompetive levels. By definition, therefore, UST has monopoly power.

Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849 (6th Cir. 1979) (same).[30]

Here, the first element — both relevant market (Point A) and UST's power in that market (Point B) — is so clearly proven by undisputed facts that Conwood is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.[31]

[30] Plaintiffs must also prove "'antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful.'" Valley Prods. Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398, 402 (6th Cir. 1997) (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489 (1977)). To establish attempted monopolization, Conwood must prove that UST "engaged in anticompetitive conduct with a specific intent to monopolize and that there was a dangerous probability that the attempt would be successful." United States v. Dairymen, Inc., 660 F.2d 192, 194 (6th Cir. 1981). To prove there is a "dangerous probability of monopolization," Conwood must establish a relevant market and UST's "ability to lessen or destroy competition in that market." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456 (1993).

[31] Courts have not hesitated to enter judgment on market definition and power in appropriate cases. See, e.g., In re Super Premium Ice Cream Distrib. Antitrust Litig., 691 F. Supp. 1262, 1268 (N.D. Cal. 1988) (summary judgment that "relevant product market [wa]s all ice creams" and not "all frozen desserts"), aff'd sub nom. Haagen-Dazs Co. v. Double Rainbow Gourmet Ice Creams, Inc., 895 F.2d 1417 (9th Cir. 1990) (Table); Remington Prods., Inc. v. North Am. Philips Corp., 717 F. Supp. 36, 43-44 (D. Conn. 1989) (summary judgment that market for electric shavers was a viable submarket for purposes of antitrust analysis), on reconsideration on other grounds, 755 F. Supp. 52 (D. Conn. 1991).

I. UST HAS MONOPOLY POWER IN THE MOIST SNUFF MARKET

UST has admitted that its "80% market share gives UST 'market power'" and that the company cannot "legally use that market power to prevent competition from selling their products."[32] UST has thus conceded that it has "monopoly power in the relevant market." Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016.

A. The Relevant Market Is Moist Snuff Sold in the United States

The relevant market is the "area of effective competition" within which a single firm holding a dominant share can raise prices above the competitive level without losing sales to other products. Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 324 (1962); Smith v. Multi-Flow Dispensers of Ohio, Inc., No. 96-4185, 1999 WL 357784, at *3 (6th Cir. May 14, 1999) (Exh. 43). The relevant market "must be determined by reference to a product market . . . and a geographic market." Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 324.

1. Moist Snuff Is the Relevant Product Market

Moist snuff is the only tobacco product sold in significant quantities by UST.[33] It is also the only tobacco product that has grown in sales over the past decade, and is far and away the

[33] UST also sells a negligible amount of dry snuff, which constitutes, in UST's CEO's view, a "minuscule part of [UST's] business" — less than $10 million per year. See Deposition of Vincent Gierer at 133 (Exh. 44); Smith Dep. at 72-73 (Exh. 37). This constitutes less than 1% of UST's retail sales dollars. most profitable tobacco product.[34] UST's profit margins on this product make UST one of America's most profitable corporations.[35] There is no evidence that other companies or products constrain UST's ability to charge ever-increasing prices. As UST has stated, "UST is the pricing leader in the market — others will follow."[36]

"The essential test for ascertaining the relevant product market involves the identification of those products or services that are either (1) identical to or (2) available substitutes for the defendant's product or service." White & White, Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp., 723 F.2d 495, 500 (6th Cir. 1983).[37]

To apply that test, courts "'examin[e] such practical indicia as (1) industry or public recognition of the [market] as a separate economic entity, (2) the product's peculiar

Prime Computer, Inc., 11 F.3d 660, 665 (6th Cir. 1993).

In this case, all factors point to the same conclusion: the relevant product market is moist snuff.

a. Moist Snuff Is a Recognized Market

The moist snuff market is universally recognized as a distinct product market, by UST and others. UST regularly prepares internal reports estimating its share of this market.[39] Its business records plainly and regularly reference this market:

- "We [UST] have defined our market as round can snuff."[40]
- "the moist snuff market"[41]

[38] This practical analysis is sometimes called the "submarket analysis." White, 723 F.2d at 500. This test, however, is not a new test in determining the relevant market for purposes of Section 2. Id. Rather, the submarket inquiry "merely adds new factors to [the traditional] test so as to more precisely define the market affected by the defendant's actions." Id.

[39] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 078583-84 (UST describes its "Market Share" or "% Share of Market" in 1996 as 80.7%, which was its market share in moist snuff) (Exh. 48).

UST executives habitually speak in terms of the moist snuff market.[45] See Ansell Inc. v. Schmid Lab., Inc., 757 F. Supp. 467, 472 (D.N.J.) (reference to market in parties' business plans supports finding of relevant market), aff'd, 941 F.2d 1200 (3d Cir. 1991) (Table).

meeting a consumer need."[46] This is the legal definition of a relevant product market. See White, 723 F.2d at 500.

What UST does, as well as what it says, reveals that moist snuff is a distinct market. UST pays retailers to collect and report relevant sales data. Tellingly, UST requires information only on sales of moist snuff. It makes no effort to obtain similar sales data from retailers for any other product.

UST's view of the relevant market is shared by competitors, outside market researchers, and government regulators. For example, Swedish Match (the third ranking producer) considers moist snuff to be a distinct market.[47] Nielsen tracks "moist snuff" as a distinct market.[48] See Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 472 (the fact that Nielsen "maintains its data separately for sales of latex condoms to U.S. retail outlets" "support[s] the proposition that the industry participants view this as an economically distinct market segment"); Tasty Baking Co. v. Ralston Purina, Inc., 653 F. Supp. 1250, 1263 (E.D. Pa. 1987) (same). And the FTC recognizes "moist snuff" to be a distinct market: for years it has prepared a biennial report to Congress on developments in the "moist snuff market."[49]

b. Moist Snuff's Peculiar Characteristics, Including Specialized Vending, Set It Apart from Other Products

It is undisputed that moist snuff has peculiar characteristics that distinguish it from other tobacco products.[50] Moist snuff, alone among tobacco products, is sold in a round, flat can; the cans, again unlike any other product, are displayed on their sides in gravity-fed dispensers for retail sale.[51] As UST has stated, moist snuff also "requires a different system of handling and replenishment" and "differen[t]"

[50] "[M]oist smokeless" tobacco is "[a]vailable in fine & long cut as well as portion packs" and is "produced in natural or flavored varieties." In contrast, loose leaf or plug chewing tobaccos are "[a]vailable in long leaf or pressed plugs," while dry snuff is "powdered, dry tobacco products designed to be inhaled (snorted) or dipped." Cigars are "smokable products, produced with natural leaf or homogonized tobacco wrappers." Pipe/smoking tobacco products are "medium cut tobacco products designed to be pipe smoked or hand rolled into cigarettes." USTC/CWD 257945-46 (Exh. 60).

[51] See USTC/CWD 257945 (loose leaf and plug are "sold in single pouches or multi-packs") (Exh. 60); USTC/CWD 257946 (dry snuff is sold in [tall] round tins) (Exh. 60); id. "vending" and "merchandising" than other forms of tobacco.[52] Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 473 (distribution and "packaging differences do distinguish . . . products" and help define the relevant market).

c. Moist Snuff Requires Specialized Production Equipment and Facilities

It is similarly undisputed that the equipment used to produce and package moist snuff is separate and distinct from that used for other tobacco products.[53] See United States v. Mrs. Smith's Pie Co., 440 F. Supp. 220, 228-29 (E.D. Pa. 1976) (distinctive equipment supported finding of relevant market); Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 473 ("requirement of additional packaging equipment is sufficient to differentiate the production facilities").

d. Moist Snuff Has Distinct Customers

UST recognizes, and instructs its sales representatives to educate retailers, that "the moist smokeless consumer" has "unique characteristics" that set him or her apart from the user of pipes, cigars, or other tobacco.[54] In addition, far more

[53] Affidavit of Robert Krauch ¶ 7 (Conwood Vice President, Manufacturing) (Exh. 62).

[54] USTC/CWD 101822 (Exh. 61). The demographic profile of the typical moist snuff consumer differs from that of consumers of other tobacco products. Moist snuff users, for example, tend to be younger than users of loose leaf and cigarettes, are less consumers use moist snuff than use any other smokeless tobacco product.[55] See International Boxing Club of New York, Inc. v. United States, 358 U.S. 242, 250 (1959) (difference in number of viewers supported court's finding that relevant market was championship boxing contests and not all professional boxing events).

e. Moist Snuff Has Distinct Pricing and Profits

There is no evidence that UST — or any other moist snuff producer — considers the price of any other product in setting prices for moist snuff. See Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 229 (lack of consideration of other product prices supported court's finding that relevant market was frozen dessert pies).

The empirical evidence, moreover, demonstrates that moist snuff prices have increased dramatically over the last ten years, while the prices of other tobacco products have increased at a much slower pace.[56] And profit margins on moist snuff far exceed likely to be African American or Hispanic, are more likely to be employed full time, and are concentrated in different regions of the country. USTC/CWD 028314-15 (Exh. 63); CWD1004010751-55 (median age of moist snuff users is 35 years old and median age of loose leaf user is 45 years old; 43% of moist snuff users are in southern regions while 67% of loose leaf users reside there) (Exh. 64).

[55] See, e.g., USTC/CWD 028426 (comparing 1996 and 1997 dollar sales for moist snuff, loose leaf, plug, dry, and twist) (Exh. 2); FTC, 1997 Smokeless Tobacco Report, Tables 8A-8I, <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/reports /smokeless97.htm> (Exh. 45) (for years 1986 to 1995; using FTC data to compare sales of moist snuff, dry snuff, plug/twist, and loose leaf).

[56] FTC, 1997 Smokeless Tobacco Report, Tables 8A-8D <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/reports/smokeless97.htm> (Exh. 45);

those of loose leaf, dry snuff, plug, twist, or any other tobacco product — indeed, moist snuff profits exceed those of any analogous consumer product.[57] See id.; International Boxing, 358 U.S. at 250 (higher pricing to consumers and higher profits for defendants on championship boxing matches supported relevant market limited to championship boxing contests).

f. Consumers Have Not Been Sensitive to Regular Price Increases in Moist Snuff

Despite substantial annual UST price increases,[58] users of moist snuff have not responded by switching to other products.[59] UST sales volume has continued to increase, year after year.[60]

USTC/CWD 032339-40 (Exh. 65).

[57] UST's gross profit margin has been greater than 82% for the past ten years. USTC/CWD 032346 (showing UST yearly increase in gross margins from 82.6% in 1989 to 88.6% in 1997) (Exh. 65). Such margins are among the highest — if not the highest — reported by any U.S. public company. Merrill Lynch Report ("UST boasts one of the highest profit margins . . . in all of corporate America.") (CWD-EXP-00228-41) (Exh. 6). Margins on other tobacco products, such as loose leaf, are far less impressive. See Gierer Dep. at 134-35 (confirming that the "profit margins" are "substantially higher in moist" than loose leaf) (Exh. 44); UST/CWD40158A (at 7) (same) (Exh. 46).

[58] For example, UST increased wholesale prices per can 106% from 1987 through 1997, for an average yearly increase of just under 8%. USTC/CWD 028565-66 (Exh. 66). For the period from 1989 through 1994, UST's price increases averaged 9.3% per year. USTC/CWD 106965 (Exh. 67). Despite these substantial and regular price increases, consumers have tended not to switch to other forms of tobacco.

[59] Expert Report of Morton I. Kamien ¶ 17 (Oct. 1, 1999).

UST recognized that it had the power to increase prices for moist snuff without losing sales to other products. It commissioned a study based on Nielsen data to determine price elasticity.[61] The study concluded that "the moist smokeless business is price inelastic or price insensitive — i.e., the percentage change in price (up or down) will result in a lower percentage change in sales."[62] As UST has observed, "pricing does not influence [the] ordering behavior" of UST's customers.[63]

g. Moist Snuff Has High Barriers to Entry and Corresponding Low Cross-Elasticity of Supply

"The relevant market cannot be determined without considering the cross-elasticity of supply." Virtual Maintenance, 11 F.3d at 665. Cross-elasticity of supply considers "the extent to which producers of one product would be consumption of loose leaf fell — directly contrary to what would have occurred if consumers had switched from moist to loose leaf in response to the moist price increases. The same is true for all other forms of smokeless tobacco. FTC, 1997 Smokeless Tobacco Report, Tables 8H-8I, <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/reports/smokeless97.htm> (Exh. 45); Kamien Report ¶¶ 17, 20. See also Gierer Dep. 108-09 (despite increasing prices, no loss in sales volume in ten years except for possible drop of 1/2% in 1997) (Exh. 44).

61 USTC/CWD 189496-542 (Exh. 70).

62 USTC/CWD 189497 (emphasis added) (Exh. 70).

63 USTC/CWD 052113 (Exh. 9). This UST conclusion is fully supported by the empirical evidence and echoed by industry analysts and executives. See USTC/CWD 431882 (industry analyst agrees that "[m]oist snuff users are generally price insensitive") (Exh. 71); Price Decl. ¶¶ 1, 3 (Senior Vice President of Swedish Match and a 17-year veteran of the tobacco industry: "consumers of moist snuff do not switch to other forms of smokeless tobacco (for example, loose leaf) in response to price increases of moist snuff" (Exh. 34).

willing to shift resources to producing another product in response to an increase in the price of the other product." AD/SAT v. Associated Press, 181 F.3d 216, 227 (2d Cir. 1999). Here, there has been no entry in response to UST's ever-increasing prices and remarkable profits. Two tobacco giants — R.J. Reynolds and Brown & Williamson — tried and failed, and no one has even tried to enter since 1991.[64]

This failed entry (as well as the lack of any new entry) is explained by the barriers to entry that define the moist snuff market. See Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 229 (barriers to entry, which may be proved by an "unsuccessful attempt . . . to enter," are "'practical indicia'" of the relevant market) (quoting Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325); Ansell, 757 F. Supp. at 474-75 (failures evidence entry barriers).

These barriers take many forms. First, government regulation, tobacco litigation, and general anti-tobacco sentiment make the moist snuff market — high profits

[64] Expert Report of David T. Scheffman ¶¶ 27-28; Gierer Dep. at 163 (Exh. 44); USTC/CWD 145051, 163106, 163112 (Exh. 72). Brown & Williamson's entry failed even though it already has a strong foothold in smokeless tobacco. It is the third largest supplier of plug and the fourth largest supplier of dry snuff. John C. Maxwell, The Maxwell Report -- The Smokeless Tobacco Industry in 1998, Table 3 (Mar. 31, 1999) (CWD-EXP-00074-75) (Exh. 73). Swedish Match in 1990 acquired an existing moist snuff manufacturer, Pinkerton. To the extent other firms have begun to sell moist snuff since that time, they constitute less than 1/3 of 1% of the market, id., CWD-EXP-00071, and are apparently irrelevant to UST in any event, see Smith Dep. at 51-54 ("Q. As vice president of sales, were you interested in who was selling moist snuff to the public? A. Not really. . . . Q. Did U.S. Tobacco follow what its competitors did in the marketplace . . . ? A. I don't ever remember doing that.") (Exh. 37).

notwithstanding — forbidding. UST's CEO testified that entry by a domestic firm not already producing tobacco products is "highly unlikely."[65] Second, entry would require substantial investments of time and money. There is a limited supply of Dark Fire Tobacco Leaf — the tobacco used to make moist snuff.[66] In addition, a new entrant would need at least two years of preparation (and tens of millions of dollars) to purchase specialized equipment and to allow the tobacco to age before it could expect to sell a product.[67] A prospective entrant would also be required to spend substantial sums on product testing, formula development, and marketing.[68] See United States v. Ivaco, Inc., 704 F. Supp. 1409, 1416 (W.D. Mich. 1989) ("[f]irms in related industries could not quickly enter . . . to discipline a significant price increase, because entry . . . would require an extensive investment in research and development as well as production facilities").

Third, UST's dominance of advertising and distribution raise more daunting barriers. As the Supreme Court has observed, in tobacco "advertising . . . is . . . a widely published warning

65 Gierer Dep. at 160 (Exh. 44).

66 Government regulators limit the amount of Dark Fire that can be produced in a given year, and each year the supply of usable tobacco is essentially depleted. Therefore, a new entrant would have to compete with existing manufacturers to acquire even a small amount of tobacco to begin production. Krauch Aff. ¶ 3 (Exh. 62).

that [a monopolist] possess[es] and know[s] how to use a powerful offensive and defensive weapon against new competition. New competition dare not enter such a field, unless it be well supported by comparable national advertising." American Tobacco, 328 U.S. at 797. Even though federal and state regulations have sharply curtailed tobacco advertising — and consequently made it more difficult for a new entrant to win customers — UST has asserted its dominance here as elsewhere. It consistently spends more than $65 million per year on advertising.[69] And, through its exclusionary conduct, it has obtained a choke-hold on the single most effective form of advertising for moist snuff: POS.

UST's effective campaign to eliminate the distribution and advertising of rival firms is more chilling still. Through its "category management" ruses, UST has achieved the complete exclusion of brands that have not yet achieved a substantial market share — including new and growing brands.[70] By demanding that its "share of fixture" equal or exceed its share of market, and by inducing retailers to restrict the total number of brands carried in the store, the entrenched monopolist has served notice to new entrants that it will be difficult and costly to get their products on store shelves. Even if they make it to the shelves, new brands can expect only to sit unnoticed where UST has obtained "POS exclusivity." All this is "further [to] emphasize the effectiveness of a well financed monopoly in this field against potential competitors if there merely exists an intent to exclude such competitors." American Tobacco, 328 U.S. at 797.

That "intent to exclude" plainly exists. UST has an announced "[b]usiness [s]trateg[y]" to "[p]rotect our market share by creating barriers to competition."[71] It has, for example, stated its goal to "[s]top the growth" of competitors' price-value brands "in order to protect our market share (80%)."[72] And it has instituted policies that create "barrier[s] to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market," barriers designed to "support[] [UST's] market share expansion objectives."[73]

It is telling that UST has not even attempted to define a relevant market other than moist snuff. Its expert offers a critique of the market analysis performed by Professor Morton Kamien of Northwestern University and Dean Edward Popper of

Bellarmine College, but has steadfastly refused to offer any alternative definition.[74]

2. Geographic Market Is the United States

The relevant geographic market is the "'area of effective competition.'" White, 723 F.2d at 501 (quoting Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 327 (1961)). That area is "'charted by . . . select[ing] . . . the market area in which the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practicably turn for supplies.'" Id. (quoting Tampa Elec., 365 U.S. at 327); see also Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (the geographic market "is the locale in which consumers of a product or service can turn for alternative sources of supply").

Applying that rule, the geographic market in this case is the United States. UST and other suppliers of moist snuff distribute their products across the country; purchasers can turn to a supplier in any area of the country to obtain an alternative source of supply.[75] UST proclaims itself "as a national company"[76] and adheres to a "pricing strategy of nation-wide delivered pricing."[77] Because "[p]roducers of [moist snuff] compete for customers throughout the United States, and [UST] sell[s] [its moist snuff brands] nationally," "the entire country is a proper geographic market." Mrs. Smith's, 440 F. Supp. at 230 (citing United States v. Pabst Brewing Co., 384 U.S. 546 (1966)); see also Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 328 ("relevant geographic market is the entire Nation" because "[t]he relationships of product value, bulk, weight and consumer demand enable manufacturers to distribute their shoes on a nationwide basis"). UST has not even attempted to contend otherwise.

B. UST Has Monopoly Power in the Moist Snuff Market

UST has admitted that its "80% market share gives UST 'market power.'"[78] UST also understands that its monopoly power "means [that it] cannot legally use that market power to prevent [the] competition from selling their products."[79]

"There are two ways to establish . . . that [UST] holds monopoly power. The first is by presenting direct evidence

[79] USTC/CWD 186414 (Exh. 8). Yet that is precisely what UST has done — it has prevented its competitors from freely advertising and effectively distributing their products and has erected barriers to prevent new entry into the moist snuff market. The extent and effect of UST's anticompetitive conduct will be the focus of trial. For purposes of this motion, the relevant issue is UST's admission that it has "market power," and the objective evidence that substantiates that admission.

