Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the nonprofit membership organization for the federally mandated Protection and Advocacy System and Client Assistance Programs for people with disabilities, the National Disability Rights Network (NDRN) would like to express its strong support for the confirmation of Debo Adebile as the next Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. The Department of Justice Civil Rights Division plays a critical role in protecting the rights of people with disabilities and effectuating the promise of integration and access in the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Mr. Adebile's history of skillful representation and bipartisan consensus-building makes him an ideal leader to enforce and advance the rights of people with disabilities in the Civil Rights Division.

Mr. Adebile is an exceptional candidate to carry on the recent ground-breaking work of the Civil Rights Division in advancing the employment and community integration of people with disabilities. As the lead agency responsible for enforcing the mandate in Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581 (1999) that people with disabilities receive services in the least restrictive setting to the person's liberty. The Olmstead decision has improved the lives of thousands of people with disabilities by providing them the opportunity for full community integration in their homes, their jobs, and their daily lives.

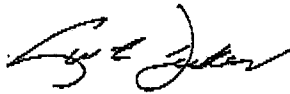

Recent work by the Civil Rights Division has demonstrated the ways in which effective leadership can help people with disabilities. In the past few years, the Division reached landmark settlement agreements with the states of Virginia, Delaware, and Georgia allowing these states to transition from a heavy reliance on institutional settings to a system focused on individualized and cost-effective community-based services promoting full participation by people with disabilities in community life. Last year, the Division also filed a Motion to Intervene in Lane v. Kitzhaber supporting the right for people with disabilities to pursue employment in integrated settings. When applied in the employment setting, the Olmstead decision will advance economic opportunities and independence for people with disabilities.

Debo Adegbile is the leader that the Civil Rights Division needs to carry on this work. He has respect and support across the political spectrum, including from former Solicitors General Paul Clement and Drew Days, because of his principled and measured approach to issues. He has demonstrated skill inside and outside of the courtroom in a variety of settings, including as a litigator for a large corporate law firm and for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, and twice arguing cases before the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Adegbile has the experience and understanding of civil rights laws that would enable him to effectively enforce the rights of all Americans, including people with disabilities.

Debo Adegbile has the qualifications and experience to make an outstanding Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. Please support his swift confirmation.

Sincerely,
