The paper blizzard. Within hours of the nomination, senators and special interest groups will inundate the press with letters, reports, memos and even small books that purport to expose the unfitness of the nominee. In many cases, those scripts have already been written. For more than two years, Democrats have been doing "opposition research," as though preparing for a political campaign, to uncover damaging information on the 10 to 15 people rumored to be on the president's short list for the court. The purpose of the paper blizzard is to turn public opinion against the nominee long before the Senate Judiciary Committee even convenes a hearing on the nomination.

The indictment. The paper blizzard will include some or all of the following accusations: The nominee is not "sensitive" to the rights of women, children, black Americans and other racial minorities, the disabled, workers, unions, farmers, native Americans and others. The nominee is "out of the mainstream" of the American legal tradition; is too "right wing"; is even "radical." (Democrats perfected their use of those smear tactics against Judge Bork, stooping so low as to suggest he might not believe in God. Apparently a godless conservative is even more dangerous than a god-fearing one.) With much hand-wringing, Democrats will cry crocodile tears, sighing "if only the president had nominated a moderate conservative, we would be delighted to confirm him or her." If the nominee does not have an extensive body of scholarly writings, Democrats will tar him as a "stealth" candidate who possesses hidden and alarming views. If, on the other hand, the nominee has written extensively, those writings will be denounced as "out of the mainstream." (Remember that phrase). If the nominee believes in a color-blind society and equal treatment under the laws, and questions the constitutionality of race-conscious policies called affirmative action by some, then of course the nominee is a "racist" who will want to "turn back the clock" on civil rights, overturn Brown vs. Board of Education, repeal the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments, and reintroduce slavery.

Beyond attacking the nominee personally, the paper blizzard will suggest that he or she represents a so-called transformative appointment who will upset the alleged delicate balance of the court. Some Democrats will seek cover by claiming that they have nothing against the nominee, he or she is just the wrong person at the wrong time for the best interests of the court and the country.

Rancorous hearings. Mr. Bush's first nominee to the court should not expect a cordial reception from Democrats on the Judiciary Committee. They will attempt to grill the nominee for three to six days. They will ask hundreds of questions. Many hostile witnesses will be called. Special interest groups will haunt the hearing room and loiter in the halls, murmuring against the nominee and handing out attack literature.

The partisan committee vote. For the Democrats, the hearings are mainly for show and to posture before the cameras for their constituencies and the left-wing special interest groups. They will have already decided their vote before the hearing begins or the nominee speaks one word. Of course that vote is "no." Because Republicans are a majority on the committee, the nomination will be reported to the Senate favorably by a party-line vote.

The Senate vote. Once the Judiciary Committee reports the nomination to the full Senate, Democrats opposing the nomination will continue to fight it on the floor by insisting on a lengthy debate. Then they will try to persuade their colleagues to vote against the nominee. Ultimately they will lose. The president's nominee will be confirmed because the Republican majority, plus a number of responsible Democrats, will vote to confirm him. If there is a vote, that is.

Along with their substantive attack on the nominee, Democrats will mount a procedural attack. That plan has two elements.

Delay the Judiciary Committee hearing. Upon making a nomination, the president will ask Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch to schedule hearings by early July, with the goal of having a Senate floor vote by late July or early August. Democrats on the committee will vigorously oppose that goal and attempt to delay the hearing until September. They will bleat that there must be no "rush to judgment," and claim that they require months to "study" the nominee. Their ability to stall Judge Bork's hearings until September contributed to the nomination's defeat. Democrats and the special interest groups had all summer to mobilize their onslaught against Judge Bork. The White House failed to anticipate the viciousness of the assault and was taken off guard. Because the Republicans now control the committee, the Democrats will find it harder to stall the hearings.

The filibuster trump card. When all else fails to cow the president's nominee into withdrawing, when the Democrats have been unable to stall the Judiciary Committee hearing, when they can't stop the committee from reporting the nomination favorably to the full Senate, after they fail to turn mainstream America against the nominee, when they count heads and discover that a majority of senators, including many Democrats, intend to vote to confirm the president's nominee, look for the leaders of the opposition to play their favorite, anti-democratic, Democratic trump card - the filibuster. Democrats challenged the president on Miguel Estrada, and they believe they have found the president wanting. Although Mr. Bush has called Mr. Estrada one of his most important appellate nominees, the White House has, for the past two years, been unable to confirm him. The Democrats' successful filibuster against Miguel Estrada, the first ever against a nominee to a U.S. Court of Appeals, has emboldened them to challenge Mr. Bush when he makes his first nomination to the High Court. The Democrats have paid no price for their Estrada filibuster. Look for them to test the president again.

Yes, that is the worst-case scenario, and it may not unfold. In any event, if there is a vacancy on the court, the nominee must be treated civilly, fairly and allowed an up or down vote by the full Senate, as the Constitution contemplates. The president had better be prepared for a fight. His opponents are certainly ready. If the president prevents the politicization of nominations to the lower federal courts, and to the U.S. Supreme Court, he will win the most important domestic battle of his first term. If he loses that battle, he may not get a second chance.

James L. Swanson, editor in chief of the Cato Institute's "Supreme Court Review," was on the Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel team that staffed the nomination and confirmation hearings of Judge Robert H. Bork for the Supreme Court.

Washington Times
April 27, 2003
Forthcoming clash for the court
By James L. Swanson

At the Supreme Court of the United States, October Term 2002 is drawing to a close. The justices hear their last oral arguments on April 30, and in late June they will take to the bench for the last time to announce their final opinions of the term. Court watchers await decisions in several important cases, including free-speech and affirmative-action issues, which may not come down until the last day of the term. But that is not the only reason why court watchers have circled the last week in June on the calendar. That is when oddsmakers are betting on the retirement of at least one member of the court.

For months, pundits have speculated that Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor or Justice John Paul Stevens will step down this year. Why?

Because justices traditionally retire under the political party that appointed them, and this is the last chance for these three Republican appointees to retire during President Bush's first term with the assurance that he can fill a vacancy before the 2004 election.

Because, in the case of the chief justice, he has, in three decades of service, gone from lone dissenter to leader of the court's return to the first principles of limited government and federalism, and will go down as one of the most important chief justices in history.

Because, in the case of Justice O'Connor, the press spread rumors that she wanted to retire.

Because, in the case of Justice Stevens, he is 83 years old.

It is impossible to know whether these or any other members of the Supreme Court are planning to retire this year. Many self-styled experts have embarrassed themselves by attempting to predict a justice's vote in a single case, let alone a retirement from the bench. Nor is this to suggest that any of the nine justices should retire. The performance of the oldest justice (John Paul Stevens) to the youngest (Clarence Thomas), of the longest serving (William H. Rehnquist) to the briefest (Stephen Breyer) reveals that all remain able and engaged. Their written opinions confirm that none has suffered an intellectual decline. One may disagree with their views, but not their competence to serve. If a retirement comes, it will occur because the justice wants to step down, not because he or she has to.

It might not happen until the end of June. But it could also happen tomorrow. Justices Potter Stewart, Warren E. Burger and Thurgood Marshall waited until the end of their final terms and made June announcements. But Byron White and Harry Blackmun announced their retirements early, on March 3, 1993, and April 6, 1994, respectively, to give President Clinton ample time to nominate their successors, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer, and to win Senate confirmation by, in both cases, the beginning of August.

Although it is impossible to know if or when a vacancy will occur, one thing is easy to predict: how Democrats will respond to Mr. Bush's first nomination of a Supreme Court justice. Senate Democrats, in combination with a cabal of special interest groups, intend to politicize the Supreme Court and oppose any Bush nominee, regardless of who the nominee is. History, both recent and reaching back to the Reagan and first Bush presidencies, offers little encouragement that the Senate will conduct itself professionally and responsibly.

The pattern emerged over time: the Democrats' defeat of Judge Robert H. Bork's nomination to the court in 1987; their near-killing of Judge Clarence Thomas' nomination in 1991; their rage against the Supreme Court for "handing" the presidency to the Republicans in the 2000 election; the notorious Washington Post op-ed by Abner Mikva (former Clinton White House counsel and retired U.S. Court of Appeals judge) calling on the Senate to block any Supreme Court nominations by President Bush; their bottling up superbly qualified appellate court nominees for nearly two years on the Democratic-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee; their obsession with Roe vs. Wade and their imposition of ideological litmus tests; their celebration of the American Bar Association seal of approval as the "gold standard" — until the ABA began giving many of Mr. Bush's nominees the highest possible rating; their filibustering of the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington to prevent an up or down vote even after a majority of senators announced that they will vote to confirm him; their threatened filibuster against Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen for a seat on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

That history, and more, exposes what Democrats will do to fight a Bush Supreme Court nomination. The attack will be waged on two fronts, one substantive, the other procedural.

The substantive attack will have six parts.

Retirement day blitzkrieg. If the retiring justice is a Republican, and gives the White House advance, confidential notice of his or her intention to retire, as Chief Justice Warren Burger did in 1986, the president will have an opportunity to announce a retirement and a nomination on the same day. Within one hour of that nomination, a leading Democratic senator, probably Tom Daschle, Edward Kennedy, Patrick Leahy or Charles Schumer, will attack the nominee's character, integrity or competence. (Recall Mr. Kennedy's outburst within 45 minutes of President Reagan's nomination of Judge Bork: "Robert Bork's America is a land in which women would be forced into back-alley abortions, blacks would sit at segregated lunch counters, rogue policemen could break down citizen's doors in midnight raids, school children could not be taught about evolution, writers and artists could be censored at the whim of government." Sundry left wing "public interest" (actually, special interest) groups will join the chorus. The purpose of the first day blitzkrieg is to set the president and the nominee reeling on their heels and destroy the momentum of the nomination. The blitzkrieg aims to spin that night's TV coverage and the next morning's newspaper stories.

The paper blizzard. Within hours of the nomination, senators and special interest groups will inundate the press with letters, reports, memos and even small books that purport to expose the unfitness of the nominee. In many cases, those scripts have already been written. For more than two years, Democrats have been doing "opposition research," as though preparing for a political campaign, to uncover damaging information on the 10 to 15 people rumored to be on the president's short list for the court. The purpose of the paper blizzard is to turn public opinion against the nominee long before the Senate Judiciary Committee even convenes a hearing on the nomination.

With much hand-wringing, Democrats will cry crocodile tears, sighing "if only the president had nominated a moderate conservative, we would be delighted to confirm him or her." If the nominee does not have an extensive body of scholarly writings, Democrats will tar him as a "stealth" candidate who possesses hidden and alarming views. If, on the other hand, the nominee has written extensively, those writings will be denounced as "out of the mainstream." (Remember that phrase.) MEDIA AVAILABILITY WITH SECRETARY OF STATE COLIN POWELL AND JORDANIAN
FOREIGN MINISTER MARWAN MUASHER FOLLOWING THEIR MEETING

C STREET ENTRANCE, THE STATE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D.C.
11:39 A.M. EDT, MONDAY, APRIL 28, 2003

SEC. POWELL: Good morning, everyone. It's been my pleasure to host Foreign Minister Muasher of Jordan. We had a good conversation, and as you might expect, we talked about the two topics of the day of greatest interest to us, and that was where we are in Iraq now that, for the most part, the serious hostilities are over. Although we have not yet finished cleaning up all the pockets of resistance, nevertheless, you can see that our attention has turned to dealing with humanitarian needs. And I am pleased that food is not a problem in the country, and we're hard at work fixing the electrical grid and making sure that the people of Iraq have clean water and the other things needed for satisfactory daily life.

;;;;; We will begin the effort of rebuilding the ministries. And as you know from the meeting taking place in Baghdad today, work is also underway to help the Iraqi people create a new government that will be representative of all the Iraqi people.

;;;;; So we discussed this issue in some detail, and then we moved to the Middle East peace process. And I reaffirmed President Bush's commitment to release, with the other members of the Quartet, the road map, as soon as Prime Minister-designate Abu Mazen has been confirmed by the PLC, and we hope that will be in the next several days.

;;;;; And both the minister and I expressed our hopes that both parties -- the Palestinians and the Israelis -- will grab this new opportunity to achieve progress along the path to peace through the use of this road map. So we're encouraged by this development, the transformation within the Palestinian Authority, that will allow the Palestinian people to have a prime minister who can be a responsible partner working with Israel and working with the United States, members of the Quartet, and the countries in the region, leaders in the region, to move forward to our goal, which is to create a Palestinian state in a period of time that President Bush suggested, within a three-year period of time.

;;;;; So, Mr. Minister, as always, it's a great pleasure to have had you here.

;;;;; MIN. MUASHER: Thank you, sir. Let me thank Secretary Powell for this very productive meeting. We discussed, of course, again, the two main issues on the region's mind -- Iraq and the peace process.

;;;;; We emphasized the need to start a political process in Iraq that would lead to the formation of a credible and representative Iraqi government so we can get on with the process of rebuilding Iraq, and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Iraq.

;;;;; On the peace process, I am very encouraged by what I heard from the secretary about the president's resolve to get ahead with the road map. We are all looking forward to the time when the road map will be announced, in a few days, hopefully. More importantly, I think there is serious work ahead of us in making sure that the road map is implemented at a very early time and in an honest manner that would restart the peace process, that would give people hope that they can live in peace and security, and that would get us to the time when a Palestinian state will be established alongside Israel, and where the occupation -- again, the Israeli occupation will end.

;;;;; I look forward to working with the secretary on these issues, and I believe that the time has come in the Middle East to truly look at all the problems of the Middle East in a way that would end all conflicts there.

;;;;; Thank you.

;;;;; Q Mr. Secretary, is the U.S. -- are you getting support from Europeans and Arab governments -- I could ask the minister, too -- on your -- what should I say? -- hopes for a transformation of the leadership, of, frankly, a sidetracking of Yasser Arafat, bringing to the fore Abu Mazen? Is the U.S. alone on this or is it reinforced?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: I don't think we're alone. Clearly, we have been ahead of our European colleagues with respect to calling for transformation in the leadership of the Palestinian Authority.