'showing the exercise of actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors.' The second is by presenting circumstantial evidence of monopoly power by showing a high market share within a defined market." Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (internal citation omitted) (quoting Byars, 609 F.2d at 850).

"In recent years, parties and courts have increasingly moved toward utilizing the circumstantial method as a 'shortcut.'" Id. However, the Sixth Circuit has cautioned that "this does not undercut the continued viability of the first avenue of establishing monopoly power." Id. UST's exclusionary conduct has shaped a market in which UST can consistently charge — and has consistently charged and sustained — prices far above the competitive level. UST thereby has, in its words, "define[d] the market" for moist smokeless tobacco.[80] See Virtual Maintenance, 11 F.3d at 665 ("true market power" is the "power sufficient to change and sustain anticompetitive prices").

1. UST's Current 77% Market Share Establishes Its Monopoly Power

The Supreme Court has stated that, if a manufacturer produces "almost 75%" of a product sold in the United States, "it may be assumed it does have monopoly power over that 'market.'" E.I. du Pont, 351 U.S. at 379, 391; PSI Repair Servs., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir.) ("the Supreme Court has concluded that . . . over two-thirds of the market . . .

constitute[s] monopoly power under § 2"), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1265 (1997).

It is undisputed that UST manufactured at least 77% of the moist snuff sold in the United States in 1998.[81] UST has sustained that self-proclaimed "dominant share of the market" for decades.[82] This evidence is itself conclusive; the Court should find that UST holds monopoly power as a matter of law.

2. UST Has the Power To Control Prices

"[E]vidence that the defendant has actually exercised price leadership control over the industry" "can be particularly compelling evidence that [the defendant] has monopoly power."[83] See Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1018 (plaintiff can "'show[] monopoly power [by] marshal[ling] evidence showing the exercise of actual control over prices'") (quoting Byars, 609 F.2d at 850). Such evidence is irrefutable in this case. UST has boasted about its "price leadership" in just those words. "UST is the pricing leader in the market — others will follow."[84] "UST pricing 'leads' and defines the market."[85]

Every January 1 and July 1 since at least 1989, UST has, like clockwork, raised prices on its moist snuff products.[86] These increases have been exacted without reference to external factors, and have always exceeded any increase in the consumer price index. A 1996 analyst report shows that, between 1990 and 1996, UST imposed an average increase in the price of a can of moist snuff of about 8.2% per year.[87]

UST's ability to earn unusually high profits, year after year, provides still further evidence of monopoly power. The prices set by UST have provided the company with profits almost unimaginable for any other U.S. public company. According to the latest annual statistics, UST's profit margin exceeds 84.8%, compared to an S&P 500 average of 47.8% and a tobacco industry average of 29.3%.[88] Such UST profit, sustained for more than a UST's ability to charge undeniably supracompetitive prices is, by definition, market power. See Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde,

UST's operating margin on moist snuff increased every year between 1990 and 1996, rising from 56.0% to 63.1%. That is, the evidence shows that UST consistently increased its prices by more than its operating costs during an extended period of time. During this period, UST's operating margin increased by 12.7% (i.e., (63.1-56.0)/56.0). The 1996 analyst report forecast that UST would be able to continue to increase its operating margin, from 63.1% in 1996 to 63.7% in 1997 and 64.3% in 1998. See Morgan Stanley Report, Table 5 (CWD-EXP-00211) (Exh. 5). UST's return on assets in its tobacco division was reported to have ranged between 120.3% and 168.0% between 1990 and 1996 (moist snuff accounted for almost all of UST's tobacco sales). Id.

466 U.S. 2, 27 n.46 (1984) ("As an economic matter, market power exists whenever prices can be raised above the levels that would be charged in a competitive market.").[89]

II. BECAUSE UST CANNOT OFFER ANY EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT ITS COUNTERCLAIMS, THEY SHOULD BE DISMISSED

UST asserted five counterclaims against Conwood.[90] All five allegedly stem from misconduct by Conwood sales representatives, similar to the misconduct alleged in support of Conwood's claims against UST. UST developed no evidence through discovery to support these me-too claims. It has failed to list a single witness with personal knowledge of any claimed actionable misconduct by Conwood; and it cannot claim damages from any such alleged misconduct. For both of these reasons, the counterclaims should be dismissed.

[89] UST's intent and ability to exclude competitors — a third way to prove monopoly power — is equally clear. See Re/Max, 173 F.3d at 1016 (monopoly-power can be established through "direct evidence showing . . . the actual exclusion of competitors" (internal quotation marks omitted). As explained in Part I(A)(1)(g), supra, UST has successfully executed its "business strategy" to create "barriers to entry" and to exclude competitors from the moist snuff market and thereby "protect its market share." USTC/CWD 052106 ("Protect our market share by creating barriers to competition") (Exh. 9); see also id. (UST activities "provide a barrier to competitor entry in the moist smokeless market" and "support [UST's] market share expansion objectives").

See Answer and Affirmative Defenses (June 12, 1998).

A. UST Has No Witness with Personal Knowledge of Actionable Misconduct by Conwood

On May 11, 1999, the Court (by Magistrate Judge Moyer) ordered UST to disclose "no later than September 21, 1999 . . . 'field personnel' trial witnesses who have direct personal knowledge regarding the allegations contained in UST's counterclaim."[91] UST has not disclosed any witness in compliance with that Order. Accordingly, UST has no competent evidence to support any of its claims, and will be unable at trial to prove any actionable misconduct by Conwood.

B. UST Has No Evidence of Damages

In its initial disclosures under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26, UST failed to provide any "computation of any category of damages claimed" (Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C)) or identify supporting documents with respect to its counterclaims, as required by the rules. Conwood brought UST's default to the Court's attention, and by Order dated February 5, 1999, Magistrate Judge Moyer required UST to provide the requisite damages disclosure.[92] UST never complied with that Order.

[91] May 11, 1999 Order at 3. Magistrate Judge Moyer defined these trial witnesses to include "witnesses who have direct personal knowledge" of the parties' "'in the field'" anti-competitive behavior. Such field personnel would include UST field sales personnel and former sales personnel, Conwood field sales personnel, convenience store owners, managers and employees, and others who have directly, personally observed 'in the field' activity" that the parties allege "to be anti-competitive." Id. at 2-3.

[92] Magistrate Judge Moyer issued an Order directing UST to provide a Rule 26(a)(1)(C) counterclaims damages calculation: "Conwood's motion to compel a response by UST under Rule 26(a)

Nor did UST make any disclosure of damages evidence in its expert reports submitted pursuant to Rule 26. Neither of UST's two experts offered any opinion on damages to UST — nor even made any reference to UST's counterclaims. UST therefore has no expert testimony to support its contentions.

Plainly, UST has no damages evidence of any kind; alternatively, if it has such evidence but failed to disclose it, its failure to comply with Court Orders and Rule 26(a) should preclude any attempt by UST to offer damages evidence at trial.[93] In either case, the absence of any evidence of damages requires entry of judgment on UST's counterclaims.

CONCLUSION

The Court should enter partial summary judgment on the issue of defendants' power in the relevant U.S. product market (moist snuff), and should grant summary judgment in favor of plaintiffs on Counts I through V of defendants' counterclaims.

with respect to UST's counterclaim is sustained." Feb. 5, 1999 Order at 8.

[93] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(1) provides that "[a] party that without substantial justification fails to disclose information required by Rule 26(a) . . . shall not, unless such failure is harmless, be permitted to use as evidence at a trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed." Rule 37(c)(1) is "a self executing sanction for failure to make a disclosure required by Rule 26(a), without need for a motion under Rule 37(2)(A)." Commentary to Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, 146 F.R.D. 401, 691 (1993).

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), through counsel, move the Court pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 for summary judgment as to the federal law claims of Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P. et al. ("Conwood") in this case and for dismissal without prejudice of Conwoods' pendent state law claims. With this motion, USTC submits a supporting memorandum of law focused on Conwood's core monopolization claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. With respect to the Lanham Act claim, USTC relies upon pp. 18-21 of its Memorandum of Law in Support of its Motion to Dismiss Complaint or for Judgment on the Pleadings filed September 4, 1998 (Dkt. 30) and pp. 21-23 of USTC's reply memorandum on the same motion submitted September 30, 1998 (Dkt. 34). USTC also tenders a proposed order.

ORDER

On the Motion of the Defendants pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 for summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' claims in this action, the Court having determined that the record reflects no genuine issue as to any material fact and that Defendants are entitled to a judgment as a matter of law as to Plaintiffs' federal law claims under Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2 (Count I of the Complaint) and the Lanham Act (Count II of the Complaint),

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that Defendants' motion is granted. All federal claims of Plaintiffs against Defendants in this action -- the Sherman Act Section 2 monopolization claim in Count I and the Lanham Act claim in Count II of the Complaint -- are dismissed with prejudice. The pendent state law claims in Counts III-VIII of the Complaint are dismissed without prejudice.

MOTION OF DEFENDANTS FOR LEAVE TO FILE MEMORANDUM IN EXCESS OF FORTY PAGES

Pursuant to LR 7.1(d), Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") seek leave to file the memorandum in support of the motion for summary judgment tendered with this motion. The memorandum is in excess of the forty-page limit because eight additional pages are necessary to enable USTC to address fully and to set forth adequately the law and facts in support of its motion, which covers each element of liability and damages asserted by Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. in their core monopolization claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.

A tendered order directing the Clerk to accept the attached memorandum for filing is attached hereto.

MOTION OF DEFENDANTS FOR ORAL ARGUMENT

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC"), by counsel, hereby move the Court, pursuant to L.R 7.1(g), to enter the attached Order setting oral argument with regard to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Dkt. 208, 212), Defendants' Motion to Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich (Dkt. 210) and Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment (Dkt. 207). As grounds for this motion, Defendants state that oral argument will allow the parties to help the Court focus on the specific legal issues involved on their motions in this case, which includes Sherman Act claims, Lanham Act claims and state law tort claims. With trial set for February 28, 2000 and briefing on the summary judgment motions to be completed by December 24, 1999, USTC asks the Court to schedule a time for the parties to be heard on these key motions, the resolution of which will determine the need for a trial and significantly shape preparation for trial of any issues the Court decides a jury should hear.

A tendered order is attached hereto.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO STRIKE CERTAIN AFFIDAVITS FILED BY PLAINTIFFS IN SUPPORT OF THEIR OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants, U.S. Tobacco Co., et al. ("USTC"), move this Court to strike certain of the affidavits offered by Plaintiffs, Conwood Company, L.P. ("Conwood"), in support of Conwood's opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment. The affidavits do not meet the basic requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e): they do not set forth facts that are admissible in evidence; and they do not show affirmatively that the affiants are competent to testify. For these reasons, the affidavits cannot constitute evidence that raises a genuine issue of material fact in this action, and they should be stricken from the record.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In April, 1999, USTC moved this Court to compel the production of all written statements or declarations obtained by Conwood from third parties, including third-party retailers. Magistrate Judge Moyer denied USTC's motion based on his conclusion that any such declarations were protected from discovery by the work-product doctrine. See Order of April 23, 1999 (Dkt. 94).

Subsequently, USTC moved the Court to modify the Scheduling Order to require earlier disclosure of certain trial witnesses in order to provide the parties with a fair opportunity to depose those persons intended to be called as trial witnesses. In light of his earlier ruling on the disclosure of witness statements, Magistrate Judge Moyer granted USTC's motion and modified the Scheduling Order "to require the disclosure by Conwood by September 21, 1999 of its trial witnesses who are 'field personnel.'" See Order of May 11, 1999 at 2 (Dkt. 100). The Order defined "field personnel" as "witnesses who have alleged direct personal knowledge of UST's 'in the field' anticompetitive behavior." Id. at 2-3. The Order provided that, upon disclosure of field personnel witnesses, the parties would have a month-long opportunity to depose those persons. Id.

On September 21, 1999, Conwood disclosed its field personnel witnesses, but did not list any retailers, other than a reference to those who had already been deposed during the regular discovery period (which had ended on September 3, 1999). See Conwood September 21, 1999 Disclosures, App. 1. Subsequent to Conwood's disclosures, USTC wrote to seek confirmation that, despite Conwood's promise to "march into court" retailer after retailer to testify about USTC's anticompetitive behavior, Conwood had not listed a single retailer as a potential live trial witness. See USTC Letter, September 22, 1999, App. 2. Conwood confirmed that it had not intended to disclose any third-party retailers as potential trial witnesses. See Conwood Letter, September 22, 1999, App. 3.

On October 1, 1999, for the first time, Conwood disclosed the existence of approximately 40 third-party witness statements obtained from retailers (the "Retailer Declarations"). The Retailer Declarations were vaguely referenced in several of Conwood's expert reports. USTC promptly sought and obtained discovery of these witness statements under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2) (requiring disclosure of materials considered by a testifying expert).

Although USTC was belatedly in possession of approximately 40 Retailer Declarations, the regular discovery period had ended, and Conwood had not listed any of the declarants as trial witnesses. Therefore, USTC could not depose the declarants under Magistrate Judge Moyer's May 11, 1999 Order. Accordingly, USTC had no opportunity to seek discovery from these third-parties, and will not have any opportunity to cross-examine them at any trial.

On November 15, 1999, USTC moved for summary judgment. On December 10, 1999, Conwood submitted the Retailer Declarations in opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment as "evidence" of otherwise unproven facts critical to Conwood's case, namely that USTC has engaged in a systematic campaign of "dirty tricks." See Pl. Opp. at 14-15, 57.

ARGUMENT

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e) mandates that any affidavit submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment meet the following requirements:

1) "opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge";

2) "opposing affidavits . . . shall set forth facts as would be admissible in evidence"; and

16diii002466

3) "opposing affidavits . . . shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein."

Thus, if a witness will not testify at trial, an affidavit from that witness must be stricken from the record at the summary judgment stage. In Chappell v. Bradley, 834 F. Supp. 1030 (N.D. Ill. 1993), for example, the plaintiffs submitted affidavits in support of their motion for summary judgment. Id. at 1033. Defendants moved to strike those affidavits because plaintiffs had failed to disclose the affiants as trial witnesses. Id. Defendants argued that, because the affiants were precluded from testifying at trial, their affidavits were not appropriately considered on summary judgment and should be stricken from the record. The court agreed and granted defendants' motion:

> The purpose of a summary judgment motion is to determine whether there are issues present which require decision at trial. The parties then disclose to the court the admissible evidence through the vehicles of affidavits, depositions, etc. that is available to determine whether there is sufficient disagreement to warrant trial. Rule 56(e) requires that an affidavit must set forth facts that are admissible in evidence and "shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify . . . ." If the plaintiffs have no intention of offering the evidence at trial it would of course not be admissible. If the witness is not disclosed, and is a Rule 26(b)(4)(B) consulting only expert, he is not competent to testify. Since the witnesses were not disclosed, the appropriate remedy is to strike the affidavits.

Id. (emphasis added). Accordingly, if a party fails to disclose a trial witness when the party is required to do so, that party may not rely on an affidavit from that witness on summary judgment.

In its motion for summary judgment, USTC established that Conwood has not proven facts sufficient to create a triable issue of fact on its Sherman Act § 2 claims. See Memorandum In Support Of Defendants' Motion For Summary Judgment. In opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment, Conwood submitted affidavits from approximately 40 retailers as "evidence" that USTC engages in a pervasive and systematic campaign of so-called "dirty tricks." See Pl. Opp.

at 14-15, 57. This "evidence," however, will not be admissible at trial and therefore should not be considered on summary judgment.

If Conwood planned to introduce evidence from third parties concerning the alleged anticompetitive conduct of USTC in the field, Conwood was obligated to disclose those persons as trial witnesses on September 21, 1999. See May 11, 1999 Order. Whether Conwood was unable or simply unwilling to disclose the identity of these third-parties from whom Conwood obtained affidavits, the fact remains that none of these witnesses may now be called by Conwood to appear at trial. Accordingly, affidavits from these persons submitted by Conwood in opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment should be stricken from the record. See Chappell, 834 F. Supp. at 1033.

Moreover, the affidavits at issue are demonstrably unreliable. In the brief period of time USTC has been in possession of these declarations, USTC has done its best to contact the affiants, where possible, about the content of their purported affidavits. In some cases, USTC informed them for the first time of Conwood's intent and purpose for obtaining the affidavits. Invariably, USTC discovered that the information contained in the affidavits was incorrect, or at a minimum, incomplete. USTC submits herewith the results of those communications – supplemental affidavits in which a significant number of the affiants took the opportunity to provide this Court with more accurate and more complete information. See App. at 4.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that this Court strike the affidavits from third-party retail personnel offered by Conwood in support of their opposition to Defendants' motion for summary judgment.

MOTION OF PLAINTIFFS FOR LEAVE TO FILE MEMORANDUM IN EXCESS OF FIFTEEN PAGES

Pursuant to LR 7.1(d), plaintiffs seek leave to file their Reply Memorandum in Support of Partial Summary Judgment. The memorandum is two pages in excess of the fifteen-page limit because additional pages are necessary to enable plaintiffs to address fully and to set forth adequately the law and facts in reply to defendants' Opposition.

A proposed order is attached.

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR ORAL ARGUMENT

Defendants have moved for oral argument with regard to three pending motions: Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment, and Defendants' Motion to Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich.

Plaintiffs respectfully submit that these matters have been briefed with unusual thoroughness and, accordingly, that oral argument would be of little or no material assistance to the Court. Plaintiffs are, however, available and ready for oral argument should the Court believe it useful. Proposed orders are attached.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 JAN -7 A9:39 FILED Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO STRIKE NON-PARTY DECLARATIONS

In sworn declarations, forty-five retail owners and employees from across the United States recounted defendants' systematic campaign to exclude smaller rivals from the moist snuff market. This corroborates and amplifies testimony from, e.g., another twenty-six such non-party witnesses, ten former UST representatives, and more than 200 Conwood representatives, as well as reams of admissions from defendants' executives and business records. Defendants now ask the Court to wipe the slate clean of the written declarations. They claim that this probative evidence is either procedurally barred or incomplete with respect to twelve of the forty-five declarants.

But the facts defendants (collectively "UST") seek to suppress fall under no procedural bar. It is hornbook law that the Court may consider written declarations or affidavits on motion for summary judgment. UST's argument that these particular declarations may not be considered -- because they come from witnesses identified as potential rebuttal witnesses, and not disclosed as witnesses for plaintiffs' case-in-chief -- is foreclosed by Sixth Circuit law, unsupported by any other authority, was expressly and properly rejected by Magistrate Judge Moyer, and, tellingly, is exactly the opposite of what they argue with respect to their counterclaims. For those, they claim the Court should deny summary judgment based on possible testimony from witnesses undisclosed to this day. (Point I, infra).

Defendants' challenges to twelve of the forty-five witnesses, all of which delve into disputed issues of material fact, only highlight the inappropriateness of the relief they seek. The "supplemental" declarations confirm the exclusionary conduct alleged by Conwood. While a few of the declarants, with the monopolist looking over their shoulder, now say that they were willing to let defendants practice such exclusion, a store employee's purported willingness to go along provides no defense to a monopolist's exclusion of competition in violation of Section 2. Such supplements provide still less of a basis for disregarding accounts of defendants' use of their market power to curtail rivals' opportunities to display and advertise their moist snuff. This evidence bears squarely on the disputed issues of material fact that must be resolved at trial.

I. THE DECLARATIONS CANNOT LAWFULLY BE DISREGARDED ON SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Under Rule 56, a party opposing summary judgment is expressly authorized to submit sworn statements. "Supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e). There is no requirement, correspondingly, that the sworn statements come from identified trial witnesses. Ryder Automotive Carrier Group, Inc. v. General Teamsters Sales & Service, 124 F.3d 199 (Table), Nos. 96-3712, 9738, 1997 WL 540893 at *3 (6th Cir. Sept. 2, 1997)("Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure does not require that affiants be included in a witness list before their affidavits may be used to support a motion for summary judgment.") (Tab I); Taylor v. St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., 746 F.Supp. 50, 53 (D. Kan. 1990) (no "strict requirement that affiants used in connection with a motion must appear on a party's witness list; under Rule 56(e), affiants need only be 'competent to testify to the matters stated therein.'").[1]

[1]Courts have gone farther and considered affidavits on summary judgment even when the affiant was unlikely to testify at

Each of plaintiffs' forty-five declarations meets the Rule 56(e) standard. Defendants base their motion to strike the declarations on the argument that, first, the forty-five declarants may not be allowed to testify at trial because Conwood did not disclose them as witnesses for its case-in-chief; and second, the Court cannot consider sworn statements from witnesses who may be prevented from testifying as a possible sanction for the supposed non-disclosure. Both of these necessary predicates to UST's motion are false.

