Nabisco's dedicated convenience store channel marketing teams have a singular goal —to help operators maximize total store profitability and productivity. The strategy for achieving that involves a hands-on approach that leverages Nabisco's understanding of consumer behavior in convenience stores against its category management and merchandising expertise, according to Billy Henry, director of marketing for Planter's immediate consumption and Cornnuts businesses. "The approach is to transform data into actionable solutions that drive total store productivity for the retailer," he said.

Those actionable solutions involve increasing transaction size by applying Nabisco's extensive consumer insights. "We focus on shopper tendencies versus demographics," Henry said, adding that Nabisco has developed insights into shopper behavior based on frequency of visits to convenience stores and traffic patterns. From this, Nabisco has developed what it calls its "Double D" strategy of linking destination categories—such as beverages and the checkout station—with discretionary categories, which include snacks and confections.

Two Nabisco programs are built on

It's Water

(and a squeeze)

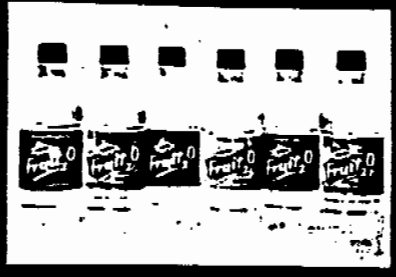
Introducing Fruit$_2$O™ from Veryfine.

The good news is...it's water. The better news is that it's spring water with just a touch of natural fruit flavor...light, clean and refreshing. The best news, (and here's the twist) Fruit$_2$O has zero calories.

Fruit$_2$O has no calories thanks to new SPLENDA® Brand Sweetener. SPLENDA (known as sucralose) is made from real sugar. It provides superior ingredient stability and shelf-life performance compared to NutraSweet®.†



Clearly, spring water is where the action is. Already bottled water represents 23% of the non-carbonated, single-serve segment in c-stores and sales are up +16%! And, like water, Fruit$_2$O also has all-day, anytime consumption appeal.

Fruit$_2$O comes in six cool, crisp flavors – lemon, lime, orange, cherry, raspberry and strawberry – all wrapped up in vibrant, eye-catching foil labels and bright blue caps.

For a healthy new addition to your water category and a taste sampling of one of the best new products of the year, call your Veryfine sales representative at 1-800-800-6822.

that foundation of applying consumer insights to driving increased transactions. The first is Lifesavers Co.'s SMART (Successful Merchandising Assures Rapid Transactions). SMART addresses the confections category with learnings garnered from alliances with eight convenience store companies, combined with Nabisco's understanding of shopper behavior. "We link the high-traffic zones with consumer behavior indicative of that zone," said Mary Jean Longo, senior manager, category management for Lifesavers Co. "For example, beverage is a destination category, and we know 70 percent of beverages are purchased in combination with a snack. So we advocate placing confections next to destination categories such as beverages to drive that impulse sale and increase transaction size."

Secondary placements play a key role the process, and Nabisco studies show that sales of confections can increase as much as 43 percent when the products are moved from the aisle to the checkout. An increasingly important destination/discretionary product match is the coffee station and breath-freshening mints and gum. "The value of placing confections in high-traffic and destination locations is unmistakable," Longo said.

Placing salty snacks in high-traffic retail locations is also a key strategy for the Planters' Pacesetter 2000 program. In tests, front-end merchandising units for Planters products generated a 62 percent increase in sales for Planters and an 8-percent increase for the total snack category overall, according to Henry. "Pacesetter 2000 focuses on reducing duplication and adding variety. The next step is to increase transaction size by linking the category with destination categories in cross-promotional activity and secondary placements," said Henry.

Retailers such as Kendra Kuehl, buyer/merchandising manager at Bosselman's Pump & Pantry, based in Grand Island, Neb., have found Nabisco's category-management personnel and programs to be valuable. "[Nabisco representatives] are willing to come in and evaluate the categories with us, looking at our movement and national numbers, and put together planograms accordingly," she said. "They set up the section with us and we continually evaluate the area. [Nabisco personnel] are objective and include all products [participating] in the category in the evaluation and planograms."

Nabisco's cross-promotional strategy is now being taken to the next level through two 1999 promotions with The Coca-Cola Co. This spring and summer, the Ice Breakers gum brand will be linked with Nestea Cool in a promotional tie-in program called "Cool to the Core." Ice Breakers will be merchandised in custom display units near beverage coolers. Nestea Cool bottles will include instant win sweepstakes pieces. Prizes include 35 cents off Ice Breaker products. Planters products will join Coca-Cola in the "Refreshing Combo" program, which brings together Planters Super Tube nuts packages with 32-ounce fountain Coca-Cola drinks. A pre-pack display and in-store signage will support the "Refreshing Combo" promotion at retail.

"These elements all come out of our ongoing research and efforts to stay in touch with the convenience store consumer," said Henry. "Then we build plans that satisfy their needs and the needs of the retailer."

Nestle USA Ice Cream Division

The category-management process undertaken by the Nestle USA Ice Cream Division begins with a solid understanding of the convenience store customer obtained through independent research, secondary research and syndicated data. "Key components of our program include use of our powerful Nestle brand name and its lineup of premium-quality products, careful selection of products that are well-suited for the individual store locations, strong advertising and promotional support, as well as an impactful merchandising program," explained Kelly Atkins, director of impulse marketing.

Nestle sales teams, including the impulse or "alternative channel" team, work closely with convenience store retailers to tailor product selection to meet their shoppers' needs and their business needs. Nestle's exclusive distributor network also plays a crucial role. "Part of the process involves joint development of a planogram, which helps to target kids, teens, adults and the entire family. Distributors are adept at managing the process in a comprehensive fashion," said Atkins. "We also address opportunities through a variety of programs, including account-specific promotions."

Dick Kolberg, sales consultant for Houston-based Equilon Enterprises, has experienced a productive partnership with his Nestle sales representative, John Artesi. "He does a great job assessing appropriate product selection and helping determine the most effective location for the freezer box. And, he is a master at promotions," he said. "We have come up with some ideas, and he has just run with them. The full Nestle merchandising program, as John implemented it, drove a sales increase in one location of 300 percent. We also have an excellent Nestle distributor in Rock Island. Few companies do as good a job. Nestle is a first-class operation."

their franchise partners, whether you are an independent or a multistore chain operator," he explained. "Orion provides us with excellent operational support through knowledgeable people, practices and ideas. They have developed high-quality marketing materials to build brand identity from in-store POS to exterior signage, while still allowing us to 'own' our food-court concept. All of this, and a great return, results in excellent category management."

Retailer satisfaction with the five Orion foodservice brands stems not only from the product quality but also from operations support. A key point of differentiation for Orion, according to executive director of marketing Greg Breukelman, is its guaranteed operational support system.

"We have territory consultants assigned to each Orion location, and we guarantee that they will visit that location every 21 days or we will issue the retailer a check for $1,000," he explained. "Convenience retailers have a complex business to run, and need support every step of the way, so we make sure they get it."

In addition to field personnel support, Orion develops training videos, operations manuals and POS systems for their retail franchise partners. Another resource is promotion, which occurs on the national level and via local store marketing. "Part of the role of the territory consultant is to develop local store marketing that helps the retailer get involved with their community," Breukelman said.

The foundation of Orion's category management is its vertically integrated structure. The company manufactures, warehouses and ships all product. "This gives us incredible control of product quality, and enables us to be flexible in introducing new products," said Breukelman. "We take a lot of pride in our products so our retail partners can do the same."

Pepsi-Cola Co.

Pepsi-Cola took its commitment to consumer-based programming to the next level when the company integrated its customer marketing and category management efforts into one business practice last year. "Historically, suppliers have helped develop category plans in isolation of marketing programs, which are developed on an opportunistic basis," said Greg McIntee, vice president, customer marketing and category management. "We've brought these two functions together. As result, the category plan, which must reflect and support the retailer's overall business plan, and the customer marketing solution we build can effectively address the strategic needs of that business."

The organizational change reflects Pepsi-Cola's position that category management must be focused against the consumer. "We have a fundamental belief that satisfied consumers drive category growth," McIntee said. "This new structure allows us to work against that principle."

"Pepsi has been proactive with new concepts and quick response to our needs," said Tony Bandiera of Chevron Products Co. Inc., based in San Francisco. "The company goes the extra mile to offer competitive intelligence."

Pepsi-Cola's consumer-insights toolbox includes E-Lab, a video study of consumer behavior, and frequent merchandising audits of convenience stores. "We have a real dedication to really understanding the c-store shopping experience. Then, we work objectively with customers in partnership to develop consumer-based solutions to drive the entire category," said McIntee. "The approach is to wed consumer insights with technology to optimize the cold vault."

The Right Choice is the primary optimization tool applied by the soft-drink marketer, and is utilized by category managers and sales representatives in the field, according to Jodi Rumble, channel strategy and marketing manager, convenience stores. "Research tells us that 75 percent of consumers know what brand of soft drink they want before they walk into the store. Knowing that, we look to maximize the cold-vault area—optimizing it against the SKU's that turn the greatest profit—so consumers can find what they want quickly," she explained.

Product and package development is another element of category management that is consumer driven. Pepsi-Cola's recent introduction of Pepsi One is an example of the company applying consumer insights and an understanding of retailer needs, according to McIntee. "Pepsi One shows our understanding of what consumers want, and developing a product that creates an opportunity for retailers," he said. "The majority of the sales achieved thus far by the brand have been incremental."

Retailers are appreciative of Pepsi-Cola's consumer-focused approach. "Pepsi's service and promotions have led this company to a leadership position in this market," observed Steve Hayward, retail supervisor for Salt Lake City, Utah-based Sinclair Marketing.

Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice

Identifying retail customer goals and developing recommendations and product matches to help them meet those needs is the strategy employed by Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice in assisting convenience store operators with category management. "We look at their approach across foodservice categories and determine where they are trying to grow and where the opportunities lie," explained Keith Dozier, marketing manager. "Then we identify the products, training and equipment that will facilitate that strategy."

Pillsbury personnel provide analysis of profits and margins, and serve as consultants for proprietary foodservice program development efforts. One area of concentration is controlling labor costs. "Often, additional labor is not needed to develop new and profitable programs," Dozier said. "For example, we might recommend to a retailer several ways to use the same product to generate additional revenue without increasing labor costs."

Much of Pillsbury's new product development is geared toward helping retailers hold down operating costs. For example, the recently introduced freezer-to-oven cinnamon rolls do not have to be thawed or proofed, reducing the prep process by two steps, Dozier said.

"Pillsbury offers quality products, promotional support and reliable technical knowledge and assistance," observed Bill McGregor, foodservice director for Maverik Country Stores, based in Afton, Wyo. "The company is an excellent partner."

Procter & Gamble

"We see our role as an objective facilitator of the NACS category-management process," said David Lane, corporate convenience industry representative for customer business development at Procter & Gamble. "We bring proprietary tools for analysis, resources in the form of people and expertise, and benchmarks industry-wide and outside the convenience channel."

Procter & Gamble was nominated as a Category Captain in both the grocery and health and beauty aids categories.

Grocery

Procter & Gamble's Grocery College is a workshop that walks retailers through NACS six-step category-management process, assisting them in identifying the role of grocery and develop strategies and tactics for improving performance. According to Bill Traywick, operations manager, category management, 80 percent of grocery volume typically comes from 170 to 200 items. "However, most convenience retailers have 500 to 800 SKUs on the grocery shelves," he explained. "Consumer data shows 10 categories drive fill-in shopping. What Grocery College does is focus retailers on the fill-in shopping products, their role and the strategies and tactics to drive growth."

Nice N Easy Grocery Shoppes Inc. of Canastota, N.Y., realized immediate results after attending Procter & Gamble's Grocery College, according to Matt Paduano, director of purchasing. "Bill Traywick helped us focus and develop a mission statement for grocery. We developed power categories," he explained. Nice N Easy has reduced grocery SKUs by increasing facings of power category items, and is the in the process of remerchandising its 100 stores. "We've seen faster turns within a week or two. The results are positive."

Procter & Gamble is working with Kellogg's and also the dairy industry to provide retailers with additional data to drive the milk, bread and cereal categories. "Milk and bread are immediate indicators of the grocery business a retailer is doing and can do," said Lane. "But those are problematic categories, so we are bringing in fullness of data to help retailers maximize the entire opportunity." The company is now developing College programs for the cooler door and salty snacks.

> "Procter & Gamble has moved the health and beauty aids category ahead light years for c-store retailers."

> Nice N Easy Grocery Shoppes Inc.

Health & Beauty Aids

"This is a category that has not been maximized by convenience operators through the years. Procter & Gamble has moved it ahead light years for convenience retailers," said Fran Duskiewicz, vice president of operations for Nice N Easy.

The chain has utilized the Procter & Gamble HBA College program "to increase the efficiency and productivity of the health and beauty aids category. Using a workbook format, HBA College is based on the NACS six-step category management program, and provides guidelines for retailers to manage the category.

HBA College assists retailers in addressing key issues for the category —identifying its role, assortment, item duplication and pricing strategies. "For example, if you have eight different versions of pain relievers, HBA College asks if you should have such duplication or look to variety," explained Traywick. "Then we look at the fact that consumers are aware of cross-channel pricing on HBA. We look at the appropriate pricing strategy."

"HBA is an arena most in the industry is not comfortable with and has little knowledge of because there are so many SKUs and so much competition," said Lane. "If it is strategically correct for the retailer to develop the category, they can attract consumers with selection and competitive pricing. The opportunity exists."

S&D Coffee

"For years, vendors to this industry were salespeople. At S&D Coffee, we're now consultants. When you sell the account, that's when the work really begins," said Dale Lozier, vice president of the convenience store division at S&D Coffee. "Our job today is to aid in the development of programs designed to grow the coffee category, continually interjecting new life and keeping the interest of the convenience store customer."

S&D Coffee's category-management efforts are supported by an interactive approach to the process. According to Lozier, a task force comprised of S&D Coffee sales and marketing managers conduct evaluations of each account's coffee program as the basis of program development. "We survey the store owners and managers, analyze the customer base and competitive environment, evaluate the various footprints in a chain and determine the appropriate program for each type of store involved," Lozier said. "Using our own sales and marketing team's expertise, we develop programs that address issues and opportunities unique to that operation."

Areas examined include the total hot beverage program, coffee-product selection, merchandising, branding, coffee-station logistics and traffic flow in the store. "Convenience store retailers constantly ask, 'How can I improve my coffee sales?' You can provide the best coffee in the world, but if the station is set up inefficiently or the traffic flow from the station to the register is not easy, you can lose that customer," Lozier explained. "We work to make the entire coffee program work efficiently and with impact."

Equipment is a crucial element of successful coffee programs, and S&D Coffee extends its expertise to equipment selection and maintenance. That complete approach to managing the coffee category has proved beneficial to convenience retailers. "S&D Coffee has worked with us on store-specific promotions, and assists with equipment calibrations to provide a consistent product profile," said Ernie Howard, director of marketing for Favorite Markets, a 121-store chain based in Dalton, Ga. "We are very proud of our program—The Coffee Corner—and S&D has helped us maintain quality and grow the program."

Swisher International Inc.

As changes in tobacco product retailing regulations continue to restrict merchandising options, convenience store retailers must be vigilant in managing the category, according to Bill Dunn, director of national accounts for Swisher International. "Category management of cigars, moist snuff and chewing tobacco is now playing a bigger role in the success of the category. It's crucial that the selection, pricing and presentation is right, because space is increasingly limited," said Dunn.

To maximize the profitability of the space devoted to tobacco products, Swisher International's field sales force takes a very hands-on approach to assisting convenience retail customers. Analysis of syndicated data, supplier sales movement and retail account data, when available, is combined with Swisher representatives' knowledge of the local market and the retailer's needs to develop a customized planogram, utilizing the Spaceman program. Key elements of the program are developing the appropriate product mix for the store's customer base, maintaining inventory levels to prevent out-of-stocks, establishing competitive pricing and developing strategic product placement, according to Dunn. Another element supplied by Swisher is merchandising racks.

Swisher International continues to assist retailers well beyond planogram implementation, which has proved beneficial to retailers. "Swisher conducts a quarterly review based on our sales so we can see what's working and what's not," said Richard Mione, director of marketing of Worsley Cos. Inc., based in Wilmington, N.C. "With that review, we can make adjustments to the planogram or product selection to keep the category fresh. This has been an extremely important part of our category-management program."

In today's environment, aggressive category management of tobacco products is the most effective means of ensuring category profitability and productivity, said Dunn. "There really is no room for mistakes today, and that's how we approach the process," he said.

Tropicana North America

James Powers

"To be a powerful resource to the retailer, we must be impartial and let the consumer dictate the basis for our recommendations," said James Powers, vice president, retail sales for the immediate consumables division at Tropicana North America. "In-store real estate is very valuable, and allocating that space with the right SKU's to maximize the retailer's profits is the appropriate focus."

Tropicana's hands-on approach begins with the interaction between retailers and the company's customer managers and broker account managers. Manager of category-management Jamie Reid is then brought in to develop category-management plans based on the needs of the retailer. Reid applies the proprietary TrueView system to the process, which incorporates retailer data, syndicated data and Tropicana's channel expertise. The process involves six phases: information gathering and goal setting; cooler space to sales evaluation; SKU optimization model development; planogram development; consumer demographic analysis against the planogram; and finally, store resets by the field personnel. The process takes 60 to 90 days to complete.

Tropicana TrueView process is constantly evolving with the industry. "Today's TrueView is not tomorrow's TrueView. Retailers are automating at a

Best-of-Class Retailers

Nominated for their category management prowess and program-execution skills by industry suppliers, the Best-of-Class retailers highlight the reasons for their success.

7-Eleven Inc.

"We take a macro-to-micro approach regarding category management," said David Podeschi, vice president of processed foods and non-foods for 7-Eleven. "We start with national industry consumer trends and seasonal change, and their impact on product sales. From there we drill down to individual item sales on an average per-store basis, also taking into account our internal analysis of category trends."

The benefits for 7-Eleven are a direct, positive impact on sales: reduced out-of-stocks; and improved display. "It makes the store easier to shop," he said. "Customers can find the fast-selling items easier. It also reduces out-of-stocks, because you're focusing your efforts on the fast-selling items."

Dallas-based 7-Eleven Inc. operates approximately 5,600 stores in the United States and Canada and, like most retailers, it has stepped up its use of scan data, especially over the past year. According to Podeschi, vendor alliances are also integral to an effective category-management model. The company doesn't establish "category captains" in the traditional sense, rather it partners with each supplier in a category. "For example, with soft drinks," Podeschi said, "we take our scan data, then we work with Pepsi-Cola, Coca-Cola and Cadbury to analyze results and develop appropriate action plans."

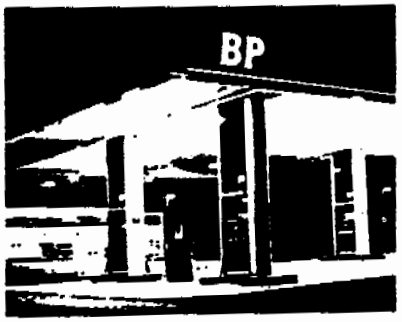
Podeschi added, "Forming supplier alliances provides you with a broader perspective on industry and consumer trends. We can identify certain trends that we might not have been able to see with just our own data, for example, if a certain subsegment is growing in the industry or if consumer trends show that a certain flavor type is trendy."

Establishing a network of suppliers also facilitates one of the most difficult aspects of category management: accommodating regional differences in product selection. "Through a combination of our centralized category managers working with our field merchandising staff and suppliers, we've been able to analyze the data centrally and regionally to implement the most effective strategies," Podeschi said.

A.T. Williams Oil Co.

A. T. Williams, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., is the parent company of Wilco Convenience Stores, operator of 120 stores. A.T. Williams devotes extensive energy to its market development and looks at every opportunity and profit center. That philosophy led one supplier to applaud A.T. Williams for its efforts in category management: "With several different store formats, the company is constantly changing. The company uses information from brokers and manufacturers' effectively to design planograms depending on each store's format."

BP Amoco Plc.



The recent merger between BP Oil and Amoco Corp. resulted in the formation of a new company—BP Amoco Plc.—but when it comes to category management, the proven rules still apply. "Our method combines the customer's point of view with a fact-based approach," said Marla Braswell, a manager of convenience store marketing at BP Amoco. "Each category is viewed as a strategic business unit, but there is also a strong focus on the customer, not solely on products."

16diii004887

The company has implemented several techniques for performing effective category management, including the use of scan data, syndicated data and vendor-supplied data for its 2,500 convenience stores.

BP Amoco also holds regular partnership meetings with its suppliers, bringing together each company's category managers, merchandisers and field personnel in an effort to develop effective, ongoing relationships. According to Braswell, establishing these alliances is invaluable. "Only suppliers can inform you about what your competition is doing and what the industry landscape is like," she said. "We only have our data, so if we're doing something wrong, we're going to continue to do it wrong. They are able to show us missed opportunities."

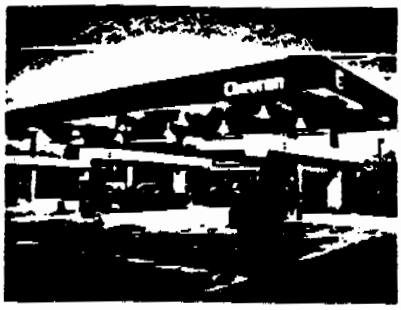
According to Braswell, since this category-management process was put in place, significant sales and margin increases have been realized, as well as a reduction in out-of-stocks. "Essentially, you're giving the right products the space they deserve for peak period sales."

Casey's General Stores Inc.

Casey's General Stores is making the most of all resources available in its approach to category management. According to one of the company's key suppliers, "Casey's has implemented a complex system to disseminate both its internal and industry data in order to make more effective category decisions.

"They believe in using as many proof sources as possible when adding a new item or promoting an existing one, and they believe in carrying a limited number of SKUs that turn very quickly. This approach helps keep inventory dollars to a minimum, while also maximizing turns." Headquartered in Ankeny, Iowa, Casey's operates 1,175 stores.

Chevron Products Co.



Data analysis and vendor alliances are the keys to Chevron Product Co.'s category-management approach. A division of Chevron Corp., based in San Francisco, the company owns and operates approximately 670 Chevron Food Marts, and views category management as an effective way to manage its c-store product offerings from a promotion, pricing and product selection standpoint.

The company rolled out POS scanning in 1998 and the information it collects is fed into a data warehouse, allowing category managers, category buyers and field merchandisers to analyze it and then develop recommendations. "Using this method, we can monitor movement of a specific item in a store," said Carlton B. Dallas, manager of convenience store retailing for Chevron. "We can carve out specific areas to analyze and we can also overlay a matrix of space allocation in terms of return on inventory investment."

According to Dallas, Chevron's approach has resulted in an upward sales trend. "Since implementing scanning last year, we've seen nearly 20 percent same-store gains in gross profit sales and dollars," he said.

Chevron also relies heavily on vendor partnerships. "Vendors are key elements of our category-management strategy," Dallas said. "Forming alliances allows for the mutual sharing of ideas to improve the efficiency of the supply chain. For example, we can begin to take a much broader look at what opportunities exist to increase both consumer service and sales."

Chevron works closely with the National Distributors Alliance and key partners such as Core-Mark and, according to Dallas, these relationships are constantly being strengthened. "The integration of data throughout the organization and between the vendors and Chevron is something that can always improve," he said. "It's also very important that we, as a retailer, develop alliances with key suppliers, and that there's an element of trust and mutual intention to develop strategies that work best for both companies, and for the consumer."

Conoco Inc.

Category management is not something you do once and then walk away, according to Jim Macari and Sam Farace, who are responsible for category management at 275-store Conoco Inc., Houston. "For Conoco, it comes down to defining who we want to be in the marketplace, what categories are going to drive our business and what strategies we're going to put in place to achieve the desired results," said Farace.

A key element of the company's market strategy was developing a centralized approach to category management and, according to Conoco's suppliers, this helps the company consistently carry the right product mix in a particular region. Conoco's category-management team in Houston monitors store operations, inventory and product movement. "There are some things we still handle on a local field level, but it just makes sense to manage a vast majority of category management from a centralized location," said Farace. "For example, if we're doing a planogram for candy, we can do that more effectively from Houston using our regional scan data. We don't need to do it six different times out in the field."

The result has been a more effective link between corporate headquarters and the field, as well as a more streamlined process for analyzing data and sending it back out to the stores. Since Conoco first started down this centralized path three years ago, the company has seen strong double-digit growth in both revenue and margin dollars on a same-store basis.

In 1998, Conoco also conducted monthly "supplier roundtables," bringing together 15 of its key suppliers. "We spent a day with them, asking them where they saw the industry headed and where they saw consumer trends moving in the next three to five years," said Macari.

Conoco also is driving continuous improvement in its stores. A "mystery shopper" is sent to stores once a month, monitoring customer service, merchandising, cleanliness and out-of-stocks. Also, the company's market merchandisers survey Conoco stores quarterly for planogram compliance, promotional implementation and correct pricing. "As of late 1997, when we implemented this program, our in-stock rate was 78 percent," said Macari. "We're now approaching 90 percent as of fourth quarter of 1998."

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores Inc.

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores is celebrating its 60th anniversary with a variety of events, among them a renewed focus on category management. Headquartered in Hudson, Ohio, Dairy Mart operates 600 convenience stores in seven states. According to Jay Ross, vice president of marketing and merchandising, as the company keeps growing, "we have to become more proactive in how we approach category management if we're going to continue to be successful."

A key element of this strategy, according to Ross, is spending more time listening to Dairy Mart customers in an effort to learn what they want from a convenience store, why they shop there and what categories are driving the business. To help accomplish this objective, the company has conducted several customer focus groups during the past year. Ross noted that maintaining an emphasis on customer needs and buying habits will help keep the company on the right track as it develops its category-management model for the future.

Ross also added that since the company presently does not scan, it relies heavily on its supplier partners to provide direction as far as category and product trends. One such supplier is Heinz Frozen Foods, which is working with Dairy Mart to develop store-specific planograms for the frozen-food category.

"Dairy Mart is very active in pursuing frozen-food sales and marketing opportunities," said Mark Kroll, associate product manager, channel development at Heinz Frozen Foods. "They are working to put together demographically specific planograms which are appropriate to their stores."

Equiva Services LLC

"Our category-management model centers on several elements," said Bill Pitocco, category manager, grocery, for Houston-based Equiva Services, operator of approximately 1,000 c-stores. "We analyze market-share data, consumer trends, competitive pressures, our information-technology capabilities and the financial realities of putting the right products in the stores."

Equiva Services uses space-management software to set its stores, including Spectra and InterCept. Suppliers noted that the company is very active in working with wholesalers and manufacturers to gather fact-based information for the development of planograms. Equiva acknowledges that it taps its supplier relationships for input. "Suppliers offer their own unique category-management expertise, especially regarding subcategories," Pitocco said. "I use the top two or three suppliers in a particular category to help me formulate strategies and to bounce planogram ideas off them."

Ultimately, however, retail turns are the deciding factor. "Category managers have to control their share of the company's assets," Pitocco said. "But they also have to be tied into what's happening with our operations personnel at the store level and with the customer. The customers' needs have to be fulfilled, from a product and inventory standpoint. I've got to be carrying the products the customer wants, with enough space allocated to those products so they're in stock. The ultimate result is increased sales and margin."

Giant Industries Inc.

Giant Industries, headquartered in Scottsdale, Ariz., is taking a branded approach to category management, according to Pam Brady at Convenience Marketing Inc., a grocery wholesaler that works closely with the company. Giant operates 54 stores under the banners Giant, Giant Express and Mustang.

"It's a very different approach," she said. "Over the course of three months, I spent a lot of time working with Giant to analyze and carefully plan out a 3-foot-by-4-foot section for all the stores operated by the company. They are taking each category one by one, and making an effort to manage categories in such a way that will achieve the maximum impact."

According to Brady, the end result will be a more pleasant shopping experience for the customer. "By making the top-selling brands more visible, throughout every category, Giant is making its stores easier to shop," said Brady. "This will lead to an overall increase in customer service and sales."

Marsh Village Pantry

Marsh Village Pantry, a division of Marsh Supermarkets, based in Indianapolis, operates approximately 180 Village Pantry convenience stores. Recently, Village Pantry was very active in implementing more effective methods of driving customer traffic. According to Bob Dalton, regional sales manager for Modern Aids, one of Village Pantry's suppliers, the chain is a very active partner as far as working to continually update its shelf sets.

"They ask us for industry data, and for other companies' success stories," said Dalton. "They're also very interested in staying current with family pricing, as well as adding new items that could be fast-selling, and deleting items that aren't."

Mobil Corp.

Mobil relies on a comprehensive, fact-based decision-making process when implementing category management at its 400 Mobil Marts and 226 On The Run convenience stores.

"A product must justify its space in a store in order to remain in the store, in terms of both retail sales and gross profit," said Barry Shull, group category director for Mobil, based in Fairfax, Va. "From Mobil's perspective, that should all be predicated on fact-based decision-making. We look at market-share data in all retail channel segments and our own internal data, as well as data gathered by the major vendors in each category segment. The goal is to implement balanced category strategies that aren't biased toward any one product and that allow us to paint an accurate picture of the marketplace."

Key to developing this picture clearly is Mobil's recently established "Beverage Vendor Category Captain" program. Mobil's criteria for awarding this status is based on a vendor's category-management philosophy, as well as having a process that "covers all the key components required for us to make a fact-based decision about putting the right products in the right slots," said Shull. For example, in the non-carbonated beverage segment, Mobil's selection for category captain is Coca-Cola Co., which in turn noted Mobil's "consumer-engineered" category approach and its understanding of the power of its brands as keys to building the entire beverage category.

For Mobil, the main benefits of working with its category captains are having access to that company's market data, as well as receiving invaluable feedback from an industry standpoint. Mobil works closely with its chosen vendors to do field and store surveys, develop timelines, make assortment presentations to its field merchandising staff and hold regular briefings regarding store-layout resets. This is all to ensure that the right products are displayed effectively to improve store operations—for both Mobil and the supplier.

The Pantry Inc.

At The Pantry, product facings are not necessarily determined by scientific analysis of the number one, two or three items in a particular market. "The items you select and the programs you execute in the stores are ultimately judged by the customer," said Kent Raphael, director of purchasing for The Pantry Inc., based in Sanford, N.C. "In the convenience store industry, your customers are somewhat of a captive audience. You need to carry branded, quality items, but not necessarily the number-one item. For example, people shop at a c-store usually out of a fairly definite need. If somebody comes in to buy air freshener, as long as a quality, brand item is in stock they'll be satisfied."

The company operates approximately 1,200 stores under the banners The Pantry, Quick Stop, Zip Mart, Dash-N, Express Stop, Lil' Champ, Quick Mart and Handy Way. Raphael noted that with such a large network of stores, he finds it useful to implement a four-tiered approach, tying together the manufacturer, broker, store and customer.

"After you select an item to carry, and you know the level of support from the manufacturer or broker, the next step is getting the product into the stores and getting the planogram done," he said. "With 1,200 locations, it's difficult to make that all happen effectively. That's why having supplier alliances is important, almost as important as what products you select."

Raphael noted that establishing alliances also provides the ability to more easily make changes at store level mid-year. "If you want to change two items in a particular section, how do you go to eight states and change that item? With a network of alliances in place, it's not as difficult," he said. "Without it, you would be stuck doing it annually or twice a year."

R.R. Morrison & Sons

At R.R. Morrison & Sons, the Vicksburg, Miss.-based operator of Fast Lane stores, the approach to category management is closely connected to its overall initiatives in customer service and store design, as well as its supplier and vendor relationships. This philosophy has helped Fast Lane realize several benefits, such as reduced out-of-stocks and the elimination of unnecessary SKUs.

"We view category management from a broad, industry perspective first, and then we narrow our approach by partnering with particular suppliers in particular categories," said Mark Tate, marketing manager of Fast Lane's 53 stores in Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee. "For example, in our juice set, we look at which supplier is leading the market in our area, and we work with them to make sure we have the right mix and the right amount of space dedicated to whatever product they carry."

One company upon which Fast Lane relies heavily is McLane Co. Inc.'s southern division. "They provide updated purchase information through their warehouse, and that tells me what other retailers are pulling," said Tate. "It's not chain-specific, but rather, they tell me, 'We're moving 400 cases of Tropicana grape juice a week and you're not carrying that in your mix so you might want to consider it.' That information is very helpful."

Ken Hudson, area sales manager for McLane Southern, noted Fast Lane's use of technology to set its stores as one example of effective category management. "They're actually tied into our mainframe," said Hudson. "From their headquarters, they can download data by category or item to see what was sold in a certain period. Then they can analyze that data, and compare the stores that are doing well against the ones that aren't and actually update their schematics in real time."

Looking forward, Tate noted that the company's goal is to further improve its use of technology to be able to make more accurate category decisions on a store-by-store basis. As part of this initiative, Fast Lane recently updated its point-of-sale equipment, and also upgraded its store registers to better capture its scan data.

Spectrum Stores Inc.

Spectrum Stores is moving into the new century with a new approach to category management. With 56 stores in eastern Alabama and western Georgia, the West Point, Ga.-based company is currently in the process of upgrading its stores to capture scan data. The rollout started in April, and Spectrum expects to have all stores completed by the end of the year.

> "We're looking forward to having scanning data, which will allow us to make more effective decisions on categories and specific items within categories."
> Spectrum Stores Inc.

"Currently, our main method of reviewing category performance is through the use of purchase information," said Chuck Vires, vice president of marketing. "We're looking forward to having scanning data, which will allow us to make more effective decisions on categories and specific items within categories."

As Spectrum continues to revise its category management methodology, the company is relying heavily on its wholesalers and suppliers to provide support and guidance. Spectrum also is following the NACS category management guidelines, tailoring them to meet its stores' specific needs. Having such a varied approach is important, according to Vires, to accommodate different store layouts and different customer buying habits in various regions.

Spectrum's long-term goal is ultimately to serve its customers better by having a better understanding of their needs and simply having product available when they're ready to buy. "Obviously, the more we know about a category, the better we can decide which stores should or should not carry a certain product," Vires said. "Then, by eliminating products that we now know won't sell in a certain store, more space can be allocated for the appropriate product sets. As a result, out-of-stocks are reduced, products turn faster and the customers' needs are more closely met."

Speedway SuperAmerica LLC

Based in Enon, Ohio, Speedway SuperAmerica operates 2,220 stores. One of Speedway SuperAmerica's key suppliers cited the company as an early user of scan data to drive the implementation of Apollo planograms. Speedway SuperAmerica and the supplier worked in concert to communicate that information in the planograms to the store level.

Speedway SuperAmerica is comprised of the downstream assets of Marathon Ashland Petroleum LLC, which includes the former SuperAmerica Group and Marathon Oil's Emro Marketing Co.

Tosco Marketing Co.

"Category management is an ongoing process that involves how you go about your day-to-day business with a strong consumer focus," said John Zikias, vice president of field and corporate marketing for Tosco Marketing Co., the retail marketing division of Tosco Corp., and operator of 2,200 Circle K stores. "Simply setting up the process is not enough. You need to continually review information."

Headquartered in Phoenix, Tosco Marketing Co.'s category management approach is based on the NACS guidelines. Through this process, Tosco and suppliers share internal category sales data, customer knowledge and their corporate marketing strategies, as well as ways to optimize market information and supply-chain efficiencies.

"We are in the process of tailoring the NACS category-management templates to meet our specific needs, for example, modifying the vendor questionnaires to fit Tosco's model," Zikias said. "We're really trying to work within the framework, however. It makes it easier for the suppliers if they know that the information they have to provide is similar and consistent with other convenience retailers."

Tosco has also established several strategic partnerships with key suppliers such as Coca-Cola, Anheuser-Busch and Dean Foods. According to Zikias, these alliances help streamline the data-gathering process. "They provide a consistent form of data," he said. "As an example, for categories with products that are direct-store-delivered, without scanning you're heavily reliant on suppliers to provide you with information. The suppliers have been able to help us organize our data in a consolidated form that's easier to work with, and they've also given us valuable category information from a total market perspective."

Turkey Hill Minit Markets

Each of the 232 Turkey Hill Minit Markets is designed from the perspective of the customer, according to Victoria Paul, business development manager, eastern region for broker Convenience Marketing Inc. By working closely with Turkey Hill and its wholesale distributor, Miller-Hartman, Paul is eyewitness to the positive changes taking place within the company.

"They are building state-of-the-art stores, from the concept of what the customer sees when they walk in," she said. "Everything is arranged in the most effective manner for the customer in a particular region."

Turkey Hill, based in Lancaster, Pa., is a division of Dillon Cos. Paul describes the way she and Turkey Hill's Brian Kurtz work together as a true partnership. "For example, if they don't have one of our retailer programs in their stores, I explain why they should," she said. "In turn, Brian has a background in buying for a wholesaler, which is very valuable to us. Ultimately, we're all partnering to get the best products in the stores and to serve the customer better."

In explanation as to why I signed the unethical incident report with the Conwood representative

I was led to believe that it was just a report stating that the racks were combined and the rep did not feel it was right. He need me to sign as a witness that the incident had happened. At no time did I have a complaint that the racks had been combined. Kodiak did not lose any facings nor did any product leave my store. The old rack was not destroyed.

In fact I appreciate the fact that the product was put in one rack because the Kodiak and Skoal reps have been coming in every month and rearranging and constantly complaining about the other reps. I feel it was in the best interest of the store, it looks much better and I don't have to listen to the complaints any more.

Attention Burdy:

This is regarding the letter I signed for Conwood Company, L.P. David came in and told me that the Skoal Company had no right to put this product in a Skoal display. He also told me this book had spoken to you (Burdy) and it was okay for him to put this product back into this own rack. From what I can remember, David told me that this letter I signed was just in a file at his Main Office letting them know he had put this own product back in this own racks.

Dear Mr. Edwards,

I Jim Ritelle of Howard Corporation recently signed a unethical report that was not a true statement. The salesman from Kodiak informed me that it was just a Incident report to show that his Kodiak rack was pulled out of my store. However, all of Kodiaks product remained in my store placed in the shoal rack. To the best of my knowledge there was nothing unethical done to this product and that I had no right to sign such a statement. The salesman from Kodiak totally mislead me to believe that it was just a Incident Report and not an unethical report.

Sincerely,

Jim Ritelle

Alan Forest
Conwood Tobacco

May 20, 1994

Dear Alan,

After our conversation on Friday, May 13th, I had a meeting with the four managers that signed the letters to Conwood on the unethical practices of the U.S. Tobacco reps in their stores. At that meeting I asked the managers if there had been any unauthorized removal of any Conwood product or racks from the store and all four of them said that none had been removed. The racks at the stores were not removed by UST as they and you had informed me. In fact all the managers said they liked the single rack program much better. As I related to you U.S. Tobacco has partnered with us for two years on our billboard campaign and for the last 5 at the River Rear in Bay City. Conwood has declined to enter into the billboard campaign for the same two year period, leaving little choice in who we should use as our primary vender in the smokeless tobacco category.

As I told you in our meeting I want a one rack program and I feel that the rack has to be the Skoal rack because of all the past and present participation they have done with Forward Corporation.

THIS WAS NOT ADDRESSED IN PHONE CONVERSATIONS OF IN THE MEETING

I would now like to address the problem of managers signing any documents for Forward Corporation, other than receipts or invoices for deliveries. Any letters of complaint or unethical practices will be written from the chain headquarters in Standish. Our managers do not have the authority to sign such a document, will not do so again. In the future before asking managers to sign letters of intent from your company you should talk with Terry Mc Taggart (President), Austin Buttrick (Chairman of the Board) or myself. We are the only authorized personnel to sign such statements in the Convenience Store Division.

The last item I would like to address is the statement you made about me being offered money or incentives to change these racks. I take personnel offense to that. After all the time we have been doing business together I can't believe that you would think that of me. I chose programs for Forward Corporation on the basis of their merit or advertising quality and that alone. That is why you don't see every cigarette display and program in our stores. The smokeless tobacco rack program was changed because managers were tired of both reps bothering them on a monthly basis concerning the position of these racks. Going to a one rack program solved this situation that was caused by your rep.

Attached you will find letters from the managers stating to me how these letters of complaint came to be signed and why I was not made aware of it at the time. If you have any questions concerning this incident please contact me at your earliest convenience at (517) 846-4501 ext. 120. Please forward all of the original letters of unethical practices to me that were signed in our name by the four managers, enclosed you will find the letters that you should have gotten.

Sincerely Yours,

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' REPLY TO PLAINTIFFS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED EXHIBITS: DeWayne Biddy, Robert Carlson, Greg Germany, Morgan Jones and Lundy Edwards

Defendants respectfully respond to Plaintiffs' objections as follows:

Dewayne Biddy — Defendants withdraw DX 680.

Robert Carlson — Defendants withdraw DX 130, 141, 499, 500

DX 131 and 139 fall within an exception to the rule against hearsay: they are business records of both the deponent and defendants.

Greg Germany

DX 258: Defendants agree that there is inconsequential hearsay on USTC/CWD 277588 and 277589. (277588: "Division Manager Nancy Kenner explained that Harrison Co. has a large minimum order per account and that the majority of the Hagmans accounts will not meet their minimum order"; 277589: "SR Barry Wentz reports that Conwood reps. have started buying down Kodiak Wint. an additional .40 cents per can on top of the original .40 cents off."). This hearsay is not being offered for the truth of the matter asserted. Defendants respectfully suggest, however, that the hearsay is too inconsequential and nonprejudicial to merit redaction or a limiting instruction.

DX 270: Beyond two observations that "SR[sales representativies]'s report that product is scanning properly" and "SR's point out that Wal-mart personnel are very pleased with the program", there is no indication on this weekly activity report that any fact Mr. Germany reports is outside his personal knowledge. This hearsay is not being offered for the truth of the matter asserted. Defendants respectfully suggest that redaction or a limiting instruction would cure any prejudice.

M. Jones

DX 95, 103: Plaintiffs object to DX 95 and 103 as lacking in foundation. The propriety of that objection is contingent on the foundation laid during Mr. Jones' direct examination and is not properly ruled on in advance.

DX 146: Defendants will not use DX 146 in their direct examination of Mr. Jones. Defendants, however, disagree that DX 146 has been excluded from evidence per prior Order of the Court. This issue of Convenience Store News may yet be introduced into evidence through the testimony of another witness.

L. Edwards

DX 539-42: These exhibits are not hearsay; they are admissions of a party opponent.

DX 465-467: Defendants will not seek to offer into evidence DX 465-467 after the testimony of Mr. Edwards.

DX 538: This is a business record of Mr. Edwards and for that reason falls into an exception to the hearsay rule.

DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO EXHIBITS

In accordance with this Court's Order at the pre-trial conference concerning the reconciling of exhibits, Plaintiffs and Defendants have been communicating regularly concerning exhibits in evidence. Attached at Tab 1 is a list of all exhibits Defendants believe have been offered and admitted into evidence. Defendants dispute only the admission of PX 152. Defendants are waiting for a transcript of the Court proceedings of March 2, 2000 concerning a possible objection to PX 333.

PX 152 is an unsigned, undated document entitled "DRAFT: 1999 CAP Goals". This draft does not reflect the position ultimately adopted by U.S. Tobacco. The revised CAP agreement is PX 146, to which Defendants have no objection. When a prior draft varies considerably from the final version, it is insufficiently trustworthy to fall within Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). See Lloyd v. Professional Realty Services, 734 F.2d 1428 (11th Cir. 1984) (affirming exclusion of a draft document under Rule 803(6) because the document "was quite different from the final copy . . . which had been previously entered into evidence."). This document does not record facts reliably, in fact, it is by its nature speculative. No record testimony establishing the context, purpose or publication of this draft exists. For these reasons, it cannot be a "statement" of a party opponent.

The goals that are currently under consideration are shown in the grid below. It is our belief that these represent goals that are achievable with the current program. They have been listed in what we perceive as priority order for retailers and wholesalers and, of course, are subject to input from management and legal.

	WHOLESALE	RETAIL
– DISPLAY - SHARE OF SPACE	N/A	1
– SHARE of SALES*	2	2
– PRICE MIX	3	3
– DATA COMPONENTS	1	N/A

DISPLAY

The display goal would be to make sure that USTSM's share of fixture was in proportion to its share of sales in the account.

SHARE OF SALES

The share of sales goals would be based upon the greater of either the retailer's historical percentage of USTSM sales or the goal for USTSM sales in the area that the retailer is located.

Share of sales was chosen as the primary benchmark for accounts, because it provides the most fair and flexible way to determine goals for an account. This approach allows us to ask the retailer to be the best that he can be with the things that he can control. There are many things that are beyond a retailer's control that could affect its performance in achieving a volume goal:

An increase in competition - A new store opens across the street.

A downturn in the local economy - A factory closes.

These could affect a retailer's volume and are caused by factors that are beyond the retailers control. Goals based on a retailer's share of sales would automatically and fairly compensate for these changes in the environment that are beyond the retailers control.

We want the retailer to focus on improving the things that are in his control.

PLAINTIFF'S EXHIBIT
CASE NO. 5:98CV-108-R
EXHIBIT NO. 152

PRICE MIX

The target PP/PV ratio might be something like 85/15 (85% PP sales and 15% PV sales).

DATA COMPONENT

The primary focus for wholesalers would be to make sure that they are providing quality data in a timely fashion. This includes all aspects of the data reporting requirements including units, dollars, promotional units, inventories.

*DETERMINATION SHARE OF SALES PERCENTAGES

A) Accounts with 1 year of history

Share goal will be the greater of an accounts share of sales for the same period of time in the previous year or the area's goal for share of sales.

B) Accounts with less than 1 year of history

Share goal will be the greater of the accounts share of sales for the last quarter or the area's goal for share of sales.

C) Accounts with less than 1 quarter of history

Share goal will be the goal for the area the account is in. This will be the average share for the area during the same time period of the previous year.

FOR EXAMPLE:

In department COO the average share of USTSM sales is XX.X%. This would be the percentage that an account without an established benchmark would have to achieve until they had established one for themselves

D) Chain Accounts

The average for the chain would be used.

The same criteria as above would be used to establish share of sales goals for the chain. In the case of a chain that had less than a quarter of history, the average share for all of the areas that the chain operates retail stores in would be used.

DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM REGARDING DEFENDANTS' USE OF DEPOSITION TESTIMONY OF CONWOOD EMPLOYEES

Plaintiffs refuse to provide counterdesignations for the designated deposition testimony of Conwood employees. For the first time, Plaintiffs assert that because all Conwood employees will be available to testify at trial, Defendant cannot use their deposition testimony in their case. This argument is baseless. It contradicts the express language of Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2), and it is contrary to the Sixth Circuit's holding in Black v. United Parcel Service, 797 F.2d 290 (6th Cir. 1986).

In the interest of time and efficiency, Defendants plan to use limited deposition testimony from several Conwood witnesses that is narrow in scope and directly relevant to Defendants' affirmative case. Apparently with the hope of disrupting Defendants' presentation, Plaintiffs seek to prevent the use of such deposition testimony simply by refusing, over the weekend, to provide counterdesignations to Defendants' designations. Defendants respectfully request that this Court order Plaintiffs to provide counterdesignations without further delay, or in the alternative, to have Defendants' designation presented to the jury without them.

The law is clear that the deposition testimony of a party, or of an officer, director, or managing agent of a party, may be used at trial for any purpose regardless of whether the witness is available to testify. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2). The rule has nothing to do with the witness' availability. The Sixth Circuit left little question that deposition testimony may be presented at trial pursuant to Rule 32(a)(2), even if the witness is physically present in the courtroom. See Black, 797 F.2d at 293 (Rule 32(a)(2) permits deposition testimony of UPS preloading manager to be used at trial for any purpose).

Here, Plaintiffs do not argue – nor could they – that any of the Conwood employees for whom deposition testimony has been designated is not – at the very least – a "managing agent" of Conwood within the meaning of Rule 32(a)(2). See Stearns v. Paccar, Inc., 986 F.2d 1429, 1993 WL 17084, *4 (10th Cir. Jan. 22, 1993) (factors considered in determining whether an individual is a "managing agent" are whether the agent's interests are identified with those of principal, the nature and extent of the agent's functions, responsibilities and duties, the extent of the agents power to exercise judgment and discretion, and whether any person or persons higher in authority than deponent were in charge of the particular matter or possessed all of the necessary information sought in the deposition.) Conwood employees for whom deposition testimony has been, and will be, designated by Defendants include Conwood's president, Conwood's vice president of marketing, Conwood's regional and district sales managers, and other Conwood management employees. By comparison, the employee in Black was a relatively low-level "loading manager" for UPS. Thus, under Stearns, under Black, and under the plain meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2), the deposition testimony of these employees may be used at trial for any purpose. Accordingly, there is no tenable argument that Defendants cannot present the designated deposition testimony to the jury.

Further, judicial efficiency would best be served by the presentation of narrowed and focused deposition testimony, rather than the presentation of numerous live witnesses. This is precisely the reason each party expended much time, effort and resources traveling around the country taking, defending and video-taping the depositions of over one hundred witnesses. Plaintiffs should not now be allowed, on the eve of Defendants' case, to announce its unwillingness to provide counterdesignations in an effort to prevent Defendants from presenting its case according to procedures expressly provided for by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Memorandum Regarding Defendants' Use of Deposition Testimony of Conwood Employees. This Court orders Plaintiffs to provide Defendants with counterdesignations to deposition testimony of officers, directors, or managing agents Defendants intend to play at trial.

Defendants assert that Plaintiffs refuse to counterdesignate deposition testimony on the basis that witnesses availability for live testimony prohibits Defendants from using deposition testimony. This argument is baseless. Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) states that, "[t]he deposition of a party or of anyone who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director or managing agent, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, partnership or association or governmental agency which is a party may be used by an adverse party for any purpose." The Sixth Circuit has previously allowed deposition testimony under this rule even when the witness is present in the courtroom. See Black v. United Parcel Serv., 797 F.2d 290 (6th Cir. 1986).

This Court ORDERS Plaintiffs to provide deposition counterdesignations to those witnesses who are officers, directors, or managing agents under Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) that Defendants plan to use at trial, regardless of their availability.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM CONCERNING THE APPLICABILITY OF RULE 32(a)(1) WHERE THE MANAGING AGENT HAS RETIRED

There is no authority for Plaintiffs' position that the deposition of an employee who was a managing agent at the time of his or her deposition cannot be used in accordance with Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2) simply because that employee no longer works for the party.

The express language of Rule 32(a)(1) provides that "[t]he deposition of a party or of anyone who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director, or managing agent . . . may be used by an adverse party for any purpose." Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2) (emphasis added). See Reed Paper Company v. Procter & Gamble Distributing Co., 144 F.R.D. 2 (D. Maine 1992) (relevant inquiry under Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(2) is whether the deponent was a managing agent at the time of the taking of his or her deposition); Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal

Practice and Procedure §§ 2103, 2145 (same). Plaintiffs argue that certain of Conwood's employees who were managing agents at the time of their deposition are now retired. Plaintiffs, however, do not argue – nor could they – that any of the retired persons were not managing agents of Conwood at the time of taking the deposition. Accordingly, despite the fact that certain of Conwood's managing agents have retired since the taking of their depositions, Rule 32(a)(1) applies with full force.

In addition, in an effort to provide the Court with sufficient factual background to Practice and Procedure §§ 2103, 2145 (same). Plaintiffs argue that certain of Conwood's employees who were managing agents at the time of their deposition are now retired. Plaintiffs, however, do not argue – nor could they – that any of the retired persons were not managing agents of Conwood at the time of taking the deposition. Accordingly, despite the fact that certain of Conwood's managing agents have retired since the taking of their depositions, Rule 32(a)(1) applies with full force.

In addition, in an effort to provide the Court with sufficient factual background to make a determination of whether Conwood District Sales Managers are managing agents within the definition of Rule 32(a)(2), Defendants note the following:

- Each District Sales Manger is in charge of a Conwood sales district, a designated geographic territory that invariably covers several states;
- Each District Sales Manager does business on behalf of Conwood with any number of retailers within his or her district;
- Each District Sales Manager supervises six to eight full-time sales representatives, as well as a varying number of part-time sales representatives; and
- Each District Sales Manager exercises discretion in allocating promotional expenditures, buy-down funds, and advertising supplies within his or her district.

In short, each Conwood District Sales Manager exercises more discretion in the interests of Conwood than the UPS "loading manager" found to be a "managing agent" in the Black case. There can be no doubt that Rule 32(a)(2) should apply with equal force to Conwood District Sales Managers.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should order Plaintiffs to provide counterdesignations for Conwood Regional Sales Managers who have retired since the time of their deposition, as well as for all Conwood District Sales Managers.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1), Defendants ("U.S. Tobacco") respectfully move this Court to grant judgment as a matter of law against Plaintiffs ("Conwood") on their Sherman Act §2, Lanham Act, and state law claims.

> "The purpose of these [antitrust] laws is not to protect businesses from the working of the market; it is to protect the public from the failure of the market. The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself."

Plaintiffs' Proposed Jury Instructions, LePages, Inc. v. 3M, p. 19. (Tab 1)

I. IT IS UNDISPUTED THAT THE COMPETITIVE PROCESS IS OPEN TO CONWOOD AND OTHERS

As the evidence has come in before the jury, there is no dispute that the "working of the market" that is at issue in this case is the competitive process between and among moist snuff manufacturers to place products, racks and POS with retailers. There also is no dispute that this competitive process is wide open to all companies that choose to take part in that process, which all moist snuff companies do in varying degrees. Although Plaintiffs may argue that certain conduct by U.S. Tobacco prevents or hinders Conwood's ability to place items at retail, any such argument misconstrues the undisputed nature of the "working of the market" for the display and sale of moist snuff products. The retail industry in this country is not a series of flea markets where merchants are free to throw down a blanket and display their wares at will. The retail industry is predicated on the decisions of retailers – decisions to spend their own money to purchase products from retailers, decisions to organize their stores and use their own space in the manner that they see fit, and the decisions to display products with the hopes of faring well in their own competition against other retailers.

A. There Is No Evidence Of Any Agreements That Restrict The Competitive Process

"If during a trial by jury a party has been fully heard on an issue and there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for that party on that issue, the court may determine the issue against the party and may grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law. . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1). Because Plaintiffs have not offered, and have not even attempted to offer, evidence concerning the competitive process itself, this Court should determine the issue and grant judgment as a matter of law for U.S. Tobacco.

In this case, Plaintiffs have not offered a single piece of evidence that the competitive process – aside from Conwood's ability and/or willingness to compete in that process – is impaired by the conduct of U.S. Tobacco. Instead, Plaintiffs have simply declared that the decisions of retailers – even the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers – are irrelevant.[1] As a result, Plaintiffs have not even suggested that a single retailer was coerced in any way, never mind meeting its burden to prove by a preponderance of evidence that a substantial amount of the retail industry was foreclosed from competition by Conwood or any other moist snuff manufacturer.

Plaintiffs have not offered a single retailer from over 300,000 retail locations to testify that it had entered an agreement with U.S. Tobacco that restricted in any way the retailer's ability to do business with other manufacturers. Plaintiffs have offered only a literal handful of retailers – far fewer than the "scores" they promised – to testify about a literal handful of isolated incidents of "bad acts." That is the extent of Plaintiffs' proof about what actually happens in the retail environment.

[1] But see February 17, 2000 Order on Summary Judgment, at 10 (holding that multiple issues remain for trial, including "whether the damages claimed by Conwood is caused by UST, or instead is the result of the independent uncoerced decisions by retailers").

1. Conwood's Evidence of "Agreements" Is Itself Fatally Flawed

Party A agrees to do X in exchange for Party B doing Y: That is an agreement. Here, the only evidence is a retailer makes decisions to use a U.S. Tobacco racks because he or she prefers the look, design, or functionality of that rack, and that U.S. Tobacco provides that rack to service its customer. That is not an agreement, even when it results in a retailer authorizing only the U.S. Tobacco rack. Plaintiffs have completely ignored this distinction and, as a result, have failed to offer sufficient evidence of any actual agreements that would support its claim that Conwood is excluded from competition.

Indeed, Plaintiffs did not offer the testimony of a single retailer suggesting that the retailer had an agreement with U.S. Tobacco that prevented the retailer from doing business however, and with whomever, it wanted. Instead, the bulk of Plaintiffs' "exclusive agreements" evidence was channeled in through the testimony of Dr. Gregory Gundlach. Dr. Gundlach's testimony, however, is revealing:

> Q. Did you study whether any retailers selected the United States Tobacco rack based on a contractual obligation to U.S. Tobacco rather than their own independent choice to have a uniform rack or just because they liked U.S. Tobacco better?
> A. Again, I was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind. . . . Tr., March 9, at 148. (Tab 2)
> Q. So, as far as you know, the competitive [process] to use one rack or multiple rack, someone else's rack, is wide open; is that correct?
> A. Again, the focus was whether or not there was an agreement. Not necessarily whether and how it was reached. . . . Id. at 156. (Tab 2)

That testimony illustrates the full extent of Plaintiffs' theory and Plaintiffs' evidence of the claim that U.S. Tobacco injures competition by entering into exclusive agreements. More importantly, the entirety of the evidence offered during Plaintiffs' case in chief warrants judgment as a matter of law:

16diii004952

- Every "agreement" that was literally highlighted by Plaintiffs is terminable at will, see Plaintiffs' Proposed Jury Instructions, LePage's, p. 48. (Tab 1)
- No "agreement" highlighted by Plaintiffs prevented or even hindered a retailer from carrying a Conwood product, if it chose to do so, see id., pp. 43-44 (Tab 1);
- No "agreement" highlighted by Plaintiffs was "exclusionary" beyond the physical rack or fixture provided to the retailer by U.S. Tobacco. In other words, any "exclusive" POS term of any "agreement" referred only to the rack or fixture, not to the store; and
- At all times, Conwood has remained free to sell its products, racks, and POS into any store in this country.

At a minimum, consistent with this Court's prior rulings, Plaintiffs had the burden of offering a legally sufficient evidentiary basis that: (1) U.S. Tobacco and retailers reached agreements; (2) the agreements were not the result of the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers; and (3) the agreements prevented Conwood from doing business. Plaintiffs have offered no such evidentiary basis, and judgment as a matter of law is warranted.

B. Plaintiffs Offered Evidence of a Handful of Isolated Incidents of Unauthorized "Bad Acts"

Similarly, Plaintiffs have not offered a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for its claim that U.S. Tobacco sales representatives engage in a systematic campaign to remove Conwood racks, POS materials and products from retail stores. Instead, Plaintiffs have relied on evidence where a retailer has chosen a U.S. Tobacco rack to replace Conwood's or on anecdotal evidence of isolated incidents of unauthorized rack removal. The evidentiary record makes it clear that any unauthorized incidents occur between and among all of the different sales forces that do business in the moist snuff industry. Swedish Match takes Conwood racks; Conwood takes U.S. Tobacco racks; the tit-for-tat goes on. It is not the stuff of the antitrust laws.

If there were, in fact, a systematic campaign to remove Conwood racks to the extent necessary to affect competition in the overall moist snuff market alleged by Plaintiffs, the frequency of rack removal would be a repeating point of concern for nearly every retailer in this country. Instead, Plaintiffs have offered the jury the following retailer testimony:

- Gayleen Rusk, a manager of a single-store Amoco Pronto Express store in Sioux City, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco representative removed a Cougar rack in August of 1998.
- Georgia Gill-Elkins, a manager of a single-store Berreth Oil minimart in Mishawaka, Indiana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco rack removed a U.S. Tobacco rack, and the Conwood POS on that rack, in November of 1998.
- Patricia Lienen, a former employee of a single-store Dave's Country Store in Dunlap, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed Conwood racks, but always put the Conwood product in a U.S. Tobacco rack.
- Marti Stevens, a manager of a single-store Qwik Way store in Billings, Montana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed a Conwood rack – the exclusive Conwood rack – in August, 1997.

If this is a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a $1.3 billion antitrust claim, then every manufacturer that employs a sales force – including Conwood – must be certain that in over 7.69 million sales calls over ten years, see Tr., March 7, at 91-93 (Tab 3), none of its sales personnel commit any "bad acts" in the field. The antitrust laws, which were intended to promote and foster competition, were not meant to snap into effect when the very market conditions created by that competition do, in fact, exist in the real world.

II. PLAINTIFFS DID NOT ESTABLISH CAUSATION AND DAMAGES

Plaintiffs have not offered any evidence whatsoever – not even expert testimony – that Conwood lost any sales as a result of not having a rack, not having a particular piece of POS, or not having its entire product line in any retail store. No consumer has testified that he or she could not "find" a Conwood product that was "lost" in a U.S. Tobacco rack. No retailer has testified that it lost sales as a result of any U.S. Tobacco conduct, and that is not even the inquiry. In fact, Plaintiffs would have to show that Conwood lost the sale – i.e., that the consumer did not or could not purchase the product at all from any retail store. In any event, Plaintiffs have not laid the injury-in-fact foundation for their expert's damages conclusions.

Dr. Leftwich's testimony and damages estimates were exposed as pure fantasy. Dr. Leftwich's own data demonstrated vividly that in the 25 lowest of the low-share states – states where Conwood did not have a "foothold" as the theory goes – Conwood's share saw no abrupt change in 1990 or thereafter. Dr. Leftwich's own data also demonstrated that Conwood's overall share rose steadily, again with no abrupt change in 1990 or thereafter. See Tr. March 8, at 63-70 (Tab 4). Accordingly, Dr. Leftwich's damages study bears no relation to Conwood's own theory of liability.

Moreover, Dr. Leftwich's damages study makes no attempt to disaggregate the effects of lawful conduct by U.S. Tobacco – e.g., increased promotional activity – or any conduct having nothing to do with U.S. Tobacco – e.g., the promotional activity or even rack removal attributable to other moist snuff companies. See Tr., March 8, at 76-91 (Tab 4). Indeed, Dr. Leftwich testified that, despite the fact that Dr. Gundlach re-evaluated his conclusions concerning whether U.S. Tobacco had "exclusive agreements" with 14 different chains, his damages calculations did not change. See id. at 76-77 (Tab 4).

Finally, Dr. Leftwich offers the jury the equivalent of a dart and the side of a barn to render a verdict on damages. Dr. Leftwich's "range" of damages is from $155 to $438 Million, or in other words, anywhere over $155 Million. See id. at 42 (Tab 4). The expert opinion that Conwood's lost profits from lost sales over the past four years is "somewhere" between $155 and $488 Million is indicative of two things: (1) the analysis is really not measuring anything; and (2) the analysis is not helpful to the jury in awarding damages.

The antitrust laws do not allow a jury to render a damages verdict based on their own speculation and guesswork. They also do not allow a jury to render a verdict based on the speculation and guesswork of a hired expert witness.

III. LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Plaintiffs' elusive Lanham Act claim seems to have taken on a whole new basis during trial. Plaintiffs' focus now appears to be on the allegation that the "Made" date on a Copenhagen can is somehow misleading to consumers. Assuming Plaintiffs prove that is true, which they cannot, Conwood would have no standing to bring what essentially is a consumer claim against U.S. Tobacco.

After searching the trial record for evidence of Plaintiffs' original Lanham Act claim, which was based on product defamation, the only evidence offered by Plaintiffs seems to be the testimony of Andrew Carter. Mr. Carter, a former U.S. Tobacco sales representative who has not worked for the company since 1994 testified that he has told consumers that the

Conwood product is "stemmy." He also testified, however, that if one were to open a can of Conwood product, the product is, in fact, stemmy. Whereas the truth of the "stemmy" quality of Conwood's products may be left up to the jury, the fact that Mr. Carter has not even worked for U.S. Tobacco within the statute of limitations period is not.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that this Court enter judgment as a matter of law against Plaintiffs.

Purpose of Antitrust Laws

The purposes and goals of the antitrust laws at issue are to preserve and promote competition. The antitrust laws encourage, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the marketplace by preventing unreasonable restraint or unlawful monopolization of any business or industry. The purpose of these laws is not to protect businesses from the working of the market; it is to protect the public from the failure of the market. The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself.

The purpose of the antitrust laws is to preserve and advance our system of free enterprise by encouraging, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the marketplace, and by preventing unreasonable restraint or unlawful monopolization of any business or industry, so that the consuming public may receive better goods and services at lower cost.

1. Elements--Count III--Unlawful Exclusive Dealing

Le Page's alleges that they were injured by 3M's unlawful exclusive dealing. To win on their claim of exclusive dealing, Le Page's must prove each of the following elements by a preponderance of the evidence:

First, 3M made sales of goods, or entered into contracts for sale of goods for use, consumption, or resale within the United States.

Second, in these sales or contracts for sale of goods, 3M set a price, discount or rebate, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the purchaser would not deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of 3M's;

Third, the effect of such sales, or contracts for sale or such condition, agreement, or understanding was to substantially lessen competition in the relevant market; and

Fourth, Le Page's was injured in its business or property as a proximate result of 3M's conduct.

I will now explain these elements in greater detail. I will instruct you on the last element after I have given you my instructions on all four of Le Page's claims.

2. Exclusive Dealing Defined

Le Page's claims that 3M paid rebates, offered market development funds, and made other payments to customers in return for the customers' agreements not to deal with Le Page's.

An exclusive dealing arrangement, in whatever form it takes, requires that there be a "meeting of the minds;" the buyer must actually agree to limit its purchases to one seller for some period of time. The agreement may be either expressly stated in a contract or inferred from the circumstances. On the other hand, the law does not prohibit a buyer from making a unilateral decision to deal exclusively with a single supplier. The primary inquiry is whether or not the buyer has committed itself, either expressly or by an implied agreement, to limit its purchases for some period of time to one seller in exchange for some benefit.

5. Rule of Reason

If you find that Le Page's has proven that the exclusive dealing agreement(s) have in the past, do now, or will in the future substantially lessen competition in the relevant market, you must then consider whether the exclusive dealing agreement(s) are "unreasonable."

In deciding this issue, you must decide whether the exclusive dealing agreement(s) help competition or harm competition. Your task is to balance any aspects of the exclusive dealing agreement(s) that were helpful to competition against any aspects that were harmful to it. In doing so, you should consider such factors as

(1) the length of the agreement(s). You should consider how long any exclusive dealing agreement(s) were, or will be in effect. If an agreement will last a relatively short time, and will not significantly limit the opportunities for competing sellers to enter or remain in the market, then it is less likely to be unreasonable.

(2) 3M's reasons for setting up the exclusive dealing agreement(s), and the circumstances surrounding the agreement(s). A purpose or intent to harm competition, by itself, is not sufficient to establish that an exclusive dealing agreement was unreasonable. Effect, not intent, is the ultimate test. However, consideration of purpose of the agreement may help you determine if it likely would have a harmful effect on competition. You may consider, for example, whether 3M entered the exclusive dealing agreement(s) to achieve a legitimate business my opinions in this case.

Q. Well, are you aware at all that Mr. Metz reported to Mr. Towel, to Mr. Williams, the store that he was reported about had a 2908 agreement, but Conwood was perfectly free to set up a rack somewhere else in the store. He reported that the Kodiak sales were doing well in that store. Do you recall that testimony?
A. Again, I'm having trouble recalling Mr. Metz's testimony, so I wouldn't have an understanding of that.
Q. Did you study whether any retailers selected the United States Tobacco rack based on a contractual obligation to U.S. Tobacco rather than their own independent choice to have a uniform rack or just because they liked U.S. Tobacco better?
A. Again, I was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind. In my review of the evidence the opinions that I reached were that in many instances almost all the instances that identify UST stated objective and their approach in terms of these they were soliciting retailers for these agreements. They were providing incentives for these agreements. They were the ones that were compelling retailers to engage in these agreements.
Q. So you weren't interested in what was going on in the retailer's minds when they were making those decisions?
A. My focus all along was what was good for consumers and my

A Yes.

MR. REED: Can we put up the chart, please?

BY MR. REED:

Q Mr. Milano, what I'd like you to do is explain to the jury what this chart represents. Let's just start with the title and the concept. What does this chart represent?

A It's just an estimated number of retail calls made by sales representatives over a 10-year period.

Q And these are not supposed to be accurate figures; is that correct; in other words, not down to the last sales call?

A No; this is just an estimate.

Q All right, sir. Now, across the top we have ten years, from 1990 to 1999; is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Now, where did the number come from in the first line under the years where it says "number of sales reps at year-end"? Where did that come from?

A That would just come from an organizational chart at the end of the year of how many sales reps were actually in position at the end of each of these years.

Q So is that a fair approximation of about how many sales reps U.S. Tobacco had during that year?

A Yes.

Q And let's look at the second -- the next line down. "Number of days worked for year approximate." What does that number represent?

A That's just an approximate number of days, taking, you know, weekends into consideration, taking vacations and holidays off of a -- working days in a year, subtracting that and come up with an average working days per year.
Q Mr. Milano, the last line says "Number of calls made per day worked, average," and it's 8 all the way across.
A Correct.
Q How did you come up with that number?
A That would just be the average, taking the average of the calls made times the days they worked and come up with an average. And the average was about eight; eight calls a day.
Q Now, it's all the way at the bottom -- let's start with 1990. There's a number, 678,690. Do you see that?
A Correct.
Q What does that represent?
A All these numbers across the bottom are just using that formula, or the amount of retail calls that were made in that particular year. It's just an estimate.
Q So in other words the 678,000 number would be 369 times 230 times 8; is that correct?
A Correct.
Q And what is the 7,696,720 in regard to?
A That's just an of the calls made over a ten-year period. So it estimated about seven and a half million calls.

Q Is that for the total 10-year period?
A Over a 10-year period.
Q And you think that's a good estimate for working purposes here of how many different times sales reps went into retail stores on behalf of U.S. Tobacco between 1990 and 1999?
A I think as an estimate, on average eight calls a day per sales rep would be as accurate as you could get.
Q Now, what sort of investment by U.S. Tobacco in dealing with retailers does that represent?
A That's hundreds of millions of dollars in investment.
Q And what is the purpose generally of sales reps going into the retail store? Well let me back up and let me ask you another question first.

After a chain account manager has met with a buyer for a chain account and the chain buyer has approved a Plan-O-Gram and whatever rack situation he wants, do U.S. Tobacco sales reps still call on those chain stores?
A Yes.
Q Why do they do that?
A To -- if -- let's say a chain manager met with a buyer and the buyer would want to reset his stores. He wants to use a different vending system, and would want it done, you know, in a specific amount of time.

Our sales representatives would have the materials that they would need to reset those stores. They would have a Conwood based on your analysis that you told us about?

A Yes, I did.
Q And that involves -- go to the next slide please -- the additional Conwood sales at a reduced price minus the additional Conwood cost associated with selling this additional moist snuff?
A That's correct.
Q What were the damages you came to as a result of your analysis?
A That depended on which method I used and which scenario I used.
Q When you included an effect for misconduct in 1997, or anticompetitive conduct in 1997, what damages did you conclude Conwood sustained?
A The damages range from $488 million to $313 million, depending on whether one uses Scenario 1 or Scenario 2.
Q What happened when you, instead of including the 1997 anticompetitive conduct, assumed that there was no anticompetitive conduct in 1997? What did that do to your damages calculation?
A Those numbers ranged then from $155 million to $238 million, depending on which scenario you assume.
Q And are those, in your opinion, Professor Leftwich, fair and reasonable estimates of the damages Conwood sustained as a result of the conduct of UST in this case?

A. No, that's not my testimony. I did different starting dates other than 1990 a long time ago. You asked specifically about the 1989 start date. I did that sometime ago and I redid it again, had it redone again this week.
Q. Professor, before we talked about your regressions, let me ask you about your 1994-1990 period. It was relatively unaffected by that, that alleged bad conduct, okay? Isn't it correct, professor, that you didn't do any simple comparison of the 1984-1990 period with the 1990-1997 period where the alleged misconduct occurred?
A. I don't think I understand your question. My testimony is I did look at 1994 to 1998, or excuse me, to the 1990 period, I testified to that before.
Q. Well, my question, professor, is simply you didn't attempt to chart the data you relied on to give Conwood's market shares showed any significant changes in 1990 when these bad acts allegedly intensified?
A. I did the tests that I testified, you seem to suggest I did other tests. I'm not sure what you're suggesting.
Q. I'm sorry, professor. I'm just asking whether you did a chart and data, just a line that slows where the data falls for Conwood's share before 1990 and after 1990? That's a very simple chart, right?
A. That is it may have some uses and it may have many faults attached to it.

Q. You didn't do it, right?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Well, let's look quickly at all 25 states with the lowest relative shares where all that alleged misconduct was supposed to have most effect starting with 1990 to see if there was any bumps along the road for this share. Let me start with Alabama, you see 1990 there?
A. Yes, I did do.
Q. Okay. Is that going down after 1990?
A. There is a slight increase after 1990. The point follows 1990, appears to higher in 1991.
Q. Well, that's going up after 1990 is not consistent with Conwood's, the belief that Conwood puts in their personnel phone call, is that right?
A. Not necessarily.
Q. Now let's look at Arizona. Is there an abrupt change in Arizona in 1990?
A. It doesn't appear to be.
Q. Look at Arkansas. An abrupt change in 1990?
A. No, but do you, question your portion of your --
Q. I'm asking you whether there's an abrupt change in 1990 when the alleged misconduct was supposed to have intensified?
A. I agree with the factual premise, I'm disputing that it has very much relevance for issue at hand.

Q. So if I told you all 25 and there was no abrupt -- well, let me show you, let's do a few more, let's look at Arkansas, I'm sorry, that's already done. Let's look at California, an abrupt change in 1990?

A. '90 and '91 seems to be higher, but 1990, 1989 fell somewhat.

Q. And it keeps going up, doesn't it? Correct?

A. The end point is higher than 1990, I agree with that.

Q. Colorado, abrupt change?

A. No,I'd give the same answer I gave before.

Q. Connecticut. Wow! Connecticut was going way up in 1990, isn't that right?

A. Connecticut was higher in 1990 than it was in 1989, yes sir.

Q. DC, going up in 1990 during this time of alleged intensifying of misconduct, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Florida, going up in 1990 and continuing to go up, right?

A. It, very little. I mean it goes about what 1990, 1990 was lower than 1989 and rose again in 1991.

Q. So, professor, we can go through the rest of these 25, your testimony is not it's not significant to you in any way that in real life in actuality in 1990 the shares were unaffected by US Tobacco's alleged misconduct, correct?

A. That's not my testimony and I can explain it to you if you'd like me to.

Q. Sure, go ahead.

A. Firstly, just looking at a series of observations it's nothing more than a series of antidotes, it doesn't demonstrate the effect of what is in the data, that's why I can use statistical evidence. And the other reason is this several levels here. The other is that the testimony as to the intensity increased, it didn't say it was there before, intensity increased over this time period, and these data do not show what the sale would have been but for, but for UST's acts. It doesn't say, there's nothing in the hypothesis that says UST wasn't able to dispute that Conwood wasn't able to grow, it just says but for UST's acts it would have grown at a much higher rate. That's the hypothesis. That's what it's saying. It's not saying they were unable to grow. They were unable to grow at the same rate as they would have had but for UST's conduct.

Q. Professor, whether you want to call it antidotal evidence on not, isn't it a fact that in the lower states shares the pre-1990 period and the post 1990 period in the actual world were unaffected?

A. No, that is not my testimony. That is not my testimony and those data points do not prove that. Those data points do not prove that at all.

Q. They're just antidotes?

A. Firstly, you give me a sample of the 50 other states, carefully selected sample, I suspect. And the other issue is that, the other issue is that you've, you are, you're not showing me what the share would be but for the bad acts.

Q. Professor, I'm just trying to measure, shoe first of all, professor, who put up the prep, you the prep, the 25 states you say are ones most affected. We'll go back through it again, if you like. Those are the ones you chose and I'm not asking you not what would have happened but for, I'm asking you whether there was an actual effect before 1990 and after 1990, and it's not changed. That's all I'm asking you.

MR. HANSEN: Objection, argument.

THE COURT: I'll overrule it, I think, if you ask a question.

MR. KEYTE: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Did you understand the question?

THE WITNESS: If you could repeat the question again.

THE COURT: Yes, why don't you. I think it was about half statement.

MR. KEYTE: I'll move on, Your Honor.

Q. Professor, if the beliefs of Conwood's personnel were correct, you would expect to see some change in Conwood's share beginning in 1990 in these low share states, is that right?

A. As I've testified, the beliefs suggested that but for Conwood, that USTs bad acts, the share would have been higher. That doesn't mean they weren't able to grow, it's simply they wouldn't have been able to grow at a higher rate.

Q. So you disagree with the proposition if there were a lot of tense bad acts after '90, that might actually effect Conwood's share going down, they grew anyway, is that your testimony?

A. No, that's not my testimony. My testimony is that there's not, there is not, it is not a one-to-one relationship, the hypothesis does not necessarily suggest that Conwood's share fell. One could be half, what, my understanding of damages is that Conwood was deprived of an opportunity, opportunity to grow. The fact the cost is the claim of damages is my understanding.

Q. I'm just trying to understand whether you actually charted, whether in the actual world Conwood's sales and market shares actually grew after 1990, did you do that? Did you chart that?

A. I measured, I reflected that in the table and the table I testified to and as I testified to you, I'm questioning the relevance of doing that. It doesn't, it does not speak to the hypothesis at hand.

Q. Professor, if you look at, backward, professor, if you look at Conwood sales, they grew steadily from the period you say, from 1984 to 1997, isn't that correct?

A. If by increased steadily you mean for sales across the whole company, but not on a state by state basis, no.
Q. Let's look at the actual market shares to see whether there was a steady increase after 1990. You see that on your screen?
A. If this is a Conwood's average market share, yes, I see that.
Q. That's a pretty steady increase after 1990, isn't it?
A. Whether you want to characterize it that way or not is in the eye of the beholder, yes, but the increase in the market share. My understanding, though, is that even if you were successful you can still be harmed, you don't have to be, you don't have to be punished, you don't have to be a wholly performing company where it's behind or ahead in business.
Q. Professor, I'm simply asking you whether in this real world they were actually increasing market share after 1990 versus before 1990, the after period being the period of this alleged intensified misconduct? That's all I'm asking.
A. As I've testified, I agree, I'm agreeing that is what the data show. But I'm questioning the relevance of that question at hand.
Q. So if you insist wholly irrelevant that in the real world after 1990 Conwood's share grew at a steady pace?
A. No, it's not irrelevant, the relevant issue is how much it would have grown but for UST's acts.

Q. Well, let's also look at the actual sales. You see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Looking again at the pre-1990 period and the post 1990 period when there is supposed to be intensified misconduct, Conwood's sales were steadily increasing, isn't that right?
A. Yes, that's your characterization. But, yes, they increased the market in this time period, were growing at a pretty good clip.
Q. And would you characterize that, don't take my characterization, would you characterize that as a steady increase in sales?
A. I would characterize the sales were higher in the end than in the beginning, by a large amounts. But again that doesn't speak to whether or not they would have been higher but for UST's acts.
Q. Professor, I'm simply asking you is it before the 1990 period and th post 1990 period, whether they actually were increasing sales significantly? That's all.
A. Yes. The, I, the question significantly, but the numbers are much higher after that that they were before, yes, I agree with that.
Q. You agree that after it was significantly higher then before 1990, correct?
A. No, I didn't use the term significant agreement. I wouldn't use the term significantly, I wouldn't use the term study, you had no idea that Conwood's other experts had made conclusion about exclusive racks, isn't that right?

A. I don't believe I had read Conwood's other expert's reports with the exception of Professor Kamien's.

Q. In fact, when you made your original analysis you were only vaguely aware of the allegation in regard to this rack arrangement, isn't that right?

A. I don't, I don't recall the vague characterization, but I had no focus on them, no.

Q. Well, professor, are you aware that another professor, Professor Gundlach is slotted to testify about the alleged exclusive agreement in this case?

A. I've seen his name, but I'm not specifically aware of what the subject matter of his testimony is.

Q. Didn't you testify earlier in this case in a deposition, that when Mr., Dr. Gundlach had made mistakes about the number of number of exclusive agreements, it would not effect your damages calculations?

A. I don't specifically recall that, I will accept your representation. But since I didn't use his calculations it just follows as a matter of logic that it wouldn't effect my calculations.

Q. So a professor is going to get up here and talk about numbers what he believes are exclusive rack agreements, you don't rely on him, right, as far as your analysis?

A. That's my testimony, yeah, I have not read his report.
Q. Well, in fact, professor, if Dr. Gundlach took the stand in this case and said okay, none of these alleged exclusive agreements are anticompetitive, that wouldn't change your analysis at all, would it?
A. I have not used his analysis, that would not change my numbers, no.
Q. In fact, professor, you testified in discovery confirmed in this case that there were no bad acts, they're all in the record, the results of you model would still not change, isn't that correct?
A. If you, that's correct to the extent you refer to the model before, before I take into account the effects that your expert pointed out.
Q. I'm talking about when you originally started. I'll clarify it. I'm talking about your original analysis that you did and signed the report. Let me ask you again. Isn't it a fact in your original analysis that if discovery reconfirmed that there were no bad acts at all in the record in this case, none whatsoever, the result of your model would still be the same?
A. My understanding is a determination of a what's a bad act is a legal issue and that's a matter for the jury to decide.
Q. I'm just asking whether in your original analysis all this, this money that you seek is connected to whether or not there's actual bad acts in the record? It's not, is it?

A. Yes, it is. It presumes that the activities that were engaged in by UST were illegal. If the jury decides those were not legal, it's my understanding, I'm not a lawyer, my understanding is the jury decides they are not illegal then there are no damages.
Q. Well, professor, if the jury decides that exclusive rack arrangements are desired by many retailers and they're fine, do you have an adjusted number for the jury be to show the jury?
A. As I testified, I did not, was not able to, was not able because of the disaggregating effect of the particular types of bad acts.
Q. And if the jury decides that the way US Tobacco practices category management is what is desired by retailers or that everybody else has their chance to make their pitch, then you back that out of your damages number?
A. I was not able to detect the damages as I've said before.
Q. In fact, professor, you can't -- well, explain what this act is? Explain what disaggregated means to the jury, you just said disaggegated for a particular act of alleged misconduct on?
A. My understanding is multiple bad acts alleged by antibehavior alleged by UST, my results take in effected all these anticompetitive results, if you will, rolled up into one ball of wax and given the world of nature of those acts, it's difficult to disentangle them, to assess data and for me to disentangle. That's bad acts, excuse me, anticompetitive acts.

Q. Professor, in your original analysis you didn't run any variability for rack removal, is that correct?

A. No, my original analysis I did not have that data available to me.

Q. Well, you didn't, in your original analysis you didn't run regression for POS removal, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Professor, you didn't use Professor Scheffman's method, as you characterize it, to calculate a damages number that you were going to post in front of this jury until after you learned that your original damages estimates were off by $245,000,000, isn't that right?

A. I, I used that after his supplemental, I received his supplemental report and after my deposition, that very soon after the deposition I learned that there were some potential errors, I don't recall specifically whether I knew the magnitude of the data errors at the time, or the impact of those data errors on my damages.

Q. Let me ask you again, I was not a clear. Isn't it a fact you didn't run any model on what you characterized as the Scheffman methodology, that you calculate damages, the actual numbers that have been put in front of the jury, until af-- you learned that your original damages estimates were incorrect by $245,000,000?

A. I did it, I used the Sheffman analysis after I knew what my original errors were, my original estimates were incorrect. I don't recall whether I did it before or after I knew the magnitude of those errors.

Q. Now, professor your revised data using the Sheffman methodology, did not distinguish whether any rack or POS removal was done with or without retailer authorization, isn't that true?

A. That's correct.

Q. And your revised data using the method to be what you say is the Scheffman methodology, did not have any information about other competitors removing Conwood's racks or POS, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Are you aware, professor, that Mr. Price, from Swedish Mash, yesterday and in this court, testified that Swedish Mash removed Conwood racks?

A. I wasn't specifically aware of that fact.

Q. And your revised data wouldn't capture that, as you said, correct?

A. I don't believe that that's, I don't believe that's correct with respect to the Sheffman analysis we're talking about.

Q. Well, my question is whether you assess, you made a independent assessment of the effects of other competitors removing Conwood's racks with or without authorization, whether you would accept that effect on Conwood sales?

A. No, I knew that, I assessed UST's impact, the impact that UST's rack removal on Conwood's sales, using Scheffman's analysis, using Professor Scheffman's analysis.

Q. My question is did you assess how the rack removal by other competitors, whether authorized or not, were impacting Conwood's sales?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Professor, you're not testifying here today that all US Tobacco actions that effect Conwood sales, constitute misconduct, are you?

A. No. I understand there's a difference between legal, legally competitive, legally competitive behavior and illegally.

Q. For example, you testified that you only meant to include the anticompetitive aspects of category management in your damage assessment, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Even though you couldn't disaggregate it, as you explained to the jury, procompetitive aspects of that versus anticompetitive aspects, correct?

A. I think my testimony to the jury was I couldn't disentangle the effects of the various types of anticompetitive acts.

Q. Well, then I assume you clearly can't disentangle what goes, what you studied results will leave our procompetitive aspects of category management versus anticompetitive, you didn't look at that, did you?

A. I didn't look at category management specifically.

Q. And you testified when attempting tot measure damages you did not intend to include the effects of rack removal that were authorized or directed by retailers, isn't that right?

A. That, that's correct, to the extent that those were independent to the extent that they were coerced or encouraged by UST. My understanding is that, that those belonged as part of the damages calculation.

Q. So it's your testimony that if the retailer makes uncoercioned independent decision to have just a US Tobacco rack, it can be no basis for damages on that issue?

MR. HANSEN: Excuse me, Your Honor, it's asking a legal basis of this witness.

MR. KEYTE: He's testified about it.

THE COURT: Repeat the question for me.

Q. The question is your testimony as the damages expert that you did not perceive for Conwood any damages based on the independent uncoerced decisions of retailers about using a US

Tobacco rack for their store?
A. No. My statement about that was purely a statement, a reflection of the information given to me by attorneys. This is a legal issue as to whether or not there was an independent uncoerced action were allowable, were anticompetitive.
Q. Well, is the number, in your damages number, you do not intend to include, do you, I'm asking as a matter of fact in your damages, rack removals of Conwood by US Tobacco that represent the independent uncoerced decision of retailers to have US Tobacco racks in their store?
A. That's my understanding.
Q. You also testified in this case that it was not your intention to include POS removals that was authorized and directed by retailers, correct?
A. Again, that's an independent retailer's decisions, I would give the same answer.
Q. And, professor, from your study you are aware that there are instances, many instances where retailers direct the removal of a competitor's rack as part of a reset, something like that, right?
A. I'm, I'm aware that there is a dispute as to whether that's independent or not. I don't have a view one way or another as to whether it was coerced or uncoerced.
Q. So you have no view about when ever Wal-Mart decides to have a certain rack in their store, Wal-Mart's making that decision?

MR. HANSEN: Objections, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I have no study the coercions or non-coercion involved in the Wal-Mart decision.

Q. You'd have, you'd have to hear that from Wal-Mart, correct?

A. I -- there are -- there are other way of learning that same data, that same information. I have not studied it.

Q. In fact, you haven't talked to any retailers in this case, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Would you agree that unless you hear from the retailer you can't determine whether they made an independent uncoerced decision to choose the US Tobacco rack?

A. No. There would other ways of learning it.

Q. Don't you think that's the best way, professor?

A. I, I have, as I did the study I didn't think the best way to investigate coercion.

Q. And professor, you did not intend to include in your analysis the removal of Conwood's products that were part of the approved planning for a retailer, did you?

A. Again, I give the same answer to the extent that approved means what uncoerced and a independent decision.

Q. In respect for example the Wal-Mart plan-o-gram would you be interested in Wal-Mart's testimony on that?

A. Ir I were trying to determine whether that was independent or uncoerced, but I did not study the question.
Q. So you didn't, you didn't, in seeking damages or putting up the number for Conwood's damages, you didn't really care what Wal-Mart had to say about their decision about racks and plan-o-grams and POS, is that right?
A. It's not that I didn't care, it's that I used a method that did not require me to have that information.
Q. Well, maybe you didn't care, but you didn't, it wasn't part of your analysis, is that right?
A. That's right, it was not part of my analysis.
Q. Professor, would you agree that related promotional activities is not a bad act in your opinion?
A. Some promotional activity I understand is illegal, some others acts are legal, I'm not sure which is legal and which is not. Disparagement, for example, I understand is illegal, but I have a clear view in my mind to which is legal and which is illegal.
Q. Professor, did you intend to include the effects of increased promotional activity in be the 1990's on Conwood's sales in your analysis?
A. No, I did not.
Q. So the promotional activities by other moist snuff companies increased after 1990, how did your study account for the effect of those promotions, Timber Wolf, for example, on Conwood's sales?

A. I didn't, I did not take that into account specifically.

Q. So, just so the jury understands this, you did not take into account the increased promotional activity of the Timber Wolf brands in the 1990s in your analysis, is that right?

A. No, but that would require a very strange set of facts to make that relevant to the analysis.

Q. Just asking you whether you took that into account.

A. I'm telling you why I didn't.

Q. And you would agree, professor, wouldn't you, that the introduction of new products aren't bad acts?

A. I would agree with that.

Q. Okay. And you did not intend to include any of the effects of new products introductions, how those effected Conwood's sales in your analysis, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. So if new products were successfully introduced by other moist snuff companies, they the new product introduction increased after 1990, you did not account for that in your analysis, correct?

A. I did not account for it because it would require a strange pattern to this products introduction to explain the results that I found.

Q. I'm asking whether you accounted for it, sir?

A. I'm telling you why it's not relevant to account for it.
Q. So it's not relevant, with all the new products that came in the market after 1990, it was not relevant to use your stats whether they had an impact on Conwood sales?
A. If I could explain that to you?
Q. Sure.
A. All of the facts, it is not just that one that you're talking about, but other factors might effect the level of Conwood sales, whether Conwood's sales were high or low in terms of total market share. The results in my, in my study don't give me systematic patterns across states. It would require that those new products introductions systematically varied across states in the same way that the bad acts varied to explain the pattern that I observed in the data, that is not plausible in my view.
Q. So therefore you didn't have to take any individual products like Timber Wolf and assess how that impacted Conwood's, is that your testimony?
A. Yes. Again, that would effect my, might effect the level of Conwood sales, but not the pattern that I observed across states when I ran my regression and when I used your expert's damages calculations, your expert's regression.
Q. I'm just asking whether you did an independent assessment of the impact of the Timber Wolf brand on Conwood sales, that's simple.

A. I did an independent assessment because I analyzed and discussed it with many people in Lexicon, I did the analysis and the analysis suggests, the analysis demonstrates that one does not need to control the things, other things unless they vary systematically across states in the same pattern of the bad acts theory.

Q. Professor, I understand that you reached a conclusion that you did not need to control for that in a regression analysis, but my question is did you, independent of your regression analysis, or tell me what you included or not included, did you assess directly what the impact of the Timber Wolf brands in 1990 was on Conwood sales?

A. As I testified, I did not do to it, I explained why I didn't do it.

Q. In fact, at the time you did your study you weren't aware that Conwood marketing documents reported that Timber Wolf was taking sales from Kodiak, were you?

A. I don't specifically recall that document, or those documents.

Q. Professor, advertising restrictions in the moist snuff industry increased after 1997, is that right?

A. They changed throughout this time period, they were increased in snuff in 1990, yes.

Q. You didn't assess the impact of that on Conwood sales because you didn't have the data, isn't that right?

A. No, that is not correct. If I could explain why?
Q. Well, did you not testify on your deposition that you did not consider advertising restrictions because that was something you were not able to obtain data for, do you remember that?
A. I don't specifically recall that. If I gave that answer it was incomplete, but I was not able to obtain data for it, but that's an incomplete answer.
Q. Well, have you since obtained data for advertising restrictions under your effect on Conwood's sales after 1990?
A. No, I have, even before my deposition I knew why it wasn't relevant, but I didn't give that answer when I was deposed, but I knew why it wasn't relevant the same reason I described to you before. Those advertising restrictions would effect the level of Conwood's sales, not the pattern across states, it would have to be that there was a systematic statements, a difference where the restrictions were more severe and binding in the low foothold states than in the high foothold states. There's a pattern of data that if a change like that just cannot explained.
Q. Well, did you assess whether restrictions on advertising effected Conwood more in low share states?
A. Again, that I did not have the data for, but that, but I did, but I did do the analysis to suggest that that could not explain the pattern in the data.

Q. I know this is somewhat of confusing area, it is for me. Can you explain again, you did not have the data to assess whether in the low share states, they would have, the shares would have grown, you didn't have the data to assess whether advertising restrictions effected Conwood's sales in the low share states, correct?

A. I didn't have the data, but suggested that advertising restrictions differ across the states.

Q. Well, professor, are you aware there are huge differences in ad restrictions among various states and localities across the country?

A. I am aware that are huge, I can accept that characterization, yes. I am aware when I wrote my, when I drew up my report.

Q. Professor, do you agree that the number of products offered by Conwood would have an effect on Conwood's sales?

A. Yes, it's a possibility.

Q. Did you do any studies to determine the number of products Conwood had in the market during any time period covered by your study?

A. No, I did not for the same reason that I have explained to you before that it would not explain the systematic pattern in the data.

Q. Well, you didn't do any study to determine how the failure of several Conwood products introduced effected Conwood's sales, did you?

A. No. And again I would give the same answer.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued Kodiak Choice?
A. I'm aware they, I'm aware that some of their brands did not meet great success, I don't recall which ones.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued Garrett Moist?
A. I heard that, I heard that, that refreshes my recollection.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued the Big Horn brands?
A. I don't specifically recall that brand.
Q. And you didn't -- so you didn't study, out of failure of those brands or other marketing efforts of Conwood effected their own sales, is that right?
A. Again, I did not study it because it would have to be very systematically across states to do, to explain the pattern.
Q. Professor, you looked at the loose leaf industry as what you call the yardstick markets, model, is that right?
A. That's correct.
Q. And the purpose of the yardstick model is to look at an industry that's free of the alleged misconduct by US Tobacco, is that right?
A. That's one purpose of the yardstick model, yes.
Q. And US Tobacco doesn't sell those new products you use loose leaf in the yardstick answer, right?

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendants' Memorandum Regarding Defendants' Use of Deposition Testimony of Conwood Employees. This supplements the Court's earlier ruling on this issue. This Court holds that district managers are "managing agents" for the purpose of Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) and also holds that those officers, directors and managing agents who were employees at the time of the deposition but who are no longer employees fall under Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2). This Court orders Plaintiffs to provide Defendants with counterdesignations to deposition testimony for these deponents.

1. District Managers

Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) allows a party to use the deposition testimony of one who was a "managing agent" for any purpose. "Whether an individual has the status of managing agent depends on several factors, including whether the interests of the individual 'are identified with those of his principal and on the nature of his functions, responsibilities and authority....'" Crimm v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., 750 F.3d 703 (8th Cir. 1984), citing Terry v. Modern Woodmen, 57 F.R.D. 141, 143 (W.D.Mo.1972). Courts also consider, how the functions, responsibilities and authority effect the subject matter of the litigation, "whether the deponent could be relied upon to give testimony, at his principal's direction, in response to the demand of a party engaged in litigation with the principal," and "whether any person or persons in higher authority than the deponent are in charge of the particular matter or possessed of the information as to which the examination is sought." Terry v. Modern Woodmen of America, 57 F.R.D. 141 (W.D.Miss. 1972). After considering these factors, this Court finds that district managers in this case meet the criteria to qualify as a "managing agent." Each district manager manages a number of employees in a large geographic area. The district managers have the interest of the company at stake as they seek to increase market share and competitiveness in the moist snuff market. As these goals are issues of litigation in this case, their duties and responsibilities directly concern the litigation at hand. Due the more direct contact the district managers have with stores and with the employees under them, they possess information and insight that could not be elicited from regional managers. For these reasons, the district managers each qualify as "managing agents" under Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2).

2. Current Employment Status

Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) specifically provides that "[t]he deposition of a party or of anyone who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director or managing agent, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, partnership or association or governmental agency which is a party may be used by an adverse party for any purpose." (emphasis added). Accordingly, the status of the deponent at the time of trial is irrelevant.

CONCLUSION

Upon Defendants' Memorandum Regarding Defendants' Use of Deposition Testimony of Conwood Employees and this Court being fully advised,

IT IS ORDERED that:

1. District managers are "managing agents" for the purpose of Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) and their deposition testimony can be used for any purpose at trial;

2. The depositions of those deponents who were officers, directors or managing agents for the purposes of Fed.R.Civ.P. 32(a)(2) at the time of their deposition can be used for any purpose at trial regardless of the current employment status of the deponents;

3. Plaintiffs are to provide Defendants with counterdesignations for the deposition testimony of those included in this ruling.

This is a final and appealable order. There is no just cause for delay.

This is the 14 day of March, 2000.

AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1), Defendants ("U.S. Tobacco") respectfully move this Court to grant judgment as a matter of law against Plaintiffs ("Conwood") on their Sherman Act §2, Lanham Act, and state law claims.

> "The purpose of these [antitrust] laws is not to protect businesses from the working of the market; it is to protect the public from the failure of the market. The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself."

I. IT IS UNDISPUTED THAT THE COMPETITIVE PROCESS IS OPEN TO CONWOOD AND OTHERS

As the evidence has come in before the jury, there is no dispute that the "working of the market" that is at issue in this case is the competitive process between and among moist snuff manufacturers to place products, racks and POS with retailers. There also is no dispute that this competitive process is wide open to all companies that choose to take part in that process, which all moist snuff companies do in varying degrees. Although Plaintiffs may argue that certain conduct by U.S. Tobacco prevents or hinders Conwood's ability to place items at retail, any such argument misconstrues the undisputed nature of the "working of the market" for the display and sale of moist snuff products. The retail industry in this country is not a series of flea markets where merchants are free to throw down a blanket and display their wares at will. The retail industry is predicated on the decisions of retailers – decisions to spend their own money to purchase products from retailers, decisions to organize their stores and use their own space in the manner that they see fit, and the decisions to display products with the hopes of faring well in their own competition against other retailers.

A. There Is No Evidence Of Any Agreements That Restrict The Competitive Process

"If during a trial by jury a party has been fully heard on an issue and there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for that party on that issue, the court may determine the issue against the party and may grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law. . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1). Because Plaintiffs have not offered, and have not even attempted to offer, evidence concerning the competitive process itself, this Court should determine the issue and grant judgment as a matter of law for U.S. Tobacco.

In this case, Plaintiffs have not offered a single piece of evidence that the competitive process – aside from Conwood's ability and/or willingness to compete in that process – is impaired by the conduct of U.S. Tobacco. Instead, Plaintiffs have simply declared that the decisions of retailers – even the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers – are irrelevant.[1] As a result, Plaintiffs have not even suggested that a single retailer was coerced in any way, never mind meeting its burden to prove by a preponderance of evidence that a substantial amount of the retail industry was foreclosed from competition by Conwood or any other moist snuff manufacturer.

Plaintiffs have not offered a single retailer from over 300,000 retail locations to testify that it had entered an agreement with U.S. Tobacco that restricted in any way the retailer's ability to do business with other manufacturers. Plaintiffs have offered only a literal handful of retailers – far fewer than the "scores" they promised – to testify about a literal handful of isolated incidents of "bad acts." That is the extent of Plaintiffs' proof about what actually happens in the retail environment.

[1] But see February 17, 2000 Order on Summary Judgment, at 10 (holding that multiple issues remain for trial, including "whether the damages claimed by Conwood is caused by UST, or instead is the result of the independent uncoerced decisions by retailers").

1. Conwood's Evidence of "Agreements" Is Itself Fatally Flawed

Party A agrees to do X in exchange for Party B doing Y: That is an agreement. Here, the only evidence is a retailer makes decisions to use a U.S. Tobacco racks because he or she prefers the look, design, or functionality of that rack, and that U.S. Tobacco provides that rack to service its customer. That is not an agreement, even when it results in a retailer authorizing only the U.S. Tobacco rack. Plaintiffs have completely ignored this distinction and, as a result, have failed to offer sufficient evidence of any actual agreements that would support its claim that Conwood is excluded from competition.

Indeed, Plaintiffs did not offer the testimony of a single retailer suggesting that the retailer had an agreement with U.S. Tobacco that prevented the retailer from doing business however, and with whomever, it wanted. Instead, the bulk of Plaintiffs' "exclusive agreements" evidence was channeled in through the testimony of Dr. Gregory Gundlach. Dr. Gundlach's testimony, however, is revealing:

> Q. Did you study whether any retailers selected the United States Tobacco rack based on a contractual obligation to U.S. Tobacco rather than their own independent choice to have a uniform rack or just because they liked U.S. Tobacco better?
> A. Again, I was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind. . . . Tr., March 9, at 148. (Tab 2)
> Q. So, as far as you know, the competitive [process] to use one rack or multiple rack, someone else's rack, is wide open; is that correct?
> A. Again, the focus was whether or not there was an agreement. Not necessarily whether and how it was reached. . . . Id. at 156. (Tab 2)

That testimony illustrates the full extent of Plaintiffs' theory and Plaintiffs' evidence of the claim that U.S. Tobacco injures competition by entering into exclusive agreements. More importantly, the entirety of the evidence offered during Plaintiffs' case in chief warrants judgment as a matter of law:

- Every "agreement" that was literally highlighted by Plaintiffs is terminable at will, see Plaintiffs' Proposed Jury Instructions, LePage's, p. 48. (Tab 1)
- No "agreement" highlighted by Plaintiffs prevented or even hindered a retailer from carrying a Conwood product, if it chose to do so, see id., pp. 43-44 (Tab 1);
- No "agreement" highlighted by Plaintiffs was "exclusionary" beyond the physical rack or fixture provided to the retailer by U.S. Tobacco. In other words, any "exclusive" POS term of any "agreement" referred only to the rack or fixture, not to the store; and
- At all times, Conwood has remained free to sell its products, racks, and POS into any store in this country.

At a minimum, consistent with this Court's prior rulings, Plaintiffs had the burden of offering a legally sufficient evidentiary basis that: (1) U.S. Tobacco and retailers reached agreements; (2) the agreements were not the result of the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers; and (3) the agreements prevented Conwood from doing business. Plaintiffs have offered no such evidentiary basis, and judgment as a matter of law is warranted.

B. Plaintiffs Offered Evidence of a Handful of Isolated Incidents of Unauthorized "Bad Acts"

Similarly, Plaintiffs have not offered a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for its claim that U.S. Tobacco sales representatives engage in a systematic campaign to remove Conwood racks, POS materials and products from retail stores. Instead, Plaintiffs have relied on evidence where a retailer has chosen a U.S. Tobacco rack to replace Conwood's or on anecdotal evidence of isolated incidents of unauthorized rack removal. The evidentiary record makes it clear that any unauthorized incidents occur between and among all of the different sales forces that do business in the moist snuff industry. Swedish Match takes Conwood racks; Conwood takes U.S. Tobacco racks; the tit-for-tat goes on. It is not the stuff of the antitrust laws.

If there were, in fact, a systematic campaign to remove Conwood racks to the extent necessary to affect competition in the overall moist snuff market alleged by Plaintiffs, the frequency of rack removal would be a repeating point of concern for nearly every retailer in this country. Instead, Plaintiffs have offered the jury the following retailer testimony:

- Gayleen Rusk, a manager of a single-store Amoco Pronto Express store in Sioux City, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco representative removed a Cougar rack in August of 1998.
- Georgia Gill-Elkins, a manager of a single-store Berreth Oil minimart in Mishawaka, Indiana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco rack removed a U.S. Tobacco rack, and the Conwood POS on that rack, in November of 1998.
- Patricia Lienen, a former employee of a single-store Dave's Country Store in Dunlap, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed Conwood racks, but always put the Conwood product in a U.S. Tobacco rack.
- Marti Stevens, a manager of a single-store Qwik Way store in Billings, Montana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed a Conwood rack – the exclusive Conwood rack – in August, 1997.

If this is a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a $1.3 billion antitrust claim, then every manufacturer that employs a sales force – including Conwood – must be certain that in over 7.69 million sales calls over ten years, see Tr., March 7, at 91-93 (Tab 3), none of its sales personnel commit any "bad acts" in the field. The antitrust laws, which were intended to promote and foster competition, were not meant to snap into effect when the very market conditions created by that competition do, in fact, exist in the real world.

II. PLAINTIFFS DID NOT ESTABLISH CAUSATION AND DAMAGES

Plaintiffs have not offered any evidence whatsoever – not even expert testimony – that Conwood lost any sales as a result of not having a rack, not having a particular piece of POS, or not having its entire product line in any retail store. No consumer has testified that he or she could not "find" a Conwood product that was "lost" in a U.S. Tobacco rack. No retailer has testified that it lost sales as a result of any U.S. Tobacco conduct, and that is not even the inquiry. In fact, Plaintiffs would have to show that Conwood lost the sale – i.e., that the consumer did not or could not purchase the product at all from any retail store. In any event, Plaintiffs have not laid the injury-in-fact foundation for their expert's damages conclusions.

Dr. Leftwich's testimony and damages estimates were exposed as pure fantasy. Dr. Leftwich's own data demonstrated vividly that in the 25 lowest of the low-share states – states where Conwood did not have a "foothold" as the theory goes – Conwood's share saw no abrupt change in 1990 or thereafter. Dr. Leftwich's own data also demonstrated that Conwood's overall share rose steadily, again with no abrupt change in 1990 or thereafter. See Tr. March 8, at 63-70 (Tab 4). Accordingly, Dr. Leftwich's damages study bears no relation to Conwood's own theory of liability.

Moreover, Dr. Leftwich's damages study makes no attempt to disaggregate the effects of lawful conduct by U.S. Tobacco – e.g., increased promotional activity – or any conduct having nothing to do with U.S. Tobacco – e.g., the promotional activity or even rack removal attributable to other moist snuff companies. See Tr., March 8, at 76-91 (Tab 4). Indeed, Dr. Leftwich testified that, despite the fact that Dr. Gundlach re-evaluated his conclusions concerning whether U.S. Tobacco had "exclusive agreements" with 14 different chains, his damages calculations did not change. See id. at 76-77 (Tab 4).

Finally, Dr. Leftwich offers the jury the equivalent of a dart and the side of a barn to render a verdict on damages. Dr. Leftwich's "range" of damages is from $155 to $438 Million, or in other words, anywhere over $155 Million. See id. at 42 (Tab 4). The expert opinion that Conwood's lost profits from lost sales over the past four years is "somewhere" between $155 and $488 Million is indicative of two things: (1) the analysis is really not measuring anything; and (2) the analysis is not helpful to the jury in awarding damages.

The antitrust laws do not allow a jury to render a damages verdict based on their own speculation and guesswork. They also do not allow a jury to render a verdict based on the speculation and guesswork of a hired expert witness.

III. LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Plaintiffs' elusive Lanham Act claim seems to have taken on a whole new basis during trial. Plaintiffs' focus now appears to be on the allegation that the "Made" date on a Copenhagen can is somehow misleading to consumers. Assuming Plaintiffs prove that is true, which they cannot, Conwood would have no standing to bring what essentially is a consumer claim against U.S. Tobacco.

After searching the trial record for evidence of Plaintiffs' original Lanham Act claim, which was based on product defamation, the only evidence offered by Plaintiffs seems to be the testimony of Andrew Carter. Mr. Carter, a former U.S. Tobacco sales representative who has not worked for the company since 1994 testified that he has told consumers that the

Conwood product is "stemmy." He also testified, however, that if one were to open a can of Conwood product, the product is, in fact, stemmy. Whereas the truth of the "stemmy" quality of Conwood's products may be left up to the jury, the fact that Mr. Carter has not even worked for U.S. Tobacco within the statute of limitations period is not.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that this Court enter judgment as a matter of law against Plaintiffs.

Purpose of Antitrust Laws

The purposes and goals of the antitrust laws at issue are to preserve and promote competition. The antitrust laws encourage, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the marketplace by preventing unreasonable restraint or unlawful monopolization of any business or industry. The purpose of these laws is not to protect businesses from the working of the market; it is to protect the public from the failure of the market. The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself.

The purpose of the antitrust laws is to preserve and advance our system of free enterprise by encouraging, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the marketplace, and by preventing unreasonable restraint or unlawful monopolization of any business or industry, so that the consuming public may receive better goods and services at lower cost.

1. Elements--Count III--Unlawful Exclusive Dealing

Le Page's alleges that they were injured by 3M's unlawful exclusive dealing. To win on their claim of exclusive dealing, Le Page's must prove each of the following elements by a preponderance of the evidence:

First, 3M made sales of goods, or entered into contracts for sale of goods for use, consumption, or resale within the United States.

Second, in these sales or contracts for sale of goods, 3M set a price, discount or rebate, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the purchaser would not deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of 3M's;

Third, the effect of such sales, or contracts for sale or such condition, agreement, or understanding was to substantially lessen competition in the relevant market; and

Fourth, Le Page's was injured in its business or property as a proximate result of 3M's conduct.

I will now explain these elements in greater detail. I will instruct you on the last element after I have given you my instructions on all four of Le Page's claims.

2. Exclusive Dealing Defined

Le Page's claims that 3M paid rebates, offered market development funds, and made other payments to customers in return for the customers' agreements not to deal with Le Page's.

An exclusive dealing arrangement, in whatever form it takes, requires that there be a "meeting of the minds;" the buyer must actually agree to limit its purchases to one seller for some period of time. The agreement may be either expressly stated in a contract or inferred from the circumstances. On the other hand, the law does not prohibit a buyer from making a unilateral decision to deal exclusively with a single supplier. The primary inquiry is whether or not the buyer has committed itself, either expressly or by an implied agreement, to limit its purchases for some period of time to one seller in exchange for some benefit.

5. Rule of Reason

If you find that Le Page's has proven that the exclusive dealing agreement(s) have in the past, do now, or will in the future substantially lessen competition in the relevant market, you must then consider whether the exclusive dealing agreement(s) are "unreasonable."

In deciding this issue, you must decide whether the exclusive dealing agreement(s) help competition or harm competition. Your task is to balance any aspects of the exclusive dealing agreement(s) that were helpful to competition against any aspects that were harmful to it. In doing so, you should consider such factors as my opinions in this case.

(1) the length of the agreement(s). You should consider how long any exclusive dealing agreement(s) were, or will be in effect. If an agreement will last a relatively short time, and will not significantly limit the opportunities for competing sellers to enter or remain in the market, then it is less likely to be unreasonable.

(2) 3M's reasons for setting up the exclusive dealing agreement(s), and the circumstances surrounding the agreement(s). A purpose or intent to harm competition, by itself, is not sufficient to establish that an exclusive dealing agreement was unreasonable. Effect, not intent, is the ultimate test. However, consideration of purpose of the agreement may help you determine if it likely would have a harmful effect on competition. You may consider, for example, whether 3M entered the exclusive dealing agreement(s) to achieve a legitimate business

Q. Well, are you aware at all that Mr. Metz reported to Mr. Towel, to Mr. Williams, the store that he was reported about had a 2908 agreement, but Conwood was perfectly free to set up a rack somewhere else in the store. He reported that the Kodiak sales were doing well in that store. Do you recall that testimony?
A. Again, I'm having trouble recalling Mr. Metz's testimony, so I wouldn't have an understanding of that.
Q. Did you study whether any retailers selected the United States Tobacco rack based on a contractual obligation to U.S. Tobacco rather than their own independent choice to have a uniform rack or just because they liked U.S. Tobacco better?
A. Again, I was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind. In my review of the evidence the opinions that I reached were that in many instances almost all the instances that identify UST stated objective and their approach in terms of these they were soliciting retailers for these agreements. They were providing incentives for these agreements. They were the ones that were compelling retailers to engage in these agreements.
Q. So you weren't interested in what was going on in the retailer's minds when they were making those decisions?
A. My focus all along was what was good for consumers and my

A Yes.

MR. REED: Can we put up the chart, please?

BY MR. REED:

Q Mr. Milano, what I'd like you to do is explain to the jury what this chart represents. Let's just start with the title and the concept. What does this chart represent?

A It's just an estimated number of retail calls made by sales representatives over a 10-year period.

Q And these are not supposed to be accurate figures; is that correct; in other words, not down to the last sales call?

A No; this is just an estimate.

Q All right, sir. Now, across the top we have ten years, from 1990 to 1999; is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Now, where did the number come from in the first line under the years where it says "number of sales reps at year-end"? Where did that come from?

A That would just come from an organizational chart at the end of the year of how many sales reps were actually in position at the end of each of these years.

Q So is that a fair approximation of about how many sales reps U.S. Tobacco had during that year?

A Yes.

Q And let's look at the second -- the next line down. "Number of days worked for year approximate." What does that number represent?

A That's just an approximate number of days, taking, you know, weekends into consideration, taking vacations and holidays off of a -- working days in a year, subtracting that and come up with an average working days per year.
Q Mr. Milano, the last line says "Number of calls made per day worked, average," and it's 8 all the way across.
A Correct.
Q How did you come up with that number?
A That would just be the average, taking the average of the calls made times the days they worked and come up with an average. And the average was about eight; eight calls a day.
Q Now, it's all the way at the bottom -- let's start with 1990. There's a number, 678,690. Do you see that?
A Correct.
Q What does that represent?
A All these numbers across the bottom are just using that formula, or the amount of retail calls that were made in that particular year. It's just an estimate.
Q So in other words the 678,000 number would be 369 times 230 times 8; is that correct?
A Correct.
Q And what is the 7,696,720 in regard to?
A That's just an of the calls made over a ten-year period. So it estimated about seven and a half million calls.

Q Is that for the total 10-year period?
A Over a 10-year period.
Q And you think that's a good estimate for working purposes here of how many different times sales reps went into retail stores on behalf of U.S. Tobacco between 1990 and 1999?
A I think as an estimate, on average eight calls a day per sales rep would be as accurate as you could get.
Q Now, what sort of investment by U.S. Tobacco in dealing with retailers does that represent?
A That's hundreds of millions of dollars in investment.
Q And what is the purpose generally of sales reps going into the retail store? Well let me back up and let me ask you another question first.

After a chain account manager has met with a buyer for a chain account and the chain buyer has approved a Plan-O-Gram and whatever rack situation he wants, do U.S. Tobacco sales reps still call on those chain stores?
A Yes.
Q Why do they do that?
A To -- if -- let's say a chain manager met with a buyer and the buyer would want to reset his stores. He wants to use a different vending system, and would want it done, you know, in a specific amount of time.

Our sales representatives would have the materials that they would need to reset those stores. They would have a Conwood based on your analysis that you told us about?

A Yes, I did.
Q And that involves -- go to the next slide please -- the additional Conwood sales at a reduced price minus the additional Conwood cost associated with selling this additional moist snuff?
A That's correct.
Q What were the damages you came to as a result of your analysis?
A That depended on which method I used and which scenario I used.
Q When you included an effect for misconduct in 1997, or anticompetitive conduct in 1997, what damages did you conclude Conwood sustained?
A The damages range from $488 million to $313 million, depending on whether one uses Scenario 1 or Scenario 2.
Q What happened when you, instead of including the 1997 anticompetitive conduct, assumed that there was no anticompetitive conduct in 1997? What did that do to your damages calculation?
A Those numbers ranged then from $155 million to $238 million, depending on which scenario you assume.
Q And are those, in your opinion, Professor Leftwich, fair and reasonable estimates of the damages Conwood sustained as a result of the conduct of UST in this case?

right?
A. No, that's not my testimony. I did different starting dates other than 1990 a long time ago. You asked specifically about the 1989 start date. I did that sometime ago and I redid it again, had it redone again this week.
Q. Professor, before we talked about your regressions, let me ask you about your 1994-1990 period. It was relatively unaffected by that, that alleged bad conduct, okay? Isn't it correct, professor, that you didn't do any simple comparison of the 1984-1990 period with the 1990-1997 period where the alleged misconduct occurred?
A. I don't think I understand your question. My testimony is I did look at 1994 to 1998, or excuse me, to the 1990 period, I testified to that before.
Q. Well, my question, professor, is simply you didn't attempt to chart the data you relied on to give Conwood's market shares showed any significant changes in 1990 when these bad acts allegedly intensified?
A. I did the tests that I testified, you seem to suggest I did other tests. I'm not sure what you're suggesting.
Q. I'm sorry, professor. I'm just asking whether you did a chart and data, just a line that slows where the data falls for Conwood's share before 1990 and after 1990? That's a very simple chart, right?
A. That is it may have some uses and it may have many faults attached to it.

Q. You didn't do it, right?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Well, let's look quickly at all 25 states with the lowest relative shares where all that alleged misconduct was supposed to have most effect starting with 1990 to see if there was any bumps along the road for this share. Let me start with Alabama, you see 1990 there?
A. Yes, I did do.
Q. Okay. Is that going down after 1990?
A. There is a slight increase after 1990. The point follows 1990, appears to higher in 1991.
Q. Well, that's going up after 1990 is not consistent with Conwood's, the belief that Conwood puts in their personnel phone call, is that right?
A. Not necessarily.
Q. Now let's look at Arizona. Is there an abrupt change in Arizona in 1990?
A. It doesn't appear to be.
Q. Look at Arkansas. An abrupt change in 1990?
A. No, but do you, question your portion of your --
Q. I'm asking you whether there's an abrupt change in 1990 when the alleged misconduct was supposed to have intensified?
A. I agree with the factual premise, I'm disputing that it has very much relevance for issue at hand.

Q. So if I told you all 25 and there was no abrupt -- well, let me show you, let's do a few more, let's look at Arkansas, I'm sorry, that's already done. Let's look at California, an abrupt change in 1990?

A. '90 and '91 seems to be higher, but 1990, 1989 fell somewhat.

Q. And it keeps going up, doesn't it? Correct?

A. The end point is higher than 1990, I agree with that.

Q. Colorado, abrupt change?

A. No,I'd give the same answer I gave before.

Q. Connecticut. Wow! Connecticut was going way up in 1990, isn't that right?

A. Connecticut was higher in 1990 than it was in 1989, yes sir.

Q. DC, going up in 1990 during this time of alleged intensifying of misconduct, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Florida, going up in 1990 and continuing to go up, right?

A. It, very little. I mean it goes about what 1990, 1990 was lower than 1989 and rose again in 1991.

Q. So, professor, we can go through the rest of these 25, your testimony is not it's not significant to you in any way that in real life in actuality in 1990 the shares were unaffected by US Tobacco's alleged misconduct, correct?

A. That's not my testimony and I can explain it to you if you'd like me to.

Q. Sure, go ahead.

A. Firstly, just looking at a series of observations it's nothing more than a series of antidotes, it doesn't demonstrate the effect of what is in the data, that's why I can use statistical evidence. And the other reason is this several levels here. The other is that the testimony as to the intensity increased, it didn't say it was there before, intensity increased over this time period, and these data do not show what the sale would have been but for, but for UST's acts. It doesn't say, there's nothing in the hypothesis that says UST wasn't able to dispute that Conwood wasn't able to grow, it just says but for UST's acts it would have grown at a much higher rate. That's the hypothesis. That's what it's saying. It's not saying they were unable to grow. They were unable to grow at the same rate as they would have had but for UST's conduct.

Q. Professor, whether you want to call it antidotal evidence on not, isn't it a fact that in the lower states shares the pre-1990 period and the post 1990 period in the actual world were unaffected?

A. No, that is not my testimony. That is not my testimony and those data points do not prove that. Those data points do not prove that at all.

Q. They're just antidotes?

A. Firstly, you give me a sample of the 50 other states, carefully selected sample, I suspect. And the other issue is that, the other issue is that you've, you are, you're not showing me what the share would be but for the bad acts.

Q. Professor, I'm just trying to measure, shoe first of all, professor, who put up the prep, you the prep, the 25 states you say are ones most affected. We'll go back through it again, if you like. Those are the ones you chose and I'm not asking you not what would have happened but for, I'm asking you whether there was an actual effect before 1990 and after 1990, and it's not changed. That's all I'm asking you.

MR. HANSEN: Objection, argument.

THE COURT: I'll overrule it, I think, if you ask a question.

MR. KEYTE: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Did you understand the question?

THE WITNESS: If you could repeat the question again.

THE COURT: Yes, why don't you. I think it was about half statement.

MR. KEYTE: I'll move on, Your Honor.

Q. Professor, if the beliefs of Conwood's personnel were correct, you would expect to see some change in Conwood's share beginning in 1990 in these low share states, is that right?

A. As I've testified, the beliefs suggested that but for Conwood, that USTs bad acts, the share would have been higher. That doesn't mean they weren't able to grow, it's simply they wouldn't have been able to grow at a higher rate.

Q. So you disagree with the proposition if there were a lot of tense bad acts after '90, that might actually effect Conwood's share going down, they grew anyway, is that your testimony?

A. No, that's not my testimony. My testimony is that there's not, there is not, it is not a one-to-one relationship, the hypothesis does not necessarily suggest that Conwood's share fell. One could be half, what, my understanding of damages is that Conwood was deprived of an opportunity, opportunity to grow. The fact the cost is the claim of damages is my understanding.

Q. I'm just trying to understand whether you actually charted, whether in the actual world Conwood's sales and market shares actually grew after 1990, did you do that? Did you chart that?

A. I measured, I reflected that in the table and the table I testified to and as I testified to you, I'm questioning the relevance of doing that. It doesn't, it does not speak to the hypothesis at hand.

Q. Professor, if you look at, backward, professor, if you look at Conwood sales, they grew steadily from the period you say, from 1984 to 1997, isn't that correct?

A. If by increased steadily you mean for sales across the whole company, but not on a state by state basis, no.
Q. Let's look at the actual market shares to see whether there was a steady increase after 1990. You see that on your screen?
A. If this is a Conwood's average market share, yes, I see that.
Q. That's a pretty steady increase after 1990, isn't it?
A. Whether you want to characterize it that way or not is in the eye of the beholder, yes, but the increase in the market share. My understanding, though, is that even if you were successful you can still be harmed, you don't have to be, you don't have to be punished, you don't have to be a wholly performing company where it's behind or ahead in business.
Q. Professor, I'm simply asking you whether in this real world they were actually increasing market share after 1990 versus before 1990, the after period being the period of this alleged intensified misconduct? That's all I'm asking.
A. As I've testified, I agree, I'm agreeing that is what the data show. But I'm questioning the relevance of that question at hand.
Q. So if you insist wholly irrelevant that in the real world after 1990 Conwood's share grew at a steady pace?
A. No, it's not irrelevant, the relevant issue is how much it would have grown but for UST's acts.

Q. Well, let's also look at the actual sales. You see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Looking again at the pre-1990 period and the post 1990 period when there is supposed to be intensified misconduct, Conwood's sales were steadily increasing, isn't that right?
A. Yes, that's your characterization. But, yes, they increased the market in this time period, were growing at a pretty good clip.
Q. And would you characterize that, don't take my characterization, would you characterize that as a steady increase in sales?
A. I would characterize the sales were higher in the end than in the beginning, by a large amounts. But again that doesn't speak to whether or not they would have been higher but for UST's acts.
Q. Professor, I'm simply asking you is it before the 1990 period and th post 1990 period, whether they actually were increasing sales significantly? That's all.
A. Yes. The, I, the question significantly, but the numbers are much higher after that that they were before, yes, I agree with that.
Q. You agree that after it was significantly higher then before 1990, correct?
A. No, I didn't use the term significant agreement. I wouldn't use the term significantly, I wouldn't use the term study, you had no idea that Conwood's other experts had made conclusion about exclusive racks, isn't that right?

A. I don't believe I had read Conwood's other expert's reports with the exception of Professor Kamien's.

Q. In fact, when you made your original analysis you were only vaguely aware of the allegation in regard to this rack arrangement, isn't that right?

A. I don't, I don't recall the vague characterization, but I had no focus on them, no.

Q. Well, professor, are you aware that another professor, Professor Gundlach is slotted to testify about the alleged exclusive agreement in this case?

A. I've seen his name, but I'm not specifically aware of what the subject matter of his testimony is.

Q. Didn't you testify earlier in this case in a deposition, that when Mr., Dr. Gundlach had made mistakes about the number of number of exclusive agreements, it would not effect your damages calculations?

A. I don't specifically recall that, I will accept your representation. But since I didn't use his calculations it just follows as a matter of logic that it wouldn't effect my calculations.

Q. So a professor is going to get up here and talk about numbers what he believes are exclusive rack agreements, you don't rely on him, right, as far as your analysis?

A. That's my testimony, yeah, I have not read his report.
Q. Well, in fact, professor, if Dr. Gundlach took the stand in this case and said okay, none of these alleged exclusive agreements are anticompetitive, that wouldn't change your analysis at all, would it?
A. I have not used his analysis, that would not change my numbers, no.
Q. In fact, professor, you testified in discovery confirmed in this case that there were no bad acts, they're all in the record, the results of you model would still not change, isn't that correct?
A. If you, that's correct to the extent you refer to the model before, before I take into account the effects that your expert pointed out.
Q. I'm talking about when you originally started. I'll clarify it. I'm talking about your original analysis that you did and signed the report. Let me ask you again. Isn't it a fact in your original analysis that if discovery reconfirmed that there were no bad acts at all in the record in this case, none whatsoever, the result of your model would still be the same?
A. My understanding is a determination of a what's a bad act is a legal issue and that's a matter for the jury to decide.
Q. I'm just asking whether in your original analysis all this, this money that you seek is connected to whether or not there's actual bad acts in the record? It's not, is it?

A. Yes, it is. It presumes that the activities that were engaged in by UST were illegal. If the jury decides those were not legal, it's my understanding, I'm not a lawyer, my understanding is the jury decides they are not illegal then there are no damages.
Q. Well, professor, if the jury decides that exclusive rack arrangements are desired by many retailers and they're fine, do you have an adjusted number for the jury be to show the jury?
A. As I testified, I did not, was not able to, was not able because of the disaggregating effect of the particular types of bad acts.
Q. And if the jury decides that the way US Tobacco practices category management is what is desired by retailers or that everybody else has their chance to make their pitch, then you back that out of your damages number?
A. I was not able to detect the damages as I've said before.
Q. In fact, professor, you can't -- well, explain what this act is? Explain what disaggregated means to the jury, you just said disaggegated for a particular act of alleged misconduct on?
A. My understanding is multiple bad acts alleged by antibehavior alleged by UST, my results take in effected all these anticompetitive results, if you will, rolled up into one ball of wax and given the world of nature of those acts, it's difficult to disentangle them, to assess data and for me to disentangle. That's bad acts, excuse me, anticompetitive acts.

Q. Professor, in your original analysis you didn't run any variability for rack removal, is that correct?

A. No, my original analysis I did not have that data available to me.

Q. Well, you didn't, in your original analysis you didn't run regression for POS removal, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Professor, you didn't use Professor Scheffman's method, as you characterize it, to calculate a damages number that you were going to post in front of this jury until after you learned that your original damages estimates were off by $245,000,000, isn't that right?

A. I, I used that after his supplemental, I received his supplemental report and after my deposition, that very soon after the deposition I learned that there were some potential errors, I don't recall specifically whether I knew the magnitude of the data errors at the time, or the impact of those data errors on my damages.

Q. Let me ask you again, I was not a clear. Isn't it a fact you didn't run any model on what you characterized as the Scheffman methodology, that you calculate damages, the actual numbers that have been put in front of the jury, until af-- you learned that your original damages estimates were incorrect by $245,000,000?

A. I did it, I used the Sheffman analysis after I knew what my original errors were, my original estimates were incorrect. I don't recall whether I did it before or after I knew the magnitude of those errors.

Q. Now, professor your revised data using the Sheffman methodology, did not distinguish whether any rack or POS removal was done with or without retailer authorization, isn't that true?

A. That's correct.

Q. And your revised data using the method to be what you say is the Scheffman methodology, did not have any information about other competitors removing Conwood's racks or POS, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Are you aware, professor, that Mr. Price, from Swedish Mash, yesterday and in this court, testified that Swedish Mash removed Conwood racks?

A. I wasn't specifically aware of that fact.

Q. And your revised data wouldn't capture that, as you said, correct?

A. I don't believe that that's, I don't believe that's correct with respect to the Sheffman analysis we're talking about.

Q. Well, my question is whether you assess, you made a independent assessment of the effects of other competitors removing Conwood's racks with or without authorization, whether you would accept that effect on Conwood sales?

A. No, I knew that, I assessed UST's impact, the impact that UST's rack removal on Conwood's sales, using Scheffman's analysis, using Professor Scheffman's analysis.

Q. My question is did you assess how the rack removal by other competitors, whether authorized or not, were impacting Conwood's sales?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Professor, you're not testifying here today that all US Tobacco actions that effect Conwood sales, constitute misconduct, are you?

A. No. I understand there's a difference between legal, legally competitive, legally competitive behavior and illegally.

Q. For example, you testified that you only meant to include the anticompetitive aspects of category management in your damage assessment, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Even though you couldn't disaggregate it, as you explained to the jury, procompetitive aspects of that versus anticompetitive aspects, correct?

A. I think my testimony to the jury was I couldn't disentangle the effects of the various types of anticompetitive acts.

Q. Well, then I assume you clearly can't disentangle what goes, what you studied results will leave our procompetitive aspects of category management versus anticompetitive, you didn't look at that, did you?

A. I didn't look at category management specifically.

Q. And you testified when attempting tot measure damages you did not intend to include the effects of rack removal that were authorized or directed by retailers, isn't that right?

A. That, that's correct, to the extent that those were independent to the extent that they were coerced or encouraged by UST. My understanding is that, that those belonged as part of the damages calculation.

Q. So it's your testimony that if the retailer makes uncoercioned independent decision to have just a US Tobacco rack, it can be no basis for damages on that issue?

MR. HANSEN: Excuse me, Your Honor, it's asking a legal basis of this witness.

MR. KEYTE: He's testified about it.

THE COURT: Repeat the question for me.

Q. The question is your testimony as the damages expert that you did not perceive for Conwood any damages based on the independent uncoerced decisions of retailers about using a US

Tobacco rack for their store?
A. No. My statement about that was purely a statement, a reflection of the information given to me by attorneys. This is a legal issue as to whether or not there was an independent uncoerced action were allowable, were anticompetitive.
Q. Well, is the number, in your damages number, you do not intend to include, do you, I'm asking as a matter of fact in your damages, rack removals of Conwood by US Tobacco that represent the independent uncoerced decision of retailers to have US Tobacco racks in their store?
A. That's my understanding.
Q. You also testified in this case that it was not your intention to include POS removals that was authorized and directed by retailers, correct?
A. Again, that's an independent retailer's decisions, I would give the same answer.
Q. And, professor, from your study you are aware that there are instances, many instances where retailers direct the removal of a competitor's rack as part of a reset, something like that, right?
A. I'm, I'm aware that there is a dispute as to whether that's independent or not. I don't have a view one way or another as to whether it was coerced or uncoerced.
Q. So you have no view about when ever Wal-Mart decides to have a certain rack in their store, Wal-Mart's making that decision?

MR. HANSEN: Objections, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I have no study the coercions or non-coercion involved in the Wal-Mart decision.

Q. You'd have, you'd have to hear that from Wal-Mart, correct?

A. I -- there are -- there are other way of learning that same data, that same information. I have not studied it.

Q. In fact, you haven't talked to any retailers in this case, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Would you agree that unless you hear from the retailer you can't determine whether they made an independent uncoerced decision to choose the US Tobacco rack?

A. No. There would other ways of learning it.

Q. Don't you think that's the best way, professor?

A. I, I have, as I did the study I didn't think the best way to investigate coercion.

Q. And professor, you did not intend to include in your analysis the removal of Conwood's products that were part of the approved planning for a retailer, did you?

A. Again, I give the same answer to the extent that approved means what uncoerced and a independent decision.

Q. In respect for example the Wal-Mart plan-o-gram would you be interested in Wal-Mart's testimony on that?

A. Ir I were trying to determine whether that was independent or uncoerced, but I did not study the question.
Q. So you didn't, you didn't, in seeking damages or putting up the number for Conwood's damages, you didn't really care what Wal-Mart had to say about their decision about racks and plan-o-grams and POS, is that right?
A. It's not that I didn't care, it's that I used a method that did not require me to have that information.
Q. Well, maybe you didn't care, but you didn't, it wasn't part of your analysis, is that right?
A. That's right, it was not part of my analysis.
Q. Professor, would you agree that related promotional activities is not a bad act in your opinion?
A. Some promotional activity I understand is illegal, some others acts are legal, I'm not sure which is legal and which is not. Disparagement, for example, I understand is illegal, but I have a clear view in my mind to which is legal and which is illegal.
Q. Professor, did you intend to include the effects of increased promotional activity in be the 1990's on Conwood's sales in your analysis?
A. No, I did not.
Q. So the promotional activities by other moist snuff companies increased after 1990, how did your study account for the effect of those promotions, Timber Wolf, for example, on Conwood's sales?

A. I didn't, I did not take that into account specifically.

Q. So, just so the jury understands this, you did not take into account the increased promotional activity of the Timber Wolf brands in the 1990s in your analysis, is that right?

A. No, but that would require a very strange set of facts to make that relevant to the analysis.

Q. Just asking you whether you took that into account.

A. I'm telling you why I didn't.

Q. And you would agree, professor, wouldn't you, that the introduction of new products aren't bad acts?

A. I would agree with that.

Q. Okay. And you did not intend to include any of the effects of new products introductions, how those effected Conwood's sales in your analysis, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. So if new products were successfully introduced by other moist snuff companies, they the new product introduction increased after 1990, you did not account for that in your analysis, correct?

A. I did not account for it because it would require a strange pattern to this products introduction to explain the results that I found.

Q. I'm asking whether you accounted for it, sir?

A. I'm telling you why it's not relevant to account for it.
Q. So it's not relevant, with all the new products that came in the market after 1990, it was not relevant to use your stats whether they had an impact on Conwood sales?
A. If I could explain that to you?
Q. Sure.
A. All of the facts, it is not just that one that you're talking about, but other factors might effect the level of Conwood sales, whether Conwood's sales were high or low in terms of total market share. The results in my, in my study don't give me systematic patterns across states. It would require that those new products introductions systematically varied across states in the same way that the bad acts varied to explain the pattern that I observed in the data, that is not plausible in my view.
Q. So therefore you didn't have to take any individual products like Timber Wolf and assess how that impacted Conwood's, is that your testimony?
A. Yes. Again, that would effect my, might effect the level of Conwood sales, but not the pattern that I observed across states when I ran my regression and when I used your expert's damages calculations, your expert's regression.
Q. I'm just asking whether you did an independent assessment of the impact of the Timber Wolf brand on Conwood sales, that's simple.

A. I did an independent assessment because I analyzed and discussed it with many people in Lexicon, I did the analysis and the analysis suggests, the analysis demonstrates that one does not need to control the things, other things unless they vary systematically across states in the same pattern of the bad acts theory.

Q. Professor, I understand that you reached a conclusion that you did not need to control for that in a regression analysis, but my question is did you, independent of your regression analysis, or tell me what you included or not included, did you assess directly what the impact of the Timber Wolf brands in 1990 was on Conwood sales?

A. As I testified, I did not do to it, I explained why I didn't do it.

Q. In fact, at the time you did your study you weren't aware that Conwood marketing documents reported that Timber Wolf was taking sales from Kodiak, were you?

A. I don't specifically recall that document, or those documents.

Q. Professor, advertising restrictions in the moist snuff industry increased after 1997, is that right?

A. They changed throughout this time period, they were increased in snuff in 1990, yes.

Q. You didn't assess the impact of that on Conwood sales because you didn't have the data, isn't that right?

A. No, that is not correct. If I could explain why?
Q. Well, did you not testify on your deposition that you did not consider advertising restrictions because that was something you were not able to obtain data for, do you remember that?
A. I don't specifically recall that. If I gave that answer it was incomplete, but I was not able to obtain data for it, but that's an incomplete answer.
Q. Well, have you since obtained data for advertising restrictions under your effect on Conwood's sales after 1990?
A. No, I have, even before my deposition I knew why it wasn't relevant, but I didn't give that answer when I was deposed, but I knew why it wasn't relevant the same reason I described to you before. Those advertising restrictions would effect the level of Conwood's sales, not the pattern across states, it would have to be that there was a systematic statements, a difference where the restrictions were more severe and binding in the low foothold states than in the high foothold states. There's a pattern of data that if a change like that just cannot explained.
Q. Well, did you assess whether restrictions on advertising effected Conwood more in low share states?
A. Again, that I did not have the data for, but that, but I did, but I did do the analysis to suggest that that could not explain the pattern in the data.

Q. I know this is somewhat of confusing area, it is for me. Can you explain again, you did not have the data to assess whether in the low share states, they would have, the shares would have grown, you didn't have the data to assess whether advertising restrictions effected Conwood's sales in the low share states, correct?

A. I didn't have the data, but suggested that advertising restrictions differ across the states.

Q. Well, professor, are you aware there are huge differences in ad restrictions among various states and localities across the country?

A. I am aware that are huge, I can accept that characterization, yes. I am aware when I wrote my, when I drew up my report.

Q. Professor, do you agree that the number of products offered by Conwood would have an effect on Conwood's sales?

A. Yes, it's a possibility.

Q. Did you do any studies to determine the number of products Conwood had in the market during any time period covered by your study?

A. No, I did not for the same reason that I have explained to you before that it would not explain the systematic pattern in the data.

Q. Well, you didn't do any study to determine how the failure of several Conwood products introduced effected Conwood's sales, did you?

A. No. And again I would give the same answer.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued Kodiak Choice?
A. I'm aware they, I'm aware that some of their brands did not meet great success, I don't recall which ones.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued Garrett Moist?
A. I heard that, I heard that, that refreshes my recollection.
Q. Are you aware that Conwood discontinued the Big Horn brands?
A. I don't specifically recall that brand.
Q. And you didn't -- so you didn't study, out of failure of those brands or other marketing efforts of Conwood effected their own sales, is that right?
A. Again, I did not study it because it would have to be very systematically across states to do, to explain the pattern.
Q. Professor, you looked at the loose leaf industry as what you call the yardstick markets, model, is that right?
A. That's correct.
Q. And the purpose of the yardstick model is to look at an industry that's free of the alleged misconduct by US Tobacco, is that right?
A. That's one purpose of the yardstick model, yes.
Q. And US Tobacco doesn't sell those new products you use loose leaf in the yardstick answer, right?

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 MAR 15 A10:22 Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

U.S. DISTRICT COURT
WESTN DIST. KENTUCKY

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY TO DEFENDANTS' OBJECTIONS TO EXHIBITS

The Court should reject defendants' tardy challenge to PX 152. On February 26, 2000, we disclosed to defendants our intention to introduce PX 152 during the testimony of Dr. Kamien. See Tab A. Defendants did not object and Dr. Kamien discussed PX 152 in his testimony. See Tab B (Trial Tr. March 3, 2000 at 21-24). PX 152 was admitted without objection. See Tab B (Trial Tr. March 3, 2000 at 33). On March 8, 2000, we responded to defendants' notice that they may, at some point, object to PX 152. See Tab C. Now, at the end of plaintiffs' case in chief, defendants seek to challenge the admissibility of PX 152. Defendants' failure to object to PX 152 prior to its introduction violates the Court's Order requiring the parties to raise objections prior to testimony concerning the exhibit.

In any event, defendants' argument is meritless. Defendants claim that the exhibit is insufficiently trustworthy to fall within the exception to the hearsay rule contained at Fed. R.

Evid. 803(6). But defendants fail to realize that the document is simply not hearsay under Rule 801(d)(2) because it is an admission by a party-opponent. The document was produced from the files of Gary Milano, U.S. Tobacco's Vice President of Sales. The document discusses defendants' Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") for 1999. Whether the CAP goals discussed in this document are contained in defendants' CAP contract/worksheets and/or implemented through various tactics employed by defendants is an issue of hotly disputed fact for the jury to determine. Plaintiffs presented significant evidence that defendants implemented strategies through CAP and other activities designed to achieve the exact goals discussed in PX 152.[1]

Finally, plaintiffs are prejudiced by defendants' tardy objection. Defendants waited until after Dr. Kamien and Mr. Milano testified to raise this objection, thereby preventing plaintiffs from eliciting additional testimony concerning the admissibility of PX 152.

[1] Lloyd v. Professional Realty Servs., 734 F.2d 1428 (11th Cir. 1984), does not support defendants' argument. The statements at issue in Lloyd were not admissible as an admission because the statements were not made by a person with authority. Defendants do not claim that PX 152 -- produced from Mr. Milano's files -- contains statements made by people other than defendants' high level employees. Moreover, unlike the statements at issue in Lloyd, there is a significant factual dispute in this case over whether the goals reflected in PX 152 are in fact exactly what defendants accomplish through the use of its CAP program.

Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v.
United States Tobacco Company, et al.

Counsel:

We have Ms. Mariner's letter stating that you have added two new designations for opening statements. It appears that you have also deleted portions of Mr. Keane's deposition, including 211:4-8, which we understood the Court to have ordered you to play. Accordingly, this passage should be included. With regard to your alterations to pages 70 and 71 of Mr. Rosson's deposition, we understand that you will play the following: 70:20 (Beginning with "You understand") through 70:25; 71:3 through 71:8; and 71:11 through 71:18. Please let us know immediately if this is incorrect.

Listed below are the witnesses we now expect to call and the exhibits we expect to introduce for the entire week of February 28 through March 3. While this represents our current plans, our plans may change (in part based on rulings on what we consider to be gross overdesignation of counter-sections of the deposition testimony of UST employees, which we expect to raise with the Court on Monday morning). Plaintiffs reserve the right to alter their proof, and we will notify you of any additional witnesses or exhibits.

Witness	Exhibits to Be Introduced
Lou Marano	None expected at this time.
William Rosson	We expect to prepare a demonstrative during Mr. Rosson's examination comparing characteristics of different smokeless products. In addition, we may introduce during Mr. Rosson's testimony certain demonstrative exhibits (copies enclosed herewith).
Morton Kamien	Plaintiffs' Exhibits: 4,5,9,13,14,16,19,20,23,24,28,32, 33,39,40,42,45,48,49,53,59,61,63, 68,70,72,76,79,80,84,86,88,94,96, 103,104,107,108,112c,113a,114,117, 120,124a,124f,127,128,129,130,136, 137,139,140,141,143,144,149,152, 156,158,159,173,188,189,208,220, 223,245,258,266,267,268,270,274, 280,285,288,326.[1] All documents discussed in plaintiffs' deposition designations for the following witnesses: Fasanelli, Fitzmaurice, Wheatley, Berkebile, Entwistle, Blackburn, Chiaradio, Parish
James Wheatley	Only documents discussed in plaintiffs' deposition designations.
Richard Fasanelli	Same.
Robert Fitzmaurice	Same.
Timothy Entwistle	Same.

Q Could you explain why?
A Yes. This is -- this just extends and makes explicit what is meant by monitoring by the sales rep and what compliance represents.
Q So, in your opinion, if the sales rep wants to obtain exclusive vending, how does that happen pursuant to CAP --
MR. STOLL: Objection, your Honor; very leading.
MR. HANSEN: How, your Honor?
THE COURT: I'm going to overrule it.
BY MR. HANSEN:
Q Professor, in your opinion, if the sales rep wants to achieve, for example, exclusive vending with one of the retail accounts, how does that happen under CAP?
A It happens under CAP because he has the discretion of reporting of -- of reporting whether you get a payment back for the -- for selling rolls. In other words, he has the discretion that -- whether you're going to get a payment or not. Okay?
Now, if he has that discretion, it also gives him sort of the ability to say, well, you know, if we have exclusive vending, it makes it easier for me to get you the money under the customer alliance program.
Q Let me hand you Exhibit 152. Is Exhibit 152 another U.S. Tobacco Company business record you've relied on in forming your opinion?

A Yes.
Q What is it?
A It's a draft, and it's dated 1999, and it says "CAP Goals." This is consumer alliance.
Q Let's highlight that. Is this the CAP program you've just been telling us about?
A Yes.
Q Let's look under the first half of the page and see if we can enlarge that.
Do you see where at the bottom of that first half there's the word "Display" in the center of the page?
A Yes.
Q I'll read it. "The display goal would be to make sure that USTSM's share of fixture was in proportion to its share of sales in the account."
Do you have an understanding as to what USTSM refers to here?
A U.S. Tobacco. I think "SM" is sales and marketing.
Q And is the display goal, one of goals, CAP, one of the enumerated goals of the CAP program?
A Yes.
Q Is this an item you found of significance in forming your opinion?
A Yes. It's -- you see, it goes in hand with the prominence of display, but it also goes a little bit beyond it in saying that, you know, not only do we want prominence of display, but we want that the share of fixture be in proportion to the share of sales.

Q So if a retailer wants to get this CAP program, what compliance is required, in your opinion, with respect to the display goal?

A Well, again, did -- this becomes part of the compliance requirement and part of the requirement in order for you to get paid under the customer alliance program.

Q Do you know whether this particular set of goals was implemented in the field?

A I believe it was, yes. I think we even had a document to that effect.

Q Let's look at "Share of Sales," the next paragraph down. It said in the prior paragraph that part of the display goal is to make sure that USTSM share of fixtures is in proportion to the share of sales. Let me just read "Share of Sales."

"The share of sales goals would be based upon the greater of either the retailer's historical percentage of USTSM sales or the goal for USTSM sales in the area that the retailer is located."

Is that an item you found of significance?

A Yes.

Q Could you explain why?

A Well, the interesting thing here is that it says the larger of two. So share -- so if it so happened that UST's products' historical percentage was below what UST would like to have had, then it says, well, you know, what we're looking at is what we would like to have, not simply what we have had. So if we would like to have even a larger share than we presently have, that is the operative standard, not the standard of what used to be historically.

Q So just to illustrate your point, if UST's goal for a particular area was at 100% of the market, what would be the consequence here?

A Well, that means that if it were 100%, it means, you know, we eliminate everybody else.

Q Let me hand you what we've marked as Exhibit 266. Is Exhibit 266 another U.S. Tobacco Company business record that you've relied on in forming your opinion?

A Yes.

Q Can you tell us what this is?

A This is a statement regarding -- the subject is E-Z Serve Plan-O-Gram opportunity, and it's to a Mr. Blackburn and it is from a Steve Towle, and it's dated November 25th, 1997.

Q And was this an item you found of significance?

A Yes.

Q Let's go down to the one, two, three, four, fifth paragraph and enlarge it, if we could, please. I'll just read that aloud. This is about a store named E-Z Serve, by the Re: Conwood Company, L.P., et al. v.

United States Tobacco Company, et al.

Gentlemen:

I have your letter of March 8, 2000 discussing the list of admitted exhibits we transmitted to you. While we do not yet have a transcript of the Court proceedings of March 2, 2000, PX 333 and PX 84a were disclosed in our February 26, 2000 letter and discussed during the Fasanelli testimony shown to the jury. I believe I moved the admission of those exhibits on March 2, 2000 and will verify when we receive the transcripts. Moreover, PX 84a is a copy of PX 84 with a different Bates number and slightly different format to the e-mail.

On February 14, 2000, we disclosed that we intended to introduce PX 148. PX 148 was included in our motion of February 22, 2000 and you did not object to its admission. PX 148 was properly admitted.

We disagree that you can challenge the admission of PX 152. On February 26, 2000, we disclosed our intention to introduce PX 152 during the testimony of Dr. Kamien and received no objection. The exhibit was discussed and admitted without objection. PX 152 was properly admitted.

As for DX 4389, we reserve our right to object to the admission of that exhibit if you use the testimony of Mr. Walden.

Please do not hesitate to call with any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Benjamin A. Powell

FROM: Richard L. Tanner, CMR-GJD01, Parsons, Kansas

SUBJECT: Conwood Rep Removing UST Vendors

The Conwood Representative, W.S. "Steve" Yager P.O. Box 16305 Wichita, Kansas, is cutting our vendors apart and removing them from retail. He is then replacing them with their version of our plastic home and replacing our product labels on his vendors. This is to gain the appearance of at least 50% of the vendor.

Mr. Yager, in his quest for shelf space, is not obtaining permission from store management. For example, The One Stop Convenient Store, 301 West Main, Sedan, Ks. had a 15 column UST plastic home with three columns for Conwood. This is the way the store manager and the owner wanted their smokeless tobacco merchandised. On his last visit to this store, Mr. Yager removed a 7 column section from our vendor and replaced it with his. (He did remove our vendor from the store). As you can see from the vendor enclosed he replaced our product labels on his vendor, with the exception of Skoal Bandit Straight, as to gain two facings for Kodiak.

With approval of the manager I reset the above store back to the way it was. If need be the clerk, Pat Sanders, witnessed the removal of our vendor and can be reached at 316-725-5713. The store manager, Cheryl Catlin, can also be contacted at the above number for conformation.

This store is just one example out of the sixty calls I made this week. Approximately 85% of these stores Mr. Yager conducted the same activities as in the above store.

The two header cards with the warning label cut off is also the doings of Mr. Yager in his retail work.

If I can be of any further assistance concerning this subject please feel free to contact me at your convenience.

Sincerely,

Richard L. Tanner

Contributing Editor: Donna Hood Crecca

Contributing Editor: Tom DiNome

In this, the second annual Convenience Store News Category Captains supplement, industry retailers, suppliers and distributors nominated companies they view as exemplary practitioners of category management. In a questionnaire sent to industry players, retailers nominated supplier and distributor Category Captains, while suppliers and distributors nominated their most proficient retail partners.

Congratulations to all of this year's Category Captains. As a group and individually, these companies have taken a leadership position in the industry with an eye toward excellence. They believe in category management, they practice and implement category-management strategies and they are reaping the rewards in the form of increased sales, profits and turns, reduced out-of-stocks and improved operational efficiency.

This year we especially recognize three suppliers who received Top Honors, based on the overwhelming number of nominations they received from retailers. This year's top honorees are Anheuser-Busch Inc., The Coca-Cola Co. and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The entire staff of Convenience Store News salutes this year's Category Captains for their vision, hard work and leadership, and for sharing their successes and lessons learned with the industry in the pages of this supplement. Not only are these companies the Best of Class, they're a class act.

Honor Roll

Congratulations to this year's Category Captains!

The following companies were cited as exemplary practitioners of category management. Suppliers were nominated by retailers as Best of Class, and retailers were nominated by their suppliers as outstanding category management partners. All of the companies appearing on this honor roll have earned the privilege to use the Category Captains' seal in their public relations and advertising materials.

In the eyes of retailers who voted for this year's Category Captains, three manufacturers—Anheuser Busch Inc., Coca-Cola Co. and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.—stand head and shoulders above the rest. These Best-of-Class companies received the most nominations from retailer respondents, making them this year's top honorees.

Anheuser-Busch Inc.

As category leader, Anheuser-Busch works to facilitate category management in two ways, according to Joe Patti, senior director, retail planning and category management. The first is to support industry initiatives such as Anheuser-Busch's active sponsorship of the National Association of Convenience Stores' (NACS) category-management work. The company was also a sponsor of the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study. The second element is working closely with retail customers to address their category management needs.

"On both levels, we take our direction from the retailers themselves," said Patti. "Especially when working directly with our retail customers. Our role is to take the best of what we've learned across the country and across channels, drill down to the consumer and industry insights to apply to a particular retailer's needs, and create a plan that helps them achieve their goals. The bottom line is that it's their plan."

Step one in Anheuser-Busch's process is to identify the convenience store retailer's goals and objectives, as well as the issues relevant to their operations. This is determined by dedicated Anheuser-Busch personnel and its wholesaler network. The brewer's extensive resources and tools are then applied to the process. One such tool is Eagle Eye, a micro-marketing system built around the Spectra program. A customized version of the Spaceman program is also used for creating planograms.

Anheuser-Busch, based in St. Louis, brings added value to the process in the form of data. In addition to market-level syndicated data, the company supplies proprietary research on cross-channel shopping behavior. "Anheuser-Busch expends many resources to understand the dynamics of the category, the marketplace and the convenience store shopper. We have developed detailed insights into how shoppers think and behave when shopping in and outside the convenience channel," Patti explained. "This helps us identify things that will drive profitability for the retailer."

Larry Lytle, buyer for Salem, N.C.-based A.T. Williams Oil Co., said he values Anheuser-Busch for its extensive resources. "[The company] has brought in the needed manpower and resources to analyze our total category and assist in implementation," he said. "It's a total effort."

Patti acknowledged that while the increasing availability of convenience store data drives more efficient and effective category management in the channel, Anheuser-Busch approaches the process as sound business practice. "With or without data, at the end of the day, you have to make sound business decisions. We focus our efforts on how to make the best business decisions to reach the defined goals and objectives of the retailer. With that position, the process becomes intuitive and logical, rather than intimidating," he said.

An element of the Anheuser-Busch category management process lauded by retailer is objectivity. "The company is very fair in the layouts it develops," said Silvio Federighi, general manager of Convenient Food Mart of Painesville, Ohio. "Anheuser-Busch doesn't monopolize the case with their products when they develop a set. They compile all the relevant information and develop fair layouts. It's truly a partnership."

"Anheuser-Busch understands that the whole category must grow to sustain growth of their products," said Jeff DeJesse, category manager for ARCO am/pm stores. "They've been very responsive, and provide the necessary resources for all our projects."

"We realize that we're in this for the long run, so we're not looking to make a quick hit at a cost to our retail customers," Patti said. "This approach allows us to be objective and focus on the quality of our products and our information."

The most important step in the category-management process, according to Patti, is to begin. "It's really important for retailers to get started, no matter where they are in terms of their own automation and data-collection capabilities. Talk to your lead suppliers, start the dialogue and start the process. The sales results and profit increases will show your return on the investment."

The Coca-Cola Co.

Dr. Glen Stoops

"Category management is all about opportunity—the ability to locate it, plan for it, execute it and capture it," observed Dr. Glenn Stoops, managing director, market research and category management for The Coca-Cola Co. "The category-management mission of the Coca-Cola system is to help convenience store operators locate opportunities for growing the size and value of the beverage category."

To assist retailers in capitalizing on the opportunities within the non-alcohol beverage segment, Coca-Cola provides an extensive category-management toolbox. However, the company emphasizes the expertise of its category-management personnel as a crucial element of the process. "Tools within themselves are not very powerful. It is the people behind them who release the tools' full potential," said Stoops.

> Tedeschi Food Shops Inc.

Coca-Cola category managers combine their personal base of knowledge and experience with market research insights to assist retailers in developing appropriate plans. Consumer insights are the key to achieving profitable growth, according to Stoops. To speed the delivery of such insights to retail, Coca-Cola's market research and category-management functions are linked. Coca-Cola's bottling system is also an important component of the process. "Our commitment to retail is clearly seen in the increasing number of Coca-Cola bottlers who are designating more category-management personnel solely to the convenience side of the business," Stoops said.

That commitment is evident to retailers doing business with Coca-Cola. "The company has a department within its organization set up specifically for category management," said Stephen Monaco, buyer at 130-store Tedeschi Food Shops Inc., based in Rockland, Mass. "They have the resources in place to analyze and recommend specific sets as they relate to our business."

Rather than focus solely on software systems and tools, Coca-Cola identifies eight areas of category-management expertise that are applied to the process. They include advanced consumer insights, market analysis, financial analysis, pricing analysis, promotional analysis, efficient assortment, advanced merchandising and efficient replenishment.

In addition to applying the NACS process and utilizing syndicated research, Coca-Cola employs proprietary systems that enable activity-based-costing studies, basket-level analysis of scan data and store services, as well as profitability recaps. The market-basket analysis capability has been implemented over the past year, and reveals beverage purchase dynamics. "The retailer is able to gain insights to important areas such as the interaction between categories, between different gasoline grades and store purchases. We'll also use it as a new approach in determining out-of-stock situations," Stoops explained. "This allows the retailer to look at other categories outside of non-alcohol beverages and apply fact-based decision-making."

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola also assists retailers in maintaining and measuring the effectiveness of category-management programs. A detailed process of conducting assortment review has been developed that is based in obtaining the proper buy-in to ensure the set's longevity and provides the ability to track progress, Stoops said. "Assortment is the backbone of any successful beverage business and must be done to satisfy the needs of the consumer."

Mapco Express Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., has had positive experiences with Coca-Cola's process, according to Larry Pedigo, category manager for the 256-store chain. "Our Coca-Cola representative was willing to not only wear a Coca-Cola hat, but when necessary put on a Mapco hat. The company is very good at doing what is best for the consumer, and has data that can be trusted," he said. "Coca-Cola works to grow the entire category."

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Jim Maguire

Mary McCombs, category manager for the 200-unit Sheetz Inc., based in Altoona, Pa., had this to say about R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.'s category-management support: "R.J. Reynolds's [representatives] keep their finger on the pulse of the [tobacco] industry, as well as the convenience store industry. They consider the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They work with customized programs that fit our needs as well as theirs. Top-down personnel are readily available at all hours. They provide us with the detailed data we request in a timely manner. Also, they are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize space or developing direct mailers for our markets."

That type of involved, unbiased, total-store approach is the backbone of R.J. Reynolds's category-management process for convenience stores. "A category advisor is a manufacturer that understands the values of all brands in the category, as well as how the category affects other product sales, and structures all of their recommendations accordingly," explained Jim Maguire, senior vice president of sales.

The total-store strategy for the tobacco category is important for the success of convenience stores, Maguire said. "Adult smoker foot traffic is critical to the c-store industry's profits. According to the Convenience Store News Out-of-Stock Study, the average adult smoker visits a convenience store 5.6 times per week and spends an average of $5.12 per visit," he noted. "This $28.67 in sales per week, per adult smoker speaks for itself relative to the importance of maximizing store profitability."

R.J. Reynolds, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., brings a range of resources to the tobacco category-management process. "We use real-time data provided by direct accounts on shipments to each retail outlet and, whenever we can, retail scan data to provide our total category recommendation," Maguire said.

Field personnel are equipped with automated tools that enable them to advise retailers in three important areas. The first is determining the brand-style selection required to satisfy a target percentage of adult smokers in a specific geography. The second is identifying the manufacturer programs that should be combined to maximize adult smoker needs relative to promotion levels and maximizing the number of brands that can be promoted. The third area is merchandising the category from the standpoint of "presentation to the consumer," said Maguire. "What is the ideal capacity for maximum turns/minimal out-of-stocks? How can the manufacturer-program requirements be incorporated into the available space?"

> "R.J. Reynolds considers the overall category needs in our stores, not just their own products. They are continually looking for ways to help us, which could involve developing fixtures to maximize our space or direct mailers for our markets."
> — Mary McCombs
> Sheetz Inc.

Determining product selection and developing the appropriate SKU mix for a convenience store outlet requires examination of all brands. "We would point out that several smaller share brands—those that are seldom, if ever, promoted—have the highest level of brand loyalty. Consequently, adult smokers who can no longer find their brand will quickly take their $28.67 per week contribution to another store that carries their brand," Maguire explained. "Reducing inventory costs has to start with getting proper inventory levels on each brand style in line versus simply discontinuing everything that doesn't sell a carton a week."

R.J. Reynolds has also studied the impact of tobacco products on other categories. Maguire outlined that retailers must consider the impact of increased cigarette sales on their five other top sales/margin items. Another question to ask is whether the retailer can afford to trade off margin on cigarettes to drive foot traffic on higher-margin items and drive a higher overall profit for the store.

"We'd like to thank the retailers who have valued our contribution enough to nominate R.J. Reynolds for this recognition," Maguire said. "We will continue to provide all of our expertise to those business partners who are truly committed to growing their total business and to providing R.J. Reynolds a fair chance in their stores to grow our business. It's a win-win situation!"

Best-of-Class Suppliers

The following Best-of-Class category-management partners nominated by convenience store retailers share their experience and some of the secrets of their success.

Convenience Marketing Inc.

Convenience Marketing has a department dedicated to category management, according to vice president, sales development, Bill Price, who added that the Austin, Texas-based food broker's entire organization assists in the process. "The organization provides a resource to facilitate linking manufacturers and retailers," said Price.

Utilizing syndicated data and industry resources, Convenience Marketing determines core-item selection that can be customized by market. State-of-the-art planogram systems are then used to develop photo-quality shelf sets for retailer implementation. Business development managers oversee each project and provide support in the form of consumer research and brand information. The field sales organization works with buyers and category managers to finalize the product-selection process and ensure implementation of the planograms. "It's a team effort in partnership with the customer," said Price.

"Convenience Marketing has consistently and promptly offered assistance," said Rebekah Ensley, category management analyst at H.T. Hackney Co., a wholesale distributor based in Knoxville, Tenn. "They provide complete, live-image planograms and their recommendations are valid and supported."

Core-Mark International

Core-Mark International is committed to objective category management, according to Chris Walsh, vice president of merchandising. "We start with fact-based, consumer-driven schematics," he said. But that is only the foundation of the company's category-management process.

"We partner with retailers in maximizing their real estate," said Walsh. "Especially with the recent dynamics of the tobacco industry, we try to help retailers understand measurements of profitability, how certain categories are driven more by impulse and the value of activity-based costing."

> "If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits."
> — Chris Walsh
> Core-Mark International

While manufacturers and distributors have made considerable gains in ECR-driven logistical efficiencies in recent years, Walsh stated that the benefits of the processes for retailers are largely untapped. "One consultant estimated it 'costs' a retailer $35 per week to transact business with each supplier. If we help a retailer eliminate a half dozen suppliers, we afford that store over $10,000 in activity-based savings per year, while increasing sales and profits," he explained, adding that savings can be realized on the bottom line or used to increase customer service and store cleanliness.

Core-Mark's primary program for achieving these objectives is SmartStock, which enrolled 3,000 retailers in 1998. The results have been positive. "For example, we worked with Quik Stop Markets [Freemont, Calif.], which has over 100 franchisees making independent buying decisions at every store. We utilized SmartStock and our category-merchandising tools to provide consistency, increase sales across commodities and eliminate 500 transactions per week from the stores," Walsh said.

Van Tarver, president of Quik Stop Markets Inc., acknowledged Core-Mark's contribution. "The company really cooperated with us in our recent remerchandising program. Core-Mark helped to eliminate slow-moving items through category management and improved the out-of-stock situation in our stores," he said. "The result has been a positive move in sales. One store, in fact, experienced sales increases at double the rate of stores that had not yet been remerchandised. Core-Mark has been a flexible and cooperative partner."

Based in South San Francisco, Core-Mark's approach is to go beyond the textbook definition of category management. "Whether it's helping to implement POS, reduce tobacco inventories or stimulate sales through promotion or merchandising, we are committed to partnerships that assist retailers in being more profitable operators," said Walsh.

Douglas Distributing

Ron Feulner

For family-owned Douglas Distributing, based in Salt Lake City, Utah, keeping up with coffee trends and the specific needs of its convenience store customers is the key to successful category management. "Our strength lies in maintaining a complete focus in one convenience store category—coffee," said Ron Feulner, owner. "We can focus directly on this category in this market [Utah and surrounding states]."

Douglas Distributing utilizes a sophisticated computer system to track retail customer activity at the store level, and combines that up-to-the-minute information with its local store knowledge. "We have six people in the field, and hold fast to a hands-on approach to serving our customers and creating programs that serve their needs best," said Feulner, who himself visits stores twice a month. "I want to rub shoulders with the people who work the stores every day. It's a great way to measure customer satisfaction and find out exactly what the consumer wants."

"Douglas accepts responsibility for equipment, service and product," said Bill McGregor, foodservice director of 140-store Maverik Country Stores in Afton, Wyo. "They offer unbiased, professional advice, current category information, price protection and rapid response. Douglas Distributing is my coffee category expert."

Eby-Brown Co. L.P.

"Eby-Brown services retailers of all sizes, from the mega-chain to the individually owned store," observed Tom Oktavec, vice president, marketing of Kocolene Marketing Corp., operator of 43 Fast Max stores, based in Seymour, Ind. "Each of their customers is treated with care and respect. Eby-Brown is a true partner to our industry."

That ability to service both large and small retailers stems from Eby-Brown's approach to customer service, and also its technical capabilities. Convenience store operators that are scanning benefit from Eby-Brown's item-information database and assistance in POS setup, and ongoing support in the format of the POS software selected by the retailer, according to Ron Coppel, vice president, business development. For retailers who are not scanning or do not have data-mining capabilities, Eby-Brown has developed IRIS (Intelligent Reporting Information System), which provides subscribers with secured access to their velocity information 24 hours a day, seven days a week via the Internet.

Naperville, Ill.-based Eby-Brown also has developed category-management practices to maximize consumer value and category asset performance, said Coppel. "We assist retailers by integrating our category expertise into our customers' strategic business process, providing the exchange of information and the willingness to share pertinent data, and jointly identifying with retailers and manufacturers opportunities to grow category sales and profits," he said. Eby-Brown then utilizes Spaceman tools to develop planograms.

Frito-Lay Inc.

"Frito-Lay is progressive and cooperative on category management," observed Arnold Kimmel, CEO of Quickie Convenience Stores of Ottawa, Canada. "They have the tools and execute their commitments and obligations well. Frito-Lay has a complete product line, but respects their competitors."

That depth of commitment, resources and objectivity stems from Frito-Lay's approach to category-management for convenience stores. "Category management is a journey, an evolving and ongoing process," said Dave Boissevain, director of category management for the Dallas-based company. "We take a fact-based, results-oriented approach. We work with retailers to build an integrated category-management plan that maximizes the key drivers and fits into the retailer's overall strategy. Partnership with the retailer is critical in developing a category plan that can be implemented."

Frito-Lay's category-management process is grounded in the consumer, and Boissevain defined several channel-specific drivers: Right Assortment, variety optimization; Right Presence, landmark merchandising; Rich Promotion, bundled tie-ins; and Right Service, direct-store-delivery (DSD) system. A proprietary software program, Right Set, has been developed to maximize the assortment and landmark merchandising drivers.

"Right Set is a consumer-centered, fact-based approach that maximizes salty-snack sales and profits for convenience stores," said Linda Seatvet, convenience store channel category manager. "The flexibility and targeted nature of the Right Set program is key because it reflects retailing realities. The population diversity across a chain's marketing area can be enormous, running the gamut from highly affluent suburbs to blue-collar neighborhoods, and c-store chains may have a wide variety of store formats. Right Set assortment and merchandising solutions can be custom targeted on a store-by-store basis."

Frito-Lay continues to be committed to fact-based, consumer-led, ECR-smart category management. "Our approach is grounded in the consumer, with the objective to build a category plan that leverages the expandable nature of snacks," said Boissevain.

Gatorade North America

Gatorade North America's proprietary category-management system, Cooler P.R.O., is gaining wide acceptance by convenience store retailers, according to Jim Brooks, assistant manager, capability development. The system incorporates analysis of consumer insights with a review of convenience store retailers' promotions, pricing, product assortment and available space to develop assortment recommendations and planograms for the non-alcohol beverage segment.

Adding to the strength of the system, Gatorade, a division of Chicago-based Quaker Oats Co., recently initiated a new structure that enables more field support for category management in convenience stores. Six regional customer business centers and a national accounts customer business center have been established, and the manpower behind Cooler P.R.O. has been tripled in the past year.

"The category-management expertise for Cooler P.R.O. really lies in our field-based category-management teams," said Brooks. "Our strategy is to sit down with the retailer, determine their goals and source their data across the beverage category. Then, we use the Cooler P.R.O. system to develop unbiased recommendations to maximize retailer sales through the cooler door."

"We completed a major cold-vault reset in 1997, and Gatorade was the category partner for the entire non-alcohol cooler," said Tamara Fowler, associate category manager at Wawa Inc., a 470-store chain based in Wawa, Pa. "Gatorade is one of the most knowledgeable and dedicated category-management companies in the industry."

Syndicated data on consumers and convenience stores, as well as custom market reports on the local competitive set, are utilized by Gatorade in the category management process. Custom consumer audits and assessments of out-of-stock situations are another tool.

Gatorade's process focuses mainly on the cooler door and addresses all non-alcohol beverages, not just sports drinks, Brooks explained. "Cooler P.R.O. is designed to analyze and create recommendations for the entire category. Taking a broad approach is the best way for convenience retailers to maximize sales and profitability of all non-alcohol beverages."

H.T. Hackney Co.

Rebekah Ensley

"Our role is to provide our customers with the best data resources and space-management tools to identify efficient product assortments and develop strategies to effectively compete in their marketplace," said Nancy Tucker, director of marketing. "Our goal is to provide category information, recommendations and customized planograms."

H.T. Hackney, based in Knoxville, Tenn., utilizes several tools in the process, including syndicated and internal data, Spaceman planogram systems and store-level reports. Planogram development is supported by product-mix analysis, pricing analysis and programs focused on increasing total category sales and profitability.

A full-time category-management analyst, Rebekah Ensley, is dedicated to administering the process for retail customers. Each of Hackney's 24 distribution centers is provided a complete category planogram guide and is staffed with merchandising experts to conduct analysis of store activity.

"H.T. Hackney has formed a great partnership with both its customers and manufacturers, and bridges that partnership on a win-win basis," said Dan Fleming, director of operations for Knoxville, Tenn.-based Pilot Corp. "Their strength is in customer service. They also have a wealth of information at easy access and are current with the latest and greatest."

Keebler Co.

"Keebler has provided good support and been very active in the category. Theirs is a comprehensive category-management program that looks at the entire category, and the Keebler people are always available to conduct analysis, create planograms and do resets," said Randy Meyer, senior vice president of Krause Gentle Corp., operator of 158 Kum and Go stores based in West Des Moines, Iowa. "We've enjoyed an excellent long-term relationship with Keebler. It's a positive partnership."

Krause Gentle's experience is the result of Keebler's efforts to focus on the goals of the convenience retailer in the cookie and cracker category. "We work closely with the retailer to understand their objectives and establish plans that meet those objectives," said Mark Clark, business development manager for the convenience division at Keebler. "In light of the number of categories and nature of the convenience store business, we simplify the process and attempt to make it easy for the retailer to execute against."

Elmhurst, Ill.-based Keebler deploys more than 35 field personnel and a broker sales force of 600 to facilitate category management with its convenience store partners. Culling data from syndicated and proprietary resources, Keebler then applies its own knowledge of the cookie and cracker category and develops planograms using state-of-the art space-management tools.

Cookies and crackers present a unique challenge to convenience store operators that Keebler assists retailers in addressing, according to Clark. "In convenience stores, this category is not the top-of-mind snack option for the consumer entering the store. There's a big opportunity to grab the consumer, however, with placement and pricing," he said. "Cookies and crackers are typically merchandised in the center aisles. By adding secondary placements and offering attractive value pricing, you can move the consumer to the category as they make their snacking decision."

To that point, Keebler's two-for-$1 program is merchandised with counter and floor racks. "Two-for-$1 can increase the purchase frequency by as much as 32 percent because it creates multiple purchases," said Clark. "The rack and value offer makes these products top-of-mind because the consumer anticipates the availability. The presentation drives impulse sales as well."

Clark explained that Keebler's category-management strategy involves developing solid working relationships with retailers and objective analysis and recommendations. "While it may drive immediate results, our category management strategy is very long-term focused," he said.

McLane Co. Inc.

"McLane Co.'s approach to category management is to give the consumer what they are looking for: well-known, well-recognized, high-quality products at a retail that allows them to purchase now and repurchase in the future," said Bill Fendrick, vice president, merchandising for Temple, Texas-based McLane. "The consumers' needs have to be focused on in a way that enables them to choose and purchase the key, core items within a category. Our focus is to make the retailer aware of the key national and regional core items within each category, and then offer these items with sound, fair pricing backed up by retail support from the vendor."

To facilitate that strategy, McLane has developed a decision-support system (DSS) that allows its merchandising experts to zero in on each category. "We then use this information in conjunction with our demographic-profiling system to present fact-based recommendations," said Fendrick. "Using these tools, we are able to work with and support both the vendor and the retailer in their businesses."

Each of McLane's 15 distribution centers has a merchandising team dedicated to providing category-management support. The merchandising teams are supported by merchandising managers located at the McLane corporate-support center. "Our role is to be an unbiased presenter of the facts and category statistics that are now available in the industry," added Fendrick.

In conjunction with the DSS system, McLane has developed its Stars and Star Gazer programs to allow retailers quick and convenient access to their item and category information. The commitment to category management and sophistication of the tools utilized in the process has made fans of convenience store retailers.

"The use of McLane's Stars and Star Gazer tools allows us great ability to look at all McLane product categories," said Artie Smith, marketing manager for Kent Oil Inc., a 25-store operator based in Midland, Texas. "We can reset much faster to adjust to trends and change problem areas quickly. We feel McLane's support really gives us the advantage."

Miller Brewing Co.

Jeff Schouten

"Miller has recently teamed with c-stores in The Miller Advantage," said Kendra Kuehl, buyer/merchandising manager for Bosselman's Pump & Pantry, Grand Island, Neb. "Miller is publishing information on category management for us, the retailers. They know that without category management, we will not be viable competitors in the future."

The Miller Advantage, a publication featuring consumer insights and key category-management issues, positions the brewer to collaborate with retailers on solid business strategies and objective plans, according to Jeff Schouten, Miller's director of category management. "Category management is something we do with, not for, the retailer," he said. "That type of collaborative effort becomes a win-win-win, benefiting the manufacturer, the retailer and the consumer."

Milwaukee-based Miller not only brings category-planning expertise to the process, but also several tools to speed analysis and deliver insights, including the CoolerMAX multi-category cooler simulation software. Recently, a price elasticity model was created to demonstrate effective pricing in a given market. A proprietary outlet-level analysis tool identifies distribution voids and ensures core items are stocked in each store.

A new element of the brewer's repertoire is Miller Tag Manager. The proprietary program generates precut shelf tags displaying the shelf set developed for the space that can be affixed to the front and/or back of the cooler. "One of the biggest issues we've identified is the failure to follow up and implement the plans." Schouten explained. "Tag Manager enables implementation at the store level so that the set meets the plan volumes."