;;;;; But I think I can speak for the members of the Quartet when we say that we welcome the appointment of a prime minister who we believe can be a partner to work with members of the Quartet and others in the region to move the peace process along. Chairman Arafat is there, but I believe we need new, reinvigorated leadership of the kind that we hope Mr. Abu Mazen will bring to the table; the kind that Mr. Fayyad, the minister of Finance, is bringing to the table. And this is not the time to look back. It's a time to look forward and do everything we can to help the new prime minister.

;;;;; Q Minister, is that something that -- do you have something to say about it?

;;;;; MIN. MUASHER: Well, this is a -- the Palestinian reform process is that, a Palestinian process that is internal and that is ongoing. And we believe that the recent developments have been very encouraging. You have a new government. You have a prime minister with authority, and you have ministers that are authorized with going on with some very serious work, both on security and finance, among other things.

;;;;; We support the new Palestinian government, and we intend to work with it in order to make sure that the proper conditions are created on the ground that would help in relaunching the peace process.

;;;;; Q Mr. Foreign Minister?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: Yeah? Yes, here.

;;;;; Q Mr. Foreign Minister, you've spoken about moving ahead with the road map but also that you would like to see more of a U.S. engagement, not only rolling out the road map. Could you describe what kind of U.S. engagement you'd like to see going forward?

;;;;; And Secretary Powell, on North Korea, the North Koreans, there's been some reports out through the Chinese that the North Koreans offered to scrap their nuclear programs, not do any testing, in exchange for a security guarantee by the United States. Is there anything you could say on that? Thank you.

;;;;; MIN. MUASHER: Well, I think what we all want to see is tangible differences on the ground, differences that would indicate to Palestinians in particular there is indeed hope that the peace process is finally relaunched and that their lives have changed. We would like to see Israel lift the curfews, stop demolition of homes. We would like to see an end to settlement activity, and we would like to see the security situation also stabilized.

;;;;; So these are the kind of early activities that we would be looking at to see whether we can indeed translate the road map into a tangible difference on the ground.

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: The trilateral meeting that we held with the Chinese and the North Koreans last week in Beijing, I think, turned out to be quite useful. The North Koreans acknowledged a number of things that they were doing and, in effect, said these are now up for further discussion. They did put forward a plan that would ultimately deal with their nuclear capability and their missile activities, but they, of course, expect something considerable in return. And so we are studying that plan, or we are examining it with our friends and allies. We're staying in the closest touch with the South Koreans, the Japanese, the Chinese, Russians, Australians and others. And so I think it was useful to get it all out on the table and see where we go from here.

;;;;; They've never used the word "testing." You suggested they threatened to test. But they never used the word "test." They said that it is the kind of capability that one can display in one way or another. And we're taking all of this (in ?) seriousness, and now that Assistant Secretary Kelly is back, we'll be spending quite a bit of time going over his notes and his impressions on what he heard.

;;;;; Let me take this opportunity to thank the Chinese government for not only hosting this meeting but being a full participant in this first multilateral session.

;;;;; Q Mr. Secretary, have you asked the Jordanians in any manner to help work with the Syrians for moderation, and also to ask for special policing and other type of army-type infrastructure to go into Iraq?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: No, it didn't come up in the course of -- the second part of your question --- didn't come up in the course of our conversation. And I don't know if the minister wishes to say a word to that point.

;;;;; With respect to Syria, we always discuss Syria when we are together. And as you know, I plan to travel to Syria in the not-too-distant future and have a full range of conversations with the Syrian leadership over issues that are on our mind and of concern to us and that we have been speaking about rather openly in recent weeks. And I'm sure we'll have complete and comprehensive discussions with the Syrians.

;;;;; And I hope that in light of the changed circumstances in the region, not only with respect to what happened in Iraq, but with the likelihood that the road map is about to be placed down over the next several days, I hope that these two elements -- changed circumstance in Iraq and the road map -- will cause the Syrians to review all of their policies and give some consideration to changing those policies, which we believe have not been helpful in the past.

;;;;; Q Mr. Secretary, there were reports over the weekend that North Korea actually told the State Department on March 31st that it had begun this reprocessing, although the press didn't find out about it until a later date. And there are some allegations that the rest of the administration didn't find out about it, or other agencies. Can you address that?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: Yeah, that's nonsense. Over a period of time, the North Koreans have made different statements about reprocessing and whether they are or are not reprocessing. And we always examine those statements and we try to determine the validity of those statements. And our intelligence community still cannot give us any validation or confirmation of what North Korea has said at various times and in various places with respect to reprocessing.

;;;;; So what we were told on the 31st was shared within the administration. I'm not sure if everybody in the administration got it, but it isn't relevant because it didn't seem to be anything that was terribly new or different from what we had been told on a regular basis over the last several months. It was not, in our judgment, anything that was particularly new or newsworthy.

;;;;; Thank you.

;;;;; (Pause while Secretary Powell walks Minister Muasher to his car.)

;;;;; Q Mr. Secretary, can you answer one more question, please, sir? In Cuba, the Cubans have really cracked down on people just trying to exercise their rights. The pope this weekend condemned this. Is there anything that the U.S. can do now to help these people or to help the situation?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: We're reviewing all of our policies and our approach toward Cuba in light of what I think is a deteriorating human rights situation within Cuba. And we have been rather forceful in our denunciation of these activities. And I am very pleased that His Holiness has also commented on the situation. The long terms of imprisonment -- 12, 15, 20 years -- for speaking out, trying to exercise basic human rights, this just once again illustrates the nature of that regime under this dictator, Fidel Castro, who's been doing this for many years. And so I hope the whole world will now see this regime for what it is, a regime that is one of the last of its kind on the face of the earth, and really is an aberration in the Western Hemisphere, when you look at how all other nations in our hemisphere, except for Cuba, are trying to find the way forward with democracy and free enterprise system and individual rights and liberty. And Castro continues to do nothing but oppress -- suppress his people, suppress opinion. And we're reviewing all of our policies.

;;;;; Thank you.

;;;;; Q Can I ask you about Newt Gingrich?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: I don't have anything to say about it.

;;;;; Q How about Saudi Arabia? Are we pulling out of Saudi Arabia? Are we getting out of Saudi Arabia?

;;;;; SEC. POWELL: Of course not.

END.

Thanks. I'll pass this along to Dean. I told him that Cruz had presented it early in the Administration as a campaign proposal.

It is ok for RNC to run such a media training program for political appointees. Also ok for Levine to run such a program here.

Following our Hispanic appointees conference call, the following inquiry below came to our attention.

Mercy has been talking with Nicolle in making this happen. Is it possible to coordinate this training at the RNC???

Q:
Possibly hold a media training for all Hispanic Spokespersons (with special emphasis on Spanish-language interviews) and mid and/or high level Administration officials often called to do Spanish-language interviews.

I have had the benefit of getting some media training at work and have found it to be quite helpful. It has made me pretty confident and able when called to do an interview in Spanish. I now even sometimes coach and brief other attorneys for Spanish and English mainstream interviews.

(small blurb on class action at end, too)
Labor Officials Offer Bottom Line On Asbestos Litigation Bill
ÿÿÿÿ In a move that could prove to be a turning point in ongoing negotiations on asbestos litigation reform legislation, labor officials have effectively drawn their bottom line on overall liability costs, sources said. In a lengthy meeting Friday with Senate staff, industry representatives and their insurers, AFL-CIO officials presented case values and medical criteria that participants said put compensation costs for victims in the range of $121 billion to $138 billion. Labor officials were not available to confirm that figure by presstime. That figure, while higher than the $90 billion that industry defendants and insurers have said they are willing to pay combined into a trust fund for victims, is nevertheless considerably lower than the $175 billion figure some labor officials had previously floated.
ÿÿÿÿ Labor's projections, which some nonlabor sources labeled as an "opening bid," is an amount that at least keeps everybody at the table, one source remarked. Industry players who spent the weekend analyzing labor's numbers will get their chance to respond to the offer at another meeting slated for Wednesday among the same parties. Insurers have continued to insist they would hold fast to their earlier commitment with industry to pay $45 billion of the total. Labor has shied away from setting an overall liability figure, preferring to focus on the individual case values and letting those values dictate the final number, as opposed to working backwards from a predetermined amount. Labor's calculations are part of an intensive negotiation that has stretched through the April recess to try and calculate an allocation formula for the trust fund.
ÿÿÿÿ Trying to define who pays what and how much has been a central question, but it is far from being the only one on the table. The unions also have made it plain that they want the legislation to provide all victims with a failsafe right to compensation -- even if the said private trust fund goes bust. Labor officials said the "simplest" way to do that would be with a back door to the U.S. Treasury -- something expected to be anathema to congressional Republicans. Although it could not be confirmed independently, one source in close contact with the White House said the Bush administration is "very vigorously opposed ... to having Uncle Sam be the ultimate default payer." However, Damon Silvers, associate general counsel for the AFL-CIO, in a recent interview pointed out that the federal government just last year agreed to be the payer of last resort on terrorism insurance claims, a move that bailed out the same insurers who are now integrally involved in the debate over asbestos claims.

ÿÿÿÿOn a separate legal reform front, Senate Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy , D-Vt., Friday said he is considering drafting his own version of class action reform legislation as an alternative to a bill approved by the Judiciary Committee shortly before the April recess and slated for floor action in May. That measure had the support of two of the committee's nine Democrats. -- by Pamela Barnett

4/28/03*****

*Iraqis are moving toward democracy and embracing the responsibilities of active citizenship. Every day, life in Iraq improves as Coalition troops work to secure unsafe areas and bring food and medical care to those in need.

*The work of building a new Iraq will take time. That nation is recovering not just from weeks of conflict, but from decades of totalitarian rule.

*We are dispatching teams across Iraq to assess the critical needs of the Iraqi people. We're clearing land mines and working to recover artifacts looted from the National Museum of Antiquities in Baghdad.

*Iraqi citizens are working closely with Coalition troops to restore order to their cities and improve the life of their nation.

*Our engineers are meeting with Iraqi engineers, more Iraqis are getting the electricity they need, and we're working to make Iraq's drinking water clean and dependable.

*We're working to give every Iraqi access to immunizations and emergency treatment, and giving health care to sick children and pregnant women.

*Because Iraq is now free, economic sanctions are pointless. It is time for the United Nations to lift the sanctions so the Iraqi people can use some resources to build their own prosperity.

*As freedom takes hold, the Iraqi people will choose their own leaders and government. America has no intention of imposing our form of government or our culture. Yet we will ensure that all Iraqis have a voice in the new government and all citizens have their rights protected.

REV_00115688

*Iraq can be an example of peace and prosperity and freedom to the entire Middle East. It will be a hard journey, but Iraq will have a steady friend in the American people.

Estrada filibuster may galvanize Latino voters
By Ruben Navarette

After several failed attempts by Senate Republicans to break a Democratic filibuster, it's starting to look as if Miguel Estrada may never make it to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The controversial Bush nominee may have to settle for the strangest of consolation prizes: his name plastered on bumper stickers in the 2004 election.

Interestingly enough, both parties seem convinced they can use the Estrada saga to help them impress Latino voters. And that would be no small thing. Now the nation's largest minority, Latinos have gone from loyal Democrats to up-for-grabs swing voters who can help decide close races in critical battleground states like Florida, Illinois and New Mexico.

Republicans are sure they can get political mileage out of the fact that Senate Democrats treated Estrada inhospitably. And, just to make sure they don't miss their chance, they're calling out the big guns. Former President George H.W. Bush recently hosted a fund-raiser at his home in Houston to collect money for the political equivalent of an air assault. Guests forked over a quarter of a million dollars to buy television commercials targeting Democratic senators who targeted Estrada and other Bush judicial nominees.

In fact, some of the spots are already airing in four states: Nevada, Arkansas, Indiana and North Carolina. All those states have significant and growing Latino populations -- and Democratic senators seeking re-election in 2004. There are more ads coming in Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, North Dakota and South Dakota. And just to make sure Latino voters don't miss the point about Democrats and their opposition to Estrada, some Republican spots are in Spanish.

About now, I bet Democrats are having second thoughts about the years they spent fighting the English-only movement.

All Republicans need for their investment to pay off is for Latinos to start asking tough questions -- like why the party of John Kennedy, for all its professed progressivism, seems to have decided that the nation's second-most prominent court is not ready for its first Latino judge. Or why it is that Democrats, even while they insist their beef with Estrada is over his lack of judicial experience, were happy to green-light white nominees who also had never served on the bench. Or why President Bill Clinton, in his two opportunities to appoint a justice to the Supreme Court, failed to nominate a Latino. And why President George W. Bush now seems primed to do just that.

It also wouldn't hurt Republicans if Latinos remembered who went to bat for Estrada. It was a Republican president who first put Estrada's nomination in play, and a Republican-controlled Senate that rallied in support of it. And even when it was clear that the nomination was in trouble, the GOP didn't give up.

You can expect Democrats to answer with their own battery of television commercials, and don't be surprised if they are among the most innovative in recent memory. Democrats have to charge that they actually did the Latino community a favor when they went after Estrada. And to do that, they'll have to tag him an activist whose views (were they only better known) would be so conservative as to put him outside the Latino mainstream.

Shouldn't someone let these guys in on the joke and tell them that -- judging from its views on everything from abortion to vouchers -- the Latino mainstream is conservative?

Besides, whom do Democrats think they're kidding? They were against Estrada's nomination from the moment they realized they couldn't control him, intimidate him or take credit for his success. After all, what fun is it for liberals to put minorities in powerful positions if doing so doesn't leave the benefactors feeling somehow empowered?

To cover their tracks, Senate Democrats managed to convince a handful of Latino advocacy groups to join them in opposing Estrada. But Democrats still have to worry about the people these groups insist they represent -- Latino voters. You remember them? They're the sort of folks who have been known to swell up with pride when one of their own tries to advance and respond angrily when someone else tries to hold him back.

Please let me know if you are available to start the Tort Reform meeting tonight at 5:45pm. It is possible that we might have to reschedule or push back the meeting from 4:30pm today. Let me know if you could attend starting at 5:45.