There was no violation of the Scheduling Order. Conwood made appropriate disclosure on September 21, 1999 of all "field personnel" it intended to call in its case-in-chief. In its disclosure, Conwood expressly reserved the right to call, in rebuttal, additional witnesses -- including retailers who had given declarations regarding UST misconduct.[2] See Conwood "Field Personnel" Witness List of September 21, 1999, Exhibit "A".

trial. See, e.g., Banco de Espana v. Fed. Reserve Bank of N.Y., 114 F.2d 438 (2nd Cir. 1940) (considering the affidavit of an ambassador who was immune from any requirement of testifying; "the real requirement is of proof which if presented at the formal trial would be competent to support the issues to which it is directed."); FDIC v. Horn, 751 F.Supp. 186, 188 (D. Colo. 1990) (considering affidavit of witness who had been removed from plaintiff's witness list at the pre-trial conference).

[2]Contrary to UST's suggestion, defendants did not receive the declarations "belatedly." The declarations were first referenced in the expert rebuttals of Professors Kamien and Gundlach filed on October 1, 1999. Conwood provided defendants with copies of all forty-five declarations on October 7, 1999.

Upon receipt of Conwood's disclosure, UST (which inexplicably made no disclosure of its own witnesses) sought written confirmation that Conwood did not intend to call non-party witnesses to field misconduct by UST. Exhibit "B". Conwood responded that same day, reiterating that it intended to call in its case all the non-party witnesses whose depositions had been taken, and that it reserved the right to call in rebuttal the forty-five retailers who had given evidence by written declaration regarding UST misconduct. Exhibit "C".

UST then asked Magistrate Judge Moyer at the next Status Conference (October 13, 1999) to preclude Conwood from calling any of the forty-five declarants at trial, on the ground that they had not been disclosed on September 21 in accordance with the Court's Order. Magistrate Judge Moyer denied UST's oral motion, and refused to preclude any of these witnesses. See Order of Oct. 13, 1999; Exhibit "D". UST's claim that "none of these witnesses [the retailer declarants] may now be called by Conwood to appear at trial," UST Memo at 5, simply ignores Magistrate Judge Moyer's contrary ruling.

Finally, UST's position here is just the opposite of what it has argued with respect to its counterclaims. UST did not disclose a single witness to alleged misconduct by Conwood on September 21, yet it argues that the Court cannot grant summary judgment on those claims because it may be able at trial to call undisclosed witnesses. See UST Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment at 31, 34. Accordingly, there is no substance to UST's argument that Conwood violated the Court's scheduling order by failing to list by name on September 21 all potential rebuttal witnesses.

The Court cannot properly ignore the declarations. Equally dispositive is the lack of authority for the relief UST seeks. For even if Conwood had failed to make timely disclosure of witnesses -- not the case here -- it would be an abuse of discretion for the Court to ignore the declarations in deciding UST's motion for summary judgment.

The Sixth Circuit so held in Polk v. Local 16, Int'l Union Bricklayers and Allied Craftsmen, 53 F.3d 332 (Table), No. 94-3272, 1995 WL 241999 at *4 (6th Cir. Apr. 25, 1995) (Tab II). There the court reversed a grant of summary judgment where the district court had refused to consider an affidavit submitted by plaintiff along with his opposition. The district court struck the affidavit because the plaintiff had failed to make timely disclosure of the affiant in his answers to defendant's interrogatories, which sought the identity of all plaintiff's trial witnesses. Despite this conceded violation, the Sixth Circuit held it an abuse of discretion for the district court to refuse to consider the affidavit in deciding summary judgment.[3] It would be a greater abuse of discretion here to strike competent evidence from the forty-five declarants based on no violation of any Federal Rule or Order of the Court.

II. THE DECLARATIONS ARE PROBATIVE AND CREDIBLE EVIDENCE OF UST EXCLUSIONARY CONDUCT

Finally, UST urges the Court to ignore evidence from some of the forty-five declarants because UST believes their sworn statements to be inaccurate and/or incomplete.[4] This really amounts to admission by UST that the case turns on disputed issues of material fact. Under no circumstances can the Court properly resolve disputes about the facts -- for example, by deciding which declarations to accept or reject -- on summary judgment. See Williams v. General Motors Corp., 187 F.3d 553,

[3]In the case UST cites, Chappell v. Bradley, 834 F.Supp. 1030 (N.D. IL 1993), the district court granted a motion to strike affidavits submitted by experts who had not been disclosed in violation of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26. That decision does not support the striking of declarations from fact witnesses who were not required to be disclosed (but were anyway). It does support Conwood's motion for summary judgment based on UST's complete failure to comply with its Rule 26 obligations and the Court's Order demanding compliance with those obligations. See Conwood Motion for Summary Judgment at 38-40.

[4]This last effort demands, on the one hand, that facts inconvenient to UST be disregarded or struck from the record, and on the other, that the Court adopt principles of law never before recognized by any court. For example, no court has read Section 2 out of the statute books as UST proposes with its insistence that a monopolist violates Section 2 only by engaging in acts that would themselves constitute some other, "independent violation" of the antitrust law.

560 (6th Cir. 1999) (summary judgment only appropriate in the absence of disputed facts with the evidence construed favorably to the non-moving party).

Moreover, the evidence UST urges on the Court corroborates the original testimony of the witnesses; the "supplemental" declarations are not recantations, but rather elaborations. They further establish that UST systematically excluded rivals from retail locations. While UST attempts to add the gloss that its exclusion was effected in some instances with acquiescence from store employees, such "permission" is irrelevant; the store's consent, as a matter of law, is no defense to the Section 2 violation established by UST's willful maintenance of its moist snuff monopoly through systematic exclusion of rival products and advertising. See, e.g., Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F.Supp. 1129, 1136-1140 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (retailer consent to exclusionary practices not a defense under Section 2); Sara Lee Corp. v. Kayser-Roth Corp., Civ. No. 6:92CV00460, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6554 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 10, 1995) (same).

For example, the supplemental declaration of Patricia Heynig corroborates the fact that UST sought and obtained exclusive vending rights at the Hollywood Party Store in Harbor Springs, Michigan. It states that "when I returned to work the next day, there was a new [UST] rack in the store that displayed all of the moist snuff, including Conwood." Heynig Supp. Dec. at ¶5. Ms.

Heynig's supplemental declaration also leaves wholly unaltered her earlier statement that the UST representative "put the Kodiak products into the UST rack and put Rooster point of sale in front of those products" and that the "Kodiak point of sale ("POS") that was on its rack was removed." Heynig Dec. at ¶¶3 & 5. Ms. Heynig, like the other eleven supplemental declarants, in no way recants her prior testimony.

Similarly, the supplemental declaration of Wayne Smart, owner of Fred's Discount Store in Delhi, Louisiana, recounts that UST persuaded him to reduce the size of the Conwood rack and product offerings as part of a UST-initiated reset. Smart Supp. Dec. at ¶¶4-5. The supplemental declaration does not address Mr. Smart's original statement that UST paid him to put in a UST rack, which was the impetus of the reset. Smart Dec. at ¶3.

The supplements, therefore, do little more than confirm and amplify the evidence originally provided by the forty-five declarants. To the extent that any supplemental declaration conflicts with its predecessor, however, it is hornbook law that the Court cannot resolve that dispute against Conwood at this stage of the case. This is an issue of credibility for trial. See Ingram v. City of Columbus, 185 F.3d 579, 597 (6th Cir. 1999) (reversing grant of summary judgment for defendant because district court failed to credit plaintiff's affidavits and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of plaintiff).

Conclusion

UST's Motion to Strike Certain Affidavits Filed by Plaintiffs in Support of Their Opposition to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

RYDER AUTOMOTIVE CARRIER GROUP, INC., Plaintiff-Appellant, v.
GENERAL TEAMSTERS SALES & SERVICE AND INDUSTRIAL UNION LOCAL NO. 654, Defendants-Appellees

Nos. 96-3712, 96-3738.

United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

Sept. 2, 1997.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio.

BEFORE: MARTIN, Chief Judge, RYAN and BATCHELDER, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

1 In this declaratory action case, Ryder Automotive Carrier Group, Inc. appeals the district's grant of summary judgment, declaring that the grievance filed by General Teamsters Sales & Service and Industrial Union Local No.654 against Ryder Automotive should be submitted to arbitration pursuant to the terms of a collective bargaining agreement between the Union and Ryder Automotive.

Ryder Systems, Inc. is the parent company for several different subsidiaries, including Ryder Automotive and Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. Ryder Truck Rental engages primarily in the business of leasing vehicles to commercial and individual clients. Through several "operating" companies, Ryder Automotive engages primarily in the business of providing transportation for vehicle manufacturers.

In 1992, the operating companies owned by Ryder Automotive entered into a collective bargaining agreement with the Union referred to as the National Automobile Transporters Agreement. In an effort to eliminate the possibility that Ryder Automotive or its operating companies would divert to an affiliated company operations traditionally assigned to Union members (a technique known as "double breasting"), Ryder Automotive, its operating companies, and the Union executed an agreement supplemental to the Collective bargaining agreement, referred to as the Ryder Automotive Work Preservation Agreement.

In March, 1994, the Union filed a grievance with Ryder Automotive, claiming that Ryder Automotive employees should be permitted to transport the new trucks purchased by Ryder Truck Rental. After Ryder Automotive refused to concede to the Union's request, the Union instituted arbitration proceedings pursuant to the terms of the Work Preservation Agreement. Ryder Automotive then filed a declaratory judgment action in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, requesting an order declaring that the Union's dispute should not be arbitrated.

Included in the scheduling order entered by the magistrate judge was a requirement that each party file a list of lay witnesses. Additionally, the order warned that unidentified witnesses would not be permitted to testify. The parties then filed cross motions for summary judgment. However, because Ryder Automotive's motion was supported by affidavits of witnesses not listed in its witness disclosure the magistrate judge granted the Union's motion to strike the offending affidavits.

The magistrate then filed a report, recommending that summary judgment be granted in favor of the Union. After the district court adopted the recommendations of the magistrate, Ryder Automotive sought review by this Court, claiming that the magistrate improperly struck the affidavits included in Ryder Automotive's summary judgment motion and improperly granted summary judgment in favor of the Union. The Union cross-appealed, seeking costs and attorneys' fees.

In Johnston Boiler Co. v. Local Lodge No. 893, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, 753 F.2d 40 (6th Cir.1985) (citing United Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Navigation Co., 363 U.S. 574, 582-83, 80 S.Ct. 1347, 1352-53, 4 L.Ed.2d 1409 (1960)), we recognized that "[a]n order to arbitrate the particular grievance should not be denied unless it may be said with positive assurance that the arbitration clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute."

2 Paragraph four of the Work Preservation Agreement states:

> [Ryder Automotive] and [Ryder Automotive's operating companies] agree that no operation, work, or services of the kind, nature, or type covered by the [Collective Bargaining Agreement] and/or applicable Supplemental Agreements currently, traditionally, or hereinafter performed by the collective bargaining unit ("Covered Work") shall be performed by any affiliated business entity other than [Ryder Automotive's operating companies] that is owned, managed, or controlled (whether directly or indirectly through other entities) by [Ryder Automotive], [Ryder Automotive's operating companies] or any business entity they own, manage, or control.

The Union claims that Ryder Truck Rental is an "affiliated business entity" of Ryder Automotive, and that, in not permitting Union employees to transport Ryder Truck Rental's newly purchased vehicles, Ryder Automotive has violated paragraph four of the Work Preservation Agreement. The Union further argues that the dispute should be submitted to arbitration, pursuant to paragraph nine, because the Union's grievance alleges a violation of the Work Preservation Agreement.

Requesting reversal of the district court, Ryder Automotive maintains that the Union's grievance should not be subject to arbitration because the Union's grievance really concerns Ryder Truck Rental, an entity who is not a party to the Work Preservation Agreement. According to Ryder Automotive, the Union is attempting to use its agreement with Ryder Automotive to arbitrate a dispute with Ryder Truck Rental.

However, Ryder Automotive once again advances an argument that misconstrues the nature of the Union's complaint. The Union claims that Ryder Automotive-- not Ryder Truck Rental--violated the terms of the Work Preservation Agreement. According to the Union, Ryder Automotive engaged in practices specifically prohibited by the Work Preservation Agreement: a diversion of work to Ryder Truck Rental (an "associated business entity") by virtue of Ryder Automotive's relationship with Ryder Truck Rental. Thus, contrary to Ryder Automotive's position, the Union's claim rests solely upon an alleged violation of the Work Preservation Agreement by a party to the Work Preservation Agreement.

Paragraph nine of the Work Preservation Agreement states "all grievances or disputes concerning the interpretation or application of this [agreement] shall be resolved in final and binding arbitration before the Board of Arbitration established in ... the [Collective Bargaining Agreement]." Because the Union's grievance concerns the interpretation of the Work Preservation Agreement, it cannot be stated "with positive assurance that the arbitration clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute." Id. Accordingly, the district court did not err in ordering arbitration of the dispute.

Ryder Automotive next argues that the district court erred in striking the affidavits supporting its motion for summary judgment. The district court struck Ryder Automotive's affidavits because Ryder Automotive failed to include the affiants in its lay witness list, as required by the court's scheduling order. Ryder Automotive maintains that, while witness not identified in a witness list may not be permitted to testify at trial, nothing prohibits such witnesses from supporting a summary judgment motion.

3 We agree with Ryder automotive that Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure does not require that affiants be included in a witness list before their affidavits may be used to support a motion for summary judgment. However, our conclusion with regard to the affidavits does not alter the disposition of this case. As noted above, the ultimate issue before this Court is not whether Ryder Automotive violated the terms of the Work Preservation Agreement, but whether the Union is entitled to submit its grievance to arbitration. To avoid the strong presumption in favor of arbitrability, Ryder Automotive must establish that the arbitration clause is not susceptible to any interpretation that covers the asserted dispute. Ryder Automotive cannot satisfy this burden with or without the affidavits supporting its motion for summary judgment.

Ryder Automotive's affidavits provide some evidence that the relationship between Ryder Automotive and Ryder Truck Rental is a tentative one. However, as the district court realized, both parties agree that Ryder Automotive and Ryder Truck Rental share a common parent corporation. Under one possible interpretation of the Work Preservation Agreement, this fact alone may establish that Ryder Truck Rental is an "associated business entity."

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Furthermore, Ryder Automotive's affidavits cannot completely refute the evidence produced by the Union. Thus, even if the district court had considered Ryder Automotive's affidavits, it still should have granted summary judgment in favor of the Union.

As a final matter, the Union claims that, because the parties agreed to be bound by the arbitration procedure "in all respects," Ryder Automotive's position is substantially without justification and the district court should have awarded costs and attorneys' fees to the Union. However, even a broad arbitration clause cannot indicate that every possible dispute between two parties must be arbitrated. See Atkinson v. Sinclair Refining Co., 370 U.S. 238, 82 S.Ct. 1318, 8 L.Ed.2d 462 (1962); John Wiley & Sons, Inc. v. Livingston, 376 U.S. 543, 84 S.Ct. 909, 11 L.Ed.2d 898 (1964). While Ryder Automotive is incorrect in its argument that the Union's grievance was not covered by the arbitration clause, it cannot be said that Ryder Automotive brought this action or appeal in bad faith. Accordingly, the district court did not abuse its discretion in declining to award costs and attorneys' fees to the Union.

For the above reasons, the judgment of the district court is affirmed.

Stephen Wesley POLK, Sr., Plaintiff-Appellant,
v.
LOCAL 16, INTERNATIONAL UNION BRICKLAYERS AND ALLIED CRAFTSMEN, Defendant-Appellee.

No. 94-3272.

United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

April 25, 1995.

On Appeal from the United States District Court, for the Northern District of Ohio, No. 38-02884; George W. White, Chief Judge.

N.D.Ohio

REVERSED.

Before: KEITH and MARTIN, Circuit Judges; and SPIEGEL, District Judge. [FN*]

FN* The Honorable S. Arthur Spiegel, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Ohio, sitting by designation.

PER CURIAM.

1 Stephen Polk appeals the district court's grant of summary judgment for Local 16 on his discrimination claim based on Title VII, Section 1983, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. Polk contends that the district court improperly struck an affidavit filed with his opposition to summary judgment.

Stephen Polk, an African-American, is a cement mason. At the time this suit was commenced in 1988, he was 73 years old and had been a member of Local 16, International Union of Bricklayers and Allied Craftsmen since 1960. He alleges that over the years he had regularly been referred to work by business managers of Local 16. However, beginning in 1986, Polk sought job referrals through Local 16 without success despite claims by the union that it attempted to reach Polk regarding jobs.

Local 16 has approximately 200 members, eight percent are African-American and sixty-three percent are over age forty. It has a collective bargaining agreement with the Mason Contractors Association of Lake and Geauga Counties. Although it does not operate a hiring hall, Local 16 does contact members to notify them of employment opportunities. Because employers interested in hiring will often notify the union, some members of Local 16 will call the union office regularly when they are out of work.

On March 19, 1987, Polk filed the first of four administrative charges of race discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. He was issued a "right to sue" letter on May 16, 1988. On August 3, he filed suit in district court challenging Local 16's operation of informal job referrals as discriminatory. Polk's claims were based on Local 16's alleged refusal to refer him for employment.

In his original complaint, Polk alleged that the union discriminated against him on the basis of race, in violation of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983 and 2000e et seq., and age, in violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C. § 623(c). Polk also claimed that the union breached the collective bargaining agreement, but this charge was later dropped. Two years after the original complaint was filed, a second amended complaint was filed August 24, 1990, raising a charge of retaliation in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3.

On March 3, 1989, Local 16 moved for summary judgment. Polk countered this motion on March 17 with the first of many requests for extensions of time. On April 14, Polk received an extension of thirty days after the completion of discovery to respond to Local 16's summary judgment motion. This would prove to delay resolution of this case for years.

On January 28, 1992, the district court referred this case to a magistrate for consideration. The magistrate ordered that discovery be completed by May 18 and that Polk reply to the summary judgment motion by June 18. On May 8, Polk filed a second motion to extend time which was granted, requesting that the discovery deadline be extended until August 1, 1992.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

On July 28, Polk sought and received a third extension, allowing him until August 15 to complete depositions and until September 15 to respond to the summary judgment motion. Then, on September 28, the magistrate granted a fourth extension and required Polk to respond by October 23. At this time, Polk was being represented by new counsel who then filed for a fifth extension of time, until November 2. On that date, Polk sought and was granted a sixth extension, asking to be permitted to respond by November 6. Finally, on November 13, one week after Polk's final extension of time had expired, he filed a memorandum opposing summary judgment.

2 Local 16 moved to strike Polk's opposition to summary judgment because it was filed late, or in the alternative to strike the accompanying affidavit of Joseph Celli. By way of response to this motion, Polk sought a seventh extension of time, which was not granted. On December 14, two weeks late, Polk filed a memorandum opposing the motion to strike. On December 16, 1993, [FN1] the magistrate granted Local 16's motion to strike the affidavit and recommended that summary judgment be granted in Local 16's favor.

> FN1. No explanation is offered in either party's brief or the record for the one year lapse between the filing of these motions and the magistrate's decision.

Polk again moved for an extension of time (until January 6, 1994) to file objections to the magistrate's report and recommendation. Despite receiving this extension, however, Polk did not file objections until January 10, 1994, having misconstrued Civil Procedure Rule 6(e) as giving him three additional days. The district court, having already prepared an order adopting the magistrate's recommendation, scheduled a hearing on whether to accept Polk's untimely objections. The court found that Polk had not "presented an acceptable reason for filing the objection late." Nevertheless, the court addressed Polk's objections, which went to the striking of Joseph Celli's affidavit:

> Mr. Celli was not listed as a witness in response to Defendant's interrogatory asking for the identification of every fact witness that Plaintiff intended to call at trial and describe in detail the subject and substance of the testimony.... Plaintiff states that Mr. Celli's affidavit should be considered because he only learned of Mr. Celli's existence prior to filing a response to Defendant's motion for summary judgment. The Court agrees with the Magistrate Judge that Mr. Celli's affidavit should not be considered. Defendant had a right to rely on Plaintiff's witness list.