All Miller chain account managers are trained in category-management analysis and plan development, a valued resource for retailers. "Jim Ebert [our Miller representative] put talk into action by implementing five crucial category-management steps in one of our major markets to pilot the program," said Gregg Wingert, senior vice president of marketing for Houston-based Coastal Mart Inc. "He succinctly summarized and documented each step, applying top-notch category management activity. It is an excellent effort."

Miller's approach is to customize the category-management process to objectively meet the business needs of the individual retailer. "Objectivity is a big issue," Schouten explained. "When we're objective, we're gaining sales for the category. We all win."

M&M/Mars

M&M/Mars works with its retail partners to better understand consumer shopping behavior, an effort that proved vital in identifying opportunities within the confection category at Equilon Enterprises' stores. "With innovation and participation in our 1998/1999 advertising promotion, M&M/Mars helped increase our candy category sales by 12 percent," said Robb Harling, Ohio ETD franchise representative, Equilon Enterprises. "The company's representatives call on our stores frequently and they participate in our monthly special programs. M&M/Mars provides excellent planogram support, and they are very involved and active in our markets."

Harling's 140 stores in the Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio regions are enjoying the benefits of M&M/Mars's comprehensive approach to category management. "We're striving to be the primary source for confectionery category management in convenience stores," explained Steve Collins, national sales director, category leadership for M&M/Mars, based in Hackettstown, N.J. "We work as a true partner with retailers, helping them identify and capitalize on opportunities to grow their confectionery sales and profits."

M&M/Mars brings a wealth of resources to the process. First and foremost is its category leadership team, whose 45 field associate members are certified through a 38-day training program. Ten members of the team are dedicated to collecting consumer information, conducting trade-channel research and developing category-management tools, which the teams' field associates then customize to meet the needs of retail customers. "The quality of our certification process and the significant size of our Category Leadership Team speaks to the commitment M&M/Mars has to this ECR initiative," said Collins.

M&M/Mars soon will expand its portfolio of category-management tools with the addition of a major proprietary convenience store study. "We conducted a statistical analysis of the conditions in the marketplace to identify top-performing stores and determine what distinguishes them from average and below-average performing stores," Collins explained.

More than 600 convenience and petroleum stores were involved in the study. M&M/Mars investigated several issues. Where should the primary confectionery selling location be? What items should be carried? How should they be merchandised? What is the role of promotion in increasing confection sales? "The findings will cover some impactful best practices, and we'll share those and more during this year's NACS convention," Collins said.

M&M/Mars's category-management strategy is based in its commitment to partnering with its retail customers. "Success in category management is realized when joint efforts between our customers' and us result in improved category sales, profits, return on investment and consumer satisfaction," Collins explained. "Each customer has specific objectives they need to meet to optimize category productivity and meet the needs of their consumer, and we're dedicated to assisting in that effort."

Nabisco Inc. (Planters Inc. and Lifesavers Co.)

Nabisco's dedicated convenience store channel marketing teams have a singular goal —to help operators maximize total store profitability and productivity. The strategy for achieving that involves a hands-on approach that leverages Nabisco's understanding of consumer behavior in convenience stores against its category management and merchandising expertise, according to Billy Henry, director of marketing for Planter's immediate consumption and Cornnuts businesses. "The approach is to transform data into actionable solutions that drive total store productivity for the retailer," he said.

Those actionable solutions involve increasing transaction size by applying Nabisco's extensive consumer insights. "We focus on shopper tendencies versus demographics," Henry said, adding that Nabisco has developed insights into shopper behavior based on frequency of visits to convenience stores and traffic patterns. From this, Nabisco has developed what it calls its "Double D" strategy of linking destination categories—such as beverages and the checkout station—with discretionary categories, which include snacks and confections.

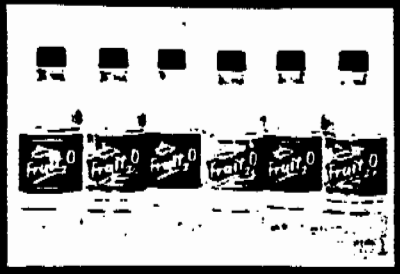
Introducing Fruit$_2$O- from Veryfine.

The good news is...it's water. The better news is that it's spring water with just a touch of natural fruit flavor...light, clean and refreshing. The best news, (and here's the twist) Fruit$_2$O has zero calories.

Fruit$_2$O has no calories thanks to new SPLENDA® Brand Sweetener. SPLENDA (known as sucralose) is made from real sugar. It provides superior ingredient stability and shelf-life performance compared to NutraSweet®.[1]



Clearly, spring water is where the action is. Already bottled water represents 23% of the non-carbonated, single-serve segment in c-stores and sales are up +16%! And, like water, Fruit$_2$O also has all-day, anytime consumption appeal.

Fruit$_2$O comes in six cool, crisp flavors - lemon, lime, orange, cherry, raspberry and strawberry -- all wrapped up in vibrant, eye-catching foil labels and bright blue caps.

For a healthy new addition to your water category and a taste sampling of one of the best new products of the year, call your Veryfine sales representative at 1-800-800-6822.

that foundation of applying consumer insights to driving increased transactions. The first is Lifesavers Co.'s SMART (Successful Merchandising Assures Rapid Transactions). SMART addresses the confections category with learnings garnered from alliances with eight convenience store companies, combined with Nabisco's understanding of shopper behavior. "We link the high-traffic zones with consumer behavior indicative of that zone," said Mary Jean Longo, senior manager, category management for Lifesavers Co. "For example, beverage is a destination category, and we know 70 percent of beverages are purchased in combination with a snack. So we advocate placing confections next to destination categories such as beverages to drive that impulse sale and increase transaction size."

Secondary placements play a key role the process, and Nabisco studies show that sales of confections can increase as much as 43 percent when the products are moved from the aisle to the checkout. An increasingly important destination/discretionary product match is the coffee station and breath-freshening mints and gum. "The value of placing confections in high-traffic and destination locations is unmistakable," Longo said.

Placing salty snacks in high-traffic retail locations is also a key strategy for the Planters' Pacesetter 2000 program. In tests, front-end merchandising units for Planters products generated a 62 percent increase in sales for Planters and an 8-percent increase for the total snack category overall, according to Henry. "Pacesetter 2000 focuses on reducing duplication and adding variety. The next step is to increase transaction size by linking the category with destination categories in cross-promotional activity and secondary placements," said Henry.

Retailers such as Kendra Kuehl, buyer/merchandising manager at Bosselman's Pump & Pantry, based in Grand Island, Neb., have found Nabisco's category-management personnel and programs to be valuable. "[Nabisco representatives] are willing to come in and evaluate the categories with us, looking at our movement and national numbers, and put together planograms accordingly," she said. "They set up the section with us and we continually evaluate the area. [Nabisco personnel] are objective and include all products [participating] in the category in the evaluation and planograms."

Nabisco's cross-promotional strategy is now being taken to the next level through two 1999 promotions with The Coca-Cola Co. This spring and summer, the Ice Breakers gum brand will be linked with Nestea Cool in a promotional tie-in program called "Cool to the Core." Ice Breakers will be merchandised in custom display units near beverage coolers. Nestea Cool bottles will include instant win sweepstakes pieces. Prizes include 35 cents off Ice Breaker products. Planters products will join Coca-Cola in the "Refreshing Combo" program, which brings together Planters Super Tube nuts packages with 32-ounce fountain Coca-Cola drinks. A pre-pack display and in-store signage will support the "Refreshing Combo" promotion at retail.

"These elements all come out of our ongoing research and efforts to stay in touch with the convenience store consumer," said Henry. "Then we build plans that satisfy their needs and the needs of the retailer."

Nestle USA Ice Cream Division

The category-management process undertaken by the Nestle USA Ice Cream Division begins with a solid understanding of the convenience store customer obtained through independent research, secondary research and syndicated data. "Key components of our program include use of our powerful Nestle brand name and its lineup of premium-quality products, careful selection of products that are well-suited for the individual store locations, strong advertising and promotional support, as well as an impactful merchandising program," explained Kelly Atkins, director of impulse marketing.

Nestle sales teams, including the impulse or "alternative channel" team, work closely with convenience store retailers to tailor product selection to meet their shoppers' needs and their business needs. Nestle's exclusive distributor network also plays a crucial role. "Part of the process involves joint development of a planogram, which helps to target kids, teens, adults and the entire family. Distributors are adept at managing the process in a comprehensive fashion," said Atkins. "We also address opportunities through a variety of programs, including account-specific promotions."

Dick Kolberg, sales consultant for Houston-based Equilon Enterprises, has experienced a productive partnership with his Nestle sales representative, John Artesi. "He does a great job assessing appropriate product selection and helping determine the most effective location for the freezer box. And, he is a master at promotions," he said. "We have come up with some ideas, and he has just run with them. The full Nestle merchandising program, as John implemented it, drove a sales increase in one location of 300 percent. We also have an excellent Nestle distributor in Rock Island. Few companies do as good a job. Nestle is a first-class operation."

their franchise partners, whether you are an independent or a multistore chain operator," he explained. "Orion provides us with excellent operational support through knowledgeable people, practices and ideas. They have developed high-quality marketing materials to build brand identity from in-store POS to exterior signage, while still allowing us to 'own' our food-court concept. All of this, and a great return, results in excellent category management."

Retailer satisfaction with the five Orion foodservice brands stems not only from the product quality but also from operations support. A key point of differentiation for Orion, according to executive director of marketing Greg Breukelman, is its guaranteed operational support system.

"We have territory consultants assigned to each Orion location, and we guarantee that they will visit that location every 21 days or we will issue the retailer a check for $1,000," he explained. "Convenience retailers have a complex business to run, and need support every step of the way, so we make sure they get it."

In addition to field personnel support, Orion develops training videos, operations manuals and POS systems for their retail franchise partners. Another resource is promotion, which occurs on the national level and via local store marketing. "Part of the role of the territory consultant is to develop local store marketing that helps the retailer get involved with their community," Breukelman said.

The foundation of Orion's category management is its vertically integrated structure. The company manufactures, warehouses and ships all product. "This gives us incredible control of product quality, and enables us to be flexible in introducing new products," said Breukelman. "We take a lot of pride in our products so our retail partners can do the same."

Pepsi-Cola Co.

Pepsi-Cola took its commitment to consumer-based programming to the next level when the company integrated its customer marketing and category-management efforts into one business practice last year. "Historically, suppliers have helped develop category plans in isolation of marketing program, which are developed on an opportunistic basis," said Greg McIntee, vice president, customer marketing and category management. "We've brought these two functions together. As result, the category plan, which must reflect and support the retailer's overall business plan, and the customer marketing solution we build can effectively address the strategic needs of that business."

The organizational change reflects Pepsi-Cola's position that category management must be focused against the consumer. "We have a fundamental belief that satisfied consumers drive category growth," McIntee said. "This new structure allows us to work against that principle."

> Chevron Products Co.

"Pepsi has been proactive with new concepts and quick response to our needs," said Tony Bandiera of Chevron Products Co. Inc., based in San Francisco. "The company goes the extra mile to offer competitive intelligence."

Pepsi-Cola's consumer-insights toolbox includes E-Lab, a video study of consumer behavior, and frequent merchandising audits of convenience stores. "We have a real dedication to really understanding the c-store shopping experience. Then, we work objectively with customers in partnership to develop consumer-based solutions to drive the entire category," said McIntee. "The approach is to wed consumer insights with

The Right Choice is the primary optimization tool applied by the soft-drink marketer, and is utilized by category managers and sales representatives in the field, according to Jodi Rumble, channel strategy and marketing manager, convenience stores. "Research tells us that 75 percent of consumers know what brand of soft drink they want before they walk into the store. Knowing that, we look to maximize the cold-vault area—optimizing it against the SKU's that turn the greatest profit—so consumers can find what they want quickly," she explained.

Product and package development is another element of category management that is consumer driven. Pepsi-Cola's recent introduction of Pepsi One is an example of the company applying consumer insights and an understanding of retailer needs, according to McIntee. "Pepsi One shows our understanding of what consumers want, and developing a product that creates an opportunity for retailers," he said. "The majority of the sales achieved thus far by the brand have been incremental."

Retailers are appreciative of Pepsi-Cola's consumer-focused approach. "Pepsi's service and promotions have led this company to a leadership position in this market," observed Steve Hayward, retail supervisor for Salt Lake City, Utah-based Sinclair Marketing.

Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice

Identifying retail customer goals and developing recommendations and product matches to help them meet those needs is the strategy employed by Pillsbury Bakery & Foodservice in assisting convenience store operators with cate-

Pillsbury personnel provide analysis of profits and margins, and serve as consultants for proprietary foodservice program development efforts. One area of concentration is controlling labor costs. "Often, additional labor is not needed to develop new and profitable programs," Dozier said. "For example, we might recommend to a retailer several ways to use the same product to generate additional revenue without increasing labor costs."

Much of Pillsbury's new product development is geared toward helping retailers hold down operating costs. For example, the recently introduced freezer-to-oven cinnamon rolls do not have to be thawed or proofed, reducing the prep process by two steps, Dozier said.

"Pillsbury offers quality products, promotional support and reliable technical knowledge and assistance," observed Bill McGregor, foodservice director for Maverik Country Stores, based in Afton, Wyo. "The company is an excellent partner."

Procter & Gamble

"We see our role as an objective facilitator of the NACS category-management process," said David Lane, corporate convenience industry representative for customer business development at Procter & Gamble. "We bring proprietary tools for analysis, resources in the form of people and expertise, and benchmarks industry-wide and outside the convenience channel."

Procter & Gamble was nominated as a Category Captain in both the grocery and health and beauty aids categories.

Grocery

Procter & Gamble's Grocery College is a workshop that walks retailers through the NACS six-step category-management process, assisting them in identifying the role of grocery and develop strategies and tactics for improving performance. According to Bill Traywick, operations manager, category management, 80 percent of grocery volume typically comes from 170 to 200 items. "However, most convenience retailers have 500 to 800 SKUs on the grocery shelves," he explained. "Consumer data shows 10 categories drive fill-in shopping. What Grocery College does is focus retailers on the fill-in shopping products, their role and the strategies and tactics to drive growth."

Nice N Easy Grocery Shoppes Inc. of Canastota, N.Y., realized immediate results after attending Procter & Gamble's Grocery College, according to Matt Paduano, director of purchasing. "Bill Traywick helped us focus and develop a mission statement for grocery. We developed power categories," he explained. Nice N Easy has reduced grocery SKUs by increasing facings of power category items, and is the in the process of re-merchandising its 100 stores. "We've seen faster turns within a week or two. The results are positive."

Procter & Gamble is working with Kellogg's and also the dairy industry to provide retailers with additional data to drive the milk, bread and cereal categories. "Milk and bread are immediate indicators of the grocery business a retailer is doing and can do," said Lane. "But those are problematic categories, so we are bringing in fullness of data to help retailers maximize the entire opportunity." The company is now developing College programs for the cooler door and salty snacks.

> "Procter & Gamble has moved the health and beauty aids category ahead light years for c-store retailers."

Health & Beauty Aids

"This is a category that has not been maximized by convenience operators through the years. Procter & Gamble has moved it ahead light years for convenience retailers," said Fran Duskiewicz, vice president of operations for Nice N Easy.

The chain has utilized the Procter & Gamble HBA College program to increase the efficiency and productivity of the health and beauty aids category. Using a workbook format, HBA College is based on the NACS six-step category management program, and provides guidelines for retailers to manage the category.

HBA College assists retailers in addressing key issues for the category —identifying its role, assortment, item duplication and pricing strategies. "For example, if you have eight different versions of pain relievers, HBA College asks if you should have such duplication or look to variety," explained Traywick. "Then we look at the fact that consumers are aware of cross-channel pricing on HBA. We look at the appropriate pricing strategy."

"HBA is an arena most in the industry is not comfortable with and has little knowledge of because there are so many SKUs and so much competition," said Lane. "If it is strategically correct for the retailer to develop the category, they can attract consumers with selection and competitive pricing. The opportunity exists."

S&D Coffee

"For years, vendors to this industry were salespeople. At S&D Coffee, we're now consultants. When you sell the account, that's when the work really begins," said Dale Lozier, vice president of the convenience store division at S&D Coffee. "Our job today is to aid in the development of programs designed to grow the coffee category, continually interjecting new life and keeping the interest of the convenience store customer."

S&D Coffee's category-management efforts are supported by an interactive approach to the process. According to Lozier, a task force comprised of S&D Coffee sales and marketing managers conduct evaluations of each account's coffee program as the basis of program development. "We survey the store owners and managers, analyze the customer base and competitive environment, evaluate the various footprints in a chain and determine the appropriate program for each type of store involved," Lozier said. "Using our own sales and marketing team's expertise, we develop programs that address issues and opportunities unique to that operation."

Areas examined include the total hot beverage program, coffee-product selection, merchandising, branding, coffee-station logistics and traffic flow in the store. "Convenience store retailers constantly ask, 'How can I improve my coffee sales?' You can provide the best coffee in the world, but if the station is set up inefficiently or the traffic flow from the station to the register is not easy, you can lose that customer," Lozier explained. "We work to make the entire coffee program work efficiently and with impact."

Equipment is a crucial element of successful coffee programs, and S&D Coffee extends its expertise to equipment selection and maintenance. That complete approach to managing the coffee category has proved beneficial to convenience retailers. "S&D Coffee has worked with us on store-specific promotions, and assists with equipment calibrations to provide a consistent product profile," said Ernie Howard, director of marketing for Favorite Markets, a 121-store chain based in Dalton, Ga. "We are very proud of our program—The Coffee Corner—and S&D has helped us maintain quality and grow the program."

Swisher International Inc.

As changes in tobacco product retailing regulations continue to restrict merchandising options, convenience store retailers must be vigilant in managing the category, according to Bill Dunn, director of national accounts for Swisher International. "Category management of cigars, moist snuff and chewing tobacco is now playing a bigger role in the success of the category. It's crucial that the selection, pricing and presentation is right, because space is increasingly limited," said Dunn.

To maximize the profitability of the space devoted to tobacco products, Swisher International's field sales force takes a very hands-on approach to assisting convenience retail customers. Analysis of syndicated data, supplier sales movement and retail account data, when available, is combined with Swisher representatives' knowledge of the local market and the retailer's needs to develop a customized planogram, utilizing the Spaceman program. Key elements of the program are developing the appropriate product mix for the store's customer base, maintaining inventory levels to prevent out-of-stocks, establishing competitive pricing and developing strategic product placement, according to Dunn. Another element supplied by Swisher is merchandising racks.

Swisher International continues to assist retailers well beyond planogram implementation, which has proved beneficial to retailers. "Swisher conducts a quarterly review based on our sales so we can see what's working and what's not," said Richard Mione, director of marketing of Worsley Cos. Inc., based in Wilmington, N.C. "With that review, we can make adjustments to the planogram or product selection to keep the category fresh. This has been an extremely important part of our category-management program."

In today's environment, aggressive category management of tobacco products is the most effective means of ensuring category profitability and productivity, said Dunn. "There really is no room for mistakes today, and that's how we approach the process," he said.

Tropicana North America

James Powers

"To be a powerful resource to the retailer, we must be impartial and let the consumer dictate the basis for our recommendations," said James Powers, vice president, retail sales for the immediate consumables division at Tropicana North America. "In-store real estate is very valuable, and allocating that space with the right SKU's to maximize the retailer's profits is the appropriate focus."

Tropicana's hands-on approach begins with the interaction between retailers and the company's customer managers and broker account managers. Manager of category-management Jamie Reid is then brought in to develop category-management plans based on the needs of the retailer. Reid applies the proprietary TrueView system to the process, which incorporates retailer data, syndicated data and Tropicana's channel expertise. The process involves six phases: information gathering and goal setting; cooler space to sales evaluation; SKU optimization model development; planogram development; consumer demographic analysis against the planogram; and finally, store resets by the field personnel. The process takes 60 to 90 days to complete.

Tropicana TrueView process is constantly evolving with the industry. "Today's TrueView is not tomorrow's TrueView. Retailers are automating at a

Best-of-Class Retailers

Nominated for their category management prowess and program-execution skills by industry suppliers, the Best-of-Class retailers highlight the reasons for their success.

7-Eleven Inc.

"We take a macro-to-micro approach regarding category management," said David Podeschi, vice president of processed foods and non-foods for 7-Eleven. "We start with national industry consumer trends and seasonal change, and their impact on product sales. From there we drill down to individual item sales on an average per-store basis, also taking into account our internal analysis of category trends."

The benefits for 7-Eleven are a direct, positive impact on sales; reduced out-of-stocks; and improved display. "It makes the store easier to shop," he said. "Customers can find the fast-selling items easier. It also reduces out-of-stocks, because you're focusing your efforts on the fast-selling items."

Dallas-based 7-Eleven Inc. operates approximately 5,600 stores in the United States and Canada and, like most retailers, it has stepped up its use of scan data, especially over the past year. According to Podeschi, vendor alliances are also integral to an effective category-management model. The company doesn't establish "category captains" in the traditional sense, rather it partners with each supplier in a category. "For example, with soft drinks," Podeschi said, "we take our scan data, then we work with Pepsi-Cola, Coca-Cola and Cadbury to analyze results and develop appropriate action plans."

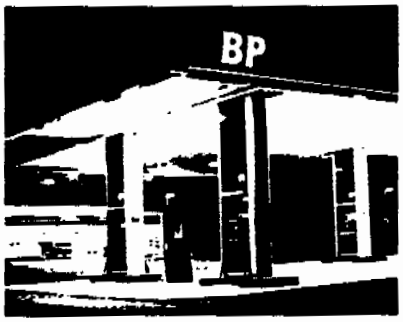
Podeschi added, "Forming supplier alliances provides you with a broader perspective on industry and consumer trends. We can identify certain trends that we might not have been able to see with just our own data, for example, if a certain subsegment is growing in the industry or if consumer trends show that a certain flavor type is trendy."

Establishing a network of suppliers also facilitates one of the most difficult aspects of category management: accommodating regional differences in product selection. "Through a combination of our centralized category managers working with our field merchandising staff and suppliers, we've been able to analyze the data centrally and regionally to implement the most effective strategies," Podeschi said.

A.T. Williams Oil Co.

A.T. Williams, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., is the parent company of Wilco Convenience Stores, operator of 120 stores. A.T. Williams devotes extensive energy to its market development and looks at every opportunity and profit center. That philosophy led one supplier to applaud A.T. Williams for its efforts in category management: "With several different store formats, the company is constantly changing. The company uses information from brokers and manufacturers' effectively to design planograms depending on each store's format."

BP Amoco Plc.



The recent merger between BP Oil and Amoco Corp. resulted in the formation of a new company—BP Amoco Plc.—but when it comes to category management, the proven rules still apply. "Our method combines the customer's point of view with a fact-based approach," said Marla Braswell, a manager of convenience store marketing at BP Amoco. "Each category is viewed as a strategic business unit, but there is also a strong focus on the customer, not solely on products."

16diii005115

The company has implemented several techniques for performing effective category management, including the use of scan data, syndicated data and vendor-supplied data for its 2,500 convenience stores.

BP Amoco also holds regular partnership meetings with its suppliers, bringing together each company's category managers, merchandisers and field personnel in an effort to develop effective, ongoing relationships. According to Braswell, establishing these alliances is invaluable. "Only suppliers can inform you about what your competition is doing and what the industry landscape is like," she said. "We only have our data, so if we're doing something wrong, we're going to continue to do it wrong. They are able to show us missed opportunities."

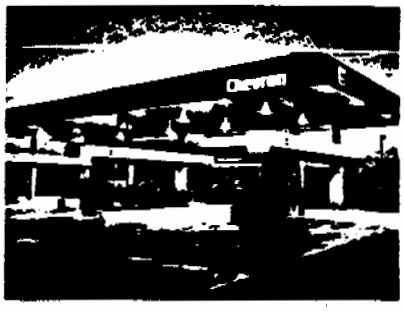
According to Braswell, since this category-management process was put in place, significant sales and margin increases have been realized, as well as a reduction in out-of-stocks. "Essentially, you're giving the right products the space they deserve for peak period sales."

Casey's General Stores Inc.

Casey's General Stores is making the most of all resources available in its approach to category management. According to one of the company's key suppliers, "Casey's has implemented a complex system to disseminate both its internal and industry data in order to make more effective category decisions.

"They believe in using as many proof sources as possible when adding a new item or promoting an existing one, and they believe in carrying a limited number of SKUs that turn very quickly. This approach helps keep inventory dollars to a minimum, while also maximizing turns." Headquartered in Ankeny, Iowa, Casey's operates 1,175 stores.

Chevron Products Co.



Data analysis and vendor alliances are the keys to Chevron Product Co.'s category-management approach. A division of Chevron Corp., based in San Francisco, the company owns and operates approximately 670 Chevron Food Marts, and views category management as an effective way to manage its c-store product offerings from a promotion, pricing and product selection standpoint.

The company rolled out POS scanning in 1998 and the information it collects is fed into a data warehouse, allowing category managers, category buyers and field merchandisers to analyze it and then develop recommendations. "Using this method, we can monitor movement of a specific item in a store," said Carlton B. Dallas, manager of convenience store retailing for Chevron. "We can carve out specific areas to analyze and we can also overlay a matrix of space allocation in terms of return on inventory investment."

According to Dallas, Chevron's approach has resulted in an upward sales trend. "Since implementing scanning last year, we've seen nearly 20 percent same-store gains in gross profit sales and dollars," he said.

Chevron also relies heavily on vendor partnerships. "Vendors are key elements of our category-management strategy," Dallas said. "Forming alliances allows for the mutual sharing of ideas to improve the efficiency of the supply chain. For example, we can begin to take a much broader look at what opportunities exist to increase both consumer service and sales."

Chevron works closely with the National Distributors Alliance and key partners such as Core-Mark and, according to Dallas, these relationships are constantly being strengthened. "The integration of data throughout the organization and between the vendors and Chevron is something that can always improve," he said. "It's also very important that we, as a retailer, develop alliances with key suppliers, and that there's an element of trust and mutual intention to develop strategies that work best for both companies, and for the consumer."

Conoco Inc.

Category management is not something you do once and then walk away, according to Jim Macari and Sam Farace, who are responsible for category management at 275-store Conoco Inc., Houston. "For Conoco, it comes down to defining who we want to be in the marketplace, what categories are going to drive our business and what strategies we're going to put in place to achieve the desired results," said Farace.

A key element of the company's market strategy was developing a centralized approach to category management and, according to Conoco's suppliers, this helps the company consistently carry the right product mix in a particular region. Conoco's category-management team in Houston monitors store operations, inventory and product movement. "There are some things we still handle on a local field level, but it just makes sense to manage a vast majority of category management from a centralized location," said Farace. "For example, if we're doing a planogram for candy, we can do that more effectively from Houston using our regional scan data. We don't need to do it six different times out in the field."

The result has been a more effective link between corporate headquarters and the field, as well as a more streamlined process for analyzing data and sending it back out to the stores. Since Conoco first started down this centralized path three years ago, the company has seen strong double-digit growth in both revenue and margin dollars on a same-store basis.

In 1998, Conoco also conducted monthly "supplier roundtables," bringing together 15 of its key suppliers. "We spent a day with them, asking them where they saw the industry headed and where they saw consumer trends moving in the next three to five years," said Macari.

Conoco also is driving continuous improvement in its stores. A "mystery shopper" is sent to stores once a month, monitoring customer service, merchandising, cleanliness and out-of-stocks. Also, the company's market merchandisers survey Conoco stores quarterly for planogram compliance, promotional implementation and correct pricing. "As of late 1997, when we implemented this program, our in-stock rate was 78 percent," said Macari. "We're now approaching 90 percent as of fourth quarter of 1998."

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores Inc.

Dairy Mart Convenience Stores is celebrating its 60th anniversary with a variety of events, among them a renewed focus on category management. Headquartered in Hudson, Ohio, Dairy Mart operates 600 convenience stores in seven states. According to Jay Ross, vice president of marketing and merchandising, as the company keeps growing, "we have to become more proactive in how we approach category management if we're going to continue to be successful."

A key element of this strategy, according to Ross, is spending more time listening to Dairy Mart customers in an effort to learn what they want from a convenience store, why they shop there and what categories are driving the business. To help accomplish this objective, the company has conducted several customer focus groups during the past year. Ross noted that maintaining an emphasis on customer needs and buying habits will help keep the company on the right track as it develops its category-management model for the future.

Ross also added that since the company presently does not scan, it relies heavily on its supplier partners to provide direction as far as category and product trends. One such supplier is Heinz Frozen Foods, which is working with Dairy Mart to develop store-specific planograms for the frozen-food category.

"Dairy Mart is very active in pursuing frozen-food sales and marketing opportunities," said Mark Kroll, associate product manager, channel development at Heinz Frozen Foods. "They are working to put together demographically specific planograms which are appropriate to their stores."

Equiva Services LLC

"Our category-management model centers on several elements," said Bill Pitocco, category manager, grocery, for Houston-based Equiva Services, operator of approximately 1,000 c-stores. "We analyze market-share data, consumer trends, competitive pressures, our information-technology capabilities and the financial realities of putting the right products in the stores."

Equiva Services uses space-management software to set its stores, including Spectra and InterCept. Suppliers noted that the company is very active in working with wholesalers and manufacturers to gather fact-based information for the development of planograms. Equiva acknowledges that it taps its supplier relationships for input. "Suppliers offer their own unique category-management expertise, especially regarding subcategories," Pitocco said. "I use the top two or three suppliers in a particular category to help me formulate strategies and to bounce planogram ideas off them."

Ultimately, however, retail turns are the deciding factor. "Category managers have to control their share of the company's assets," Pitocco said. "But they also have to be tied into what's happening with our operations personnel at the store level and with the customer. The customers' needs have to be fulfilled, from a product and inventory standpoint. I've got to be carrying the products the customer wants, with enough space dedicated to those products so they're in stock. The ultimate result is increased sales and margin."

Giant Industries Inc.

Giant Industries, headquartered in Scottsdale, Ariz., is taking a branded approach to category management, according to Pam Brady at Convenience Marketing Inc., a grocery wholesaler that works closely with the company. Giant operates 54 stores under the banners Giant, Giant Express and Mustang.

"It's a very different approach," she said. "Over the course of three months, I spent a lot of time working with Giant to analyze and carefully plan out a 3-foot-by-4-foot section for all the stores operated by the company. They are taking each category one by one, and making an effort to manage categories in such a way that will achieve the maximum impact."

According to Brady, the end result will be a more pleasant shopping experience for the customer. "By making the top-selling brands more visible, throughout every category, Giant is making its stores easier to shop," said Brady. "This will lead to an overall increase in customer service and sales."

Marsh Village Pantry

Marsh Village Pantry, a division of Marsh Supermarkets, based in Indianapolis, operates approximately 180 Village Pantry convenience stores. Recently, Village Pantry was very active in implementing more effective methods of driving customer traffic. According to Bob Dalton, regional sales manager for Modern Aids, one of Village Pantry's suppliers, the chain is a very active partner as far as working to continually update its shelf sets.

"They ask us for industry data, and for other companies' success stories," said Dalton. "They're also very interested in staying current with family pricing, as well as adding new items that could be fast-selling, and deleting items that aren't."

Mobil Corp.

Mobil relies on a comprehensive, fact-based decision-making process when implementing category management at its 400 Mobil Marts and 226 On The Run convenience stores.

"A product must justify its space in a store in order to remain in the store, in terms of both retail sales and gross profit," said Barry Shull, group category director for Mobil, based in Fairfax, Va. "From Mobil's perspective, that should all be predicated on fact-based decision-making. We look at market-share data in all retail channel segments and our own internal data, as well as data gathered by the major vendors in each category segment. The goal is to implement balanced category strategies that aren't biased toward any one product and that allow us to paint an accurate picture of the marketplace."

Key to developing this picture clearly is Mobil's recently established "Beverage Vendor Category Captain" program. Mobil's criteria for awarding this status is based on a vendor's category-management philosophy, as well as having a process that "covers all the key components required for us to make a fact-based decision about putting the right products in the right slots," said Shull. For example, in the non-carbonated beverage segment, Mobil's selection for category captain is Coca-Cola Co., which in turn noted Mobil's "consumer-engineered" category approach and its understanding of the power of its brands as keys to building the entire beverage category.

For Mobil, the main benefits of working with its category captains are having access to that company's market data, as well as receiving invaluable feedback from an industry standpoint. Mobil works closely with its chosen vendors to do field and store surveys, develop timelines, make assortment presentations to its field merchandising staff and hold regular briefings regarding store-layout resets. This is all to ensure that the right products are displayed effectively to improve store operations—for both Mobil and the supplier.

The Pantry Inc.

At The Pantry, product facings are not necessarily determined by scientific analysis of the number one, two or three items in a particular market. "The items you select and the programs you execute in the stores are ultimately judged by the customer," said Kent Raphael, director of purchasing for The Pantry Inc., based in Sanford, N.C. "In the convenience store industry, your customers are somewhat of a captive audience. You need to carry branded, quality items, but not necessarily the number-one item. For example, people shop at a c-store usually out of a fairly definite need. If somebody comes in to buy air freshener, as long as a quality, brand item is in stock they'll be satisfied."

The company operates approximately 1,200 stores under the banners The Pantry, Quick Stop, Zip Mart, Dash-N, Express Stop, Lil' Champ, Quick Mart and Handy Way. Raphael noted that with such a large network of stores, he finds it useful to implement a four-tiered approach, tying together the manufacturer, broker, store and customer.

"After you select an item to carry, and you know the level of support from the manufacturer or broker, the next step is getting the product into the stores and getting the planogram done," he said. "With 1,200 locations, it's difficult to make that all happen effectively. That's why having supplier alliances is important, almost as important as what products you select."

Raphael noted that establishing alliances also provides the ability to more easily make changes at store level mid-year. "If you want to change two items in a particular section, how do you go to eight states and change that item? With a network of alliances in place, it's not as difficult," he said. "Without it, you would be stuck doing it annually or twice a year."

R.R. Morrison & Sons

At R.R. Morrison & Sons, the Vicksburg, Miss.-based operator of Fast Lane stores, the approach to category management is closely connected to its overall initiatives in customer service and store design, as well as its supplier and vendor relationships. This philosophy has helped Fast Lane realize several benefits, such as reduced out-of-stocks and the elimination of unnecessary SKUs.

"We view category management from a broad, industry perspective first, and then we narrow our approach by partnering with particular suppliers in particular categories," said Mark Tate, marketing manager of Fast Lane's 53 stores in Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee. "For example, in our juice set, we look at which supplier is leading the market in our area, and we work with them to make sure we have the right mix and the right amount of space dedicated to whatever product they carry."

One company upon which Fast Lane relies heavily is McLane Co. Inc.'s southern division. "They provide updated purchase information through their warehouse, and that tells me what other retailers are pulling," said Tate. "It's not chain-specific, but rather, they tell me, 'We're moving 400 cases of Tropicana grape juice a week and you're not carrying that in your mix so you might want to consider it.' That information is very helpful."

Ken Hudson, area sales manager for McLane Southern, noted Fast Lane's use of technology to set its stores as one example of effective category management. "They're actually tied into our mainframe," said Hudson. "From their headquarters, they can download data by category or item to see what was sold in a certain period. Then they can analyze that data, and compare the stores that are doing well against the ones that aren't and actually update their schematics in real time."

Looking forward, Tate noted that the company's goal is to further improve its use of technology to be able to make more accurate category decisions on a store-by-store basis. As part of this initiative, Fast Lane recently updated its point-of-sale equipment, and also upgraded its store registers to better capture its scan data.

Spectrum Stores Inc.

Spectrum Stores is moving into the new century with a new approach to category management. With 56 stores in eastern Alabama and western Georgia, the West Point, Ga.-based company is currently in the process of upgrading its stores to capture scan data. The rollout started in April, and Spectrum expects to have all stores completed by the end of the year.

> "We're looking forward to having scanning data, which will allow us to make more effective decisions on categories and specific items within categories."
> —Chuck Vires
> Spectrum Stores Inc.

"Currently, our main method of reviewing category performance is through the use of purchase information," said Chuck Vires, vice president of marketing. "We're looking forward to having scanning data, which will allow us to make more effective decisions on categories and specific items within categories."

As Spectrum continues to revise its category management methodology, the company is relying heavily on its wholesalers and suppliers to provide support and guidance. Spectrum also is following the NACS category management guidelines, tailoring them to meet its stores' specific needs. Having such a varied approach is important, according to Vires, to accommodate different store layouts and different customer buying habits in various regions.

Spectrum's long-term goal is ultimately to serve its customers better by having a better understanding of their needs and simply having product available when they're ready to buy. "Obviously, the more we know about a category, the better we can decide which stores should or should not carry a certain product," Vires said. "Then, by eliminating products that we now know won't sell in a certain store, more space can be allocated for the appropriate product sets. As a result, out-of-stocks are reduced, products turn faster and the customers' needs are more closely met."

Speedway SuperAmerica LLC

Based in Enon, Ohio, Speedway SuperAmerica operates 2,220 stores. One of Speedway SuperAmerica's key suppliers cited the company as an early user of scan data to drive the implementation of Apollo planograms. Speedway SuperAmerica and the supplier worked in concert to communicate that information in the planograms to the store level.

Speedway SuperAmerica is comprised of the downstream assets of Marathon Ashland Petroleum LLC, which includes the former SuperAmerica Group and Marathon Oil's Emro Marketing Co.

Tosco Marketing Co.

"Category management is an ongoing process that involves how you go about your day-to-day business with a strong consumer focus," said John Zikias, vice president of field and corporate marketing for Tosco Marketing Co., the retail marketing division of Tosco Corp., and operator of 2,200 Circle K stores. "Simply setting up the process is not enough. You need to continually review information."

Headquartered in Phoenix, Tosco Marketing Co.'s category management approach is based on the NACS guidelines. Through this process, Tosco and suppliers share internal category sales data, customer knowledge and their corporate marketing strategies, as well as ways to optimize market information and supply-chain efficiencies.

"We are in the process of tailoring the NACS category-management templates to meet our specific needs, for example, modifying the vendor questionnaires to fit Tosco's model," Zikias said. "We're really trying to work within the framework, however. It makes it easier for the suppliers if they know that the information they have to provide is similar and consistent with other convenience retailers."

Tosco has also established several strategic partnerships with key suppliers such as Coca-Cola, Anheuser-Busch and Dean Foods. According to Zikias, these alliances help streamline the data-gathering process. "They provide a consistent form of data," he said. "As an example, for categories with products that are direct-store-delivered, without scanning you're heavily reliant on suppliers to provide you with information. The suppliers have been able to help us organize our data in a consolidated form that's easier to work with, and they've also given us valuable category information from a total market perspective."

Turkey Hill Minit Markets

Each of the 232 Turkey Hill Minit Markets is designed from the perspective of the customer, according to Victoria Paul, business development manager, eastern region for broker Convenience Marketing Inc. By working closely with Turkey Hill and its wholesale distributor, Miller-Hartman, Paul is eyewitness to the positive changes taking place within the company.

"They are building state-of-the-art stores, from the concept of what the customer sees when they walk in," she said. "Everything is arranged in the most effective manner for the customer in a particular region."

Turkey Hill, based in Lancaster, Pa., is a division of Dillon Cos. Paul describes the way she and Turkey Hill's Brian Kurtz work together as a true partnership. "For example, if they don't have one of our retailer programs in their stores, I explain why they should," she said. "In turn, Brian has a background in buying for a wholesaler, which is very valuable to us. Ultimately, we're all partnering to get the best products in the stores and to serve the customer better.

MEMORANDUM

Padova, J. March , 2000

This matter arises on Defendant's Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law, and Motion for a New Trial. For the reasons that follow, the Court will grant in part and deny in part Defendant's Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law. The Court further will deny Defendant's Motion for a New Trial.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs Le Page's Incorporated and Le Page's Management Company ("Le Page's") brought this action against Defendant Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company ("3M"), alleging that 3M engaged in unlawful restraint of trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act ("Sherman Act"), 15 U.S.C. §1; anti-competitive exclusive dealing in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. §14; and unlawful maintenance of a monopoly and attempted maintenance of a monopoly in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §2.

On September 17, 1999, Defendant filed a Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law at the close of Plaintiffs' case. Defendant renewed this Motion at the close of its case. At the conclusion of a two month trial, the Court submitted all four counts to the jury.

On October 13, 1999, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Le Page's and against 3M on Count I (unlawful maintenance of monopoly power) and Count II (unlawful attempted maintenance of monopoly power), in the amount of $22, 828, 899.00. The jury found in favor of Defendant on Count III (exclusive dealing) and Count IV (restraint of trade). Defendant 3M now moves for judgment as a matter of law, or in the alternative for a new trial, on Counts I and II.

II. STANDARD

Rule 50(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides in relevant part:

> If, for any reason, the Court does not grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law made at the close of all the evidence, the Court is considered to have submitted the action to the jury subject to the Court's later deciding the legal questions raised by the motion. The movant may renew its request for judgment as a matter of law by filing a motion no later than 10 days after the entry of judgment and may alternatively request a new trial or join a motion for a new trial under Rule 59. In ruling on a renewed motion, the Court may:
> (1) if a verdict was returned:
> (A) allow judgment to stand,
> (B) order a new trial, or
> (C) direct entry of judgment as a matter of law.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(1).

III. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Defendant moves for entry of judgment in its favor as a matter of law on Counts I and II. "[J]udgment as a matter of law should be granted sparingly." Walter v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 985 F.2d 1232, 1238 (3d Cir.1993). A motion for judgment as a matter of law "should be granted only if, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant and giving it the advantage of every fair and reasonable inference, there is insufficient evidence from which a jury could reasonably find liability." Lightning Lube, Inc. v. Witco Corp., 4 F.3d 1153, 1166 (3d Cir.1993)(citing Wittekamp v. Gulf & Western Inc., 991 F.2d 1137, 1141 (3d Cir.1993)). Although a scintilla of evidence is not enough to sustain a verdict of liability, Walter, 985 F.2d at 1238, the question is "

'whether there is evidence upon which a jury could properly find a verdict for [the prevailing] party.'" Lightning Lube, Inc., 4 F.3d at 1166 (quoting Patzig v. O'Neil, 577 F.2d 841, 846 (3d Cir.1978)).

A. COUNT II

In Count II, Plaintiff proceeded under a unique "attempted maintenance of monopoly power" theory. The Court submitted the following charge to the jury:

> Count 2 is the unlawful attempt to maintain monopoly power. And Le Page's alleges that it was injured by 3M's unlawful attempt to maintain its monopoly.
>
> And to win on its attempted monopolization, Le Page's must prove each of the following elements by a preponderance of the evidence.
>
> First, that 3M engaged in predatory or exclusionary conduct.
>
> Secondly, that 3M had a specific intent to maintain monopoly power in a relevant market.
>
> Thirdly, that there was a dangerous probability that 3M would achieve its goal of maintaining monopoly power in the relevant market.
> And fourthly, that Le Page's was injured in its business or properly by 3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct.

Trial Transcript ("Tr.") Vol. No. 34 at 140-141. Defendant argues that the Sherman Act does not provide a cause of action for "attempt to maintain a monopoly." The Court agrees.

Section 2 of the Sherman Act provides:

> Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony.

15 U.S.C. §2 (1994). As construed by the courts, Section 2 encompasses two causes of action: monopolization and attempted monopolization. The offense of monopolization under Section 2 has two elements: "(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power. . . " Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., 504

U.S. 451, 481 (1992)(internal citations and quotations omitted). On the other hand, the offense of attempted monopolization requires that the defendant "(1) had engaged in predatory conduct or anti-competitive conduct with (2) specific intent to monopolize and with (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Ideal Dairy Farms, Inc. v. John Labatt, Ltd., 90 F.3d 737, 750 (3d Cir. 1996).

The Court declines to create a new third cause of action: attempted maintenance of monopoly power. First, the Court has found no case law, nor has Plaintiff cited any case which supports an "attempted maintenance of monopoly power" claim. Furthermore, the Court does not discern any support in the legislative history of the Sherman Act for creating such a cause of action. Moreover, the Court finds "an attempted maintenance of monopoly power" inherently illogical. Any "attempt claim" rests on the underlying theory that the defendant has failed to achieve its goal, which in this case is maintenance of monopoly power. But, if the defendant has failed to achieve its goal of maintaining monopoly power, then it follows that the defendant lacks monopoly power. Lacking any monopoly power to maintain, the defendant cannot be held liable for "attempted maintenance of monopoly power."

Thus, this "attempted maintenance" concept in fact presents a standard attempted monopolization claim. The attempted monopolization cause of action readily embodies this scenario by requiring proof that there was a dangerous probability that the defendant would eventually succeed in achieving monopoly power. See Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 454 (1993). This language, thus, recognizes that the defendant does not have monopoly power, but would eventually achieve monopoly power if it continued to engage in predatory conduct.

Because neither the statutory language nor the case law support an "attempted maintenance of monopoly power" claim, the Court declines to create such a cause of action. The Court, therefore, will enter judgment in favor of Defendant on Count II.

B. COUNT I

In Count I, Plaintiff brought a monopolization claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §2. The Court instructed the jury as follows:

> . . . Count I in this case is unlawful maintenance of monopoly power.
> Le Page's alleges that it was injured by 3M's unlawful monopolization in the United States market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use. To win on their claim of monopolization, Le Page's must prove each of the following elements by a preponderance of the evidence.
> First, that 3M had monopoly power in the relevant market.
> Secondly, that 3M willfully maintained that power through predatory or exclusionary conduct. . .
> And thirdly, that Le Page's was injured in its business or property because of 3M's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

Tr. Vol. No. 34 at 131-132. The jury verdict form then asked the jurors to answer the following three questions related to Count I:

> (1) Do you find that Le Page's has proven, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the relevant market is invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States?;
> (2) Do you find that Le Page's has proven, by a preponderance of the evidence, that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power as defined under the instructions for Count I?; and
> (3) Do you find that Le Page's has proven, as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty, that 3M's unlawful maintenance of monopoly power injured Le Page's business or property as defined in these instructions?

The jury answered each question in the affirmative.

1. Relevant Market

Defendant first argues that Plaintiff failed to prove that the relevant geographic market is the United States because Plaintiff failed to present evidence of entry barriers. To the contrary, the Court finds that Plaintiff introduced sufficient evidence from which the jury could properly find that the relevant market is the United States. First, Plaintiff's economic expert, Mr. Kenneth Baseman, opined that the United States is a separate market for tape sales than the rest of the world. Tr. Vol. 21 at 61. Similarly, Defendant's economic expert found the relevant market defined by Mr. Baseman was " . . . reasonable." Tr. Vol. 32 at 71-72. Moreover, the evidence produced at trial showed that new entrants in the tape market have been negligible. Tr. Vol. 27 at 124-25; PX 365, 366. Furthermore, Plaintiff introduced evidence that distributors' inventory and "just in time" delivery requirements make it infeasible for them to utilize foreign manufacturers. Tr. Vol. 17 at 11; Tr. Vol. 20 at 124. The record thus supports a reasonable conclusion that the relevant geographic market for invisible and transparent tape is the United States.

2. Exclusionary Conduct

Defendant advances several arguments directed at the second element of Count II, namely whether 3M willfully maintained its monopoly power through predatory or exclusionary conduct. The Court instructed the jury as follows:

> [P]redatory or exclusionary conduct is conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition, or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful in and of itself, apart from its effect in maintaining 3M's monopoly power. You should consider the following factors in determining whether 3M's conduct was predatory or exclusionary: its effect on its competitors, such as Le Page's, its impact on consumers, and whether it has impaired competition in an unnecessarily restrictive way. You may also consider that behavior that might otherwise not be of concern to the antitrust laws, or that might be viewed as pro-competitive, [can] take on an exclusionary connotation when practiced by a firm with monopoly power. Thus, exclusionary conduct and predatory conduct comprehends, at the most, behavior that not only, one, tends to impair the opportunity of its rivals, but also, number two, either does not further competition on the merits, or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way. If 3M has been attempting to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency, you may characterize that behavior as predatory.

> However, you may not find that a company willfully maintained monopoly power, if that company has maintained that power, solely through the exercise of superior foresight or skill in industry, or because of economy of technological efficiencies, or because of size, or because of changes in customer and consumer preferences, or simply because the market is so limited that it is impossible to efficiently produce the product, except by a plan large enough to supply the whole demand.
> The acts or practices that result in the maintenance of monopoly power must represent something other than the conduct of business that is part of the normal competitive process, or even extraordinary commercial success. They must represent conduct that has made it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition.

Tr. Vol. 34 at 138-39. Viewing the evidence and inferences drawn therefrom in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, the Court finds that the jury's verdict that Defendant willfully maintained monopoly power through predatory or exclusionary conduct was supported by sufficient evidence adduced at trial.

a. Economic Coercion

First, Defendant submits that Le Page's was required under SmithKline Corp. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 575 F.2d 1056 (3d Cir. 1978)("SmithKline"), but failed to prove, that (1) Scotch tape is a monopoly product, and (2) that 3M's bundled rebate program effectively required 3M's customers to forego purchasing Le Page's private label tape if they wished to obtain rebates on 3M's monopoly product.

Tying cases under Section 1 of the Sherman Act require proof of monopoly power in the first product and economic coercion. See e.g. Marts v. Xerox, Inc., 77 F.3d 1109, 1113 (8th Cir. 1996). This action, however, has not proceeded under a tying theory. Rather, this case presents a unique bundled rebate program that the jury found had an anti-competitive effect.

Moreover, Plaintiff introduced evidence that Scotch is a monopoly product, and that 3M's bundled rebate programs caused distributors to displace Le Page's entirely, or in some cases, drastically reduce purchases from Le Page's. Tr. Vol. 30 at 105-106; Vol. 27 at 30. Under 3M's rebate programs, 3M set overall growth targets for unrelated product lines. In the distributors' view, 3M set these targets in a manner which forced the distributor to either drop any non-Scotch products, or lose the maximum rebate. PX 24 at 3M 48136. Thus, in order to qualify for the maximum rebate under the EGF/PGF programs, the record shows that most customers diverted private label business to 3M at 3M's suggestion. Tr. Vol. 28 at 74-75; PX23, 28, 32, 34, 715. Similarly, under the newer Brand Mix rebate program, 3M set higher rebates for tape sales which produced a shift from private label tape to branded tape. Tr. Vol. 31 at 79. PX 393 at 534906.

Furthermore, Plaintiff introduced evidence of customized rebate programs that similarly caused distributors to forego purchasing from Le Page's if they wished to obtain rebates on 3M's products. Specifically, the trial record establishes that 3M offered Kmart a customized growth rebate and Market Development Funds payment. In order to reach the $15 million sales target and qualify for the $1 million rebate, however, Kmart had to increase its consumer stationary purchases by $5.5 million. Kmart substantially achieved this "growth" by dropping Le Page's and another private label manufacturer, Tesa. PX 51 at 3M 102175, PX 121 at 156838. Likewise, 3M customized a program with Staples that provided for an extra 1% bonus rebate on Scotch tape sales "if Le Page's business is given to 3M." PX 98 at 3M 149794. Finally, 3M provided a similar discount on Scotch tape to Venture Stores "based on the contingency of Venture dropping private label." PX 712 at 3M 450738. Thus, the jury could have reasonably concluded that 3M's customers were forced to forego purchasing Le Page's private label tape in order to obtain the rebates on Scotch tape.

b. Efficiency

Second, Defendant contends that Plaintiff was required, but failed to prove that Le Page's approaches 3M's level of efficiency as a competitor. 3M reads SmithKline as imposing an equivalent efficiency standard. The Court disagrees with this construction, and finds that under the law of this Circuit, a plaintiff does not need to establish equal or equivalent efficiency to succeed under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Rather, "[i]f a firm has been attempting to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency, it is fair to characterize its behavior as predatory." Aspen Skiing Company v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605 (1985)(internal quotation and citation omitted).

Following Aspen and its progeny, the Court thus instructed the jury as follows: "if 3M has been attempting to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency, you may characterize its behavior as predatory." Tr. Vol. 34 at 138: 19-21. Accordingly, the jury properly distinguished between 3M's technological and economical efficiencies, and 3M's other exclusionary conduct.

c. Injury to Competition

Third, Defendant argues that Plaintiff failed to show that 3M's rebate programs injured competition. Nevertheless, "a finding of no anti-competitive market effect would not suffice to dispose of [plaintiff's] claim under section 2 of the Sherman Act." Angelico v. Lehigh Valley Hosp., Inc., 184 F.3d 268, 276 n. 5 (3d Cir. 1999)(citing Mahone v. Addicks Util. Dist., 836 F.2d 921, 939 (5th Cir.1988)("[P]roving an injury to competition is not an element of a monopolization-based antitrust claim.")). Accordingly, this argument does not state a basis for judgment as a matter of law. Rather, as one of several factors to consider in determining whether 3M's conduct was predatory, the jury was properly instructed to evaluate "whether [3M's conduct] impaired competition in an unnecessarily restrictive way." Tr. Vol. 34 at 138: 8-9.

Moreover, the trial record supports a finding that 3M's conduct did impair competition in an unnecessarily restrictive way. As discussed supra, Plaintiff introduced evidence that the growth targets of 3M's rebate programs caused distributors to displace competitors. The record fully supports the jury's verdict on this element.

d. Recoupment

Defendant claims that under SmithKline Corp. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 427 F.Supp. 1089 (E.D. Pa. 1976), aff'd, 575 F.2d 1056 (3d Cir. 1978), Advo, Inc. v. Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc., 51 F.3d 1191 (3d Cir. 1995), and Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209 (1993), Plaintiff was required to prove that if Le Page's was eliminated, 3M would be able to recoup the revenues and profits it sacrificed through its rebate program without attracting new entrants into the market which would check its pricing behavior. The Court does not find this argument persuasive.

First, the Court does not construe these cases as imposing a separate "recoupment" element in Section 2 cases. Rather, the definition of monopoly power includes a recoupment component. The Court explained to the jury that "monopoly power is. . . the power to control prices or exclude competition in a relevant market." Tr. Vol. 34 at 132: 18-19. The Court instructed:

> The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its equivalent goods, without a substantial loss of business to its competitor. That's the power to control prices.
>
> The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from that market, or by preventing new competition from entering that market.
>
> . . .
> The existence of monopoly power may also be shown by evidence that 3M has the power to raise prices appreciably without substantially losing business to competitors. . .

Tr. Vol. 34 at 132:22-133:4, 135: 8-10. Thus, under this definition, by finding that 3M possessed monopoly power, the jury implicitly determined that 3M enjoyed the power to control prices or exclude competition in the invisible and transparent tape market.

Moreover, 3M's recoupment argument rests on the assumption that "a wave of new entrants who will drive prices down to competitive levels," Advo, Inc., 51 F.3d at 1203, will enter the market. As discussed supra Plaintiff, however, introduced substantial evidence at trial that significant entry barriers prevent competitors from entering the invisible and transparent tape market in the United States. Thus, this case presents a situation in which a monopolist remains unchecked in the market.

Finally, Plaintiff presented evidence that 3M succeeded in eliminating the availability of the lower priced, private label tape at Hooks drug stores. PX130. The jury could reasonably infer that 3M's planned elimination of the lower priced private label tape, as well as the lower priced Highland brand, would channel consumer selection to the higher priced Scotch brand and lead to higher profits for 3M. Indeed, Defendant concedes that "3M could later recoup the profits it has forsaken on Scotch tape and private label tape by selling more higher priced Scotch tape. . . if there would be no competition by others in the private label tape segment when 3M abandoned that part of the market to sell only higher-priced Scotch tape." Def. Mem. at 30.

e. Other Proof

Finally, Defendant contends that because the jury did not find for Le Page's under Section 1 of the Sherman Act or Section 3 of the Clayton Act, the evidence surrounding exclusive dealing cannot be used to support the jury verdict on Count I. As the law of the case makes clear, conduct that does not violate Section 1 may still be "sufficient to establish the offense of monopolization under §2 of the Sherman Act." Le Page's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ-97-3983, 1997 WL 734005, at *9 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 14, 1997); accord United States v. Microsoft Corp., No. Civ-A-98-1233 (TPJ), 1998 WL 614485, at *23 (D. D.C. Sept. 14, 1998)(holding that "a monopolist's conduct that does not give rise to the level of a §1 violation may nevertheless violate §2 if it 'impair[s] competition in an unnecessarily restrictive way.'" Accordingly, the Court rejects this argument.

3. Injury in Fact and Antitrust Injury

Defendant contends that Plaintiff failed to prove that Le Page's suffered injury in fact and antitrust injury. The Court charged the jury that to establish injury, "Le Page's must have offered evidence that established as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty that 3M's alleged illegal conduct was a material cause of Le Page's injury." Tr. Vol. 34 at 155: 6-8. Evidence that a plaintiff lost customers and that this loss was a result of the defendants' antitrust violations is sufficient to prove injury and causation under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Callahan v. A.E.V., Inc., 182 F.3d 237, 253 (3d Cir. 1999). Plaintiff introduced substantial evidence that the anti-competitive effects of 3M's rebate programs caused Le Page's losses. Tr. Vol. 17 at 24-25, 46; Vol. 2 at 72, 95, Vol. 17 at 46.; Vol. 5 at 167-68. Moreover, the record amply reflects that 3M's rebate programs did not benefit the ultimate consumer. Tr. Vol. 15 at 13-14, 148-149; PX 76 at 3M 126048; PX 26 at 3M 048169. Accordingly, the jury could reasonably find injury and causation under Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

4. Amount of Damages

Finally, 3M argues that the jury's damage calculation was too speculative to uphold the award, and challenges the damages model of Plaintiff's expert, Mr. Terry Musika. The Court, however, concludes that there is no basis for rejecting the jury award. The Court specifically instructed the jury that it could only award damages to Le Page's for "injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws." Tr. Vol. 34 at 157: 9-10. The Court clearly charged the jury to disregard losses not caused by 3M:

> [Y]ou may not calculate damages based only on speculation or guessing. . . [Y]ou may not award damages for injuries or losses caused by other factors.

16diii005137

Tr. Vol. 34 at 157:7-11. The record further demonstrates that Mr. Musika's assumptions were grounded in the past performances of Scotch, Highland and Le Page's tapes, as well as 3M's own internal projections of future growth. Tr. Vol. 19 at 74:9-18, 81:10-19, 86-89, 124:18-25. Accordingly, this argument does not provide a basis for judgment as a matter of law.

In accordance with the foregoing, the Court will grant Defendant's Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law on Count II, but deny the Motion with respect to Count I.

IV. MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

In the alternative, Defendant moves for a new trial, pursuant to Rule 59 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. "A new trial is appropriate only when the verdict is contrary to the great weight of the evidence or errors at trial produce a result inconsistent with substantial justice." Sandrow v. United States, 832 F.Supp. 918, 918 (E.D.Pa.1993) (citing Roebuck v. Drexel Univ., 852 F.2d 715, 735-36 (3d Cir.1988)). When the basis of the motion for a new trial is an alleged error involving a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court, such as the court's evidentiary rulings or points of charge to the jury, the trial court has wide latitude in ruling on the motion. Griffiths v. CIGNA Corp., 857 F.Supp. 399, 410 (E.D.Pa.1994) (citing Link v. Mercedes-Benz of North America, Inc., 788 F.2d 918, 921-22 (3d Cir.1986); Lind v. Schenley Indus., Inc., 278 F.2d 79, 90 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 835 (1960); Lightning Lube v. Witco Corp., 802 F.Supp. 1180, 1185 (D.N.J. 1992), aff'd, 4 F.3d 1153 (3d Cir.1993)), aff'd without opinion, 60 F.3d 814 (3d Cir.1995).

The trial court's discretion to grant a new trial, however, is more limited when the asserted ground is that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. In that instance, the motion should be granted only where permitting the verdict to stand would result in a miscarriage of justice. Sandrow, 832 F.Supp. at 918 (citing Klein v. Hollins, 992 F.2d 1285, 1290 (3d Cir.1993)); Griffiths, 857 F.Supp. at 411 (citing Williamson v. Conrail, 926 F.2d 1344, 1353 (3d Cir.1991)). In reviewing a motion for a new trial, the Court must " 'view all the evidence and inferences reasonably drawn therefrom in the light most favorable to the party with the verdict.' " Marino v. Ballestas, 749 F.2d 162, 167 (3d Cir.1984) (citation omitted).

A. POINTS OF CHARGE

Defendant challenges eight points in the jury instructions. First, Defendant argues that the "conduct element" of the jury charge was "too general" in that it does not reveal which of its actions violated the antitrust laws. Section 2 of the Sherman Act does not require individualized or truncated transgressions, such as tying, leveraging, or predatory pricing, so long as the overall conduct is exclusionary or predatory. The Court adequately defined exclusionary or predatory conduct in the instructions. Tr. Vol. 34 at 137:21-139:11. Accordingly, this argument is rejected.

Second, 3M complains that the instructions failed to sufficiently define Plaintiff's theory of the case. See Tr. Vol. 34 at 123:15-125:13. Similarly, 3M claims that the jury was not adequately charged on its own theory of the case. See Tr. Vol. 34 at 125:14-126:11. To the extent that Defendant challenges the Court's view of the law of the case, this argument has been fully discussed and rejected. See supra §III.B. To the extent that 3M disagrees with the manner in which the Court framed the factual approach of each side, the Court is under no obligation to restate the parties' factual theory in the charge to the jury. The Court, therefore, rejects these two grounds.

Fourth, 3M challenges the "Scalia charge," Tr. Vol. 34 at 138: 10-14, on the ground that this charge vested too much discretion in the jury to determine for itself what conduct was exclusionary. In reviewing a claim of error in the charge to the jury, the Court evaluates the instructions as a whole. Malley-Duff & Associates, Inc. v. Crown Life Ins., 734 F.2d 133, 147 (3d Cir. 1984). Indeed, the Court charged the jury to consider the entire charge as a whole:

> [Y]ou should not single out any instruction[], but instead you should consider my instructions as a whole, including the instructions that I gave you at the beginning of this case when you retire to deliberate in the jury room.

Tr. Vol. 34 at 114:9-13. Furthermore, the Court charged that no one instruction surpassed any other instruction in terms of its importance:

> Now, you are instructed that the Court does not intend to stress the relative importance of any question of fact or law, either by the number of instructions given upon a particular proposition or by the order in which the instructions were given.

Tr. Vol. 34 at 164-65. The Court fully defined the term "predatory or exclusionary conduct" for the jury. Tr. Vol. 34 137:21-139:11. Accordingly, the Court dismisses this ground for relief.

Next, Defendant objects to the verdict form language stating "use in the United States," arguing that this language implied that the relevant criterion was the area in which the tape was used. The Court adequately instructed the jury on this aspect of the case:

> Question No. 1 on your verdict form deals with relevant market. There are two aspects that you must consider in defining relevant market. The fist is the relevant product market. The second is the relevant geographic market. Now, Le Page's bases its case entirely on the relevant market being invisible and transparent home and office tape in the United States. You must determine whether Le Page's has proved by a preponderance of the evidence that the relevant market is invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States in order for Le Page's to proceed on any of its claims.
> . . .
>
>
> There is no big problem with respect to what the product market, the relevant product market, is in this case, because the parties agree that the relevant product market is transparent and invisible tape for home and office use, which includes by agreement of the parties acetate, cellophane and polypropylene tape, and you should use this definition of relevant product market throughout these instructions.
>
> . . .
>
> . . .

The second aspect of relevant market, however, is in significant contest in this case, and the second part of relevant market is the relevant geographic market. Now, this aspect of relevant market is the geographic area is which the products compete. Le Page's contends that the relevant geographic market is the United States. Now, the relevant geographic market is the area in which, (1) a potential tape customer may rationally look for the goods it seeks and also the area in which (2) other businesses effectively compete with 3M for the distribution of the relevant product.

Consequently, the geographic market is not comprised of the region in which the seller attempts to sell its product, but rather is comprised of the area where its customers would look to buy such products, and in this case when we use the term "customers," customers refers to the retailers and distributors of tape, not the ultimate consumer.

Real quickly, for you again, that part. We're talking about relevant geographic market. And the relevant geographic market is the area in which a potential tape customer-- now, of course, you know we're talking about the distributors like Kmart, etc.-- a potential tape customer may rationally look for the goods it seeks, and the area in which other businesses effectively compete with 3M for the distribution of the relevant product.

Now, you may consider where customers -- and when we use the word customers, we're talking about the distributors like Kmart, Staples -- you may consider where customers, as a practical matter, can and do buy the product. That is, whether customers residing in one area buy from the same sources as customers residing in another area, or if they buy from local sources rather than more distant sources, because they find it more convenient or practical to do so.

In this regard, you may consider whether an increase in price charged by suppliers in one location would cause a substantial number of purchasers to turn to more remote sources of supply. And if so, the locations are and would be part of the same geographic market.

Tr. Vol. 34 at 128-130. This extensive instruction properly instructed the jury that the relevant criterion was the area in which distributors rationally looked for tape, and in which other businesses effectively compete with 3M for the distribution of the tape. Accordingly, this argument is rejected.

Sixth, Defendant submits that the Court erred in refusing Defendant's Proposed Instruction No. 9 which stated that "a high share of sales in a relevant market may be achieved through traditional means of competition and is not itself determinative that there is monopoly power within that market." Defendant further argues that the definition of monopoly power failed to consider potential future competitors and the strength of customers. The Court's charge amply covered the definition of monopoly power:

> Monopoly power is defined as the power to control prices or exclude competition in a relevant market. Therefore, you must determine whether 3M could control prices or exclude competition in the relevant market.
>
> The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its equivalent goods, without a substantial loss of business to its competitor. That's the power to control prices. The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from that market, or by preventing new competition from entering the market.
>
> In making these determinations, you may consider the following factors in determining whether 3M had monopoly power in the market: the size of 3M's market share, the number, size and strength of competing firms, the freedom of entry into the field, pricing trends and practices in the industry, the ability of consumers to substitute comparable goods or services from outside the market, and consumer demand.
>
> Now, you have head evidence about 3M's market share. You may infer whether or not monopoly power exists from 3M's share of the relevant market. Market share is a firm's share of total industry sales, shipments and products, capacities or reserves, expressed as a percentage of the whole. And there's been evidence on market share in the United Sates.
>
> Now, there are a variety of ways to measure market share, but whatever measure you use must be reasonably and consistently applied.
> You have heard evidence regarding 3M's market share after June 11, 1993. If you determine that 3M's share of the relevant market is less than 50 percent, that market share, less than 50 percent, by itself does not permit you to infer that 3M has monopoly power. If you determine that 3M's share of the relevant market is 80 percent or higher, well, that is strong evidence of the existence of monopoly power. And if you determine that 3M's market share is somewhere between 50 percent and 80 percent, then you may infer the existence of monopoly power from that share. And the inference is stronger, the higher 3M's market share is within that 50 to 80 percent range.

You may also consider the trend in 3M's market share. A declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power, though it does not foreclose such a finding, while an increasing market share may indicate the opposite.

And another factor is the number and size of 3M's competitors. If these are few, weak, or have small or decreasing market shares so that they do not offer substantial competition to 3M in the relevant market, then this may tend to indicate that 3M has monopoly power in that market. If, on the other hand, if those competitors are numerous, and vigorous, or have large or increasing shares of that market, this may be evidence that 3M does not have monopoly power.

And you may also consider the history of entry and exit from that market by other companies. Entry of companies into the market may indicate that 3M lacks monopoly power. On the other hand, departure of companies from the market, or the failure of companies to enter the market may indicate that 3M has monopoly power.

These are all circumstances for your consideration. The existence of monopoly power also may be shown by evidence that 3M has the power to raise prices appreciably, without substantially losing business to competitors, or by evidence that 3M has profit margins that were extraordinarily high, or maintained high rates of return over a long period of time.

Tr. Vol. 34 at 132:18-135:13. Accordingly, the Court rules against Defendant on this point.

In addition, Defendant argues that the Court erred in refusing to give Proposed Instruction No. 30 (Mitigation). This proposed instruction, however, was not supported by the evidence. Accordingly, the absence of this instruction does not provide grounds for relief.

Finally, 3M submits that the Court erred in refusing a variety of its Proposed Instructions[1]: (1) Proposed Instruction Nos. 2 and 7 (Purpose of Antitrust Laws); (2) Proposed Instruction No. 12 (Antitrust Injury); (3) Proposed Instruction No. 13 (Lost Profits); (4) Proposed Instruction No. 22 (Unlawful Monopolization), and (5) Proposed Instruction No. 25 (Injury to Competition). The Court adequately covered all of these areas of the law in its charge to the jury. See Tr. Vol. 34 at 122-23 (Purpose of the Antitrust Laws); 153-54 (Antitrust Injury); 155-57 (Damages); 139-40 (Unlawful Monopolization), and 137-38 (Injury to Competition). Accordingly, the Court rejects this argument.

The Court has considered the aforementioned alleged instruction errors, and all other objections raised in Defendant's Motion for A New Trial, and concludes that none of these grounds support a new trial under Rule 59 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

B. EVIDENTIARY ISSUES

Defendant raises three evidentiary issues. Specifically, 3M contends that (1) the Court improperly allowed hearsay testimony from Jim Kowieski concerning 3M's "upfront payments" at Kmart; (2) the Court improperly excluded evidence of the Kodak Growth Incentive Plan, and the Ponder & Best Rebate Program; and (3) the Court improperly excluded DX 1667, a glossy original catalog promoting Ross products, as evidence of a comparative restraint imposed on 3M by potential competitors. The Court has reviewed the three challenged rulings, and upholds the Court's decision. Even assuming these evidentiary rulings were erroneous, the Court finds that these three rulings did not produce "a result inconsistent with substantial justice." Sandrow, 832 F.Supp. at 918.

Finally, Defendant argues that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. Viewing all the evidence and inferences reasonably drawn therefrom in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, the Court cannot conclude that the jury's verdict in this action results in a miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, the Court will deny Defendant's Motion for a New Trial.[2]

[2]Because the Court has reached the merits of Defendant's argument, the Court expresses no opinion on whether Defendant has waived any of the various grounds asserted in support of its Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law, and Motion for A New Trial.

PLAINTIFFS' OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED DEMONSTRATIVES OF VINCENT GIERER

Plaintiffs respectfully submit the following objections to demonstrative exhibits defendants intend to use in the direct examination of Vincent Gierer:

1.	"Swedish Match"	No foundation for testimony by Mr. Gierer on Swedish Match's unit volume and unit share for FYE 1990-1999. Also, no foundation for data because no source is identified. Mr. Gierer was not disclosed as an expert. The Court should preclude testimony concerning industry comparisons and trends.
2.	"Conwood"	No foundation for testimony by Mr. Gierer on Conwood's unit volume and unit share for FYE 1978-1999. Also, no foundation for data because no source is identified. Mr. Gierer was not disclosed as an expert. The Court should preclude testimony concerning industry comparisons and trends

MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED REBUTTAL WITNESSES

Conwood has disclosed that it intends to call two live rebuttal witnesses (Messrs. Williams and Ingram) and to play excerpts from the depositions of two other witnesses (Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio). Testimony from all four of these witnesses has (or will have) been presented to the jury.

Under controlling authority, this is improper rebuttal. Courts repeatedly have confined the scope of rebuttal testimony to evidence intended to rebut new evidence or new theories proffered in the defendant's case in chief. Rebuttal testimony is improper where, as here, defendants have presented no new or unforeseen theories or evidence. Accordingly, Conwood's proposed rebuttal testimony should be excluded.

ARGUMENT

The primary purpose of rebuttal testimony is "to permit a litigant to counter new, unforeseen facts brought out in the other side's case." Faigin v. Kelly, 184 F.3d 67, 85 (1st Cir. 1999); see also In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d 498, 528 (6th Cir. 1996); Martin v. Weaver, 666 F.2d 1013, 1020 (6th Cir. 1981). In keeping with this objective, trial courts have broad discretion to limit the scope of rebuttal testimony "to that which is directed to rebut new evidence or new theories proffered in the defendant's case-in-chief." Martin v. Weaver, 666 F.2d 1013, 1020 (6th Cir. 1981).

In determining the proper scope of rebuttal evidence, a trial court must weed out evidence that either: (1) concerns issues the plaintiff knew (or should have known) would be contested by defendants at the time of its case in chief, but elected not to pursue; or (2) recasts or expands on issues already pursued in the plaintiff's case in chief. See Faigin, 184 F.3d at 85-86; In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d at 528. Such evidence may be excluded as cumulative or unfairly prejudicial under Federal Rule of Evidence 403, or under Federal Rule 611(a)'s mandate to control the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence. See Martin, 666 F.2d at 1020.

Numerous courts have recognized the unfairness in allowing a plaintiff to use a rebuttal case to offer evidence that should have been presented in its case-in-chief. For example, in Faigin v. Kelly, a sports agent sought to buttress his defamation case by offering rebuttal evidence that he did not cause his former client, former NFL star Jim Kelly, to suffer investment losses of $800,000. See 184 F.3d at 85. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the trial court's refusal to "give [Faigin] a second nibble at the cherry":

> This proffer was too late. Faigin had the burden of proving that Kelly's statements were false. . . . He also knew through pretrial discovery that this aspect of the case would be hotly contested. . . . Indeed, Faigin called Kelly during his case in chief and inquired pointedly about the investment losses. Faigin likewise pursued [this] theory during his case in chief. Thus, Faigin had enough notice of the dimensions of the battlefield that he could – and should – have brought in his heavy artillery . . . prior to resting. . . . This principle has particular bite where, as here, nothing new or unanticipated surfaced during the defense case that even arguably changed the topography of the battlefield.

184 F.3d at 85-86. Accord Braun v. Lorillard Inc., 84 F.3d 230, 237 (7th Cir. 1996) (Posner, J.) (plaintiff knew that defendant would contest "an issue that is germane to plaintiff's prima facie case); In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d at 528 (subject of defendant's testimony was "not new" because it was raised in scheduling order and included in trial exhibits); Ellis v. Ficano, 73 F.3d 361, 1995 WL 764127, *15 (6th Cir. 1995) (it was "no secret" what defendants would assert in their case in chief); Apex Oil Co. v. Clark Oil & Refining Corp., 958 F.2d 243, 245 (8th Cir. 1992) (plaintiff "knew of should have known content" of defendant's testimony).

Rebuttal testimony is improper in this case because defendants have presented no new theories or evidence that were not (or should not have been) anticipated by Conwood. Indeed, since at least the summary judgment stage, Conwood has been fully aware of the issues that would be hotly contested by USTC in its defense case: (1) whether defendants' conduct was anticompetitive or exclusionary; (2) whether retailers desired the services offered by defendants; (3) whether defendants' own conduct caused Conwood any damages; and (4) whether Conwood's purported measure of damages was accurate or reliable. Conwood's apparent concern that it did not properly address these issues -- which were part of its prima facie case -- should not be rewarded by allowing it to reverse the order of proof and have the last word before the jury.[1]

1. Proposed Live Testimony of Williams and Ingram

Conwood intends to call Terry Williams (Conwood's former National Sales Manager) and William Ingram (Conwood's President) to testify live in rebuttal. The live testimony of Mr. Williams and the videotaped deposition of Mr. Ingram have already been presented to the jury. Conwood could have called Mr. Ingram in its case-in-chief, but chose not to, knowing full well about what Mr. Ingram had testified to in his deposition. Because USTC has presented no new or unforeseen facts or theories in its defense, there can be no appropriate rebuttal testimony by Conwood.

This case is no different from Cates v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., where a consumer brought a products liability action against Sears for injuries suffered while operating a radial arm saw. 928 F.2d 679, 685 (5th Cir. 1991). On rebuttal, the consumer sought to introduce testimony by his expert witness – who had already testified during the consumer's case-in-chief – that would have rebutted Sears's claim of comparative negligence. See id.. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the exclusion of the proffered rebuttal testimony:

> The proffer reflects a more detailed and comprehensive explanation of earlier testimony . . . . Despite an opportunity, the matter was not then pursued as it properly might have been. Rebuttal must be kept in perspective; it is not to be used as a continuation of the case-in-chief.

Id.

Conwood was well aware of the issues that would be raised by USTC in its defense, and had ample opportunity to counter these issues as part of its case-in-chief. Any failure by Conwood to fully develop its desired testimony during its case-in-chief should not be rewarded by allowing it to undermine the Court's duty to control the mode and order of presenting evidence under Rule 611(a). Further, to the extent Conwood intends to revisit with Messrs. Williams or Ingram certain issues already pursued in its case-in-chief, such testimony would be cumulative and unfairly prejudicial under Rule 403.

2. Borrowdale and Ulizio Videotaped Testimony

Conwood also intends to play excerpts from the depositions of two former USTC employees, Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio. Both excerpts are intended to suggest that USTC preys on retailers who either have no decision-making power or are unconcerned about the actions taken by USTC sales representatives in their stores. [2]

This is completely improper rebuttal testimony. Conwood already has presented evidence on this issue in its own case-in-chief, including the depositions of the very witnesses it now seeks to recall in rebuttal. If it wanted to play some more of their testimony, it should have. Moreover, Conwood also has pursued this very point through the testimony of Professor Blattberg, and has published three demonstratives to the jury suggesting that retailers are too busy, unconcerned or gullible to make independent, profit-maximizing decisions. Any additional opportunity for Conwood to recast these issues on rebuttal is cumulative, unfairly prejudicial under Rule 403, and merely intended to give Conwood the last word.

[2] This, of course, was precisely the point of Professor Blattberg's testimony in support of Conwood's case in chief. His demonstratives claim that: (1) retailers delegate to manufacturers because they are "too busy"; (2) USTC preys on these retailers because it knows they are too busy; and (3) USTC takes advantage of the "busy and reliant retailer."

Conwood should not benefit by its failure to adequately address this issue in its case-in-chief. As stated by Judge Posner,

> The plaintiff who knows that the defendant means to contest an issue that is germane to the prima facie case (as distinct from an affirmative defense) must put in his evidence on the issue as part of his case in chief. . . . Otherwise the plaintiff could reverse the order of proof, in effect requiring the defendants to put in their evidence before the plaintiff put on his.

Braun v. Lorillard Inc., 84 F.3d 230, 237 (7th Cir. 1996) (Posner, J.) (citations omitted).

Conwood's proposed rebuttal testimony can be divided into two categories: (1) evidence intended to buttress positions that were necessary for Conwood's prima facie case but not adequately pursued in its case-in-chief; and (2) evidence that is cumulative of testimony already elicited in Conwood's case-in-chief. Neither category is proper rebuttal testimony. If Conwood wishes to highlight these points further, it should do so in closing arguments.[3]

[3] In the event that Conwood is allowed to present deposition testimony in rebuttal, USTC should of course be permitted to counterdesignate.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should exclude the live testimony of Messrs. Ingram and Williams, the videotaped testimony of Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio, and any other proposed rebuttal evidence that is not intended to counter new, unforeseen evidence elicited in defendants' case-in-chief.

AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED REBUTTAL WITNESSES

Conwood has disclosed that it intends to call two live rebuttal witnesses (Messrs. Williams and Ingram) and to play excerpts from the depositions of two other witnesses (Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio). Testimony from all four of these witnesses has (or will have) been presented to the jury.

Under controlling authority, this is improper rebuttal. Courts repeatedly have confined the scope of rebuttal testimony to evidence intended to rebut new evidence or new theories proffered in the defendant's case in chief. Rebuttal testimony is improper where, as here, defendants have presented no new or unforeseen theories or evidence. Accordingly, Conwood's proposed rebuttal testimony should be excluded.

ARGUMENT

The primary purpose of rebuttal testimony is "to permit a litigant to counter new, unforeseen facts brought out in the other side's case." Faigin v. Kelly, 184 F.3d 67, 85 (1st Cir. 1999); see also In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d 498, 528 (6th Cir. 1996); Martin v. Weaver, 666 F.2d 1013, 1020 (6th Cir. 1981). In keeping with this objective, trial courts have broad discretion to limit the scope of rebuttal testimony "to that which is directed to rebut new evidence or new theories proffered in the defendant's case-in-chief." Martin v. Weaver, 666 F.2d 1013, 1020 (6th Cir. 1981).

In determining the proper scope of rebuttal evidence, a trial court must weed out evidence that either: (1) concerns issues the plaintiff knew (or should have known) would be contested by defendants at the time of its case in chief, but elected not to pursue; or (2) recasts or expands on issues already pursued in the plaintiff's case in chief. See Faigin, 184 F.3d at 85-86; In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d at 528. Such evidence may be excluded as cumulative or unfairly prejudicial under Federal Rule of Evidence 403, or under Federal Rule 611(a)'s mandate to control the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence. See Martin, 666 F.2d at 1020.

Numerous courts have recognized the unfairness in allowing a plaintiff to use a rebuttal case to offer evidence that should have been presented in its case-in-chief. For example, in Faigin v. Kelly, a sports agent sought to buttress his defamation case by offering rebuttal evidence that he did not cause his former client, former NFL star Jim Kelly, to suffer investment losses of $800,000. See 184 F.3d at 85. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the trial court's refusal to "give [Faigin] a second nibble at the cherry":

> This proffer was too late. Faigin had the burden of proving that Kelly's statements were false. . . . He also knew through pretrial discovery that this aspect of the case would be hotly contested. . . . Indeed, Faigin called Kelly during his case in chief and inquired pointedly about the investment losses. Faigin likewise pursued [this] theory during his case in chief. Thus, Faigin had enough notice of the dimensions of the battlefield that he could – and should – have brought in his heavy artillery . . . prior to resting. . . . This principle has particular bite where, as here, nothing new or unanticipated surfaced during the defense case that even arguably changed the topography of the battlefield.

184 F.3d at 85-86. Accord Braun v. Lorillard Inc., 84 F.3d 230, 237 (7th Cir. 1996) (Posner, J.) (plaintiff knew that defendant would contest "an issue that is germane to plaintiff's prima facie case); In re Air Crash Disaster, 86 F.3d at 528 (subject of defendant's testimony was "not new" because it was raised in scheduling order and included in trial exhibits); Ellis v. Ficano, 73 F.3d 361, 1995 WL 764127, *15 (6th Cir. 1995) (it was "no secret" what defendants would assert in their case in chief); Apex Oil Co. v. Clark Oil & Refining Corp., 958 F.2d 243, 245 (8th Cir. 1992) (plaintiff "knew of should have known content" of defendant's testimony).

Rebuttal testimony is improper in this case because defendants have presented no new theories or evidence that were not (or should not have been) anticipated by Conwood. Indeed, since at least the summary judgment stage, Conwood has been fully aware of the issues that would be hotly contested by USTC in its defense case: (1) whether defendants' conduct was anticompetitive or exclusionary; (2) whether retailers desired the services offered by defendants; (3) whether defendants' own conduct caused Conwood any damages; and (4) whether Conwood's purported measure of damages was accurate or reliable. Conwood's apparent concern that it did not properly address these issues -- which were part of its prima facie case – should not be rewarded by allowing it to reverse the order of proof and have the last word before the jury.[1]

1. Proposed Live Testimony of Williams and Ingram

Conwood intends to call Terry Williams (Conwood's former National Sales Manager) and William Ingram (Conwood's President) to testify live in rebuttal. The live testimony of Mr. Williams and the videotaped deposition of Mr. Ingram have already been presented to the jury. Conwood could have called Mr. Ingram in its case-in-chief, but chose not to, knowing full well about what Mr. Ingram had testified to in his deposition. Because USTC has presented no new or unforeseen facts or theories in its defense, there can be no appropriate rebuttal testimony by Conwood.

This case is no different from Cates v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., where a consumer brought a products liability action against Sears for injuries suffered while operating a radial arm saw. 928 F.2d 679, 685 (5th Cir. 1991). On rebuttal, the consumer sought to introduce testimony by his expert witness – who had already testified during the consumer's case-in-chief – that would have rebutted Sears's claim of comparative negligence. See id.. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the exclusion of the proffered rebuttal testimony:

> The proffer reflects a more detailed and comprehensive explanation of earlier testimony .... Despite an opportunity, the matter was not then pursued as it properly might have been. Rebuttal must be kept in perspective; it is not to be used as a continuation of the case-in-chief.

Id.

Conwood was well aware of the issues that would be raised by USTC in its defense, and had ample opportunity to counter these issues as part of its case-in-chief. Any failure by Conwood to fully develop its desired testimony during its case-in-chief should not be rewarded by allowing it to undermine the Court's duty to control the mode and order of presenting evidence under Rule 611(a). Further, to the extent Conwood intends to revisit with Messrs. Williams or Ingram certain issues already pursued in its case-in-chief, such testimony would be cumulative and unfairly prejudicial under Rule 403.

2. Borrowdale and Ulizio Videotaped Testimony

Conwood also intends to play excerpts from the depositions of two former USTC employees, Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio. Both excerpts are intended to suggest that USTC preys on retailers who either have no decision-making power or are unconcerned about the actions taken by USTC sales representatives in their stores. [2]

This is completely improper rebuttal testimony. Conwood already has presented evidence on this issue in its own case-in-chief, including the depositions of the very witnesses it now seeks to recall in rebuttal. If it wanted to play some more of their testimony, it should have. Moreover, Conwood also has pursued this very point through the testimony of Professor Blattberg, and has published three demonstratives to the jury suggesting that retailers are too busy, unconcerned or gullible to make independent, profit-maximizing decisions. Any

PRELIMINARY INSTRUCTIONS

Members of the Jury:

Now that you have heard all of the evidence and the argument of the attorneys, it is my duty to give you instructions as to the law applicable in this case.

It is your duty as jurors to follow the law as stated in the instructions, and to apply that law to the facts you find from the evidence.

You are not to single out one instruction alone as stating the law. You must consider the instructions as a whole. The fact I have given an instruction or any element does not mean you should find one way or the other as to that element.

You are not to be concerned with the wisdom of any rule of law stated by the Court. You must apply the law given in these instructions whether you agree with it or not.

It is your duty to determine the facts, and in so doing you must consider only the evidence I have admitted in the case. The term "evidence" includes the sworn testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits admitted in the record. It is your own interpretation and recollection of the evidence that controls.

You are permitted to draw reasonable inferences, deductions, and conclusions from the testimony and exhibits which you feel are justified in the light of your own common sense.

In saying that you must consider all the evidence, I do not mean to suggest that you must necessarily accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. You are the sole judges of the credibility or believability of each witness and the weight to be given to the testimony of each witness.

In determining the credibility of any witness, you may properly consider the demeanor of the witness while testifying, frankness or lack of it, and his or her interest in the outcome of the case, if any.

In deciding the facts of this case you must not be swayed by bias or prejudice or sympathy or public opinions. Both the parties and the public expect that you will carefully and impartially consider all of the evidence in the case, follow the law as stated by the Court, and reach a just verdict regardless of the consequences.

This case should be considered and decided by you as an action between persons of equal standing in the community, and holding the same or similar stations in life. The law is not a respecter of persons, a corporation and all persons stand equal before the law and are to be dealt with as equals in a court of justice.

INSTRUCTION NO. 1.

ANTITRUST CLAIMS

The plaintiff in this case, Conwood Company, seeks damages for injury to its business and property, claimed to have been suffered or sustained as a result of alleged violations by the defendant, United States Tobacco Company, of the antitrust laws of the United States.

Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act states that every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce shall be guilty of a violation of the antitrust laws. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the market for moist snuff and also attempted to monopolize the moist snuff market, injuring Conwood. U.S. Tobacco denies these claims.

The word "person" includes not only every individual, but also every corporation, partnership and every other organization, of any kind.

The purpose of the Sherman Antitrust Act is to preserve and advance our system of free, competitive enterprise; to encourage, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the market place; and to prevent the accomplishment of a monopoly in any business or industry; all to the end that the consuming public may receive better goods and services at a lower cost.

The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not competitors. Therefore, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco's acts injured not only Conwood itself, but injured competition in the relevant market.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Monopoly Claim

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the moist snuff industry and thereby injured Conwood.

There are four essential elements which Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence in order to establish its claim that U.S. Tobacco has monopolized within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco possessed monopoly power in a relevant market;

2) That U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained that power through restrictive or exclusionary conduct;

3) That U.S. Tobacco's activities occurred in or affected interstate commerce; and

4) That Conwood was injured in its business or property because of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

If you find that the evidence is insufficient to prove any one or more of these elements, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on Conwood's monopolization claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.1

ANTITRUST: Definition of Monopoly Power

Monopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market.

The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its goods than those charged by competitors for equivalent goods without a substantial loss of business to competitors. Thus, if a company that has raised prices eventually has to lower its prices to the level of prices charged by its competitors , it may not have monopoly power in the sense of power to control prices.

The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from the market or by preventing new competition from entering the market.

To establish the possession of monopoly power, Conwood need not prove that prices were raised or that competition actually was excluded, but only that U.S. Tobacco had the power to raise prices or exclude competition.

Further, to conclude that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power , you need not find that U.S. Tobacco could sell at any price it desired or that it had no competition whatsoever. A company may face some competition in the relevant market and still have monopoly power. On the other hand, if you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have the power to control prices or exclude competition, then you must conclude that it did not have monopoly power.

The mere possession of monopoly power is not sufficient to support a finding of monopolization, unless it is also determined that the monopoly power was willfully and intentionally acquired and maintained. A person who acquires monopoly power through normal growth and development, as a consequence of having a superior product, or business acumen, or through historical accident, is not guilty of monopolization as defined in this charge.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.2

ANTITRUST: Relevant Market

Before it can be determined whether a person has monopolized a field of competition in a particular line of trade or commerce, it must first be determined what is the "area of effective competition" applicable in this case. In antitrust law, this is known as defining what is called the "relevant market."

Charges of monopolization can only be judged in the framework of the relevant market. The relevant market which plaintiff claims is applicable in this claim is as follows: all moist snuff brands. Plaintiff must, therefore, prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the relevant market applicable in this case is all moist snuff brands.

In determining the relevant market, the "area of effective competition" must be determined by reference to: (1) a product market and, (2) a geographic market. The parties agree that the relevant geographic market is the entire United States.

In determining the product market, the basic idea is that the products within it are interchangeable as a practical matter from the buyer's point of view. This does not mean that products must be identical to be in the same relevant market. It means that they must be, as a matter of practical fact and the actual behavior of consumers, substantially or reasonably interchangeable to fill the same consumer needs or purposes. Two products are within a single market if one item could suit buyers' needs substantially as well as the other.

Conwood claims that the relevant market includes all moist snuff brands. U.S. Tobacco argues that the relevant market either includes all tobacco products, including cigarettes, cigars, and other smokeless tobacco products or is divided into separate types of moist snuff products. In sum, what you are being asked to do is to decide which products compete with each other.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.3

ANTITRUST: Existence of Monopoly Power

If you find that a relevant market has been proved, you should then determine whether U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power in that market. There are a number of factors you should consider, none of which is necessarily controlling.

For example, you have heard evidence about U.S. Tobacco's market share. You may infer whether or not monopoly power exists from U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market. Market share is a firm's share of total industry sales, shipments, production, capacity, or reserves, expressed as a percentage of the whole. There are a variety of ways to measure market share, but whatever measure you use must be reasonable and consistently applied.

If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is less than 50 %, that market share by itself does not permit you to infer that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is 80 % or higher, that is strong evidence of the existence of monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's market share is somewhere between 50% and 80%, you may infer the existence of monopoly power from that share, and the inference is stronger the higher U.S. Tobacco's market share is within that range.

You may also consider the trend in U.S. Tobacco's market share. A declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power, though it does not foreclose such a finding, while an increasing market share may indicate the opposite.

Another factor is the number and size of U.S. Tobacco's competitors. If these are few, weak, or have small or decreasing market shares, so that they do not offer substantial competition to U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market, this may tend to indicate that U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power. If, on the other hand, they are numerous, vigorous, or have large or increasing shares in that market, this may be evidence that U.S. Tobacco does not have monopoly power.

You also may consider the history of entry into and exit from the market by other companies. Entry of companies into the market may indicate that U.S. Tobacco lacks monopoly power. On the other hand, departure of companies from the market, or the failure of companies to enter the market, may indicate the existence of monopoly power.

The existence of monopoly power also may be shown by evidence that defendant had the power to raise prices appreciably without a substantial loss of business to competitors or by evidence that U.S. Tobacco had profit margins that were extraordinarily high or maintained high rates of return over a long period of time.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. If you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have monopoly power, then you must find that U.S. Tobacco did not violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

ANTITRUST: Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power

The next element that Conwood must prove is that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power through predatory or exclusionary acts or practices, rather than by supplying better products or services, or by exercising superior business judgment, or just by chance.

Predatory or exclusionary conduct is conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful in and of itself, apart from its effect in maintaining U.S. Tobacco's monopoly power.

To prove U.S. Tobacco acted willfully, Conwood must prove either that U.S. Tobacco engaged in predatory or exclusionary acts or practices with the conscious object of furthering the dominance of U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market or that this was the necessary direct consequence of U.S. Tobacco's conduct or business arrangements.

You may not find that a company willfully maintained monopoly power if it has maintained that power solely through the exercise of superior foresight and skill; or because of natural advantages, such as unique geographic access to raw materials or markets; or because of economic or technological efficiency, including efficiency resulting from scientific research; or by obtaining a lawful patent; or because of a change in cost or taste has driven out all but one supplier; or simply because the market is so limited that it is impossible to efficiently produce the product except by a plant large enough to supply the whole demand. The acts or practices that result in the maintenance of monopoly power must represent something more than the conduct of business that is part of the normal competitive process or extraordinary commercial success. They must represent conduct that has made it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition.

Mere possession of monopoly power, if lawfully acquired, does not violate the antitrust laws. But it is unlawful to use monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor. Therefore, a company that has lawfully acquired monopoly power may not use that power to maintain or tighten its hold on the market. Such use may be shown by conduct that depends for its success on the company's monopoly power, as distinguished from conduct that could be successfully employed by firms without monopoly power in the relevant market.

In determining whether there has been an unlawful exercise of monopoly power, you must bear in mind that a company has not acted unlawfully simply because it has engaged in ordinary competitive behavior that would have been an effective means of competition if it were engaged in by a firm without monopoly power, or simply because it is large and efficient. To find U.S. Tobacco liable for monopolization because of the maintenance of lawfully acquired monopoly power through the use of that power, you must determine that U.S. Tobacco actually exercised monopoly power to maintain or tighten its control of the market.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this element and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. If you find that U.S. Tobacco did not willfully maintain monopoly power, then you must find that U.S. Tobacco did not violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act, and you must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on this claim.

ANTITRUST: Interstate Commerce

To violate the Sherman Act, the alleged conduct must be imposed directly on goods or services in the flow of interstate commerce or must affect interstate commerce. Interstate commerce refers to transactions in goods or services between one or more persons in one state and one or more persons in another state.

The conduct alleged by Conwood or the activities of U.S. Tobacco that were affected by the unlawful acts must have had some effect upon interstate commerce.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.6

ANTITRUST: Injury and Causation

If you find that U.S. Tobacco has violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act as alleged by Conwood, then you must decide if Conwood is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

The law provides that anyone who is injured by an antitrust violation may recover damages for any injury to its business or property caused by the violation.

For Conwood to establish that it is entitled to recover damages, it must prove that it was injured as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged violation of antitrust laws. This is sometimes referred to as proving "causation" or "fact of damage." Proving causation does not require Conwood to prove the dollar value of its injury. It requires only that Conwood prove that it was in fact injured by U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. If you find that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured, you may then consider the amount of Conwood's damages. It is important to understand, however, that injury and amount of damage are different concepts and that you cannot consider the amount of damage unless and until you have concluded that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured.

To establish injury, Conwood must have offered evidence that establishes as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty that U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury. This means that Conwood must have proved that some damage flowed to it as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. Conwood is not required to prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury. It is enough if Conwood has proved that the alleged antitrust violation was a material cause of its injury. Injury may be established by inference or circumstantial evidence. However, if you find that Conwood's injury was caused solely by something other than the alleged antitrust violation, then you must find that Conwood has failed to prove that it is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Attempt to Monopolize Claim

Conwood also claims that U.S. Tobacco has violated the federal antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize interstate trade and commerce in the moist snuff industry.

There are five essential elements which Conwood must prove in order to establish that U.S. Tobacco was liable for attempted monopolization within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco engaged in predatory or exclusionary conduct;

2) That U.S. Tobacco had a specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market of all moist snuff brands in the United States;

3) That there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would achieve its goal of monopoly power in the relevant market;

4) That U.S. Tobacco's conduct occurred in or affected interstate commerce, and

5) That Conwood was injured in its business or property by U.S. Tobacco's predatory or exclusionary conduct.

If you find that the evidence is insufficient to prove any one or more of these elements, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco and against Conwood on the attempt to monopolize claim.

The definitions of "monopoly power," "relevant market," "interstate commerce," and "injury and damages" are the same in this claim as they are in the monopoly claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.1

ANTITRUST: Exclusionary or Restrictive Conduct

I have previously instructed you on exclusionary conduct. That instruction applies here as well.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.2

ANTITRUST: Intent

There are several ways in which Conwood may prove that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize. There may be evidence of direct statements of U.S. Tobacco's intent to obtain a monopoly in the relevant market. Such proof of specific intent may be established by documents prepared by responsible officers or employees of defendant. You must be careful, however, to distinguish between a U.S. Tobacco's intent to compete aggressively (which is lawful) and an intent to acquire monopoly power by using illegal or exclusionary means.

Intent ordinarily may not be proved directly because there is no way of fathoming or scrutinizing the operations of the human mind. But you may infer a person's intent from surrounding circumstances. You may consider any statement made or act done or omitted by a party whose intent is in issue, and all other facts and circumstances which indicate his state of mind.

You may consider it reasonable to draw the inference and find that a person intends the natural and probable consequences of acts knowingly done or knowingly omitted. It is for you to decide what facts have been established by the evidence.

ANTITRUST: Dangerous Probability of Success

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to achieve a monopoly and engaged in significant exclusionary or restrictive conduct, you also must determine if the evidence shows the next element of attempt to monopolize: namely, that there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would sooner or later succeed in achieving monopoly power if it continued to engage in the same or similar conduct. In determining whether there was a dangerous probability of success, you should consider the following factors:

1) the market share and power of defendant as compared to its competitors;

2) whether U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market was increasing or decreasing;

3) the actual or probable impact on competition of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices; and

4) whether the barriers to entry into the market made it difficult for competitors to enter the market.

A dangerous probability of success need not mean that success was nearly certain. It means that the chance of success was substantial and real: that is, that there was a reasonable likelihood that defendant would ultimately achieve its goal of monopoly power.

INSTRUCTION NO. 4.

ANTITRUST: Damages

If you find that U.S. Tobacco either monopolized or attempted to monopolize in accordance with these instructions, the law provides that Conwood should be fairly compensated for all damages to its business or property that were a direct result or likely consequence of the conduct that you have found to be unlawful. A defendant's violations of the antitrust laws often create a situation in which it is hard to determine the precise amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff. Conwood's right to be fairly compensated should not be affected by any difficulty you may have in determining the precise amount of the recovery so long as there is a reasonable basis in the evidence for your award. You may not, however, calculate damages based only on speculation or guesswork, and you must remember that you can award Conwood damages only for injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws. You may not award damages for injuries or losses caused by other factors.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco violated the antitrust laws and that this violation caused injury to Conwood, then you must determine the amount of damages, if any, Conwood is entitled to recover. Damages may include lost profits, lost goodwill, destruction of a business or deprivation of the opportunity to engage in a business, overcharges, or increased costs incurred because of a violation.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco did commit an antitrust violation, then you must calculate the profits, if any, that Conwood lost as a result of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. Profit means net profit: the amount by which Conwood's gross revenues would have exceeded all of the costs and expenses that would have been necessary to produce those revenues. You may calculate net profit in the following way.

You have heard evidence of the market share that Conwood would have had in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. You may calculate U.S. Tobacco's loss of profit by considering market share, evidence of the size of the market, and evidence relating to the profit margin Conwood would have secured on such sales.

INSTRUCTION NO. 5.0

LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Conwood also alleges that U.S. Tobacco falsely advertised concerning Conwood in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics, or qualities of another person's goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products or Conwood's;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers and consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That statements were material in the sense that it was likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions;

5) That the statements had a substantial effect on interstate commerce; and

6) That U.S. Tobacco's statements caused harm to Conwood.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 6.

LANHAM ACT COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised concerning U.S. Tobacco in violation of that same law.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics or qualities of another person's goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That Conwood made false or misleading statements of fact concerning Conwood's and U.S. Tobacco's products or services offered to retailers;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers and consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That statements were material in the sense that it was likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions;

5) That the statements had a substantial effect on interstate commerce; and

6) That Conwood's statements caused harm to U.S. Tobacco.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 7.

CONVERSION

Conwood has brought a claim of conversion against U.S. Tobacco. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) That U.S. Tobacco representatives took Conwood advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to Conwood; and

3) That Conwood was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 8.

CONVERSION COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco has brought a claim of conversion against Conwood. U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for U.S. Tobacco if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) That Conwood representatives took U.S. Tobacco advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to U.S. Tobacco ; and

3) That U.S. Tobacco was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you find for U.S. Tobacco, you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 9.

UNJUST ENRICHMENT

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco was unjustly enriched.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) That Conwood conferred a benefit upon U.S. Tobacco; and

2) That U.S. Tobacco accepted the benefit from Conwood under such circumstances that it would be impossible for it to retain the benefit without paying the value thereof.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

A "benefit" may be services, goods, or monies. A loss by Conwood without an actual benefit to U.S. Tobacco is not recoverable as unjust enrichment.

It is not necessary to prove that the recipient of the benefit was at fault or guilty of wrongdoing in any way, but it must be established that as between the parties it would be unjust and unconscionable for the recipient to retain the benefit without paying the reasonable value thereof.

If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 10.

PRODUCT DEFAMATION

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco made false and misleading statements about the quality of Conwood's moist snuff products when U.S. Tobacco sales representatives stated that Conwood products contained stems, twigs, and fiberglass.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made statements about Conwood products that would reasonably have been understood to imply that Conwood products were inferior or defective;

2) That such statements would tend to injure Conwood's business and reputation;

3) That such statements were not true and gave a false impression of Conwood and its products;

4) That a reasonably prudent person would not have made statements similar to those made by U.S. Tobacco about Conwood products; and

5) That Conwood suffered harm to its reputation or economic loss as a direct result of U.S. Tobacco's statements.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco defamed Conwood or its products and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 11.

UNFAIR COMPETITION

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco has violated Kentucky Revised Statute § 265.050, which prohibits unfair trade practices, by making secret payments to certain retailers but not others.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made secret payments to retailers or distributors in the form of allowances, rebates, refunds, commissions, discounts or the like; and

2) That U.S. Tobacco's payments in fact caused injury to Conwood or competition.

If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 12.

INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco improperly interfered with various of Conwood's contractual relationships with retailers.

To prevail on this claim, Conwood must prove the following:

1) The existence of a contract between Conwood and retailers which granted Conwood _____;

2) U.S. Tobacco knew about these contracts;

3) U.S. Tobacco intentionally caused Conwood's contracts with retailers to be breached;

4) Conwood's contracts with those retailers were actually breached;

5) U.S. Tobacco's actions resulted in damages to Conwood;

6) U.S. Tobacco had no privilege or justification to excuse its conduct.

Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco

In determining whether intentional interference with a contract of another is improper or unjustified, you must consider all the facts and circumstances in the case and balance the following factors:

(1) The nature of U.S. Tobacco's conduct;

(2) U.S. Tobacco's motive;

(3) The interests of Conwood with which the conduct interfered;

(4) The interests sought to be advanced by the U.S. Tobacco's conduct;

(5) The social interests in protecting the freedom of action of U.S. Tobacco and the contractual interests of Conwood;

(6) The proximity or remoteness of U.S. Tobacco's conduct to the alleged interference;

(7) The relations between Conwood and U.S. Tobacco.

If you believe, from the evidence, that U.S. Tobacco acted in good faith to assert or protect a legitimate, legally protected interest of its own, then you may find U.S. Tobacco's conduct, in interfering with a contract between Conwood and any retailer, was privileged or justified.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco's conduct was justified, you should find for U.S. Tobacco on this claim. If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 13.

INTERFERENCE WITH BUSINESS EXPECTANCY

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco interfered with various of its potential agreements with retailers.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from the evidence:

1) The existence of a valid business relationship or its expectancy between Conwood and retailers;

2) U.S. Tobacco knew about these relationships;

3) U.S. Tobacco intentionally interfered with Conwood's relationships with retailers;

4) U.S. Tobacco had an improper motive;

5) U.S. Tobacco's interference caused injury to Conwood; and

6) Conwood suffered damages.

Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco That U.S. Tobacco improperly interfered with Conwood's business expectancy;

In determining whether intentional interference with business expectancy of another is improper or unjustified, you must consider all the facts and circumstances in the case and balance the following factors:

(1) The nature of U.S. Tobacco's conduct;

(2) U.S. Tobacco's motive;

(3) The interests of Conwood with which the conduct interfered;

(4) The interests sought to be advanced by the U.S. Tobacco's conduct;

(5) The social interests in protecting the freedom of action of U.S. Tobacco and the contractual interests of Conwood;

INSTRUCTION NO. 14.

AGENCY

As a general rule, whatever any person is legally capable of doing himself can be done through another as agent. So, if the acts of an employee or other agent are voluntarily and intentionally ordered or directed, or authorized or consented to by a person, then the law holds that person responsible for such acts, the same as if the acts had in fact been done by such person.

A corporation is in law a person, but of course it cannot act otherwise than through its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents. The law therefore holds a corporation responsible for all unlawful acts of its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents, provided such unlawful acts are done within the scope of their authority, as would usually be the case if done in the ordinary course of their employment, or in the ordinary course of the corporation's business.

Authority to act for a corporation in a particular matter, or in a particular way or manner, may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances shown by the evidence in the case. That is to say, authority to act for a corporation, like any other fact in issue in a civil case, need not be established by direct evidence, but may be established by indirect or circumstantial evidence.

Every act of every director, or officer, or employee, or other agent, on behalf of, or in the name of a corporation, if done within the scope of his authority, is in law the act of the corporation itself.

INSTRUCTION NO. 15.

VERDICT MUST BE UNANIMOUS

The verdict must represent the considered judgment of each juror. In order to return a verdict, it is necessary that each juror agree to the verdict. Your verdict must be unanimous in that all of you must agree to it.

INSTRUCTION NO. 16

NOTES

Now I would like to say something about the notes that you have taken during the trial. Your notes should be used only as memory aids. You should not give your notes precedence over your independent recollection of the evidence. If you have not taken notes, you should rely upon your own in independent recollection of the proceedings and you should not be unduly influenced by the notes of other jurors.

Notes are not entitled to any greater weight than the memory or impression of each juror as to what the testimony may have been. Whether you have taken notes or not, each of you must form and express your own opinion as to the facts of the case.

You will notice that we do have an official court reporter making a record of the trial. However, we will not have typewritten transcripts of this record available for your use in reaching a decision in this case.

INSTRUCTION NO. 17.

It is your duty as jurors, to consult with one another, and to deliberate with a view to reach an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. You must each decide the case for yourself, but only after an impartial consideration of the evidence in the case with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations, do no hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion, if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight or effect of the evidence, solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

Upon retiring to the jury room, you will select one of your number to act as your foreperson. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will be your spokesman her in Court.

You will take these forms to the jury room and, when you have reached unanimous agreement you will have reached unanimous agreement you will have your foreperson fill in and sign the forms which set forth the verdict upon which you unanimously agree with respect to each issue in this case; you will then return with your decision to the courtroom.

PLAINTIFFS' EX PARTE PROFFER REGARDING REBUTTAL PROOF

Pursuant to the Court's direction, plaintiffs ("Conwood") respectfully submit the following ex parte disclosure of their intended rebuttal proof.

Conwood intends to offer two live witnesses:

William Ingram
Conwood's CEO is expected to testify for five minutes. Mr. Ingram will testify that he was prepared to appear and testify in defendants' case and that he directed every Conwood employee to appear if requested by defendants.

Terry Williams
Conwood's National Sales Director is expected to testify for 15 minutes. Mr. Williams will testify that several of the retailers whose depositions were played by defendants in their case-in-chief allow Conwood racks, POS, and products without restriction and that Conwood performs well in these accounts. He will testify that other deposed retailers have agreements with UST for exclusive vending and POS and that Conwood's share in these chains has suffered as a result. A demonstrative summarizing much of Mr. Williams' expected testimony is attached.

Plaintiffs intend to offer two short, previously unplayed excerpts (less than 5 minutes in total) from the testimony of Messrs. Borrowdale and Ulizio, both former UST representatives. This testimony, which is attached, rebuts defendants' "retailer decides" defense by explaining the reality of how UST obtains "retailer permission."

Respectfully submitted,

05:21P 1 Do they understand -- in your experience,
2 do these store employees understand there are
3 different manufacturers of moist snuff products?
4 A Many of them didn't. They're just clerks.
05:22P 5 Q Can you describe the average clerk to me?
6 A The average clerk would -- that's hard to 7 describe an average clerk, but they're usually -- if 8 it's not the manager, if it's just the clerk, usually 9 somebody who hates standing behind the counter and 05:22P 10 hated their job and always thought they were 11 underpaid.
12 Or they were just people who weren't really 13 into what they were doing. They were just clerks and 14 really didn't seem to care about too much of 05:22P 15 anything.
16 Q Did they seem to care too much about what 17 you did with the moist snuff section?
18 MR. GOLDFARB: Object to the form.
19 THE WITNESS: They would care to the extent that 05:22P 20 they would be worried that we'd be doing something 21 wrong if their boss or if the manager came back into 22 work and saw that we switched. So there was some 23 concern.
24 "What are you doing?"
05:23P 25 "Don't worry about it. We're just checking

05:23P 1 the dates, checking your skoal, checking your
2 Copenhagen."
3 It was -- you know. Just tell them this is 4 pretty normal. Here's my card. You started getting 05:23P 5 a rapport with a lot of them, and they would let you
6 do basically what you needed to do most of the time,
7 you know.
8 Q When you got a rapport with them, would 9 they basically let you do what you wanted to do with 05:23P 10 the moist snuff section?
11 A Usually, yeah, yeah.
12 Q Was it easy to mislead or confuse or dupe
13 them?
14 MR. GOLDFARB: Object to the form.
05:23P 15 THE WITNESS: I personally would never really 16 try to mislead them or dupe them. If they don't 17 really care, there was really no misleading that 18 would be going on. They didn't care.
19 "Hey, I'm just going to switch this out,"
05:24P 20 and they didn't give a -- they didn't give a crap 21 about who Conwood was, who their competitor was, who 22 UST was, what our objectives were. They didn't care.
23 I mean, so there was really -- we didn't 24 really need to mislead.
05:24P 25 Q BY MR. GORSUCH: Take a look at paragraph

05:24P 1 7. Just read that into the record.
2 A "I routinely had my sales representatives
3 throw away thousands of units of stale product in 4 order to make its market share appear better."
05:24P 5 Q What does that mean?
6 A Doesn't make sense to me, basically.
7 Q What were you trying to communicate in this
8 paragraph, to the best of your recollection?
9 MR. GOLDFARB: Assumes facts. Assume he was 05:25P 10 trying to communicate something at all.
11 Q BY MR. GORSUCH: You read this declaration, 12 right?
13 A Yes.
14 Q You tried to be accurate with this 05:25P 15 declaration, right?
16 A Yes.
17 Q What were you trying to communicate in 18 paragraph 7?
19 A I think what I was trying to communicate
05:25P 20 was at that time I think I was asked about -- 21 possibly asked about damages and stales and things 22 like that. And I was making the statement of 23 basically what we used to do with our damages at that 24 time.
05:25P 25 And I guess what I was trying to make a

53

05:25P 1 point of was that we would take product that was
2 damaged and throw it away, write it off as a sample
3 instead of writing it off as a damage. It was just a 4 practice. There was forms that you filled out and 05:26P 5 checked the box. Take them to Oxnard landfill.
6 And I think what I was asked at that
7 point -- and I don't even remember how this came up.
8 I don't think I volunteered this information, however 9 it came up, was what was the end result of that.
05:26P 10 And in my opinion, and what my previous 11 manager used to tell me that it accomplished -- this 12 was a practice that went on for years -- and what my 13 previous manager told me when I used to ask him, why
14 am I throwing all this away, the response from him
05:26P 15 was that, well, if you write it off as damages, it
16 goes against sales in unit volume. It's backed out
17 of that distributor's volume.
18 So at the end of the year the books will 19 show that we sold that many less cans. It was backed

Q. Well, could you explain that a little bit more?
A. The nature of the beast. 90 percent of the business will take whatever space we want to take.
Q. Was that the attitude that Mr. Todd took in meetings that you saw?
A. I never attended a meeting with Mr. Todd.
Q. Okay. That was the attitude you heard expressed from Mr. Fowler?
A. Uh-huh, yes. He didn't -- no. He didn't say that he heard that David Todd told him to go in and remove displays --
Q. Uh-huh.
A. -- or POS. But it was the way they practiced doing business.
Q. Who is the "they"? You said "They" -- that's "the way they practiced doing business." Who --
A. UST.
Q. You were a division manager once, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know what kind of activities your sales representatives were up to?
A. Yes.
Q. Why is that?
A. Because I worked behind them. I worked with them.

Q. Is that part of your job?
A. I worked in front of them.
Q. Was part of your job to know what they were up to?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you understand it was part of Mr. Todd's job to know what Fowler and Valdez and you were up to?
MR. BARNETT: Objection, calls for speculation.
THE WITNESS: As far as I know, nobody ever worked behind me. I mean, you could tell where I had been. Now, David Todd did work with each of the reps. I don't know how many reps he has, four or five -- five, I think. He works with them all, periodically, maybe once a month, once every six weeks. He knows what's going on.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) And you think that based on your 30 years of experience in this industry?
MR. BARNETT: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) You indicate that Mr. Todd's instructions was to get space by whatever means necessary. What do you mean there?
A. If you need more space for your product, take it.

Q. Don't ask?
A. Take it.
Q. How about -- do you take it only when you can maximize retailer's profits?
A. No, when you say --
MR. BARNETT: Objection as to form.
THE WITNESS: When I say "take it," I'm talking chain stores. You don't go into an independent and tell a store owner, "Hey, I'm taking his display down." It doesn't work for an independent. But in chains, when you have some little girl in there, the store manager, some guy -- the store manager don't give a damn anyway, you just go for it. Well, I shouldn't be swearing.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) I'm not going to tell you how to give your testimony. You're doing fine.
MR. BARNETT: We can do without the editorial comments.
MR. GORSUCH: All right, Matt.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) Mr. Borrowdale, was it your understanding that Mr. Todd's instruction was to take space only when it would maximize the retailer's profits?
MR. BARNETT: Objection, vague --

Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) Was it your understanding that his instruction was to take space only when consumer demand required it?
MR. BARNETT: Objection, vague, calls for speculation.
THE WITNESS: No.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) Was it your understanding that you were to take space only when sales data showed that U.S. Tobacco needed more space?
MR. BARNETT: Objection, vague, calls for speculation.
THE WITNESS: No.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) Was it your understanding that you were supposed to take space no matter what?
MR. BARNETT: Objection as to form.
THE WITNESS: Pretty much so.
Q. (By Mr. Gorsuch) In the last sentence you indicate, "I believe, based on my experience, that such unethical conduct is the normal practice for UST." Is that your belief sitting here today?
A. Yes.

INSTRUCTION NO. 4.

ANTITRUST: Damages

If you find that U.S. Tobacco either monopolized or attempted to monopolize in accordance with these instructions, the law provides that Conwood should be fairly compensated for all damages to its business or property that were a direct result or likely consequence of the conduct that you have found to be unlawful. A defendant's violations of the antitrust laws often create a situation in which it is hard to determine the precise amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff. Conwood's right to be fairly compensated should not be affected by any difficulty you may have in determining the precise amount of the recovery so long as there is a reasonable basis in the evidence for your award. You may not, however, calculate damages based only on speculation or guesswork, and you must remember that you can award Conwood damages only for injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws. You may not award damages for injuries or losses caused by other factors.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco violated the antitrust laws and that this violation caused injury to Conwood, then you must determine the amount of damages, if any, Conwood is entitled to recover. Damages may include lost profits, destruction of a business or deprivation of the opportunity to engage in a business, or increased costs incurred because of a violation.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco did commit an antitrust violation, then you must calculate the profits, if any, that Conwood lost as a result of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. Profit means net profit: the amount by which Conwood's gross revenues would have exceeded all of the costs and expenses that would have been necessary to produce those revenues. You may calculate net profit in the following way.

You have heard evidence of the market share that Conwood would have had in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. You may calculate Conwood's loss of profit by considering market share, evidence of the size of the market, and evidence relating to the profit margin Conwood would have secured on such sales.

You should not interpret the fact that I have given instructions about Conwood's damages as an indication in any way that I believe that Conwood should, or should not, win this claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 45.

LANHAM ACT COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That Conwood made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products or U.S. Tobacco's products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That the statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That Conwood's statements caused harm to U.S. Tobacco.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you believe from the evidence that Conwood violated the Lanham Act and injury to U.S. Tobacco resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate U.S. Tobacco.

PRELIMINARY INSTRUCTIONS

Members of the Jury: Now that you have heard all of the evidence and the argument of the attorneys, it is my duty to give you instructions as to the law applicable in this case.

It is your duty as jurors to follow the law as stated in the instructions, and to apply that law to the facts you find from the evidence.

You are not to single out one instruction alone as stating the law. You must consider the instructions as a whole. The fact I have given an instruction on any issue does not mean you should find one way or the other as to that issue.

You are not to be concerned with the wisdom of any rule of law stated by the Court. You must apply the law given in these instructions whether you agree with it or not.

It is your duty to determine the facts, and in so doing you must consider only the evidence I have admitted in the case. The term "evidence" includes the sworn testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits admitted in the record. It is your own interpretation and recollection of the evidence that controls.

You are permitted to draw reasonable inferences, deductions, and conclusions from the testimony and exhibits which you feel are justified in the light of your own common sense.

In saying that you must consider all the evidence, I do not mean to suggest that you must necessarily accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. You are the sole judges of the credibility or believability of each witness, including expert witnesses and the weight to be given to the testimony of each witness.

In determining the credibility of any witness, you may properly consider the demeanor of the witness while testifying, frankness or lack of it, and his or her interest in the outcome of the case, if any.

In deciding the facts of this case you must not be swayed by bias or prejudice or sympathy or public opinions. Both the parties and the public expect that you will carefully and impartially consider all of the evidence in the case, follow the law as stated by the Court, and reach a just verdict regardless of the consequences.

This case should be considered and decided by you as an action between persons of equal standing in the community, and holding the same or similar stations in life. The law is not a respecter of persons, a corporation and all persons stand equal before the law and are to be dealt with as equals in a court of justice.

INSTRUCTION NO. 1.

ANTITRUST CLAIMS

The plaintiff in this case, Conwood Company, seeks damages for injury to its business and property, claimed to have been suffered or sustained as a result of alleged violations by the defendant, United States Tobacco Company, of the antitrust laws of the United States.

Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act states that every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce shall be guilty of a violation of the antitrust laws. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the market for moist snuff and also attempted to monopolize the moist snuff market, injuring Conwood. U.S. Tobacco denies these claims.

The word "person" includes not only every individual, but also every corporation, partnership and every other organization, of any kind.

The purpose of the Sherman Antitrust Act is to preserve and advance our system of free, competitive enterprise; to encourage, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the market place; and to prevent the accomplishment of a monopoly in any business or industry; all to the end that the consuming public may receive better goods and services at a lower cost.

The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not competitors. Therefore, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco's acts injured not only Conwood itself, but injured competition in the relevant market.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Monopoly Claim

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the moist snuff industry and thereby injured Conwood.

There are three essential elements which Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence in order to establish its claim that U.S. Tobacco has monopolized within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco possessed monopoly power in a relevant market;

2) That U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained that power through restrictive or exclusionary conduct; and

3) That Conwood was injured in its business or property because of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

Conwood must prove that each one of these elements is more likely true than not. That is called a preponderance of evidence. If Conwood fails to persuade you on every essential element of Conwood's monopolization claim, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.1

ANTITRUST: Definition of Monopoly Power

Monopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market.

The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its goods than those charged by competitors for equivalent goods without a substantial loss of business to competitors. Thus, if a company that has raised prices eventually has to lower its prices to the level of prices charged by its competitors , it may not have monopoly power in the sense of power to control prices.

The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from the market or by preventing new competition from entering the market.

To establish the possession of monopoly power, Conwood need not prove that prices were raised or that competition actually was excluded, but only that U.S. Tobacco had the power to raise prices or exclude competition.

Further, to conclude that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power , you need not find that U.S. Tobacco could sell at any price it desired or that it had no competition whatsoever. A company may face some competition in the relevant market and still have monopoly power. On the other hand, if you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have the power to control prices or exclude competition, then you must conclude that it did not have monopoly power.

The mere possession of monopoly power is not sufficient to support a finding of monopolization, unless it is also determined that the monopoly power was willfully and intentionally maintained. A person who maintains monopoly power through normal growth and development, as a consequence of having a superior product, or business acumen, or through historical accident, is not guilty of monopolization as defined in this charge.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.2

ANTITRUST: Relevant Market

Before it can be determined whether a person has monopolized a field of competition in a particular line of trade or commerce, it must first be determined what is the "area of effective competition" applicable in this case. In antitrust law, this is known as defining what is called the "relevant market."

Charges of monopolization can only be judged in the framework of the relevant market. The relevant market which plaintiff claims is applicable in this claim is as follows: all moist snuff brands in the United States. Plaintiff must, therefore, prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the relevant market applicable in this case is all moist snuff brands.

In determining the relevant market, the "area of effective competition" must be determined by reference to: (1) a product market and, (2) a geographic market. The parties agree that the relevant geographic market is the entire United States.

In determining the product market, the basic idea is that the products within it are interchangeable as a practical matter from the buyer's point of view. This does not mean that products must be identical to be in the same relevant market. It means that they must be, as a matter of practical fact and the actual behavior of consumers, substantially or reasonably interchangeable to fill the same consumer needs or purposes. Two products are within a single market if one item could suit buyers' needs substantially as well as the other.

Conwood claims that the relevant market includes all moist snuff brands. U.S. Tobacco denies that this is the relevant market. In sum, you must decide which products compete with each other.

If you find that the relevant market is all moist snuff brands in the United States, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.3

ANTITRUST: Existence of Monopoly Power

If you find that a relevant market of moist snuff has been proved, you should then determine whether U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power in that market. There are a number of factors you should consider, none of which is necessarily controlling.

For example, you have heard evidence about U.S. Tobacco's market share. You may infer whether or not monopoly power exists from U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market. Market share is a firm's share of total industry sales, shipments, production, capacity, or reserves, expressed as a percentage of the whole. There are a variety of ways to measure market share, but whatever measure you use must be reasonable and consistently applied.

If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is less than 50 %, that market share by itself does not permit you to infer that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is 80 % or higher, that is strong evidence of the existence of monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's market share is somewhere between 50% and 80%, you may infer the existence of monopoly power from that share, and the inference is stronger the higher U.S. Tobacco's market share is within that range.

You may also consider the trend in U.S. Tobacco's market share. A declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power, though it does not foreclose such a finding, while an increasing market share may indicate the opposite.

Another factor is the number and size of U.S. Tobacco's competitors. If these are few, weak, or have small or decreasing market shares, so that they do not offer substantial competition to U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market, this may tend to indicate that U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power. If, on the other hand, they are numerous, vigorous, or have large or increasing shares in that market, this may be evidence that U.S. Tobacco does not have monopoly power.

You also may consider the history of entry into and exit from the market by other companies. Entry of companies into the market may indicate that U.S. Tobacco lacks monopoly power. On the other hand, departure of companies from the market, or the failure of companies to enter the market, may indicate the existence of monopoly power.

The existence of monopoly power also may be shown by evidence that defendant had the power to raise prices appreciably without a substantial loss of business to competitors or by evidence that U.S. Tobacco had profit margins that were extraordinarily high or maintained high rates of return over a long period of time.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.4

ANTITRUST: Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power

The next element that Conwood must prove is that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power through predatory or exclusionary acts or practices, rather than by supplying better products or services, or by exercising superior business judgment, or just by chance.

Predatory or exclusionary conduct is conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful in and of itself, apart from its effect in maintaining U.S. Tobacco's monopoly power.

To prove U.S. Tobacco acted willfully, Conwood must prove either that U.S. Tobacco engaged in predatory or exclusionary acts or practices with the conscious object of furthering the dominance of U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market or that this was the necessary direct consequence of U.S. Tobacco's conduct or business arrangements.

You may not find that a company willfully maintained monopoly power if it has maintained that power through the exercise of superior foresight and skill; or because of economic or technological efficiency, including efficiency resulting from scientific research; or because of a change in cost or taste has driven out all but one supplier. The acts or practices that result in the maintenance of monopoly power must represent something more than the conduct of business that is part of the normal competitive process or extraordinary commercial success. They must represent conduct that has made it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition.

Mere possession of monopoly power, if lawfully acquired, does not violate the antitrust laws. But it is unlawful to use monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor. Therefore, a company that has lawfully acquired monopoly power may not use that power to maintain or tighten its hold on the market. Such use may be shown by conduct that depends for its success on the company's monopoly power, as distinguished from conduct that could be successfully employed by firms without monopoly power in the relevant market.

In determining whether there has been an unlawful exercise of monopoly power, you must bear in mind that a company has not acted unlawfully simply because it has engaged in ordinary competitive behavior that would have been an effective means of competition if it were engaged in by a firm without monopoly power, or simply because it is large and efficient. To find U.S. Tobacco liable for monopolization because of the maintenance of lawfully acquired monopoly power through the use of that power, you must determine that U.S. Tobacco actually exercised monopoly power to maintain or tighten its control of the market.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this element and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.5

ANTITRUST: Injury and Causation

If you find that U.S. Tobacco has violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act as alleged by Conwood, then you must decide if Conwood is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

The law provides that anyone who is injured by an antitrust violation may recover damages for any injury to its business or property caused by the violation.

For Conwood to establish that it is entitled to recover damages, it must prove that it was injured as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged violation of antitrust laws. This is sometimes referred to as proving "causation" or "fact of damage." Proving causation does not require Conwood to prove the dollar value of its injury. It requires only that Conwood prove that it was in fact injured by U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. If you find that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured, you may then consider the amount of Conwood's damages. It is important to understand, however, that injury and amount of damage are different concepts and that you cannot consider the amount of damage unless and until you have concluded that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured.

To establish injury, Conwood must have offered evidence that establishes as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty that U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury. This means that Conwood must have proved that some damage flowed to it as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. Conwood is not required to prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury. It is enough if Conwood has proved that the alleged antitrust violation was a material cause of its injury. Injury may be established by inference or circumstantial evidence. However, if you find that Conwood's injury was caused solely by something other than the alleged antitrust violation or if you find that Conwood was not injured, then you must find that Conwood has failed to prove that it is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Attempt to Monopolize Claim

Conwood also claims that U.S. Tobacco has violated the federal antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize the moist snuff industry in the United States.

There are four essential elements which Conwood must prove in order to establish that U.S. Tobacco was liable for attempted monopolization within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco engaged in predatory or exclusionary conduct;

2) That U.S. Tobacco had a specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market of all moist snuff brands in the United States;

3) That there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would achieve its goal of monopoly power in the relevant market; and

4) That Conwood was injured in its business or property by U.S. Tobacco's predatory or exclusionary conduct.

Conwood must prove that each one of these elements is more likely true than not. That is called a preponderance of evidence. If Conwood fails to persuade you on every essential element of the attempt to monopolize claim, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

The definitions of "monopoly power," "relevant market," and "injury and damages" are the same in this claim as they are in the monopoly claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.1

ANTITRUST: Exclusionary or Restrictive Conduct

I have previously instructed you on exclusionary conduct. That instruction applies here as well.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.2

ANTITRUST: Intent

There are several ways in which Conwood may prove that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize. There may be evidence of direct statements of U.S. Tobacco's intent to obtain a monopoly in the relevant market. Such proof of specific intent may be established by documents prepared by responsible officers or employees of defendant. You must be careful, however, to distinguish between a U.S. Tobacco's intent to compete aggressively (which is lawful) and an intent to acquire monopoly power by using illegal or exclusionary means.

Intent ordinarily may not be proved directly because there is no way of fathoming or scrutinizing the operations of the human mind. But you may infer a person's intent from surrounding circumstances. You may consider any statement made or act done or omitted by a party whose intent is in issue, and all other facts and circumstances which indicate his state of mind.

You may consider it reasonable to draw the inference and find that a person intends the natural and probable consequences of acts knowingly done or knowingly omitted. It is for you to decide what facts have been established by the evidence.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its attempt to monopolize claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.3

ANTITRUST: Dangerous Probability of Success

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to achieve a monopoly and engaged in significant exclusionary or restrictive conduct, you also must determine if the evidence shows the next element of attempt to monopolize: namely, that there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would sooner or later succeed in achieving monopoly power if it continued to engage in the same or similar conduct. In determining whether there was a dangerous probability of success, you should consider the following factors:

1) the market share and power of defendant as compared to its competitors;

2) whether U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market was increasing or decreasing;

3) the actual or probable impact on competition of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices; and

4) whether the barriers to entry into the market made it difficult for competitors to enter the market.

A dangerous probability of success need not mean that success was nearly certain. It means that the chance of success was substantial and real: that is, that there was a reasonable likelihood that defendant would ultimately achieve its goal of monopoly power.

If you find that there was a dangerous probability of success, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its attempt to monopolize claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 4.

ANTITRUST: Damages

If you find that U.S. Tobacco either monopolized or attempted to monopolize in accordance with these instructions, the law provides that Conwood should be fairly compensated for all damages to its business or property that were a direct result or likely consequence of the conduct that you have found to be unlawful. A defendant's violations of the antitrust laws often create a situation in which it is hard to determine the precise amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff. Conwood's right to be fairly compensated should not be affected by any difficulty you may have in determining the precise amount of the recovery so long as there is a reasonable basis in the evidence for your award. You may not, however, calculate damages based only on speculation or guesswork, and you must remember that you can award Conwood damages only for injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws. You may not award damages for injuries or losses caused by other factors.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco violated the antitrust laws and that this violation caused injury to Conwood, then you must determine the amount of damages, if any, Conwood is entitled to recover. Damages may include lost profits, destruction of a business or deprivation of the opportunity to engage in a business, or increased costs incurred because of a violation.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco did commit an antitrust violation, then you must calculate the profits, if any, that Conwood lost as a result of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. Profit means net profit: the amount by which Conwood's gross revenues would have exceeded all of the costs and expenses that would have been necessary to produce those revenues. You may calculate net profit in the following way.

You have heard evidence of the market share that Conwood would have had in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. You may calculate Conwood's loss of profit by considering market share, evidence of the size of the market, and evidence relating to the profit margin Conwood would have secured on such sales.

INSTRUCTION NO. 5.

LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Conwood also alleges that U.S. Tobacco falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics, or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That U.S. Tobacco's statements caused harm to Conwood.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 6.

LANHAM ACT COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That Conwood made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products or U.S. Tobacco's products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That Conwood's statements caused harm to U.S. Tobacco.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you believe from the evidence that Conwood violated the Lanham Act and injury to U.S. Tobacco resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 7.

CONVERSION

Conwood has brought a claim of conversion against U.S. Tobacco. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:

1) That U.S. Tobacco representatives wrongfully took Conwood advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to Conwood; and

3) That Conwood was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 8.

CONVERSION COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco has brought a claim of conversion against Conwood. U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for U.S. Tobacco if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:

1) That Conwood representatives wrongfully took U.S. Tobacco advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to U.S. Tobacco ; and

3) That U.S. Tobacco was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you find for U.S. Tobacco, you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 9.

AGENCY

As a general rule, whatever any person is legally capable of doing himself can be done through another as agent. So, if the acts of an employee or other agent are voluntarily and intentionally ordered or directed, or authorized or consented to by a person, then the law holds that person responsible for such acts, the same as if the acts had in fact been done by such person.

A corporation is in law a person, but of course it cannot act otherwise than through its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents. The law therefore holds a corporation responsible for all unlawful acts of its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents, provided such unlawful acts are done within the scope of their authority, as would usually be the case if done in the ordinary course of their employment, or in the ordinary course of the corporation's business.

Authority to act for a corporation in a particular matter, or in a particular way or manner, may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances shown by the evidence in the case. That is to say, authority to act for a corporation, like any other fact in issue in a civil case, need not be established by direct evidence, but may be established by indirect or circumstantial evidence.

Every act of every director, or officer, or employee, or other agent, on behalf of, or in the name of a corporation, if done within the scope of his authority, is in law the act of the corporation itself.

INSTRUCTION NO. 10.

VERDICT MUST BE UNANIMOUS

The verdict must represent the considered judgment of each juror. In order to return a verdict, it is necessary that each juror agree to the verdict. Your verdict must be unanimous in that all of you must agree to it.

INSTRUCTION NO. 11.

NOTES

Now I would like to say something about the notes that you have taken during the trial. Your notes should be used only as memory aids. You should not give your notes precedence over your independent recollection of the evidence. If you have not taken notes, you should rely upon your own in independent recollection of the proceedings and you should not be unduly influenced by the notes of other jurors.

Notes are not entitled to any greater weight than the memory or impression of each juror as to what the testimony may have been. Whether you have taken notes or not, each of you must form and express your own opinion as to the facts of the case.

You will notice that we do have an official court reporter making a record of the trial. However, we will not have typewritten transcripts of this record available for your use in reaching a decision in this case.

INSTRUCTION NO. 12.

DELIBERATION

It is your duty as jurors, to consult with one another, and to deliberate with a view to reach an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. You must each decide the case for yourself, but only after an impartial consideration of the evidence in the case with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations, do no hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion, if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight or effect of the evidence, solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

Upon retiring to the jury room, you will select one of your number to act as your foreperson. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will be your spokesman her in Court.

You will take these forms to the jury room and, when you have reached unanimous agreement you will have reached unanimous agreement you will have your foreperson fill in and sign the forms which set forth the verdict upon which you unanimously agree with respect to each issue in this case; you will then return with your decision to the courtroom.

PRELIMINARY INSTRUCTIONS

Members of the Jury: Now that you have heard all of the evidence and the argument of the attorneys, it is my duty to give you instructions as to the law applicable in this case.

It is your duty as jurors to follow the law as stated in the instructions, and to apply that law to the facts you find from the evidence.

You are not to single out one instruction alone as stating the law. You must consider the instructions as a whole. The fact I have given an instruction on any issue does not mean you should find one way or the other as to that issue.

You are not to be concerned with the wisdom of any rule of law stated by the Court. You must apply the law given in these instructions whether you agree with it or not.

It is your duty to determine the facts, and in so doing you must consider only the evidence I have admitted in the case. The term "evidence" includes the sworn testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits admitted in the record. It is your own interpretation and recollection of the evidence that controls.

Under the Federal Rules of Evidence, experts are permitted to rely on a variety of materials in forming their opinions, including materials that are not in evidence in this case. Evidence does not include documents that may have been seen or considered by experts, or about which experts were examined or cross-examined at trial, unless those documents are also admitted as exhibits in the record. Therefore, while an expert's testimony is evidence in this case, some of the materials on which the expert relied are not evidence in this case, although an expert is entitled to rely upon them in making his opinion.

You are permitted to draw reasonable inferences, deductions, and conclusions from the testimony and exhibits which you feel are justified in the light of your own common sense.

In saying that you must consider all the evidence, I do not mean to suggest that you must necessarily accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. You are the sole judges of the credibility or believability of each witness, including expert witnesses and the weight to be given to the testimony of each witness.

In determining the credibility of any witness, you may properly consider the demeanor of the witness while testifying, frankness or lack of it, and his or her interest in the outcome of the case, if any.

In deciding the facts of this case you must not be swayed by bias or prejudice or sympathy or public opinions. Both the parties and the public expect that you will carefully and impartially consider all of the evidence in the case, follow the law as stated by the Court, and reach a just verdict regardless of the consequences.

This case should be considered and decided by you as an action between persons of equal standing in the community, and holding the same or similar stations in life. The law is not a respecter of persons, a corporation and all persons stand equal before the law and are to be dealt with as equals in a court of justice.

INSTRUCTION NO. 1.

ANTITRUST CLAIMS

The plaintiff in this case, Conwood Company, seeks damages for injury to its business and property, claimed to have been suffered or sustained as a result of alleged violations by the defendant, United States Tobacco Company, of the antitrust laws of the United States.

Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act states that every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce shall be guilty of a violation of the antitrust laws. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the market for moist snuff and also attempted to monopolize the moist snuff market, injuring Conwood. U.S. Tobacco denies these claims.

The word "person" includes not only every individual, but also every corporation, partnership and every other organization, of any kind.

The purpose of the Sherman Antitrust Act is to preserve and advance our system of free, competitive enterprise; to encourage, to the fullest extent practicable, free and open competition in the market place; and to prevent the accomplishment of a monopoly in any business or industry; all to the end that the consuming public may receive better goods and services at a lower cost.

The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not competitors. Therefore, Conwood must prove that U.S. Tobacco's acts injured not only Conwood itself, but injured competition in the relevant market.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Monopoly Claim

Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully monopolized the moist snuff industry and thereby injured Conwood.

There are three essential elements which Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence in order to establish its claim that U.S. Tobacco has monopolized within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco possessed monopoly power in a relevant market;

2) That U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained that power through restrictive or exclusionary conduct; and

3) That Conwood was injured in its business or property because of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

Conwood must prove that each one of these elements is more likely true than not. That is called a preponderance of evidence. If Conwood fails to persuade you on every essential element of Conwood's monopolization claim, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.1

ANTITRUST: Definition of Monopoly Power

Monopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market.

The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its goods than those charged by competitors for equivalent goods without a substantial loss of business to competitors. Thus, if a company that has raised prices eventually has to lower its prices to the level of prices charged by its competitors , it may not have monopoly power in the sense of power to control prices.

The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from the market or by preventing new competition from entering the market.

To establish the possession of monopoly power, Conwood need not prove that prices were raised or that competition actually was excluded, but only that U.S. Tobacco had the power to raise prices or exclude competition.

Further, to conclude that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power , you need not find that U.S. Tobacco could sell at any price it desired or that it had no competition whatsoever. A company may face some competition in the relevant market and still have monopoly power. On the other hand, if you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have the power to control prices or exclude competition, then you must conclude that it did not have monopoly power.

The mere possession of monopoly power is not sufficient to support a finding of monopolization, unless it is also determined that the monopoly power was willfully maintained. A person who maintains monopoly power through normal growth and development, as a consequence of having a superior product, or business acumen, or through historical accident, is not guilty of monopolization as defined in this charge.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.2

ANTITRUST: Relevant Market

Before it can be determined whether a person has monopolized a field of competition in a particular line of trade or commerce, it must first be determined what is the "area of effective competition" applicable in this case. In antitrust law, this is known as defining what is called the "relevant market."

Charges of monopolization can only be judged in the framework of the relevant market. The relevant market which plaintiff claims is applicable in this claim is as follows: all moist snuff brands in the United States. Plaintiff must, therefore, prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the relevant market applicable in this case is all moist snuff brands.

In determining the relevant market, the "area of effective competition" must be determined by reference to: (1) a product market and, (2) a geographic market. The parties agree that the relevant geographic market is the entire United States.

In determining the product market, the basic idea is that the products within it are interchangeable as a practical matter from the buyer's point of view. This does not mean that products must be identical to be in the same relevant market. It means that they must be, as a matter of practical fact and the actual behavior of consumers, substantially or reasonably interchangeable to fill the same consumer needs or purposes. Two products are within a single market if one item could suit buyers' needs substantially as well as the other.

Conwood claims that the relevant market includes all moist snuff brands. U.S. Tobacco denies that this is the relevant market. In sum, you must decide which products compete with each other.

If you find that the relevant market is all moist snuff brands in the United States, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.3

ANTITRUST: Existence of Monopoly Power

If you find that a relevant market of moist snuff has been proved, you should then determine whether U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power in that market. There are a number of factors you should consider, none of which is necessarily controlling.

For example, you have heard evidence about U.S. Tobacco's market share. You may infer whether or not monopoly power exists from U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market. Market share is a firm's share of total industry sales, shipments, production, capacity, or reserves, expressed as a percentage of the whole. There are a variety of ways to measure market share, but whatever measure you use must be reasonable and consistently applied.

If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is less than 50 %, that market share by itself does not permit you to infer that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market is 80 % or higher, that is strong evidence of the existence of monopoly power. If you determine that U.S. Tobacco's market share is somewhere between 50% and 80%, you may infer the existence of monopoly power from that share, and the inference is stronger the higher U.S. Tobacco's market share is within that range.

You may also consider the trend in U.S. Tobacco's market share. A declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power, though it does not foreclose such a finding, while an increasing market share may indicate the opposite.

Another factor is the number and size of U.S. Tobacco's competitors. If these are few, weak, or have small or decreasing market shares, so that they do not offer substantial competition to U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market, this may tend to indicate that U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power. If, on the other hand, they are numerous, vigorous, or have large or increasing shares in that market, this may be evidence that U.S. Tobacco does not have monopoly power.

You also may consider the history of entry into and exit from the market by other companies. Entry of companies into the market may indicate that U.S. Tobacco lacks monopoly power. On the other hand, departure of companies from the market, or the failure of companies to enter the market, may indicate the existence of monopoly power.

The existence of monopoly power also may be shown by evidence that defendant had the power to raise prices appreciably without a substantial loss of business to competitors or by evidence that U.S. Tobacco had profit margins that were extraordinarily high or maintained high rates of return over a long period of time.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.4

ANTITRUST: Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power

The next element that Conwood must prove is that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power through restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices, rather than by supplying better products or services, or by exercising superior business judgment, or just by chance.

Restrictive or exclusionary conduct is conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful in and of itself, apart from its effect in maintaining U.S. Tobacco's monopoly power.

To prove U.S. Tobacco acted willfully, Conwood must prove either that U.S. Tobacco engaged in restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices with the conscious object of furthering the dominance of U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market or that this was the necessary direct consequence of U.S. Tobacco's conduct or business arrangements.

You may not find that a company willfully maintained monopoly power if it has maintained that power through the exercise of superior foresight and skill; or because of economic or technological efficiency, including efficiency resulting from scientific research; or because of a change in cost or taste has driven out all but one supplier. The acts or practices that result in the maintenance of monopoly power must represent something more than the conduct of business that is part of the normal competitive process or extraordinary commercial success. They must represent conduct that has made it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition.

Mere possession of monopoly power, if lawfully acquired, does not violate the antitrust laws. But it is unlawful to use monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor. Therefore, a company that has lawfully acquired monopoly power may not use that power to maintain or tighten its hold on the market. Such use may be shown by conduct that depends for its success on the company's monopoly power, as distinguished from conduct that could be successfully employed by firms without monopoly power in the relevant market.

In determining whether there has been an unlawful exercise of monopoly power, you must bear in mind that a company has not acted unlawfully simply because it has engaged in ordinary competitive behavior that would have been an effective means of competition if it were engaged in by a firm without monopoly power, or simply because it is large and efficient. To find U.S. Tobacco liable for monopolization because of the maintenance of lawfully acquired monopoly power through the use of that power, you must determine that U.S. Tobacco actually exercised monopoly power to maintain or tighten its control of the market.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this element and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.5

ANTITRUST: Injury and Causation

If you find that U.S. Tobacco has violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act as alleged by Conwood, then you must decide if Conwood is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

The law provides that anyone who is injured by an antitrust violation may recover damages for any injury to its business or property caused by the violation.

For Conwood to establish that it is entitled to recover damages, it must prove that it was injured as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged violation of antitrust laws. This is sometimes referred to as proving "causation" or "fact of damage." Proving causation does not require Conwood to prove the dollar value of its injury. It requires only that Conwood prove that it was in fact injured by U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. If you find that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured, you may then consider the amount of Conwood's damages.

It is important to understand, however, that injury and amount of damage are different concepts and that you cannot consider the amount of damage unless and until you have concluded that Conwood has established that it was in fact injured.

To establish injury, Conwood must have offered evidence that establishes as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty that U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury. This means that Conwood must have proved that some damage flowed to it as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation. Conwood is not required t prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury. It is enough if Conwood has proved the alleged antitrust violation was a material cause of its injury. Injury may be established inference or circumstantial evidence. However, if you find that Conwood's injury was cau solely by something other than the alleged antitrust violation or if you find that Conwood was not injured, then you must find that Conwood has failed to prove that it is entitled to recover damages from U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Attempt to Monopolize Claim

Conwood also claims that U.S. Tobacco has violated the federal antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize the moist snuff industry in the United States.

There are four essential elements which Conwood must prove in order to establish that U.S. Tobacco was liable for attempted monopolization within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco engaged in restrictive or exclusionary conduct;

2) That U.S. Tobacco had a specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market of all moist snuff brands in the United States;

3) That there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would achieve its goal of monopoly power in the relevant market; and

4) That Conwood was injured in its business or property by U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

Conwood must prove that each one of these elements is more likely true than not. That is called a preponderance of evidence. If Conwood fails to persuade you on every essential element of the attempt to monopolize claim, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

The definitions of "monopoly power," "relevant market," and "injury and damages" are the same in this claim as they are in the monopoly claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.1

ANTITRUST: Exclusionary or Restrictive Conduct

I have previously instructed you on exclusionary conduct. That instruction applies here as well.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.2

ANTITRUST: Intent

There are several ways in which Conwood may prove that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize. There may be evidence of direct statements of U.S. Tobacco's intent to obtain a monopoly in the relevant market. Such proof of specific intent may be established by documents prepared by responsible officers or employees of defendant. You must be careful, however, to distinguish between U.S. Tobacco's intent to compete aggressively (which is lawful) and an intent to acquire monopoly power by using illegal or exclusionary means.

Intent ordinarily may not be proved directly because there is no way of fathoming or scrutinizing the operations of the human mind. But you may infer a person's intent from surrounding circumstances. You may consider any statement made or act done or omitted by a party whose intent is in issue, and all other facts and circumstances which indicate his state of mind.

You may consider it reasonable to draw the inference and find that a person intends the natural and probable consequences of acts knowingly done or knowingly omitted. It is for you to decide what facts have been established by the evidence.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its attempt to monopolize claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.3

ANTITRUST: Dangerous Probability of Success

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to achieve a monopoly and engaged in significant exclusionary or restrictive conduct, you also must determine if the evidence shows the next element of attempt to monopolize: namely, that there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would sooner or later succeed in achieving monopoly power if it continued to engage in the same or similar conduct. In determining whether there was a dangerous probability of success, you should consider the following factors:

1) the market share and power of defendant as compared to its competitors;

2) whether U.S. Tobacco's share of the relevant market was increasing or decreasing;

3) the actual or probable impact on competition of U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices; and

4) whether the barriers to entry into the market made it difficult for competitors to enter the market.

A dangerous probability of success need not mean that success was nearly certain. It means that the chance of success was substantial and real: that is, that there was a reasonable likelihood that defendant would ultimately achieve its goal of monopoly power.

If you find that there was a dangerous probability of success, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its attempt to monopolize claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 4.

ANTITRUST: Damages

If you find that U.S. Tobacco either monopolized or attempted to monopolize in accordance with these instructions, the law provides that Conwood should be fairly compensated for all damages to its business or property that were a direct result or likely consequence of the conduct that you have found to be unlawful. A defendant's violations of the antitrust laws often create a situation in which it is hard to determine the precise amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff. Conwood's right to be fairly compensated should not be affected by any difficulty you may have in determining the precise amount of the recovery so long as there is a reasonable basis in the evidence for your award. You may not, however, calculate damages based only on speculation or guesswork, and you must remember that you can award Conwood damages only for injuries caused by a violation of the antitrust laws. You may not award damages for injuries or losses caused by other factors.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco violated the antitrust laws and that this violation caused injury to Conwood, then you must determine the amount of damages, if any, Conwood is entitled to recover. Damages may include lost profits, destruction of a business or deprivation of the opportunity to engage in a business, or increased costs incurred because of a violation.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco did commit an antitrust violation, then you must calculate the profits, if any, that Conwood lost as a result of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. Profit means net profit: the amount by which Conwood's gross revenues would have exceeded all of the costs and expenses that would have been necessary to produce those revenues. You may calculate net profit in the following way.

You have heard evidence of the market share that Conwood would have had in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's antitrust violation. You may calculate Conwood's loss of profit by considering market share, evidence of the size of the market, and evidence relating to the profit margin Conwood would have secured on such sales.

INSTRUCTION NO. 5.

LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Conwood also alleges that U.S. Tobacco falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics, or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That the statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That U.S. Tobacco's statements caused harm to Conwood.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 6.

LANHAM ACT COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That Conwood made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products or U.S. Tobacco's products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That the statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That Conwood's statements caused harm to U.S. Tobacco.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you believe from the evidence that Conwood violated the Lanham Act and injury to U.S. Tobacco resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 7.

CONVERSION

Conwood has brought a claim of conversion against U.S. Tobacco. Conwood claims that U.S. Tobacco wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for Conwood if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:

1) That U.S. Tobacco representatives wrongfully took Conwood advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to Conwood; and

3) That Conwood was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you find for Conwood, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 8.

CONVERSION COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco has brought a claim of conversion against Conwood. U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for U.S. Tobacco if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:

1) That Conwood representatives wrongfully took U.S. Tobacco advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to U.S. Tobacco ; and

3) That U.S. Tobacco was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you find for U.S. Tobacco, you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 9.

AGENCY

As a general rule, whatever any person is legally capable of doing himself can be done through another as agent. So, if the acts of an employee or other agent are voluntarily and intentionally ordered or directed, or authorized or consented to by a person, then the law holds that person responsible for such acts, the same as if the acts had in fact been done by such person.

A corporation is in law a person, but of course it cannot act otherwise than through its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents. The law therefore holds a corporation responsible for all unlawful acts of its directors, or officers, or employees, or other agents, provided such unlawful acts are done within the scope of their authority, as would usually be the case if done in the ordinary course of their employment, or in the ordinary course of the corporation's business.

Authority to act for a corporation in a particular matter, or in a particular way or manner, may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances shown by the evidence in the case. That is to say, authority to act for a corporation, like any other fact in issue in a civil case, need not be established by direct evidence, but may be established by indirect or circumstantial evidence.

Every act of every director, or officer, or employee, or other agent, on behalf of, or in the name of a corporation, if done within the scope of his authority, is in law the act of the corporation itself.

INSTRUCTION NO. 10.

VERDICT MUST BE UNANIMOUS

The verdict must represent the considered judgment of each juror. In order to return a verdict, it is necessary that each juror agree to the verdict. Your verdict must be unanimous in that all of you must agree to it.

INSTRUCTION NO. 11.

NOTES

Now I would like to say something about the notes that you have taken during the trial. Your notes should be used only as memory aids. You should not give your notes precedence over your independent recollection of the evidence. If you have not taken notes, you should rely upon your own in independent recollection of the proceedings and you should not be unduly influenced by the notes of other jurors.

Notes are not entitled to any greater weight than the memory or impression of each juror as to what the testimony may have been. Whether you have taken notes or not, each of you must form and express your own opinion as to the facts of the case.

You will notice that we do have an official court reporter making a record of the trial. However, we will not have typewritten transcripts of this record available for your use in reaching a decision in this case.

INSTRUCTION NO. 12.

DELIBERATION

It is your duty as jurors, to consult with one another, and to deliberate with a view to reach an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. You must each decide the case for yourself, but only after an impartial consideration of the evidence in the case with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations, do no hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion, if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight or effect of the evidence, solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

Upon retiring to the jury room, you will select one of your number to act as your foreperson. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will be your spokesman here in Court.

You will take these forms to the jury room and, when you have reached unanimous agreement your foreperson fill in and sign the forms which set forth the verdict upon which you unanimously agree with respect to each issue in this case; you will then return with your decision to the courtroom.

PRELIMINARY INSTRUCTIONS

Members of the Jury: Now that you have heard all of the evidence and the argument of the attorneys, it is my duty to give you instructions as to the law applicable in this case.

It is your duty as jurors to follow the law as stated in the instructions, and to apply that law to the facts you find from the evidence.

You are not to single out one instruction alone as stating the law. You must consider the instructions as a whole. The fact I have given an instruction on any issue does not mean you should find one way or the other as to that issue.

You are not to be concerned with the wisdom of any rule of law stated by the Court. You must apply the law given in these instructions whether you agree with it or not.

It is your duty to determine the facts, and in so doing you must consider only the evidence I have admitted in the case. The term "evidence" includes the sworn testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits admitted in the record. It is your own interpretation and recollection of the evidence that controls.

Under the Federal Rules of Evidence, experts are permitted to rely on a variety of materials in forming their opinions, including materials that are not in evidence in this case. Evidence does not include documents that may have been seen or considered by experts, or about which experts were examined or cross-examined at trial, unless those documents are also admitted as exhibits in the record. Therefore, while an expert's testimony is evidence in this case, some of the materials on which the expert relied are not evidence in this case, although an expert is entitled to rely upon them in making his opinion.

You are permitted to draw reasonable inferences, deductions, and conclusions from the testimony and exhibits which you feel are justified in the light of your own common sense.

In saying that you must consider all the evidence, I do not mean to suggest that you must necessarily accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. You are the sole judges of the credibility or believability of each witness, including expert witnesses and the weight to be given to the testimony of each witness.

In determining the credibility of any witness, you may properly consider the demeanor of the witness while testifying, frankness or lack of it, and his or her interest in the outcome of the case, if any.

In deciding the facts of this case you must not be swayed by bias or prejudice or sympathy or public opinions. Both the parties and the public expect that you will carefully and impartially consider all of the evidence in the case, follow the law as stated by the Court, and reach a just verdict regardless of the consequences.

This case should be considered and decided by you as an action between persons of equal standing in the community, and holding the same or similar stations in life. The law is not a respecter of persons, a corporation and all persons stand equal before the law and are to be dealt with as equals in a court of justice.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.1

ANTITRUST: Definition of Monopoly Power

Monopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market.

The power to control prices is the power of a company to establish appreciably higher prices for its goods than those charged by competitors for equivalent goods without a substantial loss of business to competitors. Thus, if a company that has raised prices eventually has to lower its prices to the level of prices charged by its competitors , it may not have monopoly power in the sense of power to control prices.

The power to exclude competition means the power of a company to dominate a market by eliminating existing competition from the market or by preventing new competition from entering the market.

To establish the possession of monopoly power, Conwood need not prove that prices were raised or that competition actually was excluded, but only that U.S. Tobacco had the power to raise prices or exclude competition.

Further, to conclude that U.S. Tobacco had monopoly power , you need not find that U.S. Tobacco could sell at any price it desired or that it had no competition whatsoever. A company may face some competition in the relevant market and still have monopoly power. On the other hand, if you find that U.S. Tobacco did not have the power to control prices or exclude competition, then you must conclude that it did not have monopoly power.

The mere possession of monopoly power is not sufficient to support a finding of monopolization, unless it is also determined that the monopoly power was willfully maintained. A person who maintains monopoly power through normal growth and development, as a consequence of having a superior product, or business acumen, or through historical accident, is not guilty of monopolization as defined in this charge.

INSTRUCTION NO. 2.4

ANTITRUST: Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power

The next element that Conwood must prove is that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power through restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices, rather than by supplying better products or services, or by exercising superior business judgment, or just by chance.

Restrictive or exclusionary conduct is conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market. It is not necessary that such conduct be unlawful in and of itself, apart from its effect in maintaining U.S. Tobacco's monopoly power.

To prove U.S. Tobacco acted willfully, Conwood must prove either that U.S. Tobacco engaged in restrictive or exclusionary acts or practices with the conscious object of furthering the dominance of U.S. Tobacco in the relevant market or that this was the necessary direct consequence of U.S. Tobacco's conduct or business arrangements.

You may not find that a company willfully maintained monopoly power if it has maintained that power through the exercise of superior foresight and skill; or because of economic or technological efficiency, including efficiency resulting from scientific research; or because of a change in cost or taste has driven out all but one supplier. The acts or practices that result in the maintenance of monopoly power must represent something more than the conduct of business that is part of the normal competitive process or extraordinary commercial success. They must represent conduct that has made it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition.

Mere possession of monopoly power, if lawfully acquired, does not violate the antitrust laws. But it is unlawful to use monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor. Therefore, a company that has lawfully acquired monopoly power may not use that power to maintain or tighten its hold on the market. Such use may be shown by conduct that depends for its success on the company's monopoly power, as distinguished from conduct that could be successfully employed by firms without monopoly power in the relevant market.

In determining whether there has been an unlawful exercise of monopoly power, you must bear in mind that a company has not acted unlawfully simply because it has engaged in ordinary competitive behavior that would have been an effective means of competition if it were engaged in by a firm without monopoly power, or simply because it is large and efficient. To find U.S. Tobacco liable for monopolization because of the maintenance of lawfully acquired monopoly power through the use of that power, you must determine that U.S. Tobacco actually exercised monopoly power to maintain or tighten its control of the market.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco willfully maintained monopoly power, then you must find that Conwood has established this element and you must consider the remaining elements of its monopolization claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.

ANTITRUST: Elements of Attempt to Monopolize Claim

Conwood also claims that U.S. Tobacco has violated the federal antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize the moist snuff industry in the United States.

There are four essential elements which Conwood must prove in order to establish that U.S. Tobacco was liable for attempted monopolization within the meaning of the antitrust laws:

1) That U.S. Tobacco engaged in restrictive or exclusionary conduct;

2) That U.S. Tobacco had a specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market of all moist snuff brands in the United States;

3) That there was a dangerous probability that U.S. Tobacco would achieve its goal of monopoly power in the relevant market; and

4) That Conwood was injured in its business or property by U.S. Tobacco's restrictive or exclusionary conduct.

Conwood must prove that each one of these elements is more likely true than not. That is called a preponderance of evidence. If Conwood fails to persuade you on every essential element of the attempt to monopolize claim, then you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

The definitions of "monopoly power," "relevant market," and "injury and damages" are the same in this claim as they are in the monopoly claim.

INSTRUCTION NO. 3.2

ANTITRUST: Intent

There are several ways in which Conwood may prove that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize. There may be evidence of direct statements of U.S. Tobacco's intent to obtain a monopoly in the relevant market. Such proof of specific intent may be established by documents prepared by responsible officers or employees of defendant. You must be careful, however, to distinguish between U.S. Tobacco's intent to compete aggressively (which is lawful) and an intent to acquire monopoly power by using illegal or exclusionary means.

Intent ordinarily may not be proved directly because there is no way of fathoming or scrutinizing the operations of the human mind. But you may infer a person's intent from surrounding circumstances. You may consider any statement made or act done or omitted by a party whose intent is in issue, and all other facts and circumstances which indicate his state of mind.

You may consider it reasonable to draw the inference and find that a person intends the natural and probable consequences of acts knowingly done or knowingly omitted. It is for you to decide what facts have been established by the evidence.

If you find that U.S. Tobacco had the specific intent to monopolize in the relevant market, then you must find that Conwood has established this requirement and you must consider the remaining elements of its attempt to monopolize claim. Otherwise, you must find for U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 5.

LANHAM ACT CLAIM

Conwood also alleges that U.S. Tobacco falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics, or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

Conwood must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That U.S. Tobacco made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That the statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That U.S. Tobacco's statements caused harm to Conwood.

Otherwise, you will find for U.S. Tobacco.

If you believe from the evidence that U.S. Tobacco violated the Lanham Act and injury to Conwood resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 6.

LANHAM ACT COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco alleges in its counterclaim against Conwood that Conwood falsely advertised in violation of the Lanham Act.

Under the Lanham Act, it is illegal for any person to misrepresent the nature, characteristics or qualities of his or its goods, services or commercial activities in commercial advertising or promotion .

U.S. Tobacco must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements:

1) That Conwood made false or misleading statements of fact about its own products or U.S. Tobacco's products;

2) That those statements were publically disseminated;

3) That retailers or consumers were deceived or were likely to have been deceived by U.S. Tobacco's statements;

4) That the statements were material in the sense that they were likely to influence the deceived retailer's or consumer's purchasing decisions; and

5) That Conwood's statements caused harm to U.S. Tobacco.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you believe from the evidence that Conwood violated the Lanham Act and injury to U.S. Tobacco resulted, then you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate Conwood.

INSTRUCTION NO. 8.

CONVERSION COUNTERCLAIM

U.S. Tobacco has brought a claim of conversion against Conwood. U.S. Tobacco claims that Conwood wrongfully took its property from retail locations.

You will find for U.S. Tobacco if you are satisfied from a preponderance of the evidence:.

1) That Conwood representatives wrongfully took U.S. Tobacco advertising and display racks from retail locations; and

2) That all of the advertising or display racks taken belonged to U.S. Tobacco ; and

3) That U.S. Tobacco was damaged thereby.

Otherwise, you will find for Conwood.

If you find for U.S. Tobacco, you may award damages in an amount that will reasonably and fairly compensate U.S. Tobacco.

INSTRUCTION NO. 12.

DELIBERATION

It is your duty as jurors, to consult with one another, and to deliberate with a view to reach an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. You must each decide the case for yourself, but only after an impartial consideration of the evidence in the case with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations, do no hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion, if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight or effect of the evidence, solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

Upon retiring to the jury room, you will select one of your number to act as your foreperson. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will be your spokesman here in Court.

You will take these forms to the jury room and, when you have reached unanimous agreement your foreperson fill in and sign the forms which set forth the verdict upon which you unanimously agree with respect to each issue in this case; you will then return with your decision to the courtroom.

v. ORDER

UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC., ET AL. DEFENDANTS

A telephonic conference was held March 29, 2000.
Appearances:
For the plaintiffs: Mark Hansen, Esq.
For the defendants: John Reed, Esq.

Defendants made an oral motion to extend the automatic stay provided by FRCP 62 to allow the parties to brief the issues of any conditions for the security. Defendants agreed that during the stay it would not enter into any corporate transactions that would jeopardize any security responsible for the judgment. Plaintiff has no objection.

The parties agreed on scheduling order for filing motions for attorneys' fees, bill of costs, and injunctions and for permission to interview jurors.

IT IS ORDERED:

1. The automatic stay provided by FRCP 62 is extended to allow the parties to brief the issues. Defendant shall not enter into or conduct any corporate transactions that would jeopardize any security responsible for the judgment.

2. Defendants shall file a brief on the issues of conditions for the security by April 19, 2000. Plaintiffs shall respond 7 days thereafter and defendants are granted 7 days thereafter to file a reply.

3. Motions for attorneys' fees, bill of cost, and injunctions shall be filed within 21 days, with 14 days to respond, and 7 days to reply.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE, FOR A NEW TRIAL, OR IN THE ALTERNATIVE, FOR A REDUCED DAMAGES AWARD

Defendants UST Inc., et al. ("U.S. Tobacco") move the Court pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) for entry of judgment as a matter of law. Alternatively, U.S. Tobacco moves the Court pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59 for a new trial by jury. As a further alternative, U.S. Tobacco moves the Court to enter a remittitur to reduce the damages award.

In support of these motions, U.S. Tobacco has submitted two separate memoranda, one in support of the motion for judgment as a matter of law, and the other in support of the alternative motions for a new trial or a reduced damages award. U.S. Tobacco has also tendered three proposed Orders.

Respectfully submitted,

JUDGMENT

On motion of Defendants UST Inc., et al. ("U.S. Tobacco") for entry of judgment as a matter of law under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) as to Plaintiffs' claims under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2; Plaintiffs having been fully heard at trial on the issues under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, and there being no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for the Plaintiffs on those issues; and the Court being fully and sufficiently advised,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that judgment is entered in favor of U.S. Tobacco on all matters at issue under Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

ORDER

On motion of Defendants UST Inc., et al. ("U.S. Tobacco") for a new trial by jury under Fed. R. Civ. P. 59, and the Court being fully and sufficiently advised,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that U.S. Tobacco's motion is granted and, following a conference with counsel, the case shall be scheduled on the Court's docket for a new trial as to Plaintiffs' claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.

In advance of the new trial, the Court will enter an order identifying which specific conduct of U.S. Tobacco can be considered illegal under applicable antitrust precedent and requiring Plaintiffs to demonstrate at trial (1) that the alleged conduct was in fact an exclusionary use of monopoly power; (2) that the alleged conduct caused harm to competition itself; (3) that the alleged conduct caused harm to Conwood; and (4) that Conwood suffered damages of a fair and reasonable amount flowing from that conduct and nothing else.

In advance of the new trial, the Court will enter specific in limine rulings governing the following matters: (a) evidence as to Conwood's owners, their wealth and their ability to compete if they chose, (b) Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis, (c) Dr. Gundlach's "exclusive agreement" study; (d) the requirement that Conwood prove the fact of injury at specific retail stores, (5) the publication of hearsay documents and statements to the jury through Conwood's expert witnesses, (6) Plaintiffs' use of fact witnesses as expert witnesses, (7) the enforcement of Magistrate Judge Moyer's order of May 11, 1999 governing testimony relating to "field" misconduct, (8) Plaintiffs' comments and questions concerning the availability of U.S. Tobacco employee witnesses, (9) matters relating to jury instructions relating to predatory versus restrictive conduct and an instruction on nominal damages.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT 1

ARGUMENT 6

I. U.S. TOBACCO IS ENTITLED TO JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW 6

A. The Evidence is Insufficient to Establish that U.S. Tobacco Possesses Monopoly Power in a Relevant Market 7

B. Conwood Did Not Prove U.S. Tobacco Used Monopoly Power or Engaged in Anything But Ordinary Business Conduct 10

1. Proof of Intent To Eliminate Rivals or Dominate the Marketplace Is Not Sufficient to Support Liability 10

2. The Antitrust Laws Require Proof of a Use of Monopoly Power 14

3. Suggestions Regarding Product Mix and Space Allocations 17

(a) Shelf Space Recommendations 17

(b) U.S. Tobacco's Requests That Retailers Provide Share of Shelf Space Equal To Its Share of "Market" (SOF=SOM) Is Not Exclusionary 19

4. The Offering and Provision of Exclusive Display Racks 23

16diii005364

5. CAP and Other Incentive/Promotional Programs 27

6. U.S. Tobacco's Alleged Tortious Conduct In The Field Is Not Exclusionary Under Section 2 33

C. CONWOOD DID NOT ESTABLISH OVERALL HARM TO THE MOIST SNUFF MARKET, OR HARM TO ITSELF 37

1. Conwood Did Not Establish Harm to Competition 37

2. In any Event, Conwood's "Evidence" of Injury To Itself Is Insufficient as a Matter of Law 41

D. CONWOOD FAILED TO ESTABLISH CAUSATION 42

1. The Independent, Uncoerced Decisions of Retailers 44

2. Other Factors In The Marketplace 46

(a) Increased Competition From U.S. Tobacco and Other Competitors 47

(b) Conwood's Failure To Compete 49

E. DR. LEFTWICH'S DAMAGES ESTIMATES WERE MERE SPECULATION AND GUESSWORK 50

1. Dr. Leftwich's Analysis Does Not Reflect Lost Sales, But Merely Makes Assumptions About Lost Share 51

2. Dr. Leftwich's Analysis Is Based On Assumptions That Are Unreliable As a Matter Of Law 53

16diii005365

3. Dr. Leftwich Does Not Attribute Damages To Specific Acts of Defendants 55

4. Dr. Leftwich Improperly Relied On Faulty Data and Conwood Surveys Created Solely For Litigation 58

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Defendants UST Inc., et al. ("U.S. Tobacco"), respectfully request that the Court direct entry of judgment as a matter of law in favor of U.S. Tobacco pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

After less than four hours of deliberation, the jury in this case returned an astonishing verdict for Conwood which, after trebling, is one of the largest damages awards in the history of the antitrust laws.[1] The jury reached that result in the face of undisputed evidence that U.S. Tobacco –

[1] The only larger post-trebling award of which U.S. Tobacco is aware is the initial $1.8 billion verdict in MCI Communications v. AT&T, 708 F.2d 1081 (7th Cir. 1982), an award that was overturned on appeal based on unsupportable assumptions in plaintiff's damages analysis as well as the failure of plaintiff's expert to dissaggregate the effects on plaintiff caused by lawful competition and other factors. Id. at 1159-68. The overwhelming majority of other Section 2 cases, which involve well-established abuses of monopoly power, involve awards in the of tens of millions to $150 million dollar range after trebling. In short, this Court is dealing with an unprecedented award that, for reasons described in detail below, warrants close and careful scrutiny.

whatever its "intent" – engages only in ordinary business practices that are available to all moist snuff manufacturers and, indeed, are fundamental to the efficient operation of the manufacturer/retailer relationship across all consumer product categories.

The jury also reached that result in the face of undisputed evidence that the moist snuff "market" was more competitive during the 1990s than in prior years, growing substantially in terms of both the number and variety of products, and in terms of overall sales. Indeed, it is undisputed that the most recent entrants into the moist snuff marketplace, Swedish Match and Swisher, grew rapidly in the 1990s – through the introduction of price-value brands – and that Conwood's sales and substantial profits also grew continuously and without interruption during this alleged period of marketwide competitive harm.

Finally, the jury reached its verdict relying on a damages expert who concededly never attempted to measure any actual lost sales resulting from U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct; never attempted to link damages to any particular "exclusionary" conduct; never considered the effects on Conwood sales of "independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers," which this Court specifically highlighted as important in its summary judgment opinion; never considered the effects on Conwood sales from the dramatic growth of competitive products such as Swedish Match's Timberwolf brand; and, in fact, offered a damages analysis that would not change if some or even all of U.S. Tobacco's conduct were found to be lawful. Indeed, by his own admission, all Dr. Leftwich did in this case was construct a one-variable "regression" model that was consistent with the "hypothesis" that U.S. Tobacco's misconduct – however defined – kept Conwood's share low in the 1990s in states where its share had already been low prior to 1990. He did not analyze why or how those shares would have dramatically increased absent U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct.

Equally important, he did not analyze why or how those shares had come to be so low prior to 1990 when, under Conwood's own theory, U.S. Tobacco's conduct was not substantially affecting Conwood's performance in the marketplace.

As a matter of law, this cursory analysis cannot stand as the basis of antitrust liability and does not constitute the type of "evidence" required to support a $1 billion antitrust award. On the contrary, if left to stand by this Court, the verdict and award would condemn the very process of competition itself in the retail industry, a process that the antitrust laws are supposed to foster no matter how rough it gets for individual competitors. It would also encourage more litigation aimed at stifling, rather than protecting, the competitive process. And, it would directly contravene the directive of the Supreme Court and the Sixth Circuit to exercise caution in condemning unilateral conduct under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. As the Sixth Circuit explained in Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413 (6th Cir. 1990):

> [S]ection 2 "must be used with the greatest caution. Action that injures rivals may ultimately injure consumers, but it is also perfectly consistent with competition, and to deter aggressive conduct is to deter competition. . . . '[A]n efficient firm may capture unsatisfied customers from an inefficient rival, whose own ability to compete may suffer as a result. This is the rule of the marketplace and is precisely the sort of competition that promotes the consumer interests that the Sherman Act aims to foster.'"

Id. at 1422 (quoting Ball Mem'l Hosp., Inc. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., Inc., 784 F.2d 1325, 1338 (7th Cir. 1986) (quoting Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 767 (1984))).

If the verdict and award in this case had truly been about redressing harm to the "rule of the marketplace" – the competitive process – then there would have been sufficient evidence that U.S. Tobacco had the power to control prices and exclude competition in a relevant market. There was not. There would have been sufficient evidence that U.S. Tobacco actually used monopoly power by engaging in predatory and exclusionary conduct rather than normal competitive behavior, albeit "unsavory" or "unfair" from Conwood's perspective. There was not. There would have been sufficient evidence that any exclusionary conduct harmed overall competition in the relevant market. There was not; in fact, the evidence strongly supported just the opposite conclusion. There would have been substantial evidence that Conwood actually suffered harm flowing from injury to competition rather than from retailer decisions and other causes. There was not. And, finally, there would have been sufficient evidence and expert testimony supporting a fair and reasonable measure of damages without resort to speculation and guesswork. Again, there was not.

On the contrary, it became obvious early in the case that Conwood's "evidence" would be less about attempting to establish these essential Section 2 elements and more about trying to make the jury detest U.S. Tobacco executives and employees, including those who testified (live and by videotape) and those whom Conwood elected not to depose yet condemned extensively for their absence at trial. Indeed, as presented to the jury, this case began and ended with the impressions created by a string of expert witnesses who essentially read portions of documents to the jury and offered ungrounded "interpretations" that were unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco and, ultimately, to the integrity of the trial itself. In fact, the relevant antitrust issues were effectively discarded by the third day of trial in favor of a single inquiry bearing little relationship to the substance in this case: that is, whether U.S. Tobacco's documents and testimony demonstrated malevolence toward Conwood and other competitors in the retail marketplace. That, however, is not a concern of the antitrust laws.

