

Dr. Stephen Legomsky is the John S. Lehmann University Professor at the Washington University School of Law. He has taught U.S. immigration law for more than 30 years and is the author (now co-author starting with the fifth edition) of the law school textbook "Immigration and Refugee Law and Policy." This book is now in its sixth edition and has been the required text for immigration courses at 183 U.S. law schools since its inception. From 2011 to 2013 he served as the Chief Counsel of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, in the Department of Homeland Security. He has advised both Democratic and Republican administrations and several foreign governments on immigration policy. He has held visiting academic appointments at universities in twelve countries.