Without the Celli affidavit, the district court found that there was no genuine issue of material fact and granted summary judgment for Local 16. Polk filed a timely notice of appeal on March 4, 1994.

On appeal, Polk argues that the district court abused its discretion by striking Celli's affidavit. Polk contends that no request to supplement had been made prior to the motion to strike and that witness lists need not be disclosed at the discovery stage. Polk maintains that the district court's failure to consider the affidavit was clear error. He then argues that, when considered in the light most favorable to him, summary judgment was inappropriate because there are genuine issues of material fact.

We review a grant of summary judgment de novo. Moore v. Holbrook, 2 F.3d 697, 698 (6th Cir. 1993). Summary judgment is proper only if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). All evidence is viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986).

3 In United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947, 949-50 (6th Cir. 1981), this Court held that failure to file timely objections to a magistrate's report waives a party's right to appeal from the district court's decision to adopt the magistrate's report. See also Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 142 (1985) (approving Walters rule); Kelly v. Withrow, 25 F.3d 363, 365 (6th Cir. 1994). However, the Walters rule is procedural, not jurisdictional-- any default may thus be excused in the interests of justice. Thomas, 474 U.S. at 155; Kent v. Johnson, 821 F.2d 1220, 1222-23 (6th Cir. 1987). "This court has also concluded that when, as here, a district court considers untimely objections, the justifications for enforcing the Walters rule dissipate." O'Neal v. Morris, 3 F.3d 143, 144-45 (6th Cir. 1993) (citing Patterson v. Mintzes, 717 F.2d 284, 286 (6th Cir. 1983)). Here, the district court addressed Polk's objections to the magistrate's report only after noting that it was not required to do so. Thus, Walters will not serve as a bar to appellate review in this case.

Joseph Celli's affidavit states that he has personal knowledge of Local 16's practice of referring cement masons. Celli's affidavit claims that Local 16's business manager regularly refers members for jobs and informs contractors of members' availability. It also says that as a general business practice, contractors request referrals from Local 16 and that Local 16 regularly refers union members for jobs. Finally, it relates that Local 16's business manager considers construction to be a "young man's game."

A district court may sanction a party for discovery violations in many ways, including dismissing the lawsuit or entering a default judgment. Bank One of Cleveland, N.S. v. Abbe, 916 F.2d 1067, 1073 (6th Cir. 1990). The rules specifically provide for "striking out pleadings or parts thereof." Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(C). Orders imposing sanctions under Rule 37 are reviewable for an abuse of discretion. National Hockey League v. Metropolitan Hockey Club, 427 U.S. 639 (1976).

> Among the factors to be considered in reviewing the imposition of sanctions for an abuse of discretion, the appellate court should consider: (1) whether the adversary was prejudiced by the [sanctioned] party's failure to cooperate in discovery, (2) whether the [sanctioned] party was warned that failure to cooperate could lead to [such a sanction], and (3) whether less drastic sanctions were imposed or considered before dismissal was ordered.

4 Taylor v. Medtronics, 861 F.2d 980, 986 (6th Cir. 1988) (citing Regional Refuse Systems v. Inland Reclamation Co., 842 F.2d 150, 155 (6th Cir. 1988)).

Considering the above factors, we find no prejudice to Local 16 and no advance warning to Polk; indeed, the court had been quite lenient to that point concerning timeliness. Further, given the lapse of a year between the time Local 16's motion to strike was filed and granted, it certainly could have sought to depose Celli informally despite the discovery period closing. Local 16 concedes that occasionally it refers members to jobs, but claims it is under no duty to do so. Celli's affidavit goes directly to that point; it alleges that Local 16 makes a practice of referrals and concludes with a statement about construction being a "young man's game." Celli's affidavit does raise a material issue.

We conclude that striking Celli's affidavit was an abuse of discretion, and that when it is considered, Polk has raised a genuine issue of material fact. Summary judgment was thus inappropriate in this case and we therefore REVERSE.

Re: Conwood Co., et al. vs. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We received "Plaintiffs' Initial Disclosure Of 'Field Personnel' Trial Witnesses."

We are writing to confirm that no third-paty witnesses were identified by Plaintiffs in their disclosure as required by the Court – i.e., "convenience store owners, managers, and employees, and others who may have directly, personally observed 'in the field' activity which Conwood alleges to be anticompetitive." Order of May 11, 1999.

If we do not hear from you by the end of the day today we will proceed on the basis that there are no third-party witnesses within the categories identified in the Court's May 11 Order.

Very truly yours,

Chris Athanasia

Re: Conwood Co., et al. v. United States Tobacco Co., et al.

Gentlemen:

We have your letter of 11 a.m. this morning. You indicate that, unless you receive a response today, you will make certain assumptions about plaintiffs' position and case. As you know, it is not always feasible to respond the same day a letter is sent. In the future we think neither side should assume anything if a letter is not responded to the same day it is sent.

We believe plaintiffs' field witness disclosure is self-explanatory. Nonetheless, to avoid confusion, we confirm that all non-party field personnel plaintiffs presently intend to call in their case-in-chief have been deposed (whether noticed by plaintiffs or defendants). Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify and supplement their disclosure as our investigation continues. Plaintiffs also reserve the right to call additional non-party field personnel in rebuttal.

Because we received no disclosure of field personnel trial witnesses from defendants yesterday, we understand that defendants have no such witnesses in support of their counterclaims.

Finally, this letter will confirm my recent conversation with Jed Goldfarb. Mr. Goldfarb called Monday seeking an extension for interrogatory answers due the same day. Pursuant to his request, we agreed to extend the deadline until this afternoon.

Please do not hesitate to call if you would like to discuss any of these matters.

Sincerely,

Neil Gorsuch /BAO

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL.	PLAINTIFFS
v.	NO. 5:98CV-108-R
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the Magistrate Judge on October 13, 1999 for a telephonic status conference.

PARTICIPANTS:

FOR THE PLAINTIFF: Mark Hanson, Ben Powell, and David Simpson, counsel.

FOR THE DEFENDANT: Neal Stoll, Chris Athanasia, James Keyte, Martha Weiss, and John Reed, counsel.

Plaintiff Conwood raised one issue at the teleconference which will be dealt with by separate order. Defendant UST raised two issues at the teleconference and rulings were orally announced.

On September 29, 1999, UST requested certain information about plaintiff's experts that UST contends it needs in order to be fully prepared to depose those experts. Plaintiff responded that the information could be sent to defendant by October 15, 1999, at the latest.

In its second issue, defendant sought clarification that 45 declarations from non-party retailers, produced by plaintiff after the deadline for identifying trial witnesses, will not be offered in plaintiff's case-in-chief.

The following rulings were orally announced at the teleconference.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

1) Plaintiff shall produce the requested information regarding its experts no later than Friday, October 15, 1999. If the information can be produced earlier, plaintiff is encouraged to do so.

2) Plaintiff clearly stated that it would not be offering the declarations from the 45 non-party retailers in its case-in-chief but would reserve them for its rebuttal case, if necessary.

3) The next teleconference is scheduled for Wednesday, October 27, 1999 at 2:00 p.m., EDT. Plaintiff shall initiate the teleconference.

MOTION OF DEFENDANTS FOR LEAVE TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Pursuant to LR 7.1, Defendants seek leave to file the attached supplemental memorandum in support of their motion for summary judgment. The supplemental memorandum is necessary and appropriate because of Conwood's recent introduction of its Retail Incentive Program, an action that is highly relevant to its claims that a similar program of USTC is unlawful.

A tendered order directing the Clerk to accept the attached memorandum for filing is attached hereto.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO STRIKE AFFIDAVITS FILED BY PLAINTIFFS IN SUPPORT OF THEIR OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

USTC moved this Court to strike certain affidavits offered by Conwood in support of its opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment. In its moving papers, USTC established that evidence that cannot be offered at trial by Conwood cannot support Conwood's opposition to summary judgment. See Def. Mem. at 2-3. USTC also established that this includes affidavits of affiants that cannot testify at trial. See id. As demonstrated again below, Conwood's affiants cannot testify at trial. Thus, the affidavits must be excluded as support for Conwood's opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment.

While Conwood correctly points out that their case has two parts, the case in chief and the rebuttal, Conwood fails to establish that the affiants could testify in either part. With respect to Conwood's case in chief, as Conwood correctly concedes, the affiants cannot testify since Conwood did not list them as witnesses pursuant to Magistrate Judge Moyer's May 11, 1999 Order.

See Pl. Mem. at 4-5. Conwood's only alternative -- and the focus of their opposition papers – is to attempt to qualify the affiants to testify as rebuttal witnesses. As explained below, however, Conwood's own description of the testimony that the affiants are competent to give clearly indicates that the affiants could only have been case in chief witnesses -- not rebuttal witnesses.

Thus, the affiants cannot testify in either part of Conwood's case. It necessarily follows, then, that their affidavits must be excluded from consideration on summary judgment.

Conwood also argues that whether or not an affiant will actually testify at trial, an affiant need only be competent to testify in the abstract. See id. at 3-4. This argument, too, is unsupported by any applicable case law and, at bottom, does not address the underlying issue raised by USTC -- evidence that cannot be used at trial cannot be used to oppose summary judgment, the very purpose of which is to determine whether there are issues present which require decision if the case is tried.

Finally, in what has become a matter of routine in this case, Conwood responds to USTC's motion to strike by rearguing its case on the merits, including the wild claim that the affidavits in question "corroborate[] and amplif[y]" record evidence, including purported Conwood employee declarations that Conwood -- tellingly -- did not even attempt to introduce as evidence in support of its opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment.[1] As demonstrated quite clearly by USTC and by the retailer affiants themselves, however, Conwood's affidavits do not "corroborate"

[1] Conwood also refers inexplicably to testimony from "another twenty-six such non-party witnesses," Pl. Mem. at 1, apparently including the non-party retailers called as witnesses by USTC, all of whom testified that they make all decisions concerning product, rack and POS selection and placement in their stores. Further, Conwood refers to testimony from "ten former UST sales representatives," apparently ignoring the highly relevant distinction between unauthorized activities and activities that are authorized, or even directed, by USTC's retail customers.

16diii002533

or "amplify" anything. Instead, they simply highlight the wide gap between the illusion Conwood wishes to create to survive summary judgment and the reality established by the actual record evidence -- i.e., the illusion of a rabid USTC sales force tearing down display racks and POS at every turn, and the reality of a modernized, responsive sales force adapting to the ever-changing retail environment and responding to the requests, needs, and desires of its retail customers in that environment.

I. AS A THRESHOLD MATTER, CONWOOD'S PROFFERED RETAILER "WITNESSES" ARE NOT PROPER REBUTTAL WITNESSES

As set forth in USTC's moving papers, on May 11, 1999, this Court ordered the parties to disclose by September 21, 1999 those field personnel witnesses "who have alleged direct personal knowledge of UST's 'in the field' anticompetitive behavior." May 11, 1999 Order at 2-3 (Dkt. 100). The purpose of this Court's May 11, 1999 Order was to provide the parties with a fair opportunity to depose those persons intended to be called as trial witnesses. On September 21, 1999, Conwood failed to disclose a single retail witness as a live trial witness pursuant to Magistrate Judge Moyer's Order.

As Conwood indicates in its opposition papers, USTC immediately sought clarification from Conwood, and Conwood represented to USTC that, in fact, no retailers would be called as live trial witnesses to establish Conwood's case in chief. Upon receipt of the retailer affidavits at issue, which were sprung on USTC on October 7, 1999, USTC raised the issue with Magistrate Judge Moyer.[2] During the telephonic conference, Magistrate Judge Moyer concluded

[2] Previously, USTC had sought discovery of witness statements procured by Conwood in order to conduct full and adequate discovery. Conwood asserted the work product doctrine and avoided disclosure of even the identity of those retailers who had given statements to Conwood.

16diii002534

that, because none of the retailers were disclosed in accordance with the Court's May 11, 1999 Order, none of the retailers could be called by Conwood during its case in chief.[3]

In response to USTC's motion to strike, Conwood relies principally on the unsupportable assertion that the retailer affiants in question may be called as rebuttal witnesses. This assertion is absurd. Conwood cannot claim on one had that the affidavits are affirmative evidence of an alleged "systematic campaign" to exclude rivals -- essentially Conwood's entire case -- and on the other hand claim that the affiants are proper rebuttal witnesses. This is hornbook law:

> The plaintiff who knows that the defendant means to contest an issue that is germane to the prima facie case . . . must put in his evidence on the issue as part of his case in chief. Otherwise the plaintiff could reverse the order of proof, in effect requiring the defendants to put in their evidence before the plaintiff put in his.

Braun v. Lorillard, Inc., 84 F.3d 230, 237 (7th Cir. 1996) (citations omitted); Ellis v. Ficano, 73 F.3d 361, 1995 WL 764127, *16 (6th Cir.) (affirming district court's refusal to allow plaintiff to call two rebuttal witnesses not listed in pretrial order because it was "no secret" that defendants would proceed as they did); Fashauer v. New Jersey Transit, 57 F.3d 1269, 1287 (3d Cir. 1995) (affirming district court's refusal to allow plaintiff to call rebuttal witness not listed in pretrial order because plaintiff was improperly trying to "get the last shot at the jury"); Apex Oil v. Clark Oil, 958 F.2d 243, 245 (8th Cir. 1992) (affirming district court's refusal to allow plaintiff to call previously undisclosed trial witness because "plaintiff can make no reasonable claim of ignorance as to defendant's theory.") (citations omitted).

[3] Although Conwood cites Magistrate Judge Moyer's Order arising out of the October 13, 1999 telephonic conference, see Pl. Mem. at Ex. D, Conwood fails to disclose to this Court that Magistrate Judge Moyer unequivocally held that Conwood would not be allowed to call undisclosed retail witnesses in support of their case in chief. Indeed, Conwood readily ceded this point and represented to Judge Moyer that no retail witness would be called by Conwood during its case in chief.

There is no doubt that the content of the proffered affidavits are germane to Conwood's prima facie case. Indeed, notwithstanding that the affidavits have been exposed as, at best, artful draftings, Conwood boasts that the affidavits "recount[] defendants' systematic campaign to exclude smaller rivals from the moist snuff market." Pl. Mem. at 1. There also is no doubt that Conwood knows USTC means to contest this issue. Like the plaintiff in Braun, Conwood cannot simply reverse the order of proof by offering these witnesses on rebuttal. If Conwood intended to call retailers as witnesses, they would be part of Conwood's case in chief and therefore were required to be disclosed by this Court's May 11, 1999 Order. Accordingly, Conwood's roll-the-dice gamble on non-disclosure to avoid discovery should not pay off.

II. BECAUSE CONWOOD CANNOT CALL THE AFFIANTS AS WITNESSES AT TRIAL, THE AFFIDAVITS SHOULD BE STRICKEN FROM THE RECORD ON SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Conwood next argues that Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e) requires only that an affiant be "competent" to testify in the abstract, and therefore the affidavits at issue here should be considered by this Court on summary judgment. As demonstrated by USTC in its moving papers, however, this is not the law. Indeed, because Conwood cannot offer the affiants as witnesses at trial -- either during Conwood's case in chief or on rebuttal -- the affidavits should be stricken on summary judgment.

There can be no clearer statement of the rationale underlying Rule 56(e)'s competency requirement in this context than that given by the court in Chappell v. Bradley, 834 F. Supp. 1030 (N.D. Ill. 1993):

> If the plaintiffs have no intention of offering the evidence at trial it would of course not be admissible. If the witness is not disclosed . . . he is not competent to testify.

16diii002536

> Since the witnesses were not disclosed, the appropriate remedy is to strike the affidavits.

Id. at 1033 (emphasis added). Conwood's attempt to distinguish this case as a case involving expert witnesses and the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 is a non-argument. It does nothing to address the simple and undisputed facts that (1) Conwood was required by this Court to disclose its field witnesses; and (2) Conwood did not disclose these retailers as filed witnesses. "Since the witnesses were not disclosed, the appropriate remedy is to strike the affidavits."

Conwood does not and cannot cite a single case in which a party has disavowed any intention to call a witness in support of its case in chief and then is permitted to rely on an affidavit from that witness to survive summary judgment. Moreover, the cases cited by Conwood in support of its inventive "competent in the abstract" theory are either wholly inapposite or in fact support USTC's motion to strike. In Ryder Automotive Carrier Group, Inc. v. General Teamsters Sales & Service And Indust. Union, 124 F.3d 199 (Table), 1997 WL 540893 (6th Cir. Sept. 2, 1997), for example, the affidavits in question were not affidavits concerning the merits of the proponent's claims. Rather, the affidavits concerned the issue of the parent-subsidiary affiliation of the defendant relevant only to the issue of whether the presented claim would be subject to an arbitration clause, an issue to be decided by the court. Accordingly, that case is not applicable here.

In Banco de Espana v. Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 114 F.2d 438 (2d Cir. 1940), the court denied plaintiff's motion to strike and considered the affidavit of an ambassador who was immune from any requirement of testifying, but the court did so precisely because the ambassador was free to testify at trial, and thus competent. The court reasoned that whether or not the ambassador would exercise his privilege of immunity, the relevant question was whether the ambassador could testify. Moreover, the court used an analogy to an affidavit submitted by an expert witness to illustrate the point:

> Whatever privilege the Ambassador himself or the government had as to his testimony, plaintiff would be unable to prevent him from surrendering it. A bona fide affidavit to support a summary judgment must necessarily be a statement of the facts which the moving party knows and is able to substantiate at the trial. Here the Ambassador could testify at trial to the facts he has set forth without let or hindrance of the plaintiff. There is no more occasion to assume that he did not intend to substantiate his affidavit with his testimony, should that become necessary, than there is to believe that the legal experts who executed affidavits in behalf of the plaintiff would not be willing to repeat their statements at a formal trial.

Id. at 445 (emphasis added). Thus, Banco de Espana supports USTC's motion to strike the retailer affidavits proffered by Conwood because, unlike the ambassador, the issue here is not merely that the affiants could refuse to testify. The issue is that the affiants cannot testify in support of Conwood's case because they were not disclosed by Conwood at the appropriate time as required by this Court.[4]

Conwood's citation to case law concerning the admissibility of affidavits by those persons not included on a witness list also misses the point. The issue here does not concern a trial witness list. The issue here concerns an Order by this Court to disclose witnesses in order to provide a fair opportunity for discovery. Indeed, the case cited by Conwood expressly notes that witness

[4] Conwood's feeble argument that USTC somehow argues otherwise with respect to its counterclaims is unfounded. See Pl. Mem. at 5-6, 7 n.3. In opposition to Conwood's partial motion for summary judgment, which claimed that USTC did not disclose any field witnesses, USTC merely pointed out that it can and will prove its counterclaims with documents and testimony already on the record, evidence that already has been disclosed to Conwood, and already has been subject to full cross examination. To the extent USTC would attempt to offer the affidavit of a retailer that it did not disclose by September 21, 1999, that affidavit -- like Conwood's here -- would be inadmissible. For example, if USTC were to offer the supplemental affidavit of Vicki Sharp, which states that "the Conwood representative then sawed off the slots containing Conwood product from the USTC rack with a hacksaw" without permission, the affidavit would properly be stricken.

lists, unlike mandatary disclosures, can be modified and thus persons not on a witness list may still testify at trial. Thus, in all instances, the relevant inquiry remains whether the affiant would be allowed to testify at trial. See, e.g., Taylor v. St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., 746 F. Supp. 50, 53 (D. Kan. 1990) (allowing affidavit because there is no strict requirement that an affiant appear on a witness list noting that "as practical matter, witness lists tend to be modifiable"); see also Polk v. Local 16, Int'l Union Bricklayers and Allied Craftsman, 53 F.3d 332 (Table), No. 94-3272, 1995 WL 241999 at *4 (6th Cir. Apr.25, 1995) (inappropriate to strike affidavit where moving party had a full year to seek discovery and thus was not prejudiced by the non-disclosure).