By employing such a strategy, Conwood's counsel gave themselves the luxury of ignoring the very "marketplace" at issue in this case: the competition among moist snuff manufacturers to sell products to retailers and to place racks and POS in retail stores. Retailers are the customers of packaged goods manufacturers; therefore, retailers must be the focal point for assessing what is or is not a common, ordinary or desired marketing practice by manufacturers. Conwood, however, told the jury that it could and should simply ignore evidence relating to retailers in this case. Or, as counsel for Conwood put it to the jury during closing argument: "This case isn't about the stores." Tr. 3/28 at 51. Thus, Conwood essentially took the tack of not even challenging the overwhelming evidence that retailers desire innovative racks, including "exclusive" uniform racks from one manufacturer; that retailers expect and desire competition amongst manufacturers to provide suggestions and recommendations regarding space allocation, product selection and product and rack placement, including collaborative "category management" relationships with manufacturers; and that retailers do, in fact, make their own "independent, uncoerced decisions" after each manufacturer has had its chance to make its best sales pitch regarding what products, racks and POS should be displayed in the store.

In assessing whether to grant judgment as a matter of law, however, this Court must assess the undisputed evidence concerning these economic realities of the marketplace in which U.S. Tobacco, Conwood, and other companies operate. That means the retail environment is, indeed, critically important. For example, the Court must consider the unchallenged testimony about how retailers make decisions; about what U.S. Tobacco and all competitors do to influence those decisions as part of the normal competitive process; about what U.S. Tobacco does not and could not do to influence those decisions; about what retailers want, request, need, and demand from manufacturers; and about what U.S. Tobacco and other competitors do or do not do to meet those needs and desires. In short, had Conwood supported the elements of its antitrust case with proper economic evidence rather than emotional appeals to some vague notion of "fairness" foreign to the antitrust laws, its case would have been seen by the jury as the frontal attack on competition that it truly is. As it stands, the Court must now make that assessment.

ARGUMENT

I. U.S. TOBACCO IS ENTITLED TO JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

"If during a trial by jury a party has been fully heard on an issue and there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for that party on that issue, the court may determine the issue against that party and may grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law . . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a). Accordingly, judgment as a matter of law is warranted where (1) plaintiff presented insufficient evidence to meet its burden of proof; or (2) the evidence was sufficiently favorable to the defendant that no reasonable jury could have found for plaintiff on that issue.

In antitrust cases, the Court's role in considering judgment as a matter of law is especially significant:

> "In the antitrust context, determining what amount of evidence will support a jury verdict and assessing the quality of the evidence from which [an] inference of illegal action may be drawn takes on a special importance. For a number of reasons, 'antitrust law limits the range of permissible inferences from ambiguous evidence [in antitrust cases].' . . . Consequently, the court must closely scrutinize the evidence in a given case to avoid the danger of improper antitrust condemnations."

Applying these standards to the full trial record in this case, judgment as a matter of law is mandated for several separate and independent reasons.

- First, the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to establish that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power in a relevant market.
- Second, the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to establish that U.S. Tobacco engaged in any conduct that was a use of monopoly power rather than ordinary competitive methods available to all in the marketplace.
- Third, the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to establish that there was any harm to competition in the overall market.
- Fourth, the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to establish any harm to Conwood – with the requisite "reasonable certainty" or otherwise.
- Finally, the evidence presented at trial, including expert testimony, was insufficient to provide a basis upon which a reasonable jury could make a fair and reasonable estimate of antitrust damages.

Judgment as a matter of law on any one of these issues requires the entry of judgment in favor of U.S. Tobacco on Conwood's Sherman Act Section 2 claim.

A. The Evidence is Insufficient to Establish that U.S. Tobacco Possesses Monopoly Power in a Relevant Market

Conwood failed to establish that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power in a relevant antitrust market.[2] Monopoly power is the power to control prices or exclude competition. See Tarrant Serv. Agency, Inc. v. American Standard, Inc., 12 F.3d 609, 615-16 (6th Cir. 1993) (affirming grant of judgment as a matter of law after adverse jury verdict because plaintiff did not

[2] Conwood also failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that the relevant market for antitrust purposes included only moist snuff products. Conwood offered no economic analysis concerning the substitutability of various smokeless tobacco products. Moreover, an independent third-party competitor, called by Conwood, testified that the relevant market included all smokeless tobacco products. Tr. 3/7 at 259-60. Even Conwood's own National Sales Manager recognized that U.S. Tobacco targets its promotions at loose leaf customers and that, as a result, consumers switch to moist snuff. See Tr. 3/10 at 102.

demonstrate that defendant had the power to control prices or exclude competition in a relevant market). As the Court instructed the jury, factors that should have been considered in determining whether U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power included: (1) the trend in U.S. Tobacco's market share; (2) the number and size of U.S. Tobacco's competitors; (3) the trend in the market shares of U.S. Tobacco's competitors; and (4) entry into and exit from the market by other companies. See Tr. 3/28 at 103.[3]

It is well-established that where, as here, there is undisputed evidence of entry and expansion by other competitors, a plaintiff cannot establish that the defendant had the power to exclude competition. See Omega Envt'l, Inc. v. Gilbarco, Inc., 127 F.3d 1157, 1164 (9th Cir. 1997) (fact that new competitor entered the market during the relevant period and grew from a 6% to 8% market share precluded finding that exclusive dealing contracts were an entry barrier that foreclosed competition), cert. denied, 119 S. Ct. 46 (1998); Barr Labs., Inc. v. Abbott Labs., 978 F.2d 98, 113-15 (3d Cir. 1992) (increased number of manufacturers of erythromycin over six-year period compelled finding of no significant entry barriers at summary judgment stage) (following International Distrib. Ctrs., Inc. v. Walsh Trucking Co., 812 F.2d 786, 792 (2d Cir. 1987)). Similarly, consistent with the Court's instruction to the jury, the ability to control prices and exclude competition cannot exist in a market characterized by increased price competition and a defendant's declining market share. See Magnus Petroleum Co. v. Skelly Oil Co., 599 F.2d 196, 201-02 (7th Cir. 1979) (plaintiff's concession that the market was characterized by numerous price wars and evidence

[3] While a firm's market share may be one factor to consider, it is not sufficient to establish monopoly power. See Richter Concrete Corp. v. Hilltop Concrete Corp., 691 F.2d 818, 826-27 (6th Cir. 1982) ("Market share alone . . . is not enough to determine a firm's capacity to achieve monopoly. The real test is whether [defendant] possessed sufficient market power to achieve its aims.") (citation omitted).

that defendant's share of the market decreased during the relevant period confirmed that defendant's "competitors were not foreclosed significantly from the retail market").[4]

Applying these factors here, the uncontroverted evidence in this case established that U.S. Tobacco did not have the ability to exclude competition or control prices. On the contrary, it is undisputed that: (1) all manufacturers were able to, and in fact did, introduce new products and gain distribution for those products, Tr. 3/23 at 52-55 (DX 28); Tr. 3/20 at Coatney, pp. 98-100 (Conwood marketing department reported in 1997 that Conwood had achieved "too much distribution" on secondary brand); (2) price competition increased, both through increased promotional activities by all competitors, as well as through the introduction and rapid expansion of the price-value segment, Tr. 3/7 at 276-81; Tr. 3/23 at 55-57; (3) the overall market continued to grow in terms of total sales, Tr. 3/23 at 46-48 (DX 3); (4) all moist snuff manufacturers increased sales and profits, Tr. 3/23 at 48-49 (DX 9); and (5) U.S. Tobacco's sales share – and only U.S. Tobacco's sales share – declined, while the sales share of all other moist snuff companies increased, Tr. 3/23 at 20-21; 60-63; 69 (DX 12).[5]

Conwood offered no evidence that U.S. Tobacco was able to prevent entry into the market. Conwood offered no evidence that U.S. Tobacco was able to prevent the expansion of Conwood,

[4] The fact that the defendant has increased prices on its own products and has high profit margins cannot, standing alone, provide the basis to establish the ability to control prices and exclude competition. Indeed, under that criteria, Conwood would also have monopoly power because Conwood sells its products at the same prices as USTC does and enjoys comparable profit margins. See Tr. 3/23 at 59-60 (evidence demonstrates that Conwood chose to increase prices in line with U.S. Tobacco rather than compete on price).

[5] See Richter Concrete, 691 F.2d at 826 ("The fact that [defendant's] share of the market was declining also belies whatever inference of capacity to monopolize that may be drawn from the size of its market share.").

16diii005379

Swisher, or Swedish Match through their introduction of new products. Conwood offered no evidence whatsoever that U.S. Tobacco was able to control prices by eliminating promotions, by reducing output of moist snuff, or by preventing the growth of the price-value segment. Indeed, the undisputed evidence is that retailers were at all times free to decide what products to carry, whether or not to offer price-value brands, and whether or not to offer any variety of new products and promotions they desired. Tr. 2/29 at 216-17 (Conwood's Chairman testified that retailers invariably retained the right to make final decisions). Irrespective of U.S. Tobacco's "intent," these uncontroverted market facts establish that there was no evidentiary basis to find that U.S. Tobacco possessed monopoly power in the moist snuff "market."

B. Conwood Did Not Prove U.S. Tobacco Used Monopoly Power or Engaged in Anything But Ordinary Business Conduct

1. Proof of Intent To Eliminate Rivals or Dominate the Marketplace Is Not Sufficient to Support Liability

In considering whether Conwood offered sufficient evidence of "exclusionary" conduct by U.S. Tobacco, it is important, as a threshold matter, to remember what cannot suffice to prove such conduct – the mere intent to injure competitors, to maintain share or even to dominate the marketplace. The Sixth Circuit has reiterated the well-established principle that it is not "exclusionary" for an alleged monopolist to compete vigorously, even if its objective is to "injure" its rivals and maintain or increase its market share. As the court explained in Langenderfer:

> "[C]ompetition is a ruthless process. A firm that reduces costs and expands sales injures rivals – sometimes fatally. The firm that slashes costs the most captures the greatest sales and inflicts the greatest injury. The deeper the injury to rivals, the greater the potential benefit. These injuries to rivals are by-products of vigorous competition, and the antitrust laws are not balm for the rivals' wounds."

Langenderfer, 917 F.2d at 1422 (emphasis added) (quoting Ball Mem. Hosp., Inc. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., Inc., 784 F.2d 1325, 1338 (7th Cir. 1986)). While the Langenderfer court made those comments in the context of aggressive pricing, it is no less true in the context of non-price competition. See Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 524-26 (5th Cir. 1999) (competition through attempts to persuade customers using biased bidding specifications).

Indeed, "[t]he intent to achieve or maintain a monopoly is no more unlawful than the possession of a monopoly." Burris v. Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co., 935 F.2d 1469, 1481 (7th Cir. 1991). Accordingly, a monopolist is free, as a matter of law, to devise strategies and programs specifically aimed at maintaining its monopoly as long as they are practices that smaller competitors can or do use as well. See Telex Corp. v. IBM Corp., 510 F.2d 894, 904, 926-28 (10th Cir. 1975) (reversing district court that had based Section 2 liability on IBM's specific scheme to use long-term leasing arrangements to suppress competition and maintain its monopoly); see also Trace X Chem. Inc. v. Canadian Indus., Ltd., 738 F.2d 261, 265-67 (8th Cir. 1984) ("ordinary business practices" and "ordinary commercial conduct" cannot support Section 2 liability even assuming express anticompetitive intent; Section 2 must be based on anticompetitive "behavior" rather the valid exercise of business judgment). It is only the use of monopoly power without any valid business purpose that can violate Section 2. Trace X, 738 F.2d at 266.

For these reasons, courts have long held that the "intent" to harm a competitor or maintain a monopoly cannot "transform" otherwise legitimate business activities into monopolistic conduct. Trace X, 738 F.2d at 268. As Judge Easterbrook observed: "Who says that competition is supposed to be fair, that we judge the behavior of the marketplace by the ethics of the courtroom? Real competition is bruising rivalry, in which people go out of business under intense pressure....

[C]ompetition is a 'gale of creative destruction.'" Fishman v. Estate of Wirtz, 807 F.2d 520, 577 (7th Cir. 1986) (Easterbrook, J., dissenting). Similarly, the Sixth Circuit has made very clear that "what should matter is not the monopolist's state of mind, but the overall impact of the monopolist's practices." Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 860 (6th Cir. 1979); see also Ball Mem'l Hosp., Inc. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., Inc., 784 F.2d 1325, 1338-39 (7th Cir. 1986) ("'[I]ntent to harm rivals' is not a useful standard in antitrust. . . . Vigorous competitors intend to harm rivals, to do all the business if they can. To penalize this intent is to penalize competition.").

For these reasons, courts routinely reject as a matter of law antitrust claims that are premised on "bad" intent as reflected in a defendant's internal business documents. See, e.g. Pacific Express, Inc. v. United Airlines, Inc., 959 F.2d 814, 817 (9th Cir. 1992)("'Direct evidence of intent to vanquish a rival in an honest competitive struggle cannot help to establish an antitrust violation.'") (citation omitted); Ocean State Physicians Health Plan, Inc. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 883 F.2d 1101, 1113 (1st Cir. 1989) (defendant's president's "none-too-polite . . . desire to emasculate" plaintiff and put it out of business was "irrelevant"; defendant was "no more guilty of an antitrust violation than a boxer who delivers a perfectly legal punch – hoping that it will kill his opponent – is guilty of attempted murder."); Taylor Publ'g Co. v. Jostens, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 2d 360, 368-72 (E.D. Tex. 1999) (intent to monopolize market and evidence of deception could not establish the requisite "predatory conduct" under Section 2); Delaware & Hudson Ry. Co. v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 724 F. Supp. 1073, 1077 (N.D.N.Y. 1989) ("'[T]he desire to crush a competitor, standing alone, is insufficient to make out a violation of the antitrust laws.'") (quoting Ocean State Physicians, 883 F.2d at 1113), rev'd on other grounds, 902 F.2d 174 (2d Cir. 1990).

Equally important, Section 2 liability cannot be based on ordinary business practices that are carried out unfairly or even fraudulently. See, e.g., Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., No. 98-3732, 98-4042, 2000 WL 303035, at *2 (8th Cir. Mar. 24, 2000) (no Section 2 liability in face of evidence that defendant "fraudulently concealed" special deals with certain of its customers); Taylor Publ'g Co. v. Jostens, 36 F. Supp. 2d at 368-69 ("sham pricing" scheme was best characterized as fraud or misrepresentation not predatory conduct). Otherwise, any alleged tortious or unfair conduct, no matter how ordinary the business or marketing practice involved, could form the basis of Section 2 liability, essentially federalizing state tort law. See, e.g., Havoco of America Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 557-58 (7th Cir. 1980).

Conwood's evidence in this case was all about U.S. Tobacco's "intent" and allegedly tortious conduct, rather than whether U.S. Tobacco's actual marketing practices were uses of monopoly power or anything other than ordinary competitive practices in the retail industry. In Judge Easterbrook's words, Conwood was successful in having the jury assess U.S. Tobacco's internal documents according to the "ethics of the courtroom" rather than the "bruising rivalry" of the marketplace. To be sure, it may have been troubling for the jury to hear about "eliminating competitive distribution"; it may have been offensive for the jury to hear about "using exclusive vending to control competition"; and it was probably overwhelming for the jury to see a U.S. Tobacco sales representative reporting "F_ _ k Conwood!" That clearly was Conwood's intended effect in parading these documents in front of the jury, an effect that obviously was achieved. It would be inviting reversible error, however, for Conwood now to suggest that these types of documents, rather than U.S. Tobacco's actual marketing practices and programs, can support the jury's finding of Section 2 liability. And, as described below, stripped of Conwood's counsels' and Conwood's experts' incendiary, if uninformed, characterizations of U.S. Tobacco's documents and employee testimony, the trial record contains no evidence that U.S. Tobacco used any monopoly power or engaged in any pervasive conduct that was outside the normal boundaries of competition in the retail industry.

2. The Antitrust Laws Require Proof of a Use of Monopoly Power

In sharp contrast to mere evidence of anticompetitive intent, Section 2 of the Sherman Act requires proof that the defendant in fact used monopoly power in the marketplace to harm competition. By "use" of monopoly power, courts require proof of conduct that is "'possible or effective only if taken by a firm that dominates its smaller rivals.'" Langenderfer, 917 F.2d at 1428 (quoting Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 275 (2d Cir. 1979)). That is, the defendant must in fact employ practices > that would not be considered profit maximizing except for the expectation that (1) actual rivals will be driven from the market, or the entry of potential rivals blocked or delayed, so that the predator will gain or retain a market share sufficient to command monopoly profits, or (2) rivals will be chastened sufficiently to abandon competitive behavior the predator finds threatening to its realization of monopoly profits.

Neumann v. Reinforced Earth Co., 786 F.2d 424, 427 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (emphasis added). For example, a use of monopoly power may be supported with evidence that the defendant "coerced" customers into accepting products or programs that were not desired. See, e.g., R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp.2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999) (preliminary injunction issued where retailers testified that Philip Morris incentive program was coercive and left them with no alternative but to comply in order to receive large conditional promotional monies)[6]; LePage's Inc.

v. 3M, No. CIV. A. 97-3983, 1999 WL 346223 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999) (economically coercive program requiring the complete exclusion of competitive products); see also Tr. 3/23 at 35 (expert testimony distinguishing Conwood's allegations from "long-term contracts" with "a substantial percentage of the stores" that "foreclose the ability of competitors to compete"). A use of monopoly power also can be supported with evidence that the conduct lacks any legitimate business justification whatsoever. See, e.g., Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 588-95, 605-11 (1985) (refusal to deal, after long course of cooperation, with no efficiency justification or normal business purpose).

As a matter of law, conduct that would make economic sense for smaller firms in the marketplace, or is a common business practice in the industry, cannot be a use of monopoly power or "predatory." See Northeastern Tel. Co. v. AT&T Co., 651 F.2d 76, 93 (2d Cir. 1981) (two-tier pricing system created to maintain market share and "lock in" customers could not violate Section 2 and could not be exclusionary because it was an "'ordinary marketing method []'" and because it was not "'possible or effective only if taken by a firm that dominates its smaller rivals'") (citations omitted); Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line, 935 F.2d at 1481-82.

Recognizing that it could not meet its burden of proof on this fundamental Section 2 requirement, Conwood offered the jury prejudicial rhetoric rather than evidence of a use of monopoly power by U.S. Tobacco. Specifically, Conwood argued to the jury that U.S. Tobacco was an "800 pound gorilla" wielding monopoly power to harm Conwood – a suggestion made no fewer also testified in this case that U.S. Tobacco's CAP program was not coercive, that the amount of dollars offered through CAP was "not worthy" of any extra effort to comply, and that the CAP program was in sharp contrast to the incentive program offered by Philip Morris. 16diii005385 than 28 times during opening and closing. While Conwood was obviously effective in making the jury believe that U.S. Tobacco acted like a large, wild animal in the marketplace, there is no concrete evidence in the record to support any such assertion. Conwood did not offer any evidence that U.S. Tobacco threatened, coerced, refused to deal, or engaged in any other conduct implicating its alleged monopoly power with any retail customer. In fact, Conwood's own economic expert, Dr. Kamien, conceded that U.S. Tobacco did not coerce retailers. Tr. 3/3 at 65-67. Nevertheless, he testified that U.S. Tobacco's mere size was intimidation enough. Tr.3/3 at 76-77. That, too, is an invitation to error: permitting a jury to infer a "use" of monopoly power based solely on a defendant's alleged status as a monopolist is to suggest a per se standard for Section 2 liability, a notion no court would ever entertain.

Conwood's only remaining argument is that U.S. Tobacco used monopoly power by taking part in the competitive process itself, but with bad intent and allegedly "unfair" or "deceptive" tactics. As described below, however, each of the practices challenged by Conwood is a standard industry practice and a normal part of business dealings between manufacturers and retailers. And any ruling that these practices can be considered predatory under Section 2, for example, because they were done "unfairly" or too aggressively for Conwood's liking, would either condemn the very essence of competition in the retail industry or, at a minimum, federalize state tort law with an open invitation for competitors of "monopolists" to seek treble damages for every type of tortious conduct they can imagine. Conwood's intent to achieve this result was starkly revealed by its decision to drop its tort claim against U.S. Tobacco, leaving the jury only one liability option.

3. Suggestions Regarding Product Mix and Space Allocations

(a) Shelf Space Recommendations

The antitrust laws do not prevent a competitor – no matter what its size or market share – from making shelf space recommendations to retailers. In Jays Foods, Inc. v. Frito-Lay, Inc., 664 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ill. 1987), aff'd mem., 860 F.2d 1082 (7th Cir. 1988), the court held that it was not "anticompetitive" or exclusionary for Frito-Lay to make shelf-space recommendations to retailers, even where Frito-Lay allegedly presented retailers with "misleading" and "incomplete" shelf-space studies. Granting summary judgment to Frito-Lay, the court found that competition to influence shelf space decisions of retailers was "'normal commercial behavior'" in the grocery industry. 664 F. Supp. at 370 ((emphasis added) quoting Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8, 277 (1982) (statement of Commissioner Clanton)). The court found that, absent a coercive exclusive dealing agreement with retailers, and even in the face of "overzealous" documents, Frito-Lay's conduct was not "exclusionary":

> The documents [plaintiff] relies on show that Frito-Lay is a hard-nosed, arguably over-zealous competitor. They do not, however, support the inference that Frito-Lay's shelf-space practices were exclusionary. There is nothing in the record, for example, indicating that [retailers were] contractually bound to deal only with Frito-Lay, that Frito-Lay was able to coerce [retailers] into some sort of exclusive arrangement, or that Frito-Lay was otherwise able to prevent [retailers] from dealing with Frito-Lay's competitors.

664 F. Supp. at 371 (emphasis added). Again, the proper focus is on conduct, not intent. See Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129, 1133-36 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (shelf-space recommendations made as part of shelf-space incentive program was "a commonplace tool for competitors"; even in the face of allegedly misleading presentations, retailers were free not to participate in the program; also plaintiff could implement its own competing program; in such circumstances there could be no "injury to competition") (emphasis added); Stearns Airport Equip., 170 F.3d at 524-26, 536 (affirming summary judgment in favor of defendants on Section 2 claim where manufacturer excluded competitor by convincing municipalities to adopt specifications in its favor).

Nothing in the record of this trial would distinguish the conduct in this case from the conduct in the Frito Lay cases. Whether in the context of category management or otherwise, U.S. Tobacco's attempts to influence retailer decisions about product selection and space allocation are core aspects of competition in the packaged goods industry and have been for many decades. This fact was readily conceded by Conwood's Chairman, William Rosson; its National Sales Manager, Terry Williams; and the head of sales for Swedish Match, Harold Price. See Tr. 2/29 at 157-59, 163-65; Tr. 3/10 at 93, 109, 115-17; Tr. 3/7 at 274-76, 286-87. 289-90. Category management experts for both parties also agreed that recommendations regarding space and assortment are standard industry practices. See Tr. 3/16 at 20-24; Tr. 3/14 at 63-67. Further, all of the evidence in this case regarding competition for shelf space confirms that U.S. Tobacco, Conwood, and other companies participate in this intense competition, albeit with the usual accusations of unfair and misleading tactics. Notably, Conwood, like U.S. Tobacco, has documents that tout the victories of its sales force in these daily competitive struggles. See, e.g., DX 613, DX 625, DX 688, DX 790, DX 808, DX 888, DX 934. According to Mr. Rosson, claims by Conwood sales persons that they had eliminated competitive distribution was just "competition." See Tr. 2/29 at 163 (DX 688), 164-65 (DX 888) ("It happens everyday, somebody gets discontinued.").

Accordingly, if the Court were to permit Section 2 liability to stand on evidence of U.S. Tobacco's "influence" over retailers, then the Court would in fact be condemning U.S. Tobacco for its size or market share alone. See, e.g., Telex Corp., 510 F.2d at 902, 904. Moreover, it would reward Conwood threefold for its failure to participate more effectively in this fundamental aspect of competition in the retail industry.

(b) U.S. Tobacco's Requests That Retailers Provide Share Of Shelf Space Equal To Its Share Of "Market"(SOF=SOM) Is Not Exclusionary

Conwood also has launched a frontal attack on U.S. Tobacco's "pursuit" of SOF=SOM. Conwood, of course, failed to prove that U.S. Tobacco ever required retailers to agree to this space-allocation strategy, and it is undisputed that U.S. Tobacco never achieved any such space allocation goal in the overall marketplace. See Tr. 3/23 at 29-30 (large manufacturers request SOF-SOM; none get it); Tr. 3/16 at 24-25 (no evidence that SOF=SOM was ever required; retailers would not accept any such requirement from a manufacturer). The inquiry for the Court, however, is whether the pursuit or even the achievement of SOF=SOM, assuming U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power, would be an unlawful use of that power under the antitrust laws. Again, as a matter of law, the answer is a resounding "no."

Whether seeking SOF=SOM is anticompetitive or "exclusionary" is not a question of first impression. Such an ordinary marketing practice as SOF=SOM has long been accepted as procompetitive conduct that promotes the efficient allocation of shelf space to products that are profitable for retailers because they are products desired by consumers. For example, in Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8 (1982), the Administrative Law Judge expressly found that space-to-sales marketing strategies were well-established methods used by retailers to avoid out-of-stocks and overstocks. As the ALJ explained nearly two decades ago:

> Kellogg did not invent the principle of allocating shelf space by sales volume. Sales volume is, and has been, the basic method of space allocation throughout grocery stores. A retailer's profitability is directly related to its sales turnover. The allocation of shelf space according to sales volume reduces the likelihood that a product will be out of stock, maximizes turnover and return on investment and minimizes lost sales and lost profits both to the retailer and the manufacturer.

Id. at 144 (emphasis added) (citation omitted) (vacated on other grounds and complaint dismissed by final order). Again, the ALJ did not determine that such conduct is merely "passable" or "not exclusionary"; the ALJ determined that such conduct is procompetitive. To this day, in fact, Kellogg still pursues the same objectives at retail. See Tr. 3/16 at 24.

Soon after the Kellogg decision, the Fifth Circuit, in Bayou Bottling, Inc. v. Dr. Pepper Co., 725 F.2d 300 (5th Cir. 1984), held that it cannot constitute antitrust injury for Dr. Pepper actually to obtain, never mind pursue, shelf space according to its sales levels. Upholding summary judgment for defendants, the court explained:

> [Plaintiff] acknowledges that store owners apportion their shelf space on the basis of sales . . . . But [plaintiff] implies an antitrust injury and suggests an entitlement to more shelf space than its market share would justify. The district court correctly rejected this asserted antitrust injury.

725 F.2d at 304. The record in this case confirms that Conwood, in the words of the Bayou Bottling court, believes it has "an entitlement to more shelf space than its market share would justify." Id. Indeed, Counsel for Conwood elicited testimony from Dr. Kamien that all competitors, including Conwood, should be allocated shelf space equal to U.S. Tobacco's, despite the fact that U.S. Tobacco products outsell Conwood products by a magnitude of 5 or 6 to 1. See Tr. 3/1 at 79. Under Bayou Bottling, such an entitlement theory cannot form the basis of Conwood's claim of antitrust injury.

Bayou Bottling was followed by Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129 (S.D.N.Y. 1986). Frito-Lay had a specific incentive program ("TOP") to pay retailers guaranteed profits if they brought Frito-Lay's share of shelf space up to its share of sales. Moreover, Frito-Lay expressly "recommended that the additional shelf space to be allocated to its products come from space previously allocated to competitors." Id. at 1132. A number of Frito-Lay's key accounts – large chain grocery stores – signed up for the TOP program.

Finding that Frito-Lay was doing nothing more than attempting to "increase its shelf space in those stores that did not have space-to-sales allocated shelves," the court ruled that this was ordinary marketing activity. Id. at 1134. Moreover, the court ruled that space-to-sales shelf allocation was procompetitive and therefore Bachman could not establish antitrust injury absent proof that, as a result of TOP, Frito-Lay "obtained a greater share of shelf space than that equivalent to its share of the market or, conversely, that [Bachman]'s percentage of shelf space fell below its market share." Id. Finally, recognizing the significance of retailer choice, which Conwood told the jury to ignore, the court held that Bachman would also need to prove that the TOP program was not optional, but rather resulted from "coercive or threatening behavior." Id. (emphasis added).

Following this well-established line of authority, the court in Jays Foods rejected a claim that Frito-Lay violated the antitrust laws by seeking – again, through alleged deception of retailers – SOF=SOM. See Jays Foods, 664 F. Supp. at 367-72. Specifically, plaintiff alleged that "Frito-Lay urged retailers to allocate shelf space based on total snack food sales but . . . failed to use the shelf space . . . in a profit maximizing manner [and presented] retailers with misleading and incomplete shelf-space studies." Id. at 366. The court held, as a matter of law, that such shelf space

"tactics" were part of the competition for shelf space and, in fact, were practiced by plaintiff as well. Id. at 370-71. Accordingly, the court granted summary judgment in favor of Frito-Lay. Id. at 372.[7]

Nothing in this case distinguishes U.S. Tobacco's activities from those recognized as ordinary, procompetitive marketing activities in the above-cited antitrust cases. U.S. Tobacco therefore is perfectly entitled to seek SOF=SOM, even at the "expense" of what Conwood and other companies in the marketplace may believe to be their entitlement to equal space. Any pursuit of that goal by U.S. Tobacco, therefore, is part of competition itself, not anticompetitive or "exclusionary" conduct, see Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. at 144. It is a normal business practice aimed at achieving a normal business objective, even if it may result in less space for a competitor's products. As the Fifth Circuit stated in Stearns Airport Equipment:

> [T]he business justification – independent of harm to competitors – for [defendant's] actions is obvious: it was trying to sell its product. While [plaintiff] may feel very much aggrieved at their success, the tactics it complains of were all fairly simple attempts to generate sales by "touting the virtues" of its bridges. "Acts which are ordinary business practices typical of those used in a competitive market do not constitute anti-competitive conduct violative of Section 2."

170 F.3d at 524 (quoting Trace-X Chem., 738 F.2d at 266).

Here, again, the only way to convert any efforts by U.S. Tobacco to achieve SOF=SOM into a Section 2 violation would be to deprive U.S. Tobacco of using, without coercion, this standard marketing practice that has been used for decades by all types of manufacturers in the retail industry, and that remains one of the common efficiency-enhancing tools in the retail industry for deciding what products are carried in stores.

[7] The Jay Foods court also held that plaintiffs could not establish anticompetitive effects based on the theory that Frito-Lay failed to maximize its own profits in arranging its shelf space displays, analogizing this conduct to a firm giving larger discounts than cost savings would justify, but without engaging in predatory pricing. See 664 F. Supp. at 372.

4. The Offering And Provision Of Exclusive Display Racks

The undisputed evidence offered at trial also establishes that many retailers – often large chains – do not want to use multiple racks for merchandising moist snuff products. See, e.g., Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 22; Tr. 3/15 at Walden, pp. 16-17; see also PX 84 ("Beth Schommer, the VP at Wal-Mart, is very much in favor of eliminating the extra vendors and garbage POS that exists today . . . ."). Whether it be aesthetics, logistical considerations when performing a reset, better use of space, or just wanting everything in one place, the evidence is uncontroverted that many retailers prefer a single rack provided by one moist snuff manufacturer. See Tr. 2/28 at 210 (Conwood sales representative testified that retailers want uniformity); Tr. 3/10 at 88-89; 135-36 (DX 856); Tr. 3/10 at Stevens, pp. 11-13 (retailer testified that she "didn't care" for the "big conglomeration" of little racks, so she opted for one exclusive rack from Conwood). It also is undisputed that retailers prefer single merchandising set-ups in other categories as well. See Tr. 3/14 at 105 (retailer testifying that he prefers to use display provided by Oral B for all toothbrushes); see also Tr. 3/16 at 27-29; Tr. 3/23 at 30-34. These are market realities that cannot be denied, or ignored, by manufacturers or reasonable juries or courts.

It is not surprising, then, that all moist snuff companies can and do participate in the competition either to offer a uniform rack or to try to persuade the retailer to use multiple racks. For those manufactures that choose to offer a uniform rack, the competition to supply an "exclusive" rack is won by the company that devotes the most time, effort, and resources to meeting a particular retailer's needs. See, e.g., Tr. 3/10 at 88-90 (DX 856) (Swisher wins rack placement at all K-Mart stores with innovative two-tier rack system.). Further, to the extent that exclusive racks lead to exclusive header cards in some instances, that too cannot violate Section 2. See Beverage

Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp. 1144, 1146, 1155-56 (S.D. Ohio 1986) (exclusive advertising arrangement could not violate Sections 1 or 2 where plaintiffs were free to use same ordinary marketing methods; Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act do not equate "business frustrations stemming from rival's competitive practices with violations of the antitrust laws").[8]

There is absolutely no evidence in the record that U.S. Tobacco does anything to exclude competitors from the competitive process with respect to the development or placement of moist snuff racks. There is no evidence that U.S. Tobacco coerces retailers into rack selection in any manner, or that it enters into any agreements that preclude retailers from choosing another competitor's rack or using multiple racks at any time. On the contrary, even Conwood's primary example – Wal-Mart – accepted presentations by Swisher and Swedish Match and considered using those companies' uniform racks, see Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 104, 143; Tr. 3/9 at Renfro, pp. 50-51. In fact, the uncontroverted testimony from Wal-Mart is that if Conwood were to offer a rack tomorrow that better served Wal-Mart's needs, there would be nothing preventing Wal-Mart from switching racks immediately. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 24. That too, precludes a finding of exclusionary conduct under Section 2 as a matter of law. See Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035, at *21 (Section 2 could not be violated by discount scheme tied to market share where retail customers were free to walk away at any time and at times did so).

[8] It should also be noted that Conwood did not offer a single piece of evidence indicating that U.S. Tobacco required any retailers to accept U.S. Tobacco's "exclusive" header cards. To the contrary, every witness who was asked testified that U.S. Tobacco requests, but does not require, U.S. Tobacco POS materials on U.S. Tobacco racks. See, e.g, Tr. 3/15 at 46-47, 54-55, 59-60. Accordingly, this case is unlike RJR or 3M where substantial numbers of retail customers were in fact economically "locked in" to certain programs that excluded competitors. Where, however, there are no such "golden handcuffs," and customers are free to deal with other suppliers, Section 2 cannot be violated as a matter of law. See Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035, at *21.

Given this competition, evidence that U.S. Tobacco actually sought to place uniform racks in some retail chains does not make the conduct "exclusionary," even if Conwood could have proven that the intent was to harm Conwood, maintain share, or "control" competition. U.S. Tobacco is free to engage in this ordinary and important aspect of competition, even if one of the benefits is to gain a competitive advantage in the display of its products; that is the nature and objective of competition on the merits. Likewise, reports from the field that state "we won exclusive vending" – "Excellent Job! Gary," see PX 68, do not make this competition anticompetitive. See Stearns Airport Equip., 170 F.3d at 524 n.4 ("[P]laintiff continually refers back to [defendant's] documents which indicate that [defendant] was aware that a certain specification would prevent [plaintiff] from bidding, and was pleased by this fact. Writing a memo saying that you are winning a competition on the merits does not change the fact that it is a competition on the merits."). The fact remains: the undisputed evidence offered at trial established that many retailers desire uniform racks and make the decision whether or not to use one. Manufacturers then compete either to offer a uniform rack or to try to persuade the retailer to use multiple racks.

In the context of this ongoing rack competition, Professor Gundlach's conclusions concerning U.S. Tobacco's so-called "exclusive agreements" ring especially hollow. First, even assuming that Professor Gundlach truly identified restrictive agreements, the retail locations implicated amount to little more than 7% of the total retail outlets that sell moist snuff (or, accepting Conwood's distinction between high and low volume stores, 14% of those high-volume locations). See Tr. 3/9 at 78-80, 117. Second, not a single document relied upon by Professor Gundlach demonstrates anything more than a retailer's consideration of all presentations made to it, and then making an independent, uncoerced decision to use a U.S. Tobacco rack. See Tr. 3/9 at 66-71, 77-85.

Third, not a single document relied upon by Professor Gundlach demonstrates any continuing obligation on behalf of any retailer to use U.S. Tobacco racks, and there is no retailer testimony to the contrary. See Tr. 3/9 at 66-71, 77-85. In the end, neither the documents relied upon by Professor Gundlach, nor his extremely limited "analysis," provided a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a jury to find any exclusion of Conwood from competing in the "market."

In sum, the evidence in this case regarding exclusive rack arrangements again confirms that Conwood is out to change the way many retailers wish to run their businesses. Conwood does not – "at present"– wish to enter the fray for developing uniform racks for those retailers who desire them. See Tr. 2/29 at 186-87 (Conwood Chairman testified that Conwood decided not to spend money on uniform racks to compete against Swisher and U.S. Tobacco); see also DX 671 (developing innovative racks "may force Conwood into the position of furnishing fixtures for all moist brands and, therefore, additionally increase our rack expenditures"); Tr. 3/10 at 80-81. Yet Conwood wants the Court to permit the jury to base antitrust liability on the decisions of retailers who simply wish to use U.S. Tobacco racks for their moist snuff sections. To permit liability to stand on that basis would be to condemn innovation itself, a core value protected by the antitrust laws. See California Computer Prods., Inc. v. IBM, 613 F.2d 727, 743-44 (9th Cir. 1979) (design changes to make products more attractive for buyers, including achieving better use of space, could not be predatory as a matter of law). It would also allow Conwood to be rewarded threefold for its own business decisions not to spend some of its $150 million per year in profits on rack innovation, and not to compete aggressively for rack placement like U.S. Tobacco and its other competitors.[9]

5. CAP and Other Incentive/Promotional Programs

Of similar ilk is Conwood's strained effort to demonstrate anticompetitive conduct by its characterization of U.S. Tobacco's Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") as exclusionary and unlawful. There is no reconciling this position with the case law directly on point or with the abundance of undisputed testimony by retailers that (1) the CAP program is not coercive, see, e.g., Tr. 3/15 at Walden pp. 57-60, 111; (2) the CAP program does not restrict in any way the way any retailer does business, see, e.g., Tr. 3/16 at Dill p.18; and (3) the CAP program is a typical incentive program offered by any number of manufacturers, regardless of size, in the retail industry, see, e.g., Tr. 3/15 at McGuire, p.26. In short, CAP is about as ordinary as it gets in the retail industry; it clearly cannot constitute a use of monopoly power.

In Beverage Management, the court rejected a competitor's challenge to Coca-Cola's Cooperative Merchandising Agreement ("CMA") under both Section 1 and Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Like U.S. Tobacco's CAP program, the CMA offered retailers a sliding scale of sales-based incentives. Unlike the CAP program, the CMA required that Coca-Cola's feature advertisements be exclusive. See 653 F. Supp. at 1146. Nevertheless, the Beverage Management court recognized Coca-Cola's CMA program for what it was – one facet of vigorous competition among suppliers "to obtain sales to retailers . . . by offering price discounts and promotional allowances for feature advertising." Id. at 1147. Significantly, the court found that: (1) the CMA program "is one which [9] Indeed, Conwood did not come out with an incentive program for rack placement until January, 2000, nearly two years after filing this case and many years after its sales force requested one. Tr. 3/10 at 127-31.

could have been offered by Plaintiff," id.; (2) plaintiff made "no showing that Defendant's program [was] coercive," id.; and (3) the CMA program simply did not foreclose competitors – i.e., as a factual matter, "[t]he CMA . . . does not commit [the retailer] to any specific number of weeks of feature advertising. [The retailer] is free to decide which [products] it will feature on a week to week basis . . . . [The retailer] is free to take advantage of the promotional offer or to not do so as it chooses." Id. at 1146. In these respects, CAP is no different from CMA. See also Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035, at *21 (discount scheme aimed at selling more product than rivals was "normal competitive tool" in the industry).

Professor Gundlach's testimony concerning CAP best illustrated Conwood's faulty legal position. Professor Gundlach's testimony, as presented to the jury, suggested that U.S. Tobacco should be found liable under the antitrust laws for engaging in ordinary marketing methods available to all competitors in the moist snuff industry. Professor Gundlach testified, for example, that because the CAP program provides incentives for retailers to participate in U.S. Tobacco's new product introductions, it is "on its face" exclusionary. Tr. 3/9 at 101-02. It is undisputed, however, that no term of the CAP contract provides any incentive for a retailer not to conduct business with any other manufacturer. And it is undisputed that the CAP program provides a maximum rebate of 3 cents per 10-can roll of product (approximate price to retailer of 10-can roll: $27) to a retailer who selects two of four marketing components, only one of which is to participate in U.S. Tobacco's new product introductions. DX 1939; see also Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, pp. 79-80.

Under the logic of Professor Gundlach's opinion, it would be "exclusionary" for U.S. Tobacco to offer any new products simply because acceptance of these new products may make retailers less inclined to accept new products from other manufacturers. In Professor Gundlach's own words: "Requiring the retailer to participate in all of these new brand introductions provides limited opportunity in many instances for competitors to provide new products, new brand opportunities at the marketplace." Tr. 3/9 at 102. Perhaps recognizing the fallacy of this position, Professor Gundlach also testified that the CAP program is "usually" implemented with additional requirements of exclusive vending and the elimination of competitive distribution. Tr. 3/9 at 102-16. But the complete factual record presented in this case – as opposed to the handful of documents interpreted by Professor Gundlach – makes clear that CAP, as designed and implemented, does not require exclusive vending or the reduction of competitive distribution.

Exclusive Vending and CAP. Conwood's attempt to establish exclusive vending through CAP is also without basis in the record. First, the great weight of undisputed evidence indicates that a relatively small percentage of CAP participants actually use only U.S. Tobacco display racks. See Tr. 3/16 at 93-94 (U.S. Tobacco Department Manager testified that 1 retailer out of 125 CAP participants uses only U.S. Tobacco racks); Tr. 3/15 at 55-73 (U.S. Tobacco Chain Account Manager testified that CAP does not require exclusive vending); Tr. 3/21 at 11, 14-15 (U.S. Tobacco Sales Representatives testified that only 20% of CAP participants happen to use only U.S. Tobacco rack; CAP does not require exclusive vending); Tr. 3/3 at 84 (Conwood sales representative testified that Conwood racks authorized in 90% of stores in territory); Tr. 3/8 at 137 (same); Tr. 3/8 at 175 (same).

Second, not one retailer – none – testified that he or she chose to use a U.S. Tobacco rack to display all moist snuff products because of the CAP program. In the absence of such evidence, no reasonable inference would indicate otherwise.

Third, the display component of the CAP program allows for the same maximum 3-cent per 10-can roll payment as the marketing component. See DX 1939; Tr. 3/22 Laessig, pp. 85-87. Even accepting for purposes of argument the significance Conwood attributes to rack selection, no retailer making that decision would place much weight on a 3-cent rebate on a $27 item. Conwood has offered no evidence otherwise, and no reasonable inference could possibly weigh in Conwood's favor.

Finally, evidence regarding Conwood's Retail Incentive Program ("RIP") only serves to confirm that CAP does not result in exclusive vending for U.S. Tobacco. For example, any retailer participating in CAP remained free to forego CAP moneys at any time or to accept Conwood's new RIP Program, which pays more money than CAP for placement of Conwood racks and products. See DX 4304; see also Tr. 3/10 at 148-49 (nothing prevents a retailer from participating simultaneously in CAP and in Conwood's "RIP"). And, Conwood's success in signing up participating CAP retailers for its RIP program – which requires use of a Conwood rack – further confirms that CAP does not require exclusive vending.

In any event, the undisputed facts are that CAP is an ordinary marketing program both on its face and in any ad hoc use of the program to obtain exclusive racks. It is the type of competition that takes place throughout the retail industry and, now, has finally been joined by Conwood with its RIP program (albeit without gathering movement figures for use in presentations to retailers).

Competitive Distribution. The evidence was even more scant concerning any relationship between the CAP program and the reduction of competitive distribution, i.e., the number of competitive facings. See Tr. 3/9 at 112-16 (Gundlach discussion of PX 96). At most, the evidence demonstrates isolated instances of a use of the CAP program for which it was not designed, a fact that is legally insufficient to establish any exclusionary effect in the marketplace. See, e.g., Ocean State Physicians, 883 F.2d at 1112-13 (isolated instances of misapplication of marketing program cannot prove that policy was used in an exclusionary manner).

In any event, even taking the evidence offered at trial at face value, the document selected by Conwood indicates only that the U.S. Tobacco sales representative sought a fair share of shelf space for U.S. Tobacco products, not the indiscriminate elimination of competitive products. In fact, PX 96 – on its face – indicates that the U.S. Tobacco sales representative suggested to the buyer that the buyer allow U.S. Tobacco to have its fair share of shelf space by discontinuing only two brands that, together, accounted for only 5 can-sales per week. The choice remained with the retailer, and the opportunity remained for any other company that wanted to persuade the retailer to carry its products. This, too, is ordinary competition. See Frito-Lay, 659 F. Supp. at 1134 (shelf-space recommendations made as part of shelf-space incentive program was "a commonplace tool for competitors").

Retailer Testimony. Finally, Professor Gundlach's "analysis" also completely overlooks the uncontroverted testimony of every retailer who testified about the CAP program. Why? In Professor Gundlach's own words: "I was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind." Tr. 3/9 at 148. But the deliberations that went on in the retailer's mind tell the whole story. Of those retailers who participated in CAP, some used U.S. Tobacco racks only; some used all companies' racks; some carried 12 moist snuff products; some carried over 40; some used every companies' POS materials on the racks; some used only U.S. Tobacco POS materials on the racks. But none of these decisions bore any relationship to the CAP program itself.

Without exception, the retailers – no matter what their product or rack choices were – received equal payments under CAP and they all testified that they made the choices for their stores, and that the CAP program did not restrict those choices in any way:

- Dan Walden testified that CAP is a "non-binding" program that rewards you for "things you were already doing" and that CAP was not tied in any way to his decisions concerning racks, product mix, promotions, or any interaction with other companies. Tr. 3/15 at Walden, pp. 49-51, 57-60, 62-63, 76-78, 111, 115.

- Paul McGuire testified that CAP is a "typical" incentive program not tied in any way to his decisions concerning racks and/or product mix. Tr. 3/15 at McGuire, p.26.

- Jack Barger testified that CAP was one of over 100 accrual-type programs in which he participates. Mr. Barger also testified that the amount of dollars offered through CAP was "not worthy" of any extra effort to comply. Tr. 3/15 at Barger, pp. 11-12, 26. Mr. Barger also sharply contrasted CAP with the incentive program offered by Philip Morris. Id.

- David Dill testified that CAP did not require exclusive racks and had nothing to do with his decisions concerning racks, product mix, and/or POS and did not prevent any interaction with other companies. Tr. 3/16 at Dill, pp. 18, 43-44, 75.

- Dennis Gagnon testified that CAP did not require exclusive racks or POS and did not prevent any interaction with other companies. Tr. 3/16 at Gagnon, p. 20.

- Kay Laessig testified that CAP encourages visibility for the whole category, not just U.S. Tobacco, that CAP was not tied in any way to his decisions concerning racks, product mix, and/or POS, and that CAP did not prevent him from interacting in any way with other companies. Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, pp. 29-30, 79-80, 83-89.

- Gary Jones testified that CAP had nothing to do with his decisions concerning racks or POS, and that U.S. Tobacco did not get the "most POS" or even the #1 spot under the program. Mr. Jones also testified that CAP was very simple and required him to do "what [he] would normally do as good business practice anyway." Tr. 3/16 at Jones, pp. 17-18, 23-25, 33.

- Robert Carlson testified that CAP had nothing to do with Wal-Mart's choice to use the U.S. Tobacco cabinet, that CAP was not tied in any way to his decisions concerning product mix, selection of U.S. Tobacco as Category Captain or promotions, and that CAP did not prevent him from interacting in any way with other companies. Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 54-57.

Conwood offered no testimony to the contrary from any retailer.

Thus, Conwood made no showing that would distinguish this case from Beverage Management: (1) the CAP program "is one which could have been offered by Plaintiff," 653 F. Supp. at 1147; (2) plaintiff made "no showing that Defendant's program [was] coercive," id.; and (3) the CAP program simply did not foreclose competitors – i.e., as a factual matter, "[the retailer] is free to take advantage of the promotional offer or to not do so as it chooses." Id. at 1146.

6. U.S. Tobacco's Alleged Tortious Conduct In The Field Is Not Exclusionary Under Section 2

Finally, Conwood offered the jury a hodgepodge of evidence, and inadmissible hearsay displayed through experts, to suggest the existence of a pervasive and systematic campaign by U.S. Tobacco to remove the racks of its competitors without retailer authorization. Consistent with its transparent strategy throughout this case, Conwood's chosen trial strategy was to attempt to blur the critical distinction between activity that was desired and authorized by retailers and that which was not.

That distinction is important, of course, because acts that merely constitute some form of unfair competition cannot form the basis of antitrust liability. As the Supreme Court most recently observed in NYNEX Corp. v. Discon, Inc., 119 S. Ct. 493 (1998): "[O]ther laws, for example, 'unfair competition' laws, business tort laws, or regulatory laws, provide remedies for various 'competitive practices thought to be offensive to proper standards of business morality.'" Id. at 499 (citation omitted); cf. Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 225 (1993); Langenderfer, 917 F.2d at 1426-27.

In fact, where, as here, it is undisputed that manufacturers are not foreclosed from dealing with retailers, unfair competition is – from an antitrust perspective – still competition, however unseemly. As Judge Easterbrook explained in Stamatakis Industries, Inc. v. King, 965 F.2d 469 (7th Cir. 1992):

> [Plaintiff] established a decline in sales, to be sure, but a producer's loss is no concern of the antitrust laws, which protect consumers from suppliers rather than suppliers from each other. If [the conduct in question] should be called unfair competition, it is nonetheless competition. "Competition is ruthless, unprincipled, uncharitable, unforgiving – and a boon to society, Adam Smith reminds us, precisely because of these qualities that make it a bane to other producers."

Id. at 471 (emphasis added) (citation omitted); see also Cascade Cabinet Co. v. Western Cabinet & Millwork Inc., 710 F.2d 1366, 1374 (9th Cir. 1983) ("[The Sherman Act] was not designed, and has never been interpreted, to reach all business practices, unfair or otherwise, damaging to individual companies.") (emphasis added); Oahu Gas Serv., Inc. v. Pacific Resources Inc., 838 F.2d 360, 370 (9th Cir. 1988) ("A campaign to harm or destroy rivals through deceptive marketing smacks of unfair competition, whose hallmark is harm to competitors. . . . The goal of the antitrust laws, however, unlike that of business tort or unfair competition laws, is to safeguard general competitive conditions, rather than to protect specific competitors.").

Even assuming arguendo that tortious conduct can constitute a violation of Section 2 in this case, Conwood would have had to offer evidence establishing that Conwood and other moist snuff companies were in fact foreclosed from competing in the marketplace as a result of such conduct. Sporadic or episodic activity is insufficient as a matter of law. As the Fourth Circuit cautioned in Abcor Corp. v. AM Int'l Inc., 916 F.2d 924 (4th Cir. 1990):

> Even if [defendant] has engaged in some unfair competition . . . "'courts should be circumspect in converting ordinary business torts into violations of antitrust laws.

> To do so would be to "create a federal common law of unfair competition" which was not the intent of the antitrust laws.'" The "sporadic activity" identified by the plaintiffs does not amount to an antitrust violation.

Id. at 931 (footnote omitted). See also Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 394 (7th Cir. 1984) ("The exclusion of competitors is cause for antitrust concern only if it impairs the health of the competitive process itself.") (emphasis added); NYNEX Corp., 119 S. Ct. at 498 ("[Plaintiff] must allege and prove harm, not just to a single competitor, but to the competitive process, i.e., to competition itself.").

Reviewing the trial record for truly unauthorized activity confirms that U.S. Tobacco's conduct could not have foreclosed anyone else from the competitive process. Conwood's own employees had no basis in personal knowledge to suggest anything other than authorized conduct by U.S. Tobacco in the field; anything else was pure speculation or impermissible hearsay. As expected, therefore, most of those witnesses testified about presumably authorized "corporate" resets and continued to blur, or merely speculate, about other instances of rack removals.[10] Similarly, at least half of the former U.S. Tobacco sales representatives who testified confirmed that they only removed racks or POS with explicit retail authorization, for example as part of a store reset. See, e.g., Tr. 3/2 at Marconi, pp. 11-16.

Indeed, if Conwood had met its burden of proving sufficient tortious conduct to harm the competitive process itself – rather than just "sporadic activity" that allegedly harmed Conwood in isolated instances – one would have expected a courtroom full of retailers, each of whom had [10] Nor, as described more fully in U.S. Tobacco's motion for a new trial, can Conwood prove "pervasive" unauthorized conduct or foreclosure simply by offering "expert" opinions on these factual questions for the jury; and clearly Conwood cannot make such a factual showing for the jury by having these same experts rely on self-serving hearsay "declarations" and "unethical" activity reports that are neither evidence in the case nor even relevant to a proper subject of expert testimony.

moist snuff racks removed from his or her store time and time again by U.S. Tobacco sales representatives. No such evidence was presented to the jury.[11] In sum total, four retailers testified about unauthorized conduct by U.S. Tobacco, and it clearly was sporadic:

- Georgia Gill-Elkins, a manager of a single-store Berreth Oil minimart in Mishawaka, Indiana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco rack removed a U.S. Tobacco rack, and the Conwood POS on that rack, in November of 1998. Tr. 3/2 at Gill-Elkins.

- Patricia Lienen, a former employee of a single-store Dave's Country Store in Dunlap, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed Conwood racks, but always put the Conwood product in a U.S. Tobacco rack. Tr. 3/8 at Lienen.

- Gayleen Rusk, a manager of a single-store Amoco Pronto Express store in Sioux City, Iowa, testified that a U.S. Tobacco representative removed empty facings for Conwood's Cougar products because there was no Cougar product ordered by the store. The U.S. Tobacco representative did not touch Conwood's Kodiak, Kodiak Ice, or Hawken brands that were in the store. Tr. 3/2 at Rusk.

- Marti Stevens, a manager of a single-store Qwik Way store in Billings, Montana, testified that a U.S. Tobacco sales representative removed a Conwood rack – the exclusive Conwood rack – in August, 1997. Tr. 3/10 at Stevens.

Conwood abandoned all of its state law claims with good reason: given the option, the jury might have properly concluded that this case actually is nothing more than a tort and unfair competition dispute, not an antitrust matter. The Court, however, should not now permit sporadic tortious conduct carried out in the context of otherwise normal, competitive dealings to support a billion dollar jury verdict. To do so would truly federalize state tort law and make every alleged "monopolist" the target of antitrust litigation for aggressive, but not exclusionary, competition.

C. CONWOOD DID NOT ESTABLISH OVERALL HARM TO THE MOIST SNUFF MARKET, OR HARM TO ITSELF

On the critical antitrust requirement of harm to competition, the evidence supporting Conwood's claim becomes all but nonexistent. In fact, Conwood did not even attempt to establish any economic harm to the overall market.

As described below, Conwood did not attempt to rebut, much less actually refute, the compelling economic evidence that unequivocally demonstrated that competition in the moist snuff market was not harmed by U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct. Any serious economic analysis of the factors for assessing harm to competition demonstrates beyond question in this case that any moist snuff "market" is highly competitive and became increasingly competitive during the period it was supposedly being "monopolized" by U.S. Tobacco. Moreover, Conwood also failed to establish any injury in fact to itself beyond the suggestion to the jury that it "could have done better," a proposition that cannot constitute "antitrust injury" to Conwood in the first place and which, in any event, is supported only by the speculation and anecdotal observations of Conwood's employees.

1. Conwood Did Not Establish Harm To Competition

A fundamental requirement of an antitrust case is that the plaintiff prove harm to competition, not just to itself. See Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489 (1977) (an antitrust plaintiff must show injury "that flows from that which makes defendant's acts unlawful"-- i.e., harm to competition); Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. G.T. Britts Distrib., Inc., 44 F. Supp.

2d 172, 175 (N.D.N.Y. 1999) (antitrust claim deficient because it alleged injury only to competitor's own business interests, not market-wide competition). Accordingly, judgment as a matter of law is especially appropriate and required where the competitive process in the market remains free and open. See NYNEX Corp., 119 S. Ct. at 498 ("[Plaintiff] must allege and prove harm, not just to a single competitor, but to the competitive process, i.e., to competition itself.").

For example, where output in a market actually increases during the alleged period of illegal monopolization, the market is not being injured. Indeed, Conwood's own expert economist, Dr. Kamien, testified that, in the moist snuff "market," output is increasing, to the benefit of consumers. See Tr. 3/1 at 49-50 (more product being sold is "a symptom that consumers are benefitting"). In order to lend support to Conwood's case, however, Dr. Kamien focused on sales at Wal-Mart and 7-Eleven, while unwittingly conceding that "there was an 8% increase in moist snuff sales overall in the U.S." Tr. 3/1 at 53; see also Tr. 3/1 at 59 (same conclusion with respect to 7-Eleven). Thus, in his enthusiasm to conclude that "Wal-Mart sales were reduced," Dr. Kamien established that output is increasing in the overall moist snuff "market" – a "symptom" that consumers are benefitting and that competition is alive and well.

Moreover, courts routinely grant judgment as a matter of law in monopolization cases where a plaintiff cannot dispute that other firms have entered the market and expanded successfully. See Campus Ctr. Discount Den, Inc. v. Miami Univ., 114 F.3d 1186 (6th Cir. 1997) (per curiam) (table decision; text on WESTLAW 1997 WL 271742, at 1-2).[12] For example, in the recent case

[12] Expansion by, or even excess capacity of, existing market participants is the functional equivalent of "entry" as a factor of determining monopoly power. See Ford v. Stroup, 113 F.3d 1234, 1997 WL 201560, *3 (6th Cir. 1997) ("[e]xcess capacity, thereby, deprives a relatively large 'market share' of its normal 'market power'") (citing Rebel Oil Co. v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 51 F.3d (continued...)

of Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Service of America, Inc., 190 F.3d 974 (9th Cir. 1999), the court considered a claim that UPS abused its alleged monopoly power through exclusive dealing contracts and volume discounts. The court affirmed the district court's granting summary judgment, in part, because it found that UPS had offered uncontroverted evidence that the market was competitive:

> UPS has presented evidence that during the time period in which WPX alleges antitrust injury, the market has actually expanded; other carriers . . . have entered the market.

Id. at 976 (finding also that plaintiff had experienced an increase in profits and growth during the relevant period); see also R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food, Inc., 13 F.3d 478, 486-88 (1st Cir. 1994) (alleged exclusive dealing and other misconduct did not prevent plaintiff from placing products in 80% of stores; successful entry demonstrated that "'competition has not been injured'").

Here, the undisputed facts at trial in this case confirmed that the overall moist snuff market is highly competitive, growing both in size and in the number and of type of brands – including an entirely new and rapidly expanding price-value segment. For example, two companies entered the moist snuff segment prior to 1990, and each of them continued to gain in market share and, more importantly, in sales and profits during the entire 1990's. See Tr. 3/23 at 51-53 (DX 14, DX 15, DX 18). Moreover, since 1990, and especially after 1994, all companies have successfully introduced new products, readily gaining distribution throughout the country. Tr. 3/23 at 52-55 (DX 28); Tr. 3/7 at 276-81.[13] Overall moist snuff sales have increased steadily throughout the time period. Tr. 3/23 at 46-48 (DX 3). Competitive activity, such as promotional activities and price competition, increased during the time period. Tr. 3/23 at 55-57 (DX 19, DX 27). All four moist snuff companies have successfully introduced several price-value products. Id.

In short, the competitive process in the moist snuff industry is open and vibrant, and consumer choices – in terms of flavor, cut, packaging, and price – have all increased dramatically during the time period. This is indisputable evidence of a market that is functioning competitively – clear evidence that there was no basis for the jury to conclude that any conduct by U.S. Tobacco harmed overall competition.

It is equally well-established that market-wide injury cannot be established by proof of injury to the plaintiff as an individual competitor. See D.E. Rogers Assocs., Inc. v. Gardner-Denver Co., 718 F.2d 1431, 1439 (6th Cir. 1983) (loss of business and profits as a result of defendant's predatory actions are insufficient to establish harm to competition; such a loss "is as likely the result of honest competition as it is the result of illegal conduct"); Havoco of America, Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 558 (7th Cir. 1980) (loss of single customer cannot show harm to the market; "[o]therwise the mere fact that one party bid successfully . . . would be equivalent to an anticompetitive effect and would raise the specter of an antitrust action being used as a remedy for any tortious conduct during the course of the competition"). Of course, that is all Conwood tried to prove in this case – harm to itself because it believed that it could have done better absent U.S.

[13] It is undisputed that, despite the testimony of Messrs. McClure and Price, Swedish Match's Timberwolf line of products has achieved greater success in five years than Conwood achieved during the entire 1980's – the period of time that Conwood holds out as its ideal of free access to distribution and its resultant success.

Tobacco's alleged misconduct. Tr. 2/29 at 115-20. This, however, is precisely the type of competitor "harm" that cannot constitute antitrust injury as a matter of law. See Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Service of America, Inc., 65 F. Supp. 2d 1052, 1055-56, 1064-65 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (antitrust injury to plaintiff could not be shown as a matter of law where its sales increased during the allegedly restrained period; claims of lower profit margins cannot constitute antitrust injury because that would be protecting a competitor, not competition), aff'd, 190 F.3d 974 (9th Cir. 1999).

2. In any Event, Conwood's "Evidence" of Injury To Itself Is Insufficient as a Matter of Law

Finally, Conwood's assertion – whether from Mr. Rosson or Conwood sales representatives -- that it would have done better had it been "left alone" by U.S. Tobacco also is insufficient as a matter of law to establish injury in fact. Indeed, all such testimony was little more than rank speculation with no factual basis in the record whatsoever.

For example, Mr. Rosson offered no explanation as to why Conwood's share was already low in numerous regions of the country before U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct or why those factors would not continue to have the same effect on Conwood's share after 1990. Mr. Rosson merely surmised that because Conwood's national share grew from 0 to 10% during the 1980's, it should have grown an additional 10% in the 1990's. Mr. Rosson offered no benchmark industry upon which to base this opinion. Similarly, Mr. Rosson offered no explanation of how Conwood, absent any new, innovative product (like Kodiak which was responsible for Conwood's growth in the 1980's), or any other business development, would have accomplished over 10 points of share growth in the 1990's. During the relevant time period, Conwood's "secondary brands" – i.e., all brands but Kodiak – had topped out, according to Conwood's Vice President of Marketing. Tr. 3/20 at W. Cothren, pp. 124-26. In fact, Conwood had stopped running promotions on these products for that reason. Id. The evidence established that there was simply no basis, other than pure conjecture, for anyone, including Mr. Rosson, to conclude that Conwood could have grown its share in the face of ever increasing competition from Swedish Match, Swisher and U.S. Tobacco.

Significantly, neither Mr. Rosson, other Conwood employees nor Conwood's experts offered any evidence of a reduction in Conwood moist snuff sales during the alleged period of exclusion. On the contrary, the uncontroverted evidence is that Conwood prospered in the marketplace that was allegedly being monopolized. Specifically, the uncontroverted evidence in this case established that: Conwood's flagship product, Kodiak, is in over 80% of the stores, Tr. 3/23 at 50-51 (DX 28); its secondary products, according to Conwood's own marketing department, have "too much distribution," Tr. 3/20 at Coatney, pp. 98-100 (DX 684); its racks are in 70% - 90% of the stores, Tr. 3/3 at 84; Tr. 3/8 at 137; Tr. 3/8 at 175; its sales have increased steadily and without interruption since the early 1980's, Tr. 3/23 at 48-49 (DX 9); and its profits have increased every year, Tr. 3/23 at 41-43 (DX 40, DX 57). In the face of this uncontroverted evidence, there was no basis to conclude that Conwood suffered any injury at all – and certainly not antitrust injury.

If all an antitrust plaintiff had to do to meet this requirement is put its employees on to say,"we could have done better," then every antitrust plaintiff could easily claim that it has suffered an antitrust injury no matter how well it was in fact doing in the alleged monopolized market. That result, too, would turn the antitrust laws on their head.

D. CONWOOD FAILED TO ESTABLISH CAUSATION

Even assuming that Conwood did establish some slowing of growth – however measured – judgment would still have to be entered against Conwood because it failed to establish with the requisite "reasonable certainty" that its sales or its sales share was in fact being affected by U.S. Tobacco misconduct as opposed to (1) the independent uncoerced decisions of retailers; or (2) several other factors in the marketplace indisputably affecting Conwood's performance and sales share. As the Court instructed the jury: "Conwood must have offered evidence that established as a matter of fact and with a fair degree of certainty that U.S. Tobacco's alleged illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury." Tr. 3/28 at 106 (emphasis added). Conwood did not meet this burden.

Under Sixth Circuit law, judgment as a matter of law should be granted if the alleged injury, even if "linked to an alleged violation of the antitrust laws, flows directly from conduct that is not itself an antitrust violation." Valley Prods. Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398, 403 (6th Cir. 1997); see id. at 404 (violation not "necessary predicate" where losses would have resulted from lawful cancellation); Axis, S.p.A. v. Micafil, Inc., 870 F.2d 1105, 1111-12 (6th Cir. 1989) (illegal acquisition not necessary predicate where lawful patents resulted in foreclosure from market); Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36, 38-39 (6th Cir. 1994) (alleged conspiracy not "necessary predicate" where foreclosure resulted from lawful right to exclude plaintiff from property). In each of these cases, the Sixth Circuit found that the alleged misconduct was not a "necessary predicate" to plaintiff's injury because the injury flowed directly from conduct that was not itself unlawful.

Applying this strict Sixth Circuit standard, the court in Baum Research & Development Co. v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998), dismissed plaintiff's claim that the defendants had conspired with – not just "influenced" – the NCAA to adopt baseball bat standards that clearly would harm plaintiff's business. See id. at 1020. The court held that under the controlling Sixth Circuit standard, the claimed misconduct – a de facto exclusive supply arrangement – could not be the "necessary predicate" of plaintiff's claimed injury. As the court reasoned, irrespective of whether there was an exclusionary agreement, plaintiff's "injury stem[med] from the NCAA's lawful authority to regulate the rules for baseball bats." Id. at 1023-24.

Applying the Sixth Circuit standard to this case, no reasonable jury could conclude that any U.S. Tobacco "exclusionary" conduct was in fact a material cause of Conwood's lost business. Instead, Conwood's real problem is with the lawful conduct of retailers – much like that of the NCAA in Baum – and with the rigors of competition itself.

1. The Independent, Uncoerced Decisions of Retailers

In denying summary judgment to U.S. Tobacco, this Court highlighted the fact that Conwood was required to establish that its harm did not result from the "independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers" or "other market forces." See Summary Judgment Op. at 10. The undisputed evidence at trial, however, established that any injury claimed by Conwood stemmed from the retailers' lawful authority to make decisions about what products, racks and POS to have in their own stores. It is no wonder counsel for Conwood told the jury that this case is not about the stores.

In this case, however, U.S. Tobacco offered overwhelming and uncontroverted evidence that retailers make the decisions about what products to carry and not carry, what display racks to use and not use, and what POS materials to display and not display. See, Tr. 3/14 at 99, 103-04, 111; Tr. 3/22 at 11, 17-22; Tr. 3/16 at Carlson 24-25, 28, 52-53; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig 14-15, 21-22, 24-25; see also Tr. 2/29 at 216-17 (Conwood Chairman testified that no retailer gave up decision-making authority to any manufacturer). Wal-Mart, for example, made its own decision to use display racks from U.S. Tobacco rather than from all companies. Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 22; PX 84 ("Beth Schommer, the VP at Wal-Mart is very much in favor of eliminating the extra vendors").

It follows that once Wal-Mart makes a decision to use a neat, organized, uniform display rack, Wal-Mart's lawful right not to use Conwood's rack precludes U.S. Tobacco's conduct from being the "necessary predicate" to Conwood's harm. And the same analysis applies to the rack decisions of other retailers as well as all retailers' decisions about what products and POS to carry and use in their stores.

In response to this fatal defect in its case, Conwood did not offer a single piece of evidence that any retailer was coerced, threatened, or pressured in any way by U.S. Tobacco. Conwood did not even offer a single piece of evidence that any retailer was, in fact, misled by U.S. Tobacco. Conwood simply argued that, because U.S. Tobacco is a "big" moist snuff company (though relatively small as manufacturers go), retailers' decisions must have been materially affected. Under the Sixth Circuit's (or any circuit's) causation standard, this "Kamien intimidating-stature theory," Tr. 3/3 at 76-77, is not a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to determine causation, especially where not a single retailer – not one – offered any supporting testimony.

Conwood's alternative argument that no retailer decision can be "independent" of influence by U.S. Tobacco is equally misplaced. Under that self-declared standard, retailers would be incapable of ever making independent decisions about products and racks because there is always input from manufacturers as part of the normal competitive process in the retail industry. Indeed, under Conwood's theory, Hodges and Baum would effectively be overruled. These cases involved defendants who allegedly conspired with, not just influenced, the person who lawfully exercised rights that harmed the plaintiff. It would be inviting reversible error for Conwood to ask this Court to side-step these controlling cases.

In sum, Conwood should not be allowed to by-pass the Sixth Circuit's unequivocal standard, as well as the sworn testimony of every retailer in this case, simply by declaring over and over again that the decisions of retailers do not matter or by suggesting, without proof, that retailers are bought off with "kickbacks." On the undisputed record, Conwood's alleged harm – indeed its entire competitive complaint – flows directly from the lawful decisions of retailers to choose the products, racks and POS of U.S. Tobacco, Swedish Match and/or Swisher over those offered by Conwood. Under these circumstances, no antitrust liability can attach to U.S. Tobacco for "influencing" retailer decisions.

2. Other Factors In The Marketplace

Consistent with the Sixth Circuit's standard, the "material cause" requirement also demands that Conwood establish that its claimed injury was caused by U.S. Tobacco's illegal conduct as opposed to other factors in the marketplace, such as increased competition from U.S. Tobacco and other competitors, and Conwood's own business decisions. See generally Greater Rockford Energy & Tech. Corp. v. Shell Oil Co., 998 F.2d 391, 402-04 (7th Cir. 1993) (enumerating possible causes of harm other than alleged exclusionary practices); Eichman v. Fotomat Corp., 880 F.2d 149, 163 (9th Cir. 1989) (demonstrable reduction in sales must be shown to be the result of an antitrust violation rather than other factors); Argus Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 801 F.2d 38, 42-46 (2d Cir. 1986) (plaintiff failed to establish that defendant's conduct, rather than plaintiff's independent financial difficulties, caused plaintiff's business to fail); Van Dyk Research Corp. v. Xerox Corp., 631 F.2d 251, 254-56 (3d Cir. 1980) (plaintiff failed to prove causation where its injury was caused by cash flow problems, inability to raise money through new stock offerings and failure of marketing arrangement). MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1162-1164 (7th Cir.) (rejecting damages theory where plaintiff improperly attributed all losses to defendant's illegal acts "despite the presence of significant other factors" and court found that only 7 of 22 claimed acts were illegal), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 891 (1983). Here, Conwood offered no evidentiary basis in the record to refute the clear impact that other factors were having on Conwood's performance and sales in the 1990's.

(a) Increased Competition From U.S. Tobacco and Other Competitors

For example, Conwood failed to offer any evidence to account for the effects on Conwood of the advent and rapid growth of price-value products, see Tr. 3/23 at 55-57 (DX 19, DX 27); Tr. 3/7 at 276-81; the increased number of products offered by all manufacturers which collectively intensified the competition for retail shelf space, see Tr. 3/23 at 52-55 (DX 28); the increased promotional activities of U.S. Tobacco and other competitors, see DX 592; Tr. 3/7 at 276-81; and the dramatic success of the Timberwolf line of products offered by Swedish Match. Tr. 3/23 at 51-53 (DX 14, DX 15, DX 18). This evidence is dispositive on the issue of whether U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct was materially causing harm to the marketplace. See, e.g., R.W. Int'l Corp., 13 F.3d at 486-88 (undisputed fact that new grape juice product successfully entered the market during the period of alleged unlawful activity confirmed, as a matter of law, that the alleged misconduct was not causing antitrust injury). And, it precludes any finding in this case that U.S. Tobacco materially caused antitrust harm to Conwood.

Nor is it adequate, as described in more detail below, for Dr. Leftwich simply to assert that these factors are "captured in data" of Conwood's actual sales results and thus in his damages calculation; that simply avoids the causation issue altogether. Under that approach, the jury is left with absolutely no basis to assess whether these other factors were keeping Conwood's sales levels where they were, irrespective of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct. For example, Conwood made no showing that where consumer demand for Timberwolf was affecting the sales of Cougar, or even Kodiak, having more Conwood racks or header cards would reverse or even slow that trend. The evidence that was presented on these questions suggests just the opposite. Tr. 3/23 at 81-83 (DX 88) (study demonstrating that, where all companies have increased shelf space, or "facings," Conwood's share is relatively low). Indeed, the record is replete with evidence that Timberwolf and other new products were affecting Conwood's sales. See, e.g., Tr. 3/20 at Cothren, pp. 164-67 (DX 592); Tr. 3/22 at Ludwig, pp. 115-18 (DX 759).[14] Only the pure speculation of Mr. Rosson and other Conwood employees suggests that Conwood could have overcome the impact of Timberwolf and other competitors on Conwood's sales, and that hardly meets the "reasonable certainty" standard for proving causation.

Indeed, Conwood's entire theory of causation is directly at odds with the undisputed evidence that the moist snuff "market" has become increasingly competitive and that smaller competitors – Swedish Match and Swisher – have collectively increased their sales share to nearly 10 percent. Conwood's entire claim of injury is based, not on declining sales or profits, but on the purported stagnation of Conwood's sales share in the 1990's. But Conwood offered no evidence to refute the clear evidence that the dramatic share growth of Swedish Match and Swisher were causing Conwood's stagnation. Indeed, in Wal-Mart, Swedish Match and Swisher brands grew dramatically

[14] The evidence at trial also was undisputed that the increased regulation of the tobacco industry had a negative impact on each company's ability to advertise and promote its products. Conwood did not offer any evidence whatsoever to account for the effects tobacco regulation had on Conwood sales.

in the late 1990's even though displayed in a rack provided by U.S. Tobacco. See Tr. 3/7 at 268. Thus, there was no evidence presented to the jury to establish that U.S. Tobacco's "exclusionary" conduct was even a cause of Conwood's harm, let alone a material cause.

(b) Conwood's Failure To Compete

Finally, at trial, Conwood candidly admitted that it has only now begun to respond to the needs and demands of retailers. In January of 2000 Conwood launched an incentive program. Tr. 3/10 at 127-31. In March of 2000 Conwood introduced a display rack to vend rolls of moist snuff products. Compare Tr. 3/20 at 74 and Tr. 3/20 at Coatney, pp. 57-59. In March of 2000 Conwood invested in a shelving system to provide to retailers. Tr. 3/10 at 131-32. Prior to the year 2000 Conwood did not have any of these items to offer to retailers. How did the decisions by Conwood's management not to have these items affect Conwood's ability to products, display racks, and/or POS materials in the 1990s? Conwood does not attempt to account for the effects of these decisions on its relationships with retailers, on its success in placing products, racks and POS, and/or on Conwood's sales. Only pure speculation can support the inference that U.S. Tobacco's "exclusionary" conduct was the material cause of Conwood's claimed injury.

For all of these reasons, it would directly contravene Sixth Circuit law, as well as established principles regarding what constitutes adequate proof of causation and injury in fact, to find that the jury had a sufficient basis to conclude that U.S. Tobacco's conduct was a material cause of Conwood's alleged injury.

E. DR. LEFTWICH'S DAMAGES ESTIMATES WERE MERE SPECULATION AND GUESSWORK

The final reason that judgment as a matter of law should be granted in this case is the wildly speculative nature of Conwood's "evidence" regarding damages. Conwood's theory of damages in this case was the epitome of rank speculation and "guesswork" -- all, however, stamped with the imprimatur of expert testimony.

Judgment as a matter of law is appropriate on the issue of damages where an antitrust plaintiff offers only speculation and guesswork, even if offered in the guise of expert testimony. See Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035 at *11-14 (reversing denial of JMOL where expert's one-variable model was based on a "hypothetical market" that ignored market reality and "inconvenient evidence"; did not incorporate the economic reality of the marketplace; did not relate damages to specific anticompetitive conduct; and was not capable of separating lawful from unlawful conduct.) "Unless the amount sought to be recovered is shown to be 'definitely attributable' to defendant's wrongful conduct, there is no basis for making a 'just and reasonable estimate.'" Murphy Tugboat Co. v. Shipowners & Merchants Towboat Co., 467 F. Supp. 841, 863 (N.D. Cal. 1979), aff'd sub nom. Murphy Tugboat Co. v. Crowley, 658 F.2d 1256 (9th Cir. 1981).

In this case, it is clear that no reasonable jury could have based a $350 million antitrust verdict on the damages analysis presented through the testimony of Dr. Leftwich. Dr. Leftwich's testimony does not provide the jury with any basis to determine that Conwood lost sales by reason of U.S. Tobacco's conduct, much less to quantify any lost sales. Indeed, Dr. Leftwich does not offer any measure of lost sales; nor does he attempt to link his damages estimates to any U.S. Tobacco conduct or to demonstrate by any means that his "damages" estimates are not, in fact, measures of the results of other marketplace factors on Conwood's sales. Instead, Dr. Leftwich's analysis is a patchwork of baseless assumptions, unreliable data, and lawyer-created "evidence."

1. Dr. Leftwich's Analysis Does Not Reflect Lost Sales, But Merely Makes Assumptions About Lost Share

Dr. Leftwich readily conceded in this case that he never attempted to assess any lost sales by Conwood, not one dollar. Tr. 3/8 at 68-70. Based on the record, that is understandable. As discussed above in Section C.2, and according to Dr. Leftwich's own data, Conwood's sales have increased steadily and without interruption from the early 1980's to present. Tr. 3/23 at 48-49 (DX 9); see also Tr. 3/8 at 70 (Dr. Leftwich acknowledges that Conwood sales "were growing to a pretty good clip."). In fact, Conwood's sales trends showed no change on or about 1990 – the focus date of Conwood's theory of liability. Id.

Because Conwood suffered no demonstrable harm that comports with its theory of liability, Dr. Leftwich concocted a damages theory based on its own sales share and the "beliefs" of Conwood personnel that U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct "intensified" after 1990 and prevented Conwood from getting off the ground in states where it was already doing poorly. This "methodology" enabled Dr. Leftwich to ignore the glaring fact that, prior to 1990, there were only two companies competing significantly in moist snuff, while after 1990 there were four companies competing in moist snuff. Given this increased competition, it is no surprise that Conwood's sales share did not maintain pace in the 1990s (neither did U.S. Tobacco's). See McGlinchy v. Shell Chem. Co., 845 F.2d 802, 807 (9th Cir. 1988) (as a "'before and after' assessment" of damages, plaintiff's damages "study was hopelessly flawed. . . . [plaintiffs' expert] did not confirm that relevant market conditions were the same before and after the time the injury was alleged to have occurred"). With his regression analysis, Dr. Leftwich simply measured the relationship between Conwood's sales share in 1990 and Conwood's sales share in 1997. As one would expect, there is such a relationship: Conwood did better after 1990 in the same states in which it did better before 1990, and continued to do poorly after 1990 in the same states in which it was already doing poorly before 1990. Thus, there is no magic to Dr. Leftwich's analysis or his purported conclusions.

Further, even assuming that the "beliefs" of Conwood personnel – as opposed to actual sales trends – were a proper starting point for a damages analysis, Dr. Leftwich did nothing to confirm these "beliefs" with facts. For example, Dr. Leftwich recognizes that – prior to 1990 – Conwood failed to establish a so-called "foothold" in many states. Tr. 3/8 at 12-13. But without even attempting to assess why, prior to 1990, Conwood achieved little success in these states, Dr. Leftwich concludes that, after 1990, Conwood's share would have dramatically increased in these same states absent certain undefined conduct by U.S. Tobacco. But how? Conwood offered no new, innovative products. Conwood did not significantly increase manpower. Conwood did not significantly increase promotional spending. In short, there are no reasons either offered by Dr. Leftwich or demonstrated by any evidence why Conwood could have or would have grown share after 1990 in those states where it failed to grow share prior to 1990. As a result, Dr. Leftwich was forced simply to assume -- arbitrarily -- that absent U.S. Tobacco misconduct (whatever it may be), Conwood's shares in all states would tend to equalize. See Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035 at *14 (reversing denial of JMOL where expert's model did not incorporate other factors affecting market share). This, too, is a totally unsupportable assumption, and in fact is contrary to the wide range of shares for Conwood's looseleaf products, a "yardstick" industry in which U.S. Tobacco has no products. Tr. 3/23 at 75-77. Moreover, the evidence is undisputed that, unlike in the moist snuff segment, Conwood's sales in the loose leaf industry were declining since 1990. Tr. 3/10 at 87-88.

As a result of this abstract and unsupported analysis -- coupled literally with no analysis of lost sales -- there is no way on the record for the jury to reconcile Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates with Conwood's theories of how it purportedly was harmed by U.S. Tobacco's conduct; the jury's guess, which it clearly was, is as good or as bad as Dr. Leftwich's.

2. Dr. Leftwich's Analysis Is Based On Assumptions That Are Unreliable As a Matter Of Law.

Under established law, Dr. Leftwich was not permitted to use as a starting point the unsupported "beliefs" or "hypothesis" of Conwood's executives and employees. Indeed, that is precisely the type of self-serving short-cut that renders a damages opinion defective as a matter of law. See, e.g., McGlinchy, 845 F.2d at 807 (affirming exclusion of damages study and future testimony that included assumption based on "'experience plus inflation'"); Chrysler Credit Corp. v. J. Truett Payne Co., 670 F.2d 575, 582 (5th Cir. 1982) (excluding under Bigelow a damages study based on "[s]elf-serving and unsupported assumptions" as insufficient to sustain a verdict; "hypothesized effect" on business not sufficient where expert did not document assumptions or consider local market conditions); Park v. El Paso Bd. of Realtors, 764 F.2d 1053, 1067-68 & n.23 (5th Cir. 1985) (excluding damages testimony based on projections of "but for" market share without evidence of consumer behavior or a study of comparable markets), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1102 (1986); R.S.E., Inc. v. Pennsy Supply, Inc., 523 F. Supp. 954, 967-71 (M.D. Pa. 1981) (damages analysis using "base years" based on testimony of president of plaintiff company, without further consideration of the evidence, was mere speculation and guesswork); Pacific Mailing Equip. Corp.

v. Pitney Bowes, Inc., 499 F. Supp. 108, 119 (N.D. Cal. 1980) (opinion based on experience of businessmen properly excluded in the absence of "supporting studies, analyses, comparisons, or other factual, objective, observed or verifiable data of any kind"); Argus Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 612 F. Supp. 904, 925 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) ("[Business] plan . . . based on speculative and unfounded assumptions [was] not probative of [plaintiff's] losses and is not admissible evidence of damages."), aff'd, 801 F.2d 38 (2d Cir. 1986). Accordingly, opinions based on "general experience" and unfounded assumptions are not substitutes for economic analysis.

Dr. Leftwich originally testified that he based his damages study on two telephone calls with Conwood personnel. Leftwich Dep. at 63-66. At trial, however, an attempt was made to bolster the foundation for Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates by having Mr. Rosson testify that, in his opinion, Conwood's share would have been 10 points higher absent U.S. Tobacco's misconduct. From there, to repeat a phrase used by Conwood's counsel, it was all simple math: 10 share points each year, four years, $10 million per share point, equals $400 million. Tr. 3/28 at 61 (displaying exhibit to jury). But, Mr. Rosson's speculation provides no more foundation for Dr. Leftwich's "analysis" than the phone calls upon which Dr. Leftwich originally relied.[15] Indeed, Mr. Rosson's own testimony clearly demonstrates that he had no foundation to offer the opinions he was allowed to offer. See Tr. 2/29 at 201-05 (Mr. Rosson testified that he couldn't say why Conwood's "market" share differed in different areas; "there are too many variables for me to give you a sensible answer

[15] Even looking past the obvious foundational problems of Mr. Rosson's testimony, such testimony could not support Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates. Mr. Rosson concluded that Conwood had suffered $400 million in damages in four years. See Tr. 3/28 at 61. Dr. Leftwich, however, concluded that Conwood would suffer a maximum of $488 million, but not only for four years, but also extending 10 years into the future. This disparity demonstrates the complete and utter lack of support for either of these opinions.

to that question.") Yet, Dr. Leftwich, like Mr. Rosson, concluded without any real basis that Conwood's share would have been higher and calculated damages from there. This type of speculation and guesswork, offered in the guise of expert testimony, cannot substitute for proof on antitrust causation. As the court stated in Argus:

> Expert opinion, "unsupported by facts, that but for the defendants' conduct plaintiff would not have suffered losses does not convert the evidence of operating losses into evidence of damage flowing from defendants' antitrust violation."

612 F. Supp. at 926 (quoting Murphy Tugboat, 467 F. Supp. at 864).[16]

For this reason, as well, Dr. Leftwich's damages study could not have provided the jury with a basis for determining a fair and reasonable estimate of damages.

3. Dr. Leftwich Does Not Attribute Damages To Specific Acts of Defendants

It also is axiomatic that, in calculating antitrust damages, an expert witness must attribute the damages solely to specific unlawful acts of the defendants. See McGlinchy, 845 F.2d at 806 (damages study properly excluded at summary judgment stage because expert "did not relate the loss to specific acts" of the defendants). Accordingly, a damages study is defective if it may include losses attributable to other causal factors, including the lawful conduct of the defendants and other factors affecting the marketplace. Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035 at *14 (finding that such a defect makes the expert's opinion mere speculation as a matter of law); City of Vernon v. Southern Cal. Edison Co., 955 F.2d 1361, 1372-73 (9th Cir. 1992) (damages study properly excluded at summary judgment stage where damages study failed to account for lawful conduct by defendants); MCI Communications, 708 F.2d at 1161-63; Coleman Motor Co. v. Chrysler Corp., 525 F.2d 1338, 1353 (3d Cir. 1975) (damages evidence inadequate where it failed to "account for significant factors bearing upon [plaintiff's] diminished market share"); Argus Inc., 612 F. Supp. at 924-25; R.S.E., Inc., 523 F. Supp. at 966 (same); ILC Peripherals Leasing Corp. v. International Business Mach. Corp., 458 F. Supp. 423, 435 (N.D. Cal. 1978) (same), aff'd sub nom. Memorex Corp. v. IBM, 636 F.2d 1188 (9th Cir. 1980).

[16] Indeed, in holding that Dr. Leftwich's analysis "survives a preliminary Daubert analysis," see Feb. 23 Op. at 4-5, this Court emphasized that damages evidence would be inadequate at trial if the underlying assumptions of the analysis were not proven at trial. Given Mr. Rosson's admitted speculation regarding the starting "hypotheses" for Dr. Leftwich's entire analysis, see supra Section E.2, Daubert should now compel the complete rejection of Dr. Leftwich's analysis.

As the Eighth Circuit recently stated in Blue Dane Simmental Corp. v. American Simmental Ass'n, 178 F.3d 1035 (8th Cir. 1999):

> Although [plaintiff's expert] utilized a method of analysis typical within his field, that method is not typically used to make statements regarding causation without considering all independent variables that could affect the conclusion.

Id. at 1040-41 (upholding district court's exclusion of expert testimony as "'simplistic,'" noting that "at least one other independent variable contributed" to the alleged injury) see also Manual For Complex Litigation (1997), at 348 (generally impossible to determine causal relationship between the independent variable and dependent variable without analyzing "confounding variables"); id. at 424-26 (discussing selection of explanatory variables; "omitted variables that are correlated with the dependent variable reduce the probative value of the regression analysis"); EEOC v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 839 F.2d 302, 348-51 (7th Cir. 1988) (affirming district court's findings that plaintiff's overly simplistic regression analysis lacked any probative value).

The damages testimony offered by Dr. Leftwich at trial does not properly account for any other factors that may have affected Conwood's sales during this time period. For example, even assuming the reliability of the mechanics of Dr. Leftwich's regression, Dr. Leftwich's damages projections do not properly measure the effects of the specific alleged misconduct. Thus, Dr. Leftwich's regression "results" would verify and prove that Conwood actually suffered all of the same alleged "harm" by reason of: (1) regulation of the tobacco industry increased after 1990; (2) the number of new product introductions increased after 1990; (3) the marketing and promotional activities of Conwood's competitors increased after 1990; (4) the introduction of price-value brands, including Swedish Match's very successful Timberwolf products, occurred after 1990; (5) the fact that Conwood's flagship Kodiak brand had been on the shelves for 9 years as of 1990, and that Conwood had not introduced another successful premium brand until Kodiak Ice in 1997; and (6) the fact that the retail environment changed significantly, in terms of shelf space allocations, after 1990. This is because, as Dr. Leftwich conceded at trial, the results are the same no matter what causal variable is assumed or hypothesized; that, of course, is the epitome of a damages analysis totally divorced from any U.S. Tobacco misconduct or from any other variable affecting Conwood sales in the marketplace.

That his methodology is incapable of disaggregating the effect of these other factors was effectively conceded by Dr. Leftwich during cross-examination. Tr. 3/8 at 78-79 (damages study measures effects "rolled up into one ball of wax"). Indeed, when asked about numerous specific other factors that may have affected Conwood's sales, Dr. Leftwich could offer no explanation as to how the effects of any of those factors were reflected in or accounted for by his model. See Tr. 3/8 at 81 (rack removal by other competitors); 81-82 (procompetitive category management); 82-85 (independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers); 85-86 (lawful promotional activities); 86-87 (new product introductions); 87-88 (Timberwolf); 88-89 (advertising restrictions).

Critically, it is insufficient, as a matter of law, for a damages expert simply to declare that the effects of other factors were properly accounted for in the "data." As the court stated in ILC Peripherals:

> Although another Memorex witness testified that the effect of these factors was implicit in [the damages] forecasts, the jury would have had to take Memorex at its word that their influence was properly reflected.

458 F. Supp. at 435 (emphasis added). See also Concord Boat, 2000 WL 303035 at *11-13 (reversing denial of JMOL where, despite plaintiff's counsel's pretrial assurances, the expert's model remained incapable at trial of disaggregating lawful and unlawful conduct). But that is all that Dr. Leftwich could offer here. Tr. 3/8 at 78-86. Accordingly, there can be no doubt that Dr. Leftwich's testimony was improper expert testimony and therefore inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 702. More importantly, it is clear now, at the close of evidence, that Dr. Leftwich's testimony improperly gave the jury an "expert" basis simply to ignore all the other causes of Conwood's alleged harm, thus rendering the jury's award baseless as a matter of law.

4. Dr. Leftwich Improperly Relied On Faulty Data and Conwood Surveys Created Solely For Litigation

Finally, after realizing that his original study included a $250 million mistake ($750 million after trebling) because of bad data, Dr. Leftwich attempted to revamp his damages to reach the original overstated estimates by factoring in a quantification of the so-called "sworn declarations" of Conwood personnel created by Conwood's lawyers for purposes of litigation. Tr. 3/8 at 81. Dr. Leftwich's supplemental analysis, however, has two basic flaws. First, Dr. Leftwich's quantification of the surveys was a blatant manipulation of "data" to compensate for his own $250 million mistake and thus cannot constitute a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a jury to determine damages. Second, it is well established that biased hearsay, like speculative conjecture, cannot form the basis

16diii005428

Ultimately, Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates are a combination of: (1) a methodology that avoided any attempt to prove lost sales, relying instead on the unremarkable hypothesis that when a product performed poorly in one period (1990) it continued to perform poorly through another period (1997); (2) assumptions about the effects of U.S. Tobacco misconduct (however defined), which assumptions are themselves based on rank speculation; (3) a methodology that neither linked damages to unlawful conduct nor accounted for a number of other causal factors clearly present on the record; and (4) a last-ditch effort to override a glaring data error and to fill the $250 million gap caused by that error. While, at the end of the day, such "simple math" may have enabled Conwood's counsel to post an astronomical damages range for the jury's consideration, it is also precisely the type of defective damages analysis that enabled a jury to return a $1 billion award without Conwood ever proving or demonstrating that U.S. Tobacco's exclusionary conduct -- and nothing else -- caused Conwood to lose any sales at all. For all of these reasons, the Court should not permit Dr. Leftwich's "model" -- or Mr. Rosson's bald assertions -- to substitute for actual proof of harm to the moist snuff marketplace or to Conwood.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment as a matter of law in favor of U.S. Tobacco.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL, OR, IN THE ALTERNATIVE, A REDUCED DAMAGES AWARD

Defendants UST Inc., et al. ("U.S. Tobacco"), respectfully request that the Court order a new trial under Fed. R. Civ. P. 59, or in the alternative, enter a remittitur to reduce the damages award to an amount, if any, supported by the record evidence.

I. THE VERDICT WAS AGAINST THE GREAT WEIGHT OF THE EVIDENCE, AND THE DAMAGES WERE EXCESSIVE

Defendants respectfully request that, in the alternative to granting U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law, the Court grant a new trial pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59. A new trial is warranted under Rule 59 when a jury has reached an erroneous result as evidenced by (1) the verdict being against the great weight of evidence, (2) the damages being excessive, or (3) the trial being unfair to the moving party. See Holmes v. City of Massillon, 78 F.3d 1041, 1045-46 (6th Cir. 1996). All three reasons fully apply here.

A. The Verdict was Contrary to the Weight of the Evidence

As described more completely in U.S. Tobacco's memorandum in support of its motion for the judgment as a matter of law, the overwhelming weight of the evidence in this case, at a very minimum, confirms the following:

1) U.S. Tobacco lacks "monopoly power" under the instructions given to the jury;

2) U.S. Tobacco did not "use" or wield monopoly power in the marketplace, but rather engaged in ordinary marketing practices either used by or available to all competitors;

3) The moist snuff "market" was not harmed by any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct, and in fact was characterized by significantly increased competition during the 1990's under all relevant measures;

4) Conwood prospered in terms of sales and profits during the same time period; and

5) Conwood did not offer evidence, beyond mere "beliefs" and speculation of its own employees, that U.S. Tobacco's "exclusionary" conduct was a material cause of it "not doing better." In fact, the overwhelming evidence shows that the actual sources of Conwood's share stagnation were (a) the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers, (b) competition from other competitors and new brands, and (c) Conwood's own decisions not to compete in the ways desired by retailers.

While U.S. Tobacco strongly believes that these undisputed facts, and others, require judgment as a matter of law, they at minimum warrant a new trial. Indeed, the manner in which Conwood chose to present its case essentially conceded its lack of evidence on these points, and instead played on the jury's emotions and desire to penalize the "800 pound gorilla" for trying to maintain a monopoly – an objective that is perfectly permissible under the antitrust laws. This led to the jury's obviously less than thorough consideration of the evidence, particularly in light of the Court's jury instructions which, by the very nature of this type of case, are long and complex. The jury simply could not have objectively discussed and weighed the evidence on all of the issues, and considered all of the factors, in less than four hours. For the reasons described herein, however, the great weight of the evidence on all of these critical antitrust issues – when fully considered – requires granting a new trial to ensure that any jury verdict is based on the weight of the evidence rather than passion or prejudice.

B. The Damages Were Excessive

Notwithstanding the clear lack of evidence on all of the fundamental elements of any antitrust case, this jury, infused with an obvious desire to penalize U.S. Tobacco for what it believed was "unethical" misconduct or "unfair" competition, slapped U.S. Tobacco with what may be the largest verdict in the history of the antitrust laws – including even those civil damages cases following the break-up of AT&T.

Indeed, permitting any part of this enormous damages award to stand would be particularly outrageous in light of the direct attack on the retail industry that this case represents. No retailer testified that it was coerced or threatened by U.S. Tobacco in any respect, and no retailer testified that it has any agreement – regarding products, racks or P.O.S. – that prevents or restricts it from dealing with Conwood or other competitors at any time. Moreover, every retailer who testified in this case confirmed that all of the U.S. Tobacco practices in question are part of the competitive process and are ordinary business practices used by everyone in the retail industry. For Conwood to be compensated at all for any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged "exclusionary" conduct is unjust enough; to allow a billion dollar verdict to stand on that record would be a true perversion of the antitrust laws.

Finally, courts routinely grant motions for new trials where the plaintiff's expert fails to limit damages to injury flowing solely from the exclusionary conduct or offers an otherwise defective damages analysis to the jury. See, e.g., Image Technical Services Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 125 F.3d 1195 (9th Cir. 1997); Litton Systems, Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., No. CV 90-4823, 1996 WL 634213 (C.D. Cal. 1996); MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T, 708 F.2d 1081 (7th Cir. 1983). As described in detail in U.S. Tobacco's memorandum in support of its motion for judgment as a matter of law, Dr. Leftwich's testimony suffers several-fold from a number of fatal defects for an antitrust damages analysis, none of which can be cured simply be asserting: "yes I did consider x" or "it's captured in the data." The antitrust laws are too important, and the stakes are too high, to permit that ipse dixit to substitute for analysis. See Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., _ F.3d. _, 2000 WL 303035, *13 (8th Cir. (Ark.) 2000) (rejecting damages analysis where expert's damages opinion was connected to the facts in the case only through the ipse dixit of the expert).

To be sure, this was a long, complicated trial, and a new trial would likely be no different. It is clear, however, that the jury, for a variety of reasons already discussed, based this shocking damages award on passion and prejudice rather than on facts and the antitrust law. Accordingly, in keeping with the Sixth Circuit's discretion to exercise "caution" in Section 2 cases, see Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson & Co., 917 F.2d 1413 (6th Cir. 1990), this Court should order a new trial so that U.S. Tobacco's conduct may truly be judged under the antitrust laws and the rough and tumble of the marketplace, rather than the "ethics of the courtroom."

C. The Trial Was Unfair To U.S. Tobacco

Defendants also respectfully request that the Court grant a new trial because several of the Court's rulings were in error and unfairly prejudiced Defendants' right to a fair trial and a just verdict.

1. The Court's Rulings on Summary Judgment

On February 17, 2000, the Court issued an opinion denying U.S. Tobacco's motion for summary judgment, concluding that the issues concerning U.S. Tobacco's alleged "exclusionary" practices required the development of proof at trial. Id. at 9. In arriving at this conclusion, the Court rejected undisputed evidence that – regardless of U.S. Tobacco's intent – all of the conduct alleged by Conwood to have violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act: (1) was not and could not have been a use of monopoly power, (2) was ordinary competitive business practice used by all manufacturers in the moist snuff and other industries; (3) did not unreasonably foreclose market-wide competition;[1] and/or (4) was, at most, unfair -- but not anticompetitive -- competition. See, supra, Section I.

Instead, the Court focused on "intent," rather than conduct:

> Here, UST does not, at the summary judgment stage of the proceedings, attempt to show conclusively that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could

[1] The Court rejected, for example, established case law to the effect that if an exclusive arrangement cannot violate Section 3 of the Clayton Act, then a fortiori it must be "lawful under [S]ection[s] 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act." Smith v. Northern Mich. Hosps., Inc., 703 F.2d 942, 953 (6th Cir. 1983) (citing Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 327-29 (1961)); CDC Techs., Inc. v. IDEXX Labs., Inc., 186 F.3d 74, 79 (2d Cir. 1999) ("'[A] greater showing of anticompetitive effect is required to establish a Sherman Act violation than a section 3 Clayton Act violation in exclusive-dealing cases.'") (citation omitted). That principle was recently confirmed by the holding in Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 2000 WL 303035, *15-17, 21 (8th Cir. (Ark.) March 24, 2000) (where volume discount contracts were terminable at will and boat builder customers were free to reject defendant's discounts at any time, the program could not be unreasonable under Section 1 or exclusionary under Section 2).

> never constitute violations at all. This falls short of the proof which would be required to prevail on the § 2 claims, particularly in view of the numerous record comments from high level UST personnel which arguably show an anticompetitive intent rather than a business justification . . . .

Op. at 8. At that time, the Court did not discuss any of the cases cited by U.S. Tobacco, including those that directly addressed specific marketing practices challenged by Conwood – e.g., Beverage Management, which addressed incentive programs analogous to CAP; Kellogg, which addressed SOF=SOM recommendations; and Frito-Lay, which addressed shelf-space recommendations. All of these cases concluded that these practices – whether considered separately or in the aggregate – were ordinary, procompetitive business conduct, and in fact were the norm in the retail industry. At Conwood's suggestion, however, the Court appeared to begin and end its analysis with evidence of U.S. Tobacco's intent. Op. at 8.

Further, the Court did not discuss how U.S. Tobacco's CAP program could possibly be found to be an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power under any applicable law, especially given that other moist snuff manufacturers use similar incentive programs. The Court did not discuss how shelf-space and product mix recommendations to retailers could be found to be an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power under any legal standard, especially given that all moist snuff manufacturers, including Conwood, make suggestions to retailers. The Court did not discuss how providing category management services, requested by retailers and standard in the industry for years, could be found to be an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power, especially given that all moist snuff manufacturers can – and all but Conwood do – provide category management services to retailers. The Court did not discuss how the provision of uniform racks capable of holding all moist snuff products could be found to be an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power, especially given that all moist snuff manufacturers can, and even the smallest moist snuff manufacturer does, provide such racks to retailers. The Court did not discuss how tortious conduct – conduct that can be expected, though not condoned, in a competitive sales environment – could be found to be an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power, especially given that sporadic instances of reciprocal rack and/or POS removal occur by all companies' sales representatives. And, finally, the Court appeared to accept the notion that even if none of U.S. Tobacco's conduct could independently violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act, U.S. Tobacco's conduct could still be "exclusionary" as some type of monopoly "broth." The Court thereby implicitly adopted an extremely broad application of Section 2 of the Sherman Act which has been consistently rejected by courts or has been applied only where some explicit exclusionary conduct was present. See, e.g., Caldera, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., 72 F. Supp. 2d 1295, 1297-1305, 1309 (D. Utah 1999). No such conduct exists here.

The Court's denial of U.S. Tobacco's motion for summary judgment was in error. U.S. Tobacco's intent to beat its rivals in the competition to sell moist snuff, even if carried out aggressively or "unfairly" in the view of Conwood and its experts, is not a violation of the antitrust laws. Accordingly, the Court should grant a new trial, first identifying which specific conduct can be illegal under applicable antitrust precedent and then requiring Conwood to demonstrate (1) that the alleged conduct was in fact an exclusionary use of monopoly power; (2) that the alleged conduct caused harm to competition itself; (3) that the alleged conduct caused harm to Conwood; and (4) that Conwood suffered damages of a fair and reasonable amount flowing from that conduct and nothing else.

2. The Court's In Limine Rulings

Several of the Court's evidentiary rulings on motions in limine filed by both parties were erroneous as a matter of law and resulted in an erroneous jury verdict. Accordingly, the Court should grant a new trial.

(a) Evidence As To Conwood's Owners, Their Wealth, And Their Ability to Compete if They Chose

Under Fed. R. Evid. 403, the Court granted Conwood's motion to preclude U.S. Tobacco from informing the jury that Conwood is owned by a privately-held, multi-national conglomerate many times the size of U.S. Tobacco. The Court concluded that "the probative nature of the inquiry is substantially outweighed by the potential prejudice to Plaintiffs, while causing no harm to Defendants' case." Feb. 23 Op. at 1. Nevertheless, at trial, Conwood's case was all about "BIG" versus small. Conwood argued, on dozens of occasions, that U.S. Tobacco is an "800 pound gorilla," Tr. 2/28 at 105-36 (14 times during opening statement); Tr. 3/28 at 51-93 (14 times during closing argument); that Conwood does not have the resources to compete against U.S. Tobacco, see, e.g., Tr. 2/29 at 104-05, 110; Tr. 3/10 at 69-70, 77-78; and that U.S. Tobacco alone has the ability to influence retailers because of its size, see, e.g., Tr. 3/3 at 76-77. Even the Court recognized the inaccurate picture Conwood was painting for the jury – a large, wealthy company bringing all of its resources to bear in an effort to crush the small, poor, pioneering company started by the war hero in his garage. Tr. 2/29 at 124-31.

Accordingly, the Court's decision based on the "potential prejudice to Plaintiffs" was used at trial by Conwood as a sword instead of a shield. And, because the unfair prejudice to U.S. Tobacco from Conwood's characterizations cannot possibly be overestimated, the Court's observation that its in limine decision would "cause] no harm to Defendants' case" was, in retrospect, not borne out at trial. Indeed, during trial, the Court recognized the inequity its ruling had allowed, but yielding to the persistence of Conwood's counsel, did not permit U.S. Tobacco to inquire into Conwood's ownership. Tr. 2/29 at 124-31. First, the Court commented that counsel for Conwood had given an impression to the jury, during Mr. Rosson's direct examination, that required clarification:

> I think you have played, Mr. Hansen, attempting to play on big more than you needed to make your point about the difference in market share, and to establish, well, establish monopolistic power, I think you did it for purposes of other advocacy. I will allow you [U.S. Tobacco counsel] to ask the question isn't it true that Conwood is some form of subsidiary of companies which are as big or bigger than UST.

Tr. 2/29 at 128. Within two pages of trial transcript, however, the Court reversed itself and did not allow counsel for U.S. Tobacco to ask the critical question of the relative sizes of Conwood and U.S. Tobacco. Tr. 2/29 at 131.[2]

A jury verdict based on only half the story is, by definition, erroneous. A new trial is warranted to tell the whole story.

(b) Dr. Leftwich's Damages Analysis

Defendants moved in limine to preclude the expert damages testimony of Dr. Leftwich. Defendants stated several grounds for the exclusion of this evidence: (1) without doing any economic analysis of the evidence in this case, Dr. Leftwich relied on the "beliefs" of Conwood personnel and on data not used by Conwood for any business purpose; (2) Dr. Leftwich did not relate his damages estimates to any wrongful conduct; (3) Dr. Leftwich did not account for other causal factors demonstrated to have affected Conwood's sales; (4) Dr. Leftwich's "supplemental" damages analysis – the only analysis that could account for a jury verdict of $350 million – was not disclosed as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B); and (5) Dr. Leftwich's "supplemental" damages analysis relied on, as its only basis, the self-serving "surveys" of Conwood sales personnel that were created by Conwood lawyers. The Court denied Defendants' motion. Grounds (1) through (3) are discussed fully in Defendants' Memorandum In Support of Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law. For the reasons discussed in that memorandum, the denial of Defendants' motion based on each of these grounds was error.

---

[2] Counsel for Conwood, of course, continued to "play on big" throughout the case, eliciting testimony about the "800 pound gorilla" from Mr. McClure, a third-party competitor witness. Tr. 3/13 at 102. Again, the Court would not allow U.S. Tobacco to set the record straight. Id.

With respect to Dr. Leftwich's "supplemental" analysis, the Court's denial of Defendants' supplemental motion to preclude Dr. Leftwich's testimony was also error. First, the Court incorrectly concluded that the opinions expressed in paragraphs 5 through 8 of Dr. Leftwich's supplemental expert report "did not present new opinions." In paragraphs 5 through 8, for the first time, Dr. Leftwich used the "surveys" of Conwood personnel to calculate damages, resulting in damages estimates approximately $250 million in excess of what Dr. Leftwich's original methodology produced with corrected data. That is a new analysis, a new basis for damages, and a new conclusion to the tune of an additional $250 million, all undisclosed until January 28, 2000, approximately 5 months after Plaintiffs' expert reports were due to be filed. The disclosure requirements of Rule 26(a)(2)(B) should have applied to the "supplemental" analysis, and allowing U.S. Tobacco to take Dr. Leftwich's deposition on the eve of trial did not provide U.S. Tobacco with adequate time to develop economic analysis responding to Dr. Leftwich's last minute testimony and, therefore, did not "avoid any possible prejudice to Defendants" in allowing Dr. Leftwich to present these new opinions to the jury. See Op. at 5.

Second, with respect to the Conwood employee surveys themselves, the Court recognized the Sixth Circuit's requirement that, under Rule 703, an expert may rely on hearsay, "as long as the evidence is of a kind reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field." Op. at 6 (quoting United States v. Bonds, 12 F.3d 540, 566 (6th Cir. 1993)). The Court, however, made no determination whether experts giving opinions on antitrust damages reasonably rely upon surveys of a plaintiff's employees as a basis for their opinions. The answer is they do not, and in fact, the Sixth Circuit has affirmed the preclusion of expert testimony based on biased hearsay. See Dallas & Mavis Forwarding Co. v. Stegall, 659 F.2d 721, 722 (6th Cir. 1981) (affirming district court's exclusion of expert testimony when the opinion to be offered was hearsay based on story of biased eyewitness).[3] The Court's denial of U.S. Tobacco's motion, and its statement that "[i]t is for the jury to decide any weight to give to the testimony of these experts," did not, in retrospect, fulfill a district court's gate-keeping role under Fed. R. Evid. 702 and 703 as instructed and required by the Supreme Court's Daubert decision. Accordingly, the Court's decision to admit the expert testimony of Dr. Leftwich was error and requires, at a minimum, the grant of a new trial.

(c) Dr. Gundlach's "Exclusive Agreement" Study

U.S. Tobacco also moved in limine to preclude the testimony of Dr. Gundlach pertaining to his compiled list of so-called "exclusive agreements." U.S. Tobacco argued that Dr. Gundlach's "study" lacked foundation because most, if not all, of the documents cited by Dr.

[3] Moreover, the Court concluded – so far as U.S. Tobacco is aware, without any review of the surveys – that the "surveys are not replete with so many obvious errors as to be of no value to the trier of fact." Op. at 6 (quotations omitted). The Court did not discuss the basis of its conclusion, and given Dr. Leftwich's complete non-involvement in the preparation of these self-serving, lawyer-created surveys, Conwood essentially received a free pass through the Daubert gate. See Manual for Complex Litigation (1997), § 21.493.

Gundlach were not agreements of any kind and did not represent the type of agreement that would be considered "exclusionary" either under Section 3 of the Clayton Act or under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. U.S. Tobacco also argued that Dr. Gundlach's characterization of these documents as "exclusive agreements" was misleading to the jury and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

The Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motion, reasoning that Dr. Gundlach was not limited by the requirements of Section 3 of the Clayton Act and that Dr. Gundlach's testimony "is probative and will assist the jury in understanding the alleged widespread anticompetitive behavior of UST." Feb. 23 Op. at 2. Accordingly, Dr. Gundlach was allowed to take the stand at trial and publish to the jury documents that he and Conwood deemed to be "exclusive agreements."

Dr. Gundlach, like Conwood's other liability experts, simply was used by Conwood's counsel as a vehicle to publish and characterize a group of documents to the jury. Dr. Gundlach did not lend any expertise to the "analysis." He is not, and did not claim to be, an expert in determining whether certain documents constituted agreements; nor did he offer any comparative analysis based on his work with either retailers or manufacturers in the retail industry. Nor did he interview, or even review the depositions of, retailers on his list. Tr. 3/9 at 129-32. Indeed, Dr. Gundlach testified that he was not even concerned with the "specific deliberations that went on in the retailers' minds." Tr.3/9 at 148. Dr. Gundlach's testimony is improper expert testimony that should have been excluded by the Court under Fed. R. Evid. 702 and 403. See also, infra, Section 3(a). See Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342, 1352, 1356 (6th Cir. 1994) (reversing jury verdict for plaintiff based, in part, on the testimony of an expert witness who reviewed defendant's reports, without reviewing the underlying facts to make relevant determinations). The Court's failure to preclude the testimony of Dr. Gundlach was error and requires a new trial.

Finally, after the Court allowed Dr. Gundlach to publish documents concerning Wal-Mart to the jury and to characterize such documents as "exclusive agreements," counsel for U.S. Tobacco was not allowed to confront Dr. Gundlach with the deposition testimony of Robert Carlson, Wal-Mart's decision-maker with respect to the moist snuff category. Tr. 3/9 at 152.[4] Mr. Carlson testified that Wal-Mart had no agreement whatsoever with U.S. Tobacco. Tr. 3/16 at Carlson pp. 22-25. This ruling by the Court, in light of the Court's decision to allow Dr. Gundlach to read and characterize documents as "exclusive agreements," was unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

(d) Conwood Is Required To Prove Fact Of Injury At Specific Retail Stores

U.S. Tobacco also moved in limine to require Conwood to make some specific showing of fact of injury. Thus, U.S. Tobacco sought an order requiring Conwood to show that it actually lost sales at specific retail locations. U.S. Tobacco's motion clearly focused on fact of injury, not on the amount of damages. The Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motion under the reasoning that Conwood should not be required – because of time and expense – to show specific lost sales at over 300,000 retail locations nationwide to prove damages.

At a minimum, the Court should have required Conwood to prove actual fact of injury a subset of stores, whether based on sales volume, on locations specifically identified by Dr. Gundlach as having "exclusive agreements" with U.S. Tobacco, or on some other appropriate cross-section. In fact, the top five retailers on Dr. Gundlach's chart of "exclusive agreements," all of whom easily could have been deposed by Conwood, accounted for over one-half of the retail locations covered by Dr. Gundlach's entire study. See Tr. 3/9 at 156-59. From a proper cross-section of retailers, injury in fact arguably could have been demonstrated by some reasonable extrapolation methodology. No such analysis was done.

[4] On redirect examination, counsel for Conwood was then allowed, over objection, to elicit further testimony from Dr. Gundlach concerning "indicia" of an agreement between U.S. Tobacco and Wal-Mart. Tr. 3/9 at 167.

The Court's decision therefore completely freed Conwood of its obligation to prove fact of injury with a "fair degree of certainty." Tr. 3/28 at 106. As discussed above, Conwood failed to present evidence at trial of any lost sales at any retail location, relying instead on (1) the inference that the "800 pound gorilla" must have had some effect on Conwood's sales and (2) a damages study that was devoid of any evidentiary foundation. See supra, Section 2(b). The result of that decision was a $1 billion antitrust verdict – despite the fact that Conwood's sales had increased continuously and without interruption each and every year since the early 1980's, and despite the fact that Conwood's profits had increased each and every year extending back at least into the early 1990's. The Court's denial of U.S. Tobacco's motion was error and requires a new trial during which Conwood should be required actually to prove injury in fact with a fair degree of certainty.

(e) Motion To Preclude Certain Trial Exhibits

U.S. Tobacco moved to preclude the publication of voluminous hearsay statements and documents to the jury through Conwood's expert witnesses. U.S. Tobacco also moved on the ground that such publication would be unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco. Most of these materials were "declarations" or "unethical activity reports" which, if anything, would be relevant to the purely factual question of the extent of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct; they were not the proper subject of "expert" opinion.

The Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motion, reasoning that Conwood had expressed that it would not try to introduce this evidence at trial, that expert witnesses are allowed to rely on hearsay in forming their opinions, and that the probative value of the evidence was not outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. See Feb. 23 Op. at 2 (citing Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999)). Thus, the Court dismissed U.S. Tobacco's concern that inadmissible hearsay would nevertheless find its way to the jury without any opportunity for U.S. Tobacco to cross-examine the declarants:

> The loss of an opportunity to confront witnesses is a key concern any time hearsay testimony is allowed at trial. The Sixth Circuit was certainly aware of this consequence when it allowed expert witnesses to rely upon and discuss hearsay. Accordingly, the Court finds little merit in Defendants' argument.

Feb. 23 Op. at 2.

Of course, Conwood did not merely mention hearsay evidence to the jury because Conwood's experts happened to rely on it. Instead, as described further below, Conwood affirmatively, and quite strategically, relied on its "experts" to present the jury with hearsay evidence, and only to present the jury with hearsay evidence. This issue was revisited many times over the course of the trial, and should not be understood to be limited in scope to U.S. Tobacco's motion in limine. In any event, the denial of U.S. Tobacco's motion itself was in error and requires a new trial.[5]

---

[5] U.S. Tobacco also moved to preclude counsel for Conwood from using prejudicial terms connoting unlawful behavior where there was no evidence of any such behavior on the record. The Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motion, specifically with regard to the term "kickback." Accordingly, counsel for Conwood was free to use the term at will, describing ordinary promotions and buy downs as illegal "kickbacks" paid to Wal-Mart. Conwood had no evidence of any quid pro quo exchanged by Wal-Mart for promotional monies; nor did Conwood even attempt to refute the direct testimony of Robert Carlson from Wal-Mart that U.S. Tobacco promotional monies were not tied in any way to Wal-Mart's decisions with respect to rack, POS, and/or product placements. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 53-54. Again, innuendo and inflammatory comments ruled the day. See, e.g., Tr. 3/28 at 59 (Conwood's closing argument) ("[T]hat did involve kickbacks"; "I don't care if you call it promotions or buybacks or whatever. . . .").

3. The Court's Evidentiary Rulings During Trial

Several of the Court's evidentiary rulings during trial were erroneous as a matter of law and resulted in an erroneous jury verdict. Accordingly, the Court should grant a new trial.

(a) Plaintiffs' Use of "Expert Witnesses"

Conwood retained five expert witnesses, four of whom testified at trial. Throughout the trial, Conwood used its expert witnesses primarily for two improper purposes: (1) to display and read documents to the jury with editorial comments and interpretation, but with little or no factual development or expert analysis; and (2) to present to the jury the existence of inadmissible evidence with the implied, if not express, message to the jury that such evidence was probative of Conwood's case. Conwood's use of expert witnesses extended well beyond the bounds of Rules 702 and 703 and reached well within the bounds of Rule 403.

(i) "Human Highlighters"

Even a cursory review of the testimony of Drs. Kamien, Gundlach and Blattberg – Conwood's three "liability expert witnesses" – indicates that Conwood's purpose in calling these "experts" was to channel in its documentary evidence. Rule 702 requires "scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge" that "will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue." Fed. R. Evid. 702. Hiring university professors to read documents and to highlight certain inflammatory language to the jury is not within the ambit of Rule 702.

Dr. Kamien, an expert economist, read documents to the jury for well over five hours on his first and second days of testimony. The Court so noted. Tr. 3/1 at 146-47. Dr. Kamien continued for several more hours when he returned to the stand on March 3, 2000. See Tr. 3/3. Conwood conducted this aspect of Dr. Kamien's direct examination under the guise of presenting the basis for Dr. Kamien's opinions. Dr. Kamien's complete testimony, however, was all basis and few, if any, opinions. U.S. Tobacco objected to the factual and cumulative nature of such "foundation" testimony and the transparency of its obvious intent to prejudice U.S. Tobacco. Tr. 3/1 at 5. Nevertheless, Dr. Kamien was allowed to wade through volumes of documents while the jury followed along with multi-colored highlighters in binder sets which Conwood prepared and made available to the jury. See Tr. 3/1 and 3/3. Dr. Kamien – again, supposedly testifying as an expert economist – also was allowed to testify as to the authors' state of mind when they wrote the documents being reviewed. See, e.g., Tr. 2/29 at 277-80 (testifying about what U.S. Tobacco personnel were "talking about" when writing certain phrases in documents).

Similarly, as discussed above, Dr. Gundlach – supposedly testifying as a marketing professor – did little more than read documents and tell the jury that the documents represented "exclusive agreements." Dr. Gundlach did not lend any expertise. He did not do any studies; he did not draw any comparisons to the dealings of manufacturers of other packaged products. The depth of Dr. Gundlach's analysis – and its detachment from his claimed expertise – is perhaps best exemplified by his "expert" opinion that, because a retailer's letter to its own stores was distributed on U.S. Tobacco letterhead, it indicated that U.S. Tobacco was in control of the particular retailer's decision. Tr. 3/9 at 82; 150-51.

Finally, Dr. Blattberg – supposedly testifying as an expert in category management – waxed on at length about what authors meant when they wrote documents relating to category management, including that they felt "guilty" about it. Tr. 3/13 at 248-49, 256. Dr. Blattberg then proceeded to testify that, under his interpretation of U.S. Tobacco's documents and testimony, U.S. Tobacco was "violating" his principles of category management. Id. Conwood, of course, had every opportunity to depose the authors of these documents, but in nearly every instance chose not to for what are now obvious strategic reasons.

In sum, rather than presenting competent evidence through witnesses with personal knowledge, Conwood chose to use hired experts to say what they wanted the jury to hear. Thus, rather than presenting opinions to "assist the trier of fact," Conwood presented its expert witnesses as factual surrogates, complete with summaries and interpretations that, predictably, were perfectly consistent with Conwood's theories in this case. This is improper expert testimony. Accordingly, a new trial should be granted.

(ii) Hearsay Through Experts

Conwood did not stop at using its experts to read admissible documents. Conwood also channeled inadmissible evidence through its experts. The use of Dr. Leftwich – Conwood's damages expert – for this purpose is discussed in full above. Conwood's primary channels of inadmissible evidence, however, were Dr. Kamien and the theatrical performance of Conwood's lead trial counsel during the cross-examination of Dr. Scheffman.

Through Dr. Kamien, Conwood was allowed, over U.S. Tobacco's objections, to inform the jury by expert testimony and by demonstrative aid that (1) over 226 Conwood employees gave "sworn declarations" that U.S. Tobacco's "conduct was widespread across the United States"; (2) over 60 retailers gave "sworn testimony" that U.S. Tobacco's "conduct was widespread across the United States"; (3) over 400 retailers signed "statements" that U.S. Tobacco's "conduct was widespread across the United States"; and (4) Conwood employees submitted over 1,200 "unethical activity reports" that U.S. Tobacco's "conduct was widespread across the United States." See Tr. 2/28 at 264-65; Tr. 2/29 at 7-9; Tr. 3/1 at 36-37. None of this information, of course, was in evidence in this case at any time, and none was relevant to what would be a proper expert opinion in the case.

The dramatic publication of this "sworn testimony" was even more prejudicial when presented through the questioning of Dr. Scheffman by Conwood's counsel. While telling the Court throughout the case that he merely wished to ask Dr. Scheffman whether he considered these materials, Conwood's counsel obviously had something very different in mind: dropping large binders of "evidence" on U.S. Tobacco's counsel table and, with a flourish, on the witness stand in front of Dr. Scheffman; publishing the content of the Conwood employee declarations through his questions; trying to get Dr. Scheffman to refer to Conwood employees as "liars;" and, ultimately at closing referring to these declarations as "testimony" that Dr. Scheffman ignored like a "dead cat" dropped in his lap. See Tr. 3/23 at 164-70, 176-78, 187-88; Tr. 3/28 at 77-78. All of these highly calculated theatrics were improper and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco.

There can be no doubt that the presentation of this inadmissible evidence to the jury was unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco. And, the Court's limiting instruction, see Tr. 3/1 at 37, was insufficient to unring the bell that Conwood's counsel rang with Dr. Kamien, rang again during the cross-examination of Dr. Scheffman, Tr. 3/23 at 164-70, 176-78, 187-88, and rang again during closing argument. Tr. 3/28 at 77-78. This is not the proper use of expert testimony contemplated by the Sixth Circuit in Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999). The Court's decision to allow the presentation was error and, for this reason, a new trial is warranted.

(b) Plaintiffs' Use of "Fact" Witnesses as Expert Witnesses

Conwood also was allowed to introduce expert opinion testimony through its fact witnesses. First, Mr. Rosson, Conwood's Chairman, was allowed to testify about financials and other

U.S. Tobacco documents based on studies prepared by "staff" and, according to Conwood's counsel at side bar, by Kellogg Huber attorneys. See Tr. 2/28 at 236-46. This could not constitute proper subject matter for a lay witness. Indeed, prior to his testimony, Conwood's counsel argued to the Court that Mr. Rosson intended to testify that Conwood's share of the "market" would have been 6% to 10% higher, and that Mr. Rosson is "the greatest expert of tobacco I've ever seen." Tr. 2/29 at 115. Conwood's counsel also revealed that Conwood's purpose in presenting this testimony was essentially to use Mr. Rosson as a damages expert: "it's a piece of [the damages] puzzle that we need to have fit." Tr. 2/29 at 116. Thus, with this lawyer-prepared "basis," Mr. Rosson was allowed to render his opinion concerning what Conwood's market share would have been in the absence of U.S. Tobacco's misconduct, as well as what the relevant product market is for antitrust purposes in this case. See id.; Tr. 2/29 at 115-19. Further, over U.S. Tobacco's objection, Conwood's counsel was allowed to present Mr. Rosson's testimony in the form of a simple damages chart for use in opening and closing arguments. Tr. 3/28 at 6-7; Tr. 3/28 at 60-61. Again, this was a blatant – and successful – effort to use Mr. Rosson as a damages expert, even though he was not offered as one prior to trial, was therefore never cross-examined on these issues before trial, and had no basis but pure speculation to claim $400 million in damages from U.S. Tobacco.

Similarly, Mr. McClure, the former Executive Vice President of Swedish Match, was allowed to testify regarding what Swedish Match's sales share would have been "in the absence of UST tactics." See Tr. 3/13 at 41-43. No basis was given for this testimony other than Mr. McClure's having previously worked for Swedish Match. The Court sustained U.S. Tobacco's objection consistent with its ruling regarding Mr. Price's earlier attempt to give the same testimony. Tr. 3/13 at 42. Nonetheless, immediately after that side bar, the Court permitted counsel for Conwood to proceed with the same line of questioning and to elicit the objectionable opinion testimony. Tr. 3/13 at 42-43. U.S. Tobacco moved to strike the testimony and the Court overruled the motion. Tr. 3/13 at 43. Mr. McClure also was allowed to testify that it was simply a "figment of somebody's imagination" that a retailer could make an independent decision – a critical issue in this case. This testimony, too, was exploited by Conwood's counsel during closing. Tr. 3/28 at 89.[6]

In both of these instances, Conwood was attempting to bolster the woefully deficient damages testimony of Dr. Leftwich, or in Conwood's own words, it was "a piece of the puzzle [they] needed to have fit." See Tr. 2/29 at 16. U.S. Tobacco has, in prior motions, referred to Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis as a "house of cards." A more accurate description would be a pre-fabricated house that was created and then transported to Paducah with the hope of laying some proper foundation there. Antitrust damages, however, should be calculated from a proper foundation. A foundation should not be retrofitted to a damages calculation.

(c) Plaintiffs' Comments and Questions Concerning "Availability" of U.S. Tobacco Employee Witnesses

The Court also allowed Conwood's counsel to question and comment about the "availability" of U.S. Tobacco employee witnesses, reaching a crescendo during closing argument where a long list of U.S. Tobacco employees was scrolled on a video screen before the jury. See Tr. 3/28 at 81-82. Such questions and comments were irrelevant, misleading, and unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco. As an initial matter, "availability" has a specific legal meaning under Fed. R. Civ.

[6] In addition, over numerous objections by U.S. Tobacco, the Court permitted Mr. McClure, as well as Mr. Price, to testify about alleged pervasive misconduct by U.S. Tobacco "in the field." Not only was such testimony without foundation, it was in direct contravention of Magistrate Judge Moyer's May 11, 1999 Order precluding testimony concerning "field" misconduct from witnesses not disclosed in September 1999 pursuant to that Order.

16diii005459

P. 32 – a witness is unavailable if he or she resides more than 100 miles from the place of trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(3)(B). It does not mean, as Conwood counsel repeatedly implied, that a witness' schedule happens to be free. Moreover, Conwood chose Paducah, Kentucky as the forum in which to try this case with full knowledge that Greenwich, Connecticut is more than 100 miles from Paducah. By filing in a forum near U.S. Tobacco's headquarters, Conwood could have ensured its ability to call any live witnesses from Greenwich it desired. Finally, for over two years, Conwood had unlimited access to all U.S. Tobacco personnel for the purposes of deposition, and the videotapes could have been played at trial. Accordingly, questions and comments about a person's availability were improper and intended only to create the misleading and unfairly prejudicial impression before the jury that U.S. Tobacco was somehow hiding witnesses.

The Court recognized the intention of Conwood's counsel, as well as the prejudicial nature of the questions and comments, and ruled accordingly:

> But I don't think it's fair comment for you to say, "We asked them to bring them here and they didn't bring them." Because you chose the forum. For some reason the unlikely place of Paducah, Kentucky, was chosen to try this case and I think it would be improper to say that we asked them to bring them here and they didn't bring them. I'm not going to allow you to do that.

Tr. 2/28 at 16. Nevertheless, counsel for Conwood repeatedly, over objection and without admonition, was allowed to ask U.S. Tobacco live witnesses about the "availability" of other witnesses. See, e.g., Tr. 3/6 at 48; Tr. 3/16 at 54; Tr. 3/20 at 56-57; Tr 3/21 at 116-17. Moreover, Conwood counsel was allowed to argue in closing that Mr. Segelstrom, a U.S. Tobacco employee, was "hiding up in Greenwich with the rest of them," Tr. 3/28 at 79-80, and that U.S. Tobacco "is a company that wouldn't bring the top executives who hatched the plan and made sure it was carried out." Tr. 3/28 at 91. Conwood's counsel made these arguments in spite of the Court's ruling that it would be improper to emphasize that U.S. Tobacco didn't bring witnesses to Paducah. See Tr. 2/28 at 16.

There can be no doubt that questions, comments, and arguments concerning the unavailability of U.S. Tobacco witnesses were unfairly prejudicial to U.S. Tobacco. That was Conwood's intention. That was the effect. Accordingly, a new trial is warranted.

4. The Court's Jury Instructions

During trial, U.S. Tobacco made several objections to the Court's jury instructions. First, U.S. Tobacco objected to the removal of the word "predatory" from the Court's Instruction 2.4: Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power. Second, U.S. Tobacco objected to the Court's refusal to include U.S. Tobacco's proffered instruction on nominal damages.

(a) Removal of "Predatory"

Upon suggestion by Conwood's counsel, the Court replaced the word "predatory" with "restrictive" in its instruction to the jury on Willful Maintenance of Monopoly Power – i.e., its instruction on conduct. This change was highly significant given the importance in this case of the jury's consideration of specific conduct and the jury's determination of whether any conduct was competitive or anticompetitive. "Predatory" is a proper instruction. "Restrictive" does not say enough.

As described in detail in U.S. Tobacco's memorandum in support of its motion for judgment as a matter of law, conduct that is "predatory" includes only conduct that would be irrational absent its effect of eliminating competition. Predatory conduct violates the antitrust laws. On the other hand, conduct that is "restrictive" may include conduct that is procompetitive, but nevertheless "restricts" competition. Thus, restrictive conduct may or may not violate the antitrust laws. This is a critical distinction, prevalent in antitrust jurisprudence. For example, predatory pricing is unlawful because there is no rational, legitimate business reason for pricing below cost. Promotional pricing that may affect competitors, however, may be "restrictive," and may have (in the words of the Court's instruction to the jury), "the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market." Tr. 3/28 at 103. But, promotional pricing, even if restrictive, is perfectly legitimate and procompetitive conduct.

Accordingly, the Court's omission of the word "predatory" and the substitution of "restrictive" was in error and requires the grant of a new trial.

(b) Instruction on Nominal Damages

After moving in limine and twice for a directed verdict on the issue of antitrust damages, U.S. Tobacco moved the Court to include in its jury instructions a charge on nominal damages. The Court, however, refused to include a nominal damages instruction.

After the close of Conwood's case, U.S. Tobacco moved for judgment as a matter of law. At that time, the Court commented that "if [the Court] thought there was a weakness in the plaintiff's case, it's more in the damages issue." Tr. 3/14 at 95. Nevertheless, the Court declined to include a nominal damages instruction to the jury. As a result, the jury was left with the impression that, if it found U.S. Tobacco liable under the antitrust laws, it was compelled to award Conwood damages in spite of the lack of evidence supporting any fair and reasonable damages award. In addition, the only damage amounts the jury had as a reference were the astronomical figures proposed by Conwood. Accordingly, and especially in light of the enormous verdict, the Court's omission of a nominal damages instruction was in error and requires a new trial.

II. IN THE ALTERNATIVE, THE COURT SHOULD ENTER A REMITTITUR

Defendants respectfully request that, in the alternative to granting U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law or to granting a new trial, the Court should enter a remittitur, reducing the damages award to an amount at least arguably supported by the evidence. As described above, U.S. Tobacco's position is that Conwood completely failed to prove damages, and the jury's verdict represents mere speculation and guesswork. Accordingly, no damages award whatsoever would be supported by the evidence. In the alternative, however, the Court should enter a remittitur that, at a minimum, attempts to account for the growth of Swisher and Swedish Match, and other demonstrable causes of Conwood's claim of stagnation.

"[E]xcessiveness of a verdict is primarily a matter for the trial court and the judge's conscience . . . ." Katch v. Speidel, 746 F.2d 1136, 1143 (6th Cir. 1984); see id. at 1143-44 (further reducing damages award where the court concluded that the damages award, even after remittitur, exceeded the maximum amount supported by established facts). In antitrust cases, it is appropriate for a district court to reduce a damages award by an amount sufficient to account for causes other than the conduct found to violate the antitrust laws. See Tennessee Consol. Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers of America, 416 F.2d 1192, 1195, 1203 (6th Cir. 1969) (affirming district court's remittitur of $500,000 from a $977,500 damages award because it "fully took into account [defendant's] claims that causes other than its violations of the anti-trust laws may have contributed to the damage").

Remittitur has also been found to be appropriate where the damages estimates offered by an expert witness were too speculative to support the jury's damages award, and where there was insufficient expert testimony to establish a causal link between the alleged violation and the damages award. See, e.g., Parkway Garage, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, Civ. A. No. 90-7752, 1994 WL

412430, *7 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 3, 1994). In Parkway Garage, the jury awarded plaintiff $5 million. The court, however, found that the testimony of plaintiff's expert witness was unreliable to establish causation and, as a result, the expert's calculations of damages were too speculative to support the jury's verdict. Accordingly, the court concluded that the evidence supported a damages award of no more than $53,002.83 and remitted the balance, $4,946,997.20. See id. at *8-9.

An appropriate remittitur is warranted here. Conwood's own failure to associate its damages estimates with any alleged misconduct, or even with any actual demonstration of lost sales, however, makes it difficult to determine the amount of such a remittitur. Given the many flaws in Dr. Leftwich's analysis, the Court should, at a bare minimum, enter a remittitur adjusting the jury's damages award to the minimum range offered by Dr. Leftwich in his original damages study after he adjusted for data errors: $113 million.

In the alternative, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that the Court consider Conwood's own theory based on market share. As discussed in more detail above, Conwood argues that its share would have been approximately 10 share points higher absent U.S. Tobacco's misconduct, or conversely, that U.S. Tobacco unlawfully maintained 10 share points through exclusionary conduct. This estimate is based on Conwood's performance prior to 1990, the year U.S. Tobacco's alleged campaign of exclusionary conduct supposedly began. Conwood and Dr. Leftwich, however, completely ignore the effects of the growth of Swisher and Swedish Match, which this Court can and should take into account.

Accordingly, using Conwood's 10 share points as a basis, this Court should attempt to determine how much of the 10 share points would have been captured by the growth of Swisher and Swedish Match. Thus, the Court should reduce Conwood's damages award by a dollar amount representative of the fraction of those 10 share points. During the relevant four-year damages period, the combined share of Swisher and Swedish Match grew from 4.5% to over 9% of the moist snuff segment, or, in other words, they captured an average of 6.8% of sales in the marketplace. So, rather than determine damages based on a speculative guess that Conwood's share would have been 10 points higher, this Court should consider the evidence of the growth of Swisher and Swedish Match and adjust the damages accordingly; 6.8 share points out of 10 share points leaves 3.2 share points for Conwood. The amount of the remittitur – based on this measured proven success of Swisher and Swedish Match alone – would be therefore .68 x $350 million or $238 million, yielding a modified damages verdict in the amount of $112 million. It should be noted that the amount of that remittitur would be conservative given the fact that, according to the logic if not the proof of Conwood's own theory, Swisher and Swedish Match would have gained more share absent the alleged exclusionary conduct by U.S. Tobacco. See Tr. 3/7 at 248-49, 252-53; Tr. 3/13 at 42-43.[7]

In addition, other causal factors such as the independent decisions of retailers would support a further remittitur of the damages award. For example, according to Conwood, Wal-Mart accounts for approximately 8-10% of all moist snuff sales. Based on the undisputed evidence that Wal-Mart made all decisions with respect to the display and sale of moist snuff in Wal-Mart stores, a further remittitur of 8-10% is warranted. Accordingly, using an average of 9% and the $112 million figure that accounts for the growth of Swisher and Swedish Match, the Court should modify the damages further by $10.8 million to $101,020,000.[8]

[7] This, too, was something Dr. Leftwich never considered. See Leftwich Dep. at 193-96.

Wal-Mart, of course, is just one example of a chain store. Similar adjustments to the jury's damages award would be necessary for all chain stores that made independent decisions that may have affected Conwood's sales. As Conwood's counsel pointed out during Conwood's closing argument, 60% of the nation's retail outlets employ sophisticated buyers that make reasoned decisions. Tr. 3128 at 102. An adjustment to the damages award to account for these decisions would result in damages of $40,408,000. Moreover, according to Conwood's theory, Conwood also was excluded from K-Mart – Conwood racks were not authorized and its distribution was limited to one facing of Kodiak. Tr. 3/10 at 88-89, 135-36 (DX 856). But Swisher, not U.S. Tobacco, worked with K-Mart to develop that store set and plan-o-gram. Id. To the extent Conwood sales suffer a similar decline when Swisher provides input to a retailer, a further remittance to account for K-Mart (and the Tom Thumb chain, which also uses Swisher racks exclusively, Tr. 3/10 at 136-37) is warranted.

These, of course, are merely crude attempts to capture the effects of causal factors that were not accounted for by Conwood or by Dr. Leftwich, and thus were included in the jury's damages award. Another approach to determining an appropriate remittitur would be affirmatively to evaluate all of the evidence offered by Conwood to demonstrate its claimed lost sales as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct. U.S. Tobacco is confident that any effort on behalf of the Court to do so would reveal that there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury, or the Court, to determine a fair and reasonable amount of damages.

remittitur would be warranted.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that as an alternative to granting judgment as a matter of law, the Court order a new trial, or in the alternative, enter a remittitur, reducing the damages award to an amount, if any, supported by the record evidence.

DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR PERMISSION TO CONDUCT POST-VERDICT JUROR INTERVIEWS

Defendants United States Tobacco Company, et al. ("U.S. Tobacco") respectfully move the Court for permission to interview jurors in this case. At trial, numerous U.S. Tobacco marketing practices were challenged as "exclusionary" and violative of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. In order to communicate more effectively with its shareholders, insurers and other constituents, U.S. Tobacco needs a clearer understanding of which of its marketing practices were perceived by the jury as exclusionary.

ARGUMENT

The decision whether to allow interviews of jurors after a verdict is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. See Wilkerson v. Johnson, 699 F.2d 326, 330 (6th Cir. 1983); United States v. Franks, 511 F.2d 25, 38 (6th Cir. 1975); see also LR 47.1 (court's permission must be obtained for post-verdict juror interview). Although juror interviews may be refused when intended as a fishing expedition to ultimately challenge the basis for the verdict, they clearly are allowed if sought for a proper purpose. See McCullough v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 937 F.2d 1167, 1168 (6th Cir. 1991) (clarification of verdict sought); cf. Wilkerson, 699 F.2d at 330 (request denied because defendants sought only to demonstrate lack of evidence to support verdict); Franks, 511 F.2d at 37 (same).

The jury's verdict in this case does not shed any light on what conduct was found to be in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. U.S. Tobacco therefore seeks to interview the jurors in this case solely to gain an understanding of which marketing practices were perceived as unlawfully exclusionary. This process will help U.S. Tobacco to: (i) comply with its disclosure obligations as a publicly held company under the securities laws; (ii) provide necessary information to its insurers and sureties; and (iii) better understand which marketing practices the jury perceived as unlawful under the antitrust laws. U.S. Tobacco has no intention of securing specific information on which to base a challenge to the jury's verdict.

U.S. Tobacco recognizes the difficulty in reconvening the entire jury to be interviewed. U.S. Tobacco therefore moves this Court for permission to interview the foreman if he is willing, in addition to any other jurors who agree to be interviewed. In this regard, U.S. Tobacco wishes to report to the Court that after the trial one of the jurors contacted one of its attorneys by telephone, wanting to discuss the deliberations, the verdict and the judgment. The attorney did not seek to interview the juror at that time. From this contact, however, it is apparent that at least one juror would not object to the interviews U.S. Tobacco seeks.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that this Court permit post-verdict interviews of jurors willing to be interviewed.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST, INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P. and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. ("Conwood") move pursuant to Section 16 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 26) and Section 2 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 2) for a permanent injunction to provide relief from the effects of defendants United States Tobacco Company, United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company, Inc., United States Tobacco Manufacturing Company, Inc., and UST, Inc.'s ("UST") illegal conduct in monopolizing the moist snuff market. The injunction is also necessary to end UST's illegal conduct once and for all -- as defendants have promised that it will continue, without change, in their recent post-trial communications with customers. See UST Letter to All Customers, March 30, 2000 (attached hereto as Exh. A).

It is well-established that a trial court should grant appropriate injunctive relief following a finding that defendants violated the antitrust laws. The injunctive relief remedies continuing and threatened harm from defendants' conduct. See Stone v. William Beaumont Hosp., 782 F.2d 609, 617 (6th Cir. 1986) ("plaintiff may obtain injunctive relief simply by demonstrating a 'significant threat of injury from an impending violation of the antitrust laws or from a contemporary violation likely to continue or recur'") (quoting Bender v. Southland Corp., 749 F.2d 1205, 1214 (6th Cir. 1984)).

Such an injunction is necessary here to serve at least three critical purposes that the jury's damage award cannot fulfill because there is no adequate remedy at law. As the Sixth Circuit has recognized, "Section 16 injunctive relief has three primary purposes: '(1) putting an end to illegal conduct, (2) depriving violators of the benefits of their illegal conduct, and (3) restoring competition in the marketplace.'" Arthur S. Langenderfer v. S.E. Johnson Co., 729 F.2d 1050, 1059 (6th Cir. 1984) (quoting In re Multidistrict Vehicle Air Pollution, 538 F.2d 231, 234 (9th Cir. 1976)), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036 (1984); see also United States v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 391 U.S. 244, 250 (1968) (same); Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 405 U.S. 562, 573-75 (1972); International Boxing Club v. United States, 358 U.S. 242, 253 (1959); United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 607-08 (1957).

I. CONWOOD IS ENTITLED TO PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Under Section 16 of the Clayton Act "[a]ny person, firm, corporation, or association shall be entitled to sue for and have injunctive relief . . . against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 26. The eleven-person jury verdict in this case establishes that "loss or damage" to Conwood from an antitrust violation was not merely threatened; it in fact occurred. UST's conduct has been found to violate the antitrust laws. The only remaining question is the need for an injunction to protect consumers from the effects of such unlawful conduct in the future. See, e.g., Beacon Theatres, Inc. v. Westover, 359 U.S. 500 (1959); Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 130 (1969) (injunctive relief appropriate under Section 16 to enjoin "a contemporary violation [that is] likely to continue or recur").

Once the finder of fact has determined that a violation of Section 2 has been proved, it is the duty of the Court to ensure that the anticompetitive conduct ceases:

> It is of course established that, in a Section 2 case, upon appropriate findings of violation, it is the duty of the Court to prescribe relief which will terminate the illegal monopoly, deny to the defendant the fruits of its statutory violation, and ensure that there remain no practices likely to result in monopolization > in the future . . . . The trial court is charged with inescapable responsibility to achieve this objective. United States v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 391 U.S. 244, 250 (1968) (emphasis added and citations omitted).

Under the antitrust laws, "courts are authorized, indeed required, to decree relief effective to redress the violations." United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 366 U.S. 316, 326 (1961) (emphasis added). Accordingly, "[t]he courts have an obligation, once a violation of the antitrust laws has been established, to protect the public from a continuation of the harmful and unlawful activities." United States v. Parke, Davis & Co., 362 U.S. 29, 48 (1960) (emphasis added).

These principles are equally applicable to private actions under the antitrust laws. "The purpose of giving private parties treble-damage and injunctive remedies was not merely to provide private relief, but was to serve as well the high purpose of enforcing the antitrust laws," and "Section 16 should be construed and applied with this purpose in mind." Zenith Radio, 395 U.S. at 130-31. See also California v. American Stores Co., 495 U.S. 271, 284 (1990) (same). Private actions are no different from government actions: they "serve the public interest in that 'they effectively pry open to competition a market that has been closed by defendants' illegal restraints.'" Id. at 133 (quoting International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U.S. 392, 401 (1947)). Conwood's proposed injunctive relief protects the public as well as Conwood from anticompetitive conduct that UST has vowed it will continue unless enjoined.[1]

II. THE ORDER PROPOSED BY CONWOOD WILL ACHIEVE THE THREE PURPOSES FOR SECTION 16 INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

The proposed injunction serves each of the three primary purposes for section 16 relief. Arthur S. Langenderfer, 729 F.2d at 1059. Each of these purposes will be aided by entry of the narrowly tailored order proposed by Conwood.

A. Only Permanent Injunctive Relief Will Put an End to UST's Illegal Conduct

UST has pursued a calculated policy of anticompetitive activity for years. At its 1993 "Top Gun" meeting of executives and high level sales personnel, for example, UST touted a "Chain Strategy" to "eliminate competitive distribution" and pursue "exclusive vending." PX 9. In 1996, UST executives adopted a written goal to combat competitive price value brands by

---

[1]Courts have fashioned broad and permanent injunctive relief in a variety of contexts after a private plaintiff prevailed at trial. See, e.g., Image Technical Servs., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2386 (N.D. Ca. February 26, 1996) (five-year injunction requiring Kodak to sell all manner of repair parts to independent service organizations and to notify Kodak customers henceforth these third-parties will have full access to Kodak parts); Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 911 F. Supp. 510 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (requiring defendants to provide all of their customers with a copy of the court's injunction and provide antitrust training for all employees); International Distribution Centers, Inc. v. Walsh Trucking Co., Inc., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701 (S.D. N.Y. January 8, 1986) (prohibiting defendants from hiring plaintiff's employees, making false or misleading representations about plaintiff, and imposing tariff and price restrictions on defendants' provision of certain trucking services) controlling their growth through, among other things, choking their distribution. PX 45. UST even made plans to give Conwood a "serious whack" where Kodiak was doing well and to get aggressive with Helme once Helme reached a 5 percent market share threshold. PX 14. Of course, UST supplemented these programs and strategies with a healthy dose of simply ripping out competitors' racks and POS at retail. See, e.g., Trial testimony of Bill Rosson at 226-28 (Feb. 29, 2000); Terry Williams at 44-48 (Mar. 10, 2000); Lou Marano at 222-23 (Feb. 28, 2000); Doug Hynek at 206 (Mar. 8, 2000); Gary Ryan at 126-33 (Mar. 8, 2000). All of these strategies were premeditated at the highest corporate levels. See, e.g., PX 68 (UST President Gary Smith praising sales personnel for winning exclusive vending at corporate 7-11 stores); PX 123 (memo to Gary Milano reporting that CAP program is being used to push competitors' displays under the counter at retail).[2]

Both before and after the verdict, UST publicly stated that it has no intention of changing its conduct in any way. On the witness stand, Chairman of the Board Vincent Gierer testified that UST has no plans to change any of the ways it deals with retailers or competitors in the marketplace. Trial Tr. at 88-89

[2]In the wake of this lawsuit, Mr. Smith has "retired effective immediately citing personal reasons." UST Press Release, Apr. 3, 2000 <http://www.shareholder.com/ust/news/releases.htm

(Mar. 21, 2000). Even after the verdict, Mr. Gierer remained defiant. He stated publicly that the magnitude of the damages "was completely unjustified given the evidence presented. . . . [O]ur conduct did not violate the antitrust laws." UST Press Release, Mar. 29, 2000 (attached hereto as Exh. B). In an open letter to all customers, UST reiterated its intention to continue with business as usual: "[T]he actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. . . . We will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us." UST Letter to All Customers, Mar. 30, 2000 (Exh. A).

Such denial of wrongdoing weighs heavily in favor of permanent injunctive relief. See Blue Cross & Blue Shield United v. Marshfield Clinic, 883 F. Supp. 1247, 1263 (W.D. Wisc. 1995) (defendants' continuing denials of wrongdoing means that "[c]onsequently, there is a threat that defendants will continue to violate the antitrust laws"), rev'd on other grounds and remanded, 65 F.3d 1406 (7th Cir.), reh'g denied, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 29056 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1184 (1996). See also Wilk v. American Medical Association, 895 F.2d 352, 367 (7th Cir. 1990) (defendant's refusal to acknowledge wrongdoing significant in court's determination that no adequate remedy at law existed). UST's statements and actions to date demonstrate that none of its illegal conduct will stop absent an injunction.[3]

B. The Entry of Permanent Injunctive Relief Will Deprive UST of the Benefits of its Conduct

UST should not be allowed to benefit from its existing exclusive vending agreements and other exclusionary programs.[4] Even if UST were to refrain from entering into exclusive/exclusionary agreements in the future, it would continue to benefit from arrangements already in place. Thus, a

[3]The Court is not limited to enjoining conduct found to be illegal. The Court has the discretion to issue a permanent injunction to restore competition, even if that injunction prohibits practices that would otherwise be legal. E.g., United States v. Loew's, Inc., 371 U.S. 38, 53 (1962) ("to ensure . . . that relief is effectual, otherwise permissible practices connected with the acts found to be illegal must sometimes be enjoined").

[4]Permanent injunctive relief is appropriate to prohibit the execution or continuation of agreements or contracts that are unlawful under the antitrust laws. In United States v. National Lead Co., 332 U.S. 319 (1947), the Supreme Court upheld a District Court injunction which mandated the cancellation and enjoined enforcement of contracts that violated Sherman Act § 1. The decree enjoined the defendants from "entering into, adhering to, maintaining or furthering, directly or indirectly, any contract, agreement, undertaking, plan or program" that resulted in a restraint of trade. 332 U.S. at 328-29. In Pacific Coast Agricultural Export Ass'n v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 959 (1976), the Ninth Circuit upheld the district court's injunction terminating the defendants' exclusive sales agreement. Similarly, in Zenith Radio, the Supreme Court restored an injunction proscribing the defendant from "[e]ntering into, adhering to, enforcing or claiming any rights under any contract, agreement, understanding, plan or program" that resulted in a restraint on the plaintiff. 395 U.S. at 130 n.23.

permanent injunction is necessary to prevent UST from profiting from its past illegal successes.

C. The Entry of Permanent Injunctive Relief Will Restore Competition to the Marketplace

Permanent injunctive relief to protect competition and the interests of consumers is a critical component of private antitrust actions.[5] Here, a permanent injunction is necessary to promote unrestrained competition in the market for the benefit of consumers. UST maintained its monopoly by means the jury has found to be unlawful. The unrefuted evidence at trial demonstrated that UST's practices did not benefit consumers, but harmed them by limiting actual product choice and raising prices. See, e.g., Testimony of R. Blattberg, Tr. at 230-31 (fewer alternatives to UST products actually in stores); PX 326.4 (showing higher prices where UST has a greater percentage of facings). For full and unfettered competition to develop, UST's exclusionary practices must be enjoined to allow Conwood and others to compete fairly and freely.

[5]In entering a permanent injunction "[t]he essential consideration is that the remedy shall be effective and fair as possible in preventing continued or future violations of the Antitrust Act in the light of the facts of the particular case." United States v. National Lead Co., 332 U.S. at 335.

16diii005492

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the injunctive relief requested by Conwood should be granted in its entirety.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

As many of you may already know, on Tuesday, March 28, 2000, a Kentucky jury rendered a verdict against United States Tobacco and awarded $350 million to the plaintiff, Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws. The verdict, as required by the antitrust laws, has been trebled, resulting in a total award of over $1 billion.

United States Tobacco believes strongly that our moist snuff marketing and promotion programs do not violate the antitrust laws and we have already begun the steps necessary to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal. We believe that United States Tobacco, Conwood and other companies in the moist snuff business compete in a highly competitive marketplace, and that the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. KENTUCKY JURY RENDERS VERDICT AGAINST U. S. TOBACCO CO. IN ANTITRUST CASE

GREENWICH. Conn.. March 29, 2000 – UST Inc. announced today that a Kentucky jury had rendered a verdict against its subsidiary, United States Tobacco Company, awarding $350 million in damages to Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws that U. S. Tobacco had engaged in exclusionary and anticompetitive conduct in the marketing and promotion of moist smokeless tobacco products. The verdict, when entered as a judgment, will be subject to trebling under the federal antitrust laws.

"We are extremely disappointed by the jury's verdict. We believe that the plaintiff failed to prove its case under applicable law, especially in light of the voluminous evidence which clearly shows that U.S. Tobacco and Conwood compete in a highly competitive marketplace. We also believe that the size of the award was completely unjustified given the evidence presented at trial."

"We continue to believe that our conduct did not violate the antitrust laws and intend to take all steps to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal," stated Vincent A. Gierer, Jr., Chairman and Chief Executive Officer.

The Company intends to file motions with the Court in the next ten days to overturn the verdict by seeking a judgment as a matter of law or, in the alternative, a new trial. If the District Court fails to enter a judgment in the Company's favor as a matter of law or order a new trial, the Company intends to appeal the judgment to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Company also has begun taking the steps to enable it to satisfy any bonding which may be required.

PROPOSED ORDER FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 26, the Court orders that defendants United States Tobacco Company, United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company Inc., United States Tobacco Manufacturing Company Inc. and UST Inc. and all persons acting in concert with defendants (collectively, "UST") shall be enjoined for a period of five (5) years as follows:

I. UST shall not:

(a) eliminate, remove, deface, alter, obscure or otherwise manipulate any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, counter displays or other advertising (including, but not limited to, "point of sale" advertising such as "header cards"), except with the prior written consent of the relevant competitor, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld.

(b) induce, influence, materially cause or seek to cause any other persons, by agreement, through financial incentives, misrepresentations or otherwise to remove, deface, alter or otherwise adversely affect the placement or selection of any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, counter displays or other advertising (including but not limited to "point of sale" advertising such as "header cards").

II. UST shall be required to appoint a three-person Committee of its board of directors to be comprised of independent (non-employee) persons with plenary power to monitor and to enforce (with the approval of the Court) compliance with the Order. This Committee shall appoint independent counsel to assist in its efforts. The Committee shall be appointed by the UST board of directors within thirty (30) days after the date of the entry of this Order. UST shall:

(a) within thirty (30) days after the date of entry of this Order, provide a copy of this Order to each distributor and retailer that purchases or sells UST products in the United States;

(b) within thirty (30) days after the date of entry of this Order, and annually thereafter for a period of five (5) years, provide a copy of this Order to each UST employee responsible for or involved in sales, marketing or pricing of smokeless tobacco products in the United States, and cause each such employee to participate in a training program designed to ensure compliance with this Order and to submit a signed statement certifying that the employee has read, understands, and will comply with the provisions of this Order;

(c) within sixty (60) days after the entry of this Order, submit a written report to the Court and counsel for Conwood describing the procedures taken and to be taken by UST and the Compliance Committee to ensure compliance with all provisions of this Order, including the requirements of this Paragraph relating to compliance;

(d) maintain and preserve documentation sufficient to demonstrate UST's compliance with this Order for a period of five (5) years after the date of entry hereof, and upon such reasonable notice and upon a showing of good cause, make such documentation available during such period for inspection and copying by the Court and/or by counsel for Conwood;

(e) annually for a period of five (5) years after the date of entry of this Order, submit a written report to the Court and counsel for Conwood describing the manner in which UST has complied with all provisions of this Order and certifying that UST is in compliance with all provisions of this Order.

UST shall bear all costs and expenses incurred in complying with the terms of this Order, including but not limited to, reasonable fees and expenses for those serving on the Committee required to be appointed under Part II hereof and for those designated by such Committee to assist in carrying out its duties, including but not limited to, reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses for the independent counsel whose appointment is contemplated by the terms of this Order.

Any party may seek modification of this Order, at any time, by written motion and for good cause based on changed circumstances or otherwise.

This Order is based on 15 U.S.C. § 26, the accompanying Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Permanent Injunctive Relief, the jury verdict, the trial record, the pleadings and files in this matter, and upon such other evidence or argument as may be presented at a hearing on this motion.

This Court shall retain jurisdiction to enforce this Order. This Order will be enforceable against all defendants in this lawsuit, and any and all other persons, affiliated or acting in concert with those persons. In the event that any part of this Order is violated by any of the named defendants or other persons, the plaintiff may, by motion with notice to the attorneys for the defendants, apply for sanctions or other relief that may be appropriate.

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS

Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P. and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. ("Conwood") respectfully move the Court for an award of attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15(a) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d). A federal jury has determined that Conwood suffered antitrust injury and damages by reason of unlawful monopolization and attempted monopolization of the moist snuff market by defendants United States Tobacco Company, United States Tobacco Sales and Marketing Company, Inc., United States Tobacco Manufacturing Company, Inc., and UST, Inc. (collectively, "UST"). See Verdict Form (Mar. 28, 2000). As such, Conwood has been "injured in [its] business or property by reason of [conduct] forbidden in the antitrust laws," and is entitled to recover "the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee" under the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).

In aggregate, plaintiffs request $19,170,652.86 in fees and costs.[1] In support of this Motion, plaintiffs rely on the accompanying Memorandum in Support and exhibits, including the Declarations of Mark C. Hansen, Richard C. Roberts, Robert E. Craddock, Jr., David L. Simpson; all pleadings, files and records in this action; material that may be judicially noticed by this Court; the presentations and arguments of counsel, if any; and other such matters that the Court may properly consider.

A proposed order is attached.

[1]This amount does not include costs covered by Plaintiffs' Bill of Costs which is being filed concurrently with this Motion. This amount also does not include fees and expenses for performed but as-yet unbilled work. Likewise, it does not include fees and expenses associated with future work on post-trial motions or any appeal. Accordingly, plaintiffs anticipate filing a supplemental motion for additional fees and expenses at a later date.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC. and UST INC., Defendants.	'00 APR 25 A10:10 FILED U.S. DISTRICT COURT CLERK WESTN. DIST. KENTUCKY Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR POST-VERDICT JUROR INTERVIEWS

It is settled that the "integrity of jury proceedings must not be jeopardized by unauthorized invasions." Remmer v. United States 347 U.S. 227, 229 (1954). Jury deliberations are kept secret for good reasons: "full and frank discussion in the jury room, jurors' willingness to return an unpopular verdict, and the community's trust in a system that relies on the decisions of laypeople would all be undermined by a barrage of postverdict scrutiny of juror conduct." Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 120 (1987).[1]

[1] For these reasons jurors cannot be asked to testify about the deliberations that led to their verdict. "Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) recognizes the necessity of limiting inquiry into a jury's decisions, as it prohibits post-verdict testimony about intra-jury influences such as allegedly occurred here." United States v. Holloway, No. 98-5175, 1998 WL 833767, at 5 (6th Cir. Nov. 19, 1998) (Exh. C hereto) (Table decision reported at 166 F.3d 1215) (affirming district court refusal to permit post-verdict interviews based on specific allegations of juror misconduct). These policies are also embodied in LR 47.1, which

As the Eastern District of Kentucky explained:

> [I]t is a 'cardinal principle' of our legal system that the deliberations of the jury shall remain private and secret in every case. . . . This rule of the privacy of jury deliberations, in conjunction with the rules that jurors shall not impeach their verdicts and that their arguments and votes in the jury room are privileged, furthers the laudable policies of the law that jurors should be free in their deliberations to discuss the case frankly and without fear, that the jurors should not be subjected to harassment after their discharge, and that there should be an end to litigation.

Pessin v. Keeneland Ass'n, 298 F. Supp. 593, 596 (E.D. Ky. 1969)(citation omitted).

The Court has discretion to permit the intrusion of post-verdict interviews based on a particularized showing of improper outside influence, McCoy v. Goldston, 652 F.2d 654, 657 (6th Cir. 1981), or -- in very limited circumstances -- to clarify a mistake in the amount of the verdict announced, McCullough v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 937 F.2d 1167, 1172 (6th Cir. 1991). But, where defendants "simply [seek] to inquire as to the reasons for the verdict," there is no valid basis for interviews. Wilkerson v. Johnson, 699 F.2d 325, 330 (6th Cir. 1983).

Defendants candidly admit they seek to inquire into the reasons for the verdict. They make no claim of any improper outside influence, or any mistake in the reported verdict. They claim only that they need a "better understanding" of what led the jury to decide as it did. "This is not a proper subject of inquiry." Id.

flatly prohibits post-verdict interviews without leave of the Court.

Defendants point to no court that has authorized post-verdict interviews based on the supposed need to probe jury decisionmaking in order to make public disclosure under the securities laws, to notify "insurers and sureties," or to identify which evidence the jury found most persuasive with respect to their anticompetitive business practices. Motion at 2. Were any of these valid reasons for breaching the "cardinal principle" of jury secrecy, post-verdict interviews would be the norm in all cases involving verdicts against corporate defendants. But the law is to the contrary; the jurors' thought processes and deliberations are off-limits. Wilkerson, 699 F.2d at 330.

In addition, defendants' proffered reasons make no sense. They cite to no provision of the securities laws that requires them to obtain and disclose the mental impressions of jurors; they do not identify any information about the deliberations that they are required to provide to the unidentified insurers and sureties; and they are not entitled to debrief jurors on their reactions to the extensive evidentiary record that was before them. The Court has before it plaintiffs' motion for permanent injunctive relief. The Court -- not the results of juror interviews -- will determine whether defendants may carry out their defiant post-trial vow to continue without change all of their anticompetitive practices. See UST Press Release, Mar. 29, 2000 (verdict "was completely unjustified given the evidence presented. . . . [O]ur conduct did not violate the antitrust laws") (Exh. A hereto); UST Letter to Our Customers, Mar. 30, 2000 ("[T]he actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. . . . We will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us.") (Exh. B hereto).

KENTUCKY JURY RENDERS VERDICT AGAINST U. S. TOBACCO CO. IN ANTITRUST CASE

GREENWICH, Conn., March 29, 2000 – UST Inc. announced today that a Kentucky jury had rendered a verdict against its subsidiary, United States Tobacco Company, awarding $350 million in damages to Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws that U. We believe that United States Tobacco, Conwood and other companies in the moist snuff business compete in a highly competitive marketplace, and that the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. In light of the evidence of this presented at trial, we believe the award was completely unjustified.

As this process continues, we will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products, and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us. We appreciate your continued support, and will provide you with additional information as it becomes available.

UNITED STATES of America, Plaintiff-Appellee,
v.
Timothy Lynn HOLLOWAY, Defendant-Appellant.

No. 98-5175.

United States Court of Appeals,
Sixth Circuit.

Nov. 19, 1998.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee.

Before KENNEDY and BOGGS, Circuit Judges; and WEBER, [FN*] District Judge.

FN* The Honorable Herman J. Weber, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Ohio, sitting by designation.

PER CURIAM.

1 Timothy Lynn Holloway appeals his conviction on four federal drug and firearm offenses: conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine, use of a firearm during and in relation to drug trafficking, and two counts of conspiracy to attempt to possess methamphetamine with intent to distribute. The district court sentenced Holloway to a term of 360 months on the drug counts, and a consecutive term of 60 months on the firearm count, for a total of 420 months. Holloway challenges his conviction and sentence, presenting eleven issues for review. We affirm his conviction, but vacate his sentence and remand for further consideration of the amount of drugs for which Holloway was responsible.

I

For the second time this year, Timothy Lynn Holloway appeals a federal conviction to this court. See United States v. Holloway, 142 F.3d 437, No. 96-6344, 1998 WL 109987 (6th Cir. Mar.4, 1998) (unpublished) (affirming Holloway's conviction on federal firearms charges). The instant appeal stems from Holloway's involvement in a methamphetamine ("meth") distribution ring. From 1992 to January 1996, Paul Tula, a resident of La Puente, California, shipped meth via United Parcel Service to Earl and Peggy Frye of Macon County, Tennessee. Tula and Robert Carney concealed the meth in plastic clocks and shipped it to the Frye residence and to other locations designated by Earl Frye. The government estimates that the Fryes imported into Tennessee at least 135 pounds of meth over four years.

Holloway participated in the Fryes' drug ring, receiving packages at Brooks Used Cars in Lebanon, Tennessee. Although the defense challenges this assumption, as we discuss in Part III, infra, the government estimates that Holloway received 120 pounds of meth over fifteen months. On July 19, 1994, a UPS package sent to Tula by Holloway "broke open," revealing $21,000 in cash. UPS apparently returned the money to Holloway. In August 1995, the government seized two shipments to Brooks Used Cars that contained a total of 4 .87 pounds of meth.

In November 1996, the Grand Jury in the Middle District of Tennessee indicted seven people, including Holloway, on seventeen conspiracy, drug, firearm, and forfeiture counts. [FN1] Over the next ten months, the government filed two superseding indictments, removing a recently-deceased co-defendant, Earl Frye, and adding three co-defendants, Ronnie Dixon, Morris Parks, and Paul Tula. In the second superseding indictment, which had twenty counts, five counts implicated Holloway: count one, for conspiracy to distribute one or more kilogram of meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) & (b)(1)(A); count two, for use and possession of a firearm, as that term is defined in 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3), during and in relation to the drug trafficking crime of count one, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1) and (2); count fourteen, attempt to possess with intent to distribute meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1); count fifteen, attempt to possess with intent to distribute meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1); and count sixteen, a forfeiture provision relating to count one, under 21 U.S.C. § 853.

FN1. In addition to Holloway, the Grand Jury indicted Earl and Peggy Frye, Steve Nicely, John "Jack" William Parks, Robert Carney, and Mike Mingle.

2 Holloway pled not guilty and was tried by a jury along with co- defendants Peggy Frye, Steve Nicely, John "Jack" William Parks, Robert Carney, Morris Parks, and Ronnie Dixon. A month-long trial resulted in Holloway's conviction on all five counts. [FN2] The district court denied Holloway's motion for a new trial, and it sentenced Holloway to 420 months in prison. Holloway was already serving time for the unrelated 1996 firearms conviction, and he now faces a murder trial for his involvement in the slaying of Denise Rogers, a prospective witness in the meth trial.

FN2. The jury acquitted Steve Nicely, Morris Parks, Ronnie Dixon, and Robert Carney on all counts. The jury acquitted Peggy Frye and John "Jack" William Parks on some counts and convicted them on others. The jury did not acquit Holloway on any counts.

II

Holloway seeks review of eleven issues. We have carefully studied the record and the partie arguments, and we believe that seven of his contentions do not merit discussion. We affirm the district court's disposition of the following claims: (1) that the government improperly withheld the names of confidential informants; (2) that a search warrant for Holloway's home was invalid; (3) that the district court erred in admitting evidence of Holloway's threats to witnesses; (4) that the district court should not have applied an obstruction of justice sentencing enhancement for Holloway's threats to witnesses; (5) that pre-indictment delay by the government unfairly prejudiced Holloway's defense; (6) that the district court erroneously permitted John Dalton Harris to testify; and (7) that the district court should have followed the Tenth Circuit's vacated decision in United States v. Singleton, 144 F.3d 1343 (10th Cir.1998), vacated and reh'g en banc granted, 144 F.3d 1343 (10th Cir. July 10, 1998), and found that the prosecution improperly offered leniency to cooperating accomplices. We will focus on Holloway's remaining four contentions, turning first to three challenges to his conviction.

A

Holloway believes that the district court erroneously failed to suppress evidence obtained through the interception of wire communications. In order to investigate the meth ring, the government applied for and received permission to install wiretaps on Earl and Peggy Frye's two residential telephone lines. FBI Special Agent Harcum submitted an affidavit to establish the necessity of relying on wiretaps. Holloway did not challenge the wiretaps below; he now relies on a motion by his co-defendant, Peggy Frye, who unsuccessfully challenged the validity of the wiretap application and order, and moved to suppress evidence resulting from the taps. [FN3] The district court denied the motion because Frye offered no proof for her many allegations. Holloway claims that Special Agent Harcum misled the district court in his affidavit, and that the application did not establish "necessity" because other investigative techniques could have acquired the information sought by wiretap. He supports these contentions with selective excerpts from Harcum's affidavit.

FN3. On appeal, Holloway contends that he may properly appeal the denial of Frye's motion, and he refers to an ambiguous September 30, 1997 bench ruling by the district court that, "Everybody can have the benefit of everybody's motions." In context, this ruling responded to the request of co-defendant Dixon, who was first indicted in a superseding indictment and thus could not participate in the filing or arguing of motions that preceded the superseding indictment. By contrast, Holloway was indicted in the original indictment, and he does not explain why he could not have filed a separate motion challenging the wiretap affidavit. For this appeal, however, we will assume that Holloway may also benefit from this ruling.

"In considering a district court's denial of a motion to suppress, we review its conclusions of law and application of the law to the facts, such as its finding of probable cause, de novo." United States v. Kincaide, 145 F.3d 771, 779 (6th Cir.1998) (citation omitted). We review for clear error the district court's findings of fact, and will uphold the denial of the motion if any grounds support the district court's decision. See, e.g., United States v. Pasquarille, 20 F.3d 682, 685 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 986, 115 S.Ct. 481, 130 L.Ed.2d 394 (1994); cf. United States v. Alfano, 838 F.2d 158, 162 (6th Cir.1988) ("Reasonable minds frequently may differ on the question whether a particular affidavit establishes probable cause, and we have thus concluded that the preference for warrants is most appropriately effectuated by according 'great deference' to a magistrate's determination.") (quoting United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 914 (1984) (quoting Spinelli v. United States, 393 U.S. 410, 419, 89 S.Ct. 584, 21 L.Ed.2d 637 (1969))).

3 The district court properly denied Frye's unsupported motion to suppress the evidence, and Holloway's appeal does not offer any new reason to revisit the suppression. The wiretap law > [does] not require that the police officials exhaust every conceivable non- wiretap investigative technique. All that is required is that the investigators give serious consideration to the non-wiretap techniques prior to applying for wiretap authority and that the court be informed of the reasons for the investigators' belief that such non-wiretap techniques have been or will likely be inadequate.

United States v. Lambert, 771 F.2d 83, 91 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1034 (1985); see also Alfano, 838 F.2d at 163 (quoting Lambert). Harcum's affidavit reflects serious consideration. Harcum's affidavit devotes a section to other investigative techniques, mentioning the shortcomings that accompany each (the section has the appropriate title, "Exhaustion of Other Investigative Methods"). The limitations on other techniques ranged from the conspirators' counter-surveillance techniques to the insularity of the Frye drug ring. (Trial testimony and seized evidence gave post hoc corroboration of the reality of these limitations: Harcum testified that one informant refused to serve undercover, and law enforcement agents recovered sophisticated counter-surveillance devices from Holloway's home). Holloway's excerpts show only that other investigative techniques had provided valuable information; the excerpts do not establish that the other techniques would suffice for the purposes the wiretap was meant to serve. The district court did not err, and we uphold its decision not to suppress the evidence that resulted from the wiretaps. [FN4]

> FN4. While we uphold the validity of the application for the warrant, we observe in passing that the good faith exception recognized in United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 923-25 (1984), may also apply to evidence obtained by wiretap. See, e.g., United States v. Moore, 41 F.3d 370, 376 (8th Cir.1994) (applying Leon good faith exception to evidence acquired by wiretap), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1121, 115 S.Ct. 1985, 131 L.Ed.2d 872 (1995); cf. United States v. Baranek, 903 F.2d 1068, 1071- 72 (6th Cir.1990) (recognizing that Congress intended federal wiretap law to incorporate Fourth Amendment evidence suppression doctrines). Were the affidavit technically invalid, the evidence may have properly been received under the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule.

We next examine Holloway's argument that a witness's answer required the granting of a mistrial. During the government's case-in-chief, Larry Campbell took the stand. Prosecutor Wendy Goggin questioned him, eliciting background information for a short time until the judge halted questioning after one of Campbell's answers. Through a series of questions, Goggin had Campbell identify himself and his occupation; she next established that Campbell was serving a six-year state sentence for vehicular homicide. Goggin then asked a series of questions about Campbell's car accident, culminating in the following exchange:

Q: Where were you going?
A: I was going to a funeral.
Q: Whose funeral.
A: It was my dad's.
Q: Okay. And you were involved in an accident?

A: Yes, ma'am.
Q: And people in the other car were killed?
A: Were killed, yes.
Q: And why, sir, were you charged with vehicular homicide?
A: Because I was intoxicated with methamphetamine.
Q: Okay, sir.
Mr. Drake [Holloway's trial counsel]: Your Honor, may we approach the bench?
[Questioning ends].

At the bench conference, the attorneys and judge recognized the prejudice to the co-defendants, including Holloway, because prior testimony implied that Holloway sold meth to Campbell. The jury might blame Holloway for causing the car accident and resulting deaths, which were not at issue in Holloway's trial. The judge first reacted by saying, "I'm going to excuse this witness, and he's not going to say another word unless you all want to cross-examine him." Defense counsel declined to cross-examine, and the judge continued: "I'm going to excuse him right now. You are not going to put any more proof on by this witness. I'm going to have to declare a mistrial. This is inexcusable." The judge then excused the jury for the day, asking them to return the next morning.

4 The next morning, the judge held a hearing, where Goggin denied purposefully eliciting Campbell's use of meth. She contended that she discussed the vehicular homicide conviction to defuse it and to preempt a withering cross-examination by the co-defendants. The government also observed that nineteen witnesses had testified about their meth use and that defense counsel had cross-examined three witnesses about the witnesses' use of meth while driving. No attorney objected to the elicitation of testimony that three witnesses had driven while intoxicated with meth, although no other witness testified to causing harm while intoxicated, much less to causing death.

The judge denied the motion for a mistrial, finding the prejudice insufficient and ameliorated with a curative instruction:

I've had the ... court reporter read the witness's testimony back to me. You were in error, Mr. Drake [Holloway's trial counsel]. There were no questions asked of this witness about any Defendant, including Mr. Holloway, about their use of methamphetamine or from this witness about any knowledge that he had of any of the Defendants.
This happened very early on in the testimony. It was for that reason that yesterday afternoon I felt that any prejudice or prejudicial inference that might be drawn from the testimony was cured by the termination of his testimony at that point. I'm still of that opinion.
I intend, however, to give the Jury an instruction that they are to totally disregard and diffuse [sic] their mind of Mr. [Campbell's] testimony.
And I'll hear you if you have any further suggestions as to what the admonishment to the Jury should contain.