I will confirm once I hear back from all participants.

thanks,
Emily

Carlton McLellan was transferred to me. He was calling from the Academy for Educational Development. They are having 5 Supreme Court Judges come from the Republic of Moldova (south of Ukraine) to learn about the American judicial process, and he is intrerested in having someone who could discuss with them the process of appointing federal judges. Please call him at 202-884-8042. He was also going to fax a request. Thanks!

Hatch Warns Labor, Industry to Reach Asbestos Agreement

Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch warned Tuesday that he planned to press ahead with a May markup of asbestos litigation reform legislation – regardless of whether labor and industry had worked out their differences on an allocation formula for compensating victims.

Negotiations between those parties over funding have been ongoing since before the April recess, but have yet to yield an agreement.

“There will be a bill,” Hatch said in an interview. “We’re going ahead, one way or the other.”

He added, “Business and labor have got to get together.” If they do not, the status quo will prevail “as far as I’m concerned,” Hatch said. However, Hatch said he believes labor has the most to lose under that scenario. “This is a big, big thing,” he said.

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

April 30, 2003

Dear Senators Frist and Daschle,

As the ten newest members of the United States Senate, we write to express our concerns about the state of the federal judicial nomination and confirmation process. The apparent breakdown in this process reflects poorly on the ability of the Senate and the Administration to work together in the best interests of our country. The breakdown also disserves the qualified nominees to the federal bench whose confirmations have been delayed or blocked, and the American people who rely on our federal courts for justice.

We, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress, are a diverse group. Among our ranks are former federal executive branch officials, members of the U.S. House of Representatives, and state attorneys general. We include state and local officials, and a former trial and appellate judge. We have different viewpoints on a variety of important issues currently facing our country. But we are united in our commitment to maintaining and preserving a fair and effective justice system for all Americans. And we are united in our concern that the judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed.

In some instances, when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the ground of how prior nominees – typically, the nominees of a previous President – were treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate. None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future.

Each of us firmly believes that the United States Senate needs a fresh start. And each of us believes strongly that we were elected to this body in order to do a job for the citizens of our respective states – to enact legislation to stimulate our economy, protect national security, and promote the national welfare, and to provide advice and consent, and to vote on the President's nominations to important positions in the executive branch and on our nation's courts.

Accordingly, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress urge you to work toward improving the Senate's use of the current process or establishing a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. We acknowledge that the White House should be included in repairing this process.

All of us were elected to do a job. Unfortunately, the current state of our judicial confirmation process prevents us from doing an important part of that job. We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us.

Yours truly,

John Cornyn

Subject: DOJ issue

We need some help with a DOJ issue.

DOJ is threatening to "investigate" every Ohio state-owned facility, building, parking lot, etc. for allegedly failing to conduct a self-evaluation and transition plan for compliance under the American with Disabilities Act. This investigation is to begin in June.

This is a long story...bottom line is we need to have a conversation with someone above the Disability Rights Section in the DOJ Civil Rights Division to resolve the issue. My attorneys tell me DOJ is on unstable legal grounds but won't relent or have a reasonable discussion.

Can you point me in a direction?

REMARKS BY RICHARD L. ARMITAGE, DEPUTY SECRETARY OF STATE, TO THE NATIONAL DEFENSE UNIVERSITY (AS RELEASED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT)

SUBJECT: IRAQ AND THE GLOBAL CHALLENGE OF PROLIFERATION

CAPITAL HILTON, WASHINGTON, D.C.

9:30 A.M. EDT, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 2003

MR. ARMITAGE: Well, thank you very much for the kind and elegant and eloquent words. There are many who accuse me of spending too much time in the weight room -- I should be spending more time on the duties, but I will let you all judge if that's the case when I've finished my remarks.

;;;;; Paul was right. We were at the boat school together. Neither of us had the opportunity to have a college education. (Laughter.) And again, about 23 years ago, found ourselves in the Pentagon -- both of us as junior bureaucrats working in the Reagan administration. Of course Paul was a serving military officer, and we've intersected from time to time ever since.

;;;;; And I really appreciate you allowing me back home, as my two-time service as the Chairman of the Board of Visitors is one of the things that I point to in almost 28 years of government service, as something that really mattered. It mattered a lot to me, and I think it mattered a lot to many of you in the room because it was during that time the Middle States' Accreditation Board came and visited and we gained accreditation for this fine university. It was long overdue. And if I do nothing else in a government career, having been part of that, along with the excellent faculty here, then I will have considered my life to have been a great success. So thanks for allowing me back.

;;;;; And I can't imagine a better audience for what I want to talk about today than this National Defense University. This is the incubator, as far as I'm concerned, for some of this nation's finest strategic thinking. And the events unfolding today in Iraq will require your best work if we are to learn valuable lessons -- in particular, if we are to learn lessons about how to approach the challenge that weapons of mass destruction pose for the security of this nation and, indeed, for all nations.

;;;;; Forty years ago, John F. Kennedy predicted that within a decade his successor could face a world bristling with nuclear weapons. He said, "I ask you to stop and think for a moment what it would mean to have nuclear weapons in so many hands; in the hands of countries large and small, stable and unstable, responsible and irresponsible, scattered throughout the world."

;;;;; Well, today, this is not the world President Bush faces, so we are fortunate in that regard. Though of course, JFK did not have to reckon with weapons of mass destruction intersecting with non-state actors. So today, instead of the 25 or so countries that President Kennedy once predicted, only a handful of nations possess nuclear weapons. Of course we suspect many more countries have chemical and biological weapons, but still short of the scores that have been predicted in the past.

;;;;; Well, we've reached this state of affairs in no small part through a concerted effort of many nations. Agreements such as the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and the Chemical Weapons Convention, organizations such as the IAEA and the Nuclear Suppliers Group -- these constitute a global security architecture that has served us satisfactorily and kept us safe.

;;;;; But as we have seen so dramatically in recent days, that architecture is showing some signs of age. Just look at the headlines. You will see India and Pakistan with a thousand-mile shared border and a 50-year history of enmity and war -- a situation that is truly frightening when you add into the mix nuclear weapons outside of the system of international restraints. Of course you'll see North Korea in the headlines -- a blighted nation led by a dictator who defies his international commitments and fiddles with nuclear threats. And you'll see Iran where an entire generation is ready for change, while elements of a violent and backward past look to buy and to build weapons of mass destruction despite their solemn obligations to the contrary.

;;;;; Now all of this goes on while terrorists are shopping the globe for enriched uranium, lethal chemicals and technical expertise. And September 11th brought home to Americans the awful truth that no one is safe from such individuals -- not Tanzanians and Kenyans attending to their daily shopping or ordinary Americans, from stockbrokers to waiters, guilty of nothing more than going to the office.

;;;;; And of course, in the headlines you will certainly see Iraq.

;;;;; These are among the most pressing global security concerns of our time. And yet, the system we have in place for dealing with such proliferation challenges does not really offer solutions for these problems. This is a system that works to dampen the demand for such capabilities and to deny the means to develop them, and with some success. But it is not a system that has a clear and a consistent way of dealing with nations who pass certain milestones.

;;;;; It's time for the world community to reinvigorate our shared commitment to stopping the spread of these weapons. And perhaps it is time to refashion the tools we already have for doing so -- to develop new tools to deal with these challenges as well as to commit to vigorous bilateral and multilateral negotiations whenever necessary.

;;;;; Now I will try to tell you all the truth. I certainly don't have all the answers on this. I can't, today, tell you exactly how to fix what is broken or how to build the new structures we need to be safe. But what I can tell you is that Iraq offers proof that the community of nations needs to come together to ask the right questions and to work out a way to deal with the tough proliferation challenges of today and tomorrow.

;;;;; In Iraq, the possession of the weapons and the means to make them, even the demonstrated willingness to use them -- that, alone, was not the problem. The problem was a dictator who by force and by fear created a political culture defined by the desire to possess and keep such capabilities at all cost.

;;;;; War was never the preferred option for our nation. It generally is not the preferred option for countries with representative governments. But Saddam Hussein was able to exploit that reluctance and exploit it for far too long. He agreed to a ceasefire he never intended to keep, and for 12 years he led the international community on -- all while he continued to do exactly as he pleased; whether that meant torturing his people, suborning terrorism or looting his nation; stashing proscribed items in private homes and schools and hospitals as well as secret hiding places.

;;;;; We simply reached the point where there was no other option, where the will of the world community, so clearly expressed in resolution after resolution from the United Nations Security Council, had to be enforced. It was unpleasant, but unavoidable -- an unpleasant and unavoidable prospect for any nation with the courage of its convictions.

;;;;; And so a group of nations has come together to force and to forge a change in the political culture of Iraq. And this required that we destroy the old regime, which the US military has done and done brilliantly, and we owe much to the assistance of our British, Australian and Polish allies inside Iraq and many other partners outside the country.

;;;;; A little more than a month after military operations began, some of our warriors are already returning home to a hero's welcome, while some will stay in place for some time to continue clean-up activities. But without question, the brutal regime of Saddam Hussein is gone.

;;;;; Changing the political culture, however, also requires that we create the conditions for something to grow in place of that regime. And I want to talk to you today about some of the ways in which the United States is working with other nations to do so.

;;;;; From the moment that we began to consider military operations, we all knew that the aftermath would be a significant challenge, but we never for a moment thought it would be an insurmountable challenge. We hold the lives of our men and women in uniform far too dear to send them on an impossible mission.

;;;;; And while you've all seen the images of looting in post-war Iraq, the news is actually much better than we had anticipated and than we had planned for.

;;;;; Our forces were able to achieve military objectives while sparing the country from a humanitarian emergency, in large part, because we could achieve those objectives without significantly damaging civilian infrastructure. But of course, much of that infrastructure had already been damaged or allowed to become decrepit because of a deliberate policy of Saddam Hussein to pressure, particularly the Shia, in the south.

;;;;; So at this point, the most formidable challenge we face is reconstruction. This will be formidable for physical as well as psychological reasons. Indeed, I would say this is not so much reconstruction as it is redevelopment of human beings and a national infrastructure that have suffered from decades of abuse and decades of neglect. This is going to require patience and persistence and above all, obviously, hard work.

;;;;; Our goal is an Iraq that is moving toward democracy; an Iraq that is whole; an Iraq that is free of weapons of mass destruction; an Iraq which is at peace with its neighbors and within itself; an Iraq for Iraqis -- for all Iraqis.

;;;;; And for those who doubt that the United States has good intentions toward the Muslim world, I can offer a thought, and that is a thought about our great respect for Islam, and more particularly, the Shia of Iraq. For the first time in so many years, they were able to participate in the religious observance of the Arbayeen recently. And it was a great demonstration of their faith and their desire to be free that so many people took the pilgrimage to demonstrate their devotion for the first time in 23 years; only possible by the activities of a U.S.-led coalition.

;;;;; President Bush has requested and Congress has provided some $2.4 billion to assist the people of Iraq in redeveloping that nation. The first priorities will continue to be the restoration of basic services, but we're also looking at key sectors where we can help make immediate improvements in the life of all Iraqis, such as: educational opportunities for Iraqi children, the schools will shortly open, as well as some of the universities; roads and bridges and ports that are functional and safe; agricultural fields which are both productive and safe.

;;;;; And we are finding as we get these -- what we are finding as we get these efforts underway is something that we had hoped, prior to the conflict, would be the case: the technical expertise to do almost all of this already resides in Iraq. People know what to do to make their country prosper and they would have done it long ago if Saddam Hussein had simply let them.

;;;;; The key now, obviously, is for Iraqis to develop a political system that will not hold them back. And so the coalition and the United States, particularly, are helping Iraqis to form an interim authority, or an IIA. This authority will be chosen by Iraqis and it is meant to be temporary, hence the word "interim." It operates only until free and fair elections bring a legitimate government to power. Nonetheless, it's absolutely imperative that this IIA be broadly representative, drawing from all of Iraq's ethnic groups and regions, including liberated Iraqis from inside as well as outside the country -- those free Iraqis who are now returning home from all around the world.

;;;;; The IIA will give Iraqis a way to participate in the economic and political reconstruction of a country from the very beginning. And as it is able, this authority will assume responsibilities ever more daily for the functioning of the government.

;;;;; The U.S. and coalition countries have helped convene two meetings, the most recently held Monday, in Baghdad, which have helped create a national dialogue about governance. These sessions have been successful, successful enough that the participants believe they can form an IIA within the next few weeks.

;;;;; And the role of the United States and our allies is limited in this regard. We are helping to create a level playing field for this energized Iraqi political process, but we will step in to stop any attempts to seize power and return the people of Iraq to servitude. That is part of the ongoing responsibility we accept for security in Iraq. President Bush has said that we are committed to helping Iraq build a future of freedom, of dignity, and of peace. The United States does not see this in any sense as an occupation, but rather, we see it as an obligation -- an obligation that we will stay long enough to see this through. And as the President has made very, very clear, not one day longer. In the meantime, we will continue to root out remaining elements of the regime. We will continue to hunt down the terrorists who have used Iraq as a safe-haven for far too many years and of course, we will continue to seek out Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction.

;;;;; I want to be clear here today that I am extraordinarily confident that Iraq had those capabilities. Rarely have the intelligence agencies of this country and our allies been so unified on any subject. Now, I know there are those, probably in this audience, that think because we have found little so far, that there's nothing to find. But I'd like to suggest to you a more frightening reality, and that is that it is far too easy to hide and to move these capabilities, and far too difficult to find them, especially in the face of a determined and practiced effort to conceal them. And the regime of Saddam Hussein was nothing if not practiced. They had years of close scrutiny in which to learn how to deceive inspectors. And then they had four unfettered years to do as they pleased.

;;;;; What emerged was a well-developed and sophisticated strategy of dispersal. For example, Secretary Powell told the United Nations Security Council on February 5th, "We know that Iraq has embedded key portions of its illicit chemical weapons infrastructure within its legitimate civilian industry." And as for Iraq's biological weapons program, Secretary Powell pointed out that multiple sources have told us of mobile facilities built while UNSCOM inspectors were actually in Iraq and designed especially and only to avoid detection.