Here, in sharp contrast to Taylor and Polk, the affiants in question cannot testify at trial in support of Conwood's case, not because they were simply left off a trial witness list, but because they were not disclosed for purposes of fair and adequate discovery at the appropriate time as required by this Court. See May 11, 1999 Order. In such cases, the appropriate remedy is to strike the proffered affidavits. The court so held in Harris v. AC & S, Inc., 915 F. Supp. 1420 (S.D. Ind. 1995). In that case, a magistrate judge had entered an order ("GOAL") requiring disclosures in order to provide the parties with an opportunity for written and depositional discovery. Undisclosed affidavits offered in opposition to summary judgment were stricken by the court:

> Bearing in mind the objectives of the GOAL and the associated remedy, to provide "any affected defendant . . . a timely opportunity . . . to conduct written and depositional discovery concerning such . . . evidence," (GOAL at 15), this Court will disregard affidavit product identification where the relative timing effectively foreclosed the affected Defendant's opportunity to examine a witness' memory of a product at deposition.

Id. at 1431. There can be no doubt that, here, Conwood's timing in introducing its affidavits "effectively foreclosed" USTC's opportunity to depose these witnesses in violation of the letter and spirit of Magistrate Judge Moyer's May 11, 1999 Order.

Accordingly, because Conwood did not disclose these witnesses, and because Conwood cannot support its opposition to USTC's motion for summary judgment by offering testimony that will not be admitted at trial, USTC's motion to strike the affidavits at issue should be granted.

III. CONWOOD'S PROFFERED AFFIDAVITS DEMONSTRATE THAT THERE ARE NO GENUINE ISSUES OF FACT TO BE DECIDED, ONLY A QUESTION OF LAW FOR THIS COURT TO DECIDE ON SUMMARY JUDGMENT

In its opposition papers, Conwood also chose to argue the merits of its proffered affidavits, and its case. Thus, Conwood claims that its retail affidavits are evidence of a "systematic campaign to exclude smaller rivals from the moist snuff market." Pl. Mem. at 1. Conwood further contends that its Section 2 claim based on this purported systematic campaign to exclude rivals is unaffected by the now completely undisputed fact that USTC sales representatives act at the request and under the direction of its retail customers. Indeed, Conwood boldly asserts that it is a violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act for USTC to do so. As USTC demonstrated in the appropriate forum, however, this is not the law. See Reply Memorandum In Support Of Defendants' Motion For Summary Judgment at 16. Conwood's statement to the contrary reveals what has always been at the bottom of this case -- i.e., a question of law for this Court as to whether providing better merchandise, better displays, better advertisements, better incentive programs, and better all-around service in response to the needs of one's customers can constitute a violation of the antitrust laws.

16diii002540

Perhaps recognizing the irony in invoking the antitrust laws to attack competition itself, Conwood retreats to the argument that this Court may not resolve factual disputes at summary judgment. Pl. Mem. at 7. USTC does not dispute this fundamental tenent of civil procedure. USTC's motion to strike and its accompanying supplemental affidavits, however, are not meant to and do not create an issue of fact. Rather, they are intended to ensure that all eyes are kept on the ball in deciding USTC's motion for summary judgment. Thus, the supplemental affidavits plainly illustrate a simple fact central to this case: what Conwood's lawyers call "exclusionary" and illegal rack, POS, and/or product removals are actually procompetitive and perfectly lawful responses by USTC to the needs of its retail customers. Or, in the words of these retail customers:

- "[T]he U.S. Tobacco Company ('USTC') representative had my permission to put a new USTC rack in the store and to display all of the moist snuff. In fact, I specifically requested this particular rack from USTC after seing one displayed in another store." Supplemental Affidavit of Sarkis Abduchai.

- "At all times, I used a Conwood rack to display Conwood moist snuff products. CAP did not require the exclusive use of a USTC rack. . . . I specifically gave [the USTC representative] permission to move the USTC rack because it was in the best interest of my business. . . . This was strictly my decision." Supplemental Affidavit of Teresa Beavers.

- "In March 1998, I decided to place all moist snuff products behind the counter in one rack supplied by USTC. I decided to use a USTC rack because USTC is the leading moist snuff manufacturer in the moist snuff category. There was no agreement to this effect. Sometime later in 1998, however, I decided to move the moist snuff rack out in front of the counter. This change made the moist snuff directly accessible to customers. At this time, I telephoned all of the moist snuff manufacturers to let them know of this change in the store. Conwood never responded. . . . After a short period of time, I noticed that several brands of the moist snuff were not selling and decided to eliminate such brands. After doing so, the store had no need for four different moist snuff racks, so I decided to only use two USTC racks instead. . . . I chose the USTC racks because the racks are nice looking, clean, and easy to use. In addition, USTC provides the best service to our store and does not object to competitors placing header cards above their respective slots in the racks. There is no agreement that I will only use USTC racks." Supplemental Affidavit of Ross Gwin.

- "I had developed a planogram to govern the reset that was strictly based on moist snuff movement figures. At my request, the U.S. Tobacco Company sales representatives assisted me in the development of this planogram. My door has always been open to any of the moist snuff sales representatives who wish to make suggestions regarding the planogram. No sales representatives from Conwood has ever called or met with me in this regard.... I instructed the U.S. Tobacco Company sales representative to reset the moist snuff section of the store in accordance with the planogram that I had approved for the U-Pak-It chain.... After the U.S. Tobacco Company sales representative completed the reset of the moist snuff section, I reviewed the reset to ensure that it was done in accordance with the planogram." Supplemental Affidavit of John Bradley Lemoine.

- "Some time ago, the USTC sales representative that services this store called on the store to place new product extensions on the USTC rack. I never questioned whether this representative had permission to do so because I know that someone from our store had in fact ordered these new product extensions for the store." Supplemental Affidavit of Vicki Sharp.

- "If any brands of Conwood products were deleted from the store that day, I know from the general pattern of business with U.S. Tobacco Company that such products were deleted because [the store manager] had determined that these products were not selling well enough and not because the U.S. Tobacco Company sales representative deleted them without permission. I have never had such a problem with any U.S. Tobacco Company employee...." Supplemental Affidavit of Randall Macdonald.

- "I would like to clarify that the U.S. Tobacco Company ('USTC') representative had my permission to reset the moist snuff section as described in the Conwood Declaration. In fact, I personally assisted this representative with the reset.... The extra USTC product was stored in a USTC storage unit that sat on top of the USTC rack. This storage unit was provided to me by the USTC representative that same day. I am very pleased with this arrangement." Supplemental Affidavit of Wayne Smart.

It is not unlawful to help one's customers in their lawful business activities, and, as a matter of law, it cannot be a "dirty trick" to act with retailer authorization. USTC's motion to strike should be granted because Conwood's failure to comply with this Court's Order cannot be used to avoid proper discovery and attempt to create factual disputes that, upon examination, do not exist.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that this Court strike the affidavits from third-party retail personnel offered by Conwood in support of their opposition to Defendants' motion for summary judgment.

Civil Action No.
5:98CV-108-R

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE "SUPPLEMENTAL" BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants' motion for (partial) summary judgment is a shifting target. When their opening arguments are discredited, defendants promptly offer new ones in lengthy reply briefs and "supplemental" pleadings. In fact, defendants have so far filed some seven pleadings and 137 pages of briefs related to their motion for summary judgment. The latest, a "Supplemental Memorandum in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment" (Jan. 10, 2000), contends that Conwood has introduced a retail incentive program practically identical to their own Customer Alliance Program ("CAP"). UST submits that Conwood's action (somehow) insulates its CAP program from legal challenge -- notwithstanding evidence that UST is a monopolist and its CAP program (unlike Conwood's) has the purpose and effect of excluding rivals. Defendants' brief, however, rests on a mistaken premise, omits and mischaracterizes the pertinent facts, and makes a plainly erroneous legal argument.

Discussion

It is understandable why UST continues to fight so hard over its CAP program. According to the view of antitrust law defendants recently espoused in their (first) reply brief, Conwood must state an "independent" antitrust violation, such as a Clayton Act Section 3 exclusive dealing claim, before being permitted to pursue a Sherman Act Section 2 monopolization claim. See Reply Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 18-26 (Dec. 23, 1999). UST's CAP program concededly covers 80% of its moist snuff volume. Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ J. at 52 (Dec. 9, 1999). Accordingly, if CAP contracts are even arguably exclusionary, the program presents a triable claim even under UST's (mistaken) view of the law. UST's continuing effort to convince the Court to bless CAP as a matter of law, however, fails for at least three reasons:

First, UST's fundamental premise -- that Conwood must state an "independent" antitrust violation, such as an exclusive dealing claim under the Clayton Act or a tying claim under Section 1 of the Sherman Act, before being permitted to pursue a monopolization claim under Section 2 -- is simply wrong.[1] The Sixth Circuit has held that acts violative of Section 2 "need not be in themselves independently unlawful." Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986), (internal

[1]Indeed, taken to its logical conclusion, UST reads Section 2 of the Sherman Act out of the statute books, for if a monopolist only violates Section 2 by violating some other provision of the Sherman Act, then Section 2 independently proscribes no conduct at all.

16diii002548

quotation marks and citation omitted).[2] Instead, "[r]egarding Section 2 of the Sherman Act, what matters is that the freedom to compete is restrained." Riverview Invs., Inc. v. Ottawa Community Improvement Corp., 769 F.2d 324, 328 (6th Cir. 1985) (reversing summary judgment). Court after court (and UST's expert witness, Professor Scheffman) has found that a monopolist may restrain the freedom to compete, and thus violate Section 2, in many and diverse ways having nothing to do with other, "independent" antitrust violations.[3]

Second, UST's assertion that its CAP program and Conwood's incentive plan are practically identical is demonstrably false. UST pays retailers to exclude competitors' racks and point of sale advertising ("POS"). By contrast, Conwood pays to exclude no one; it merely offers incentives to retailers who agree to include Conwood racks and products.

Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849, 853-54 (6th Cir. 1979).

16diii002549

UST uses CAP as a means of achieving what it calls "exclusive vending" -- i.e., the elimination of rival racks and attached POS and the forced incorporation of some (but not all) competing brands into the UST rack, under UST control, with only UST advertising affixed. In "worksheets" (which UST curiously cannot find for most of its accounts), defendants record specific CAP terms and conditions agreed upon with individual retail chains. Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 26. Scores of these worksheets openly condition UST payments on the exclusion of Conwood racks and POS. Id. at 27 & n.38.[4] In cases where worksheets are not used, UST sales representatives are permitted to use their "discretion" to determine retailer compliance and eligibility for payment under CAP. The evidence shows that they use this "discretion" to enforce exclusive UST vending. Id. As one UST sales representative put it, CAP "has become a great incentive . . . for the elimination of competitive products." USTC/CWD 825801.[5]

Further, under the terms of the generic CAP form contract itself, retailers are paid to fence competitors out of roughly 80% of the available space. UST expressly dictates that share of retail fixture (or space) must be allocated according to each manufacturer's share of market ("SOF=SOM"). Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 27.[6] UST thereby seeks to lock in its existing market share and foreclose opportunities for rival brands seeking to grow share. UST does not even need or want 80% of the fixture space for the two brands -- Copenhagen and Skoal -- that comprise the lion's share of its sales. Instead, UST

---

[5]UST's CAP program has still other exclusionary terms nowhere found in Conwood's incentive plan. For example, CAP requires retailers to participate in all UST new brand tests or introductions, even for its "slow selling" product lines, thus ensuring that UST can exert pressure on the space available for rivals and their new products. Under CAP's most recent amendments, retailers are also paid to place moist snuff products behind the counter in a non-self service ("NSS") environment as part of what UST has dubbed its "New World Order" strategy. Chiaradio Dep. Exh. 26 (1999 CAP Contract Amendment offering money to any retailer who adopts UST's NSS program); USTC/CWD 416412 (Chiaradio describing NSS shelving system as "another tool for us to have in our arsenal to lock up space in the NWO"). UST, like major retailers and the Federal Trade Commission, realizes that a NSS confers competitive advantages on dominant tobacco manufacturers and disadvantages smaller rivals. See, e.g., Carlson Dep. at 125-26; Chiaradio Dep. at 311; FTC Report at 23.

[6]The need for allocation of space is created in the first instance by UST, when it removes competitors' racks as part of "exclusive vending." Once competitors no longer have their own racks with their own facings, they become competitors vying for slots in the UST rack, and UST progressively whittles down the number of facings made available for rivals through its "fact based" campaign to convince retailers that products that have not yet gained large market shares (virtually all brands save UST's) should be eliminated. See, e.g., Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Sum. J. at 16-28.

deliberately fills much of its space with slow-moving products (e.g., Cherry flavored snuff) simply to elbow out the competition. Id. at 20-21 quoting, inter alia, USTC/CWD 416416 (UST stocks slow-movers to "gain space which our competitors cannot get"). UST alone can win such a concession, moreover, because of its massive market power. Id. at 18. Apparently, even UST now recognizes that SOF=SOM is impermissibly exclusionary; in its most recent amendments to the CAP contract, written after this case was filed, all references to the formula were dropped.

Where UST's program seeks to exclude, Conwood's program does nothing of the kind. It nowhere seeks to eliminate rival racks and POS and it nowhere prescribes the share of fixture or POS available to competitors. Nor could Conwood plausibly convince a retailer to agree to such terms, with a bare 14% market share compared to UST's 80% share. Instead, as UST's exhibit shows on its face, Conwood's program provides incentives only for retailers to include Conwood's racks along with UST's. Supp'l Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. Exh. 1. The evidence establishes, moreover, that Conwood implemented its incentive program in response to UST's successful exclusion through CAP, among other tactics. Initially, retailers allowed all manufacturers to use their own racks. See Harold Price Decl. ¶ 7 (Swedish Match Vice President). After UST's predatory campaign of exclusion, however, Conwood was forced, in effect, to pay stores to reverse UST's exclusion and permit Conwood again to house its own products in its own racks with its own POS. See, e.g., R. Davis Dep. at 120; G. Ellis Dep. at 164-65; T. Williams Dep. at 40. Thus, if UST wants to compare the programs, the comparison is between Conwood's legitimate program to include its racks and UST's illegitimate program to exclude rival racks.

Third, UST's (implicit) suggestion that Conwood's adoption of an incentive program immunizes CAP from attack lacks any legal support. To the contrary, it is (again) long-settled law, undisputed by UST, that "[b]ehavior that might otherwise not be of concern to the antitrust laws -- or that might even be viewed as procompetitive -- can take on exclusionary connotations when practiced by a monopolist." Eastman Kodak v. Image Technical Servs., 504 U.S. 451, 488 (1992) (White, J., dissenting). Thus, the fact that Conwood, with 14% of the market, has an incentive program offers no automatic protection even to an identical program offered by an 80% monopolist. Instead, any discussion of "potentially legitimate business justifications against what plaintiffs contend are exclusionary effects are fact-bound questions that generally cannot be resolved on summary judgment," but must be argued to the jury at trial. United States v. Microsoft, Nos. Civ. A. 98-1232, 98-1233 (TPJ), 1998 WL 614485, at *21, *22 (D.D.C. Sept. 14, 1998); Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 483 ("Factual questions exist . . . about the validity and sufficiency of each claimed justification, making summary judgment inappropriate.").

16diii002553

Conclusion

Conwood respectfully submits that nothing in defendants' latest filing alters the conclusion that summary judgment remains inappropriate in this case.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE "SUPPLEMENTAL" BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants' motion for (partial) summary judgment is a shifting target. When their opening arguments are discredited, defendants promptly offer new ones in lengthy reply briefs and "supplemental" pleadings. In fact, defendants have so far filed some seven pleadings and 137 pages of briefs related to their motion for summary judgment. The latest, a "Supplemental Memorandum in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment" (Jan. 10, 2000), contends that Conwood has introduced a retail incentive program practically identical to their own Customer Alliance Program ("CAP"). UST submits that Conwood's action (somehow) insulates its CAP program from legal challenge -- notwithstanding evidence that UST is a monopolist and its CAP program (unlike Conwood's) has the purpose and effect of excluding rivals. Defendants' brief, however, rests on a mistaken premise, omits and mischaracterizes the pertinent facts, and makes a plainly erroneous legal argument.

Discussion

It is understandable why UST continues to fight so hard over its CAP program. According to the view of antitrust law defendants recently espoused in their (first) reply brief, Conwood must state an "independent" antitrust violation, such as a Clayton Act Section 3 exclusive dealing claim, before being permitted to pursue a Sherman Act Section 2 monopolization claim. See Reply Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 18-26 (Dec. 23, 1999). UST's CAP program concededly covers 80% of its moist snuff volume. Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ J. at 52 (Dec. 9, 1999). Accordingly, if CAP contracts are even arguably exclusionary, the program presents a triable claim even under UST's (mistaken) view of the law. UST's continuing effort to convince the Court to bless CAP as a matter of law, however, fails for at least three reasons:

First, UST's fundamental premise -- that Conwood must state an "independent" antitrust violation, such as an exclusive dealing claim under the Clayton Act or a tying claim under Section 1 of the Sherman Act, before being permitted to pursue a monopolization claim under Section 2 -- is simply wrong.[1] The Sixth Circuit has held that acts violative of Section 2 "need not be in themselves independently unlawful." Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986), (internal

[1]Indeed, taken to its logical conclusion, UST reads Section 2 of the Sherman Act out of the statute books, for if a monopolist only violates Section 2 by violating some other provision of the Sherman Act, then Section 2 independently proscribes no conduct at all.

16diii002557

quotation marks and citation omitted).[2] Instead, "[r]egarding Section 2 of the Sherman Act, what matters is that the freedom to compete is restrained." Riverview Invs., Inc. v. Ottawa Community Improvement Corp., 769 F.2d 324, 328 (6th Cir. 1985) (reversing summary judgment). Court after court (and UST's expert witness, Professor Scheffman) has found that a monopolist may restrain the freedom to compete, and thus violate Section 2, in many and diverse ways having nothing to do with other, "independent" antitrust violations.[3]

Second, UST's assertion that its CAP program and Conwood's incentive plan are practically identical is demonstrably false. UST pays retailers to exclude competitors' racks and point of sale advertising ("POS"). By contrast, Conwood pays to exclude no one; it merely offers incentives to retailers who agree to include Conwood racks and products.

Ctr., 800 F.2d at 575 (internal quotation marks omitted); (2) conduct that "'tends to impair the opportunities of rivals,'" id. (quoting Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605 n.32 (1985)); (3) conduct that "'either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way,'" id. (quoting Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 605 n.32); (4) conduct intended to raise competitors' operating costs, Forsyth v. Humana, Inc., 114 F.3d 1467, 1478 (9th Cir. 1997) (reversing summary judgment and holding that raising rivals' costs is exclusionary conduct), aff'd, 525 U.S. 299 (1999); S. Salop & D. Scheffman, Recent Advances in the Theory of Industrial Structure: Raising Rivals' Costs, AEA Papers and Proceedings (May 1983) (UST's expert discussing anticompetitive effects of raising rivals' costs); (5) conduct designed to impair the distribution of rival products and racks, Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849, 853-54 (6th Cir. 1979).

UST uses CAP as a means of achieving what it calls "exclusive vending" -- i.e., the elimination of rival racks and attached POS and the forced incorporation of some (but not all) competing brands into the UST rack, under UST control, with only UST advertising affixed. In "worksheets" (which UST curiously cannot find for most of its accounts), defendants record specific CAP terms and conditions agreed upon with individual retail chains. Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 26. Scores of these worksheets openly condition UST payments on the exclusion of Conwood racks and POS. Id. at 27 & n.38.[4] In cases where worksheets are not used, UST sales representatives are permitted to use their "discretion" to determine retailer compliance and eligibility for payment under CAP. The evidence shows that they use this "discretion" to enforce exclusive UST vending. Id. As one UST sales representative put it, CAP "has

Further, under the terms of the generic CAP form contract itself, retailers are paid to fence competitors out of roughly 80% of the available space. UST expressly dictates that share of retail fixture (or space) must be allocated according to each manufacturer's share of market ("SOF=SOM"). Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. at 27.[6] UST thereby seeks to lock in its existing market share and foreclose opportunities for rival brands seeking to grow share. UST does not even need or want 80% of the fixture space for the two brands -- Copenhagen and Skoal -- that comprise the lion's share of its sales. Instead, UST

---

[5]UST's CAP program has still other exclusionary terms nowhere found in Conwood's incentive plan. For example, CAP requires retailers to participate in all UST new brand tests or introductions, even for its "slow selling" product lines, thus ensuring that UST can exert pressure on the space available for rivals and their new products. Under CAP's most recent amendments, retailers are also paid to place moist snuff products behind the counter in a non-self service ("NSS") environment as part of what UST has dubbed its "New World Order" strategy. Chiaradio Dep. Exh. 26 (1999 CAP Contract Amendment offering money to any retailer who adopts UST's NSS program); USTC/CWD 416412 (Chiaradio describing NSS shelving system as "another tool for us to have in our arsenal to lock up space in the NWO"). UST, like major retailers and the Federal Trade Commission, realizes that a NSS confers competitive advantages on dominant tobacco manufacturers and disadvantages smaller rivals. See, e.g., Carlson Dep. at 125-26; Chiaradio Dep. at 311; FTC Report at 23.