When the jury entered, the judge immediately issued a curative instruction, twice questioning the jury to ensure that they could disregard Campbell's testimony.

This court reviews a denial of a mistrial for abuse of discretion. See, e.g., United States v. Chambers, 944 F.2d 1253, 1263 (6th Cir.1991) (discussing standard of review), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1112, 112 S.Ct. 1217, 117 L.Ed.2d 455 (1992). Appellate review focuses on the fairness to the defendant, but it affords a strong presumption that prompt curative instructions and striking of testimony will ameliorate any harm. See ibid. (quoting United States v. Greene, 400 F.2d 847, 848 (6th Cir.1968)). [FN5] Chambers involved a trial for conspiracy to distribute cocaine; the Chambers court upheld the district court's denial of a mistrial despite thirty minutes of testimony from a witness who later recanted (outside the presence of the jury). See ibid. Chambers held that the curative instruction issued the next day avoided undue prejudice, especially given other evidence of the defendant's involvement in the conspiracy. Here, too, ample evidence existed of Holloway's involvement, so it seems unlikely that a jury would convict Holloway merely to punish him for (perhaps) supplying meth to a man who killed two people while driving. Also, Holloway's co-defendants' counsel established--without objection--that Holloway had sold drugs to people who then drove under the influence. Granted, the district court raised Holloway's hopes one day and dashed them the next. The judge implied, however, that a night of reflection convinced him of the rashness of the impulse to declare a mistrial, and that a curative instruction would solve the problem. Here, this did not constitute an abuse of discretion.

FN5. Holloway cites United States v.

Solivan, 937 F.2d 1146, 1157 (6th Cir.1991), for the proposition that curative instructions must issue within twenty minutes, and that, by implication, the night's delay in Holloway's case resulted in undue prejudice. Solivan involved a prosecutor's direct statements to the jury in closing argument, asking for a conviction of drug defendants to send a message to other drug dealers and impliedly to support the war on drugs. The court found that the dilatory curative instruction did not solve the extreme prejudice. Hollway did not face similar prejudice.

5 Holloway's final challenge to his conviction relies on allegations that jurors discussed the case prior to deliberations, and that the district court therefore erred in denying his co-defendant Peggy Frye's motion to conduct post-verdict interrogation of the jurors. [FN6] Frye's motion relied on the report of a self-styled "private investigator" who interviewed at least three jurors one month after the verdict. Apparently, an acquitted co-defendant hired the investigator to approach the jurors. The investigator offered three brief, unsworn "reports" based on his November 1997 meetings with three jurors at their Nashville residences. The reports, filed with the motion, allege that two jurors said that the jurors "compared notes" during the trial, one juror said that the jurors discussed issues during the trial, and one juror said she saw Holloway outside the courtroom in a prison uniform and handcuffs. Holloway emphasizes that the trial included several co-defendants and twenty counts. The jury returned its verdict in "only a few hours," according to the defendant, who believes that the investigative reports and the quick decision, combined with the allegation of a sighting of him in handcuffs and prison clothing, merit a remand for post-verdict interviews.

FN6. See note 3 supra. Holloway's trial counsel made an oral motion to "poll or interview" the jurors, which the court denied, ruling that it would only consider written motions. Trial counsel said he would file a written motion, but apparently did not do so.

The district court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for post-verdict interrogation. Cf. United States v. Franks, 511 F.2d 25, 38 (6th Cir.) (applying this standard of review), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1042 (1975); cf. also United States v. Bertoli, 40 F.3d 1384, 1394 (3d Cir.1994) ("[I]ntra-jury communications pose a less serious threat to a defendant's right to an impartial trial than do extra-jury influences, and therefore district courts are entitled to even greater deference in their responses to them than in responses to outside influences."). Local Rule 12(h) of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee requires parties or their representatives to gain court approval to conduct post-verdict interrogations of jurors, a condition clearly violated here when the acquitted co-defendant had an agent approach jurors without permission from the district court. Rewarding this conduct by opening an investigation offers a gaping loophole in the requirement of judicial approval of post-verdict interrogation, greatly encouraging future unsanctioned post-verdict interrogations. We will not lightly permit circumvention of a district court's authority to maintain the integrity of its trials. Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) recognizes the necessity of limiting inquiry into a jury's decisions, as it prohibits post-verdict juror testimony about intra-jury influences such as allegedly occurred here. See, e.g., Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 117-25, 107 S.Ct. 2739, 97 L.Ed.2d 90 (1987); United States v. Resko, 3 F.3d 684, 695 n. 9 (3d Cir.1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1205, 114 S.Ct. 1326, 127 L.Ed.2d 674 (1994).

Further, Holloway and his co-defendants did not produce the investigator for questioning concerning his qualifications, reasons for investigating (especially in the absence of judicial approval), method of investigation, or whether he interviewed other jurors and did not include their reports. There is no evidence that the jurors discussed anything that was not properly introduced at trial, and no juror report contends that any juror's mind was changed based on the discussions or on the sight of the handcuffed Holloway in an elevator outside the courtroom. [FN7] While Holloway directs our attention to United States v. Resko, that court explicitly distinguished its situation from those akin to the present one. In Resko, every juror admitted to participating in pre-deliberation discussions; the deliberations came to light when a juror--not a party--approached the judge; and the judge learned of the improper deliberations before the jury returned its verdict. Even with these factors, the Resko court admitted that it faced a "difficult case" before it vacated the conviction and ordered a new trial. Resko limited its holding to instances where "unequivocal" evidence of misconduct arises mid-trial, see id. at 694, and it noted the increased practical and doctrinal problems that militate against post-verdict investigation of intra-jury discussions. See id. at 693 n. 5, 694-95, 695 n. 9.

> FN7. This circuit requires defendants to show prejudice when they allege that jurors saw them in restraints. See, e.g., United States v. Barger, 931 F.2d 359, 371 (6th Cir.1991). Barger also distinguishes between the prejudice that arises from extraordinary security procedures and routine procedures (such as the handcuffs on Holloway, who, apart from his drug and firearm charges, was also a murder suspect), and between the prejudice from shackles worn in the courtroom and those worn outside the courtroom (as here). See ibid.

6 Granted, the district court here did not call the jurors for requestioning, but the defendants' weak proffer of misconduct did not merit the burden of reconvening a dismissed jury. See id. at 694-95 (distinguishing investigations into intra-jury deliberations that are uncovered mid-trial and those that are revealed post-verdict). As for the duration of the deliberations, we note that the outcome was as consistent with clarity of the evidence as it was with pre-deliberation consultations, and we decline to recognize the implications of Holloway's argument and enforce a minimum time limit for deliberation. [FN8]

> FN8. Presumably, the minimum time limit would vary depending on the number of co-defendants, the tally of different issues, and the complexity of each issue. This subject seems ill suited for judicial micromanagement.

Finding no merit to Holloway's challenges to his conviction, we turn to Holloway's sentence.

III

The district court sentenced Holloway to 360 months in prison on the drug counts. On appeal, Holloway argues that the trial court erred in concluding that all the methamphetamine at issue in this case was d-methamphetamine, which receives harsh treatment under the Sentencing Guidelines. However, he never objected to this finding at sentencing. A defendant may not raise objections to his sentence for the first time on appeal; objections that are not raised at the sentencing hearing are deemed waived. See United States v. Cullens, 67 F.3d 123, 124 (6th Cir.1995); United States v. Nagi, 947 F.2d 211, 213 (6th Cir.1991), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 958 (1992).

Second, Holloway contends that the trial court erred in charging him, for sentencing purposes, with responsibility for over 30 kilograms of methamphetamine. [FN9] This finding relates to Holloway's eligibility to be sentenced under U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1, which states that "30 KG or more of Methamphetamine" requires a base offense level of 38. U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(c)(1) (1995). The district court enhanced this offense level by two for obstruction of justice, resulting in an overall offense level of 40. Holloway's previous crimes qualified him for criminal history category IV, resulting in a Guideline sentencing range of imprisonment for 360 months to life. [FN10]

> FN9. The district court and presentence investigation report applied the 1995 Guidelines rather than the 1997 Guidelines; the report explains that, because meth guidelines became more punitive in 1997, this approach avoided ex post facto problems.

> FN10. In his written objections to the presentence report, Holloway argued that he deserved a base offense level of 36; at sentencing and on appeal, Holloway seeks a lower base offense level. Section 2D1.1(c)(2) provides for a base offense level of 36 for quantities of 10 kilograms to less than 30 kilograms of meth, § 2D1.1(c)(3) gives a base level of 34 for a range of 3 kilograms to less than 10 kilograms of meth, and § 2D1.1(c)(4) requires a base level of 32 for a range of 1 kilogram to less than 3 kilograms. Adding the obstruction of justice enhancement results in offense levels of 38 (324-405 months at criminal history category IV), 36 (262-327 months

At sentencing, the district court adopted the findings and conclusions of a presentence investigation report, which estimated the quantity of drugs for which Holloway was responsible. Courts properly may rely on approximations of drug quantities. A sentencing court may properly estimate quantities of drugs for a specified period and multiply by the length of time a defendant participated in a conspiracy, for example. See, e.g., United States v. Elder, 90 F.3d 1110, 1126 (6th Cir.1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1131, 117 S.Ct. 993, 136 L.Ed.2d 873 (1997); see also U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1 n. 12 ("Where ... the amount seized does not reflect the scale of the offense, the court shall approximate the quantity of the controlled substance."). When precise measurement of the drugs is impossible, as in this case, the sentencing court must approximate the amount charged to defendants. See United States v. Jennings, 83 F.3d 145, 150 (6th Cir.1996). The district court may sentence the defendant based upon quantities of drugs attributable to other members of a conspiracy, provided the court finds that those quantities were known to defendant or were reasonably foreseeable to him. See ibid. "A court may hold a defendant responsible for an amount of drugs only if the court finds that it is more likely than not that the defendant actually was responsible for at least that amount." United States v. Ward, 68 F.3d 146, 149 (6th Cir.1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1151, 116 S.Ct. 1028, 134 L.Ed.2d 106 (1996). Here, however, the report only relied on shipments of methamphetamine made to Holloway--not to the other conspirators--for the purposes of determining his base offense level. The report, and the government, repeatedly emphasized that its approximation represented a conservative estimate of the quantity of the drugs received by Holloway, and that this figure did not attribute to Holloway the receipt of shipments by co-conspirators.

7 We review the court's approximation of the amount of drugs involved to determine if its estimate is clearly erroneous--that is, if it is unsupported by competent evidence in the record. See Jennings, 83 F.3d at 149. The authorities recovered two packages of drugs shipped to Holloway by UPS--one totaling 894.5 grams of methamphetamine, the other containing 1,321 grams. Incomplete UPS records indicate that Holloway received at least ten other shipments at the Brooks salvage yard from February 24, 1995 to August 29, 1995--i.e., approximately two shipments per month. The UPS driver who delivered packages on the Brooks route testified that he had delivered similar packages to that address for "a year" of the fifteen-month conspiracy.

The report estimated the applicable quantity of drugs at 120 pounds, or 51 kilograms. This was based on an estimate of receipt by Holloway of a 2-pound package of drugs once a week for fifteen months. At the sentencing hearing, Holloway's counsel objected to the report's use of a fifteen-month time frame. No "reasoning" for this estimate was provided in the report, which was summarily cited as authority for the district court's sentencing decision. The district court did not elaborate, stating that, "The Court will adopt the factual findings and guideline applications in the presentence report."

While the Sentencing Guidelines permit the estimation of the quantity of drugs, the court and presentence report must base the approximation on verifiable evidence. See, e.g., United States v. Milledge, 109 F.3d 312, 316 (6th Cir.1997). The report--summarily adopted by the court--made two assumptions that do not appear to have any support in the record: it assumed shipments to the Brooks salvage yard for fifteen months, despite the UPS driver's testimony that he had only worked the route for one year; and the report assumed weekly, rather than bimonthly shipments. As a panel of this court noted in United States v. Baro, 15 F.3d 563 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 912, 115 S.Ct. 285, 130 L.Ed.2d 201 (1994):

> The district court, without making any factual findings to support the one- kilogram increase, sentenced Danilo and Ramon Baro according to the fifty- kilogram calculation.
> In doing so, the district court failed to err on the side of caution. Especially where, as here, the district court's determination of the quantity of cocaine involved results in a two-level increase in the base offense level, the sentencing judge may not, without further findings, simply sentence a defendant based on conjecture. In reaching this conclusion, which increased the defendants' potential term of incarceration by at least forty-seven months, the district court failed to identify the evidence on which it relied to find both defendants responsible for the increased amount or to address testimony in the record that Dupont traveled to Miami during this period for legitimate reasons. Thus, we must remand.

Id. at 569. In United States v. Gaitan-Acevedo, 148 F.3d 577, 593 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, --- U.S. ----, 119 S.Ct. 256, 142 L.Ed.2d 210 (1998), we re-emphasized the importance of relying on findings, rather than conjecture.

8 We believe this result may have been merely a short-cut by the district court, which could have supported the 30-kilogram figure in several ways. When it revisits this issue, the court is at liberty to consider other evidence in the record. Whatever its rationale, and whatever the support in the record, the district court must explain its reasoning and source of findings in order for an appellate court to review sentencing decisions. See United States v. Tucker, 90 F.3d 1135, 1145 (6th Cir.1996) (remanding for resentencing to ensure "an adequate record for appellate review of the evidence used to calculate [a defendant's] sentence"). The district court did not cite to the record; instead, it adopted a presentence report containing two assumptions that are not supported by the record, one of which (the UPS driver's tenure) appears to be contradicted by testimony. While a district court may adopt a presentence investigation report's findings, it must explain why it does so when the defendant raises specific objections to the report's method of estimating drug quantities. Cf. United States v.. Vargas, 16 F.3d 155, 159 (7th Cir.1994) (remanding for resentencing when a defendant objected to a presentence report's finding concerning restitution, and the district court did not discuss the objection or the specific section of the presentence report). We thus remand for either a re-estimation of the quantity of drugs attributable to Holloway, or for an explanation of the legitimacy of the present approximation.

IV

We have considered Holloway's eleven claims and we AFFIRM his conviction. We VACATE his sentence and REMAND for further proceedings in light of this opinion.

Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

PLAINTIFFS' OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR POST-VERDICT JUROR INTERVIEWS

It is settled that the "integrity of jury proceedings must not be jeopardized by unauthorized invasions." Remmer v. United States 347 U.S. 227, 229 (1954). Jury deliberations are kept secret for good reasons: "full and frank discussion in the jury room, jurors' willingness to return an unpopular verdict, and the community's trust in a system that relies on the decisions of laypeople would all be undermined by a barrage of postverdict scrutiny of juror conduct." Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 120 (1987).[1]

[1] For these reasons jurors cannot be asked to testify about the deliberations that led to their verdict. "Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) recognizes the necessity of limiting inquiry into a jury's decisions, as it prohibits post-verdict testimony about intra-jury influences such as allegedly occurred here." United States v. Holloway, No. 98-5175, 1998 WL 833767, at 5 (6th Cir. Nov. 19, 1998) (Exh. C hereto) (Table decision reported at 166 F.3d 1215) (affirming district court refusal to permit post-verdict interviews based on specific allegations of juror misconduct). These policies are also embodied in LR 47.1, which

As the Eastern District of Kentucky explained:

> [I]t is a 'cardinal principle' of our legal system that the deliberations of the jury shall remain private and secret in every case. . . . This rule of the privacy of jury deliberations, in conjunction with the rules that jurors shall not impeach their verdicts and that their arguments and votes in the jury room are privileged, furthers the laudable policies of the law that jurors should be free in their deliberations to discuss the case frankly and without fear, that the jurors should not be subjected to harassment after their discharge, and that there should be an end to litigation.

Pessin v. Keeneland Ass'n, 298 F. Supp. 593, 596 (E.D. Ky. 1969)(citation omitted).

The Court has discretion to permit the intrusion of post-verdict interviews based on a particularized showing of improper outside influence, McCoy v. Goldston, 652 F.2d 654, 657 (6th Cir. 1981), or -- in very limited circumstances -- to clarify a mistake in the amount of the verdict announced, McCullough v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 937 F.2d 1167, 1172 (6th Cir. 1991). But, where defendants "simply [seek] to inquire as to the reasons for the verdict," there is no valid basis for interviews. Wilkerson v. Johnson, 699 F.2d 325, 330 (6th Cir. 1983).

Defendants candidly admit they seek to inquire into the reasons for the verdict. They make no claim of any improper outside influence, or any mistake in the reported verdict. They claim only that they need a "better understanding" of what led the jury to decide as it did. "This is not a proper subject of inquiry." Id.

flatly prohibits post-verdict interviews without leave of the Court.

Defendants point to no court that has authorized post-verdict interviews based on the supposed need to probe jury decisionmaking in order to make public disclosure under the securities laws, to notify "insurers and sureties," or to identify which evidence the jury found most persuasive with respect to their anticompetitive business practices. Motion at 2. Were any of these valid reasons for breaching the "cardinal principle" of jury secrecy, post-verdict interviews would be the norm in all cases involving verdicts against corporate defendants. But the law is to the contrary; the jurors' thought processes and deliberations are off-limits. Wilkerson, 699 F.2d at 330.

In addition, defendants' proffered reasons make no sense. They cite to no provision of the securities laws that requires them to obtain and disclose the mental impressions of jurors; they do not identify any information about the deliberations that they are required to provide to the unidentified insurers and sureties; and they are not entitled to debrief jurors on their reactions to the extensive evidentiary record that was before them. The Court has before it plaintiffs' motion for permanent injunctive relief. The Court -- not the results of juror interviews -- will determine whether defendants may carry out their defiant post-trial vow to continue without change all of their anticompetitive practices. See UST Press Release, Mar. 29, 2000 (verdict "was completely unjustified given the evidence presented. . . . [O]ur conduct did not violate the antitrust laws") (Exh. A hereto); UST Letter to Our Customers, Mar. 30, 2000 ("[T]he actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. . . . We will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us.") (Exh. B hereto).

UST

KENTUCKY JURY RENDERS VERDICT AGAINST U. S. TOBACCO CO. IN ANTITRUST CASE

GREENWICH, Conn., March 29, 2000 – UST Inc. announced today that a Kentucky jury had rendered a verdict against its subsidiary, United States Tobacco Company, awarding $350 million in damages to Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws that U. S. Tobacco had engaged in exclusionary and anticompetitive conduct in the marketing and promotion of moist smokeless tobacco products. The verdict, when entered as a judgment, will be subject to trebling under the federal antitrust laws.

"We are extremely disappointed by the jury's verdict. We believe that the plaintiff failed to prove its case under applicable law, especially in light of the voluminous evidence which clearly shows that U.S. Tobacco and Conwood compete in a highly competitive marketplace. We also believe that the size of the award was completely unjustified given the evidence presented at trial."

"We continue to believe that our conduct did not violate the antitrust laws and intend to take all steps to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal," stated Vincent A. Gierer, Jr., Chairman and Chief Executive Officer.

The Company intends to file motions with the Court in the next ten days to overturn the verdict by seeking a judgment as a matter of law or, in the alternative, a new trial. If the District Court fails to enter a judgment in the Company's favor as a matter of law or order a new trial, the Company intends to appeal the judgment to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Company also has begun taking the steps to enable it to satisfy any bonding which may be required.

UST, through its subsidiaries, is a leading producer and marketer of moist smokeless tobacco products including Copenhagen, Copenhagen Long Cut, Skoal, Skoal Long Cut, Skoal Bandits, Rooster and Red Seal. Other consumer products marketed by UST subsidiaries include premium wines sold nationally through the Chateau Ste. Michelle, Columbia Crest and Villa Mt. Eden wineries as well as sparkling wine produced under the Domaine Ste. Michelle label and premium cigars including Don Tomás, Don Tomás Special Edition, Astral and Habano Primero.

March 30, 2000

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

As many of you may already know, on Tuesday, March 28, 2000, a Kentucky jury rendered a verdict against United States Tobacco and awarded $350 million to the plaintiff, Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws. The verdict, as required by the antitrust laws, has been trebled, resulting in a total award of over $1 billion.

United States Tobacco believes strongly that our moist snuff marketing and promotion programs do not violate the antitrust laws and we have already begun the steps necessary to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal. We believe that United States Tobacco, Conwood and other companies in the moist snuff business compete in a highly competitive marketplace, and that the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. In light of the evidence of this presented at trial, we believe the award was completely unjustified.

As this process continues, we will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products, and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us. We appreciate your continued support, and will provide you with additional information as it becomes available.

UNITED STATES of America, Plaintiff-Appellee,
v.
Timothy Lynn HOLLOWAY, Defendant-Appellant.

No. 98-5175.

United States Court of Appeals,
Sixth Circuit.

Nov. 19, 1998.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee.

Before KENNEDY and BOGGS, Circuit Judges; and WEBER, [FN*] District Judge.

FN* The Honorable Herman J. Weber, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Ohio, sitting by designation.

PER CURIAM.

1 Timothy Lynn Holloway appeals his conviction on four federal drug and firearm offenses: conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine, use of a firearm during and in relation to drug trafficking, and two counts of conspiracy to attempt to possess methamphetamine with intent to distribute. The district court sentenced Holloway to a term of 360 months on the drug counts, and a consecutive term of 60 months on the firearm count, for a total of 420 months. Holloway challenges his conviction and sentence, presenting eleven issues for review. We affirm his conviction, but vacate his sentence and remand for further consideration of the amount of drugs for which Holloway was responsible.

I

For the second time this year, Timothy Lynn Holloway appeals a federal conviction to this court. See United States v. Holloway, 142 F.3d 437, No. 96-6344, 1998 WL 109987 (6th Cir. Mar.4, 1998) (unpublished) (affirming Holloway's conviction on federal firearms charges). The instant appeal stems from Holloway's involvement in a methamphetamine ("meth") distribution ring. From 1992 to January 1996, Paul Tula, a resident of La Puente, California, shipped meth via United Parcel Service to Earl and Peggy Frye of Macon County, Tennessee. Tula and Robert Carney concealed the meth in plastic clocks and shipped it to the Frye residence and to other locations designated by Earl Frye. The government estimates that the Fryes imported into Tennessee at least 135 pounds of meth over four years.

Holloway participated in the Fryes' drug ring, receiving packages at Brooks Used Cars in Lebanon, Tennessee. Although the defense challenges this assumption, as we discuss in Part III, infra, the government estimates that Holloway received 120 pounds of meth over fifteen months. On July 19, 1994, a UPS package sent to Tula by Holloway "broke open," revealing $21,000 in cash. UPS apparently returned the money to Holloway. In August 1995, the government seized two shipments to Brooks Used Cars that contained a total of 4 .87 pounds of meth.

In November 1996, the Grand Jury in the Middle District of Tennessee indicted seven people, including Holloway, on seventeen conspiracy, drug, firearm, and forfeiture counts. [FN1] Over the next ten months, the government filed two superseding indictments, removing a recently-deceased co-defendant, Earl Frye, and adding three co-defendants, Ronnie Dixon, Morris Parks, and Paul Tula. In the second superseding indictment, which had twenty counts, five counts implicated Holloway: count one, for conspiracy to distribute one or more kilogram of meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) & (b)(1)(A); count two, for use and possession of a firearm, as that term is defined in 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3), during and in relation to the drug trafficking crime of count one, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1) and (2); count fourteen, attempt to possess with intent to distribute meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1); count fifteen, attempt to possess with intent to distribute meth, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1); and count sixteen, a forfeiture provision relating to count one, under 21 U.S.C. § 853.

FN1. In addition to Holloway, the Grand Jury indicted Earl and Peggy Frye, Steve Nicely, John "Jack" William Parks, Robert Carney, and Mike Mingle.

2 Holloway pled not guilty and was tried by a jury along with co- defendants Peggy Frye, Steve Nicely, John "Jack" William Parks, Robert Carney, Morris Parks, and Ronnie Dixon. A month-long trial resulted in Holloway's conviction on all five counts. [FN2] The district court denied Holloway's motion for a new trial, and it sentenced Holloway to 420 months in prison. Holloway was already serving time for the unrelated 1996 firearms conviction, and he now faces a murder trial for his involvement in the slaying of Denise Rogers, a prospective witness in the meth trial.

FN2. The jury acquitted Steve Nicely, Morris Parks, Ronnie Dixon, and Robert Carney on all counts. The jury acquitted Peggy Frye and John "Jack" William Parks on some counts and convicted them on others. The jury did not acquit Holloway on any counts.

II

Holloway seeks review of eleven issues. We have carefully studied the record and the partie arguments, and we believe that seven of his contentions do not merit discussion. We affirm the district court's disposition of the following claims: (1) that the government improperly withheld the names of confidential informants; (2) that a search warrant for Holloway's home was invalid; (3) that the district court erred in admitting evidence of Holloway's threats to witnesses; (4) that the district court should not have applied an obstruction of justice sentencing enhancement for Holloway's threats to witnesses; (5) that pre-indictment delay by the government unfairly prejudiced Holloway's defense; (6) that the district court erroneously permitted John Dalton Harris to testify; and (7) that the district court should have followed the Tenth Circuit's vacated decision in United States v. Singleton, 144 F.3d 1343 (10th Cir.1998), vacated and reh'g en banc granted, 144 F.3d 1343 (10th Cir. July 10, 1998), and found that the prosecution improperly offered leniency to cooperating accomplices. We will focus on Holloway's remaining four contentions, turning first to three challenges to his conviction.

Holloway believes that the district court erroneously failed to suppress evidence obtained through the interception of wire communications. In order to investigate the meth ring, the government applied for and received permission to install wiretaps on Earl and Peggy Frye's two residential telephone lines. FBI Special Agent Harcum submitted an affidavit to establish the necessity of relying on wiretaps. Holloway did not challenge the wiretaps below; he now relies on a motion by his co-defendant, Peggy Frye, who unsuccessfully challenged the validity of the wiretap application and order, and moved to suppress evidence resulting from the taps. [FN3] The district court denied the motion because Frye offered no proof for her many allegations. Holloway claims that Special Agent Harcum misled the district court in his affidavit, and that the application did not establish "necessity" because other investigative techniques could have acquired the information sought by wiretap. He supports these contentions with selective excerpts from Harcum's affidavit.

FN3. On appeal, Holloway contends that he may properly appeal the denial of Frye's motion, and he refers to an ambiguous September 30, 1997 bench ruling by the district court that, "Everybody can have the benefit of everybody's motions." In context, this ruling responded to the request of co-defendant Dixon, who was first indicted in a superseding indictment and thus could not participate in the filing or arguing of motions that preceded the superseding indictment. By contrast, Holloway was indicted in the original indictment, and he does not explain why he could not have filed a separate motion challenging the wiretap affidavit. For this appeal, however, we will assume that Holloway may also benefit from this ruling.

"In considering a district court's denial of a motion to suppress, we review its conclusions of law and application of the law to the facts, such as its finding of probable cause, de novo." United States v. Kincaide, 145 F.3d 771, 779 (6th Cir.1998) (citation omitted). We review for clear error the district court's findings of fact, and will uphold the denial of the motion if any grounds support the district court's decision. See, e.g., United States v. Pasquarille, 20 F.3d 682, 685 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 986, 115 S.Ct. 481, 130 L.Ed.2d 394 (1994); cf. United States v. Alfano, 838 F.2d 158, 162 (6th Cir.1988) ("Reasonable minds frequently may differ on the question whether a particular affidavit establishes probable cause, and we have thus concluded that the preference for warrants is most appropriately effectuated by according 'great deference' to a magistrate's determination.") (quoting United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 914 (1984) (quoting Spinelli v. United States, 393 U.S. 410, 419, 89 S.Ct. 584, 21 L.Ed.2d 637 (1969))).

3 The district court properly denied Frye's unsupported motion to suppress the evidence, and Holloway's appeal does not offer any new reason to revisit the suppression. The wiretap law > [does] not require that the police officials exhaust every conceivable non- wiretap investigative technique. All that is required is that the investigators give serious consideration to the non-wiretap techniques prior to applying for wiretap authority and that the court be informed of the reasons for the investigators' belief that such non-wiretap techniques have been or will likely be inadequate.

United States v. Lambert, 771 F.2d 83, 91 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1034 (1985); see also Alfano, 838 F.2d at 163 (quoting Lambert). Harcum's affidavit reflects serious consideration. Harcum's affidavit devotes a section to other investigative techniques, mentioning the shortcomings that accompany each (the section has the appropriate title, "Exhaustion of Other Investigative Methods"). The limitations on other techniques ranged from the conspirators' counter-surveillance techniques to the insularity of the Frye drug ring. (Trial testimony and seized evidence gave post hoc corroboration of the reality of these limitations: Harcum testified that one informant refused to serve undercover, and law enforcement agents recovered sophisticated counter-surveillance devices from Holloway's home). Holloway's excerpts show only that other investigative techniques had provided valuable information; the excerpts do not establish that the other techniques would suffice for the purposes the wiretap was meant to serve. The district court did not err, and we uphold its decision not to suppress the evidence that resulted from the wiretaps. [FN4]

> FN4. While we uphold the validity of the application for the warrant, we observe in passing that the good faith exception recognized in United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 923-25 (1984), may also apply to evidence obtained by wiretap. See, e.g., United States v. Moore, 41 F.3d 370, 376 (8th Cir.1994) (applying Leon good faith exception to evidence acquired by wiretap), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1121, 115 S.Ct. 1985, 131 L.Ed.2d 872 (1995); cf. United States v. Baranek, 903 F.2d 1068, 1071- 72 (6th Cir.1990) (recognizing that Congress intended federal wiretap law to incorporate Fourth Amendment evidence suppression doctrines). Were the affidavit technically invalid, the evidence may have properly been received under the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule.

We next examine Holloway's argument that a witness's answer required the granting of a mistrial. During the government's case-in-chief, Larry Campbell took the stand. Prosecutor Wendy Goggin questioned him, eliciting background information for a short time until the judge halted questioning after one of Campbell's answers. Through a series of questions, Goggin had Campbell identify himself and his occupation; she next established that Campbell was serving a six-year state sentence for vehicular homicide. Goggin then asked a series of questions about Campbell's car accident, culminating in the following exchange:

Q: Where were you going?
A: I was going to a funeral.
Q: Whose funeral.
A: It was my dad's.
Q: Okay. And you were involved in an accident?

A: Yes, ma'am.
Q: And people in the other car were killed?
A: Were killed, yes.
Q: And why, sir, were you charged with vehicular homicide?
A: Because I was intoxicated with methamphetamine.
Q: Okay, sir.
Mr. Drake [Holloway's trial counsel]: Your Honor, may we approach the bench?
[Questioning ends].

At the bench conference, the attorneys and judge recognized the prejudice to the co-defendants, including Holloway, because prior testimony implied that Holloway sold meth to Campbell. The jury might blame Holloway for causing the car accident and resulting deaths, which were not at issue in Holloway's trial. The judge first reacted by saying, "I'm going to excuse this witness, and he's not going to say another word unless you all want to cross-examine him." Defense counsel declined to cross-examine, and the judge continued: "I'm going to excuse him right now. You are not going to put any more proof on by this witness. I'm going to have to declare a mistrial. This is inexcusable." The judge then excused the jury for the day, asking them to return the next morning.

4 The next morning, the judge held a hearing, where Goggin denied purposefully eliciting Campbell's use of meth. She contended that she discussed the vehicular homicide conviction to defuse it and to preempt a withering cross-examination by the co-defendants. The government also observed that nineteen witnesses had testified about their meth use and that defense counsel had cross-examined three witnesses about the witnesses' use of meth while driving. No attorney objected to the elicitation of testimony that three witnesses had driven while intoxicated with meth, although no other witness testified to causing harm while intoxicated, much less to causing death.

The judge denied the motion for a mistrial, finding the prejudice insufficient and ameliorated with a curative instruction:

I've had the ... court reporter read the witness's testimony back to me. You were in error, Mr. Drake [Holloway's trial counsel]. There were no questions asked of this witness about any Defendant, including Mr. Holloway, about their use of methamphetamine or from this witness about any knowledge that he had of any of the Defendants.
This happened very early on in the testimony. It was for that reason that yesterday afternoon I felt that any prejudice or prejudicial inference that might be drawn from the testimony was cured by the termination of his testimony at that point. I'm still of that opinion.
I intend, however, to give the Jury an instruction that they are to totally disregard and diffuse [sic] their mind of Mr. [Campbell's] testimony.
And I'll hear you if you have any further suggestions as to what the admonishment to the Jury should contain.

When the jury entered, the judge immediately issued a curative instruction, twice questioning the jury to ensure that they could disregard Campbell's testimony.

This court reviews a denial of a mistrial for abuse of discretion. See, e.g., United States v. Chambers, 944 F.2d 1253, 1263 (6th Cir.1991) (discussing standard of review), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1112, 112 S.Ct. 1217, 117 L.Ed.2d 455 (1992). Appellate review focuses on the fairness to the defendant, but it affords a strong presumption that prompt curative instructions and striking of testimony will ameliorate any harm. See ibid. (quoting United States v. Greene, 400 F.2d 847, 848 (6th Cir.1968)). [FN5] Chambers involved a trial for conspiracy to distribute cocaine; the Chambers court upheld the district court's denial of a mistrial despite thirty minutes of testimony from a witness who later recanted (outside the presence of the jury). See ibid. Chambers held that the curative instruction issued the next day avoided undue prejudice, especially given other evidence of the defendant's involvement in the conspiracy. Here, too, ample evidence existed of Holloway's involvement, so it seems unlikely that a jury would convict Holloway merely to punish him for (perhaps) supplying meth to a man who killed two people while driving. Also, Holloway's co-defendants' counsel established--without objection--that Holloway had sold drugs to people who then drove under the influence. Granted, the district court raised Holloway's hopes one day and dashed them the next. The judge implied, however, that a night of reflection convinced him of the rashness of the impulse to declare a mistrial, and that a curative instruction would solve the problem. Here, this did not constitute an abuse of discretion.

FN5. Holloway cites United States v.

Solivan, 937 F.2d 1146, 1157 (6th Cir.1991), for the proposition that curative instructions must issue within twenty minutes, and that, by implication, the night's delay in Holloway's case resulted in undue prejudice. Solivan involved a prosecutor's direct statements to the jury in closing argument, asking for a conviction of drug defendants to send a message to other drug dealers and impliedly to support the war on drugs. The court found that the dilatory curative instruction did not solve the extreme prejudice. Hollway did not face similar prejudice.

5 Holloway's final challenge to his conviction relies on allegations that jurors discussed the case prior to deliberations, and that the district court therefore erred in denying his co-defendant Peggy Frye's motion to conduct post-verdict interrogation of the jurors. [FN6] Frye's motion relied on the report of a self-styled "private investigator" who interviewed at least three jurors one month after the verdict. Apparently, an acquitted co-defendant hired the investigator to approach the jurors. The investigator offered three brief, unsworn "reports" based on his November 1997 meetings with three jurors at their Nashville residences. The reports, filed with the motion, allege that two jurors said that the jurors "compared notes" during the trial, one juror said that the jurors discussed issues during the trial, and one juror said she saw Holloway outside the courtroom in a prison uniform and handcuffs. Holloway emphasizes that the trial included several co-defendants and twenty counts. The jury returned its verdict in "only a few hours," according to the defendant, who believes that the investigative reports and the quick decision, combined with the allegation of a sighting of him in handcuffs and prison clothing, merit a remand for post-verdict interviews.

FN6. See note 3 supra. Holloway's trial counsel made an oral motion to "poll or interview" the jurors, which the court denied, ruling that it would only consider written motions. Trial counsel said he would file a written motion, but apparently did not do so.

The district court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for post-verdict interrogation. Cf. United States v. Franks, 511 F.2d 25, 38 (6th Cir.) (applying this standard of review), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1042 (1975); cf. also United States v. Bertoli, 40 F.3d 1384, 1394 (3d Cir.1994) ("[I]ntra-jury communications pose a less serious threat to a defendant's right to an impartial trial than do extra-jury influences, and therefore district courts are entitled to even greater deference in their responses to them than in responses to outside influences."). Local Rule 12(h) of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee requires parties or their representatives to gain court approval to conduct post-verdict interrogations of jurors, a condition clearly violated here when the acquitted co-defendant had an agent approach jurors without permission from the district court. Rewarding this conduct by opening an investigation offers a gaping loophole in the requirement of judicial approval of post-verdict interrogation, greatly encouraging future unsanctioned post-verdict interrogations. We will not lightly permit circumvention of a district court's authority to maintain the integrity of its trials. Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) recognizes the necessity of limiting inquiry into a jury's decisions, as it prohibits post-verdict juror testimony about intra-jury influences such as allegedly occurred here. See, e.g., Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 117-25, 107 S.Ct. 2739, 97 L.Ed.2d 90 (1987); United States v. Resko, 3 F.3d 684, 695 n. 9 (3d Cir.1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1205, 114 S.Ct. 1326, 127 L.Ed.2d 674 (1994).

Further, Holloway and his co-defendants did not produce the investigator for questioning concerning his qualifications, reasons for investigating (especially in the absence of judicial approval), method of investigation, or whether he interviewed other jurors and did not include their reports. There is no evidence that the jurors discussed anything that was not properly introduced at trial, and no juror report contends that any juror's mind was changed based on the discussions or on the sight of the handcuffed Holloway in an elevator outside the courtroom. [FN7] While Holloway directs our attention to United States v. Resko, that court explicitly distinguished its situation from those akin to the present one. In Resko, every juror admitted to participating in pre-deliberation discussions; the deliberations came to light when a juror--not a party--approached the judge; and the judge learned of the improper deliberations before the jury returned its verdict. Even with these factors, the Resko court admitted that it faced a "difficult case" before it vacated the conviction and ordered a new trial. Resko limited its holding to instances where "unequivocal" evidence of misconduct arises mid-trial, see id. at 694, and it noted the increased practical and doctrinal problems that militate against post-verdict investigation of intra-jury discussions. See id. at 693 n. 5, 694-95, 695 n. 9.

> FN7. This circuit requires defendants to show prejudice when they allege that jurors saw them in restraints. See, e.g., United States v. Barger, 931 F.2d 359, 371 (6th Cir.1991). Barger also distinguishes between the prejudice that arises from extraordinary security procedures and routine procedures (such as the handcuffs on Holloway, who, apart from his drug and firearm charges, was also a murder suspect), and between the prejudice from shackles worn in the courtroom and those worn outside the courtroom (as here). See ibid.

6 Granted, the district court here did not call the jurors for requestioning, but the defendants' weak proffer of misconduct did not merit the burden of reconvening a dismissed jury. See id. at 694-95 (distinguishing investigations into intra-jury deliberations that are uncovered mid-trial and those that are revealed post-verdict). As for the duration of the deliberations, we note that the outcome was as consistent with clarity of the evidence as it was with pre-deliberation consultations, and we decline to recognize the implications of Holloway's argument and enforce a minimum time limit for deliberation. [FN8]

> FN8. Presumably, the minimum time limit would vary depending on the number of co-defendants, the tally of different issues, and the complexity of each issue. This subject seems ill suited for judicial micromanagement.

Finding no merit to Holloway's challenges to his conviction, we turn to Holloway's sentence.

III

The district court sentenced Holloway to 360 months in prison on the drug counts. On appeal, Holloway argues that the trial court erred in concluding that all the methamphetamine at issue in this case was d-methamphetamine, which receives harsh treatment under the Sentencing Guidelines. However, he never objected to this finding at sentencing. A defendant may not raise objections to his sentence for the first time on appeal; objections that are not raised at the sentencing hearing are deemed waived. See United States v. Cullens, 67 F.3d 123, 124 (6th Cir.1995); United States v. Nagi, 947 F.2d 211, 213 (6th Cir.1991), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 958 (1992).

Second, Holloway contends that the trial court erred in charging him, for sentencing purposes, with responsibility for over 30 kilograms of methamphetamine. [FN9] This finding relates to Holloway's eligibility to be sentenced under U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1, which states that "30 KG or more of Methamphetamine" requires a base offense level of 38. U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(c)(1) (1995). The district court enhanced this offense level by two for obstruction of justice, resulting in an overall offense level of 40. Holloway's previous crimes qualified him for criminal history category IV, resulting in a Guideline sentencing range of imprisonment for 360 months to life. [FN10]

> FN9. The district court and presentence investigation report applied the 1995 Guidelines rather than the 1997 Guidelines; the report explains that, because meth guidelines became more punitive in 1997, this approach avoided ex post facto problems.

> FN10. In his written objections to the presentence report, Holloway argued that he deserved a base offense level of 36; at sentencing and on appeal, Holloway seeks a lower base offense level. Section 2D1.1(c)(2) provides for a base offense level of 36 for quantities of 10 kilograms to less than 30 kilograms of meth, § 2D1.1(c)(3) gives a base level of 34 for a range of 3 kilograms to less than 10 kilograms of meth, and § 2D1.1(c)(4) requires a base level of 32 for a range of 1 kilogram to less than 3 kilograms. Adding the obstruction of justice enhancement results in offense levels of 38 (324-405 months at criminal history category IV), 36 (262-327 months at criminal history category IV), and 34 (210-262 months at criminal history category IV), respectively.

At sentencing, the district court adopted the findings and conclusions of a presentence investigation report, which estimated the quantity of drugs for which Holloway was responsible. Courts properly may rely on approximations of drug quantities. A sentencing court may properly estimate quantities of drugs for a specified period and multiply by the length of time a defendant participated in a conspiracy, for example. See, e.g., United States v. Elder, 90 F.3d 1110, 1126 (6th Cir.1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1131, 117 S.Ct. 993, 136 L.Ed.2d 873 (1997); see also U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1 n. 12 ("Where ... the amount seized does not reflect the scale of the offense, the court shall approximate the quantity of the controlled substance."). When precise measurement of the drugs is impossible, as in this case, the sentencing court must approximate the amount charged to defendants. See United States v. Jennings, 83 F.3d 145, 150 (6th Cir.1996). The district court may sentence the defendant based upon quantities of drugs attributable to other members of a conspiracy, provided the court finds that those quantities were known to defendant or were reasonably foreseeable to him. See ibid. "A court may hold a defendant responsible for an amount of drugs only if the court finds that it is more likely than not that the defendant actually was responsible for at least that amount." United States v. Ward, 68 F.3d 146, 149 (6th Cir.1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1151, 116 S.Ct. 1028, 134 L.Ed.2d 106 (1996). Here, however, the report only relied on shipments of methamphetamine made to Holloway--not to the other conspirators--for the purposes of determining his base offense level. The report, and the government, repeatedly emphasized that its approximation represented a conservative estimate of the quantity of the drugs received by Holloway, and that this figure did not attribute to Holloway the receipt of shipments by co-conspirators.

7 We review the court's approximation of the amount of drugs involved to determine if its estimate is clearly erroneous--that is, if it is unsupported by competent evidence in the record. See Jennings, 83 F.3d at 149. The authorities recovered two packages of drugs shipped to Holloway by UPS--one totaling 894.5 grams of methamphetamine, the other containing 1,321 grams. Incomplete UPS records indicate that Holloway received at least ten other shipments at the Brooks salvage yard from February 24, 1995 to August 29, 1995--i.e., approximately two shipments per month. The UPS driver who delivered packages on the Brooks route testified that he had delivered similar packages to that address for "a year" of the fifteen-month conspiracy.

The report estimated the applicable quantity of drugs at 120 pounds, or 51 kilograms. This was based on an estimate of receipt by Holloway of a 2-pound package of drugs once a week for fifteen months. At the sentencing hearing, Holloway's counsel objected to the report's use of a fifteen-month time frame. No "reasoning" for this estimate was provided in the report, which was summarily cited as authority for the district court's sentencing decision. The district court did not elaborate, stating that, "The Court will adopt the factual findings and guideline applications in the presentence report."

While the Sentencing Guidelines permit the estimation of the quantity of drugs, the court and presentence report must base the approximation on verifiable evidence. See, e.g., United States v. Milledge, 109 F.3d 312, 316 (6th Cir.1997). The report--summarily adopted by the court--made two assumptions that do not appear to have any support in the record: it assumed shipments to the Brooks salvage yard for fifteen months, despite the UPS driver's testimony that he had only worked the route for one year; and the report assumed weekly, rather than bimonthly shipments. As a panel of this court noted in United States v. Baro, 15 F.3d 563 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 912, 115 S.Ct. 285, 130 L.Ed.2d 201 (1994):

> The district court, without making any factual findings to support the one- kilogram increase, sentenced Danilo and Ramon Baro according to the fifty- kilogram calculation.
> In doing so, the district court failed to err on the side of caution. Especially where, as here, the district court's determination of the quantity of cocaine involved results in a two-level increase in the base offense level, the sentencing judge may not, without further findings, simply sentence a defendant based on conjecture. In reaching this conclusion, which increased the defendants' potential term of incarceration by at least forty-seven months, the district court failed to identify the evidence on which it relied to find both defendants responsible for the increased amount or to address testimony in the record that Dupont traveled to Miami during this period for legitimate reasons. Thus, we must remand.

Id. at 569. In United States v. Gaitan-Acevedo, 148 F.3d 577, 593 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, --- U.S. ----, 119 S.Ct. 256, 142 L.Ed.2d 210 (1998), we re-emphasized the importance of relying on findings, rather than conjecture.

8 We believe this result may have been merely a short-cut by the district court, which could have supported the 30-kilogram figure in several ways. When it revisits this issue, the court is at liberty to consider other evidence in the record. Whatever its rationale, and whatever the support in the record, the district court must explain its reasoning and source of findings in order for an appellate court to review sentencing decisions. See United States v. Tucker, 90 F.3d 1135, 1145 (6th Cir.1996) (remanding for resentencing to ensure "an adequate record for appellate review of the evidence used to calculate [a defendant's] sentence"). The district court did not cite to the record; instead, it adopted a presentence report containing two assumptions that are not supported by the record, one of which (the UPS driver's tenure) appears to be contradicted by testimony. While a district court may adopt a presentence investigation report's findings, it must explain why it does so when the defendant raises specific objections to the report's method of estimating drug quantities. Cf. United States v.. Vargas, 16 F.3d 155, 159 (7th Cir.1994) (remanding for resentencing when a defendant objected to a presentence report's finding concerning restitution, and the district court did not discuss the objection or the specific section of the presentence report). We thus remand for either a re-estimation of the quantity of drugs attributable to Holloway, or for an explanation of the legitimacy of the present approximation.

IV

We have considered Holloway's eleven claims and we AFFIRM his conviction. We VACATE his sentence and REMAND for further proceedings in light of this opinion.

Introduction

Defendants (collectively, "UST") argue for almost 100 pages that the Court should ignore the verdict of the properly instructed jury and enter judgment for them as a matter of law. Alternatively, they ask the Court to order a new trial, or reduce the damages award to the low end of the range supported by the evidence (and perhaps even lower based on supposed adjustments defendants failed to argue to the jury). In virtually all respects, however, defendants simply repeat old arguments. These arguments, supported (or not) by the very same cases, all were urged on the Court in support of their successive motions for summary judgment and for directed verdict, or in motions in limine. The Court's rulings on those points are law of the case, and need not be reconsidered absent significant new facts, change in law, or a showing of clear error -- none of which UST even attempts to demonstrate. (Point I).

Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law. Defendants have no serious quarrel with the Court's instructions to the jury; they effectively concede that the jury decided the case on the proper legal standards. Nor can they plausibly argue -- although they do -- that there was a lack of evidence to support the jury's verdict on each element of the causes of action. There is ample evidence that UST possessed monopoly power in the U.S. moist snuff market, engaged in exclusionary conduct, and thereby harmed competition and Conwood.

While UST disagrees with this evidence and suggests that there was some contrary evidence, it makes no meaningful effort to grapple with the actual trial record, which fully supported the jury's verdict. UST's submission that the evidence compels judgment for defendants as a matter of law repeats word-for-word claims made to and rejected by the Court on summary judgment, on a far less extensive factual record. UST gives the Court no persuasive reason to reverse its prior rulings, which in any event are plainly correct. (Point II).

Motion for New Trial. While UST makes perfunctory arguments that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence and that the damages were "excessive" by some undefined measure, it principally (re)argues that the Court was wrong to deny summary judgment, wrong to deny some of its motions in limine, and wrong in failing to sustain evidentiary objections that in many instances UST did not even make. But it is UST that is wrong -- wrong to demand endless reconsideration of the same arguments. UST makes no showing that any of the Court's rulings constitutes error, much less error that deprived it of a fair trial. (Point III).

Motion for Reduced Damages. Finally, after deriding Dr. Leftwich's study in numerous pre-trial, trial, and post-trial motions, UST closes with a demand for a reduced damages award based on the low end of the range established by his analysis. It asks the Court to override the jury's determination of damages in the middle of that range -- a reasonable conclusion supported by a wealth of independent evidence from other witnesses, including UST witnesses. That amount, UST argues, should be further reduced based on adjustments that it chose not to present to the jury, and that are unsupported by any evidence. UST elected to offer no damages testimony, other than testimony that Conwood had suffered no damages. UST cannot now credibly complain that the jury failed to weigh evidence UST decided not to present, or that the jury was required by law to award only the low end of the range supported by the evidence. (Point IV).

UST simply refuses to acknowledge that an attentive jury listened carefully for a month to all of the evidence and argument that the parties could muster. It refuses to acknowledge that the jury considered the demeanor and credibility of dozens of witnesses as well as hundreds of documents offered by both sides. It refuses to acknowledge that the jury reached a considered and reasonable judgment based on indisputably proper legal instructions and fully supported by the evidence. UST received a fair trial. Its post-trial motions should be denied.

I. THE COURT'S PRIOR RULINGS CONSTITUTE LAW OF THE CASE THAT UST HAS OFFERED NO REASON TO RECONSIDER

As the attached chart (Attachment "A") demonstrates, the Court has previously ruled on virtually every one of UST's post-trial arguments, which were previously made in the same words and based on the same proffered authority. UST seeks to relitigate issues already fully briefed, considered, and decided by the

Court on summary judgment or on directed verdict (twice), or in limine before and during trial.[1]

The Court does not have to entertain such rote repetition. "Under the doctrine of law of the case, findings made at one point in the litigation become the law of the case for subsequent stages of that same litigation." United States v. Moored, 38 F.3d 1419, 1421 (6th Cir. 1994). The rule is based on "the sound public policy that litigation be decided and then put to an end." In re United States Steel Corp., 479 F.2d 489, 494 (6th Cir. 1973). See also Hanover Ins. Co. v. American Eng'g Co., 105 F.3d 306, 310 (6th Cir. 1997) (refusing appeal on defendant's motion for judgment as a matter of law after trial because it had heard and decided the same legal issues pressed by the same defendant in an interlocutory appeal concerning its summary judgment motion).

The law of the case does not prevent the Court from reconsidering its prior rulings. But "to maintain consistency and avoid reconsideration of matters once decided during the course of a single continuing lawsuit," 18 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 4478, at 788 (1981 & 1999 Supp.), once an issue is decided, it is typically reopened "only in limited circumstances." United States ex. rel. Stevens v. McGinnis, Inc., No. C-1-93-442, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22122, at *19-*20 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 16, 1996). "The major grounds that justify reconsideration involve an intervening change of controlling law, the availability of new evidence, or the need to correct a clear error or prevent manifest injustice." Cale v. Johnson, 861 F.2d 943, 947 (6th Cir. 1988) (citation omitted).

[1]Indeed, UST's brief in support of its motion for judgment as a matter of law ("JMOL") tracks its summary judgment memorandum virtually page for page. For example, on UST's "ordinary" business practice defense, compare UST JMOL Mem. at 17-33 with UST Summ. J. Mem. at 25-33; UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 2-5. On its argument that tortious conduct cannot be exclusionary, compare UST JMOL Mem. at 33-37 with UST Summ. J. Mem. at 34-37; UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 5-6. On harm to competition, compare UST JMOL Mem. at 37-41 with UST Summ. J. Mem. at 38-40. On harm to Conwood, compare UST JMOL Mem. at 42-50 with UST Summ. J. Mem. at 40-50; UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 7-8. On the claim that damages are "speculative," compare UST JMOL Mem. at 50-60 with UST Summ. J. Mem. at 46-48.

None of these circumstances remotely applies here. The evidence at trial was by no means "substantially different" from the summary judgment record. It was stronger and more extensive. There has been no change of controlling law. And UST does not (and cannot credibly) claim that any of the Court's rulings was clearly erroneous or manifestly unjust. Accordingly, UST has provided no basis for what is, in substance, a motion for reconsideration of the Court's summary judgment and other rulings.

II. THE PROPERLY INSTRUCTED JURY'S VERDICT IS SUPPORTED BY THE EVIDENCE, AND UST'S CONTRARY ARGUMENTS FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW ARE WITHOUT MERIT

It is settled that judgment as a matter of law should be granted only "cautiously and sparingly" since it negates a determination of the facts by the jury. 9A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2524, at 252 (2d ed. 1995). In considering a Rule 50(a) motion, a court must refrain from weighing the evidence or making credibility determinations. See Lytle v. Household Mfg., Inc., 494 U.S. 545, 554-55 (1990); Jackson v. Quanex Corp., 191 F.3d 647, 657 (6th Cir. 1999). The jury verdict must be respected unless "there is a complete absence of pleading or proof on an issue material to the cause of action or when no disputed issues of fact exist." Jackson, 191 F.3d at 657 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Sawchik v. E.I. DuPont Denemours & Co., 783 F.2d 635, 636 (6th Cir. 1986). In considering a motion for judgment as a matter of law, moreover, the Court must consider the evidence in a light most favorable to the nonmovant, giving that party the benefit of all reasonable inferences. See Tuck v. HCA Health Servs. of Tennessee, Inc., 7 F.3d 465, 469 (6th Cir. 1993).[2]

Because UST concedes (with two trivial exceptions) that the Court's instructions to the jury were correct, the only issue is whether there was a "complete absence of proof" on any of the necessary elements of Conwood's Section 2 claim. Jackson, 191

[2]Albani v. Southern Arizona Anesthesia Services, P.D., No. 91-588, 1997 WL 718499, at *1 (D. Ariz. Jan. 27, 1997), does not stand for the proposition that an antitrust verdict deserves heightened scrutiny under Rule 50. In upholding the attempted monopoly verdict, the court noted that the defendants' Rule 50 motion "fails to account for the reasonable inferences the jury could have taken, and asks that we ignore them as well." Id. at *2. The court in Albani did begin its analysis expressing "serious concerns with the jury's result" because the jury found no conspiracy, combination, or contract in restraint of trade, yet concluded that the same conduct constituted attempted monopoly. Id. at *1. No such split verdict exists here. Moreover, the Albani court found its reservations insufficient to grant judgment for the defendants under Rule 50.

F.3d at 657.[3] UST does not attempt to clear that high hurdle; nor could it. The trial record brims with evidence on each element. While UST focuses on the limited evidence that supported its arguments, its failure to address the extensive and inconvenient contrary proof is fatal to its motion.

A. The Jury's Finding That UST Had Monopoly Power in the U.S. Moist Snuff Market Was Supported by the Evidence

The jury was properly instructed on the applicable legal standard for assessing whether UST had monopoly power. Jury Instructions 2.1, 2.3.[4] UST does not contend otherwise. The Court's instructions precisely tracked controlling Sixth Circuit authority.[5] The jury properly found, based on undisputed

[4]The Court first defined monopoly power directly, instructing that "[m]onopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market." Jury Instruction 2.1. The Court then listed a number of factors indicative of monopoly power, including: (i) UST's market share, (ii) the trend of UST's market share, (iii) the number and size of UST's competitors, (iv) competitors' share trends, (v) the history of entry into and exit from the market of other competitors, (vi) UST's ability to raise price without losing business, and (vii) UST's profit margins. See Jury Instruction 2.3. All such instructions were given with no objection from UST.

[5]See Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1016 (6th Cir. 1999)("There are two ways to establish . . . that the defendant holds monopoly power. The first is by presenting direct evidence 'showing the exercise of actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors.' The second is by presenting circumstantial evidence of monopoly power by showing a high market share within a defined market.") (quoting Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 850 (6th Cir. 1979)), petition for cert. filed, No. 99-294, 68 U.S.L.W. 3138 (Aug. 17, 1999).

evidence, that UST had monopoly power in accordance with the Court's instructions.

UST Admissions. Remarkably, and unmentioned by UST, the jury needed to look no further than UST's own admissions to determine that it had market power. In several strategic documents, the company candidly acknowledged its market power (and, indeed, its abuse).[6] UST did not attempt to address or dispute this proof at trial, and it does not come to grips with it now.[7] The jury was entitled to credit UST's admissions about its position in the market, and that evidence alone was sufficient to support the finding of market power.[8]

[6] See, e.g., PX 156 ("80% market share gives UST 'market power' -- this means we cannot legally use that market power to prevent competition from selling their products"); PX 33 ("UST does not deal on price -- we don't have to"); id. ("Our market power allows this [stated barrier to entry created by Copenhagen return policy] to exist"); PX 79 ("This is our arena"); PX 94 ("leverage our market share").

[7] UST did not call any of the authors of these documents to explain them, or otherwise dispute the statements. The sole attempted explanation came from its expert, Dr. Scheffman, who testified that he knew better than the executives, and that the "flaming" documents represented incautious and uninformed statements (from people he didn't bother to speak with). 3/23/00 Tr. at 115-16. Dr. Scheffman, however, did not even attempt to do what his own report said was required as a prerequisite to proper analysis of whether UST had market power. Id. at 155-56. The jury was free to accept or reject Dr. Scheffman's view that UST lacked market power, but there is no substance to UST's post-trial contention that they were forced to agree with it as a matter of law.

16diii005572

Direct Evidence of Controlling Price and Excluding Competition. UST's admissions were the tip of the iceberg of proof. It was uncontroverted that UST not only had the power to control prices, but did so year after year. UST's Chairman, Vincent Gierer, conceded in cross-examination that UST had raised prices every year in the 1990s. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131. UST's relentless annual price increases exceeded any increased costs and produced profit margins that were among the highest in corporate America. 2/29/00 Tr. at 253 (Kamien); 3/23/00 Tr. at 159-60 (Scheffman); 2/29/00 Tr. at 85-86 (Rosson); Smith Dep. at 83-97; 3/21/00 Tr. at 130 (Gierer); 3/13/00 Tr. at 13 (McClure); PXs 326.17, 326.20, 326.34. UST freely acknowledged this pricing power: "[we] don't deal on our product's prices, we don't have to." PX 33. Dr. Kamien testified, without challenge on cross-examination, that UST's control of prices, its increasing margins, and its unparalleled profits, could be explained only by UST's monopoly power. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 277-78 (Kamien); 3/1/00 Tr. at 15-17 (Kamien).[9]

It was equally plain that UST had the power to exclude competition and that it successfully did so. UST's own strategic documents -- unmentioned in its pleadings -- discussed how UST

[9]While UST's expert offered an alternative explanation for the fact that consumers paid roughly double for moist snuff as a result of UST's price increases from 1986 to 1996 -- that is, UST "shifted the demand curve" through advertising and the like, 3/23/00 Tr. at 47-48 (Scheffman) -- the jury was not compelled to accept it. It was, rather, permitted to weigh the evidence and credit UST's undisputed control of pricing as evidence of monopoly power.

created "barriers to entry" that prevented new entrants. E.g., PXs 32, 33, 37. Dr. Kamien testified without challenge that only UST's monopoly power explained the lack of new entrants to compete for UST's extraordinary profits, and the limited expansion of existing firms such as Conwood and Swedish Match. 2/29/00 Tr. at 278-79 (Kamien). Not a single new firm entered the moist snuff market after 1990,[10] and in the preceding decade two of the largest tobacco companies in the world tried and failed to surmount the barriers to entry. 3/1/00 Tr. at 20 (Kamien); 3/23/00 Tr. at 161-62 (Scheffman). There was also evidence that the existing competitors, including Conwood and Swedish Match, were actually restricted as a result of UST's anticompetitive tactics. E.g., 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-44 (testimony of former CEO of Swedish Match re UST tactics curtailing its growth); 2/29/00 Tr. at 103 (testimony of William Rosson discussing UST tactics curtailing Conwood's growth). The direct evidence of UST's exclusion of competition provided ample support for the jury's finding.[11]

Indirect Factors Indicative of Monopoly Power. UST's admissions and Conwood's direct proof of UST's monopoly power made superfluous the indirect factors the jury could consider.

[10]And the two that entered after Conwood's 1979 entry did so by acquisition of an existing competitor, not by actual new entry. 3/23/00 Tr. at 161-62 (Scheffman).

[11]The record is filled with other direct evidence of UST's "actual exclusion." See Point II.B, infra.

16diii005574

Jury Instruction 2.3. But there was ample evidence to support the jury's finding on those as well.

UST mistakenly suggests that the various factors are like elements, and that plaintiffs must establish each factor in order to prevail. UST JMOL Mem. at 8-9. That is not the law. No single factor is dispositive. So long as there was evidence to support the jury's finding, the alleged lack of, or conflicting evidence on, one or more of the factors affords no basis to overturn the verdict. Jackson, 191 F.3d at 657 (judgment as a matter of law appropriate only when "there is a complete absence of pleading or proof on an issue material to the cause of action or when no disputed issues of fact exist such that reasonable minds would not differ") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Of the seven factors identified in Jury Instruction 2.3, UST does not now contest three; the undisputed evidence established them beyond argument (UST's market share of close to 80%,[12] the small number and size of UST's competitors in moist snuff,[13] and UST's truly eye-popping profits[14]). The jury was entitled to infer, strongly so, that UST had monopoly power based on its

[13]Only three other competitors participate in the market, and none has a share greater than 13.5%. 2/29/00 Tr. at 50 (Rosson).

[14]UST's profit margins are without parallel among public companies. Neither UST's Chairman, Vincent Gierer, nor UST's economist, David Scheffman, could even think of another company with similar high margins. 3/21/00 Tr. at 130 (Gierer); 3/23/00 at 161-62 (Scheffman).

16diii005575

admitted 78% share of the market. See PSI Repair Servs., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir.) ("the Supreme Court has concluded that . . . over two-thirds of the market . . . constitute[s] monopoly power under § 2"), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1265 (1997). The undisputed evidence on these factors was itself sufficient for the jury to return a finding of monopoly power irrespective of any disputes regarding the remaining factors. But there was ample consistent evidence with regard to the other factors as well.[15]

First, while UST's share declined marginally (less than 1% per year from 1980 to 1998, 3/1/00 Tr. at 21 (Kamien)), the Court properly instructed -- with the concurrence of UST -- that such decline did not necessarily demonstrate lack of market power. Id. at 22-24 ("a declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power thought it does not foreclose such a finding"). And Dr. Kamien found it significant that UST's share had declined so little given UST's relentless price increases and its lack of product improvement or other consumer welfare benefit. Id. at 22-24. Dr. Kamien testified that, without market power, UST would have experienced a sharp decline similar to that suffered by IBM in the face of unrestrained competition in the personal computer market. Id. The jury was entitled to credit Conwood's [15]They were: (i) the trend of UST's market share, (ii) competitors' share trends, (iii) the history of entry into and exit from the market of other competitors, and (iv) UST's ability to raise price without losing business. See Jury Instruction 2.3.

evidence that UST's share movement was consistent with its possession of monopoly power.

Second, it was undisputed that Conwood's share growth was cut to one-third of the growth it had sustained in unrestrained competition during the period from 1980 to 1990. 3/1/00 Tr. at 15-17 (Kamien). Senior executives of Swedish Match likewise testified that its growth was substantially curtailed as a result of UST's anticompetitive scheme. 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-43 (McClure); 3/7/00 Tr. at 251-52 (Price). The significance of the fact that both Conwood and Swedish Match managed to grow in absolute terms from 1990 on (albeit at a restrained rate) was argued to the jury and was something the jury was entitled to consider. But the jury was also entitled to consider the evidence that UST successfully restrained the growth of competitors, and to resolve the dispute in favor of plaintiffs.

Third, the history of entry plainly supported plaintiffs. UST mistakenly conflates introduction of brands with new entry by competitors -- it is the latter that spurs competition and on which the Court's instruction focused properly and without objection.[16] The astonishing and undisputed fact with regard to entry is that after 1990 no company even attempted to enter the moist snuff market, UST's unparalleled profits notwithstanding.[17] Two tobacco giants tried and failed in the 1980s, and exited. This cannot be explained absent market power. 3/1/00 Tr. at 20 (Kamien). The jury was, again, entitled to credit this evidence, and UST cannot credibly argue otherwise.

[16]See Jury Instruction 2.3 ("You may consider the history of entry into and exit from the market by other companies"). Further, while UST offered a long list of brands introduced and nominally in production, it offered no evidence regarding the market shares of those brands or their breadth of distribution. The proof was therefore meaningless as a measure of competition in the moist snuff market, and the jury could reasonably have found it unpersuasive.

Finally, UST's ability to raise price without losing business was established by the undisputed evidence of its price hikes and corresponding increases in revenue and profits. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131 (Gierer). UST did not and could not explain its price increases by claims of innovation or other consumer benefit. And UST admitted that its price hikes exceeded any increased costs. UST's de minimis loss of market share is fully consistent with the consequences of rational pricing decisions by a monopolist. 2/29/00 Tr. at 278-79 (Kamien: only a company "with . . . substantial monopoly power, market power" can do this). The jury was entitled to credit the undisputed evidence that UST raised prices, increased revenues and profits, and maintained a monopoly share of the moist snuff market, and to accept the opinion of Dr. Kamien that only a company with market power could do that. Id.

[17]The two cases UST cites for the proposition that entry into the market precludes a finding of market power under Section 2 do not support its claim. UST JMOL Mem. at 8. In Omega Environmental, Inc. v. Gilbarco, Inc., 127 F.3d 1157 (9th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 812 (1998), which was a Clayton Act Section 3 case, there was undisputed evidence of a significant new entrant within three years of the filing of the complaint. In Barr Laboratories, Inc. v. Abbott Laboratories, 978 F.2d 98 (3d Cir. 1992), there had been six new competitors in the six years immediately preceding the suit. Those factual records present a stark contrast with the undisputed record here of no new entrants in 10 years.

B. The Jury Correctly Determined that UST Maintained its Monopoly Power Through Restrictive or Exclusionary Conduct

Other than its quibble over the use of the word "restrictive" in lieu of "predatory" (see pp. 67-68, infra), UST agreed in all respects with the Court's instruction on willful maintenance of monopoly power. Jury Instruction 2.4. Accordingly, the only question is whether there was evidence to support the finding of the properly instructed jury.

Here the witnesses were legion, and the documents (from UST itself) extensive. UST curbed rivals' growth by eliminating competitive distribution, obscuring the presence of rival products and advertising, using its "clout" and misleading data to convince retailers to restrict competitive distribution, and paying retailers to exclude, among other tactics. 3/13/00 Tr. at 228-31, 233-39, 247-51 (Blattberg); 3/21/00 Tr. at 208-09 (Gierer telling stock analysts that UST needs to limit competitive distribution); PXs 59, 113A, 215. UST's own documents established the company's unlawful plan to maintain its monopoly by impairing distribution for rivals. E.g., PX 9 ("Chain strategies . . . Eliminate Comp. Distribution"); PXs 28, 61, 289. These documents also recorded the success of the program in stark language. E.g., PXs 96, 120, 139.

Eight former UST sales representatives testified that they were ordered by their supervisors systematically to eliminate rival products, displays, facings, and point of sale ("POS") advertising from stores. See note 37, infra. Eleven Conwood representatives gave accounts of the daily exclusion they encountered in the field. See id. Six store witnesses gave corroborating accounts of their own run-ins with the self-proclaimed "top dog," PX 39.[18] This misconduct was widespread and systematic, as senior Conwood executives testified and as representatives of Swedish Match and expert witnesses (Dr. Kamien, Dr. Gundlach, and Dr. Blattberg) corroborated. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 105-06 (Rosson); 3/1/00 Tr. at 166 (Kamien); 3/10/00 Tr. at 46-47 (Williams); 3/7/00 Tr. at 256 (Price); 3/13/00 at 41 (McClure); 3/9/00 Tr. at 77-80 (Gundlach); 3/13/00 Tr. at 224 (Blattberg).

UST does not dispute this evidence now and made virtually no effort to challenge it at trial. Neither does UST contend that the evidence fails in the aggregate to support the jury's finding of exclusionary conduct. Instead, UST begins by claiming that to prove a Section 2 violation Conwood was required to show that UST

[18] See, e.g., Rusk Dep. at 10-12 (UST's rack removal not approved by manager or any other store personnel); Gill-Elkins Dep. at 15-16 (UST representative removed Conwood racks from store and placed product in box); Leinen Dep. at 19-22 (UST representative told store manager that it was his job to remove Conwood racks, despite being told to leave rack alone); Renfro Dep. at 16-17 (UST acting as category captains for Wal-Mart developed plan-o-gram providing very limited selection of price value brands despite analysis showing price value growth in the industry); Waller Dep. at 11-12 (UST provided skewed data to wholesaler); Stevens Dep. at 19-21 (UST removed Conwood rack while store manager was on vacation despite knowledge that all changes must be approved by manager); Engster Dep. at 26-27 (UST CEO offered store owner money to discontinue competitors' brands).

"used monopoly power in the marketplace to harm competition." UST JMOL Mem. at 14-16. However, UST does not dispute that the Court properly instructed the jury on this score. See Jury Instruction 2.4. Neither can it seriously contest the existence of evidence from which jurors could have made the requisite finding. See, e.g., 3/13/00 Tr. at 210-13 (Blattberg: only UST can credibly become category captain because of its market power; UST used that power to exclude); Kiel Dep. at 22-23 (UST able to engage in systematic tortious conduct because it was the big dog and let everyone know it); Borrowdale Dep. at 27-28; PX 39 (Chiaradio: retailers typically want the big dog running things); 3/10/00 Tr. at 78 (Williams: only UST, by virtue of its market power, could obtain permission to house all competitive products and pursue exclusive vending to eliminate competition); 3/13/00 Tr. at 44 (McClure: same); 3/21/00 Tr. at 129 (Gierer); 2/29/00 Tr. at 62, 109 (Rosson); 3/13/00 Tr. at 39 (McClure) 3/6/00 Tr. at 76 (Milano); PXs 23, 137, 268, 280, 288.

UST is similarly wrong to suggest that evidence of its intent had no proper role in the jury's determination of whether its conduct was exclusionary. UST JMOL Mem. at 10-14. Under long-settled law, evidence regarding intent is critical in determining whether the business tactics are procompetitive or anticompetitive.[19] UST's supposedly controlling authority holding otherwise is nothing of the sort.[20] And, in any event, UST points to no instruction on intent or evidence of intent to which it objected, or the admission of which supposedly was erroneous.

[19] Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 602 (1985) (intent may determine "whether the challenged conduct [was] fairly characterized as 'exclusionary' or 'anticompetitive'"); United States v. United States Gypsum Co.,

Ultimately, UST is left to resort to the same tactic it used on summary judgment -- plucking out separate strands of evidence (e.g., shelf space "recommendations," SOF=SOM, exclusive racks, CAP, and its admittedly tortious conduct) for separate consideration and then complaining that each strand, viewed in United States, 246 U.S. 231, 238 (1918) ("knowledge of intent may help . . . to interpret facts and to predict consequences"); Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women v. NCAA, 735 F.2d 577, 583 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (intent relevant "insofar as it helps predict the probable competitive impact of a disputed practice") (citation omitted); see U.S. Healthcare, Inc. v. Healthsource, Inc., 986 F.2d 589, 596 (1st Cir. 1993) ("[m]otive can, of course, be a guide to expected effects").

[20]UST cites Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1422 (6th Cir. 1990), for the proposition that "it is not 'exclusionary' for an alleged monopolist to compete vigorously, even if its objective is to 'injure' its rivals." UST JMOL Mem. at 10. Of course, in making that statement, the court in Langenderfer had explicitly found that the defendant's low-bidding practices were entirely lawful. Id. UST's reliance on Byars, 609 F.2d at 860, in support of its contention that intent is irrelevant likewise misconstrues the case. Byars specifically acknowledged that "a general intent to monopolize is all that is ordinarily required to find a § 2 violation." Id. at 859 (citing United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 105 (1948)). Since the challenged conduct in Byars was a monopolist's alleged unlawful refusal to deal, the court needed to find a specific intent to monopolize under prevailing law and only in that context noted its concern with the "overall impact of the monopolist's practices." Id. at 860. Overturning the district court's dismissal of the plaintiff's case, the Sixth Circuit remanded for "explicit factfinding" regarding the monopolist's intent -- namely, whether "business reasons justified the refusal to deal." Id. at 864.

isolation, fails to constitute the whole. Each species of conduct, UST insists, is merely "ordinary" competition beyond the reach of Section 2.[21]

UST's claim of "ordinary" business conduct is seriously misconceived. The jury was properly instructed on this defense. See Jury Instructions 2.1, 2.4. And there can be little wonder why the jurors rejected it: the top executives of UST testified that none of the conduct at issue in the case was, in their opinion, ordinary or appropriate in any respect. E.g., 3/6/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Vice President of Sales Milano: removal of racks and POS, exclusive vending, and reduction of competitor facings inappropriate); Smith Dep. at 249 (President Smith: eliminating competitive brand not "the right thing"; unaware of meaning of words "exclusive vending"); 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120, 190 (Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Gierer: UST conduct "astound[ing]," "embarass[ing]," "disappoint[ing]," and requiring an "investigation"); 3/7/00 Tr. at 36 (Vice President of Sales

Milano stating that eliminating competitive brands "inappropriate").[22]

Proceeding through UST's artificial (and improper) piecemeal review further confirms the conclusion of its executives:

Shelf Space "Recommendations." UST engages in fantasy to suggest that its representatives merely "recommended" to stores what might go where. UST JMOL Mem. at 17-19. With or without store permission, UST routinely excluded competitors' display racks, advertising, and products for the specific purpose of making it more difficult for them to distribute and sell their products. E.g., Borrowdale Dep. at 18 ("no exposure no sales, Q: It's that simple? A: Uh-huh"); Hart Dep. at 28-29 (Milano instructed at UST sales meeting -- attended by 125 representatives -- to eliminate competitors' racks and place products in UST racks to reduce the competitors' visibility in stores and make it harder for them to sell their products).

[22]In addition, UST's witnesses, Messrs. Biddy, Germany, and Jones, testified without exception that they personally did not engage in any of the challenged and concededly inappropriate practices. They did not remove competitors products, racks, or advertising, promote exclusive vending, or attempt to persuade stores to reduce competitor facings. 3/15/00 Tr. at 34-35, 102 (Biddy); 3/16/00 Tr. at 90-91 (Germany); 3/21/00 Tr. at 23-24 (Jones). In sharp contrast, however, Dr. Scheffman opined that UST did in fact engage in such activities, that they were all part of the normal competitive process, and that he thought UST could go much farther -- as far as blowing up Conwood's plants -- without violating the antitrust laws. 3/23/00 Tr. at 193-94. Needless to say, the jury was not required to resolve the dispute between Dr. Scheffman and his own clients in favor of Dr. Scheffman. It was entitled to find that the challenged conduct was exclusionary.

Where UST engaged in "category management," the evidence demonstrated that it abused its position of trust as category captain or manager -- a position uniquely available to it as the dominant monopolist -- in order to exclude rival racks, POS, and products, and often did so by using false or misleading information. 3/13/00 Tr. at 210-13, 247-51, 253-56, 260-62 (Blattberg); PXs 39, 59, 63, 139. There is no support for UST's claim that it merely made "recommendations" desired by stores as part of the competitive process. That argument was properly rejected by the jury based on the contrary evidence. Similarly shopworn is the fourth iteration of UST's argument that its "recommendations" are lawful per se.[23]

---

[23]The Court previously considered all of UST's citations on summary judgment. Not one so much as suggests the sweeping approval that UST claims, and none involves a factual backdrop even remotely similar to the extensive record of exclusionary conduct developed at the trial of the instant case. For example, in In re Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8, 144-45 (1982), an administrative law judge decided that the efforts of the leading cereal manufacturers (none of which had more than 45% of the market) to obtain shelf space in proportion to market share did not constitute unlawful collusion, a claim not even at issue here. In Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129, 1137 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), the court dismissed complaints about the defendant's restrictive shelf space practices under Section 1, but approved the plaintiff's Section 2 monopolization claim for the same conduct, and did so where the defendant had a much lower (50%) market share than here. In Bayou Bottling, Inc. v. Dr Pepper Co., 725 F.2d 300, 303 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 833 (1984), the court decided that particular practices in a particular market at that particular time did not constitute unlawful activity. And Jays Foods, L.L.C. v. Chemical & Allied Product Workers' Union, Local 20, No. 97 C 6227, 1998 WL 265098 (N.D. Ill. May 13, 1998), aff'd, No. 99-2807, 2000 WL 336902 (7th Cir. Mar. 31, 2000), was a case brought under an Illinois consumer fraud statute, not Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

SOF=SOM. According to its Vice President of Sales, there was no legitimate reason for UST to seek share of fixture equal to its monopoly share of sales. 3/6/00 Tr. at 99-100 (Milano). In fact, by pursuing that formula UST subjected itself to return problems, as its dated product (Copenhagen) often went stale when too many facings were allotted to it. Id. The testimony was uniform and uncontested that UST did not need SOF=SOM in order to display its wares adequately. Indeed, several UST witnesses testified that UST already had too much retail space in many locations, which led to excessive returns. See, e.g., 3/16/00 Tr. at 91-92 (Germany); Borrowdale Dep. at 28-30. Others flatly denied that UST pursued a strategy of seeking SOF=SOM. See, e.g., 3/6/00 Tr. at 79-80 (Milano).

The only reason for UST's use of SOF=SOM was what its internal documents flatly conceded: "Control competition/ SOF=SOM." PX 28 (Top Gun 1995).[24] The pernicious purpose and [24] See also PX 61 ("It is imperative that we continue with this category management action plan to eliminate competitive products."); PX 63 (UST can achieve more than 80% of merchandising space through SOF=SOM); id. ("Do not discontinue any slow selling brands on a national level"); PX 104 ("[W]hen reducing distribution, it may [be] necessary to have a smaller vendor. You definitely need to reduce the competitive facings in these locations in order for us to have a fair share of the section.").

effect of this tactic were explained in detail by Dr. Kamien and Dr. Blattberg.[25]

The attempt to defend the company's use of SOF=SOM as an ordinary and sensible business practice thus runs afoul of the trial testimony of UST executives, its own documents, and the credible opinion of leading experts. Nor can UST point to any authority suggesting that a monopolist is permitted as a matter of law to command the percentage of shelf space that equals its market share. The jury properly considered the evidence surrounding UST's use of SOF=SOM in making its finding of exclusionary conduct.[26]

Exclusive Vending. According to UST's own documents, "exclusive vending" (the requirement that all moist snuff be sold from UST's vendor or rack) was the linchpin of its anticompetitive strategy, not a mere accommodation to retailers who wanted "uniform" racks. PX 9 ("Chain Strategy -- Control Comp. Distribution . . . Exclusive Vending"). Former UST

[25]For example, Dr. Blattberg explained that he was aware of no space management theory or study suggesting SOF=SOM to be an optimal retail strategy and that in his opinion SOF=SOM leads to overstocks, assortment problems, and serves only to reinforce market share status quo. 3/13/00 Tr. at 252-53, 259. Dr. Blattberg further testified that UST pursued SOF=SOM to diminish the space available to competitors. Id. at 224.

[26]Tellingly, UST revised the CAP program to drop all reference to SOF=SOM as a baseline for measuring compliance after the lawsuit was commenced. Whereas the original CAP contract required the placement of POS and vendors "in accordance with share of market" in order to earn the monetary incentives, the 1999 (post-lawsuit) version of the CAP contract dropped all such references. 3/15/00 Tr. at 142-43 (Biddy); PX 146.

employees confirmed that they were directed to obtain exclusive vending specifically as a means of exclusion. Hart Dep. at 15-16; Marconi Dep. at 12-13; Borrowdale Dep. at 16; Ulizio Dep. at 23; 3/10/00 Tr. at 18-20 (Jeffrey); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32; Keil Dep. at 15-17. Field sales personnel regularly reported they solicited, and succeeded in obtaining, agreements with stores in order to exclude. PX 68 (7-Eleven); PX 4 (Quality Marts); PX 113A (United Dairy Farms). And, where stores did not agree, UST often imposed exclusive vending and/or POS anyway. See notes 35, 37, infra.

Through exclusive vending, UST imposed "artificial scarcity" that required the allocation of slots (in the UST rack) among competitors, and thus gave UST a choke point against competitive distribution. 3/13/00 Tr. at 238-39 (Blattberg).[27] It also provided the platform from which UST could reduce facings for competitors through "category management" abuses such as "cutting the tail" just below the last UST product, wider (and thus fewer) slots in the rack, and other restrictive means. And it eliminated the critical point-of-sale location for competitors to advertise lower prices, innovative products, or existing products

[27]Where each competitor had its own rack, there was no such choke point. Nor was exclusive vending necessary for this profitable and space-efficient product. The evidence was undisputed that other tobacco products, such as loose leaf, found ample room in stores even though they were far less profitable for the stores than moist snuff. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 51-53 (Rosson); 3/9/00 Tr. at 188 (Hettinger); 2/28/00 Tr. at 174-76 (Marano).

to interested consumers; on this score, UST's documents could not be clearer. PXs 23, 53, 48, 80, 139.[28]

UST does not and cannot defend these as "ordinary" business practices. Its top three executives denied that the company sought exclusive vending -- despite testimony from its former representatives and hundreds of its own documents to the contrary. E.g., 3/21/00 Tr. at 189 (Gierer); 3/6/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Milano); Smith Dep. at 225. Indeed, Mr. Milano testified that it would be inappropriate to put competitive products in UST racks to control shelf space and advertising. 3/6/00 Tr. at 75. Remarkably, UST's President and its National Key Accounts Manager claimed not to know what the words "exclusive vending" mean. Untiedt Dep. at 109; Smith Dep. at 421. There simply was no evidence from which the jury could have concluded that exclusive vending, as practiced by UST, constituted appropriate business conduct.[29]

[28]The harm from this conduct is greatly increased in a market where advertising is severely restricted by law. 3/15/00 Tr. at 263-64 (Blattberg).

[29]UST documents also show that, once the Conwood lawsuit was filed, UST stopped offering exclusive vending, speaking volumes to the supposed "ordinariness" of its practice. See, e.g., PX 130 (Division Manager re Crystal Flash: "Given the pending Conwood lawsuit, we explained that vendor exclusivity was no longer a requirement of our company."); PX 136 (Division Manager re Lake County Dairy chain: "This is also the chain that would like to go to US Tobacco exclusive if we are willing to pay a little. I have been told due to the recent Conwood lawsuit not to pursue exclusive right now."); PX 140 (UST Sales Representative Performance Evaluation pre-printed form has the following objective: "Continue to offer vendor exclusivity and category management where feasible." Comment on performance of one sales representative: "vendor exclusivity is not being

UST was free to offer testimony from a few store witnesses that they preferred exclusive vending and to argue from that to the jury. It cannot plausibly suggest that its tactics were lawful per se in light of the mountains of evidence demonstrating that the purpose and effect of its exclusive vending practices were to disadvantage rivals by limiting their distribution and advertising and thereby maintain UST's monopoly.

CAP Program. The evidence at trial established that UST designed and implemented its Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") as a tool of exclusion. PX 120 ("CAP has been a great means of reducing competition"); PX 94 ("[T]he inception of the Customer Alliance Program will be utilized to leverage our market share toward improved merchandising presence. This will come at the expense of slow moving competitive products."); PX 144 (UST division manager uses CAP to secure exclusive vending and header cards); PX 113A (exclusive vending and elimination of competitive product incorporated into CAP contract).

Dr. Gundlach testified, without contradiction, that CAP was used by UST, first, to eliminate competitive products, racks, and advertising;[30] second, as a basis for entering into exclusive vending agreements on the "worksheets" used by the sales representatives to determine compliance with, and hence

eligibility for, CAP payments;[31] and, third, as a tool for imposing other restrictions harmful to competition.[32]

At trial, UST disavowed these exclusionary uses insisting that CAP was merely a way to gather retail movement figures. 3/7/00 Tr. at 139 (Milano); 3/16/00 Tr. at 108-09 (Germany). The jury was of course permitted to accept or reject that explanation in the light of all the evidence. But there is no substance to or authority for UST's sweeping argument, that because CAP is denominated an "incentive program," its use by a monopolist to exclude competition cannot be challenged as exclusionary conduct under Section 2. See, e.g., R.J. Reynolds Tobacco. Co. v. Philip Morris Inc. 60 F. Supp. 2d 502, 511-12 (M.D.N.C. 1999) (enjoining "Retail Leaders" incentive program as likely violation of Sections 1 and 2); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. 97-3983, 1999 WL 346223, at *6-*7 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999) (denying 3M's summary judgment motion defending its retail rebate programs).[33] The jury properly considered UST's actual use of the CAP program as part of its overall campaign of unlawful exclusion.

[31] See, e.g., PX 120 (CAP incentive for eliminating competitive products); PX 175 (Berkebile discussing CAP goals); PX 112C ("All smokeless moist snuff in UST vendor[;] No competition"); PX 112D ("[B]ut [UST is] not going to vend Renegades or Kodiak Straight. They are under the counter."); PX 112F (exclusive vending); PX 112O (exclusive vending and exclusive header cards). Dr. Gundlach testified that, exclusive of the many CAP agreements that provided for such exclusivity, there were more than 21,000 stores covered by exclusive vending agreements with UST. 3/9/00 Tr. at 80.

[32] E.g., PX 114 (CAP used to place competitive displays under the counter in as many places as possible with the explicit approval of management); PX 139 (UST's control over merchandising and POS placement will make customer awareness of price differential difficult); PX 187 (CAP requires USTSM vendors and displays be placed in premium locations).

Admittedly Tortious Conduct. UST repeats again its argument, first made on motion for judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) and then repeated several times thereafter, that tortious conduct cannot also be exclusionary. UST JMOL Mem. at 34 (from "an antitrust perspective," tortious conduct is mere "competition, however unseemly"). But there is no "safe harbor" under antitrust law for exclusionary conduct that also happens to be tortious. See Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 7; Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 55-58. [34] There was, moreover, substantial evidence to support the finding that UST maintained its market share through exclusionary tactics that included the outright, [33]Defendants find no support in Beverage Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp 1144 (S.D. Ohio 1986). There the court decided only that a particular program in a particular market did not amount to exclusionary conduct because it did nothing more than promote the sale of one competitor's products without any exclusion of other competitors. Id. at 1154. In short, there was no evidence that Coca-Cola there used the incentive program to do what the evidence overwhelmingly established that UST used CAP and other programs to do here: exclude competition.

[34]The Sixth Circuit in Byars vacated the district court's ruling for the defendant -- on just this argument -- and remanded for further findings of fact on whether the defendant had engaged in "dirty tricks." 609 F.2d at 864. The court of appeals instructed the district court to "carefully examine the alleged 'dirty tricks.' Predatory conduct on [the defendant's] part would go a long way toward establishing a § 2 violation." Id. at 863 (footnote omitted). Defendants' remaining cases are inapt for reasons already fully briefed. See Pls' Opp. to Motion for Sum. J. at 55-58.

tortious theft of competitors' products, racks, and/or POS from stores. This misconduct was widespread across the country and premeditated at the highest levels of the company.[35] UST's contention that this evidence could not be considered as part of the jury's examination of the record finds no support in law or logic.

C. The Jury's Verdict Was Supported by Ample Evidence of Harm to Competition and Conwood

The jury was properly instructed on the element of injury in fact. Jury Instruction 2.5. The only remaining issue, therefore, is whether there was evidence to support the finding of the jury that Conwood suffered injury in fact. There was extensive evidence that UST's exclusionary campaign to limit distribution of competitors' moist snuff harmed competition and consumers as well as Conwood. UST ignores that evidence and bases its arguments, impermissibly, on assertedly contrary evidence that the jury justifiably found unconvincing.

As to competition, UST's documents established that it sought to harm competition by impeding distribution for rivals -- and thereby frustrating their ability to undercut UST with procompetitive products like price-value brands. PXs 14, 268, 288, 45. The purpose and effect of these practices were indisputably to harm competition, and they did so. Indeed, representatives of two of UST's three moist snuff competitors testified that the monopolist's restrictive tactics substantially impaired their ability to compete effectively in the market and significantly limited their growth. 2/29/00 Tr. at 116-20 (Rosson); 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-43 (McClure). This testimony, while ridiculed by UST, came from the most knowledgeable witnesses called at trial -- men with a combined total of more than 75 years in the tobacco business, one a neutral third-party. It was, moreover, fully corroborated by UST's own documents, e.g., PX 84 ("we have severely cut back on their ability to market products"), and former employees, e.g., Borrowdale Dep. at 18 (goal was "no exposure, no sales," and confirming effect on competitors' sales).[36]

[36]UST's position is that, because competitors did not go bankrupt, there has been no harm to competition. But UST's repeated mantra that competition in moist snuff was "vigorous" is belied by the uncontroverted evidence of supra-competitive prices, no innovation, huge monopoly profits and increasing margins, no entry in the contested period, regressions showing higher consumer prices and lower rival market shares where UST's predation succeeded in reducing competitive share of fixture, restricted output in chains where UST obtained exclusionary

Equally dispositive is the evidence, ignored by UST at trial and still today, that where UST succeeded in controlling more facings in stores -- the stated goal of its anticompetitive scheme, PX 23 ("our objective is to control the smokeless home, present the category and velocity, provide facings for competitive, control facings and positioning") -- consumers were harmed. Dr. Kamien established a direct, linear relationship between the number of facings controlled by UST and higher prices for consumers. This was direct evidence of consumer harm at the hands of UST, and UST did not even question, much less attempt to agreements, as well as indefensible predation practiced by the monopolist against its smaller rivals to maintain its grip. This is the essence of harm to competition.

Moreover, UST's "controlling legal authority" for judgment as a matter of law on this score is, at best, wildly off-point. See, e.g., Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Serv. of America, Inc., 190 F.3d 974, 977 (9th Cir. 1999) (affirming summary judgment where "uncontradicted evidence in the record" showed "low entry barriers," defendant's "inability to control prices or exclude competitors," and no "unnatural market barriers precluding robust competition") (citation omitted); R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food, Inc., 13 F.3d 478, 486-88 (1st Cir. 1994) (affirming summary judgment on similar, uncontradicted record); D.E. Rogers Assocs., Inc. v. Gardner-Denver Co., 718 F.2d 1431, 1439 (6th Cir. 1983) (affirming district court where "there is no evidence of anticompetitive effect, direct or inferential, in the record," and plaintiff mistakenly claimed that its own lost profits could suffice to "evidence[] the requisite effect on competition"); Havoco of America, Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 558 (7th Cir. 1980) (affirming dismissal where plaintiff failed to include in its complaint "any supporting factual allegations" of harm to competition); Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Serv. of America, Inc., 65 F. Supp. 2d 1052, 1065 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (granting summary judgment on exclusive dealing claim because plaintiff could not show that the contracts at issue were exclusive dealing contracts, and noting the continued and very recent entry of numerous other competitors in recently degregulated industry), aff'd, 190 F.3d 974 (9th Cir. 1999).

The very same conduct that harmed consumers also harmed Conwood. It cannot be gainsaid that the systemic exclusion (and in many instances destruction) of Conwood racks, POS, and products constituted harm to Conwood.[37] UST's own witnesses -- who claimed that they did not practice the exclusionary tactics -- provided further evidence of the harmful effect of the

---

[37]For example: 11 Conwood employees from across the country testified that UST representatives systematically ransacked Conwood racks, POS, and products; used misleading or false information in their "category management" efforts to exclude Conwood; and paid retailers, through CAP and other contracts, to do the same. See 2/28/00 Tr. at 222-23 (Marano); 3/3/00 Tr. at 88, 93 (Wilding); 3/8/00 Tr. at 128, 133 (Ryan); id. at 154, 161 (Dring); id. at 202-09 (Hynek); 3/9/00 Tr. at 197-98 (Hettinger); 3/10/00 Tr. at 8 (Falevsky); id. at 19 (Jeffrey); id. (vol. X-B) at 7-8 (Larsen); id. at 63-64 (Williams); 2/29/00 Tr. at 95-99 (Rosson).

Eight former UST representatives admitted that they deliberately excluded Conwood at the behest of their management. See Marconi Dep. at 12-13; Borrowdale Dep. at 16; Hart Dep. at 18; Carter Dep. at 37; Ulizio Dep. at 22-25; 3/10/00 Tr. at 18-20 (Jeffrey); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32; Keil Dep. at 15-17.

Six retailers and one wholesaler testified that UST representatives eliminated Conwood racks, POS, and products; presented false or misleading numbers as part of their category management efforts; and, even through UST's chairman, offered cash to exclude. See Rusk Dep. at 10-12; Gill-Elkins Dep. at 15-16; Leinen Dep. at 19-22; Renfro Dep. at 16-17; Waller Dep. at 11-12; Stevens Dep. at 19-20; Engster Dep. at 26-27.

UST's expert, David Scheffman, admitted that there is a direct correlation between Conwood losing racks and losing sales. 3/23/00 Tr. at 133.

Literally scores of UST's own documents attested to the successful implementation of their illegal efforts to eliminate Conwood racks, POS, and products. See, e.g., PXs 19, 24, 84, 106, 112C, 112D, 112F, 112O, 159, 272.

practices. E.g., 3/14/00 Tr. at 174-75 (Luckett: where no exclusive vending or "category management" reducing Conwood facings, Conwood has approximately 26% market share); 3/15/00 Tr. at 102 (Biddy: where no exclusion, Conwood has 26% market share); 3/21/00 Tr. at 23-24 (Jones: where no exclusion, Conwood has 20%-25% market share). UST's expert witness, Dr. Scheffman, confirmed in a statistical regression that where UST succeeded in reducing Conwood's facings Conwood sold less moist snuff. 3/23/00 Tr. at 133-34 (Scheffman).[38]

In addition, Conwood introduced evidence that, in two of America's largest chains (Wal-Mart and 7-Eleven), UST's success in excluding Conwood racks and POS led to sharply reduced sales for Conwood (harm to Conwood), and overall reduction in sales of moist snuff (reduced output indicating harm to competition and consumers). 3/1/00 Tr. at 51-54, 57-58 (Kamien); 3/13/00 Tr. at 275-78 (Blattberg); PX 327.21.

The jury was also entitled to credit the undisputed evidence that Conwood's growth was cut by two-thirds after UST began using its "clout" to exclude,[39] and the evidence that Conwood's state-by-state growth was differentially affected in a manner

[38]This testimony is consistent with UST's internal projections, which in 1997 estimated that competing price-value brands could be expected to gain as much as 18% of the market in just three years if left unrestrained. PX 45.

[39]From 1980 to 1990, Conwood grew from 0 to 11%; from 1990 to trial, Conwood grew from 11% to approximately 13.5%. 2/29/00 Tr. at 103 (Rosson). Conwood's growth in the decade following the commencement of UST's concerted exclusion was less than one-third of the growth it sustained in the preceding decade.

consistent only with the upsurge of UST's exclusionary conduct after 1990. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30 (Leftwich); PX 327.21.

UST's "no harm, no foul" theory ignores all this evidence and asks the Court to rule, as a matter of law, that an antitrust plaintiff cannot establish injury to competition unless it can establish that the market contracted and that its sales decreased in absolute terms. That is not the law.[40] UST's successful efforts to arrest Conwood's (and Swedish Match's) growth through exclusionary tactics that increased prices for consumers (undisputedly so) is fully cognizable under the antitrust laws.

D. The Jury's Verdict Was Supported by Ample Evidence of Causation

The properly instructed jury was required to determine, in order to find that Conwood had established injury in fact, that some harm to Conwood had been caused by UST's exclusionary conduct. As the Court explained -- with no objection from UST -- Conwood was "not required to prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury." Jury [40] See Caribe BMW, Inc. v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft, 19 F.3d 745, 753-54 (1st Cir. 1994) (reversing district court's dismissal of complaint because dealer's loss of additional profits due to alleged maximum resale price constraints constitutes antitrust injury); Gulfstream III Assocs., Inc. v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 425, 429 (3d Cir. 1993) ("lost profits (or increased losses)" constitute antitrust injury); Volvo N. Am. Corp. v. Men's Int'l Prof'l Tennis Council, 857 F.2d 55, 67 (2d Cir. 1988) (reversing dismissal of complaint because allegation that anticompetitive conspiracy caused tennis events "to be less profitable than [those] events otherwise would have been" was sufficient to establish antitrust injury).

Instruction 2.5 (emphasis added). Instead, Conwood needed to show only that UST's "illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury. This means that Conwood must have proved that some damage flowed to it as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation." Id. (emphasis added).[41]

There is no serious dispute that Conwood met this test. For example, the former UST representatives established injury to Conwood by admitting their concerted removal of Conwood racks, POS, and products pursuant to company policy. And of course there was far more and corroborative evidence of harm from [41]UST did not object to this instruction at trial, does not do so now, and cannot sensibly do so under long-settled law nowhere addressed by defendants. See, e.g., Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 114 n.9 (1969) ("It is enough that the illegality is shown to be a material cause of the injury; a plaintiff need not exhaust all possible alternative sources of injury in fulfilling his burden of proving compensable injury under § 4."); Allied Accessories & Auto Parts Co. v. General Motors Corp., 825 F.2d 971, 973 (6th Cir. 1987) ("Allied I") (reversing district court's holding that plaintiff must show defendants' misconduct was sole cause of its antitrust injuries and approving Seventh Circuit jury instruction providing: "'The plaintiff does not claim nor is he obligated to prove that the violation was the sole and only cause of the loss of profit. It must, however, show that the violation played a substantial part in bringing about or causing the loss of sales and the loss of profit. . . . Plaintiff need not show that the price discrimination was a more substantial cause of injury than any other.'") (quoting Bohack Corp. v. Mar. 14, 2000) (rejecting motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict on causation grounds because plaintiff had established that 3M's conduct "was a material cause of LePage's injury"); Allied Accessories & Auto Parts Co. v. General Motors Corp., 901 F.2d 1322, 1325-26 (6th Cir. 1990) ("Allied II") (rejecting defendants' claim that plaintiff must show it would have obtained contract in a "violation free environment" and holding that plaintiff "need only show" that defendants' unlawful conduct "materially affected" retailer's decision).

Conwood's own representatives, store witnesses, and scores of UST documents. See, e.g., notes 35, 37, supra. Remarkably, UST does not even mention the proof from its own former employees and its own documents, which establish that UST intended to harm Conwood through exclusionary tactics and that it did so routinely and systematically. Id.

UST's argument is based solely on the notion that other factors might also have caused Conwood to lose sales." UST JMOL Mem. at 44. UST undoubtedly had theories of what halted Conwood's growth (e.g., "the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers," "other factors in marketplace," "additional competition from UST and other competitors," and "Conwood's failure to compete"). Id. at 46. All of these arguments were given the weight they deserved by the jury. The jury's decision not to credit UST's alternative theories of harm affords no colorable basis for granting judgment to UST as a matter of law.[42]

[42]As previously briefed (see Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 62 n.78), defendants' citation to Valley Products Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398 (6th Cir. 1997); Axis, S.p.A. v. Micafil, Inc., 870 F.2d 1105 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 823 (1989); Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36 (6th Cir. 1994); and Baum Research & Development Co. v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998), does nothing to change this conclusion. In each case, the uniform proof was that the plaintiff's injuries resulted solely from the defendant's lawful acts of exclusion -- in Axis by control over a patent, in Valley Products by control over licensing rights, in Hodges by control over physical premises, and in Baum Research by control over eligibility rules. By contrast, on the record adduced at trial there can be no serious claim here that Conwood's injuries were caused solely by fair competition and not at all by UST's unlawful conduct.

E. The Jury's Award of Damages Affords No Basis for Judgment As a Matter of Law

Here, as with the elements of liability addressed above, there is no dispute that the Court gave the jury proper legal instruction. Indeed, with respect to damages, the jury instructions and verdict form language were in significant part proposed by UST.

Nor is there any dispute that there is sufficient record evidence to support Conwood's claimed damages. Conwood introduced a wealth of damages evidence. Dr. Leftwich presented a detailed study based on accepted economic method establishing Conwood's damages from UST's anticompetitive acts within the range of $155 to $488 million. Based on his 45 years of experience in the tobacco business, Conwood's historical performance in moist snuff, and Conwood's performance in adjacent smokeless markets, Conwood's Chairman, Mr. Rosson, testified that Conwood would have attained a market share in the mid-20s but for UST's misconduct. 2/29/00 Tr. at 119-20 (Rosson). And it was undisputed (and corroborated independently by Mr. Price of Swedish Match) that each additional share point is worth $10 million in net profit. 3/7/00 Tr. at 116-20 (Price). In contrast, UST decided to offer no evidence with respect to Conwood's damages, other than to sponsor an expert who opined that Conwood had not been damaged at all. 3/23/00 Tr. at 140-41 (Scheffman).

The jury determined that Conwood's actual damages "only" from UST's antitrust violation amounted to $350,000,000. This fell near the mid-point of the range to which Dr. Leftwich testified, and was far less than the jury could properly have awarded by application of Mr. Rosson's estimation of "but for" market share (the mid-20s) to the undisputed figure of $10 million per additional share point.

UST challenges the admissibility of some but by no means all of the damages evidence, maintains that the damages are "excessive" by some undefined standard, and suggests that the Court should rejigger the figures. But these arguments have nothing to do with judgment as a matter of law. (Point 1). Passing that, UST's recycled complaints provide no reasoned basis for intruding upon the determination made by a properly instructed jury based on competent evidence, from several sources, that UST did little if anything at trial to dispute. (Point 2).

1. On a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the element of damages "is satisfied by [the plaintiff's] proof of some damage flowing from [the defendant's actions]; inquiry beyond this minimum point goes only to the amount and not the fact of damage." Zenith Radio, 395 U.S. at 114 n.9; Allied I, 825 F.2d at 973-75; Broan Mfg. Co. v. Associated Distribs., Inc., 923 F.2d 1232, 1235 (6th Cir. 1991) (recovery prevented "only where the fact of damage is uncertain," not the amount of damages); Grantham & Mann, Inc. v. American Safety Prods., Inc., 831 F.2d 596, 601-02 (6th Cir. 1987) (rule that remote and speculative damages are not recoverable "serves to preclude recovery . . . only where the fact of damage is uncertain . . . not where the amount of damage alone is uncertain"). See also Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 65; Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 14-15. UST does not challenge the fact that Conwood provided proof from which a reasonable juror could find at least some damage (e.g., one lost sale) flowing from its misconduct. Nor, on this record, could it plausibly do so. Accordingly, judgment for UST is unavailable as a matter of black letter law.

2. Even if UST's arguments concerning the amount of Conwood's damages were pertinent on a motion for judgment (and they are not), there is nothing new here. UST simply restates the same arguments and recites the same authorities previously detailed in its pre-trial motion to exclude Dr. Leftwich's testimony. Each of its points were exhaustively addressed by Conwood and the Court at that time. See Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich; Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 63-67; Feb. 23, 2000 Order. UST offers no persuasive reason to retread this familiar territory. For example:

(a) UST complains that Dr. Leftwich's analysis "does not reflect lost sales, but merely makes assumptions about lost share." UST JMOL Mem. at 51-53. In fact, Dr. Leftwich did not make assumptions about lost share, but rather tested Conwood's hypothesis that its growth was particularly stymied by UST's

anticompetitive tactics in markets where it had not attained a "foothold" by 1990. The economic evidence confirmed the validity of the hypothesis, and from that Dr. Leftwich estimated the growth that Conwood would have attained "but for" UST's unlawful conduct. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30-32. In any event, there was testimony regarding lost sales as a result of UST's misconduct. See, e.g., p. 29 & note 35, supra (citing testimony regarding lost sales). And UST has not cited (and cannot cite) any authority for the proposition that a damages expert must directly measure lost sales instead of lost market share.

(b) UST complains, as it did in pre-trial motions, that Dr. Leftwich's analysis began with a hypothesis derived from conversations with Conwood executives and employees. UST JMOL Mem. at 53-55. Contrary to UST's intimations, however, Dr. Leftwich did not rely on Conwood's perceptions to generate a damages number, he tested them using industry-standard data and accepted statistical techniques. He found that the empirical evidence supported Conwood's experience: the data demonstrated that UST's acts after 1990 had a disproportionate adverse impact on Conwood in states where Conwood had not already attained sufficient market share to protect itself from attack. See 3/8/00 Tr. at 20-21; Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 5-12, 26-27 (discussing argument and facts in further detail). The use of hypotheses, as Dr. Leftwich testified without challenge from UST, is the cornerstone of the scientific method. UST cites no court that has required experts to forgo hypotheses, or limited the sources from which experts may obtain them.

(c) UST complains that Dr. Leftwich's study did not rule out all other possible causes for the effect he observed in the data. UST JMOL Mem. at 55-58. As was fully briefed before trial, however, Dr. Leftwich considered a host of possible "confounding variables," including every single variable proposed by defendants' expert in his report. Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 20 n.15. These include changes in average state per capita income; median age; racial composition; educational levels; unemployment rates; regional preferences; and trends found in related smokeless tobacco markets (including looseleaf) that are unaffected by UST interference but similarly affected by increasing government regulation and other factors. Id. at 6-7, 11. From the empirical data, Dr. Leftwich concluded that none of these factors could explain Conwood's different level of share growth between 1990 and 1997. The only factor that could explain this empirical phenomenon was UST's misconduct. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30 (Leftwich).

This was more than sufficient under settled law -- which does not require a damages expert to exclude all hypothetical possibilities imagined by counsel after the fact.[43] Indeed, the lines and in particular overseas countries and territories"); Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., Nos. 98-3732 & 98-4042, 2000 WL 303035, at *14 (8th Cir. Mar. 24, 2000) (plaintiff's expert admitted that important, "inconvenient" facts "could have been incorporated into his model" but were not) (emphasis added).[44] See also Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 17-21.

Where a plaintiff has provided a plausible economic model using the available data, alternative causal explanations proposed by the defendant are for the jury to decide. See, e.g., In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litig., 756 F.2d 411, 418 (5th Cir. 1985) ("[P]laintiffs offered evidence which attributed price increases to price fixing. Defendants countered with evidence that the price increases were caused by increases in the cost of linerboard, fuel, and labor. The jury could reasonably have believed either explanation."). The jury was properly allowed to resolve the dispute over what caused Conwood's damages.

[44]Concord Boat is distinguishable on yet other grounds. The expert's but-for model there, unlike here, depended on unsupported assumptions that the parties' products "would be viewed as equal in quality" by consumers. 2000 WL 303035, at *14. Further, unlike here, there was apparently no damages evidence on which the jury could have relied beyond the expert's opinion. Id. at *15. Here, by contrast, there was substantial evidence that corroborated the expert's opinion, including evidence from defendants' own witnesses as to the market share Conwood was able to attain in areas unaffected by the unlawful and exclusionary UST campaign. See p. 45, infra.

(d) Defendants complain that Dr. Leftwich should not have been permitted to rely on sworn declarations from Conwood employees attesting to the scope and nature of UST's exclusionary practices. UST JMOL Mem. at 58-59. However, UST's contention that experts cannot rely on hearsay materials is simply wrong. Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999) (abuse of discretion to preclude expert from discussing basis of opinion, even if basis was otherwise inadmissible hearsay).[45]

(e) In any event, the jury's verdict cannot be vacated (let alone reversed) when other record evidence supports it. Sawchik, 783 F.2d at 636; Kabealo v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 17 F.3d 822, 827 (6th Cir.) (noting that plaintiffs' "own projections and their actual experience during four years of operation" would provide factfinder with reasonable basis for damages), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 812 (1994). Here the jury's verdict is supported by substantial evidence in addition to -- and corroborative of -- Dr. Leftwich. Indeed, the jury verdict is fully supported even in the absence of evidence from Dr. Leftwich.

[45]UST's alternative evidentiary argument under Federal Rule of Evidence 703 that the sworn declarations are not the sort of material "reasonably relied on by experts" is unsupported by record evidence. It is also undermined by the decision of UST's own expert to place heavy reliance on materials of a similar nature, such as Conwood activity reports and -- as the very bedrock of his analysis -- a one-page document that he literally knew nothing about. 3/23/00 Tr. at 183-88 (Scheffman). In any event, such evidentiary cavils are not by a long shot a valid basis for judgment as a matter of law. See p. 62, infra.

For example, Mr. Rosson's testimony provided painstaking detail about the smokeless tobacco markets. This gave the jury a fully reasonable basis, grounded in actual past performance in moist snuff as well as adjacent markets, for estimating the "but for" share Conwood would have attained. 2/29/00 Tr. at 119-20 (Rosson). Mr. Price, corroborating Mr. Rosson's testimony, stated that each additional share point is worth $10 million in net profits in the moist snuff market. 3/7/00 Tr. at 116-20 (price). Several witnesses -- all called by UST -- testified that where Conwood was unrestrained by UST's exclusionary conduct it easily attained market shares as high as 30%.[46] Similar testimony was provided by Conwood's sales manager, Mr. Williams. 3/10/00 Tr. at 84 (Conwood has approximately 30% market share in Paducah area and chains unaffected by UST misconduct). UST itself predicted that Conwood and other makers of "price value" brands had the potential to gain as much as 18.1% of the market in three years. PX 45.

From all this evidence, the jury was plainly entitled to determine -- without engaging in speculation -- that Conwood would have continued on its growth trajectory after 1990, would have attained substantial additional market share, and [46] See, e.g., 3/14/00 Tr. at 174-75 (Luckett); 3/15/00 Tr. at 133 (Biddy); 3/16/00 Tr. at 94 (Germany); 3/21/00 Tr. at 23-24 (Jones); 3/22/00 Tr. at 29 (Overby).

consequently (at $10 million per additional share point) would have earned $350 million in additional profits.[47]

To UST, of course, no damages proof could be sufficient, because the attempt to model a market purged of its antitrust violation necessarily involves predictions and estimates that can always be challenged as unanchored in the actual facts. For this reason, the law provides wide latitude to wronged antitrust plaintiffs; jury awards may be challenged only when they are supported by nothing more than "total[] speculat[ion]." Elder-Beerman Stores Corp. v. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 459 F.2d 138, 150 (6th Cir. 1972). That is not the case here.

III. DEFENDANTS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL

The verdict in this case resulted from a trial that even UST concedes was virtually error-free. Indeed, it states that a new trial would differ little if at all from the trial just completed. UST New Trial Mem. at 4. UST further concedes that the Court gave instructions that were proper statements of the law. And UST's handful of quibbles regarding the conduct of the trial, many of which they failed to register during trial, do not remotely approach the denial of its substantial rights. UST has no legitimate basis for asking the Court, and another jury, to set aside another month to repeat the same arguments that a jury has already considered fully and rejected.

[47]While seemingly large in appearance, the jury award represents slightly less than an additional nine market share points over four years. 16diii005610

A new trial is warranted under Rule 59 only "when a jury has reached a 'seriously erroneous result.'" Holmes v. City of Massillon, 78 F.3d 1041, 1045-46 (6th Cir. 1996) (reversing district court's grant of new trial); Morvay v. Maghielse Tool & Die Co., 708 F.2d 229, 233 (6th Cir. 1983) (new trial denied where party failed to demonstrate "manifest errors of law or fact"). Defendants must demonstrate that (1) the verdict was against the weight of the evidence; (2) the damages were excessive; or (3) the trial was unfair to defendants. Holmes, 78 F.3d at 1046. UST can demonstrate none of the above.

A. Overwhelming Evidence Supported the Verdict

A new trial is not appropriate "'unless th[e] verdict was unreasonable.'" Barnes v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 201 F.3d 815, 820-21 (6th Cir. 2000) (quoting Holmes, 78 F.3d at 1047). "'[C]ourts are not free to reweigh the evidence and set aside the jury verdict merely because the jury could have drawn different inferences or conclusions or because judges feel that other results are more reasonable.'" Id. at 821 (citation omitted).

The verdict here was eminently reasonable, and was supported by numerous witnesses and exhibits on each essential element of Conwood's antitrust claims. In many critical respects, the evidence was undisputed. See Point II, supra.[48] UST does not seriously argue otherwise, devoting less than one and a half pages to this point and offering not a single case citation that supports the grant of a new trial based on a jury's allegedly incorrect resolution of disputed Section 2 factual issues. UST New Trial Mem. at 2-3. While it laments the jury's failure to endorse the defense arguments, UST gives no reason to think a second jury would disagree with the first. The alleged haste with which the jury returned its verdict suggests no lack of reasoned consideration, but rather the absence of any genuine disagreement over the proper decision. The jury's deliberations and verdict were "consistent with [the] clarity of the evidence." United States v. Holloway, No. 98-5175, 1998 WL 833767, at *6 n.8 (6th Cir. Nov. 19, 1998).[49] There is no basis for suggesting

[48]For example, Conwood's market definition, see Jury Instruction 2.2, was the only market definition offered by either party; UST's market share, history of price and margin increases, and the lack of new entrants into the market after 1990 were all undisputed; the accounts of the eight former UST salesmen, the six store employees, and the twelve Conwood field sales representatives went unchallenged in any material respect; UST's own records documenting their anticompetitive practices were undisputed; the lack of any benefit to consumers from UST's practices was undisputed, and indeed the economic evidence that proved the relationship between UST's command of facings and higher prices to consumers was effectively conceded; and only Conwood offered evidence regarding the amount of damages.

[49]To the extent that it reacted to the evidence, the jury was not alone. UST's Chief Executive Officer testified that the proof variously "astounded," "embarrassed," and "troubled" him. 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120, 190 (Gierer). But see UST Letter to Our Customers, Mar. 30, 2000 (after trial, UST apparently retracting promise to investigate and change conduct, insisting to retailers that it will not alter its conduct and stating: "[T]he actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful competitive conduct . . . . We will

that a second jury would decide otherwise, and no authority for giving UST a second chance to make the same unpersuasive arguments.

B. UST Cannot Show That the Damage Award Was Excessive

The jury's award of $350,000,000 in actual damages was based solidly on the evidence. See Point II.E, supra. UST cannot plausibly call the damages "excessive" when they were far less than the maximum the jury could appropriately have awarded,[50] and when UST decided for tactical reasons not to offer any damages evidence of its own. Portis v. Grand Trunk Western R.R., No. 93-1721, 1994 WL 362110, at *2-*3 (6th Cir. July 12, 1994) (damages not excessive where defendant "chose to defend" solely on theory that claim was a fraud and presented no alternative calculations of economic loss; award "was within the range permitted by the evidence presented at trial, and therefore not so large as to shock the conscience of the court"); Farber v. Massillon Bd. of Educ., 917 F.2d 1391, 1395 (6th Cir. 1990) (damages not excessive unless beyond maximum damages presented at trial); Jenkins v. Associated Transport, Inc., 330 F.2d 706, 712 (6th Cir. 1964) continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us.").

[50]Dr. Leftwich estimated damages of up to $488 million, and he testified that he believed the evidence warranted an award at the high end of his range. 3/8/00 Tr. at 103-04 (Leftwich); PX 327.21. Mr. Rosson's testimony that Conwood, based on past performance and market conditions, could have attained market share in the mid-20s would also have fully supported damages of close to $500 million (12 additional share points x $10 million per year x four years). The jury's award was just about 65% of these amounts.

("[jury's] decision is not subject to interference by the trial judge unless so excessive . . . as to be indicative of prejudice, passion, partiality, or corruption on the part of the jury") (internal quotations marks omitted). The damages were appropriately scaled to Conwood's lost profits in a market characterized by enormous profits. As the Court stated, Conwood was "entitled to the damages that you're entitled -- entitled to receive, no matter what they are in relation to anything else." 3/27/00 Tr. at 93.

The damages are excessive only in the sense that UST believes the jury should not have awarded them. But that is no basis for the grant of a new trial, and UST does not seriously argue it is. UST cites no authority to support its subjective challenge to the amount of damages, and indeed the cases that it does cite all turn not on "excessiveness" but on a jury's patent award on impermissible grounds -- an issue not present here.[51]

---

[51]Thus, in Image Technical Services, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 125 F.3d 1195, 1225 (9th Cir. 1997), a new trial was required because the jury concededly awarded damages based on claims that had been dismissed on the merits before the case was submitted. In MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Corp., 708 F.2d 1081, 1163 (7th Cir. 1983), a new trial was required because the damages study included damages for 22 counts of alleged monopolization, liability was established only on 7 of the 22 counts, and there was no way -- based on the evidence presented to it -- the jury could have limited the award to the counts on which liability was established. In Litton Systems, Inc. v. Honeywell, No. 90-4823, 1996 WL 634213, at *3 (C.D. Cal. July 24, 1996), similarly, the jury was presented with a damages model that relied on six categories of conduct that the Court had expressly excluded from the jury's consideration. No such issue is present here. The jury found against UST on both actual and attempted monopolization, the damages evidence from, e.g., Dr. Leftwich and Mr. Rosson was tied to evidence of UST exclusionary conduct that the jury was entitled to consider, and the jury was

There is simply no reasoned basis on which the jury's verdict can be rejected, and a new trial ordered, where the jury awarded substantial damages supported by the evidence.[52]

C. The Trial Was Fair

The four-week trial of this major case was a model of efficiency and fairness to all parties, and UST does not actually contend otherwise. Far from making the requisite showing that its "substantial rights" were trampled, Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; Morales v. American Honda Motor Co., 151 F.3d 500, 514 (6th Cir. 1998) (question is whether supposed error "caused a different outcome"); Gandy v. Sullivan County, 24 F.3d 861, 866 (6th Cir. 1994)("substantial rights" must be affected), UST finds surprisingly little to complain about.

UST's continued protests that it should have been granted summary judgment, that the Court should have granted all of its motions in limine, that the Court should have excluded some and allowed other evidence, and that the Court should have made the two inconsequential (and inaccurate) modifications to the jury instructions that UST requested, are both wrong and beside the point: UST does not argue, and cannot argue, that these claimed "errors" singly or together deprived it of a fair trial.

properly instructed to award damages, if any, for injuries caused "only" by UST's unlawful conduct. Jury Instruction 4.

[52]UST engages in irrelevant hyperbole when it calls the damages award a "direct attack" on the retail industry itself. UST JMOL Mem. at 3.

1. The Court's Ruling on Summary Judgment Was Correct

UST asserts that the Court erred as a matter of law in its summary judgment ruling. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

First, UST asserts that the Court impermissibly relied on its "intent" and not its "conduct." But evidence of intent is highly probative in a Section 2 case and may even determine whether the conduct is "exclusionary" or "anticompetitive." See pp. 17-18, supra. Besides, the Court's ruling passed "intent" and discussed the "highly detailed" and "carefully developed, thoroughly documented record" of UST's actual misconduct and the resulting harm to consumers and competition. Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 5, 7. The Court held that credible evidence demonstrated that UST's intent was actually carried out through widespread anticompetitive conduct -- all of which conduct was later proved, in even greater detail, at trial. See, e.g., id. at 3 (efforts to eliminate competitive racks were "significantly successful"); id. at 4 (excluded competitive POS); id. (increase slot width to reduce consumer choice); id. (reduce distribution of lower-priced price-value products); id. at 7 (concerted campaign at highest levels of UST to shut Conwood out from effective competition at retail level).

Second, UST asserts that the Court erred when it held that UST's marketing practices are not immunized from review as a matter of law. As was fully briefed at the time, however, the cases that UST believes "immunize" its marketing practices are at best unhelpful, and often even damaging, to its claim that its conduct is ordinary and procompetitive. See note 23, supra; Pls.' Opp. to Motion for Summ. J. at 49-50, 54 n.64. UST's assertion that its practices are ordinary and not exclusionary was properly held a disputed issue of material fact, and the Court correctly reserved the determination of this and other disputed factual issues for the jury. The properly instructed jury decided that UST's practices were neither ordinary nor procompetitive. UST has given the Court no good reason to reverse its decision to deny summary judgment. That decision was fully informed by "well-accepted principles of § 2 law." Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 7. UST's repetitive carping sheds no new light on the subject.[53]

---

[53]The only new twist is UST's incorrect parsing of Concord Boat, and in particular its suggestion that Concord Boat supports its argument that Conwood should have been held to the standards of the Clayton Act. Concord Boat involved price cutting in the boat engine market. The court did not suggest that exclusionary conduct under Section 2 is judged under the same standards as a Clayton Act claim. The court did mention in passing some of the characteristics of defendants' discount programs that lowered prices -- "the 'very essence of competition.'" 2000 WL 303035, at *21 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 594 (1986)). But the Eighth Circuit's approval in passing of price competition does not help UST; the evidence was undisputed that UST does not compete on price. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131 (Gierer) (UST raised price every year for last ten years); Smith Dep. at 26 (admitting that UST does not engage in price competition; denying knowledge of what "price competition" is); PX 33 ("UST doesn't 'deal' on its product's prices. We don't have to").

2. The Court's In Limine Rulings Were Correct

(a) The Court Properly Excluded Evidence of Owner Wealth.

Before trial, the Court issued a written ruling that excluded evidence regarding the identity of Conwood's ultimate beneficial owners and their claimed wealth. This ruling was entirely correct. The identity of the owners, and the unrelated assets they have or do not have, is both irrelevant and unfairly prejudicial -- offered solely to suggest to the jury that Conwood was owned by rich people and hence was undeserving of any recovery notwithstanding its legal entitlement.

Familiarly, UST claims severe prejudice in having been unable "to tell the whole story" of Conwood's chain of ownership.[54] But the parties in this case were corporations, and the wealth of Conwood's ultimate beneficial owners was no more relevant than evidence that the majority of UST's stockholders are financial institutions with vast wealth far exceeding that of Conwood's owners. UST does not point to a single authority or new argument suggesting otherwise.

The Court's ruling did not prevent UST from making any proper argument. It was free to elicit evidence, and to argue,

[54]In two years of discovery, however, UST never established that Conwood had access to additional funds from its ultimate owners or that the owners involved themselves in any way in Conwood's expenditures, investments, and distributions. Had it attempted to establish these matters in discovery, moreover, it would have found the facts very different than what it now claims.

that Conwood had ample financial resources and could easily use those resources in its business rather than distribute them to its owners.[55] Conwood never claimed otherwise. UST elicited and argued that Conwood was a subsidiary of another corporation, despite the Court's statement that "I'm not even sure of the relevance." 2/29/00 Tr. at 131, 145 (Rosson). It fully explored Conwood's substantial participation in, and income from, smokeless tobacco markets other than moist snuff. See 3/23/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Scheffman). What it was not allowed to do -- offer proof of unrelated wealth of beneficial owners uninvolved in management and far up the chain of ownership, to unfairly prejudicial effect -- it has no coherent argument that it was entitled to do so, much less an argument that the failure of the Court to permit this obvious sideshow constituted a deprivation of its substantial rights or affected the outcome.

(b) The Court Properly Permitted Testimony Concerning Dr. Leftwich's Supplemental Report.

UST claims the Court erred by allowing testimony concerning Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report.[56] But this matter, too, was

---

[55] See, e.g., 2/29/00 Tr. at 145 (UST cross-examination of Rosson establishing that Conwood made $150 million in free cash flow last year and this was distributed to owners); id. (available free cash flow); 3/23/00 Tr. at 42 (Scheffman testimony on amount of money distributed to owners); DX 57 (showing Conwood profits and percent distributed to owners -- used in Scheffman testimony); see also PX 14 (Conwood part of a conglomerate -- under "competition" heading of UST marketing plan).

[56] UST also submits that other damages-related arguments discussed in its JMOL motion warrant a new trial. The Court previously rejected each of these arguments and, as discussed exhaustively briefed and argued prior to trial. See Pls.' Opp.to UST's Mot. to Preclude "Undisclosed Expert Materials" at 6-9; Pls.' Reply to Defs.' Suppl. Mem. To Exclude Dr. Richard Leftwich at 1-7. After full consideration, the Court ruled that the supplemental material was appropriate. Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5 ("supplementation was appropriate" under Rule 26(e); the opinions were not new and were discussed in rebuttal report). UST offers no new legal argument, let alone a compelling one, for reopening this settled issue.

Neither can UST claim prejudice from this appropriate evidentiary ruling. Instead, UST simply asserts that allowing Dr. Leftwich's deposition on the eve of trial did not permit "adequate time" to respond. UST New Trial Mem. at 10. But the timing of Dr. Leftwich's deposition was UST's decision, as it waited four weeks after receiving Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report before seeking to depose him. See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5 (noting that Magistrate had already granted leave on February 8 to take Dr. Leftwich's deposition). Tellingly, UST made no motion for a continuance and no objection to Dr. Leftwich's testimony at trial on the grounds that its attorneys were unprepared to examine him.[57]

[57] 11 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2805, at 56-57 (2d ed. 1995) (under Rule 59, "relief [for unfair surprise] will be denied if the party failed to seek a continuance"); United States v. Walton, 909 F.2d 915, 924 (6th Cir. 1990) (must show "'error was so fundamental that gross injustice would result'" if grounds for new trial were not raised at trial) (quoting Wright § 2805). The Court's previous ruling

(c) The Court Properly Admitted Professor Gundlach's Study.

UST's challenge to Dr. Gundlach's testimony is also a mere repetition of rejected pre-trial arguments. See Pls.' Opp. to Mot. to Preclude Prof. Gundlach's Study of Exclusionary Agreements and Related Testimony. Defendants' recycled claim that Dr. Gundlach did not offer any expertise, moreover, remains dead wrong. The trial record utterly undercuts UST's pre-trial assertion.[58] See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 65-66 (importance of advertising location); id. at 68 (UST aggressively seeking exclusive vending agreements); id. at 85 (outcome of agreements was reduction in competitive facings); id. at 91 (effect of agreements is to limit information to consumers, especially in light of tobacco advertising restrictions); id. at 101-16 (exclusionary features of CAP); id. at 150 (exclusive agreements solicited and gained by UST; often involved payments). Contrary to UST's claim, moreover, Dr. Gundlach comprehensively reviewed the record, including the testimony of retailers and employees.

that "any possible prejudice" was avoided by the additional deposition remains correct. Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5. UST's remaining Rule 703 argument is fully discussed in Point II.E, supra.

[58]UST can hardly complain, moreover, that Dr. Gundlach's study was unnecessary when UST repeatedly took the position that it had no idea how many exclusive vending agreements it had or where they could be located. See Milano Aff. ¶ 4; Untiedt Dep. at 110 (no idea if UST has exclusive vending agreements with top accounts, though he is responsible for them); 3/7/00 Tr. at 42 (Milano) (denying any agreement with Wal-Mart) compare with PX 47 (UST "has formed an agreement with Wal-Mart"); PX 230 (letter detailing agreement). Indeed, it was UST's professed ignorance about its own agreements that necessitated Dr. Gundlach's study.

Id. at 74 (detailing specific UST deposition testimony supporting his opinion on 2908 agreements); id. at 93 (discussing out-of-stock problems and testimony of Wal-Mart tobacco category manager as part of basis of his opinion); id. at 131-32 (discussions with retailers). UST has no support for its renewed argument that Dr. Gundlach should not have been permitted to testify.[59]

UST also complains that it was "unable to confront" Dr. Gundlach with a video deposition excerpt from Mr. Carlson's testimony. See id. at 153 (Court: "I'm [n]ot going to let you show the deposition. Just like I didn't allow [plaintiffs] during some of their testimony earlier and you all objected to them. Exactly the same thing."). UST, however, identifies no authority that permits -- much less requires -- the playing of one witness's deposition in the middle of the testimony of another witness. Nor can it claim any prejudice from this run-of-the-mill evidentiary ruling falling well within the Court's discretion. UST was free to "confront" Dr. Gundlach with the substance of Mr. Carlson's testimony, and in fact did so. See id. (questioning Dr. Gundlach about Mr. Carlson's assertion that there was "no agreement" between UST and Wal-Mart, despite documentary evidence and testimony to the contrary). UST was also permitted to play Mr. Carlson's deposition in full at the [59] Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342 (6th Cir. 1994), is inapposite. Unlike Dr. Gundlach, who personally reviewed the agreements underlying his study, see 3/9/00 Tr. at 124, the expert in Berry used a one-page summary sheet in his testimony, see 25 F.3d at 1352. The only expert in this case who used a mystery one-page summary sheet as the basis for his opinion was UST's expert, Dr. Scheffman.

16diii005622

appropriate time. The Court's decision on the manner of cross-examination was entirely correct. It would be difficult to imagine anything farther from error affecting substantial rights.

(d) Sixth Circuit Law Does Not Require Store-by-Store Proof or a "Cross Section."

UST insists that a new trial is required because Conwood should have shown injury at the store level through a "cross-sectional" analysis. But UST never made any objection on this score at trial that might have allowed the Court to address this supposed error. Indeed, before trial UST took the opposite position, arguing that Conwood could not establish injury by any such "representative sampling," but only on a store-by-store basis. Mem. in Supp. of Mot. To Require Pls.' To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury at Specific Retail Stores and Chains at 2.

Moreover, UST cites no legal support for its new position and simply bypasses controlling Sixth Circuit law. See Mem. in Opp. to Mot. To Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4. As the Court recognized in denying UST's motion in limine, the Sixth Circuit "does not limit an antitrust plaintiff to specific damages or prohibit the use of estimates and inferences." See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 3; Elyria-Lorain Broad. Co. v. Lorain Journal Co., 358 F.2d 790, 792-93 (6th Cir. 1966) ("It is not the rule that in an action for damages for violation of the antitrust laws plaintiff is limited to recover only the specific items of damage which he can prove with reasonable certainty."). UST was free to argue to the jury that Conwood's experts should have used different methodologies, but instead it chose to wait until after trial to present the argument that Conwood must use a methodology specified by UST. The Court's correct ruling on the motion in limine leaves no room for this tactic:

> Plaintiffs' expert has utilized various calculations and theories to project the damages in this suit. It is the responsibility of the parties to argue the merits of these damages and to offer alternative explanations for their origin. The Court has no doubt each side can provide the jurors with the information necessary for them to exercise good sense and sound judgment to determine an amount, if any, that will produce adequate compensation and that will, in turn, remove speculation and guesswork from the decisionmaking process.

Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 3. See also Mem. in Opp. to Mot. To Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4.[60]

3. The Court's Evidentiary Rulings Were Correct

At trial, the Court made a number of evidentiary rulings, some of which UST objected to, many of which it did not.[61] UST fails to demonstrate that a single one constitutes error, much

[60]UST's claim that there was no evidence at trial of the fact of injury through lost sales at any retail location simply turns a blind eye to inconvenient evidence. See, e.g., PX 326.2 (chart showing decrease in Wal-Mart sales); PX 326.3 (chart showing decrease in 7-Eleven sales). See Point II, supra.

[61]Any objection to the admission of testimony unobjected to at trial is now waived. Walton, 909 F.2d at 924 (absent objection, error must be "so fundamental that gross injustice would result" to qualify for reversal).

16diii005624

less error so grave that it trenched on UST's substantial rights and accordingly warrants the extraordinary relief of a new trial. Leonard v. Uniroyal, Inc., 765 F.2d 560, 567 (6th Cir. 1985) (no error in the admission or exclusion of evidence is grounds for overturning jury verdict unless ruling is inconsistent with substantial justice); Morales, 151 F.3d at 154 (evidentiary ruling not grounds for reversal unless it "would have caused a different outcome").

(a) Conwood's Expert Witnesses Properly Explained Highly Relevant Opinions to the Jury.

(i) Conwood's Expert Testimony Assisted the Jury. UST disparages Conwood's experts, respected full-time professors at Northwestern University, Notre Dame University, and the University of Chicago, as "human highlighters." Essentially, UST criticizes plaintiffs' experts for providing evidentiary support for their views instead of just announcing a blizzard of opinions without explanation. UST might have preferred that Conwood's experts not rely on highly detailed and credible record evidence to support and illustrate their opinions. But UST can point to no authority for its novel view that experts are not permitted to explain the bases of their opinions.[62]

---

[62]Nor can UST's complaint that experts simply "read[] documents" stand as a factual matter. For example, Dr. Kamien presented opinions about, and the results of his studies on, the relevant market, UST's possession of market power, and the effects of UST's pervasive exclusionary conduct. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 246-58, 279-80; 3/1/00 Tr. at 14-23; id. at 39-44. He presented undisputed studies showing UST's ability to charge higher prices when it occupies more facings and the output

(ii) Conwood's Used Proper Materials with Experts. UST objects (on hearsay grounds) to a demonstrative exhibit that itemized some of the bases for the opinions of Dr. Kamien. UST New Trial Mem. at 18. But the demonstrative was not hearsay; it was merely a summary of testimony Dr. Kamien was indisputably entitled to give, and gave without objection.

Moreover, UST failed to object to the demonstrative when it was presented. Instead, UST's counsel stated only that "I think a limiting instruction . . . would be appropriate." 2/29/00 Tr. at 8. UST both authored and agreed to the limiting instruction that the Court readily agreed to read to the jury. See id. at 124 (UST's counsel noting that "we have an agreement"); 3/1/00 Tr. at 35 (discussing instruction); id. at 37 (court giving limiting instruction to jury). UST's assertion that the Court engaged in fatal error by doing exactly what defendants asked at trial is both representative of its evidentiary challenges and entirely without substance.

On a related matter, UST argues that it was (somehow) improper for plaintiffs' counsel to ask Dr. Scheffman why he chose to ignore more than 200 sworn declarations detailing UST's effects of UST's agreements at the largest chain stores and mass merchandisers in the country. See PX 326.4 (price/facing chart); PX 326.2 (Wal-Mart sales drop); PX 326.3 (7-Eleven sales drop). Similarly, Dr. Blattberg explained to the jury his opinion that UST's category management practices are not "ordinary," but an abuse of accepted industry category management norms and standards. See 3/13/00 Tr. at 288-89. And Dr. Gundlach presented a number of opinions and a study discussed elsewhere. See pp. 57-59, supra.

exclusionary conduct and instead base his conclusions on a piece of paper that he knew absolutely nothing about. 3/23/00 Tr. at 183-89. But questions about the bases of an expert's opinion are surely proper cross-examination. Counsel's questions were made all the more pertinent when Dr. Scheffman first claimed that the sworn declarations had not been available to him, and later admitted that they had been.[63] Here, too, UST was content at trial with a limiting instruction that it authored and the Court read.[64] It ill suits UST to charge the Court with committing fatal error for doing precisely what it asked at trial.

(b) Plaintiffs' Use of Fact Witnesses Was Proper.

First, UST claims that Mr. Rosson improperly presented testimony concerning the qualities and differences among Conwood's various smokeless products, even though he is the Chairman of the company and has worked in the tobacco business virtually his entire life. UST claims that Mr. Rosson improperly based his testimony on staff-prepared analyses of UST documents. But UST cites no such testimony from Mr. Rosson, only a discussion among counsel. In fact, the Court required Mr. Rosson

---

[63]In his trial testimony, Dr. Scheffman first claimed that "I didn't have this at the time of my report." 3/23/00 Tr. at 166, 176, 177. When confronted with contrary deposition testimony, however, he eventually admitted that he in fact did have the material at the time of his report. Id. at 178-79.

[64]3/23/00 Tr. at 198 ("no questions" if court reads limiting instruction); id. at 199 (court reading instruction requested by UST); see also 3/24/00 Tr. at 34, 36 (UST requesting supplemental jury instruction and saying "that's fine"); 3/28/00 Tr. at 95-96 (jury instruction authored by UST and given by Court).

to demonstrate personal knowledge and a proper foundation. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 4. Conwood then proceeded to do so at length, a fact UST cannot dispute. See id. at 79-80, 83 (Rosson). Indeed, UST sat on its hands after this foundation was laid, making only a single objection to Mr. Rosson's testimony in this area. As it recognized at the time, UST has literally nothing to complain about, let alone error affecting its substantial rights. Cf. note 66, infra.[65]

Second, Mr. Rosson's testimony on trends in Conwood's market share and the effect of UST's misconduct on that market share was likewise appropriate. As Chairman of Conwood, it was "very critical" to his job to track Conwood's market share and analyze factors affecting its market share. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 116-17 (Rosson). Mr. Rosson's testimony with respect to Conwood's market share growth was based on his personal knowledge of the industry and more than 45 years with Conwood, as well as Conwood's prior performance in moist snuff, and its performance in analogous smokeless markets (such as looseleaf). UST cites no case suggesting that a witness with such experience is barred from testifying about his knowledge of the industry and factors affecting sales in the industry. Indeed, the law authorizes precisely this kind of testimony.[66]

[65]In any event, UST can hardly complain when its CEO and Chairman, Mr. Gierer, repeatedly testified based on "staff" prepared charts and data regarding industry expenditures and market share. See 3/21/00 Tr. at 81-82 (testifying on charts he "asked [his] staff to prepare").

Third, UST complains that Mr. McClure should not have been permitted to testify about the effects of UST's tactics on Swedish Match. UST describes the basis for his testimony as merely "having previously worked for Swedish Match" as a Vice President. UST New Trial Mem. at 20. This is wrong. Mr. McClure served as President of Swedish Match, Manager of North America, and eventually became the Chief Operating Officer of Swedish Match worldwide. 3/13/00 Tr. at 6. Mr. McClure was deeply involved in the development and marketing of Swedish Match's moist snuff products. Id. at 16-17, 21-22, 28-29. There was a solid basis for his testimony in his knowledge and experience. UST was fully able to cross-examine Mr. McClure on his familiarity with the industry. Its decision not to do so reflects its recognition that Mr. McClure well knew what he was talking about.

UST's Chairman offered exactly the same sort of testimony defendants now claim to have been objectionable when given by Mr.

[66] See Fed. R. Evid. 701 (allowing witnesses to testify to opinions and inferences rationally based on their perception and helpful to determination of fact in issue or understanding of witness's testimony); See Lightning Lube, Inc. v. Witco Corp., 4 F.3d 1153, 1174 (3d Cir. 1993) (businessman's "experience in the quick-lube business" made him "qualified to predict how well [plaintiff] could have been expected to do"); In re Merritt Logan, Inc., 901 F.2d 349 (3d Cir. 1990) (principal shareholder's "personal knowledge of his business . . . [was] sufficient to make [this] witness eligible under Rule 701 to testify as to how lost profits could be calculated"). The Court's decision to admit Mr. Rosson's testimony on this point is unassailable.

Rosson and Mr. McClure. In fact, Mr. Gierer went beyond Mr. Rosson's description of the characteristics of different types of smokeless tobacco and opined about consumer switching behavior between cigarettes and moist snuff. He also testified about market share trends, changes in market share, projections of market share growth, and factors affecting changes in market share of moist snuff companies. He even opined as a matter of economics that it was "not feasible" to limit distribution and suppress Conwood's growth. 3/21/00 Tr. at 228. The notion that Mr. Rosson and Mr. McClure were not allowed to offer more modest testimony about matters plainly within their competence is both illogical and unsupported in law.

(c) Plaintiffs' Inquiries About the Availability of UST Witnesses Were Appropriate.

UST next complains about counsel's questions concerning the location and availability of UST witnesses.[67] But it is settled that "counsel in a civil trial may comment on the failure of a party to call an available witness whose testimony the party would naturally be expected to produce if favorable to him." Downriver Internists v. Harris Corp., 929 F.2d 1147, 1151 (6th Cir. 1991) (citation omitted). Accordingly, there can be no objection to counsel's eliciting the fact that the witnesses

[67]Contrary to UST's suggestion in its motion, the Court did not permit Conwood to inform the jury that UST refused to make 18 critical executives available for live testimony at trial.

16diii005630

were, in fact, available. Not surprisingly, UST cites no case in which admission of such testimony has been held to be error.[68]

4. The Court's Jury Instructions Were Proper

(a) "Restrictive" Was the Correct Instruction.

UST argues that the use of the term "restrictive" instead of "predatory" was "highly significant" and requires a new trial. UST is incorrect. The term "restrictive" and other such synonyms are commonly used in the Sixth Circuit and elsewhere to describe conduct proscribed by Section 2. See, e.g, Riverview Inv., Inc. v. Ottawa Community Improvement Corp., 769 F.2d 324, 328 (6th Cir. 1985) ("Regarding Section 2 of the Sherman Act, what matters is that the freedom to compete is restrained."); Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986) (conduct that "'either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way'" violates Section 2) (quoting Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 615 n.32); Continental Ore Co. v. Union Carbide and Carbon Corp., 370 U.S. at 695 (jury [68]UST's chairman testified that he was angry about the deposition testimony of UST senior executives. See 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120 (Gierer). He testified about the investigation he was going to do when he returned to Greenwich. See id. at 190. He testified about his plan to "have a sit-down" with the President of UST and that he "would deal" with UST's director of its largest accounts, after viewing their "astonishing" deposition testimony at trial. Id. at 118, 190. It was entirely appropriate to ask UST witnesses whether or not these same senior executives planned to appear at trial to discuss their actions. The Court properly concluded that the questions and comments in closing were appropriate: "I think [Mr. Gierer] opened that door, saying he was troubled and he was going to investigate. I think it's fair game." See 3/27/00 Tr. at 91.

question whether "defendant's monopolistic and restrictive practices" harmed plaintiff).

Besides, UST must concede that the real question is not the particular word chosen but the substance conveyed. See, e.g., United States v. Kendrick, 853 F.2d 492, 495 (6th Cir. 1988) (defendant has "no right to select particular wording of jury instruction") (citation omitted); United States v. Baker, Nos. 84-5216, 84-5217, 84-5223, 84-5234, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 13437, at *8 (6th Cir. Dec. 20, 1984) (court has "broad discretion in wording its jury instructions" and is reversible only if the instruction is "substantively" incorrect). And UST has no objection to the substance of the Court's detailed definition of "restrictive" or "exclusionary" conduct: "conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market." Jury Instruction 2.4. Having made no objection to the substance of the Court's instruction at trial, it cannot seriously complain now. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51 (party cannot assign error to jury instruction absent objection at trial).

(b) The Court's Damages Instruction Was Complete and Proper.

UST's argument that the Court should have included a nominal damages instruction is without substance for a host of reasons:

16diii005632

First, as the Court noted at trial, there is no authority requiring a nominal damages instruction, or holding its absence error. See 3/27/00 Tr. at 69.

Second, the proposed instruction was, as the Court observed, essentially "a reargument of causation." Id.; see Jury Instruction 2.5: Injury and Causation (instructing jury that Conwood must prove "some damage flowed to it" as a result of UST's antitrust violations).

Third, UST's complaint that the jury had only Conwood's damages figure is the result solely of UST's tactical decision not to present any alternative damages figure to the jury. See Portis, 1994 WL 362110, at *2, *3 (defendant presented no alternative damages and relied solely on theory that claim was a fraud, thus jury had "no evidence of economic loss to consider except that presented by plaintiff"). UST cannot now ask the Court to protect it from its own strategy.

Finally, the jury was properly instructed -- using language proposed by UST -- that it need not find any damages. Hence, a nominal damages instruction was superfluous. Jury Instruction 4 ("amount of damages, if any"); 3/28/00 Tr. at 112 ("You should not interpret the fact that I've given instructions about Conwood's damages as an indication in any way that I believe Conwood should or should not win this claim").

IV. THERE IS NO LEGAL OR FACTUAL BASIS FOR REDUCING THE JURY'S AWARD

Controlling Sixth Circuit precedent holds that "'[a] jury verdict will not be set aside or reduced as excessive unless it is beyond the maximum damages that the jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for a party's loss.'" Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 (citations omitted). See also Jackson v. City of Cookeville, 31 F.3d 1354, 1359 (6th Cir. 1994) (ordering reinstatement of verdict at higher level because there was evidence upon which jury could have awarded maximum amount); In re Lewis, 845 F.2d 624, 635 (6th Cir. 1988) ("A motion for remittitur should only be granted if the award clearly exceeds the amount which, under the evidence in the case, was the maximum that a jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for the plaintiff's loss.") (internal quotation marks omitted); Green v. Francis, 705 F.2d 846, 850 (6th Cir. 1983) (affirming refusal to set aside or reduce verdict because it was not beyond the maximum damages supported by the evidence).

Indeed, "[a] trial court is within its discretion in remitting a verdict only when, after reviewing all evidence in the light most favorable to the awardee, it is convinced that the verdict is clearly excessive, resulted from passion, bias or prejudice; or is so excessive or inadequate as to shock the conscience of the court." Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 ("If there is any credible evidence to support a verdict, it should not be set aside.") (emphasis added).[69]

UST's various proposed recalculations do not come within miles of meeting this standard:

First, UST asks the Court (without any hint of irony) to rely on Dr. Leftwich's testimony and simply award damages at the low end of his range, rather than in the middle, as the jury did. But such an action would run foursquare into the Sixth Cicuit's holdings that remittitur of a jury award at the high end of the range supported by the evidence is a reversible abuse of discretion. See Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395; Jackson, 31 F.3d at 1359; In re Lewis, 845 F.2d at 635; Green, 705 F.2d at 850.

Second, UST asks the Court to rely on Mr. Rosson's testimony that Conwood would have grown at least 10 share points absent UST's misconduct. UST argues only that the jury should have taken into account the possibility that some of these 10 points could have come at Swedish Match's or Swisher's expense, not UST's. Of course, so long as it was UST's conduct that prevented Conwood from gaining this share, it is irrelevant where it would have come from. But UST was, of course, entirely free to argue this theory to the jury. It simply made the decision not to do so. See Portis, 1994 WL 362110, at *2, *3 (defendant presented no alternative damages and thus jury had "no evidence of economic loss to consider except that presented by plaintiff"). The jury was entitled to find that Conwood's gain through unimpaired competition would have amounted to $350 million, and accordingly the verdict is not appropriately subject to reduction.[70]

[69]The two cases cited by UST do nothing to help its cause. Tennessee Consolidated Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers, 416 F.2d 1192, 1203 (6th Cir. 1969), does not even discuss when remittitur is appropriate and actually denies the defendant's argument that an additional reduction of a remitted award was appropriate. Parkway Garage, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, No. 90-7752, 1994 WL 412430, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 3, 1994), is similarly unhelpful. Unlike here, in Parkway there was a complete absence of any evidence that the closure of a parking garage for six weeks by the City resulted in damages beyond the date of closure.

Third, UST returns once again to the "retailer decides" defense. It asks the Court to assume that the jury awarded damages for certain "sophisticated" chains that made "reasoned decisions" to exclude Conwood entirely independent of influence from UST. UST then asks the Court to remit some (unspecified) amount of damages attributable to these chains. Of course, UST neglects to cite any evidentiary basis for its presumption that the jury's award included money for independent conduct.[71] UST offers the Court no basis in the evidence, or even in principle, for figuring remitted damages. And UST blithely bypasses the [70]This also impermissibly asks the Court to disregard Dr. Leftwich's study (on which UST's prior argument for remittitur expressly relies), which found damages of as much as $488 million. See Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 (court cannot substitute its judgment if "any credible evidence" exists to support award).

[71]Moreover, the record is replete with evidence that their paradigmatical "independent" retailer, Wal-Mart, actually relied on UST to act as its category manager, that UST consciously exploited that trust to exclude Conwood and other price-value competition, that rival sales and Wal-Mart sales suffered as a result, and that UST had to resort to unprecedented "promotional" payments to make up Wal-Mart's lost profits. 3/13/00 Tr. at 264-89 (Blattberg).

fact that the Sixth Circuit has made plain that such an exercise in fantasy would constitute reversible error. Jackson, 31 F.3d at 1361 (trial court abused its discretion in remitting award when court simply presumed that the jury did not account for present value); Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395.

Conclusion

UST's motions for judgment as a matter of law, new trial, and remittitur should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
U.S. Tobacco did not wield monopoly power, but rather engaged in ordinary marketing practices The alleged anticompetitive activity by UST (e.g., shelf space recommendations, SOF=SOM, recommending exclusive racks, CAP) is nothing more than ordinary competitive marketing practices. (UST JMOL Mem, throughout)	"USTC's Other Alleged Misconduct Involves Ordinary Business Practices" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 25-37 (11/15/99)) (UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 2-5 (3/14/00))	"There Is Ample Evidence From Which a Jury Could Conclude That UST's 'Ordinary' Business Practices Are Exclusionary" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 53-54 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. This falls short of the proof which would be required to prevail on the § 2 claims, particularly in view of the numerous record comments from high level UST personnel which arguably show an anitcompetitive intent rather than a business justification. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
Shelf space recommendations are an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive "Whether in the context of category management or otherwise, U.S. Tobacco's attempts to influence retailer decisions about product selection and space allocations are core aspects of competition in the packaged goods industry and have been for many decades." (UST JMOL Mem at 17-19)	"USTC's Shelf Space Suggestions and Recommendations Are Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 26-27 (11/15/99))	Professor Blattberg indicated that UST abused category management to suppress competition. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 18 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
SOF=SOM is an ordinary marketing practice, and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 19-22)	"USTC's Requests That Retailers Give USTC Share Of Shelf Space Equal To Share Of 'Market' Are Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 28-30 (11/15/99))	"UST used the SOF=SOM formula not to obtain needed room for its products, but to exclude competition." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 20 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
Offering exclusive racks to retailers is an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 23-27)	"USTC Offering 'Category Management' Services Is Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 30-31 (11/15/99))	"Beginning in 1995, UST entered into agreements covering 22,000 stores that expressly excluded rival racks, products, facings, or POS." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 23 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
CAP is an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 27-33)	"USTC's 'CAP' Incentive Program Is Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 32-33 (11/15/99))	"CAP paid retailers to participate in all UST new brand tests or introductions, even for its 'slow selling' product lines, thus ensuring that UST could exert pressure on the space available for rivals and their new products." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 27 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
U.S. Tobacco's alleged tortious conduct cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 33-37)	"USTC's Alleged Tortious Conduct In The Field Is Not Exclusionary, And Is Neither A 'Corporate Policy' Nor 'Systematic and Routine'" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 33-37 (11/15/99)) (UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 5-6)	The evidence that UST engaged pervasively and systematically in this misconduct comes from a wealth of sources: former UST representatives, retailers, Swedish Match, and Conwood representatives. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 11-16 (12/9/99))	"[T]he questions of whether these anticompetitive practices took place, how extensive they were, how much they were orchestrated by top management and how much by sporadic local efforts by 'rogue' sales personnel, how effective they were in restraining or eliminating competition, . . . -- all these are issues which can be resolved only by a jury." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 11)
The Court's improper focus on U.S. Tobacco's intent, rather than its exclusionary conduct (UST JMOL Mem at 10-14)	"Evidence Of Alleged 'Anticompetitive' Intent Cannot Save Conwood" (Reply Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 26-28 (12/23/99))	"[E]vidence of UST's intent may determine whether 'the challenged conduct is fairly characterized as exclusionary or anticompetitive.'" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 3 (12/9/99))	"[N]umerous record comments from high level UST personnel . . . arguably show an anticompetitive intent rather than a business justification for the exclusionary POS practices." (emphasis added) (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
The moist snuff "market" was not harmed by U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct (UST JMOL Mem at 14-16, 37-41)	"Conwood Cannot Establish That USTC Has Reduced Market-Wide Competition in the Moist Snuff Industry" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 38-40 (11/15/99))	"UST's Exclusionary Conduct Harmed Conwood, Competition, and Consumers" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 30 (12/9/99))	"Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these [is]. . .whether the effects on competition and on Conwood which plaintiff claims are the result of actions by UST at all." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 10)

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
Conwood failed to prove retailers were coerced by U.S. Tobacco (UST JMOL Mem at 14-16, 21-22, 44-46)	"The Independent Decisions Of Retailers" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 41-42 (11/15/99))	"In any event, whether retailers agree to exclusion is legally irrelevant: the essence of any Section 2 claim is not harm to retailers; it is harm to competition and consumers." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 62 (12/9/99))	"Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these are the. . .uncoerced decisions by retailers." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 10)
The Court improperly granted Conwood's motion to preclude disclosure of Pritzker family ownership of Conwood (UST Mot. for New Trial at 8-9)	Conwood has attempted to portray itself as a "victimized, small competitor" and the Pritzkers are a disinterested owner of Conwood. (UST Opp. to Conwood Mot. in Limine at 8-9)	"[I]nformation about the ultimate beneficiaries of these profits would be inflammatory and prejudicial." (Pls.' Mots. in Limine at 1 (1/28/00))	"[T]he probative nature of the inquiry is substantially outweighed by the potential prejudice to Plaintiffs, while causing no harm to Defendants' case." (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 1)
Dr. Leftwich's damages study is "speculative" "Conwood's theory of damages in this case was the epitome of rank speculation and 'guesswork' -- all, however, stamped with the imprimatur of expert testimony.'" "Dr. Leftwich's testimony does not provide the jury with any basis to determine that Conwood lost sales by reason of U.S. Tobacco's conduct, much less to quantify any lost sales." (UST JMOL Mem at 50-60)	"It is axiomatic that, in calculating antitrust damages, an expert witness must attribute the damages solely to the unlawful acts of the defendants." (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 11 (11/15/99))	Dr. Leftwich's analysis meets all relevant criteria for the admission of expert testimony. UST may challenge Leftwich's opinions before the jury, but has offered no valid reason to preclude his testimony. (Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 5 (12/9/99))	"Leftwich's testimony satisfies Daubert. His methodologies are generally acceptable. (Citation omitted) Defendant's expert also used them. . . . The credibility of the expert and his opinion is an issue for the jury." (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 4)

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
Dr. Leftwich's supplemental disclosure of his damages report was untimely In Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report, he used the surveys of Conwood personnel to add $250 million to his damages estimate; allowing UST to take his deposition on the "eve of trial" prejudiced defendants. (UST Mot. for New Trial at 10)	Dr. Leftwich's supplemental opinion is both a new expert opinion and untimely. (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Motion To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 7-18 (2/8/00))	"Leftwich's Supplemental Report presents nothing new, is timely, and has not caused any delay that prejudices UST." (Pls.' Reply to Defs.' Suppl. Mem. in Supp. of Their Motion To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 2 (2/16/00))	"[Leftwich's supplemental opinions] are not new, and were discussed in Leftwich's rebuttal report. . . . However, to avoid any possible prejudice to Defendants, Defendants may take Leftwich's deposition again prior to his testimony at trial." (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5)
Prof. Gundlach's lack of foundation for his exclusivity study "He is not, and did not claim to be, an expert in determining whether certain documents constitututed agreements; nor did he offer any comparative analysis based on his work with either retailers or manufacturers in the retail industry." (UST Mot. for New Trial at 11-12)	"The Gundlach 'study' is nothing more than a table of retailers with whom USTC purportedly has had exclusive agreements since 1995." (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. in Limine to Preclude Professor Gundlach's "Study" of Purported "Exclusive Agreements" and Related Testimony at 4 (1/28/00))	These agreements require exclusive racks and POS on their face. (Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Preclude Professor Gundlach's Study of Exclusionary Agreements and Related Testimony at 5 (2/11/00))	"Defendants mischaracterize Gundlach's testimony regarding the agreements. Gundlach did not include the types of agreements that contained merely 'an indicia of some form, type of exclusion' in his study." (Citation omitted) (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 2)

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
Failure of Conwood to prove specific injury at store level "At a minimum, the Court should have required Conwood to prove actual fact of injury [at] a subset of stores. . . . Conwood failed to present evidence at trial of any lost sales at any retail location." (UST Mot. for New Trial at 13, 14)	Conwood should be ordered to prove "(i) that USTC engaged in some form of exclusionary behavior in every retail establishment in which Conwood was purportedly injured; and (ii) that Conwood sales were reduced by this conduct as opposed to other causes." (UST Mot. in Limine at 6 (1/28/00))	Antitrust precedent does not require specific damages; rather, "general" damages may be assessed. (Conwood Mem. in Opp. to Mot. to Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on a Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4 (2/11/00))	"Simply put, Plantiffs are not required to prove what damage occurred at each of the 300,000 separate retail establishments in order to prove fact of injury. Defendants argument to the contrary is not well taken." (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 3)
The Court's acceptance of a monopoly "broth" theory (UST JMOL Mem at 10-37)	"A 'Monopoly Broth' Without Any Independent Antitrust Violations Cannot Survive" (Reply Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 18-21 (12/23/99))	The amalgam of UST's misconduct is mandated by the antitrust laws. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 45-52 (12/9/99))	"UST's 'deconstruction' of the Conwood claims into a series of discrete antitrust theories, which UST then individually seeks to knock down, does not compel the summary judgment dismissal of this case." (Citation omitted) (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 7)
Conwood made improper comments about the availability of U.S. Tobacco employee witnesses Questions and comments on the availability of U.S. Tobacco witnesses were, "irrelevant, misleading, and unfairly prejudicial." (UST Mot. for New Trial at 21-23)	Conwood chose the forum, and chose not to depose authors of documents. (3/27/00 Tr. at 89-90)	The UST witnesses chose not to appear. UST could have brought witnesses to Paducah who had personal knowledge of the issues in this case. (3/27/00 Tr. at 88-89)	Plaintiff's comments about UST employees not brought to Paducah is a fair comment. (3/27/00 Tr. at 90)

Introduction

Defendants (collectively, "UST") argue for almost 100 pages that the Court should ignore the verdict of the properly instructed jury and enter judgment for them as a matter of law. Alternatively, they ask the Court to order a new trial, or reduce the damages award to the low end of the range supported by the evidence (and perhaps even lower based on supposed adjustments defendants failed to argue to the jury). In virtually all respects, however, defendants simply repeat old arguments. These arguments, supported (or not) by the very same cases, all were urged on the Court in support of their successive motions for summary judgment and for directed verdict, or in motions in limine. The Court's rulings on those points are law of the case, and need not be reconsidered absent significant new facts, change in law, or a showing of clear error -- none of which UST even attempts to demonstrate. (Point I).

Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law. Defendants have no serious quarrel with the Court's instructions to the jury; they effectively concede that the jury decided the case on the proper legal standards. Nor can they plausibly argue -- although they do -- that there was a lack of evidence to support the jury's verdict on each element of the causes of action. There is ample evidence that UST possessed monopoly power in the U.S. moist snuff market, engaged in exclusionary conduct, and thereby harmed competition and Conwood.

While UST disagrees with this evidence and suggests that there was some contrary evidence, it makes no meaningful effort to grapple with the actual trial record, which fully supported the jury's verdict. UST's submission that the evidence compels judgment for defendants as a matter of law repeats word-for-word claims made to and rejected by the Court on summary judgment, on a far less extensive factual record. UST gives the Court no persuasive reason to reverse its prior rulings, which in any event are plainly correct. (Point II).

Motion for New Trial. While UST makes perfunctory arguments that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence and that the damages were "excessive" by some undefined measure, it principally (re)argues that the Court was wrong to deny summary judgment, wrong to deny some of its motions in limine, and wrong in failing to sustain evidentiary objections that in many instances UST did not even make. But it is UST that is wrong -- wrong to demand endless reconsideration of the same arguments. UST makes no showing that any of the Court's rulings constitutes error, much less error that deprived it of a fair trial. (Point III).

Motion for Reduced Damages. Finally, after deriding Dr. Leftwich's study in numerous pre-trial, trial, and post-trial motions, UST closes with a demand for a reduced damages award based on the low end of the range established by his analysis. It asks the Court to override the jury's determination of damages in the middle of that range -- a reasonable conclusion supported by a wealth of independent evidence from other witnesses, including UST witnesses. That amount, UST argues, should be further reduced based on adjustments that it chose not to present to the jury, and that are unsupported by any evidence. UST elected to offer no damages testimony, other than testimony that Conwood had suffered no damages. UST cannot now credibly complain that the jury failed to weigh evidence UST decided not to present, or that the jury was required by law to award only the low end of the range supported by the evidence. (Point IV).

UST simply refuses to acknowledge that an attentive jury listened carefully for a month to all of the evidence and argument that the parties could muster. It refuses to acknowledge that the jury considered the demeanor and credibility of dozens of witnesses as well as hundreds of documents offered by both sides. It refuses to acknowledge that the jury reached a considered and reasonable judgment based on indisputably proper legal instructions and fully supported by the evidence. UST received a fair trial. Its post-trial motions should be denied.

I. THE COURT'S PRIOR RULINGS CONSTITUTE LAW OF THE CASE THAT UST HAS OFFERED NO REASON TO RECONSIDER

As the attached chart (Attachment "A") demonstrates, the Court has previously ruled on virtually every one of UST's post-trial arguments, which were previously made in the same words and based on the same proffered authority. UST seeks to relitigate issues already fully briefed, considered, and decided by the

Court on summary judgment or on directed verdict (twice), or in limine before and during trial.[1]

The Court does not have to entertain such rote repetition. "Under the doctrine of law of the case, findings made at one point in the litigation become the law of the case for subsequent stages of that same litigation." United States v. Moored, 38 F.3d 1419, 1421 (6th Cir. 1994). The rule is based on "the sound public policy that litigation be decided and then put to an end." In re United States Steel Corp., 479 F.2d 489, 494 (6th Cir. 1973). See also Hanover Ins. Co. v. American Eng'g Co., 105 F.3d 306, 310 (6th Cir. 1997) (refusing appeal on defendant's motion for judgment as a matter of law after trial because it had heard and decided the same legal issues pressed by the same defendant in an interlocutory appeal concerning its summary judgment motion).

The law of the case does not prevent the Court from reconsidering its prior rulings. But "to maintain consistency and avoid reconsideration of matters once decided during the course of a single continuing lawsuit," 18 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 4478, at 788 (1981 & 1999 Supp.), once an issue is decided, it is typically reopened "only in limited circumstances." United States ex. rel. Stevens v. McGinnis, Inc., No. C-1-93-442, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22122, at *19-*20 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 16, 1996). "The major grounds that justify reconsideration involve an intervening change of controlling law, the availability of new evidence, or the need to correct a clear error or prevent manifest injustice." Cale v. Johnson, 861 F.2d 943, 947 (6th Cir. 1988) (citation omitted).

None of these circumstances remotely applies here. The evidence at trial was by no means "substantially different" from the summary judgment record. It was stronger and more extensive. There has been no change of controlling law. And UST does not (and cannot credibly) claim that any of the Court's rulings was clearly erroneous or manifestly unjust. Accordingly, UST has provided no basis for what is, in substance, a motion for reconsideration of the Court's summary judgment and other rulings.

II. THE PROPERLY INSTRUCTED JURY'S VERDICT IS SUPPORTED BY THE EVIDENCE, AND UST'S CONTRARY ARGUMENTS FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW ARE WITHOUT MERIT

It is settled that judgment as a matter of law should be granted only "cautiously and sparingly" since it negates a determination of the facts by the jury. 9A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2524, at 252 (2d ed. 1995). In considering a Rule 50(a) motion, a court must refrain from weighing the evidence or making credibility determinations. See Lytle v. Household Mfg., Inc., 494 U.S. 545, 554-55 (1990); Jackson v. Quanex Corp., 191 F.3d 647, 657 (6th Cir. 1999). The jury verdict must be respected unless "there is a complete absence of pleading or proof on an issue material to the cause of action or when no disputed issues of fact exist." Jackson, 191 F.3d at 657 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Sawchik v. E.I. DuPont Denemours & Co., 783 F.2d 635, 636 (6th Cir. 1986). In considering a motion for judgment as a matter of law, moreover, the Court must consider the evidence in a light most favorable to the nonmovant, giving that party the benefit of all reasonable inferences. See Tuck v. HCA Health Servs. of Tennessee, Inc., 7 F.3d 465, 469 (6th Cir. 1993).[2]

Because UST concedes (with two trivial exceptions) that the Court's instructions to the jury were correct, the only issue is whether there was a "complete absence of proof" on any of the necessary elements of Conwood's Section 2 claim. Jackson, 191

[2]Albani v. Southern Arizona Anesthesia Services, P.D., No. 91-588, 1997 WL 718499, at *1 (D. Ariz. Jan. 27, 1997), does not stand for the proposition that an antitrust verdict deserves heightened scrutiny under Rule 50. In upholding the attempted monopoly verdict, the court noted that the defendants' Rule 50 motion "fails to account for the reasonable inferences the jury could have taken, and asks that we ignore them as well." Id. at *2. The court in Albani did begin its analysis expressing "serious concerns with the jury's result" because the jury found no conspiracy, combination, or contract in restraint of trade, yet concluded that the same conduct constituted attempted monopoly. Id. at *1. No such split verdict exists here. Moreover, the Albani court found its reservations insufficient to grant judgment for the defendants under Rule 50.

F.3d at 657.[3] UST does not attempt to clear that high hurdle; nor could it. The trial record brims with evidence on each element. While UST focuses on the limited evidence that supported its arguments, its failure to address the extensive and inconvenient contrary proof is fatal to its motion.

A. The Jury's Finding That UST Had Monopoly Power in the U.S. Moist Snuff Market Was Supported by the Evidence

The jury was properly instructed on the applicable legal standard for assessing whether UST had monopoly power. Jury Instructions 2.1, 2.3.[4] UST does not contend otherwise. The Court's instructions precisely tracked controlling Sixth Circuit authority.[5] The jury properly found, based on undisputed

[3]UST does not even address the elements of attempted monopolization, except insofar as they overlap with the elements of actual monopolization.

[4]The Court first defined monopoly power directly, instructing that "[m]onopoly power is the power to control prices in or to exclude competition from the relevant market." Jury Instruction 2.1. The Court then listed a number of factors indicative of monopoly power, including: (i) UST's market share, (ii) the trend of UST's market share, (iii) the number and size of UST's competitors, (iv) competitors' share trends, (v) the history of entry into and exit from the market of other competitors, (vi) UST's ability to raise price without losing business, and (vii) UST's profit margins. See Jury Instruction 2.3. All such instructions were given with no objection from UST.

[5]See Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1016 (6th Cir. 1999)("There are two ways to establish . . . that the defendant holds monopoly power. The first is by presenting direct evidence 'showing the exercise of actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors.' The second is by presenting circumstantial evidence of monopoly power by showing a high market share within a defined market.") (quoting Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 850 (6th Cir. 1979)), petition for cert. filed, No. 99-294, 68 U.S.L.W. 3138 (Aug. 17, 1999).

evidence, that UST had monopoly power in accordance with the Court's instructions.

UST Admissions. Remarkably, and unmentioned by UST, the jury needed to look no further than UST's own admissions to determine that it had market power. In several strategic documents, the company candidly acknowledged its market power (and, indeed, its abuse).[6] UST did not attempt to address or dispute this proof at trial, and it does not come to grips with it now.[7] The jury was entitled to credit UST's admissions about its position in the market, and that evidence alone was sufficient to support the finding of market power.[8]

[6] See, e.g., PX 156 ("80% market share gives UST 'market power' -- this means we cannot legally use that market power to prevent competition from selling their products"); PX 33 ("UST does not deal on price -- we don't have to"); id. ("Our market power allows this [stated barrier to entry created by Copenhagen return policy] to exist"); PX 79 ("This is our arena"); PX 94 ("leverage our market share").

[7] UST did not call any of the authors of these documents to explain them, or otherwise dispute the statements. The sole attempted explanation came from its expert, Dr. Scheffman, who testified that he knew better than the executives, and that the "flaming" documents represented incautious and uninformed statements (from people he didn't bother to speak with). 3/23/00 Tr. at 115-16. Dr. Scheffman, however, did not even attempt to do what his own report said was required as a prerequisite to proper analysis of whether UST had market power. Id. at 155-56. The jury was free to accept or reject Dr. Scheffman's view that UST lacked market power, but there is no substance to UST's post-trial contention that they were forced to agree with it as a matter of law.

[8] See, e.g., Cassidy v. Spectrum Rents, 959 F. Supp. 823, 828 (E.D. Tenn. 1997) (admissions from defendant's own documents sufficient to sustain adverse verdict under Rule 50).

16diii005664

Direct Evidence of Controlling Price and Excluding Competition. UST's admissions were the tip of the iceberg of proof. It was uncontroverted that UST not only had the power to control prices, but did so year after year. UST's Chairman, Vincent Gierer, conceded in cross-examination that UST had raised prices every year in the 1990s. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131. UST's relentless annual price increases exceeded any increased costs and produced profit margins that were among the highest in corporate America. 2/29/00 Tr. at 253 (Kamien); 3/23/00 Tr. at 159-60 (Scheffman); 2/29/00 Tr. at 85-86 (Rosson); Smith Dep. at 83-97; 3/21/00 Tr. at 130 (Gierer); 3/13/00 Tr. at 13 (McClure); PXs 326.17, 326.20, 326.34. UST freely acknowledged this pricing power: "[we] don't deal on our product's prices, we don't have to." PX 33. Dr. Kamien testified, without challenge on cross-examination, that UST's control of prices, its increasing margins, and its unparalleled profits, could be explained only by UST's monopoly power. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 277-78 (Kamien); 3/1/00 Tr. at 15-17 (Kamien).[9]

It was equally plain that UST had the power to exclude competition and that it successfully did so. UST's own strategic documents -- unmentioned in its pleadings -- discussed how UST

[9]While UST's expert offered an alternative explanation for the fact that consumers paid roughly double for moist snuff as a result of UST's price increases from 1986 to 1996 -- that is, UST "shifted the demand curve" through advertising and the like, 3/23/00 Tr. at 47-48 (Scheffman) -- the jury was not compelled to accept it. It was, rather, permitted to weigh the evidence and credit UST's undisputed control of pricing as evidence of monopoly power.

created "barriers to entry" that prevented new entrants. E.g., PXs 32, 33, 37. Dr. Kamien testified without challenge that only UST's monopoly power explained the lack of new entrants to compete for UST's extraordinary profits, and the limited expansion of existing firms such as Conwood and Swedish Match. 2/29/00 Tr. at 278-79 (Kamien). Not a single new firm entered the moist snuff market after 1990,[10] and in the preceding decade two of the largest tobacco companies in the world tried and failed to surmount the barriers to entry. 3/1/00 Tr. at 20 (Kamien); 3/23/00 Tr. at 161-62 (Scheffman). There was also evidence that the existing competitors, including Conwood and Swedish Match, were actually restricted as a result of UST's anticompetitive tactics. E.g., 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-44 (testimony of former CEO of Swedish Match re UST tactics curtailing its growth); 2/29/00 Tr. at 103 (testimony of William Rosson discussing UST tactics curtailing Conwood's growth). The direct evidence of UST's exclusion of competition provided ample support for the jury's finding.[11]

Indirect Factors Indicative of Monopoly Power. UST's admissions and Conwood's direct proof of UST's monopoly power made superfluous the indirect factors the jury could consider.

[10]And the two that entered after Conwood's 1979 entry did so by acquisition of an existing competitor, not by actual new entry. 3/23/00 Tr. at 161-62 (Scheffman).

[11]The record is filled with other direct evidence of UST's "actual exclusion." See Point II.B, infra.

16diii005666

Jury Instruction 2.3. But there was ample evidence to support the jury's finding on those as well.

UST mistakenly suggests that the various factors are like elements, and that plaintiffs must establish each factor in order to prevail. UST JMOL Mem. at 8-9. That is not the law. No single factor is dispositive. So long as there was evidence to support the jury's finding, the alleged lack of, or conflicting evidence on, one or more of the factors affords no basis to overturn the verdict. Jackson, 191 F.3d at 657 (judgment as a matter of law appropriate only when "there is a complete absence of pleading or proof on an issue material to the cause of action or when no disputed issues of fact exist such that reasonable minds would not differ") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Of the seven factors identified in Jury Instruction 2.3, UST does not now contest three; the undisputed evidence established them beyond argument (UST's market share of close to 80%,[12] the small number and size of UST's competitors in moist snuff,[13] and UST's truly eye-popping profits[14]). The jury was entitled to infer, strongly so, that UST had monopoly power based on its

[12] See, e.g., 3/6/00 Tr. at 76 (Milano); 3/21/00 Tr. at 129 (Gierer); 3/23/00 Tr. at 61-62 (Scheffman).

[13] Only three other competitors participate in the market, and none has a share greater than 13.5%. 2/29/00 Tr. at 50 (Rosson).

[14] UST's profit margins are without parallel among public companies. Neither UST's Chairman, Vincent Gierer, nor UST's economist, David Scheffman, could even think of another company with similar high margins. 3/21/00 Tr. at 130 (Gierer); 3/23/00 at 161-62 (Scheffman).

16diii005667

admitted 78% share of the market. See PSI Repair Servs., Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir.) ("the Supreme Court has concluded that . . . over two-thirds of the market . . . constitute[s] monopoly power under § 2"), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1265 (1997). The undisputed evidence on these factors was itself sufficient for the jury to return a finding of monopoly power irrespective of any disputes regarding the remaining factors. But there was ample consistent evidence with regard to the other factors as well.[15]

First, while UST's share declined marginally (less than 1% per year from 1980 to 1998, 3/1/00 Tr. at 21 (Kamien)), the Court properly instructed -- with the concurrence of UST -- that such decline did not necessarily demonstrate lack of market power. Id. at 22-24 ("a declining market share may indicate the absence of monopoly power thought it does not foreclose such a finding"). And Dr. Kamien found it significant that UST's share had declined so little given UST's relentless price increases and its lack of product improvement or other consumer welfare benefit. Id. at 22-24. Dr. Kamien testified that, without market power, UST would have experienced a sharp decline similar to that suffered by IBM in the face of unrestrained competition in the personal computer market. Id. The jury was entitled to credit Conwood's evidence that UST's share movement was consistent with its possession of monopoly power.