;;;;; Now, whether it is the mobile labs or weapons disguised as industry, we are finding now that the capabilities were even more dispersed and disguised than we had thought. The evidence of Saddam Hussein's programs is likely to be spread across many hundreds and even possibly thousands of sites in Iraq. It is going to take us months to find this material, but find it we will.

;;;;; Don't forget that it was information provided by defectors, including members of Saddam Hussein's immediate family and scientists from within the program, that was critical and at times, essential, to revealing what UN inspectors were able to figure out and find out in the past. That is one reason why an inspection regime based on anything other than genuine disarmament by the now-defunct regime was doomed to fail in Iraq.

;;;;; Indeed, my optimism that we will find evidence of Iraq's weapons soon is largely a function of the cooperation that we are beginning to get from Iraqi scientists and former Iraqi officials. We're interviewing these people and continuing to seek others based on the intelligence we have about who was instrumental in each of these programs.

;;;;; And the people we have found are already leading us to other people, as well as to computer files and documents. And with these sources of information, we can say with a high degree of confidence that we will find Iraq's unconventional weapons.

;;;;; Many of these individuals are proving most helpful, but it may take some time to persuade others to cooperate with us because again, we are talking about a cultural change. People have to be certain that the climate of fear and the climate of intimidation is truly gone for good before they will be willing to truly talk about the past. And indeed, there is one sad sign that Iraqis are beginning to believe. Hundreds of people are coming forward showing reporters and soldiers and marines the scars on their bodies, the cigarette burns, the electric shocks, the mutilated hands, feet and ears.

;;;;; They are starting to share their stories of pain, of execution and of extortion, of loved ones who disappeared. They are beginning to show us mass graves and obscene torture chambers. The more we learn about just how bad it was, the more we know that this is going to be a long recovery and a hard reckoning for Iraqis. But that is what it will take: a firm decision to reconcile with the past and to move on from the past, as well as the firm determination to undo the legacy of brutality they inherited from Saddam Hussein.

;;;;; Back in 1962, President Kennedy said that in a world where the possession of nuclear weapons was commonplace, "There would be no rest, no stability, no security, and no chance of effective disarmament. There would only be the increased chance of accidental war - and an increased necessity for the great powers to involve themselves in what otherwise would be local conflicts."

;;;;; Well, I believe the world of 2003 is a safer one than that predicted. We are coming ever closer, however, to realizing in one way, that terrible vision. September 11th taught us the risks of complacency, of knowing that we are not facing up to the threats and the challenges of the day and simply allowing the difficulties of doing so to defeat us.

;;;;; Iraq is an object lesson in what can happen if we leave the problems of proliferation to a solution of the past. The use of military force to destroy a perverse political culture was a point of no return we don't want to keep coming back to. But if we are to avoid doing so, we must have effective and peaceful means of achieving and enforcing that change. And yet, while Iraq illustrates the gaps we have in our global architecture for dealing with weapons of mass destruction, it is not the template. This is not a one-size-fits-all policy. In fact, our President has stated that the threat we face from North Korea's nuclear problem is something that can be dealt with through patient, deliberate and multilateral diplomacy. And indeed, we're working now, well, with the governments of China, Japan, the Republic of Korea toward that end. And there are certainly other success stories we can point to.

;;;;; The United States, the Russian Federation and other Soviet states have worked together for years in the Cooperative Threat Reduction program, which has led to the elimination of substantial Cold War capabilities.

;;;;; For that matter, the United Nations responded swiftly to the attacks on our nation on September 11th and helped direct international reaction into concrete action to combat terrorists and to close down the financial networks that support them. This fact will be rather graphically demonstrated in about an hour or so when Secretary Powell unveils the Global Patterns of Terrorism, and we will see a rather significant, more than 40 percent, decline because of international activities to combat the problem of terrorism.

;;;;; But far too often when we talk about proliferation challenges, the international community has a tendency to put off difficult decisions, as if these difficult decisions will go away on their own. I believe our President has shown the courage to make these difficult decisions, to do what is necessary to protect the interests of this nation and the lives of our citizens.

;;;;; Now, however, it is time for the community of nations to work together, to start asking the right questions and start doing what is necessary to reshape, to reinvigorate that architecture of our common security. And certainly, this government of yours is prepared to do what it takes. We are prepared to work with all those who are willing to find effective ways to address the most pressing challenges of our time -- the challenges not just for the security of this nation, but for all nations.

;;;;; And that's why I asked Admiral Gaffney to have the opportunity to come to this university today. Because I want to challenge you to discuss this in your classrooms, and in your seminars and in your fora. And I want you to use the time the government and our various bureaucracies have given you to advance your education to attack this problem. That's why I asked to come here today. I'm going to leave you with that challenge and with my enormous gratitude for doing me the honor of listening to me this morning.

;;;;; Thank you very much. (Applause.)

END.

NOMINEE DOESN'T DESERVE CALUMNY HEAPED ON HER Forum Column

By Vilma S. Martinez

As a member of Sen. Barbara Boxer's judicial screening committee during the Clinton administration, I was proud to recommend Judge Richard Paez for the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. President Clinton nominated Paez, but his nomination languished for four years, and he was subjected to a campaign of half-truths and cruel caricatures. California Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, characteristic of her sense of fairness and respect for an independent judiciary, stepped up to the plate. She wrote letters, made phone calls and exhorted her fellow Republicans to confirm Paez and other Clinton nominees. Now that President Bush has nominated Kuhl to the 9th Circuit, many of the groups that supported Paez, ironically, have turned their fire on Kuhl, apparently to exact payback against Senate Republicans. This turnabout is not fair play. It is the continuation of a vicious cycle that punishes worthy judicial candidates in a misguided effort to use the judiciary to further narrow political ends. I generally identify myself as a Democrat, am a veteran of civil rights battles and testified against Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court (on the basis of his inadequate judicial temperament). Like others dedicated to the independence of our judiciary, I certainly do not want ideologues serving as judges on our federal courts. That is why I think that Kuhl would make a great addition to the 9th Circuit. Kuhl has served for seven years on the Los Angeles County Superior Court. Before that, she and I were law partners for nine years. Kuhl is what I think of as an "old fashioned" judge. She cares about due process for everyone. In her seven years on the Superior Court, she has shown that she is careful to hear both sides. She does not try to influence the outcome of a case to favor one side or the other. She is serious about her oath to follow the law, whatever the result. Kuhl takes as her guide the words of Justice Felix Frankfurter that the highest calling of a judge is to subordinate the judge's personal views to the law. Kuhl hardly can be described as being on "the fringe" of the Los Angeles legal community. She is the first woman to serve as the supervising judge of the civil departments of the Los Angeles Superior Court, a court system that is larger than the entire federal trial court nationwide. She served as the supervising judge of that court's very successful complex litigation program in its experimental phase.

REV_00116120

Both the plaintiff and defense bars in Los Angeles actively support Kuhl, even though she primarily represented defendants when she practiced law. California Supreme Court Justice Carlos Moreno, more than a dozen justices of the Court of Appeal and almost 100 judges of the Superior Court (including more than 25 women) have signed letters in support of Kuhl. Many of these supporters are active Democrats. They know Kuhl and, like me, they know that she has not been, and would not be, a result-oriented judge. Prof. Erwin Chemerinsky recently argued, in the pages of this publication, that the battle over judges that was so unfair to nominees of Clinton should continue against Bush's nominees. "Look Closely," Forum, April 17. He also takes the position that candidates for judicial office should be judged by who their clients are and what positions they took on behalf of those clients.

The Los Angeles County Bar Association strongly disagrees. In its March 28 letter to the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the County

Bar stated: "The recent trend in attacking the qualifications of judicial candidates on the basis of positions advocated on behalf of clients is misguided ... . [W]e urge that the Judiciary Committee give due consideration to those issues that are critical to assessing a nominees' qualifications - the nominees' professional abilities, intelligence, integrity, experience and judicial temperament - and not to those positions taken by nominees on behalf of their clients."

The letter explains that because of a lawyer's responsibility to explore and present all arguments that may advance a client's cause, "neither the identity of a lawyer's clients nor the zealous advocacy of their causes necessarily provides any insight into the lawyer's personal beliefs, nor do they necessarily provide any indication of how a nominee may view a particular case presented to him or her as a judge." The letter also notes that the type of personal attacks on candidates that have become common may discourage candidates from pursuing judicial nominations and discourage lawyers from taking on unpopular or controversial clients or causes.

I call on fellow members of the bar, both Democrats and Republicans, to step up to the plate to support Kuhl, just like she went to bat for Paez and other Clinton nominees. It is shameful that her generosity and dedication to an independent judiciary are being repaid with the same sort of calumny that Paez suffered. Until the politicians decide to play fair with judicial candidates, our system of justice will suffer grievously.

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration appealed to the Supreme Court on Wednesday to preserve the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance recited by school children.

The reference does not amount to unconstitutional government promotion of religion, the administration's top Supreme Court lawyer wrote in a court filing.

"Whatever else the (Constitution's) establishment clause may prohibit, this court's precedents make clear that it does not forbid the government from officially acknowledging the religious heritage, foundation and character of this nation," Solicitor General Theodore Olson wrote in a court filing.

"That is what the Pledge of Allegiance does. The pledge is therefore constitutional."

The Justice Department and a California school district asked the high court to reverse a federal appeals court ruling last year that banned the teacher-led pledge in public schools.

The Constitution says the government may not establish religion. In practice that has meant the government cannot endorse or promote religion in general, or favor one religion over another.

The Supreme Court has twice declared the pledge is constitutional, and numerous justices have assumed as much in other writings, Olson argued. The administration asked the court to hear its appeal in the term that begins in the fall. The court could decide before summer whether to take the case.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was so far out of bounds that the Supreme Court could simply strike down the ruling without even hearing arguments on the case, Olson suggested.

In March, the sharply divided San Francisco appeals court voted not to reconsider its earlier ruling on the pledge. In the initial ruling last June, two judges on a three-judge panel ruled that the regular morning classroom salute to the American flag is unconstitutional because of the phrase "one nation, under God."

The ban is on hold while the school district appeals. The Bush administration joined the case and filed its own appeal. If allowed to take effect in the nine states covered by the 9th Circuit, the pledge ban would affect 9.6 million children in public schools.

THE NEW JUDGMENTALISM

Look for major movement, at least from the White House side, in the nomination of federal judges. "The president promised that many of the openings in the federal judiciary would at the very least have nominations," says a White House political staffer.

The nominations, which will most likely number at least 40 and fewer than 150, should keep the Senate Judiciary Committee busy for quite a while.

The plan, according to the White House source, is to force Senate adversaries into picking and choosing individual nominees out of clusters that in the end will probably add up to more than 200 when combined with current nominees held up in committee. The larger the pool, in other words, the harder it will be for Democrats to obstruct movement toward confirmation. So one would think.

*****STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT ON THE MIDDLE EAST, 4/30/03*****

On March 14, I noted the important steps taken by the Palestinian Legislative Council (PLC) toward the creation of an empowered, accountable office of Prime Minister.

The PLC has now confirmed a new Palestinian Prime Minister and Cabinet. Today, the roadmap for peace developed by the United States over the last several months in close cooperation with Russia, the European Union, and the United Nations has been presented to Israel and the Palestinians.

The roadmap represents a starting point toward achieving the vision of two states, a secure State of Israel and a viable, peaceful, democratic Palestine, that I set out on June 24, 2002.

It is a framework for progress towards lasting peace and security in the Middle East. Implementing the roadmap will depend upon the good faith efforts and contributions of both sides. The pace of progress will depend strictly on the performance of the parties.

I urge Israelis and Palestinians to work with us and with other members of the international community, and above all directly with each other to immediately end the violence and return to a path of peace based on the principles and objectives outlined in my statement of June 24, 2002.

Both Israelis and Palestinians have suffered from the terror and violence, and from the loss of hope in a better future of peace and security. An opportunity now exists to move forward.

The United States will do all it can to seize this opportunity. To that end, I have asked Secretary Powell to travel to the region to begin working with the parties so that we can take advantage of this moment.

By JESSE J. HOLLAND

The Associated Press

Thursday, May 1, 2003: 11:21 AM

WASHINGTON - Senate Democrats on Thursday blocked Texas Judge Priscilla Owen from being confirmed to the U.S. Appeals Court, the second time they've thwarted President Bush and majority Republicans in a confrontation over federal judgeships.

GOP senators were not able to get the 60 votes they needed to break the filibuster on Owen, a home-state favorite of the president who has been nominated to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Their attempt to break the Democratic filibuster failed, 52-44.

The vote broke down along mostly party lines, with independent Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont voting with the Democrats and two Democrats - Sens. Zell Miller of Georgia and Ben Nelson of Nebraska - voting with the GOP. Four senators did not vote: Democrats Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, Joe Lieberman of Connecticut, Bob Graham of Florida and Republican James Inhofe of Oklahoma.

Republicans say Owen is more than qualified for the appellate bench and that Democrats misrepresented her positions and demonized her when they rejected her nomination last year when they controlled the Senate.

"I think that Justice Owen has been put in the political meat grinder in Washington, D.C.," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson, R-Texas.

But Democrats complain that Owen, who sits on the Texas Supreme Court, is an anti-abortion, pro-business judicial activist whose opinions and rulings are overly influenced by her personal beliefs. Bush forced them into this new filibuster by sending her name back for confirmation, they said.

"We are here because the president has picked another fight with the United States Senate by renominating a divisive and controversial activist to another circuit court, and that's regrettable," said Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the top Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Democrats say they have more than enough votes in their 48-member caucus to keep Owen bottled up in the Senate for months to come.

"She seems to want to make law to fit her own ideological preconception rather than follow the law as written," said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

A successful filibuster on Owen for Democrats will mean that simultaneous filibusters will be going against Owen and Hispanic lawyer Miguel Estrada, nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. It will be the first time two official filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred simultaneously in the Senate.