[6]The need for allocation of space is created in the first instance by UST, when it removes competitors' racks as part of "exclusive vending." Once competitors no longer have their own racks with their own facings, they become competitors vying for slots in the UST rack, and UST progressively whittles down the number of facings made available for rivals through its "fact based" campaign to convince retailers that products that have not yet gained large market shares (virtually all brands save UST's) should be eliminated. See, e.g., Pls.' Mem. in Opp'n to Mot. for Sum. J. at 16-28.

deliberately fills much of its space with slow-moving products (e.g., Cherry flavored snuff) simply to elbow out the competition. Id. at 20-21 quoting, inter alia, USTC/CWD 416416 (UST stocks slow-movers to "gain space which our competitors cannot get"). UST alone can win such a concession, moreover, because of its massive market power. Id. at 18. Apparently, even UST now recognizes that SOF=SOM is impermissibly exclusionary; in its most recent amendments to the CAP contract, written after this case was filed, all references to the formula were dropped.

Where UST's program seeks to exclude, Conwood's program does nothing of the kind. It nowhere seeks to eliminate rival racks and POS and it nowhere prescribes the share of fixture or POS available to competitors. Nor could Conwood plausibly convince a retailer to agree to such terms, with a bare 14% market share compared to UST's 80% share. Instead, as UST's exhibit shows on its face, Conwood's program provides incentives only for retailers to include Conwood's racks along with UST's. Supp'l Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. Exh. 1. The evidence establishes, moreover, that Conwood implemented its incentive program in response to UST's successful exclusion through CAP, among other tactics. Initially, retailers allowed all manufacturers to use their own racks. See Harold Price Decl. ¶ 7 (Swedish Match Vice President). After UST's predatory campaign of exclusion, however, Conwood was forced, in effect, to pay stores to reverse UST's exclusion and permit Conwood again to house its own products in its own racks with its own POS. See, e.g., R. Davis Dep. at 120; G. Ellis Dep. at 164-65; T. Williams Dep. at 40. Thus, if UST wants to compare the programs, the comparison is between Conwood's legitimate program to include its racks and UST's illegitimate program to exclude rival racks.

Third, UST's (implicit) suggestion that Conwood's adoption of an incentive program immunizes CAP from attack lacks any legal support. To the contrary, it is (again) long-settled law, undisputed by UST, that "[b]ehavior that might otherwise not be of concern to the antitrust laws -- or that might even be viewed as procompetitive -- can take on exclusionary connotations when practiced by a monopolist." Eastman Kodak v. Image Technical Servs., 504 U.S. 451, 488 (1992) (White, J., dissenting). Thus, the fact that Conwood, with 14% of the market, has an incentive program offers no automatic protection even to an identical program offered by an 80% monopolist. Instead, any discussion of "potentially legitimate business justifications against what plaintiffs contend are exclusionary effects are fact-bound questions that generally cannot be resolved on summary judgment," but must be argued to the jury at trial. United States v. Microsoft, Nos. Civ. A. 98-1232, 98-1233 (TPJ), 1998 WL 614485, at *21, *22 (D.D.C. Sept. 14, 1998); Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 483 ("Factual questions exist . . . about the validity and sufficiency of each claimed justification, making summary judgment inappropriate.").

16diii002562

Conwood respectfully submits that nothing in defendants' latest filing alters the conclusion that summary judgment remains inappropriate in this case.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' PRETRIAL BRIEF

Introduction

Plaintiffs ("Conwood") allege that defendants ("UST") monopolized and attempted to monopolize the U.S. moist snuff market in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.[1] For decades, UST has maintained a 77%-plus share of the U.S. moist snuff market.[2] UST has used the monopoly power created by its dominant market share to effect large annual price increases -- yielding profits and margins unparalleled in American business. Instead of competing with rivals through lower prices or increased efficiency, UST has also used its monopoly power to "control competition" (its words) by means of what it calls "exclusive vending" -- in which all competing moist snuff brands are captured in a single UST distribution rack, on which UST alone may advertise. Through exclusive vending, UST

[1]Conwood also has claims for violation of the Lanham Act, the Kentucky unfair competition statute, and state tort law.

[2]UST's current share is approximately 77%. During the years that preceded the filing of this action, UST's share varied from from 85.1% in 1993 to 77.1% in 1998.

has systematically eliminated rivals' retail distribution racks, point of sale advertising ("POS"), and ultimately the opportunity to sell their products. As a result of this pervasive exclusion, Conwood has suffered damages in the amount of approximately $280 to $480 million.

Statement of Facts[3]

The parties and public have long recognized moist snuff as a separate product market. While there are other forms of smokeless tobacco, including "plug," "chew," "dry snuff," and "twist," none constrains UST's pricing power over moist snuff. Indeed, while UST has disproportionately hiked prices for moist snuff year after year, users have not switched to other forms of smokeless tobacco.

For decades, UST controlled 100% of the moist snuff market. In 1979, Conwood entered the market as UST's first real competition and brought with it a number of innovations. For example, Conwood introduced a plastic can that preserved freshness weeks longer than UST's fiberboard cans (and, thus, blunted the impact of a UST returns policy for stale product that had previously imposed ruinous costs on new entrants). Conwood provided substantially better value: it offered 20% more tobacco than UST's long-cut Skoal products. Conwood produced innovative product distribution racks and competed vigorously, often outspending its entrenched rival to do so. While permitted to compete, Conwood flourished. Its market share grew from less than 1% in 1980 to more than 10% by 1990.

[3]Some of the facts supporting Conwood's claims are described more fully in Pls' Mot. for Part. Summ. J. (Nov. 15, 1999), Pls' Reply in Support of Mot. for Partial Summ. J. (Dec. 23, 1999), and Pls' Opp. to Motion for Summ. J. (Dec. 9. 1999). Conwood incorporates these descriptions by reference.

According to internal guidelines prepared at the time, UST disregarded competitors with small market shares. But by the early 1990s, UST became alarmed at Conwood's continuing success and concluded that a "serious response" was needed. Because it did not want to erode its profit margins, however, UST decided that its "serious response" would not include competition on the merits, specifically price discounts. It concluded that "UST does not 'deal' on its product's prices, we don't have to." Instead, UST determined that it would use "our market power" to "eliminate comp[etitive] distribution," and thereby "control competition."

UST recognized that Conwood (and other competitors) succeeded best in stores where they could place their products in their own racks, with the best selection of their brands. With their own racks, UST knew that rivals could effectively advertise the price and other advantages of their products (via POS). UST also recognized that, because of pervasive government restrictions on tobacco advertising, retail distribution racks and POS (specifically the "header card" affixed permanently to the rack) were the last available means of effective communication with moist snuff consumers. Accordingly, UST began its "exclusive vending" campaign.

Through exclusive vending, UST sought to exclude rival racks from the store, bring competing brands into its own rack, and eliminate competitors' header cards and other POS. Competing brands, therefore, were merchandised in UST-controlled racks under UST advertising. Where rivals were once able to advertise at the point of sale that they offered a better value than UST, exclusive vending prevented that. After incorporating rival brands into its exclusive moist snuff vendor, moreover, UST compounded the exclusion by seeking reduction of the number of slots ("facings") allocated to rivals in the UST "exclusive vendor." While UST used different tactics, its ends remained constant: "eliminate competitive distribution," "reduce facings" for competitive products, and maintain "exclusive POS," all of which choked channels of distribution and thereby harmed competition.

Exclusive Vending by Fiat. Following corporate policy, UST sales representatives imposed exclusive vending on countless stores. They simply took rival products from their own racks, placed some in the UST vendor, and then discarded the rival rack, POS, and the excluded products. As one store employee explained, "I said [to the UST representative] why did you take that down, [Conwood] just put [its racks] up here yesterday. He said that's just my job."

According to ex-UST sales representatives (10 of whom will testify), nonparty retailers (50 of whom are available to testify), and Conwood personnel (226 of whom have given sworn statements and are available to testify), such conduct occurred regularly and systematically across the United States. UST graded employees on their success in executing exclusive vending. In a single year, Conwood lost 10,000 racks in California alone, and 3,000 racks were eliminated in Wichita, Kansas over a mere 9 month period. Nor was such conduct aimed only at Conwood. A senior executive of Swedish-Match, another UST rival, will testify that Swedish-Match was harmed by this same UST predation.

Exclusive Vending by "Permission". UST also sought "permission" to exclude rivals. As a former UST Division Manager explained, UST representatives were instructed to ask sales clerks for permission to "clean up" the moist snuff racks. UST representatives then used this or a similar ruse to remove rival racks and execute their exclusive vending plan.[4]

Along the same lines, UST offered "category management" services to effect exclusive vending. Category management, properly practiced, is a marketing strategy designed to increase the sales of an entire product category. Retailers rely on manufacturers to obtain and analyze sales data; they sometimes even delegate responsibility for an entire category to a single manufacturer, who acts as "category captain." Because of its dominant market share, UST is the only credible category captain for moist snuff. While UST acknowledges that this is a position of trust, it regularly abused that trust, employing the rubric of "category management," and its status as "category captain," not to enhance the entire moist snuff category but as merely another way to eliminate rival racks, POS, and brands. UST executives routinely admitted as much in their reports.[5]

[4]UST suggests such "permission" is a defense to the charge of unlawful monopolization. It is no such thing. As a monopolist, UST is not permitted to practice exclusion of rivals, with or without the acquiescence of retailers. See p. 11, infra (conduct barred by Section 2 need not be "independently" unlawful).

[5]E.g., "[T]hrough our category management efforts, we have been successful in eliminating numerous competitive brands from existing plan-o-grams"; "It is imperative that we continue with this Category Management action plan to eliminate competitive products."

16diii002577

Professor Robert Blattberg of Northwestern University's graduate business school, a leading expert on retailing (and specifically category management), will testify that UST distorted category management to effect exclusion in many ways, including, without limitation, by providing retailers with misleading data skewed to encourage the discontinuation of Conwood products. See Pls' Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 17-23 (Dec. 9, 1999).

Exclusive Vending by Contract. Where UST was unable to impose exclusive vending, or persuade the store employees to acquiesce to it, the company often contracted with retailers to the same effect. In fact, UST reached agreements with some of the nation's largest and most important retail chains (Wal-Mart, 7-Eleven, among others).

To take one example, in 1997 UST convinced Wal-Mart to eliminate Conwood racks, POS, along with a number of Conwood brands. In return, UST provided millions of dollars worth of services and in-kind benefits. Later, when Wal-Mart discovered that the deal hurt overall sales, UST allotted Wal-Mart millions of dollars more in rebates and promotions to make up for Wal-Mart's losses and continue the exclusion. These rebates and promotions were not offered to other retailers. In an internal e-mail, UST's National Account Manager acknowledged that the private deal succeeded in "severely cut[ting] back on [the competition's] ability to market products" and would "most certainly crush the competition."

UST also devised an incentive program, the Customer Alliance Program ("CAP"), for general use across the United States.[6] In "worksheets" used to record the specific terms and conditions applicable to each retailer (which UST curiously cannot find for most accounts), defendants expressly required exclusion of Conwood racks and POS. UST sales representatives were also permitted to use their "discretion" to determine retailer compliance and eligibility for payment under CAP. The evidence shows that they used this "discretion" to demand exclusive UST vending. As one UST sales representative put it, CAP "has become a great incentive . . . for the elimination of competitive products."

Further, under the terms of the generic CAP form contract itself, retailers were paid to conform to UST's principle that share of retail fixture (or space) must be allocated according to each manufacturer's share of market ("SOF=SOM"). Having constricted the number of available slots through its exclusive vending, UST thus added to that exclusion by locking in its existing 77% market share and rendering 77% of the slots unavailable for growing rival brands.

As nationally-recognized experts (including Professor Morton Kamien of Northwestern University) will explain, UST's exclusionary conduct resulted in higher consumer prices, lower [6]Surprisingly, UST claims that it does not know how many retailers are covered by CAP. From UST records, Conwood estimates that at least 22,000 retailers participate. UST documents confirm that 80% of its moist snuff volume is covered.

---

16diii002579

output, and fewer choices for consumers. Over the last 10 years, UST was able to raise prices an average of 8.2% per year -- more than twice the rate of inflation. In retail outlets where UST succeeded in reducing rivals' share of facings, consumers paid significantly higher prices. Where UST succeeded in eliminating Conwood racks -- as in Wal-Mart and 7-Eleven -- overall moist snuff sales fell. With exclusive vending, consumer choice and valuable consumer information (including coupons and other discounts) were also lost. As a result, and as third party retailers attest, consumers were denied information about less expensive alternatives and paid more for their moist snuff.

UST's exclusion also suppressed Conwood's growth. Where Conwood's market share grew from nothing in 1980 to more than 10% by 1990, Conwood gained just 2.9 additional market points over the last decade -- despite a record of continued innovation and investment. (Per sale, Conwood continues to invest more in retail efforts than UST. And Conwood recently helped ignite a price revolution in the industry, introducing a full line of half-price brands, including a product that competes directly with UST's flagship "natural" flavored Copenhagen brand.)

Using established econometric techniques, Professor Richard Leftwich of the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business established that Conwood continued growing (albeit at a decreased rate) through the 1990s in parts of the United States where it had already attained significant market share. However, where Conwood had not attained this "critical mass" by 1990, UST's exclusionary campaign succeeded in arresting Conwood's growth entirely. No factor other than the exclusion practiced by UST accounts for the economic evidence in this regard. Based on a consistent application of Conwood's actual growth rate in the markets it had penetrated by 1990 (growth which itself was depressed by UST's actions), to the areas in which Conwood lacked a foothold at the time UST commenced its predatory campaign, Professor Leftwich will testify that Conwood's lost profits as a consequence of UST's actions between approximately $280 and $480 million. UST has offered no alternative calculation of damages.

Questions of Fact and Law

A. CONWOOD'S CLAIMS

1. Monopolization. The elements of Conwood's monopolization claim are "(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1016 (6th Cir. 1999) (citation omitted). Conwood must prove these elements by a preponderance of the evidence.

As applied to this case, the questions will be:

- Does the national moist snuff market constitute the relevant product market?

In assessing this question, the jury may consider matters including: (i) industry perception of the market, (ii) evidence of substitution or switching, (iii) differences among consumers, (iv) distinct product characteristics, and (v) competitive conditions. See White & White, Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp. 723 F.2d 495, 501 (6th Cir. 1983); Pls' Reply in Supp. of Motion for Partial Summ. J. at 2 (Dec. 23, 1999).

- Does UST have monopoly power in the moist snuff market?

Conwood may prove monopoly power by "presenting direct evidence 'showing the exercise of actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors.'" Re/Max Int'l, 173 F.3d at 1016 (quoting Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 850 (6th Cir. 1979)). Alternatively, Conwood may prove UST's monopoly power "by showing a high market share within a defined market." Id. Anything "over two-thirds of the market . . . constitute[s] monopoly power." PSI Repair Servs., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1265 (1997).

- Did UST unlawfully maintain its monopoly power through exclusionary conduct?

"Regarding Section 2 of the Sherman Act, what matters is that the freedom to compete is restrained." Riverview Invs., Inc. v. Ottawa Community Improvement Corp., 769 F.2d 324, 328 (6th Cir. 1985) (reversing summary judgment). A monopolist is permitted to compete, but only in respects that benefit consumers, such as better prices, product innovation, and the like. Conduct that tends to impair the opportunities of rivals, without benefitting consumers, is exclusionary. Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986) (Section 2 bars the "use of monopoly power to foreclose competition or gain a competitive advantage"); id. (Section 2 bars conduct that "does not further competition on the merits") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Similarly, even conduct that might benefit consumers is exclusionary if it is more restrictive than necessary to serve the interests of consumers. See, e.g., Potters Med. Ctr., 800

16diii002582

F.2d at 575; Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 605 (Section 2 bars conduct by a monopolist that "impair[s] competition in an unnecessarily restrictive way"). As Judge Martin put the point: conduct "which tend[s] to create a monopoly" is unlawful "whether the tendency is a creeping one or one that proceeds at full gallup." Kerasotes Michigan Theatres, Inc. v. National Amusements, Inc., 854 F.2d 135, 137 (6th Cir. 1988) (internal quotation marks omitted), cert. dismissed, 490 U.S. 1087 (1989).

Exclusionary conduct is a flexible, case-specific element that can be determined only by examining defendants' actions in their totality; none of a monopolist's actions need be "independently" unlawful to give rise to a Section 2 violation. Potters Ass'n, 800 F.2d at 575 (monopolist's actions "need not be in themselves independently unlawful" to violate Section 2) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Forsyth v. Humana, Inc., 114 F.3d 1467, 1478 (9th Cir. 1997) (merely raising rivals' costs is exclusionary conduct), aff'd, 525 U.S. 299 (1999); S. Salop & D. Scheffman, Recent Advances in the Theory of Industrial Structure: Raising Rivals' Costs, AEA Papers and Proceedings (May 1983) (UST's expert discussing anticompetitive effects of raising rivals' costs); Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849, 853-54 (6th Cir. 1979) (conduct designed to impair the distribution of rival products and racks is actionable under Section 2); Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1443-44 (6th Cir. 1990) ("[t]he jury is entitled 'to look at the whole picture' with respect to allegations and evidence of Sherman Act § 2 violations")(quoting American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 147 F.2d 93, 106 (6th Cir. 1944), aff'd, 328 U.S. 781 (1946)); City of Mishawaka v. American

16diii002583

Elec. Power Co., 616 F.2d 976, 986 (7th Cir. 1980) ("[i]t is the mix of the various ingredients . . . in a monopoly broth that produces the unsavory flavor"), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1096 (1981).

One critical touchstone for deciding whether UST's scheme qualifies as "exclusionary" is defendants' intent. In fact, courts have held that evidence of a defendant's intent can determine "whether the challenged conduct is fairly characterized as 'exclusionary' or 'anticompetitive.'" Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 602. See also United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 438 U.S. 422, 436 n.13 (1978) ("consideration of intent may play an important role in divining the actual nature and effect of the alleged anticompetitive conduct"). Accordingly, the jury will have to assess how UST's conceded intent to exclude rivals (see Defs' Reply Br. in Supp. of Motion for Summ. J. at 11-12 (Dec. 23, 1999)) bears on the nature of its conduct.

2. Attempted Monopolization. If the jury finds that UST monopolized the moist snuff market, it will have no need to consider whether UST attempted to do so. But attempted monopolization may be proved even if actual monopolization is not. To prevail on its alternative claim for attempted monopolization, Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that "(1) the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456 (1993).

The first and second elements can be satisfied by showing that UST engaged in exclusionary conduct. See, e.g., M&M Med. Supplies & Serv. v. Pleasant Valley Hosp., 981 F.2d 160, 166 (4th Cir. 1992) (en banc) ("specific intent may be inferred from the defendant's anticompetitive practices"), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 972 (1993); Volvo N. Am. Corp. v. Men's Int'l Prof'l Tennis Council, 857 F.2d 55, 74 (2d Cir. 1988) ("Proof of . . . anticompetitive or exclusionary conduct, may be used to infer . . . specific intent to monopolize.").