Second, it was undisputed that Conwood's share growth was cut to one-third of the growth it had sustained in unrestrained competition during the period from 1980 to 1990. 3/1/00 Tr. at 15-17 (Kamien). Senior executives of Swedish Match likewise testified that its growth was substantially curtailed as a result of UST's anticompetitive scheme. 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-43 (McClure); 3/7/00 Tr. at 251-52 (Price). The significance of the fact that both Conwood and Swedish Match managed to grow in absolute terms from 1990 on (albeit at a restrained rate) was argued to the jury and was something the jury was entitled to consider. But the jury was also entitled to consider the evidence that UST successfully restrained the growth of competitors, and to resolve the dispute in favor of plaintiffs.

Third, the history of entry plainly supported plaintiffs. UST mistakenly conflates introduction of brands with new entry by competitors -- it is the latter that spurs competition and on which the Court's instruction focused properly and without objection.[16] The astonishing and undisputed fact with regard to entry is that after 1990 no company even attempted to enter the

---

[16]See Jury Instruction 2.3 ("You may consider the history of entry into and exit from the market by other companies"). Further, while UST offered a long list of brands introduced and nominally in production, it offered no evidence regarding the market shares of those brands or their breadth of distribution. The proof was therefore meaningless as a measure of competition in the moist snuff market, and the jury could reasonably have found it unpersuasive.

moist snuff market, UST's unparalleled profits notwithstanding.[17] Two tobacco giants tried and failed in the 1980s, and exited. This cannot be explained absent market power. 3/1/00 Tr. at 20 (Kamien). The jury was, again, entitled to credit this evidence, and UST cannot credibly argue otherwise.

Finally, UST's ability to raise price without losing business was established by the undisputed evidence of its price hikes and corresponding increases in revenue and profits. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131 (Gierer). UST did not and could not explain its price increases by claims of innovation or other consumer benefit. And UST admitted that its price hikes exceeded any increased costs. UST's de minimis loss of market share is fully consistent with the consequences of rational pricing decisions by a monopolist. 2/29/00 Tr. at 278-79 (Kamien: only a company "with . . . substantial monopoly power, market power" can do this). The jury was entitled to credit the undisputed evidence that UST raised prices, increased revenues and profits, and maintained a monopoly share of the moist snuff market, and to accept the opinion of Dr. Kamien that only a company with market power could do that. Id.

B. The Jury Correctly Determined that UST Maintained its Monopoly Power Through Restrictive or Exclusionary Conduct

Other than its quibble over the use of the word "restrictive" in lieu of "predatory" (see pp. 67-68, infra), UST agreed in all respects with the Court's instruction on willful maintenance of monopoly power. Jury Instruction 2.4. Accordingly, the only question is whether there was evidence to support the finding of the properly instructed jury.

Here the witnesses were legion, and the documents (from UST itself) extensive. UST curbed rivals' growth by eliminating competitive distribution, obscuring the presence of rival products and advertising, using its "clout" and misleading data to convince retailers to restrict competitive distribution, and paying retailers to exclude, among other tactics. 3/13/00 Tr. at 228-31, 233-39, 247-51 (Blattberg); 3/21/00 Tr. at 208-09 (Gierer telling stock analysts that UST needs to limit competitive distribution); PXs 59, 113A, 215. UST's own documents established the company's unlawful plan to maintain its monopoly by impairing distribution for rivals. E.g., PX 9 ("Chain strategies . . . Eliminate Comp. Distribution"); PXs 28, 61, 289. These documents also recorded the success of the program in stark language. E.g., PXs 96, 120, 139.

Eight former UST sales representatives testified that they were ordered by their supervisors systematically to eliminate rival products, displays, facings, and point of sale ("POS") advertising from stores. See note 37, infra. Eleven Conwood representatives gave accounts of the daily exclusion they encountered in the field. See id. Six store witnesses gave corroborating accounts of their own run-ins with the self-proclaimed "top dog," PX 39.[18] This misconduct was widespread and systematic, as senior Conwood executives testified and as representatives of Swedish Match and expert witnesses (Dr. Kamien, Dr. Gundlach, and Dr. Blattberg) corroborated. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 105-06 (Rosson); 3/1/00 Tr. at 166 (Kamien); 3/10/00 Tr. at 46-47 (Williams); 3/7/00 Tr. at 256 (Price); 3/13/00 at 41 (McClure); 3/9/00 Tr. at 77-80 (Gundlach); 3/13/00 Tr. at 224 (Blattberg).

UST does not dispute this evidence now and made virtually no effort to challenge it at trial. Neither does UST contend that the evidence fails in the aggregate to support the jury's finding of exclusionary conduct. Instead, UST begins by claiming that to prove a Section 2 violation Conwood was required to show that UST

[18] See, e.g., Rusk Dep. at 10-12 (UST's rack removal not approved by manager or any other store personnel); Gill-Elkins Dep. at 15-16 (UST representative removed Conwood racks from store and placed product in box); Leinen Dep. at 19-22 (UST representative told store manager that it was his job to remove Conwood racks, despite being told to leave rack alone); Renfro Dep. at 16-17 (UST acting as category captains for Wal-Mart developed plan-o-gram providing very limited selection of price value brands despite analysis showing price value growth in the industry); Waller Dep. at 11-12 (UST provided skewed data to wholesaler); Stevens Dep. at 19-21 (UST removed Conwood rack while store manager was on vacation despite knowledge that all changes must be approved by manager); Engster Dep. at 26-27 (UST CEO offered store owner money to discontinue competitors' brands).

"used monopoly power in the marketplace to harm competition." UST JMOL Mem. at 14-16. However, UST does not dispute that the Court properly instructed the jury on this score. See Jury Instruction 2.4. Neither can it seriously contest the existence of evidence from which jurors could have made the requisite finding. See, e.g., 3/13/00 Tr. at 210-13 (Blattberg: only UST can credibly become category captain because of its market power; UST used that power to exclude); Kiel Dep. at 22-23 (UST able to engage in systematic tortious conduct because it was the big dog and let everyone know it); Borrowdale Dep. at 27-28; PX 39 (Chiaradio: retailers typically want the big dog running things); 3/10/00 Tr. at 78 (Williams: only UST, by virtue of its market power, could obtain permission to house all competitive products and pursue exclusive vending to eliminate competition); 3/13/00 Tr. at 44 (McClure: same); 3/21/00 Tr. at 129 (Gierer); 2/29/00 Tr. at 62, 109 (Rosson); 3/13/00 Tr. at 39 (McClure) 3/6/00 Tr. at 76 (Milano); PXs 23, 137, 268, 280, 288.

UST is similarly wrong to suggest that evidence of its intent had no proper role in the jury's determination of whether its conduct was exclusionary. UST JMOL Mem. at 10-14. Under long-settled law, evidence regarding intent is critical in determining whether the business tactics are procompetitive or anticompetitive.[19] UST's supposedly controlling authority holding otherwise is nothing of the sort.[20] And, in any event, UST points to no instruction on intent or evidence of intent to which it objected, or the admission of which supposedly was erroneous.

Ultimately, UST is left to resort to the same tactic it used on summary judgment -- plucking out separate strands of evidence (e.g., shelf space "recommendations," SOF=SOM, exclusive racks, CAP, and its admittedly tortious conduct) for separate consideration and then complaining that each strand, viewed in NCAA, 735 F.2d 577, 583 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (intent relevant "insofar as it helps predict the probable competitive impact of a disputed practice") (citation omitted); see U.S. Healthcare, Inc. v. Healthsource, Inc., 986 F.2d 589, 596 (1st Cir. 1993) ("[m]otive can, of course, be a guide to expected effects").

[20]UST cites Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1422 (6th Cir. 1990), for the proposition that "it is not 'exclusionary' for an alleged monopolist to compete vigorously, even if its objective is to 'injure' its rivals." UST JMOL Mem. at 10. Of course, in making that statement, the court in Langenderfer had explicitly found that the defendant's low-bidding practices were entirely lawful. Id. UST's reliance on Byars, 609 F.2d at 860, in support of its contention that intent is irrelevant likewise misconstrues the case. Byars specifically acknowledged that "a general intent to monopolize is all that is ordinarily required to find a § 2 violation." Id. at 859 (citing United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 105 (1948)). Since the challenged conduct in Byars was a monopolist's alleged unlawful refusal to deal, the court needed to find a specific intent to monopolize under prevailing law and only in that context noted its concern with the "overall impact of the monopolist's practices." Id. at 860. Overturning the district court's dismissal of the plaintiff's case, the Sixth Circuit remanded for "explicit factfinding" regarding the monopolist's intent -- namely, whether "business reasons justified the refusal to deal." Id. at 864.

isolation, fails to constitute the whole. Each species of conduct, UST insists, is merely "ordinary" competition beyond the reach of Section 2.[21]

UST's claim of "ordinary" business conduct is seriously misconceived. The jury was properly instructed on this defense. See Jury Instructions 2.1, 2.4. And there can be little wonder why the jurors rejected it: the top executives of UST testified that none of the conduct at issue in the case was, in their opinion, ordinary or appropriate in any respect. E.g., 3/6/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Vice President of Sales Milano: removal of racks and POS, exclusive vending, and reduction of competitor facings inappropriate); Smith Dep. at 249 (President Smith: eliminating competitive brand not "the right thing"; unaware of meaning of words "exclusive vending"); 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120, 190 (Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Gierer: UST conduct "astound[ing]," "embarass[ing]," "disappoint[ing]," and requiring an "investigation"); 3/7/00 Tr. at 36 (Vice President of Sales

Milano stating that eliminating competitive brands "inappropriate").[22]

Proceeding through UST's artificial (and improper) piecemeal review further confirms the conclusion of its executives:

Shelf Space "Recommendations." UST engages in fantasy to suggest that its representatives merely "recommended" to stores what might go where. UST JMOL Mem. at 17-19. With or without store permission, UST routinely excluded competitors' display racks, advertising, and products for the specific purpose of making it more difficult for them to distribute and sell their products. E.g., Borrowdale Dep. at 18 ("no exposure no sales, Q: It's that simple? A: Uh-huh"); Hart Dep. at 28-29 (Milano instructed at UST sales meeting -- attended by 125 representatives -- to eliminate competitors' racks and place products in UST racks to reduce the competitors' visibility in stores and make it harder for them to sell their products).

[22]In addition, UST's witnesses, Messrs. Biddy, Germany, and Jones, testified without exception that they personally did not engage in any of the challenged and concededly inappropriate practices. They did not remove competitors products, racks, or advertising, promote exclusive vending, or attempt to persuade stores to reduce competitor facings. 3/15/00 Tr. at 34-35, 102 (Biddy); 3/16/00 Tr. at 90-91 (Germany); 3/21/00 Tr. at 23-24 (Jones). In sharp contrast, however, Dr. Scheffman opined that UST did in fact engage in such activities, that they were all part of the normal competitive process, and that he thought UST could go much farther -- as far as blowing up Conwood's plants -- without violating the antitrust laws. 3/23/00 Tr. at 193-94. Needless to say, the jury was not required to resolve the dispute between Dr. Scheffman and his own clients in favor of Dr. Scheffman. It was entitled to find that the challenged conduct was exclusionary.

Where UST engaged in "category management," the evidence demonstrated that it abused its position of trust as category captain or manager -- a position uniquely available to it as the dominant monopolist -- in order to exclude rival racks, POS, and products, and often did so by using false or misleading information. 3/13/00 Tr. at 210-13, 247-51, 253-56, 260-62 (Blattberg); PXs 39, 59, 63, 139. There is no support for UST's claim that it merely made "recommendations" desired by stores as part of the competitive process. That argument was properly rejected by the jury based on the contrary evidence. Similarly shopworn is the fourth iteration of UST's argument that its "recommendations" are lawful per se.[23]

---

[23]The Court previously considered all of UST's citations on summary judgment. Not one so much as suggests the sweeping approval that UST claims, and none involves a factual backdrop even remotely similar to the extensive record of exclusionary conduct developed at the trial of the instant case. For example, in In re Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8, 144-45 (1982), an administrative law judge decided that the efforts of the leading cereal manufacturers (none of which had more than 45% of the market) to obtain shelf space in proportion to market share did not constitute unlawful collusion, a claim not even at issue here. In Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129, 1137 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), the court dismissed complaints about the defendant's restrictive shelf space practices under Section 1, but approved the plaintiff's Section 2 monopolization claim for the same conduct, and did so where the defendant had a much lower (50%) market share than here. In Bayou Bottling, Inc. v. Dr Pepper Co., 725 F.2d 300, 303 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 833 (1984), the court decided that particular practices in a particular market at that particular time did not constitute unlawful activity. And Jays Foods, L.L.C. v. Chemical & Allied Product Workers' Union, Local 20, No. 97 C 6227, 1998 WL 265098 (N.D. Ill. May 13, 1998), aff'd, No. 99-2807, 2000 WL 336902 (7th Cir. Mar. 31, 2000), was a case brought under an Illinois consumer fraud statute, not Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

SOF=SOM. According to its Vice President of Sales, there was no legitimate reason for UST to seek share of fixture equal to its monopoly share of sales. 3/6/00 Tr. at 99-100 (Milano). In fact, by pursuing that formula UST subjected itself to return problems, as its dated product (Copenhagen) often went stale when too many facings were allotted to it. Id. The testimony was uniform and uncontested that UST did not need SOF=SOM in order to display its wares adequately. Indeed, several UST witnesses testified that UST already had too much retail space in many locations, which led to excessive returns. See, e.g., 3/16/00 Tr. at 91-92 (Germany); Borrowdale Dep. at 28-30. Others flatly denied that UST pursued a strategy of seeking SOF=SOM. See, e.g., 3/6/00 Tr. at 79-80 (Milano).

The only reason for UST's use of SOF=SOM was what its internal documents flatly conceded: "Control competition/ SOF=SOM." PX 28 (Top Gun 1995).[24] The pernicious purpose and [24] See also PX 61 ("It is imperative that we continue with this category management action plan to eliminate competitive products."); PX 63 (UST can achieve more than 80% of merchandising space through SOF=SOM); id. ("Do not discontinue any slow selling brands on a national level"); PX 104 ("[W]hen reducing distribution, it may [be] necessary to have a smaller vendor. You definitely need to reduce the competitive facings in these locations in order for us to have a fair share of the section.").

effect of this tactic were explained in detail by Dr. Kamien and Dr. Blattberg.[25]

The attempt to defend the company's use of SOF=SOM as an ordinary and sensible business practice thus runs afoul of the trial testimony of UST executives, its own documents, and the credible opinion of leading experts. Nor can UST point to any authority suggesting that a monopolist is permitted as a matter of law to command the percentage of shelf space that equals its market share. The jury properly considered the evidence surrounding UST's use of SOF=SOM in making its finding of exclusionary conduct.[26]

Exclusive Vending. According to UST's own documents, "exclusive vending" (the requirement that all moist snuff be sold from UST's vendor or rack) was the linchpin of its anticompetitive strategy, not a mere accommodation to retailers who wanted "uniform" racks. PX 9 ("Chain Strategy -- Control Comp. Distribution . . . Exclusive Vending"). Former UST

[25]For example, Dr. Blattberg explained that he was aware of no space management theory or study suggesting SOF=SOM to be an optimal retail strategy and that in his opinion SOF=SOM leads to overstocks, assortment problems, and serves only to reinforce market share status quo. 3/13/00 Tr. at 252-53, 259. Dr. Blattberg further testified that UST pursued SOF=SOM to diminish the space available to competitors. Id. at 224.

[26]Tellingly, UST revised the CAP program to drop all reference to SOF=SOM as a baseline for measuring compliance after the lawsuit was commenced. Whereas the original CAP contract required the placement of POS and vendors "in accordance with share of market" in order to earn the monetary incentives, the 1999 (post-lawsuit) version of the CAP contract dropped all such references. 3/15/00 Tr. at 142-43 (Biddy); PX 146.

employees confirmed that they were directed to obtain exclusive vending specifically as a means of exclusion. Hart Dep. at 15-16; Marconi Dep. at 12-13; Borrowdale Dep. at 16; Ulizio Dep. at 23; 3/10/00 Tr. at 18-20 (Jeffrey); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32; Keil Dep. at 15-17. Field sales personnel regularly reported they solicited, and succeeded in obtaining, agreements with stores in order to exclude. PX 68 (7-Eleven); PX 4 (Quality Marts); PX 113A (United Dairy Farms). And, where stores did not agree, UST often imposed exclusive vending and/or POS anyway. See notes 35, 37, infra.

Through exclusive vending, UST imposed "artificial scarcity" that required the allocation of slots (in the UST rack) among competitors, and thus gave UST a choke point against competitive distribution. 3/13/00 Tr. at 238-39 (Blattberg).[27] It also provided the platform from which UST could reduce facings for competitors through "category management" abuses such as "cutting the tail" just below the last UST product, wider (and thus fewer) slots in the rack, and other restrictive means. And it eliminated the critical point-of-sale location for competitors to advertise lower prices, innovative products, or existing products

[27]Where each competitor had its own rack, there was no such choke point. Nor was exclusive vending necessary for this profitable and space-efficient product. The evidence was undisputed that other tobacco products, such as loose leaf, found ample room in stores even though they were far less profitable for the stores than moist snuff. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 51-53 (Rosson); 3/9/00 Tr. at 188 (Hettinger); 2/28/00 Tr. at 174-76 (Marano).

to interested consumers; on this score, UST's documents could not be clearer. PXs 23, 53, 48, 80, 139.[28]

UST does not and cannot defend these as "ordinary" business practices. Its top three executives denied that the company sought exclusive vending -- despite testimony from its former representatives and hundreds of its own documents to the contrary. E.g., 3/21/00 Tr. at 189 (Gierer); 3/6/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Milano); Smith Dep. at 225. Indeed, Mr. Milano testified that it would be inappropriate to put competitive products in UST racks to control shelf space and advertising. 3/6/00 Tr. at 75. Remarkably, UST's President and its National Key Accounts Manager claimed not to know what the words "exclusive vending" mean. Untiedt Dep. at 109; Smith Dep. at 421. There simply was no evidence from which the jury could have concluded that exclusive vending, as practiced by UST, constituted appropriate business conduct.[29]

[28]The harm from this conduct is greatly increased in a market where advertising is severely restricted by law. 3/15/00 Tr. at 263-64 (Blattberg).

[29]UST documents also show that, once the Conwood lawsuit was filed, UST stopped offering exclusive vending, speaking volumes to the supposed "ordinariness" of its practice. See, e.g., PX 130 (Division Manager re Crystal Flash: "Given the pending Conwood lawsuit, we explained that vendor exclusivity was no longer a requirement of our company."); PX 136 (Division Manager re Lake County Dairy chain: "This is also the chain that would like to go to US Tobacco exclusive if we are willing to pay a little. I have been told due to the recent Conwood lawsuit not to pursue exclusive right now."); PX 140 (UST Sales Representative Performance Evaluation pre-printed form has the following objective: "Continue to offer vendor exclusivity and category management where feasible." Comment on performance of one sales representative: "vendor exclusivity is not being

UST was free to offer testimony from a few store witnesses that they preferred exclusive vending and to argue from that to the jury. It cannot plausibly suggest that its tactics were lawful per se in light of the mountains of evidence demonstrating that the purpose and effect of its exclusive vending practices were to disadvantage rivals by limiting their distribution and advertising and thereby maintain UST's monopoly.

CAP Program. The evidence at trial established that UST designed and implemented its Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") as a tool of exclusion. PX 120 ("CAP has been a great means of reducing competition"); PX 94 ("[T]he inception of the Customer Alliance Program will be utilized to leverage our market share toward improved merchandising presence. This will come at the expense of slow moving competitive products."); PX 144 (UST division manager uses CAP to secure exclusive vending and header cards); PX 113A (exclusive vending and elimination of competitive product incorporated into CAP contract).

Dr. Gundlach testified, without contradiction, that CAP was used by UST, first, to eliminate competitive products, racks, and advertising;[30] second, as a basis for entering into exclusive vending agreements on the "worksheets" used by the sales representatives to determine compliance with, and hence eligibility for, CAP payments;[31] and, third, as a tool for imposing other restrictions harmful to competition.[32]

At trial, UST disavowed these exclusionary uses insisting that CAP was merely a way to gather retail movement figures. 3/7/00 Tr. at 139 (Milano); 3/16/00 Tr. at 108-09 (Germany). The jury was of course permitted to accept or reject that explanation in the light of all the evidence. But there is no substance to or authority for UST's sweeping argument, that because CAP is denominated an "incentive program," its use by a monopolist to exclude competition cannot be challenged as exclusionary conduct under Section 2. See, e.g., R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Philip Morris Inc. 60 F. Supp. 2d 502, 511-12 (M.D.N.C. 1999) (enjoining "Retail Leaders" incentive program as likely violation of Sections 1 and 2); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. 97-3983, 1999 WL 346223, at *6-*7 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999) (denying 3M's summary judgment motion defending its retail rebate programs).[33] The jury properly considered UST's actual use of the CAP program as part of its overall campaign of unlawful exclusion.

[31] See, e.g., PX 120 (CAP incentive for eliminating competitive products); PX 175 (Berkebile discussing CAP goals); PX 112C ("All smokeless moist snuff in UST vendor[;] No competition"); PX 112D ("[B]ut [UST is] not going to vend Renegades or Kodiak Straight. They are under the counter."); PX 112F (exclusive vending); PX 112O (exclusive vending and exclusive header cards). Dr. Gundlach testified that, exclusive of the many CAP agreements that provided for such exclusivity, there were more than 21,000 stores covered by exclusive vending agreements with UST. 3/9/00 Tr. at 80.

[32] E.g., PX 114 (CAP used to place competitive displays under the counter in as many places as possible with the explicit approval of management); PX 139 (UST's control over merchandising and POS placement will make customer awareness of price differential difficult); PX 187 (CAP requires USTSM vendors and displays be placed in premium locations).

Admittedly Tortious Conduct. UST repeats again its argument, first made on motion for judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) and then repeated several times thereafter, that tortious conduct cannot also be exclusionary. UST JMOL Mem. at 34 (from "an antitrust perspective," tortious conduct is mere "competition, however unseemly"). But there is no "safe harbor" under antitrust law for exclusionary conduct that also happens to be tortious. See Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 7; Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 55-58. [34] There was, moreover, substantial evidence to support the finding that UST maintained its market share through exclusionary tactics that included the outright, [33]Defendants find no support in Beverage Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp 1144 (S.D. Ohio 1986). There the court decided only that a particular program in a particular market did not amount to exclusionary conduct because it did nothing more than promote the sale of one competitor's products without any exclusion of other competitors. Id. at 1154. In short, there was no evidence that Coca-Cola there used the incentive program to do what the evidence overwhelmingly established that UST used CAP and other programs to do here: exclude competition.

[34]The Sixth Circuit in Byars vacated the district court's ruling for the defendant -- on just this argument -- and remanded for further findings of fact on whether the defendant had engaged in "dirty tricks." 609 F.2d at 864. The court of appeals instructed the district court to "carefully examine the alleged 'dirty tricks.' Predatory conduct on [the defendant's] part would go a long way toward establishing a § 2 violation." Id. at 863 (footnote omitted). Defendants' remaining cases are inapt for reasons already fully briefed. See Pls' Opp. to Motion for Sum. J. at 55-58.

tortious theft of competitors' products, racks, and/or POS from stores. This misconduct was widespread across the country and premeditated at the highest levels of the company.[35] UST's contention that this evidence could not be considered as part of the jury's examination of the record finds no support in law or logic.

C. The Jury's Verdict Was Supported by Ample Evidence of Harm to Competition and Conwood

The jury was properly instructed on the element of injury in fact. Jury Instruction 2.5. The only remaining issue, therefore, is whether there was evidence to support the finding of the jury that Conwood suffered injury in fact. There was extensive evidence that UST's exclusionary campaign to limit distribution of competitors' moist snuff harmed competition and consumers as well as Conwood. UST ignores that evidence and bases its arguments, impermissibly, on assertedly contrary evidence that the jury justifiably found unconvincing.

As to competition, UST's documents established that it sought to harm competition by impeding distribution for rivals -- and thereby frustrating their ability to undercut UST with procompetitive products like price-value brands. PXs 14, 268, 288, 45. The purpose and effect of these practices were indisputably to harm competition, and they did so. Indeed, representatives of two of UST's three moist snuff competitors testified that the monopolist's restrictive tactics substantially impaired their ability to compete effectively in the market and significantly limited their growth. 2/29/00 Tr. at 116-20 (Rosson); 3/13/00 Tr. at 42-43 (McClure). This testimony, while ridiculed by UST, came from the most knowledgeable witnesses called at trial -- men with a combined total of more than 75 years in the tobacco business, one a neutral third-party. It was, moreover, fully corroborated by UST's own documents, e.g., PX 84 ("we have severely cut back on their ability to market products"), and former employees, e.g., Borrowdale Dep. at 18 (goal was "no exposure, no sales," and confirming effect on competitors' sales).[36]

[36]UST's position is that, because competitors did not go bankrupt, there has been no harm to competition. But UST's repeated mantra that competition in moist snuff was "vigorous" is belied by the uncontroverted evidence of supra-competitive prices, no innovation, huge monopoly profits and increasing margins, no entry in the contested period, regressions showing higher consumer prices and lower rival market shares where UST's predation succeeded in reducing competitive share of fixture, restricted output in chains where UST obtained exclusionary

16diii005686

Equally dispositive is the evidence, ignored by UST at trial and still today, that where UST succeeded in controlling more facings in stores -- the stated goal of its anticompetitive scheme, PX 23 ("our objective is to control the smokeless home, present the category and velocity, provide facings for competitive, control facings and positioning") -- consumers were harmed. Dr. Kamien established a direct, linear relationship between the number of facings controlled by UST and higher prices for consumers. This was direct evidence of consumer harm at the hands of UST, and UST did not even question, much less attempt to agreements, as well as indefensible predation practiced by the monopolist against its smaller rivals to maintain its grip. This is the essence of harm to competition.

Moreover, UST's "controlling legal authority" for judgment as a matter of law on this score is, at best, wildly off-point. See, e.g., Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Serv. of America, Inc., 190 F.3d 974, 977 (9th Cir. 1999) (affirming summary judgment where "uncontradicted evidence in the record" showed "low entry barriers," defendant's "inability to control prices or exclude competitors," and no "unnatural market barriers precluding robust competition") (citation omitted); R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food, Inc., 13 F.3d 478, 486-88 (1st Cir. 1994) (affirming summary judgment on similar, uncontradicted record); D.E. Rogers Assocs., Inc. v. Gardner-Denver Co., 718 F.2d 1431, 1439 (6th Cir. 1983) (affirming district court where "there is no evidence of anticompetitive effect, direct or inferential, in the record," and plaintiff mistakenly claimed that its own lost profits could suffice to "evidence[] the requisite effect on competition"); Havoco of America, Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 558 (7th Cir. 1980) (affirming dismissal where plaintiff failed to include in its complaint "any supporting factual allegations" of harm to competition); Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Serv. of America, Inc., 65 F. Supp. 2d 1052, 1065 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (granting summary judgment on exclusive dealing claim because plaintiff could not show that the contracts at issue were exclusive dealing contracts, and noting the continued and very recent entry of numerous other competitors in recently degregulated industry), aff'd, 190 F.3d 974 (9th Cir. 1999).

disprove, this evidence. 2/29/00 Tr. at 264-65 (Kamien); PX 326.2.

The very same conduct that harmed consumers also harmed Conwood. It cannot be gainsaid that the systemic exclusion (and in many instances destruction) of Conwood racks, POS, and products constituted harm to Conwood.[37] UST's own witnesses -- who claimed that they did not practice the exclusionary tactics -- provided further evidence of the harmful effect of the

---

[37]For example: 11 Conwood employees from across the country testified that UST representatives systematically ransacked Conwood racks, POS, and products; used misleading or false information in their "category management" efforts to exclude Conwood; and paid retailers, through CAP and other contracts, to do the same. See 2/28/00 Tr. at 222-23 (Marano); 3/3/00 Tr. at 88, 93 (Wilding); 3/8/00 Tr. at 128, 133 (Ryan); id. at 154, 161 (Dring); id. at 202-09 (Hynek); 3/9/00 Tr. at 197-98 (Hettinger); 3/10/00 Tr. at 8 (Falevsky); id. at 19 (Jeffrey); id. (vol. X-B) at 7-8 (Larsen); id. at 63-64 (Williams); 2/29/00 Tr. at 95-99 (Rosson).

Eight former UST representatives admitted that they deliberately excluded Conwood at the behest of their management. See Marconi Dep. at 12-13; Borrowdale Dep. at 16; Hart Dep. at 18; Carter Dep. at 37; Ulizio Dep. at 22-25; 3/10/00 Tr. at 18-20 (Jeffrey); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32; Keil Dep. at 15-17.

Six retailers and one wholesaler testified that UST representatives eliminated Conwood racks, POS, and products; presented false or misleading numbers as part of their category management efforts; and, even through UST's chairman, offered cash to exclude. See Rusk Dep. at 10-12; Gill-Elkins Dep. at 15-16; Leinen Dep. at 19-22; Renfro Dep. at 16-17; Waller Dep. at 11-12; Stevens Dep. at 19-20; Engster Dep. at 26-27.

UST's expert, David Scheffman, admitted that there is a direct correlation between Conwood losing racks and losing sales. 3/23/00 Tr. at 133.

Literally scores of UST's own documents attested to the successful implementation of their illegal efforts to eliminate Conwood racks, POS, and products. See, e.g., PXs 19, 24, 84, 106, 112C, 112D, 112F, 112O, 159, 272.

practices. E.g., 3/14/00 Tr. at 174-75 (Luckett: where no exclusive vending or "category management" reducing Conwood facings, Conwood has approximately 26% market share); 3/15/00 Tr. at 102 (Biddy: where no exclusion, Conwood has 26% market share); 3/21/00 Tr. at 23-24 (Jones: where no exclusion, Conwood has 20%-25% market share). UST's expert witness, Dr. Scheffman, confirmed in a statistical regression that where UST succeeded in reducing Conwood's facings Conwood sold less moist snuff. 3/23/00 Tr. at 133-34 (Scheffman).[38]

In addition, Conwood introduced evidence that, in two of America's largest chains (Wal-Mart and 7-Eleven), UST's success in excluding Conwood racks and POS led to sharply reduced sales for Conwood (harm to Conwood), and overall reduction in sales of moist snuff (reduced output indicating harm to competition and consumers). 3/1/00 Tr. at 51-54, 57-58 (Kamien); 3/13/00 Tr. at 275-78 (Blattberg); PX 327.21.

The jury was also entitled to credit the undisputed evidence that Conwood's growth was cut by two-thirds after UST began using its "clout" to exclude,[39] and the evidence that Conwood's state-by-state growth was differentially affected in a manner

[38]This testimony is consistent with UST's internal projections, which in 1997 estimated that competing price-value brands could be expected to gain as much as 18% of the market in just three years if left unrestrained. PX 45.

[39]From 1980 to 1990, Conwood grew from 0 to 11%; from 1990 to trial, Conwood grew from 11% to approximately 13.5%. 2/29/00 Tr. at 103 (Rosson). Conwood's growth in the decade following the commencement of UST's concerted exclusion was less than one-third of the growth it sustained in the preceding decade.

consistent only with the upsurge of UST's exclusionary conduct after 1990. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30 (Leftwich); PX 327.21.

UST's "no harm, no foul" theory ignores all this evidence and asks the Court to rule, as a matter of law, that an antitrust plaintiff cannot establish injury to competition unless it can establish that the market contracted and that its sales decreased in absolute terms. That is not the law.[40] UST's successful efforts to arrest Conwood's (and Swedish Match's) growth through exclusionary tactics that increased prices for consumers (undisputedly so) is fully cognizable under the antitrust laws.

D. The Jury's Verdict Was Supported by Ample Evidence of Causation

The properly instructed jury was required to determine, in order to find that Conwood had established injury in fact, that some harm to Conwood had been caused by UST's exclusionary conduct. As the Court explained -- with no objection from UST -- Conwood was "not required to prove that U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation was the sole cause of its injury; nor need Conwood eliminate all other possible causes of injury." Jury Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft, 19 F.3d 745, 753-54 (1st Cir. 1994) (reversing district court's dismissal of complaint because dealer's loss of additional profits due to alleged maximum resale price constraints constitutes antitrust injury); Gulfstream III Assocs., Inc. v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 425, 429 (3d Cir. 1993) ("lost profits (or increased losses)" constitute antitrust injury); Volvo N. Am. Corp. v. Men's Int'l Prof'l Tennis Council, 857 F.2d 55, 67 (2d Cir. 1988) (reversing dismissal of complaint because allegation that anticompetitive conspiracy caused tennis events "to be less profitable than [those] events otherwise would have been" was sufficient to establish antitrust injury).

Instruction 2.5 (emphasis added). Instead, Conwood needed to show only that UST's "illegal conduct was a material cause of Conwood's injury. This means that Conwood must have proved that some damage flowed to it as a result of U.S. Tobacco's alleged antitrust violation." Id. (emphasis added).[41]

There is no serious dispute that Conwood met this test. For example, the former UST representatives established injury to Conwood by admitting their concerted removal of Conwood racks, POS, and products pursuant to company policy. And of course there was far more and corroborative evidence of harm from [41]UST did not object to this instruction at trial, does not do so now, and cannot sensibly do so under long-settled law nowhere addressed by defendants. See, e.g., Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 114 n.9 (1969) ("It is enough that the illegality is shown to be a material cause of the injury; a plaintiff need not exhaust all possible alternative sources of injury in fulfilling his burden of proving compensable injury under § 4."); Allied Accessories & Auto Parts Co. v. General Motors Corp., 825 F.2d 971, 973 (6th Cir. 1987) ("Allied I") (reversing district court's holding that plaintiff must show defendants' misconduct was sole cause of its antitrust injuries and approving Seventh Circuit jury instruction providing: "'The plaintiff does not claim nor is he obligated to prove that the violation was the sole and only cause of the loss of profit. It must, however, show that the violation played a substantial part in bringing about or causing the loss of sales and the loss of profit. . . . Plaintiff need not show that the price discrimination was a more substantial cause of injury than any other.'") (quoting Bohack Corp. v. Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., 715 F.2d 703, 711 n.9 (7th Cir. 1983)); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. 97-3983, slip op. at 12 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 14, 2000) (rejecting motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict on causation grounds because plaintiff had established that 3M's conduct "was a material cause of LePage's injury"); Allied Accessories & Auto Parts Co. v. General Motors Corp., 901 F.2d 1322, 1325-26 (6th Cir. 1990) ("Allied II") (rejecting defendants' claim that plaintiff must show it would have obtained contract in a "violation free environment" and holding that plaintiff "need only show" that defendants' unlawful conduct "materially affected" retailer's decision).

Conwood's own representatives, store witnesses, and scores of UST documents. See, e.g., notes 35, 37, supra. Remarkably, UST does not even mention the proof from its own former employees and its own documents, which establish that UST intended to harm Conwood through exclusionary tactics and that it did so routinely and systematically. Id.

UST's argument is based solely on the notion that other factors might also have caused Conwood to lose sales." UST JMOL Mem. at 44. UST undoubtedly had theories of what halted Conwood's growth (e.g., "the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers," "other factors in marketplace," "additional competition from UST and other competitors," and "Conwood's failure to compete"). Id. at 46. All of these arguments were given the weight they deserved by the jury. The jury's decision not to credit UST's alternative theories of harm affords no colorable basis for granting judgment to UST as a matter of law.[42]

[42]As previously briefed (see Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 62 n.78), defendants' citation to Valley Products Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398 (6th Cir. 1997); Axis, S.p.A. v. Micafil, Inc., 870 F.2d 1105 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 823 (1989); Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36 (6th Cir. 1994); and Baum Research & Development Co. v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998), does nothing to change this conclusion. In each case, the uniform proof was that the plaintiff's injuries resulted solely from the defendant's lawful acts of exclusion -- in Axis by control over a patent, in Valley Products by control over licensing rights, in Hodges by control over physical premises, and in Baum Research by control over eligibility rules. By contrast, on the record adduced at trial there can be no serious claim here that Conwood's injuries were caused solely by fair competition and not at all by UST's unlawful conduct.

E. The Jury's Award of Damages Affords No Basis for Judgment As a Matter of Law

Here, as with the elements of liability addressed above, there is no dispute that the Court gave the jury proper legal instruction. Indeed, with respect to damages, the jury instructions and verdict form language were in significant part proposed by UST.

Nor is there any dispute that there is sufficient record evidence to support Conwood's claimed damages. Conwood introduced a wealth of damages evidence. Dr. Leftwich presented a detailed study based on accepted economic method establishing Conwood's damages from UST's anticompetitive acts within the range of $155 to $488 million. Based on his 45 years of experience in the tobacco business, Conwood's historical performance in moist snuff, and Conwood's performance in adjacent smokeless markets, Conwood's Chairman, Mr. Rosson, testified that Conwood would have attained a market share in the mid-20s but for UST's misconduct. 2/29/00 Tr. at 119-20 (Rosson). And it was undisputed (and corroborated independently by Mr. Price of Swedish Match) that each additional share point is worth $10 million in net profit. 3/7/00 Tr. at 116-20 (Price). In contrast, UST decided to offer no evidence with respect to Conwood's damages, other than to sponsor an expert who opined that Conwood had not been damaged at all. 3/23/00 Tr. at 140-41 (Scheffman).

The jury determined that Conwood's actual damages "only" from UST's antitrust violation amounted to $350,000,000. This fell near the mid-point of the range to which Dr. Leftwich testified, and was far less than the jury could properly have awarded by application of Mr. Rosson's estimation of "but for" market share (the mid-20s) to the undisputed figure of $10 million per additional share point.

UST challenges the admissibility of some but by no means all of the damages evidence, maintains that the damages are "excessive" by some undefined standard, and suggests that the Court should rejigger the figures. But these arguments have nothing to do with judgment as a matter of law. (Point 1). Passing that, UST's recycled complaints provide no reasoned basis for intruding upon the determination made by a properly instructed jury based on competent evidence, from several sources, that UST did little if anything at trial to dispute. (Point 2).

1. On a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the element of damages "is satisfied by [the plaintiff's] proof of some damage flowing from [the defendant's actions]; inquiry beyond this minimum point goes only to the amount and not the fact of damage." Zenith Radio, 395 U.S. at 114 n.9; Allied I, 825 F.2d at 973-75; Broan Mfg. Co. v. Associated Distribs., Inc., 923 F.2d 1232, 1235 (6th Cir. 1991) (recovery prevented "only where the fact of damage is uncertain," not the amount of damages); Grantham & Mann, Inc. v. American Safety Prods., Inc., 831 F.2d 596, 601-02 (6th Cir. 1987) (rule that remote and speculative damages are not recoverable "serves to preclude recovery . . . only where the fact of damage is uncertain . . . not where the amount of damage alone is uncertain"). See also Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 65; Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 14-15. UST does not challenge the fact that Conwood provided proof from which a reasonable juror could find at least some damage (e.g., one lost sale) flowing from its misconduct. Nor, on this record, could it plausibly do so. Accordingly, judgment for UST is unavailable as a matter of black letter law.

2. Even if UST's arguments concerning the amount of Conwood's damages were pertinent on a motion for judgment (and they are not), there is nothing new here. UST simply restates the same arguments and recites the same authorities previously detailed in its pre-trial motion to exclude Dr. Leftwich's testimony. Each of its points were exhaustively addressed by Conwood and the Court at that time. See Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich; Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 63-67; Feb. 23, 2000 Order. UST offers no persuasive reason to retread this familiar territory. For example:

(a) UST complains that Dr. Leftwich's analysis "does not reflect lost sales, but merely makes assumptions about lost share." UST JMOL Mem. at 51-53. In fact, Dr. Leftwich did not make assumptions about lost share, but rather tested Conwood's hypothesis that its growth was particularly stymied by UST's

anticompetitive tactics in markets where it had not attained a "foothold" by 1990. The economic evidence confirmed the validity of the hypothesis, and from that Dr. Leftwich estimated the growth that Conwood would have attained "but for" UST's unlawful conduct. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30-32. In any event, there was testimony regarding lost sales as a result of UST's misconduct. See, e.g., p. 29 & note 35, supra (citing testimony regarding lost sales). And UST has not cited (and cannot cite) any authority for the proposition that a damages expert must directly measure lost sales instead of lost market share.

(b) UST complains, as it did in pre-trial motions, that Dr. Leftwich's analysis began with a hypothesis derived from conversations with Conwood executives and employees. UST JMOL Mem. at 53-55. Contrary to UST's intimations, however, Dr. Leftwich did not rely on Conwood's perceptions to generate a damages number, he tested them using industry-standard data and accepted statistical techniques. He found that the empirical evidence supported Conwood's experience: the data demonstrated that UST's acts after 1990 had a disproportionate adverse impact on Conwood in states where Conwood had not already attained sufficient market share to protect itself from attack. See 3/8/00 Tr. at 20-21; Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 5-12, 26-27 (discussing argument and facts in further detail). The use of hypotheses, as Dr. Leftwich testified without challenge from UST, is the cornerstone of the scientific method. UST cites no court that has required experts to forgo hypotheses, or limited the sources from which experts may obtain them.

(c) UST complains that Dr. Leftwich's study did not rule out all other possible causes for the effect he observed in the data. UST JMOL Mem. at 55-58. As was fully briefed before trial, however, Dr. Leftwich considered a host of possible "confounding variables," including every single variable proposed by defendants' expert in his report. Pls.' Opp. to Mot. To Exclude the Damages Study and Future Testimony of Dr. Richard Leftwich at 20 n.15. These include changes in average state per capita income; median age; racial composition; educational levels; unemployment rates; regional preferences; and trends found in related smokeless tobacco markets (including looseleaf) that are unaffected by UST interference but similarly affected by increasing government regulation and other factors. Id. at 6-7, 11. From the empirical data, Dr. Leftwich concluded that none of these factors could explain Conwood's different level of share growth between 1990 and 1997. The only factor that could explain this empirical phenomenon was UST's misconduct. 3/8/00 Tr. at 30 (Leftwich).

This was more than sufficient under settled law -- which does not require a damages expert to exclude all hypothetical possibilities imagined by counsel after the fact.[43] Indeed, the

Where a plaintiff has provided a plausible economic model using the available data, alternative causal explanations proposed by the defendant are for the jury to decide. The jury was properly allowed to resolve the dispute over what caused Conwood's damages.

The expert's but-for model there, unlike here, depended on unsupported assumptions that the parties' products "would be viewed as equal in quality" by consumers. 2000 WL 303035, at *14. Further, unlike here, there was apparently no damages evidence on which the jury could have relied beyond the expert's opinion. Id. at *15. Here, by contrast, there was substantial evidence that corroborated the expert's opinion, including evidence from defendants' own witnesses as to the market share Conwood was able to attain in areas unaffected by the unlawful and exclusionary UST campaign. See p. 45, infra.

(d) Defendants complain that Dr. Leftwich should not have been permitted to rely on sworn declarations from Conwood employees attesting to the scope and nature of UST's exclusionary practices. UST JMOL Mem. at 58-59. However, UST's contention that experts cannot rely on hearsay materials is simply wrong. Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999) (abuse of discretion to preclude expert from discussing basis of opinion, even if basis was otherwise inadmissible hearsay).[45]

(e) In any event, the jury's verdict cannot be vacated (let alone reversed) when other record evidence supports it. Sawchik, 783 F.2d at 636; Kabealo v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 17 F.3d 822, 827 (6th Cir.) (noting that plaintiffs' "own projections and their actual experience during four years of operation" would provide factfinder with reasonable basis for damages), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 812 (1994). Here the jury's verdict is supported by substantial evidence in addition to -- and corroborative of -- Dr. Leftwich. Indeed, the jury verdict is fully supported even in the absence of evidence from Dr. Leftwich.

[45]UST's alternative evidentiary argument under Federal Rule of Evidence 703 that the sworn declarations are not the sort of material "reasonably relied on by experts" is unsupported by record evidence. It is also undermined by the decision of UST's own expert to place heavy reliance on materials of a similar nature, such as Conwood activity reports and -- as the very bedrock of his analysis -- a one-page document that he literally knew nothing about. 3/23/00 Tr. at 183-88 (Scheffman). In any event, such evidentiary cavils are not by a long shot a valid basis for judgment as a matter of law. See p. 62, infra.

For example, Mr. Rosson's testimony provided painstaking detail about the smokeless tobacco markets. This gave the jury a fully reasonable basis, grounded in actual past performance in moist snuff as well as adjacent markets, for estimating the "but for" share Conwood would have attained. 2/29/00 Tr. at 119-20 (Rosson). Mr. Price, corroborating Mr. Rosson's testimony, stated that each additional share point is worth $10 million in net profits in the moist snuff market. 3/7/00 Tr. at 116-20 (price). Several witnesses -- all called by UST -- testified that where Conwood was unrestrained by UST's exclusionary conduct it easily attained market shares as high as 30%.[46] Similar testimony was provided by Conwood's sales manager, Mr. Williams. 3/10/00 Tr. at 84 (Conwood has approximately 30% market share in Paducah area and chains unaffected by UST misconduct). UST itself predicted that Conwood and other makers of "price value" brands had the potential to gain as much as 18.1% of the market in three years. PX 45.

From all this evidence, the jury was plainly entitled to determine -- without engaging in speculation -- that Conwood would have continued on its growth trajectory after 1990, would have attained substantial additional market share, and

consequently (at $10 million per additional share point) would have earned $350 million in additional profits.[47]

To UST, of course, no damages proof could be sufficient, because the attempt to model a market purged of its antitrust violation necessarily involves predictions and estimates that can always be challenged as unanchored in the actual facts. For this reason, the law provides wide latitude to wronged antitrust plaintiffs; jury awards may be challenged only when they are supported by nothing more than "total[] speculat[ion]." Elder-Beerman Stores Corp. v. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 459 F.2d 138, 150 (6th Cir. 1972). That is not the case here.

III. DEFENDANTS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL

The verdict in this case resulted from a trial that even UST concedes was virtually error-free. Indeed, it states that a new trial would differ little if at all from the trial just completed. UST New Trial Mem. at 4. UST further concedes that the Court gave instructions that were proper statements of the law. And UST's handful of quibbles regarding the conduct of the trial, many of which they failed to register during trial, do not remotely approach the denial of its substantial rights. UST has no legitimate basis for asking the Court, and another jury, to set aside another month to repeat the same arguments that a jury has already considered fully and rejected.

[47]While seemingly large in appearance, the jury award represents slightly less than an additional nine market share points over four years. The moist snuff market operations of UST produced almost a billion dollars in gross profits last year alone. UST Inc., 1999 Annual Report (2000) <http//www.ust.shareholder.com>.

A new trial is warranted under Rule 59 only "when a jury has reached a 'seriously erroneous result.'" Holmes v. City of Massillon, 78 F.3d 1041, 1045-46 (6th Cir. 1996) (reversing district court's grant of new trial); Morvay v. Maghielse Tool & Die Co., 708 F.2d 229, 233 (6th Cir. 1983) (new trial denied where party failed to demonstrate "manifest errors of law or fact"). Defendants must demonstrate that (1) the verdict was against the weight of the evidence; (2) the damages were excessive; or (3) the trial was unfair to defendants. Holmes, 78 F.3d at 1046. UST can demonstrate none of the above.

A. Overwhelming Evidence Supported the Verdict

A new trial is not appropriate "'unless th[e] verdict was unreasonable.'" Barnes v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 201 F.3d 815, 820-21 (6th Cir. 2000) (quoting Holmes, 78 F.3d at 1047). "'[C]ourts are not free to reweigh the evidence and set aside the jury verdict merely because the jury could have drawn different inferences or conclusions or because judges feel that other results are more reasonable.'" Id. at 821 (citation omitted).

The verdict here was eminently reasonable, and was supported by numerous witnesses and exhibits on each essential element of Conwood's antitrust claims. In many critical respects, the evidence was undisputed. See Point II, supra.[48] UST does not seriously argue otherwise, devoting less than one and a half pages to this point and offering not a single case citation that supports the grant of a new trial based on a jury's allegedly incorrect resolution of disputed Section 2 factual issues. UST New Trial Mem. at 2-3. While it laments the jury's failure to endorse the defense arguments, UST gives no reason to think a second jury would disagree with the first. The alleged haste with which the jury returned its verdict suggests no lack of reasoned consideration, but rather the absence of any genuine disagreement over the proper decision. The jury's deliberations and verdict were "consistent with [the] clarity of the evidence." United States v. Holloway, No. 98-5175, 1998 WL 833767, at *6 n.8 (6th Cir. Nov. 19, 1998).[49] There is no basis for suggesting

[48]For example, Conwood's market definition, see Jury Instruction 2.2, was the only market definition offered by either party; UST's market share, history of price and margin increases, and the lack of new entrants into the market after 1990 were all undisputed; the accounts of the eight former UST salesmen, the six store employees, and the twelve Conwood field sales representatives went unchallenged in any material respect; UST's own records documenting their anticompetitive practices were undisputed; the lack of any benefit to consumers from UST's practices was undisputed, and indeed the economic evidence that proved the relationship between UST's command of facings and higher prices to consumers was effectively conceded; and only Conwood offered evidence regarding the amount of damages.

[49]To the extent that it reacted to the evidence, the jury was not alone. UST's Chief Executive Officer testified that the proof variously "astounded," "embarrassed," and "troubled" him. 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120, 190 (Gierer). But see UST Letter to Our Customers, Mar. 30, 2000 (after trial, UST apparently retracting promise to investigate and change conduct, insisting to retailers that it will not alter its conduct and stating: "[T]he actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful competitive conduct . . . . We will

that a second jury would decide otherwise, and no authority for giving UST a second chance to make the same unpersuasive arguments.

B. UST Cannot Show That the Damage Award Was Excessive

The jury's award of $350,000,000 in actual damages was based solidly on the evidence. See Point II.E, supra. UST cannot plausibly call the damages "excessive" when they were far less than the maximum the jury could appropriately have awarded,[50] and when UST decided for tactical reasons not to offer any damages evidence of its own. Portis v. Grand Trunk Western R.R., No. 93-1721, 1994 WL 362110, at *2-*3 (6th Cir. July 12, 1994) (damages not excessive where defendant "chose to defend" solely on theory that claim was a fraud and presented no alternative calculations of economic loss; award "was within the range permitted by the evidence presented at trial, and therefore not so large as to shock the conscience of the court"); Farber v. Massillon Bd. of Educ., 917 F.2d 1391, 1395 (6th Cir. 1990) (damages not excessive unless beyond maximum damages presented at trial); Jenkins v. Associated Transport, Inc., 330 F.2d 706, 712 (6th Cir. 1964) continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us.").

[50]Dr. Leftwich estimated damages of up to $488 million, and he testified that he believed the evidence warranted an award at the high end of his range. 3/8/00 Tr. at 103-04 (Leftwich); PX 327.21. Mr. Rosson's testimony that Conwood, based on past performance and market conditions, could have attained market share in the mid-20s would also have fully supported damages of close to $500 million (12 additional share points x $10 million per year x four years). The jury's award was just about 65% of these amounts.

("[jury's] decision is not subject to interference by the trial judge unless so excessive . . . as to be indicative of prejudice, passion, partiality, or corruption on the part of the jury") (internal quotations marks omitted). The damages were appropriately scaled to Conwood's lost profits in a market characterized by enormous profits. As the Court stated, Conwood was "entitled to the damages that you're entitled -- entitled to receive, no matter what they are in relation to anything else." 3/27/00 Tr. at 93.

The damages are excessive only in the sense that UST believes the jury should not have awarded them. But that is no basis for the grant of a new trial, and UST does not seriously argue it is. UST cites no authority to support its subjective challenge to the amount of damages, and indeed the cases that it does cite all turn not on "excessiveness" but on a jury's patent award on impermissible grounds -- an issue not present here.[51]

---

[51]Thus, in Image Technical Services, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 125 F.3d 1195, 1225 (9th Cir. 1997), a new trial was required because the jury concededly awarded damages based on claims that had been dismissed on the merits before the case was submitted. In MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Corp., 708 F.2d 1081, 1163 (7th Cir. 1983), a new trial was required because the damages study included damages for 22 counts of alleged monopolization, liability was established only on 7 of the 22 counts, and there was no way -- based on the evidence presented to it -- the jury could have limited the award to the counts on which liability was established. In Litton Systems, Inc. v. Honeywell, No. 90-4823, 1996 WL 634213, at *3 (C.D. Cal. July 24, 1996), similarly, the jury was presented with a damages model that relied on six categories of conduct that the Court had expressly excluded from the jury's consideration. No such issue is present here. The jury found against UST on both actual and attempted monopolization, the damages evidence from, e.g., Dr. Leftwich and Mr. Rosson was tied to evidence of UST exclusionary conduct that the jury was entitled to consider, and the jury was

There is simply no reasoned basis on which the jury's verdict can be rejected, and a new trial ordered, where the jury awarded substantial damages supported by the evidence.[52]

C. The Trial Was Fair

The four-week trial of this major case was a model of efficiency and fairness to all parties, and UST does not actually contend otherwise. Far from making the requisite showing that its "substantial rights" were trampled, Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; Morales v. American Honda Motor Co., 151 F.3d 500, 514 (6th Cir. 1998) (question is whether supposed error "caused a different outcome"); Gandy v. Sullivan County, 24 F.3d 861, 866 (6th Cir. 1994)("substantial rights" must be affected), UST finds surprisingly little to complain about.

UST's continued protests that it should have been granted summary judgment, that the Court should have granted all of its motions in limine, that the Court should have excluded some and allowed other evidence, and that the Court should have made the two inconsequential (and inaccurate) modifications to the jury instructions that UST requested, are both wrong and beside the point: UST does not argue, and cannot argue, that these claimed "errors" singly or together deprived it of a fair trial.

properly instructed to award damages, if any, for injuries caused "only" by UST's unlawful conduct. Jury Instruction 4.

[52]UST engages in irrelevant hyperbole when it calls the damages award a "direct attack" on the retail industry itself. UST JMOL Mem. at 3.

1. The Court's Ruling on Summary Judgment Was Correct

UST asserts that the Court erred as a matter of law in its summary judgment ruling. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

First, UST asserts that the Court impermissibly relied on its "intent" and not its "conduct." But evidence of intent is highly probative in a Section 2 case and may even determine whether the conduct is "exclusionary" or "anticompetitive." See pp. 17-18, supra. Besides, the Court's ruling passed "intent" and discussed the "highly detailed" and "carefully developed, thoroughly documented record" of UST's actual misconduct and the resulting harm to consumers and competition. Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 5, 7. The Court held that credible evidence demonstrated that UST's intent was actually carried out through widespread anticompetitive conduct -- all of which conduct was later proved, in even greater detail, at trial. See, e.g., id. at 3 (efforts to eliminate competitive racks were "significantly successful"); id. at 4 (excluded competitive POS); id. (increase slot width to reduce consumer choice); id. (reduce distribution of lower-priced price-value products); id. at 7 (concerted campaign at highest levels of UST to shut Conwood out from effective competition at retail level).

Second, UST asserts that the Court erred when it held that UST's marketing practices are not immunized from review as a matter of law. As was fully briefed at the time, however, the cases that UST believes "immunize" its marketing practices are at best unhelpful, and often even damaging, to its claim that its conduct is ordinary and procompetitive. See note 23, supra; Pls.' Opp. to Motion for Summ. J. at 49-50, 54 n.64. UST's assertion that its practices are ordinary and not exclusionary was properly held a disputed issue of material fact, and the Court correctly reserved the determination of this and other disputed factual issues for the jury. The properly instructed jury decided that UST's practices were neither ordinary nor procompetitive. UST has given the Court no good reason to reverse its decision to deny summary judgment. That decision was fully informed by "well-accepted principles of § 2 law." Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 7. UST's repetitive carping sheds no new light on the subject.[53]

[53]The only new twist is UST's incorrect parsing of Concord Boat, and in particular its suggestion that Concord Boat supports its argument that Conwood should have been held to the standards of the Clayton Act. Concord Boat involved price cutting in the boat engine market. The court did not suggest that exclusionary conduct under Section 2 is judged under the same standards as a Clayton Act claim. The court did mention in passing some of the characteristics of defendants' discount programs that lowered prices -- "the 'very essence of competition.'" 2000 WL 303035, at *21 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 594 (1986)). But the Eighth Circuit's approval in passing of price competition does not help UST; the evidence was undisputed that UST does not compete on price. 3/21/00 Tr. at 131 (Gierer) (UST raised price every year for last ten years); Smith Dep. at 26 (admitting that UST does not engage in price competition; denying knowledge of what "price competition" is); PX 33 ("UST doesn't 'deal' on its product's prices. We don't have to").

2. The Court's In Limine Rulings Were Correct

(a) The Court Properly Excluded Evidence of Owner Wealth.

Before trial, the Court issued a written ruling that excluded evidence regarding the identity of Conwood's ultimate beneficial owners and their claimed wealth. This ruling was entirely correct. The identity of the owners, and the unrelated assets they have or do not have, is both irrelevant and unfairly prejudicial -- offered solely to suggest to the jury that Conwood was owned by rich people and hence was undeserving of any recovery notwithstanding its legal entitlement.

Familiarly, UST claims severe prejudice in having been unable "to tell the whole story" of Conwood's chain of ownership.[54] But the parties in this case were corporations, and the wealth of Conwood's ultimate beneficial owners was no more relevant than evidence that the majority of UST's stockholders are financial institutions with vast wealth far exceeding that of Conwood's owners. UST does not point to a single authority or new argument suggesting otherwise.

The Court's ruling did not prevent UST from making any proper argument. It was free to elicit evidence, and to argue,

[54] In two years of discovery, however, UST never established that Conwood had access to additional funds from its ultimate owners or that the owners involved themselves in any way in Conwood's expenditures, investments, and distributions. Had it attempted to establish these matters in discovery, moreover, it would have found the facts very different than what it now claims.

that Conwood had ample financial resources and could easily use those resources in its business rather than distribute them to its owners.[55] Conwood never claimed otherwise. UST elicited and argued that Conwood was a subsidiary of another corporation, despite the Court's statement that "I'm not even sure of the relevance." 2/29/00 Tr. at 131, 145 (Rosson). It fully explored Conwood's substantial participation in, and income from, smokeless tobacco markets other than moist snuff. See 3/23/00 Tr. at 75-76 (Scheffman). What it was not allowed to do -- offer proof of unrelated wealth of beneficial owners uninvolved in management and far up the chain of ownership, to unfairly prejudicial effect -- it has no coherent argument that it was entitled to do so, much less an argument that the failure of the Court to permit this obvious sideshow constituted a deprivation of its substantial rights or affected the outcome.

(b) The Court Properly Permitted Testimony Concerning Dr. Leftwich's Supplemental Report.

UST claims the Court erred by allowing testimony concerning Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report.[56] But this matter, too, was

---

[55] See, e.g., 2/29/00 Tr. at 145 (UST cross-examination of Rosson establishing that Conwood made $150 million in free cash flow last year and this was distributed to owners); id. (available free cash flow); 3/23/00 Tr. at 42 (Scheffman testimony on amount of money distributed to owners); DX 57 (showing Conwood profits and percent distributed to owners -- used in Scheffman testimony); see also PX 14 (Conwood part of a conglomerate -- under "competition" heading of UST marketing plan).

[56] UST also submits that other damages-related arguments discussed in its JMOL motion warrant a new trial. The Court previously rejected each of these arguments and, as discussed exhaustively briefed and argued prior to trial. See Pls.' Opp.to UST's Mot. to Preclude "Undisclosed Expert Materials" at 6-9; Pls.' Reply to Defs.' Suppl. Mem. To Exclude Dr. Richard Leftwich at 1-7. After full consideration, the Court ruled that the supplemental material was appropriate. Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5 ("supplementation was appropriate" under Rule 26(e); the opinions were not new and were discussed in rebuttal report). UST offers no new legal argument, let alone a compelling one, for reopening this settled issue.

Neither can UST claim prejudice from this appropriate evidentiary ruling. Instead, UST simply asserts that allowing Dr. Leftwich's deposition on the eve of trial did not permit "adequate time" to respond. UST New Trial Mem. at 10. But the timing of Dr. Leftwich's deposition was UST's decision, as it waited four weeks after receiving Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report before seeking to depose him. See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5 (noting that Magistrate had already granted leave on February 8 to take Dr. Leftwich's deposition). Tellingly, UST made no motion for a continuance and no objection to Dr. Leftwich's testimony at trial on the grounds that its attorneys were unprepared to examine him.[57]

[57] 11 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2805, at 56-57 (2d ed. 1995) (under Rule 59, "relief [for unfair surprise] will be denied if the party failed to seek a continuance"); United States v. Walton, 909 F.2d 915, 924 (6th Cir. 1990) (must show "'error was so fundamental that gross injustice would result'" if grounds for new trial were not raised at trial) (quoting Wright § 2805). The Court's previous ruling

(c) The Court Properly Admitted Professor Gundlach's Study.

UST's challenge to Dr. Gundlach's testimony is also a mere repetition of rejected pre-trial arguments. See Pls.' Opp. to Mot. to Preclude Prof. Gundlach's Study of Exclusionary Agreements and Related Testimony. Defendants' recycled claim that Dr. Gundlach did not offer any expertise, moreover, remains dead wrong. The trial record utterly undercuts UST's pre-trial assertion.[58] See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 65-66 (importance of advertising location); id. at 68 (UST aggressively seeking exclusive vending agreements); id. at 85 (outcome of agreements was reduction in competitive facings); id. at 91 (effect of agreements is to limit information to consumers, especially in light of tobacco advertising restrictions); id. at 101-16 (exclusionary features of CAP); id. at 150 (exclusive agreements solicited and gained by UST; often involved payments). Contrary to UST's claim, moreover, Dr. Gundlach comprehensively reviewed the record, including the testimony of retailers and employees.

that "any possible prejudice" was avoided by the additional deposition remains correct. Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 5. UST's remaining Rule 703 argument is fully discussed in Point II.E, supra.

[58]UST can hardly complain, moreover, that Dr. Gundlach's study was unnecessary when UST repeatedly took the position that it had no idea how many exclusive vending agreements it had or where they could be located. See Milano Aff. ¶ 4; Untiedt Dep. at 110 (no idea if UST has exclusive vending agreements with top accounts, though he is responsible for them); 3/7/00 Tr. at 42 (Milano) (denying any agreement with Wal-Mart) compare with PX 47 (UST "has formed an agreement with Wal-Mart"); PX 230 (letter detailing agreement). Indeed, it was UST's professed ignorance about its own agreements that necessitated Dr. Gundlach's study.

Id. at 74 (detailing specific UST deposition testimony supporting his opinion on 2908 agreements); id. at 93 (discussing out-of-stock problems and testimony of Wal-Mart tobacco category manager as part of basis of his opinion); id. at 131-32 (discussions with retailers). UST has no support for its renewed argument that Dr. Gundlach should not have been permitted to testify.[59]

UST also complains that it was "unable to confront" Dr. Gundlach with a video deposition excerpt from Mr. Carlson's testimony. See id. at 153 (Court: "I'm [n]ot going to let you show the deposition. Just like I didn't allow [plaintiffs] during some of their testimony earlier and you all objected to them. Exactly the same thing."). UST, however, identifies no authority that permits -- much less requires -- the playing of one witness's deposition in the middle of the testimony of another witness. Nor can it claim any prejudice from this run-of-the-mill evidentiary ruling falling well within the Court's discretion. UST was free to "confront" Dr. Gundlach with the substance of Mr. Carlson's testimony, and in fact did so. See id. (questioning Dr. Gundlach about Mr. Carlson's assertion that there was "no agreement" between UST and Wal-Mart, despite documentary evidence and testimony to the contrary). UST was also permitted to play Mr. Carlson's deposition in full at the

Unlike Dr. Gundlach, who personally reviewed the agreements underlying his study, see 3/9/00 Tr. at 124, the expert in Berry used a one-page summary sheet in his testimony, see 25 F.3d at 1352. The only expert in this case who used a mystery one-page summary sheet as the basis for his opinion was UST's expert, Dr. Scheffman.

appropriate time. The Court's decision on the manner of cross-examination was entirely correct. It would be difficult to imagine anything farther from error affecting substantial rights.

(d) Sixth Circuit Law Does Not Require Store-by-Store Proof or a "Cross Section."

UST insists that a new trial is required because Conwood should have shown injury at the store level through a "cross-sectional" analysis. But UST never made any objection on this score at trial that might have allowed the Court to address this supposed error. Indeed, before trial UST took the opposite position, arguing that Conwood could not establish injury by any such "representative sampling," but only on a store-by-store basis. Mem. in Supp. of Mot. To Require Pls.' To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury at Specific Retail Stores and Chains at 2.

Moreover, UST cites no legal support for its new position and simply bypasses controlling Sixth Circuit law. See Mem. in Opp. to Mot. To Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4. As the Court recognized in denying UST's motion in limine, the Sixth Circuit "does not limit an antitrust plaintiff to specific damages or prohibit the use of estimates and inferences." See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 3; Elyria-Lorain Broad. Co. v. Lorain Journal Co., 358 F.2d 790, 792-93 (6th Cir. 1966) ("It is not the rule that in an action for damages for violation of the antitrust laws plaintiff is limited to recover only the specific items of damage which he can prove with reasonable certainty."). UST was free to argue to the jury that Conwood's experts should have used different methodologies, but instead it chose to wait until after trial to present the argument that Conwood must use a methodology specified by UST. The Court's correct ruling on the motion in limine leaves no room for this tactic:

> Plaintiffs' expert has utilized various calculations and theories to project the damages in this suit. It is the responsibility of the parties to argue the merits of these damages and to offer alternative explanations for their origin. The Court has no doubt each side can provide the jurors with the information necessary for them to exercise good sense and sound judgment to determine an amount, if any, that will produce adequate compensation and that will, in turn, remove speculation and guesswork from the decisionmaking process.

Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 3. See also Mem. in Opp. to Mot. To Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4.[60]

3. The Court's Evidentiary Rulings Were Correct

At trial, the Court made a number of evidentiary rulings, some of which UST objected to, many of which it did not.[61] UST fails to demonstrate that a single one constitutes error, much less error so grave that it trenched on UST's substantial rights and accordingly warrants the extraordinary relief of a new trial. Leonard v. Uniroyal, Inc., 765 F.2d 560, 567 (6th Cir. 1985) (no error in the admission or exclusion of evidence is grounds for overturning jury verdict unless ruling is inconsistent with substantial justice); Morales, 151 F.3d at 154 (evidentiary ruling not grounds for reversal unless it "would have caused a different outcome").

---

[60]UST's claim that there was no evidence at trial of the fact of injury through lost sales at any retail location simply turns a blind eye to inconvenient evidence. See, e.g., PX 326.2 (chart showing decrease in Wal-Mart sales); PX 326.3 (chart showing decrease in 7-Eleven sales). See Point II, supra.

[61]Any objection to the admission of testimony unobjected to at trial is now waived. Walton, 909 F.2d at 924 (absent objection, error must be "so fundamental that gross injustice would result" to qualify for reversal).

(a) Conwood's Expert Witnesses Properly Explained Highly Relevant Opinions to the Jury.

(i) Conwood's Expert Testimony Assisted the Jury. UST disparages Conwood's experts, respected full-time professors at Northwestern University, Notre Dame University, and the University of Chicago, as "human highlighters." Essentially, UST criticizes plaintiffs' experts for providing evidentiary support for their views instead of just announcing a blizzard of opinions without explanation. UST might have preferred that Conwood's experts not rely on highly detailed and credible record evidence to support and illustrate their opinions. But UST can point to no authority for its novel view that experts are not permitted to explain the bases of their opinions.[62]

---

[62]Nor can UST's complaint that experts simply "read[] documents" stand as a factual matter. For example, Dr. Kamien presented opinions about, and the results of his studies on, the relevant market, UST's possession of market power, and the effects of UST's pervasive exclusionary conduct. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 246-58, 279-80; 3/1/00 Tr. at 14-23; id. at 39-44. He presented undisputed studies showing UST's ability to charge higher prices when it occupies more facings and the output

(ii) Conwood's Used Proper Materials with Experts. UST objects (on hearsay grounds) to a demonstrative exhibit that itemized some of the bases for the opinions of Dr. Kamien. UST New Trial Mem. at 18. But the demonstrative was not hearsay; it was merely a summary of testimony Dr. Kamien was indisputably entitled to give, and gave without objection.

Moreover, UST failed to object to the demonstrative when it was presented. Instead, UST's counsel stated only that "I think a limiting instruction . . . would be appropriate." 2/29/00 Tr. at 8. UST both authored and agreed to the limiting instruction that the Court readily agreed to read to the jury. See id. at 124 (UST's counsel noting that "we have an agreement"); 3/1/00 Tr. at 35 (discussing instruction); id. at 37 (court giving limiting instruction to jury). UST's assertion that the Court engaged in fatal error by doing exactly what defendants asked at trial is both representative of its evidentiary challenges and entirely without substance.

On a related matter, UST argues that it was (somehow) improper for plaintiffs' counsel to ask Dr. Scheffman why he chose to ignore more than 200 sworn declarations detailing UST's effects of UST's agreements at the largest chain stores and mass merchandisers in the country. See PX 326.4 (price/facing chart); PX 326.2 (Wal-Mart sales drop); PX 326.3 (7-Eleven sales drop). Similarly, Dr. Blattberg explained to the jury his opinion that UST's category management practices are not "ordinary," but an abuse of accepted industry category management norms and standards. See 3/13/00 Tr. at 288-89. And Dr. Gundlach presented a number of opinions and a study discussed elsewhere. See pp. 57-59, supra.

exclusionary conduct and instead base his conclusions on a piece of paper that he knew absolutely nothing about. 3/23/00 Tr. at 183-89. But questions about the bases of an expert's opinion are surely proper cross-examination. Counsel's questions were made all the more pertinent when Dr. Scheffman first claimed that the sworn declarations had not been available to him, and later admitted that they had been.[63] Here, too, UST was content at trial with a limiting instruction that it authored and the Court read.[64] It ill suits UST to charge the Court with committing fatal error for doing precisely what it asked at trial.

(b) Plaintiffs' Use of Fact Witnesses Was Proper.

First, UST claims that Mr. Rosson improperly presented testimony concerning the qualities and differences among Conwood's various smokeless products, even though he is the Chairman of the company and has worked in the tobacco business virtually his entire life. UST claims that Mr. Rosson improperly based his testimony on staff-prepared analyses of UST documents. But UST cites no such testimony from Mr. Rosson, only a discussion among counsel. In fact, the Court required Mr. Rosson

---

[63]In his trial testimony, Dr. Scheffman first claimed that "I didn't have this at the time of my report." 3/23/00 Tr. at 166, 176, 177. When confronted with contrary deposition testimony, however, he eventually admitted that he in fact did have the material at the time of his report. Id. at 178-79.

[64]3/23/00 Tr. at 198 ("no questions" if court reads limiting instruction); id. at 199 (court reading instruction requested by UST); see also 3/24/00 Tr. at 34, 36 (UST requesting supplemental jury instruction and saying "that's fine"); 3/28/00 Tr. at 95-96 (jury instruction authored by UST and given by Court).

to demonstrate personal knowledge and a proper foundation. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 4. Conwood then proceeded to do so at length, a fact UST cannot dispute. See id. at 79-80, 83 (Rosson). Indeed, UST sat on its hands after this foundation was laid, making only a single objection to Mr. Rosson's testimony in this area. As it recognized at the time, UST has literally nothing to complain about, let alone error affecting its substantial rights. Cf. note 66, infra.[65]

Second, Mr. Rosson's testimony on trends in Conwood's market share and the effect of UST's misconduct on that market share was likewise appropriate. As Chairman of Conwood, it was "very critical" to his job to track Conwood's market share and analyze factors affecting its market share. See 2/29/00 Tr. at 116-17 (Rosson). Mr. Rosson's testimony with respect to Conwood's market share growth was based on his personal knowledge of the industry and more than 45 years with Conwood, as well as Conwood's prior performance in moist snuff, and its performance in analogous smokeless markets (such as looseleaf). UST cites no case suggesting that a witness with such experience is barred from testifying about his knowledge of the industry and factors affecting sales in the industry. Indeed, the law authorizes precisely this kind of testimony.[66]

[65]In any event, UST can hardly complain when its CEO and Chairman, Mr. Gierer, repeatedly testified based on "staff" prepared charts and data regarding industry expenditures and market share. See 3/21/00 Tr. at 81-82 (testifying on charts he "asked [his] staff to prepare").

Third, UST complains that Mr. McClure should not have been permitted to testify about the effects of UST's tactics on Swedish Match. UST describes the basis for his testimony as merely "having previously worked for Swedish Match" as a Vice President. UST New Trial Mem. at 20. This is wrong. Mr. McClure served as President of Swedish Match, Manager of North America, and eventually became the Chief Operating Officer of Swedish Match worldwide. 3/13/00 Tr. at 6. Mr. McClure was deeply involved in the development and marketing of Swedish Match's moist snuff products. Id. at 16-17, 21-22, 28-29. There was a solid basis for his testimony in his knowledge and experience. UST was fully able to cross-examine Mr. McClure on his familiarity with the industry. Its decision not to do so reflects its recognition that Mr. McClure well knew what he was talking about.

UST's Chairman offered exactly the same sort of testimony defendants now claim to have been objectionable when given by Mr.

[66] See Fed. R. Evid. 701 (allowing witnesses to testify to opinions and inferences rationally based on their perception and helpful to determination of fact in issue or understanding of witness's testimony); See Lightning Lube, Inc. v. Witco Corp., 4 F.3d 1153, 1174 (3d Cir. 1993) (businessman's "experience in the quick-lube business" made him "qualified to predict how well [plaintiff] could have been expected to do"); In re Merritt Logan, Inc., 901 F.2d 349 (3d Cir. 1990) (principal shareholder's "personal knowledge of his business . . . [was] sufficient to make [this] witness eligible under Rule 701 to testify as to how lost profits could be calculated"). The Court's decision to admit Mr. Rosson's testimony on this point is unassailable.

Rosson and Mr. McClure. In fact, Mr. Gierer went beyond Mr. Rosson's description of the characteristics of different types of smokeless tobacco and opined about consumer switching behavior between cigarettes and moist snuff. He also testified about market share trends, changes in market share, projections of market share growth, and factors affecting changes in market share of moist snuff companies. He even opined as a matter of economics that it was "not feasible" to limit distribution and suppress Conwood's growth. 3/21/00 Tr. at 228. The notion that Mr. Rosson and Mr. McClure were not allowed to offer more modest testimony about matters plainly within their competence is both illogical and unsupported in law.

(c) Plaintiffs' Inquiries About the Availability of UST Witnesses Were Appropriate.

UST next complains about counsel's questions concerning the location and availability of UST witnesses.[67] But it is settled that "counsel in a civil trial may comment on the failure of a party to call an available witness whose testimony the party would naturally be expected to produce if favorable to him." Downriver Internists v. Harris Corp., 929 F.2d 1147, 1151 (6th Cir. 1991) (citation omitted). Accordingly, there can be no objection to counsel's eliciting the fact that the witnesses were, in fact, available. Not surprisingly, UST cites no case in which admission of such testimony has been held to be error.[68]

[67]Contrary to UST's suggestion in its motion, the Court did not permit Conwood to inform the jury that UST refused to make 18 critical executives available for live testimony at trial.

4. The Court's Jury Instructions Were Proper

(a) "Restrictive" Was the Correct Instruction.

UST argues that the use of the term "restrictive" instead of "predatory" was "highly significant" and requires a new trial. UST is incorrect. The term "restrictive" and other such synonyms are commonly used in the Sixth Circuit and elsewhere to describe conduct proscribed by Section 2. See, e.g, Riverview Inv., Inc. v. Ottawa Community Improvement Corp., 769 F.2d 324, 328 (6th Cir. 1985) ("Regarding Section 2 of the Sherman Act, what matters is that the freedom to compete is restrained."); Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986) (conduct that "'either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way'" violates Section 2) (quoting Aspen Skiing, 472 U.S. at 615 n.32); Continental Ore Co. v. Union Carbide and Carbon Corp., 370 U.S. at 695 (jury question whether "defendant's monopolistic and restrictive practices" harmed plaintiff).

[68]UST's chairman testified that he was angry about the deposition testimony of UST senior executives. See 3/21/00 Tr. at 91, 117-18, 120 (Gierer). He testified about the investigation he was going to do when he returned to Greenwich. See id. at 190. He testified about his plan to "have a sit-down" with the President of UST and that he "would deal" with UST's director of its largest accounts, after viewing their "astonishing" deposition testimony at trial. Id. at 118, 190. It was entirely appropriate to ask UST witnesses whether or not these same senior executives planned to appear at trial to discuss their actions. The Court properly concluded that the questions and comments in closing were appropriate: "I think [Mr. Gierer] opened that door, saying he was troubled and he was going to investigate. I think it's fair game." See 3/27/00 Tr. at 91.

Besides, UST must concede that the real question is not the particular word chosen but the substance conveyed. See, e.g., United States v. Kendrick, 853 F.2d 492, 495 (6th Cir. 1988) (defendant has "no right to select particular wording of jury instruction") (citation omitted); United States v. Baker, Nos. 84-5216, 84-5217, 84-5223, 84-5234, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 13437, at *8 (6th Cir. Dec. 20, 1984) (court has "broad discretion in wording its jury instructions" and is reversible only if the instruction is "substantively" incorrect). And UST has no objection to the substance of the Court's detailed definition of "restrictive" or "exclusionary" conduct: "conduct that has the effect of preventing or excluding competition or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market." Jury Instruction 2.4. Having made no objection to the substance of the Court's instruction at trial, it cannot seriously complain now. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51 (party cannot assign error to jury instruction absent objection at trial).

(b) The Court's Damages Instruction Was Complete and Proper.

UST's argument that the Court should have included a nominal damages instruction is without substance for a host of reasons:

First, as the Court noted at trial, there is no authority requiring a nominal damages instruction, or holding its absence error. See 3/27/00 Tr. at 69.

Second, the proposed instruction was, as the Court observed, essentially "a reargument of causation." Id.; see Jury Instruction 2.5: Injury and Causation (instructing jury that Conwood must prove "some damage flowed to it" as a result of UST's antitrust violations).

Third, UST's complaint that the jury had only Conwood's damages figure is the result solely of UST's tactical decision not to present any alternative damages figure to the jury. See Portis, 1994 WL 362110, at *2, *3 (defendant presented no alternative damages and relied solely on theory that claim was a fraud, thus jury had "no evidence of economic loss to consider except that presented by plaintiff"). UST cannot now ask the Court to protect it from its own strategy.

Finally, the jury was properly instructed -- using language proposed by UST -- that it need not find any damages. Hence, a nominal damages instruction was superfluous. Jury Instruction 4 ("amount of damages, if any"); 3/28/00 Tr. at 112 ("You should not interpret the fact that I've given instructions about Conwood's damages as an indication in any way that I believe Conwood should or should not win this claim").

IV. THERE IS NO LEGAL OR FACTUAL BASIS FOR REDUCING THE JURY'S AWARD

Controlling Sixth Circuit precedent holds that "'[a] jury verdict will not be set aside or reduced as excessive unless it is beyond the maximum damages that the jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for a party's loss.'" Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 (citations omitted). See also Jackson v. City of Cookeville, 31 F.3d 1354, 1359 (6th Cir. 1994) (ordering reinstatement of verdict at higher level because there was evidence upon which jury could have awarded maximum amount); In re Lewis, 845 F.2d 624, 635 (6th Cir. 1988) ("A motion for remittitur should only be granted if the award clearly exceeds the amount which, under the evidence in the case, was the maximum that a jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for the plaintiff's loss.") (internal quotation marks omitted); Green v. Francis, 705 F.2d 846, 850 (6th Cir. 1983) (affirming refusal to set aside or reduce verdict because it was not beyond the maximum damages supported by the evidence).

Indeed, "[a] trial court is within its discretion in remitting a verdict only when, after reviewing all evidence in the light most favorable to the awardee, it is convinced that the verdict is clearly excessive, resulted from passion, bias or prejudice; or is so excessive or inadequate as to shock the conscience of the court." Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 ("If there is

UST's various proposed recalculations do not come within miles of meeting this standard:

First, UST asks the Court (without any hint of irony) to rely on Dr. Leftwich's testimony and simply award damages at the low end of his range, rather than in the middle, as the jury did. But such an action would run foursquare into the Sixth Cicuit's holdings that remittitur of a jury award at the high end of the range supported by the evidence is a reversible abuse of discretion. See Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395; Jackson, 31 F.3d at 1359; In re Lewis, 845 F.2d at 635; Green, 705 F.2d at 850.

Second, UST asks the Court to rely on Mr. Rosson's testimony that Conwood would have grown at least 10 share points absent UST's misconduct. UST argues only that the jury should have taken into account the possibility that some of these 10 points could have come at Swedish Match's or Swisher's expense, not UST's. Of course, so long as it was UST's conduct that prevented Conwood from gaining this share, it is irrelevant where it would

---

[69]The two cases cited by UST do nothing to help its cause. Tennessee Consolidated Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers, 416 F.2d 1192, 1203 (6th Cir. 1969), does not even discuss when remittitur is appropriate and actually denies the defendant's argument that an additional reduction of a remitted award was appropriate. Parkway Garage, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, No. 90-7752, 1994 WL 412430, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 3, 1994), is similarly unhelpful. Unlike here, in Parkway there was a complete absence of any evidence that the closure of a parking garage for six weeks by the City resulted in damages beyond the date of closure.

have come from. But UST was, of course, entirely free to argue this theory to the jury. It simply made the decision not to do so. See Portis, 1994 WL 362110, at *2, *3 (defendant presented no alternative damages and thus jury had "no evidence of economic loss to consider except that presented by plaintiff"). The jury was entitled to find that Conwood's gain through unimpaired competition would have amounted to $350 million, and accordingly the verdict is not appropriately subject to reduction.[70]

Third, UST returns once again to the "retailer decides" defense. It asks the Court to assume that the jury awarded damages for certain "sophisticated" chains that made "reasoned decisions" to exclude Conwood entirely independent of influence from UST. UST then asks the Court to remit some (unspecified) amount of damages attributable to these chains. Of course, UST neglects to cite any evidentiary basis for its presumption that the jury's award included money for independent conduct.[71] UST offers the Court no basis in the evidence, or even in principle, for figuring remitted damages. And UST blithely bypasses the [70]This also impermissibly asks the Court to disregard Dr. Leftwich's study (on which UST's prior argument for remittitur expressly relies), which found damages of as much as $488 million. See Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395 (court cannot substitute its judgment if "any credible evidence" exists to support award).

[71]Moreover, the record is replete with evidence that their paradigmatical "independent" retailer, Wal-Mart, actually relied on UST to act as its category manager, that UST consciously exploited that trust to exclude Conwood and other price-value competition, that rival sales and Wal-Mart sales suffered as a result, and that UST had to resort to unprecedented "promotional" payments to make up Wal-Mart's lost profits. 3/13/00 Tr. at 264-89 (Blattberg).

fact that the Sixth Circuit has made plain that such an exercise in fantasy would constitute reversible error. Jackson, 31 F.3d at 1361 (trial court abused its discretion in remitting award when court simply presumed that the jury did not account for present value); Farber, 917 F.2d at 1395.

16diii005729

Conclusion

UST's motions for judgment as a matter of law, new trial, and remittitur should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
U.S. Tobacco did not wield monopoly power, but rather engaged in ordinary marketing practices The alleged anticompetitive activity by UST (e.g., shelf space recommendations, SOF=SOM, recommending exclusive racks, CAP) is nothing more than ordinary competitive marketing practices. (UST JMOL Mem, throughout)	"USTC's Other Alleged Misconduct Involves Ordinary Business Practices" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 25-37 (11/15/99)) (UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 2-5 (3/14/00))	"There Is Ample Evidence From Which a Jury Could Conclude That UST's 'Ordinary' Business Practices Are Exclusionary" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 53-54 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. This falls short of the proof which would be required to prevail on the § 2 claims, particularly in view of the numerous record comments from high level UST personnel which arguably show an anitcompetitive intent rather than a business justification. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
Shelf space recommendations are an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive "Whether in the context of category management or otherwise, U.S. Tobacco's attempts to influence retailer decisions about product selection and space allocations are core aspects of competition in the packaged goods industry and have been for many decades." (UST JMOL Mem at 17-19)	"USTC's Shelf Space Suggestions and Recommendations Are Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 26-27 (11/15/99))	Professor Blattberg indicated that UST abused category management to suppress competition. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 18 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
SOF=SOM is an ordinary marketing practice, and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 19-22)	"USTC's Requests That Retailers Give USTC Share Of Shelf Space Equal To Share Of 'Market' Are Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 28-30 (11/15/99))	"UST used the SOF=SOM formula not to obtain needed room for its products, but to exclude competition." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 20 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
Offering exclusive racks to retailers is an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 23-27)	"USTC Offering 'Category Management' Services Is Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 30-31 (11/15/99))	"Beginning in 1995, UST entered into agreements covering 22,000 stores that expressly excluded rival racks, products, facings, or POS." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 23 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
CAP is an ordinary marketing practice and cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 27-33)	"USTC's 'CAP' Incentive Program Is Not Exclusionary" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 32-33 (11/15/99))	"CAP paid retailers to participate in all UST new brand tests or introductions, even for its 'slow selling' product lines, thus ensuring that UST could exert pressure on the space available for rivals and their new products." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 27 (12/9/99))	UST does not argue that the restrictions on the use of Conwood racks and Conwood POS were justified by business reasons; rather, it argues that the restrictions could never constitute violations at all. U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
U.S. Tobacco's alleged tortious conduct cannot be found to be anticompetitive (UST JMOL Mem at 33-37)	"USTC's Alleged Tortious Conduct In The Field Is Not Exclusionary, And Is Neither A 'Corporate Policy' Nor 'Systematic and Routine'" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 33-37 (11/15/99)) (UST Directed Verdict Mem. at 5-6)	The evidence that UST engaged pervasively and systematically in this misconduct comes from a wealth of sources: former UST representatives, retailers, Swedish Match, and Conwood representatives. (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 11-16 (12/9/99))	"[T]he questions of whether these anticompetitive practices took place, how extensive they were, how much they were orchestrated by top management and how much by sporadic local efforts by 'rogue' sales personnel, how effective they were in restraining or eliminating competition, . . . -- all these are issues which can be resolved only by a jury." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 11)
The Court's improper focus on U.S. Tobacco's intent, rather than its exclusionary conduct (UST JMOL Mem at 10-14)	"Evidence Of Alleged 'Anticompetitive' Intent Cannot Save Conwood" (Reply Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 26-28 (12/23/99))	"[E]vidence of UST's intent may determine whether 'the challenged conduct is fairly characterized as exclusionary or anticompetitive.'" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 3 (12/9/99))	"[N]umerous record comments from high level UST personnel . . . arguably show an anticompetitive intent rather than a business justification for the exclusionary POS practices." (emphasis added) (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 8)
The moist snuff "market" was not harmed by U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct (UST JMOL Mem at 14-16, 37-41)	"Conwood Cannot Establish That USTC Has Reduced Market-Wide Competition in the Moist Snuff Industry" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 38-40 (11/15/99))	"UST's Exclusionary Conduct Harmed Conwood, Competition, and Consumers" (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 30 (12/9/99))	"Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these [is]. . .whether the effects on competition and on Conwood which plaintiff claims are the result of actions by UST at all." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 10)

U.S. TOBACCO NOW ARGUES IN ITS JMOL/NEW TRIAL MOTION	U.S. TOBACCO'S PRIOR ARGUMENT ON THE ISSUE	CONWOOD'S PRIOR RESPONSE	COURT'S PRIOR RULING ON THE ISSUE
Conwood failed to prove retailers were coerced by U.S. Tobacco (UST JMOL Mem at 14-16, 21-22, 44-46)	"The Independent Decisions Of Retailers" (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. for Summ. J. at 41-42 (11/15/99))	"In any event, whether retailers agree to exclusion is legally irrelevant: the essence of any Section 2 claim is not harm to retailers; it is harm to competition and consumers." (Pls.' Mem. in Opp. to Mot. for Summ. J. at 62 (12/9/99))	"Multiple issues concerning injury, damage, and causation remain for trial. Included in these are the. . .uncoerced decisions by retailers." (Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 10)
The Court improperly granted Conwood's motion to preclude disclosure of Pritzker family ownership of Conwood (UST Mot. for New Trial at 8-9)	Conwood has attempted to portray itself as a "victimized, small competitor" and the Pritzkers are a disinterested owner of Conwood. (UST Opp. to Conwood Mot. in Limine at 8-9)	"[I]nformation about the ultimate beneficiaries of these profits would be inflammatory and prejudicial." (Pls.' Mots. in Limine at 1 (1/28/00))	"[T]he probative nature of the inquiry is substantially outweighed by the potential prejudice to Plaintiffs, while causing no harm to Defendants' case." (Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 1)
Dr. Leftwich's damages study is "speculative" "Conwood's theory of damages in this case was the epitome of rank speculation and 'guesswork' -- all, however, stamped with the imprimatur of expert testimony.'" Dr. Leftwich's supplemental disclosure of his damages report was untimely In Dr. Leftwich's supplemental report, he used the surveys of Conwood personnel to add $250 million to his damages estimate; allowing UST to take his deposition on the "eve of trial" prejudiced defendants. (UST Mot. for New Trial at 10)	Dr. Leftwich's supplemental opinion is both a new expert opinion and untimely. (Mem. in Supp. of Defs.' Failure of Conwood to prove specific injury at store level "At a minimum, the Court should have required Conwood to prove actual fact of injury [at] a subset of stores. . . . Conwood failed to present evidence at trial of any lost sales at any retail location." (UST Mot. for New Trial at 13, 14)	Conwood should be ordered to prove "(i) that USTC engaged in some form of exclusionary behavior in every retail establishment in which Conwood was purportedly injured; and (ii) that Conwood sales were reduced by this conduct as opposed to other causes." (UST Mot. in Limine at 6 (1/28/00))	Antitrust precedent does not require specific damages; rather, "general" damages may be assessed. (Conwood Mem. in Opp. to Mot. to Require Pls. To Prove Exclusionary Conduct and Fact of Injury on a Store-by-Store Basis at 2-4 (2/11/00))	"Simply put, Plantiffs are not required to prove what damage occurred at each of the 300,000 separate retail establishments in order to prove fact of injury. Conwood made improper comments about the availability of U.S. Tobacco employee witnesses Questions and comments on the availability of U.S. Tobacco witnesses were, "irrelevant, misleading, and unfairly prejudicial." UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR PERMISSION TO CONDUCT POST-VERDICT JUROR INTERVIEWS

In its effort to prevent U.S. Tobacco from interviewing willing jurors, Conwood misstates the purpose of U.S. Tobacco's request. U.S. Tobacco seeks the Court's permission to interview one or more of jurors in order to clarify the meaning of their verdict. Clarification of a verdict is a permissible basis for post-verdict juror interviews. McCullough v. Consol. Rail Corp., 937 F.2d 1167, 1172 (6th Cir. 1991).

The McCullough court distinguished an inquiry that seeks to understand what the jury intended by its verdict from one in which the litigants inquire into the reasons behind a verdict. It approved the district court's questions to a jury panel because "[t]he judge in this case inquired only as to the intended verdict and did not elicit any testimony about the process by which the jury reached its verdict." Id. at 1170

Conwood incorrectly states in its response that U.S. Tobacco seeks to inquire into the "reasons" for the verdict. Response at 2. Conwood relies on Wilkerson v. Johnson, 699 F.2d 325, 330 (6th Cir. 1983), which prohibits inquiries into the reasons for a verdict when the movant bases the request for juror interviews on the belief that evidence supporting the verdict inquired into was insufficient. But Wilkerson affirms the trial court's discretion to allow interviews where appropriate. Here, unlike the movant in Wilkerson, U.S. Tobacco does not seek to obtain juror testimony in order to demonstrate lack of evidence to support the jury verdict. The proposed interviews are simply not designed to inquire into the "thought processes or emotional reactions of the jurors," and therefore the inquiry is permissible. McCullough, 937 F.2d at 1169, 1172. The proposed inquiry merely asks for clarification of the verdict. Id. at 1172.

In this situation, the stability and finality of the verdicts are not threatened and U.S. Tobacco's request presents no danger of harassment of the jurors as prohibited by Fed. R. Evid. 606(b); See also McCullough, 937 F.2d at 1170, 1172. Given that the stability and finality of the verdicts are not threatened by mere voluntary interviews of jurors, it is difficult to understand how the interviews can unfairly prejudice Conwood.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that this Court permit post-verdict interviews of jurors willing to be interviewed.

Respectfully submitted,

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR ATTORNEY FEES AND COSTS

In seeking compensation for "the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee," 15 U.S.C. § 15(a), Conwood has deliberately chosen not to support its request with the detailed submission required by the case law. Consequently, U.S. Tobacco has had no effective opportunity to examine and challenge the request, and the Court does not have before it a record upon which it can discharge its duty to determine the reasonableness of the request. On the present record, neither form of scrutiny is reasonably possible. Accordingly, the Court is under no obligation even to consider Conwood's request and should, in fact, deny it outright.

Alternatively, if the Court chooses to examine Conwood's bare-bones request, it should deny it because it is unreasonable on its face. Even without the required detailed documentation, U.S. Tobacco will demonstrate in this memorandum the patent unreasonableness of Conwood's request. One example, which should lead to the closest scrutiny of the entire request and all backup material in detail, is Conwood's attempt to recover its expert witness fees in this antitrust case, a notion rejected by the United States Supreme Court ten years ago.

If, despite Conwood's efforts to avoid the requisite scrutiny of its request, the Court decides to seek from Conwood the necessary detail that it should already have produced, this should not delay the consideration of U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions. The appropriate procedure would be to defer a determination of the specific amount of any award until after the Court has ruled on U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions and until after the conclusion of any subsequent appeal and further proceedings. This is particularly appropriate in light of the following:

1. Conwood has indicated it intends to claim costs and fees through the end of the proceeding such that a final determination of the award cannot be determined at this time;
2. subsequent proceedings may obviate Conwood's entitlement to any award of costs and fees;
3. Conwood has delayed effective scrutiny of its request; and
4. taking the time to consider a fully supported request on Conwood's schedule would delay the ultimate resolution of issues on appeal.

ARGUMENT

Section 4 of the Clayton Act provides that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor . . . and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).

A. THE COURT SHOULD DENY CONWOOD'S REQUEST FOR ATTORNEY FEES AND COSTS BECAUSE OF CONWOOD'S FAILURE TO SUPPORT AND PROVE ITS CLAIM.

In determining a reasonable attorney fee, the Court is to use the "lodestar" approach to calculate "'the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate.'" Wayne v. Village of Sebring, 36 F.3d 517, 531 (6th Cir. 1994) (quoting Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 429 (1983)). Under this approach, the Court should "exclude excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary hours." Id. (citing Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434)[1]

A party seeking an award of fees "bears the burden of establishing entitlement to an award and documenting the appropriate hours expended and hourly rates." Hensley, 461 U.S. at 437. Applications for attorney fees must specify, for each attorney, the date, the hours expended, and the nature of the work done. Cruz v. Local Union No. 3 of the Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 34 F.3d 1148 (2d Cir. 1994). The Sixth Circuit has been very explicit on this point, stating that "[n]ot only must attorneys exclude unnecessary hours from their bill, they must also maintain billing time records that are sufficiently detailed to enable the courts to review the reasonableness of the hours expended." Wooldridge v. Marlene Indus. Corp., 898 F.2d 1169, 1177 (6th Cir. 1990). Otherwise, "it is impossible to tell what portion of the claimed hours were 'excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary. . . .'" Id. at 1177 (quoting Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434.)

Similarly, a party seeking an award of costs must document its expenses in detail, not merely by category, to allow a full examination and determination that such expenditures were necessary and reasonable. Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 953, 960-61 (N.D. Ohio 1988); Apple Corps Ltd. v. Int'l Collectors Soc'y, 25 F. Supp. 2d 480, 497 (D.N.J. 1998).

In flagrant disregard of these strict requirements, Conwood offers absolutely no proof in support of its claimed fees and costs that would enable the Court to determine a reasonable award. Instead, Conwood purports to justify its request for over $19 million in attorney fees and costs

---

[1] The principles governing an award of attorney fees and costs pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988 apply to fee determinations in other types of equally complex litigation, including antitrust cases. See Northcross v. Bd. of Educ., 611 F.2d 624, 633 (6th Cir. 1979).

16diii005752

(which, it claims, are still accruing) with the self-serving declarations of three of its own trial attorneys and its general counsel and a one-page summary of costs and expenses (which is practically illegible). Conwood offers absolutely no itemized billing statements or detailed cost information to support the specific attorney fees and costs claimed. The Court should deny Conwood's request on this basis alone.

Rather than providing the information and addressing the reasonableness of its request as required by the case law, Conwood (a) cites irrelevant common-fund, class action cases (that involve a different reasonableness standard inapplicable here); (b) emphasizes the jury award of $350 million and the trebled amount of $1.05 billion; and (c) asserts that this result could warrant a higher fee recovery than the multi-million dollar amount requested. (Conwood Mem. p. 2) Conwood's attempt to focus the Court's attention on the trebled damage award, which is exorbitant by any standard, is an obvious and inappropriate attempt to sidestep the real standards governing its request for over $19 million in fees and costs.

In Transworld Airlines, Inc. v. Hughes, 312 F. Supp. 478 (D.C.N.Y. 1970), aff'd as modified on other grounds, 449 F.2d 51 (2d Cir. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 409 U.S. 463 (1973), the court stated that an award of attorney fees under Section 4 of the Clayton Act based on a percentage of the recovery is not a satisfactory test of whether the requested fee is adequate because a percentage fee gives undue weight to the size of the recovery. In cases with small recoveries, it ignores the professional skill and the complexity of the work involved, and could result in an insufficient award. Conversely, where the recovery is extraordinarily high, as here, it could result in an excessive award. Id. at 484.

In addition to its improper attempt to misdirect the Court's attention to the size of the judgment, Conwood has submitted a request for fees and costs that the Court simply cannot properly consider because it does not include the detailed documentation required by the Supreme Court, Hensley, 461 U.S. at 437; the Sixth Circuit, Wooldridge, 898 F.2d at 1177, and trial courts, e.g., Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. at 960-61; Apple Corps, 25 F. Supp. 2d at 497. "[T]he documentation [in support of a request for attorney fees and costs] must be sufficient for the court to verify that the applicant has met its burden. 'In determining the amount of an attorney fee award, courts customarily require the applicant to produce contemporaneous billing records or other sufficient documentation so that the district court can fulfill its duty to examine the application for noncompensable hours.'" Louisiana Power & Light Co. v. Kellstrom, 50 F.3d 319, 324 (5th Cir. 1995) (internal citation omitted); see Bode v. United States, 919 F.2d 1044, 1047 (5th Cir. 1990) ("[T]he party seeking reimbursement of attorneys' fees . . . has the burden of establishing the number of attorney hours expended, and can meet that burden only by presenting evidence that is adequate for the court to determine what hours should be included in the reimbursement.")

Conwood has not submitted a single billing record or a single detail of its costs in support of its request. Furthermore, while each of its three law firms has disclosed a total of hours that were allegedly expended and ranges of hourly rates for partners, associates, legal assistants and the like (one firm even talked about a "blended rate"), there is no indication of what any individual lawyer charged for his or her time. Nor does the request include detailed descriptions of the work done or of costs beyond broad categories – descriptions necessary to allow a review and analysis by U.S. Tobacco and the Court. Among other things, neither the Court nor U.S. Tobacco can tell whether and to what extent Conwood is seeking to recover fees or costs associated with its abandoned state law or Lanham Act claims.

Further, this Court could not possibly fulfill its duty to determine a reasonable award based on Conwood's skeletal submission, which is completely lacking in detailed support and documentation. The district court "is not only required to determine whether the total hours claimed are reasonable, but also whether particular hours claimed were reasonably expended." Louisiana Power & Light, 50 F.3d at 324 (emphasis supplied). Any award to Conwood in the absence of the required documentation would be clear error. Id. at 323 (district court's determination of reasonable hours and reasonable rates are determination of fact reviewed for clear error).

Conwood's remark, buried in a footnote, that, "[if] the Court wishes, Conwood will provide the Court, in camera, with the billing and expense records that underlie [its] calculations," does not cure or even begin to ameliorate the deficiency of Conwood's proof. Even assuming that documentation of Conwood's requested fees and costs exists and is provided to the Court, U.S. Tobacco must have an opportunity to raise objections to the specific fees and costs claimed. See Wooldridge, 898 F.2d at 1176. The Sixth Circuit has recognized this right, which is necessary to the Court's proper determination of any fee and costs award. "Where a party raises specific objections to a fee award, a district court should state why it is rejecting them. . . . Ideally, a party should raise objections with specificity, pointing out particular items, rather than making generalized objections to the reasonableness of the bill as a whole." Id. at 20; at n.14. Without the detailed documentation, U.S. Tobacco cannot raise specific objections to particular items as required.

Conwood's unsupported fee request is an obvious attempt to prevent U.S. Tobacco from evaluating and objecting to the request as it is rightfully allowed to do. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C) ("On request of a party or class member, the court shall afford an opportunity for adversary submissions with respect to the motion [for attorneys' fees and related nontaxable expenses]"). Rule 54(d)(2)(C) "assures the parties of an opportunity to make an appropriate presentation with respect to issues involving the evaluation of legal services. . . . The court may determine that discovery under Rules 26 through 37 would be useful to the parties." Fed. R. Civ.

P. 54(d)(2)(C) advisory committee note. See also Nat'l Ass'n of Concerned Veterans v. Secretary of Defense, 675 F.2d 1319 (D.D.C. 1982) (party opposing fee request is entitled to the information it requires to appraise the reasonableness of the fee requested and in order that it may present any legitimate challenges to the application of the district court); Copper Liquor, Inc. v. Adolph Coors Co., 684 F.2d 1087 (5th Cir. 1982) (if reasonableness of the hours claimed in fee request becomes an issue, applicant should voluntarily make his time charges available for inspection by the court and opposing counsel), overruled sub nom. on other grounds Int'l Woodworkers of Am. v. Champion Int'l Corp., 790 F.2d 1174 (5th Cir. 1986) and J.T. Gibbons, Inc. v. Crawford Fitting Co., 790 F.2d 1193 (5th Cir. 1986).

Conwood's arrogant disregard of controlling case law and normal practice and its deliberate attempts to circumvent the rights of U.S. Tobacco and the duties of this Court, should not be tolerated, much less rewarded. Accordingly, the Court should deny Conwood's request for an award of attorney fees and costs based on its complete lack of appropriate proof, including supporting documentation.

B. THE COURT SHOULD DENY CONWOOD'S REQUEST FOR FEES AND COSTS BECAUSE IT IS UNREASONABLE ON ITS FACE.

The Sixth Circuit has made it clear that attorney fee claims that appear unreasonable on their face are to be denied. Wooldridge, 898 F.2d at 1176-77; see also Sun Publ'g Co. v. Mecklenburg News, Inc., 823 F.2d 818 (4th Cir. 1987) (affirming the district court's outright denial of plaintiff's antitrust attorney fee petition on grounds that the petition was so unreasonable and exorbitant that it shocked the conscience of the court); Johnson v. State, No. C.A. 98-266T, 2000 WL 303305 (D.R.I. March 22, 2000) (holding that total disallowance of a fee petition may be justified when the application is grossly and intolerably exaggerated, or manifestly filed in bad faith). As discussed below, it can be determined, even from its bare-bones request, that Conwood obviously is requesting fees and costs that are unreasonable.

1. Conwood's Request for Attorney Fees Is Unreasonable on its Face Both as to Hourly Rates and Number of Hours

The Sixth Circuit has explained that, in determining an award of attorney fees, the primary concern is that the fees awarded be "reasonable." Reed v. Rhodes, 179 F.3d 453, 471 (6th Cir. 1999). The Sixth Circuit defines a "reasonable fee" as "one that 'is adequate to attract competent counsel, but . . . [does] not produce windfalls to attorneys.'" Id. (quoting Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 887 (1984)).

The Sixth Circuit has specified that statutorily-mandated attorney fees provisions do not guarantee plaintiffs the best counsel in the country, only counsel that is competent. Consequently, in assessing a reasonable attorney fee award, the hourly rate used in the lodestar formula "should not exceed what is necessary to encourage competent lawyers within the relevant community to undertake legal representation." Hadix v. Johnson, 65 F.3d 532, 535-36 (6th Cir. 1995); Reed, 179 F.3d at 471. This same principle applies regardless of whether a renowned or out-of-town attorney has been retained in the case, unless the fee petitioner can prove that competent counsel was not locally available at a lower charge or rate. Id.; See also Coulter v. Tennessee, 805 F.2d 146, 149-50 (6th Cir. 1986) (affirming district court's reduction of higher attorney rate to lower local prevailing rate); Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. at 958-59 (applying lower local rate where prevailing antitrust plaintiff failed to show it had contacted all qualified local firms to determine whether conflicts existed before hiring more expensive Cleveland firm); Apple Corps, 25 F. Supp. 2d at 493-96 (finding that relevant market is the community where the case was litigated and accordingly reducing out-of-town attorney rates); Westenfelder v. Ferguson, No. CA 97-478L, 2000 WL 303301 (D.R.I. Feb. 17, 2000) (reducing out-of-town hourly rate to local prevailing rate).

Before this case began, Conwood was already represented by counsel competent and available to represent it in this case in this District; yet Conwood took another, more expensive, course for which U.S. Tobacco should not have to pay. For years, the widely known and well-respected, multi-state law firm of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs (and its predecessor in Memphis) ("Wyatt") has been Conwood's regular outside counsel. Conwood is based in Memphis, and lawyers in Wyatt's Memphis office regularly work for Conwood and, thus, should be familiar with Conwood's business and the industry in which it participates. Wyatt's principal office is in Louisville, Kentucky, and its attorneys regularly practice in this District. As explained on its web site found at www.wyattfirm.com, Wyatt offers clients "resources and experiences equal to those found in the nation's largest firms" and has "a comprehensive practice which includes all aspects of business and litigation matters including . . . Antitrust." (See Ex. A)

Indeed, it is beyond dispute that the Wyatt firm is quite competent in handling the litigation of antitrust matters at both the trial and appellate level. See, e.g., Tarrant Serv. Agency, Inc. v. Am. Standard, Inc., 12 F.3d 609 (6th Cir. 1993) (where Wyatt and co-counsel were successful in securing affirmance of judgment notwithstanding the verdict for its client, defendant/appellant in Sherman Act § 2 monopoly case.) In fact, of the three law firms ultimately retained by Conwood to handle this case, the Wyatt firm, which traces its roots back to the 1800s (even before the enactment in 1890 of the Sherman Act), seems to have the most antitrust litigation experience. The co-chair of Wyatt's group of more than fifty commercial litigators is Memphis-based J. Richard Buchignani, whose practice includes antitrust litigation. Similarly, Robert E. Craddock, who took and defended depositions in this case, is a Memphis commercial litigation partner in the Wyatt firm who lists antitrust as his first area of emphasis in the firm web site. John S. Wilson, III, who worked on the case, is also in Wyatt's Memphis office and has a practice emphasis in antitrust. Wyatt has a number of other commercial litigators who have worked in antitrust litigation. In comparison, Kellogg Huber was not even in existence until the spring of 1993, and none of its attorneys graduated from law school before 1982.

The Wyatt firm, which not only is familiar with Conwood's business from having been its regular counsel, but also has antitrust expertise, charges associate rates between $90 and $160 and partner rates between $135 and $300. This can be compared with Kellogg Huber's substantially higher rates of $205 to $250 for associates and $275 to $495 for partners.

Nevertheless, for some reason known only to them, Conwood, or its owners in the Pritzker Organization, passed over Conwood's regular law firm and decided to retain Kellogg Huber as lead counsel in this case. As a result of this decision, Conwood not only had to familiarize Kellogg Huber with its business but also needed to retain local counsel. Neither of these things would have been necessary had Wyatt been handling the case. Once again, however, Conwood or its Pritzker owners passed over Wyatt as potential local counsel and decided to retain Whitlow Roberts as local counsel in the Western District. Even so, for reasons of their own, Conwood or its Pritzker owners still decided to use the services of the Wyatt firm in ways not disclosed in Conwood's fee request, but known to have included taking and defending depositions. In addition, at least one Wyatt attorney was present during all or part of the trial.

In light of these facts and the controlling law, it is patently unreasonable for Conwood to request that it be compensated, at Washington, D.C. rates of up to $495 per hour, for 106,107 hours of "Professional Fees" charged by Kellogg Huber, as well as expenses for travel between the District of Columbia and both Conwood's Memphis headquarters and the Kentucky forum chosen by Conwood. (See Hansen Decl. ¶¶ 5-7). In essence, Conwood is asking this Court for a "windfall" in many ways. See Reed, 179 F.3d at 471. Indeed, the convoluted counsel arrangement that Conwood or its Pritzker owners ultimately constructed for this case, and for which Conwood is now claiming fees and costs, included such wasteful practices as bringing Conwood executives from Memphis to Washington, D.C. for their depositions, in which they were represented by Wyatt lawyers also flown from Memphis to Washington for that purpose.

Conwood has offered no proof, and there is none, that it was necessary to use three different law firms and twenty-five different attorneys in this case. More specifically, Conwood has failed to offer any explanation as to why it was necessary, much less justified under the Sixth Circuit standards applicable to fee requests, to use Kellogg Huber with its much higher hourly rates instead of Conwood's regular counsel, Wyatt, or any other qualified, competent, nonconflicted firm in the region. In the absence of some believable proof by Conwood that neither Wyatt, its knowledgeable, qualified and competent regular counsel, nor any other nonconflicted law firm in this region, could have competently handled a case such as this in the Western District of Kentucky, a forum chosen by Conwood, the record made by Conwood supports hourly rates no higher than those Wyatt rates disclosed in the declaration of Mr. Craddock.

Equally important, Conwood has failed to meet its burden of proving that the requested attorney and paralegal rates of any of its three firms are in line with those prevailing in the community for similar services by attorneys and paralegals of reasonably comparable skill, experience, and reputation. The Supreme Court has expressly noted that a petitioner must submit evidence "in addition to [its] attorney's own affidavits" regarding its requested rates. See Blum, 465 U.S. at 895 n.11; see also Fauri v. Exec. Branch Ethics Comm'n, 20 F. Supp. 2d 1071, 1074 n.1 (E.D. Ky. 1997), aff'd, 162 F.3d 1161 (6th Cir. 1998). Conwood has simply failed to meet this standard. Conwood has not submitted any evidence besides that of its own attorney declarations regarding the alleged reasonableness of any of its attorneys or paralegals requested rates, and certainly not those of Kellogg Huber.

Thus, in order to calculate a reasonable fee, the Wyatt firm's rates (assuming they are reasonable) would have to be applied to the Kellogg firm's reasonable hours. But both the Kellogg firm's reported 106,000 hours and Conwood's overall request for fees relating to approximately 110,000 hours (or about fifty-five 2,000-hour work years) are staggering given that this case lasted less than two years and Conwood is also claiming costs or fees for temporary service workers. Obviously, neither the Court nor U.S. Tobacco can begin to address the reasonableness of these 110,000 hours, nor can they mechanically apply Wyatt rates to specific Kellogg time, without detailed billing records from all three firms. Nor can U.S. Tobacco and the Court begin to address the quantification of the reduction of travel costs claimed by the Kellogg firm that will be appropriate for the same reason. Nor, with Wyatt, a Louisville-based law firm, in the case, would Conwood have needed to hire the Whitlow Roberts firm as local counsel, nor would Kellogg Huber have had to learn Conwood's business from scratch. These two sources of duplication of fees and expenses would have been avoided had Conwood, or the Pritzkers, chosen Wyatt in the first place instead of using it only in a limited fashion in the case.

In the end, Conwood has completely failed to meet the requisite standard for justifying any of its requested attorney and paralegal rates as well the requisite standard for using out-of-town counsel when competent local counsel was readily available at a lower charge. Moreover, Conwood has failed to give the Court a basis to determine the reasonableness of the number of hours of work for which it requests fees. Conwood's fee request is, therefore, unreasonable on its face and should be denied.

2. Conwood's Request for Numerous Expenses Is Also Unreasonable on its Face.

In Northcross v. Bd. of Educ., 611 F.2d 624 (6th Cir. 1979), the Sixth Circuit held that certain out-of-pocket expenses such as reasonable photocopying, paralegal expenses, travel, and telephone costs are recoverable as part of a "reasonable attorney fee." Other out-of-pocket expenses like docket fees, investigation expenses, deposition expenses, witness expenses, and charts and maps may also be recovered, although "on a different footing" under 28 U.S.C. § 1920. Id. at 639.

Applying the principles set forth in Northcross to a Section 4 Clayton Act case, the court in Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 953 (N.D. Oh. 1988), held that out-of-pocket costs such as telephone charges, court cost, trial transcripts, and photocoying costs, if reasonable, are recoverable. Postage, supplies, and computer research such as LEXIS and WESTLAW, however, are not. Id. at 959-61. Moreover, absent a showing from the plaintiff that the depositions were reasonably necessary to the case even though they were not used as evidence at trial, the costs related to those depositions are not recoverable. Id. at 961. Likewise, claimed expert costs are strictly limited to the witness fee, travel and subsistence allowance set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 1821. Id. at 961-62.

More recently, the Supreme Court has made it clear that, absent specific statutory language, expert witness fees are not to be considered as part of an attorney fee, "but as a distinct category of litigation expense." West Va. Univ. Hosp., Inc. v. Casey, 499 U.S. 83, 92 (1991). In reaching this decision under a civil rights attorney fee statute (which at that time did not make reference to expert fees), the Supreme Court specifically noted that the fee-shifting provision of the Clayton Act does not permit a court to shift expert witness fees to a losing party. Id. at 94 (recognizing, among other cases, Sixth Circuit case law holding the same in Ott v. Speedwriting Publ'g Co., 518 F.2d 1143, 1148-49 (6th Cir. 1975)). Instead, recoverable expert witness fees in antitrust cases are "costs" and are strictly limited to the statutory $40 per day witness fee plus the travel expense and subsistence allowance for all witnesses provided in 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and made recoverable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 445 (1987). See also Data Gen. Corp. v. Grumman Sys. Support Corp., 825 F. Supp. 361, 366-67 (D.C. Mass. 1993), aff'd, 36 F.3d 1147 (1st Cir. 1994) (same in copyright case), and Bonilla v. Trebol Motors Corp., No. 92-1795 (JP), 1997 WL 178861 (D.C. Puerto Rico March 27, 1997), rev'd and vac'd in part on other grounds, 150 F.3d 88 (1st Cir. 1998) (applying Casey and Crawford Fitting principles in RICO case with fee-shifting statute worded like antitrust statute).

Similar to its request for attorney fees, in this case Conwood has asked this Court to award it an unauthorized "windfall" with respect to its claimed out-of-pocket expenses. Aside from the obvious fact that neither U.S. Tobacco nor this Court can even begin to assess the reasonableness of any of Conwood's expenses due to the lack of adequate documentation, Conwood expects U.S. Tobacco and this Court to magically understand what is included in its "Reproduction" and "Miscellaneous" costs claims. In addition, Conwood expects to be compensated for expenses such as postage, office supplies, software license, electronic research, and document scanning and production which are clearly unrecoverable "costs of suit." See Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. at 959-62. Conwood also expects to receive costs related to the taking of dozens of depositions in this case without offering even a shred of evidence showing that such depositions were necessary even though they were not used at trial. Conwood also wants this Court to believe that in addition to all of the manpower from three different law firms, including twenty five different attorneys, numerous paralegals and other support staff, it was somehow necessary for Conwood to employ a temporary agency at a cost of $392,834.48 to perform unspecified work on this case and that U.S. Tobacco should pay for it.

By far the most egregious example of overreaching on costs, whether by dollar amount or disregard of controlling case law, is Conwood's request for over $2 million in unspecified and unrecoverable "Consultant and Expert Fees" which clearly includes expert witness fees disallowed by the Supreme Court as either attorney fees or costs in Casey and Crawford Fitting. The inclusion of such a request would cast doubt on the entirety of an otherwise well-supported fee and costs request; here it shows exactly why the entire unsupported request is without credibility.

These are but a few examples clearly discernable from Conwood's bare-bones filing that show the unreasonableness of its overall request to recover its "costs of suit." Conwood's request for costs should be denied as unreasonable in its entirety or Conwood should be required to submit a complete justification for U.S. Tobacco's review and comment and the Court's subsequent examination.

C. AT THE VERY LEAST, ANY DETERMINATION REGARDING THE AMOUNT OF FEES TO BE AWARDED SHOULD BE DEFERRED OR STAYED PENDING THE OUTCOME OF U.S. TOBACCO'S POST-TRIAL MOTIONS AND APPEAL, IF ANY.

As discussed in the preceding sections of this memorandum, the Court has ample basis to deny Conwood's request for an award of fees and expenses – both because Conwood's request is totally lacking in proper documentation and other support, and, independently, because the skeletal information provided demonstrates that Conwood's request is unreasonable on its face. Nevertheless, should the Court be inclined for any reason not to deny Conwood's request on either of these bases, a determination of the amount of fees certainly cannot be made at this time and should be deferred or stayed pending the outcome of U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions and any appeal.

A judgment on the merits is final for purposes of appeal even though the amount of fees has not yet been determined. The Sixth Circuit will consolidate an appeal on the merits with an appeal on the determination of liability for fees, and has jurisdiction to decide both the merits issue and the liability for fees, even though the amount of fees has not yet been determined. Loudermill v. Cleveland Bd. of Educ., 844 F.2d 304, 308 (6th Cir. 1988); Morgan v. Union Metal Mfg., 757 F.2d 792, 795 (6th Cir. 1985).

In this case, there are multiple reasons for deferring any determination of the amount of fees and costs to be awarded to Conwood. First, the necessary proof is not before the Court. As discussed in preceding sections of this brief, Conwood failed to provide the required documentation and other support for the attorney fees and costs claimed. Even assuming that such information exists and is provided both to the Court and to U.S. Tobacco, U.S. Tobacco must then be allowed a fair opportunity to raise objections to the specific amounts claimed. See Wooldridge, 898 F.2d at 1169; Nat'l Assoc. of Concerned Veterans, 675 F.2d at 1319. Then, in all likelihood, discovery will be necessary to allow U.S. Tobacco, as well as the Court, to fully understand and assess the reasonableness (or lack thereof) of the requested attorney fees and costs. U.S. Tobacco would likely request an evidentiary hearing on this matter pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C). Rule 54(d)(2)(C) "assures the parties of an opportunity to make an appropriate presentation with respect to issues involving the evaluation of legal services; . . . the court may determine that discovery under Rules 26-37 would be useful to the parties." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C) Advisory Committee Note. See also O'Bryan v. County of Saginaw, 722 F.2d 313, 314 (6th Cir. 1983) (stating that the district court is required, if necessary, to conduct an evidentiary hearing to inform itself of the facts on the question of attorney fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988).

Second, at this point, the Court is not in a position to determine the specific fees and costs which Conwood may be entitled to recover, even assuming that adequate documentation does exist and is later provided. Now pending before the Court are U.S. Tobacco's motions for judgment as a matter of law, or in the alternative, for a new trial, or, in the alternative, for a reduced damages award. Conwood takes the position it will be seeking additional fees and expenses after resolution of these motions and again after appeal. Yet, these motions raise serious legal issues for the trial court to consider and resolve before any review of this case on appeal, and the outcome of these motions may be that Conwood is entitled to no merits relief and thus not entitled to attorney fees pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act. Similarly, the appeal process could lead to Conwood's not being entitled to an award of fees and costs at all.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should deny or defer Conwood's request for determination of an amount of fees and costs. To the extent the Court is considering any other course of action, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests a conference with the Court to schedule Conwood's disclosure of complete, detailed fee and costs records and to schedule such further proceedings, including discovery and a hearing, as may be necessary to make a proper record upon which the Court can resolve these disputed issues.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' REQUEST FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Having persuaded the jury that the demands, wishes and preferences of retail customers can be ignored in this case, Plaintiffs Conwood Company, L.P. and Conwood Sales Company, L.P. ("Conwood") now continues that ruse in seeking what it grossly mischaracterizes as "narrowly tailored" permanent injunctive relief. (Pl. Mem. at 5) Conwood's request for injunctive relief creates an imaginary marketplace in which moist snuff manufacturers must "compete": (1) without making suggestions and recommendations on product assortment, including, as Mr. Price of Swedish Match testified, suggesting which slow-moving products of competitors "don't deserve to be on the shelf," see Tr. 3/7 at 286-87; (2) without offering plan-o-gram and category management services to retailers; (3) without designing innovative racks, including racks for those retailers that desire one uniform rack to house all moist snuff products; (4) without offering standard incentive programs to retailers in exchange for the retailer providing movement figures, trying new products, participating in promotions and giving the manufacturer preferential vendor placement; and (5) without offering the manpower to execute programs and store resets out in the field. Under Conwood's sweeping proposed permanent injunction, this Court would put an end to these and other competitive practices "once and for all" – but only from U.S. Tobacco Company, et al. ("U.S. Tobacco").

The proposed order also would have Conwood and its lawyers essentially exercise veto power over thousands of retailers across the country by requiring Conwood's written approval – "not to be unreasonably withheld" – before a retailer could ask U.S. Tobacco to undertake a common, ordinary reset of the category. Conwood's approval would be required before U.S. Tobacco, with retailer authorization, could simply remove a piece of Conwood P.O.S., not authorized by a retailer, from a U.S. Tobacco rack. Conwood's approval would be required if a retailer accepted a new U.S. Tobacco product and chose to replace a Conwood product, even if the retailer sold one can of that Conwood product per week. The list goes on. Apparently, Conwood's working premise is that if it cannot succeed in the marketplace by satisfying the demands of retailers, maybe the Court will give Conwood both the power to prevent U.S. Tobacco from doing so, and the power to dictate how and when retailers can operate their stores.

Indeed, in the imaginary marketplace that Conwood proposes, retailers would become "persons" who would be in contempt of court if they act "in concert" with U.S. Tobacco, or "persons" who are precluded from receiving any input or programs from U.S. Tobacco that may "adversely affect the placement or selection of any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, counter displays or other [P.O.S.] such as 'header cards.'" (Proposed Order at 1-2) The proposed injunction thus would set the moist snuff category apart as a unique section of the store in which retailers cannot seek the type of standard input and collaboration that they desire and demand from manufacturers.[1] Conwood's claim that the purpose of the proposed injunction is the "restoration" of "full and unfettered competition" (see Pl. Mem. at 9) is as ludicrous as it is anticompetitive.

Conwood's use of the judicial process to seek refuge from the rigors of competition and to restrict its own retail customers should offend this Court as much as it offends the underlying policies of the antitrust laws, which are to protect competition, not competitors. And at this point in the proceedings, the Court is not dealing with abstract antitrust principles or discrete portions of the record. On the contrary, there now is a full trial record in this case that establishes, without dispute, the nature and scope of competition that retailers desire and expect from all moist snuff suppliers, including what U.S. Tobacco and other moist snuff manufacturers do to participate fully in that competition and what Conwood does not do. Conwood, however, obviously views the jury verdict, together with Section 16 of the Clayton Act, as an opportunity to ask this Court to prevent U.S. Tobacco from employing the competitive tools and programs that retailers have demanded for years, and that Conwood is now scrambling to develop. Indeed, had Conwood taken a fraction of the nearly $20 million it claims to have spent in bringing this case and reinvested that money in the products, racks and programs that retailers desire, it may have fared much better in the marketplace during the 1990s. Instead, the Pritzker Organization obviously prefers the venture-capital-like opportunities of treble damage cases to the rigors of competition.

[1] In fact, since the jury's verdict, U.S. Tobacco has received complaints from retailers that the Conwood sales force is actively using the jury verdict itself to try to force and coerce retailers to accept Conwood racks, products or P.O.S. that the retailers do not want. Should the Court desire, U.S. Tobacco will ask these retailers to sign affidavits regarding Conwood's conduct, but at a minimum we believe the Court should be made aware of Conwood's actions.

Of course, to the extent the Court grants either U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law or a new trial – as it should – Conwood's request for injunctive relief will be moot. Whatever that outcome, this Court should not allow itself to be used by Conwood as an anticompetitive tool to redefine the competitive process among retailers and moist snuff manufacturers, and to prevent U.S. Tobacco from engaging in basic competitive practices available to all competitors in all packaged-goods categories of the retail industry. Indeed, as described below, well-established law under Section 16 of the Clayton Act mandates the complete rejection of Conwood's requested relief for numerous reasons.

First, as a threshold matter, Conwood cannot establish the requisite irreparable harm or inadequate remedy at law to justify permanent injunctive relief; its moist snuff business continues to be highly profitable, and it may seek damages at a future date if U.S. Tobacco continues to engage in conduct, if any, that is ultimately found to violate Section 2.

Second, a more vague and sweeping permanent injunction could hardly have been imagined by Conwood; no person could say in advance precisely what conduct is or is not allowed under the proposed Order, including something as procompetitive as offering new moist snuff brands to retailers. Conwood's proposed injunction thus violates the basic standards of precision required for any injunction under Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(d), including a request for permanent injunctive relief under Section 16 of the Clayton Act.

Third, if read literally, the proposed injunction would essentially stop U.S. Tobacco from competing by subjecting retailers and U.S. Tobacco's entire marketing and sales operations to Conwood's written approval to conduct day-to-day business. Requiring U.S. Tobacco to not seek to "influence" retailer decisions regarding product, rack and P.O.S. selection that may "adversely affect" Conwood and other competitors means nothing less than requiring U.S. Tobacco to stop competing. Under well-established case law, however, such an injunction would improperly (i) prohibit procompetitive conduct by U.S. Tobacco that was not even claimed to be "exclusionary" at trial, (ii) prohibit conduct that cannot be exclusionary as a matter of law, and is in fact procompetitive on this trial record, and (iii) bind non-party retailers to this sweeping injunction. Indeed, in rolling up all of U.S. Tobacco's conduct that affects Conwood -- procompetitive or not -- into one "ball of wax" for purposes of the proposed injunction, it is clear that Conwood's counsel, like Dr. Leftwich, has totally ignored the critical concept of disaggregation of lawful and unlawful conduct in antitrust cases. See Tr. 3/8 at 78-79.

Fourth, Conwood's proposed injunction completely ignores the fundamental principle that only the exclusionary aspects of any particular "agreement" or program may be enjoined. This is particularly true where the agreements or programs in question are not "naked" restraints, but rather legitimate practices desired by the customers in the marketplace. It is no answer to treat all U.S. Tobacco "agreements" or programs as if they are per se Section 1 violations, as Conwood attempts to do. Instead, even the cases cited by Conwood confirm that any "exclusive" agreements desired by retail customers – if they even exist based on the evidence or can be anticompetitive as a matter of law – should simply be made non-exclusive or shortened in duration in accordance with well-established Section 2 case law. Thus, for example, to the extent the Court decides that a reasonable jury could have found that U.S. Tobacco had rack "agreements," or incentive programs with exclusionary provisions, the appropriate relief would be to purge only those provisions – i.e., provisions, if any, that have foreclosed other manufacturers from participating in the competitive process.

Fifth, the proposed injunction in no way lends itself, as it must, to effective and efficient judicial administration. On the contrary, the proposed injunction would result in ongoing disputes concerning the "reasonableness" of Conwood's veto power over the day-to-day conduct of U.S. Tobacco and retailers in the field as well as disputes concerning Conwood's quasi-regulatory role in "monitoring" U.S. Tobacco's "influence" over retailer decisions. The Court, of course, would then have to micromanage these inevitable disputes.[2] Further, the judicial quagmire invited by Conwood would only be exacerbated by requiring U.S. Tobacco to set up a Board of Directors "Compliance Committee" to ensure that U.S. Tobacco employees are properly trained to stop competing against Conwood, that U.S. Tobacco periodically submits written compliance reports to Conwood and the Court, and that Conwood's counsel be permitted to rummage through U.S. Tobacco's business documents at its leisure. On its face, that proposal is grossly intrusive on U.S. Tobacco's business, is highly inefficient as a matter of judicial oversight and, in fact, would have Conwood's lawyers function in a regulatory capacity that would make the Federal Trade Commission envious – and all for the purpose of reducing competition in the marketplace. In short, the proposal is as baseless in law as it is overreaching in scope.

Finally, should the Court grant any injunctive relief in this case, U.S. Tobacco would seek a stay of that relief, first in this Court and, if necessary, in the Sixth Circuit. Accordingly, U.S.

---

[2] Ironically, in Conwood's opposition to U.S. Tobacco's motion to reduce the bond for any appeal, Conwood highlights the need to avoid embroiling the Court in the micromanagement of U.S. Tobacco's day-to-day business activities. See Pl. Opp.(Bond) at 11. Reducing the bond would not require that type of Court supervision; Conwood's proposed injunction no doubt would.

16diii005780

Tobacco requests that, with the entry of any injunctive relief, the Court simultaneously enter an order temporarily staying the injunction for a minimum of thirty (30) business days.[3]

For all of these reasons, Conwood's proposed injunctive relief should be seen for what it is: a stark concession that Conwood's case is and always has been premised on the erroneous theory that anything U.S. Tobacco does to compete for the retailers' business is "exclusionary" if it adversely effects Conwood, and that Conwood is somehow entitled under the antitrust laws to place whatever products, racks and P.O.S. it desires in retail stores without having to compete for that privilege.

ARGUMENT

I. THIS COURT IS NOT "REQUIRED" TO GRANT PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF, AND MAY DENY RELIEF FOR LACK OF IRREPARABLE HARM ALONE

As a threshold matter, Plaintiffs are simply wrong in suggesting that this Court is "required" or "obligated" as a matter of law to grant Conwood some form of injunctive relief in this case. (See Pl. Mem. at 4) Indeed, where, as here, a plaintiff asks for incredibly vague and overbroad injunctive relief, courts can and should reject the relief in full. See, e.g., Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., Nos. 98-3732, 98-4042, 2000 WL 303035 at *5 (8th Cir. March 24, 2000)(to be published in F.3d)(observing that the district court rejected plaintiff's proposed injunctive relief because it was "imprecise, impossible to monitor and enforce, and so broad that it potentially could preclude Brunswick from engaging in legitimate business activity") (See Appendix A).

[3] To the extent the Court may consider ordering any injunctive relief, U.S. Tobacco also respectfully requests that this Court first entertain oral argument on the issues raised by Plaintiffs' motion, their proposed injunction, and Defendants' opposition.

Moreover, courts have rejected proposed injunctive relief on the simple basis that a financially healthy plaintiff, who already has been awarded damages for the alleged violation, is not at risk of suffering irreparable harm and can sue again if the practices ultimately found to be illegal continue to persist in the future. See, e.g., Barrett v. Fields, 941 F. Supp. 980, 983 (D. Kan. 1996) ("[E]ven if the evidence established that defendants' unlawful conduct would likely continue, plaintiff has not demonstrated that he faces a threat of irreparable injury or that he lacks an adequate legal remedy . . . . The evidence establishes that plaintiff's business survived more than four years of defendants' unlawful conduct . . . . If faced with similar conduct in the future, plaintiff is free to again file suit and recover damages against defendants.").

Here, of course, Conwood will have been compensated (to the extent the jury's verdict stands) for past and future harm purportedly caused by U.S. Tobacco's alleged exclusionary conduct. Further, Conwood's moist snuff business not only "survived" but prospered during the alleged period of exclusion. Finally, the Pritzker Organization is quite obviously fully capable of seeking damages for Conwood if any conduct ultimately found to be unlawful is continued by U.S. Tobacco. Thus, the lack of irreparable harm, as well as the availability of any necessary future damages action by Conwood, should preclude permanent injunctive relief in this case at the outset.

As described in detail below, however, there are numerous other reasons that require the complete rejection, or severe cutting back, of the incredibly broad injunctive relief sought by Conwood.

II. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION IS IMPERMISSIBLY VAGUE

Rule 65(d) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that every injunction shall be "specific in its terms" and shall describe in "reasonable detail" the acts sought to be restrained. The common sense standard under Rule 65 "is that the ordinary person reading the court's order should be able to ascertain from the document itself exactly what conduct is proscribed." 11A Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary K. Kane, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, § 2955, at 308-09 (2d ed. 1995) (emphasis added).

Applying that standard to antitrust cases, courts routinely reject proposed injunctions that do not precisely detail the specific conduct to be proscribed. See Hartford-Empire Co. v. United States, 323 U.S. 386, 410 (1945) ("The decree must not be 'so vague as to put the whole of the defendants' business at the peril of a summons for contempt'. . . .") (citation omitted); see also City of Mishawaka v. Am. Elec. Power Co., 616 F.2d 976, 991-92 (7th Cir. 1980) (vacating injunction prohibiting defendant, and all persons acting in concert with it, from "taking any action that will have the effect" of discriminating against certain customers – i.e., conduct that "would be difficult to ascertain in advance"); Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., No. LR-C-95-781, Order ¶¶ 17-18 (E.D. Ark. Oct. 16, 1998) (See Appendix B) (rejecting proposed injunctive relief "against any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to cause any buying group to break up" or "against any policy the purpose or intent of which is to create artificial barriers to entry or expansion of any rivals").

Conwood's counsel obviously did not have this fundamental requirement in mind when it drafted the proposed permanent injunction in this case.

16diii005783

A. Conduct That Apparently Involves Handling Competitors' Products, Racks, Counter Displays or P.O.S.

First, although unwilling simply to say so, Conwood is asking for an injunction that precludes U.S. Tobacco from acting upon the request or authorization of a retailer – for example, in performing a store reset, one of the central functions of manufacturers in all product categories. See Tr. 3/10 at 135-36 (Conwood's National Sales Manager testifies that during a reset, it is typical for a retailer to direct a manufacturer to take a competitor's rack off the shelf and to dispose of it in whatever way the retailer wants). Indeed, based on Conwood's memorandum of law, it appears that Conwood seeks an order requiring retailers that chose "exclusive" U.S. Tobacco racks to remove them, including such retailers as Wal-Mart and Golden Pantry, who testified during trial that they make their own, independent decisions to use a U.S. Tobacco rack to house all moist snuff products in the store. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 16-18; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, pp. 22-25. Again, it is impossible to tell if something as outrageous and anticompetitive as this is what Conwood has in mind. Perhaps that is why Conwood chose not to state its proposed relief plainly and precisely and then see if it could hold up under judicial scrutiny.

Of course, there is a wide variety of ordinary, procompetitive that takes place in stores every day and necessarily involves the handling of competitive products, racks or P.O.S. These include, for example:

- performing store resets;
- removing damaged or shop-worn racks and/or P.O.S.;
- removing out-of-date or stale products from store shelves; and
- moving an entire moist snuff or smokeless tobacco category to comply with new state or local ordinances, such as the recent self-serve display ban in the State of Texas.

Conwood's proposed injunction, however, does not specify whether it is asking the Court to put an end to any of this ordinary, everyday conduct, let alone acknowledge that it is asking the Court to let Conwood, not retailers, make the decisions regarding what competitive conduct will be permitted. Accordingly, this part of the proposed injunction should be rejected.

B. Conduct That May "Adversely Affect" The Placement of Competitors' Products, Racks, Counter Displays and P.O.S.

The second part of Conwood's proposed injunction is even more vague. It seeks to proscribe any conduct that can be characterized (by Conwood, no doubt) as seeking to cause any "other person" – read retailer or wholesaler – to "adversely affect the placement or selection of any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, counter displays or other advertising including but not limited to 'point of sale' advertising such as 'header cards.'" Proposed Order at 1-2.

The proposed language does not even hint at the precise conduct by U.S. Tobacco that would be enjoined, including U.S. Tobacco's ordinary business dealings with retailers (or "other persons"). Indeed, such an injunction is so patently vague on its face that one can hardly conceive of conduct by U.S. Tobacco that would not be covered. For example, a U.S. Tobacco marketing or sales person could hardly carry out any aspect of his or her job – including, for example, simply designing a suggested plan-o-gram (or even commenting on one) in response to a retailer's request – without violating the proposed Order.

Under the well-established case law discussed above, Conwood's intentionally vague injunction must be rejected. No reasonable person could know from this proposed language what U.S. Tobacco could or could not do in competing in the marketplace without putting the whole of its business at risk of a summons for contempt.

16diii005785

III. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION IS GROSSLY OVERBROAD AND, IN FACT, ANTICOMPETITIVE

If the Court does not completely reject Conwood's proposed injunctive relief for vagueness, then the proposed injunction runs into equally serious problems of overbreadth. It is axiomatic that every request for injunctive relief under Section 16 of the Clayton Act must be narrowly tailored to prohibit only the precise anticompetitive conduct which, if permitted to continue, will injure competition in the marketplace. See United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 579-80 (1966); see also United States v. Loew's, Inc., 371 U.S. 38, 52 (1962).[4]

In considering whether to grant any request for injunctive relief, this Court is free to make its own findings of fact on the trial record, including determining what conduct was not at issue in the case, what conduct was not sufficiently proven to be anticompetitive and what conduct cannot, as a matter of law, be considered exclusionary. See, e.g., Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 457 F. Supp. 404, 433-36 (S.D.N.Y. 1978) (rejecting relief that "extends well beyond the wrongs affecting [plaintiff] proved to the satisfaction of the jury or the court"; prohibiting conduct that "was a modest aspect of the wrongful conduct which the jury might have found"; prohibiting conduct that could not be "deemed wrongful" as a matter of law; and "would forbid all kinds of conduct outside the dimensions, or even broadest penumbra, of what was proved" in the case) (emphasis added), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 603 F.2d 263 (2d Cir. 1979) (vacating injunctive relief as overbroad); see also Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 162 F.2d 520, 522-23 (7th Cir. 1947).

[4] While a court may enjoin lawful conduct that could be used indirectly to replicate the exclusionary conduct, see, e.g., Loew's, 371 U.S. at 106, it may not enjoin competitive conduct even if it harms plaintiff. (See part B below.)

16diii005786

This fundamental limitation on permanent injunctive relief has several facets, all of which are blatantly ignored by Conwood's proposed injunction.

A. The Proposed Injunction Would Be Violated By Conduct Not At Issue In This Case Or Which Completely Lacks Evidentiary Support

Initially, of course, an injunction that would preclude conduct that was not even claimed to be illegal, or for which scant evidence was offered at trial, must be rejected out of hand. See Berkey Photo, 457 F. Supp. at 433-36; see also Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson, Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1448 (6th Cir. 1990) (upholding refusal to mandate that defendants charge captive companies the same prices as independent customers where there was no evidence that plaintiffs did anything differently).

Representative examples of this threshold defect in Conwood's proposed injunction are not difficult to identify on this record. For example, any of the following conduct could easily fit within the proposed injunction, yet was not challenged, and could not have been challenged, in this case:

- the continued development of new, innovative racks to meet retailers' needs and desires, especially in the changing regulatory environment;
- the continued development of new, innovative P.O.S. materials that would compete for display space in retail stores;
- the introduction of new products that would compete against existing products for limited retail and wholesale shelf space;
- the introduction of price-value and mid-tier priced products, as well as couponing and other price promotions, to compete for consumer sales; and
- the provision of an incentive program to encourage proper product ordering, handling, and merchandising.

Given the breadth of Conwood's proposed injunction, the above list of improperly-included conduct is only a starting point.

B. The Proposed Injunction Would Be Violated By Ordinary Competitive Behavior of U.S. Tobacco

Further, a permanent injunction may not be so broad that it would enjoin legitimate business activity that was challenged at trial or otherwise interfere with ordinary business activity. See Concord Boat, No. LR-C-95-781 at ¶ 19 ("Equity requires that injunctive relief . . . be carefully tailored to prevent competitive injury . . . without reaching too broadly to prevent or interfere with legitimate business activity") (emphasis added); Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Marshfield Clinic, 883 F. Supp. 1247, 1266 (W.D. Wis. 1995) (refusing to enjoin HMO from contracting with its own doctors, which is the "very essence" of what HMO's do; "[t]here is no justification for such an anti-competitive policy as requested by plaintiffs"); Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 849 F. Supp. 1458, 1473 (M.D. Ala. 1993) ("[p]laintiffs' proposed injunction is too vague and covers conduct that is not only clearly legal but could conceivably be procompetitive."). Such activity would include the provision of an innovative or specialized product display rack, even if Conwood mischaracterizes such activity as "exclusive dealing." See Concord Boat, Order ¶¶ 23-24 (in Section 2 case, refusing to enter an injunction limiting long term contracts to one year or more -- unless cancellable without penalty on reasonable notice -- because such relief would prohibit, inter alia, contracts initiated by the customer as well as contracts that justify a longer term because the defendant was "asked to develop a specialized, custom-specific product").

The trial record is replete with the legitimate competitive activity that Conwood's proposed injunction would prohibit, but a few critical categories should suffice to illustrate the point:

16diii005788

- providing display racks to accommodate all moist snuff products to respond to the needs, desires, and requests of retailers;

- offering targeted product introductions and promotional activities to meet the marketplace activities of competitors;

- seeking product arrangements that are in accordance with the well-accepted marketing concept, SOF=SOM;

- making product recommendations, based on industry sales data, resulting in the elimination of slow-moving products of all companies;

- providing an incentive program to encourage the acceptance of new products and promotions and to encourage preferential rack, P.O.S. and product placement.

Again, it is clear that Conwood's counsel, contrary to established law, has chosen to aggregate in one "ball of wax" any conduct by U.S. Tobacco that might adversely affect Conwood. The antitrust laws – as they relate both to liability and injunctive relief – are not so generous.

C. The Proposed Injunction Would Restrict Competition and Improperly Shelter Conwood From The Basic Competitive Processes In The Marketplace

Similarly, a proposed injunction must be rejected as overbroad if it actually seeks to alter the normal competitive forces of the marketplace in question. See Calnetics Corp. v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 532 F.2d 674, 693-94 (9th Cir. 1976) (rejecting proposed injunction banning certain car imports and setting quotas because it would be "anticompetitive," would "create[] the antithesis of an open market" and would "displace the competitive forces of the marketplace" and transform it into a "regulated industry"); see also Volasco Products Co. v. Fry Roofing Co., 346 F.2d 661, 667 (6th Cir. 1965) (rejecting part of injunction that would prevent defendant from meeting competition); See Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 950, 952 (N.D. Ohio 1987) (requested relief that would prevent defendant from bidding on certain contracts would not be in the "public interest" and "may result in less competition"), aff'd, 917 F.2d 1413 (6th Cir. 1990). For the same reasons, courts routinely reject proposed injunctions that would effectively protect plaintiff from the rigors of the marketplace or place competitors at a competitive advantage over the defendant. See Bigelow, 162 F.2d at 524 (plaintiffs "have a right to compete . . . but they have no right to be awarded and protected by decree in any certain position" and may not "obtain a decree vesting them and protecting them in a privileged position"); Image Technical Services, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 125 F.3d 1195, 1225 (9th Cir. 1997) (striking "unnecessary and anticompetitive" provisions of proposed injunction that would require Kodak to provide plaintiffs with parts that plaintiffs could obtain from other sources; injunctions should not allow plaintiffs to "free rid[e]" on defendants); United States v. United Shoe Mach. Corp., 110 F. Supp. 295, 349 (D. Mass. 1953) (rejecting proposed injunction that would result in competitors being able to offer customers desired leasing programs, but not the defendant).

Here, the proposed injunction would, without question, fundamentally alter the competitive process in the marketplace. For example, the injunction would deprive retailers of the opportunity to decide what company will best serve their needs at any point in time with respect to the provision of category management services (except from Swedish Match and Swisher); exclusive racks (except from Swisher, or Swedish Match and Conwood when they decide to compete on this basis)[5]; standard incentive programs (except for Conwood, Swedish Match and Swisher); and manpower capabilities for resets. Moreover, as a further impediment to competition, Conwood's proposed injunction would require U.S. Tobacco to consult with, and seek approval from, its competitor prior to conducting certain normal competitive business practices, even when conducted at the behest of retailers. Again, the list could go on and on. For the antitrust laws to be used to force collusion among competitors prior to dealing with customers would create a perverse result.[6] It is not within the purpose and intent of the antitrust laws to allow an injunction that would limit retailers' choices by reducing competition among their suppliers.

[5] The testimony of Conwood executives illustrates this point. For example, Conwood's Chairman, Mr. Rosson, testified that Conwood was not willing to design uniform display racks to accommodate all companies' moist snuff products. See Tr. 2/29 at 185-87. If U.S. Tobacco is prohibited from doing so by an injunction issued by this Court, a retailer who wants a uniform rack would be prevented from using one or would be forced to use one provided by Swisher.

D. The Proposed Injunction Would Improperly Bind Retailers and Other Non-Parties

Finally, consistent with Rule 65, permanent injunctions should not bind persons who are neither parties to the action nor properly viewed as co-conspirators. See Calnetics Corp., 532 F.2d at 694 (rejecting injunctive relief that would ban imports of Porsche automobiles: "[e]lementary fairness requires that Porsche be given a chance to be heard before its importation agreement with VW is, in effect, partially voided by judicial decree); Weiss v. York Hosp., 548 F. Supp. 1048, 1060 (M.D. Pa. 1982) (rejecting portion of proposed relief that would bind non-parties to the lawsuit where they are not acting in concert with defendants).

In this case Conwood obviously knew it would be preposterous to claim that retailers are acting as "conspirators" with U.S. Tobacco with regard to every decision regarding products, racks or P.O.S. that Conwood does not like. On the contrary, the trial record confirms without any dispute whatsoever that retailers gather information and suggestions as part of the normal competitive process and then make their own, independent, uncoerced decisions on all of these subjects. See, e.g., Tr. 3/2 at 43-44 (Rusk); Tr. 3/9 at 62-67 (Renfro); Tr. 3/14 at 99,104-05, 109 (Luckett); Tr. 3/15 at 18 (Butler); Tr. 3/15 at 8-9, 15-17 (McGuire); Tr. 3/15 at 16-24 (Walden).

[6] Conwood's proposed injunction also would require the Court to monitor and evaluate, on an ongoing basis, the particular circumstances in the retail environment in order to determine, according to some unarticulated standard, whether Conwood's approval was "unreasonably withheld."

The proposed injunction, however, would now treat all of the decisions as conspiratorial agreements that may be enjoined, and apparently would subject any number of retailers – for example, every one that has U.S. Tobacco as a category captain – to sanctions. The right of retailers to make their own decisions regarding their moist snuff sections were not challenged at trial; this Court should not award any injunctive relief that would impinge in any respect on the retailers' independent decisions – decisions the Court has recognized as being beyond the scope of Conwood's lawsuit. See February 17, 2000 Order (as a matter of causation, Conwood could not recover damages for claimed lost sales that may have been caused by the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers). At a minimum, this Court should allow retailers to be heard – by a hearing or otherwise – before awarding any injunctive relief that affects their standard way of doing business.

* * * * *

In sum, Conwood no doubt realized that it must at least pay lip service to the prohibition against overbroad injunctions, which is why its memorandum declares that it is offering a "narrowly tailored order." (Pl. Mem. at 5) The incredibly overbroad injunction proposed by Conwood, however, is neither narrow nor tailored, but instead violates every one of these basic principles and should be summarily rejected.

IV. AT MOST, THIS COURT SHOULD REMOVE ANY "EXCLUSIONARY" FEATURES OF U.S. TOBACCO'S "AGREEMENTS" WITH RETAILERS OR PROGRAMS

As this Court is fully aware, U.S. Tobacco continues to hold firm to the position that none of its conduct violates Section 2 of the Sherman Act. That includes any "rack exclusives" which, on the full trial record, are provided in response to retailers' wishes and are perfectly justified to meet retailer and consumer needs. See Concord Boat, Order ¶ 19. Nevertheless, if this Court finds that any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged "agreements" or marketing programs contain "exclusionary" features, the appropriate relief is to "purge" those agreements or programs of their offensive terms rather than prohibit these desired practices altogether.[7]

The very cases relied on by Conwood prove the point. For example, in the well-known case of United States v. United Shoe Machinery Corp, 110 F. Supp. 295 (D. Mass. 1953), the court found that United Shoe had violated Section 2 based in part on 10-year leases of shoe machinery equipment that foreclosed competitors from the reasonable opportunity to compete for that business. At the same time, however, numerous customers testified that they preferred a leasing system over having to purchase the machinery. See id. at 349. In "purging" the leases of the "restrictive features," the court's solution, upheld by the Supreme Court, was to cut back the 10-year leases to a maximum 5-year term coupled with the right of customers to return the leased equipment without penalty after one year. See id. at 349-52. See also Pacific Coast Agriculture Export Ass'n v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196, 1209 (9th Cir. 1975) (Pl. Mem. at 8 n.4) (striking exclusivity provision of import agency agreement, but not the agency agreement itself).

Based on United Shoe, this Court, at most, should limit the relief to purging the provisions of any agreements – whether relating to plan-o-grams, racks or CAP – that purportedly require retailers not to purchase (or use) the products, racks or P.O.S. of other competitors for an unreasonable term; or the Court should simply make any such agreements completely non-exclusive. While Conwood obviously seeks much more than this – no doubt because there are no such exclusive agreements impairing Conwood's ability to compete – this is all the law could even [7] The few cases cited by Conwood in which the entire agreements were enjoined involved per se illegal, horizontal restraints such as price-fixing, market divisions or group boycotts. See, e.g., United States v. Nat'l Lead Co., 332 U.S. 319 (1947).

16diii005793

theoretically require. Any more relief than that would actually restrict the type of competition retailers desire, including their desire to use uniform racks to house all moist snuff products and to participate in CAP.

V. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION IS UNDULY INTRUSIVE

Another fundamental defect in Conwood's proposed injunction is the elaborate mechanisms it suggests for implementing and policing the proposed injunction, including the proposed requirement that U.S. Tobacco clear resets or any other "manipulation" of competitive products, racks, and P.O.S. through Conwood first – again, "permission not to be unreasonably withheld." Conwood also would have this Court set up a new Board of Directors committee that would "monitor and enforce" the communication of the injunction to wholesalers and retailers; the training of employees to comply with its terms; the creation and submission of a written "compliance" plan to the Court and Conwood; the creation of a document bank so that Conwood's counsel can inspect U.S. Tobacco's documents for compliance whenever it wishes; and an annual submission of a written compliance report to the Court and Conwood's counsel.

Conwood offers no relevant support for this highly intrusive policing scheme, nor could it in a case of this nature.[8] Indeed, courts have rejected attempts to impose far less onerous

[8] Plaintiffs cite two inapposite cases for the proposition that U.S. Tobacco should be required to notify its customers of any injunction ultimately issued and provide antitrust compliance training for its employees. The injunction in Image Technical Servs., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2386 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 1996), a tying case, simply required Kodak to notify its customers that Kodak would now be required to sell replacement parts to third-party service providers. See Image Technical Servs., 125 F.3d at 1226-27 (modifying injunction). The injunction in Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 911 F. Supp. 510 (M.D. Ala. 1995), required only that defendants provide antitrust training for its employees who had engaged in a per se price fixing scheme, the type of naked restraints that are not at issue in this case. See id. at 512; see also Coleman v. Cannon Oil requirements on a defendant, even when the plaintiff was not seeking a blatantly anticompetitive injunction such as that proposed here. See Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. at 952 (finding that a proposed injunction "requiring the circulation of [the] injunction to actual or potential customers [and the] compilation of [an] annual list of . . . jobs bid on by defendants to be distributed[,] to the Court" and plaintiffs counsel, was "not effectively designed to ensure free competition in [the] marketplace"); see also Weiss, 548 F. Supp. at 1060 (finding that injunction requesting the defendant hospital to amend its By-Laws to be "grossly intrusive upon the autonomy of that body").

In short, this is not a Section 1 conspiracy case, and Conwood is not an antitrust regulatory agency – even if its lawyers would like nothing more than to police U.S. Tobacco's day-to-day operations to ensure that Conwood is protected from the rigors of even the most basic and ordinary forms of competition.

VI. THE COURT SHOULD STAY ANY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IT MAY ORDER

If the Court enters a permanent injunction, U.S. Tobacco anticipates that it will need to seek a suspension or stay of the injunction pending appeal so as to avoid the inevitable and irreparable injury that will result to its business prior to the conclusion of the case. A motion for suspension or stay of the injunction may be filed in either the district court, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(c), or in the Court of Appeals pursuant to FRAP 8 (a). Should it be necessary, U.S. Tobacco will file in this Court a motion to stay any injunction pending appeal. Should this Court decline the request for stay pending appeal, U.S. Tobacco would then need to file an emergency petition for temporary stay in the Court of Appeals, followed by a motion for stay pending appeal. See, e.g., Chambers v. Ohio Dep't. of Human Serv., 145 F.3d 793, 796 (6th Cir. 1998); Reynolds v. Int'l Amateur Athletic Fed'n, No. 92-3596, 1992 WL 15754 (6th Cir. June 19, 1992) (granting stay of injunction pending appeal).

As the foregoing discussion regarding Conwood's requested injunction demonstrates, U.S. Tobacco will be irreparably harmed by the entry of any permanent injunction that restricts its competitive participation in the marketplace. Should the Court enter an order in any way approaching the scope demanded by Conwood, U.S. Tobacco's relationships with its wholesale and retail customers will be irreparably and irretrievably harmed. The likelihood that an applicant for stay of injunction pending appeal will be irreparably harmed absent a stay is a factor for the Court to consider in ruling on the stay request. See Michigan Coalition of Radioactive Material Users, Inc. v. Griepentrog, 945 F.2d 150, 153 (6th Cir.1991) (citing Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776 (1987)).

A second factor requires the Court to consider the likelihood that U.S. Tobacco will prevail on the appeal. Griepentrog, 945 F.2d at 153. U.S. Tobacco has demonstrated in its motions for judgment as a matter of law and for a new trial that serious issues have been preserved for appeal, if they are not corrected by this Court. The erroneous admission of significant portions of Dr. Leftwich's testimony alone amounts to a "serious question going to the merits" as is necessary under Griepentrog. See id. at 153-54 (citations omitted).

The third and fourth Griepentrog factors require the Court to assess the possible harm to others if the stay is granted and the interest of the public in a stay. Id. The Griepentrog court required that all four factors for consideration of a stay of injunction be addressed by affidavits from the movant. Id. at 154.

Given that U.S. Tobacco expects to file a comprehensive motion for stay pending appeal following entry of any permanent injunction, U.S. Tobacco requests that, with entry of any injunction, the Court simultaneously enter an order temporarily staying the injunction for a minimum of thirty (30) business days. The 30 day temporary stay will allow U.S. Tobacco the time necessary to obtain the affidavits and any other supporting documents required to address the four Griepentrog issues as they relate to the specifics of any injunction, which obviously will not be known to U.S. Tobacco until the Court enters its order. The Griepentrog factors are not to be applied rigidly. The Court's analysis under Griepentrog contemplates an individualized judgment, specific to U.S. Tobacco's situation. See Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 777 (1987). This Court, obviously familiar with the parties and the relevant facts, will thereafter have the opportunity for a meaningful review of a motion for stay pending appeal. The alternative to this suggested procedure will be to force the parties to litigate a rushed emergency stay petition in the Sixth Circuit.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs' Request for Permanent Injunctive Relief should be denied in full. If the Court is inclined to enter any injunctive relief, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests oral argument in advance.

Nos. 98-3732, 98-4042.

United States Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit.

Submitted Sept. 15, 1999.

Decided March 24, 2000.

Boat builders brought antitrust action against stern drive engine manufacturer. Following judgment for boat builders, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas, James M. Moody, J., 21 F.Supp.2d 923, denied engine manufacturer's motion for judgment as a matter of law or new trial, and 34 F.Supp.2d 1125, trebled boat builders' damages. Both sides appealed. The Court of Appeals, Diana E. Murphy, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) boat builders' Clayton Act claim that engine manufacturer's purchases of other boat builders lessened competition or tended to create monopoly was barred by statute of limitations; (2) plaintiffs' expert's opinion should have been excluded; and (3) and evidence was insufficient to support finding that engine manufacturer's discount programs restrained trade and monopolized market.

Reversed, vacated and remanded.

*1 A number of boat builders [FN2] brought this antitrust action against stern drive engine manufacturer Brunswick Corporation (Brunswick) for violations of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 and 2 (1994), and of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18 (1994). Brunswick counterclaimed, arguing that the boat builders had themselves conspired to restrain trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. The case was tried to a jury for ten weeks, and a verdict was returned in favor of the boat builders for $44,371,761. Post trial motions were filed by both sides, and judgment was eventually entered for the boat builders in the amount of $133,115,283, plus $7,783,224 in attorney fees and $1,267,424 in costs. The district court granted Brunswick's motion for judgment as a matter of law on its counterclaim, but denied its motions for a new trial and for judgment as a matter of law on the boat builders' claims. It also denied the boat builders' motion for equitable relief. Both sides appeal, and we reverse.

I.
A.

Neither side contests the finding of the jury that the relevant market is the market for inboard and stern drive marine engines. Since the early 1980s there have been a number of manufacturers in the market, including inboard manufacturers PCM, Indmar, Crusader, Volvo, Marine Power, MTU, Caterpillar, Detroit Diesel, Cummins, and Toyota, and stern drive manufacturers Brunswick, Outboard Marine Corporation (OMC), Volvo Penta of the Americas (Volvo), and Yamaha. In this opinion we employ the term "stern drive engines" to include both types of engines.

The manufacturers use standard automobile engine blocks to make stern drive engines for motor boats. They "marinize" the automobile engines and equip them with a drive system and then sell them to boat builders who may be affiliated with the manufacturer or may be independent buyers. The boat builders install the engines in their brand name boats and sell the completed boats to dealers. Stern drive engines are used primarily in recreational power boats known as runabouts, which are typical water skiing boats, and in cruising boats, which are larger and more expensive boats and usually have cabins. Runabouts and cruising boats together make up about 40% of all recreational power boats.

Brunswick has been the market leader in stern drive engine manufacturing for many years, and by 1983 it had earned a 75% market share. Beginning in 1982 it employed McKinsey & Company (McKinsey) to provide consulting services to its engine business. McKinsey consultants suggested various ways for Brunswick to increase the sales of its engines. In 1984 Brunswick began to offer market share discounts to boat builders and dealers. Several of its competitors, including Volvo and OMC, also offered market share discounts at about the same time. Under the Brunswick programs, boat builders and dealers could agree to purchase a certain percentage of their engine requirements from Brunswick for a fixed period of time in exchange for a discount off the list price of the engine. From 1984 to 1994, Brunswick offered a 3% discount to boat builders who bought 80% of their engines from the company, a 2% discount for 70% of all purchases, and a 1% discount for those who took 60% of their needs from Brunswick. For the 1995 to 1997 model year program, the market share requirements were reduced so that the maximum 3% discount could be earned by buying 70% from Brunswick; customers could receive a 2% discount for 65% market share and 1% for 60% market share. Another feature was added to the program in 1989 to offer long term discounts of an additional 1 or 2% to anyone who signed a market share agreement for two to three years. [FN3] Boat builders also could receive a volume discount of up to 5% based on the quantity of engines purchased. Brunswick attempted to increase its market share requirement to 95% in its proposed 1994 "Industry Growth Program," but was unsuccessful due to serious backlash from boat builders. The market share discounts were eliminated entirely in the middle of 1997.

*2 Neither the regular market share discount program, the long term program, nor the volume discount program obligated boat builders and dealers to purchase engines from Brunswick, and none of the programs restricted the ability of builders and dealers to purchase engines from other engine manufacturers. Builders and dealers were able to buy up to 40% of their engines from other manufacturers and still obtain a discount from Brunswick. Several boat builders chose to take a higher percentage of their engines from Brunswick than necessary to qualify for its largest market share discount; some purchased 95 or 100% of their engines from Brunswick.

In the year after Brunswick and other stern drive engine manufacturers instituted market share discount programs, Brunswick's largest domestic competitor, OMC, introduced a new stern drive engine called the "Cobra." The Cobra engine registered solid early sales, which increased OMC's stern drive engine market share and simultaneously reduced Brunswick's market share to approximately 50%. Brunswick began exploring its competitive options, and in December 1986 it purchased two of the largest boat builders, U.S. Marine (Bayliner) and Ray Industries (Sea Ray). [FN4] These purchases were noted throughout the boating industry. Brunswick hoped this vertical integration would enable it to synthesize engine manufacturing and boat building, leading to a higher quality and less expensive product.

Other events occurred about this time which improved Brunswick's competitive position. OMC's success with the Cobra was short lived because the company began receiving complaints that the engine's shift cable was defective. After a year investigating complaints, OMC was forced to recall all of its Cobra engines in 1989. This resulted in significant market share gains by Brunswick. Brunswick also experienced a market share gain in 1993 as a result of mistakes made by Volvo and OMC when they merged, leading to decreased consumer confidence in their products. In 1994 Yamaha, another stern drive engine manufacturer, left the market. The price of Brunswick's stern drive engine increased between 1986 and 1997 from $4775 to $4984, fluctuating both upward and downward in the interim.

B.

The boat builders filed this antitrust suit in 1995, more than ten years after Brunswick and other stern drive engine manufacturers first instituted market share discount programs, and over nine years after Brunswick acquired Bayliner and Sea Ray. They alleged that Brunswick had violated Section 7 of the Clayton Act by acquiring Bayliner and Sea Ray in 1986 and subsequently holding them, enabling Brunswick to create a monopoly in the stern drive engine market. They contended that Brunswick had used its market share discounts, volume discounts, and long term discounts and contracts, coupled with the market power it had achieved in purchasing Bayliner and Sea Ray, to restrain trade and to monopolize the market in violation of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. According to the boat builders, Brunswick's monopolization of the market enabled it to charge supracompetitive high prices for their engines, which drove other engine manufacturers out of business. The boat builders also claimed that Brunswick had fraudulently concealed both the special deals that they gave to certain boat builders and the stern drive engine that Bayliner was developing.

*3 Brunswick denied the allegations and counterclaimed against several of the boat builders, alleging that they had conspired to boycott Brunswick engines at industry boat shows and to price Brunswick engines higher than competitors' engines in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Brunswick also brought three state law counterclaims against two of the boat builders, alleging that they had submitted falsified market share affidavits.

Both sides filed pretrial motions, including Brunswick's motion in limine to limit the testimony of Dr. Robert Hall, the expert witness for the boat builders. Brunswick argued that Dr. Hall's economic model was unreliable and did not have the capacity to distinguish between lawful and unlawful market behavior; his opinion therefore could not provide the jury with an adequate basis to assess antitrust liability or damages. At a pretrial Daubert hearing, [FN5] the boat builders assured the district court that Dr. Hall's testimony and economic model would segregate unlawful conduct by Brunswick from lawful behavior that had contributed to its market share. The district court did not make specific findings regarding Dr. Hall's methodology or the bases of his opinions, but it ruled that the jury could draw its own conclusions about the value of his testimony.

During the course of the ten week trial, both parties called numerous witnesses and presented over 800 exhibits, including voluminous economic data, charts and graphs made in the course of business and for trial purposes, internal business memoranda, consultants' reports, deposition testimony, and much more. The boat builders called over 30 witnesses, many of whom testified by videotaped deposition. Among these witnesses were owners of some of the plaintiff boat building companies, as well as several current and former Brunswick employees. Brunswick called some 15 witnesses, including its own employees and owners of boat building companies and boat dealerships. Expert witnesses presented differing interpretations of stern drive engine market events and of Brunswick's conduct in that market.

The boat builders' primary evidence to establish Brunswick's antitrust liability was presented by their sole expert, Dr. Hall, a professor of economics at Stanford University. He testified that Brunswick had monopoly power in the stern drive market that enabled it to use its market share discount programs to impose a "tax" on boat builders and dealers who chose to purchase engines from other manufacturers. He defined the "tax" as the discount these purchasers gave up by not buying from Brunswick. He stated that Brunswick's program effectively required its competitors to charge substantially lower prices in order to convince customers to purchase from them and forgo the discount. Dr. Hall further testified that the discount programs, combined with the market power Brunswick acquired by purchasing Bayliner and Sea Ray, enabled Brunswick to capture 78% of the stern drive engine market. According to Dr. Hall, other manufacturers could not enter into stern drive engine manufacturing as a result of Brunswick's having such a high percentage of the market. He concluded that the discount programs were anticompetitive.

*4 In support of the boat builders' damage claim, Dr. Hall relied on the Cournot model of economic theory that posits that a firm "maximizes its profits by assuming the observed output of other firms as a given, and then equating its own marginal cost and marginal revenue on that assumption." 4 Phillip E. Areeda et al., Antitrust Law: An Analysis of Antitrust Principles and Their Application ¶ 925a (rev. ed.1998). Dr. Hall postulated that in a stern drive engine market that was competitive, Brunswick and some other firm would each maintain a 50% market share. Under this theory, any market share over 50% would be evidence of anticompetitive conduct on Brunswick's part. Since Brunswick at various points in time had garnered a market share as large as 78% percent, Dr. Hall concluded that it had engaged in anticompetitive conduct and that the boat builders had been overcharged at the moment Brunswick's market share surpassed the 50% threshold.

Brunswick moved for judgment as a matter of law at the close of the boat builders' case. The district court heard arguments on the motion but declined to rule on it at that stage. Brunswick then called its various witnesses, including two expert witnesses. Dr. Frederick Warren-Boulton, former chief economist for the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice, testified that Brunswick's discount programs served efficiency and business purposes by improving the predictability of engine demand and by helping to keep manufacturing costs to a minimum. He explained that the discount programs encouraged competition in the boat building industry by providing discounts to smaller boat builders who otherwise would not be able to order sufficient quantities of engines to qualify for strict volume discounts. Dr. Richard Rapp, an economist who is president of National Economic Research Associates, testified that there was no rational basis by which Dr. Hall's model could identify alleged overcharges. He pointed out that the Hall model used a mechanical formula to determine Brunswick's alleged overcharge percentage for any year. The only independent variable in the formula was Brunswick's stern drive market share. See Tr. at 5288-91. According to the formula, an overcharge was calculated anytime Brunswick's market share surpassed 50%. See id. The price at which Brunswick sold its engines was therefore irrelevant for purposes of the formula because the overcharge amount was related solely to Brunswick's market share. See id.

The case was submitted to the jury with a detailed verdict form divided into a number of sections. [FN6] The jury deliberated for a day and a half before returning its verdict. It found that Brunswick had violated three antitrust statutes, Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. The jury awarded a total of $44,371,761 in answer to a question that asked it to assess the individual damages suffered by each boat builder as a result of Brunswick's "antitrust violation or violations." Although the jury found liability for all three antitrust claims, the form of the verdict did not require it to specify what amount of damages was caused by each type of antitrust violation. The jury was asked, however, to consider damages for three separate time periods: one ending December 7, 1991, [FN7] one from that date to the day of the verdict, and one for the post verdict period. It found damages only for the period starting December 7, 1991, and running to June 19, 1998, the date of the verdict. It rejected the boat builders' fraudulent concealment claim, which would have extended the four year limitations period, by awarding no damages for the period before December 7, 1991. The jury also found for the boat builders on Brunswick's counterclaim for unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and for state law violations.

C.

*5 Both sides filed post trial motions. Brunswick moved for judgment as a matter of law on Count 1 of its counterclaim, alleging that the boat builders had engaged in a per se unlawful conspiracy to boycott its engines at industry boat shows and to price its engines at a disadvantage to its competitors. The boat builders filed a protective motion for judgment as a matter of law on Brunswick's counterclaim in the event the court were to overturn the jury verdict. The district court granted Brunswick's motion on Count 1 of its counterclaim, concluding as a matter of law that the boat builders had committed a per se violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. It awarded Brunswick only nominal damages of $1, however, because of a failure of proof. The boat builders filed a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law, or alternatively for reconsideration of the order granting Brunswick judgment on its antitrust counterclaim. This motion was denied, and neither side has appealed the final resolution of Brunswick's counterclaim.

Brunswick also filed a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law and for a new trial on the boat builders' claims. In support of its motion for judgment, Brunswick attacked both the jury's finding of liability and its calculation of damages. It contended that Dr. Hall's testimony should have been limited by the court because his opinion had no basis in the economic reality of the stern drive engine market. Brunswick further claimed that his model was flawed because it failed to account for market share gains that resulted from lawful competitive activity and from market events unrelated to its conduct. Brunswick argued that the jury adopted all aspects of Dr. Hall's presentation and theory and thus awarded damages for losses due to factors other than any anticompetitive conduct. Brunswick also argued that its market share discount programs were not anticompetitive because they were above cost and were not unlawfully exclusionary. Finally, Brunswick contended that the boat builders had not presented sufficient evidence to sustain the jury's verdict on any of their claims and that the Clayton Act claims were barred by the statutory limitations period. Brunswick's motion for a new trial raised many of the same issues. It argued that the jury verdict went against the weight of the evidence, that the damages awarded were grossly excessive, that Dr. Hall's testimony was unfairly prejudicial, and that the plaintiffs were awarded damages for conduct that was not anticompetitive. The district court denied both motions.

The boat builders filed a motion for equitable relief seeking orders to divest Brunswick of Bayliner and Sea Ray, [FN8] to proscribe Brunswick's use of market share discount programs, and to prohibit it from further violation of the antitrust laws. The district court also denied this motion. It ruled that the boat builders' request for divestiture was barred by laches in light of the jury's finding of no damages prior to December 7, 1991 and that the balance of equities precluded any order to divest. It also refused to enjoin market share discount programs, again citing laches and no showing of irreparable harm. Finally, the court rejected the boat builders' request to enjoin Brunswick from violating assorted antitrust laws on the grounds that such an injunction would be imprecise, impossible to monitor and enforce, and so broad that it potentially could preclude Brunswick from engaging in legitimate business activity.

*6 Following its rulings on the various post trial motions, the district court trebled the damages found by the jury and awarded the boat builders $7,783,223.94 in attorney fees and $1,267,424.18 in costs. See Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 34 F.Supp.2d 1125, 1134 (E.D.Ark.1998). The final award totaled $142,165,931.12.

II.

Brunswick argues on appeal that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law because the boat builders' Clayton Act claims were barred by the statute's four year limitations period and because the evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to enable a reasonable jury to find that Brunswick's discount programs and acquisitions restrained trade and monopolized the market in violation of the Sherman Act. Brunswick contends that above cost discounting and vertical integrations constitute competitive business behavior that should be encouraged because of the resulting benefits for consumers and purchasers. [FN9] It also claims that Dr. Hall's testimony should not have been admitted because his approach did not provide a reasonable basis for either liability or damages. His opinion that competitive conduct would have resulted in a "50-50 lockstep duopoly" in the market was without factual support, wholly speculative, and methodologically unsound according to Brunswick. See Def.'s Br. at 61. In support of its motion for a new trial Brunswick says that the boat builders' Clayton Act claims were not timely filed, that it is not possible to know what part of the antitrust damages awarded by the jury resulted from the Clayton violations it found, and that Dr. Hall's expert opinion should not have been admitted.

The boat builders contend that their evidence was sufficient to permit a reasonable jury to find that Brunswick had used its discounts and acquisitions to restrain trade and monopolize the market in violation of the Sherman Act. They claim that they proved that Brunswick's monopolization of the engine market resulted in higher engine prices which forced its primary rivals, Volvo and OMC, to merge in 1993 and resulted in Yamaha's departure from the market in 1994. They also argue that the statute of limitations does not bar their Clayton Act claims because Brunswick's purchases of Bayliner and Sea Ray were part of a continuing violation and because their damages were only speculative during the limitations period. They also contend that there was no need for the jury to be asked to tie any damages to a particular type of antitrust violation and that the damage award can be sustained if any of their antitrust claims are upheld. Finally, the boat builders cross appeal from the denial of their motion for equitable relief, but they do not appeal the jury's rejection of their fraudulent concealment claim.

A.

*7 The boat builders claim that Brunswick's purchases of Bayliner and Sea Ray in December 1986 and its continuing holding of them served "substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly" in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 18 (1994). Brunswick argues that these claims are barred by the statute's limitations period and that its acquisitions were not anticompetitive as a matter of law. Section 7 of the Clayton Act protects against more than one type of anticompetitive conduct, but all cases are governed by the limitations period in Section 4B that requires that an action be commenced "within four years after the cause of action accrued." 15 U.S.C. § 15b (1994).

[5][6] Section 7 "is primarily aimed at arresting, at their incipiency, acquisitions and mergers that substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly." Midwestern Mach., Inc. v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 167 F.3d 439, 442 (8th Cir.1999) (citing United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 589, 77 S.Ct. 872, 1 L.Ed.2d 1057 (1957)). An antitrust cause of action generally "accrues and the statute begins to run when a defendant commits an act that injures a plaintiff's business." Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 401 U.S. 321, 338, 91 S.Ct. 795, 28 L.Ed.2d 77 (1971). A Section 7 action challenging the initial acquisition of another company's stocks or assets accrues at the time of the merger or acquisition. See Midwestern Mach., Inc., 167 F.3d at 442-43. Brunswick acquired Bayliner and Sea Ray in December 1986, and the cause of action for these widely publicized transactions accrued at that time. The statute's four year limitations period for the initial acquisitions therefore expired in 1990. Since this action was not filed until 1995, Section 7 claims based on Brunswick's initial acquisitions are time barred.

[7] Clayton Act claims are not limited to challenging the initial acquisition of stocks or assets, however, since " 'holding as well as obtaining assets' is potentially violative of section 7." Midwestern Mach., Inc., 167 F.3d at 443 (quoting United States v. ITT Continental Baking Co., 420 U.S. 223, 240, 95 S.Ct. 926, 43 L.Ed.2d 148 (1975)). A Clayton Act violation may occur " 'at or any time after the acquisition, depending upon the circumstances of the particular case .' " Id. (quoting E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. at 597, 77 S.Ct. 872). "[W]hile the primary thrust of § 7 is to prohibit and thus to forestall anti-competitive and monopolistic acquisitions," completed acquisitions and "post-acquisition conduct may amount to a violation of § 7." Id. (internal quotations and citations omitted). The rationale for extending Section 7 liability beyond the acquisition itself is that " 'as a practical matter it often may be difficult to foresee and evaluate the real impact and effect of an acquisition until the transaction has been completed and the aggregate combine is operating.' " Id. at 442-43 (quoting Carlson Cos. v. Sperry & Hutchinson Co., 507 F.2d 959, 962 (8th Cir.1974)).