Republicans have lost four attempts to break the Estrada filibuster. If they're successful on Owen, Democrats say they're prepared to have three or even more judicial filibusters going simultaneously.

Democrats have threatened all year to filibuster against the nomination of U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering of Mississippi to the 5th Circuit.

"I think Pickering will have a very rough time," Schumer said. "And I think they'll be more" filibusters.

Schumer said another possible target could be California Judge Carolyn Kuhl, a former Reagan administration lawyer nominated to the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Senate Judiciary Committee vote will indicate whether Democrats will try to filibuster a nominee, Schumer said. The committee has 10 Republicans and nine Democrats.

"If we don't get nine votes against them in the Judiciary Committee, it will be a difficult thing to hold it up on the floor of the Senate," said Schumer, who sits on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "That's our rule of thumb."

Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, says he will hold hearings in his Senate Judiciary subcommittee in May to try to resolve the Senate logjam. Cornyn personally would prefer to ban filibusters and holds on judicial nominees.

"The Senate needs to find an end to the downward spiral of accusations, obstruction and delay," said Cornyn, who put together a letter from all 10 Senate freshmen calling for quicker confirmation of judges.

Schumer suggested setting up bipartisan nomination commissions in each state that would recommend a judicial candidate to the president for each empty judgeship. "It's our best hope for breaking the vicious cycle," Schumer said.

CORNYN TO CONVENE HEARING TO DISCUSS "FRESH START" IN JUDICIAL CONFIRMATION PROCESS

Senators, leading constitutional scholars to testify

WASHINGTON - U.S. Sen. John Cornyn, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on the Constitution, announced Thursday a list of witnesses scheduled to testify in the hearing he will convene on reforming the broken judicial confirmation process. The hearing, Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent, will be held in 226 Dirksen on Tuesday, May 6, 2003 at 2:30 p.m.

The witnesses scheduled to testify are Sens. Zell Miller (D-Ga.), Chuck Schumer (D-NY), and Arlen Specter (R-Pa.), as well as constitutional scholars Bruce Fein, Fein & Fein; Dean Douglas W. Kmiec, Catholic University School of Law; Professor Steven G. Calabresi, Northwestern School of Law; and Professor John C. Eastman, Chapman Law School.

"These witnesses, with their vast constitutional knowledge and confirmation process expertise, will provide a broad range of insight and ideas into how best to reform the judicial confirmation process. We hope to identify not only the flaws in the current system, but how they can best be addressed," Sen. Cornyn said. "The hearing will provide a forum for all sides to raise important concerns and suggestions with the intent of creating a fair and reasonable process of confirming judicial nominees."

The hearing comes two years after President Bush announced his first class of nominees to the federal courts of appeals, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen, whose nomination is being filibustered by a partisan minority of the Senate. Five of the 11 nominees have still not had a vote by the full Senate.

"It's encouraging that Sen. Schumer, my colleague on the subcommittee, has acknowledged that the system is broken and has offered a proposal of his own. Our hearing will review his, and many other proposals," Chairman Cornyn added.

Sen. Cornyn chairs the subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights & Property Rights, and is the only former judge on the committee. He also serves on the Armed Services, Environment and Public Works, and Budget Committees. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice, and Bexar County District Judge.

-See below for biographies of the witnesses-

Bruce Fein, Fein & Fein

Bruce Fein is a nationally acclaimed expert on constitutional law. He has more than 25 years of experience in legal fields ranging from antitrust to communications to national security law. He is former Associate Deputy Attorney General in the Department of Justice and former General Counsel of the Federal Communications Commission. Both parties in Congress have repeatedly summoned Mr. Fein to testify on various constitutional subjects. According to National Law Journal, he is one of the seven most quoted attorneys in the nation. He regularly appears on national radio and television, including National Public Radio, Face the Nation, C-Span and MSNBC.

Douglas W. Kmiec, Catholic University School of Law

One of the nation's leading experts in constitutional law, Douglas W. Kmiec previously held the Caruso Family Chair in Constitutional Law at Pepperdine University School of Law. Prior to that post, he taught constitutional law at the University of Notre Dame for nearly two decades. Professor Kmiec has previously served as Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legal Counsel in the U.S. Department of Justice.

Dean Kmiec has authored or co-authored numerous books and articles on constitutional issues and the role of the U.S. Supreme Court. These include books co-authored with distinguished legal historian Stephen B. Presser - The American Constitutional Order, Individual Rights and the American Constitution, and The History, Structure and Philosophy of the American Constitution.

Steven G. Calabresi, Northwestern School of Law

Professor Calabresi is a member of the faculty of the Northwestern University School of Law and is a graduate of the Yale Law School and of Yale College. He served as a Law Clerk to Justice Antonin Scalia of the United States Supreme Court. From 1985 to 1990, he served in the Reagan and Bush Administrations working both in the White House and before that in the U.S. Department of Justice. Since joining the Northwestern Faculty in 1990, Professor Calabresi has participated in constitutional reform conferences with Eastern European officials.

John C. Eastman, Chapman School of Law

John Eastman is a Professor of Law at the Chapman University School of Law, specializing in Constitutional Law and Legal History. He is also the Director of the Center for Constitutional Jurisprudence, a public interest law firm affiliated with the Claremont Institute for the Study of Statesmanship and Political Philosophy. Prior to joining the Chapman law faculty, Dr. Eastman served as a law clerk to the Honorable Clarence Thomas, Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the United States.

The quotation below from Sen. Schumer, taken from an AP story from today, is exactly right. The emerging test for judicial confirmation is, if you get at least one D vote in committee, you get confirmed; if not, you get filibustered.

"If we don't get nine votes against them in the Judiciary Committee, it will be a difficult thing to hold it up on the floor of the Senate," said Schumer, who sits on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "That's our rule of thumb."

Maybe We Should Rock The Boat After All

Washington Post's Dewar reports, "Faced with deepening political strife" over Bush's jud. nominees, sens. from both parties on 4/30 called for "overhaul of the nomination and confirmation process but offered conflicting solutions" -- "signaling that reform will not come easily." The first came from the Senate's "10 freshmen" -- nine GOPers and one Dem -- "who, in a letter to party leaders, urged an unspecified 'bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees and leave the bitterness of the past behind us.'"

Another came from Jud. Cmte member Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY), a "sharp critic of many of Bush's most conservative nominees." A letter to Bush from Schumer "proposed the creation of bipartisan nominating commissions in all states and judicial circuits to propose one candidate for each vacancy, who would then be nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate."

Writes Dewar: "While the freshmen made no specific proposals," Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX), "who joined with" Sen. Mark Pryor (D-AR) "to organize their effort, said he would like the Senate to shield judicial nominations from filibusters." While it is "unusual for freshmen to take such step in their first few months in office," the 10 "suggested in their letter that they are uniquely qualified as newcomers to suggest judicial process changes because they were not part of struggles that contributed to the current strife." Bush had "made a similar proposal" in '02 but "got nowhere, in part because" sens. are "reluctant to tamper with a power they may want to use someday."

Sen. Zell Miller (D-GA) "has proposed a process under which the 60-vote requirement would be reduced gradually to a simple majority," while Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA) "has proposed a series of deadlines for everything up to a final vote by the Senate, leaving open the option of a filibuster." Specter: "I think there is cause to preclude a filibuster, but I don't think you can get there in one bite" (5/1).

Owen Fight

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (R-TX) "and a gaggle" of TX female attys, including one Dem, held a presser on 4/30 "praising" the record of TX Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Hutchison: "I'm really stunned at how hard it has been to get this totally qualified woman confirmed ... She is one of the finest people I have ever known." Hutchison "said she is furious" of what she called Dems' "mistreatment" of Owen, and "vowed to use her leadership position" as GOP conf. vice chair "to push for a rule change that would disallow filibustering" jud. nominees.

The message "did not appear to sway" any female Dems, "many of whom" -- including Sens. Patty Murray (D-WA), Maria Cantwell (D-WA), Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI), on 4/30 "spoke out against Owen on the Senate floor" (Masterson, Houston Chronicle, 4/30). But Dems are also "working hard to prove that they do not oppose all of Bush's nominees by moving for a vote" on jud. nominee Edward Prado -- but the Senate "rebuffed" the effort on 4/29. Senate Min. Leader Tom Daschle (D-SD): "We may disagree on the Owen nomination, but there is no reason we should not pass those nominees for which there is no disagreement."

Frist "filed for cloture" on Owen's nod on 4/29, "meaning the Senate will vote" on 5/1 "whether to end debate" (Duran, Roll Call, 5/1).

FNC's Hume: "On Capitol Hill, it seems like there are harsh words almost every time when one of President Bush's judicial nominees are coming up for action" ("Special Report," 4/30).

FNC's Rosen: "Republicans may be more frustrated with their own Senate leader, Bill Frist, who some say is not making Democrats feel enough pain for their blockage of Bush nominees" ("Special Report," 4/30).

Sen. Trent Lott (R-MS), on Dem filibustering: "Surely in the past when I was majority leader, we did, you know, scrutinize Clinton's nominees, some of them were delayed in committee, some delayed on the floor. But never once, never once, did we kill one by a filibuster. I don't think we can let this stand. And we have got to stop the filibuster of Estrada and Owen" ("Hannity & Colmes," FNC, 4/30).

Finally, A Few Soft Pitches

Bush is "expected to nominate" ex-TX Supreme Court Justice Xavier Rodriguez and State District Judge Frank Montalvo to fed'l judgeships on 5/1. He also will appoint to fill vacancies on the TX fed'l bench TX Appeals Court Justice Lee Yeakel, visiting District Judge Kathleen Cardone and US Magistrate Judge Marcia Crone. All are "noncontroversial candidates" recommended by Cornyn and Hutchison (Martin, San Antonio Express-News, 5/1).

Get Stabenow

Detroit News' Weeks writes, the 6th US Circuit Court of Appeals, with "four of five vacancies ... supposed to be filled" by MI judges, "has more vacancies than any other federal appeals court." Bush "long ago nominated the four. But, alas, they have been twisting in the wind because of the same kind of bitter partisan gamesmanship that sidelined" MIans nominated by ex-Pres. Bush and ex-Pres. Clinton. The MI Four "have not even received a hearing in the GOP-ruled" Senate Jud. Cmte because Sens. Carl Levin (D-MI) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) "essentially have blackballed them. The committee has this quaint tradition of not taking up a nominee if a senator from the nominee's home state, regardless of party, objects by withholding return of 'blue slips' on them." Advises Weeks: "Chuck the tradition. One senator should not be able to prevent a vote by 99 others."

Weeks Writes: "I visit the subject today because" the MI Legal Foundation, "currently housed at the conservative" Mackinac Center for Public Policy, "began running radio ads ... attacking" Stabenow for "playing politics" with the nods, similar to earlier ads by Mackinac, attacking both Stabenow and Levin. MI Legal has raised $100K "for ads on the issue." Writes Weeks: "Why now single out just Stabenow? Because she is the next" MI sen. "up for re-election -- in three years" -- and GOPers "want to turn up the heat in areas where they think she is more vulnerable. They also figure she's more likely to cave than Levin -- and that he would go along with any compromise acceptable to her" (5/1).

President Bush has nominated four respected judges from Michigan to fill vacancies on the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. Each judge has received high marks from the American Bar Association. But Senator Debbie Stabenow ... won't let her Senate colleagues hold a hearing on Michigan's judges. If Stabenow keeps playing politics, Michigan could lose its voice on the second-highest court in the land. That's right Michigan's positions ... could end up being filled by judges from Kentucky or Tennessee, and that would be a travesty of justice for Michigan.

GOP Frustrated by Dem Filibusters May Sue

By JESSE J. HOLLAND, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Stymied now on two of President Bush's judicial nominees, Republicans are considering an attempt to change Senate rules or suing to ban judicial filibusters, even against long odds.

"It certainly could be taken to court," Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., said after Democrats on Thursday successfully blocked Texas Judge Priscilla Owen from getting a federal appeals court seat.

The discussions reflect frustration among majority Republicans that Democrats have been able to sidestep Bush's popularity and undermine one of his platforms: putting more conservatives in key judgeships.

Bush called the Owen filibuster "shameful" and "unfair to this good woman and unfaithful to the Senate's own obligations."

"The Senate has a constitutional responsibility to exercise its advice and consent function and hold up or down votes on all judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination," he said in a statement.

Democrats are filibustering two nominees — Owen and Hispanic lawyer Miguel Estrada — and have promised more if divisive Bush nominees come to the Senate floor. It takes 60 votes to break a filibuster and Democrats showed Thursday with a 52-44 vote that they had a solid enough bloc to keep Owen off the bench. They say they will win again on Monday when Republicans try for the fifth time to force Estrada through.

"History will look kindly on us for doing so," said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., "because never has a president of the United States been more ideological in his selection of judges."

The White House, GOP senators and advocates aides have been saying for months that they think filibustering judicial nominees is unconstitutional, but to test that theory someone would have to sue.

Republicans admit that they've thought about it. "One option that has been floated is the idea of a lawsuit," said Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas on Wednesday.

Frist said he didn't know whether a lawsuit would be the right way to go.

"I can't predict whether that will be done or not, but ultimately I think the United States Senate will decide for itself" how to solve the problem, he told reporters.

Some observers say resorting to a lawsuit to ban filibusters would be futile.

"Even the thought that the courts would get involved in Senate business is mind-boggling," said Sheldon Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst who studies the federal appellate nomination process. "If this isn't a separation of powers issue, what is?"

Cornyn, a former Texas judge himself, agreed. "Another branch of the government — the judiciary — cannot come in and tell Congress how it must function."

Frist and other Republicans are also looking at changing the Senate rules to eliminate filibusters of judicial nominees.

Cornyn's Senate Judiciary subcommittee plans a whole hearing next week called "Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent" to explore the issue and plans to change the nomination process.

"If filibusters are going to be made part of the judicial nominee process, I think you will see increasing discussion over whether the rules should be changed," Frist said.

The fact that the GOP's November takeover of the Senate has not made it any easier for Bush's appellate nominees to get confirmed only stokes Republican fury.