16diii002584

With respect to the final element -- "dangerous probability of success" -- the "[m]ost significant" factual question for the jury "is the defendants' share of the relevant market." Pastore v. Bell Tel. Co., 24 F.3d 508, 513 (3d Cir. 1994). Courts find a dangerous probability of success where a defendant has a market share in excess of 50 percent. See, e.g., Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1443 (6th Cir. 1990) (58% share over seven-year period sufficient), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 899 (1991). Other pertinent factual questions that may bear on the "dangerous probability" element include "the number and strength of other competitors, market trends, and entry barriers." Multistate Legal Studies v. Harcourt Brace Publications, Inc., 63 F.3d 1550, 1554 (10th Cir, 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1044 (1996). The jury will have to determine, in light of these factors and UST's approximately 77% (current) market share, whether UST has a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power.

3. Lanham Act Violation. The Lanham Act prohibits misrepresentations made "in commercial advertising or promotion." 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)(B) (emphasis added). To succeed on this claim, Conwood must show

> (1) that the defendant has made false or misleading statements as to his own product or another's; (2) that there is actual deception or at least a tendency to deceive > a substantial portion of the intended audience; (3) that the deception is material in that it is likely to influence purchasing decisions; (4) that the advertised goods travelled in interstate commerce; and (5) that there is likelihood of injury to the plaintiff in terms of declining sales, loss of goodwill, etc.

Seven-Up Co. v. Coca-Cola Co., 86 F.3d 1379, 1383 n.3 (5th Cir. 1996) (quoting Ditri v. Coldwell Banker Residential Affiliates, Inc., 954 F.2d 869, 872 (3d Cir. 1992)). Conwood will challenge both the promotional and advertising practices of UST.[7]

Pertinent factual questions in this case include:

- Whether UST sales personnel misleadingly represented that Conwood products contain fiberglass, stems, or other imperfections.
- Whether UST sales personnel misleadingly represented that Conwood dating methods are unreliable.
- Whether UST advertised its Copenhagen products with false or misleading "made on" dates to gain an advantage over rivals.

4. Tortious Interference with Contract/Tortious Interference with Prospective Business Relations. To show tortious interference with contract, Conwood must prove that UST induced or otherwise caused a third person not to perform an

[7]Promotional misrepresentations made by sales representatives are sufficiently disseminated to violate the Lanham Act when repeated to multiple customers. See, e.g., Seven-Up Co., 86 F.3d at 1386-87 (sales presentation not "merely isolated, individual statements of opinion by a single sales representative to a single customer" was commercial advertising for purposes of Lanham Act); H & R Indus., Inc. v. Kirshner, 899 F. Supp. 995, 1005-06 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) (statements made by defendant that competitor was engaging in improper commercial practices held to raise fact issues for jury on trade disparagement claim under Lanham Act); National Artists Management Co. v. Weaving, 769 F. Supp. 1224, 1229-31 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (allegation that defendants had made phone calls and statements to plaintiffs' clients stated claim for commercial disparagement under Lanham Act); Gordon & Breach Science Publishers S.A. v. American Inst. of Physics, 859 F. Supp. 1521, 1544 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) (allegations of deceptive promotional efforts stated claim under Lanham Act).

16diii002586

existing contract with Conwood. Carmichael--Lynch--Nolan v. Bennett, 561 S.W.2d 99, 102 (Ky. Ct. App. 1977). To show tortious interference with prospective business relations, Conwood must show that UST prevented Conwood from acquiring or continuing a valuable prospective business relationship with a third person. See id.; National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Hornung, 754 S.W.2d 855, 857 (Ky. 1988). Conwood does not need to show that UST acted fraudulently or employed coercion to succeed on either tort. Id. at 858.

As applied to this case, pertinent questions will include whether UST interfered with Conwood's existing and prospective relationships with retailers by, inter alia, providing misleading and false sales data to retailers in an effort to exclude Conwood products; conditioning receipt of promotions on the retailer's rejection or restriction of Conwood racks, POS, or products; and ripping out Conwood racks, products, and POS.

5. Unfair Competition (Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 365.050). Under Section 365.050, Conwood must show that UST made a "secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or secretly extending to certain purchasers special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers . . . where such payment or allowance tends to destroy competition." Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 365.050. It is not necessary that the rebate be made with the intent to destroy competition. Jefferson Ice & Fuel Co. v. Grocers Ice & Cold Storage Co., 286 S.W.2d 80, 83 (Ky. 1955). Factual questions in this case will include:

- Whether UST provided secret rebates and promotions to certain retailers (such as Wal-Mart) that were not offered to other retailers.

- Whether such secret rebates and promotions tended to harm competition.

6. Product Defamation. To show defamation, Conwood must establish that UST (1) used defamatory language; (2) about the plaintiff; (3) which is published; (4) which caused injury to reputation. Pennington v. Little, 266 Ky. 750, 99 S.W.2d 776 (Ky. 1936); Columbia Sussex Corp., Inc. v. Hay, 627 S.W.2d 270, 274 (Ky. Ct. App. 1981). While the language at issue must be false under element (1), Kentucky law recognizes that language may be considered defamatory in and of itself ("per se") or defamatory given the context of the communication ("per quod") which explain its meaning. Columbia Sussex, 627 S.W.2d at 274; Elkins v. Roberts, 242 S.W.2d 994 (Ky. 1951). In this case, factual questions will include whether UST misrepresented that Conwood products contain fiberglass, stems, and other impurities.

7. Unjust Enrichment. Under Kentucky law, Conwood may recover for unjust enrichment if it (1) conferred a benefit upon defendants, (2) defendants appreciated that a benefit was conferred, and (3) defendants inequitably retained the benefit without payment for its value. Guarantee Elec. Co. v. Big Rivers Elec. Corp., 669 F. Supp. 1371, 1380-81 (W.D. Ky. 1987). Factual questions will include whether UST was inequitably enriched by taking Conwood racks, POS, and product at retail stores across the country.

8. Conversion/Trover. To prove conversion, "[a]ll that is necessary is that the defendant exercise dominion and control over the property which is inconsistent with the plaintiff's rights" and some resulting damages. Mansbach v. Prescott, Ball & Turben, 598 F.2d 1017, 1027 (6th Cir. 1979); Kimberly & European

Diamonds, Inc., 518 F. Supp. 599, 602 (W.D. Ky. 1981), aff'd, 684 F.2d 363 (6th Cir. 1982). In this case, Conwood alleges that UST sales representatives tortiously converted Conwood racks, POS, and product.

B. UST'S COUNTERCLAIMS

UST has filed counterclaims that are the mirror image of plaintiff's Lanham Act, tortious interference with contract and prospective business relations, unfair competition (Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 365.050), product defamation, and conversion/trover claims. Each of UST's counterclaims must be analyzed under the same legal standards discussed above. Two threshold matters exist, however, that preclude UST's counterclaims.

First, despite a Court order, UST disclosed no witnesses to any of the conduct it alleges; accordingly, it has no competent proof to offer at trial. See Pls' Mot. for Partial Summ. J. at 35-37 (Nov. 15, 1999); Pls' Reply Br. in Support of Mot. for Partial Summ. J. at 13-16 (Dec. 23, 1999). Even the two persons UST belatedly identified in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment have witnessed no conduct in Kentucky that could sustain UST's Kentucky state tort claims. Id.

Second, UST disclosed no damages from any of the conduct alleged in its counterclaims in conformance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26 and the Court's order compelling production of a damages estimate. Id. Damages are a necessary element for each of the causes of action UST alleges. Id. Without any competent damages evidence, none of UST's counterclaims can stand.

PLAINTIFFS' LIST OF TRIAL EXHIBITS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully submit the attached list of exhibits plaintiffs may offer in evidence during their case-in-chief ("Exhibit "A"). All listed exhibits have been made available for inspection by counsel for defendants.

Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify or supplement this list as they continue to prepare their case for trial, to offer enlargements of exhibits in evidence, to offer additional exhibits identified and discussed during deposition testimony designated by plaintiffs for potential use at trial (which designations are incorporated herein by reference), and to modify demonstrative exhibits plaintiffs expect to offer during testimony by expert witnesses in order to conform such exhibits to the proof. Plaintiffs further reserve their right to offer additional exhibits, not listed herein, in rebuttal.

DEFENDANTS SUPPLEMENTAL TRIAL WITNESS LIST

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") respectfully supplement their Trial Witness List to add the name of the following witness who may be called to testify to defend against the claims of Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood") or to prove USTC's counterclaims against Conwood. At present, USTC plans to offer this additional witness in place of Randy Pickett, the witness identified at No. 19 in Defendants Trial Witness List, but reserves the right to call Mr. Pickett at trial.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 1

INTRODUCTION

Now that you have heard all of the evidence and the argument of the attorneys, it is my duty to give you instructions as to the law applicable in this case.

It is your duty as jurors to follow the law as stated in the instructions, and to apply that law to the facts you find from the evidence.

You are not to single out one instruction alone as stating the law. You must consider the instructions as a whole. The fact I have given an instruction on any element does not mean you should find one way or the other as to that element.

You are not to be concerned with the wisdom of any rule of law stated by the Court. You must apply the law given in these instructions whether you agree with it or not.

It is your duty to determine the facts, and in so doing you must consider only the evidence I have admitted in the case. The term "evidence" includes the sworn testimony of the witnesses, whether live or by deposition, and the exhibits admitted in the record. It is your own interpretation and recollection of the evidence that controls.

You are permitted to draw reasonable inferences, deductions, and conclusions from the testimony and exhibits which you feel are justified in the light of your own common sense.

In saying that you must consider all the evidence, I do not mean to suggest that you must necessarily accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. You are the sole judges of the credibility or believability of each witness and the weight to be given to the testimony of each witness.

In determining the credibility of any witness, you may properly consider the demeanor of the witness while testifying, frankness or lack of it and his or her interest in the outcome of the case, if any.

The statements, objections, and arguments made by the lawyers are not evidence. What the lawyers have said to you is not binding upon you.

The weight of the evidence is not necessarily determined by the number of witnesses testifying as to the existence or nonexistence of any fact. You should be guided in your deliberations by the quality and credibility of the evidence you have heard.

In this case it is Plaintiffs' responsibility to persuade you that Plaintiffs' claim is more likely true than not. That is called preponderance of the evidence. If Plaintiff fails to persuade you on every essential element of Plaintiffs' claim, then you should find for the Defendant on that claim.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 2

DELIBERATION

It is your duty as jurors to consult with one another, and to deliberate with a view to reach an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. You must each decide the case for yourself, but only after an impartial consideration of the evidence in the case with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations do not hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion, if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight of effect of the evidence, solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

Any answer must represent the considered judgment of each juror. In order to return an answer to questions presented in these instructions, it is necessary that each juror agree. Your answer must be unanimous.

Upon returning to the jury room, you will select one of your number to act as your foreperson. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will be your spokesman here in Court.

WEIGHING THE EVIDENCE - EXPERT WITNESSES

Both Conwood and UST have called expert witnesses in this case. These witnesses, because of their education and experience, have become expert in some profession or calling, have been permitted to state their opinions as to relevant and material matters in which they profess to be expert, and have stated their reasons for their opinions.

You should consider each expert opinion received in evidence in this case and give it such weight as you think it deserves.

BURDEN OF PROOF -- CRIMINAL BURDEN DISTINGUISHED

As you may know, there are two kinds of cases that come to court: criminal cases and civil cases. Criminal cases are when the government charges a person with a crime, such as theft. Civil cases may also involve illegal acts, but do not involve criminal penalties.

This is a civil case in which Conwood claims it was harmed by UST. I mention this because there is one big difference between criminal cases and civil cases.

In criminal cases, the government must prove its case "beyond a reasonable doubt." That is a stricter standard which applies in criminal cases. It does not apply in civil cases such as this. You should, therefore, put it out of your minds.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 5

INTRODUCTION TO CONWOOD'S ANTITRUST CLAIMS

Conwood claims that UST violated the antitrust laws by unlawfully monopolizing the market for moist smokeless tobacco, also called moist snuff, in the United States. Conwood also claims that UST unlawfully attempted to monopolize the market for moist snuff in the United States. Conwood claims that UST's violations of the antitrust laws harmed competition and caused Conwood to lose profits it would otherwise have earned. UST denies that it violated the antitrust laws in any way, and denies that Conwood was injured or suffered damages.

16diii002884

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 6

PURPOSE OF THE ANTITRUST LAWS

The purpose of the antitrust laws is to preserve and advance our system of free enterprise by encouraging fair competition and by preventing monopolization of any business, so that the consuming public may receive better products at lower cost. The antitrust laws are geared toward protecting the consumer, and you should keep that in mind as you hear evidence about the alleged antitrust violations.

It has been said that the antitrust laws are as important to the preservation of economic freedom and our free enterprise system as the Bill of Rights is to the protection of our fundamental personal freedoms. Private antitrust suits, such as this one, are an important way to ensure that the antitrust laws are being followed and enforced.

In enacting the antitrust laws, Congress has determined that monopolies are bad for commerce, and therefore intentionally acquiring or maintaining monopoly power is illegal. Whether or not UST actually exercised its monopoly power is not important. Conwood need only prove that UST acquired or maintained monopoly power through anticompetitive behavior.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 7

ELEMENTS OF MONOPOLIZATION

To win on its claim of illegal monopolization, Conwood must prove each of the following elements:

First, UST had monopoly power in a relevant market;

Second, UST willfully maintained monopoly power in the relevant market through anticompetitive or exclusionary conduct;

Third, Conwood was injured in its business or property.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 8

FIRST ELEMENT - RELEVANT MARKET

There are two aspects you must consider in defining a relevant market: (i) the relevant product market and (ii) the relevant geographic market.

Relevant Product Market. The basic idea of a relevant product market is that the products within it are reasonably interchangeable substitutes from a buyer's point of view. This does not mean that products must be identical to be in the same product market. It means that, as a matter of practical fact and the actual behavior of buyers, the products are reasonably interchangeable substitutes for the buyer's needs. In this case, Conwood claims that the relevant market includes all moist snuff brands. UST argues that the relevant market is broader and includes all tobacco products such as cigarettes, cigars and other kinds of smokeless tobacco.

There are a number of factors you should consider in determining whether different products are in the same product market. These include, but are not limited to, the following: (i) evidence that consumers substitute or switch from one product to the other when one becomes more expensive; (ii) whether people in the industry consider the products to be in the same market; (iii) whether the products appeal to the same consumers; (iv) whether the products have the same prices; (v) whether the products have the same characteristics such as the way they look, or are used, made or packaged; (vi) whether the competitive conditions for the products are the same.

Relevant Geographic Market. The other aspect is the geographic area in which the products compete. The parties agree that the relevant geographic market is the entire United States.

Supply Corp., 723 F.2d 495, 500 (6th Cir. 1983) ("The essential test for ascertaining the relevant product market involves the identification of those products or services that are either (1) identical to or (2) available substitutes for the defendants' product or service.")

UST Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment at 2, fn 2. (Conceding that relevant geographic market is entire United States)

16diii002889

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 9

SECOND ELEMENT - MONOPOLY POWER

You must next determine whether UST had monopoly power in the relevant market. Monopoly power is the power to control prices in, or to exclude competition from, the relevant market. If you find UST had the power either to control prices or to exclude competitors, you should find that UST had monopoly power.

Power to Control Prices. Power to control prices can be shown by proof that UST raised prices without a substantial loss of business to competitors. It may also be shown by evidence that UST earned extraordinarily large profits or maintained high margins over a long period of time.

Power to Exclude Competition. Power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by preventing existing competition from expanding in that market or by preventing new competition from entering that market. In other words, the power to exclude competition is the power to place barriers in the way of other companies trying to remain in or effectively enter the market and compete for customers.

To establish that UST possessed monopoly power, Conwood need not prove that prices were actually raised or that competition actually was excluded, but only that UST had the power to do so. You also need not find that UST could sell at any price it desired or that UST had no competition whatsoever. A company may face some competition in the relevant market and still have monopoly power.

United States, 328 U.S. 781, 811 (1946) ("[T]he material consideration in determining whether a monopoly exists is not that prices are raised and that competition is actually is excluded but that power exists to raise prices or to exclude competition when it is desired to do so.")

Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605 (1985) (same)

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 10

SECOND ELEMENT - MONOPOLY POWER - MARKET SHARE AS INDICATOR OF MONOPOLY POWER

You may infer monopoly power from UST's share of the relevant market. Share is a firm's percentage of total industry sales.

The larger UST's market share was, the more likely that UST had the power to control prices and to exclude competition. If you determine that UST's share of the relevant market was 66% percent or higher, that is strong evidence that UST had monopoly power.

Another factor that you may consider is the history of entry into and exit from the relevant market by other companies. If there has been recent entry of new companies into the market, that may indicate that UST lacked monopoly power. On the other hand, if there has been departure of companies from the market or a lack of new competitors entering the market, that is evidence of monopoly power.

The second is by presenting circumstantial evidence of monopoly power by showing a high market share within a defined market.") (internal quotes and citation omitted)

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 11

SECOND ELEMENT - WILLFUL MAINTENANCE OF MONOPOLY POWER AND EXCLUSIONARY CONDUCT DEFINED

You must next decide whether UST willfully maintained monopoly power through anticompetitive or exclusionary conduct.

UST acted willfully if it intended to do acts that naturally result in the elimination of competition and maintenance of monopoly power. UST's conduct was anticompetitive or exclusionary if it had the effect of reducing competition or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within a relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful by itself. The question is whether it impaired competition without providing lower prices or other consumer benefit. If a company attempts to exclude rivals on some basis other than lower price or other consumer benefit, its behavior must be characterized as exclusionary.

You may look to evidence of UST's intent to help you decide whether UST's conduct was exclusionary. Whether conduct is exclusionary is also determined in part by whether the firm engaging in the conduct is a monopolist. Conduct that might be legitimate, procompetitive behavior if engaged in by a firm without a monopoly can be anticompetitive if practiced by a monopolist; in other words, a monopolist is held to a higher standard when it engages in acts that may have the effect of restricting competition. You should keep this in mind when deciding whether UST's conduct was exclusionary.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 12

SECOND ELEMENT - WILLFUL MAINTENANCE - RELEVANCE OF ALLEGED CONWOOD CONDUCT

It is no defense that other firms may have engaged in conduct similar to or even the same as the alleged conduct of UST. Your focus must be on whether UST willfully maintained monopoly power through exclusionary conduct, not what other firms may have done.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 13

SECOND ELEMENT - WILLFUL MAINTENANCE - STORE PERMISSION NO DEFENSE

If you find that UST engaged in exclusionary conduct, it is no defense that retailers permitted UST to do so. The consent or lack of consent of stores is irrelevant to whether UST's conduct was exclusionary.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 14

THIRD ELEMENT - INJURY/CAUSATION

You must next decide whether Conwood was injured as a result of UST's violation of the antitrust laws. For purposes of this element, you need not consider the amount of injury to Conwood. I will instruct you later as to the amount of damages you may award.

Conwood is not required to prove that UST's conduct was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury; nor need Conwood prove that UST benefitted from the loss experienced by Conwood. It is enough if Conwood has proved that UST's unlawful monopolization was a material cause of its injury even though other factors also may have contributed.

Plaintiffs meet their burden if they show that the defendants' unlawful facts substantially contributed to their injuries, even though other facts may have contributed significantly. Plaintiffs need only show that their injury to some degree resulted from defendants violation.")

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 15

ATTEMPTED MONOPOLIZATION - ELEMENTS

In order to establish Conwood's second claim, attempted monopolization, Conwood must prove the following elements:

First, UST engaged in exclusionary conduct;

Second, UST had a specific intent to achieve monopoly power in a relevant market;

Third, there was a dangerous probability that UST would sooner or later achieve its goal of monopoly power in the relevant market.

Fourth, Conwood was injured in its business or property.

McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456 ("[I]t is generally required that to demonstrate attempted monopolization a plaintiff must prove (1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power.")

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 16

ATTEMPTED MONOPOLIZATION - FIRST ELEMENT - EXCLUSIONARY CONDUCT

I have previously instructed you on exclusionary conduct. That instruction applies here as well.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 17

ATTEMPTED MONOPOLIZATION - SECOND ELEMENT -

SPECIFIC INTENT TO MONOPOLIZE

You must next decide whether UST had the specific intent to monopolize the relevant market. In other words, you must decide whether UST acted with the conscious object of acquiring the power to control prices or to exclude competition in the relevant market.