*8 [8][9] Section 7 actions challenging the holding or use of assets remain subject to the four year limitations period, and the normal antitrust accrual rule applies. The limitations period thus starts to run at "the point the act first causes injury." Klehr v. A.O. Smith Corp., 521 U.S. 179, 190- 91, 117 S.Ct. 1984, 138 L.Ed.2d 373 (1997) (citing Zenith Radio Corp., 401 U.S. at 339-40, 91 S.Ct. 795); E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. at 598,

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

77 S.Ct. 872 (action accrues when "threat of the prohibited effects is evident"); ITT Continental Baking Co., 420 U.S. at 242, 95 S.Ct. 926 (antitrust action accrues later when there is "no realistic threat of restraint of commerce or creation of a monopoly" at the initial acquisition); Midwestern Mach., Inc., 167 F.3d at 442 n. 3 (sweep of Section 7 claims restricted by the statute of limitations, laches, and problems of proof and causation). The statute can be tolled under certain circumstances, such as where a defendant has engaged in fraudulent concealment, see Kansas City, Mo. v. Federal Pacific Elec. Co., 310 F.2d 271 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 912, 83 S.Ct. 256, 9 L.Ed.2d 171 (1962), or where a plaintiff's damages are only speculative during the limitations period, see Zenith Radio Corp., 401 U.S. at 338-42, 91 S.Ct. 795.

[10][11] The record indicates that the boat builders did not prove that the statute of limitations was tolled or that the limitations period was extended, unlike the plaintiffs in Midwestern Machinery, E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, and ITT Continental Baking Company . The limitations period in this case cannot be extended on the basis of the holding and use of the acquisitions because the evidence at trial showed that the boat builders' injury accrued in 1986. Brunswick's purchases of Bayliner and Sea Ray were public information at the time of acquisition and were well known throughout the boat manufacturing industry. See Tr. at 1929. At trial the boat builders provided the jury with damage calculations for each year beginning in 1986, and these calculations were based solely on Brunswick's market share. This showed that the damages resulting from any injury based on Brunswick's holding and use of Bayliner and Sea Ray could have been quantified as early as 1986. Brunswick's market share was the only independent variable in the boat builders' damage formula, and it was easily calculable at that time. Moreover, in 1990 the boat builders' buying cooperative, Independent Boat Builders, Incorporated (IBBI), advised its members to declare Brunswick's practices "in violation of the Sherman Anti- Trust Act." Def.'s Ex. 318. This advice would have alerted the boat builders to investigate whatever violations of the antitrust laws might have been committed by Brunswick's holding and use of the companies it had acquired.

Thus, by 1990 at the very latest the boat builders were aware of their alleged injuries and of their potential Section 7 claims with regard to Brunswick's holding and use of Bayliner and Sea Ray. As the Seventh Circuit has noted, > *9 the statute of limitations is not tolled simply in order to wait and see just how well the defendant does in the market from which he excluded the plaintiff. Otherwise it would be tolled indefinitely in a very large class of antitrust suits.

Brunswick Corp. v. Riegel Textile Corp., 752 F.2d 261, 271 (7th Cir.1984), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1018, 105 S.Ct. 3480, 87 L.Ed.2d 615 (1985). If the rule were different, a merger or acquisition could be subject to continual challenge under Section 7. See Midwestern Mach., Inc., 167 F.3d at 442 n. 3.

[12] The boat builders also claim that Brunswick's holding of Bayliner and Sea Ray resulted in a continuing violation, but they cite no appellate decision applying that concept in a Section 7 case. Continuing violations typically arise in the context of Sherman Act or RICO [FN10] claims where multiple defendants are alleged to be part of an ongoing conspiracy. See, e.g., Zenith Radio Corp., 401 U.S. at 338, 91 S.Ct. 795 (Sherman Act conspiracy); Hanover Shoe, Inc. v. United Shoe Mach. Corp., 392 U.S. 481, 502 n. 15, 88 S.Ct. 2224, 20 L.Ed.2d 1231 (1968) (Sherman Act refusal to deal); Grand Rapids Plastics, Inc. v. Lakian, 188 F.3d 401, 406 (6th Cir.1999), petition for cert. filed, 68 U.S.L.W. 3491 (U.S. Nov. 10, 1999) (No. 99-1232) (Robinson- Patman price discrimination scheme); Hugh Chalmers Motors, Inc. v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc., 184 F.3d 761, 763 (8th Cir.1999), cert. denied, --- U.S. ----, 120 S.Ct. 1162, --- L.Ed.2d ---- (1999) (No. 99-934) (antitrust conspiracy involving product tying, price discrimination, restraint of trade, and monopolization). In such a situation, the statute of limitations runs from the last "overt act ." Grand Rapids Plastics, Inc., 188 F.3d at 406 (internal quotations and citation omitted). Continuing violations have not been found outside the RICO or Sherman Act conspiracy context, however, because acts that "simply reflect or implement a prior refusal to deal or acts that are merely unabated inertial consequences (of a single act) do not restart the statute of limitations." DXS, Inc. v. Siemens Med. Sys., Inc., 100 F.3d 462, 467-68 (6th Cir.1996) (citations and internal quotations omitted).

Even if a continuing violation analysis were applicable to the Section 7 claims here, the boat builders have not shown any overt act that would restart the limitations period. The holding or use of assets is by its nature an "unabated inertial consequence[ ]" of the initial acquisition. DXS, Inc., 100 F.3d at 467 (internal quotations and citations omitted). Where a company is merely holding or using assets in the same manner as at the time of acquisition, there is no "separate new overt act" to restart the limitations period as is found, for example, in each new sale by a Sherman Act price fixing defendant. Cf. Klehr, 521 U.S. at 189, 117 S.Ct. 1984. Rather than engaging in another sale or overt act, this type of defendant simply continues to hold or use an asset. If this were enough to make out a continuing violation, there would in effect be no statute of limitations since a Section 7 challenge to the holding or use of assets could be brought at any time. The policy reasons for the four year statutory limitations period for acquisition claims have been discussed by the Ninth Circuit:

> *10 [t]he four-year limitation of Clayton Act § 4B for private antitrust actions for damages is long enough to enable potential plaintiffs to observe the actual effects of a possible antitrust violation and to calculate its potential effects. The abuses which would occur if plaintiffs were permitted to search the history of other firms and challenge at their pleasure any possible violations, no matter how old, seem apparent.

International Tel. & Tel. Corp. v. General Tel. & Elecs. Corp., 518 F.2d 913, 929 (9th Cir.1975), overruled on other grounds, California v. American Stores Co., 495 U.S. 271, 110 S.Ct. 1853, 109 L.Ed.2d 240 (1990).

The boat builders rely on a civil RICO case and two district court cases in arguing that a continuing violation can be found in the Section 7 context. See Klehr, 521 U.S. at 189, 117 S.Ct. 1984; see also Telectronics Proprietary, Ltd. v. Medtronic, Inc., 687 F.Supp. 832, 842-44 (S.D.N.Y.1988); Julius Nasso Concrete Corp. v. DIC Concrete Corp., 467 F.Supp. 1016, 1022- 25 (S.D.N.Y.1979). In Klehr the Supreme Court considered the four year antitrust limitations period in deciding when a RICO cause of action accrues and the limitations period starts to run:

> Antitrust law provides that, in the case of a "continuing violation," say, a price fixing conspiracy that brings about a series of unlawfully high priced sales over a period of years, "each overt act that is part of the violation and that injures the plaintiff," e.g., each sale to the plaintiff, "starts the statutory period running again, regardless of the plaintiff's knowledge of the alleged illegality at much earlier times."

Id. at 189, 117 S.Ct. 1984 (internal quotations and citations omitted). The Court cited only Sherman Act cases, however, and did not discuss Section 7 Clayton claims. Although the boat builders contend that "[n]umerous courts have applied Zenith to Clayton § 7 actions and held that the cause of action accrues each time an injury is incurred," Pls.' Br. at 58, neither of the cited district court cases discussed continuing injuries. Those plaintiffs instead alleged that merged companies began holding or using assets differently at some time after the acquisitions and that this subsequent change affected the running of the limitations period. Here, however, the boat builders never pointed to evidence showing that Brunswick was holding or using Bayliner and Sea Ray differently than when it originally acquired them, and the continuing violation exception to the limitations period does not apply to save their Section 7 claims from being time barred.

Giving the boat builders the benefit of all reasonable inferences from the evidence, their alleged Section 7 injuries accrued at the latest in 1990 and their damages were then calculable. The four year statute of limitations started to run at that time and expired no later than 1994. Their action was not filed until December 7, 1995, and they have not shown that the statute was tolled or that the continuing violation exception applies. Their Section 7 claims are therefore time barred. Since the statute of limitations had run on the Section 7 claims, they should not have been submitted to the jury and Brunswick is entitled to judgment as a matter of law with respect to them.

B.

*11 [13] The parties disagree about what impact dismissal of the Clayton Act claims should have on the case on appeal since the verdict form did not ask the jury to allocate damages to each type of antitrust claim or to consider what damages were caused by each type of violation.

Brunswick believes it is entitled to a new trial on any remaining claims because the jury was not asked to specify the damages attributable to the individual theories of liability. It cites several Supreme Court and appellate decisions in support. In Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 459-60,

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

113 S.Ct. 884, 122 L.Ed.2d 247 (1993), the Supreme Court overturned a Section 2 antitrust judgment because there was no way to know whether the jury had relied on an erroneously submitted claim in setting damages. Similarly in Sunkist Growers, Inc. v. Winckler & Smith Citrus Prods. Co., 370 U.S. 19, 29-30, 82 S.Ct. 1130, 8 L.Ed.2d 305 (1962), the Court set aside an antitrust judgment where one theory of liability should not have been submitted to the jury. Many other cases have reached similar results if a jury might have relied on erroneously submitted claims. See, e.g., Robertson v. Norton Co., 148 F.3d 905, 908 (8th Cir.1998); Dakota Indus., Inc. v. Ever Best Ltd., 28 F.3d 910, 912 (8th Cir.1994); Dudley v. Dittmer, 795 F.2d 669, 673 (8th Cir.1986); Northeastern Tel. Co. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 651 F.2d 76, 94-95 (2d Cir.1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 943, 102 S.Ct. 1438, 71 L.Ed.2d 654 (1982); see also Barber v. Whirlpool Corp., 34 F.3d 1268, 1278 (4th Cir.1994).

The boat builders argue that the entire damage award may be upheld even when based on Brunswick's Sherman Act liability alone, but they provide no persuasive authority for their theory. They cite a civil rights case dealing only with alternate grounds for summary judgment, see Duffy v. Wolle, 123 F.3d 1026, 1035 n. 5 (8th Cir.1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1137, 118 S.Ct. 1839, 140 L.Ed.2d 1090 (1998), and a distinguishable antitrust case, see General Indus. Corp. v. Hartz Mountain Corp., 810 F.2d 795, 800-01 (8th Cir.1987). Hartz upheld a judgment on Section 2 grounds despite the erroneous submission of a Section 1 claim to the jury, but there the appellant had not challenged the form of special verdict or objected to it at trial. See Hartz, 810 F.2d at 801. Here, Brunswick alerted the district court at trial to the problems with the general verdict form and specifically objected to it on the grounds that it did not "account for the disaggregation principles that need to be addressed by the jury in order that the Court and, if necessary, the Court of Appeals can determine which conduct the jury thought was lawful versus which conduct was unlawful ...." Tr. at 6316-26. Moreover, the claims in Hartz were all brought under the Sherman Act; Section 7 of the Clayton Act was not implicated.

This case is like Spectrum Sports and Sunkist Growers, in that the jury considered an erroneously submitted claim in determining its verdict on damages. It found Brunswick liable for violating Section 7 of the Clayton Act and Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, but it is not possible to know what damages it found to have been caused by the acquisitions upon which the Section 7 claims were based. The verdict form did not require the jury to consider what damages resulted from each type of violation. See Barber, 34 F.3d at 1278. The jury could have assigned millions of dollars in damages to a claim that should not have been submitted in the first instance because of the statute of limitations. Had the verdict form included a damage question for each of the three statutory claims, it would have been possible to deduct from the total damage figure the amount awarded for the Section 7 claim. See Mueller v. Hubbard Milling Co., 573 F.2d 1029, 1038 n. 13 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 865, 99 S.Ct. 189, 58 L.Ed.2d 174 (1978) (special verdicts especially suited to multiple theories of liability).

*12 Because there is no way to know what damages the jury assigned to the Section 7 claims based on the verdict form that was used, Brunswick would be entitled at the very least to a new damages trial on the boat builders' Sherman Act claims.

IV.

Brunswick argues that another trial on the boat builders' Sherman Act claims is not required because it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on those claims and the district court erred in not granting its motion for judgment. Brunswick contends that its discount programs and acquisitions represented pro competitive business conduct that did not unreasonably restrain trade or monopolize the market. The boat builders therefore did not suffer any antitrust injury, and they have not shown causation or damages. The boat builders respond that Brunswick's discount programs amounted to de facto exclusive dealing and its acquisitions enabled it to foreclose a substantial share of the stern drive engine market and to charge supracompetitive high prices for its engines.

[14] The boat builders' antitrust allegations claim damages based on the combined effect of Brunswick's market behavior over some ten years. Under federal law treble damages are available to "[a]ny person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws ...." 15 U.S.C. § 15 (1994). In order to prevail plaintiffs must prove for each claim " 'an antitrust violation, the fact of damage or injury, a causal relationship between the violation and the injury, and the amount of damages.' " Amerinet, Inc., 972 F.2d at 1490 (quoting Rosebrough Monument Co. v. Memorial Park Cemetery Ass'n, 666 F.2d 1130, 1146 (8th Cir.1981), cert. denied, 457 U.S. 1111, 102 S.Ct. 2915, 73 L.Ed.2d 1321 (1982)); see also Green v. Associated Milk Producers, Inc., 692 F.2d 1153, 1157 (8th Cir.1982). Antitrust injury, causation, and damages all are necessary parts of the proof because "Congress did not intend the antitrust laws to provide a remedy in damages for all injuries that might conceivably be traced to an antitrust violation." Hawaii v. Standard Oil Co., 405 U.S. 251, 262-63 n. 14, 92 S.Ct. 885, 31 L.Ed.2d 184 (1972).

Because the boat builders presented the same evidence for their Section 1 and 2 claims, relying primarily on Dr. Hall to present the key evidence to support their theories of liability and causation, we examine Dr. Hall's presentation first and then turn to the separate antitrust claims.

A.

Brunswick argues that Dr. Hall's expert opinion should have been excluded because it was contrary to undisputed record evidence and because it did not separate lawful from unlawful conduct. The district court recognized that > the task Dr. Hall faced in analyzing this case was an enormous one. Notwithstanding the complex nature of the conduct at issue, Dr. Hall was required to construct a hypothetical market, a "but for" market, free of the restraints and conduct alleged to be anticompetitive. The difficulty of such a task has long been recognized by courts in antitrust cases ....

*13 Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 21 F.Supp.2d 923, 927 (E.D.Ark.1998). Despite the inherent difficulty of the task, counsel for the boat builders assured the district court before trial that Dr. Hall's model would reflect the reality of the market and would segregate any lawful acts and unrelated market events that might have contributed to Brunswick's market share from any anticompetitive conduct in order to enable the jury to assign damages only for illegal actions taken by Brunswick.

[15] Counsel's assurances did not eliminate the need for a thorough analysis of the expert's economic model and his proffered opinion. Under Daubert the district court is to make a "preliminary assessment of whether the reasoning or methodology underlying the testimony is scientifically valid and of whether that reasoning or methodology properly can be applied to the facts in issue." Daubert, 509 U.S. at 592-93, 113 S.Ct. 2786. Among the factors to consider is whether the " 'expert testimony proffered in the case is sufficiently tied to the facts of the case that it will aid the jury in resolving a factual dispute.' " Id. at 591, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (quoting United States v. Downing, 753 F.2d 1224, 1242 (3d Cir.1985)). The Court referred to this requirement as "fit," meaning that the expert testimony must not only be based on reliable science but must also "fit" the particular facts of the case. See id.

In recent years the Supreme Court has put renewed emphasis on the importance of the "fit" of an expert's opinion to the data or facts in the case:

> [C]onclusions and methodology are not entirely distinct from one another.... [N]othing in either Daubert or the Federal Rules of Evidence requires a district court to admit opinion evidence that is connected to existing data only by the ipse dixit of the expert. A court may conclude that there is simply too great an analytic gap between the data and the opinion proffered.

General Elec. Co. v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136, 146, 118 S.Ct. 512, 139 L.Ed.2d 508 (1997); see also Jaurequi v. Carter Mfg. Co., 173 F.3d 1076, 1082 n. 3 (8th Cir.1999). A court must focus on the "reasonableness of using such an approach, along with [the expert's] particular method of analyzing the data thereby obtained, to draw a conclusion regarding the particular matter to which the expert testimony was directly relevant." Kumho Tire Co. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 154, 119 S.Ct. 1167, 143 L.Ed.2d 238 (1999) (emphasis in original).

[16][17] The district court commented that because Brunswick had not challenged the Cournot model as a scientific theory, its "criticisms are reduced to complaints about how Dr. Hall applied the Cournot model to the facts of this case." Concord Boat Corp., 21 F.Supp.2d at 934. If a party believes that an expert opinion has not considered all of the relevant facts, an objection to its admission is appropriate. See Kumho Tire Co., 526 U.S. at 154, 119 S.Ct. 1167; Joiner, 522 U.S. at 146, 118 S.Ct.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

512. Even a theory that might meet certain Daubert factors, such as peer review and publication, testing, known or potential error rate, and general acceptance, [FN11] should not be admitted if it does not apply to the specific facts of the case. See Kumho Tire Co., 526 U.S. at 154, 119 S.Ct. 1167; Joiner, 522 U.S. at 146, 118 S.Ct. 512.

*14 [18] Not all relevant circumstances were incorporated into the expert's method of analysis related to antitrust liability. Dr. Hall's opinion that Brunswick's discount programs imposed a tax on boat builders who chose to purchase engines from other manufacturers is not supported by the evidence that some boat builders chose to purchase 100% of their engines from Brunswick when they only needed to purchase 80% to qualify for the maximum discount. [FN12] If Brunswick's market share had enabled it to charge supracompetitive high prices for its engines, presumably none of the boat builders would have chosen to purchase more than the minimum percentage required to receive the discount. There was other evidence that the boat builders were not unable to forgo Brunswick's discounts. For example, the boat builders wielded sufficient power over Brunswick to force it to scuttle its 1994 "Industry Growth Program," which would have raised the market share requirement to 95%, and their reaction led to a reduction in market share levels for the 1995 to 1997 model year program.

Dr. Hall used the Cournot model to construct a hypothetical market which was not grounded in the economic reality of the stern drive engine market, for it ignored inconvenient evidence. The basis for his model was a theoretical situation in which some other manufacturer's engine would be viewed as equal in quality to Brunswick's. See Tr. at 1351. In this hypothetical market, Dr. Hall assessed an overcharge on each engine sold at any point where Brunswick possessed over the 50% market share he deemed permissible. The overcharge was described as the difference between the actual price paid by the boat builders and the price that would theoretically have existed in a more competitive market. This approach was not affected by the actual price at which Brunswick's engines were sold since the overcharge percentage was applied any time its market share surpassed 50%. As Dr. Hall testified but his opinion did not reflect, Brunswick had achieved a 75% share in the mid 1980s, before it started the market share discounts and before it acquired Bayliner and Sea Ray. See Tr. at 1392.

The model also failed to account for market events that both sides agreed were not related to any anticompetitive conduct, such as the recall of OMC's Cobra engine and the problems associated with the Volvo/OMC merger. Dr. Hall admitted on cross examination that such facts could have been incorporated into his model but that he had not done so:

> I did not numerically attribute--in other words, it wasn't some specific adjustment that you'll see in my computer spread sheet saying, "Here's what I did because of OMC." And that's because of the framework that I was working in. Remember, I was stepping back and saying, "What's a reasonable benchmark for what a freer market would have been?" .... Within that framework, there isn't a slot ... [to get] down into the year by year details.
> *15 ... What I want to do is stand back and say what averaged over the years, with, of course, ups and downs.

Tr. at 1417-18. Dr. Hall testified about OMC's recall of its Cobra engine and admitted that the "decline in OMC's market share and the corresponding increase during this time period of Brunswick's market share is very much related to the switch-over in engines previously supplied by OMC ...." Tr. at 1249. The OMC/Volvo joint venture alone increased Brunswick's market share by as much as 10%. See Def.'s Ex. 1207 (letter dated May 21, 1993 from David Ball to IBBI members: Brunswick "picked up over 10 unearned market share points this past year due to the chaos created by the Volvo/OMC joint venture announcement"); Tr. at 4954 (testimony of David Ball, President of IBBI). There was also evidence that the boat builders did not hesitate to switch to OMC and Volvo when they offered superior discounts. Cf. SMS Sys. Maintenance Servs., Inc. v. Digital Equip. Corp., 188 F.3d 11, 19-20 (1st Cir.1999), cert. denied, --- U.S. ----, 120 S.Ct. 1241, --- L.Ed.2d ---- (1999) (No. 99-995) (actual behavior of customers more important than "self-serving testimony" of plaintiffs).

Dr. Hall's expert opinion should not have been admitted because it did not incorporate all aspects of the economic reality of the stern drive engine market and because it did not separate lawful from unlawful conduct. Because of the deficiencies in the foundation of the opinion, the expert's resulting conclusions were "mere speculation." Virgin Atlantic Airways Ltd. v. British Airways PLC, 69 F.Supp.2d 571, 580 (S.D.N.Y.1999) (summary judgment appropriate on Section 1 and 2 claims because "an expert's opinion is not a substitute for a plaintiff's obligation to provide evidence of facts that support the applicability of the expert's opinion to the case"). Expert testimony that is speculative is not competent proof and contributes "nothing to a 'legally sufficient evidentiary basis.' " Weisgram v. Marley Co., --- U.S. ----, 120 S.Ct. 1011, 1015, 1020, --- L.Ed.2d ----, (2000) (citing Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 242, 113 S.Ct. 2578, 125 L.Ed.2d 168 (1993)). "Expert testimony is useful as a guide to interpreting market facts, but it is not a substitute for them." Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 242, 113 S.Ct. 2578; Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 594 n. 19, 106 S.Ct. 1348, 89 L.Ed.2d 538 (1986) ("[E]xpert opinion evidence ... has little probative value in comparison with the economic factors ....").

[19][20] An expert opinion cannot sustain a jury's verdict when it "is not supported by sufficient facts to validate it in the eyes of the law, or when indisputable record facts contradict or otherwise render the opinion unreasonable ...." Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 242, 113 S.Ct. 2578; see also Wright v. Willamette Indus., Inc., 91 F.3d 1105, 1108 (8th Cir.1996) (motion for judgment should have been granted because the expert opinion on causation was speculative). An error in admission of evidence is reversible if the ruling affected a substantial right of a party. See Fed. R. Ev. 103(a); see also White v. Honeywell, Inc., 141 F.3d 1270, 1275 (8th Cir.1998); cf. Fed.R.Civ.P. 61. Here Dr. Hall's expert opinion was the basis of the boat builders' damage case, and the jury clearly relied on his opinion in reaching its verdict because the damages it awarded to the individual boat builders were identical to the detailed figures Dr. Hall had calculated. Compare Pls.' Ex. 2556, and Tr. at 2608-46, with Appendix to this opinion. It cannot be said that the verdict would have been the same without the expert testimony, and its admission affected Brunswick's substantial rights. Brunswick's motion for judgment should have therefore been granted. See Weisgram, --- U.S. at ----, 120 S.Ct. at 1015.

B.

16 [21] Brunswick argues that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the boat builders' Sherman Act claims because of the improper expert testimony and because the other evidence presented by the boat builders was insufficient to demonstrate antitrust injury, causation, and damage. The boat builders argue that there is more than sufficient evidence in the trial record of Brunswick's anticompetitive conduct to support the jury's finding of liability and damages. Antitrust plaintiffs must prove an antitrust violation by a preponderance of the evidence. Cf. Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 390, 103 S.Ct. 683, 74 L.Ed.2d 548 (1983). After a thorough examination of the record, we find that the boat builders failed to carry their burden of proof and Brunswick's motion for judgment should have been granted for this reason.

[22] Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act prohibits "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce." 15 U.S.C. § 1 (1994). To prove a Section 1 violation, a plaintiff must show an agreement in the form of a contract, combination, or conspiracy that imposes an unreasonable restraint on trade. See Willman v. Heartland Hosp. E., 34 F.3d 605, 610 (8th Cir.1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1018, 115 S.Ct. 1361, 131 L.Ed.2d 218 (1995). The unreasonableness of a restraint is determined using either a per se standard or a standard that examines all of the circumstances, the so-called rule of reason test. See Business Elecs. Corp. v. Sharp Elecs. Corp., 485 U.S. 717, 723, 108 S.Ct. 1515, 99 L.Ed.2d 808 (1988). Under the per se standard, conduct that is "manifestly anticompetitive" or "would always or almost always tend to restrict competition," id. (internal quotations and citation omitted), is conclusively presumed to restrain competition unreasonably " 'without elaborate inquiry as to the precise harm [it has] caused or the business excuse for [its] use.' " Rossi v. Standard Roofing, Inc., 156 F.3d 452, 461 (3d Cir.1998) (quoting Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5, 78 S.Ct. 514, 2 L.Ed.2d 545 (1958)). Practices that have been held to be illegal per se include price fixing, division of markets, group boycotts, and tying arrangements. See Arizona v. Maricopa County Med. Soc., 457 U.S. 332, 344 n. 15, 102 S.Ct. 2466, 73 L.Ed.2d 48 (1982); Double D Spotting Serv., Inc. v. Supervalu, Inc., 136 F.3d 554, 558 (8th Cir.1998).

[23] Because the boat builders have not alleged that Brunswick engaged in activity that would trigger a per se analysis, we apply the rule of reason analysis that focuses on the "particular facts disclosed by the record," Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 467, 112 S.Ct. 2072, 119 L.Ed.2d 265 (1992) (internal quotations and citation omitted), and "weigh[ ] all of the circumstances ... in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition," Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 49, 97 S.Ct. 2549, 53 L.Ed.2d 568 (1977).

The boat builders' Section 1 theory is that Brunswick violated the law by means of its agreements or contracts. They argue that Brunswick's market share discount programs created an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of Section 1. See Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 81 S.Ct. 623, 5 L.Ed.2d 580 (1961); Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 31 S.Ct. 502, 55 L.Ed. 619 (1911). It is undisputed that the market share discounts were not exclusive contracts. At most the programs were de facto exclusive dealing arrangements. Dr. Hall testified at trial that the discount programs were "voluntary contracts. Nobody forced the boatmakers individually to accept these. They accepted these contracts because they individually got a deal from it. They got their discounts if they bought a lot of Brunswick engines." Tr. at 1173-74.

*17 [24][25] Section 1 claims that allege only de facto exclusive dealing may be viable. See Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1301-02 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1009, 103 S.Ct. 364, 74 L.Ed.2d 400 (1982). The principle criteria used to evaluate the reasonableness of a contractual arrangement include the extent to which competition has been foreclosed in a substantial share of the relevant market, the duration of any exclusive arrangement, and the height of entry barriers. See Tampa Elec. Co., 365 U.S. at 327, 81 S.Ct. 623; Ryko Mfg. Co. v. Eden Servs., 823 F.2d 1215, 1233-35 (8th Cir.1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1026, 108 S.Ct. 751, 98 L.Ed.2d 763 (1988); see also Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 45, 104 S.Ct. 1551, 80 L.Ed.2d 2 (1984) (O'Connor, J., concurring) (reasonableness of the restraint on trade in exclusive dealing cases depends upon whether a "significant fraction of buyers or sellers are frozen out of a market").

[26] The boat builders failed to produce sufficient evidence to demonstrate that Brunswick had foreclosed a substantial share of the stern drive engine market through anticompetitive conduct. They also did not demonstrate that Brunswick's discount program was in any way exclusive. The programs did not require the boat builders to commit to Brunswick for any specified period of time. See Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 395 (7th Cir.1984) (contracts terminable in less than a year presumptively lawful). They were free to walk away from the discounts at any time, and they in fact switched to OMC engines at various points when that manufacturer offered superior discounts. One of the boat builders' witnesses testified, for example, that he had switched from 80% Brunswick engines to 70-80% OMC engines between 1988 and 1991 because OMC was offering better prices. See Tr. at 327. Another witness testified in his deposition that his boat building employer had switched from 90% Brunswick to 80% OMC in 1993 because of OMC's favorable pricing. See Def.'s Ex. 3466; cf. SMS Sys. Maintenance Servs., Inc., 188 F.3d at 19-20 (rejecting Sherman Act Section 2 monopolization claim that defendant used generous warranty contracts to lock in customers where the customers' actual behavior indicated they were willing and able to switch to other suppliers).

The boat builders also did not show that significant barriers to entry existed in the stern drive engine market. If entry barriers to new firms are not significant, it may be difficult for even a monopoly company to control prices through some type of exclusive dealing arrangement because a new firm or firms easily can enter the market to challenge it. Cf. Lomar Wholesale Grocery, Inc. v. Dieter's Gourmet Foods, Inc., 824 F.2d 582, 597-98 (8th Cir.1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1010, 108 S.Ct. 707, 98 L.Ed.2d 658 (1988) (predatory price claim rejected where there was no evidence of a "drastically declining price structure" or of increasing concentration in the market (internal quotations and citation omitted)). If there are significant entry barriers in the market, a potential competitor would have difficulty entering in order to challenge a firm that is charging supracompetitive high prices. See id. A significant barrier to entry may exist when large amounts of capital would be required. See Mississippi River Corp. v. F.T.C., 454 F.2d 1083, 1092 (8th Cir.1972). The boat builders presented scant evidence that firms have difficulty entering the stern drive engine manufacturing market. They suggest that engine manufacturing is a capital intensive business, but Dr. Hall testified that various companies are capable of assembling stern drive engines and of overcoming whatever entry barriers might exist. He noted that Toyota had entered the market recently and was on its way to competing with established manufacturers like Brunswick and OMC/Volvo. Brunswick's discounts, because they were significantly above cost, left ample room for new competitors such as Toyota to enter the engine manufacturing market and to lure customers away by offering superior discounts.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*18 In sum, the boat builders failed to establish Section 1 violations or a sufficient causal connection between the alleged violations and their injuries. In order to make out their case they had to produce evidence to show that Brunswick's market share discount programs were an unreasonable contractual arrangement, based on the amount of market foreclosure, exclusivity, and the erection of entry barriers. See Tampa Elec. Co., 365 U.S. at 325-29, 81 S.Ct. 623. The boat builders have not shown that a reasonable jury could have found that Brunswick's programs, which were not exclusionary, caused harm in the first instance, or that they were a "material cause" of any harm allegedly suffered. National Ass'n of Review Appraisers & Mortgage Underwriters, Inc. v. Appraisal Found., 64 F.3d 1130, 1135 (8th Cir.1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1189, 116 S.Ct. 1676, 134 L.Ed.2d 779 (1996) (summary judgment affirmed where defendant's allegedly anticompetitive conduct was not a material cause of plaintiff's injury); see also Amerinet, 972 F.2d at 1494 (summary judgment affirmed where plaintiff failed to provide sufficient evidence of antitrust injury, causation, and damages). The boat builders also failed to account for "numerous intervening economic and market factors which ... may have been the actual cause of the plaintiffs' injuries," such as market share gains related to competitors' mistakes. Greater Rockford Energy & Tech. Corp. v. Shell Oil Co., 998 F.2d 391, 402 (7th Cir.1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1111, 114 S.Ct. 1054, 127 L.Ed.2d 375 (1994) (summary judgment affirmed where "as a matter of law, plaintiffs have failed to show with a fair degree of certainty that the antitrust violation was a material and substantial factor causing their alleged injuries").

[27][28] Section 2 of the Sherman Act prohibits "monopoliz[ing], or attempt[ing] to monopolize ... any part of the trade or commerce among the several States ...." 15 U.S.C. § 2 (1994). To establish a Section 2 violation, plaintiffs must show that 1) the defendant possessed monopoly power in the relevant market and 2) the defendant willfully acquired or maintained this monopoly power by anticompetitive conduct as opposed to gaining that power as a result "of a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident." United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 86 S.Ct. 1698, 16 L.Ed.2d 778 (1966); see also Morgan v. Ponder, 892 F.2d 1355, 1358 (8th Cir.1989). Monopoly power is defined as "the power to control prices or exclude competition." United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 391, 76 S.Ct. 994, 100 L.Ed. 1264 (1956).

[29] The boat builders argue that the discount programs and acquisitions were part of a deliberate plan to exclude competitors from the stern drive engine market, and that this exclusion enabled Brunswick to charge supracompetitive high prices for its engines. As with the Section 1 claim, the boat builders point to evidence they say shows that when Brunswick was threatened in the mid-1980s with OMC's new Cobra engine and with increasing competition from other engine manufacturers, it offered market share discounts and acquired Bayliner and Sea Ray in an effort to avoid competition on the merits. They also allege that Brunswick attempted to erect and maintain barriers to entry and to place its customers in "golden handcuffs," such that boat builders and dealers had no choice but to purchase engines from it.

*19 [30] The Supreme Court "has urged great caution and a skeptical eye when dealing with unfair pricing claims." Bathke v. Casey's Gen. Stores, Inc., 64 F.3d 340, 343 (8th Cir.1995). This is because "[l]ow prices benefit consumers regardless of how those prices are set, and so long as they are above predatory levels, they do not threaten competition. Hence, they cannot give rise to antitrust injury." Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 340, 110 S.Ct. 1884, 109 L.Ed.2d 333 (1990) (rejecting Section 1 claim that a maximum price fixing conspiracy caused antitrust injury when the prices were fixed above a predatory level). In the absence of predatory prices, [FN13] any losses caused by pricing "cannot be said to stem from an anticompetitive aspect of the defendant's conduct. It is in the interest of competition to permit dominant firms to engage in vigorous competition, including price competition." Id. at 340-41, 110 S.Ct. 1884 (emphasis in original) (internal quotations and citations omitted).

[31] Because cutting prices in order to increase business often is the very essence of competition, which antitrust laws were designed to encourage, it "is beyond the practical ability of a judicial tribunal to control [above cost discounting] without courting intolerable risks of chilling legitimate price cutting." Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 223, 113 S.Ct. 2578 (citation omitted); see also Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 475 U.S. at 594, 106 S.Ct. 1348 (emphasizing the pro-competitive effect of above cost discounting); Morgan, 892 F.2d at 1359-63; Barry Wright Corp. v. ITT Grinnell Corp., 724 F.2d 227, 230-36 (1st Cir.1983). To hold otherwise "would, in effect, render illegal any decision by a firm to cut prices in order to increase market share. The antitrust laws require no such perverse result ...." Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 116, 107 S.Ct. 484, 93 L.Ed.2d 427 (1986). If a firm has discounted prices to a level that remains above the firm's average variable cost, "the plaintiff must overcome a strong presumption of legality by showing other factors indicating that the price charged is anticompetitive." Morgan, 892 F.2d at 1360. This is because a firm's ability to offer above cost discounts is attributable to "the lower cost structure of the alleged predator, and so represents competition on the merits ...." Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 223, 113 S.Ct. 2578.

The decisions of the Supreme Court in Brooke Group and Matsushita illustrate the general rule that above cost discounting is not anticompetitive. In Brooke Group Ltd. the trial court had granted the defendants' motion for judgment overturning a $49.6 million verdict after a 115 day trial with nearly 3000 exhibits. See Liggett Group, Inc. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 748 F.Supp. 344, 348 (M.D.N.C.1990), aff'd, 964 F.2d 335, 336 (4th Cir.1992), aff'd sub nom., Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 219, 113 S.Ct. 2578. The plaintiff had failed to demonstrate that the defendants had caused injury to competition. See Brooke Group Ltd., 509 U.S. at 243, 113 S.Ct. 2578. The Court pointed out that > *20 [a]lthough [the plaintiff's] theory of liability, as an abstract matter, is within the reach of the statute .... [The plaintiff] was not entitled to submit its case to the jury.... The record in this case demonstrates that the anticompetitive scheme [the plaintiff] alleged, when judged against the realities of the market, does not provide an adequate basis for a finding of liability.

Id. at 230, 113 S.Ct. 2578 (citations omitted). In Matsushita the Court remanded a predatory pricing conspiracy case for entry of summary judgment for the defendants unless > there is other evidence that is sufficiently unambiguous to permit a trier of fact to find that [the defendants] conspired to price predatorily for two decades despite the absence of any apparent motive to do so. The evidence must "ten[d] to exclude the possibility" that [the defendants] underpriced [the plaintiffs] to compete for business rather than to implement an economically senseless conspiracy.

Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 597-98, 106 S.Ct. 1348. In both of these cases the Supreme Court put the focus on the actual facts or realities of the marketplace rather than on hypotheticals.

No one argues in this case that Brunswick's discounts drove the engine price below cost, and Brunswick contends that its discounts were therefore per se lawful. The district court questioned Brunswick's per se legality theory, since the boat builders' claim was that Brunswick's conduct as a whole, including the discounts and acquisitions, enabled it to "charge[ ] anticompetitive high prices for its engines." Concord Boat Corp., 21 F.Supp.2d at 929 (emphasis in original). The court examined several cases that had "rejected the argument that any pricing practice that leads to above costs prices is per se lawful under the antitrust laws." Id. (emphasis in original); see LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ.A 97-3983, 1997 WL 734005 (E.D.Pa. Nov.14, 1997) (bundling discounts on several product purchased together); SmithKline Corp. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 575 F.2d 1056 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 838, 99 S.Ct. 123, 58 L.Ed.2d 134 (1978) (pricing scheme linking monopolistic product with another competitive product violated Section 2); Ortho Diagnostic Sys., Inc. v. Abbott Labs., Inc., 920 F.Supp. 455, 467 (S.D.N.Y.1996) (refusing to dismiss Section 2 bundling claims even though defendant not accused of pricing below cost because "average variable cost is the controlling standard in this Circuit [only for] single product cases"). The cases examined by the district court all involve bundling or tying, however, which "cannot exist unless two separate product markets have been linked." Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2, 466 U.S. at 21, 104 S.Ct. 1551. Because only one product, stern drive engines, is at issue here and there are no allegations of tying or bundling with another product, we do not find these cases persuasive.

[32] The boat builders also have not shown that Brunswick's superior market share was achieved or maintained "by means other than the competition on the merits ...." Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 522 (5th Cir.1999) (citing Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 105 S.Ct. 2847, 86 L.Ed.2d 467 (1985)); see also Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. at 570-71, 86 S.Ct. 1698. A Section 2 defendant's proffered business justification is the most important factor in determining whether its challenged conduct is not competition on the merits. See Stearns Airport Equip. Co., 170 F.3d at 522; see also Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. at 570-71, 86 S.Ct. 1698. Section 2 claims cannot succeed if a defendant's dominant market share resulted from "a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident." Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. at 571, 86 S.Ct. 1698. On the other hand, if the conduct "has no rational business purpose other than its adverse effects on competitors, an inference that it is exclusionary is supported." Stearns Airport Equip. Co., 170 F.3d at 522.

*21 Brunswick's business justification in this case is that it was trying to sell its product. Cf. id. at 524. Cutting prices is the "very essence of competition." Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 475 U.S. at 594, 106 S.Ct. 1348. Brunswick's competitors also cut prices in order to attract additional business, confirming that such a practice was a normal competitive tool within the stern drive manufacturing industry. See id.; see also Trace X Chem., Inc. v. Canadian Indus., Ltd., 738 F.2d 261, 266 (8th Cir.1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1160, 105 S.Ct. 911, 83 L.Ed.2d 925 (1985) ("Acts which are ordinary business practices typical of those used in a competitive market do not constitute anti-competitive conduct violative of Section 2."). In addition, Brunswick's discount programs were not exclusive dealing contracts and its customers were not required either to purchase 100% from Brunswick or to refrain from purchasing from competitors in order to receive the discount (and in fact could purchase up to 40% of requirements from other sellers without forgoing the discount). See Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Serv. of Am., Inc., 190 F.3d 974, 976 (9th Cir.1999) (affirming summary judgment for defendant in Section 2 predatory pricing and exclusive dealing case where the challenged volume discount contracts were terminable "for any reason with very little notice" and did not foreclose customers from entering into contracts with the defendant's competitors). Boat builders and dealers were free to walk away from Brunswick's discounts at any time, see id., and the evidence showed that they did so when Brunswick's competitors offered better discounts, thus discrediting the boat builders' theory that the discounts created "golden handcuffs" and entry barriers for other engine manufacturers.

C.

Giving the boat builders the benefit to which they are entitled of all legitimate inferences, they did not offer sufficient evidence to enable a jury to determine that Brunswick's market share discount programs and acquisitions were anticompetitive. Even considering the erroneously admitted testimony of Dr. Hall, the boat builders failed to offer a "legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for [them]." Weisgram, --- U.S. at ----, 120 S.Ct. at 1020 (internal quotations and citation omitted). They did not establish antitrust injury or causation with respect to either Sherman Act claim. The boat builders had a "full and fair opportunity to present [their] case," and the record evidence was insufficient to justify the verdict. Id. 120 S.Ct. at 1015. Brunswick is therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the Sherman Act claims.

V.

After a careful review of the voluminous record in this case, we conclude that the judgment for the boat builders cannot be upheld and that Brunswick is entitled to entry of judgment in its favor. Since the boat builders did not file their case until more than four years after the accrual of their cause of action under the Clayton Act and no exception to the running of the limitations period applies, the Section 7 claims should have been dismissed rather than submitted to the jury. We also conclude that the boat builders did not make out submissible Sherman Act claims. We therefore reverse and vacate the judgment in favor of the boat builders, including the award of fees and costs, and remand for entry of judgment in favor of Brunswick. [FN14]

APPENDIX

*22 The relevant portion of the verdict form with the jury's answers follows:

PART I Plaintiffs' Antitrust Claims

1. Do you find from a preponderance of the evidence that Plaintiffs have proved a relevant product market?
YES / NO____

2. If you answered "NO" to Question 1 then go to PART II. If you answered "YES" to Question 1, place an "X" next to the following engines that you find by a preponderance of the evidence to be in the relevant product market:

/ stern drive engines

____ outboard engines / inboard engines

____ jet engines

3. Do you find from a preponderance of the evidence that Brunswick monopolized that market in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act?
YES / NO____

4. Do you find from a preponderance of the evidence that Brunswick engaged in an unreasonable restraint of trade in that market in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act?
YES / NO____

5. Do you find from a preponderance of the evidence Brunswick engaged in acquisitions which had the effect of substantially lessening competition in that market, or tending to create a monopoly in that market, in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act?
YES / NO____

6. If you answered YES to either question 3, or question 4, or question 5 (or answered yes to more than one of those questions) what, if any, damages did the Plaintiffs suffer (or will suffer) as a result of Brunswick's antitrust violation or violations in that market? Use Chart 1 to fill in the damages, if any, suffered (or to be suffered) by each of the Plaintiffs during each of the following time periods:

a. From December 7, 1991 through the date of verdict; and
b. After the date of verdict.

PART II Brunswick's Section 1 Counterclaim

10. Do you find by a preponderance of the evidence that any of the Plaintiffs engaged in an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act?

YES____ NO/

FN1. The Honorable Andrew W. Bogue, United States District Judge for the District of South Dakota, sitting by designation.

FN2. The plaintiffs include twenty four corporations that manufacture and sell recreational boats; they are located in various states, including Arkansas, California, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Texas, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington, Wisconsin, and Canada. An additional party plaintiff is an Illinois buying cooperative composed of recreational boat manufacturers.

FN3. Four financially troubled boatbuilders--Baja, Porter, Pro-Line, and Fountain--entered into long term contracts with Brunswick in exchange for financial assistance. The contracts were for three to five years and, in the case of Baja and Porter, they contained some provisions extending beyond five years. The Baja and Fountain contracts required those companies to purchase 100% of their engines from Brunswick. Porter was required to purchase 99%, and Pro-Line's contract contained a 50% market share threshold. The boat builders' expert testified that these companies made up about 5% of the stern drive engine market. See Tr. at 1179.

FN4. Brunswick also made several other acquisitions that were not part of the main focus of the boat builders' Clayton Act claims. In 1987 it made a small asset purchase from BMW Marine Diesel, a European diesel engine manufacturer; Brunswick hoped this would enable it to compete with Volvo in Europe. See Tr. at 4552. In 1990 it acquired Kiekhaefer Aeromarine, which annually produced about sixty high performance stern drive engines that were priced at more than $50,000. Neither of these acquisitions involved products that competed in the relevant market, nor did they occur during the limitations period. See discussion Part III.A. The boat builders characterized both companies as "small players" in their closing argument at trial. See Tr. at 6632. In 1995 Brunswick bought boat builder Baja Cruisers which had 2.8% of the stern drive engine market; the boat builders' expert testified that Baja was not really a significant player in the market. See id. at 1178, 1189.

FN5. See Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 592, 113 S.Ct. 2786, 125 L.Ed.2d 469 (1993).

FN6. A copy of the verdict form with the jury's answers is attached to this opinion. See Appendix.

FN7. December 7, 1991 was four years before the day on which this action was filed, December 7, 1995.

FN8. In denying equitable relief to the boat builders, the district court indicated that they had asked for an "order that Brunswick divest itself within twelve months of its U.S. Marine [Bayliner] and Sea Ray boat manufacturing divisions ...." Order of Oct. 16, 1998 at 7. The boat builders apparently had not specifically requested divestiture of Baja, which was being operated as part of the Sea Ray division. The court held that "[i]n light of the record as a whole, the balance of equities precludes any award of divestiture, including the divestiture by Brunswick of Baja ...." Id. at 13 (emphasis in original).

FN9. The National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) has submitted an amicus curiae brief supporting Brunswick's position that this type of discount program results in lower prices for consumers. NAM's 14,000 member companies and subsidiaries, which include 10,000 small manufacturers, employ approximately 85% of all manufacturing workers in the United States and produce over 80% of the nation's manufactured goods. See Amicus Curiae Br. for the National Association of Manufacturers at 1. It states that this case has significant implications for potential antitrust liability for its members should they choose to offer above cost, non exclusive discounts to consumers. See id. at 2.

FN10. See Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-68 (1994).

FN11. It is not clear how often the Cournot model has been employed in antitrust cases; a Westlaw search on February 3, 2000 did not find any other federal antitrust case discussing its application.

FN12. The owner of Mariah Boats, for example, which was found by the jury to have suffered $16 million of the damages awarded to the boat builders, testified that when Brunswick lowered its market share discount level to 70% in 1994, "it was of no significance [to Mariah] because we were 90-plus anyway." Tr. at 2129.

FN13. Predatory pricing occurs when " 'a single firm, having a dominant share of the relevant market, cuts its prices in order to force competitors out of the market, or perhaps to deter potential entrants from coming in.' " Morgan, 892 F.2d at 1358 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 475

> U.S. at 584 n. 8, 106 S.Ct. 1348). Determining whether price cutting is predatory is not a simple inquiry:

> The difficulty, of course, is distinguishing highly competitive pricing from predatory pricing. A firm that cuts its prices or substantially reduces its profit margin is not necessarily engaging in predatory pricing. It may simply be responding to new competition, or to a downturn in market demand. Indeed, there is a real danger in mislabeling such practices as predatory, because consumers generally benefit from the low prices resulting from aggressive price competition.

Morgan, 892 F.2d at 1358-59 (citing Barry Wright Corp. v. ITT Grinnell Corp., 724 F.2d 227, 231 (1st Cir.1983)). There is no allegation that Brunswick engaged in predatory pricing.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

CONCORD BOAT CORPORATION, et al PLAINTIFFS

V. NO. LR-C-95-781

BRUNSWICK CORPORATION DEFENDANT

ORDER

Presently before the Court are Plaintiffs' Claims for Equitable Relief Related to Plaintiffs' First, Second and Sixth Claims for Relief. On September 8, 1998, Plaintiffs filed a memorandum in support of their claims for equitable relief along with proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law. Brunswick filed a memorandum in opposition to Plaintiffs' requests for equitable relief and a separate set of proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law on September 16, 1998. Plaintiffs filed a rebuttal submission on September 21, 1998.

On October 16, 1998, the Court granted Plaintiffs' motion to strike two affidavits submitted in support of Brunswick's response, as well as any references to those affidavits in the supporting materials. The Court also denied Brunswick's motion to update the record with an additional affidavit. The Court has not considered the affidavits in making the findings of fact and conclusions of law set forth herein.

After careful consideration of the parties' submissions, the relevant case law, and the record as a whole, the Court makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Plaintiff Albemarle Boats Inc. is a North Carolina corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

2. Plaintiff Armada Manufacturing Company, Inc. is a Kentucky corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

3. Plaintiff Caravelle Boats, Inc. is a Georgia corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

4. Plaintiff Campion Marine, Inc. is a Canadian corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

5. Plaintiff Century Craft Industries, f/k/a Vanguard Industries, is a Canadian corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

6. Plaintiff Concord Boat Corporation is an Arkansas corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

7. Plaintiff F.R.P. Industries, d/b/a Baha Cruisers, is a Florida corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

16diii005828

8. Plaintiff G.W. Invader is an Indiana corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

9. Plaintiff Galaxie Boat Works, Inc., is a Texas corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

10. Plaintiff Harris Kayot, Inc., is an Indiana corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

11. Plaintiff KCS International, Inc. is a Wisconsin corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

12. Plaintiff Malibu Boats West, Inc. is a California corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

13. Plaintiff Mariah Boats, Inc. is an Illinois corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

14. Plaintiff Mirage Manufacturing LLC is a Washington corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

16diii005829

15. Plaintiff Play Time Mfg. by Ohio Marine Distributors, Inc. is an Ohio corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

16. Plaintiff Powerquest Boats, Inc. is a Michigan corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

17. Plaintiff Sea Arrow Marine, Inc. is a Texas corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

18. Plaintiff Silverton Marine Corporation is a New Jersey corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

19. Plaintiff Thompson Marine Products, Inc. is a Michigan corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines.

20. Plaintiff Weeres Industries Corporation is a Minnesota corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational boats that are equipped with stern drive engines and/or inboard engines. The Plaintiffs identified in findings 1 through 20 will be referred to hereafter as the "boat manufacturer Plaintiffs."

21. Plaintiff Independents Boat Builders, Inc. ("IBBI") is an Illinois corporation, all of the members of which are manufacturers of recreational boats. IBBI negotiates agreements on behalf of its members with vendors of equipment and materials used in the manufacture of recreational boats, but does not itself buy such equipment or materials. All of the boat manufacturer Plaintiffs are members of IBBI.

22. Defendant Brunswick Corporation ("Brunswick") is a Delaware corporation, the business of which includes the manufacture and sale of recreational products, including recreational boats, engines for recreational boats and recreational boats equipped with engines.

23. A stern drive engine is one type of marine engine used in recreational boats. A stern drive engine includes an engine block within the hull of the boat, and a drive system which extends through the stern or transom of the boat.

24. An inboard engine is one type of marine engine used in recreational boats. An inboard engine is entirely enclosed within the hull of the boat, and drives a propeller shaft that passes through the hull.

25. An outboard engine is one type of marine engine used in recreational boats. An outboard engine, including engine, drive, and propeller, is attached to the stern transom of the boat, and is substantially external to the boat's hull.

26. A jet pump is one type of marine engine used in recreational boats. A jet pump propels a boat by taking water in through an intake and expelling the water through a nozzle at the rear of the boat.

27. Stern drive and inboard engines are the types of engines with respect to which Plaintiffs seek equitable relief on the claims previously tried to the jury.

28. This action was initially filed on December 7, 1995.

29. In connection with their antitrust claims, the boat manufacturer Plaintiffs sought damages based on the alleged amounts of overcharges they claimed to have paid on stern drive and inboard engines that they bought from Brunswick, beginning in calendar year 1986 and extending through calendar year 2000.

16diii005831

30. The parties agreed that the relevant geographic market consisted of the United States and Canada, so that engines in the relevant product market are ones sold or intended for sale in the United States or Canada.

31. The jury returned its verdict on June 19, 1998.

32. The jury found the relevant product market to include stern drive and inboard engines and not to include outboard or jet engines.

33. The jury found that Brunswick monopolized the relevant market in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act; engaged in an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act; and engaged in acquisitions which had the effect of substantially lessening competition in the relevant market, or tending to create a monopoly in that market, in violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act.

34. The jury awarded damages (before trebling) to the boat manufacturer Plaintiffs in the amount of $44,371,761 for the period from December 1991, to June 1998, and allocated those damages among those Plaintiffs as detailed in Chart 1 of the Verdict Form. The Court had instructed the jury that the Plaintiffs' antitrust claims were subject to a four-year statute of limitations. The jury awarded no damages to any plaintiff for the time period prior to December 7, 1991, and awarded no damages to any plaintiff for the time period after June 1998, through calendar year 2000.

35. On September 14, 1998 the Court entered a Judgment on the Jury's verdict trebling the damages awarded by the Jury to $133,115,283.

16diii005832

36. Plaintiffs seek additional equitable relief for the violations by Brunswick of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, Section 1 of the Sherman Act, and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. Plaintiffs, as more fully set forth in their submission of September 15, 1998, ask the Court, sitting as a chancellor, to order that Brunswick divest itself within twelve months of its US Marine and Sea Ray boat manufacturing divisions (the assets of which are used to manufacture or sell boats powered by stern drive or inboard engines). Plaintiffs further ask the Court to enjoin market share related programs; policies designed to cause any buying group to break up; policies designed to create barriers to entry into the relevant market; joint ventures; long term contracts; Brunswick's acquisition of any interest in stern drive and/or inboard engine manufacturers; and Brunswick's acquisition of any interest in builders of stern drive and/or inboard boats.

37. In response to the prayer for additional equitable relief summarized in finding 36, Brunswick has denied that Plaintiffs are entitled to any equitable relief and has raised defenses including estoppel, laches and unclean hands.

38. Brunswick has at all relevant times manufactured and sold stern drive and inboard engines for use in recreational boats under the brand name MerCruiser.

39. Brunswick offers MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines for sale to independent manufacturers of recreational boats, including the Plaintiffs, for incorporation in boats built by such manufacturers, and has done so at all relevant times.

40. In December 1986, Brunswick acquired Bayliner Marine Corporation, a manufacturer of recreational boats. Brunswick, through its US Marine Division, sells recreational boats under the Bayliner name and other brand names.

16diii005833

41. The fact that Brunswick acquired Bayliner Marine Corporation in December, 1986, was public information at the time, and was generally known throughout the recreational boat manufacturing industry in North America. Trial Tr. at 1929.

42. In December 1986, Brunswick acquired Ray Industries, Inc., a manufacturer of recreational boats. Brunswick, through its Sea Ray division, sells recreational boats under the Sea Ray name and other brand names.

43. The fact that Brunswick acquired Ray Industries, Inc., in December 1986, was public information at the time, and was generally known throughout the recreational boat manufacturing industry in North America. Trial Tr. at 1929.

44. Since its acquisitions of Bayliner and Sea Ray in December 1986, Brunswick has generally used MerCruiser engines in boats manufactured by its US Marine and Sea Ray divisions that employed stern drive or inboard engines to the extent permitted by contractual commitments that existed at the time of the acquisitions. Since approximately 1989, a very large proportion of the stern drive and inboard engines used in the relevant market in boats built by Brunswick's US Marine and Sea Ray divisions have been MerCruiser engines.

45. Beginning no later than 1990, IBBI, which was established in 1989, expressed dissatisfaction with Brunswick's ownership of US Marine and Sea Ray and advanced the contention that boat manufacturers not affiliated with an engine manufacturer should not have to compete with boat manufacturing operations owned by engine manufacturers. D. Ball 8/4/97 dep. at 47 and J. Fulks 9/8/97 dep. at 100; DX 1010.

46. In 1995 Brunswick acquired Baja Boats, Inc. ("Baja") a manufacturer of recreational boats equipped with stern drive marine engines. Since the acquisition (as well as before, pursuant to a long-term supply agreement) Baja has used MerCruiser engines in the boats it built. Trial Tr. at 2934, 3989.

47. Baja is the only boat building operation bought by Brunswick after the 1986 Bayliner Marine Corporation and Ray Industries, Inc. acquisitions that Brunswick still owns or controls and that builds stern drive or inboard boats. Exhibit "C" to 8/28/97 affidavit of A. Romersa.

48. At various times Brunswick has offered programs to boat manufacturer customers which included discounts from the price of MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines which were based on market share; i.e., on the percentage of a customer's total stern drive and inboard engine purchases that were MerCruiser engines during a particular period of time.

49. The term "model year" is widely used in the recreational marine industry, and refers to a business year that begins on or about July 1 of a given calendar year, and ends on or about June 30 of the succeeding calendar year. A model year bears the number of the calendar year in which it ends; e.g., model year 1998 began on or about July 1, 1997, and ended on or about June 30, 1998.

50. Beginning with model year 1987, Brunswick offered "market share" discounts to all boat manufacturer buyers of MerCruiser stern drive engines and inboard engines.

51. Beginning no later than 1990, IBBI, which was established in 1989, circulated documents to its membership complaining about Brunswick "market share" discount programs for boat manufacturers.

16diii005835

52. For model year 1998, Brunswick ceased offering "market share"-based discounts in its programs for the sale of MerCruiser stern drive engines and inboard engines to boat manufacturers. PX 1516A.

53. Since the discontinuation referred to in finding 52, Brunswick has made no attempt to re-institute "market share" discounts in its programs for the sale of MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines to boat manufacturers, and has no intent to do so. Affidavit of D. Sheller at ¶2; Trial Tr. at 3306.

54. Typically, manufacturers of recreational boats, including boat manufacturing operations run by defendant Brunswick and by Plaintiffs, sell their boats through dealers rather than directly to consumers.

55. During part or all of model year 1992, model year 1995 and model year 1996, Brunswick offered programs that included various "market share"-based rebates to dealers in stern drive and inboard boats, based on the ratio of the number of boats such a dealer sold equipped with MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines to the total number of boats they sold which used engines of those types.

56. Brunswick has not offered "market share"-based rebate programs for MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines to recreational boat dealers since the end of model year 1996. Trial Tr. at 1184, 3292, 3294.

57. Since the discontinuation referred to in finding 56, Brunswick has made no attempt to re-institute "market share"-based rebates in its programs for recreational boat dealers that use MerCruiser stern drive and inboard engines, and has no intent to do so. Affidavit of D. Sheller at ¶2.

16diii005836

58. Brunswick is not a party to any Joint Venture, defined by Plaintiffs as "any agreement or arrangement, whether denominated a joint venture or otherwise, which involves any substantial integration of the manufacturing, marketing or sales efforts of Brunswick and any other seller or purchaser in the relevant market," which involves its stern drive or inboard engine businesses. Affidavit of D. Sheller at ¶4.

59. Beginning with model year 1998, the MerCruiser sales and marketing program no longer contained a long-term contract component. PX 1516A.

60. The multi-year supply agreements with Baja, Porter, Pro-Line and Fountain that Brunswick entered in 1991 or 1992 all have ended, and there are no similar supply agreements that fall within plaintiff's definition of "Long Term Engine Supply Contract" with other MerCruiser customers. Brunswick's outboard engine supply agreement with Tracker Marine allows Tracker to buy MerCruiser stern drive engines from Brunswick, but does not contractually require Tracker to do so. The vast majority of the marine engines that Tracker purchases are outboard engines. Affidavit of D. Sheller at ¶5.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The Court has jurisdiction of this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1337.

2. Venue in this District is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

3. The relevant geographic market for purposes of this action consists of the United States and Canada, so that engines in the relevant product market are ones sold or intended for sale in the United States or Canada.

16diii005837

4. In considering the equitable relief sought by the Plaintiffs, the Court is bound by the jury's finding that the relevant product market includes stern drive engines and inboard engines, but does not include outboard engines or jets.

5. In considering the equitable relief sought by the Plaintiffs, the Court is bound by the jury's finding that Brunswick engaged in a course of conduct violative of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2, and Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18.

6. The award of injunctive relief to a private antitrust plaintiff under Section 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.§ 26, requires more than a showing of a statutory violation on the part of the defendant. The plaintiff must satisfy all of the applicable standards that are applied generally when a court considers whether or not to award equitable relief.

7. Among the questions which the Court must consider in deciding whether or not to award a particular form of equitable relief are:

a. Whether in the absence of the equitable remedy sought, the plaintiff will suffer irreparable harm;

b. Whether the plaintiff that seeks equitable relief has an adequate remedy at law;

c. Whether the injury to the plaintiff outweighs the injury to the other party if the relief is granted, and whether the award of the relief is in the public interest;

d. Whether the relief sought lends itself to effective judicial administration;

e. Whether the relief sought is broader than necessary to achieve the desired goals of that relief; and

16diii005838

f. Whether equitable defenses such as laches and unclean hands prevent the granting of the equitable relief the plaintiff seeks.

8. Plaintiffs claims for injunctive relief are not barred by the doctrine of unclean hands.

9. Divestiture is an extraordinary equitable remedy. Divestiture should not be awarded except in extreme circumstances.

10. The equitable principles of laches require Plaintiffs that seek the aid of equity to act promptly to enforce their claimed rights, and not rest on those rights. By deciding to award Plaintiffs no damages for the period more than four years before the filing of this lawsuit on December 7, 1995, the jury rejected Plaintiffs' claim of fraudulent concealment with respect to Brunswick's principal acquisitions of boat manufacturers, those of Ray Industries, Inc. and Bayliner Marine Corporation, in December 1986. In determining a period within which Plaintiffs should reasonably assert their claimed rights, equity will generally look to the statutory limitations period for an analogous action at law, which in this instance is four years. Brunswick has not engaged in conduct that would deny it the benefit of the equitable principles of laches. Plaintiffs' claim for the extraordinary relief of divestiture of the stern drive and inboard boat businesses of the Sea Ray and US Marine divisions is barred by application of the equitable doctrine of laches.

11. In light of the record as a whole, the balance of the equities precludes any award of divestiture, including the divestiture by Brunswick of Baja (now operated as part of Sea Ray division), which builds boats that use stern drive and/or inboard engines and which Brunswick acquired in 1995.

12. For the reasons stated in conclusions 8 through 11, the Court will not order the divestiture sought by Plaintiffs.

13. Equity may only enter an injunction to prevent irreparable harm to the party that seeks it. As set forth in findings 52, 53, 56 and 57, Brunswick has discontinued market share-based discount programs, has made no attempt to re-institute such programs, and has no intent to do so. Plaintiffs have not shown that injunctive relief is required, because they have not shown that they will suffer irreparable harm.

14. The equitable principles of laches set forth in conclusion 10 apply to Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against market share discount programs for boat manufacturers, which were generally used by MerCruiser in model year 1987, nine years before the filing of this lawsuit.

15. For the reasons stated in conclusions 13 and 14, the Court will not enjoin market share-based programs.

16. An injunction must lend itself to effective judicial administration. Equity requires that injunctive relief not be broader than necessary to achieve the desired goals of that relief, and that it be sufficiently exact in its terms that the subject of the injunction can comply with reasonable certainty. The Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to cause any buying group to break up does not satisfy the standards of precision required of an injunction to be monitored and enforced in the future.

17. For the reasons stated in conclusion 16 the Court will not enjoin any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to cause any buying group to break up.

18. Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to create artificial barriers to entry or expansion of any rivals of Brunswick in the relevant market does not satisfy the standards of precision required of an injunction to be monitored and enforced in the future. For this reason the Court will not enjoin any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to create artificial barriers to entry or expansion of any rivals of Brunswick in the relevant market.

19. Equity requires that injunctive relief not be broader than necessary to achieve the goals of that relief, and that it be carefully tailored to prevent competitive injury in the relevant market without reaching too broadly, to prevent or interfere with legitimate business activity that will or may benefit consumers. Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against any Joint Venture, as that term defined in Plaintiffs' submissions, is too broad to satisfy the foregoing standard, in that it does not permit accounting for the alleged anticompetitive impact, if any, of a particular joint venture, or the potential benefits of such a joint venture.

20. Joint ventures affecting Brunswick's position in the relevant product market were not among the claimed exclusionary acts on which Plaintiffs relied at trial, and there has not been any showing of irreparable harm from any joint venture that is required for an injunction to issue.

21. For the reasons identified in conclusions 19 and 20 the Court will not enjoin Brunswick participation in any Joint Venture.

22. Equity may only enter an injunction to prevent irreparable harm to the party that seeks it. As set forth in findings 59 and 60, Brunswick does not now have "Long Term Supply Agreements" in place in the relevant product market and in the relevant geographic market.

16diii005841

Plaintiffs have not shown that injunctive relief is required, because they have not shown that they will suffer irreparable harm.

23. Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against any agreement for the purchase or sale in the relevant product market and relevant geographic market of Brunswick-manufactured stern drive or inboard engines which has a term of one year or more (unless the agreement is cancelable without penalty on reasonable notice) is too broad to satisfy equitable standards, in that it would prohibit:

a. Contracts even of exactly one year's duration;

b. Contracts without reference to the volumes of engines involved;

c. Contracts without reference to the party initiating a proposed duration of one year or more;

d. Contracts subject to special considerations that justify a duration of one year or more; for example, Brunswick might be asked to develop a specialized, customer-specific product, under circumstances in which the cost of development can only be justified by a purchase commitment of one year or more.

24. For the reasons identified in conclusions 22 and 23, the Court will not enjoin Long-Term Supply Agreements.

25. Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against any acquisition by Brunswick of any part of the stock or assets of any firm engaged in the manufacture of:

a. stern drive and/or inboard marine engines;

16diii005842

b. recreational power boats designed to be powered by stern drive or inboard marine engines.

is too broad to satisfy equitable standards, in that it does not take into account the extent of any possible stock ownership, the size of firm acquired, or the potential competitive impact of the hypothetical acquisition.

26. The injunction requested by plaintiffs would usurp and defeat the purpose of offices and agencies specifically empowered to examine and evaluate the competitive impact (if any) of proposed mergers and acquisitions, including but not limited to the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission.

27. For the reasons identified in conclusions 25 and 26 the Court will not enjoin acquisitions by Brunswick.

28. The jury awarded no damages to any plaintiff for alleged future harm in the time period following June 1998, through calendar year 2000. The jury's finding on this issue is inconsistent with Plaintiffs' claim of future irreparable harm which requires equitable relief, and gives an additional, independent reason for the Court to deny the Plaintiffs' claims for an order of divestiture and the injunctive relief described in finding 36.

29. The Court, sitting in equity, has the obligation to consider a variety of factors in determining whether to award Plaintiffs the relief they seek in the form of an order of divestiture and injunctions. In deciding not to grant such relief, the Court has weighed the testimony at trial and the exhibits admitted into evidence, and has considered the following factors in reaching its conclusions:

16diii005843

a. The extraordinary nature of equitable relief, which is not available based simply on proof of a statutory violation;

b. The large sum of damages awarded to Plaintiffs by the jury's verdict;

c. The penalty that would undoubtedly be imposed on Brunswick's shareholders by a forced "fire sale" of Brunswick boat building operations;

e. The long and unjustified delay between the acquisitions of which plaintiff complain and the filing of this lawsuit;

f. The relative hardships and benefits that award of the relief sought would give rise to for the parties;

g. The fact that substantial parts of the conduct complained of, including market share discounts for boat manufacturers and dealers, and the long-term contract component of the MerCruiser marketing program, have been dropped, and that there is no evidence of intent to resume them;

h. The jury's decision not to award any damages claimed for the period after June 1998;

i. The breadth of the injunctive remedies sought;

j. The difficulty in administering the broad injunctive remedies sought; and

k. The availability of administrative safeguards against anticompetitive acquisitions and mergers.

16diii005844

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, Plaintiffs' requests for equitable relief related to Plaintiffs' First, Second and Sixth Claims for relief are hereby DENIED. The Court will promptly enter an amended final judgment.

IT IS SO ORDERED this 16 day of October, 1998.

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS

Ignoring the law of the Sixth and other Circuits that "[a]n award of attorney's fees as part of the cost of a successful antitrust suit is mandatory,"[1] defendants ("UST") invite error in urging the Court to deny Conwood the recovery of its attorneys' fees and expenses. Since at least 1968, the Sixth Circuit has recognized that the express provision of Section 4 of the Clayton Act trumps the court's discretion to deny the successful plaintiff attorneys' fees and expenses under Rule 54(d).[2]

[1] Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1312 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1009 (1982).

[2] See White & White Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp., 786 F.2d 728, 731 n.1 (6th Cir. 1986); Lewis v. Pennington, 400 F.2d 806, 819 (6th Cir. 1968) (Section 4 "makes 'express provision' for costs, and a district court would be powerless under Rule 54(d) to deny such plaintiff his costs in the exercise of discretion.").

The award is thus mandatory, and UST's desire to avoid paying it is hardly reason for the Court to ignore the statute. Nor should it be the occasion for another month-long trial. While UST suggests that Conwood's billing statements and invoices must be litigated in granular detail, the law is expressly to the contrary. See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437 (1983) ("A request for attorney's fees should not result in a second major litigation.").

Conwood's fee submission complies fully with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(B) and Local Rule 54.4. Conwood has provided ample proof -- comparable to the proof provided by successful plaintiffs in other large antitrust cases -- in support of its motion for attorneys' fees and costs. (Point I, infra). Conwood's requested attorneys' fees, expenses and expert fees in this nationwide, complex antitrust case are reasonable as to hourly rates and number of hours. The Court would have discretion to award a multiple of those fees, but should award at least the actual fees and expenses as "costs of suit" to fully compensate Conwood for what it has already incurred and paid. (Point II, infra).

I. CONWOOD HAS PROVIDED SUFFICIENT PROOF IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION AND HAS OFFERED TO PROVIDE ADDITIONAL DETAIL IN CAMERA SHOULD THE COURT SO REQUEST

A. Conwood's Motion and Memorandum in Support Specify the Judgment and Grounds for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and Costs and Provide a Fair Estimate of the Amount Sought.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(B) requires only that a motion for attorneys' fees "specify the judgment and the statute, rule or other grounds entitling the moving party to the award; and must state the amount or provide a fair estimate of the amount sought." Conwood has met -- and exceeded -- the Rule 54(d)(2)(B) requirements. Conwood has provided the Court with (a) a motion for attorneys' fees and expenses and memorandum in support specifying the judgment and statute entitling Conwood to its award and the amounts sought; (b) four affidavits from counsel attesting to the amounts sought and reasonableness of the requested fees and expenses; (c) a summary of the amounts sought as requested fees and expenses. Conwood has also offered to provide to the Court actual billing records and invoices for in camera review in the event the Court determines that such review is necessary.

This information matches, and in some instances exceeds, the information provided by successful plaintiffs in at least two other recent antitrust cases. Attached as Exhibit A is Litton's Notice of Motion and Motion for the Award of Attorney's Fees and Litigation Expenses (Mar. 8, 1999) in Litton Systems, Inc. and Litton Systems Canada, Ltd. v. Honeywell, Inc., No. CV 90-4823 MRP (Ex) (C.D. Cal.). As is evident from Exhibit A, the information submitted by Litton consisted of only a motion, spreadsheets summarizing fees and expenses, and supporting declarations.[3] Unlike Litton, see Exh. A at 15-16, Conwood has not asked to be compensated for the thousands of hours its in-house counsel -- David L. Simpson and Edward J. Foster -- have worked on this litigation. Similarly, while the quality of the work, the degree of success, and size of the damages award given by the jury would warrant a quality adjustment above the market rate lodestar Conwood has requested,[4] Conwood has not asked this Court for a quality of work adjustment or a lodestar multiplier. Litton did. Cf. Exh. A at 14.

[3]Litton's supporting declarations were filed under seal.

Attached as Exhibit B is Plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C.'s Petition for Attorney's Fees Including Expenses Not Covered by the Bill of Costs (Nov. 23, 1999) in LePage's, Inc., et al. v. 3M (Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.), No. 97-CV-3983 (E.D. Pa.). Like Conwood, LePages submitted a motion, memorandum in support, a spreadsheet summarizing its fees and expenses, and supporting affidavits. While UST complains about Conwood's 14-page "bare-bones request," Defendants' Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorney Fees and Costs at 1 (May 3, 2000) ("Opp."), LePage's memorandum in support of its fees motion consists of nine pages.

While UST cites repetitively to civil rights, Title VII, and NLRA fee award cases, in which a court's fee award is discretionary, those decisions apply a standard far more limiting than 15 U.S.C. § 15.[5] The discretionary fee award statutes have

[4]See Pitchford v. PEPI, Inc., 531 F.2d 92, 110 (3d Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 935 (1976) and Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Suit at 9 (Apr. 19, 2000).

[5]See Opp. at 3. Wayne v. Village of Sebring, 36 F.3d 517, 531 (6th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1127 (1995) involved a discretionary award of fees and costs to a successful plaintiff in a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, while Wooldridge v. Marlene Industries Corp., 898 F.2d 1169 (6th Cir. 1990), addressed a discretionary award in a Title VII case under 42 differing and often heightened proof requirements. They cannot properly be used to chisel away at a successful antitrust plaintiff's entitlement.[6] UST has shown no respect in which Conwood's petition for fees is deficient.

B. Conwood's Detailed Billing Records and Invoices Contain Work Product and Privileged Communications, to Which UST is Not Entitled.

Conwood has not provided its detailed billing statements and invoices to opposing counsel for good reason: the billing statements and invoices are replete with recitations of attorney client communications and attorney work product. They provide an hour-by-hour "road-map" to the prosecution of this case. UST is not entitled to this information, particularly while the case remains unresolved.

U.S.C. § 2000e-5(k). In Cruz v. Local Union No. 3 of the International Board of Electric Workers, 34 F.3d 1148 (2d Cir. 1994), the Second Circuit considered a discretionary award of fees to a successful plaintiff in a National Labor Relations Act claim, and actually remanded the case for "a more generous appraisal" of the fee award. 34 F.3d at 1161.

[6]See, e.g., Tic-X-Press, Inc. v. Omni Promotions Co. of Ga., 815 F.2d 1407, 1423 n.25 (11th Cir. 1987) ("the principles guiding attorney's fee awards in other cases, such as civil rights suits under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, should not be applied mechanically to antitrust cases"); Black Gold, Ltd. v. Rockwool Indus., Inc., 529 F. Supp. 272, 274 (D. Colo. 1981) ("A successful plaintiff in an antitrust action is entitled to attorney fees as a matter of right under the Clayton Act § 4, 15 U.S.C. § 15. It is this entitlement as a matter of right which distinguishes the award of attorneys fees in antitrust cases from civil rights cases and most other statutory actions which provide that the award of attorneys fees is discretionary."); 10 Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2675.2, at 405-06 (1998) (comparing mandatory fee statutes, such as 15 U.S.C. § 15, which "direct the court to award a reasonable attorney's fee to a prevailing litigant" with "others [such as 42 U.S.C. § 1988 which] grant the court discretion to make an award").

For these same reasons, Litton declined to provide its detailed fee records, including daily time entries, to opposing counsel in support of its motion for attorney's fees and expenses. Litton's counsel aptly noted that > Litton has not included the detailed diary entries prepared by each timekeeper that are supplied with each statement. Provision of these unredacted diary entries to Honeywell's counsel at this state in the litigation is problematic, as there is a possibility of disclosure of confidential information that could be used to Honeywell's advantage in subsequent trial proceedings.

Exh. A at 5 n.3. The same holds true here. UST cites no authority that requires the submission of privileged, tactically sensitive information as a condition of obtaining the mandatory award of fees and expenses required by the Clayton Act.[7]

C. The Materials Before the Court Are Sufficient.

The materials before the Court are, as a matter of law, sufficient support for the mandatory award. UST has no authority to the contrary. Rule 54(d)(2)(C) merely offers UST the opportunity for "adversary submissions with respect to the motion in accordance with Rule 43(e) or Rule 78." Rules 43(e) and 78 are purely discretionary: "When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, but the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or deposition." (emphasis added). Rule 78 allows district courts to rule on motions for attorneys' fees on a "motions day," or "without oral hearing upon brief written statements of reasons in support and opposition." (emphasis added).

The Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 54(d)(2)(C) confirm that the time-consuming and onerous additional proof, discovery and evidentiary hearings requested by UST, see Opp. at 6-7, 16, are unnecessary.[8] While UST seeks to create obstacles to deny Conwood the award of fees and expenses to which the Clayton Act entitles it, nothing in the Clayton Act, the Federal Rules, or the cases requires the elaborate, expensive, and time-consuming procedure UST urges on the Court.

II. THE ATTORNEYS' FEES AND EXPENSES INCURRED BY CONWOOD IN THIS NATIONWIDE ANTITRUST CASE ARE REASONABLE

A. Conwood's Request for Attorneys' Fees in this Nationwide, Complex Antitrust Case is Reasonable as to Hourly Rates and Number of Hours.

Conwood incurred and paid hourly fees and related expenses to prosecute this case. The recovery of those out-of-pocket payments would in no sense be a "windfall." Opp. at 8, 11. It would merely "insulate [Conwood's] treble damages recovery from expenditures for legal fees, consistent with section 4's purpose to encourage private persons to undertake enforcement of antitrust laws." Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1312. The very purpose of the Clayton Act's provision for the mandatory award of fees and expenses is to shift the cost of counsel from plaintiff to the defendant.[9]

[8] "In some cases, an evidentiary hearing may be needed, but this is not required in every case. . . . On rare occasion, the court may determine that discovery under Rules 26-37 would be useful to the parties." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C) advisory committee note (Amendments 1993) (emphasis added).

Of course, UST's New York and Louisville counsel argue that Conwood should have been limited in this high-stakes, complex, nationwide antitrust litigation to Memphis counsel, and therefore should recover only at Memphis rates. See Opp. at 12. No case so holds. The determination of the appropriate rate is "fact-intensive and is best guided by what attorneys earn from paying clients for similar services in similar circumstances." Rum Creek Coal Sales, Inc. v. Caperton, 31 F.3d 169, 175 (4th Cir. 1994).

This litigation was not a Paducah or even a Kentucky litigation. It was a complex, national antitrust litigation, involving parties, witnesses, experts and counsel from numerous states. Discovery was conducted throughout the country, because the case involved the actions of UST sales representatives and managers in nearly every state. While the Western District of Kentucky was the forum, it was by no means the only locus from which jurors heard testimony. Conwood brought witnesses to Paducah from such far-ranging places as Spokane, Washington, Worthing, South Dakota and Atlanta, Georgia. The case sought a recovery for UST misconduct that was truly nationwide.

[9] E.g., Tic-X-Press, Inc., 815 F.2d at 1423-24 ("Section 4's purpose is three-fold: 1) to encourage private citizens to undertake enforcement of the antitrust laws; 2) to insure that the cost of doing so does not diminish the plaintiff's treble damages award; and 3) to require a losing defendant to pay the plaintiff's attorney's fees as part of the penalty for violating the antitrust laws.").

16diii005864

Even in civil rights cases, where recovery of fees and expenses is discretionary and hence more narrowly cabined, the Sixth Circuit has held that "[d]istrict courts are free to look to a national market, an area of specialization market or any other market they believe appropriate to fairly compensate particular attorneys in individual cases." Louisville Black Police Officers Ass'n, Inc. v. City of Louisville, 700 F.2d 268, 278 (6th Cir. 1983); Sigley v. Kuhn, Nos. 98-3977, 99-3531, 2000 WL 145187, 7 (6th Cir. Jan. 21, 2000)(same).

In this case, both parties chose to use counsel with particular expertise in nationwide antitrust litigation. Courts in similar circumstances have rejected defendant efforts to cap fees at local rates rather than the rates actually used by the particular firm or firms that represented plaintiff. For example, in National Wildlife Federation v. Hanson, 859 F.2d 313 (4th Cir. 1988), the Fourth Circuit upheld a district court's decision to use Washington D.C. counsel's rates to compute the lodestar in a complex environmental litigation tried in Raleigh, N.C. The Fourth Circuit rejected defense counsel's argument that "the court should have used rates charged in Raleigh, North Carolina, because that is the community in which the court sat." Id. at 317. Here too, "where it is reasonable to retain attorneys from other communities. . . , the rates in those communities may also be considered." Rum Creek, 31 F.3d at 175.

UST cannot plausibly claim it was unreasonable for Conwood to retain Washington, D.C. antitrust counsel, at prevailing Washington, D.C. rates, when UST found it reasonable and

necessary to employ as principal counsel a New York firm with rates substantially higher than those charged by Kellogg, Huber.[10] Conwood does not question UST's decision to retain Skadden Arps, its cost notwithstanding, given the enormous stakes for all parties in this case; neither should UST be permitted to question Conwood's choice of counsel. The Court should not penalize Conwood, by forcing it to abjure recovery of fees, because it chose counsel it reasonably believed was necessary to bring the case to successful conclusion against determined, skillful, well-financed opposition. No principle of law required Conwood to look no further than Memphis for its lawyers.[11]

B. Conwood Should be Awarded All of Its Expenses as Costs of Suit Under 15 U.S.C. § 15.

Numerous district courts view the Clayton Act's "costs of suit" as encompassing all expenses incurred in bringing an antitrust case to a successful conclusion:

> 15 U.S.C. § 15 does not award merely court costs to a successful antitrust plaintiff, but "the cost of suit". This is a more comprehensive term, evidently embracing

[10]A recent article stated that "[n]ot surprisingly, larger firms tend to charge the higher rates. New York's Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom L.L.P. -- No. 2 on the NLJ 250, with 1,403 attorneys -- lists a range of $380 to $590 for partners and $190 to $365 for associates." Ruth Singleton, Rates Aren't Skyrocketing, But They Do Keep Going Up, Nat'l L.J., Dec. 27, 1999, at B11 (attached hereto as Exh. C).

[11]In Langenderfer, the district court determined that for a case involving only the Toledo area it was appropriate to cap fees at the prevailing Toledo rate; here, in contrast, the case was not localized to Memphis or any other area, and accordingly Langenderfer -- even if correct on its facts -- does not support the principle UST urges on the Court. Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 953, 956 (N.D. Ohio 1988).

> "the expense of prosecuting the suit to a successful conclusion". The court costs in the technical sense are of course included in the "cost of suit", but other necessary and reasonable expenses are also included (except the attorney's fee, which is specified separately as an additional item to be paid to plaintiff).

Pitchford Scientific Instrument Corp. v. PEPI Inc., 440 F. Supp. 1175, 1178-79 (W.D. Pa. 1977), aff'd, 582 F.2d 1275 (3d Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 981 (1979). Unlike discretionary fee award statutes, "the award of cost of suit and attorney fees in an antitrust case is designed to afford the plaintiff the relief to which he is entitled without any diminution by reason of the financial burden of making the judicial machinery work in his behalf." Id. at 1179 (emphasis added).

Similarly, in Refuse & Environmental Systems v. Industrial Services of America, 732 F. Supp. 1209 (D. Mass. 1990), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 932 F.2d 37 (1st Cir. 1991), the court based its decision "on case law in the first, fifth, eighth and eleventh circuits under both 15 U.S.C. § 15 and 42 U.S.C. § 1988" and held "that [successful antitrust] plaintiffs must be awarded the reasonable costs of bringing the antitrust lawsuit, beyond those costs allowed by Rule 54(d) and section 1920." Id. at 1220-21 (emphasis added).[12]

[12]UST concedes that in Northcross v. Board of Educ., 611 F.2d 624 (6th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 911 (1980) -- a civil rights action -- the Sixth Circuit held that photocopying, paralegal expenses, travel, and telephone costs were recoverable as part of the plaintiff's attorneys' fees. Opp. at 13. UST also concedes that the plaintiffs' docket fees, investigation expenses, deposition expenses, witness expenses, and charts and maps were also recoverable. Id. But it argues that this recovery was limited to civil rights actions. While a district court in Ohio 12 years ago found that "Northcross does provide

C. Conwood Should Be Awarded the Fees and Expenses It Has Paid for Economic Experts.

UST cites to no decisions from this district or to the Sixth Circuit that restrict a prevailing antitrust plaintiff's economic experts to the statutory $40 per day witness fee provided in 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and expenses provided for by 28 U.S.C. § 1920. The two main cases cited by UST, West Virginia University Hospital, Inc. v. Casey, 499 U.S. 83 (1991) and Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437 (1987) both involved expert fee awards in civil rights cases under 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

At least one district court judge since West Virginia University Hospitals and Crawford has granted a successful antitrust plaintiff its request for expert fees and expenses and has explicitly held that Crawford did not apply.[13] In Automotive Products P.L.C. v. Tilton Engineering, Inc., 855 F. Supp. 1101, 1107 (C.D. Cal.), appeal dismissed, 36 F.3d 1109 (Fed. Cir. 1994), the district judge granted the successful plaintiff's request for expert fees, finding that the expert's testimony "was necessary to provide the jury with a factual basis from which to ascertain the damages." Id. The court also specifically held guidance for [an] award of attorney's fees in antitrust litigation," and read that case to support limits on recovery of expenses, Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. 956, the weight of authority across the United States holds that the prevailing plaintiff in an antitrust case should recoup all expenses reasonably required to bring the case to judgment. See Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Suit at 11-13.

[13]The plaintiffs in Litton also moved for recovery of their expert fees and expenses. See Exh. A at 19.

that Crawford does not limit a prevailing antitrust plaintiff to statutory expert fees:

> Tilton has cited Ninth Circuit authority providing for the award of expert witness fees if the expert was necessary to the litigation and if the expert's fees are reasonable. . . . AP cites no contradictory Ninth Circuit cases limiting such an award to statutory damages only, and the Court has already held that Crawford does not specifically limit a prevailing antitrust plaintiff to statutory damages only.

Id.

Similarly, in Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 258, 268 (E.D. Wash. 1986), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part, 879 F.2d 632 (9th Cir. 1989), the district court noted the defendant's "strident defense posture" and held that "the retention by plaintiffs of the experts . . . was necessary due to the defenses interposed by [defendant]." Id. at 268. The court went on to find that the plaintiffs' expert fees were "reasonable" and awarded plaintiffs their requested expert fees. Id.

The same holds true here. There can be no question that the testimony of the experts called by plaintiffs was necessary to overcome the defenses raised by defendants. Each such expert specifically addressed and refuted those defenses, and that proof was concededly of critical importance. Indeed UST has moved for a new trial based on its contention that, for at least one expert (Dr. Leftwich), the proof determined the outcome.

UST asks the Court to find that Conwood's expert expenses, like all of the other fees and expenses Conwood has claimed, were not reasonably necessary to the successful prosecution of this case. But Conwood chose to incur and pay all these costs, with no certainty of any recovery; that more than anything establishes that these costs were both reasonable and necessary. And UST has given the Court no valid basis for challenging Conwood's decisions. UST is hardly in a position to determine what was or was not required to win this case.[14]

---

[14]UST asks that the fee and expense award be stayed, but cites no authority for the stay of a mandatory award of attorneys' fees and expenses under 15 U.S.C. § 15. The two discretionary fee award cases to which UST cites in support of its argument for a stay are inapposite. Loudermill v. Cleveland Board. of Education, 844 F.2d 304 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 946 (1988), involved yet another discretionary award of attorneys' fees in a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. In Morgan v. Union Metal Manufacturing, 757 F.2d 792 (6th Cir. 1985), there was not even a trial on the merits in the underlying case; the court dismissed the plaintiff's complaint and "awarded attorneys' fees on the common law ground that [plaintiff's] suit had been maintained in bad faith" after dismissing plaintiff's complaint. Id. at 796. Conwood counsel are unaware of any support for postponing the mandatory award of fees and expenses under 15 U.S.C. § 15 until after all appeals have been exhausted.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs' request for attorneys' fees and expenses in the aggregate amount of $19,170,652.86 should be granted.

TO DEFENDANT HONEYWELL, INC., AND ITS ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that as soon as this matter may be heard, in the Courtroom of the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Court for the Central District of California, 312 North Spring Street, Los Angeles, California, Plaintiffs Litton Systems, Inc. and Litton Systems Canada, Ltd. (collectively "Litton") will and hereby do move this court for the award of attorney's fees and costs of suit pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15(a) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d). Litton respectfully submits this motion pursuant to the Court's January 27, 1998 Order Re Entry of Judgment, providing that plaintiffs may file and serve their bill of costs and motion for attorneys' fees within 40 days following the entry of judgment.

Litton's motion for attorney's fees and costs of suit is based on the ground that a federal jury has determined that Litton has suffered antitrust injury and damages by reason of Honeywell's unlawful monopolization and attempted monopolization of the global RLG-IRS market. See February 29, 1996 General Verdict Forms and December 9, 1998 General Verdict Forms. As such, Litton has been "injured in [its] business or property by reason of [conduct] forbidden in the antitrust laws," and is entitled to recover "the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee" under the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).

Litton's motion is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion, the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities In Support Thereof, the Declarations of Thomas J. Nolan, Thomas N. Heyer, Frederick A. MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Litton's attorneys' fee petition follows the successful nine year prosecution of this complex, hard fought and immensely time-consuming litigation. As the jury's verdict reflects, the stakes were large. At issue was the illegal conduct of Honeywell, Inc. ("Honeywell") in a $6 billion worldwide market for a product line with only two competitors — Honeywell and Litton. Honeywell's determination to engage highly qualified counsel from at least four major law firms and to commit apparently limitless resources, brought with it the almost certain prospect that, should it not succeed in defending against Litton's antitrust claim, it would be responsible for payment of fees and expenses commensurate with the effort it was undertaking. After nearly a decade of litigation, Litton has prevailed on its antitrust complaint. In accordance with the jury verdict, the Court has entered judgment assessing treble damages in the aggregate amount of $750 million. As the Clayton Act provides, the Court also has entered judgment for attorneys' fees and costs and has retained jurisdiction to modify its final judgment to include the specific amount of such fees and costs.

Litton now petitions for an award of $ as a lodestar, adjusted upward for delay to). In addition, Litton petitions for an award of fees for work performed by in-house counsel of $. ; fees for contract paralegals and economic analysts of $ fees and expenses for Litton's expert witnesses of $ and litigation expenses of $ exclusive of amounts in Litton's bill of costs. The total award amounts to $, including an additional $ in reproduction costs that were alternatively included in taxable costs. See Exhibit A to the Declaration of Thomas J. Nolan in Support of Litton's Motion for the Award of Attorney's Fees and Litigation Expenses ("Nolan Decl.") filed under separate cover.

Consistent with the direction of the Supreme Court in this area, Litton has already approached Honeywell to attempt to reach agreement regarding Litton's reasonable fees and expenses and thereby avoid needless, full-scale litigation regarding the award of attorneys' fees. It is Litton's hope and expectation that the parties will be able to reach an agreement at least to narrow the issues, mindful of the Supreme Court's admonition that determination of the reasonable attorneys' fees should be something to which the parties can stipulate. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437, 103 S.Ct. 1933, 76 L.Ed.2d 40 (1983).

This Memorandum, along with the supporting declarations and exhibits, establishes that Litton is entitled to the full amount of its requested fees, expenses, and costs, including an enhancement as allowed under the statute and governing case law. Litton does not seek any compensation beyond that to which it is entitled. The prosecution of an antitrust action such as this is costly and time-consuming. Litton's requested reimbursement does not even include millions of dollars in unrecoverable out-of-pocket expenses and thousands of hours of management and employee time that were necessary to pursue this litigation over nine long years.

For Honeywell, the fees and expenses covered by this motion should come as no surprise. The breadth and scope of this litigation find few parallels in private antitrust litigation. Viewed in the context of the magnitude of this litigation, the hours expended and the rates charged by Litton's attorneys are eminently reasonable. Litton's counsel worked hard, efficiently and effectively. Litton should therefore be awarded the full amount of its fees, adjusted to account for delay of up to nine years.

The reasonableness of Litton's fees and expenses is shown by the observations of Honeywell's experienced counsel, Maxwell Blecher, who was recently quoted as stating that Litton's petition would be "monstrous" and would be in the range of $50 million or more.[1] Mr. Blecher is a knowledgeable antitrust plaintiff's counsel, and he is intimately familiar with the market conditions in Los Angeles and the effort required to bring a case of this type to a successful conclusion. As one of several lead counsel among Honeywell's four law firms, Mr. Blecher no doubt has a fair understanding of the fees and costs that Honeywell incurred in the course of defending itself (and that Honeywell will be required to disclose should Litton's petition be opposed). That Litton's fees are actually lower than those projected by Mr. Blecher is a testament to the disciplined and efficient work of Litton's counsel and provides support for an award of the full amount of fees and expenses that Litton requests.

This fee petition seeks reimbursement of Litton's fees and allowable expenses from the inception of the case in 1990 through December 31, 1998, with the exception of the work on the fee petition and cost bill in late 1998. Litton will continue to incur significant reimbursable attorney's fees through the post-trial phase, including its fees and expenses for this petition and the cost bill for the post-trial motions, and for the appeal. Litton will supplement this petition to cover fees and expenses incurred after December 31, 1998, either following entry of orders on the post-trial motions or at such time as the Court may direct.

II. THE LAW ENTITLES LITTON TO RECOVER ITS ATTORNEYS FEES AND LITIGATION EXPENSES INCURRED OVER THIS NINE YEAR LITIGATION

A. Statute and Its Purpose

Section 4 of the Clayton Act states that "any person . . . injured . . . by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws . . . shall recover . . . the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 15 U.S.C. § 15(a). "An award of attorney's fees as part of the cost of a successful antitrust suit is mandatory. . . ." Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., Inc., 676 F.2d 1291, 1312 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1009, 103 S. Ct. 364, 74 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1982) (citations omitted). The purpose of such a mandatory award is "to insulate treble damages recovery from expenditures for legal fees, consistent with Section 4's purpose to encourage private persons to undertake enforcement of antitrust laws." Id. See also Perkins v. Standard Oil Co., 474 F.2d 549, 553 (9th Cir.) (citation omitted), amended on other grounds, 487 F.2d 672 (9th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 940, 93 S. Ct. 2778, 37 L. Ed. 2d 400

(1973); see also Image Technical Services, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 136 F.3d 1354, 1357 (9th Cir. 1998).

B. The Lodestar Is Presumptively The Reasonable Attorney's Fee Recoverable Under The Clayton Act

The Supreme Court has adopted the lodestar as the "the guiding light of our fee-shifting jurisprudence. We have established a 'strong presumption' that the lodestar represents the 'reasonable' fee . . . ." City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 562, 112 S.Ct. 2638, 120 L.Ed. 2d 449 (1992) (citations omitted). The "lodestar" amount, i.e., "the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate," has been found to be the "most useful starting point for determining the amount of a reasonable fee." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 at 433.[2] The lodestar "is more than a mere 'rough guess' or initial approximation of the final award to be made. Instead . . . [it] 'is presumed to be the reasonable fee to which counsel is entitled." Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 564, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) (citation omitted) (emphasis in original).

In all determinations of a reasonable fee, the amount involved in the lawsuit and the results obtained are important factors. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. at 434-36. "Where a plaintiff has obtained excellent results, his attorney should recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally, this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation, and indeed in some cases of exceptional success an enhanced award may be justified." Id. at 435 (emphasis added); Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 897, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) (emphasis added).

---

[2]Although Hensley and Dague were civil rights actions, the Court noted that the "standards set forth in this opinion are generally applicable in all cases in which Congress has authorized an award of fees to a 'prevailing party.' " Hensley, 461 U.S. at 433, n.7; see also Thorne v. City of El Segundo, 802 F.2d 1131, 1141, n. 10 (9th Cir. 1986). While the standards set forth in Hensley and its progeny are generally applied in antitrust cases, the Ninth Circuit has also cautioned that "there should not be an automatic transference of rulings interpreting [the civil rights and other fee statutes]" to an antitrust case where this would lead to "an incorrect application of the philosophy of full recovery of attorney's fees for successful treble damages plaintiffs." Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1314, 1316.

The law also recognizes the need to account for delay in arriving at an award of reasonable fees. For example, In Re Washington Public Power Supply Sys. Lit., 19 F.3d 1291, 1305 (9th Cir. 1994) involved a seven year delay between the time the prevailing party paid its attorneys and the time it was reimbursed. In that case, the Ninth Circuit held that it was an abuse of discretion for the district court to fail to include a delay adjustment calculated by using current rates or adding a prime rate adjustment. As discussed below, the delay present in this case similarly warrants an adjustment.

III. LITTON IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD OF ATTORNEYS' FEES ADJUSTED FOR DELAY

Over the nine years of this litigation, Litton incurred more than $ in outside counsel attorneys' fees. This represents the largest component of Litton's cost of suit which it is entitled to recover. As described below, Litton has computed the attorneys' fee portion of its request using the lodestar method adjusted for delay by the prime interest rate method. Litton petitions for an award of $ as its lodestar, adusted upward for delay to $. The relevant computational tables are included as Exhibits B, D, E and Y of the Nolan Decl.

A. Litton's Modified Lodestar For Attorney's Fees Is Based On The Below Market Hourly Rates And Reasonable Hours Actually Charged To And Paid By Litton

The contemporaneous billing records maintained by counsel and submitted to Litton as the basis for payment provide a solid framework for computation of the lodestar.[3] In computing

[3] Litton is submitting with this petition actual billing statements for Howrey & Simon by month from the inception of the litigation, exclusive of the detailed diary entries. Nolan Decl., Ex. C. For ease of presentation, the information on rates, hours and expenses have been restated in spread sheet format and included as exhibits to Mr. Nolan's declaration. Id. at B. Litton has not included the detailed diary entries prepared by each timekeeper that are supplied with each statement. Provision of these unredacted diary entries to Honeywell's counsel at this state in the litigation is problematic, as there is a possibility of disclosure of confidential information that could be used to Honeywell's advantage in subsequent trial proceedings.

the lodestar, Litton has used both the actual hours expended and the actual rates charged, as extracted from these records.[4] Through daily diary entries, Litton's counsel have kept accurate and complete records of the time expended on this matter. This time was billed to Litton and paid on an ongoing basis. In addition, Litton has used the actual rates it was charged — not the prevailing market rate in Los Angeles — because this results in lower fees. See Nolan Decl., Ex. B (summarizing the hours and fees of the Howrey & Simon attorneys); Ex. D (summarizing the hours and fees for the Bright & Lorig attorneys).

1. Litton Retained Experienced and Capable Counsel To Represent It In This Litigation

When Litton began investigating its antitrust claim against Honeywell, it realized the scope and complexity of the litigation with which it was faced. Litton wished to retain a leading law firm with specialized knowledge and experience in antitrust litigation that could effectively and efficiently present the case. Litton's choice of Howrey & Simon was reasonable. In addition to Howrey & Simon's experience litigating antitrust cases in general, the firm had previously represented Litton in antitrust and other matters and was therefore already familiar with Litton, its management and its employees.

Howrey & Simon's work began in May 1990. The firm has continued to represent Litton throughout comprehensive discovery and two trials spanning a nine-year period. Initially, the primary partners working on this matter were John Bodner and Thomas Heyer, assisted by several associates. In 1994-95 they were joined by Thomas Nolan of the Los Angeles office, along with various associates, some of whom later became partners. Litton also retained the law firm of Bright & Lorig to conduct an initial investigation of the claims in this matter, to assist in discovery and at trial, and to serve as local counsel before Howrey & Simon had a Los Angeles office. Bright & Lorig has also represented Litton in the patent case.

[4] The hours covered by Litton's petition do not include time expended in connection with the related patent case.

16diii005887

Honeywell has been represented by four nationally-known law firms during the course of this litigation. Initially, the law firm of Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton was the principal firm representing Honeywell, led by attorneys Joseph Coyne and Carlton Varner. Sheppard, Mullin was then joined by Sullivan & Cromwell in New York, with Richard Carlton as the principal partner. Honeywell later added the firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, including partners Robert Cooper, Arthur Sherwood, J. Edd Stepp, Mark Weber, Mary Laura Davis and Daniel Swanson, and a large group of associates. Most recently, Honeywell engaged the law firm of Blecher & Collins, represented by partners Maxwell Blecher and Gary Joye. Also, as did Litton, Honeywell has from time to time used other law firms to provide assistance on particular issues over the long course of this litigation.

Litton's counsel were and are experienced antitrust litigators. At Howrey & Simon, Mr. Bodner is an experienced antitrust trial attorney who has represented Litton for over thirty years in various antitrust and commercial matters. Mr. Nolan is an experienced federal court litigator and a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. Mr. Lorig is also an experienced trial attorney who has represented Litton both in this matter and the related patent case.[5]

2. Counsel Charged Reasonable Rates

Litton calculated the lodestar using the rates that Howrey & Simon and Bright & Lorig actually charged and that Litton paid monthly over the course of the litigation. These rates easily satisfy the reasonability requirement. Blum, 465 U.S. at 888; Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434. A law firm's hourly rates are presumptively reasonable if equivalent to (or lower than) the market rate for comparable attorneys. See Student Pub. Interest Research Group v. AT&T Bell Labs., 842 F.2d 1436, 1445 (3d Cir. 1988) ("in most cases, billing rates reflect market rates — they provide

[5] Mr. Lorig submits a declaration in support of this motion that describes the qualifications of the attorneys from Bright & Lorig who worked on the case. This declaration has been filed concurrently under separate cover. See Notice of Filing Declarations of Frederick A. Lorig, Victoria T. McGhee, Theodore F. Craver, Newton D. Lesh II, Jeannie M. Crowley, William Christopher Black and Thomas E. Evans ("Notice of Filing").

an efficient and fair shortcut for determining the market rate"); In re Fine Paper Antitrust Litigation, 751 F.2d 562, 590-91 (3d Cir. 1984).

The reasonableness of the rates charged is also shown by a calculation of the overall rates for both Howrey & Simon and Bright & Lorig. The overall average charge per hour was $ for Howrey & Simon attorneys and $ for Bright & Lorig attorneys.

a. Counsel's Rates Actually Charged and Included In the Lodestar Were Discounted from Counsel's Normal Rates

Under its normal billing practices, Howrey & Simon charges clients hourly rates that differ by attorney depending on the attorney's experience and the office in which the attorney is resident. For associates, the rates generally are determined by the law school class year to which the associate belongs. For partners, the rates are based on a combination of experience, success, standing in the legal community and attractiveness to clients. These rates periodically are adjusted to account for greater attorney experience, inflation, and marketplace factors.

Initially, Howrey & Simon charged Litton its customary District of Columbia rates for all timekeepers. These rates were substantially lower than Los Angeles market rates. Negotiations over the period 1991-1993 led to the adoption of a discounted blended rate beginning in August 1994.

16diii005889

b. The Rates Actually Paid By Litton and Included In The Lodestar Are Below Market Rates Charged By Comparable Firms and Attorneys

The reasonableness of Howrey & Simon's rates is demonstrated by a comparison of the hourly rates of other firms in Los Angeles. Available data for the going market rates in these cities show that counsel's rates are clearly within the market rate range and thus are reasonable. See Nolan Decl. at ¶ 38, 39, and Ex. Z attached thereto. For much of the litigation Litton paid fees based upon the Washington, D.C. legal market, where rates are lower than Los Angeles. In 1990, at the outset of the litigation, Howrey & Simon only had offices in the District of Columbia. It charged Litton hourly rates of $ for a relatively junior associate, $ for a junior partner and $ for a senior partner. During the 1998 trial, the rates for associates working out of the District of Columbia office ranged from $ to $. Howrey & Simon's blended partner rates were well within the market range for comparable national law firms in the District of Columbia. Because rates in the District of Columbia generally are substantially less than those in Los Angeles, Howrey & Simon's rates were substantially lower than Los Angeles market rates throughout the litigation (particularly prior to 1994).

[6] This estimate of what Litton's fees would have been using regular fees has been calculated using District of Columbia rates where the attorney is or was based in that office; those rates are substantially lower than Los Angeles office rates. Thus, had the comparison used all Los Angeles rates, as the case law suggests, the difference would be greater.

16diii005890

Because counsel's hourly rates are within or below the range of market rates charged by other firms in the same geographic market with similar practices, counsel's rates are presumptively reasonable.

3. Litton's Counsel Expended A Reasonable Number of Hours Litigating This Case Over a Nine-Year Period.

This was and is a large complex case that required intensive and continuous effort over the course of the litigation, which has included two trials. The hours expended are entirely consistently with the effort required to bring this case to a successful close. In total, the actual billing records show that Litton's outside counsel worked over 97,000 hours since 1990. The total for Howrey & Simon is 95,127.5 hours. Bright & Lorig has worked 2,108.5 hours.

Counsel's pretrial and trial work was critical to Litton's success at trial. The declarations accompanying this Motion summarize the qualifications of Litton's counsel and describe the work counsel performed. See, e.g., Nolan Decl. ¶¶ 2, 11; Heyer Decl. ¶¶ 4-30; Lorig Decl. ¶ 2. These declarations attest to the facts that the hours billed were reasonably expended on the litigation or on closely-related matters where the work was useful and of a type ordinarily necessary to secure the final result.

Such work generally included fact investigation; preparation and filing of the Complaint and other initial pleadings, preparing and responding to numerous motions; conducting ongoing factual and legal research; reviewing hundreds of thousands of pages of documents; receiving, processing and organizing millions of pages of documents produced in discovery; creating and maintaining full-text document database and imaging systems; deposing and defending the depositions of hundreds of witnesses; requesting and responding to voluminous discovery; overseeing the work of expert witnesses; trying issues of liability and damages before two juries; and participating in out-of-court mediation.

For a case of this size, complexity and duration, the hours expended to accomplish these tasks were reasonable. Throughout, Honeywell mounted a vigorous defense, raising every available issue, both legal and factual, in an effort to defeat Litton's claims. Honeywell employed scores of highly capable, experienced lawyers from several major law firms. Litton's counsel ably, effectively, and expeditiously litigated this case to a successful conclusion.

In addition, Litton's representation was characterized by continuity. Litton benefited from the continuous representation of its lead counsel Messrs. Bodner, Nolan and Heyer, whose time jointly accounts for more than 30 percent of the hours included in this petition.

4. Litton Excluded Substantial Hours from the Fee Petition

In accordance with its billing practices, Litton's outside counsel excluded time that was unproductive, unnecessary, or duplicative. Counsel carefully reviewed each Howrey & Simon bill before it was sent to Litton, including each individual task entry and the time spent, as well as all expenses. Any entries deemed duplicative, unproductive or otherwise unnecessary were eliminated.

. None of those hours are included here. Further, in-house counsel at Litton carefully reviewed the bills and, in some cases, further deleted time considered duplicative, excessive, unnecessary or otherwise objectionable. See the Declaration of Victoria T. McGhee, attached to Litton's Notice of Filing and filed concurrently herewith.

In summary, Litton has excluded from its petition timekeeper hours that come within the following categories: (1) time absorbed by Howrey & Simon and not included in the bill; (2) time written off by Howrey & Simon prior to billing; and (3) time written off by Litton after billing.[7]

The hours that Litton has excluded from its fee petition reinforce the conclusion that the attorneys' fees for which Litton is seeking reimbursement are only those which were reasonable and necessary. Accordingly, Litton is entitled to recover the entire amount of its fees set forth in this petition.

B. Litton Is Entitled to Upward Adjustments of the Modified Lodestar to Account For Delay

Once a petitioner establishes that counsel's hours and rates are reasonable, the lodestar is presumed to be correct and fully awardable. See Blum, 465 U.S. at 897. There is an additional step, however, where there has been substantial delay between the time a prevailing party pays

---

[7] In addition to the attorney's fees included here, Litton incurred fees from other outside counsel in 1990 for which records have not been located. If and when Litton locates those records, it will supplement this petition to include them.

16diii005893

the fees and expenses and the time it is reimbursed. In re Washington Public Power Supply Sys. Lit., 19 F.3d at 1305 (holding it was an abuse of discretion for the district court to fail to include a delay adjustment where there was a seven year delay before recovery of fees and expenses). The Supreme Court has also recognized that "courts may adjust [the] lodestar calculation" if the lodestar does not reflect the reasonable worth of counsel's services. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 94, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L.Ed.2d 67 (1989). For example, under the fee-shifting provisions of the Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1988, the Court noted "[a]n adjustment for delay in payment is . . . an appropriate factor in the determination of what constitutes a reasonable attorney's fee...." Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 284, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989). Such adjustment may be "by the application of current rather than historic hourly rates or otherwise...." Id.

The Ninth Circuit has explained that there are two ways to account for delay in making an upward adjustment to the lodestar:

> (1) by applying the attorneys' current rates to all hours billed during the course of the litigation; or (2) by using the attorneys' historical rates and adding a prime rate enhancement.

In re Washington Pub. Power Supply Sys. Litig., 19 F.3d at 1305. In accordance with these suggested methodologies, Litton is requesting a delay adjustment of at least $.

An upward adjustment for delay is appropriate not only in contingency fee cases but also in cases where the attorneys' fees have been paid by the client on a regular basis. In Gulfstream III Associates v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 414 (3d Cir. 1993), the Third Circuit explained:

> Although the principal justification for delay enhancements is to compensate attorneys who have had to wait for their fees, we believe this does not preclude such an award in every case where the attorneys are paid on time. The overriding purpose of a delay enhancement is to compensate for the lost use of money during the time before statutorily mandated attorneys' fees are awarded. The fact that the cost is borne by the client and not the attorney does not alleviate the hardship of waiting for attorneys' fees until the > end of the litigation. Any other result would create an incentive for plaintiffs not to pay their attorneys until the conclusion of the litigation.

Id. at 425 (awarding antitrust plaintiff a delay adjustment); see also Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 846 F. Supp. 108, 118 (D.D.C. 1994), ("Plaintiffs, if not their counsel, were deprived for three to four years of the use of the funds that they paid to counsel.")

Here, Litton has computed the delay adjustment under both methods and will seek Honeywell's agreement as to the most appropriate. Both methods yield a result that is fairly close when applied to the lodestar for Howrey & Simon fees and Bright & Lorig fees. Under the current rate method, the total adjustment comes to $ for Howrey & Simon fees and $ for Bright & Lorig fees. The computation of the lodestar fees at current rates is contained in Exhibits B and D of Mr. Nolan's declaration. Under the interest method using the Federal Reserve Average Prime Rate, the adjustment totals $. These analyses are presented in Exhibit Y to the Nolan Decl. Litton has not computed a delay adjustment for the amounts included in this petition for in-house attorneys, contract paralegals and economic analysts, or litigation expenses. Only those fees contained in the lodestar are the subject of adjustment. Litton would accept a delay adjustment under either method, but suggests that the prime rate approach may best compensate Litton for the lost use of money paid monthly over this nine year litigation.

Whichever method is chosen, Litton is entitled to a delay enhancement of at least $.

C. Litton Is Entitled to a Quality Adjustment of the Lodestar

The quality of the work of Litton's counsel and the degree of success also warrant a quality adjustment above the market rate lodestar. Litton submits that the amount of such an adjustment may be best be determined after Litton has fully briefed its responses to whatever challenges Honeywell may raise in its post-trial motions. Accordingly, Litton will address this item of recovery more fully.

IV. LITTON IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD FOR TIME SPENT BY IN-HOUSE ATTORNEYS IN PROSECUTING THIS SUIT

Litton petititons for an award of $. for work performed by Litton's in-house counsel. Just as outside counsel's fees are compensable, so is the time of certain in-house counsel. National Gypsum Co. v. Steel Sys. Int'l, Inc., 9 U.S.P.Q.2d (BNA) 2073 (D. Or. 1988); Zacharias v. Shell Oil Co., 627 F. Supp. 31, 35 (E.D.N.Y. 1984); see generally, Milgard Tempering, Inc. v. Selas Corp. of America, 761 F.2d 553, 558 (9th Cir. 1985) (permitting district court, using Washington law, to examine modern trend toward providing fees for in-house counsel).

A court should award fees for work performed by in-house counsel when he or she actively participated in the case. Milgard Tempering, 761 F.2d at 558. In short, the Court should compensate Litton for the time of in-house counsel for all substantive work that was not client work, (e.g., not monitoring the litigation and consulting with outside counsel). In this case, Litton's experienced in-house counsel took on various case responsibilities, including: the review and analysis of discovery materials, preparation of witnesses and defense of depositions, and the review and production of documents responsive to discovery demands. These tasks are properly compensable as part of the fee award.

In awarding attorneys' fees for work performed by in-house counsel, courts commonly use an hourly rate to determine the proper compensation. Zacharias, 627 F. Supp. at 34 (citing Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 281 F.2d 538, 542 (3d Cir. 1960) and Brisbane v. Port Auth. of New York & New Jersey, 550 F. Supp. 222, 224 (S.D.N.Y. 1982)). This practice is based on the rationale that "work performed by in-house counsel reduces the workload and, consequently, the fee of the [outside] counsel and '[t]here is no reason in law or in equity why the [losing party] should benefit from [the prevailing party's] choice to proceed with some of the work through its own legal department.'" Id. To determine a reasonable hourly rate for in-house counsel, courts often look to the going market rate. In re Public Serv. Co., No. 91-0536M, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16326, at *15 (S.D. Cal. 1992) ("Generally, the relevant community is one in which the District Court sits.") (citing Davis v. Mason County, 927 F.2d 1473, 1488 (9th Cir. 1991)).

The declarations of Ms. McGhee, Mr. Craver, Mr. Lesh, Mr. Black, and Ms. Crowley describe the work each of these in-house attorneys performed and how they determined their reasonable hours. In addition, Exhibit L to the Nolan Decl. presents a summary of all of the in-house counsel time and fees calculated at the rates actually paid for comparable Howrey & Simon attorneys. The total hours expended are , and the requested fees are $.

V. LITTON SHOULD BE AWARDED FEES OF CONTRACT PARALEGALS AND OTHER NON-LAWYER LITIGATION ASSISTANTS

The fees award properly encompasses not only attorneys' fees, but also fees for all litigation-related work performed by counsel's non-lawyer staff. The term ["reasonable attorney's fee"] refers to a reasonable fee for the work product of an attorney, not just the fees for the attorney's work, thus, the fee must "take into account the work not only of attorneys, but also of secretaries, messengers, librarians, janitors, and others whose labor contributes to the work product for which an attorney bills her client; and it must also take account of other expenses and profit." Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. at 285. This is particularly so under the Clayton Act, which broadly provides for the recovery of "costs of suit."

Litton has incurred costs for both paralegals and accounting and economic analysts. The fees for paralegals employed by Howrey & Simon are in the lodestar computation above. The remaining fees of paralegals and analysts are a cost of suit not included in the lodestar. Litton requests that it be awarded the sum of $. for contract paralegals and $ for economic and accounting analysts.

A. Paralegal Fees

Attorneys on both sides have relied extensively on paralegals to perform substantive and case management tasks in this litigation. In addition to paralegals employed by Howrey & Simon (whose time is already in the lodestar), Litton engaged paralegals in three general categories: those who were (a) employed directly by Litton in Washington, D.C. as temporary paralegals ("Lit Temps") in the Howrey & Simon office and were paid only for the hours expensed on case-related tasks through the submission of daily time cards; (b) employed elsewhere as such temporary paralegals ("Lit Temps"); and (c) employed by third party temporary help agencies but worked under the direction of counsel either at a Litton site or at counsel's office.

These paralegals all assisted in the review, production and organization hundreds of thousands of documents; created and maintained document and deposition databases; prepared witness files and deposition digests; managed case files; checked citations and organized exhibits for court submissions; and assisted in the preparation and control of exhibits and pleadings during trial. These are the kinds of tasks the Supreme Court has described as appropriate paralegal work. Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. at 288. These tasks were performed more efficiently and more economically by delegating them to non-attorneys with lower billing rates and specialized expertise. These costs were further controlled by the extensive use of Litton temporary employees and contract paralegals whose time was billed directly to Litton. Also, Howrey & Simon used other litigation support personnel such as computer specialists, librarians and clerks to assist as necessary. Their time, which is not large, is included as litigation support within the Howrey & Simon paralegal time.

As with the attorneys, Litton has kept records of the time billed by these paralegals. These bills were submitted to and paid by Litton on an ongoing basis. The declarations of Thomas N. Heyer and Thomas E. Evans[8] describe the paralegals and litigation support staff and their qualifications, the work they did, how their time was kept and rates determined, and time that was excluded from this petition. See Heyer Decl. ¶ 38; Evans Decl. ¶ 5-8. The hours and rates of these paralegals are shown on Exhibits E, F, G, and H to the Nolan Decl. for Howrey &

Simon paralegals and litigation support personnel, for the Lit Temps that worked only in Howrey & Simon's District of Columbia office, and for Lit Temps and agency paralegals, respectively, that worked at Litton document sites in the Los Angeles area.

B. Accounting and Economic Analysts

As is necessary in a case of this type and magnitude, the attorneys have used the assistance of accounting and economic analysts for their specialized expertise. The support that these analysts have provided includes such tasks as assembling discovery materials relevant to the assessment of damages, analyzing the reports of Honeywell's expert witnesses, assisting the attorneys in preparing for depositions of those expert witnesses, assisting at the depositions, and assisting in preparing for cross-examination at trial of Honeywell's witnesses, both expert and otherwise.

All of the work was done at the instruction of and under the supervision of attorneys and was useful, necessary, not duplicative, and not excessive. These analysts were acting in support of Howrey & Simon attorneys in the same capacity as other litigation support staff including paralegals. For the same reasons as noted above for paralegals, their time is compensable.

VI. LITTON SHOULD BE AWARDED THE FEES AND EXPENSES IT HAS PAID FOR ECONOMIC EXPERTS

Litton also requests an award of the fees and expenses in the amount of $ for economic experts as part of its "cost of suit" under the Clayton Act. These experts were absolutely essential to the presentation of both liability and damages issues. Indeed, the second trial on damages revolved primarily around the testimony of these economic experts. Both sides recognized the importance of economic experts in this litigation and retained several such experts. Thus, Litton retained Dr. John Beyer, Dr. James Langenfeld, and Dr. Robert Hall to testify concerning market definition and damages. In addition, Litton retained Dr. Edward Leamer and Mr. Roger Schlonsky to provide consultation and possible testimony during the damages retrial. Moreover, both Dr. Leamer and Mr. Schlonsky were designated and prepared to testify as rebuttal witnesses. Honeywell retained Professor William Baumol, Dr. Joe Pace, Dr. Gary Dorman, Profession Richard Schmalensee, Professor Joseph Kalt, and accountant J. Duross O'Bryan to testify on liability and damages issues.

Recent antitrust decisions have awarded expert witness fees and expenses to prevailing antitrust plaintiffs as a component of the "costs of suit" pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act. For example, in Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 258, 268 (E.D. Wash. 1986), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part, 879 F.2d 632, 639 (9th Cir. 1989), the district court awarded the plaintiffs all of their requested expert witness fees, ruling that "the retention by plaintiffs of the experts . . . was necessary due to the defenses interposed by [defendant]. See also Automotive Products PLC v. Tilton Engineering, Inc., 855 F. Supp. 1101, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 1994) appeal dismissed, 36 F.3d 1109 (Fed. Cir. 1994) (court granted antitrust plaintiff's request for expert fees, finding that the expert's testimony "was necessary to provide the jury with a factual basis from which to ascertain the damages").

The testimony and advice of Litton's economic experts was necessary to the litigation of this case, and the fees and expenses that Litton has incurred in retaining these experts are reasonable. The experts submitted detailed reports and were the subject of extensive and costly deposition discovery. Furthermore, Litton's damages expert Dr. Beyer (as well as Honeywell's expert Dr. Pace) was the subject of a special evidentiary hearing before the trial commenced. The fees for this work were billed to and paid by Litton on an ongoing basis, and the detailed records of these bills have been maintained. These records fully support the amounts which Litton is seeking to recover, as set forth in the accompanying declarations and exhibits.

VII. LITTON'S OUT-OF-POCKET LITIGATION EXPENSES ARE EITHER COMPENSABLE AS PART OF ITS COST BILL, OR ARE COMPENSABLE AS PART OF ATTORNEY'S EXPENSES UNDER THE CLAYTON ACT

To the extent that the attorneys for the prevailing plaintiff incur out-of-pocket (such as travel, telephone, photocopying, and computerized research expenses) that are billed to the client, are not part of the general overhead of the office, and are not recoverable as part of the bill of costs, Litton is entitled to recover those litigation expenses as part of the mandatory costs and fees award under Section 4 of the Clayton Act. Recovery of these costs is necessary to give effect to the purpose of the statute, which is to ensure that a successful plaintiff's treble damage recovery is not diminished by the payment to the attorney, and thereby to encourage private enforcement of the antitrust laws. See Perkins, 474 F.2d at 553; Image Technical, 136 F.3d at 1357.

In accordance with this mandatory award of fees and costs, courts have routinely awarded the prevailing plaintiff its out-of-pocket litigation expenses. See Automotive Products, 855 F. Supp. at 1106 (prevailing antitrust plaintiff entitled to an award of reasonable "out-of-pocket" expenses such as "facsimile expenses, Lexis charges, long distance telephone charges, Federal Express charges, secretarial overtime charges, trial supply expenses, postage, messenger fees, hotel and travel expenses, parking expenses, teleconference expenses, and mock trial expenses"); Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 839 F. Supp. 905, 916 (D.D.C. 1993) ("[p]laintiffs' out-of-pocket costs for telephone, telecopier, air and local couriers, postage, photocopying, WESTLAW research, secretarial overtime, and counsels' travel expenses are routinely billed to fee-paying clients, and thus are all compensable as part of a reasonable attorney's fee" award under the antitrust laws).

Each of the categories of Litton's out-of-pocket litigation expenses are fully set forth in the supporting declarations submitted with this memorandum, along with the amount for each broken out separately. These litigation expenses include: LEXIS charges, photocopying not recoverable under the cost bill, database creation and management, travel expenses, courier charges, postage, long-distance telephone charges and expenses incurred in connection with Court-ordered mediation. The total amount of these expenses, exclusive of amounts included in the cost bill, are $6,035,141. All of these expenses are taken from monthly records of amounts billed to and paid by Litton. These expenses were reasonably and necessarily incurred for the preparation and presentation of this case and, as such, are fully recoverable.

MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS LEPAGE'S, INC. AND LEPAGE'S MANAGEMENT COMPANY, L.L.C.'s PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES INCLUDING EXPENSES NOT COVERED BY THE BILL OF COSTS

I. INTRODUCTION.

Plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C. (collectively referred to as "LePage's") petition the Court for an award of attorneys' fees under Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).[1] In total, plaintiffs seek $5,495,304.04 in attorneys' fees and recoverable expenses not covered by plaintiffs' Bill of Costs[2] broken down as follows: $2,728,756.93 for Mayer Brown & Platt ("Mayer Brown"); $2,179,151.67 for Pepper Hamilton LLP ("Pepper");and $587,395.44 for Peter Hearn, Esquire.[3]

[1] 15 U.S.C. § 15(a) provides, in pertinent part, that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor ... and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee."

[2]Plaintiffs' Bill of Costs will be filed with the Clerk of the Court in the near future.

[3]The supporting documentation for the fee and expense requests is being submitted in (continued...)

Section 4 of the Clayton Act mandates an award of attorneys' fees to any person who is injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden by the antitrust laws. 15 U.S.C. § 15(a). Counsel for LePage's have made a good faith effort to eliminate redundant and duplicative hours and otherwise inapplicable charges and to present the Court with a complete description and itemization of fees and expenses recoverable under the Clayton Act. These are the fees and expenses necessarily and reasonably incurred in achieving the result in this case: a determination by the jury that 3M violated the antitrust laws, and a damages award in the amount of $22,828,899 (trebled by this Court to $68,486,697).

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY.

The reasonableness of the efforts of plaintiffs' lawyers devoted to this litigation is best understood in light of the resistance LePage's faced at every step of the way. First, 3M moved for a more specific complaint or, in the alternative, to dismiss Count Four of the complaint, to which LePage's responded by amending its complaint. In the meantime, 3M unsuccessfully moved to transfer venue from Philadelphia to either Minnesota or the Western District of Pennsylvania. 3M next moved to dismiss the amended complaint or, alternatively, for a more definite statement of claims. 3M's request was again denied, following briefing and oral argument. Not satisfied with the Court's decision, 3M unsuccessfully moved for reconsideration or, in the alternative, for certification of an appeal of this Court's ruling, once again requiring substantial efforts on the part of LePage's attorneys.

volumes: Volumes IA and IB for Mayer Brown; Volumes IIA and IIB for Pepper; and Volume III for Peter Hearn. A chart summarizing each firm's fees and expenses is attached to this memorandum as Exhibit "A."

16diii005908

In another series of motions, 3M moved to dismiss LePage's as a plaintiff, to require joinder of LePage's Management's members to the case as plaintiffs, and (twice) to eliminate LePage's right to a jury trial. None of these attempts were successful.

3M's insistence that it could not understand LePage's theory of the case prompted this Court to order LePage's to prepare and file a statement of its claims, which required LePage's attorneys to conduct an extensive review of the discovery that was available to date, and to prepare a comprehensive paper explaining LePage's theories of the case. Preparation of this statement of claims consumed numerous hours of partners, associates, legal assistants and secretaries alike.

On February 1, 1999, 3M again sought dismissal of plaintiffs' claims with a motion for summary judgment backed by numerous exhibits and affidavits, and again requiring a comprehensive response. In preparation for trial, 3M listed 83 witnesses whom it expected to call, thereby requiring plaintiffs to prepare for that possibility. Together, the parties filed 22 motions in limine addressed to trial evidence. Trial itself consumed 33 days, many of which were committed to defendant's cross-examination.

III. DISCUSSION.

A. Plaintiffs Have Met the Threshold Requirements for An Attorneys' Fee Award.

In order to qualify for an attorneys' fee award under Section 4 of the Clayton Act, the Third Circuit requires only that plaintiffs prove a violation of the antitrust laws and that as a result, plaintiffs suffered damages. If these two requirements are satisfied, a plaintiff is entitled to a mandatory award of attorneys' fees. Gulfstream III Associates, Inc. v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 414, 418-19 (3d Cir. 1993) ("[a]n antitrust plaintiff who has proven to the satisfaction of the factfinder that defendant violated the antitrust laws and has established the fact of damage has established the prerequisites for defendant's liability and its own entitlement to attorneys' fees.").

There can be no doubt that plaintiffs qualify for an attorneys' fees award. The jury's responses to Questions 1 through 3.1 of the Jury Verdict Form indicate that the jury found that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power and attempted to unlawfully maintain monopoly power in the market consisting of invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States. The jury then assessed damages in the amount of $22,828,899 for monopolization, and for attempted monopolization. Since the jury found that 3M violated the antitrust laws and that LePage's suffered damages as a result, plaintiffs are entitled to an award of attorneys fees.

B. Plaintiffs' Attorneys' Fees are Reasonable.

Once a plaintiff establishes entitlement to an attorneys' fees award, "[t]he most useful starting point for determining the amount of a reasonable fee is the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 433 (1983). This figure is referred to as the "lodestar," which is "strongly presumed to yield a reasonable fee." Washington v. Philadelphia County Court of Common Pleas, 89 F.3d 1031, 1035 (3d Cir. 1996)(citing City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557 (1992)). Once the lodestar amount of attorneys' fees is determined, the district court has discretion to make upward or downward adjustments. U.S. ex rel. John Doe I v. Pennsylvania Blue Shield, 54 F.Supp.2d 410 (M.D. Pa. 1999). The lodestar in this case is calculated in the sections immediately below.[4]

[4]The lodestar approach is the "only reasonably objective basis for valuing an attorney's services," Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. of Phila. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 487 F.2d 161, 167 (3d Cir. 1973), judgment vacated on other grounds, 540 F.2d 102 (3d Cir. 1976), and has become the standard method for calculating attorney fee awards. Gulfstream III, (continued...)

16diii005910

1. Plaintiffs' lodestar calculation is based only on hours reasonably expended on the case.

The first step in calculating the lodestar is to determine the number of hours reasonably expended by plaintiffs' attorneys in pursuing the litigation to judgment. To ensure claims are made only for time "reasonably expended," the Hensley decision requires counsel to make "a good-faith effort to exclude from a fee request hours that are excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary." Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434.

This has been done. Counsel has carefully reviewed all of the time records to arrive at the number of hours that can reasonably be charged for the work performed. Time has been eliminated for education time of lawyers assigned to the case because of associate turnover. The records have been reviewed to eliminate time spent on particular tasks which proved irrelevant to the case as tried. See Declarations of Barbara Mather, Peter Hearn and Mark Ryan, attached as Exhibits "B," "C," and "D," respectively. In light of these reductions, the total hours claimed to have been reasonably expended are not excessive.

The second and final step in determining the lodestar is to determine the reasonable billing rate of the attorneys involved in the litigation. The Third Circuit has stated that a reasonable hourly rate "generally is reflected in [an individual attorney's] normal billing rate." Lindy Bros., 487 F.2d at 167. Additionally, the Supreme Court has directed that "'reasonable fees' ... are to be calculated according to the prevailing market rates in the relevant community...." Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 895 (1984).

4
995 F.2d at 421.

16diii005911

Mayer Brown and Pepper partner rates range from $250 per hour to $350 per hour, associate rates range from $125 per hour to $285 per hour, and legal assistant rates range from $50 per hour to $130 per hour. Peter Hearn's fee ranged from $300 per hour to $350 per hour. The hourly rates claimed by plaintiffs' counsel are their usual rates and are consistent with the rates normally charged by counsel in this district. Plaintiffs have attached the declaration of William T. Hangley, Esquire as Exhibit "E" attesting that the rates of the Pepper and Mayer Brown attorneys and legal assistants, as well as Peter Hearn's rates, are reasonable in light of the character and complexity of the issues presented in this case.[5] Mr. Hangley states that Ms. Mather's, Mr. Ryan's and Mr. Hearn's billing rates are in line with those prevailing in Philadelphia for antitrust litigation services by lawyers of comparable skill, experience and reputation.

2. Calculation of the lodestars.

Calculating the lodestar figure "requires multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended by the reasonable hourly rate." Pennsylvania Environmental Defense Foundation v. Canon-McMillan School Dist., 152 F.3d 228, 231 (3d Cir. 1998). The total counsel fees claimed in this case, including expenses, are $5,480,703.23. Each firm has performed its lodestar calculation by multiplying the number of hours claimed per attorney or legal assistant by that person's billing rate. The calculations are attached to the front of the supporting documentation volumes being submitted with this fee petition. See Volume IA for Mayer Brown, Volume IIA for Pepper, and Volume III for Peter Hearn.

[5]Mr. Hangley's declaration comports with the rule in the Third Circuit that, "[t]he plaintiff bears the burden of producing sufficient evidence of what constitutes a reasonable market rate for the essential character and complexity of the legal services rendered...." Hurley v. Atlantic City Police Department, 174 F.3d 95, 131 (3d Cir. 1999) (citing Smith v. Philadelphia Housing Authority, 107 F.3d 223, 225 (3d Cir. 1997)).

3. No downward adjustments to the lodestars are warranted.

LePage's was successful in proving that 3M violated the antitrust laws in two respects. First, LePage's proved that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Second, LePage's proved that 3M unlawfully attempted to maintain monopoly power, also in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

Notwithstanding LePage's lack of success in proving the Section 1 (unlawful restraint of trade) and Section 3 (exclusive dealing) claims, no downward adjustment to the lodestar is warranted. In Hensley, the Supreme Court was asked to decide whether a partially prevailing plaintiff may recover attorneys' fees for services performed with respect to unsuccessful claims. Two rules were effectively established by the Court: one governing loss of a claim related to the winning claim; and another rule governing the loss of a claim that is unrelated or wholly independent of the winning claim. See Dobbs, Reducing Attorneys' Fees for Partial Success: A Comment on Hensley and Blum, 1986 Wis. L. Rev. 835, 838-89. The first rule (related claims rule) will apply if the plaintiffs' claims for relief involve a common core of facts or are based on related legal theories. See id. at 839. In effect, the related claims should be treated as a single unit so that the plaintiff is entitled to recover all of its attorneys' fees regardless of whether one of the related claims was ultimately unsuccessful at trial. The second rule will apply only if a plaintiff presents two unrelated claims and loses on one of them, for example, where an antitrust plaintiff's claims included a count under the RICO statute. See id. at 839-40.

In the present case, LePage's four antitrust claims were all based on a common core set of facts. LePage's theories were also legally interrelated, for example, all of plaintiffs' claims required plaintiffs to prove the existence of a relevant market, the market for invisible and transparent tape for plaintiffs to prove the existence of a relevant market, the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States. That common element was proved, as indicated by the jury's response to Question 1 of the Verdict Form. It makes no difference that plaintiffs did not prevail on every theory, or for the full amount of the damages sought. What does matter is that plaintiffs prevailed on their central claims – that 3M monopolized and attempted to monopolize the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States – both of which are inimical to the antitrust laws. Since plaintiffs prevailed on the litigation as a whole and the claims involved many overlapping issues of fact and law, the fee award should not be reduced.

C. Plaintiffs are Permitted To Add Costs Not Covered in the Bill of Costs.

LePage's has claimed total expenses of $302,193.64 in the lodestar amounts to account for costs not recoverable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920, but which are properly included in the attorney fee petition as having been necessarily incurred in the litigation of the action.[6] See, e.g., Abrams v. Lightolier, Inc., 50 F.3d 1204, 1225 (3d Cir. 1995) (reproduction expenses, travel time and expenses, and postage recoverable under § 1988 if attorneys in the community bill separately for these charges); Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 869 F.Supp. 1190, 1202 n. 9 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (charges for court liason, electronic research services, messengers, report services, faxes and transportation allowed); Midnight Sessions, Ltd. v. City of Phila., 755 F.Supp. 652, 663 (E.D. Pa.) (payment for meals and travel allowed when indication of to whom various expenses are attributable is provided), rev'd and vacated on other grounds, 945 F.2d 667 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 984

[6]These costs include charges for: electronic legal research; delivery service, including FedEx, UPS and other courier charges; business meals; postage; supplies, such as binders and tabs; facsimile transmissions (labeled "telecopy" charges on Pepper's supporting documentation); telephone calls; and attorney travel and local transportation, including airfare, taxi cabs, parking, tolls and mileage.

16diii005914

(1992); Rank v. Balsky, 590 F.Supp. 787, 803 (E.D. Pa. 1984) (transportation and food expenses allowed "to the extent that such expenses were reasonably and necessarily incurred"). As with the lodestars, the expenses have been carefully reviewed to ensure that only proper items are claimed.[7]

IV. CONCLUSION.

For all of the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C. request an award of attorneys' fees (including expenses not covered by the Bill of Costs) to Mayer Brown & Platt in the amount of $2,728,756.93; to Pepper Hamilton in the amount of $2,179,151.67; and to Peter Hearn in the amount of $587,395.44.

DECLARATION OF BARBARA W. MATHER

I, Barbara W. Mather, certify as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a 1968 graduate of the University of Chicago Law School, and a partner in the law firm of Pepper Hamilton LLP since 1973. Throughout my years with the Firm, my practice has included a substantial volume of antitrust litigation.

2. A partial list of the major cases in which I have served as counsel includes:

- Massachusetts School of Law at Andover, Inc. v. American Bar Association, Civil Action No. 93-6206 (E.D. PA.) (co-counsel)
- John J. Wallace v. Systems & Computer Technology Corporation, et al., Civil Action No. 95-CV-6303 (E.D. PA)
- Blanche Road Corporation, et. al v. Bensalem Township, et al., Civil Action No. 89-9040 (E.D. PA)

3. Within Pepper, I have served as Executive Partner of the firm (1993-94) and as Chair of the Litigation and Dispute Resolution Department (1998-present).

4. I am a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers.

5. I serve as a Lecturer in Law for Antitrust at The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania (1995-96, 1998-present).

6. I am admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and the U.S. District Courts for the Eastern and Middle Districts of Pennsylvania.

7. Pepper's partner rates range from $270-$350; associates' rates range from $125-$195; and legal assistants' rates range frm $50-$110. These rates represent the customary billing rates charged for their time during the relevant years.

8. My firm devoted a total of 14,556 hours to its representation of the plaintiffs. Summaries of the activities conducted by the firm's lawyers and legal assistants and the hours spent by each attorney and legal assistant on this matter are set forth in Volume IIA of this submission.

9. Based upon the rates identified above, multiplied by the hours attributable to each firm member, plaintiffs' total fee request for Pepper Hamilton is $2,036,549.45. As explained more fully in the Memorandum, I have reviewed the time records for this matter and attest that the time was reasonably expended in support of plaintiffs' case.

10. In addition, my firm incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $142,602.22. An itemization of these expenses is set forth in Volume IIB of this submission and discussed at pages 8 and 9 of the Memorandum.

16diii005921

11. Accordingly, the total request for Pepper Hamilton's fees and expenses in this matter is $2,179,151.67.

DECLARATION OF PETER HEARN

I, Peter Hearn, declare as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a graduate of Cornell University (1956) and the University of Pennsylvania Law School (1961).

2. I joined the law firm of Pepper Hamilton in 1961 and was elected partner in 1968. I was a member of the Pepper firm until 1996.

3. In April, 1996, I established the Philadelphia firm of Peter Hearn, P.C. I continue to practice with this firm.

4. Throughout my years of practice, I have specialized in litigation. Included in this work has been a substantial volume of antitrust matters.

5. Attached hereto is a current copy of my personal biography.

6. I am admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Courts of Appeals for the Third and Eleventh Circuits, and the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. I am also admitted to practice before the trial and appellate courts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

7. I devoted a total of 1674.5 hours representing the plaintiffs in the above-captioned action. My activities are described in a narrative summary located at Volume III of this submission.

8. My hourly rate was $300 for the period through December 31, 1997, $325 for the 1998 calendar year, and $350 for the 1999 calendar year.

9. Based on the above rates multiplied by the number of hours attributable to my representation, plaintiffs' total fee request for my services is $557,612.50. As explained more fully in the Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees, these billing memoranda have been extensively edited to eliminate any time not directly related to the representation.

10. In addition, my firm incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $29,782.94. An itemization of these expenses and services is located at Volume III of this submission.

11. Accordingly, my firm's portion of the total request for plaintiff's fees and expenses in this matter is $587,395.44.

DECLARATION OF MARK W. RYAN

I, Mark W. Ryan, declare as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a 1977 graduate of Syracuse University, a 1981 graduate of Duke University Law School and a partner in the law firm of Mayer, Brown & Platt.

2. I joined Mayer, Brown & Platt in 1981 and, throughout my career, antitrust law has been the principal focus of my practice. This work has included both litigation and non-litigation antitrust matters.

3. A partial list of the cases in which I have served as counsel includes:

- In re Citric Acid Antitrust Litigation, MDL Dkt. 1092 (N.D. Cal.)
- In re High Fructose Corn Syrup Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 1087 (C.D. Il.)

- In re Airline Ticket Commission Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 1058, (D. Minn.)
- Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx, 396 U.S. 384 (1990) (and related litigation)

4. I am admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and various other federal and state courts. I have been admitted pro hac vice in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania for purposes of this case.

5. The other Mayer, Brown & Platt attorney who was principally responsible for our representation of the plaintiffs in these proceedings is Kerry Edwards. Ms. Edwards is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School. She joined Mayer, Brown & Platt in 1986 and became a partner in 1995. Her practice focuses on antitrust and litigation.

6. Mayer, Brown & Platt is seeking payment for 17,219.15 hours of representation of the plaintiffs. This include the time of attorneys, legal assistants and document clerks for the period March 1, 1997 through October 8, 1999. Detailed billing records describing the firm's activities are set forth in Volume IA of this submission, with a summary of the hours spent by each Mayer, Brown & Platt attorney and legal assistant attached to the front of the volume.

7. Mayer, Brown & Platt annually reviews and adjusts attorney billing rates as of each July 1st. During the period March 1, 1997 through October 8, 1999, my hourly rate ranged from $300-$350 and Ms. Edwards' rate ranged from $250-$325. Associate hourly rates ranged from $135-$285. Legal assistant rates ranged from $75-$130. These rates represent the customary billing rates charged for their time during the relevant time period.

8. Based upon the above rates multiplied by the hours attributable to each firm member, the total fee request relating to work performed by Mayer, Brown & Platt is $2,598,948.45. As explained more fully in the Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiffs' LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C.'s Petition for Attorneys' Fees, these billing records have been edited to eliminate unreasonable and duplicative time.

9. In addition, Mayer, Brown & Platt incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $129,808.48. An itemization of these expenses is located at Volume IB of this submission.

10. Accordingly, the total request for Mayer, Brown & Platt related fees and costs in this matter is $2,728,756.93.

DECLARATION OF WILLIAM T. HANGLEY

I, William T. Hangley, declare as follows in support of Plaintiff's Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs:

1. I am a 1966 graduate of The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania.

2. I have practiced law in Philadelphia, primarily as a trial lawyer, since my graduation from law school, and the majority of my work has been in federal court. I am a member of the Pennsylvania Bar and am admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and Federal Circuit and the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and other districts. I am Chairman of the law firm of Hangley Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, which I co-founded in 1994. My areas of specialty include antitrust litigation.

3. I am a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the American Bar Foundation, a Master of the Bench of the University of Pennsylvania Inn of Court, and a member of the American Law Institute. My memberships in bar associations include the American Bar Association (Co-Chair of the ABA Litigation Section Task Force on the Merit Selection of Judges, 1995-1997; Co-Chair of the Section's Federal Procedure Committee, 1990-1995; and Member of the Section's Task Forces on Discovery, 1997-1998 and on the Judiciary, 1998-present), the Philadelphia Bar Association and the Pennsylvania Bar Association (Member of the House of Delegates 1989-1992). I am also a Member of the Advisory Board for the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia, and served on its Board of Directors from 1982-1988.

4. I am familiar with rates customarily charged by attorneys in litigation in the federal courts and particularly with rates typically charged by partners and associates in the major firms in Philadelphia. Rates for senior lawyers range from $300 to $435, depending on experience and reputation, and rates for associates typically range from $100 to $200.

5. I have reviewed the rates charged by Pepper Hamilton LLP, Peter Hearn, P.C. and Mayer, Brown & Platt in their Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs.

6. Pepper's partner rates range from $270-$350; associates' rates range from $125-$195, and legal assistants' rates range from $50-$110. Peter Hearn's rates range from $300-$350. Mayer, Brown & Platt's partner rates range from $250-$350, associates' rates range from $135-$285, and legal assistants' rates range from $75-$130. The rates claimed by Pepper Hamilton LLP, Peter Hearn, P.C. and Mayer, Brown & Platt are reasonable given the attorneys' experience and background, and are in line with rates usually and customarily charged by comparable law firms in this geographic area and, I believe, nationally.

7. I state under penalty of perjury that the foregoing information is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

William T. Hangley

Rates aren't skyrocketing, but they do keep going up

Many corporate clients are willing to pay the increasing hourly cost of top legal talent, especially in hot practice areas.

BY RUTH SINGLETON

NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL STAFF REPORTER

The National Law Journal (p. B11)
Monday, December 27, 1999

As the economy continues to flourish, law firm billing rates keep climbing. Information provided by law firms responding to the billing portion of The National Law Journal's 1999 survey of the nation's 250 largest law firms indicates that the increases were somewhat more substantial this year than last.

At the high end, Hollywood has beaten out the Beltway. Bertram Fields, a partner who practices entertainment law at Los Angeles' Greenberg Glusker Fields Claman & Machtinger L.L.P., charges a rate of $750 an hour, $140 more than the $610 charged by lobbying partner Thomas Hale Boggs, of Washington, D.C.'s Patton Boggs L.L.P., frequently a top-biller in past NLJ surveys. Houston's Andrews & Kurth L.L.P., whose highest rate is $650, came in second. Twenty firms list partners who charge $500 an hour or more.

There were 141 law firms that provided a range of billing rates for partners and associates, 111 of which responded to last year's survey. Of these 111 firms, 105 raised rates for at least some attorneys, but many held the line on some parameters of their billing rates. For example, 25 firms kept their high rates for partners the same. At the same time, 20 raised them by $5 to $10; seven by $15 to $20; 13 by $25; 21 by $26 to $50; seven by $51 to $99; and four by $100 or more. (Of course, some large jumps can be attributed to the arrival of one high-priced partner.) Only 14 firms lowered their highest rates. Thus 72 firms, or about 65%, of the responding firms raised their highest rates.

The low rates for associates also showed a general upward trend. Although 31 out of the 111 law firms, or 28%, kept their entry-level associate rate the same, 19 firms raised their low-associate rates by $5; 22 by $10; nine by $15; nine by $20; 10 by between $20 and $50; and three by more than $50. Only eight firms lowered their lowest associate rates. Thus, 72 out of 111 firms, or about 65%, raised their entry-level associate rates.

Only 26 of the 141 responding firms now offer an associate rate under $100. Firms charging the lower rates were mostly located in the Midwest (Detroit; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Louisville, Ky.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis) or smaller municipalities (Baltimore; Buffalo, N.Y.; Norfolk, Va.; Uniondale, N.Y.; Woodbridge, N.J.), although lower rates could also be found at a few Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans and Seattle firms.

Not surprisingly, larger firms tend to charge the higher rates. New York's Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom L.L.P.--No. 2 on the NLJ 250, with 1,403 attorneys--lists a range of $380 to $590 for partners and $190 to $365 for associates. In contrast, St. Louis' Husch & Eppenberger L.L.C. charges $140 to $275 for partners, a lower range than Skadden's associate rate. The firm--No. 199 on the NLJ 250, with 183 attorneys--charges

Alternative billing methods continue to be popular, but they still don't pose a threat to the billable hour. Firms that generate sizable percentages of their income from alternative billing methods include Brooklyn, N.Y.'s Cullen & Dykman (50%); Woodbridge, N.J.'s Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer (47%); Chicago's D'Ancona & Pflaum (40%); Buffalo, N.Y.'s Hodgson, Russ, Andrews, Woods & Goodyear L.L.P. (40%); Hunton & Williams (40%); Philadelphia's Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis L.L.P. (39%); Philadelphia's Saul, Ewing, Remick & Saul L.L.P. (36%); Detroit's Butzel Long (30%); and Holland & Knight L.L.P. (30%).

The alternative billing methods such firms listed include task-based billing, contingency fees, fixed fees and blended rates. Mr. Altonji observed that many firms use "value-based billing for the bigger stuff....For a lot of basic things, such as loans, a lot of [law firms use] fixed fees."

PLAINTIFFS' REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS

Ignoring the law of the Sixth and other Circuits that "[a]n award of attorney's fees as part of the cost of a successful antitrust suit is mandatory,"[1] defendants ("UST") invite error in urging the Court to deny Conwood the recovery of its attorneys' fees and expenses. Since at least 1968, the Sixth Circuit has recognized that the express provision of Section 4 of the Clayton Act trumps the court's discretion to deny the successful plaintiff attorneys' fees and expenses under Rule 54(d).[2]

[1] Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1312 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1009 (1982).

[2] See White & White Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp., 786 F.2d 728, 731 n.1 (6th Cir. 1986); Lewis v. Pennington, 400 F.2d 806, 819 (6th Cir. 1968) (Section 4 "makes 'express provision' for costs, and a district court would be powerless under Rule 54(d) to deny such plaintiff his costs in the exercise of discretion.").

The award is thus mandatory, and UST's desire to avoid paying it is hardly reason for the Court to ignore the statute. Nor should it be the occasion for another month-long trial. While UST suggests that Conwood's billing statements and invoices must be litigated in granular detail, the law is expressly to the contrary. See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437 (1983) ("A request for attorney's fees should not result in a second major litigation.").

Conwood's fee submission complies fully with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(B) and Local Rule 54.4. Conwood has provided ample proof -- comparable to the proof provided by successful plaintiffs in other large antitrust cases -- in support of its motion for attorneys' fees and costs. (Point I, infra). Conwood's requested attorneys' fees, expenses and expert fees in this nationwide, complex antitrust case are reasonable as to hourly rates and number of hours. The Court would have discretion to award a multiple of those fees, but should award at least the actual fees and expenses as "costs of suit" to fully compensate Conwood for what it has already incurred and paid. (Point II, infra).

I. CONWOOD HAS PROVIDED SUFFICIENT PROOF IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION AND HAS OFFERED TO PROVIDE ADDITIONAL DETAIL IN CAMERA SHOULD THE COURT SO REQUEST

A. Conwood's Motion and Memorandum in Support Specify the Judgment and Grounds for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and Costs and Provide a Fair Estimate of the Amount Sought.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(B) requires only that a motion for attorneys' fees "specify the judgment and the statute, rule or other grounds entitling the moving party to the award; and must state the amount or provide a fair estimate of the amount sought." Conwood has met -- and exceeded -- the Rule 54(d)(2)(B) requirements. Conwood has provided the Court with (a) a motion for attorneys' fees and expenses and memorandum in support specifying the judgment and statute entitling Conwood to its award and the amounts sought; (b) four affidavits from counsel attesting to the amounts sought and reasonableness of the requested fees and expenses; (c) a summary of the amounts sought as requested fees and expenses. Conwood has also offered to provide to the Court actual billing records and invoices for in camera review in the event the Court determines that such review is necessary.

This information matches, and in some instances exceeds, the information provided by successful plaintiffs in at least two other recent antitrust cases. Attached as Exhibit A is Litton's Notice of Motion and Motion for the Award of Attorney's Fees and Litigation Expenses (Mar. 8, 1999) in Litton Systems, Inc. and Litton Systems Canada, Ltd. v. Honeywell, Inc., No. CV 90-4823 MRP (Ex) (C.D. Cal.). As is evident from Exhibit A, the information submitted by Litton consisted of only a motion, spreadsheets summarizing fees and expenses, and supporting declarations.[3] Unlike Litton, see Exh. A at 15-16, Conwood has not asked to be compensated for the thousands of hours its in-house counsel -- David L. Simpson and Edward J. Foster -- have worked on this litigation. Similarly, while the quality of the work, the degree of success, and size of the damages award given by the jury would warrant a quality adjustment above the market rate lodestar Conwood has requested,[4] Conwood has not asked this Court for a quality of work adjustment or a lodestar multiplier. Litton did. Cf. Exh. A at 14.

[3]Litton's supporting declarations were filed under seal.

Attached as Exhibit B is Plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C.'s Petition for Attorney's Fees Including Expenses Not Covered by the Bill of Costs (Nov. 23, 1999) in LePage's, Inc., et al. v. 3M (Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.), No. 97-CV-3983 (E.D. Pa.). Like Conwood, LePages submitted a motion, memorandum in support, a spreadsheet summarizing its fees and expenses, and supporting affidavits. While UST complains about Conwood's 14-page "bare-bones request," Defendants' Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorney Fees and Costs at 1 (May 3, 2000) ("Opp."), LePage's memorandum in support of its fees motion consists of nine pages.

While UST cites repetitively to civil rights, Title VII, and NLRA fee award cases, in which a court's fee award is discretionary, those decisions apply a standard far more limiting than 15 U.S.C. § 15.[5] The discretionary fee award statutes have

[5]See Opp. at 3. Wayne v. Village of Sebring, 36 F.3d 517, 531 (6th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1127 (1995) involved a discretionary award of fees and costs to a successful plaintiff in a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, while Wooldridge v. Marlene Industries Corp., 898 F.2d 1169 (6th Cir. 1990), addressed a discretionary award in a Title VII case under 42

differing and often heightened proof requirements. They cannot properly be used to chisel away at a successful antitrust plaintiff's entitlement.[6] UST has shown no respect in which Conwood's petition for fees is deficient.

B. Conwood's Detailed Billing Records and Invoices Contain Work Product and Privileged Communications, to Which UST is Not Entitled.

Conwood has not provided its detailed billing statements and invoices to opposing counsel for good reason: the billing statements and invoices are replete with recitations of attorney client communications and attorney work product. They provide an hour-by-hour "road-map" to the prosecution of this case. UST is not entitled to this information, particularly while the case remains unresolved.

U.S.C. § 2000e-5(k). In Cruz v. Local Union No. 3 of the International Board of Electric Workers, 34 F.3d 1148 (2d Cir. 1994), the Second Circuit considered a discretionary award of fees to a successful plaintiff in a National Labor Relations Act claim, and actually remanded the case for "a more generous appraisal" of the fee award. 34 F.3d at 1161.

[6]See, e.g., Tic-X-Press, Inc. v. Omni Promotions Co. of Ga., 815 F.2d 1407, 1423 n.25 (11th Cir. 1987) ("the principles guiding attorney's fee awards in other cases, such as civil rights suits under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, should not be applied mechanically to antitrust cases"); Black Gold, Ltd. v. Rockwool Indus., Inc., 529 F. Supp. 272, 274 (D. Colo. 1981) ("A successful plaintiff in an antitrust action is entitled to attorney fees as a matter of right under the Clayton Act § 4, 15 U.S.C. § 15. It is this entitlement as a matter of right which distinguishes the award of attorneys fees in antitrust cases from civil rights cases and most other statutory actions which provide that the award of attorneys fees is discretionary."); 10 Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2675.2, at 405-06 (1998) (comparing mandatory fee statutes, such as 15 U.S.C. § 15, which "direct the court to award a reasonable attorney's fee to a prevailing litigant" with "others [such as 42 U.S.C. § 1988 which] grant the court discretion to make an award").

For these same reasons, Litton declined to provide its detailed fee records, including daily time entries, to opposing counsel in support of its motion for attorney's fees and expenses. Litton's counsel aptly noted that > Litton has not included the detailed diary entries prepared by each timekeeper that are supplied with each statement. Provision of these unredacted diary entries to Honeywell's counsel at this state in the litigation is problematic, as there is a possibility of disclosure of confidential information that could be used to Honeywell's advantage in subsequent trial proceedings.

Exh. A at 5 n.3. The same holds true here. UST cites no authority that requires the submission of privileged, tactically sensitive information as a condition of obtaining the mandatory award of fees and expenses required by the Clayton Act.[7]

C. The Materials Before the Court Are Sufficient.

The materials before the Court are, as a matter of law, sufficient support for the mandatory award. UST has no authority to the contrary. Rule 54(d)(2)(C) merely offers UST the opportunity for "adversary submissions with respect to the motion in accordance with Rule 43(e) or Rule 78." Rules 43(e) and 78 are purely discretionary: "When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, but the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or deposition." (emphasis added). Rule 78 allows district courts to rule on motions for attorneys' fees on a "motions day," or

"without oral hearing upon brief written statements of reasons in support and opposition." (emphasis added).

The Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 54(d)(2)(C) confirm that the time-consuming and onerous additional proof, discovery and evidentiary hearings requested by UST, see Opp. at 6-7, 16, are unnecessary.[8] While UST seeks to create obstacles to deny Conwood the award of fees and expenses to which the Clayton Act entitles it, nothing in the Clayton Act, the Federal Rules, or the cases requires the elaborate, expensive, and time-consuming procedure UST urges on the Court.

II. THE ATTORNEYS' FEES AND EXPENSES INCURRED BY CONWOOD IN THIS NATIONWIDE ANTITRUST CASE ARE REASONABLE

A. Conwood's Request for Attorneys' Fees in this Nationwide, Complex Antitrust Case is Reasonable as to Hourly Rates and Number of Hours.

Conwood incurred and paid hourly fees and related expenses to prosecute this case. The recovery of those out-of-pocket payments would in no sense be a "windfall." Opp. at 8, 11. It would merely "insulate [Conwood's] treble damages recovery from expenditures for legal fees, consistent with section 4's purpose to encourage private persons to undertake enforcement of antitrust laws." Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1312. The very purpose of the Clayton Act's provision for the mandatory

[8] "In some cases, an evidentiary hearing may be needed, but this is not required in every case. . . . On rare occasion, the court may determine that discovery under Rules 26-37 would be useful to the parties." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C) advisory committee note (Amendments 1993) (emphasis added).

award of fees and expenses is to shift the cost of counsel from plaintiff to the defendant.[9]

Of course, UST's New York and Louisville counsel argue that Conwood should have been limited in this high-stakes, complex, nationwide antitrust litigation to Memphis counsel, and therefore should recover only at Memphis rates. See Opp. at 12. No case so holds. The determination of the appropriate rate is "fact-intensive and is best guided by what attorneys earn from paying clients for similar services in similar circumstances." Rum Creek Coal Sales, Inc. v. Caperton, 31 F.3d 169, 175 (4th Cir. 1994).

This litigation was not a Paducah or even a Kentucky litigation. It was a complex, national antitrust litigation, involving parties, witnesses, experts and counsel from numerous states. Discovery was conducted throughout the country, because the case involved the actions of UST sales representatives and managers in nearly every state. While the Western District of Kentucky was the forum, it was by no means the only locus from which jurors heard testimony. Conwood brought witnesses to Paducah from such far-ranging places as Spokane, Washington, Worthing, South Dakota and Atlanta, Georgia. The case sought a recovery for UST misconduct that was truly nationwide.

[9] E.g., Tic-X-Press, Inc., 815 F.2d at 1423-24 ("Section 4's purpose is three-fold: 1) to encourage private citizens to undertake enforcement of the antitrust laws; 2) to insure that the cost of doing so does not diminish the plaintiff's treble damages award; and 3) to require a losing defendant to pay the plaintiff's attorney's fees as part of the penalty for violating the antitrust laws.").

16diii005955

Even in civil rights cases, where recovery of fees and expenses is discretionary and hence more narrowly cabined, the Sixth Circuit has held that "[d]istrict courts are free to look to a national market, an area of specialization market or any other market they believe appropriate to fairly compensate particular attorneys in individual cases." Louisville Black Police Officers Ass'n, Inc. v. City of Louisville, 700 F.2d 268, 278 (6th Cir. 1983); Sigley v. Kuhn, Nos. 98-3977, 99-3531, 2000 WL 145187, 7 (6th Cir. Jan. 21, 2000)(same).

In this case, both parties chose to use counsel with particular expertise in nationwide antitrust litigation. Courts in similar circumstances have rejected defendant efforts to cap fees at local rates rather than the rates actually used by the particular firm or firms that represented plaintiff. For example, in National Wildlife Federation v. Hanson, 859 F.2d 313 (4th Cir. 1988), the Fourth Circuit upheld a district court's decision to use Washington D.C. counsel's rates to compute the lodestar in a complex environmental litigation tried in Raleigh, N.C. The Fourth Circuit rejected defense counsel's argument that "the court should have used rates charged in Raleigh, North Carolina, because that is the community in which the court sat." Id. at 317. Here too, "where it is reasonable to retain attorneys from other communities. . . , the rates in those communities may also be considered." Rum Creek, 31 F.3d at 175.

UST cannot plausibly claim it was unreasonable for Conwood to retain Washington, D.C. antitrust counsel, at prevailing Washington, D.C. rates, when UST found it reasonable and

necessary to employ as principal counsel a New York firm with rates substantially higher than those charged by Kellogg, Huber.[10] Conwood does not question UST's decision to retain Skadden Arps, its cost notwithstanding, given the enormous stakes for all parties in this case; neither should UST be permitted to question Conwood's choice of counsel. The Court should not penalize Conwood, by forcing it to abjure recovery of fees, because it chose counsel it reasonably believed was necessary to bring the case to successful conclusion against determined, skillful, well-financed opposition. No principle of law required Conwood to look no further than Memphis for its lawyers.[11]

B. Conwood Should be Awarded All of Its Expenses as Costs of Suit Under 15 U.S.C. § 15.

Numerous district courts view the Clayton Act's "costs of suit" as encompassing all expenses incurred in bringing an antitrust case to a successful conclusion:

> 15 U.S.C. § 15 does not award merely court costs to a successful antitrust plaintiff, but "the cost of suit". This is a more comprehensive term, evidently embracing

[10]A recent article stated that "[n]ot surprisingly, larger firms tend to charge the higher rates. New York's Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom L.L.P. -- No. 2 on the NLJ 250, with 1,403 attorneys -- lists a range of $380 to $590 for partners and $190 to $365 for associates." Ruth Singleton, Rates Aren't Skyrocketing, But They Do Keep Going Up, Nat'l L.J., Dec. 27, 1999, at B11 (attached hereto as Exh. C).

[11]In Langenderfer, the district court determined that for a case involving only the Toledo area it was appropriate to cap fees at the prevailing Toledo rate; here, in contrast, the case was not localized to Memphis or any other area, and accordingly Langenderfer -- even if correct on its facts -- does not support the principle UST urges on the Court. Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 953, 956 (N.D. Ohio 1988).

> "the expense of prosecuting the suit to a successful conclusion". The court costs in the technical sense are of course included in the "cost of suit", but other necessary and reasonable expenses are also included (except the attorney's fee, which is specified separately as an additional item to be paid to plaintiff).

Pitchford Scientific Instrument Corp. v. PEPI Inc., 440 F. Supp. 1175, 1178-79 (W.D. Pa. 1977), aff'd, 582 F.2d 1275 (3d Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 981 (1979). Unlike discretionary fee award statutes, "the award of cost of suit and attorney fees in an antitrust case is designed to afford the plaintiff the relief to which he is entitled without any diminution by reason of the financial burden of making the judicial machinery work in his behalf." Id. at 1179 (emphasis added).

Similarly, in Refuse & Environmental Systems v. Industrial Services of America, 732 F. Supp. 1209 (D. Mass. 1990), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 932 F.2d 37 (1st Cir. 1991), the court based its decision "on case law in the first, fifth, eighth and eleventh circuits under both 15 U.S.C. § 15 and 42 U.S.C. § 1988" and held "that [successful antitrust] plaintiffs must be awarded the reasonable costs of bringing the antitrust lawsuit, beyond those costs allowed by Rule 54(d) and section 1920." Id. at 1220-21 (emphasis added).[12]

---

[12]UST concedes that in Northcross v. Board of Educ., 611 F.2d 624 (6th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 911 (1980) -- a civil rights action -- the Sixth Circuit held that photocopying, paralegal expenses, travel, and telephone costs were recoverable as part of the plaintiff's attorneys' fees. Opp. at 13. UST also concedes that the plaintiffs' docket fees, investigation expenses, deposition expenses, witness expenses, and charts and maps were also recoverable. Id. But it argues that this recovery was limited to civil rights actions. While a district court in Ohio 12 years ago found that "Northcross does provide

C. Conwood Should Be Awarded the Fees and Expenses It Has Paid for Economic Experts.

UST cites to no decisions from this district or to the Sixth Circuit that restrict a prevailing antitrust plaintiff's economic experts to the statutory $40 per day witness fee provided in 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and expenses provided for by 28 U.S.C. § 1920. The two main cases cited by UST, West Virginia University Hospital, Inc. v. Casey, 499 U.S. 83 (1991) and Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437 (1987) both involved expert fee awards in civil rights cases under 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

At least one district court judge since West Virginia University Hospitals and Crawford has granted a successful antitrust plaintiff its request for expert fees and expenses and has explicitly held that Crawford did not apply.[13] In Automotive Products P.L.C. v. Tilton Engineering, Inc., 855 F. Supp. 1101, 1107 (C.D. Cal.), appeal dismissed, 36 F.3d 1109 (Fed. Cir. 1994), the district judge granted the successful plaintiff's request for expert fees, finding that the expert's testimony "was necessary to provide the jury with a factual basis from which to ascertain the damages." Id. The court also specifically held guidance for [an] award of attorney's fees in antitrust litigation," and read that case to support limits on recovery of expenses, Langenderfer, 684 F. Supp. 956, the weight of authority across the United States holds that the prevailing plaintiff in an antitrust case should recoup all expenses reasonably required to bring the case to judgment. See Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs of Suit at 11-13.

[13]The plaintiffs in Litton also moved for recovery of their expert fees and expenses. See Exh. A at 19.

16diii005959

that Crawford does not limit a prevailing antitrust plaintiff to statutory expert fees:

> Tilton has cited Ninth Circuit authority providing for the award of expert witness fees if the expert was necessary to the litigation and if the expert's fees are reasonable. . . . AP cites no contradictory Ninth Circuit cases limiting such an award to statutory damages only, and the Court has already held that Crawford does not specifically limit a prevailing antitrust plaintiff to statutory damages only.

Id.

Similarly, in Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 258, 268 (E.D. Wash. 1986), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part, 879 F.2d 632 (9th Cir. 1989), the district court noted the defendant's "strident defense posture" and held that "the retention by plaintiffs of the experts . . . was necessary due to the defenses interposed by [defendant]." Id. at 268. The court went on to find that the plaintiffs' expert fees were "reasonable" and awarded plaintiffs their requested expert fees. Id.

The same holds true here. There can be no question that the testimony of the experts called by plaintiffs was necessary to overcome the defenses raised by defendants. Each such expert specifically addressed and refuted those defenses, and that proof was concededly of critical importance. Indeed UST has moved for a new trial based on its contention that, for at least one expert (Dr. Leftwich), the proof determined the outcome.

UST asks the Court to find that Conwood's expert expenses, like all of the other fees and expenses Conwood has claimed, were not reasonably necessary to the successful prosecution of this case. But Conwood chose to incur and pay all these costs, with no certainty of any recovery; that more than anything establishes that these costs were both reasonable and necessary. And UST has given the Court no valid basis for challenging Conwood's decisions. UST is hardly in a position to determine what was or was not required to win this case.[14]

[14]UST asks that the fee and expense award be stayed, but cites no authority for the stay of a mandatory award of attorneys' fees and expenses under 15 U.S.C. § 15. The two discretionary fee award cases to which UST cites in support of its argument for a stay are inapposite. Loudermill v. Cleveland Board. of Education, 844 F.2d 304 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 946 (1988), involved yet another discretionary award of attorneys' fees in a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. In Morgan v. Union Metal Manufacturing, 757 F.2d 792 (6th Cir. 1985), there was not even a trial on the merits in the underlying case; the court dismissed the plaintiff's complaint and "awarded attorneys' fees on the common law ground that [plaintiff's] suit had been maintained in bad faith" after dismissing plaintiff's complaint. Id. at 796. Conwood counsel are unaware of any support for postponing the mandatory award of fees and expenses under 15 U.S.C. § 15 until after all appeals have been exhausted.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs' request for attorneys' fees and expenses in the aggregate amount of $19,170,652.86 should be granted.

TO DEFENDANT HONEYWELL, INC., AND ITS ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that as soon as this matter may be heard, in the Courtroom of the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Court for the Central District of California, 312 North Spring Street, Los Angeles, California, Plaintiffs Litton Systems, Inc. and Litton Systems Canada, Ltd. (collectively "Litton") will and hereby do move this court for the award of attorney's fees and costs of suit pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15(a) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d). Litton respectfully submits this motion pursuant to the Court's January 27, 1998 Order Re Entry of Judgment, providing that plaintiffs may file and serve their bill of costs and motion for attorneys' fees within 40 days following the entry of judgment.

Litton's motion for attorney's fees and costs of suit is based on the ground that a federal jury has determined that Litton has suffered antitrust injury and damages by reason of Honeywell's unlawful monopolization and attempted monopolization of the global RLG-IRS market. See February 29, 1996 General Verdict Forms and December 9, 1998 General Verdict Forms. As such, Litton has been "injured in [its] business or property by reason of [conduct] forbidden in the antitrust laws," and is entitled to recover "the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee" under the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).

Litton's motion is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion, the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities In Support Thereof, the Declarations of Thomas J. Nolan, Thomas N. Heyer, Frederick A. Lorig, Victoria T. McGhee, Theodore F.Craver, Newton D. Lesh II, Jeannie M. Crowley, William Christopher Black and Thomas E. Evans; all

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Litton's attorneys' fee petition follows the successful nine year prosecution of this complex, hard fought and immensely time-consuming litigation. As the jury's verdict reflects, the stakes were large. At issue was the illegal conduct of Honeywell, Inc. ("Honeywell") in a $6 billion worldwide market for a product line with only two competitors — Honeywell and Litton. Honeywell's determination to engage highly qualified counsel from at least four major law firms and to commit apparently limitless resources, brought with it the almost certain prospect that, should it not succeed in defending against Litton's antitrust claim, it would be responsible for payment of fees and expenses commensurate with the effort it was undertaking. After nearly a decade of litigation, Litton has prevailed on its antitrust complaint. In accordance with the jury verdict, the Court has entered judgment assessing treble damages in the aggregate amount of $750 million. As the Clayton Act provides, the Court also has entered judgment for attorneys' fees and costs and has retained jurisdiction to modify its final judgment to include the specific amount of such fees and costs.

Litton now petitions for an award of $ as a lodestar, adjusted upward for delay to). In addition, Litton petitions for an award of fees for work performed by in-house counsel of $. ; fees for contract paralegals and economic analysts of $ fees and expenses for Litton's expert witnesses of $ and litigation expenses of $ exclusive of amounts in Litton's bill of costs. The total award amounts to $, including an additional $ in reproduction costs that were alternatively included in taxable costs. See Exhibit A to the Declaration of Thomas J. Nolan in Support of Litton's Motion for the Award of Attorney's Fees and Litigation Expenses ("Nolan Decl.") filed under separate cover.

Consistent with the direction of the Supreme Court in this area, Litton has already approached Honeywell to attempt to reach agreement regarding Litton's reasonable fees and expenses and thereby avoid needless, full-scale litigation regarding the award of attorneys' fees. It is Litton's hope and expectation that the parties will be able to reach an agreement at least to narrow the issues, mindful of the Supreme Court's admonition that determination of the reasonable attorneys' fees should be something to which the parties can stipulate. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437, 103 S.Ct. 1933, 76 L.Ed.2d 40 (1983).

This Memorandum, along with the supporting declarations and exhibits, establishes that Litton is entitled to the full amount of its requested fees, expenses, and costs, including an enhancement as allowed under the statute and governing case law. Litton does not seek any compensation beyond that to which it is entitled. The prosecution of an antitrust action such as this is costly and time-consuming. Litton's requested reimbursement does not even include millions of dollars in unrecoverable out-of-pocket expenses and thousands of hours of management and employee time that were necessary to pursue this litigation over nine long years.

For Honeywell, the fees and expenses covered by this motion should come as no surprise. The breadth and scope of this litigation find few parallels in private antitrust litigation. Viewed in the context of the magnitude of this litigation, the hours expended and the rates charged by Litton's attorneys are eminently reasonable. Litton's counsel worked hard, efficiently and effectively. Litton should therefore be awarded the full amount of its fees, adjusted to account for delay of up to nine years.

The reasonableness of Litton's fees and expenses is shown by the observations of Honeywell's experienced counsel, Maxwell Blecher, who was recently quoted as stating that Litton's petition would be "monstrous" and would be in the range of $50 million or more.[1] Mr. Blecher is a knowledgeable antitrust plaintiff's counsel, and he is intimately familiar with the market conditions in Los Angeles and the effort required to bring a case of this type to a

---

[1] Mr. Blecher's statement about Litton's expected costs and attorney's fees appeared in a recent newspaper article. Mr. Blecher observed that "[w]e expect they'll be monstrous, in the medium-to-high eight figures." The National Law Journal, Special Suppl., Feb. 22, 1999.

16diii005974

successful conclusion. As one of several lead counsel among Honeywell's four law firms, Mr. Blecher no doubt has a fair understanding of the fees and costs that Honeywell incurred in the course of defending itself (and that Honeywell will be required to disclose should Litton's petition be opposed). That Litton's fees are actually lower than those projected by Mr. Blecher is a testament to the disciplined and efficient work of Litton's counsel and provides support for an award of the full amount of fees and expenses that Litton requests.

This fee petition seeks reimbursement of Litton's fees and allowable expenses from the inception of the case in 1990 through December 31, 1998, with the exception of the work on the fee petition and cost bill in late 1998. Litton will continue to incur significant reimbursable attorney's fees through the post-trial phase, including its fees and expenses for this petition and the cost bill for the post-trial motions, and for the appeal. Litton will supplement this petition to cover fees and expenses incurred after December 31, 1998, either following entry of orders on the post-trial motions or at such time as the Court may direct.

II. THE LAW ENTITLES LITTON TO RECOVER ITS ATTORNEYS FEES AND LITIGATION EXPENSES INCURRED OVER THIS NINE YEAR LITIGATION

A. Statute and Its Purpose

Section 4 of the Clayton Act states that "any person . . . injured . . . by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws . . . shall recover . . . the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 15 U.S.C. § 15(a). "An award of attorney's fees as part of the cost of a successful antitrust suit is mandatory. . . ." Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., Inc., 676 F.2d 1291, 1312 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1009, 103 S. Ct. 364, 74 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1982) (citations omitted). The purpose of such a mandatory award is "to insulate treble damages recovery from expenditures for legal fees, consistent with Section 4's purpose to encourage private persons to undertake enforcement of antitrust laws." Id. See also Perkins v. Standard Oil Co., 474 F.2d 549, 553 (9th Cir.) (citation omitted), amended on other grounds, 487 F.2d 672 (9th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 940, 93 S. Ct. 2778, 37 L. Ed. 2d 400

(1973); see also Image Technical Services, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 136 F.3d 1354, 1357 (9th Cir. 1998).

B. The Lodestar Is Presumptively The Reasonable Attorney's Fee Recoverable Under The Clayton Act

The Supreme Court has adopted the lodestar as the "the guiding light of our fee-shifting jurisprudence. We have established a 'strong presumption' that the lodestar represents the 'reasonable' fee . . . ." City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 562, 112 S.Ct. 2638, 120 L.Ed. 2d 449 (1992) (citations omitted). The "lodestar" amount, i.e., "the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate," has been found to be the "most useful starting point for determining the amount of a reasonable fee." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 at 433.[2] The lodestar "is more than a mere 'rough guess' or initial approximation of the final award to be made. Instead . . . [it] 'is presumed to be the reasonable fee to which counsel is entitled." Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 564, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) (citation omitted) (emphasis in original).