Democrats last year voted down Owen and Mississippi Judge Charles Pickering in committee and didn't hold hearings for others. The U.S. Appeals Courts are some of the most important courts in America, one step below the Supreme Court and deciding most of the nation's law.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah — who is on the front line of the judicial battles — finally boiled over a Wednesday hearing. Schumer was strongly questioning appellate nominee John Roberts at his second hearing for his nomination for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, when Hatch finally tired of the questions.

"Some I totally disagree with," Hatch said. "Some I think are dumb ... questions, between you and me. I am not kidding you. I mean, as much as I love and respect you, I just think that's true."

Brett,
Are these statistics talking about the same thing -- the same court?

The U.S. Courts of Appeals are nearly 15% vacant, with 24 vacancies out of 167 authorized seats.

Regional appeals courts have a 14 percent vacancy rate.
I know there was some confusion last time about which courts this statistic referred to, and I want to get it right. Let me know. Thanks.
Colleen

Prado, 55, was confirmed by the Senate on Thursday to fill a vacancy on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, based in New Orleans. The vote was 97-0. Three Senators did not vote.

"I want to know who the three were who had more important things to do than vote for me," quipped Prado, a colorful jurist nominated for the position by President Bush in February.

GOOD PICK

In nominating Claude Allen to a seat on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, President Bush has made an excellent choice. Allen very well could win approval for the wrong reason - he is black and the composition of the Fourth Circuit has been criticized as insufficiently diverse - but merits the appointment on the strength of his qualifications.

Democrats already are combing through Allen's record for material with which to paint him as an extremist - he supports home schooling and abstinence education, he once worked for (gasp) Jesse Helms. But Allen is no ideologue; as Virginia's Secretary of Health and Human Resources, he sought to expand the FAMIS program that offers subsidized health insurance to lower-middle-income families, and defended the effort against criticism from this newspaper.

From Washington law-firm work in the early 1990s, Allen has risen quickly through the Virginia Attorney General's office under Jim Gilmore and the state health secretariat to (currently) deputy secretary at the federal Department of Health and Human Services. An official with the Bush administration says Allen has been considered as a possible Cabinet Secretary. That background of legal expertise leavened with an understanding of the privation that besets those in need - combined with Allen's intelligence and strong grounding in traditional values - should make him a worthy addition to the court.

HEADLINE: OUR OPINION: Democrats use wrong route to win South

BODY:

U.S. Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) brought his presidential aspirations to the South last week, promising in Alabama that he will make the national party competitive here once again.

Make competitive, he neglected to mention, a party that has positioned itself in opposition to the war in Iraq and anything other than token tax cuts, and as Democrats reminded the nation once again about the elevation of conservatives to the federal bench. While the White House may appeal to some as inside work with no heavy lifting, getting there through the South toting this party's agenda will be a task requiring Herculean labor.

Just this week, for example, Kerry's Democratic colleagues --- Georgia's Zell Miller excepted --- began to filibuster the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Kerry and other Democrats are already filibustering the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals --- the first time simultaneous filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred in the U.S. Senate.

Both Owen and Estrada are superbly qualified in every respect. Yet on Owen, those who complain that a "glass ceiling" exists for women of achievement are busily constructing one to keep her in her place. And those who complain that the federal bench lacks "diversity" find Estrada to be too much diversity for their taste. He is considered to be a conservative, and the interest groups that drive the Democratic Party nationally fear Owen is, too, at least on their abortion litmus test.

The fear with Owen and Estrada is that one or both will be nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court should a vacancy occur. Senate Democrats are determined to keep off the Circuit Court bench any perceived conservative who has the credentials to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kerry, then, and the legions of presidential soundalikes who campaign with him, have to come to a region where conservatism is the mainstream to explain how reducing federal taxes is bad and cheating exemplary women and minorities of the fair hearing they have earned before the U. S. Senate because they might be conservative is good.

"I can help you wage a fight down here and rebuild this party for the long run," Kerry said in Birmingham. Republicans have carried Alabama in all but three presidential elections in the past 50 years. Jimmy Carter in 1976 was the last Democrat to carry the state. George W. Bush carried every Southern state in 2000, including Tennessee, his Democratic opponent's home state. Al Gore Jr. thought so little of his Southern prospects that he actively campaigned in just three states --- Tennessee, Florida and West Virginia.

Some Democrats, said Kerry, were "surprised" that he visited Alabama.

No surprise that he visited. The real surprise is the party baggage he hauled.

Opposition to tax cuts is comprehensible. Politicians loathe interruptions in the flow of spendable revenues. Opposition to the war is, too. Too confrontational. Angers adversaries. Provokes understandable aggression, for which we bear unexpurgated sin.

While some positions are understandable, not so their party-line opposition to Owen and Estrada. Owen, the new filibusteree, drew the American Bar Association's highest rating. She is a cum laude graduate of the Baylor University Law School who scored the top grade in Texas on the bar exam. She practiced 17 years before becoming a judge and has been widely praised for her integrity and ability. Liberal groups say, unconvincingly except when they are talking to each other and Senate Democrats, that she is anti-abortion and pro-business.

Being a neighborly people, Southerners of course welcome Kerry to visit the region and to indulge himself in its hospitality. But the senator should not indulge himself into believing that a party that opposes tax cuts and filibusters nominees such as Owen and Estrada has the slightest chance of carrying this region.

Pryor's point is precedent

EDITORIAL

Mobile (AL) Register

05/04/03

THE LATEST attacks against the judicial nomination of Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor are supremely unfair, for supremely simple reasons.

When dealing with issues before federal courts, a state attorney general has two obligations: First, be an advocate for the laws passed by his own state's legislature. Second, respect U.S. Supreme Court precedent.

With regard to the controversy over a "friend of the court" brief that Mr. Pryor filed in defense of a Texas law against sodomy, the Alabama AG acted in accordance with both obligations.

First, Alabama has an anti-sodomy law much like that of Texas, so Alabama's law effectively would be voided if the Supreme Court invalidated the Texas statute. Second, Mr. Pryor's brief asks only that existing Supreme Court precedent be upheld. And until that precedent is overturned, he is duty-bound to abide by it.

The controlling precedent comes from a 1986 case known as Bowers vs. Hardwick. According to that decision, a Georgia anti-sodo my law was held to be allowable under the Constitution.

Justice Byron White wrote that if Georgia's law were thrown out, "It would be difficult, except by fiat, to limit the claimed right to homosexual conduct while leaving exposed to prosecution adultery, incest, and other sexual crimes even though they are committed in the home. We are unwilling to start down that road."

The only difference in Mr. Pryor's brief is that he listed some of the "other sexual crimes" to which Justice White referred: "prostitution, adultery, necrophilia, bestiality, possession of child pornography, and even incest and pedophilia (if the child should credibly claim to be 'willing')."

It may well be an unfair intrusion on privacy to outlaw consensual homosexual acts. But that which is unfair is not always unconstitutional. Bill Pryor's argument is an accurate assertion of where constitutional law stands at this very moment. It no more disqualifies him from confirmation as a federal judge than does a base hit (rather than a home run) dis qualify Hank Aaron from the Hall of Fame.

Pryor's preaching
Editorial
Huntsville (AL) Times
05/04/03

Huntsville Times
Churches promote faith; courtrooms promote justice

Attorney General Bill Pryor usually has been what few Alabama politicians seem to know how to be: principled. Though unabashedly a conservative Republican, Pryor has usually been more nonpartisan than partisan. More than once, he has ignored the prevailing political winds to do what he thought was right. Trying to reform the state's sentencing system is a prime example. One what he thought was right again. But this time Pryor has gotten it wrong.

In a "friend of the court" brief filed almost three months ago regarding the Texas sodomy case before the U.S. Supreme Court, Pryor compared homosexual acts to "prostitution, adultery, necrophilia, bestiality, possession of child pornography and even incest and pedophilia." This is the same case, of course, that Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, another conservative Republican, made some similarly troubling remarks about.

The problem here is neither that Pryor has a certain point of view that others may not share, nor that he expressed it. In the United States, we all have a right to think and speak freely.

The problem is that as the attorney general of Alabama - and President Bush's nominee to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals - Pryor did not separate his personal moral views from his public role as a promoter of justice.

Bill Pryor has championed causes that many Republicans and not a few Democrats would have probably walked away from: such as the removal of the interracial marriage ban from the state constitution and the recruitment of mentors for underprivileged children, to mention a few. Alabama has benefited from having him as attorney general, and would probably benefit if he decided to seek an even higher elected office one day.

Perhaps the nation would too, but not if Pryor plans to use a judicial appointment as a opportunity to give his moral points of view the heft of the law's brief seems to be part of a trend to infuse public policy and the law with a morality of an unabashedly religious strain.

Until God (or whoever or whatever it is you do or do not worship) decides to clarify the myriad matters of faith that have caused us to separate into different churches, temples, mosques, sects and beliefs, it would be best for those who believe to enjoy their beliefs in a way that allows others to enjoy theirs - or to enjoy not having any beliefs at all. Churches are supposed to promote faith, and courtrooms, justice. If Pryor is confirmed to the 11th Circuit, he would do well to honor this distinction.

The Honorable George Bush
President of the United States of America
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I believe the process for judicial nominations is going in the wrong direction. The debate between the Senate and the Executive Branch over judicial candidates has become polarized and increasingly bitter.

Clearly, each side must be willing to compromise. Accordingly, I would like to make some recommendations for your consideration. I believe a model of bipartisan cooperation on judges already exists in the State of California.

At the beginning of your Administration, to resolve several years of acrimony over nominees in California, we jointly agreed to establish bipartisan committees to select district court judges. As you know, we created four committees in the State, one for each judicial district. Each committee has six members evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats. A nominee only can get approved with the support of the majority of the committee. For each vacancy, the committee forwards three to five candidates to the White House, and you, of course, have the final decision over which of these candidates is chosen.

Since the judicial selection committees took effect in the Spring 2001, they have filled these vacancies with high quality judges. As of today, eight California judges nominated by the committees have obtained swift Senate confirmation. On average, the nominees have obtained confirmation within 114 days of being nominated. In contrast, California district court nominees in the 106th Congress took an average of 223 days to get confirmed (three of the nominees never even managed to get a hearing).

The California system yields good results quickly. On Thursday, May 1st, you announced nominees for five district judgeships in the Southern District of California and one for the Central District of California. Congress created all six of these judgeships on November 2, 2002. Now, just six months later, we have six nominees before the Senate that earned unanimous approval before their respective state selection committees. The Committees accomplished these selections so quickly that candidates are being appointed to positions that will not even officially exist until July 15, 2003.

I propose extending this successful California model nationally.

- Each State would have an evenly divided Bipartisan Committee to recommend District and Circuit Court judges to the President
- The White House would choose nominees from this list of recommended names, but could request as many candidates as desired. In California, for example, the Selection Committee provides three to five names for each district court vacancy.
- The Senate would have six months from the President's announcement of a nomination to hold a hearing on the nominee. Subsequent to the hearing, the Senate would have to hold an up-or-down vote in Committee or on the Floor within three months.
- Concurrent with these changes, the Senate would agree to allow nominees to go forward without secret holds or public filibusters.

We have a limited window of opportunity before the current impasse over judges spirals out of control. I urge you to consider this proposal and help us find common ground. California's experience has shown how bipartisan cooperation can lead to the efficient selection of the highest caliber nominees. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

OUR OPINION: Democrats use wrong route to win South

BODY:

U.S. Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) brought his presidential aspirations to the South last week, promising in Alabama that he will make the national party competitive here once again.

Make competitive, he neglected to mention, a party that has positioned itself in opposition to the war in Iraq and anything other than token tax cuts, and as Democrats reminded the nation once again about the elevation of conservatives to the federal bench. While the White House may appeal to some as inside work with no heavy lifting, getting there through the South toting this party's agenda will be a task requiring Herculean labor.

Just this week, for example, Kerry's Democratic colleagues --- Georgia's Zell Miller excepted --- began to filibuster the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Kerry and other Democrats are already filibustering the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals --- the first time simultaneous filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred in the U.S. Senate.

Both Owen and Estrada are superbly qualified in every respect. Yet on Owen, those who complain that a "glass ceiling" exists for women of achievement are busily constructing one to keep her in her place. And those who complain that the federal bench lacks "diversity" find Estrada to be too much diversity for their taste. He is considered to be a conservative, and the interest groups that drive the Democratic Party nationally fear Owen is, too, at least on their abortion litmus test.

The fear with Owen and Estrada is that one or both will be nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court should a vacancy occur. Senate Democrats are determined to keep off the Circuit Court bench any perceived conservative who has the credentials to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kerry, then, and the legions of presidential soundalikes who campaign with him, have to come to a region where conservatism is the mainstream to explain how reducing federal taxes is bad and cheating exemplary women and minorities of the fair hearing they have earned before the U. S. Senate because they might be conservative is good.

"I can help you wage a fight down here and rebuild this party for the long run," Kerry said in Birmingham. Republicans have carried Alabama in all but three presidential elections in the past 50 years. Jimmy Carter in 1976 was the last Democrat to carry the state. George W. Bush carried every Southern state in 2000, including Tennessee, his Democratic opponent's home state. Al Gore Jr. thought so little of his Southern prospects that he actively campaigned in just three states --- Tennessee, Florida and West Virginia.

Some Democrats, said Kerry, were "surprised" that he visited Alabama.

No surprise that he visited. The real surprise is the party baggage he hauled.

Opposition to tax cuts is comprehensible. Politicians loathe interruptions in the flow of spendable revenues. Opposition to the war is, too. Too confrontational. Angers adversaries. Provokes understandable aggression, for which we bear unexpurgated sin.

While some positions are understandable, not so their party-line opposition to Owen and Estrada. Owen, the new filibusteree, drew the American Bar Association's highest rating. She is a cum laude graduate of the Baylor University Law School who scored the top grade in Texas on the bar exam. She practiced 17 years before becoming a judge and has been widely praised for her integrity and ability. Liberal groups say, unconvincingly except when they are talking to each other and Senate Democrats, that she is anti-abortion and pro-business.