There are several ways in which Conwood may prove that UST had the specific intent to monopolize. There may be evidence of direct statements of UST's intent to obtain a monopoly in the relevant market, or there may be evidence of direct statements of UST's intent to exclude or deter entry into the relevant market through various means, such as the erection of entry barriers. For this you may consider documents prepared by employees of UST around the time of the conduct in question and any statements made by employees of UST. You must be careful, however, to distinguish between intent to compete aggressively, which is lawful, and an intent to acquire monopoly power through exclusionary means, which is unlawful.

You may also infer specific intent from what UST did. For example, if the evidence shows that the probable consequence of UST's conduct in the relevant market was to give UST control over prices or destroy competition, and this was plainly foreseeable to UST, then you may infer that UST specifically intended to acquire monopoly power.

plaintiffs alleging monopolization under section 2 must produce intent evidence.")

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 18

ATTEMPTED MONOPOLIZATION - THIRD ELEMENT - DANGEROUS PROBABILITY OF SUCCESS

You must next decide whether there was a dangerous probability that UST would succeed in achieving its intended monopoly if it continued to engage in the same or similar conduct.

The term "dangerous probability of success" does not mean that success was nearly certain. It means that the chance of success was substantial and real; that is, that there was a reasonable likelihood that UST would ultimately achieve its goal of monopoly power.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 20

TOTALITY OF THE EVIDENCE

In determining whether Conwood has proved one or both of its antitrust claims, you must view all the evidence together.

You should not view each of UST's acts in isolation from other acts. You should use your judgment to thoroughly and sensitively weigh all of the evidence presented. Your duty, as jurors, is to look at the whole picture and not view each separate act in isolation. Persons claiming violations of the antitrust laws should be given the full benefit of their proof without tightly compartmentalizing the various factual components and wiping the slate clean after scrutiny of each.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 21

ANTITRUST DAMAGES

If you find that UST either monopolized or attempted to monopolize in accordance with my prior instructions, you must decide what damages, if any, to award Conwood.

The law provides that Conwood should be fairly compensated for all damages to its business and property which were a likely consequence of the conduct which you have found to be unlawful. Violations of the antitrust laws often create situations in which it is hard to determine the precise amount of damages suffered.

The law allows a party injured by violations of the antitrust laws to receive damages even if those damages cannot be calculated with mathematical precision. The reason for this rule is that the law does not reward wrongdoers who cause a harm that is not easy to measure. Any other rule would encourage making wrongdoing so effective and complete in every way as to preclude any recovery, by making the measure of damages uncertain.

This does not mean that you may speculate or guess as to the amount of damages. Rather, based on the evidence presented, you should make a fair and reasonable estimate of the total damages that Conwood suffered as a result of UST's violation of the antitrust laws. Such damages may include lost profits for prior years, if you find that Conwood's profits for those years would have been greater, and lost profits for future years, if you find that Conwood's future earnings are likely to be reduced.

LANHAM ACT CLAIMS

To establish a Lanham Act violation, Conwood must show that UST:

(i) made a false or misleading representation about its own products and Conwood's;

(ii) retailers and consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by UST's representations;

(iii) the deception was material in the sense that it was likely to influence purchasing decisions;

(iv) the goods in question traveled in interstate commerce;

(v) Conwood was likely damaged by UST's misrepresentations.

If you believe from the evidence that UST violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED INSTRUCTION NO. 23

UNJUST ENRICHMENT

To establish its claim that UST was unjustly enriched, Conwood must show the following:

(i) Conwood conferred a benefit upon UST. A benefit may be services, goods or monies. A loss by Conwood without an actual benefit to UST is not recoverable as unjust enrichment.

(ii) UST accepted the benefit from Conwood under such circumstances that it would be impossible for it to retain the benefit without paying the value thereof. It is not necessary to prove that the recipient of the benefit was a fault or guilty of wrongdoing in any way, but it must be established that as between the parties it would be unjust and unconscionable for the recipient to retain the benefit without paying the reasonable value thereof.

If you believe from the evidence that UST was unjustly enriched at the expense of Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

CONVERSION

Conwood contends that UST systematically removed Conwood racks, point-of-sale advertising, and products from retail locations. Conwood claims that UST employees kept these items, threw them away or otherwise disposed of them. UST denies these allegations.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence that:

(i) UST took racks, point-of-sale advertising and products from retail locations;

AND

(ii) some or all of these racks, point-of-sale advertising and products belonged to Conwood;

AND

(iii) Conwood was damaged thereby.

If you believe from the evidence that UST converted Conwood property and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

PRODUCT DEFAMATION

Conwood claims that UST made false and misleading statements about the quality of Conwood's moist snuff products when UST sales representatives stated that Conwood products contained stems, twigs, and fiberglass. Conwood claims that it suffered damages as a result. UST denies the allegation.

For Conwood to establish liability, it must show that:

(i) UST made statements about Conwood products that would reasonably have been understood to imply that Conwood products were inferior or defective;

(ii) Such statements would tend to injure Conwood's business and reputation;

(iii) Such statements were not true and gave a false a impression of Conwood and its products;

(iv) A reasonably prudent person would not have made statements similar to those made by UST about Conwood products;

(v) Conwood suffered harm to its reputation or economic loss as a direct result of UST's statements.

If you believe from the evidence that UST defamed Conwood or its products and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

UNFAIR COMPETITION - KENTUCKY REVISED STATUTE § 365.050

Conwood alleges that UST has violated Kentucky Revised Statute § 365.050, which prohibits unfair trade practices, by making secret payments to certain retailers but not others. UST denies the allegation.

To establish a violation of Ky. Rev. Stat. § 365.050, Conwood must show that:

(i) UST made secret payments to retailers or distributors in the form of allowances, rebates, refunds, commissions, discounts or the like; and

(ii) UST's payments in fact caused injury to Conwood or competition

If you believe from the evidence that UST violated Ky. Rev. Stat. §365.050 and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS

Conwood alleges that UST interfered with various of its agreements with retailers by virtue of UST's disparaging comments about the quality of Conwood products, misleading presentations of sales data to retailers, and UST insistence on agreements with retailers that tended to exclude Conwood racks, POS, products and promotions. UST denies this allegation.

To establish interference with contractual relations, Conwood must show that:

(i) UST improperly interfered with Conwood's business expectancy, and

(ii) UST did so intentionally, and

(iii) UST did so without a legitimate interest or business purpose.

If you believe from the evidence that UST interfered with Conwood's contractual relations and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

UST denies this allegation.

To establish interference with business expectancy, Conwood must show that:

(ii) UST did so intentionally, and

(iii) UST did so without a legitimate interest or business purpose.

FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' MOTIONS IN LIMINE

Plaintiffs respectfully move the Court, in limine, for an order excluding the following evidence from the trial of this case:

1. Evidence as to Conwood's owners and their alleged wealth. Defendants have indicated that they intend to offer evidence that Conwood is owned, indirectly, by members of the Pritzker family, and that the Pritzker family has substantial wealth. Conwood's ownership is entirely irrelevant to any issue in this case, and even more irrelevant is the wealth of the Pritzker family. Evidence about Conwood's – and UST's – profits can fairly be offered, as can evidence of the firms' respective returns (UST's dividends and share repurchases substantially exceeding Conwood's in both absolute and relative terms). But information about the ultimate beneficiaries of these profits would be inflammatory and prejudicial. There should accordingly be no mention of who or what owns Conwood, nor their wealth.

2. Testimony of David Scheffman. Defendants have designated David Scheffman (formerly a faculty member at Vanderbilt and now a full-time "litigation consultant") as their expert on economic and marketing issues. Mr. Scheffman submitted a materially untruthful report about his compensation in this matter. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B), Mr. Scheffman was required to disclose "the compensation to be paid for [his] study and testimony." Mr. Scheffman disclosed only that "I am currently compensated at a rate of $400 per hour for my work in this matter." Scheffman Expert Rep. at 1. In fact — as plaintiffs' counsel discovered by happenstance at deposition — Mr. Scheffman receives far greater compensation than he disclosed in his report. He receives a percentage (almost 14%) of all hourly billings of at least 13 other consultants from his firm (Navigant) who are working on this matter under his supervision. See Scheffman Dep. at 96-97, 103-04. Although Mr. Scheffman was unwilling to state how much money he received on this basis, id. at 106-12, it is beyond dispute that his sworn report is false. His explanation for this falsity is equally troubling: he did not think he should be required to disclose all of his compensation. Id. at 99-106. "The compensation, in whatever form, received by . . . experts to testify . . . [is] relevant to the credibility of their testimony." Thayer v. Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., Civ. Action No. 5314, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12796, at *41-42 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 19, 1970). Mr. Scheffman should be permitted to testify only upon the condition that he disclose, fully and accurately, all the money he has earned and will earn from this engagement, as well as his relative earnings from his academic affiliation (which, on information and belief, plaintiffs maintain is quite small) and his full-time work as a defendants' litigation expert, which plaintiffs believe may run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.[1]

3. Evidence that companies other than UST seek to exclude. UST should be precluded from making any reference to, or offering any evidence to support, claims that Conwood and other companies tampered with UST moist snuff racks after UST succeeded in obtaining "exclusive vending" (i.e., UST's as the exclusive moist snuff rack to the exclusion of other manufacturers' racks). It is not relevant that victimized small competitors in some instances sought to restore their brands to their own racks.[2] "Tit for tat" is not a defense to Conwood's antitrust claims. A monopolist (such as UST) violates Section 2 of the Sherman Act by maintaining its market power through exclusion of rivals on any basis other than reduced prices or other consumer benefit. Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 615 n.32 (1985); Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986). Nor is it a defense to Conwood's state law claims. Because UST has no evidence of any Conwood conversion of racks in Kentucky, UST's counterclaims do not afford a basis for admission of any evidence regarding alleged Conwood

[1]Mr. Scheffman testified that he has been engaged in scores of antitrust cases, in all but one of which he testified for the defense. Scheffman Dep. at 16-20.

[2]This is because, to take their own products out of UST's rack, excluded rivals were in some instances required to remove the vacated slots in UST's rack. This was a necessary part of restoring their own racks for their own products. UST's evidence of "misconduct" by competitors typically involves alleged "retaliation" by excluded rivals in response to UST's successful efforts to prevent them from merchandising and advertising their products in their own racks.

16diii002929

misconduct.

4. "Retailer permission" evidence. The Court should exclude evidence that retailers permitted or agreed to UST's exclusion of rival racks, products, and advertising - except as necessary to rebut any claim by plaintiffs that, in specific instances, UST effected such exclusion against the wishes of the retailer. Otherwise, retailer consent is irrelevant to Conwood's antitrust claims. Where the monopolist procures the exclusion of rivals by means other than lower prices or better products for consumers, it commits a Section 2 violation whether or not the retailer goes along with it. Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 615 n.32; Potters Med. Ctr., 800 F.2d at 575; Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 849, 853-54 (6th Cir. 1979) (conduct designed to impair the distribution of rival products and racks actionable under Section 2; consent not the issue); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ. A. 97-3983, 1999-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 72,538, 1999 WL 346223, at *4-6 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999) (rebate program concededly agreed to by retailer); Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129, 1136 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (profit guarantee program agreed to by retailers supported Section 2 claim against manufacturer); United States v. United Shoe Mach. Corp., 110 F. Supp. 295, 344-45 (D. Mass. 1953) (leasing arrangements, agreed to by consumers, violated Section 2), aff'd, 347 U.S. 521 (1954).

5. Any evidence offered in support of UST's counterclaims. For the reasons set forth in Conwood's Motion for Summary Judgment, UST should be precluded from offering any evidence in support of its counterclaims because it failed to list a single witness with personal knowledge of any actionable misconduct by Conwood, despite an order from the Court (by Magistrate Judge

Moyer) to disclose by September 21, 1999 any and all such witnesses. May 11, 1999 Order at 3. In addition, UST never provided any damages computation, as required both by Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C) and by a direct Order of the Court. See February 5, 1999 Order.

6. Hearsay deposition testimony and documents. UST has listed, for introduction at trial, 25 depositions of its own employees. These witnesses are all current UST employees available to testify at trial. Because a party may offer deposition testimony only when a witness is "unavailable," UST should not be permitted to play excerpts of its current employees' depositions in lieu of calling them to testify at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32. Similarly, UST has designated (in its list of 4250 putative trial exhibits) hundreds if not thousands of its own prior written statements. These self-serving statements are inadmissible hearsay under Fed. R. Evid. 801 and 802 and should be excluded.

16diii002931

THEREFORE, Conwood respectfully requests that the Court exclude or condition the admission of the above-listed matters. A proposed order is attached.

Respectfully submitted,

ORDER

Upon consideration of Plaintiffs' Motions in Limine, the opposition thereto, and for good cause shown, it is hereby ordered that defendants may not introduce the following at trial:

1. Evidence or testimony concerning the wealth and identity of plaintiffs' owners.

2. Evidence or testimony from David Scheffman unless Mr. Scheffman provides full and accurate testimony regarding all compensation from this and other litigation support matters.

3. Evidence that companies other than defendants have sought to exclude rivals' products.

4. Evidence or testimony that retailers permitted or agreed to defendants' exclusion of rival moist snuff racks, products, and advertising, except as necessary to rebut any claim by plaintiffs that, in specific instances, defendants effected such exclusion against the wishes of the retailer.

5. Evidence or testimony concerning defendants' counterclaims.

6. Deposition testimony of defendants' own employees and defendants' own documents when offered by defendants.

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR AN APPROPRIATE TRIAL EXHIBIT LIST AND APPROPRIATE DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS

Under the Court's Scheduling Order, defendants ("UST") were directed to provide plaintiffs ("Conwood") with a list of exhibits and deposition designations that they "intend[] to use at trial." Order at 2. Instead, UST threw in the kitchen sink, listing some 4,250 exhibits and huge chunks of 123 separate depositions.

Defendants' overdesignations fail to provide Conwood with reasonable notice of the exhibits and excerpts they intend to use at trial and, accordingly, prejudice Conwood's ability to prepare. In fact, UST would have to introduce 425 documents or other items every single trial day to exhaust its proffered "exhibit list."[1] Playing UST's 123 video deposition designations would alone consume several weeks. UST's overdesignations also made it virtually impossible for Conwood to conduct a thorough review and respond with complete set of objections and counterdesignations in the one week period set by the Court's Scheduling Order. Id. at 2.[2]

[1]Defendants have represented that they anticipate taking two weeks (10 trial days) to put on their defense.

For these reasons, plaintiffs respectfully move the Court to order defendants to provide a more narrowly-tailored list of those exhibits and deposition excerpts they actually believe they will offer at trial.

A proposed order is attached.

[2]Conwood has filed an initial set of objections and counterdesingations within the week period set by the Court, but has reserved the right to supplement these filings as it continues its review of UST's overbroad designations.

PLAINTIFFS' OBJECTIONS TO DEFENDANTS' TRIAL EXHIBITS

Pursuant to the Court's Scheduling Order, plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully submit the attached list of initial objections to the trial exhibits defendants designated on January 21, 2000. Because defendants' overdesignation of 4,250 items fails to provide reasonable notice of the exhibits defendants actually intend to use and trial, and because defendants' overdesignation made it virtually impossible to conduct a thorough review and respond with a complete set of objections in the one week period provided by the Court's Scheduling Order, Conwood reserves the right to supplement its objections as its review continues.

PLAINTIFFS' OBJECTIONS AND COUNTER-DESIGNATIONS TO DEFENDANTS' DEPOSITION DESIGNATIONS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. (collectively, "Conwood") respectfully submit the attached list of objections and counterdesignations to the approximately 100 nonparty and Conwood depositions designated for potential use at trial by defendants.[1] Because defendants' deposition designations do not provide appropriate notice of the excerpts defendants actually intend to use at trial, and because the designation of large portions of 100 different depositions made it

[1]Conwood has filed a motion in limine to preclude defendants from using the depositions of an additional 25 witnesses, all of whom are employees of the defendants. Plaintiffs' Motions in Limine ¶ 6 (Jan. 28, 2000). Under settled law, a party may not introduce at trial the out of court statements of its own employees. Id. In the event the motion in limine is denied, plaintiffs respectfully reserve the right to provide objections and counterdesignations to those depositions at that time.

virtually impossible for counsel to conduct a thorough review within the week provided, plaintiffs reserve the right to make additional objections and counterdesignations as review continues.

Respectfully submitted,

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P.
CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY L. P., ET AL.	PLAINTIFFS
v.	NO. 5:98CV-108-R
UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC.	DEFENDANT

ORDER

This matter came before the court on motion of defendant UST to strike ceratin affidavits filed by plaintiff in support of their opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment. (Docket No. 226). Plaintiff Conwood has responded, (Docket No. 236), and UST has filed a reply. (Docket No. 242).

When defendant moved for summary judgment, plaintiff responded and filed a number of affidavits from retailers regarding defendant's alleged anti-competitive activity at the retail level. Defendant argues, in the present motion, that the affidavits should be stricken because the affiants were not included on plaintiff's witness list and are prevented from testifying at trial. Plaintiff's position is more persuasive for three reasons.

First, defendants rely principally on Chappell v. Bradley, 834 F.Supp. 1030 (N.D. Ill 1993), for the proposition that affidavits should be stricken when the affiants were not included on a witness list. That case dealt with affidavits from expert witnesses who had not been disclosed. None of the affiants in the present case are expert witnesses so the Rule 26 analysis contained in Chappell is inapplicable. The Sixth Circuit has stated that:

> We agree ... that Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure does not require that affiants be included in a witness list before their affidavits may be used to support a motion for summary judgment.

Second, the ruling that defendant seeks is dependent on a finding that none of the affiants at issue will be permitted to testify at trial in any capacity. It is premature at this point to consider or decide who is qualified to testify as a rebuttal witness or to predict how the district court will construe the magistrate judge's orders regarding witnesses for plaintiff's case-in-chief.

Third, the record contains other evidence regarding plaintiff's allegations of anti-competitive behavior at the retail level and the presence or absence of the affidavits in question is not crucial to deciding defendant's motion for summary judgment.

Pursuant to the Court's February 18, 1999 Scheduling Order, Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") respectfully ask the Court to:

1. Preclude undisclosed expert witness materials and related testimony and declarations of Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood");

2. Require Conwood to prove exclusionary conduct and fact of injury at specific retail stores and chains;

3. Preclude Conwood from offering Professor Gundlach's "study" of purported "exclusive agreements" and related testimony; and

4. Enter an order simplifying the issues at trial and facilitating the disposition of this lawsuit;

5. Preclude certain of Conwood intended trial exhibits and testimony referencing such exhibits.

6. Preclude all evidence offered by Conwood concerning conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington immunity;

7. Preclude irrelevant, misleading and unfairly prejudicial statements and references by or on behalf of Conwood;

A tendered order is attached hereto. With this motion, USTC is filing a separate memorandum in support of each separate motion listed above.

Respectfully submitted,

Dated: January 28, 2000

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

ORDER

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("USTC") having moved the Court for certain in limine relief with respect to evidence, argument or statements expected or intended to be offered at trial by Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P., et al. ("Conwood"), and the Court being otherwise well and sufficiently advised,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED as follows:

1. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding Conwood from introducing at trial its intended group trial Exhibits 326 and 327 and any related testimony is hereby GRANTED;

2. USTC's motion for an order in limine requiring Conwood to prove specific exclusionary misconduct by USTC, and any injury in fact from such conduct, at specific retail establishments is hereby GRANTED:

3. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding the introduction of any part of the Gundlach "study" of purported "exclusive agreements" as well as any related testimony is hereby GRANTED;

4. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding Conwood from presenting its Lanham Act, Kentucky state law, and attempted monopolization claims at trial is hereby GRANTED;

5. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding the introduction of Conwood "unethical activity reports" and "sworn declarations," as well as any reference to such materials is hereby GRANTED;

6. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding the introduction of any evidence and any argument concerning conduct protected by Noerr-Pennington immunity is hereby GRANTED; and

7. USTC's motion for an order in limine precluding Conwood from drawing analogies to the United States v. Microsoft case, from referencing violent or criminal behavior such as "kneecapping" a competitor, and from simply referring to USTC as a "monopolist" beyond the bounds of legitimate legal argument is hereby GRANTED;