In all determinations of a reasonable fee, the amount involved in the lawsuit and the results obtained are important factors. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. at 434-36. "Where a plaintiff has obtained excellent results, his attorney should recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally, this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation, and indeed in some cases of exceptional success an enhanced award may be justified." Id. at 435 (emphasis

---

[2]Although Hensley and Dague were civil rights actions, the Court noted that the "standards set forth in this opinion are generally applicable in all cases in which Congress has authorized an award of fees to a 'prevailing party.' " Hensley, 461 U.S. at 433, n.7; see also Thorne v. City of El Segundo, 802 F.2d 1131, 1141, n. 10 (9th Cir. 1986). While the standards set forth in Hensley and its progeny are generally applied in antitrust cases, the Ninth Circuit has also cautioned that "there should not be an automatic transference of rulings interpreting [the civil rights and other fee statutes]" to an antitrust case where this would lead to "an incorrect application of the philosophy of full recovery of attorney's fees for successful treble damages plaintiffs." Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1314, 1316.

added); Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 897, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) (emphasis added).

The law also recognizes the need to account for delay in arriving at an award of reasonable fees. For example, In Re Washington Public Power Supply Sys. Lit., 19 F.3d 1291, 1305 (9th Cir. 1994) involved a seven year delay between the time the prevailing party paid its attorneys and the time it was reimbursed. In that case, the Ninth Circuit held that it was an abuse of discretion for the district court to fail to include a delay adjustment calculated by using current rates or adding a prime rate adjustment. As discussed below, the delay present in this case similarly warrants an adjustment.

III. LITTON IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD OF ATTORNEYS' FEES ADJUSTED FOR DELAY

Over the nine years of this litigation, Litton incurred more than $ in outside counsel attorneys' fees. This represents the largest component of Litton's cost of suit which it is entitled to recover. As described below, Litton has computed the attorneys' fee portion of its request using the lodestar method adjusted for delay by the prime interest rate method. Litton petitions for an award of $ as its lodestar, adusted upward for delay to $. The relevant computational tables are included as Exhibits B, D, E and Y of the Nolan Decl.

A. Litton's Modified Lodestar For Attorney's Fees Is Based On The Below Market Hourly Rates And Reasonable Hours Actually Charged To And Paid By Litton

The contemporaneous billing records maintained by counsel and submitted to Litton as the basis for payment provide a solid framework for computation of the lodestar.[3] In computing

[3] Litton is submitting with this petition actual billing statements for Howrey & Simon by month from the inception of the litigation, exclusive of the detailed diary entries. Nolan Decl., Ex. C. For ease of presentation, the information on rates, hours and expenses have been restated in spread sheet format and included as exhibits to Mr. Nolan's declaration. Id. at B. Litton has not included the detailed diary entries prepared by each timekeeper that are supplied with each statement. Provision of these unredacted diary entries to Honeywell's counsel at this state in the litigation is problematic, as there is a possibility of disclosure of confidential information that could be used to Honeywell's advantage in subsequent trial proceedings.

the lodestar, Litton has used both the actual hours expended and the actual rates charged, as extracted from these records.[4] Through daily diary entries, Litton's counsel have kept accurate and complete records of the time expended on this matter. This time was billed to Litton and paid on an ongoing basis. In addition, Litton has used the actual rates it was charged — not the prevailing market rate in Los Angeles — because this results in lower fees. See Nolan Decl., Ex. B (summarizing the hours and fees of the Howrey & Simon attorneys); Ex. D (summarizing the hours and fees for the Bright & Lorig attorneys).

1. Litton Retained Experienced and Capable Counsel To Represent It In This Litigation

When Litton began investigating its antitrust claim against Honeywell, it realized the scope and complexity of the litigation with which it was faced. Litton wished to retain a leading law firm with specialized knowledge and experience in antitrust litigation that could effectively and efficiently present the case. Litton's choice of Howrey & Simon was reasonable. In addition to Howrey & Simon's experience litigating antitrust cases in general, the firm had previously represented Litton in antitrust and other matters and was therefore already familiar with Litton, its management and its employees.

Howrey & Simon's work began in May 1990. The firm has continued to represent Litton throughout comprehensive discovery and two trials spanning a nine-year period. Initially, the primary partners working on this matter were John Bodner and Thomas Heyer, assisted by several associates. In 1994-95 they were joined by Thomas Nolan of the Los Angeles office, along with various associates, some of whom later became partners. Litton also retained the law firm of Bright & Lorig to conduct an initial investigation of the claims in this matter, to assist in discovery and at trial, and to serve as local counsel before Howrey & Simon had a Los Angeles office. Bright & Lorig has also represented Litton in the patent case.

[4] The hours covered by Litton's petition do not include time expended in connection with the related patent case.

Honeywell has been represented by four nationally-known law firms during the course of this litigation. Initially, the law firm of Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton was the principal firm representing Honeywell, led by attorneys Joseph Coyne and Carlton Varner. Sheppard, Mullin was then joined by Sullivan & Cromwell in New York, with Richard Carlton as the principal partner. Honeywell later added the firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, including partners Robert Cooper, Arthur Sherwood, J. Edd Stepp, Mark Weber, Mary Laura Davis and Daniel Swanson, and a large group of associates. Most recently, Honeywell engaged the law firm of Blecher & Collins, represented by partners Maxwell Blecher and Gary Joye. Also, as did Litton, Honeywell has from time to time used other law firms to provide assistance on particular issues over the long course of this litigation.

Litton's counsel were and are experienced antitrust litigators. At Howrey & Simon, Mr. Bodner is an experienced antitrust trial attorney who has represented Litton for over thirty years in various antitrust and commercial matters. Mr. Nolan is an experienced federal court litigator and a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. Mr. Lorig is also an experienced trial attorney who has represented Litton both in this matter and the related patent case.[5]

2. Counsel Charged Reasonable Rates

Litton calculated the lodestar using the rates that Howrey & Simon and Bright & Lorig actually charged and that Litton paid monthly over the course of the litigation. These rates easily satisfy the reasonability requirement. Blum, 465 U.S. at 888; Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434. A law firm's hourly rates are presumptively reasonable if equivalent to (or lower than) the market rate for comparable attorneys. See Student Pub. Interest Research Group v. AT&T Bell Labs., 842 F.2d 1436, 1445 (3d Cir. 1988) ("in most cases, billing rates reflect market rates — they provide

[5] Mr. Lorig submits a declaration in support of this motion that describes the qualifications of the attorneys from Bright & Lorig who worked on the case. This declaration has been filed concurrently under separate cover. See Notice of Filing Declarations of Frederick A. Lorig, Victoria T. McGhee, Theodore F. Craver, Newton D. Lesh II, Jeannie M. Crowley, William Christopher Black and Thomas E. Evans ("Notice of Filing").

an efficient and fair shortcut for determining the market rate"); In re Fine Paper Antitrust Litigation, 751 F.2d 562, 590-91 (3d Cir. 1984).

The reasonableness of the rates charged is also shown by a calculation of the overall rates for both Howrey & Simon and Bright & Lorig. The overall average charge per hour was $ for Howrey & Simon attorneys and $ for Bright & Lorig attorneys.

a. Counsel's Rates Actually Charged and Included In the Lodestar Were Discounted from Counsel's Normal Rates

Under its normal billing practices, Howrey & Simon charges clients hourly rates that differ by attorney depending on the attorney's experience and the office in which the attorney is resident. For associates, the rates generally are determined by the law school class year to which the associate belongs. For partners, the rates are based on a combination of experience, success, standing in the legal community and attractiveness to clients. These rates periodically are adjusted to account for greater attorney experience, inflation, and marketplace factors.

Initially, Howrey & Simon charged Litton its customary District of Columbia rates for all timekeepers. These rates were substantially lower than Los Angeles market rates. Negotiations over the period 1991-1993 led to the adoption of a discounted blended rate beginning in August 1994.

16diii005980

b. The Rates Actually Paid By Litton and Included In The Lodestar Are Below Market Rates Charged By Comparable Firms and Attorneys

The reasonableness of Howrey & Simon's rates is demonstrated by a comparison of the hourly rates of other firms in Los Angeles. Available data for the going market rates in these cities show that counsel's rates are clearly within the market rate range and thus are reasonable. See Nolan Decl. at ¶ 38, 39, and Ex. Z attached thereto. For much of the litigation Litton paid fees based upon the Washington, D.C. legal market, where rates are lower than Los Angeles. In 1990, at the outset of the litigation, Howrey & Simon only had offices in the District of Columbia. It charged Litton hourly rates of $ for a relatively junior associate, $ for a junior partner and $ for a senior partner. During the 1998 trial, the rates for associates working out of the District of Columbia office ranged from $ to $. Howrey & Simon's blended partner rates were well within the market range for comparable national law firms in the District of Columbia. Because rates in the District of Columbia generally are substantially less than those in Los Angeles, Howrey & Simon's rates were substantially lower than Los Angeles market rates throughout the litigation (particularly prior to 1994).

[6] This estimate of what Litton's fees would have been using regular fees has been calculated using District of Columbia rates where the attorney is or was based in that office; those rates are substantially lower than Los Angeles office rates. Thus, had the comparison used all Los Angeles rates, as the case law suggests, the difference would be greater.

Because counsel's hourly rates are within or below the range of market rates charged by other firms in the same geographic market with similar practices, counsel's rates are presumptively reasonable.

3. Litton's Counsel Expended A Reasonable Number of Hours Litigating This Case Over a Nine-Year Period.

This was and is a large complex case that required intensive and continuous effort over the course of the litigation, which has included two trials. The hours expended are entirely consistently with the effort required to bring this case to a successful close. In total, the actual billing records show that Litton's outside counsel worked over 97,000 hours since 1990. The total for Howrey & Simon is 95,127.5 hours. Bright & Lorig has worked 2,108.5 hours.

Counsel's pretrial and trial work was critical to Litton's success at trial. The declarations accompanying this Motion summarize the qualifications of Litton's counsel and describe the work counsel performed. See, e.g., Nolan Decl. ¶¶ 2, 11; Heyer Decl. ¶¶ 4-30; Lorig Decl. ¶ 2. These declarations attest to the facts that the hours billed were reasonably expended on the litigation or on closely-related matters where the work was useful and of a type ordinarily necessary to secure the final result.

Such work generally included fact investigation; preparation and filing of the Complaint and other initial pleadings, preparing and responding to numerous motions; conducting ongoing factual and legal research; reviewing hundreds of thousands of pages of documents; receiving, processing and organizing millions of pages of documents produced in discovery; creating and maintaining full-text document database and imaging systems; deposing and defending the depositions of hundreds of witnesses; requesting and responding to voluminous discovery; overseeing the work of expert witnesses; trying issues of liability and damages before two juries; and participating in out-of-court mediation.

For a case of this size, complexity and duration, the hours expended to accomplish these tasks were reasonable. Throughout, Honeywell mounted a vigorous defense, raising every available issue, both legal and factual, in an effort to defeat Litton's claims. Honeywell employed scores of highly capable, experienced lawyers from several major law firms. Litton's counsel ably, effectively, and expeditiously litigated this case to a successful conclusion.

In addition, Litton's representation was characterized by continuity. Litton benefited from the continuous representation of its lead counsel Messrs. Bodner, Nolan and Heyer, whose time jointly accounts for more than 30 percent of the hours included in this petition.

4. Litton Excluded Substantial Hours from the Fee Petition

In accordance with its billing practices, Litton's outside counsel excluded time that was unproductive, unnecessary, or duplicative. Counsel carefully reviewed each Howrey & Simon bill before it was sent to Litton, including each individual task entry and the time spent, as well as all expenses. Any entries deemed duplicative, unproductive or otherwise unnecessary were eliminated.

16diii005983

. None of those hours are included here. Further, in-house counsel at Litton carefully reviewed the bills and, in some cases, further deleted time considered duplicative, excessive, unnecessary or otherwise objectionable. See the Declaration of Victoria T. McGhee, attached to Litton's Notice of Filing and filed concurrently herewith.

In summary, Litton has excluded from its petition timekeeper hours that come within the following categories: (1) time absorbed by Howrey & Simon and not included in the bill; (2) time written off by Howrey & Simon prior to billing; and (3) time written off by Litton after billing.[7]

The hours that Litton has excluded from its fee petition reinforce the conclusion that the attorneys' fees for which Litton is seeking reimbursement are only those which were reasonable and necessary. Accordingly, Litton is entitled to recover the entire amount of its fees set forth in this petition.

B. Litton Is Entitled to Upward Adjustments of the Modified Lodestar to Account For Delay

Once a petitioner establishes that counsel's hours and rates are reasonable, the lodestar is presumed to be correct and fully awardable. See Blum, 465 U.S. at 897. There is an additional step, however, where there has been substantial delay between the time a prevailing party pays

---

[7] In addition to the attorney's fees included here, Litton incurred fees from other outside counsel in 1990 for which records have not been located. If and when Litton locates those records, it will supplement this petition to include them.

16diii005984

the fees and expenses and the time it is reimbursed. In re Washington Public Power Supply Sys. Lit., 19 F.3d at 1305 (holding it was an abuse of discretion for the district court to fail to include a delay adjustment where there was a seven year delay before recovery of fees and expenses). The Supreme Court has also recognized that "courts may adjust [the] lodestar calculation" if the lodestar does not reflect the reasonable worth of counsel's services. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 94, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L.Ed.2d 67 (1989). For example, under the fee-shifting provisions of the Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1988, the Court noted "[a]n adjustment for delay in payment is . . . an appropriate factor in the determination of what constitutes a reasonable attorney's fee...." Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 284, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989). Such adjustment may be "by the application of current rather than historic hourly rates or otherwise...." Id.

The Ninth Circuit has explained that there are two ways to account for delay in making an upward adjustment to the lodestar:

> (1) by applying the attorneys' current rates to all hours billed during the course of the litigation; or (2) by using the attorneys' historical rates and adding a prime rate enhancement.

In re Washington Pub. Power Supply Sys. Litig., 19 F.3d at 1305. In accordance with these suggested methodologies, Litton is requesting a delay adjustment of at least $.

An upward adjustment for delay is appropriate not only in contingency fee cases but also in cases where the attorneys' fees have been paid by the client on a regular basis. In Gulfstream III Associates v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 414 (3d Cir. 1993), the Third Circuit explained:

> Although the principal justification for delay enhancements is to compensate attorneys who have had to wait for their fees, we believe this does not preclude such an award in every case where the attorneys are paid on time. The overriding purpose of a delay enhancement is to compensate for the lost use of money during the time before statutorily mandated attorneys' fees are awarded. The fact that the cost is borne by the client and not the attorney does not alleviate the hardship of waiting for attorneys' fees until the > end of the litigation. Any other result would create an incentive for plaintiffs not to pay their attorneys until the conclusion of the litigation.

Id. at 425 (awarding antitrust plaintiff a delay adjustment); see also Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 846 F. Supp. 108, 118 (D.D.C. 1994), ("Plaintiffs, if not their counsel, were deprived for three to four years of the use of the funds that they paid to counsel.")

Here, Litton has computed the delay adjustment under both methods and will seek Honeywell's agreement as to the most appropriate. Both methods yield a result that is fairly close when applied to the lodestar for Howrey & Simon fees and Bright & Lorig fees. Under the current rate method, the total adjustment comes to $ for Howrey & Simon fees and $ for Bright & Lorig fees. The computation of the lodestar fees at current rates is contained in Exhibits B and D of Mr. Nolan's declaration. Under the interest method using the Federal Reserve Average Prime Rate, the adjustment totals $. These analyses are presented in Exhibit Y to the Nolan Decl. Litton has not computed a delay adjustment for the amounts included in this petition for in-house attorneys, contract paralegals and economic analysts, or litigation expenses. Only those fees contained in the lodestar are the subject of adjustment. Litton would accept a delay adjustment under either method, but suggests that the prime rate approach may best compensate Litton for the lost use of money paid monthly over this nine year litigation.

Whichever method is chosen, Litton is entitled to a delay enhancement of at least $.

C. Litton Is Entitled to a Quality Adjustment of the Lodestar

The quality of the work of Litton's counsel and the degree of success also warrant a quality adjustment above the market rate lodestar. Litton submits that the amount of such an adjustment may be best be determined after Litton has fully briefed its responses to whatever challenges Honeywell may raise in its post-trial motions. Accordingly, Litton will address this item of recovery more fully.

IV. LITTON IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD FOR TIME SPENT BY IN-HOUSE ATTORNEYS IN PROSECUTING THIS SUIT

Litton petititons for an award of $. for work performed by Litton's in-house counsel. Just as outside counsel's fees are compensable, so is the time of certain in-house counsel. National Gypsum Co. v. Steel Sys. Int'l, Inc., 9 U.S.P.Q.2d (BNA) 2073 (D. Or. 1988); Zacharias v. Shell Oil Co., 627 F. Supp. 31, 35 (E.D.N.Y. 1984); see generally, Milgard Tempering, Inc. v. Selas Corp. of America, 761 F.2d 553, 558 (9th Cir. 1985) (permitting district court, using Washington law, to examine modern trend toward providing fees for in-house counsel).

A court should award fees for work performed by in-house counsel when he or she actively participated in the case. Milgard Tempering, 761 F.2d at 558. In short, the Court should compensate Litton for the time of in-house counsel for all substantive work that was not client work, (e.g., not monitoring the litigation and consulting with outside counsel). In this case, Litton's experienced in-house counsel took on various case responsibilities, including: the review and analysis of discovery materials, preparation of witnesses and defense of depositions, and the review and production of documents responsive to discovery demands. These tasks are properly compensable as part of the fee award.

In awarding attorneys' fees for work performed by in-house counsel, courts commonly use an hourly rate to determine the proper compensation. Zacharias, 627 F. Supp. at 34 (citing Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 281 F.2d 538, 542 (3d Cir. 1960) and Brisbane v. Port Auth. of New York & New Jersey, 550 F. Supp. 222, 224 (S.D.N.Y. 1982)). This practice is based on the rationale that "work performed by in-house counsel reduces the workload and, consequently, the fee of the [outside] counsel and '[t]here is no reason in law or in equity why the [losing party] should benefit from [the prevailing party's] choice to proceed with some of the work through its own legal department.'" Id. To determine a reasonable hourly rate for in-house counsel, courts often look to the going market rate. In re Public Serv. Co., No. 91-0536M, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16326, at *15 (S.D. Cal. 1992) ("Generally, the relevant community is one in which the District Court sits.") (citing Davis v. Mason County, 927 F.2d 1473, 1488 (9th Cir. 1991)).

The declarations of Ms. McGhee, Mr. Craver, Mr. Lesh, Mr. Black, and Ms. Crowley describe the work each of these in-house attorneys performed and how they determined their reasonable hours. In addition, Exhibit L to the Nolan Decl. presents a summary of all of the in-house counsel time and fees calculated at the rates actually paid for comparable Howrey & Simon attorneys. The total hours expended are , and the requested fees are $.

V. LITTON SHOULD BE AWARDED FEES OF CONTRACT PARALEGALS AND OTHER NON-LAWYER LITIGATION ASSISTANTS

The fees award properly encompasses not only attorneys' fees, but also fees for all litigation-related work performed by counsel's non-lawyer staff. The term ["reasonable attorney's fee"] refers to a reasonable fee for the work product of an attorney, not just the fees for the attorney's work, thus, the fee must "take into account the work not only of attorneys, but also of secretaries, messengers, librarians, janitors, and others whose labor contributes to the work product for which an attorney bills her client; and it must also take account of other expenses and profit." Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. at 285. This is particularly so under the Clayton Act, which broadly provides for the recovery of "costs of suit."

Litton has incurred costs for both paralegals and accounting and economic analysts. The fees for paralegals employed by Howrey & Simon are in the lodestar computation above. The remaining fees of paralegals and analysts are a cost of suit not included in the lodestar. Litton requests that it be awarded the sum of $. for contract paralegals and $ for economic and accounting analysts.

A. Paralegal Fees

Attorneys on both sides have relied extensively on paralegals to perform substantive and case management tasks in this litigation. In addition to paralegals employed by Howrey & Simon (whose time is already in the lodestar), Litton engaged paralegals in three general categories: those who were (a) employed directly by Litton in Washington, D.C. as temporary paralegals ("Lit Temps") in the Howrey & Simon office and were paid only for the hours expensed on case-related tasks through the submission of daily time cards; (b) employed elsewhere as such temporary paralegals ("Lit Temps"); and (c) employed by third party temporary help agencies but worked under the direction of counsel either at a Litton site or at counsel's office.

These paralegals all assisted in the review, production and organization hundreds of thousands of documents; created and maintained document and deposition databases; prepared witness files and deposition digests; managed case files; checked citations and organized exhibits for court submissions; and assisted in the preparation and control of exhibits and pleadings during trial. These are the kinds of tasks the Supreme Court has described as appropriate paralegal work. Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. at 288. These tasks were performed more efficiently and more economically by delegating them to non-attorneys with lower billing rates and specialized expertise. These costs were further controlled by the extensive use of Litton temporary employees and contract paralegals whose time was billed directly to Litton. Also, Howrey & Simon used other litigation support personnel such as computer specialists, librarians and clerks to assist as necessary. Their time, which is not large, is included as litigation support within the Howrey & Simon paralegal time.

As with the attorneys, Litton has kept records of the time billed by these paralegals. These bills were submitted to and paid by Litton on an ongoing basis. The declarations of Thomas N. Heyer and Thomas E. Evans[8] describe the paralegals and litigation support staff and their qualifications, the work they did, how their time was kept and rates determined, and time that was excluded from this petition. See Heyer Decl. ¶ 38; Evans Decl. ¶ 5-8. The hours and rates of these paralegals are shown on Exhibits E, F, G, and H to the Nolan Decl. for Howrey &

[8] The declaration of Thomas E. Evans ("Evans Decl.") is attached to Litton's Notice of Filing, filed concurrently herewith; the Declaration of Thomas N. Heyer ("Heyer Decl.") in support has been filed under separate cover.

16diii005989

Simon paralegals and litigation support personnel, for the Lit Temps that worked only in Howrey & Simon's District of Columbia office, and for Lit Temps and agency paralegals, respectively, that worked at Litton document sites in the Los Angeles area.

B. Accounting and Economic Analysts

As is necessary in a case of this type and magnitude, the attorneys have used the assistance of accounting and economic analysts for their specialized expertise. The support that these analysts have provided includes such tasks as assembling discovery materials relevant to the assessment of damages, analyzing the reports of Honeywell's expert witnesses, assisting the attorneys in preparing for depositions of those expert witnesses, assisting at the depositions, and assisting in preparing for cross-examination at trial of Honeywell's witnesses, both expert and otherwise.

All of the work was done at the instruction of and under the supervision of attorneys and was useful, necessary, not duplicative, and not excessive. These analysts were acting in support of Howrey & Simon attorneys in the same capacity as other litigation support staff including paralegals. For the same reasons as noted above for paralegals, their time is compensable.

VI. LITTON SHOULD BE AWARDED THE FEES AND EXPENSES IT HAS PAID FOR ECONOMIC EXPERTS

Litton also requests an award of the fees and expenses in the amount of $ for economic experts as part of its "cost of suit" under the Clayton Act. These experts were absolutely essential to the presentation of both liability and damages issues. Indeed, the second trial on damages revolved primarily around the testimony of these economic experts. Both sides recognized the importance of economic experts in this litigation and retained several such experts. Thus, Litton retained Dr. John Beyer, Dr. James Langenfeld, and Dr. Robert Hall to testify concerning market definition and damages. In addition, Litton retained Dr. Edward Leamer and Mr. Roger Schlonsky to provide consultation and possible testimony during the damages retrial. Moreover, both Dr. Leamer and Mr. Schlonsky were designated and prepared to testify as rebuttal witnesses. Honeywell retained Professor William Baumol, Dr. Joe Pace, Dr. Gary Dorman, Profession Richard Schmalensee, Professor Joseph Kalt, and accountant J. Duross O'Bryan to testify on liability and damages issues.

Recent antitrust decisions have awarded expert witness fees and expenses to prevailing antitrust plaintiffs as a component of the "costs of suit" pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act. For example, in Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 258, 268 (E.D. Wash. 1986), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part, 879 F.2d 632, 639 (9th Cir. 1989), the district court awarded the plaintiffs all of their requested expert witness fees, ruling that "the retention by plaintiffs of the experts . . . was necessary due to the defenses interposed by [defendant]. See also Automotive Products PLC v. Tilton Engineering, Inc., 855 F. Supp. 1101, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 1994) appeal dismissed, 36 F.3d 1109 (Fed. Cir. 1994) (court granted antitrust plaintiff's request for expert fees, finding that the expert's testimony "was necessary to provide the jury with a factual basis from which to ascertain the damages").

The testimony and advice of Litton's economic experts was necessary to the litigation of this case, and the fees and expenses that Litton has incurred in retaining these experts are reasonable. The experts submitted detailed reports and were the subject of extensive and costly deposition discovery. Furthermore, Litton's damages expert Dr. Beyer (as well as Honeywell's expert Dr. Pace) was the subject of a special evidentiary hearing before the trial commenced. The fees for this work were billed to and paid by Litton on an ongoing basis, and the detailed records of these bills have been maintained. These records fully support the amounts which Litton is seeking to recover, as set forth in the accompanying declarations and exhibits.

VII. LITTON'S OUT-OF-POCKET LITIGATION EXPENSES ARE EITHER COMPENSABLE AS PART OF ITS COST BILL, OR ARE COMPENSABLE AS PART OF ATTORNEY'S EXPENSES UNDER THE CLAYTON ACT

To the extent that the attorneys for the prevailing plaintiff incur out-of-pocket (such as travel, telephone, photocopying, and computerized research expenses) that are billed to the client, are not part of the general overhead of the office, and are not recoverable as part of the bill of costs, Litton is entitled to recover those litigation expenses as part of the mandatory costs and fees award under Section 4 of the Clayton Act. Recovery of these costs is necessary to give effect to the purpose of the statute, which is to ensure that a successful plaintiff's treble damage recovery is not diminished by the payment to the attorney, and thereby to encourage private enforcement of the antitrust laws. See Perkins, 474 F.2d at 553; Image Technical, 136 F.3d at 1357.

In accordance with this mandatory award of fees and costs, courts have routinely awarded the prevailing plaintiff its out-of-pocket litigation expenses. See Automotive Products, 855 F. Supp. at 1106 (prevailing antitrust plaintiff entitled to an award of reasonable "out-of-pocket" expenses such as "facsimile expenses, Lexis charges, long distance telephone charges, Federal Express charges, secretarial overtime charges, trial supply expenses, postage, messenger fees, hotel and travel expenses, parking expenses, teleconference expenses, and mock trial expenses"); Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 839 F. Supp. 905, 916 (D.D.C. 1993) ("[p]laintiffs' out-of-pocket costs for telephone, telecopier, air and local couriers, postage, photocopying, WESTLAW research, secretarial overtime, and counsels' travel expenses are routinely billed to fee-paying clients, and thus are all compensable as part of a reasonable attorney's fee" award under the antitrust laws).

Each of the categories of Litton's out-of-pocket litigation expenses are fully set forth in the supporting declarations submitted with this memorandum, along with the amount for each broken out separately. These litigation expenses include: LEXIS charges, photocopying not recoverable under the cost bill, database creation and management, travel expenses, courier charges, postage, long-distance telephone charges and expenses incurred in connection with Court-ordered mediation. The total amount of these expenses, exclusive of amounts included in the cost bill, are $6,035,141. All of these expenses are taken from monthly records of amounts billed to and paid by Litton. These expenses were reasonably and necessarily incurred for the preparation and presentation of this case and, as such, are fully recoverable.

MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS LEPAGE'S, INC. AND LEPAGE'S MANAGEMENT COMPANY, L.L.C.'s PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES INCLUDING EXPENSES NOT COVERED BY THE BILL OF COSTS

I. INTRODUCTION.

Plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C. (collectively referred to as "LePage's") petition the Court for an award of attorneys' fees under Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15(a).[1] In total, plaintiffs seek $5,495,304.04 in attorneys' fees and recoverable expenses not covered by plaintiffs' Bill of Costs[2] broken down as follows: $2,728,756.93 for Mayer Brown & Platt ("Mayer Brown"); $2,179,151.67 for Pepper Hamilton LLP ("Pepper");and $587,395.44 for Peter Hearn, Esquire.[3]

[1] 15 U.S.C. § 15(a) provides, in pertinent part, that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor ... and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee."

[2]Plaintiffs' Bill of Costs will be filed with the Clerk of the Court in the near future.

[3]The supporting documentation for the fee and expense requests is being submitted in

In another series of motions, 3M moved to dismiss LePage's as a plaintiff, to require joinder of LePage's Management's members to the case as plaintiffs, and (twice) to eliminate LePage's right to a jury trial. None of these attempts were successful.

3M's insistence that it could not understand LePage's theory of the case prompted this Court to order LePage's to prepare and file a statement of its claims, which required LePage's attorneys to conduct an extensive review of the discovery that was available to date, and to prepare a comprehensive paper explaining LePage's theories of the case. Preparation of this statement of claims consumed numerous hours of partners, associates, legal assistants and secretaries alike.

On February 1, 1999, 3M again sought dismissal of plaintiffs' claims with a motion for summary judgment backed by numerous exhibits and affidavits, and again requiring a comprehensive response. In preparation for trial, 3M listed 83 witnesses whom it expected to call, thereby requiring plaintiffs to prepare for that possibility. Together, the parties filed 22 motions in limine addressed to trial evidence. Trial itself consumed 33 days, many of which were committed to defendant's cross-examination.

III. DISCUSSION.

A. Plaintiffs Have Met the Threshold Requirements for An Attorneys' Fee Award.

In order to qualify for an attorneys' fee award under Section 4 of the Clayton Act, the Third Circuit requires only that plaintiffs prove a violation of the antitrust laws and that as a result, plaintiffs suffered damages. If these two requirements are satisfied, a plaintiff is entitled to a mandatory award of attorneys' fees. Gulfstream III Associates, Inc. v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 414, 418-19 (3d Cir. 1993) ("[a]n antitrust plaintiff who has proven to the satisfaction of the factfinder that defendant violated the antitrust laws and has established the fact of damage has established the prerequisites for defendant's liability and its own entitlement to attorneys' fees.").

There can be no doubt that plaintiffs qualify for an attorneys' fees award. The jury's responses to Questions 1 through 3.1 of the Jury Verdict Form indicate that the jury found that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power and attempted to unlawfully maintain monopoly power in the market consisting of invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States. The jury then assessed damages in the amount of $22,828,899 for monopolization, and for attempted monopolization. Since the jury found that 3M violated the antitrust laws and that LePage's suffered damages as a result, plaintiffs are entitled to an award of attorneys fees.

B. Plaintiffs' Attorneys' Fees are Reasonable.

Once a plaintiff establishes entitlement to an attorneys' fees award, "[t]he most useful starting point for determining the amount of a reasonable fee is the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 433 (1983). This figure is referred to as the "lodestar," which is "strongly presumed to yield a reasonable fee." Washington v. Philadelphia County Court of Common Pleas, 89 F.3d 1031, 1035 (3d Cir. 1996)(citing City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557 (1992)). Once the lodestar amount of attorneys' fees is determined, the district court has discretion to make upward or downward adjustments. U.S. ex rel. John Doe I v. Pennsylvania Blue Shield, 54 F.Supp.2d 410 (M.D. Pa. 1999). The lodestar in this case is calculated in the sections immediately below.[4]

[4]The lodestar approach is the "only reasonably objective basis for valuing an attorney's services," Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. of Phila. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 487 F.2d 161, 167 (3d Cir. 1973), judgment vacated on other grounds, 540 F.2d 102 (3d Cir. 1976), and has become the standard method for calculating attorney fee awards. Gulfstream III, (continued...)

1. Plaintiffs' lodestar calculation is based only on hours reasonably expended on the case.

The first step in calculating the lodestar is to determine the number of hours reasonably expended by plaintiffs' attorneys in pursuing the litigation to judgment. To ensure claims are made only for time "reasonably expended," the Hensley decision requires counsel to make "a good-faith effort to exclude from a fee request hours that are excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary." Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434.

This has been done. Counsel has carefully reviewed all of the time records to arrive at the number of hours that can reasonably be charged for the work performed. Time has been eliminated for education time of lawyers assigned to the case because of associate turnover. The records have been reviewed to eliminate time spent on particular tasks which proved irrelevant to the case as tried. See Declarations of Barbara Mather, Peter Hearn and Mark Ryan, attached as Exhibits "B," "C," and "D," respectively. In light of these reductions, the total hours claimed to have been reasonably expended are not excessive.

The second and final step in determining the lodestar is to determine the reasonable billing rate of the attorneys involved in the litigation. The Third Circuit has stated that a reasonable hourly rate "generally is reflected in [an individual attorney's] normal billing rate." Lindy Bros., 487 F.2d at 167. Additionally, the Supreme Court has directed that "'reasonable fees' ... are to be calculated according to the prevailing market rates in the relevant community...." Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 895 (1984).

4
995 F.2d at 421.

16diii006001

Mayer Brown and Pepper partner rates range from $250 per hour to $350 per hour, associate rates range from $125 per hour to $285 per hour, and legal assistant rates range from $50 per hour to $130 per hour. Peter Hearn's fee ranged from $300 per hour to $350 per hour. The hourly rates claimed by plaintiffs' counsel are their usual rates and are consistent with the rates normally charged by counsel in this district. Plaintiffs have attached the declaration of William T. Hangley, Esquire as Exhibit "E" attesting that the rates of the Pepper and Mayer Brown attorneys and legal assistants, as well as Peter Hearn's rates, are reasonable in light of the character and complexity of the issues presented in this case.[5] Mr. Hangley states that Ms. Mather's, Mr. Ryan's and Mr. Hearn's billing rates are in line with those prevailing in Philadelphia for antitrust litigation services by lawyers of comparable skill, experience and reputation.

2. Calculation of the lodestars.

Calculating the lodestar figure "requires multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended by the reasonable hourly rate." Pennsylvania Environmental Defense Foundation v. Canon-McMillan School Dist., 152 F.3d 228, 231 (3d Cir. 1998). The total counsel fees claimed in this case, including expenses, are $5,480,703.23. Each firm has performed its lodestar calculation by multiplying the number of hours claimed per attorney or legal assistant by that person's billing rate. The calculations are attached to the front of the supporting documentation volumes being submitted with this fee petition. See Volume IA for Mayer Brown, Volume IIA for Pepper, and Volume III for Peter Hearn.

[5]Mr. Hangley's declaration comports with the rule in the Third Circuit that, "[t]he plaintiff bears the burden of producing sufficient evidence of what constitutes a reasonable market rate for the essential character and complexity of the legal services rendered...." Hurley v. Atlantic City Police Department, 174 F.3d 95, 131 (3d Cir. 1999) (citing Smith v. Philadelphia Housing Authority, 107 F.3d 223, 225 (3d Cir. 1997)).

3. No downward adjustments to the lodestars are warranted.

LePage's was successful in proving that 3M violated the antitrust laws in two respects. First, LePage's proved that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Second, LePage's proved that 3M unlawfully attempted to maintain monopoly power, also in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

Notwithstanding LePage's lack of success in proving the Section 1 (unlawful restraint of trade) and Section 3 (exclusive dealing) claims, no downward adjustment to the lodestar is warranted. In Hensley, the Supreme Court was asked to decide whether a partially prevailing plaintiff may recover attorneys' fees for services performed with respect to unsuccessful claims. Two rules were effectively established by the Court: one governing loss of a claim related to the winning claim; and another rule governing the loss of a claim that is unrelated or wholly independent of the winning claim. See Dobbs, Reducing Attorneys' Fees for Partial Success: A Comment on Hensley and Blum, 1986 Wis. L. Rev. 835, 838-89. The first rule (related claims rule) will apply if the plaintiffs' claims for relief involve a common core of facts or are based on related legal theories. See id. at 839. In effect, the related claims should be treated as a single unit so that the plaintiff is entitled to recover all of its attorneys' fees regardless of whether one of the related claims was ultimately unsuccessful at trial. The second rule will apply only if a plaintiff presents two unrelated claims and loses on one of them, for example, where an antitrust plaintiff's claims included a count under the RICO statute. See id. at 839-40.

In the present case, LePage's four antitrust claims were all based on a common core set of facts. LePage's theories were also legally interrelated, for example, all of plaintiffs' claims required plaintiffs to prove the existence of a relevant market, the market for invisible and transparent tape for plaintiffs to prove the existence of a relevant market, the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States. That common element was proved, as indicated by the jury's response to Question 1 of the Verdict Form. It makes no difference that plaintiffs did not prevail on every theory, or for the full amount of the damages sought. What does matter is that plaintiffs prevailed on their central claims – that 3M monopolized and attempted to monopolize the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States – both of which are inimical to the antitrust laws. Since plaintiffs prevailed on the litigation as a whole and the claims involved many overlapping issues of fact and law, the fee award should not be reduced.

C. Plaintiffs are Permitted To Add Costs Not Covered in the Bill of Costs.

LePage's has claimed total expenses of $302,193.64 in the lodestar amounts to account for costs not recoverable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920, but which are properly included in the attorney fee petition as having been necessarily incurred in the litigation of the action.[6] See, e.g., Abrams v. Lightolier, Inc., 50 F.3d 1204, 1225 (3d Cir. 1995) (reproduction expenses, travel time and expenses, and postage recoverable under § 1988 if attorneys in the community bill separately for these charges); Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 869 F.Supp. 1190, 1202 n. 9 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (charges for court liason, electronic research services, messengers, report services, faxes and transportation allowed); Midnight Sessions, Ltd. v. City of Phila., 755 F.Supp. 652, 663 (E.D. Pa.) (payment for meals and travel allowed when indication of to whom various expenses are attributable is provided), rev'd and vacated on other grounds, 945 F.2d 667 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 984

[6]These costs include charges for: electronic legal research; delivery service, including FedEx, UPS and other courier charges; business meals; postage; supplies, such as binders and tabs; facsimile transmissions (labeled "telecopy" charges on Pepper's supporting documentation); telephone calls; and attorney travel and local transportation, including airfare, taxi cabs, parking, tolls and mileage.

16diii006004

(1992); Rank v. Balsky, 590 F.Supp. 787, 803 (E.D. Pa. 1984) (transportation and food expenses allowed "to the extent that such expenses were reasonably and necessarily incurred"). As with the lodestars, the expenses have been carefully reviewed to ensure that only proper items are claimed.[7]

IV. CONCLUSION.

For all of the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C. request an award of attorneys' fees (including expenses not covered by the Bill of Costs) to Mayer Brown & Platt in the amount of $2,728,756.93; to Pepper Hamilton in the amount of $2,179,151.67; and to Peter Hearn in the amount of $587,395.44.

DECLARATION OF BARBARA W. MATHER

I, Barbara W. Mather, certify as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a 1968 graduate of the University of Chicago Law School, and a partner in the law firm of Pepper Hamilton LLP since 1973. Throughout my years with the Firm, my practice has included a substantial volume of antitrust litigation.

2. A partial list of the major cases in which I have served as counsel includes:

- Massachusetts School of Law at Andover, Inc. v. American Bar Association, Civil Action No. 93-6206 (E.D. PA.) (co-counsel)
- John J. Wallace v. Systems & Computer Technology Corporation, et al., Civil Action No. 95-CV-6303 (E.D. PA)
- Blanche Road Corporation, et. al v. Bensalem Township, et al., Civil Action No. 89-9040 (E.D. PA)

3. Within Pepper, I have served as Executive Partner of the firm (1993-94) and as Chair of the Litigation and Dispute Resolution Department (1998-present).

4. I am a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers.

5. I serve as a Lecturer in Law for Antitrust at The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania (1995-96, 1998-present).

6. I am admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and the U.S. District Courts for the Eastern and Middle Districts of Pennsylvania.

7. Pepper's partner rates range from $270-$350; associates' rates range from $125-$195; and legal assistants' rates range frm $50-$110. These rates represent the customary billing rates charged for their time during the relevant years.

8. My firm devoted a total of 14,556 hours to its representation of the plaintiffs. Summaries of the activities conducted by the firm's lawyers and legal assistants and the hours spent by each attorney and legal assistant on this matter are set forth in Volume IIA of this submission.

9. Based upon the rates identified above, multiplied by the hours attributable to each firm member, plaintiffs' total fee request for Pepper Hamilton is $2,036,549.45. As explained more fully in the Memorandum, I have reviewed the time records for this matter and attest that the time was reasonably expended in support of plaintiffs' case.

10. In addition, my firm incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $142,602.22. An itemization of these expenses is set forth in Volume IIB of this submission and discussed at pages 8 and 9 of the Memorandum.

16diii006011

11. Accordingly, the total request for Pepper Hamilton's fees and expenses in this matter is $2,179,151.67.

DECLARATION OF PETER HEARN

I, Peter Hearn, declare as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a graduate of Cornell University (1956) and the University of Pennsylvania Law School (1961).

2. I joined the law firm of Pepper Hamilton in 1961 and was elected partner in 1968. I was a member of the Pepper firm until 1996.

3. In April, 1996, I established the Philadelphia firm of Peter Hearn, P.C. I continue to practice with this firm.

4. Throughout my years of practice, I have specialized in litigation. Included in this work has been a substantial volume of antitrust matters.

5. Attached hereto is a current copy of my personal biography.

6. I am admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Courts of Appeals for the Third and Eleventh Circuits, and the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. I am also admitted to practice before the trial and appellate courts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

7. I devoted a total of 1674.5 hours representing the plaintiffs in the above-captioned action. My activities are described in a narrative summary located at Volume III of this submission.

8. My hourly rate was $300 for the period through December 31, 1997, $325 for the 1998 calendar year, and $350 for the 1999 calendar year.

9. Based on the above rates multiplied by the number of hours attributable to my representation, plaintiffs' total fee request for my services is $557,612.50. As explained more fully in the Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees, these billing memoranda have been extensively edited to eliminate any time not directly related to the representation.

10. In addition, my firm incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $29,782.94. An itemization of these expenses and services is located at Volume III of this submission.

11. Accordingly, my firm's portion of the total request for plaintiff's fees and expenses in this matter is $587,395.44.

DECLARATION OF MARK W. RYAN

I, Mark W. Ryan, declare as follows in support of Plaintiffs' Petition for Attorneys' Fees Including Expenses Not Covered By the Bill of Costs:

1. I am a 1977 graduate of Syracuse University, a 1981 graduate of Duke University Law School and a partner in the law firm of Mayer, Brown & Platt.

2. I joined Mayer, Brown & Platt in 1981 and, throughout my career, antitrust law has been the principal focus of my practice. This work has included both litigation and non-litigation antitrust matters.

3. A partial list of the cases in which I have served as counsel includes:

- In re Citric Acid Antitrust Litigation, MDL Dkt. 1092 (N.D. Cal.)
- In re High Fructose Corn Syrup Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 1087 (C.D. Il.)

- In re Airline Ticket Commission Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 1058, (D. Minn.)
- Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx, 396 U.S. 384 (1990) (and related litigation)

4. I am admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and various other federal and state courts. I have been admitted pro hac vice in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania for purposes of this case.

5. The other Mayer, Brown & Platt attorney who was principally responsible for our representation of the plaintiffs in these proceedings is Kerry Edwards. Ms. Edwards is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School. She joined Mayer, Brown & Platt in 1986 and became a partner in 1995. Her practice focuses on antitrust and litigation.

6. Mayer, Brown & Platt is seeking payment for 17,219.15 hours of representation of the plaintiffs. This include the time of attorneys, legal assistants and document clerks for the period March 1, 1997 through October 8, 1999. Detailed billing records describing the firm's activities are set forth in Volume IA of this submission, with a summary of the hours spent by each Mayer, Brown & Platt attorney and legal assistant attached to the front of the volume.

7. Mayer, Brown & Platt annually reviews and adjusts attorney billing rates as of each July 1st. During the period March 1, 1997 through October 8, 1999, my hourly rate ranged from $300-$350 and Ms. Edwards' rate ranged from $250-$325. Associate hourly rates ranged from $135-$285. Legal assistant rates ranged from $75-$130. These rates represent the customary billing rates charged for their time during the relevant time period.

8. Based upon the above rates multiplied by the hours attributable to each firm member, the total fee request relating to work performed by Mayer, Brown & Platt is $2,598,948.45. As explained more fully in the Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiffs' LePage's, Inc. and LePage's Management Company, L.L.C.'s Petition for Attorneys' Fees, these billing records have been edited to eliminate unreasonable and duplicative time.

9. In addition, Mayer, Brown & Platt incurred expenses which are not accounted for in the bill of costs in the amount of $129,808.48. An itemization of these expenses is located at Volume IB of this submission.

10. Accordingly, the total request for Mayer, Brown & Platt related fees and costs in this matter is $2,728,756.93.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF WILLIAM T. HANGLEY

I, William T. Hangley, declare as follows in support of Plaintiff's Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs:

1. I am a 1966 graduate of The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania.

2. I have practiced law in Philadelphia, primarily as a trial lawyer, since my graduation from law school, and the majority of my work has been in federal court. I am a member of the Pennsylvania Bar and am admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and Federal Circuit and the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and other districts. I am Chairman of the law firm of Hangley Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, which I co-founded in 1994. My areas of specialty include antitrust litigation.

3. I am a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the American Bar Foundation, a Master of the Bench of the University of Pennsylvania Inn of Court, and a member of the American Law Institute. My memberships in bar associations include the American Bar Association (Co-Chair of the ABA Litigation Section Task Force on the Merit Selection of Judges, 1995-1997; Co-Chair of the Section's Federal Procedure Committee, 1990-1995; and Member of the Section's Task Forces on Discovery, 1997-1998 and on the Judiciary, 1998-present), the Philadelphia Bar Association and the Pennsylvania Bar Association (Member of the House of Delegates 1989-1992). I am also a Member of the Advisory Board for the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia, and served on its Board of Directors from 1982-1988.

4. I am familiar with rates customarily charged by attorneys in litigation in the federal courts and particularly with rates typically charged by partners and associates in the major firms in Philadelphia. Rates for senior lawyers range from $300 to $435, depending on experience and reputation, and rates for associates typically range from $100 to $200.

5. I have reviewed the rates charged by Pepper Hamilton LLP, Peter Hearn, P.C. and Mayer, Brown & Platt in their Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs.

6. Pepper's partner rates range from $270-$350; associates' rates range from $125-$195, and legal assistants' rates range from $50-$110. Peter Hearn's rates range from $300-$350. Mayer, Brown & Platt's partner rates range from $250-$350, associates' rates range from $135-$285, and legal assistants' rates range from $75-$130. The rates claimed by Pepper Hamilton LLP, Peter Hearn, P.C. and Mayer, Brown & Platt are reasonable given the attorneys' experience and background, and are in line with rates usually and customarily charged by comparable law firms in this geographic area and, I believe, nationally.

7. I state under penalty of perjury that the foregoing information is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

Rates aren't skyrocketing, but they do keep going up

Many corporate clients are willing to pay the increasing hourly cost of top legal talent, especially in hot practice areas.

BY RUTH SINGLETON

NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL STAFF REPORTER

The National Law Journal (p. B11)
Monday, December 27, 1999

As the economy continues to flourish, law firm billing rates keep climbing. Information provided by law firms responding to the billing portion of The National Law Journal's 1999 survey of the nation's 250 largest law firms indicates that the increases were somewhat more substantial this year than last.

At the high end, Hollywood has beaten out the Beltway. Bertram Fields, a partner who practices entertainment law at Los Angeles' Greenberg Glusker Fields Claman & Machtinger L.L.P., charges a rate of $750 an hour, $140 more than the $610 charged by lobbying partner Thomas Hale Boggs, of Washington, D.C.'s Patton Boggs L.L.P., frequently a top-biller in past NLJ surveys. Houston's Andrews & Kurth L.L.P., whose highest rate is $650, came in second. Twenty firms list partners who charge $500 an hour or more.

There were 141 law firms that provided a range of billing rates for partners and associates, 111 of which responded to last year's survey. Of these 111 firms, 105 raised rates for at least some attorneys, but many held the line on some parameters of their billing rates. For example, 25 firms kept their high rates for partners the same. At the same time, 20 raised them by $5 to $10; seven by $15 to $20; 13 by $25; 21 by $26 to $50; seven by $51 to $99; and four by $100 or more. (Of course, some large jumps can be attributed to the arrival of one high-priced partner.) Only 14 firms lowered their highest rates. Thus 72 firms, or about 65%, of the responding firms raised their highest rates.

The low rates for associates also showed a general upward trend. Although 31 out of the 111 law firms, or 28%, kept their entry-level associate rate the same, 19 firms raised their low-associate rates by $5; 22 by $10; nine by $15; nine by $20; 10 by between $20 and $50; and three by more than $50. Only eight firms lowered their lowest associate rates. Thus, 72 out of 111 firms, or about 65%, raised their entry-level associate rates.

Only 26 of the 141 responding firms now offer an associate rate under $100. Firms charging the lower rates were mostly located in the Midwest (Detroit; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Louisville, Ky.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis) or smaller municipalities (Baltimore; Buffalo, N.Y.; Norfolk, Va.; Uniondale, N.Y.; Woodbridge, N.J.), although lower rates could also be found at a few Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans and Seattle firms.

Not surprisingly, larger firms tend to charge the higher rates. New York's Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom L.L.P.--No. 2 on the NLJ 250, with 1,403 attorneys--lists a range of $380 to $590 for partners and $190 to $365 for associates. In contrast, St. Louis' Husch & Eppenberger L.L.C. charges $140 to $275 for partners, a lower range than Skadden's associate rate. The firm--No. 199 on the NLJ 250, with 183 attorneys--charges $85 to $160 for associates. The lowest reported high rate for partners is $180, at Clarksburg, W.Va.'s Steptoe & Johnson.

Joseph Altonji, a director in the Chicago office of Somerset, N.J.'s Hildebrandt International, a management consulting firm, is not surprised by the increases. "Demand for legal services remains very strong," he says. "Firms are very busy, and costs are rising very dramatically. At the end of the day, you've got to recover your costs." He notes that firms must compensate for the rising salaries of associates, the best of whom are in great demand.

Mr. Altonji also says that corporate clients are willing to pay the rising rates because "there is a pretty good market; you have to pay the going rate." In addition, he notes that "in-house legal talent is not necessarily a bargain....Corporations are paying more for people they're hiring." He says that corporations are willing to pay higher rates for outside law firms because these companies might actually save over hiring more in-house attorneys and because "people recognize there is a shortage of good, available people out there." He adds, "As long as the economy is good and there is a demand for legal time, you see rates continue to bump."

Another trend that Mr. Altonji has observed is a decrease in discounting. The rate a law firm charges "is getting closer to the standard rate...the rate on the actual sheet," he says.

Rates take a hike in the Rockies

At Denver's Davis, Graham & Stubbs L.L.P., rates rose to $195 to $280 for partners and $125 to $200 for associates, from $175 to $275 for partners and $115 to $160 for associates last year. Ronald R. Levine, a partner and member of the firm's executive committee, attributed the increase to several factors.

"Part of what we're experiencing in Colorado, particularly in popular areas like IP, securities and M&A, is a little bit of...elasticity as a result of how busy everyone is and how hot the Colorado economy is," he says. He also observes that there have been "significant out-of-town incursions into our market," referring to IP specialty firms such as Cooley Godward L.L.P. "Out-of town firms are more pricey than we are....We're still a reasonable cost provider, particularly compared to the out-of-town firms," he says, even if one factors in the firm's most recent rate increases.

Mr. Levine says that at his firm, rates are "typically set by department heads in consultation with partners. [There is] discussion with each individual partner as to whether they think [their] practice will support that rate. [There is] also a fair amount of flexibility that most of our partners have for setting rates for any particular transaction." He says that his firm does make use of volume discounting: "The type of discounting we're doing is over a substantial amount of annual billing." The firm uses a "sliding scale of 1% to 5% as you go up the totem pole," meaning that the discount increases with the volume of business.

Uniondale's Rivkin Radler & Kremer is one firm that opted not to raise rates for either partners or associates at the top and bottom end, although Executive Director Paul Czeladnicki notes that "within those broad categories, people move up." He adds, "We felt that there was latitude within our rate structure without having to raise [rates]." He also says that the firm set its rates based on "being sensitive to our client base and our client needs."

There's always an alternative

Alternative billing methods continue to be popular, but they still don't pose a threat to the billable hour. Firms that generate sizable percentages of their income from alternative billing methods include Brooklyn, N.Y.'s Cullen & Dykman (50%); Woodbridge, N.J.'s Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer (47%); Chicago's D'Ancona & Pflaum (40%); Buffalo, N.Y.'s Hodgson, Russ, Andrews, Woods & Goodyear L.L.P. (40%); Hunton & Williams (40%); Philadelphia's Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis L.L.P. (39%); Philadelphia's Saul, Ewing, Remick & Saul L.L.P. (36%); Detroit's Butzel Long (30%); and Holland & Knight L.L.P. (30%).

The alternative billing methods such firms listed include task-based billing, contingency fees, fixed fees and blended rates. Mr. Altonji observed that many firms use "value-based billing for the bigger stuff....For a lot of basic things, such as loans, a lot of [law firms use] fixed fees."

CONWOOD'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Defendants (collectively, "UST") suggest that injunctive relief is discretionary and unnecessary. It is neither. After the jury's finding of unlawful monopolization by UST, the Court "has the duty to compel action by [UST] that will, so far as practicable, cure the ill effects of the illegal conduct, and assure the public freedom from its continuance." United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 340 U.S. 76, 88 (1950) (reversing with order to strengthen decree) (emphasis added).[1] Conwood need not show "irreparable injury," only that UST's misconduct is likely to continue. And that is conceded: UST has announced that it will persist in the misconduct that caused hundreds of millions of dollars in damages to Conwood and higher prices for consumers. While UST invites Conwood to file further lawsuits as

[1] Accord United States v. Glaxo Group, Ltd., 410 U.S. 52, 64 (1973); Schine Chain Theatres, Inc. v. United States, 334 U.S. 110, 128-29 (1948); International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U.S. 392, 400-01 (1947); International Distrib. Ctrs., Inc. v. Walsh Trucking Co., No. 82 Civ. 8709, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 8, 1986).

UST's new violations mount, that is no answer. Conwood and the public are entitled to have UST's unlawful conduct stopped; that is the very purpose of the Clayton Act's provision for injunctive relief. (Point I).

The proposed injunction is simple and straightforward, and neither impermissibly vague nor overbroad. It requires UST to concern itself with its own products, advertising, and displays, and to leave competitors alone. Thus, it addresses only conduct that is indefensible, and proscribes nothing that is even arguably procompetitive. Only by ignoring the actual language of the proposed injunction -- which, tellingly, it never cites -- can it even attempt to argue vagueness or overbreadth. (Points II and III).

Nor is there substance to UST's complaint about the injunction's supposedly undue "intrusion" into its affairs. The prohibition against manipulation of competitors' products, displays, and advertising intrudes not at all, and the modest requirement of board of directors oversight is both commonplace and highly deferential to UST's self-governance; the Court would be fully justified in going much farther. (Point IV).

Finally, UST does not (and cannot) cite any valid basis for denying needed relief during the 2 to 3 years it expects to consume in the pursuit of appeals. Indeed, UST does not even try to meet the Sixth Circuit standard for a stay pending appeal. It has not demonstrated likelihood of success on the merits of its appeal, irreparable injury, the absence of any harm to third persons if the stay is granted, or a public interest favoring the entry of a stay. Under controlling law it must establish all of the above. UST's alternative request for a 30-day stay so that it can attempt at leisure to find grounds for a stay to present to the Sixth Circuit should be rejected out of hand. (Point V).

I. CONWOOD HAS MET THE STANDARD FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

UST's central argument is that the Court has the discretion to "deny relief for lack of irreparable harm alone." UST Mem. at 7. This is simply wrong. The Sixth Circuit has held that "irreparable harm" is not a required element for permanent (as opposed to temporary) injunctive relief in antitrust cases. Instead, a plaintiff may obtain permanent injunctive relief "simply by demonstrating that a 'significant threat of injury from an impending violation of the antitrust laws or from a contemporary violation likely to continue or recur.'" Stone v. William Beaumont Hosp., 782 F.2d 609, 617 (6th Cir. 1986) (quoting Bender v. Southland Corp., 748 F.2d 1205, 1214 (6th Cir. 1984)).[2]

---

[2]Accord Zenith Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 132 (1969) ("A federal court has broad power to restrain acts which are of the same type or class as unlawful acts which the court has found to have been committed or whose commission in the future, unless enjoined, may be fairly anticipated from the defendant's conduct in the past." (internal quotation marks omitted)); ABA, Antitrust Law Developments (Fourth) 799 (1997) ("By the permanent relief phase of the proceeding, the court has already determined that an antitrust violation occurred and there is no need to apply the preliminary injunction standard of 'likelihood of success on the merits.' Rather, the only material issue that remains is whether the plaintiff can show that it is threatened with loss or damage arising out of the illegal conduct or a cognizable danger that past or existing violations will continue or recur." (footnotes omitted)).

There is no question that UST's antitrust violations are likely to continue. It has admitted as much, in its defiance of the verdict[3] and in its public pronouncements that it plans to continue all of the practices at issue.[4] That alone would be sufficient showing for the requested injunction.[5] But there is more; Conwood has evidence that UST has made good on its post-trial threats, and continues to use the very same pernicious tactics the jury found unlawful. See, e.g., Williams Decl. ¶ 3 (Exh. B); Conwood Sales Force Decls. (Exh. C). In these circumstances, it would be an abuse of discretion to fail to provide injunctive relief.[6]

[3]"As this Court is fully aware, U.S. Tobacco continues to hold firm to the position that none of its conduct violates Section 2 of the Sherman Act." UST Mem. at 18.

[4]See Exh. A (compiling post-trial public comments, including statement that UST did nothing more than "engage[] in ordinary marketing practices," that "the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than . . . normal," and that, despite judgment, UST "will continue to provide you with the same level of service . . . and the same fine programs").

[5]See, e.g., Blue Cross & Blue Shield United v. Marshfield Clinic, 883 F. Supp. 1247, 1263 (W.D. Wis. 1995) (defendants' continued denials of wrongdoing after trial give rise to "threat that the defendants will continue to violate the antitrust laws"); Wilk v. American Med. Ass'n, 895 F.2d 352, 367 (7th Cir. 1990) (same).

[6]Defendants' only authority demonstrates as much. In Barrett v. Fields, 941 F. Supp. 980, 983 (D. Kan. 1996), a Kansas trial court case concerning a conspiracy to divide the county car-towing business, it was undisputed that a "new 1995 policy" implemented by the Sheriff (rotating towing assignments) put an end to the illegal practices. Accordingly, the court there found no threat of future harm to the plaintiff and entered no injunction. Id. at 983, 984. But the court also made plain that the existence of evidence of a threatened recurrence would warrant an injunction. Id. at 984 & n.5.

16diii006040

The possibility of an endless cycle of Conwood damages actions is likewise no valid reason to deny the injunctive relief required by the Clayton Act. Were that sufficient, there would never be injunctive relief in antitrust cases. But that is not the law.[7] Moreover, Conwood damages actions provide no relief for consumers and competition. Yet, the Court is expressly obligated to consider "the high purpose of enforcing the antitrust laws" in preventing harm to consumers and competition. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. at 131. Indeed, the Court has "the duty" to issue an injunction that "cure[s] the ill effects of the illegal conduct, and assure[s] the public freedom from its continuance." United States Gypsum, 340 U.S. at 88. See also note 1, supra (citing additional cases).

UST's unlawful monopolization has resulted in higher prices,[8] reduced output available to consumers,[9] reduced brand choice,[10]

---

[7]The only case cited by UST in its effort to suggest that future damages actions might be sufficient, Bennett, was in fact decided on a different basis: the court declined to issue an injunction because it found no evidence of likely recurrence, a finding simply not possible here. 941 F. Supp. at 983, 984. The Kansas court's dicta about future damages suits should carry little weight in light of the squarely contrary Supreme Court holdings. See note 1, supra.

16diii006042

II. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION PROPERLY DEFINES WHAT IS PROHIBITED, AND IS NOT "IMPERMISSIBLY VAGUE"

Conwood has proposed an injunction that, in essence, prohibits the abuses proved at trial by placing competitors' products, displays, and advertising off limits to the monopolist. Specifically, Conwood has proposed that UST shall not (a) "manipulate any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, [or] . . . 'point of sale' advertising," or (b) "induce . . . other persons" to do the same. Proposed Order § I.

Tellingly, UST argues that the proposed injunction is "vague" without once citing its actual terms. Thus, it suggests it is "unclear" from Section I.A of the proposed injunction whether retailers may make "their own, independent decisions to use a U.S. Tobacco rack to house all moist snuff." UST Mem. at 10. In fact, there is no fair reading of the injunction that could conceivably prohibit such independent decisions. By its plain terms, the proposed injunction bars only UST -- not the independent retailer -- from manipulating rival companies' property without permission.[13] UST has not offered a single genuine ambiguity; while it does not agree with the restrictions on its conduct, including restrictions on its manipulation of [13]Similarly, UST complains that Section I.B of the injunction is "so patently vague" that it might even preclude UST representatives from designing or commenting on a suggested plan-o-gram. UST Mem. at 11. But nothing in Section I.B's language remotely restricts UST personnel from designing or commenting on suggested plan-o-grams for its own products. It does, however, plainly prevent UST from influencing retailers to delete rival products. Again, there is nothing vague here, and UST's complaint seems to be more about the substance of the restriction on its ability to continue its proven anticompetitive conduct.

rivals' property, it cannot validly argue that it is in the dark about the scope of those restrictions.

The proposed injunction is therefore appropriately drafted. In crafting an injunction, "elaborate detail is unnecessary and even may be undesirable . . . . [T]he court should be specific, direct, and to the point" so that reasonable persons can understand the Court's directive. 11A Charles Alan Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2955, at 312-13 (2d ed. 1995). Injunctions far more succinct than Conwood's proposal routinely pass judicial scrutiny.[14] Indeed, not one of the cases cited by UST suggests that the proposed injunction is inappropriate; each stands at most for the unremarkable proposition that a trial court may not rotely repeat broad statutory commands in the form of an injunction -- something that is indisputably not the case here.[15]

[14]See, e.g., United States v. V-1 Oil Co., 63 F.3d 909 (9th Cir. 1995) (rejecting vagueness challenge and upholding sweeping injunction requiring defendant to accede to warrantless searches "for the purpose of enforcing the [Hazardous Material Transportation Act]," and explaining that injunctions will not be overturned on appeal "unless they are so vague that they have no reasonably specific meaning" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

[15]See City of Mishawaka v. American Elec. Power Co., 616 F.2d 976, 991-92 (7th Cir. 1980) (rejecting injunction provision that merely restated "the broad language of Section 2 of the Sherman Act" and provision that simply required defendant to "treat all its customers fairly, equitably, and on a nondiscriminatory basis"); Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., No. LR-C-95-781, ¶ 18 (E.D. Ark. Oct. 16, 1998) (rejecting injunction that would bar "any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to create artificial barriers to entry or expansion"); Hartford-Empire Co. v. United States, 323 U.S. 386, 410 (1945) (explaining that "[t]he decree must not be so vague as to put the whole conduct of the defendants' business at the peril of a summons for contempt; [or] enjoin all possible breaches of the law" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

III. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION PROPERLY ADDRESSES UST'S UNLAWFUL CONDUCT AND IS NOT "OVERBROAD"

After first professing inability to understand what the proposed injunction prohibits, UST does an about face and claims that it understands perfectly and objects because the injunction covers too much. But under the Sherman Act the Court must completely eliminate the unlawful conduct -- even if that does mean incidentally foreclosing related lawful conduct. See, e.g., United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., 334 U.S. 131, 148 (1948) ("equity has the power to uproot all parts of an illegal scheme -- the valid as well as the invalid -- in order to rid the trade or commerce of all taint" of the illegal conduct); National Soc'y of Prof'l Eng'rs v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 698 (1978) (otherwise lawful conduct may be enjoined if it "represents a reasonable method of eliminating the consequences of the illegal conduct" or its resumption); United States Gypsum Co., 340 U.S. at 89 (relief may "range broadly through practices connected with acts actually found to be illegal").[16]

Accordingly, the Court can and should prohibit otherwise lawful conduct if it "represents a reasonable method of eliminating the consequences of the illegal conduct" or

---

[16] See also International Salt, 332 U.S. at 400-01 ("When the purpose to restrain trade appears from a clear violation of law, it is not necessary that all of the untraveled roads to that end be left open and that only the worn one be closed. The usual ways to the prohibited goal may be blocked against the proven transgressor and the burden put upon him to bring any proper claims for relief to the court's attention."); United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 366 U.S. 316, 327 (1961) (In choosing "among two or more effective [antitrust] remedies[,] [i]f the remedy chosen is not effective, it will not be saved because an effective remedy would entail harsh consequences. This proposition is not novel; it is deeply rooted in antitrust law and has never been successfully challenged.").

preventing its resumption. National Soc'y of Prof'l Eng'rs, 435 U.S. at 698. Accord United States v. National Lead Co., 332 U.S. 319, 335 (1947) ("The essential consideration is that the remedy shall be effective and fair as possible in preventing continued or future violations of the Antitrust Act in the light of the facts of the particular case."); International Salt, 334 U.S. at 400; DuPont, 366 U.S. at 327; United States v. Loew's, Inc., 371 U.S. 38, 53 (1962) ("When [a party] has won the lawsuit, it is entitled to win the cause as well.").[17]

Here, however, the proposed injunction is far narrower than is required, and does nothing to restrain or impede legitimate competition by UST or anyone else.

A. UST asserts that the development of new racks, POS, products, and incentive programs "could easily fit within the proposed injunction." UST Mem. at 13-14. But UST never explains how and never points to any language in the proposed injunction

---

[17]Defendants' overbreadth claims are undermined by the cases they cite. For example, in Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 162 F.2d 520 (7th Cir. 1947), the court of appeals went out of its way to explain that trial courts may impose restraints not only on "acts committed under the conspiracy," but also "impose such further restraints as would prevent an evasion. All doubts [are to be] resolved in favor of the plaintiff." Id. at 523. A decree may enjoin not only illegal conduct, but other conduct that "became tainted by illegality," given the way defendants employed it. Id. A decree "may very properly be used to destroy the [illegal conduct] root, branch, and all its evil fruits." Id. at 524. The only thing an injunction may not do, the court held, is impose on a defendant competitive restraints unrelated to the conspiracy that simply "preserve the evil in the interest of the plaintiff." Id. Likewise, in Loew's, the Supreme Court expanded the injunction issued by lower courts to cover facially lawful, but potentially abusive, conduct in order "to ensure . . . that relief is effectual, otherwise permissible practices connected with the acts found to be illegal must sometimes be enjoined." 371 U.S. at 53.

that could be so construed. In fact, nothing in the proposed injunction affects UST's ability to develop and support its own products, POS, and racks.[18] Likewise, nothing prevents UST from developing incentive programs to secure the placement of its own products, POS, and racks (like the programs implemented by Swisher and Conwood), as opposed to programs used to restrain or exclude competition.[19]

B. UST complains that the proposed injunction would preclude "perfectly normal" conduct like (i) exclusive vending, (ii) SOF=SOM, and (iii) making "recommendations" to exclude rival products. UST Mem. at 14-15. There is, of course, nothing "perfectly normal" about any of these practices. Indeed, Gary Milano, UST's Vice President of Sales, testified that exclusive vending was improper: "It wouldn't be proper for [a] representative to try and have exclusive vending in the stores." 3/7/00 Tr. at 25. Mr. Milano likewise admitted that UST had no legitimate need for SOF=SOM. 3/6/00 Tr. at 81-82. And he conceded that it was not appropriate for UST employees to recommend the deletion of competitive brands. 3/6/00 Tr. at 113. Understandably, the properly instructed jury rejected defense counsel's subsequent argument that such conduct is "normal." The proposed injunction is carefully tailored to prevent recurrence

[18]The injunction proscribes only efforts by UST to manhandle other companies' property and induce retailers to limit rival distribution -- actions that lack any procompetitive virtue and that the record showed UST plainly abused to exclude competition.

[19]See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 98-99 (Gundlach testifying that UST's Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") contains a variety of "exclusionary feature[s]," such as exclusion of competitive POS and reduced visibility of competitive brands.); PXs 112C, 112D, 112F, 112O (expressly conditioning CAP payments on exclusion).

of these abusive practices while leaving ample room for UST to compete fairly.

(i) Given the extensive record at trial showing how UST used exclusive vending to restrict competitive distribution, thwart price-value brand introductions, and eliminate rival POS,[20] it would be entirely permissible for the Court to ban exclusive vending entirely as the most "effective" remedy to prevent "continued or future violations" of the antitrust laws. National Lead, 332 U.S. at 335.

Conwood's proposal is, however, far more modest. Under the proposed injunction a retailer remains free to make an independent decision to implement exclusive vending. UST is even free to place the new vendor, as well as its own POS and product. The proposed injunction (§ I.A) simply provides that, if rival products and POS are to be incorporated into the UST vendor, the retailer or the rival should perform this function rather than UST. In fact, the proposed injunction even permits UST to perform this service too -- with the permission of the rival, and [20] See, e.g., PX 4 ("Our objective with exclusive vending rights . . . is to control expanded competitive distribution and competitive P.O.S."); PX 268 ("I have exclusive vending rights and have eliminated most all of any serious distribution of Conwood brands. I should be well under 10% of competitive distribution in my chains."); Hart Dep. at 15-16 (former UST rep testifying that his supervisors told him to persuade stores to use UST racks exclusively and to remove or reduce Conwood facings because, "if we didn't keep control . . . they would get a higher percent of the market share"); Marconi Dep. at 11-13 (same); Borrowdale Dep. at 16 (same); Ulizio Dep. at 23-24 ("[t]he program was to go through every account, pull out every display, whether it was good or bad," leaving Conwood, "a slot or two, or possibly three, connected to ours"); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32 (engaged in same conduct at supervisor's behest); Keil Dep. at 15-17 (same).

such permission may not be unreasonably withheld.[21] The proposed injunction is thus narrowly drafted to address the specific abuses proved at trial, and does not in any way stifle legitimate competitive activity.[22]

(ii) "SOF=SOM" is one of the means UST used to "control competition," according to its own documents. PX 9. UST's counsel now protests that SOF=SOM is legitimate and procompetitive. But at trial UST's executives conceded that

[22]While UST complains that it will be unable to discard rivals' "damaged or shopworn racks and/or POS" and "out-of-date or stale products," UST Mem. at 10, nothing in the injunction prevents retailers from removing these items. Rival manufacturers have every incentive to do the same. Williams Decl. ¶¶ 6-7 (Exh. B). And UST may even discard rivals' property with their advance permission. Once again, UST does not (and cannot) explain why it needs to have the unilateral right to remove and tamper with other companies' property without permission. And the record shows that UST has used and continues to use these tactics to exclude. See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 189-94 (Hettinger testifying that UST bagged up hundreds of fresh cans of Conwood product and removed thousands of racks); 3/8/00 Tr. at 200-04 (Hynek: same); id. at 155-59 (Dring: same); 3/10/00 Tr. at 53-54, 84 (Williams: same); PX 16 ("better for [Conwood] to be lost in our vending than to have their own and no point of sale on the vendor"); PX 27 (Conwood products deleted and factings removed. "All competitors' vendors have been replaced by UST vendors.").

policy has literally "no effect" on its sales.[23] And UST's documents and former sales representatives revealed that the company used the tactic solely to exclude competition, especially nascent price-value brands.[24] However legitimate when employed by other companies in other industries -- and there is no evidence that it is legitimate anywhere by anyone -- there is no question that UST used SOF=SOM as an unlawful exclusionary tactic and, accordingly, should be enjoined. See Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 405 U.S. 562, 573 (1972) (means a court uses to restore competition depends on "the special needs of the individual case").

(iii) UST complains that it will not be allowed to "recommend" the deletion of rival products. UST Mem. at 15. But it has no credible argument -- much less authority -- for the notion that an 80% monopolist should be permitted to use its power to "recommend" deletion of competitors. The evidence at trial proved that UST used its market "clout," its position as category captain (which it alone can secure because of its dominant market power[25]), and related "incentives" to encourage retail stores to eliminate facings and advertising opportunities for rivals.[26] In making its "recommendations," UST even resorted on a systematic basis to using false and misleading information.[27] And its "recommendations" were often intentionally targeted at stunting price-value competition.[28]

While UST should be permitted to promote its own products, and to recommend additions (or deletions) of those products, even where such additions lead to deletions of competitive products, the monopolist should not be permitted -- independent of any efforts to promote its products -- deliberately and specifically to impair the opportunities of rivals. That is all the proposed injunction prohibits. Conwood's restriction is, thus, appropriately and narrowly tailored to the needs of this case.

(Williams); 3/6/00 Tr. at 76 (Milano).

[26] See, e.g., PX 61 ("[i]t is imperative that we continue with this Category Management action plan to eliminate competitive products"); PX 59 (UST seeking discontinuation of slow-selling competitive products, yet maintaining its own slow-selling flavor-paks); 3/13/00 Tr. at 288 (Blattberg testifying that for the purpose of excluding competitors, UST created artificial scarcity in a market that it knew had the potential to grow). 16diii006051

C. UST asserts that issuing an injunction would insulate Conwood from normal competition. UST Mem. at 16. But normal competition is exactly what Conwood seeks, and the "examples" UST cites belie its claim. UST complains, for instance, that the proposed injunction would preclude retailers from being able to obtain category management services. To the contrary, nothing in the injunction bars UST from performing such services.[29]

D. UST asserts that the proposed injunction "binds" independent retailers and treats their decisions as "conspiratorial." UST Mem. at 17-18. Tellingly, however, defendants point to no language in the proposed injunction that would so operate. Nor can they. The proposed injunction is expressly "enforceable against all defendants in this lawsuit." Proposed Order at 4. The proposed injunction does also apply to "other persons, affiliated or acting in concert with" defendants. Id. But this language is designed to cover defendants' agents, in order to ensure that UST does not attempt to pursue indirectly illegal acts that it is forbidden to pursue directly.[30]

[29]UST is not precluded from performing any of the central functions of a category captain: making product selection recommendations about its own products or the addition of rival products, from offering category displays for its products and even rival products, from promoting its products or the entire category, or from providing labor to perform resets. 3/13/00 Tr. at 209-10 (Blattberg enumerating category captain functions). UST is forbidden only from seeking to delete rival products and handling their property -- neither of which are essential to category captain functions. Id. at 223, 246 (Blattberg describing UST's behavior on both scores as "abuses" of category management).

[30]For example, manufacturers sometimes pay independent "manufacturer representatives" to represent them with retailers in certain areas, rather than endure the expense of maintaining a sales force there. Williams Decl. ¶ 4 (Exh. B). UST should not be encouraged to use such agents as a way around the Court's

Indeed, Conwood's proposed language is drawn from other injunctions proposed and approved in analogous circumstances. See, e.g., International Distrib. Ctrs., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701, at *24 (proscribing conduct by defendant and "all persons acting in aid of, or in concert with, them"); Plaintiffs' Proposed Final Judgment, United States v. Microsoft Corp., Civ. Action Nos. 98-1232, 98-1233 (D.D.C. filed Apr. 28, 2000), available at http://www.usdoj.gov/atr/cases/f4600/4639.htm (Exh. D) (¶ 6b: order applies to "all other persons in active concert or participation with any of" defendants).

IV. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION IS NOT "UNDULY INTRUSIVE"

Finally, UST objects to the proposed injunction on the ground that it would unreasonably intrude into its operations. But it can point to no such intrusion.

While UST complains that it would have to obtain permission from rivals before manipulating their products, displays or advertising, it gives no sound reason why that is burdensome or inappropriate. The alternative, obviously, is flat prohibition. But Conwood has sought to tailor the request to allow for flexibility, and the requirement of consent is both commonsense and commonplace. Williams Decl. ¶ 5 (Exh. B). It was UST's legerdemain over the property of its rivals that, in large measure, provided the mechanism through which UST unlawfully monopolized the moist snuff market. It cannot credibly argue that it should have the right to exercise such dominion. It should do so only with permission. Accordingly, there is no injunction. Nothing in this language is designed to, or would, cover "independent, uncoerced retailers" that, by definition, are not acting in concert with it.

16diii006053

basis for thinking this procedure to be "unduly intrusive" on anyone.

UST also protests the creation of a new Board of Directors committee to enforce internal compliance with the Court's order, as well as the mandate that it produce annual compliance reports, maintain relevant corporate records, and provide notice to customers and training to employees. UST Mem. at 20. But UST nowhere explains why any of these provisions would be unduly onerous. Neither does (or can) UST dispute that each of these provisions would materially further compliance by an (admittedly) recalcitrant and unrepentant UST.

Significantly, UST cites no court that has rejected such modest measures as "unduly intrusive"; in fact, the proposed injunction is far less "intrusive" than injunctions entered by courts in cases where the conduct was far less pervasive than the exclusion proved at trial in this case. See, e.g., International Distrib. Ctrs., Inc., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701, at *32 (ordering defendant to file quarterly reports and affidavits with the court; to generate and send to plaintiff internal accounting statements on a quarterly basis; to notify plaintiff in advance of any planned sale or transfer; to inform its employees of the terms of the injunction and develop a compliance training program; to provide annual accounts of "all steps" taken in the preceding year to "discharge its obligations" under the court's order); Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 911 F. Supp. 510, 512 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (approving "affirmative steps" including the "educat[ion] [of defendants'] employees about the Sherman Act's" requirements and the "adopti[on] [of] personnel policies and procedures"); Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 950, 953 (N.D. Ohio 1987) (court retaining jurisdiction "for such further orders or directions as may be necessary" and "for the enforcement of compliance herewith, and for the punishment of any violation"); Image Technical Servs., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., No. 87-1686, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2386 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 1996) (notice to all customers and antitrust training).[31]

V. UST HAS NOT MET (AND CANNOT MEET) THE STANDARDS REQUIRED FOR A TEMPORARY STAY

Defendants ask the Court for a stay pending appeal. But they cite no similar antitrust case in which a court has denied effective and timely injunctive relief so that a defendant can continue the misconduct while the case is on appeal. Besides, under Sixth Circuit law, the party seeking a stay is obligated to show that it is likely (1) to prevail on the merits of the appeal; (2) to be irreparably harmed absent a stay; (3) other parties will not be harmed if the court grants the stay; (4) the public interest will be advanced by a stay. Michigan Coalition of Radioactive Material Users, Inc. v. Griepentrog, 945 F.2d 150, 153 (6th Cir. 1991); Ohio ex rel. Celebrezze v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm'n, 812 F.2d 288, 290 (6th Cir. 1987). UST has shown none of these things, much less all of them.

First, while granting that UST believes it will win on appeal, its appellate issues are mere retreads of arguments

[31] See also Plaintiffs' Proposed Final Judgment, Microsoft (Exh. D) (Government's proposed injunction requiring, inter alia, creation of a "compliance committee" of Microsoft's board of directors (§ 4); development of internal programs to ensure compliance with Section 2 (id.); and maintenance and access to relevant records (§ 5)).

16diii006055

soundly rejected by the Court many times -- on summary judgment, on two directed verdict motions, and in pre-trial in limine motions practice. The Court conducted an error-free trial, and, as fully discussed elsewhere, UST's familiar arguments do not come close to demonstrating otherwise. See Pls.' Opp. to Defs' Mot. for Judgment, New Trial, or Remittitur (Apr. 30, 2000).

Second, UST makes no effort to present any evidence that it would be irreparably harmed by the proposed injunction. Instead, it rests on the bare assertion that its "foregoing discussion" somehow "demonstrates" impending irreparable injury. UST Mem. at 22. That "discussion" is no substitute for the evidence UST bears the burden of producing. See Ohio ex rel. Celebrezze, 812 F.2d at 290 (in evaluating the claimed harm, court looks to "the adequacy of the proof provided" and will not award relief when harm is "speculative or theoretical"). More fundamentally, UST's only imaginable "harm" in this case is some (unspecified) reduction in its $1 billion annual profits. The Sixth Circuit has repeatedly held that such financial injury cannot qualify as "irreparable harm." Id.; see Griepentrog, 945 F.2d at 154 ("[m]ere injuries, however substantial, in terms of money, time and energy necessarily expended in the absence of a stay, are not enough").

UST does not even address the two remaining prongs on which it bears the burden of proof: showing that a stay would cause no harm to other persons and that a stay is in the public interest. In fact, a stay would harm other persons and grossly offend the public interest. UST has confirmed again and again that it will not change its unlawful conduct absent a direct court order. If a stay is granted, both competition and consumers will be harmed through the continuation of conduct already adjudged to offend the antitrust laws -- conduct that has resulted in higher consumer prices, lower output, reduced brand choice, harm to other existing competitors (not just Conwood), and increased barriers to entry. It is beyond argument, therefore, that a stay would harm Conwood, other moist snuff competitors, consumers, and the public interest as well.

Absent a stay pending appeal, UST asks the Court to issue at least a 30-day stay so that it can prepare "affidavits and any other supporting documents" at its leisure for a second try before the Sixth Circuit. UST cites no authority for the procedure it contemplates. What it seeks, in substance, is a temporary restraining order without having to make any of the legal showings necessary to obtain one. In any event, UST had ample time to prepare its case; it is telling that it cannot identify for this Court any of the materials it now says it needs 30 days to assemble for the Sixth Circuit. The issue of injunctive relief has been present in this case from the outset. See Prayer for Relief, Conwood Complaint (Apr. 22, 1998) (seeking permanent injunctive relief). If the Court determines that injunctive relief is necessary and appropriate -- as it should, given the evidence before it -- the Court should move forthwith to restore fair competition to the moist snuff market.

Conclusion

Conwood's motion for permanent injunctive relief should be granted.

UST REPORTS FIRST QUARTER 2000 RESULTS

GREENWICH, Conn., April 20, 2000 – UST Inc. (NYSE:UST) today announced that first quarter 2000 net sales increased 5% to $368.3 million, net earnings declined 6% to $102.0 million and earnings per share of $.62 increased 3% compared to the corresponding 1999 period.

UST Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Vincent A. Gierer, Jr., stated: "The fundamentals of our core businesses are on track. During the quarter we experienced higher than anticipated costs for legal fees, interest expense and a hedging loss related to the recent debt issuance. Without these charges, our earnings would have come in better than originally targeted."

Gierer continued, "Despite the continuing difficult environment for tobacco equities, we continue to be encouraged by the performance of our principal business, smokeless tobacco, which posted a net unit volume gain of 2% and, most importantly, the overall category continued to post solid growth. Looking forward to the remainder of the year, we expect the operations to continue to perform in accordance with our original plan. However, in light of the present uncertainty associated with the Conwood litigation, the Company's stated 2000 EPS growth target of 10% may not be achievable."

During the quarter, the Company repurchased 4.7 million shares at a cost of $97.5 million. The Company has suspended its share repurchase program pending further review after the post-trial motions in the Conwood litigation in Kentucky are decided.

Tobacco Segment

Tobacco segment revenue increased 4% to $324.2 million as a result of higher prices and a 2% increase in net smokeless tobacco unit volume to 152.5 million cans. Premium can sales were off slightly, while non-premium products contributed an additional 4.4 million cans in the quarter. Operating profit remained stable at $179.6 million, as the Company continued its accelerated spending plan started in the third quarter of 1999 in an effort to increase category growth.

Impacting Tobacco segment performance were legal expenses associated with the Conwood litigation. In addition, cost of sales increased over 12%, a result of higher federal excise taxes and higher leaf costs associated with the increased weight for Skoal Long Cut products.

Wine Segment

Wine segment revenue increased 15% to $37.1 million primarily due to a 12% increase in premium case sales, while operating profit increased 19% to $2.5 million.

The closing of the announced Guenoc acquisition has been delayed, pending the results of post-trial matters in the Conwood litigation. Costs associated with the acquisition in the amount of $.8 million were expensed during the quarter and negatively impacted the growth in operating profit.

Significant Developments

As previously announced, a jury in Paducah, Kentucky recently found that the Company's subsidiary, U.S. Tobacco Company, had violated the antitrust laws and awarded $350 million in damages to

16dii006061

Conwood Company, L.P. As required by the antitrust laws, the award was trebled and a judgment in the amount of $1.05 billion was entered on March 29, 2000. The enforcement of the judgment is presently stayed while the court hears arguments as to the timing and amount of any bond to be required, as well as arguments on other matters relating to the case.

The Company strongly believes that the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to support the jury's findings and intends to take all actions necessary to vacate or reverse the judgment. The Company recently filed motions with the District Court seeking to have the court vacate the judgment as a matter of law or, in the alternative, order a new trial or reduce significantly the amount of the judgment. If the judgment is not vacated, or a new trial not ordered, the Company intends to appeal the judgment to the court of appeals.

The Company believes that the verdict should be vacated on the following grounds:

1. U.S. Tobacco lacks "monopoly power" under the instructions given to the jury;

2. U.S. Tobacco did not "use" or wield monopoly power in the marketplace, but rather engaged in ordinary marketing practices either used by or available to all competitors;

3. The moist snuff "market" was not harmed by any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct, and in fact was characterized by significantly increased competition during the 1990's under all relevant measures;

4. Conwood prospered in terms of sales and profits during the same time period; and

5. Conwood did not offer evidence, beyond mere "beliefs" and speculation of its own employees, that U.S. Tobacco's "exclusionary" conduct was a material cause of it "not doing better." In fact, the overwhelming evidence shows that the actual sources of Conwood's share stagnation were (a) the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers, (b) competition from other competitors and new brands, and © Conwood's own decisions not to compete in the ways desired by retailers.

In light of the Company's belief as to the merits of its case, the uncertainties associated with the post-trial process and the Company's belief that the amount of damages, if any, which may ultimately be imposed can not be reasonably estimated at this time, no charge relating to the judgment is reflected in the Company's financial statements.

For further information on post-trial motions filed by the Company with the court, please refer to our website at www.ustobacco.com.

UST, through its subsidiaries, is a leading producer and marketer of moist smokeless tobacco products including Copenhagen, Copenhagen Long Cut, Skoal, Skoal Long Cut, Skoal Bandits, Rooster and Red Seal. Other consumer products marketed by UST subsidiaries include premium wines sold nationally through the Chateau Ste. Michelle, Columbia Crest and Villa Mt. Eden wineries as well as sparkling wine produced under the Domaine Ste. Michelle label and premium cigars including Don Tomas, Don Tomas Special Edition, Astral and Habano Primero.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO
SALES and MARKETING COMPANY INC.
100 WEST PUTNAM AVENUE, GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT 06830

March 30, 2000

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

As many of you may already know, on Tuesday, March 28, 2000, a Kentucky jury rendered a verdict against United States Tobacco and awarded $350 million to the plaintiff, Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws. The verdict, as required by the antitrust laws, has been trebled, resulting in a total award of over $1 billion.

United States Tobacco believes strongly that our moist snuff marketing and promotion programs do not violate the antitrust laws and we have already begun the steps necessary to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal. We believe that United States Tobacco, Conwood and other companies in the moist snuff business compete in a highly competitive marketplace, and that the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. In light of the evidence of this presented at trial, we believe the award was completely unjustified.

As this process continues, we will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products, and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us. We appreciate your continued support, and will provide you with additional information as it becomes available.

EXHIBIT B

DECLARATION OF TERRY WILLIAMS

1. I, Terry Williams, am over the age of 18. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. ("Conwood") as the National Sales Manager. I have been employed by Conwood for the past 20 years as a sales representative, district sales supervisor, district manager, regional manager and assistant national sales manager prior to holding my current position.

2. In March, 2000, I gave sworn testimony in Paducah, KY concerning, among other things, the various sales and marketing problems encountered by Conwood everyday because of defendants ("UST").

3. After trial, I have continued to receive multiple reports every week of unauthorized rack removals by UST. In fact, there has been no significant reduction in the number of these reports since the trial concluded and I see no indication that UST has any intention of changing its conduct absent an injunction.

4. UST currently employs independent agents or brokers throughout the country to supplement its direct sales force. For example, UST uses military brokers to promote the sale of its products on military bases. UST also provides payments to distributors who will, in turn, have their employees represent the interests of UST when calling on retail stores. Further, manufacturers in other retail industries frequently hire independent brokers instead of incurring the expense of a sales force to sell and market their products. Conwood is concerned that UST could side-step any injunction directed only to its direct employees by using independent agents to continue its anti-competitive behavior.

5. In the moist snuff industry, it is possible for competing companies to work together and respect the property rights of one another. For example, when the buyer for a large retailer independently decides to reset the moist snuff section, all companies are sometimes notified and asked to attend the reset together. In such cases, the moist snuff companies then work side by side installing their own products, racks and point of sale advertising to ensure compliance with the buyer's instructions. Failure to act in a cordial and professional manner would reflect poorly on the respective companies and potentially jeopardize future business opportunities with the retailer.

6. Retailers are perfectly capable of handling, and do handle, problems with shopworn or broken racks, POS, and out-of-date product without relying on UST. For example, retailers can and do call the appropriate company's local sales representative, the manufacturer's headquarters, the local distributor, or their own chain's headquarters. All of these options are available for providing unbiased assistance with any problems the retailer encounters. In fact, Conwood maintains a customer service department and a consumer relations department for handling such problems.

7. Conwood has every incentive and desire to assist retailers in removing and replacing shopworn or damaged Conwood racks, POS, or out-of-date product. It is one of the central reasons Conwood maintains a large national sales force. Failure to assist retailers with such issues only jeopardizes our ability to maximize the sale of our own products, as well as retailer good will.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF LOU MARANO

1. I, Lou Marano, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative for the Philadelphia, PA territory. I have been employed in this position for the past 11 years. On February 28th, 2000, I gave sworn testimony in Paducah, KY concerning my problems with U.S. Tobacco ("UST") during my tenure with Conwood.

3. For the past six months, UST has been placing their extra-wide, green rack in stores throughout the Philadelphia metropolitan area. This practice continues today.

4. These green racks have individual slots which are larger than necessary to hold an individual can of moist snuff. As a result, each slot on the green rack takes up more counter space than is necessary to vend a moist snuff can. When 10 or 15 of these UST green rack slots are placed side by side on a counter or shelf, a significant amount of space is wasted.

5. With UST wasting space by using this green rack, I am finding it increasingly difficult to merchandise Conwood products in the space designated by stores for moist snuff sales. I believe UST is attempting to artificially limit the amount of space available to vend moist snuff to the detriment of its competitors.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF BARTEN GREEN

1. I, Barten Green, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative for the Tulsa, OK territory. I have held this position for the past 3 1/2 years.

3. Since the verdict against U.S. Tobacco ("UST"), I have had my racks and point of sale ("POS") advertising removed by UST at the Food-4-Less store in Tahlequah, OK. Furthermore, Conwood's products have been placed in a UST rack and beneath UST POS.

4. According to the UST planogram left behind at the store, UST will be the only moist snuff company allowed to place any racks or POS in the store due to its C.A.P. contract with the retailer. (see attached)

5. This situation has occurred at several other retail stores in my territory since the verdict.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF PAUL STICKLEY

1. I, Paul Stickley, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in Des Moines, IA. I have held this position for the past 6 1/2 years

3. Recently, I know of two separate occasions where U.S. Tobacco ("UST") has removed Conwood's rack from a store and eliminated its point of sale ("POS") advertising.

4. On May 1, 2000, I entered Sparky's One Stop convenience store in Stanhope, IA and discovered that Conwood's rack had been removed. I learned from the store manager that a UST representative had been in the store just one hour prior and had removed the rack himself.

5. As a result of UST removing Conwood's racks, I lost distribution on 2 Conwood products and had the number of Kodiak wintergreen facings reduced from 2 to 1. Further, Conwood's POS material was discarded along with the rack.

6. On May 9, 2000, I learned that Conwood's rack had been removed from the Swift Stop in Ames, IA in mid-March. During that time, UST had installed its own tobacco shelving unit which housed all moist snuff products. On one of the shelves, UST used one of its racks to merchandise all competitive moist products even though the existing Conwood rack was perfectly capable of fitting into the new UST shelving system. As a result of UST's conduct, Conwood lost a facing for Kodiak and all its POS advertising. Finally, the store manager allowed me to install another rack.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

DECLARATION OF JEFF CAMPBELL

1. I, Jeff Campbell, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in Gaylord, Michigan. I have been employed in this position for the past two years.

3. I have experienced frequent unethical activity in my district. There has been no change in the level of unethical activity since the judgment in the lawsuit.

4. On April 6th, 2000, I called on the Sunrise Convenience Store in Houghton Lake, Michigan, a high volume account. I discovered that all of Conwood's racks had been removed and its product was placed in UST's green rack. Conwood previously had ten racks with eight brands in the store, with a full compliment of POS.

5. On April 26th, 2000, I called on the 4 Corners BP in Petoskey, Michigan. I discovered that all three Conwood racks had been removed, and the Conwood brands were placed in a UST rack without Conwood POS

6. The Conwood racks were out of the store for at least a month before I could replace them. The rack removals from this store resulted in substantial lost sales for Conwood.

7. On May, 10th, 2000, I called on the Holiday Gas Station in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. I discovered that the UST representative had recently removed all of Conwood's racks and POS, and placed our product into a UST rack.

DECLARATION OF JOHN CARANO

1. I, John Carano, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in McAlester, OK. I have held this position for the past 19 years.

3. In April of 2000, I had my moist snuff racks removed from two stores by U.S. Tobacco ("UST").

4. On April 13, 2000, I personally witnessed a UST sales representative's van parked at Wetumka Indian Smoke Shop store in Wetumka, OK. When Marty Stover, the UST representative exited the store, he informed me that he had removed Conwood's racks.

5. When I entered the store I received permission from the store manager to replace the removed Conwood rack immediately. In fact, the store manager stated that she didn't think it was right for Mr. Stover to have removed Conwood's rack in the first place.

6. In mid-April of 2000, Conwood's rack was removed from the Iron Post Smoke Shop in Sallisaw, OK. Prior to UST visiting the store in mid-April, all moist snuff companies had tall-profile style racks in the store. UST visited the store in April and then placed each company's products in the UST rack in a manner determined by UST . In addition to losing racks in this store, all Conwood point of sale ("POS") was removed from the moist section.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in Lufkin, Texas. I have been employed in this position for the past 23 years.

3. Since the judgment in the lawsuit, I have personally seen Conwood's racks moved to less desirable position in at least five stores in Lufkin and Nacogdoches, Texas. I am also aware that this has occurred in all 65 Brookshire Brothers stores in the chain. I believe that UST is responsible for rearranging the moist smokeless tobacco section in all of these stores.

4. Mike Due, the tobacco buyer for Brookshire Brothers grocery told me that the position changing by UST was not authorized by the chain.

5. I have received permission from Mike Due to return Conwood to the number one position all Brookshire Brothers grocery stores.

DECLARATION OF KIRK GLENN

1. I, Kirk Glenn, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district supervisor/key account manager for the Houston district. I have been employed in this position for the past 14 years.

3. Since the judgment in the lawsuit, I have continued to experience significant levels of unethical activity on military bases in my district.

4. The UST broker for military bases in the San Antonio area has been telling commissary and exchange managers that UST would be providing them a new rack.

5. At the Randolph Air Force Base Exchange all 12 Conwood racks were removed and replaced in a UST rack.

6. At the Randolph Air Force Base Commissary all four Conwood racks containing two Conwood brands were removed and replaced with two facings for two products in UST racks.

7. At the Kelly Air Force Base gas station, Conwood had nine racks holding six of its brands in the account. All nine racks were removed by UST, and its product was placed in four UST slots for only four brands. This resulted in five lost facings for Conwood. The remaining Conwood product was placed behind the racks.

8. At the Kelly Air Force Base Shoppette, Conwood had approximately 12 racks, for six of its brands placed in the account. UST removed the Conwood racks and placed the product in eight slots for six brands in a UST rack, a loss of four Conwood facings.

9. At the Lackland Air Force Base Commissary, Conwood had four racks for two of its brands placed in the account. UST removed Conwood's racks from the store and placed Conwood's product in two slots for two brands in a UST rack. This resulted in the loss of two Conwood facings.

10. In all instances UST placed the Conwood product into its new wide "green racks."

11. All of Conwood's POS was removed with its racks in each case.

12. On these military bases, Conwood's brand, Cougar sells for $1.00 per can, so POS is a necessity to make customers aware of its value price. This price information was printed on the header cards that were removed with Conwood's racks.

13. I was told by a UST broker that they were "cleaning up" the moist smokeless tobacco sections on the bases because UST personnel would be coming around soon to check on the sections.

14. Conwood racks were replaced in each account after receiving permission from the various managers involved. Two full working days were spent replacing racks in these accounts. Replacing racks in military accounts is more time consuming than ordinary retail accounts due to the high level of security on military bases.

15. Military bases are very high volume, and it is a large detriment to Conwood when its racks are out of the accounts.

16. All of this activity occurred on or around April 9, 2000, and was discovered by me between Arpil 11th and April 13th, 2000.

DECLARATION OF JERRY MCKEON

1. I, Jerry McKeon, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district manager for the Pittsburgh, PA district. I have held this position with Conwood since 1993.

3. On May 5, 2000, I learned that the Giant Eagle supermarket in Pittsburgh, PA had accepted U S Tobacco's ("UST") proposal to use one of UST's racks exclusively in all 165 stores.

4 As a result of UST's proposal, Conwood has lost distribution on 5 brands and is not allowed to place their own racks for the remaining Conwood products By losing the ability to place its rack, Conwood also loses the ability to place important point of sale ("POS") advertising.

5. During the first week of May, 2000, I also received reports from one of my salespersons that UST is continuing to remove Conwood racks from a variety of retail stores in Washington County, PA. As a result, Conwood loses its ability to vend its products in a professional manner and loses valuable POS advertising.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

1. I, Rick Woodall, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed as a sales representative for Conwood Sales Co., L.P. in Lawton, OK. I have held this position for the past 12 years.

3. For the month of April, 2000, I have documented 98 Conwood racks "disappearing" from retail stores and being replaced by U.S. Tobacco ("UST") racks. In addition to the racks being removed, point of sale ("POS") advertising is also missing and 90% of the time only UST POS remains.

4. Along with Conwood racks disappearing in April, other companies such as Swedish-Match and Swisher also have their racks removed from stores by UST.

6. I have had similar problems with UST for years. I have not noticed any change in their behavior since the verdict this past March.

1. I, Gene Rogers, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district manager for south Georgia. I have held this position for the past 11 years.

3. Recently, a 48 store chain in Douglass, GA called Quick Change was approached by U.S. Tobacco ("UST") and, I believe, presented with a schematic which would house all moist snuff products in a UST rack.. As a result of UST's efforts, Conwood lost products.

4. When this plan was implemented in April of 2000, Conwood lost distribution on 2 Cougar brands and Hawken, and lost 2 of 3 facings for Kodiak wintergreen.

5. Kodiak is the number 2 selling brand at this chain but was reduced from 3 to 1 facings for its merchandising. UST's Skoal fine cut, however, is the number 4 selling brand in the chain but UST dedicated 2 facings for its merchandising.

6. Also included in the UST recommended schematic was UST's Rooster brand which has not sold as well in the past as some of the deleted Conwood brands such as Hawken and Cougar fine cut wintergreen.

DECLARATION OF DOUG HYNEK

1. I, Doug Hynek, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district sales manager for the Minneapolis, MN district. I have held this position since 1993.

3. In March of 2000, I testified in Paducah, KY to the extensive problems my district has had with U.S. Tobacco ("UST") limiting the sale of Conwood products through various means. Since I've testified, the problems in my district with UST have continued.

4. For example, two weeks ago in Coon Rapids, MN, Conwood placed a six-facing rack in a Super America convenience store. By May 9, 2000, 2 of the 6 facings had been removed from Conwood's rack and all 4 of Conwood's premium products had been placed in a UST rack. In the remaining 4 slots of Conwood's rack were 2 Conwood products and Swisher products. Further, all Conwood point of sale ("POS") advertising was removed. The manager of the store reported that UST did not get permission for any of these changes.

5. At an Amoco gas station in Woodruff, WI, UST removed Conwood's moist snuff rack from the store sometime in the past six weeks. In addition, all 6 of Conwood's moist products were placed in a UST rack.

6. At the Amoco gas station in Mercer, WI, UST placed all moist snuff products in one UST rack. Conwood's rack was removed from the store by UST and all accompanying POS was missing.

7. At the Cenex convenience store in Morris, MN, Conwood installed a 7-facing rack to house its moist snuff products in February of 2000. Since that time, UST discontinued Conwood's Kodiak Ice brand, removed 1 slot from Conwood's rack and removed Conwood's header card (POS). This allowed UST to introduce 2 new products and install its extra-wide slot green rack which unnecessarily takes up more shelf space in the moist snuff section. The manager was unaware that these events had taken place.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

The Court having conducted further proceedings on appropriate relief, it is this _____ day of _____, 2000, hereby:

ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED as follows:

1. Reorganization

a. Not later than four months after entry of this Final Judgment, Microsoft shall submit to the Court and the Plaintiffs a proposed plan of reorganization. The Plaintiffs shall submit any objections to the proposed plan of reorganization to the Court within 60 days of receipt of the plan, and Microsoft shall submit its response within 30 days of receipt of the plaintiffs' objections.

b. Following approval of a final plan of reorganization by the Court (the "Plan")[1] (and the expiration of the stay pending appeal set forth in section 6.a.), Microsoft shall implement such Plan.

c. The Plan shall provide for the completion, within 12 months of the expiration of the stay pending appeal set forth in section 6.a., of the following steps:

i. The separation of the Operating Systems Business from the Applications Business, and the transfer of the assets of one of them (the "Separated Business") to a separate entity along with (a) all personnel, systems, and other tangible and intangible assets (including Intellectual Property) used to develop, produce, distribute, market, promote, sell, license and support the products and services of the Separated Business, and (b) such other assets as are necessary to operate the Separated Business as an independent and economically viable entity.

ii. Intellectual Property that is used both in a product developed, distributed, or sold by the Applications Business and in a product developed, distributed, or sold by the Operating Systems Business as of April 27, 2000, shall be assigned to the Applications Business, and the Operating Systems Business shall be granted a perpetual, royalty-free license to license and distribute such Intellectual Property in its products, and, except with respect to such

[1] Definitions of capitalized terms are set forth in section 7, below.

Intellectual Property related to the Internet browser, to develop, license and distribute modified or derivative versions of such Intellectual Property provided that the Operating Systems Business does not grant rights to such versions to the Applications Business. In the case of such Intellectual Property that is related to the Internet browser, the license shall not grant the Operating System Business any right to develop, license, or distribute modified or derivative versions of the Internet browser.

iii. The transfer of ownership of the Separated Business by means of a spin-off of stock of the Separated Business to Non-Covered Shareholders of Microsoft, or by other disposition that does not result in a Covered Shareholder owning stock in both the Separated Business and the Remaining Business.

d. Until Implementation of the Plan, Microsoft shall

i. preserve, maintain, and operate the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business as ongoing, economically viable businesses, with management, sales, products, and operations of each business held as separate, distinct and apart from one another as they were on April 27, 2000, except to provide the accounting, management, and information services or other necessary support functions provided by Microsoft prior to the entry of this Final Judgment.

ii. use all reasonable efforts to maintain and increase the sales and revenues of both the products produced or sold by the Operating Systems Business and those produced or sold by the Applications Business prior to the Implementation of the Plan and to support research and development and business development efforts of both the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business;

iii. take no action that undermines, frustrates, interferes with, or makes more difficult the reorganization required by this Final Judgment without the prior approval of the Court; and

iv. file a report with the Court sixty days after entry of this Final Judgment on the steps Microsoft has taken to comply with the requirements of this section 1.d.

2. Provisions Implementing Reorganization

a. After Implementation of the Plan, and throughout the term of this Final Judgment, neither the Operating Systems Business nor the Applications Business, nor any member of their respective Boards of Directors, shall acquire any securities or assets of the other Business; no Covered Shareholder holding securities of either the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business shall acquire any securities or assets of or shall be an officer, director, or employee of the other Business; and no person who is an officer, director, or employee of the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business shall be an officer, director, or employee of the other Business.

b. After Implementation of the Plan and throughout the term of the Final Judgment, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall be prohibited from:

i. merging or otherwise recombining, or entering into any joint venture with one another;

ii. entering into any Agreement under which one of the Businesses develops, sells, licenses for sale or distribution, or distributes products or services developed, sold, licensed, or distributed by the other Business;

iii. providing to the other any APIs, Technical Information, Communications Interfaces, or technical information that is not simultaneously published, disclosed, or made readily available to ISVs, IHVs, and OEMs; and

iv. licensing, selling or otherwise providing to the other Business any product or service on terms more favorable than those available to any similarly situated third party.

c. After Implementation of the Plan and throughout the term of this Final Judgment, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall file with the Plaintiffs a copy of each Agreement (and a memorandum describing each oral Agreement) entered into between them.

d. Throughout the term of this Final Judgment, Microsoft, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall be prohibited from taking adverse action against any person or entity in whole or in part because such person or entity provided evidence in this case.

e. The obligations and restrictions set forth in sections 3 and 4 herein concerning Microsoft shall, after the Implementation of the Plan, apply only to the Operating Systems Business.

16diii006089

3. Provisions In Effect Until Full Implementation of the Plan of Reorganization. The provisions in this section 3 shall remain in effect until the earlier of three years after the Implementation of the Plan or the expiration of the term of this Final Judgment.

a. OEM Relations.

i. Ban on Adverse Actions for Supporting Competing Products. Microsoft shall not take or threaten any action adversely affecting any OEM (including but not limited to giving or withholding any consideration such as licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support; enabling programs; product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos) based directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, on any actual or contemplated action by that OEM:

(1) to use, distribute, promote, license, develop, produce or sell any product or service that competes with any Microsoft product or service; or

(2) to exercise any of the options or alternatives provided under this Final Judgment.

ii. Uniform Terms for Windows Operating System Products Licensed to Covered OEMs. Microsoft shall license Windows Operating System Products to Covered OEMs pursuant to uniform license agreements with uniform terms and conditions and shall not employ market development allowances or discounts in connection with Windows Operating System Products. Without limiting the foregoing, Microsoft shall charge each Covered OEM the applicable royalty for Windows Operating System Products as set forth on a schedule, to be established by Microsoft and published on its web site, that provides for uniform royalties for Windows Operating System Products, except that

(1) the schedule may specify different royalties for different language versions, and

(2) the schedule may specify reasonable volume discounts based upon actual volume of total shipments of Windows Operating System Products.

Without limiting the foregoing, Microsoft shall afford Covered OEMs equal access to licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support;

16diii006090

product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos. The foregoing requirement insofar as it relates to access to technical information and information about future plans shall not apply to any bona fide joint development effort by Microsoft and a Covered OEM with respect to confidential matters within the scope of that effort. Microsoft shall not terminate a Covered OEM's license for a Windows Operating System Product without having first given the Covered OEM written notice of the reason for proposed termination and not less than thirty days' opportunity to cure. Microsoft shall not enforce any provision in any Agreement with a Covered OEM that is inconsistent with this Final Judgment

iii. OEM Flexibility in Product Configuration. Microsoft shall not restrict (by contract or otherwise, including but not limited to granting or withholding consideration) an OEM from modifying the boot sequence, startup folder, internet connection wizard, desktop, preferences, favorites, start page, first screen, or other aspect of a Windows Operating System Product to--

(1) include a registration sequence to obtain subscription or other information from the user;

(2) display icons of or otherwise feature other products or services, regardless of the size or shape of such icons or features, or to remove the icons, folders, start menu entries, or favorites of Microsoft products or services;

(3) display any user interfaces, provided that an icon is also displayed that allows the user to access the Windows user interface; or

(4) launch automatically any non-Microsoft Middleware, Operating System or application, offer its own Internet access provider or other start-up sequence, or offer an option to make non-Microsoft Middleware the Default Middleware and to remove the means of End-User Access for Microsoft's Middleware Product.

b. Disclosure of APIs, Interfaces and Technical Information. Microsoft shall disclose to ISVs, IHVs, and OEMs in a Timely Manner, in whatever media Microsoft disseminates such information to its own personnel, all APIs, Technical Information and Communications Interfaces that Microsoft employs to enable--

i. Microsoft applications to interoperate with Microsoft Platform Software installed on the same Personal Computer, or

ii. a Microsoft Middleware Product to interoperate with Windows Operating System software (or Middleware distributed with such Operating System) installed on the same Personal Computer, or

iii. any Microsoft software installed on one computer (including but not limited to server Operating Systems and operating systems for handheld devices) to interoperate with a Windows Operating System (or Middleware distributed with such Operating System) installed on a Personal Computer.

To facilitate compliance, and monitoring of compliance, with the foregoing, Microsoft shall create a secure facility where qualified representatives of OEMs, ISVs, and IHVs shall be permitted to study, interrogate and interact with relevant and necessary portions of the source code and any related documentation of Microsoft Platform Software for the sole purpose of enabling their products to interoperate effectively with Microsoft Platform Software (including exercising any of the options in section 3.a.iii).

c. Knowing Interference with Performance. Microsoft shall not take any action that it knows will interfere with or degrade the performance of any non-Microsoft Middleware when interoperating with any Windows Operating System Product without notifying the supplier of such non-Microsoft Middleware in writing that Microsoft intends to take such action, Microsoft's reasons for taking the action, and any ways known to Microsoft for the supplier to avoid or reduce interference with, or the degrading of, the performance of the supplier's Middleware.

d. Developer Relations. Microsoft shall not take or threaten any action affecting any ISV or IHV (including but not limited to giving or withholding any consideration such as licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support; enabling programs; product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos) based directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, on any actual or contemplated action by that ISV or IHV to --

i. use, distribute, promote, or support any Microsoft product or service, or

ii. develop, use, distribute, promote or support software that runs on non-Microsoft Middleware or a non-Microsoft Operating System or that competes with any Microsoft product or service, or

iii. exercise any of the options or alternatives provided under this Final Judgment.

e. Ban on Exclusive Dealing. Microsoft shall not enter into or enforce any agreement in which a third party agrees, or is offered or granted consideration, to

i. limit its development, production, distribution, promotion or use of, or payment for, any non-Microsoft Platform Software,

ii. distribute, promote or use any Microsoft Platform Software exclusively,

iii. degrade the performance of any non-Microsoft Platform Software, or

iv. in the case of an agreement with an Internet access provider or Internet content provider, distribute, promote or use Microsoft software in exchange for placement with respect to any aspect of a Windows Operating System Product.

f. Ban on Contractual Tying. Microsoft shall not condition the granting of a Windows Operating System Product license, or the terms or administration of such license, on an OEM or other licensee agreeing to license, promote, or distribute any other Microsoft software product that Microsoft distributes separately from the Windows Operating System Product in the retail channel or through Internet access providers, Internet content providers, ISVs or OEMs, whether or not for a separate or positive price.

g. Restriction on Binding Middleware Products to Operating System Products. Microsoft shall not, in any Operating System Product distributed six or more months after the effective date of this Final Judgment, Bind any Middleware Product to a Windows Operating System unless:

i. Microsoft also offers an otherwise identical version of that Operating System Product in which all means of End-User Access to that Middleware Product can readily be removed (a) by OEMs as part of standard OEM preinstallation kits and (b) by end users using add-remove utilities readily accessible in the initial boot process and from the Windows desktop; and

ii. when an OEM removes End-User Access to a Middleware Product from any Personal Computer on which Windows is preinstalled, the royalty paid by that OEM for that copy of Windows is reduced in an amount not less than the product of the otherwise applicable royalty and the ratio of the number of amount in bytes of binary code of (a) the Middleware Product as distributed separately from a Windows Operating System Product to (b) the applicable version of Windows.

h. Agreements Limiting Competition. Microsoft shall not offer, agree to provide, or provide any consideration to any actual or potential Platform Software competitor in exchange for such competitor's agreeing to refrain or refraining in whole or in part from developing, licensing, promoting or distributing any Operating System Product or Middleware Product competitive with any Windows Operating System Product or Middleware Product.

i. Continued Licensing of Predecessor Version. Microsoft shall, when it makes a major Windows Operating System Product release (such as Windows 95, OSR 2.0, OSR 2.5, Windows 98, Windows 2000 Professional, Windows "Millennium," "Whistler," "Blackcomb," and successors to these), continue for three years after said release to license on the same terms and conditions the previous Windows Operating System Product to any OEM that desires such a license. The net royalty rate for the previous Windows Operating System Product shall be no more than the average royalty paid by the OEM for such Product prior to the release. The OEM shall be free to market Personal Computers in which it preinstalls such an Operating System Product in the same manner in which it markets Personal Computers preinstalled with other Windows Operating System Products.

4. Internal Antitrust Compliance. This section shall remain in effect throughout the term of this Final Judgment.

a. Within 30 days after the effective date of this Final Judgment, Microsoft shall establish a Compliance Committee of its corporate Board of Directors, consisting of not fewer than three members of the Board of Directors who are not present or former employees of Microsoft.

b. The Compliance Committee shall hire a Chief Compliance Officer, who shall report directly to the Compliance Committee and to the Chief Executive Officer of Microsoft.

c. The Chief Compliance Officer shall be responsible for development and supervision of Microsoft's internal programs to ensure compliance with the antitrust laws and this Final Judgment.

d. Microsoft shall give the Chief Compliance Officer sufficient authority and resources to discharge the responsibilities listed herein.

e. The Chief Compliance Officer shall

i. within 30 days after entry of this Final Judgment, cause to be delivered to each Microsoft officer, director, and manager, and each platform software developer and employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs, a copy of this Final Judgment together with additional informational materials describing the conduct prohibited and required by this Final Judgment;

ii. distribute in a timely manner a copy of this Final Judgment and such additional informational materials to any person who succeeds to a position of officer, director, or manager, or platform software developer or employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs;

iii. obtain from each officer, director, and manager, and each platform software developer and employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs, within 60 days of entry of this Final Judgment, and for each person thereafter succeeding to such a position within 5 days of such succession, a written certification that he or she:

(1) has read, understands, and agrees to abide by the terms of this Final Judgment; and

(2) has been advised and understands that his or her failure to comply with this Final Judgment may result in conviction for criminal contempt of court;

iv. maintain a record of persons to whom this Final Judgment has been distributed and from whom, pursuant to Section 4(e)(iii), such certifications have been obtained;

v. establish and maintain a means by which employees can report potential violations on a confidential basis; and

vi. report immediately to Plaintiffs and the Court any violation of this Final Judgment.

f. The Chief Compliance Officer may be removed only by the Chief Executive Officer with the concurrence of the Compliance Committee.

g. Microsoft shall, with the supervision of the Chief Compliance Officer, maintain for a period of at least four years the e-mail of all Microsoft officers, directors and managers engaged in software development, marketing, sales and developer relations related to Platform Software.

16diii006095

5. Compliance Inspection. This section shall remain in effect throughout the term of this Final Judgment.

a. For purposes of determining or securing implementation of or compliance with this Final Judgment, including the provisions requiring a plan of reorganization, or determining whether this Final Judgment should be modified or vacated, and subject to any legally recognized privilege, from time to time:

i. Duly authorized representatives of a Plaintiff, upon the written request of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice, or the Attorney General of a Plaintiff State, as the case may be, and on reasonable notice to Microsoft made to its principal office, shall be permitted:

(1) Access during office hours to inspect and copy or, at Plaintiffs' option, demand Microsoft provide copies of all books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda, source code, and other records and documents in the possession or under the control of Microsoft (which may have counsel present), relating to the matters contained in this Final Judgment; and

(2) Subject to the reasonable convenience of Microsoft and without restraint or interference from it, to interview, either informally or on the record, its officers, employees, and agents, who may have their individual counsel present, regarding any such matters.

ii. Upon the written request of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice, or the Attorney General of a Plaintiff State, as the case may be, made to Microsoft at its principal offices, Microsoft shall submit such written reports, under oath if requested, as may be requested with respect to any matter contained in this Final Judgment.

iii. No information or documents obtained by the means provided in this Article shall be divulged by a representative of a Plaintiff to any person other than a duly authorized representative of a Plaintiff, except in the course of legal proceedings to which the Plaintiff is a party (including grand jury proceedings), or for the purpose of securing compliance with this Final Judgment, or as otherwise required by law.

iv. If at the time information or documents are furnished by Microsoft to a Plaintiff, Microsoft represents and identifies in writing the material in any such information or documents to which a claim of protection may be asserted under Rule 26(c)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and Microsoft marks each pertinent page of such material, "Subject to claim of protection under Rule 26(c)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure," then ten (10) calendar days notice shall be given by a Plaintiff to Microsoft prior to divulging such material in any legal proceeding (other than a grand jury proceeding) to which Microsoft is not a party.

6. Effective Date, Term, Retention of Jurisdiction, Modification

a. This Final Judgment shall take effect 30 days after the date on which it is entered; provided, however that sections 1.b and 2 (except 2.d) shall be stayed pending completion of any appeals from this Final Judgment.

b. Except as provided in section 2.d., the provisions of this Final Judgment apply to Microsoft, the Separated Business, the Remaining Business, their successors and assigns (including any transferee or assignee of any ownership rights to, control of, or ability to license the patents referred to in this Final Judgment), their subsidiaries, affiliates, directors, officers, managers, agents, and employees, and all other persons in active concert or participation with any of them who shall have received actual notice of this Final Judgment by personal service or otherwise.

c. This Final Judgment shall expire at the end of ten years from the date on which it takes effect.

d. The Court may act sua sponte to issue orders or directions for the construction or carrying out of this Final Judgment, for the enforcement of compliance therewith, and for the punishment of any violation thereof.

e. Jurisdiction is retained by this Court for the purpose of enabling any of the parties to this Final Judgment to apply to this Court at any time for such further orders or directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction or carrying out of this Final Judgment, for the modification of any of the provisions hereof, for the enforcement of compliance herewith, and for the punishment of any violation hereof.

f. In accordance with the Court's Conclusions of Law, the plaintiff States shall submit a motion for costs and fees, with supporting documents as necessary, no later than 45 days after the entry of this Final Judgment.

7. Definitions.

a. "Agreement" means any agreement, arrangement, alliance, understanding, or joint venture, whether written or oral.

b. "Application Programming Interfaces (APIs)" means the interfaces, service provider interfaces, and protocols that enable a hardware device or an application, Middleware, or server Operating System to obtain services from (or provide services in response to requests from) Platform Software in a Personal Computer and to use, benefit from, and rely on the resources, facilities, and capabilities of such Platform Software.

c. "Applications Business" means all businesses carried on by Microsoft Corporation on the effective date of this Final Judgment except the Operating Systems Business. Applications Business includes but is not limited to the development, licensing, promotion, and support of client and server applications and Middleware (e.g., Office, BackOffice, Internet Information Server, SQL Server, etc.), Internet Explorer, Mobile Explorer and other web browsers, Streaming Audio and Video client and server software, Mobile Explorer, transaction server software, SNA server software, indexing server software, XML servers and parsers, Microsoft Management Server, Java virtual machines, Frontpage Express (and other web authoring tools), Outlook Express (and other e-mail clients), Media player, voice recognition software, Net Meeting (and other collaboration software), developer tools, hardware, MSN, MSNBC, Slate, Expedia, and all investments owned by Microsoft in partners or joint venturers, or in ISVs, IHVs, OEMs or other distributors, developers, and promoters of Microsoft products, or in other information technology or communications businesses.

d. "Bind" means to include a product in an Operating System Product in such a way that either an OEM or an end user cannot readily remove or uninstall the product.

e. "Business" means the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business.

f. "Communications Interfaces" means the interfaces and protocols that enable software installed on other computers (including servers and handheld devices) to interoperate with the Microsoft Platform Software on a Personal Computer.

g. "Covered OEM" means the 20 OEMs with the highest volume of sales of Personal Computers in the United States in the previous 12 months.

h. "Covered Shareholder" means a shareholder of Microsoft on the date of entry of this Final Judgment who is a present or former employee, officer or director of Microsoft and who owns directly or beneficially more than 3 percent of the voting stock of the firm.

i. "Default Middleware" means Middleware configured to launch automatically (that is, by "default") to provide particular functionality when other Middleware has not been selected for this purpose. For example, a default browser is Middleware configured to launch automatically to display Web pages transmitted over the Internet or an intranet that bear the .htm extension, when other software has not been selected for this purpose.

j. "End-User Access" means the invocation of Middleware directly or indirectly by an end user of a Personal Computer or the ability of such an end user to invoke Middleware. "End-User access" includes invocation of Middleware by end users which is compelled by the design of the Operating System Product.

k. "IHV" means an independent hardware vendor that develops hardware to be included in or used with a personal computer.

l. "Implementation of the Plan" means full completion of all of the steps described in section 1.c.

m. "Intellectual Property" means copyrights, patents, trademarks and trade secrets used by Microsoft or licensed by Microsoft to third parties.

n. "ISV" means any entity other than Microsoft (or any subsidiary, division, or other operating unit of any such other entity) that is engaged in the development and licensing (or other marketing) of software products intended to interoperate with Microsoft Platform Software.

o. "Middleware" means software that operates, directly or through other software, between an Operating System and another type of software (such as an application, a server Operating System, or a database management system) by offering services via APIs or Communications Interfaces to such other software, and could, if ported to or interoperable with multiple Operating Systems, enable software products written for that Middleware to be run on multiple Operating System Products. Examples of Middleware within the meaning of this Final Judgment include Internet browsers, e-mail client software, multimedia viewing software, Office, and the Java Virtual Machine. Examples of software that are not Middleware within the meaning of this Final Judgment are disk compression and memory management.

16diii006099

p. "Middleware Product" means

i. Internet browsers, e-mail client software, multimedia viewing software, instant messaging software, and voice recognition software, or

ii. software distributed by Microsoft that

(1) is, or has in the applicable preceding year been, distributed separately from an Operating System Product in the retail channel or through Internet access providers, Internet content providers, ISVs or OEMs, and

(2) provides functionality similar to that provided by Middleware offered by a competitor to Microsoft.

q. "Non-Covered Shareholder" means a shareholder of Microsoft who is not a Covered Shareholder on the date of entry of this Final Judgment.

r. "OEM" means the manufacturer or assembler of a personal computer.

s. "Operating System" means the software that controls the allocation and usage of hardware resources (such as memory, central processing unit time, disk space, and peripheral devices) of a computer, providing a "platform" by exposing APIs that applications use to "call upon" the Operating System's underlying software routines in order to perform functions.

t. "Operating System Product" means an Operating System and additional software shipped with the Operating System, whether or not such additional software is marketed for a positive price. An Operating System Product includes Operating System Product upgrades that may be distributed separately from the Operating System Product.

u. "Operating Systems Business" means the development, licensing, promotion, and support of Operating System Products for computing devices including but not limited to (i) Personal Computers, (ii) other computers based on Intel x-86 or competitive microprocessors, such as servers, (iii) handheld devices such as personal digital assistants and cellular telephones, and (iv) television set-top boxes.

v. "Personal Computer" means any computer configured so that its primary purpose is to be used by one person at a time, that uses a video display and keyboard (whether or not the video display and keyboard are actually included), and that contains an Intel x86, successor, or competitive microprocessor, and computers that are commercial substitutes for such computers.

w. "Plaintiff" means the United States or any of the plaintiff States in this action.

x. "Plan" means the final plan of reorganization approved by the Court.

y. "Platform Software" means an Operating System or Middleware or a combination of an Operating System and Middleware.

z. "Remaining Business" means whichever of the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Businesses is not transferred to a separate entity pursuant to the Plan.

aa. "Separated Business" means whichever of the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Businesses is transferred to a separate entity pursuant to the Plan.

bb. "Technical Information" means all information, regarding the identification and means of using APIs and Communications Interfaces, that competent software developers require to make their products running on any computer interoperate effectively with Microsoft Platform Software running on a Personal Computer. Technical information includes but is not limited to reference implementations, communications protocols, file formats, data formats, syntaxes and grammars, data structure definitions and layouts, error codes, memory allocation and deallocation conventions, threading and synchronization conventions, functional specifications and descriptions, algorithms for data translation or reformatting (including compression/ decompression algorithms and encryption/decryption algorithms), registry settings, and field contents.

cc. "Timely Manner": disclosure of APIs, Technical Information and Communications Interfaces in a timely manner means, at a minimum, publication on a web site accessible by ISVs, IHVs, and OEMs at the earliest of the time that such APIs, Technical Information, or Communications Interfaces are (1) disclosed to Microsoft's applications developers, (2) used by Microsoft's own Platform Software developers in software released by Microsoft in alpha, beta, release candidate, final or other form, (3) disclosed to any third party, or (4) within 90 days of a final release of a Windows Operating System Product, no less than 5 days after a material change is made between the most recent beta or release candidate version and the final release.

dd. "Windows Operating System Product" means software code (including source code and binary code, and any other form in which Microsoft distributes its Windows Operating Systems for Personal Computers) of Windows 95, Windows 98, Windows 2000 Professional, and their successors, including the Windows Operating Systems for Personal Computers codenamed "Millennium," "Whistler," and "Blackcomb," and their successors.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P., CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY, INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 5:98CV-108-R

CONWOOD'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Defendants (collectively, "UST") suggest that injunctive relief is discretionary and unnecessary. It is neither. After the jury's finding of unlawful monopolization by UST, the Court "has the duty to compel action by [UST] that will, so far as practicable, cure the ill effects of the illegal conduct, and assure the public freedom from its continuance." United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 340 U.S. 76, 88 (1950) (reversing with order to strengthen decree) (emphasis added).[1] Conwood need not show "irreparable injury," only that UST's misconduct is likely to continue. And that is conceded: UST has announced that it will persist in the misconduct that caused hundreds of millions of dollars in damages to Conwood and higher prices for consumers. While UST invites Conwood to file further lawsuits as

[1] Accord United States v. Glaxo Group, Ltd., 410 U.S. 52, 64 (1973); Schine Chain Theatres, Inc. v. United States, 334 U.S. 110, 128-29 (1948); International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U.S. 392, 400-01 (1947); International Distrib. Ctrs., Inc. v. Walsh Trucking Co., No. 82 Civ. 8709, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 8, 1986).

UST's new violations mount, that is no answer. Conwood and the public are entitled to have UST's unlawful conduct stopped; that is the very purpose of the Clayton Act's provision for injunctive relief. (Point I).

The proposed injunction is simple and straightforward, and neither impermissibly vague nor overbroad. It requires UST to concern itself with its own products, advertising, and displays, and to leave competitors alone. Thus, it addresses only conduct that is indefensible, and proscribes nothing that is even arguably procompetitive. Only by ignoring the actual language of the proposed injunction -- which, tellingly, it never cites -- can it even attempt to argue vagueness or overbreadth. (Points II and III).

Nor is there substance to UST's complaint about the injunction's supposedly undue "intrusion" into its affairs. The prohibition against manipulation of competitors' products, displays, and advertising intrudes not at all, and the modest requirement of board of directors oversight is both commonplace and highly deferential to UST's self-governance; the Court would be fully justified in going much farther. (Point IV).

Finally, UST does not (and cannot) cite any valid basis for denying needed relief during the 2 to 3 years it expects to consume in the pursuit of appeals. Indeed, UST does not even try to meet the Sixth Circuit standard for a stay pending appeal. It has not demonstrated likelihood of success on the merits of its appeal, irreparable injury, the absence of any harm to third persons if the stay is granted, or a public interest favoring the entry of a stay. Under controlling law it must establish all of the above. UST's alternative request for a 30-day stay so that it can attempt at leisure to find grounds for a stay to present to the Sixth Circuit should be rejected out of hand. (Point V).

I. CONWOOD HAS MET THE STANDARD FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

UST's central argument is that the Court has the discretion to "deny relief for lack of irreparable harm alone." UST Mem. at 7. This is simply wrong. The Sixth Circuit has held that "irreparable harm" is not a required element for permanent (as opposed to temporary) injunctive relief in antitrust cases. Instead, a plaintiff may obtain permanent injunctive relief "simply by demonstrating that a 'significant threat of injury from an impending violation of the antitrust laws or from a contemporary violation likely to continue or recur.'" Stone v. William Beaumont Hosp., 782 F.2d 609, 617 (6th Cir. 1986) (quoting Bender v. Southland Corp., 748 F.2d 1205, 1214 (6th Cir. 1984)).[2]

---

[2]Accord Zenith Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 132 (1969) ("A federal court has broad power to restrain acts which are of the same type or class as unlawful acts which the court has found to have been committed or whose commission in the future, unless enjoined, may be fairly anticipated from the defendant's conduct in the past." (internal quotation marks omitted)); ABA, Antitrust Law Developments (Fourth) 799 (1997) ("By the permanent relief phase of the proceeding, the court has already determined that an antitrust violation occurred and there is no need to apply the preliminary injunction standard of 'likelihood of success on the merits.' Rather, the only material issue that remains is whether the plaintiff can show that it is threatened with loss or damage arising out of the illegal conduct or a cognizable danger that past or existing violations will continue or recur." (footnotes omitted)).

There is no question that UST's antitrust violations are likely to continue. It has admitted as much, in its defiance of the verdict[3] and in its public pronouncements that it plans to continue all of the practices at issue.[4] That alone would be sufficient showing for the requested injunction.[5] But there is more; Conwood has evidence that UST has made good on its post-trial threats, and continues to use the very same pernicious tactics the jury found unlawful. See, e.g., Williams Decl. ¶ 3 (Exh. B); Conwood Sales Force Decls. (Exh. C). In these circumstances, it would be an abuse of discretion to fail to provide injunctive relief.[6]

---

[3]"As this Court is fully aware, U.S. Tobacco continues to hold firm to the position that none of its conduct violates Section 2 of the Sherman Act." UST Mem. at 18.

A (compiling post-trial public comments, including statement that UST did nothing more than "engage[] in ordinary marketing practices," that "the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than . . . normal," and that, despite judgment, UST "will continue to provide you with the same level of service . . . and the same fine programs").

[5]See, e.g., Blue Cross & Blue Shield United v. Marshfield Clinic, 883 F. Supp. 1247, 1263 (W.D. Wis. 1995) (defendants' continued denials of wrongdoing after trial give rise to "threat that the defendants will continue to violate the antitrust laws"); Wilk v. American Med. Ass'n, 895 F.2d 352, 367 (7th Cir. 1990) (same).

[6]Defendants' only authority demonstrates as much. In Barrett v. Fields, 941 F. Supp. 980, 983 (D. Kan. 1996), a Kansas trial court case concerning a conspiracy to divide the county car-towing business, it was undisputed that a "new 1995 policy" implemented by the Sheriff (rotating towing assignments) put an end to the illegal practices. Accordingly, the court there found no threat of future harm to the plaintiff and entered no injunction. Id. at 983, 984. But the court also made plain that the existence of evidence of a threatened recurrence would warrant an injunction. Id. at 984 & n.5.

16diii006110

The possibility of an endless cycle of Conwood damages actions is likewise no valid reason to deny the injunctive relief required by the Clayton Act. Were that sufficient, there would never be injunctive relief in antitrust cases. But that is not the law.[7] Moreover, Conwood damages actions provide no relief for consumers and competition. Yet, the Court is expressly obligated to consider "the high purpose of enforcing the antitrust laws" in preventing harm to consumers and competition. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. at 131. Indeed, the Court has "the duty" to issue an injunction that "cure[s] the ill effects of the illegal conduct, and assure[s] the public freedom from its continuance." United States Gypsum, 340 U.S. at 88. See also note 1, supra (citing additional cases).

UST's unlawful monopolization has resulted in higher prices,[8] reduced output available to consumers,[9] reduced brand choice,[10]

---

[7]The only case cited by UST in its effort to suggest that future damages actions might be sufficient, Bennett, was in fact decided on a different basis: the court declined to issue an injunction because it found no evidence of likely recurrence, a finding simply not possible here. 941 F. Supp. at 983, 984. The Kansas court's dicta about future damages suits should carry little weight in light of the squarely contrary Supreme Court holdings. See note 1, supra.

II. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION PROPERLY DEFINES WHAT IS PROHIBITED, AND IS NOT "IMPERMISSIBLY VAGUE"

Conwood has proposed an injunction that, in essence, prohibits the abuses proved at trial by placing competitors' products, displays, and advertising off limits to the monopolist. Specifically, Conwood has proposed that UST shall not (a) "manipulate any competitor's smokeless tobacco products, vending systems, [or] . . . 'point of sale' advertising," or (b) "induce . . . other persons" to do the same. Proposed Order § I.

Tellingly, UST argues that the proposed injunction is "vague" without once citing its actual terms. Thus, it suggests it is "unclear" from Section I.A of the proposed injunction whether retailers may make "their own, independent decisions to use a U.S. Tobacco rack to house all moist snuff." UST Mem. at 10. In fact, there is no fair reading of the injunction that could conceivably prohibit such independent decisions. By its plain terms, the proposed injunction bars only UST -- not the independent retailer -- from manipulating rival companies' property without permission.[13] UST has not offered a single genuine ambiguity; while it does not agree with the restrictions on its conduct, including restrictions on its manipulation of [13]Similarly, UST complains that Section I.B of the injunction is "so patently vague" that it might even preclude UST representatives from designing or commenting on a suggested plan-o-gram. UST Mem. at 11. But nothing in Section I.B's language remotely restricts UST personnel from designing or commenting on suggested plan-o-grams for its own products. It does, however, plainly prevent UST from influencing retailers to delete rival products. Again, there is nothing vague here, and UST's complaint seems to be more about the substance of the restriction on its ability to continue its proven anticompetitive conduct.

rivals' property, it cannot validly argue that it is in the dark about the scope of those restrictions.

The proposed injunction is therefore appropriately drafted. In crafting an injunction, "elaborate detail is unnecessary and even may be undesirable . . . . [T]he court should be specific, direct, and to the point" so that reasonable persons can understand the Court's directive. 11A Charles Alan Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2955, at 312-13 (2d ed. 1995). Injunctions far more succinct than Conwood's proposal routinely pass judicial scrutiny.[14] Indeed, not one of the cases cited by UST suggests that the proposed injunction is inappropriate; each stands at most for the unremarkable proposition that a trial court may not rotely repeat broad statutory commands in the form of an injunction -- something that is indisputably not the case here.[15]

[14]See, e.g., United States v. V-1 Oil Co., 63 F.3d 909 (9th Cir. 1995) (rejecting vagueness challenge and upholding sweeping injunction requiring defendant to accede to warrantless searches "for the purpose of enforcing the [Hazardous Material Transportation Act]," and explaining that injunctions will not be overturned on appeal "unless they are so vague that they have no reasonably specific meaning" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

[15]See City of Mishawaka v. American Elec. Power Co., 616 F.2d 976, 991-92 (7th Cir. 1980) (rejecting injunction provision that merely restated "the broad language of Section 2 of the Sherman Act" and provision that simply required defendant to "treat all its customers fairly, equitably, and on a nondiscriminatory basis"); Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., No. LR-C-95-781, ¶ 18 (E.D. Ark. Oct. 16, 1998) (rejecting injunction that would bar "any policy or program the purpose or intent of which is to create artificial barriers to entry or expansion"); Hartford-Empire Co. v. United States, 323 U.S. 386, 410 (1945) (explaining that "[t]he decree must not be so vague as to put the whole conduct of the defendants' business at the peril of a summons for contempt; [or] enjoin all possible breaches of the law" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

III. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION PROPERLY ADDRESSES UST'S UNLAWFUL CONDUCT AND IS NOT "OVERBROAD"

After first professing inability to understand what the proposed injunction prohibits, UST does an about face and claims that it understands perfectly and objects because the injunction covers too much. But under the Sherman Act the Court must completely eliminate the unlawful conduct -- even if that does mean incidentally foreclosing related lawful conduct. See, e.g., United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., 334 U.S. 131, 148 (1948) ("equity has the power to uproot all parts of an illegal scheme -- the valid as well as the invalid -- in order to rid the trade or commerce of all taint" of the illegal conduct); National Soc'y of Prof'l Eng'rs v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 698 (1978) (otherwise lawful conduct may be enjoined if it "represents a reasonable method of eliminating the consequences of the illegal conduct" or its resumption); United States Gypsum Co., 340 U.S. at 89 (relief may "range broadly through practices connected with acts actually found to be illegal").[16]

Accordingly, the Court can and should prohibit otherwise lawful conduct if it "represents a reasonable method of eliminating the consequences of the illegal conduct" or

[16] See also International Salt, 332 U.S. at 400-01 ("When the purpose to restrain trade appears from a clear violation of law, it is not necessary that all of the untraveled roads to that end be left open and that only the worn one be closed. The usual ways to the prohibited goal may be blocked against the proven transgressor and the burden put upon him to bring any proper claims for relief to the court's attention."); United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 366 U.S. 316, 327 (1961) (In choosing "among two or more effective [antitrust] remedies[,] [i]f the remedy chosen is not effective, it will not be saved because an effective remedy would entail harsh consequences. This proposition is not novel; it is deeply rooted in antitrust law and has never been successfully challenged.").

preventing its resumption. National Soc'y of Prof'l Eng'rs, 435 U.S. at 698. Accord United States v. National Lead Co., 332 U.S. 319, 335 (1947) ("The essential consideration is that the remedy shall be effective and fair as possible in preventing continued or future violations of the Antitrust Act in the light of the facts of the particular case."); International Salt, 334 U.S. at 400; DuPont, 366 U.S. at 327; United States v. Loew's, Inc., 371 U.S. 38, 53 (1962) ("When [a party] has won the lawsuit, it is entitled to win the cause as well.").[17]

Here, however, the proposed injunction is far narrower than is required, and does nothing to restrain or impede legitimate competition by UST or anyone else.

A. UST asserts that the development of new racks, POS, products, and incentive programs "could easily fit within the proposed injunction." UST Mem. at 13-14. But UST never explains how and never points to any language in the proposed injunction

---

[17]Defendants' overbreadth claims are undermined by the cases they cite. For example, in Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 162 F.2d 520 (7th Cir. 1947), the court of appeals went out of its way to explain that trial courts may impose restraints not only on "acts committed under the conspiracy," but also "impose such further restraints as would prevent an evasion. All doubts [are to be] resolved in favor of the plaintiff." Id. at 523. A decree may enjoin not only illegal conduct, but other conduct that "became tainted by illegality," given the way defendants employed it. Id. A decree "may very properly be used to destroy the [illegal conduct] root, branch, and all its evil fruits." Id. at 524. The only thing an injunction may not do, the court held, is impose on a defendant competitive restraints unrelated to the conspiracy that simply "preserve the evil in the interest of the plaintiff." Id. Likewise, in Loew's, the Supreme Court expanded the injunction issued by lower courts to cover facially lawful, but potentially abusive, conduct in order "to ensure . . . that relief is effectual, otherwise permissible practices connected with the acts found to be illegal must sometimes be enjoined." 371 U.S. at 53.

that could be so construed. In fact, nothing in the proposed injunction affects UST's ability to develop and support its own products, POS, and racks.[18] Likewise, nothing prevents UST from developing incentive programs to secure the placement of its own products, POS, and racks (like the programs implemented by Swisher and Conwood), as opposed to programs used to restrain or exclude competition.[19]

B. UST complains that the proposed injunction would preclude "perfectly normal" conduct like (i) exclusive vending, (ii) SOF=SOM, and (iii) making "recommendations" to exclude rival products. UST Mem. at 14-15. There is, of course, nothing "perfectly normal" about any of these practices. Indeed, Gary Milano, UST's Vice President of Sales, testified that exclusive vending was improper: "It wouldn't be proper for [a] representative to try and have exclusive vending in the stores." 3/7/00 Tr. at 25. Mr. Milano likewise admitted that UST had no legitimate need for SOF=SOM. 3/6/00 Tr. at 81-82. And he conceded that it was not appropriate for UST employees to recommend the deletion of competitive brands. 3/6/00 Tr. at 113. Understandably, the properly instructed jury rejected defense counsel's subsequent argument that such conduct is "normal." The proposed injunction is carefully tailored to prevent recurrence

[18]The injunction proscribes only efforts by UST to manhandle other companies' property and induce retailers to limit rival distribution -- actions that lack any procompetitive virtue and that the record showed UST plainly abused to exclude competition.

[19]See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 98-99 (Gundlach testifying that UST's Customer Alliance Program ("CAP") contains a variety of "exclusionary feature[s]," such as exclusion of competitive POS and reduced visibility of competitive brands.); PXs 112C, 112D, 112F, 112O (expressly conditioning CAP payments on exclusion).

of these abusive practices while leaving ample room for UST to compete fairly.

(i) Given the extensive record at trial showing how UST used exclusive vending to restrict competitive distribution, thwart price-value brand introductions, and eliminate rival POS,[20] it would be entirely permissible for the Court to ban exclusive vending entirely as the most "effective" remedy to prevent "continued or future violations" of the antitrust laws. National Lead, 332 U.S. at 335.

Conwood's proposal is, however, far more modest. Under the proposed injunction a retailer remains free to make an independent decision to implement exclusive vending. UST is even free to place the new vendor, as well as its own POS and product. The proposed injunction (§ I.A) simply provides that, if rival products and POS are to be incorporated into the UST vendor, the retailer or the rival should perform this function rather than UST. In fact, the proposed injunction even permits UST to perform this service too -- with the permission of the rival, and

[20] See, e.g., PX 4 ("Our objective with exclusive vending rights . . . is to control expanded competitive distribution and competitive P.O.S."); PX 268 ("I have exclusive vending rights and have eliminated most all of any serious distribution of Conwood brands. I should be well under 10% of competitive distribution in my chains."); Hart Dep. at 15-16 (former UST rep testifying that his supervisors told him to persuade stores to use UST racks exclusively and to remove or reduce Conwood facings because, "if we didn't keep control . . . they would get a higher percent of the market share"); Marconi Dep. at 11-13 (same); Borrowdale Dep. at 16 (same); Ulizio Dep. at 23-24 ("[t]he program was to go through every account, pull out every display, whether it was good or bad," leaving Conwood, "a slot or two, or possibly three, connected to ours"); Naifeh Dep. at 30-32 (engaged in same conduct at supervisor's behest); Keil Dep. at 15-17 (same).

such permission may not be unreasonably withheld.[21] The proposed injunction is thus narrowly drafted to address the specific abuses proved at trial, and does not in any way stifle legitimate competitive activity.[22]

(ii) "SOF=SOM" is one of the means UST used to "control competition," according to its own documents. PX 9. UST's counsel now protests that SOF=SOM is legitimate and procompetitive. But at trial UST's executives conceded that

[21]In the past, UST and other manufacturers have performed rack resets in this fashion -- working cooperatively to conform a rival's display to the independent retailer's request. 3/3/00 Tr. at 111-12 (Willding); 3/9/00 Tr. at 218-19 (Hettinger); 3/14/00 Tr. at 104 (Luckett); see also Williams Decl. ¶¶ 5-7 (Exh. B). UST's passing suggestion that "cooperation" to conform a rack to the retailer's independent mandate may constitute an antitrust violation is specious and unsupported by a single authority. Moreover, if there were any genuine concerns along these lines, the proper course would not be to drop the injunction altogether but simply to bar UST outright from tampering with rival property, excising from Section I.A the language beginning with "except with the prior written permission . . . ."

[22]While UST complains that it will be unable to discard rivals' "damaged or shopworn racks and/or POS" and "out-of-date or stale products," UST Mem. at 10, nothing in the injunction prevents retailers from removing these items. Rival manufacturers have every incentive to do the same. Williams Decl. ¶¶ 6-7 (Exh. B). And UST may even discard rivals' property with their advance permission. Once again, UST does not (and cannot) explain why it needs to have the unilateral right to remove and tamper with other companies' property without permission. And the record shows that UST has used and continues to use these tactics to exclude. See, e.g., 3/9/00 Tr. at 189-94 (Hettinger testifying that UST bagged up hundreds of fresh cans of Conwood product and removed thousands of racks); 3/8/00 Tr. at 200-04 (Hynek: same); id. at 155-59 (Dring: same); 3/10/00 Tr. at 53-54, 84 (Williams: same); PX 16 ("better for [Conwood] to be lost in our vending than to have their own and no point of sale on the vendor"); PX 27 (Conwood products deleted and factings removed. "All competitors' vendors have been replaced by UST vendors.").

policy has literally "no effect" on its sales.[23] And UST's documents and former sales representatives revealed that the company used the tactic solely to exclude competition, especially nascent price-value brands.[24] However legitimate when employed by other companies in other industries -- and there is no evidence that it is legitimate anywhere by anyone -- there is no question that UST used SOF=SOM as an unlawful exclusionary tactic and, accordingly, should be enjoined. See Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 405 U.S. 562, 573 (1972) (means a court uses to restore competition depends on "the special needs of the individual case").

(iii) UST complains that it will not be allowed to "recommend" the deletion of rival products. UST Mem. at 15. But it has no credible argument -- much less authority -- for the notion that an 80% monopolist should be permitted to use its power to "recommend" deletion of competitors. The evidence at trial proved that UST used its market "clout," its position as category captain (which it alone can secure because of its dominant market power[25]), and related "incentives" to encourage retail stores to eliminate facings and advertising opportunities for rivals.[26] In making its "recommendations," UST even resorted on a systematic basis to using false and misleading information.[27] And its "recommendations" were often intentionally targeted at stunting price-value competition.[28]

While UST should be permitted to promote its own products, and to recommend additions (or deletions) of those products, even where such additions lead to deletions of competitive products, the monopolist should not be permitted -- independent of any efforts to promote its products -- deliberately and specifically to impair the opportunities of rivals. That is all the proposed injunction prohibits. Conwood's restriction is, thus, appropriately and narrowly tailored to the needs of this case.

C. UST asserts that issuing an injunction would insulate Conwood from normal competition. UST Mem. at 16. But normal competition is exactly what Conwood seeks, and the "examples" UST cites belie its claim. UST complains, for instance, that the proposed injunction would preclude retailers from being able to obtain category management services. To the contrary, nothing in the injunction bars UST from performing such services.[29]

D. UST asserts that the proposed injunction "binds" independent retailers and treats their decisions as "conspiratorial." UST Mem. at 17-18. Tellingly, however, defendants point to no language in the proposed injunction that would so operate. Nor can they. The proposed injunction is expressly "enforceable against all defendants in this lawsuit." Proposed Order at 4. The proposed injunction does also apply to "other persons, affiliated or acting in concert with" defendants. Id. But this language is designed to cover defendants' agents, in order to ensure that UST does not attempt to pursue indirectly illegal acts that it is forbidden to pursue directly.[30]

[29]UST is not precluded from performing any of the central functions of a category captain: making product selection recommendations about its own products or the addition of rival products, from offering category displays for its products and even rival products, from promoting its products or the entire category, or from providing labor to perform resets. 3/13/00 Tr. at 209-10 (Blattberg enumerating category captain functions). UST is forbidden only from seeking to delete rival products and handling their property -- neither of which are essential to category captain functions. Id. at 223, 246 (Blattberg describing UST's behavior on both scores as "abuses" of category management).

[30]For example, manufacturers sometimes pay independent "manufacturer representatives" to represent them with retailers in certain areas, rather than endure the expense of maintaining a sales force there. Williams Decl. ¶ 4 (Exh. B). UST should not be encouraged to use such agents as a way around the Court's

Indeed, Conwood's proposed language is drawn from other injunctions proposed and approved in analogous circumstances. See, e.g., International Distrib. Ctrs., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701, at *24 (proscribing conduct by defendant and "all persons acting in aid of, or in concert with, them"); Plaintiffs' Proposed Final Judgment, United States v. Microsoft Corp., Civ. Action Nos. 98-1232, 98-1233 (D.D.C. filed Apr. 28, 2000), available at http://www.usdoj.gov/atr/cases/f4600/4639.htm (Exh. D) (¶ 6b: order applies to "all other persons in active concert or participation with any of" defendants).

IV. THE PROPOSED INJUNCTION IS NOT "UNDULY INTRUSIVE"

Finally, UST objects to the proposed injunction on the ground that it would unreasonably intrude into its operations. But it can point to no such intrusion.

While UST complains that it would have to obtain permission from rivals before manipulating their products, displays or advertising, it gives no sound reason why that is burdensome or inappropriate. The alternative, obviously, is flat prohibition. But Conwood has sought to tailor the request to allow for flexibility, and the requirement of consent is both commonsense and commonplace. Williams Decl. ¶ 5 (Exh. B). It was UST's legerdemain over the property of its rivals that, in large measure, provided the mechanism through which UST unlawfully monopolized the moist snuff market. It cannot credibly argue that it should have the right to exercise such dominion. It should do so only with permission. Accordingly, there is no injunction. Nothing in this language is designed to, or would, cover "independent, uncoerced retailers" that, by definition, are not acting in concert with it.

16diii006123

basis for thinking this procedure to be "unduly intrusive" on anyone.

UST also protests the creation of a new Board of Directors committee to enforce internal compliance with the Court's order, as well as the mandate that it produce annual compliance reports, maintain relevant corporate records, and provide notice to customers and training to employees. UST Mem. at 20. But UST nowhere explains why any of these provisions would be unduly onerous. Neither does (or can) UST dispute that each of these provisions would materially further compliance by an (admittedly) recalcitrant and unrepentant UST.

Significantly, UST cites no court that has rejected such modest measures as "unduly intrusive"; in fact, the proposed injunction is far less "intrusive" than injunctions entered by courts in cases where the conduct was far less pervasive than the exclusion proved at trial in this case. See, e.g., International Distrib. Ctrs., Inc., 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30701, at *32 (ordering defendant to file quarterly reports and affidavits with the court; to generate and send to plaintiff internal accounting statements on a quarterly basis; to notify plaintiff in advance of any planned sale or transfer; to inform its employees of the terms of the injunction and develop a compliance training program; to provide annual accounts of "all steps" taken in the preceding year to "discharge its obligations" under the court's order); Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 911 F. Supp. 510, 512 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (approving "affirmative steps" including the "educat[ion] [of defendants'] employees about the Sherman Act's" requirements and the "adopti[on] [of] personnel policies and procedures"); Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 684 F. Supp. 950, 953 (N.D. Ohio 1987) (court retaining jurisdiction "for such further orders or directions as may be necessary" and "for the enforcement of compliance herewith, and for the punishment of any violation"); Image Technical Servs., Inc. v. V. UST HAS NOT MET (AND CANNOT MEET) THE STANDARDS REQUIRED FOR A TEMPORARY STAY

Defendants ask the Court for a stay pending appeal. But they cite no similar antitrust case in which a court has denied effective and timely injunctive relief so that a defendant can continue the misconduct while the case is on appeal. Besides, under Sixth Circuit law, the party seeking a stay is obligated to show that it is likely (1) to prevail on the merits of the appeal; (2) to be irreparably harmed absent a stay; (3) other parties will not be harmed if the court grants the stay; (4) the public interest will be advanced by a stay. Michigan Coalition of Radioactive Material Users, Inc. v. Griepentrog, 945 F.2d 150, 153 (6th Cir. 1991); Ohio ex rel. Celebrezze v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm'n, 812 F.2d 288, 290 (6th Cir. 1987). UST has shown none of these things, much less all of them.

First, while granting that UST believes it will win on appeal, its appellate issues are mere retreads of arguments

---

[31] See also Plaintiffs' Proposed Final Judgment, Microsoft (Exh. D) (Government's proposed injunction requiring, inter alia, creation of a "compliance committee" of Microsoft's board of directors (§ 4); development of internal programs to ensure compliance with Section 2 (id.); and maintenance and access to relevant records (§ 5)).

16diii006125

soundly rejected by the Court many times -- on summary judgment, on two directed verdict motions, and in pre-trial in limine motions practice. The Court conducted an error-free trial, and, as fully discussed elsewhere, UST's familiar arguments do not come close to demonstrating otherwise. See Pls.' Opp. to Defs' Mot. for Judgment, New Trial, or Remittitur (Apr. 30, 2000).

Second, UST makes no effort to present any evidence that it would be irreparably harmed by the proposed injunction. Instead, it rests on the bare assertion that its "foregoing discussion" somehow "demonstrates" impending irreparable injury. UST Mem. at 22. That "discussion" is no substitute for the evidence UST bears the burden of producing. See Ohio ex rel. Celebrezze, 812 F.2d at 290 (in evaluating the claimed harm, court looks to "the adequacy of the proof provided" and will not award relief when harm is "speculative or theoretical"). More fundamentally, UST's only imaginable "harm" in this case is some (unspecified) reduction in its $1 billion annual profits. The Sixth Circuit has repeatedly held that such financial injury cannot qualify as "irreparable harm." Id.; see Griepentrog, 945 F.2d at 154 ("[m]ere injuries, however substantial, in terms of money, time and energy necessarily expended in the absence of a stay, are not enough").

UST does not even address the two remaining prongs on which it bears the burden of proof: showing that a stay would cause no harm to other persons and that a stay is in the public interest. In fact, a stay would harm other persons and grossly offend the public interest. UST has confirmed again and again that it will not change its unlawful conduct absent a direct court order. If a stay is granted, both competition and consumers will be harmed through the continuation of conduct already adjudged to offend the antitrust laws -- conduct that has resulted in higher consumer prices, lower output, reduced brand choice, harm to other existing competitors (not just Conwood), and increased barriers to entry. It is beyond argument, therefore, that a stay would harm Conwood, other moist snuff competitors, consumers, and the public interest as well.

Absent a stay pending appeal, UST asks the Court to issue at least a 30-day stay so that it can prepare "affidavits and any other supporting documents" at its leisure for a second try before the Sixth Circuit. UST cites no authority for the procedure it contemplates. What it seeks, in substance, is a temporary restraining order without having to make any of the legal showings necessary to obtain one. In any event, UST had ample time to prepare its case; it is telling that it cannot identify for this Court any of the materials it now says it needs 30 days to assemble for the Sixth Circuit. The issue of injunctive relief has been present in this case from the outset. See Prayer for Relief, Conwood Complaint (Apr. 22, 1998) (seeking permanent injunctive relief). If the Court determines that injunctive relief is necessary and appropriate -- as it should, given the evidence before it -- the Court should move forthwith to restore fair competition to the moist snuff market.

16diii006127

Conclusion

Conwood's motion for permanent injunctive relief should be granted.

UST REPORTS FIRST QUARTER 2000 RESULTS

GREENWICH, Conn., April 20, 2000 – UST Inc. (NYSE:UST) today announced that first quarter 2000 net sales increased 5% to $368.3 million, net earnings declined 6% to $102.0 million and earnings per share of $.62 increased 3% compared to the corresponding 1999 period.

UST Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Vincent A. Gierer, Jr., stated: "The fundamentals of our core businesses are on track. During the quarter we experienced higher than anticipated costs for legal fees, interest expense and a hedging loss related to the recent debt issuance. Without these charges, our earnings would have come in better than originally targeted."

Gierer continued, "Despite the continuing difficult environment for tobacco equities, we continue to be encouraged by the performance of our principal business, smokeless tobacco, which posted a net unit volume gain of 2% and, most importantly, the overall category continued to post solid growth. Looking forward to the remainder of the year, we expect the operations to continue to perform in accordance with our original plan. However, in light of the present uncertainty associated with the Conwood litigation, the Company's stated 2000 EPS growth target of 10% may not be achievable."

During the quarter, the Company repurchased 4.7 million shares at a cost of $97.5 million. The Company has suspended its share repurchase program pending further review after the post-trial motions in the Conwood litigation in Kentucky are decided.

Tobacco Segment

Tobacco segment revenue increased 4% to $324.2 million as a result of higher prices and a 2% increase in net smokeless tobacco unit volume to 152.5 million cans. Premium can sales were off slightly, while non-premium products contributed an additional 4.4 million cans in the quarter. Operating profit remained stable at $179.6 million, as the Company continued its accelerated spending plan started in the third quarter of 1999 in an effort to increase category growth.

Impacting Tobacco segment performance were legal expenses associated with the Conwood litigation. In addition, cost of sales increased over 12%, a result of higher federal excise taxes and higher leaf costs associated with the increased weight for Skoal Long Cut products.

Wine Segment

Wine segment revenue increased 15% to $37.1 million primarily due to a 12% increase in premium case sales, while operating profit increased 19% to $2.5 million.

The closing of the announced Guenoc acquisition has been delayed, pending the results of post-trial matters in the Conwood litigation. Costs associated with the acquisition in the amount of $.8 million were expensed during the quarter and negatively impacted the growth in operating profit.

Significant Developments

As previously announced, a jury in Paducah, Kentucky recently found that the Company's subsidiary, U.S. Tobacco Company, had violated the antitrust laws and awarded $350 million in damages to Conwood Company, L.P. As required by the antitrust laws, the award was trebled and a judgment in the amount of $1.05 billion was entered on March 29, 2000. The enforcement of the judgment is presently stayed while the court hears arguments as to the timing and amount of any bond to be required, as well as arguments on other matters relating to the case.

The Company strongly believes that the evidence presented at trial was insufficient to support the jury's findings and intends to take all actions necessary to vacate or reverse the judgment. The Company recently filed motions with the District Court seeking to have the court vacate the judgment as a matter of law or, in the alternative, order a new trial or reduce significantly the amount of the judgment. If the judgment is not vacated, or a new trial not ordered, the Company intends to appeal the judgment to the court of appeals.

The Company believes that the verdict should be vacated on the following grounds:

1. U.S. Tobacco lacks "monopoly power" under the instructions given to the jury;

2. U.S. Tobacco did not "use" or wield monopoly power in the marketplace, but rather engaged in ordinary marketing practices either used by or available to all competitors;

3. The moist snuff "market" was not harmed by any of U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct, and in fact was characterized by significantly increased competition during the 1990's under all relevant measures;

4. Conwood prospered in terms of sales and profits during the same time period; and

5. Conwood did not offer evidence, beyond mere "beliefs" and speculation of its own employees, that U.S. Tobacco's "exclusionary" conduct was a material cause of it "not doing better." In fact, the overwhelming evidence shows that the actual sources of Conwood's share stagnation were (a) the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers, (b) competition from other competitors and new brands, and © Conwood's own decisions not to compete in the ways desired by retailers.

In light of the Company's belief as to the merits of its case, the uncertainties associated with the post-trial process and the Company's belief that the amount of damages, if any, which may ultimately be imposed can not be reasonably estimated at this time, no charge relating to the judgment is reflected in the Company's financial statements.

For further information on post-trial motions filed by the Company with the court, please refer to our website at www.ustobacco.com.

UST, through its subsidiaries, is a leading producer and marketer of moist smokeless tobacco products including Copenhagen, Copenhagen Long Cut, Skoal, Skoal Long Cut, Skoal Bandits, Rooster and Red Seal. Other consumer products marketed by UST subsidiaries include premium wines sold nationally through the Chateau Ste. Michelle, Columbia Crest and Villa Mt. Eden wineries as well as sparkling wine produced under the Domaine Ste. Michelle label and premium cigars including Don Tomas, Don Tomas Special Edition, Astral and Habano Primero.

UNITED STATES TOBACCO
SALES and MARKETING COMPANY INC.
100 WEST PUTNAM AVENUE, GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT 06830

March 30, 2000

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

As many of you may already know, on Tuesday, March 28, 2000, a Kentucky jury rendered a verdict against United States Tobacco and awarded $350 million to the plaintiff, Conwood Company, L.P., for its claims under federal antitrust laws. The verdict, as required by the antitrust laws, has been trebled, resulting in a total award of over $1 billion.

United States Tobacco believes strongly that our moist snuff marketing and promotion programs do not violate the antitrust laws and we have already begun the steps necessary to have the award overturned or reversed on appeal. We believe that United States Tobacco, Conwood and other companies in the moist snuff business compete in a highly competitive marketplace, and that the actions complained of by Conwood are nothing more than part of normal, lawful, competitive conduct. In light of the evidence of this presented at trial, we believe the award was completely unjustified.

As this process continues, we will continue to provide you with the same level of service, the same fine products, and the same fine programs that you have come to expect of us. We appreciate your continued support, and will provide you with additional information as it becomes available.

EXHIBIT B

DECLARATION OF TERRY WILLIAMS

1. I, Terry Williams, am over the age of 18. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. ("Conwood") as the National Sales Manager. I have been employed by Conwood for the past 20 years as a sales representative, district sales supervisor, district manager, regional manager and assistant national sales manager prior to holding my current position.

2. In March, 2000, I gave sworn testimony in Paducah, KY concerning, among other things, the various sales and marketing problems encountered by Conwood everyday because of defendants ("UST").

3. After trial, I have continued to receive multiple reports every week of unauthorized rack removals by UST. In fact, there has been no significant reduction in the number of these reports since the trial concluded and I see no indication that UST has any intention of changing its conduct absent an injunction.

4. UST currently employs independent agents or brokers throughout the country to supplement its direct sales force. For example, UST uses military brokers to promote the sale of its products on military bases. UST also provides payments to distributors who will, in turn, have their employees represent the interests of UST when calling on retail stores. Further, manufacturers in other retail industries frequently hire independent brokers instead of incurring the expense of a sales force to sell and market their products. Conwood is concerned that UST could side-step any injunction directed only to its direct employees by using independent agents to continue its anti-competitive behavior.

5. In the moist snuff industry, it is possible for competing companies to work together and respect the property rights of one another. For example, when the buyer for a large retailer independently decides to reset the moist snuff section, all companies are sometimes notified and asked to attend the reset together. In such cases, the moist snuff companies then work side by side installing their own products, racks and point of sale advertising to ensure compliance with the buyer's instructions. Failure to act in a cordial and professional manner would reflect poorly on the respective companies and potentially jeopardize future business opportunities with the retailer.

6. Retailers are perfectly capable of handling, and do handle, problems with shopworn or broken racks, POS, and out-of-date product without relying on UST. For example, retailers can and do call the appropriate company's local sales representative, the manufacturer's headquarters, the local distributor, or their own chain's headquarters. All of these options are available for providing unbiased assistance with any problems the retailer encounters. In fact, Conwood maintains a customer service department and a consumer relations department for handling such problems.

7. Conwood has every incentive and desire to assist retailers in removing and replacing shopworn or damaged Conwood racks, POS, or out-of-date product. It is one of the central reasons Conwood maintains a large national sales force. Failure to assist retailers with such issues only jeopardizes our ability to maximize the sale of our own products, as well as retailer good will.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF LOU MARANO

1. I, Lou Marano, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative for the Philadelphia, PA territory. I have been employed in this position for the past 11 years. On February 28th, 2000, I gave sworn testimony in Paducah, KY concerning my problems with U.S. Tobacco ("UST") during my tenure with Conwood.

3. For the past six months, UST has been placing their extra-wide, green rack in stores throughout the Philadelphia metropolitan area. This practice continues today.

4. These green racks have individual slots which are larger than necessary to hold an individual can of moist snuff. As a result, each slot on the green rack takes up more counter space than is necessary to vend a moist snuff can. When 10 or 15 of these UST green rack slots are placed side by side on a counter or shelf, a significant amount of space is wasted.

5. With UST wasting space by using this green rack, I am finding it increasingly difficult to merchandise Conwood products in the space designated by stores for moist snuff sales. I believe UST is attempting to artificially limit the amount of space available to vend moist snuff to the detriment of its competitors.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF BARTEN GREEN

1. I, Barten Green, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative for the Tulsa, OK territory. I have held this position for the past 3 1/2 years.

3. Since the verdict against U.S. Tobacco ("UST"), I have had my racks and point of sale ("POS") advertising removed by UST at the Food-4-Less store in Tahlequah, OK. Furthermore, Conwood's products have been placed in a UST rack and beneath UST POS.

4. According to the UST planogram left behind at the store, UST will be the only moist snuff company allowed to place any racks or POS in the store due to its C.A.P. contract with the retailer. (see attached)

5. This situation has occurred at several other retail stores in my territory since the verdict.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

DECLARATION OF PAUL STICKLEY

1. I, Paul Stickley, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in Des Moines, IA. I have held this position for the past 6 1/2 years

3. Recently, I know of two separate occasions where U.S. Tobacco ("UST") has removed Conwood's rack from a store and eliminated its point of sale ("POS") advertising.

4. On May 1, 2000, I entered Sparky's One Stop convenience store in Stanhope, IA and discovered that Conwood's rack had been removed. I learned from the store manager that a UST representative had been in the store just one hour prior and had removed the rack himself.

5. As a result of UST removing Conwood's racks, I lost distribution on 2 Conwood products and had the number of Kodiak wintergreen facings reduced from 2 to 1. Further, Conwood's POS material was discarded along with the rack.

6. On May 9, 2000, I learned that Conwood's rack had been removed from the Swift Stop in Ames, IA in mid-March. During that time, UST had installed its own tobacco shelving unit which housed all moist snuff products. On one of the shelves, UST used one of its racks to merchandise all competitive moist products even though the existing Conwood rack was perfectly capable of fitting into the new UST shelving system. As a result of UST's conduct, Conwood lost a facing for Kodiak and all its POS advertising. Finally, the store manager allowed me to install another rack.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in Gaylord, Michigan. I have been employed in this position for the past two years.

3. I have experienced frequent unethical activity in my district. There has been no change in the level of unethical activity since the judgment in the lawsuit.

4. On April 6th, 2000, I called on the Sunrise Convenience Store in Houghton Lake, Michigan, a high volume account. I discovered that all of Conwood's racks had been removed and its product was placed in UST's green rack. Conwood previously had ten racks with eight brands in the store, with a full compliment of POS.

5. On April 26th, 2000, I called on the 4 Corners BP in Petoskey, Michigan. I discovered that all three Conwood racks had been removed, and the Conwood brands were placed in a UST rack without Conwood POS

6. The Conwood racks were out of the store for at least a month before I could replace them. The rack removals from this store resulted in substantial lost sales for Conwood.

7. On May, 10th, 2000, I called on the Holiday Gas Station in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. I discovered that the UST representative had recently removed all of Conwood's racks and POS, and placed our product into a UST rack.

1. I, John Carano, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a sales representative in McAlester, OK. I have held this position for the past 19 years.

3. In April of 2000, I had my moist snuff racks removed from two stores by U.S. Tobacco ("UST").

4. On April 13, 2000, I personally witnessed a UST sales representative's van parked at Wetumka Indian Smoke Shop store in Wetumka, OK. When Marty Stover, the UST representative exited the store, he informed me that he had removed Conwood's racks.

5. When I entered the store I received permission from the store manager to replace the removed Conwood rack immediately. In fact, the store manager stated that she didn't think it was right for Mr. Stover to have removed Conwood's rack in the first place.

6. In mid-April of 2000, Conwood's rack was removed from the Iron Post Smoke Shop in Sallisaw, OK. Prior to UST visiting the store in mid-April, all moist snuff companies had tall-profile style racks in the store. UST visited the store in April and then placed each company's products in the UST rack in a manner determined by UST . In addition to losing racks in this store, all Conwood point of sale ("POS") was removed from the moist section.

3. Since the judgment in the lawsuit, I have personally seen Conwood's racks moved to less desirable position in at least five stores in Lufkin and Nacogdoches, Texas. I am also aware that this has occurred in all 65 Brookshire Brothers stores in the chain. I believe that UST is responsible for rearranging the moist smokeless tobacco section in all of these stores.

4. Mike Due, the tobacco buyer for Brookshire Brothers grocery told me that the position changing by UST was not authorized by the chain.

5. I have received permission from Mike Due to return Conwood to the number one position all Brookshire Brothers grocery stores.

DECLARATION OF KIRK GLENN

1. I, Kirk Glenn, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district supervisor/key account manager for the Houston district. I have been employed in this position for the past 14 years.

3. Since the judgment in the lawsuit, I have continued to experience significant levels of unethical activity on military bases in my district.

4. The UST broker for military bases in the San Antonio area has been telling commissary and exchange managers that UST would be providing them a new rack.

5. At the Randolph Air Force Base Exchange all 12 Conwood racks were removed and replaced in a UST rack.

6. At the Randolph Air Force Base Commissary all four Conwood racks containing two Conwood brands were removed and replaced with two facings for two products in UST racks.

7. At the Kelly Air Force Base gas station, Conwood had nine racks holding six of its brands in the account. All nine racks were removed by UST, and its product was placed in four UST slots for only four brands. This resulted in five lost facings for Conwood. The remaining Conwood product was placed behind the racks.

8. At the Kelly Air Force Base Shoppette, Conwood had approximately 12 racks, for six of its brands placed in the account. UST removed the Conwood racks and placed the product in eight slots for six brands in a UST rack, a loss of four Conwood facings.

9. At the Lackland Air Force Base Commissary, Conwood had four racks for two of its brands placed in the account. UST removed Conwood's racks from the store and placed Conwood's product in two slots for two brands in a UST rack. This resulted in the loss of two Conwood facings.

10. In all instances UST placed the Conwood product into its new wide "green racks."

11. All of Conwood's POS was removed with its racks in each case.

12. On these military bases, Conwood's brand, Cougar sells for $1.00 per can, so POS is a necessity to make customers aware of its value price. This price information was printed on the header cards that were removed with Conwood's racks.

13. I was told by a UST broker that they were "cleaning up" the moist smokeless tobacco sections on the bases because UST personnel would be coming around soon to check on the sections.

14. Conwood racks were replaced in each account after receiving permission from the various managers involved. Two full working days were spent replacing racks in these accounts. Replacing racks in military accounts is more time consuming than ordinary retail accounts due to the high level of security on military bases.

15. Military bases are very high volume, and it is a large detriment to Conwood when its racks are out of the accounts.

16. All of this activity occurred on or around April 9, 2000, and was discovered by me between Arpil 11th and April 13th, 2000.

DECLARATION OF JERRY MCKEON

1. I, Jerry McKeon, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district manager for the Pittsburgh, PA district. I have held this position with Conwood since 1993.

3. On May 5, 2000, I learned that the Giant Eagle supermarket in Pittsburgh, PA had accepted U S Tobacco's ("UST") proposal to use one of UST's racks exclusively in all 165 stores.

4 As a result of UST's proposal, Conwood has lost distribution on 5 brands and is not allowed to place their own racks for the remaining Conwood products By losing the ability to place its rack, Conwood also loses the ability to place important point of sale ("POS") advertising.

5. During the first week of May, 2000, I also received reports from one of my salespersons that UST is continuing to remove Conwood racks from a variety of retail stores in Washington County, PA. As a result, Conwood loses its ability to vend its products in a professional manner and loses valuable POS advertising.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

DECLARATION OF RICK WOODALL

1. I, Rick Woodall, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed as a sales representative for Conwood Sales Co., L.P. in Lawton, OK. I have held this position for the past 12 years.

3. For the month of April, 2000, I have documented 98 Conwood racks "disappearing" from retail stores and being replaced by U.S. Tobacco ("UST") racks. In addition to the racks being removed, point of sale ("POS") advertising is also missing and 90% of the time only UST POS remains.

4. Along with Conwood racks disappearing in April, other companies such as Swedish-Match and Swisher also have their racks removed from stores by UST.

6. I have had similar problems with UST for years. I have not noticed any change in their behavior since the verdict this past March.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

DECLARATION OF GENE ROGERS

1. I, Gene Rogers, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district manager for south Georgia. I have held this position for the past 11 years.

3. Recently, a 48 store chain in Douglass, GA called Quick Change was approached by U.S. Tobacco ("UST") and, I believe, presented with a schematic which would house all moist snuff products in a UST rack.. As a result of UST's efforts, Conwood lost products.

4. When this plan was implemented in April of 2000, Conwood lost distribution on 2 Cougar brands and Hawken, and lost 2 of 3 facings for Kodiak wintergreen.

5. Kodiak is the number 2 selling brand at this chain but was reduced from 3 to 1 facings for its merchandising. UST's Skoal fine cut, however, is the number 4 selling brand in the chain but UST dedicated 2 facings for its merchandising.

6. Also included in the UST recommended schematic was UST's Rooster brand which has not sold as well in the past as some of the deleted Conwood brands such as Hawken and Cougar fine cut wintergreen.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

DECLARATION OF DOUG HYNEK

1. I, Doug Hynek, am over the age of 18.

2. I am currently employed by Conwood Sales Co., L.P. as a district sales manager for the Minneapolis, MN district. I have held this position since 1993.

3. In March of 2000, I testified in Paducah, KY to the extensive problems my district has had with U.S. Tobacco ("UST") limiting the sale of Conwood products through various means. Since I've testified, the problems in my district with UST have continued.

4. For example, two weeks ago in Coon Rapids, MN, Conwood placed a six-facing rack in a Super America convenience store. By May 9, 2000, 2 of the 6 facings had been removed from Conwood's rack and all 4 of Conwood's premium products had been placed in a UST rack. In the remaining 4 slots of Conwood's rack were 2 Conwood products and Swisher products. Further, all Conwood point of sale ("POS") advertising was removed. The manager of the store reported that UST did not get permission for any of these changes.

5. At an Amoco gas station in Woodruff, WI, UST removed Conwood's moist snuff rack from the store sometime in the past six weeks. In addition, all 6 of Conwood's moist products were placed in a UST rack.

6. At the Amoco gas station in Mercer, WI, UST placed all moist snuff products in one UST rack. Conwood's rack was removed from the store by UST and all accompanying POS was missing.