Being a neighborly people, Southerners of course welcome Kerry to visit the region and to indulge himself in its hospitality. But the senator should not indulge himself into believing that a party that opposes tax cuts and filibusters nominees such as Owen and Estrada has the slightest chance of carrying this region.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

February 24, 2003

Dear Senator Schumer:

Based on your public comments yesterday, I am concerned that you may have inaccurate and incomplete information about Miguel Estrada's qualifications and about the historical practice with respect to judicial confirmations. Therefore, I write to respectfully reiterate and explain our conclusion that you and certain other Senators are applying an unfair double standard -- indeed, a series of unfair double standards -- to Miguel Estrada.

First, your request for confidential attorney-client memoranda Mr. Estrada wrote in the Office of Solicitor General seeks information that, based on our review, has not been demanded from past nominees to the federal courts of appeals. We are informed that the Senate has not requested memoranda such as these for any of the 67 appeals court nominees since 1977 who had previously worked in the Justice Department -- including the seven nominees who had previously worked in the Solicitor General's office. Nor have such memoranda been demanded from nominees in similar attorney-client situations: The Senate has not demanded confidential memoranda written by judicial nominees who had served as Senate lawyers, such as memoranda written by Stephen Breyer as a Senate counsel before Justice Breyer was confirmed to the First Circuit in 1980. Nor has the Senate demanded confidential memoranda written by judicial nominees who had served as law clerks to Supreme Court Justices or other federal or state judges. Nor has the Senate demanded confidential memoranda written by judicial nominees who had worked for private clients.

The very few isolated examples you have cited were not nominees for federal appeals courts. Moreover, those situations involved Executive Branch accommodations of targeted requests for particular documents about specific issues that were primarily related to allegations of malfeasance or misconduct in a federal office. We respectfully do not believe these examples support your request. Our conclusion about the general lack of support and precedent for your position is buttressed by the fact that every living former Solicitor General (four Democrats and three Republicans) has strongly opposed your request and stated that it would sacrifice and compromise the ability of the Justice Department to effectively represent the United States in court. In short, the traditional practice of the Senate and the Executive Branch with respect to federal appeals court nominations stands in contrast to your request here and supports our conclusion that an unfair double standard is being applied to Miguel Estrada. (Also, contrary to your suggestion yesterday, please note that no one in the Executive Branch has reviewed these memoranda since President Bush took office in January 2001.)

Second, you suggested that "no judicial nominee that I'm aware of, for such a high court, has ever had so little of a record." I respectfully disagree. Miguel Estrada has been a very accomplished lawyer, trying cases before federal juries, briefing and arguing numerous appeals before federal and state appeals courts, and arguing 15 cases before the Supreme Court, among his other significant work. His record and breadth of experience exceeds that of many judicial nominees, which is no doubt why the American Bar Association -- which you have labeled the “gold standard” -- unanimously rated him “well-qualified.” In noting yesterday that Mr. Estrada’s career had been devoted to “arguing for a client,” you appeared to imply that only those with prior judicial service (or perhaps “a lot of [law review] articles”) may serve on the federal appeals courts. But five of the eight judges currently serving on the D.C. Circuit had no prior judicial service at the time of their appointments. Indeed, Supreme Court Justices Rehnquist, White, and Powell -- to name three of the most recent -- had not served as judges before being confirmed to the Supreme Court. And like Mr. Estrada, two appointees of President Clinton to the D.C. Circuit (Judge David Tatel and Judge Merrick Garland) had similarly spent their careers “arguing for a client,” but were nonetheless confirmed.

As the Chief Justice noted in his 2001 Year-End Report, moreover, “[t]he federal Judiciary has traditionally drawn from a wide diversity of professional backgrounds.” The Chief Justice cited Justice Louis Brandeis, Justice John Harlan, Justice Byron White, Judge Thurgood Marshall (as nominee to the Second Circuit), Judge Learned Hand, and Judge John Minor Wisdom as just a few examples of great judges who had spent virtually their entire careers “arguing for a client” before becoming Supreme Court Justices or federal appeals court judges. As these examples show, had the “arguing for a client” standard been applied in the past, it would have deprived the American people of many of our most notable appellate judges. Based on our understanding, this standard has not been applied in the past. This further explains why we have concluded that an unfair double standard is being applied to Miguel Estrada.

Third, you stated that “when you went to those hearings, Mr. Estrada answered no questions.” The record demonstrates otherwise. Mr. Estrada answered more than 100 questions at his hearing (and another 25 in follow-up written answers). He explained in some detail his approach to judging on many issues, and did so appropriately without providing his personal views on specific legal or policy questions that could come before him – which is how previous judicial nominees of Presidents of both parties have appropriately answered questions. Indeed, at his hearing, Mr. Estrada was asked and answered more questions, and did so more fully, than did President Clinton’s appointees to this same court. Judge David Tatel was asked a total of three questions at his hearing. Judges Judith Rogers and Merrick Garland were each asked fewer than 20 questions. The three appointees of President Clinton – combined – thus answered fewer than half the number of questions at their hearings that Mr. Estrada answered at his hearing. What is more, like Mr. Estrada, both Judge Rogers and Judge Garland declined to give their personal views on disputed legal and policy questions at the hearing. Judge Rogers refused to give her views when asked about the notion of an evolving Constitution. And Mr. Garland did not answer questions about his personal views on the death penalty, stating that he would follow precedent. In short, we believe that your criticism of Mr. Estrada’s answers at his hearing reveals that another unfair double standard is being applied to Mr. Estrada.

Fourth, you stated that the Founding Fathers “came to the conclusion that the Senate ought to ask a whole lot of questions” of judicial nominees. We respect the Senate’s constitutional role in the confirmation process, and we agree that the Senate should make an informed judgment consistent with its traditional role and practices. But your characterization of the Senate’s role with respect to judicial nominations is not consistent with our reading of historical or traditional practice. Alexander Hamilton explained that the purpose of Senate confirmation is to prevent appointment of “unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity.” The Federalist 76. The Framers anticipated that the Senate’s approval would not often be refused unless there were “special and strong reasons for the refusal.” Id. Moreover, the Senate did not hold hearings on judicial nominees for much of American history, and the hearings for lower-court nominees in modern times traditionally have not included the examination of personal views that you have advocated. (My letter of February 12, 2003, to Senators Daschle and Leahy contains more detail on this point.) Indeed, just a few years ago, Senator Biden made clear, consistent with the traditional practice, that he would vote to confirm an appeals court judge if he were convinced that the nominee would follow precedent and otherwise was of high ability and integrity.

In short, it appears that you are seeking to change the Senate’s traditional standard for assessing judicial nominees. We respect your right to advocate a change, but we do not believe that the standard you seek to apply is consistent with the Framers’ vision, the traditional Senate practice, or the Senate’s treatment of President Clinton’s nominees. Rather, we believe a new standard is being devised and applied to Miguel Estrada.

Fifth, you stated yesterday that a “filibuster” is not an appropriate term to describe what has been occurring in the Senate. We respectfully disagree. Democrat Senators have objected to unanimous consent motions to schedule a vote, and they have indicated that they will continue to do so. That tactic is historically and commonly known as a filibuster, and is a dramatic escalation of the tactics used to oppose judicial nominees. Indeed, in 1998, Senator Leahy stated: “I have stated over and over again on this floor that I would refuse to put an anonymous hold on any judge; that I would object and fight against any filibuster on a judge, whether it is somebody I opposed or supported; that I felt the Senate should do its duty. If we don’t like somebody the President nominates, vote him or her down. But don’t hold them in this anonymous unconscionable limbo, because in doing that, the minority of Senators really shame all Senators.” 144 Cong. Rec. S6522 (June 18, 1998). In our judgment, the tactics now being employed again show that Miguel Estrada is receiving differential treatment.

As I have said before, I appreciate and respect the Senate’s constitutional role in the confirmation process. You have expressed concern that you do not know enough about Mr. Estrada’s views, but you have not submitted any follow-up questions to him. We respectfully submit that the Senate has ample information and has had more than enough time to consider questions about the qualifications and suitability of a nominee submitted more than 21 months ago. Most important, we believe that a majority of Senators have now concluded that they possess sufficient information on Mr. Estrada and would vote to confirm him. We believe it is past time for the Senate to vote on this nominee, and we urge your support.

Sincerely,

/s/

May 5, 2003

The Honorable George Bush
President of the United States of America
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I believe the process for judicial nominations is going in the wrong direction. The debate between the Senate and the Executive Branch over judicial candidates has become polarized and increasingly bitter.

Clearly, each side must be willing to compromise. Accordingly, I would like to make some recommendations for your consideration. I believe a model of bipartisan cooperation on judges already exists in the State of California.

At the beginning of your Administration, to resolve several years of acrimony over nominees in California, we jointly agreed to establish bipartisan committees to select district court judges. As you know, we created four committees in the State, one for each judicial district. Each committee has six members evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats. A nominee only can get approved with the support of the majority of the committee. For each vacancy, the committee forwards three to five candidates to the White House, and you, of course, have the final decision over which of these candidates is chosen.

Since the judicial selection committees took effect in the Spring 2001, they have filled these vacancies with high quality judges. As of today, eight California judges nominated by the committees have obtained swift Senate confirmation. On average, the nominees have obtained confirmation within 114 days of being nominated. In contrast, California district court nominees in the 106th Congress took an average of 223 days to get confirmed (three of the nominees never even managed to get a hearing).

The California system yields good results quickly. On Thursday, May 1st, you announced nominees for five district judgeships in the Southern District of California and one for the Central District of California. Congress created all six of these judgeships on November 2, 2002. Now, just six months later, we have six nominees before the Senate that earned unanimous approval before their respective state selection committees. The Committees accomplished these selections so quickly that candidates are being appointed to positions that will not even officially exist until July 15, 2003.

I propose extending this successful California model nationally.

- Each State would have an evenly divided Bipartisan Committee to recommend District and Circuit Court judges to the President
- The White House would choose nominees from this list of recommended names, but could request as many candidates as desired. In California, for example, the Selection Committee provides three to five names for each district court vacancy.
- The Senate would have six months from the President's announcement of a nomination to hold a hearing on the nominee. Subsequent to the hearing, the Senate would have to hold an up-or-down vote in Committee or on the Floor within three months.
- Concurrent with these changes, the Senate would agree to allow nominees to go forward without secret holds or public filibusters.

We have a limited window of opportunity before the current impasse over judges spirals out of control. I urge you to consider this proposal and help us find common ground. California's experience has shown how bipartisan cooperation can lead to the efficient selection of the highest caliber nominees. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

His COS called be back, finally. Not too hip on coming down. We can try Zell and Ben Nelson. Just seems odd. What about Feinstein and Feingold...back to the group that is vocal on fixing the problem?

THE GLOBAL MESSENGER
Tuesday, May 6, 2003

*****KEY POINTS*****

*Major combat operations in Iraq have ended. Our coalition is now engaged in securing and reconstructing that country. The United States and our allies have prevailed, and because of this our nation and the Middle East are more secure, a tyrant has fallen and Iraq is now free.

*Difficult work lies ahead in Iraq:
-Bringing order and security to parts that remain dangerous;
-Bringing to justice the leaders of and those who are loyal to the old regime;
-Locating hidden chemical and biological weapons
-Rebuilding Iraq's infrastructure after 30 years of devastation;
-Standing by the Iraqi people as they establish a government of, by and for the Iraqi people.

*Saddam Hussein is no more. The terrorists can no longer find a source of funding or weapons of mass destruction from the Saddam Hussein regime, because that regime is gone forever.

*America has a tradition of spreading liberty throughout the world. Our country is committed to freedom in Afghanistan, in Iraq, and in a peaceful Palestine. We make this commitment because it is the right thing to do and because the advance of freedom is the surest strategy to undermine the appeal of terror in the world.

*****TODAY'S SCHEDULE*****

All Times Eastern Daylight. Subject to Change

REV_00116727

12:30 pm White House Briefing

3:10 pm President Bush signs the U.S.-Singapore Free Trade Agreement

*****WORLD PRESS FREEDOM DAY*****

World Press Freedom Day is marked worldwide each year on May 3 to shed light on violations of the right to freedom of expression and to recognize journalists who face death or prison to gather news.

Freedom House is a non-profit, non-partisan organization advocating democracy and freedom around the world, and according to their report: "Press freedom suffered notable worldwide deterioration in 2002....Among the most serious developments were major setbacks for press freedom in Russia, Ukraine, and Venezuela."

The United States is committed to freedom of the press and to the protection of those who have dedicated their lives to journalism.

*****IRAQ EDUCATION SYSTEM UPDATE*****

*After a six-week closure, one of the first primary schools in Baghdad reopened on April 29. Approximately 30 percent of the 1,300 students enrolled returned. Attendance is expected to increase rapidly as word spreads the school is open.

*America is sending to Iraq school kits to support 1 million Iraqi schoolchildren and 28,000 teachers. The kits include basic supplies such as, pencils, notebooks, chalkboards, and crayons.

*****KEY QUOTES*****

"For 20 months, this nation has been at war against people who hate freedom, and they hate America because of what we stand for. And we are winning that war against terror."
President Bush, in remarks, 5/5/03

"As stability is gained throughout [Iraq] and that security is obtained, and as the various ministries come back up online, more and more other sorts of organizations will come in...and in due course, General Franks and his colleagues will turn it over to the Iraqi people when they stand up a government, and at that point the U.S. presence will be in the form of a United States ambassador and a mission, just as it is in cases all over the world."
Secretary Powell, NBC's Meet the Press, 5/4/03

THE GLOBAL MESSENGER

Tuesday, May 6, 2003

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

All Times Eastern Daylight. Subject to Change

- 12:30 pm White House Briefing
- 3:10 pm President Bush signs the U.S. -
Singapore Free Trade Agreement

WORLD PRESS FREEDOM DAY

World Press Freedom Day is marked worldwide each year on May 3 to shed light on violations of the right to freedom of expression and to recognize journalists who face death or prison to gather news.