7. At the Cenex convenience store in Morris, MN, Conwood installed a 7-facing rack to house its moist snuff products in February of 2000. Since that time, UST discontinued Conwood's Kodiak Ice brand, removed 1 slot from Conwood's rack and removed Conwood's header card (POS). This allowed UST to introduce 2 new products and install its extra-wide slot green rack which unnecessarily takes up more shelf space in the moist snuff section. The manager was unaware that these events had taken place.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

EXHIBIT D

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, v. MICROSOFT CORPORATION, Defendant.	Civil Action No. 98-1232 (TPJ)
STATE OF NEW YORK ex rel. Attorney General ELIOT SPITZER, et al., Plaintiffs, v. MICROSOFT CORPORATION, Defendant.	Civil Action No. 98-1233 (TPJ)

PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED FINAL JUDGMENT

Plaintiff, United States of America, having filed its complaint herein on May 18, 1998;

Plaintiff States, having filed their complaint herein on the same day;

Defendant Microsoft Corporation ("Microsoft") having appeared and filed its answer to such complaints;

The Court having jurisdiction of the parties hereto and of the subject matter hereof and having conducted a trial thereon and entered Findings of Fact on November 5, 1999, and Conclusions of Law on April 3, 2000;

The Court having entered judgment in accordance with the Findings of Fact and the Conclusions of Law on April 3, 2000, that Microsoft has violated §§ 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2, as well as the following state law provisions: Cal Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16720, 16726, 17200; Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 35-26, 35-27, 35-29; D.C. Code §§ 28-4502, 28-4503; Fla. Stat. chs. 501.204(1), 542.18, 542.19; 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 10/3; Iowa Code §§ 553.4, 553.5; Kan. Stat. §§ 50-101 et seq.; Ky. Rev. Stat. §§ 367.170, 367.175; La. Rev. Stat. §§ 51:122, 51:123, 51:1405; Md. Com. Law II Code Ann. § 11-204; Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 2; Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 445.772, 445.773; Minn. Stat. § 325D.52; N.M. Stat. §§ 57-1-1, 57-1-2; N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §

340; N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 75-1.1, 75-2.1; Ohio Rev. Code §§ 1331.01, 1331.02; Utah Code § 76-10-914; W.Va. Code §§ 47-18-3, 47-18-4; Wis. Stat. § 133.03(1)-(2); and

The Court having conducted further proceedings on appropriate relief, it is this _____ day of _____, 2000, hereby:

ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED as follows:

1. Reorganization

a. Not later than four months after entry of this Final Judgment, Microsoft shall submit to the Court and the Plaintiffs a proposed plan of reorganization. The Plaintiffs shall submit any objections to the proposed plan of reorganization to the Court within 60 days of receipt of the plan, and Microsoft shall submit its response within 30 days of receipt of the plaintiffs' objections.

b. Following approval of a final plan of reorganization by the Court (the "Plan")[1] (and the expiration of the stay pending appeal set forth in section 6.a.), Microsoft shall implement such Plan.

c. The Plan shall provide for the completion, within 12 months of the expiration of the stay pending appeal set forth in section 6.a., of the following steps:

i. The separation of the Operating Systems Business from the Applications Business, and the transfer of the assets of one of them (the "Separated Business") to a separate entity along with (a) all personnel, systems, and other tangible and intangible assets (including Intellectual Property) used to develop, produce, distribute, market, promote, sell, license and support the products and services of the Separated Business, and (b) such other assets as are necessary to operate the Separated Business as an independent and economically viable entity.

ii. Intellectual Property that is used both in a product developed, distributed, or sold by the Applications Business and in a product developed, distributed, or sold by the Operating Systems Business as of April 27, 2000, shall be assigned to the Applications Business, and the Operating Systems Business shall be granted a perpetual, royalty-free license to license and distribute such Intellectual Property in its products, and, except with respect to such

[1] Definitions of capitalized terms are set forth in section 7, below.

Intellectual Property related to the Internet browser, to develop, license and distribute modified or derivative versions of such Intellectual Property provided that the Operating Systems Business does not grant rights to such versions to the Applications Business. In the case of such Intellectual Property that is related to the Internet browser, the license shall not grant the Operating System Business any right to develop, license, or distribute modified or derivative versions of the Internet browser.

iii. The transfer of ownership of the Separated Business by means of a spin-off of stock of the Separated Business to Non-Covered Shareholders of Microsoft, or by other disposition that does not result in a Covered Shareholder owning stock in both the Separated Business and the Remaining Business.

d. Until Implementation of the Plan, Microsoft shall

i. preserve, maintain, and operate the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business as ongoing, economically viable businesses, with management, sales, products, and operations of each business held as separate, distinct and apart from one another as they were on April 27, 2000, except to provide the accounting, management, and information services or other necessary support functions provided by Microsoft prior to the entry of this Final Judgment.

ii. use all reasonable efforts to maintain and increase the sales and revenues of both the products produced or sold by the Operating Systems Business and those produced or sold by the Applications Business prior to the Implementation of the Plan and to support research and development and business development efforts of both the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business;

iii. take no action that undermines, frustrates, interferes with, or makes more difficult the reorganization required by this Final Judgment without the prior approval of the Court; and

iv. file a report with the Court sixty days after entry of this Final Judgment on the steps Microsoft has taken to comply with the requirements of this section 1.d.

2. Provisions Implementing Reorganization

a. After Implementation of the Plan, and throughout the term of this Final Judgment, neither the Operating Systems Business nor the Applications Business, nor any member of their respective Boards of Directors, shall acquire any securities or assets of the other Business; no Covered Shareholder holding securities of either the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business shall acquire any securities or assets of or shall be an officer, director, or employee of the other Business; and no person who is an officer, director, or employee of the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business shall be an officer, director, or employee of the other Business.

b. After Implementation of the Plan and throughout the term of the Final Judgment, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall be prohibited from:

i. merging or otherwise recombining, or entering into any joint venture with one another;

ii. entering into any Agreement under which one of the Businesses develops, sells, licenses for sale or distribution, or distributes products or services developed, sold, licensed, or distributed by the other Business;

iii. providing to the other any APIs, Technical Information, Communications Interfaces, or technical information that is not simultaneously published, disclosed, or made readily available to ISVs, IHVs, and OEMs; and

iv. licensing, selling or otherwise providing to the other Business any product or service on terms more favorable than those available to any similarly situated third party.

c. After Implementation of the Plan and throughout the term of this Final Judgment, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall file with the Plaintiffs a copy of each Agreement (and a memorandum describing each oral Agreement) entered into between them.

d. Throughout the term of this Final Judgment, Microsoft, the Operating Systems Business and the Applications Business shall be prohibited from taking adverse action against any person or entity in whole or in part because such person or entity provided evidence in this case.

e. The obligations and restrictions set forth in sections 3 and 4 herein concerning Microsoft shall, after the Implementation of the Plan, apply only to the Operating Systems Business.

16diii006159

3. Provisions In Effect Until Full Implementation of the Plan of Reorganization. The provisions in this section 3 shall remain in effect until the earlier of three years after the Implementation of the Plan or the expiration of the term of this Final Judgment.

a. OEM Relations.

i. Ban on Adverse Actions for Supporting Competing Products. Microsoft shall not take or threaten any action adversely affecting any OEM (including but not limited to giving or withholding any consideration such as licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support; enabling programs; product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos) based directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, on any actual or contemplated action by that OEM:

(1) to use, distribute, promote, license, develop, produce or sell any product or service that competes with any Microsoft product or service; or

(2) to exercise any of the options or alternatives provided under this Final Judgment.

ii. Uniform Terms for Windows Operating System Products Licensed to Covered OEMs. Microsoft shall license Windows Operating System Products to Covered OEMs pursuant to uniform license agreements with uniform terms and conditions and shall not employ market development allowances or discounts in connection with Windows Operating System Products. Without limiting the foregoing, Microsoft shall charge each Covered OEM the applicable royalty for Windows Operating System Products as set forth on a schedule, to be established by Microsoft and published on its web site, that provides for uniform royalties for Windows Operating System Products, except that

(1) the schedule may specify different royalties for different language versions, and

(2) the schedule may specify reasonable volume discounts based upon actual volume of total shipments of Windows Operating System Products.

Without limiting the foregoing, Microsoft shall afford Covered OEMs equal access to licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support;

product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos. The foregoing requirement insofar as it relates to access to technical information and information about future plans shall not apply to any bona fide joint development effort by Microsoft and a Covered OEM with respect to confidential matters within the scope of that effort. Microsoft shall not terminate a Covered OEM's license for a Windows Operating System Product without having first given the Covered OEM written notice of the reason for proposed termination and not less than thirty days' opportunity to cure. Microsoft shall not enforce any provision in any Agreement with a Covered OEM that is inconsistent with this Final Judgment

iii. OEM Flexibility in Product Configuration. Microsoft shall not restrict (by contract or otherwise, including but not limited to granting or withholding consideration) an OEM from modifying the boot sequence, startup folder, internet connection wizard, desktop, preferences, favorites, start page, first screen, or other aspect of a Windows Operating System Product to--

(1) include a registration sequence to obtain subscription or other information from the user;

(2) display icons of or otherwise feature other products or services, regardless of the size or shape of such icons or features, or to remove the icons, folders, start menu entries, or favorites of Microsoft products or services;

(3) display any user interfaces, provided that an icon is also displayed that allows the user to access the Windows user interface; or

(4) launch automatically any non-Microsoft Middleware, Operating System or application, offer its own Internet access provider or other start-up sequence, or offer an option to make non-Microsoft Middleware the Default Middleware and to remove the means of End-User Access for Microsoft's Middleware Product.

b. Disclosure of APIs, Interfaces and Technical Information. Microsoft shall disclose to ISVs, IHVs, and OEMs in a Timely Manner, in whatever media Microsoft disseminates such information to its own personnel, all APIs, Technical Information and Communications Interfaces that Microsoft employs to enable--

16diii006161

i. Microsoft applications to interoperate with Microsoft Platform Software installed on the same Personal Computer, or

ii. a Microsoft Middleware Product to interoperate with Windows Operating System software (or Middleware distributed with such Operating System) installed on the same Personal Computer, or

iii. any Microsoft software installed on one computer (including but not limited to server Operating Systems and operating systems for handheld devices) to interoperate with a Windows Operating System (or Middleware distributed with such Operating System) installed on a Personal Computer.

To facilitate compliance, and monitoring of compliance, with the foregoing, Microsoft shall create a secure facility where qualified representatives of OEMs, ISVs, and IHVs shall be permitted to study, interrogate and interact with relevant and necessary portions of the source code and any related documentation of Microsoft Platform Software for the sole purpose of enabling their products to interoperate effectively with Microsoft Platform Software (including exercising any of the options in section 3.a.iii).

c. Knowing Interference with Performance. Microsoft shall not take any action that it knows will interfere with or degrade the performance of any non-Microsoft Middleware when interoperating with any Windows Operating System Product without notifying the supplier of such non-Microsoft Middleware in writing that Microsoft intends to take such action, Microsoft's reasons for taking the action, and any ways known to Microsoft for the supplier to avoid or reduce interference with, or the degrading of, the performance of the supplier's Middleware.

d. Developer Relations. Microsoft shall not take or threaten any action affecting any ISV or IHV (including but not limited to giving or withholding any consideration such as licensing terms; discounts; technical, marketing, and sales support; enabling programs; product information; technical information; information about future plans; developer tools or developer support; hardware certification; and permission to display trademarks or logos) based directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, on any actual or contemplated action by that ISV or IHV to --

i. use, distribute, promote, or support any Microsoft product or service, or

ii. develop, use, distribute, promote or support software that runs on non-Microsoft Middleware or a non-Microsoft Operating System or that competes with any Microsoft product or service, or

iii. exercise any of the options or alternatives provided under this Final Judgment.

e. Ban on Exclusive Dealing. Microsoft shall not enter into or enforce any agreement in which a third party agrees, or is offered or granted consideration, to

i. limit its development, production, distribution, promotion or use of, or payment for, any non-Microsoft Platform Software,

ii. distribute, promote or use any Microsoft Platform Software exclusively,

iii. degrade the performance of any non-Microsoft Platform Software, or

iv. in the case of an agreement with an Internet access provider or Internet content provider, distribute, promote or use Microsoft software in exchange for placement with respect to any aspect of a Windows Operating System Product.

f. Ban on Contractual Tying. Microsoft shall not condition the granting of a Windows Operating System Product license, or the terms or administration of such license, on an OEM or other licensee agreeing to license, promote, or distribute any other Microsoft software product that Microsoft distributes separately from the Windows Operating System Product in the retail channel or through Internet access providers, Internet content providers, ISVs or OEMs, whether or not for a separate or positive price.

g. Restriction on Binding Middleware Products to Operating System Products. Microsoft shall not, in any Operating System Product distributed six or more months after the effective date of this Final Judgment, Bind any Middleware Product to a Windows Operating System unless:

i. Microsoft also offers an otherwise identical version of that Operating System Product in which all means of End-User Access to that Middleware Product can readily be removed (a) by OEMs as part of standard OEM preinstallation kits and (b) by end users using add-remove utilities readily accessible in the initial boot process and from the Windows desktop; and

ii. when an OEM removes End-User Access to a Middleware Product from any Personal Computer on which Windows is preinstalled, the royalty paid by that OEM for that copy of Windows is reduced in an amount not less than the product of the otherwise applicable royalty and the ratio of the number of amount in bytes of binary code of (a) the Middleware Product as distributed separately from a Windows Operating System Product to (b) the applicable version of Windows.

h. Agreements Limiting Competition. Microsoft shall not offer, agree to provide, or provide any consideration to any actual or potential Platform Software competitor in exchange for such competitor's agreeing to refrain or refraining in whole or in part from developing, licensing, promoting or distributing any Operating System Product or Middleware Product competitive with any Windows Operating System Product or Middleware Product.

i. Continued Licensing of Predecessor Version. Microsoft shall, when it makes a major Windows Operating System Product release (such as Windows 95, OSR 2.0, OSR 2.5, Windows 98, Windows 2000 Professional, Windows "Millennium," "Whistler," "Blackcomb," and successors to these), continue for three years after said release to license on the same terms and conditions the previous Windows Operating System Product to any OEM that desires such a license. The net royalty rate for the previous Windows Operating System Product shall be no more than the average royalty paid by the OEM for such Product prior to the release. The OEM shall be free to market Personal Computers in which it preinstalls such an Operating System Product in the same manner in which it markets Personal Computers preinstalled with other Windows Operating System Products.

4. Internal Antitrust Compliance. This section shall remain in effect throughout the term of this Final Judgment.

a. Within 30 days after the effective date of this Final Judgment, Microsoft shall establish a Compliance Committee of its corporate Board of Directors, consisting of not fewer than three members of the Board of Directors who are not present or former employees of Microsoft.

b. The Compliance Committee shall hire a Chief Compliance Officer, who shall report directly to the Compliance Committee and to the Chief Executive Officer of Microsoft.

c. The Chief Compliance Officer shall be responsible for development and supervision of Microsoft's internal programs to ensure compliance with the antitrust laws and this Final Judgment.

d. Microsoft shall give the Chief Compliance Officer sufficient authority and resources to discharge the responsibilities listed herein.

e. The Chief Compliance Officer shall

16diii006164

i. within 30 days after entry of this Final Judgment, cause to be delivered to each Microsoft officer, director, and manager, and each platform software developer and employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs, a copy of this Final Judgment together with additional informational materials describing the conduct prohibited and required by this Final Judgment;

ii. distribute in a timely manner a copy of this Final Judgment and such additional informational materials to any person who succeeds to a position of officer, director, or manager, or platform software developer or employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs;

iii. obtain from each officer, director, and manager, and each platform software developer and employee involved in relations with OEMs, ISVs, or IHVs, within 60 days of entry of this Final Judgment, and for each person thereafter succeeding to such a position within 5 days of such succession, a written certification that he or she:

(1) has read, understands, and agrees to abide by the terms of this Final Judgment; and

(2) has been advised and understands that his or her failure to comply with this Final Judgment may result in conviction for criminal contempt of court;

iv. maintain a record of persons to whom this Final Judgment has been distributed and from whom, pursuant to Section 4(e)(iii), such certifications have been obtained;

v. establish and maintain a means by which employees can report potential violations on a confidential basis; and

vi. report immediately to Plaintiffs and the Court any violation of this Final Judgment.

f. The Chief Compliance Officer may be removed only by the Chief Executive Officer with the concurrence of the Compliance Committee.

g. Microsoft shall, with the supervision of the Chief Compliance Officer, maintain for a period of at least four years the e-mail of all Microsoft officers, directors and managers engaged in software development, marketing, sales and developer relations related to Platform Software.

16diii006165

5. Compliance Inspection. This section shall remain in effect throughout the term of this Final Judgment.

a. For purposes of determining or securing implementation of or compliance with this Final Judgment, including the provisions requiring a plan of reorganization, or determining whether this Final Judgment should be modified or vacated, and subject to any legally recognized privilege, from time to time:

i. Duly authorized representatives of a Plaintiff, upon the written request of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice, or the Attorney General of a Plaintiff State, as the case may be, and on reasonable notice to Microsoft made to its principal office, shall be permitted:

(1) Access during office hours to inspect and copy or, at Plaintiffs' option, demand Microsoft provide copies of all books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda, source code, and other records and documents in the possession or under the control of Microsoft (which may have counsel present), relating to the matters contained in this Final Judgment; and

(2) Subject to the reasonable convenience of Microsoft and without restraint or interference from it, to interview, either informally or on the record, its officers, employees, and agents, who may have their individual counsel present, regarding any such matters.

ii. Upon the written request of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice, or the Attorney General of a Plaintiff State, as the case may be, made to Microsoft at its principal offices, Microsoft shall submit such written reports, under oath if requested, as may be requested with respect to any matter contained in this Final Judgment.

iii. No information or documents obtained by the means provided in this Article shall be divulged by a representative of a Plaintiff to any person other than a duly authorized representative of a Plaintiff, except in the course of legal proceedings to which the Plaintiff is a party (including grand jury proceedings), or for the purpose of securing compliance with this Final Judgment, or as otherwise required by law.

iv. If at the time information or documents are furnished by Microsoft to a Plaintiff, Microsoft represents and identifies in writing the material in any such information or documents to which a claim of protection may be asserted under Rule 26(c)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and Microsoft marks each pertinent page of such material, "Subject to claim of protection under Rule 26(c)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure," then ten (10) calendar days notice shall be given by a Plaintiff to Microsoft prior to divulging such material in any legal proceeding (other than a grand jury proceeding) to which Microsoft is not a party.

6. Effective Date, Term, Retention of Jurisdiction, Modification

a. This Final Judgment shall take effect 30 days after the date on which it is entered; provided, however that sections 1.b and 2 (except 2.d) shall be stayed pending completion of any appeals from this Final Judgment.

b. Except as provided in section 2.d., the provisions of this Final Judgment apply to Microsoft, the Separated Business, the Remaining Business, their successors and assigns (including any transferee or assignee of any ownership rights to, control of, or ability to license the patents referred to in this Final Judgment), their subsidiaries, affiliates, directors, officers, managers, agents, and employees, and all other persons in active concert or participation with any of them who shall have received actual notice of this Final Judgment by personal service or otherwise.

c. This Final Judgment shall expire at the end of ten years from the date on which it takes effect.

d. The Court may act sua sponte to issue orders or directions for the construction or carrying out of this Final Judgment, for the enforcement of compliance therewith, and for the punishment of any violation thereof.

e. Jurisdiction is retained by this Court for the purpose of enabling any of the parties to this Final Judgment to apply to this Court at any time for such further orders or directions as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction or carrying out of this Final Judgment, for the modification of any of the provisions hereof, for the enforcement of compliance herewith, and for the punishment of any violation hereof.

f. In accordance with the Court's Conclusions of Law, the plaintiff States shall submit a motion for costs and fees, with supporting documents as necessary, no later than 45 days after the entry of this Final Judgment.

16diii006167

7. Definitions.

a. "Agreement" means any agreement, arrangement, alliance, understanding, or joint venture, whether written or oral.

b. "Application Programming Interfaces (APIs)" means the interfaces, service provider interfaces, and protocols that enable a hardware device or an application, Middleware, or server Operating System to obtain services from (or provide services in response to requests from) Platform Software in a Personal Computer and to use, benefit from, and rely on the resources, facilities, and capabilities of such Platform Software.

c. "Applications Business" means all businesses carried on by Microsoft Corporation on the effective date of this Final Judgment except the Operating Systems Business. Applications Business includes but is not limited to the development, licensing, promotion, and support of client and server applications and Middleware (e.g., Office, BackOffice, Internet Information Server, SQL Server, etc.), Internet Explorer, Mobile Explorer and other web browsers, Streaming Audio and Video client and server software, Mobile Explorer, transaction server software, SNA server software, indexing server software, XML servers and parsers, Microsoft Management Server, Java virtual machines, Frontpage Express (and other web authoring tools), Outlook Express (and other e-mail clients), Media player, voice recognition software, Net Meeting (and other collaboration software), developer tools, hardware, MSN, MSNBC, Slate, Expedia, and all investments owned by Microsoft in partners or joint venturers, or in ISVs, IHVs, OEMs or other distributors, developers, and promoters of Microsoft products, or in other information technology or communications businesses.

d. "Bind" means to include a product in an Operating System Product in such a way that either an OEM or an end user cannot readily remove or uninstall the product.

e. "Business" means the Operating Systems Business or the Applications Business.

f. "Communications Interfaces" means the interfaces and protocols that enable software installed on other computers (including servers and handheld devices) to interoperate with the Microsoft Platform Software on a Personal Computer.

g. "Covered OEM" means the 20 OEMs with the highest volume of sales of Personal Computers in the United States in the previous 12 months.

h. "Covered Shareholder" means a shareholder of Microsoft on the date of entry of this Final Judgment who is a present or former employee, officer or director of Microsoft and who owns directly or beneficially more than 3 percent of the voting stock of the firm.

i. "Default Middleware" means Middleware configured to launch automatically (that is, by "default") to provide particular functionality when other Middleware has not been selected for this purpose. For example, a default browser is Middleware configured to launch automatically to display Web pages transmitted over the Internet or an intranet that bear the .htm extension, when other software has not been selected for this purpose.

j. "End-User Access" means the invocation of Middleware directly or indirectly by an end user of a Personal Computer or the ability of such an end user to invoke Middleware. "End-User access" includes invocation of Middleware by end users which is compelled by the design of the Operating System Product.

k. "IHV" means an independent hardware vendor that develops hardware to be included in or used with a personal computer.

l. "Implementation of the Plan" means full completion of all of the steps described in section 1.c.

m. "Intellectual Property" means copyrights, patents, trademarks and trade secrets used by Microsoft or licensed by Microsoft to third parties.

n. "ISV" means any entity other than Microsoft (or any subsidiary, division, or other operating unit of any such other entity) that is engaged in the development and licensing (or other marketing) of software products intended to interoperate with Microsoft Platform Software.

o. "Middleware" means software that operates, directly or through other software, between an Operating System and another type of software (such as an application, a server Operating System, or a database management system) by offering services via APIs or Communications Interfaces to such other software, and could, if ported to or interoperable with multiple Operating Systems, enable software products written for that Middleware to be run on multiple Operating System Products. Examples of Middleware within the meaning of this Final Judgment include Internet browsers, e-mail client software, multimedia viewing software, Office, and the Java Virtual Machine. Examples of software that are not Middleware within the meaning of this Final Judgment are disk compression and memory management.

16diii006169

p. "Middleware Product" means

i. Internet browsers, e-mail client software, multimedia viewing software, instant messaging software, and voice recognition software, or

ii. software distributed by Microsoft that

(1) is, or has in the applicable preceding year been, distributed separately from an Operating System Product in the retail channel or through Internet access providers, Internet content providers, ISVs or OEMs, and

(2) provides functionality similar to that provided by Middleware offered by a competitor to Microsoft.

q. "Non-Covered Shareholder" means a shareholder of Microsoft who is not a Covered Shareholder on the date of entry of this Final Judgment.

r. "OEM" means the manufacturer or assembler of a personal computer.

s. "Operating System" means the software that controls the allocation and usage of hardware resources (such as memory, central processing unit time, disk space, and peripheral devices) of a computer, providing a "platform" by exposing APIs that applications use to "call upon" the Operating System's underlying software routines in order to perform functions.

t. "Operating System Product" means an Operating System and additional software shipped with the Operating System, whether or not such additional software is marketed for a positive price. An Operating System Product includes Operating System Product upgrades that may be distributed separately from the Operating System Product.

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

DEFENDANTS' REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO AUTHORIZE A SUPERSEDEAS BOND AND OTHER CONDITIONS FOR SECURITY OF THE JUDGMENT

Conwood acknowledges, as it is compelled to do, that courts have waived the supersedeas bond requirement, or have allowed a substantially reduced bond, where either the judgment debtor is a financially stable company with sufficient funds to pay the ultimate judgment against it or where the full bond would irreparably harm the judgment debtor. U.S. Tobacco has shown that both of these circumstances exist in this case. Accordingly, a full supersedeas bond is neither necessary nor appropriate pending the outcome of U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions and any appeal of the final judgment in this case.

U.S. Tobacco does not request that the Court waive the bond requirement entirely. To the contrary, U.S. Tobacco proposes a bond in the amount of the jury's verdict, $350 million, or the amount of any reduced award of compensatory damages entered by the Court, plus additional conditions, which, together, are more than adequate to protect Conwood's interest as a judgment creditor. Any suggestion that this is not an "extraordinary" case, or that an approximately $100 million fee for a bond is simply the "cost of doing business" to secure appellate review, is just not credible. Under the unique set of facts in this case, a reduced supersedeas bond would not be extraordinary; it would be perfectly reasonable to protect the interests of all parties. The bond proposed by U.S. Tobacco should therefore be authorized.

ARGUMENT

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(d), an appellant may obtain a stay of a judgment pending appeal "by giving a supersedeas bond." While an appellant's posting of a supersedeas bond for the full amount of the judgment, interest and costs automatically results in a stay under Rule 62(d), courts have the inherent power to grant a stay of enforcement based upon a bond in a lesser amount or no bond at all, with or without security other than a bond. 11 Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary K. Kane, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Section 2905, at 518-22 (2d ed. 1995).

In its memorandum in opposition to U.S. Tobacco's motion to authorize a supersedeas bond and other conditions for security of the judgment, Conwood begrudgingly acknowledges, as it is compelled by an abundance of case law to do, that courts have the discretion to provide for the form and amount of security for a stay pending appeal other than a full supersedeas bond. Applying that discretion, courts have waived or modified the supersedeas bond requirement where the judgment debtor demonstrates either its financial ability to pay the money judgment or where the judgment debtor's financial condition is such that posting a full bond would impose an undue financial burden. See, e.g., Poplar Grove Planting and Ref. Co. v. Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc., 600 F.2d 1189, 1191 (5th Cir. 1979). In determining an appropriate bond, courts "look to general equitable principles. Accordingly, when setting supersedeas bonds courts seek to protect judgment creditors as fully as possible without irreparably injuring judgment debtors." Texaco, Inc. v. Pennzoil Co., 784 F.2d 1133, 1154 (2nd Cir. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 481 U.S. 1 (1987).

Here, the bottom line is that U.S. Tobacco has more than adequately demonstrated both (a) UST Inc.'s financial ability to pay the money judgment, and (b) that requiring a supersedeas bond in an amount materially more than $350 million would pose a serious and substantial risk of irreparable harm to UST Inc.'s business operations and financial value. In extraordinary cases such as this, equitable principles compel granting the relief U.S. Tobacco requests regarding the supersedeas bond.

A. Conwood Cannot Dispute UST Inc.'s Financial Ability To Pay The Judgment.

In its memorandum in support of its motion to authorize a supersedeas bond, U.S. Tobacco provided solid proof of its financial ability to pay the judgment against it. As demonstrated in the report of American Appraisal Associates, Inc. – the oldest and largest independent valuation firm in the world, operating 60 offices worldwide and an industry leader since 1894 – the current fair value of UST Inc.'s assets, net of liabilities (except for the judgment in this case) is approximately $3.9 billion, or well over three times the anticipated after-tax cost of the judgment. (See Defendants' Memorandum, D'Alessandro Decl., ¶ 3, Ex. A.) Conwood does not dispute this analysis or any of the additional proof of financial integrity provided by U.S. Tobacco in support of its motion – which, alone, should decide the issue. Nor does Conwood dispute that, on a cash flow basis, the most relevant indication of an ability to pay any judgment, U.S. Tobacco makes before-tax profits of one-half to two-thirds of the existing judgment every year.

Instead, in an attempt to direct the Court's attention away from this solid proof of U.S. Tobacco's indisputable ability to satisfy any judgment in this case, Conwood points to irrelevant figures and facts, including for example, the equity of U.S. Tobacco's stockholders ($200 million) or a purported "fair market value" based on what buyers are currently willing to pay for shares of UST Inc. stock – even then without accounting for the dip in stock price following the judgment. None of these purported facts and figures, however, do anything to refute, or even challenge, the report of the leading professional business appraiser in the world, which concluded that the current fair value of UST Inc.'s net assets is $3.9 billion.

As an initial matter, U.S. Tobacco vehemently disputes that the judgment debt is likely to approach $1.3 billion after all appeals have been resolved. To the contrary, U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions raise serious legal issues for the Court to consider and resolve before any review of this case on appeal, and the outcome of these motions or any appeal may be that Conwood is entitled to no recovery at all. Even if the judgment is allowed to stand, Conwood is definitely putting the cart before the horse by concluding that the final judgment will include an award of attorney fees and expenses based upon the patently inadequate request it has filed. In any event, even if the final award were $1.3 billion, UST Inc.'s $3.9 billion in net assets is obviously sufficient to cover it.

The other figures thrown out by Conwood are equally irrelevant. U.S. Tobacco's after-tax income in 1999, the shareholders' equity of $200 million, and the price of UST Inc. stock are consistent with, and certainly do not refute, the report of a professional business appraiser that the current value of UST Inc.'s assets is $3.9 billion.[1]

[1] As to pending lawsuits, obviously, it is pure speculation that any of them will result in damages against the company. Conwood admits that no one can assess with certainty whether (continued...)

Conwood's reliance upon U.S. Tobacco's own representation that it would have to accept potentially onerous collateralization requirements and restrictive covenants (or excessive fees) in order to obtain a full bond does not change the analysis. Conwood concludes that this fact necessarily means that U.S. Tobacco's lenders believe that UST may not be able to pay off the bond and insist upon a panoply of protections in order to limit the risk. (Conwood's Memorandum, pp. 9-10) In the circumstances of securing funds for non-operating purposes and under a particularly tight time frame, the commercial credit market, i.e., banks, typically would require nearly full collateralization for all loans or bonds without regard to any specific risk analysis. A collateralization requirement, however, does not suggest that the banks are concerned about U.S. Tobacco's ability to pay, if necessary; otherwise, they would never lend the funds at all.

Conwood's legal analysis is equally off the point. Conwood argues that the cases cited by U.S. Tobacco involve circumstances in which the net worth of the judgment debtor was many times the amount of the damage award and that other factors supporting the waiver of a bond were present. See, e.g., Fed. Prescription Serv., Inc. v. Am. Pharmaceutical Assoc., 636 F.2d 755 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (the net worth of the judgment debtor was 47 times the amount of the damage award and the judgment debtor was a long-time resident of the district). Conwood is, of course, simply ignoring lawsuits will impair U.S. Tobacco's ability to satisfy Conwood's judgment, but boldly and incorrectly asserts that "Rule 62(d) mandates that Conwood should not have to take any risk in this regard." (Conwood's Memorandum, p. 9) To the contrary, as many of the cases cited by U.S. Tobacco in support of its motion clearly explain, "when setting supersedeas bonds courts seek to protect judgment creditors as fully as possible without irreparably injuring judgment debtors . . . ." Texaco, Inc., 784 F.2d at 1154. Accordingly, an inflexible bond requirement would be inappropriate in two circumstances, both of which are clearly present in this case. See Olympia Equip. Leasing Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 786 F.2d 794, 796 (7th Cir. 1986).

the general principle to be gleaned from those cases, which is that a full supersedeas bond is not necessary where, as here, the judgment debtor is a financially stable company with sufficient funds to pay the ultimate judgment against it. No court has set out a bright line rule that the judgment debtor's net worth must be a specified amount or percentage in excess of the final award; instead, the bond has been waived where courts are convinced that the judgment debtor's financial integrity is such that the judgment creditor's rights will be protected. The proof provided by U.S. Tobacco is more than adequate to accomplish this result.

In any event, U.S. Tobacco does not request a complete waiver of the bond requirement, but is proposing a $350 million cash bond, plus other conditions for the security of Conwood.[2] Instead of recognizing these conditions as those imposed by courts under similar circumstances for the protection of a judgment creditor, Conwood makes the untenable suggestion that these conditions would somehow result in the Court being required to engage in "day-to-day supervision of UST's business activities." (Conwood's Memorandum, p. 11) Conwood's "concern" for the Court is patently unfounded and, not surprisingly, was never raised by the courts in any of the cases which have imposed the very conditions proposed by U.S. Tobacco. (See U.S. Tobacco's Memorandum, p. 8)

Finally, Conwood completely ignores probably the most analogous case, at least in terms of unprecedented magnitude, Texaco, 784 F.2d 1113, wherein a $12 billion judgment was entered in favor of Pennzoil. The court concluded that Pennzoil's interest in protecting the full amount of its judgment during an appellate process was reasonably secure because Texaco's net worth, appraised at over $22 billion, was almost twice the amount of Pennzoil's judgment ($12 billion). U.S. Tobacco's appraised net worth is over three times the amount of the judgment. Moreover, Texaco was required to post $1 billion as security, which, proportionally, is substantially less than the amount which U.S. Tobacco proposes in this case. Id. at 1157.

[2] U.S. Tobacco asks the Court to continue the stay of the judgment subject to UST Inc. posting a cash bond of $350 million (or any reduced damages award entered by the Court), which is the amount of the jury's verdict, UST Inc. providing its financial statements, UST Inc. not entering into or conducting any corporate transactions that would jeopardize any security responsible for the judgment and giving notice to the Court and Conwood of any extraordinary dividend or other distribution, other than regular quarterly dividends to UST Inc.'s shareholders.

As the Texaco circumstances illustrate, Conwood's arguments are insufficient to rebut U.S. Tobacco's valid proof that it is a financially stable company with sufficient funds to pay the ultimate judgment against it, and that a full supersedeas bond is therefore not necessary to protect Conwood's interest pending the outcome of post-trial motions and an appeal, if any. Moreover, if any changed circumstances were to come to light that result in a reasonable belief by Conwood that its judgment is not adequately protected, Conwood would be free to ask the Court to increase the cash bond or to impose other conditions necessary to protect and secure its judgment during the stay.

B. UST Inc. Cannot Post A Bond Materially Greater Than The Proposed $350 Million Without Incurring Irreparable Harm

As amply explained in its memorandum in support of its motion to authorize supersedeas bond, requiring a supersedeas bond in an amount materially more than $350 million would pose a serious and substantial risk of irreparably harming UST Inc.'s business operations and financial value. More specifically, the potential collateralization conditions and restrictive covenants of such a bond would seriously encumber the business operations and growth strategies of the company. (U.S. Tobacco's Memorandum, pp. 14-18)

In an attempt to minimize the potential severity and irreparable nature of the consequences described in U.S. Tobacco's memorandum, Conwood argues that the fact that U.S. Tobacco "is financially able to post a supersedeas bond requires that it must do so." (Conwood's Memorandum, p. 12) Conwood then attempts to distinguish the cases cited by U.S. Tobacco by arguing that, in those cases, the judgment debtors were not able to post the full bond. Conwood's view of irreparable harm, especially in the circumstances of this case, is, however, much too narrow.

The law is clear, for example, that U.S. Tobacco is not required to demonstrate its inability to post the bond (although there is always a risk of not obtaining a bond in such a short time frame), but rather to show that a full bond would impose an undue financial burden or irreparable injury. See Poplar Grove, 600 F.2d at 1191 ("[I]f the judgment debtor's present financial condition is such that the posting of a full bond would impose an undue financial burden, the court similarly is free to exercise a discretion to fashion some other arrangement for substitute security through an appropriate restraint on the judgment debtor's financial dealings, which would furnish equal protection to the judgment creditor."); Texaco, 784 F.2d 1154055 (in setting supersedeas bonds courts seek to protect judgment creditors as fully as possible without irreparably injuring judgment debtors . . . .").

Under the appropriate standard for assessing irreparable harm, Conwood's persistent focus on U.S. Tobacco's ability to post a full bond does nothing to refute U.S. Tobacco's proof of irreparable harm and runs directly contrary to Conwood's argument that its judgment would be in jeopardy during the two-to-three year appeal process. Conwood's argument, if anything, provides further support for the obvious fact that UST Inc. is financially able to pay the judgment and, on this basis, the proposed bond should be authorized. Conwood is wrong in its suggestion that the alleged harmful consequences of a full supersedeas bond are mere "inconveniences" which have never been found to justify waiver or partial waiver of the supersedeas bond requirement. (Conwood's Memorandum, p. 14) To the contrary, many of the damaging and costly consequences of requiring a full bond for a "titanic" judgment were set out in Texaco, 784 F.2d at 1133. It is true that, due to the size of the $12 billion judgment at issue, Texaco could not meet the mandatory bond requirement. Nevertheless, the focus of the Second Circuit was not the inability of Texaco to post a bond for the full amount of the judgment, but the catastrophic consequences of requiring it. See Id. at 1138. The same principle applies in this case. While posting a full bond may not render U.S. Tobacco insolvent, requiring substantially more than the proposed $350 million bond would clearly result in an undue and unnecessary financial burden and irreparable harm to its business.

In the end, Conwood is forced to fall back on an argument that, if accepted, would fully displace the Court's discretion, i.e., that having to pay costs and fees in order to obtain a bond can never amount to irreparable harm because this is simply the "cost of doing business." (Conwood's Memorandum, pp. 15-16) While the courts in the cases cited by Conwood might have been willing to set out that proposition based on the specific facts in those cases, the judgments in those cases were far smaller than the amount of the judgment in this case. See, e.g., Maharan v. Berkshire Life Ins. Co., 948 F. Supp. 261 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) (judgment in the amount of $445,095).

More importantly, in those cases, the controlling factor for the court, in requiring a full bond, was the judgment debtor's total failure to show any resulting harm. Id. at 263 ("defendant has not given the court any reason to believe that incurring this cost will harm it or the public interest."); Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Arbogast, 769 F. Supp. 130 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (full bond required, no harm shown); Grand Union Co. v. Food Employers Labor Relations Ass'n, 637 F. Supp. 356 (D.D.C.

1986)(requiring a full bond where the responsible party failed to show hardship as a result of posting a full bond and where the party may have left the jurisdiction).

Here, the "cost of doing business" simply to seek an appeal – approximately $100 million, if not more – would itself constitute one of the larger antitrust verdicts in recent years. Contrary to Conwood's suggestion, this is, indeed, a unique case in which rote application of contrived standards will not work, and the Court's considered discretion and judgment is required.

C. The Validity Of U.S. Tobacco's Post-trial Motions Are A Factor To Be Considered.

Conwood argues that the fact that U.S. Tobacco has raised highly meritorious issues in its post-trial motions is irrelevant to the Court's consideration of the supersedeas bond requirement. While this fact alone would not be a sufficient basis for waiving or modifying the bond requirement, courts clearly have considered the existence of such arguments in making the supersedeas bond determination. See Morgan Guar. Trust Co. of New York v. Republic of Palau, 702 F. Supp. 60 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (citing difficult legal questions); Texaco, 784 F.2d at 1153 (the issue before the Second Circuit was "not whether Texaco should have prevailed on the merits in the Texas action but whether its Texas appeal presents non-frivolous issues for resolution.").

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated in its two briefs, U.S. Tobacco asks the Court to authorize UST Inc. to post a cash bond in the amount of $350 million, or in the amount of any reduced award for compensatory damages entered by the Court, and to abide by the other stated conditions for the security of Plaintiffs with respect to the judgment in their favor pending the Court's ruling on U.S. Tobacco's post-trial motions and the outcome of any appeal by U.S. Tobacco. To the extent that the Court would consider requiring greater security for the judgment or different conditions which might adversely impact U.S. Tobacco's business, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests a hearing to discuss the matter with the Court.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF
DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Conwood's response to U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law confirms that this Court can uphold the jury's verdict only by revolutionizing Section 2 of the Sherman Act in direct contravention of long-established Sixth Circuit and Supreme Court precedents. Specifically, Conwood is asking this Court to be the first court to hold:

- that monopoly power may be inferred solely from a high sales share coupled with high prices and profit margins, even though all other marketplace factors indicate a lack of monopoly power and smaller competitors (including Conwood) have similar prices and margins for these heterogeneous products;

- that it can be an unlawful "use" of monopoly power for a company simply to influence customer decisions without engaging in coercion of any kind and without entering into agreements that preclude customers – here, retailers – from choosing whatever products, racks, or POS they desire at any time for any reason;

- that it can be an unlawful "use" of monopoly power to engage in a variety of marketing practices that are desired by retail customers, are commonly used by even the smallest moist snuff competitors, and are an essential aspect of the efficient operation of the retail industry in all product categories;

- that, ultimately, it can be an unlawful "use" of monopoly power to engage in sporadic acts of unfair competition – e.g., making an allegedly "misleading" suggestion to a retailer or removing a competitor's rack without retailer approval – even though such conduct, to the extent it occurs, is common among all competitors in the industry;

- that "harm to competition" can be established even where it is undisputed that market output has increased, the number of brands has more than quadrupled since 1990 and price and non-price competition has significantly increased, including the creation and rapid growth of a new price-value segment in the marketplace;

- that a manufacturer can be held liable under Section 2 for the direct effects of the lawful, independent, and uncoerced decisions of retail customers regarding their choices of products, racks, and POS for their stores;

- that antitrust damages may be based on the assumption that any reduction in Conwood's sales or sales share (in actuality no loss at all, but an alleged slowing of growth) was caused by the unlawful conduct of U.S. Tobacco (whatever that is found to be) and not by numerous other factors that indisputably affected Conwood's sales and share;

- that antitrust damages of over $1 billion can stand and remain unalterable no matter what conduct the Court determines may or may not be considered "exclusionary" as a matter of law, and no matter what conduct a reasonable jury could determine to be "exclusionary" as a matter of fact; and

- that, just in case the damages analysis of a plaintiff's expert is ultimately found to be defective (as it should be here), plaintiff may still recover over $1 billion simply by placing its senior executive on the stand to assert – in direct contradiction of market reality – that absent defendants' misconduct (again, whatever that turns out to be) the plaintiff would have approximately doubled its sales share from 1990 to 1998.

Each and every one of these principles must be accepted in order to uphold the jury's verdict, yet each of them has long been rejected as a viable legal basis to find Section 2 liability and damages.

Conwood's overarching response to these and other critical legal questions – which now must be applied to a full trial record – is twofold. First, Conwood claims that, because the Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motions for summary judgment and to exclude Dr. Leftwich's testimony under Daubert, the Court's role is over as a matter of "law of the case." Pl. Mem. at 3-5.

16diii006193

That position, of course, is baseless in law; moreover, it ignores the stated qualifications contained in the Court's rulings on those motions. Second, Conwood relies on the equally specious suggestion that if the jury was "properly instructed," this Court is now precluded from determining, under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1), that Conwood failed to present a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for Conwood on each element of its Section 2 monopolization claim. The Court's role on a motion for judgment as a matter of law, however, is not so easily abrogated.

Conwood's concern that the Court will now assess the sufficiency of the evidence on a full trial record is understandable. In sharp contrast to what Conwood's counsel constantly suggested to the jury, the Court will not find evidence of "coercion" or any "use" of monopoly power simply by accepting the analogy of U.S. Tobacco to a large man walking down the street who thus intimidates a short economist who happens to be standing nearby, Tr. 3/3 at 76-77 (Kamien), or Conwood's repeated characterization of U.S. Tobacco as an "800 pound gorilla."

Likewise, in contrast to what Conwood's counsel repeatedly suggested to the jury, the Court should not define competition "on the merits" as a process that somehow magically skips over the needs and desires of retailers. On the contrary, the full trial record confirmed that the competition among moist snuff suppliers to influence the decisions of retailers – to purchase products, to choose display racks, and to choose POS materials – is the very competition that is at issue in this case. Thus, the views of retailers regarding what constitutes competition "on the merits" – including their desire for category management assistance and rack innovation – are not just relevant; they define the very process that the antitrust laws are designed to protect. Seen in this proper light, Conwood's attack on U.S. Tobacco's marketing practices as "exclusionary" is itself an anticompetitive attempt to insulate Conwood from that competitive process. Indeed, if the Court were to find that U.S. Tobacco violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act simply by influencing retailers' decisions (or attempting to do so), then the Court would have held that an alleged monopolist, especially a supplier to retail customers, is not allowed to compete at all. But that view of Section 2 was rejected by the Supreme Court many decades ago.

Finally, Conwood understandably does not want the Court to make its own assessment, under Rule 50(a), of Conwood's damages evidence, including its foundational "assumptions" that the Court earlier held must be proven at trial. See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 4. Where, for example, is the evidence regarding why Conwood could not achieve what its damages expert called a "foothold" in 46 out of 49 states prior to 1990? There was none. Where is the evidence regarding how and why, "but for" some undefined U.S. Tobacco misconduct, Conwood's share would have increased by 500%, 600%, 700% in many of those states, even though competitive conditions had greatly intensified? Again, there was none. Where is the evidence that Conwood's sales and sales share were not, in fact, being affected by the great influx of new competitive products in the 1990's and the resulting decisions of retailers – for example, the decisions of many retailers to carry Timberwolf instead of Cougar, or their decisions to carry a limited selection of products rather than every moist snuff product being offered by manufacturers? Again, there was none. Neither Mr. Rosson – Conwood's newly declared damages expert – nor Dr. Leftwich even attempted to deal with these and other inherent defects in Conwood's damages theory and analysis. Indeed, the recently rejected damages study in Concord Boat appears rigorous compared to what Dr. Leftwich did in this case. This Court has a continuing obligation under Rule 50 and Daubert to reject the fundamentally deficient model and opinion presented by Dr. Leftwich at trial.

In sum, Conwood's response to U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law confirms that Conwood's case is, indeed, paper thin. It is a story strung together solely from what Conwood's counsel and its parade of experts could read into a selection of U.S. Tobacco documents. But it is a story that, in Conwood's own words, "fails to grapple with" the economic reality of what retailers desire in the marketplace, what U.S. Tobacco and other competitors provide to retailers, and what is or is not actually affecting Conwood's success with retail customers. Accordingly, if this Court truly considers the undisputed facts on the whole record, the inescapable conclusion is that the moist snuff marketplace is highly competitive, the competitive process is free and open to all manufacturers, consumer choices and product output have increased substantially, and any harm that Conwood claims to have suffered since 1990 is the result of intense competition, not the lack of it. No reasonable jury could have found otherwise.

ARGUMENT

I. THE COURT'S PRIOR RULINGS ARE NOT LAW OF THE CASE

Conwood's first argument in opposition to U.S. Tobacco's motion for judgment as a matter of law is that because, at the summary judgment stage, the Court found that there were genuine issues of material fact to be decided at trial, it cannot now grant judgment as a matter of law. Conwood's argument, unsupported and unsupportable by any case law, is plainly wrong. First, judgment as a matter of law pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 is not precluded by the denial of summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. It is well settled that "it is 'perfectly appropriate' for a single judge to deny preverdict motions and then enter judgment as a matter of law on a postverdict motion." 13 Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 4478 (2000) (citing Flibotte v. Pennsylvania Truck Lines, 131 F.3d 21, 24- 25 (1st Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1123 (1998)); see also St. Louis Convention & Visitors Comm'n v. National Football League, 154 F.3d 851, 860 (8th Cir. 1998) (denying summary judgment "did not control the outcome of the Rule 50 motion," which was "made and considered after the court had had the benefit of over four weeks of trial").

Second, the Court's earlier ruling on summary judgment was limited to its determination that there existed genuine issues of material fact, on which Conwood had the burden of proof at trial; it is not, as the Court itself recognized, a finding in advance of trial that Conwood had already met that burden of proof. See, e.g., Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 9-10. For example, the Court expressly held that Conwood had the burden of proving that product, rack, and POS selections were something other than the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers. Id. at 10. At trial, however, Conwood failed to present any evidence whatsoever of coercion. And, in fact, all retailer testimony was specifically to the contrary. See, e.g., Tr. 3/14 at 117-18 (Luckett) (U.S. Tobacco never dictated, coerced, or made threats with respect to racks, P.O.S., or products). Likewise, in its Daubert opinion, the Court highlighted, among other things, that Dr. Leftwich's analysis would still be defective if "there is no basis for critical assumptions or the assumptions are shown to be false," Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 4 – again, defects that were starkly revealed at trial. See infra Section VIII.

Accordingly, Conwood cannot avoid judicial scrutiny of the verdict by asserting "law of the case."

II. U.S. TOBACCO DOES NOT POSSESS MONOPOLY POWER

Conwood does not dispute that, to establish that a defendant possesses monopoly power, a plaintiff must establish that the defendant had the ability to control prices or exclude competition. Nor does Conwood even attempt to address the numerous cases cited by U.S. Tobacco granting summary judgment or judgment as a matter of law based on market factors, also present on this record, that precluded a finding of monopoly power, see Def. Mem. at 7-10, including Tarrant Service Agency, Inc. v. American Standard, Inc., 12 F.3d 609, 615-16 (6th Cir. 1993) (affirming grant of judgment as a matter of law after adverse jury verdict because plaintiff did not demonstrate that defendant had the power to control prices or exclude competition in a relevant market).[1] Instead, Conwood argues that it offered sufficient "direct" and "indirect" evidence for a reasonable jury to conclude that U.S. Tobacco had the ability to control prices and exclude competition, relying particularly on proof of U.S. Tobacco's sales share, price increases and "eye-popping" profit margins. Pl. Opp. at 11. As a matter of law, however, none of these factors – alone or combined – can support a jury finding of monopoly power.

With respect to U.S. Tobacco's sales share, for example, Conwood simply ignores the applicable case law cited by U.S. Tobacco in its moving papers. See Def. Mem. at 8 n.3 (citing Richter Concrete Corp. v. Hilltop Concrete Corp., 691 F.2d 818, 826-27 (6th Cir. 1982) ("Market share alone . . . is not enough to determine a firm's capacity to achieve monopoly. The real test is whether [defendant] possessed sufficient market power to achieve its aims.")). Nor may Conwood rely on the Sixth Circuit's factual observations in PSI Repair Services, Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 821 (6th Cir. 1997); PSI does not create a rule of law that a 74% sales share equates to monopoly power. See id. ("there is no magical percentage of market power that will qualify as monopoly power under § 2").

[1] Conwood also does not dispute that it did not offer sufficient evidence to meet its burden of proof that the relevant market in this case included only moist snuff products. See Def. Mem. at 7 n.2.

Similarly, Conwood's suggestion that high prices and margins can suffice to establish monopoly power has long been rejected as a matter of law in markets involving the sale of differentiated products – for example, as here, where different product types and specific brands command high degrees of consumer loyalty. As the Seventh Circuit explained in Blue Cross & Blue Shield United v. Marshfield Clinic, 65 F.3d 1406 (7th Cir. 1995):

> [Plaintiff] also asked the jury to infer monopoly power from [defendant's] high prices and high rate of return, relative to the prices and rates of return of its competitors. But when dealing with a heterogeneous product or service . . . a reasonable finder of fact cannot infer monopoly power just from higher prices – the difference may reflect a higher quality more costly to provide – and its always treacherous to try to infer monopoly power from a high rate of return . . . . [T]here is not even a good economic theory that associates monopoly power with a high rate of return.

Id. at 1411-12 (citation omitted). The evidence here is undisputed that Conwood's prices and margins are substantially similar to U.S. Tobacco's. Tr. 3/23 at 59-60 (Scheffman) (evidence demonstrates that Conwood historically chose to follow U.S. Tobacco price increases, rather than compete on price). Thus, even more so than in Marshfield Clinic, the factors relied on by Conwood – especially in light of the full trial record – cannot be a reasonable basis for a jury to infer that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power.

The law remains, in the Sixth Circuit and elsewhere, that the existence of price competition, a declining market share, and entry and expansion are all indicative of a competitive market in which no firm has the power to control prices or exclude competition. The undisputed evidence establishing all of these factors defeats any finding that U.S. Tobacco has monopoly power.[2]

[2] U.S. Tobacco does not argue, as Conwood contends, that each marketplace factor must be proven as if it were a separate element. U.S. Tobacco does vehemently dispute Conwood's theory (continued...)

A. There Is No Evidence That U.S. Tobacco Had the Ability To Control Prices

There is no evidence – "direct" or "indirect" – that U.S. Tobacco has the ability to control market prices. In its opposition papers, Conwood sets forth the evidence that it believes establishes this critical element of a Section 2 claim. See Pl. Opp. at 9, 14. Conwood points to the testimony of Vincent Gierer that U.S. Tobacco and Conwood raised wholesale prices and that U.S. Tobacco's and Conwood's profit margins on its premium products are high. These facts, parroted by Conwood's economic expert, are undisputed. See Pl. Opp. at 9 (collecting transcript cites). They cannot, however, provide the basis for a jury to conclude that U.S. Tobacco possesses monopoly power. See Marshfield Clinic, 65 F.3d at 1411-12 (high rate of return cannot support finding of monopoly power as a matter of law).

Conwood also cites to a U.S. Tobacco document that reads, in part: "UST does not 'deal' on its product's prices, we don't have to," PX33 at 052113, as evidence of U.S. Tobacco's ability to control prices. Pl. Mem. at 9. As a threshold point, it is significant that PX33 is an issue outline prepared by U.S. Tobacco's "DCS II team," an information systems group responsible for the planning and maintenance of software systems to support U.S. Tobacco's distribution and invoicing functions. See PX33 at 052102. There is no evidence whatsoever that the DCS II team has anything to do with developing U.S. Tobacco's pricing policies. Moreover, the same document makes it clear that the statement pertained only to U.S. Tobacco's "current pricing strategy of nation-that it need only offer some evidence in support of one or two factors to satisfy its burden of proof on the issue of monopoly power. That is not the law. See, e.g., Magnus Petroleum Co. v. Skelly Oil Co., 599 F.2d 196, 201-02 (7th Cir. 1979) (a marketplace characterized by numerous price wars and evidence that defendant's share of the market decreased during the relevant period confirmed that defendant's "competitors were not foreclosed significantly from the retail market").

wide delivered pricing" as opposed to differential pricing for individual states or wholesale customers – it did not pertain to overall pricing strategies in the marketplace at all. See PX33 at 052112. Indeed, the very same document, dated in February 1996, also makes clear that retail price competition in the marketplace was increasing: "However, with the advent of greater competition in the market, our pricing strategy has become more sensitive to overall price-to-consumer and elasticity of demand considerations." See id. No reasonable jury could have concluded from the snippet of this document to which Conwood referred that U.S. Tobacco has the ability to control prices in the marketplace.

In sharp contrast to the innuendo Conwood hopes to create, the actual evidence of marketplace facts demonstrates, consistent with the observations contained in PX33 itself, a highly competitive marketplace in which U.S. Tobacco has had to compete aggressively on price through promotional activities targeted at the retail price to consumers, irrespective of the wholesale price of moist snuff products. For example:

- Douglas Hynek, a Conwood District Manager, testified that U.S. Tobacco's price promotions were more generous than Conwood's, causing Conwood to lose sales to U.S. Tobacco products. Tr. 3/9 at 11-12 (Hynek).

- Mr. Hynek also testified that U.S. Tobacco and Swisher were undercutting the price of Conwood's Cougar brands. Id. at 12 (Hynek).

- The evidence is undisputed that U.S. Tobacco developed the only mid-tier priced products under the brand name Rooster, offering 25% more tobacco than any competitive product at a reduced price. Tr. 3/21 at 73 (Gierer).

- U.S. Tobacco introduced Red Seal, a price-value product, again offering 25% more tobacco than any competitive product at an even lower price. Id. at 73-74 (Gierer).

- Harold Price, Swedish Match's head of sales, testified that the price of U.S. Tobacco's Red Seal product undercut Timberwolf, forcing Swedish Match to lower its prices to consumers. Tr. 3/7 at 279-80 (Price); see also Tr. 3/13 at 36-37 (McClure).

- Mr. McClure, Swedish Match's former Chief Operating Officer and current consultant, testified that Swedish Match was hurt most by the price wars with U.S. Tobacco's Red Seal brand. Tr. 3/13 at 37-39 (McClure).

- According to Mr. Price, with Red Seal, U.S. Tobacco accelerated (not restricted) the growth of the entire price-value segment. See Tr. 3/7 at 278-79 (Price).

All of these activities represent the aggressive pricing strategies of a firm responding to intense price competition (and still losing sales share to its rivals), not of a "monopolist" that "does not have to deal on its prices."

Finally, any suggestion that U.S. Tobacco had the ability to control prices is belied by U.S. Tobacco's obvious inability to prevent the creation and growth of the moist snuff price value segment, even when Conwood claims this "800 pound gorilla" had a well-conceived corporate plan to do so. In reality, price value products, where desired by retailers because of consumer demand, have readily gained distribution; moreover, sales of price value brands – particularly Timberwolf – have grown dramatically. See Tr. 3/7 at 281 (Price). Thus, while U.S. Tobacco has no obligation under Section 2 to encourage retailers to accept lower-priced products, the evidence is undisputed that U.S. Tobacco did not and could not stop the introduction and growth of the price value segment. Instead, it joined the price-value fray and competed on price against its competitors – hardly conduct that is indicative of the power to control prices and exclude competition.

B. There Is No Evidence That U.S. Tobacco Had the Ability To Exclude Competition

Conwood's evidence of U.S. Tobacco's purported ability to exclude competitors is equally deficient as a matter of law. Conwood points to U.S. Tobacco documents referring to

16diii006202

"barriers to entry," but again fails to point to any evidence of actual barriers to entry in the alleged moist snuff market.[3] Of course, this would be difficult to do considering every moist snuff company has introduced numerous new products into the marketplace, U.S. Tobacco's competitors have successfully expanded sales, and U.S. Tobacco's sales share alone has declined.[4] Indeed, the quadrupling of the number of brands in the moist snuff marketplace in the 1990s is staggering even when compared with cases holding, as a matter of law, that evidence of new competition precluded a finding of market power. See Def. Mem. at 8-9. It is no answer to suggest that the entry of new brands does not count, but only the entry of new "competitors," Pl. Mem. at 13 – new entry by "competitors," as a matter of law, includes the expansion of existing competitors. See Def. Mem. at 38-39 n.12.[5]

---

[3] Conwood's attempt to elevate simple words in documents to the status of economic evidence of market conditions is without support in the law. Conwood's reliance on Cassidy v. Spectrum Rents, 959 F. Supp. 823 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), is misplaced. There, the court relied in part on documents that resolved a simple question of fact by providing "clear and convincing evidence" that the defendant knew plaintiff was injured at the time he was fired. Id. at 828. Here, in sharp contrast, Conwood is asking this Court to sustain a jury verdict on the issue of monopoly power – a complex legal issue – based on words in documents created by employees not shown to have any knowledge of economics or antitrust law.

[4] A declining market share and the ability to exclude competition cannot coexist. See Def. Mem. at 9 n.5; see Richter Concrete Corp. v. Hilltop Concrete Corp., 691 F.2d 818, 826 (6th Cir. 1982) (declining market share "belies whatever inference of capacity to monopolize that may be drawn from the size of [defendant's] market share"). It is preposterous for Conwood to suggest that U.S. Tobacco's decline in share of over 10% since 1990 was insignificant, relying solely on the opinion testimony of Dr. Kamien, who concluded, without any analysis whatsoever, that U.S. Tobacco's share should have declined like IBM's in the personal computer market. Pl. Opp. at 12.

[5] Conwood also relies on the fact that "two of the largest tobacco companies in the world tried and failed" to enter the market. Pl. Opp. at 10. Conwood, however, did not seek to discover or present to the jury any evidence concerning why these companies supposedly "failed" in their efforts to enter the market. The fact that these companies did not continue to offer moist snuff products,

Conwood also suggests that its own growth and the growth of Swedish Match was "restricted." Id. (again citing the testimony of Mr. Rosson and Mr. McClure). That type of self-serving opinion testimony from competitors could be offered in every antitrust case to avoid a plaintiff's burden of proving the elements of monopoly power. The antitrust laws, however, require more reliable proof of actual market factors. Conwood's reliance on the "we could have done even better" opinions of competitors cannot overcome the undisputed record evidence of the successful expansion of all of U.S. Tobacco's competitors – evidence that, as a matter of law, precludes a finding of any barriers to entry. See, e.g., Omega Envt'l., Inc. v. Gilbarco, Inc., 127 F.3d 1157, 1164 (9th Cir. 1997) (fact that new competitor grew from a 6% to 8% market share precluded finding that exclusive dealing contracts were an entry barrier that foreclosed competition); see also Def. Mem. at 8-9.

For example, it is undisputed that the sales share of Swedish Match grew from less than 1% to over 7% from its introduction in 1994 through 1999. Tr. 3/7 at 281 (Price) (Mr. Price testified that, in the first months of 1999, the Timberwolf brand grew in sales volume by approximately 49%); see id. (Mr. Price also testified that from 1994-1998, Timberwolf grew by over 700%). In fact, despite Conwood's and Swedish Match's claims of being "restricted," Swedish Match's rate of growth exceeds the rate of growth that Conwood achieved prior to 1990 (i.e., Swedish Match's 7 share points in 5 years compared to Conwood's 10 share points in 10 years). See Tr. 2/29 at 103 (Rosson) (Mr. Rosson testified that, prior to 1990, Conwood experienced the ideal standing alone, is not probative of anything.

[5] (...continued)

16diii006204

growth rate).[6] Swedish Match's rate of growth even exceeds Dr. Leftwich's most aggressive damages "scenario." Tr. 3/8 at 35 (Leftwich) (Dr. Leftwich assumes Conwood's share would have grown by 8.1% in 8 years). Conwood does not even attempt to address this and other record evidence cited by U.S. Tobacco that clearly and unequivocally demonstrates that U.S. Tobacco had no power to exclude competition in the alleged market. See Def. Mem. at 9-10 (demonstrating that each moist snuff company successfully introduced new products and gained both in sales and in sales share during the relevant time period).

For all of these reasons, no reasonable jury could have concluded that U.S. Tobacco had the power to control prices or exclude competition in the moist snuff "market."

III. U.S. TOBACCO DID NOT "USE" MONOPOLY POWER

Conwood does not dispute the fact that a Section 2 plaintiff must prove that the alleged monopolist used its purported monopoly power in the marketplace to harm competition. Pl. Opp. at 16-17 (simply stating that the jury was properly instructed "on this score."). Nor does Conwood dispute that, in order to prove this element of a Section 2 claim, the Sixth Circuit requires proof of conduct that is "'possible or effective only if taken by a firm that dominates its smaller rivals.'" Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 917 F.2d 1413, 1428 (6th Cir. 1990) (citation omitted). Thus, a plaintiff must prove that the conduct lacks any legitimate business justification. See Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 588-95, 605-611 (1985); see also Def. Mem. at 14-15 (distinguishing cases such as R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

[6] It also is ironic that this growth of Swedish Match's price-value Timberwolf brand, characterized by Mr. Price as growing "by leaps and bounds," Tr. 3/7 at 271 (Price), occurred despite U.S. Tobacco's alleged intent to eliminate the distribution, and restrict the growth, of the price-value segment. See Pl. Opp. at 15-29.

v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999), in which retailers complained of a coercive incentive program).

Moreover, it is clear from this Court's summary judgment opinion that the Court permitted Conwood to try to prove at trial that U.S. Tobacco in fact "controlled" the types and number of competitive products in the store; that U.S. Tobacco "required" exclusive U.S. Tobacco header cards on U.S. Tobacco-provided racks; and that U.S. Tobacco in fact "imposed" restrictions on retailers in terms of what products, racks or POS could be obtained from competing moist snuff suppliers. See Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 3-4, 8-9.

As it turned out, Conwood did not prove that U.S. Tobacco "controlled," "required," or "imposed" anything. After four weeks of trial, Conwood has marshaled what evidence it believes supports U.S. Tobacco's "use" of monopoly power into one paragraph. See Pl. Opp. at 17. Rather than citing evidence that proves U.S. Tobacco actually coerced retailers in any manner, Conwood argues that U.S. Tobacco used monopoly power because (1) "only" U.S. Tobacco can act as category captain; (2) "only" U.S. Tobacco can offer "exclusive" display racks; and (3) "only" U.S. Tobacco can engage in "tortious" conduct. As described below, Conwood's evidence falls well short of that required by the Sixth Circuit and the Supreme Court. Indeed, Conwood's cited evidence falls squarely within the axiom that an alleged monopolist cannot be held liable "as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71 (1966).

Acting as Category Captain. Conwood's expert witness, Dr. Blattberg, testified that "only UST can credibly become category captain because of its market power." Pl. Opp. at 17. Conwood also cites PX39, a 6-page U.S. Tobacco document describing the category management process which states, in part, that "most retailers want the 'top dog' running things." PX39 at 932901. Whatever inferences can be drawn from Dr. Blattberg's opinion, or the oft-quoted document, have nothing to do with the "use" of market power.

First, even if it were true that U.S. Tobacco, because of its size and resources, were the only "credible" category captain, that designation by a retailer cannot be a "use" of monopoly power as a matter of law. Indeed, it is the classic example of a firm having a legitimate advantage because of its past success and current business acumen. See Grinnell, 384 U.S. at 570-71; Seagood Trading Corp. v. Jerrico, Inc., 924 F.2d 1555, 1573 (11th Cir. 1991).

Further, on the record evidence, Dr. Blattberg's naked assertion that U.S. Tobacco is selected by retailers as category captain "because of its market power" is absurd. It cannot be a "use" of monopoly power to make one's self an attractive candidate for category captain: for example, by subscribing to sales data services (Conwood finally subscribes to McLane's in January, 2000, Tr. 3/10 at 111 (Williams)); investing in a data base (Conwood considers it, but fails to include collection of data in its "Retail Incentive Program," Tr. 3/10 at 127-28 (Williams)); equipping a sales force with computers with access to information (Conwood sales force requests computers; Conwood finally invests in computers in January 2000, Tr. 3/10 at 112-14 (Williams)); investing in field offices with regionalized sales analysts (Conwood has no field offices and only two sales analysts for entire sales force, Tr. 3/10 at 106-07 (Williams)); increasing the size of a sales force to provide better retail coverage (Conwood has two times and four times the sales of Swedish Match and Swisher respectively, but same size sales force, Tr. 3/10 at 103-05 (Williams)). Indeed, the very document Conwood relies on, PX39, describes the time, effort, and expense that a company must expend to become an effective and sought-after category captain.[7] And, of course, no retailer testified that he or she chose U.S. Tobacco as category captain because of "market power" as opposed to U.S. Tobacco's willingness to dedicate the time and resources to offer that service. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 32 (Swisher, Swedish Match and U.S. Tobacco selected as category captains based on sales force, resources, access to sales information, P.O.S. capabilities, rack capabilities, and availability of representatives.).

Second, Dr. Blattberg's opinion testimony that "only UST can credibly become category captain" is completely belied by the undisputed record evidence. Smaller moist snuff manufacturers have been chosen as category captain, including for large retail chains. See Tr. 2/29 at 218-20 (Rosson); DX 856 (Swisher, the smallest of the moist snuff competitors, is selected as category captain for K-Mart, one of the largest retailers in the country). Moreover, smaller manufacturers often act as category captain in other packaged-goods product categories. Tr. 3/16 at 18-19 (Weber); Tr. 3/14 at 115-16, 120-21 (Luckett) (category captain not always category leader; depends on capability and confidence with product category). The evidence also was undisputed that firms like Conwood, Swedish Match and Swisher – all of whom do business in multiple smokeless tobacco categories – are well positioned to offer category management services. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 31 (Swisher, Swedish Match and U.S. Tobacco selected as category captain by Wal-Mart); Tr. 3/10 at 99-100 (Williams) (Swisher recognized as an exemplary category captain by Convenience Store News trade publication); Tr. 3/7 at 286-87 (Price) (Swedish Match uses sales information to "pinpoint" products that don't deserve to be on the shelf); Tr. 3/16 at 32-33 (Weber) (Conwood is well-positioned to be category captain because of its participation in different product categories). Dr. Blattberg's bald assertion to the contrary cannot support the jury's verdict as a matter of law. See Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 242 (1993) (jury verdict cannot stand when plaintiff's "expert opinion is not supported by sufficient facts . . . or when indisputable record facts contradict or otherwise render [the] opinion unreasonable"); SCFC ILC, Inc. v. Visa USA, Inc., 36 F.3d 958, 968-69 (10th Cir. 1994) (same).

In short, Conwood's focus at trial on attempting to cast category management – or U.S. Tobacco's status as "category captain" – as a "use" of monopoly power runs squarely into Grinnell's admonition not to condemn a firm's business acumen; it is precisely the type of procompetitive conduct that retailers desire from all manufacturers, and to the extent U.S. Tobacco is in a better position than other competitors to offer those services, that is an economic reality that the antitrust laws applaud rather than condemn.

"Exclusive Vending." The Court correctly observed, at the summary judgment stage, that U.S. Tobacco framed the issues in a way that did not raise the question of whether there were legitimate business reasons for U.S. Tobacco to offer racks that would house all moist snuff products – so-called "exclusive racks." Feb. 17 Op. at 8-9 And this Court held that whether exclusive rack arrangements served a "legitimate purpose" would be an issue for trial. Id. Conwood now argues that it proved at trial that any time a retailer used only U.S. Tobacco racks, it was the result of an unlawful "use" of monopoly power. Apparently, Conwood's position is that "only UST, by virtue of its market power, could obtain permission to house all competitive products." Pl. Opp. at 17 (emphasis added).[8]

Contrary to Conwood's contention, however, the undisputed evidence at trial confirmed that every U.S. Tobacco "exclusive" rack arrangement was because of a retailer's desire to house all moist snuff products in one rack. Indeed, every retailer who was asked (by U.S. Tobacco or Conwood) confirmed that he or she made the independent decision to use only a U.S. Tobacco rack (or, in the case of Marti Stevens, a Conwood rack, see Tr. 3/10 at Stevens, pp. 48-49) whether for purposes of "uniformity," avoidance of "clutter," better use of space or just ensuring compliance by all competitors with a chain-wide planogram. See, e.g., Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 17-18; Tr. 3/14 at 104-05 (Luckett); Tr. 3/16 at Gagnon, pp. 11-12; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, p. 22. Conwood's own witnesses also confirmed that many retailers preferred exclusive racks. See Tr. 3/9 at 204-06 (Hettinger); Tr. 3/24 at Balk, pp. 177-78; Tr. 3/10 at 31-32 (Jeffrey); Tr. 3/8 at 138-39 (Ryan); Tr. 3/7 at 261 (Price); Tr. 3/10 at 13 (Falevsky) (Conwood employee frustrated that retailers wanted to use U.S. Tobacco rack).

Moreover, smaller competitors (including Conwood) compete with U.S. Tobacco to meet the particular rack needs that many retailers demand. Swisher, for example, provides all the moist snuff racks at K-Mart and Tom Thumb, two very large retail chains. Tr. 2/29 at 218-20 (Rosson), DX 856. And Conwood itself had exclusive racks in retail stores – e.g., at 7-Eleven, see DX 554, and several other chains. Tr. 3/24 at Balk, pp. 177-78; Tr. 3/10 at 31-32 (Jeffery) (Conwood sales representative naming two chains in territory with U.S. Tobacco racks only, and [8] Even the contention that it could possibly be a "use" of monopoly power for U.S. Tobacco to "obtain permission" demonstrates vividly that there is no evidence whatsoever of conduct indicative of a monopolist wielding its economic power.

three chains in territory with Conwood racks only). Again, whether it was Swisher at K-Mart or U.S. Tobacco at WalMart, the demands of retailers for "exclusive" racks is what justifies U.S. Tobacco's legitimate business responses as a matter of law.

Equally important, Conwood has no basis to claim after trial that U.S. Tobacco "imposed" any terms on retail customers in relation to rack placement that could even theoretically be characterized as a "use" of monopoly power. Retailers of all types and sizes provided consistent and undisputed testimony that they were free at any time to use another competitor's exclusive rack or to return to multiple rack set ups. See, e.g., Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 24-25; Tr. 3/16 at Jones, p. 13; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, p. 22. Nor did any retailer have any agreement with U.S. Tobacco by which the retailer was required to use only U.S. Tobacco header cards or other POS; that, too, was a voluntary placement by the retailer that could be changed at any time. There is no evidence to the contrary. Thus, the opportunity for rivals to seek alternative rack arrangements with retail stores could not have been less "impaired" – absent a holding by this Court that, as a matter of law, retailers are never allowed to choose "exclusive" U.S. Tobacco racks or header cards, no matter what their reasons for that decision and no matter what their ability to change their decision at any time.

Tortious Conduct. Finally, in what can only be seen as a desperate and improper attempt to equate tortious conduct with a "use" of monopoly power, Conwood cites the testimony of Leroy Keil, a former U.S. Tobacco sales representative who had not worked for the company since 1987. Pl. Opp. at 17. After searching the trial record for some evidence that tortious conduct could in any way relate to monopoly power, Conwood claims that Mr. Keil testified that "UST [is] able to engage in systematic tortious conduct because it was the big dog and let everyone know it." Id. Mr. Keil's actual testimony is worth quoting in full because it is indicative of the smoke screen that is Conwood's entire case, and of what Conwood wishes to characterize as unlawful and anticompetitive conduct:

> Q. Could you read that sentence into the record, please?
> A. ["]UST saw itself as the big dog in the industry, and let everyone else know it."
> Q. Is that a true statement?
> A. Sure, yes.
> Q. And, in your understanding, how did UST let everyone know that UST saw itself as the big dog in the industry?
> A. Well, in the moist snuff department, they controlled 74 to 78 percent share of the market, which does make them the big dog of the industry.
> Q. How did they let people know it?
> A. Through their advertising, through telling, and just through the sales of their product. I mean, everyone knew it.

Tr. 3/13 at Keil, pp. 22-23. That testimony apparently is Conwood's best shot at arguing, in law and from the record evidence, that "tortious conduct" is a use of monopoly power.

While Conwood offers no evidence that any tortious conduct by U.S. Tobacco derived from its alleged market power, numerous witnesses confirmed that any instances of misconduct in the field were not limited to U.S. Tobacco, but were the natural result of large, competitive sales forces. See, e.g., Tr. 3/7 at 285 (Price) (Mr. Price testified: "that's what happens when big sales forces get a little aggressive."); see also Tr. 3/8 at 141-42 (Ryan); Tr. 3/10 at 135, 142-44 (Williams); Tr. 3/8 at 246-47 (Hynek). Moreover, any retailer who was asked – again, no matter what the type or size of organization – testified that he or she controls what goes on in the stores and would never permit any systematic, unauthorized conduct from any supplier, including U.S. Tobacco. See, e.g., Tr. 3/2 at Rusk, p. 81; Tr. 3/14 at 116-17 (Luckett); Tr. 3/22 at 26 (Overby).

In short, there is not one shred of evidence in the trial record that suggests a "use" of monopoly power by U.S. Tobacco. There is no coercion of any kind; there are no threatened refusals to deal; and there are not even any long term arrangements with retailers regarding "exclusive" racks or header cards (let alone products). This is not the posture of an "800 pound gorilla," which perhaps is why Conwood referred to U.S. Tobacco as an "800 pound gorilla" twenty-eight times during opening and closing, but not once in its opposition papers. On this basis alone, judgment as a matter of law is warranted.

IV. ORDINARY MARKETING PRACTICES CANNOT BE "EXCLUSIONARY" AS A MATTER OF LAW

In its moving papers, U.S. Tobacco established that in assessing evidence of "exclusionary" conduct, this Court must look beyond mere evidence of an intent to maintain share or dominate the marketplace. The law is clear, for example, that a monopolist is free, as a matter of law, to devise strategies and programs specifically aimed at maintaining its monopoly as long as they are practices that smaller competitors can or do use as well. See Def. Mem. at 14-33. Indeed, it is well settled that even where there is evidence of anticompetitive intent, a plaintiff must make a separate showing of predatory conduct. See Morgan v. Ponder, 892 F.2d 1355, 1359 (8th Cir. 1989). And contrary to Conwood's suggestion, that principle applies equally in cases where ordinary competitive conduct is not limited to price competition. See Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 524-26, 536 (5th Cir. 1999).[9]

Strikingly, but predictably, Conwood's primary response to this core post-trial issue is to ask this Court to regress back to its summary judgement analysis and refuse to assess what

---

[9] Rather than take this argument head on, Conwood chose to mischaracterize it in the extreme and then call it extreme. See Pl. Opp. at 17-18, n.19 & 20 U.S. Tobacco's argument is not, as Conwood claims, that intent is "irrelevant." U.S. Tobacco's argument, well supported by an abundance of case law, is that intent to be successful at the expense of a rival is normal, typical, expected and not at all unlawful. The pertinent question, however, is what conduct a business firm uses to carry out that intent – hard-nosed competitive conduct or predatory use of monopoly power.

conduct on the full trial record – whether viewed in strands or as a "whole" – cannot be considered exclusionary as a matter of law. The Court should decline Conwood's invitation. Indeed, now that the Court has been shown the entire "forest" at trial, it is undisputed that U.S. Tobacco's conduct in this case is not only practiced by just about every manufacturer of consumer packaged goods sold at retail, Def. Mem. at 14-18, it is essential to the efficient operation of the retail marketplace itself. Alternatively, Conwood asks this Court to defer to the "properly instructed" jury no matter what the evidence actually demonstrated at trial. See Pl. Opp. at 18-19. Neither attempt to have this Court abdicate its Rule 50 role is appropriate.

As a threshold matter, Conwood apparently concedes that, under Section 2, ordinary commercial conduct cannot be considered exclusionary as a matter of law. Thus, Conwood makes no attempt to distinguish cases cited by U.S. Tobacco, such as Trace X Chemical Inc. v. Canadian Industries, Ltd., 738 F.2d 261, 265-67 (8th Cir. 1984) ("ordinary business practices" and "ordinary commercial conduct" cannot support Section 2 liability even assuming express anticompetitive intent); or Telex Corp. v. IBM Corp., 510 F.2d 894, 904, 926-28 (10th Cir. 1975) (same). Nor does Conwood even address Stearns Airport, 170 F.3d at 526, which clearly confirmed that "competition on the merits" is to be defined as broadly as the market realities dictate, and is not to be limited to price competition alone.

Moreover, Conwood's attempted distinction of Langenderfer, 917 F.2d at 1422, precisely frames the issue. See Pl. Opp. at 18 n.20. Conwood points out that despite an "objective [] to 'injure its rivals,'" the defendant's practices were entirely lawful, ordinary competition. Id. Like the defendant in that case, U.S. Tobacco arguably had an intent to "'injure' its rivals," but its conduct was ordinary commercial conduct and entirely lawful.[10] Such conduct does not become unlawful – or "exclusionary" – simply because U.S. Tobacco has a large sales share or because Conwood suffered the consequences of lagging behind in an increasingly competitive marketplace. It is the inherent nature of the competitive process that "'at some point there are winners and losers, and losers are excluded.'" See Balaklaw v. Lovell, 14 F.3d 793, 801 (2d Cir. 1994) (citation omitted). It is Conwood, not U.S. Tobacco, that cannot come to "grips" with that market reality. As described below, Conwood does not dispute that U.S. Tobacco's conduct, as shown at trial, is a standard part of the competitive process whether viewed as "separate strands of evidence" or as a collective whole. Morevoer, as the Eighth Circuit recently held, ordinary competitive conduct cannot violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act regardless of the jury's verdict. See Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 207 F.3d 1039 (8th Cir. 2000). There, as here, what conduct is lawful under the antitrust laws is a question of law for the Court, not a question of fact for the jury.

A. Product Assortment Recommendations/Category Management

Conwood does not dispute that no court has ever found that it can constitute "exclusionary" conduct to make recommendations to retailers, including in the context of a category management collaboration. This Court would be the first. Instead, Conwood attempts to distinguish each case cited by U.S. Tobacco on procedural grounds, even though the fundamental inquiry of each court was the same one required here – Was the conduct at issue normal competitive behavior available to all in the marketplace? See Trace X, 738 F.2d at 265-67; Telex, 510 F.2d at 904, 926-

---

[10] Conwood's attempt to distinguish Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 860 (6th Cir. 1979) also highlights the relative simplicity of this case. As Conwood points out, the conduct in that case was tortious conduct coupled with an unlawful refusal to deal, a well-recognized use of monopoly power not at issue here. See Pl. Opp. at 18 n.20.

28. Without exception, each court that has considered the varied attempts of product manufacturers to gain and preserve shelf space in the retail industry has found that, absent coercion, such practices are, at most, "hard-nosed" competition, see Jays Foods, Inc. v. Frito-Lay, Inc., 664 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ill. 1987), aff'd mem., 860 F.2d 1082 (7th Cir. 1988), but more typically, procompetitive behavior well accepted in the retail industry. See In re Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8, 144, 277 (1982); see also Def. Mem. at 17-22.[11]

The evidence presented at trial established that the moist snuff industry is no different. As with other product categories, recommendations regarding product assortment are the rule, not the exception, for each manufacturer's sales force. Without taking testimonial snippets out of context, and without having a paid expert "interpret" selected documents, the record evidence speaks for itself:

- Swedish Match, a company with half the sales share of Conwood, attempts to convince retailers to carry its Timberwolf products over Conwood's Cougar products or U.S. Tobacco's Red Seal products. Tr. 3/7 at 274-75 (Price).

- Swedish Match targets competitors' products that don't deserve to be on the shelf, and such products get eliminated as part of everyday business. Tr. 3/7 at 286-87 (Price).

- Swisher, a company with one-fourth the sales of Conwood, makes product mix and shelf space recommendations to one of the largest national retailers in the country – K-

---

[11] Again, Conwood's tactic of legal argument seems to be to mischaracterize U.S. Tobacco's arguments in the extreme and then criticize them for being extreme. Pl. Opp. at 21 n.23. U.S. Tobacco does not argue, as Conwood contends, that any conduct at issue is "lawful per se." Rather, U.S. Tobacco argues that the evidence presented by Conwood in this case does not prove anything more than conduct that has been found to be lawful and procompetitive. See Def. Mem. at 17-22. Moreover, Conwood's suggestion that the court in Frito-Lay, Inc. v. Bachman Co., 659 F. Supp. 1129 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), "approved" plaintiff's Section 2 claim, even though the court dismissed plaintiff's Section 1 claim, id. at 1133, is a misstatement of the case. See Pl. Mem. at 21. What Conwood fails to disclose to this Court is that Frito-Lay did not move for summary judgment on the Section 2 claim on the basis of lawful conduct, but instead only challenged market definition and market power, issues upon which it eventually prevailed on summary judgment.

Mart. Tr. 2/29 at 218-20 (Rosson). The results are the same for Conwood: Swisher obtains exclusive vending, and Conwood facings are reduced to 1 facing of Kodiak only. DX 856.

- Conwood makes planogram suggestions and recommendations to retailers about competitive products. Tr. 3/8 at 260-61; 273-74 (Hynek).

- Conwood targets Timberwolf and Helme products for elimination in its presentations. Tr. 2/29 at 159-65 (Rosson), DX 808, DX 888.

- Conwood seeks to eliminate private label brands that don't sell well. Tr. 2/29 at 159-65 (Rosson), DX 688.

- Mr. Rosson testified that the elimination of competitors' products as part of the competitive process "happens every day." Tr. 2/29 at 159-65 (Rosson).

Further, the fact that this competition for shelf space may take place in the context of a category management relationship between U.S. Tobacco and a retailer does not make it any less ordinary. On the contrary, the undisputed record is that category management recommendations by leading manufacturers in every consumer product category are now an essential part of the efficient operation of the marketplace. See Tr. 3/14 at 52-54, 56-57, 57-58 (Blattberg); Tr. 3/16 at 9-11 (Weber). In this ordinary competitive process, the marketplace itself weeds out those manufacturers who "abuse" that relationship. See, e.g., Tr. 3/14 at 116-17 (Luckett) (ousting Proctor and Gamble, a manufacturer many times the size of U.S. Tobacco, for making misleading presentations). This is especially the case where, as here, no manufacturers are foreclosed from making their own suggestions or commenting on those of the category leader. See Tr. 3/9 at 10 (Hynek) (Conwood employee testifies it was part of his job to recommend Cougar over Timberwolf); Tr. 2/29 at 159-65 (Rosson) (Conwood's chairman recognized that Conwood has access to retailers and recommends deletion of competitive products; "That's competition, I presume."); Tr. 3/7 at 171-75 (Milano), PX 23 (document indicates that Conwood had equal access to present its brands); Tr. 3/9 at 137-39 (Gundlach) (Conwood expert recognizes that all companies had access to Wal-Mart); Tr. 3/7 at 264-66 (Price) (Mr. Price testifies that it is part of the competitive process to make presentations regarding racks and products); id. at 267 (U.S. Tobacco, Swisher and Swedish Match all had access to Wal-Mart).

The evidence also established that for the relatively few retailers that had category management relationships with U.S. Tobacco, no retailer testified that U.S. Tobacco "abused" category management principles.[12] Moreover, notwithstanding all of his work on this case, Dr. Blattberg could point to only one instance when he believed U.S. Tobacco affirmatively misrepresented facts in a category management presentation, and that was where he simply disagreed with U.S. Tobacco's method of calculating inventory costs. Tr. 3/14 at 69-72 (Blattberg). It is not for the antitrust laws, Dr. Blattberg or juries to regulate this relatively new, but now standard, form of competition in the retail industry.

Conwood also attacks the concept of SOF=SOM, but offers no legal authority whatsoever that seeking SOF=SOM could be unlawful under the antitrust laws.[13] Conwood indicates that U.S. Tobacco did not "need" SOF=SOM in order to sell its product "adequately," see Pl. Opp. at 22, and that "there was no legitimate reason" for U.S. Tobacco to seek SOF=SOM. Id. (improperly citing testimony of Gary Milano that had nothing to do with SOF=SOM); see also Tr.

[12] In fact, all retailer testimony was to the contrary. See, e.g., Tr. 3/14 at 117-18 (Luckett); id. at 169 ("manufacturer would ultimately be committing suicide if it gave misleading numbers."); Tr. 3/15 at Walden, pp. 29-30 ("no misleading data has ever been provided"); Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 34 (U.S. Tobacco provides unbiased information).

[13] All law is to the contrary. For example, in Bayou Bottling, Inc. v. Dr. Pepper Co., 725 F.2d 300 (5th Cir. 1984), the court held that a plaintiff could not complain of a defendant seeking and obtaining SOF=SOM, as a matter of antitrust injury, a concept that is equally applicable to claims under Section 1, Section 2, and any state antitrust laws modeled after the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

3/6 at 99-100 (Milano). The observation that U.S. Tobacco did not "need" SOF=SOM, in Conwood's view, does not alter the fact that, if U.S. Tobacco wished to, it would be ordinary competitive activity to seek or even obtain SOF=SOM. Retailers testified that this was a common marketing practice in numerous product categories, see, e.g., Tr. 3/14 at 122 (Luckett) (retailer testifies that he starts with SOF=SOM as the basis of the plan-o-gram), and even Dr. Blattberg begrudgingly conceded that SOF=SOM is a proper factor in determining shelf allocation. Tr. 3/14 at 16-18, 32-33 (Blattberg) (Dr. Blattberg concedes that U.S. Tobacco's SOF is less than its SOM in the overall marketplace).

Further, Conwood's economic expert conceded that U.S. Tobacco did not obtain SOF=SOM, even in the retail chains used by Dr. Kamien to perform his dubious shelf space/retail price study. Tr. 3/3 at 57-65 (Kamien); see also Tr. 3/14 at 32-33 (Blattberg) (Conwood's category management expert testified about U.S. Tobacco's share of shelf space: "Oh, I know its below its share of sales."). And, as Mr. Milano actually testified, U.S. Tobacco presents information on SOF and SOM in order to improve its overall product shelf-space representation in retail stores. Mr. Milano's actual testimony on the subject of SOF=SOM is, to the letter, consistent with Dr. Blattberg's:

> Q. Does U.S. Tobacco, as part of category management, ever use the share of fixture versus – equals share of sales formulation to the stores that the stores have a certain number of facings allocated to U.S. Tobacco based on its share of sales?
> A. Yes. We show them share of fixture and share of sales.
> Q. And you suggest to them that they should give you as many fixtures as your share of sales approximates, right?
> A. No. Our recommendation wouldn't be always that we get exactly the same amount of facings to equal our share of sales.
> Q. Well, isn't it true that you tell stores that the number of facings you should have equal or be close to your share of sales?

A. Closer to it would be a recommendation and information for a retailer to make a decision.

Tr. 3/6 at 79-80 (Milano); see also id. at 84 (U.S. Tobacco should get fair share of shelf space).

In light of this evidence, Conwood's reliance on testimony by U.S. Tobacco's executives that product mix and space allocation recommendations to retailers are somehow "inappropriate" is not only a gross mischaracterization, it is legally irrelevant. For example, U.S. Tobacco's Vice President of Sales, Gary Milano, testified no fewer than seven times that, although seeking to eliminate a competitor's product with no justification may be inappropriate, making fact-based presentations that result in the elimination of competitive products is exactly what a sales force is supposed to do. Tr. 3/6 at 112, 115-16, 116-17 (Milano); Tr. 3/7 at 11-13, 22, 23, 23-26 (Milano). Similarly, not one of the citations to Mr. Gierer's testimony in Conwood's opposition papers has anything to do with the appropriateness of any conduct in the field. See Pl. Opp. at 19-20 (citing testimony that Mr. Gierer was disappointed with the testimony of certain U.S. Tobacco personnel). But even assuming U.S. Tobacco executives found certain examples of conduct to be "inappropriate," that does not convert conduct that is prevalent in the marketplace and practiced by all manufacturers into an "exclusionary" use of monopoly power violative of Section 2.

At bottom, U.S. Tobacco's marketing practices are entirely consistent with established case law holding such conduct to be perfectly lawful competition available to all participants in the retail industry.

B. Offering And Providing Exclusive Product Display Racks

U.S. Tobacco established at trial that the competition among manufacturers to innovate product display racks and to offer and provide them to retailers is an ordinary and important aspect of competition in the retail environment. See Def. Mem. at 23-27. U.S. Tobacco established that many retailers – usually large chains – often do not want to use multiple racks for merchandising moist snuff and other products. See id. at 25; see also Tr. 3/7 at 262-63 (Price). U.S. Tobacco also established that the manufacturer that wins the competition to provide a uniform rack to a retailer may gain an advantage in terms of product and POS placement. See Def. Mem. at 26-27. And U.S. Tobacco established that all moist snuff manufacturers participate in this competition with varying degrees of skill and effort, and correspondingly, with varying degrees of success. See id. at 25-26; see also Tr. 2/29 at 218-20 (Rosson), DX 856; Tr. 3/24 at Balk, pp. 177-78; Tr. 3/10 at 31-32 (Jeffery) (Conwood sales representative naming two chains in territory with U.S. Tobacco racks only, and three chains in territory with Conwood racks only). Finally, U.S. Tobacco established that all manufacturers are able to try to persuade any retailer to use multiple racks. See Def. Mem. at 26-27.

Conwood does not dispute any of these facts; nor could it. As U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, there is absolutely no evidence in the record that U.S. Tobacco does anything to exclude competitors from the competitive process with respect to the development or placement of moist snuff racks. There is no evidence that U.S. Tobacco coerces retailers into rack selection in any manner. There is no evidence that U.S. Tobacco enters any agreements that preclude retailers from choosing another competitor's racks or using multiple racks at any time. See supra Section III. Again, Conwood does not and cannot dispute any of these facts.

Instead, Conwood argues that U.S. Tobacco used exclusive vending "as a platform" to reduce competitive facings through category management "abuses." Pl. Opp. at 24-25. Conwood, however, cites no evidence whatsoever that the product mix and space allocation strategy chosen by any retailer had anything to do with that retailer's rack selection. Pl. Opp. at 23-26. Indeed, the undisputed evidence confirms the exact opposite – planograms are designed first, rack selection follows. See, e.g., Tr. 3/14 at 99, 104-05 (Luckett); Tr. 3/9 at Renfro, pp. 62-64; Tr. 3/14 at 18 (Blattberg). But even if there were evidence that planograms were somehow linked to rack selection, to the extent a manufacturer – whether it be U.S. Tobacco, Swisher, Swedish Match, or Conwood – gained some advantage by persuading a retailer to use its rack, that advantage would be the result of competition, not the exclusion from competition. See Def. Mem. at 25 (citing Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. F.C. Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 524 (5th Cir. 1999)).[14]

The critical material facts regarding "exclusive" racks remain unchallenged by Conwood. Many retailers want them, and all moist snuff manufacturers are free to try to persuade a retailer to use that company's display racks, either exclusively or alongside other racks. Further, every single retailer in this country may choose, at any time, to use single or multiple racks, and may choose, at any time, to use the rack of any moist snuff company. Some retailers have selected multiple racks; some have selected racks from U.S. Tobacco; some retailers have selected racks from Swisher; and some retailers have selected racks from Conwood. The competition is playing out as it should. But whatever the results of that competition, no reasonable jury could have found that so-called "exclusive vending" is anything but an ordinary marketing practice used by all competitors in the moist snuff and other industries.

[14] Conwood does not even address the fact that its own expert concluded that U.S. Tobacco had "exclusive rack agreements" with only 7% of the retail locations in the alleged market. This concession, together with Conwood's admission that "[w]here each competitor had its own rack, there was no such choke point [against competitive distribution]," Pl. Opp. at 24 n.27, confirms that there could have been no market-wide harm to competition as a result of either "exclusive rack agreements" (over 90% of retail locations unaffected) or from category management "abuses" (no "choke point" in over 90% of retail locations).

C. CAP and Other Incentive/Promotional Programs

In its moving papers, U.S. Tobacco established three significant points with respect to the Customer Alliance Program. First, the maximum payment under CAP – 8 cents per 10-can roll (3 cents for merchandising component; 2 cents for product handling component; and 3 cents for display component) – is not coercive and has not been shown to have affected any retailer's decisions with respect to racks, POS, or products. See Def. Mem. at 31-33. Second, payment under any component of the CAP program does not require "exclusive vending," "exclusive POS," or the elimination of products. See id. at 28-31. Third, any retailer participating in the CAP program is completely free to end that participation at any time, either by terminating the contract at will, or by simply forgoing payments for any given quarter. See Def. Mem. at 27-28, 31-33.

Conwood's response is to point to the same handful of CAP worksheets that, at most, indicate situations in which a retailer has chosen to use a U.S. Tobacco rack for all moist snuff products or has chosen to use a single U.S. Tobacco header card. Pl. Opp. at 27 n.31. What Conwood did not and cannot do, however, is to point to any evidence: (1) that any retailer was required under the CAP program to use a U.S. Tobacco rack or a U.S. Tobacco header card exclusively; (2) that the retailers who signed the cited worksheets made their decisions because of the CAP program; (3) that any retailer was, or even could be, coerced by an 8-cent rebate on a $27 purchase; (4) that any retailer was "locked in" and could not change his decisions, or terminate the program, at any time; or (5) that Conwood and every other moist snuff manufacturer was not free and able to offer a program identical to CAP. Without such evidence, no reasonable jury could find that U.S. Tobacco's CAP program was an unlawful use of monopoly power.

Conwood's reliance on R.J. Reynolds and on LePage's Inc. v. 3M is clearly misplaced, and its attempt to distinguish Beverage Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp. 1144 (S.D. Ohio 1986), a case that is right on point, cannot be well-taken. First, in sharp contrast to U.S. Tobacco's CAP program, the incentive programs in R.J. Reynolds and LePage's were economically coercive according to retailers that testified in those case. See R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Philip Morris Inc., 60 F. Supp. 2d 502 (M.D.N.C. 1999) (preliminary injunction issued where retailers testified that Philip Morris incentive program was coercive and left them with no alternative but to comply in order to receive large conditional promotional monies); LePage's Inc. v. 3M, No. Civ. A. 97-3983, 1999 WL 346223 (E.D. Pa. May 14, 1999) (economically coercive program requiring the complete exclusion of competitive products).

Second, Conwood's statement that the court in Beverage Management determined that Coca-Cola's CMA program "did nothing more than promote the sale of one competitor's products without any exclusion of other competitors" is a gross misstatement of that case. Pl. Opp. at 27 n.33. In Beverage Management, the plaintiff, like Conwood does here, complained that Coca-Cola's CMA program called for exclusive advertising and prevented plaintiff from promoting its products resulting in lost sales. The court rejected plaintiff's Section 2 claim because, among other things: (1) the sliding-scale rebate program was not coercive; (2) retail participants were free to terminate the program at any time; and (3) plaintiff could have offered a similar rebate program. Accordingly, Beverage Management is right on point.

Finally, the Eighth Circuit recently determined that even an optional incentive program that offered rebates directly linked to increasing an alleged monopolist's market share could not, as a matter of law, violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act. See Concord Boat, 207 F.3d at 1059 (where customers are not "locked in" and are free to deal with other suppliers, Section 2 cannot be violated as a matter of law). It would be an inexplicable juxtaposition to have this Court condemn CAP, while the Eighth Circuit upheld an incentive program directly linked to market share that the district court found to be de facto exclusive dealing arrangements.

In proper context, CAP is the most ordinary of incentive programs, even if it results in preferential product display for U.S. Tobacco.

* * * *

In sum, the evidence at trial established without question that all of these "strands" of competition – including U.S. Tobacco's attempt to influence decisions concerning product assortment, racks or POS – are integral parts of the efficient operation of the marketplace. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, p. 96; Tr. 3/16 at Dill, pp. 10-11, 21, 34-35; Tr. 3/16 at Gagnon, p. 11; Tr. 3/16 at Jones, p. 9; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, pp. 61-62. And to condemn that type of competition from U.S. Tobacco simply because of its large sales share would stifle the competitive process, condemn U.S. Tobacco simply because of its size, and contravene every Section 2 case decided to date regarding the meaning of ordinary competitive activity.

D. Alleged Tortious Conduct Is Not Exclusionary Under Section 2

Finally, with respect to the removal of racks, Conwood's tactic, as at trial, continues to be to blur the critical distinction between authorized and unauthorized activity. See, e.g., Pl. Opp. at 29 n.35 (citing testimony of authorized activity as examples of "tortious theft of competitors' products, racks, and/or POS from stores"). Activity that is authorized by a retailer that owns, operates, or manages a store or group of stores, however, is not "tortious" and cannot form the basis of any antitrust liability. See Def. Mem. at 33-37. In fact, it is undisputed that conducting a store reset and removing a competitor's rack is an ordinary and common part of doing business. See Tr. 3/10 at 135-36 (Williams) (Conwood's National Sales Manager); Tr. 3/7 at 285-86 (Price) (Swedish Match's head of sales).

Conwood's evidence of truly unauthorized activity by U.S. Tobacco included the testimony of only four single-store retailers, only one of which testified to anything more than a single incident. See Def. Mem. at 36. As U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, if Conwood's claim of pervasive and widespread "tortious theft of competitors' products, racks and/or POS" were true, retailers would have taken notice and there would have been substantial retailer testimony of repeated instances of misconduct. See Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 59-60. That was not the case. As it stands, there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to have concluded that the sporadic misconduct foreclosed competition and violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act.

V. CONWOOD DID NOT ESTABLISH HARM TO COMPETITION

U.S. Tobacco demonstrated that Conwood failed to prove overall harm to competition in the alleged market. Conwood's response essentially is to argue that because its claims include an intent to injure competition, competition was necessarily injured. Pl. Opp. at 29-34. Under this theory, again unsupported and unsupportable by any case law, every Section 2 plaintiff could prove harm to competition merely by bringing its claim and asserting that, absent the complained-of conduct, it would have done better and then trotting a few executives into court to say so. The antitrust laws, however, require more.

A. Conwood Did Not Prove Harm To The Competitive Process

The antitrust laws are concerned with protecting the competitive process, not individual competitors. See Def. Mem. at 37-41. Conwood complains that U.S. Tobacco reduced distribution and exposure of competitive products by dealing with retailers, yet Conwood does not even address the undisputed record evidence that all doors are open; retailers want recommendations from all manufacturers; and any company willing to make the effort may participate in the competitive process to influence retailer decisions.

Indeed, literally every retailer witness who testified confirmed that the door is always open for all competitors to make their best pitch on product selection and assortment, racks and POS. See, e.g., Tr. 3/9 at Renfro, pp. 43, 66-67, 74-75; Tr. 3/15 at 121 (Luckett); Tr. 3/15 at McGuire, pp. 8-9; Tr. 3/16 at Dill, pp. 10-11, 34-35; Tr. 3/16 at Jones, p. 9. Competitors such as Swedish Match confirmed this as well, see Tr. 3/7 at 264-67 (Price), as did Conwood executives and employees. See, e.g., Tr. 2/29 at 159-65 (Rosson). The evidence also was undisputed that any retailer can change product assortment, racks or POS (including header cards) at any time. See Tr. 3/9 at Renfro, pp. 66-67; Tr. 3/14 at 109 (Luckett); Tr. 3/15 at McGuire, pp. 25-26; Tr. 3/15 at Walden, pp. 25-26, 110; Tr. 3/16 at Carlson, pp. 17-18, 24-25; Tr. 3/16 at Gagnon, pp. 10-11, 15, 17; Tr. 3/16 at Jones, p. 13; Tr. 3/22 at Laessig, p. 25. And, again, U.S. Tobacco's competitors, including Conwood, do not and cannot disagree with these undisputed facts. See Tr. 3/7 at 264-67 (Price); Tr. 2/29 at 105, 159-65, 181-83, 186-87 (Rosson).

Conwood, however, chose to sit on its hands in the marketplace rather than participate in the competition like all the other moist snuff manufacturers. See, e.g., Tr. 2/29 at 181-83 (Rosson) (Rosson testified that Conwood made no attempt to compete at Wal-Mart); Tr. 3/10 at 111

(Williams) (Conwood waited until January, 2000 even to purchase sales data from McLane in order to make factual presentations to retailers); Tr. 3/7 at 267-68 (Price) (Mr. Price testified that Conwood was only company that did not participate in the Wal-Mart reset). Conwood then complained that the participation of other companies in the competitive process is anticompetitive and exclusionary. But see Tr. 3/14 at 72-74 (Blattberg) (Blattberg testified that the investment in sales information was too "expensive"). That is not proof of harm to competition in any respect recognized by the antitrust laws.

Accordingly, whatever the Court finds regarding U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct, there was no basis for the jury to conclude that the competitive process was adversely affected as it must be to violate Section 2. See Def. Mem. at 37-41.

B. Conwood Did Not Prove Actual Harm To The Overall Marketplace

U.S. Tobacco also established that Conwood did not demonstrate any harm to the overall market. Indeed, Conwood could not prove this essential element of antitrust injury given the overwhelming and undisputed evidence that the marketplace has witnessed unprecedented growth and sales, unprecedented breadth in product selection, unprecedented price competition through promotions and the introduction of price-value products, and – in this allegedly restricted period – unprecedented distribution of competitive products. See Def. Mem. at 37-41.

Conwood's response to these straight-forward, undisputed facts is again to tout the opinion testimony of Mr. Rosson and Mr. McClure, both of whom believed their companies would have done better. Pl. Opp. at 30. Conwood also offers the opinion testimony of Dr. Kamien's shelf space/price study, a "price" study that used average retail prices and therefore did not account for promotions or for the lowest price option – i.e., price-value products – available to consumers in a particular store. Id. at 31.[15] Finally, Conwood claims that overall sales were reduced in WalMart and 7-Eleven. Id. at 33. Notwithstanding that this latter assertion is factually inaccurate (it is undisputed that overall sales increased in both WalMart and 7-Eleven, see Tr. 3/1 at 53, 59 (Kamien)), it says nothing about output in the overall moist snuff "market" – the proper inquiry of any economic study. See Tr. 3/1 at 49-50 (Kamien) (Dr. Kamien concedes that more product being sold in the overall market is "a symptom that consumers are benefitting.") None of Conwood's "evidence" is sufficient to support the jury's verdict on this element of Section 2.

Like any antitrust plaintiff, Conwood can put its chairman on the stand to opine that Conwood would have done better, and can find another competitor to make the same assertion. But these bald assertions do not and cannot dispute the economic reality of the moist snuff "market": (1) two companies besides U.S. Tobacco and Conwood entered the moist snuff segment prior to 1990, each of which continued to gain sales share, actual sales and profits during the 1990's; (2) all moist snuff companies have successfully introduced new products and gained distribution throughout the country in the 1990's; (3) overall sales of moist snuff have increased steadily throughout the 1990's; (4) price competition and promotional activities have increased during the time period; and (5) all moist snuff companies have introduced price-value products. See Def. Mem. at 39-40.

Under established case law, all of these facts are dispositive of a competitive market, and Conwood's attempt to use a footnote summarily to dismiss the cases cited by U.S. Tobacco cannot change the law. For example, there can be no doubt that the plaintiff in Western Parcel Express v. United Parcel Service of America, Inc., 190 F.3d 974 (9th Cir. 1999), claimed that it

[15] It also should be noted that not a single one of the hand-picked stores Dr. Kamien used in his "price" study allocated shelf space to U.S. Tobacco products in relation to U.S. Tobacco's share of sales. Tr. 3/3 at 58-65 (Kamien).

"could have done better" in the absence of the complained-of exclusive dealing and volume discounts. Thus, Conwood's attempt to distinguish Western Parcel by claiming that, in that case, the defendant offered "uncontradicted evidence" is no distinction at all. There, like here, the evidence offered by the defendant was of overall market expansion, entry and expansion of competitors, and a plaintiff that experienced increases in profits during the relevant time period. Id. at 976. There, like here, the inevitable conclusion was that, as a matter of law, there was no harm to overall competition. Similarly, in R.W. International Corp. v. Welch Food, Inc., 13 F.3d 478, 486-88 (1st Cir. 1994), plaintiff could not overcome evidence that its products were in over 80% of the stores, demonstrating successful entry. Again, there can be no doubt that the plaintiff claimed it "could have done better." That was not enough.

Similarly, Dr. Kamien's "study" of average retail prices, at best, confirms only that U.S. Tobacco has a broader selection of premium-priced products than everyone else; accordingly, and unremarkably, the more U.S. Tobacco products were chosen by retailers, the higher the average price. Moreover, even Dr. Kamien agreed that retailers should be allowed to choose a premium-priced product strategy, see Tr. 3/1 at 62 (Kamien), and the record confirmed that many retailers do not want to carry a broad selection of price-value brands (or any at all). See, e.g., Tr. 3/7 at 30, 165-66 (Milano) (citing examples). The resulting "market" price from these routine retailer decisions can hardly be called harm to competition.

In short, these cases relied on by U.S. Tobacco are not so easily discarded, and any application of the law to the undisputed facts of this case confirms that no reasonable jury could find that Conwood proved harm to the overall moist snuff "market."

VI. CONWOOD DID NOT PROVE HARM TO ITSELF

Conwood's "proof" concerning antitrust injury to itself is equally, if not more, deficient. In 1982, Conwood introduced Kodiak, its most successful moist snuff product. Tr. 2/29 at 72-73 (Rosson). Mr. Rosson testified that the Kodiak was successful because it was unique – a long cut wintergreen product. Id. Since the introduction of Kodiak, Conwood has not developed or introduced any other product that is unique in any way. Tr. 3/8 at 71 (Leftwich). Conwood's "secondary brands" – as they are called by Conwood itself – were all "me too" products in terms of cut, flavor and price. Id. According to Conwood's own Vice President of Marketing, Conwood stopped promoting it secondary products because, in his view, they had topped out. Tr. 3/20 at W. Cothren, pp. 124-26. With no growth expected from its secondary brands, Conwood's only promotional effort was with its flagship Kodiak product – Conwood offered biannual 40-cent Kodiak buy down promotions. Tr. 3/10 at 139 (Williams). By the mid-1990's, however, that product had been on the market for over 12 years, and many competitive long cut wintergreen products were, by then, available to consumers, including price-value products. Tr. 3/7 at 123-24 (Milano) (approximately 40 wintergreen moist snuff products being offered today).

Nevertheless, without innovating new products, without innovating display racks, and without any other new business development efforts, Conwood maintained a steady growth rate throughout the 1990's – exactly the same growth rate it experienced in the 1980's. See Tr. 3/8 at 68-71 (Leftwich) (Dr. Leftwich concedes that Conwood's sales growth is consistent and uninterrupted from 1984 to 1997). Each year, Conwood increased sales and profits. See Tr. 3/23 at 41-43 (Scheffman), DX 40, DX 57.

Dispositively, there is no discernable point in time at which Conwood's sales growth slows commensurate with its theory of harm in this case. Tr. 3/8 at 68-71 (Leftwich).[16] This comes as no surprise: (1) Conwood's Kodiak brand is in over 80% of the stores (only slightly under U.S. Tobacco's distribution of Copenhagen); (2) Conwood's secondary brands, according to its marketing department, have "too much distribution"; and (3) Conwood's display racks and POS materials are in 70%-90% of stores. See Def. Mem. at 41-42. Conwood does not dispute any of these facts about what the marketplace actually looks like. The long and short of the story is that Conwood's products are available to any consumer who wishes to buy them.

Thus, the only factor Conwood can point to claim any injury to itself is the fact that its sales share did not grow as fast as it grew in the 1980's (it still grew, just not at the same rate). Pl. Opp. at 33-34.[17] Conwood's only attempt to establish that its share should have grown at the same rate is, again, to elicit the testimony of its own employees that "we could have done better." See Pl. Opp. at 30. As U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, this "evidence" is not sufficient to establish injury in fact. Accordingly, judgment as a matter of law should be entered.

VII. CONWOOD DID NOT PROVE CAUSATION

In its moving papers, U.S. Tobacco demonstrated that Conwood did not prove that a single lost sale was caused by the allegedly unlawful conduct. In response, Conwood does not offer

---

[16] Contrary to what Conwood stated, U.S. Tobacco does not argue that a plaintiff must show "that its sales decreased in absolute terms" or that Conwood had to go "bankrupt." Pl. Opp. at 30 n. 36 and 34. Rather, U.S. Tobacco argues that a plaintiff, at the very minimum, must show that its actual sales changed in some way attributable to the complained-of conduct. Here, Conwood's sales grew steadily and without interruption.

[17] Conwood intentionally ignores the fact that, unlike in the 1980's, two new companies, Swisher and Swedish Match, were introducing products and gaining share in the alleged market. Tr. 3/23 at 51-53 (Scheffman), DX 14, DX 15, DX 18; see also Section VII, infra.

any evidence that demonstrates with the requisite "reasonable certainty" that its alleged harm – the slowing of its growth in share despite its continuous and uninterrupted growth in sales – was caused by U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct as opposed to other marketplace factors. Pl. Opp. at 34-36. Indeed, rather than offer any such evidence, Conwood would have this Court shift the burden to U.S. Tobacco to demonstrate that all of Conwood's claimed injury was caused by other factors in the marketplace. Pl. Opp. at 35-36.

For example, in a perverse twist of Sixth Circuit law, Conwood contends that the "necessary predicate" requirement of Valley Products Co. v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398 (6th Cir. 1997), Axis, S.p.A v. Micafil, Inc., 870 F.2d 1105 (6th Cir.1989), and Baum Research & Development Co. v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co., 31 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (E.D. Mich. 1998), shifts the burden of proof to the defendant to demonstrate that all of a plaintiff's claimed injury was caused by "lawful acts of exclusion." See Pl. Opp. at 36 n.42. The result of Conwood's theory, of course, would be to hold U.S. Tobacco liable for any and all factors that may have affected Conwood's sales during the 1990's.[18]

Thus, for every lost sale that resulted from a retailer's decision not to carry Kodiak Straight, U.S. Tobacco must foot the bill. For every lost sale of Kodiak that resulted from products being displayed behind the counter out of the reach of consumers because of state regulations, U.S. Tobacco must foot the bill. For every lost sale that resulted from a consumer trying the new Timberwolf products, U.S. Tobacco must foot the bill. For every lost sale that resulted from a

[18] At the same time, however, Conwood claims that the "jury determined that Conwood's actual damages 'only' from UST's antitrust violation amounted to $350,000,000." Pl. Opp. at 37. Conwood does not offer any insight as to how the jury had any basis to make that determination.

consumer switching to another product because of a generous coupon offer, U.S. Tobacco must foot the bill. The list goes on.

In its moving papers, U.S. Tobacco demonstrated – with undisputed record evidence – that all of these marketplace factors, and others, affected Conwood's ability to maintain its share growth. See Def. Mem. at 42-49. And, as described below, Conwood does not dispute any of this evidence; nor does it attempt to demonstrate – with record evidence of its own – a single lost sale that can be attributed with any fair degree of certainty to U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct.

A. Independent, Uncoerced Decisions of Retailers

On summary judgment, this Court held that Conwood must prove that its claimed injury was not caused by the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers. Feb. 17, 2000 Order at 10. Conwood made no attempt to meet this burden of proof at trial, see Tr. 3/28 at 51 (Closing Argument) ("this case isn't about the stores"), and makes no attempt now to present evidence in its opposition papers to support any finding that its claimed injury was the result of anything but the uncoerced choices of retailers. See Pl. Opp. at 34-336. It is no answer for Conwood to continue in its position – declared forcefully numerous times for the jury – that no retailer even can make a decision independent of U.S. Tobacco because U.S. Tobacco's seeks to "influence" those decisions. Tr. 3/13 at 24 (McClure). Under that theory, no retailer that communicates with a manufacturer at any time can ever make "independent" decisions; that is not the law under the Sixth Circuit's "necessary predicate" line of cases and this Court's prior ruling. Moreover, the issue is not whether the retailers' decisions were influenced by U.S. Tobacco, but whether Conwood's alleged harm flowed directly from the decisions that retailers had the lawful right to make. See Def. Mem. at 45. Conwood's refusal to recognize that its problems stem from the lawful decisions of retailers – whether or not influenced by competition by U.S. Tobacco – and not from unlawful conduct of U.S. Tobacco, is also at the root of Conwood's request for an injunction that would take away the rights of retailers to run their stores the way they see fit. See Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiffs' Request for Permanent Injunctive Relief at 17-18.

Ultimately, and contrary to Conwood's assertion, this case is all about retailers, especially on the issue of causation. As this Court held in its February 17, 2000 Order, Conwood cannot recover damages for claimed lost sales that may have been caused by the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers. The overwhelming and uncontroverted evidence in this case is that retailers make their own uncoerced decisions about products, racks and POS at the end of a competitive process in which all suppliers do their best to influence those decisions. In fact, there is no evidence that retailers' ultimate decisions are anything but their own: they own, operate, and manage the stores; they serve their own self interest to maximize profits; and they determine their own success in their own sphere of competition – i.e., competition against other retailers to win consumer sales. See Def. Mem. at 44-46. Conwood should not be allowed to by-pass the Sixth Circuit's "necessary predicate" standard and not only ignore, but contradict, the sworn testimony of every retailer in this case, simply by asserting – without proving – that some loss may be attributable to U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct.

B. Other Factors in the Marketplace

Conwood also continues simply to ignore the undisputed evidence that, in the 1990's, Conwood faced more competition from all of its competitors in terms of new products, in terms of promotional activity, in terms of meeting the needs and desires of retail customers, and in terms of price competition. See Def. Mem. at 46-49. In the face of this new competition, Conwood lagged behind all of its competitors, failing to introduce a premium natural product, introducing several brands that were withdrawn from the marketplace because of no consumer demand, failing to offer an incentive program to incent retailers to carry its racks and products, and failing to develop and provide new display racks to meet the changing retail environment. See Def. Mem. at 49.

Because Conwood still does not attempt to account for these marketplace factors – nor could it at this stage on the record – no reasonable jury could have concluded "with reasonable certainty" that U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct was a "material cause" of Conwood's claimed injury. Accordingly, the Court should enter judgment as a matter of law.

VIII. CONWOOD DID NOT PROVE DAMAGES BEYOND MERE SPECULATION AND GUESSWORK

Finally, U.S. Tobacco demonstrated that Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis did not meet well-established standards for proving antitrust damages beyond mere speculation and guesswork. See Def. Mem. at 50-60. In response, Conwood argues first, that "the jury verdict is fully supported even in the absence of evidence from Dr. Leftwich," see Pl. Opp. at 44, and second, that Dr. Leftwich's analysis is a "plausible economic model" and "alternative causal explanations . . . are for the jury to decide." Pl. Opp. at 43. Contrary to Conwood's contentions, however, neither the speculative opinion of Conwood's chairman nor the foundationless theoretical construct offered by Dr. Leftwich can support the jury's verdict.

A. The Testimony of Conwood's "Supplemental Damages Expert" – Mr. Rosson – Cannot Support the Jury's Damages Award

Conwood's claim that the jury's award of $350 million is fully supported by the oversimplistic testimony of Mr. Rosson that Conwood's share would have been "in the mid-20s but for UST's misconduct," Pl. Opp. at 37, if accepted, would fully eradicate the well-established rule of law that antitrust damages must be proven by a fair and reasonable estimate beyond mere speculation and guesswork. It also would open wide the gate to excessive damages awards based on little more than the conjecture of a plaintiff's executives – antitrust plaintiffs would no longer even have to bother with damages experts at all. Here, a review of Mr. Rosson's testimony reveals why the Court should not elevate Mr. Rosson from "a piece of the puzzle that [Conwood] need[ed] to have fit," Tr. 2/29 at 116 (Rosson), to a self-contained basis for a $350 million damages award.[19]

In its opposition papers, Conwood states that Mr. Rosson's testimony was based on "45 years of experience in the tobacco business, Conwood's historical performance in moist snuff, and Conwood's performance in adjacent smokeless markets." Pl. Opp. at 37. Taking each one of these factors, it becomes readily apparent that Mr. Rosson's damages testimony, in fact, has no basis at all. First, Mr. Rosson's 45 years of experience does not qualify Mr. Rosson to offer the jury a back-of-the-envelope projection that could measure and account for the effects of various factors on Conwood's sales share. Second, simply observing Conwood's historical performance in the moist snuff industry does not and cannot predict how Conwood would have fared in the 1990's "but for UST's misconduct." Critically, Mr. Rosson testified that he did not know what factors affected Conwood's sales such that Conwood's sales share differed from state to state prior to 1990. Tr. 2/29 at 201-05 (Rosson) ("there are too many variables for me to give you a sensible answer to that question"). That concession not only disqualifies Mr. Rosson's newly announced status as a damages expert, it also disqualifies Mr. Rosson even as the "piece" of Dr. Leftwich's puzzle that [19] Despite the fact that Mr. Rosson was not disclosed as an expert witness under Fed. R. Civ P. 26(a), the Court allowed Mr. Rosson, over U.S. Tobacco's objection, to offer what can only be classified – now, even by Conwood – as expert testimony (however flawed) on the issue of damages. See Memorandum In Support of Defendants' Motion For A New Trial.

plaintiff's counsel said Conwood so desperately needed. See infra Section VIII.B. There also is no reason to believe that Mr. Rosson had any better understanding of the various factors affecting Conwood's sales after 1990; nor was any reason offered at trial.

Finally, any true assessment of Conwood's performance in adjacent smokeless markets (such as loose leaf) would predict that Conwood's share in moist snuff sales would have declined and that Conwood's actual sales would have declined. In loose leaf, Conwood was passed by Swedish Match as the number one supplier, and Conwood's actual sales have experienced a steady decline throughout the 1990's. If Mr. Rosson truly did assess adjacent smokeless markets, he would have predicted that Conwood's moist share was doing exceedingly well by comparison. The truth is that Mr. Rosson did not assess adjacent smokeless markets at all.

Conwood's attempt to prop Mr. Rosson up as a supplemental damages expert comes, no doubt, from its realization that Dr. Leftwich's analysis completely lacked foundation and was replete with methodological errors. But Mr. Rosson's testimony lends no support to Dr. Leftwich's fatally flawed analysis, and it is not sufficient under the antitrust laws simply to pile speculation on speculation.

B. Dr. Leftwich Did No Better

Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis added little to the speculation of Conwood personnel such as Mr. Rosson. Thus, Dr. Leftwich was hired in July of 1999, made assumptions based on two telephone calls with Conwood personnel, put together a regression analysis that did not "test" any alternative theories aside from the one he heard on the phone, and submitted his expert report on August 2, 1999. As U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, Dr. Leftwich did not measure any lost sales; Dr. Leftwich relied on assumptions that are not supported by record evidence; Dr.

Leftwich did not attribute damages to specific acts of defendants; and Dr. Leftwich relied on faulty data and Conwood surveys created solely for purposes of litigation. Conwood disputes none of this.

Instead, Conwood's principal argument in response is that because Dr. Leftwich cleared the Daubert hurdle before trial, there is no legal basis for the Court to now review his damages estimates based on the full trial record. But, as the Court indicated in its Daubert opinion, Dr. Leftwich's damages testimony is deficient as a matter of law if (1) there is no evidentiary basis for critical assumptions; or (2) the assumptions are shown to be false. See Feb. 23, 2000 Order at 4.

1. There Is No Basis For Critical Assumptions

At the very outset of Dr. Leftwich's study in this case, he made assumptions based on telephone calls with Conwood personnel. These assumptions led Dr. Leftwich to conclude that, absent U.S. Tobacco's misconduct (whatever it may be): (1) Conwood's sales share would grow equally in all states, and (2) regardless of Conwood's share in any state as of 1990, Conwood's share would grow 8.1% or 6.5%, depending on the "scenario." Tr. 3/8 at 35 (Leftwich). For example, if Conwood's share in a given state was 1.4% as of 1990, Dr. Leftwich's model assumes that Conwood's share would be 9.5% (1.4% + 8.1%) in that state in 1997. Nowhere in this record – and Conwood does not even attempt to point to any record evidence – is there any basis for these assumptions.

The evidence is as follows: Conwood successfully entered the moist snuff "market" in 1979 with the introduction of Hawken. Tr. 2/29 at 67-69 (Rosson). In 1982, Conwood introduced Kodiak. Tr. 2/29 at 72-73 (Rosson). By 1990, Conwood had grown its national sales share to 11%, but Conwood's share in 1990 varied from state to state – the lowest being 1.4%, the highest being 24.2%. See Leftwich Supp. Rep., Table 1. This variation, according to Conwood's own theory, had nothing to do with U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct because the "commencement of UST's concerted exclusion" did not occur until 1990. See Pl. Opp. at 33 n.39. Yet, despite Conwood's state-by-state success rates in an "unrestricted market," Dr. Leftwich's model assumes (1) a suddenly uniform growth in all of these states after 1990; and (2) an actual growth in share of 6.5-8.1% in all of these states by 1997, despite the fact that 21 states did not reach an 8.1% share in the entire unaffected period prior to 1990. Tr. 3/8 at 35 (Leftwich); see also Leftwich Supp. Rep., Table 1.[20]

Conwood has not and cannot support these assumptions with any record evidence. Instead, it is clear that Dr. Leftwich was used by Conwood simply to assume causation and plug in numbers that, in varying degrees, essentially equalized Conwood's sales share across all states. This is not rigorous antitrust damages analysis; it is a rather pointless math exercise. But as the Seventh Circuit has explained:

> For years we have been saying, without much visible effect, that people who want damages have to prove them, using methodologies that need not be intellectually sophisticated but must not insult the intelligence. Post hoc ergo propter hoc will not do; nor the enduing of simplistic extrapolation and childish arithmetic with the appearance of authority by hiring a professor to mouth damages theories that make a joke of the concept of expert knowledge.

See Blue Cross & Blue Shield United v. Marshfield Clinic, 883 F. Supp. 1247, 1262 (W.D. Wis. 1995) (quoting Schiller & Schmidt, Inc. v. Nordisco Corp, 969 F.2d 410, 415-416 (7th Cir. 1992)), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 65 F.3d 1406 (7th Cir. 1995). That is all Dr. Leftwich did here.

2. Dr. Leftwich's Assumptions Were Shown To Be False

Dr. Leftwich also made assumptions that were shown to be false at trial. Primary among these was his failure to measure or account in any way for the effects of other factors clearly at work in the marketplace.[21] Dr. Leftwich conceded that it was important to his analysis to test the effects of other "confounding variables." See Pl. Opp. at 41; Tr. 3/8 at 22-30 (Leftwich). Accordingly, Dr. Leftwich tested the effects of per capita income, age, racial composition, educational levels, and unemployment. Id. None of these factors has anything to do with the differences in growth rates of competitors in the moist snuff industry. Thus, it was not surprising, as Conwood pointed out, that "none of these factors could explain Conwood's different level of share growth between 1990 and 1997." Pl. Opp. at 41.[22] But the list of factors that Dr. Leftwich did not test, or account for in any way, demonstrates vividly that Dr. Leftwich's assumptions about what did explain Conwood's different level of share growth were demonstrably false in light of the trial record.

For example, Dr. Leftwich (1) could not "disentangle" the procompetitive aspects of Category Management from any allegedly anticompetitive aspects of Category Management. Tr. 3/8 at 81-82 (Leftwich); (2) did not measure the effects of increased promotional activity and pricing strategies of Conwood's competitors; id. at 85-86; (3) did not study the effects of new product introductions, although he admitted that new product introductions such as Timberwolf affected [21] Dr. Leftwich did not even "test," as Conwood claims, the assumption that U.S. Tobacco's misconduct began in 1990. Dr. Leftwich did not run regressions for other years, including 1989, see Tr. 3/8 at 49-52, 61-63 (Leftwich), to test counter-hypotheses. Dr. Leftwich found an economic model that was consistent with what he heard and he stuck with it, closing his eyes and ears to all else.

[22] Presumably, none of these factors would explain Conwood's different level of share growth prior to 1990 either. The questions remain: What factors do explain Conwood's different levels of share growth prior to 1990? How did these same factors affect Conwood's share after 1990? What basis is there to support an assumption of uniform growth after 1990? Mr. Rosson could not answer these questions. Dr. Leftwich could not answer these questions. There is no way a reasonable jury could have answered these questions.

Conwood's sales, id. at 86-87; (3) did not have the data to measure the effects of advertising restrictions, although he admitted that such restrictions vary across states, id. at 89-90; (4) did not measure the effects of the introduction of products by Conwood, or the marketplace failure of products such as Kodiak Choice, id. at 90-91; and (5) did not measure the factors causing the decline in Conwood's loose leaf sales and sales share during the 1990's, id. at 91-92. Indeed, Mr. McClure of Swedish Match testified that the U.S. Tobacco conduct that had the greatest effect on Timberwolf was a "price war" that U.S. Tobacco started when it introduced Real Seal in 1997. Tr. 3/13 at 37-39 (McClure).

Based on these same events, Conwood had originally made a predatory pricing claim, which it has since abandoned. How U.S. Tobacco's lawful price competition must have affected Cougar, when according to Mr. McClure it nearly killed Timberwolf, is something Dr. Leftwich obviously did not consider. That lawful conduct, too, was something Dr. Leftwich just rolled up in one "ball of wax" with no means for the jury to "disaggregate" even if they wanted to do so. See Def. Mem. at 55-58.

There is a simple question to be answered here: rather than advance a self-constrained, one-variable model, why didn't Dr. Leftwich construct a model to measure any of the alternative factors that indisputably affected Conwood's sales? Dr. Leftwich's explanation, like Dr. Hall's explanation in Concord Boat, cannot pass the requisite judicial scrutiny under Daubert, and now under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a). Dr. Hall explained:

> I did not numerically attribute – in other words, it wasn't some specific adjustment that you'll see in my computer spread sheet saying, "Here's what I did because of OMC." And that's because of the framework that I was working in. Remember, I was stepping back and saying, "What's a reasonable benchmark for what a free market would have been?"

Concord Boat, 207 F.3d at 1056-57. Similarly, at trial, for the first time, Dr. Leftwich attempted to explain away these omissions by testifying that it was not necessary to account for any other factors that did not occur in the same "pattern" predicted by his regression model. Tr. 3/8 at 87-88 (Leftwich).[23] But this explanation, even if accepted as true, is not consistent with Dr. Leftwich's own theory that it was the effects that varied across different states (based on Conwood's "foothold"), not the degree or intensity of the alleged misconduct. Tr. 3/8 at 20-22 (Leftwich). There was no reason for Dr. Leftwich to assume that new product introductions, or any other factor he failed to measure, would not likewise have affected Conwood more where Conwood had not established a foothold -- the same assumption he was willing to make and did make with respect to the alleged misconduct of U.S. Tobacco. His decision to ignore these market realities also renders his damages opinions speculative as a matter of law:

> [The] expert opinion should not have been admitted because it did not incorporate all aspects of the economic reality of the [relevant] market and because it did not separate lawful from unlawful conduct. Because of the deficiencies in the foundation of the opinion, the expert's resulting conclusions were "mere speculation."

Concord Boat, 207 F.3d at 1057.

The evidence at trial established that these other lawful factors in the marketplace were, indeed, a market reality for Conwood, but Dr. Leftwich never even attempted to incorporate those factors into his model. Accordingly, Dr. Leftwich's opinion, like Mr. Rosson's, did not separate unlawful from lawful conduct, and that makes his damages opinion "mere speculation" as a matter of law. Id.

---

[23] Dr. Leftwich, however, offered no explanation of how he reasonably excluded any factors when he didn't even determine the "patterns" of the factors that indisputably affected Conwood's sales, such as promotional activities, introductions of new products, or advertising restrictions, all of which vary in intensity from state to state.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that the Court direct entry of judgment as a matter of law for Defendants.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY
AT PADUCAH

CONWOOD COMPANY, L.P. and CONWOOD SALES COMPANY, L.P. Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES TOBACCO COMPANY, UNITED STATES TOBACCO SALES AND MARKETING COMPANY INC., UNITED STATES TOBACCO MANUFACTURING COMPANY INC., and UST INC., Defendants.	)	Civil Action No. 5:98-CV-108-R

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL, OR, IN THE ALTERNATIVE, A REDUCED DAMAGES AWARD

Conwood's response to U.S. Tobacco's motion for a new trial, or alternatively, for a reduced damages award ("Def. Mem."), is an obsequious attempt to have this Court simply overlook an extremely excessive and unsupported damages award, which followed on the heels of what unfortunately became an extremely unfair trial. While Conwood would have this Court find that U.S. Tobacco's objections to the verdict and the course of the trial are mere "quibbles," the applicable law and the events at trial prove otherwise.

I. THE VERDICT WAS AGAINST THE GREAT WEIGHT OF THE EVIDENCE

As a threshold matter, Conwood's argument regarding the weight of the evidence is simply – and erroneously – this: because Conwood used a lot of documents and witnesses, there is nothing for the Court to weigh. Conwood, however, mistakes the quantity of evidence for the quality of evidence, in terms of what facts the evidence actually proved. It is clear that Conwood's evidence focused on U.S. Tobacco's intent and had little to do with the conduct that actually took place in the retail environment or the results of that conduct. Accordingly, despite the volume of evidence offered at trial, Conwood did not prove by a preponderance of the evidence that U.S. Tobacco (1) possessed monopoly power in any relevant market; or (2) engaged in exclusionary conduct violative of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. See Memorandum In Support of Defendants' Motion For Judgment As a Matter of Law ("Def. Mem. JMOL"). Because the jury reached a "seriously erroneous result," see Pl. Opp. at 47, a new trial is warranted.

II. THE DAMAGES AWARD WAS EXCESSIVE AND UNSUPPORTED BY THE EVIDENCE

Attempting to defend the amount of the jury's damages award as "eminently reasonable," Conwood asks this Court to uphold the jury's award solely because it was within the range of damages offered by Dr. Leftwich. Conwood also claims that Dr. Leftwich's range, even at its maximum of $488 million, was somehow "conservative" because Conwood's chairman, Mr. Rosson, got on the stand and asked for over $500 million. Conwood, however, misstates the law and the factual circumstances governing the jury's verdict.

Conwood simply avoids U.S. Tobacco's central point – and dispositive case law – as to why the jury's verdict was excessive. As set forth in U.S. Tobacco's moving papers, new trials are routinely granted in antitrust cases where a plaintiff's damages analysis (including belated proffers of company executives) do not disaggregate the effects of lawful and unlawful conduct. See Def. Mem. at 3-4. There can be no doubt that the jury's $350 million verdict included damages caused by lawful conduct as well as factors wholly unrelated to U.S. Tobacco.

Conwood does not disagree with the law cited by U.S. Tobacco. See Pl. Opp. at 50, but instead attempts to limit the application of those cases to instances where a court expressly finds certain conduct to be lawful. See Pl. Opp. at 50 n.51. Conwood must concede, however, that to the extent Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis includes, inter alia, the effects on Conwood sales of the introduction of Timberwolf, of the independent, uncoerced decisions of retailers, of lawful promotional activities by Conwood's competitors, and/or of increased competition through the number of brands and price offerings, Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates are indeed excessive. See Def. Mem. at 3-5. Conwood's cited authority stands only for the proposition that damages awards are appropriate if supported by the damages evidence offered at trial; it does not permit a jury to award damages based on damages analyses that are themselves speculative and unsupported by record facts. Here, Dr. Leftwich's damages estimates do not and cannot support the jury's verdict.

III. ULTIMATELY, THE TRIAL WAS NOT FAIR TO U.S. TOBACCO

As expected, Conwood applauds the Court for running a trial that it characterizes as the "model of efficiency and fairness." See Pl. Opp. at 51. While U.S. Tobacco agrees that this was the Court's objective throughout, the trial did not turn out that way. Indeed, Conwood does not and cannot seriously dispute that the Court's in limine decisions and its rulings throughout the trial, together with Conwood's calculated overreaching of certain of the Court's rulings, eventually enabled the jury to find U.S. Tobacco liable under Section 2 for reasons having nothing to do with "exclusionary" conduct, and to award damages to Conwood for reasons having nothing to do with relevant proof of lost sales and profits caused solely by any such conduct.

A. The Court's Rulings On Summary Judgment

There should never have been a trial in the first place. In its moving papers, U.S. Tobacco established that the Court erred when it denied U.S. Tobacco's motion for summary judgment because the practices challenged by Conwood were, under well-established case law, ordinary, procompetitive business practices available to all participants in the alleged moist snuff market – including Conwood – and used by just about every manufacturer of consumer goods doing business with retailers in this country. U.S. Tobacco established that practices such as product mix and space allocation suggestions were ordinary and procompetitive; that seeking and even obtaining SOF=SOM promoted efficiency and was commonly used by retailers to achieve efficient space allocation; that offering and providing exclusive display racks – even to obtain a promotional advantage over one's competitors – was ordinary and procompetitive; and that U.S. Tobacco's CAP program was an ordinary incentive program of the type offered by hundreds of manufacturers in all different product categories. See Def. Mem. at 5-8.

These arguments were rejected by the Court on summary judgment with apparent disregard of cases cited by U.S. Tobacco holding each specific "species of conduct" to be lawful and procompetitive, even when practiced by a monopolist, see Beverage Management, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 653 F. Supp. 1144, 1146, 1155-56 (S.D. Ohio 1986) (exclusive advertising arrangement could not violate Sections 1 or 2 where plaintiffs were free to use same ordinary marketing methods; Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act do not equate "business frustrations stemming from rival's competitive practices with violations of the antitrust laws"), and even when carried out by an alleged conspiracy of manufacturers see Kellogg Co., 99 F.T.C. 8 (1982) (manufacturers seeking SOF=SOM was lawful, procompetitive conduct). Conwood's contention that whether or not the complained-of conduct was ordinary and not exclusionary was properly held to be a question of fact for the jury is simply wrong. Based on the undisputed material facts, U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct involves marketing practices that courts have long held to be procompetitive and lawful. Accordingly, this Court should have found, as a matter of law, that the practices cannot be "exclusionary" under Section 2; there should have been no role for the jury.

Similarly, Conwood's mischaracterization of Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 207 F.3d 1039 (8th Cir. 2000), as a decision limited to above-cost price-cutting under the Clayton Act is disingenuous at best. In Concord Boat, plaintiffs challenged the market-share-based incentive programs of a boat manufacturer, arguing that rebates offered to retailers for purchasing motors up to the defendant's market share unlawfully excluded competitors and therefore violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Id. at 1043-46. The Eighth Circuit rejected plaintiffs' claim, vacating the jury's verdict and reversed the district court's failure to grant judgment as a matter of law. See id. at 1063. Whether or not the incentive program, or any other allegedly anticompetitive conduct, was "ordinary" conduct was not a question of fact for the jury – there, or here.

B. The Court's In Limine Rulings

U.S. Tobacco also demonstrated that certain of the Court's in limine rulings were in error and affected the outcome of the trial, unfairly and inappropriately leading to the jury's verdict in favor of Conwood.

1. Evidence of the Pritzker Organization

U.S. Tobacco was unfairly prejudiced by the Court's ruling not to allow the jury to know that this was not a case of big company versus small company, a "sideshow" created and exploited by Conwood's counsel under cover of the Court's "Pritzker" ruling. The Court ultimately recognized the inequity it had permitted by first ruling the way it did on the in limine motion, but then allowing Conwood's counsel to "play on big" throughout the trial "for purposes of other advocacy." Tr. 2/29 at 128 (Rosson). Even if the original in limine ruling had arguable been appropriate, Conwood repeatedly opened wide the door to all the evidence about the financial capacities of its owners, but the Court repeatedly closed it again. There can be no doubt that the false impression created for the jury – that Conwood did not have the resources to compete long term with U.S. Tobacco – went a long way in the jury's determination of liability and damages. Accordingly, a new trial is warranted.

2. Dr. Leftwich's Damages Analysis

As discussed in Section II above, U.S. Tobacco established that Dr. Leftwich's damages analysis was insufficient as a matter of law and should have been excluded under Daubert. In addition, U.S. Tobacco established that allowing Dr. Leftwich to submit an expert report on January 28, 2000, six months after the August 2, 1999 deadline for expert reports, was a violation of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2), resulting in all of the harm and unfair prejudice meant to be prevented by that Rule.[1] Based on the Court's rulings in this case, a party has every incentive to file a "place holder" expert report on the due date and then "supplement" that report with a completely new opinion on the eve of trial. Such conduct, however, warrants a new trial.

3. Professor Gundlach's "Study"

U.S. Tobacco established that, under Sixth Circuit authority, it was reversible error to allow Dr. Gundlach simply to read documents to the jury that he then characterized as "exclusive agreements." Contrary to Conwood's attempt to distinguish the case, the Sixth Circuit adjudicated this precise issue in Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342, 1352, 1356 (6th Cir. 1994) (reversing jury verdict for plaintiff based, in part, on the testimony of an expert witness who reviewed reports, but without reviewing the underlying facts to make relevant determinations). In Berry, the expert reviewed "shots fired" police reports and then, without investigating the underlying facts, made determinations about whether the incidents were justified by "self-defense." Id. at 1352.[2] Here, Dr. Gundlach made no investigation of the facts underlying the documents he read. In fact, he did not interview a single retailer on his "exclusive agreement" list. Tr. 3/9 at 129-31 (Gundlach). The only fact that distinguishes Berry from the instant case is that the expert in Berry did not testify quite plainly that he "was not interested in the specific deliberations that went on in the [police officer's] mind." Tr. 3/9 at 148 (Gundlach). Using these words, Dr. Gundlach admitted he didn't care or consider what retailers thought. Accordingly, as U.S. Tobacco established in its moving papers, Dr.

[1] Conwood's argument that U.S. Tobacco made no motion for a continuance ignores the fact that U.S. Tobacco objected to the admission of Dr. Leftwich's new testimony and was denied by the Court. U.S. Tobacco's objection, therefore, is fully preserved.

[2] The expert witness in Berry was also allowed by the district court to offer opinions that encompassed legal conclusions. For example, the expert opined that the police department was grossly negligent. Id. at 1354. Here, Dr. Gundlach testified that the documents he reviewed constituted "exclusive agreements."

16diii006251

Gundlach offered no expertise beyond reading documents; his testimony was improper expert testimony under Fed. R. Evid. 702 and should have been excluded.

4. Proving Fact Of Injury At Specific Retail Stores

With full knowledge of what Conwood was trying to present to the jury in terms of "damages" estimates, U.S. Tobacco foresaw that Conwood was attempting to circumvent completely its obligation under Sixth Circuit and other applicable law to prove injury in fact with "reasonable certainty." Accordingly, U.S. Tobacco moved the Court in limine to require Conwood to make some showing of lost sales caused by U.S. Tobacco's alleged misconduct. The Court denied U.S. Tobacco's motion based on the faulty premise that Conwood would have to prove lost sales at over 300,000 retail locations.

In its motion for a new trial, U.S. Tobacco pointed out that the Court could have required Conwood – at a minimum – to make some showing of lost sales short of requiring Conwood to prove lost sales at every one of the 300,000 retail locations. See Def. Mem. at 13-14. In any event, as U.S. Tobacco established in its moving papers, the Court's denial in full of U.S. Tobacco's motion in limine completely relieved Conwood of its obligation to prove fact of injury and causation. Accordingly, a new trial is warranted to require Conwood to meet its burden of proving fact of injury "with a fair degree of certainty."

5. Motion To Preclude Certain Trial Exhibits

U.S. Tobacco established that Conwood used expert witnesses improperly to present otherwise inadmissible and highly prejudicial hearsay evidence to the jury. In denying U.S. Tobacco's motion in limine, the Court relied on Trepel v. Roadway Express, Inc., 194 F.3d 708, 717 (6th Cir. 1999), and allowed Conwood to present hearsay evidence, while recognizing U.S. Tobacco's "key concern" of not being able to cross-examine the declarants (for example, any of the 226 Conwood employees who signed "sworn declarations" of purportedly unethical activity). See

Feb. 23 Op. at 2. The Trepel court, however, which allowed the introduction of a single document reasonably relied on by an appraiser, did not contemplate the introduction en masse of Conwood employee surveys, "unethical activity reports," and retailer statements under the guise that they were the type of documents that could be reasonably relied on by an economist as a basis of his opinions. See Tr. 3/1 at 35-37 (Kamien); see also Tr. 3/23 at 164-83 (Scheffman).

C. The Court's Evidentiary Rulings During Trial

1. Improper Use of Expert Witnesses

U.S. Tobacco demonstrated that Conwood's use of experts simply to read documents to the jury and to channel in otherwise inadmissible hearsay was highly improper under Fed. R. Evid. 702, 703, and 403. See Def. Mem. at 16-21. In its opposition papers, Conwood makes several misstatements.

First, Conwood argues that Drs. Kamien, Gundlach and Blattberg each read scores of documents to the jury merely "to explain the bases of their opinions." Pl. Opp. at 61. The trial record, however, indicates that Conwood's entire strategy was to present documents to the jury through its expert witnesses:

> MR. HANSEN: Your Honor, the reason I have to read documents is U.S. Tobacco will not bring the witnesses who wrote the documents here. I have two options. I can do it this way or take seven hours of deposition.

Tr. 3/1 146-47 (bench conference during the direct examination of Dr. Kamien). Mr. Hansen's statement to the Court reveals that, for two years, Conwood neglected to take proper discovery, all the while planning to introduce documents – complete with convenient interpretations – through its"experts" at trial in violation of the Federal Rules of Evidence and the Sixth Circuit's opinion in Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342 (6th Cir. 1994).

Second, with respect to the presentation of inadmissible hearsay, Conwood argues that because U.S. Tobacco agreed to a limiting instruction, it waived its objection. Conwood fails to point out that U.S. Tobacco agreed to a limiting instruction only after its objection was denied by the Court. See Tr. 2/29 at 8. Accordingly, contrary to Conwood's representation, U.S. Tobacco's objection is preserved. Allowing Conwood to use experts to act as factual surrogates and to channel in otherwise inadmissible hearsay was in error and warrants a new trial.[3]

2. Conwood's Use of "Fact" Witnesses as Expert Witnesses

Over U.S. Tobacco's objection, Conwood's Chairman, Mr. Rosson, was allowed to offer opinions derived from studies prepared by "staff" and, according to Conwood's counsel at side bar, by Kellogg Huber attorneys. Tr. 2/28 at 236-46 (Kamien). In its opposition papers, Conwood is quick to point out that the cited trial record was a discussion among counsel, but that does not change the fact that, according to Mr. Hansen's own judicial admission, Mr. Rosson's testimony derived from materials prepared by counsel; it was not "opinions and inferences rationally based on [his] perception" as Conwood asserts is allowed by Fed. R. Evid. 701. Pl. Opp. at 65 n.66. Rather, Mr. Rosson's testimony concerning product market and comparative advertising expenditures was patent expert testimony.

Likewise, Mr. Hansen represented to the Court that Mr. Rosson's testimony regarding "but for" sales share was "a piece of the [damages] puzzle that we need to have fit." Tr. 2/29 at 116 (Rosson). Thus, what Dr. Leftwich failed to assess by January 28, 2000 (or ever), Conwood's counsel simply prepared for Mr. Rosson to parrot to the jury. Together, Conwood succeeded in presenting all pieces of the puzzle – defective as it was – without regard to the Rules. In its opposition papers, Conwood cites cases involving the proper admission of lay opinion testimony.

[3] Moreover, Conwood's excuse for slamming three binders of inadmissible Conwood employee surveys on the witness stand during the cross-examination of Dr. Scheffman demonstrates the lengths to which Conwood went in order to present inadmissible testimony to the jury. See Pl. Opp. at 62-63. Questions about the bases of an expert opinion are proper cross-examination. See id. B-movie theatrics for the sole purpose of circumventing the Federal Rules of Evidence are not. U.S. Tobacco respectfully suggests that it would be error to minimize the impact upon the jury of this calculated disregard for the Rules.

They have no relevance, however, where a witness' testimony was based on materials prepared by staff and by attorneys rather than on the witness' own perception. The Court's decision to allow Conwood to present such opinion evidence was in error and requires a new trial.

In any event, the testimony of Mr. McClure from Swedish Match also exceeded the bounds of lay opinion testimony admissible under Fed. R. Evid. 701. As U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, Mr. Rosson and Mr. McClure were allowed to guesstimate what Conwood's and Swedish Match's sales shares would have been, respectively, "in the absence of UST tactics." Tr. 3/13 at 41-43 (McClure). U.S. Tobacco objected, and the Court sustained the objection at the time of Mr. McClure's testimony. Tr. 3/13 at 42. Undaunted, counsel for Conwood proceeded to elicit the objectionable testimony anyway. Tr. 3/13 at 42-43 (McClure). The Court allowed counsel to do so, and in fact, overruled U.S. Tobacco's immediate motion to strike. Tr. 3/13 at 43. The Court's decision to allow this testimony over its own ruling was in error and warrants a new trial.

3. Conwood's Comments and Questions Concerning The "Availability" of U.S. Tobacco Employee Witnesses

U.S. Tobacco demonstrated that it was highly prejudicial for the Court to allow counsel for Conwood to question and comment about the availability of U.S. Tobacco employee witnesses. Contrary to Conwood's suggestion, see Pl. Opp. at 67 n.68, such questioning was not limited to questioning Mr. Gierer about Gary Smith and David Untiedt. As demonstrated in U.S. Tobacco's moving papers, counsel for Conwood asked about the availability of many witnesses during the course of trial, and argued to the jury that U.S. Tobacco witnesses were "hiding" in Greenwich. See Def. Mem. at 21-22; see also Tr. 3/6 at 47-48 (Milano) (Days before Mr. Gierer took the stand, counsel for Conwood asked Mr. Milano about the availability of U.S. Tobacco employees who were never requested by Conwood to appear at trial or to be deposed.) Moreover, this was not a situation in which U.S. Tobacco's objection was overruled.[4] The Court expressly ruled that it would be improper to make such inquiries. See Tr. 2/28 at 16 ("[I]t would be improper to say that we asked them to bring them here and they didn't bring them."). Conwood did it anyway and then reinforced the forbidden questions by scrolling as background during its closing argument the names of innumerable U.S. Tobacco employees, most of whom it never sought to depose.

D. The Court's Jury Instructions

1. Removal of "Predatory"

Conwood cannot deny or minimize the import of the change in the Court's jury instruction from "predatory" to "restrictive." Indeed, Conwood lobbied persistently for this change in the jury instructions – and with good reason. Throughout this case, Conwood relied on blurring the distinction between competitive conduct that may have caused Conwood to lose business (e.g., promotions and/or incentive programs) and conduct that was actually anticompetitive. By persuading the Court to eliminate the word "predatory," Conwood eliminated the element of irrational economic behavior and was able to argue effectively that normal competitive business activity was "restrictive" to Conwood's business.

Even the Supreme Court and Sixth Circuit precedent cited by Conwood makes clear that the word "restrictive" is insufficient. See Pl. Opp. at 67; see also Continental Ore Co. v. Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., 370 U.S. 690, 694 (1962)(defining violative conduct as "monopolistic and

---

[4] Conwood's reliance on Downriver Internists v. Harris Corp., 929 F.2d 1147, 1151 (6th Cir. 1991) is misplaced. In that case, and cases cited therein, it was held to be permissible to comment on the failure of a party to call an available witness who would ordinarily be expected to testify, such as a hired consultant. Id. at 1151. Here, Conwood did not simply comment that certain witnesses had not appeared, but instead made it a central theme of their case that U.S. Tobacco was hiding numerous employee witnesses – all of whom were available to be deposed at any time – outside the jurisdiction of the court. Therefore, Conwood's tactic falls squarely within that category of cases where the Sixth Circuit has held "it would be improper for counsel to comment to a jury about the failure of a witness to testify because such inferences that are raised would be mere speculation not subject to ay cross examination." Boulter v. Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Co., 442 F.2d 335, 336 (6th Cir. 1971).

16diii006256

restrictive"); Potters Med. Ctr. v. City Hosp. Ass'n, 800 F.2d 568, 575 (6th Cir. 1986) (defining violative conduct as "unnecessarily restrictive"). Thus, as U.S. Tobacco argued at trial and demonstrated in its moving papers, the omission of the word predatory was far more than a word change; it changed the substance of the entire jury instruction on the critical behavioral element. Accordingly, Conwood's claim that U.S. Tobacco has no right "to select particular wording" is off the mark. The Court's omission of the word "predatory," done at Conwood's persistent request, was in error and warrants a new trial.

2. Instruction On Nominal Damages

The Court's refusal to include an instruction on nominal damages was in error because it deprived the jury of the opportunity to find for Conwood on liability, but to reject the damages estimates proffered by Conwood and its damages expert, Dr. Leftwich. Conwood is correct to point out that the Court properly instructed the jury that the Court's damages instruction should not imply that Conwood should win its case. But the Court did not present the jury with the option of finding for Conwood on liability and awarding only nominal damages. Conwood is wrong to argue that a nominal damages instruction was not necessary because U.S. Tobacco did not offer an alternative damages calculation.[5] In an antitrust case, a plaintiff has the burden of proving damages beyond mere speculation and guesswork. If it does not meet that burden, a court should enter judgment as a matter of law. See Def. Mem. JMOL. At most, the jury should have awarded nominal damages. Accordingly, the Court's refusal to instruct the jury on nominal damages, even after [5] Conwood's reliance on Portis v. Grand Trunk Western Railroad, No. 93-1721, 1994 WL 362110 (6th Cir. July 12, 1994), is absurd. Portis was a personal injury case, in which the plaintiff offered direct evidence of lost wages. Id. at *2. Here, Conwood offered no evidence of lost sales. Moreover, in that case, the defendant did not offer any evidence of other causal factors, and did not dispute the calculation of lost wages offered by plaintiff. Even if personal injury case law could be extended to antitrust cases (where a specific standard for proving damages has been articulated by numerous federal courts), Portis would not support Conwood's argument.

---

16diii006257

recognizing that proof of damages was a weakness in Conwood's case, see Tr. 3/14 at 95, was in error and warrants a new trial.

IV. AT A MINIMUM, REMITTITUR IS REQUIRED

Even if the Court does not order a new trial, at a minimum, the factual record of this case strongly warrants the entry of a remittitur of the jury's damages award. In its opposition papers, Conwood cites a number of cases that hold that a jury's damages award may not be set aside or reduced unless it exceeds the maximum amount of damages "that the jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for a party's loss." See Pl. Opp. at 70 (emphasis added). U.S. Tobacco does not dispute this case law; rather, it contends that the jury's verdict is far in excess of any amount that could be said to be reasonably supported by the record evidence of this case.

As demonstrated in U.S. Tobacco's moving papers, Conwood's damages award is a windfall that includes "lost" profits based on an astronomical "but for" projection of Conwood's sales share in the moist snuff industry. It awards Conwood damages for the effects of perfectly legitimate conduct, whether by U.S. Tobacco, by Swisher and Swedish Match, or by retailers. While U.S. Tobacco continues to maintain that entire damages evidence is defective and should be thrown out, at a minimum, it is unfair, unsupported by evidence and should therefore be reduced.

Finally, Conwood misinterprets damages cases to suggest that no remittitur is warranted, as a matter of law, if the damages award is within the range offered by plaintiff's expert witness. Conwood, however, confuses damages evidence with the speculation and exercises in fantasy of its own expert witness.[6] Further, Conwood's suggestion that this Court may not reduce

---

[6] Similarly, Conwood's reliance on personal injury, age discrimination, sex discrimination, and civil rights cases, see Pl. Opp. at 70-71, is a transparent attempt to mislead the Court, but it actually highlights the fact that never in the history of the antitrust laws has a jury award been upheld where it was based on pure speculation and guesswork offered in the guise of expert testimony. See Def. Mem. at 4 (citing numerous antitrust cases resulting in remittitur or judgment as a matter of law based on failure to prove damages). Moreover, in each non-antitrust case cited by Conwood, the (continued...)

damages unless U.S. Tobacco had presented the proposed adjustments to the jury, see Pl. Mem. at 2-3, is completely baseless. Conwood cites no case that conditions remittitur on the defendant having offered an alternative damages analysis. Moreover, the remittitur cases cited in U.S. Tobacco's moving papers, see Def. Mem. at 25-26, reduced damages based on the evidence at trial regarding causation and other factors, not on an alternative damages presentation.

Accordingly, as U.S. Tobacco demonstrated in its moving papers, this Court should enter a remittitur, reducing what now stands as the largest verdict in the history of the antitrust laws to an amount more consistent with the record evidence of other causal factors in the marketplace shown to have affected Conwood's sales.

[6] (...continued)
plaintiff offered real evidence of lost wages. Here, Conwood offered absolutely no evidence of any lost sales. Even if applicable, the cases cited by Conwood, on their facts, further illustrate the deficiencies in Conwood's damages evidence. See also n.5, supra.

16diii006259

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, U.S. Tobacco respectfully requests that as an alternative to granting judgment as a matter of law, the Court order a new trial, or in the alternative, enter a remittitur, reducing the damages award.

Richard PORTIS, Plaintiff-Appellee,
v.
GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, a Michigan corporation, Defendant-Appellant.

No. 93-1721.

United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

July 12, 1994.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, No. 91-74840; Zatkoff, D.J.

E.D.Mich.

AFFIRMED.

Before MILBURN and BATCHELDER, Circuit Judges, and CONTIE, Senior Circuit Judge.

PER CURIAM.

1 Defendant appeals a jury verdict for plaintiff Richard Portis in the amount of $500,000. The issues are (1) whether the jury verdict was excessive, (2) whether the district court erred by failing to instruct the jury on plaintiff's duty to mitigate damages, and (3) whether the district court erred by refusing to allow a doctor to testify about reports and opinions of other doctors. For the reasons that follow, we affirm.

I.

On March 25, 1991, while working at Grand Trunk Western Railroad Company's Port Huron Car Shop, plaintiff Richard Portis, a railroad carman, was injured when he had to suddenly twist and duck out of the way of an oncoming, airborne wrench. The wrench had been knocked loose from a piece of equipment by a co- worker's hammering at the wrench. Plaintiff sustained a back and neck injury from his efforts in dodging the flying wrench.

Plaintiff Portis brought this action under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq., [FN1] alleging that the injuries he received were proximately caused by defendant Grand Trunk's negligence. The jury found defendant negligent and awarded plaintiff $500,000 in damages. On appeal, defendant contests the damage award only; it does not contest the jury's finding of negligence. Defendant filed a motion for a new trial or remittitur arguing the same issues it raises on appeal. In its memorandum opinion and order, the district court addressed each of defendant's arguments and denied the motion. This timely appeal followed.

The parties presented extensive medical evidence at trial. Plaintiff was examined by several doctors, including Dr. Yull, one of defendant's company doctors; Dr. Gallant, defendant's Chief Medical Advisor; and Dr. Sutton, an orthopedic surgeon in Port Huron who was plaintiff's primary treating physician. Additionally, plaintiff was examined by a second orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Roy, apparently at defendant's request. Even though Dr. Sutton was plaintiff's primary treating physician, plaintiff was periodically examined by Drs. Gallant and Yull. Dr. Roy examined plaintiff one time and prepared a report that was sent to Dr. Gallant. Neither Dr. Yull nor Dr. Roy testified at the trial.

At the trial, the parties disputed plaintiff's ability to return to work. Defendant's medical expert, Dr. Gallant, testified that both he and Dr. Yull released plaintiff to return to work without restrictions. Although Dr. Roy's report was not admitted into evidence, Dr. Gallant testified that Dr. Roy's conclusions regarding plaintiff's condition substantiated Dr. Gallant and Dr. Yull's evaluations. Plaintiff's medical expert, Dr. Sutton, testified that plaintiff could return to work provided that plaintiff did not lift more than ten to fifteen pounds, and Dr. Sutton indicated that the ten to fifteen pound restriction was permanent.

After being cleared by all four doctors, plaintiff Portis reported to work and presented Dr. Sutton's orders to defendant. Plaintiff was subsequently sent home because no light duty work existed at Grand Trunk. Plaintiff did not seek alternative employment while restricted to light duty work. However, he was still considered a Grand Trunk employee and continued to be examined periodically by Dr. Gallant. At the time of the trial, plaintiff had been injured for less than nineteen months and was still an employee of Grand Trunk. Both plaintiff and Dr. Sutton testified that plaintiff was experiencing constant pain and frequent muscle spasm. Dr. Sutton indicated that plaintiff would permanently experience pain and muscle spasm.

2 In his closing argument, plaintiff's counsel suggested a total damage award of $800,000. Plaintiff had testified that he was making approximately $30,000 annually at the time of the accident. Because he had been off work for approximately nineteen months at the time of the trial, his lost wages were approximately $45,000-$50,000. Plaintiff also testified that he was 40 years old and had planned to work until he reached the age of 62. He indicated, however, that because of his injuries, any job that he would be able to perform would require him to accept a decrease in pay. Specifically, plaintiff's attorney indicated that, including fringe benefits, plaintiff would lose approximately $20,000 per year. Multiplying $20,000 by 22 years (plaintiff's estimated work life), plaintiff's attorney suggested that reasonable compensation for lost wages would be $440,000 plus the $50,000 plaintiff had already lost. Thus, plaintiff's counsel argued that plaintiff's economic damages were $490,000. In addition to these economic damages, plaintiff requested damages for pain and suffering and calculated the total damage award at $800,000. Defendant chose to defend on the ground that plaintiff's claim was fraudulent and, thus, presented no evidence regarding plaintiff's lost wages or failure to mitigate damages. Defendant's closing argument made no mention of damages, nor did it give any alternative figure for the jury to consider. The jury did not indicate how much of the $500,000 verdict it awarded was for economic loss and how much was for pain and suffering.

II.

A.

Defendant contends that it should be granted a new trial because the jury's damage award of $500,000 was excessive. In support of this contention, defendant argues (1) the $500,000 award was so large "as to shock the judicial conscience," (2) the jury disregarded the court's instructions on damage awards, (3) the award was based on "speculation and conjecture," and (4) plaintiff counsel's comments during closing argument were "improper and prejudicial" and "designed to influence the jury" to base their verdict on "passion, prejudice and sympathy." The district court rejected all of these arguments and held that the jury's award of damages was not excessive. "[A]bsent abuse of discretion or clear mistake, the judgment of the judge who presided at the trial that a verdict was not excessive will control." Hoskins v. Blalock, 384 F.2d 169, 170 (6th Cir.1967). A damage award should not be set aside as excessive unless it was based on prejudice, passion, or sympathy, or was so large as to be shocking to the conscience of the court. E.g., Farber v. Massillon Bd. of Educ., 917 F.2d 1391, 1395 (6th Cir.1990), cert. denied, 111 S.Ct. 952 and 2851 (1991).

The damage award of $500,000 was within the range permitted by the evidence presented at trial, and therefore was not so large as to shock the conscience of the court. As a general rule, "a jury verdict will not be set aside or reduced as excessive unless it is beyond the maximum damages that the jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for a party's loss." Id. (quotations and citation omitted). In this case, plaintiff testified about his salary and fringe benefits, the length of time he had planned to continue working, and the reduction in salary he could expect from accepting employment with the medical restrictions caused by the accident. In his closing argument, plaintiff's counsel showed the jury how these numbers should be calculated and arrived at a sum of $490,000 for economic damages. Plaintiff also testified that he had constant pain in his back and neck and experienced frequent muscle spasm. Dr. Sutton indicated that this was a permanent condition. For this pain and suffering, plaintiff asked the jury for approximately $310,000. We do not know how the jury arrived at its final $500,000 figure, but we do know that $500,000 was not beyond the maximum damages that the jury reasonably could find to be compensatory for plaintiff's loss. See Kokesh v. American S.S. Co., 747 F.2d 1092, 1095 (6th Cir.1984) (upholding $500,000 award where plaintiff had back injury permanently impairing earning capacity and causing pain).

3 Defendant's reliance on Nairn v. National Railroad Passenger Corp., 837 F.2d 565 (2d Cir.1988), is misplaced. In Nairn, the court held that a $765,000 verdict awarded to an injured railroad employee was excessive. The injuries suffered by the Nairn employee were similar to those suffered by plaintiff in this case. However, the reason the court found the verdict excessive was that at least $400,000 of the award was for pain and suffering. In the present case, the award for pain and suffering could have been as low as $10,000. Therefore, Nairn is no support for defendant's position.

Defendant also argues that the jury disregarded the court's instructions on the non taxability of the damage award and reduction of award for loss of future earnings to present value. However, a jury is presumed to have followed the instructions given by the court. Clarksville-Montgomery County Sch. Sys. v. United States Gypsum Co., 925 F.2d 993, 1003 (6th Cir.1991). The only argument defendant advances to overcome this presumption is: "It is abundantly clear based on the extremely short duration of time that the jury deliberated (one hour and forty minutes) that it did not take into account either the non taxability of the damage award or the reduction to present worth as required by law." Brief for Defendant at 18 (emphasis omitted). We see nothing "abundantly clear" about it. A reasonable jury could make the needed calculations in one hour and forty minutes, particularly where it has no evidence of economic loss to consider except that presented by the plaintiff. Therefore, defendant has not overcome the presumption that the jury followed the court's instructions.

Defendant contends that any award for future loss of income in this case could only be based on speculation because "there was no basis for the jury to have concluded that plaintiff's condition would be disabling in the future and/or to what extent." Brief for Defendant at 19. However, Dr. Sutton testified that plaintiff could not perform work requiring him to lift more than 10-15 pounds and that this weight restriction was permanent. This testimony provided the jury a basis from which the jury could conclude that plaintiff would remain partially disabled in the future. Therefore, defendant has not shown that the jury's conclusion was based on speculation.

Defendant also complains that three comments made by plaintiff's counsel during closing argument, taken as a whole, constitute reversible error because they were "improper and prejudicial comments designed to influence the jury so that their verdict would be based in whole or in substantial part on passion, prejudice and sympathy." Brief for Defendant at 20 (emphasis omitted). A new trial may be granted if "improper closing argument irreparably prejudices a jury verdict." Nissho-Iwai Co. v. Occidental Crude Sales, Inc., 848 F.2d 613, 619 (5th Cir.1988); see also Rommel-McFerran Co. v. Local Union No. 369, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 361 F.2d 658, 661-62 (6th Cir.1966). However, defendant did not object to these comments at any time before the jury retired to deliberate. After the jury returned the unfavorable verdict, defendant for the first time called the alleged improprieties to the court's attention. At that point it was too late for the court to cure any possible problems caused by plaintiff counsel's comments. "[I]n a civil action, '[a] principle that strikes very deep is that a new trial will not be granted on grounds not called to the court's attention during the trial unless the error was so fundamental that gross injustice would result.' " United States v. Walton, 909 F.2d 915, 924 (6th Cir.1990) (quoting 11 Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2805, at 39 (1973)); see also Carmel v. Clapp & Eisenberg, P.C., 960 F.2d 698, 704 (7th Cir.1992); Nissho-Iwai Co., 848 F.2d at 619; Computer Sys. Eng'g, Inc. v. Qantel Corp., 740 F.2d 59, 69 (1st Cir.1984). Defendant has not shown that any gross injustice resulted from plaintiff counsel's statements in closing argument. Therefore, a new trial could not be granted on these grounds even if plaintiff counsel's statements were improper.

4 Defense counsel explains that she did not object at trial "because she believed that plaintiff's counsels, being experienced trial attorneys, knew or should have known that 'extraneous matters' that had not been introduced and admitted into evidence should not have been put before a jury." Reply Brief for Defendant at 7. What plaintiff's counsel knew or should have known is irrelevant. The fact is that defendant did not bring the alleged improprieties to the court's attention at a time when the court could take corrective measures. If we excused defendant's failure to object because the opposing attorneys should have known what they were doing was improper, then all errors made at trial would be subject to review even if not objected to, because all attorneys should be competent and know the rules of trial procedure. Allowing defendant's proffered reason to excuse the failure to object would encourage some lawyers to plant error for appeal. This we refuse to do.

Relying on United States v. Bess, 593 F.2d 749, 757 n. 11 (6th Cir.1979), defendant argues that it did not have to object to plaintiff counsel's comments on extraneous matters. Bess is inapposite. Bess merely held that there is one circumstance where statements of personal belief in closing argument are proper. Where criminal defense counsel has impugned the integrity or motivation of the prosecutor, the prosecutor has the right to reply. That curative admissibility rule simply has nothing to do with this case.

In sum, defendant has not satisfied its burden of showing that the jury's verdict was excessive or influenced by passion, prejudice, or sympathy. Therefore, a new trial cannot be granted on this basis.

B.

Under the Federal Employers' Liability Act a plaintiff has a duty to mitigate his damages. Jones v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 800 F.2d 590, 593 (6th Cir.1986); Baker v. Baltimore & Ohio R.R. Co., 502 F.2d 638, 644 (6th Cir.1974). The district court did not instruct the jury on plaintiff's duty to mitigate. On appeal, defendant contends that this omission was reversible error, but at the trial defendant did not object to the omission. Rather, defendant raised its objection for the first time in its motion for a new trial. [FN2] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 51 provides: "No party may assign as error the giving or the failure to give an instruction unless that party objects thereto before the jury retires to consider its verdict...." Because defendant did not object before the jury retired, we may only review the district court's failure to instruct the jury on mitigation principles for plain error, error that is so obvious and prejudicial that a failure to correct it would result in a manifest miscarriage of justice. See Thompson v. Paasche, 950 F.2d 306, 314 (6th Cir.1991); Gomez v. Great Lakes Steel Div. Nat'l Steel Corp., 803 F.2d 250, 256 (6th Cir.1986); O'Brien v. Willys Motors, Inc., 385 F.2d 163, 166 (6th Cir.1967). Defendant offers no argument as to why the omission of the mitigation instruction was plain error other than to say that it is the law that a plaintiff must mitigate his damages and failing to give the instruction "may have affected the award of damages." Brief for Defendant-Appellant at 45 (emphasis in original).

5 In denying defendant's motion for a new trial, the district court held that the omission of the mitigation instruction was not prejudicial to defendant because the jury verdict appeared to have taken the mitigation principle into account. Without accounting for the duty to mitigate, plaintiff's economic damages would have been $660,000, that is, plaintiff's $30,000 salary multiplied by his expected work life of 22 years. The district court concluded that the jury had to have taken mitigation principles into account because it only awarded $500,000, which was the total of economic damages and pain and suffering. We agree that defendant has not satisfied its burden of showing that the failure to instruct the jury on mitigation principles resulted in a manifest miscarriage of justice. Therefore, the failure to give such an instruction was not plain error.

C.

Defendant's final complaint is that the district court committed reversible error by prohibiting Dr. Gallant from testifying about the medical opinions of Dr. Yull and Dr. Roy, which were contained in the medical file maintained by Dr. Gallant. [FN3] Plaintiff objected to the introduction of these opinions because the opinions constituted hearsay. Defendant argued that the opinions fell within the hearsay exceptions for statements made for purposes of medical diagnosis or treatment, Fed.R.Evid. 803(4), and for records of regularly conducted activity, Fed.R.Evid. 803(6). We review the district court's rulings on admission of evidence only for an abuse of discretion. Nida v. Plant Protection Assoc. Nat'l, 7 F.3d 522, 527 (6th Cir.1993). "In the context of an evidentiary ruling, abuse of discretion exists when the reviewing court is firmly convinced that a mistake has been made regarding admission of evidence. However, even if a mistake has been made, a new trial will not be granted unless the evidence would have caused a different outcome at trial." Polk v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 876 F.2d 527, 532 (6th Cir.1989) (citation omitted).

The medical opinions of Dr. Yull and Dr. Roy that plaintiff was fit to return to regular work do not fall within the hearsay exception provided by Fed.R.Evid. 803(4). "The rationale underlying the Rule 803(4) exception for statements made for purposes of treatment is that the declarant's motive guarantees their trustworthiness, since he has a motive to disclose the truth because his treatment will depend in part upon what he says." 4 Jack B. Weinstein & Margaret A. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence ¶ 803(4)[01], at 803-144 (1993) (citing Meaney v. United States, 112 F.2d 538 (2d Cir.1940)). In this case, defendant was not trying to admit statements made by plaintiff for the purposes of treatment or diagnosis but rather was trying to admit the medical opinions and diagnoses of doctors who had examined plaintiff. Because these opinions were not statements made for the purposes of diagnosis or treatment, they do not fall within the hearsay exception of Rule 803(4).

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

6 Furthermore, the medical reports were not admissible under Fed.R.Evid. 803(6) because Dr. Gallant was unable to lay a proper foundation. A "qualified witness" under Rule 803(6) need not have participated in the making of the record, but he must be "familiar with the record keeping system." United States v. Hathaway, 798 F.2d 902, 906 (6th Cir.1986). Here, Dr. Gallant could not testify as to the record keeping procedures of Drs. Yull and Roy or if it was the regular practice of those doctors to make such records. Because Dr. Gallant was not familiar with the record keeping system under which these reports were made, he was not qualified to a lay a foundation for the reports to be admitted or read into evidence. Furthermore, the fact that Dr. Gallant regularly kept reports of other doctors in his records does not cure this foundation deficiency. Rule 803(6) requires not only that the witness show that the report was "kept in the course of a regularly conducted business activity" but also that "it was the regular practice of that business activity to make the ... report." Dr. Gallant and defendant Grand Trunk may have regularly kept such reports, but it was not their regular practice to make such reports. In other words, Dr. Gallant's custody of Dr. Yull's and Dr. Roy's medical reports does not make the reports admissible as Dr. Gallant's business records. See Belber v. Lipson, 905 F.2d 549, 552 (1st Cir.1990).

Moreover, although Dr. Gallant was not permitted to read the opinion of Dr. Roy into evidence, he nevertheless advised the jury of the conclusions reached by Dr. Roy by testifying that Dr. Roy's opinion "reinforces my opinion that this man is not disabled." J.A. 601. Therefore, even if it were error to disallow the medical report, defendant was not substantially prejudiced by the error because the jury was aware of the basic content of the report and that the other doctor's findings bolstered Dr. Gallant's conclusion.

The district court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to allow the medical reports of Dr. Roy and Dr. Yull to be admitted into evidence. We are not firmly convinced that the district court made a mistake in not allowing the evidence. Rule 803(4) is inapplicable, and defendant did not lay a proper foundation to admit the reports under Rule 803(6). Additionally, even if the reports should have been admitted, we cannot say that it would have made a difference in the outcome of the trial, because the jury was aware that the reports agreed with Dr. Gallant's conclusion.

III.

For the reasons stated, the district court is AFFIRMED in all respects.

FN1. 45 U.S.C. § 51 provides in relevant part:
Every common carrier by railroad while engaging in [interstate] commerce ... shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier in such commerce ... for such injury ... resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier....

FN2. The district court required the parties to submit joint proposed jury instructions. No proposed instruction on the duty to mitigate was included in the joint instructions submitted by the parties. After the trial was complete and the verdict rendered, defendant filed a motion to amend the record to add defendant's individual set of proposed instructions. A mitigation instruction was included in defendant's proposed instructions.
Defendant seems to argue that the failure to object should be excused because the district court gave the attorneys only an hour to review the jury instructions before closing arguments. Even if an hour was insufficient time, which we do not mean to imply, this excuse would not aid defendant here because not only were the attorneys given an hour to review the actual jury instructions, but the attorneys also had the joint proposed jury instructions well beforehand. There was no mitigation instruction in the joint proposal, and therefore defendant should have been aware of the possibility that such an instruction would not be given.

Copr. © West 2000 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN3. Dr. Yull and Dr. Roy were not called as witnesses at trial. Defendant contends that they were not called because there was an agreement between counsel that the reports could be admitted into evidence. However, no such agreement appears in the record of this case, and plaintiff's counsel states that no such agreement was ever made.

Dear Mr. Apperson:

Enclosed for filing please find an original and one copy of Conwood's Reply in Support of Motion for Permanent Injunctive Relief, Plaintiffs' Reply in Support of Motion for Attorneys' Fees and Costs and Motion of Plaintiffs for Leave to File Memorandum in Excess of Fifteen Pages.

I have also enclosed an additional copy of each. Please date stamp and return these copies in the attached self-addressed, postage pre-paid envelope.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Respectfully,

Steven F. Benz