Freedom House is a non-profit, nonpartisan organization advocating democracy and freedom around the world, and according to their report: "Press freedom suffered notable worldwide deterioration in 2002... Among the most serious developments were major setbacks for press freedom in Russia, Ukraine, and Venezuela."

The United States is committed to freedom of the press and to the protection of those who have dedicated their lives to journalism.

KEY QUOTES

"For 20 months, this nation has been at war against people who hate freedom, and they hate America because of what we stand for. And we are winning that war against terror."

President Bush, in remarks, 5/5/03

"As stability is gained throughout [Iraq] and that security is obtained, and as the various ministries come back up online, more and more other sorts of organizations will come in...and in due course, General Franks and his colleagues will turn it over to the Iraqi people when they stand up a government, and at that point the U.S. presence will be in the form of a United States ambassador and a mission, just as it is in cases all over the world."

Secretary Powell, NBC's Meet the Press, 5/4/03

KEY POINTS

- Major combat operations in Iraq have ended. Our coalition is now engaged in securing and reconstructing that country. The United States and our allies have prevailed, and because of this our nation and the Middle East are more secure, a tyrant has fallen and Iraq is now free.
- Difficult work lies ahead in Iraq:
  - Bringing order and security to parts that remain dangerous;
  - Bringing to justice the leaders of and those who are loyal to the old regime;
  - Locating hidden chemical and biological weapons;
  - Rebuilding Iraq's infrastructure after 30 years of devastation;
  - Standing by the Iraqi people as they establish a government of, by and for the Iraqi people.
- Saddam Hussein is no more. The terrorists can no longer find a source of funding or weapons of mass destruction from the Saddam Hussein regime, because that regime is gone forever.
- America has a tradition of spreading liberty throughout the world. Our country is committed to freedom in Afghanistan, in Iraq, and in a peaceful Palestine. We make this commitment because it is the right thing to do and because the advance of freedom is the surest strategy to undermine the appeal of terror in the world.

IRAQ EDUCATION SYSTEM UPDATE

- After a six-week closure, one of the first primary schools in Baghdad reopened on April 29. Approximately 30 percent of the 1,300 students enrolled returned. Attendance is expected to increase rapidly as word spreads the school is open.
- America is sending to Iraq school kits to support 1 million Iraqi schoolchildren and 28,000 teachers. The kits include basic supplies such as, pencils, notebooks, chalkboards, and crayons.

EDITORIAL: Filibuster two-fer

Senate Democrats kick judicial obstruction up a notch

The decision three months ago by Senate Democrats to filibuster the nomination of Miguel Estrada for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia was a first. Never before had a filibuster been launched to prevent the confirmation of federal appeals court or district court nominee. On Tuesday, the Democrats made it a two-fer ... pledging to also filibuster Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen's selection to an opening on the 5th Circuit.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., defended the repeated use of this heretofore unprecedented stalling tactic: "In her interpretation in the law on case after case, she has made the decisions that her own views are superior, her own views are the ones that have greater weight than the law itself."

Really? Why, then, does the American Bar Association's committee on judicial nominees -- certainly no conservative bastion -- consider Justice Owen "well qualified" for the federal bench?

Sen. Daschle's charge is nonsense, of course, ginned up by the hyper left-wing groups to whom the Democratic Party has sold its soul.

consider an appeals court judge who was confirmed this week: former Ohio solicitor general Jeffrey S. Sutton. Mr. Sutton was approved Tuesday for a vacancy on the 6th Circuit by a 52-41 margin -- fewer affirmative votes, it should be noted, than either Mr. Estrada or Ms. Owen would get should the Democrats' tactics be thwarted. Opponents focused on several cases Mr. Sutton successfully argued before the U.S. Supreme Court which placed limits on the ability of individuals to bring lawsuits, based on federal statutes, against state governments.

In other words, he's considered an out-of-the-mainstream ideologue by some advocacy groups because he has defended constitutional principles before the nation's highest court ... and won.

Beltway Democrats, led by Sen. Daschle and Nevada's Harry Reid, are playing with fire, here. The party suffered an unprecedented humiliation in last November's election, to a large degree because President Bush blamed Democratic obstructionism for a rash of judicial vacancies. With few judges available to hear cases, for countless litigants, justice has been delayed.

Sen. John Cornyn, who served with Justice Owen for three years on the Texas Supreme Court, plans to convene hearings next week on the judicial crisis titled "Judicial nominations, filibusters and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent." The hearings will examine why five of the 11 people Mr. Bush has nominated to federal appeals courts since

May 2001 have never received a vote.

The hearings may spur much-needed reforms of the nomination process. Or the Democrats could render the hearings moot by living up to their sworn duties under the Constitution, and allowing all of Mr. Bush's judicial nominations to receive up or down votes without further delay.

Jose,

Good morning, I have the video tapes you requested.

Additionally, our Executive Director, Ron Carroll, has made a donation to the Scouts endowment fund in honor of Sec Card. A letter was mailed in April regarding the donation. I have taken the liberty of cutting and pasting the letter below. The letter will better explain the recognition.

Question: It is possible for Mr Carroll to present the award to Sec Card in person? perhaps and excellent photo opportunity. Location to be determined as best for your schedule. (Sec Card's office is ideal)

Jose, many thanks for all of your time and support of the Scouting program!

lc

Dear @Salutation~:

An integral part of the National Capital Area Council's program to expand its endowment trust fund to ensure its future financial stability is the James E. West Fellowship Award. Named after the first Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, the award is a national recognition for those who contribute $1,000 or more in cash or securities to the local council endowment fund.

Our Scout Executive, Ron Carroll, has made a $1,000 donation to the National Capital Area Council Endowment fund in your honor.

As a James E. West Fellowship Award recipient you will be recognized with a personalized engraved brick, 8-by-10-inch certificate, distinctive lapel pin/charm, and an embroidered square knot.

We would like to formally present these items to you at The Alice S. Marriott Patio & The Robert & Dee Leggett Endowment Garden, Re-Dedication and Donor Recognition event. The event is April 26, 2003, 10:00am-11:00am at the Marriott Scout Service Center. Your personalized engraved brick will remain on permanent display in our endowment garden.

Simply put thank you for your support of the Scouting program.

Sincerely,

Right-wing zealot is unfit to judge

ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION

May 6, 2003

Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor favors posting the Ten Commandments in the courtroom, opposes abortion, even for rape victims, and filed the only state brief in opposition to the federal Violence Against Women Act. President Bush wants him on the appellate court that oversees the rights of Georgians.

If Bush had combed the country for the perfect Christian Right extremist, he couldn't have found a more perfect candidate. Pryor has been nominated for the Atlanta-based 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which hears federal appeals from Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

A popular speaker at Christian Coalition events, Pryor is best remembered for standing on the steps of the Alabama Capitol at a rally in support of state Supreme Court Justice Roy Moore's display of the Ten Commandments in his courtroom.

Pryor used the occasion to rail against the Roe v. Wade decision.

"I will never forget," he said, "the day seven members of our highest court ripped the Constitution and ripped out the life of millions of unborn children."

Among other extreme positions Pryor has argued was the legitimacy of Alabama prison guards' handcuffing state prisoners to hitching posts in the summer heat. But the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the practice is cruel and unusual, dismissing Pryor's argument that the prison guards should be given legal immunity. Senate Republicans have tried to depict opposition to Pryor and a handful of other Bush nominations as a broad refusal to let the president fill judicial vacancies. In truth, though, the Senate has already confirmed 120 Bush nominees.

With the exception of Miguel Estrada, those few nominees being blocked by Senate Democrats do not deserve to be confirmed. Pryor's nomination, for example, is an affront to the basic premise that a candidate for the federal bench must exhibit respect for established constitutional principles and individual liberties. Pryor may be a good lawyer and a faithful Republican, but his lifelong extremism disqualifies him for a federal judgeship.

Schumer's Latest Bit Of Trickery

EDITORIAL

Tampa Tribune

Published: May 6, 2003

New York's Sen. Charles Schumer, a particularly odious character, has suggested to President Bush that the Senate and president give up their constitutionally prescribed roles in the selection of federal judges.

Seizing on the president's description of the judicial nomination and confirmation process as "broken," Schumer would turn to nominating commissions to ensure "a true balance" is achieved on the bench.

Each commission would be made up of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans chosen by the president and the Senate leader of the opposition party. The commissions would recommend one candidate whom the president would nominate and the Senate would confirm.

Well, setting aside the inconvenient fact that the Constitution requires the executive to select and nominate federal judges, commissions made up of men and women chosen for partisan reasons would not take the politics out of the judicial selection process, nor would they guarantee "true balance," whatever that is.

Balance, whether pertaining to judicial philosophy or ideology or gender or race, is in theory achieved through periodic changes in the executive branch.

But even if we were to treat Schumer's proposal as not objectionable because we could amend the Constitution, the defining question must be whether it would result in a better court. And the answer is no.

Consider Florida. Judicial nominating commissions here were created to take the politics out of the selection process, but that cannot be done. As a result, no one is responsible.

At least under the present system of choosing federal judges, the politics are out front. We know where the president stands. We know where senators like Schumer stand. With committees, the political agendas would be hidden, and nobody would be responsible.

That Schumer would dispatch his constitutional role comes as no surprise. He is, after all, an architect of the Senate's "filibuster" policy, preventing a final vote on two Bush candidates and in effect requiring a supermajority for confirmation.

That the Democrats are using the filibuster (even though they continue to conduct other business) to keep Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen off the bench has led some commentators to suggest the president fill those seats and other judicial vacancies with appointments during the next congressional recess.

Better still, the president should take his case to the people and point out who the Senate Democrats' ``mainstream" candidates are - intensely nontraditional eccentrics who would delete ``God" from the Pledge of Allegiance and approve the horror of partial-birth abortion.

Bush should pound home the message that he won't have democracy thwarted. He should force a true filibuster. Let the Democrats be responsible for bringing the Senate to a standstill, and then let us see who folds.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 6, 2003

Dear Senator Feinstein:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of May 5.

You propose that the President and the opposite political party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State who would then select nominees for each judicial vacancy. The President would be required to nominate one of the individuals selected by the commission and the Senate required to vote up or down on that nominee. You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated belief that the judicial confirmation process is "going in the wrong direction" and is potentially "spiral[ing] out of control." But as explained more fully in my attached letter to Senator Schumer in response to his similar proposal, we respectfully believe that this proposal is inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many other Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. We thus agree with your statement of September 16, 1999 in which you stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down." As you said on October 4, 1999, moreover, the Senate's "institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

We very much appreciate your open-minded approach to the President's judicial nominees and what I know is your sincere desire to fix this process on a permanent and bipartisan basis. Thank you very much for your letter, and please do not hesitate to contact me at any time about the judicial appointments process.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales
Counsel to the President

Dear xxx,

It was a great honor to serve my neighbors as State Representative from 1978-1984. I know the needs of the 5th Norfolk District and believe the best person to represent you is Republican candidate Matt Sisk.

There is a divide on Beacon Hill about how to solve the current fiscal crisis facing the Commonwealth. Governor Romney and his allies believe that state government must be reformed to eliminate waste and mismanagement. This strategy would rid our government of the patronage positions that represent millions of taxpayer dollars in our budget each year.

Matt Sisk is a native of Braintree who has been an active member of his community. He currently serves on the Blue Hills Regional School Committee and is a member of the Braintree Town Meeting. Matt will be a key ally to Governor Romney and is committed to finding creative solutions to solve our budget crisis.

As a young man, I campaigned hard to serve the people I cared about. There is another young man working hard to earn your vote. Please consider a vote for Matt Sisk on May 13th.

Sincerely,

Andrew H. Card,
Jr.

Senate Democrats prepare to delay more Bush judicial nominees
Spartanburg (SC) Herald-Tribune
EDITORIAL

Senate Democrats have launched another filibuster to make sure that a second Bush nominee never gets a vote by the full body.

Democrats have already held up the nomination of Miguel Estrada to a federal appeals court for months using a filibuster. Now they are using the same tactic against the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Democrats don't have the votes necessary to defeat the nominations in an open vote, so they are trying to make sure the votes are never taken. They do so by filibustering, by continuing to debate the topic whenever it comes up, refusing to allow a vote to be taken. It takes 60 votes in the Senate to close debate and force a vote.

So what the Democrats are doing is using the rules to prevent the full Senate from carrying out its constitutional duty to vote on the president's judicial nominees.

Why? Why do Senate Democrats refuse to let their body carry out its duty?

Because they say Bush's nominees are too conservative for them. They say that Estrada is a stealth conservative because they have been unable to prove his ideology. They accuse Owen of being anti-abortion and pro-business.

Of course, the fact of the matter is that the Constitution gives the president the ability to appoint judges. The people vote for the president they want and the ideology they want used to select judges. As a check on that authority, the Senate is empowered to give advice and consent to the president, to confirm or reject his nominees.

If a vote of the full Senate were allowed, both Estrada and Owen would be confirmed.

So, in order to enforce their ideological blockade, Senate Democrats have short-circuited the constitutional process. They say they may also filibuster other nominees.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., announced: "History will look kindly on us for doing so."

He is wrong. History will record that Democrats tried to assume a power they didn't have, that they tried to negate the effect of the democratic process, that they refused to allow a president elected by the people to exercise the power granted to him by the Constitution and that they corrupted their own body by refusing to allow it to fulfill its constitutional duty -- all because they insisted on pushing an ideology rejected by the voters.

Ensign puts Reid's son on judge list

By Benjamin Grove

WASHINGTON -- In an intriguing political move, Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., included Leif Reid, the son of Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., on a short list of recommendations for President Bush to consider for a federal judge post.

A judge will be needed to fill the spot of U.S. District Judge David Hagen of Reno, who will assume senior status, and fewer duties, later this year.

As the senator of the president's party, Ensign last week forwarded the names of four potential judicial nominees to the White House. Bush will nominate one to the Senate, which confirms federal nominees. Ensign has not released the names of the other three recommendations.

Reid and Ensign declined comment. The two senators had said that they had an agreement that Ensign would recommend three judicial candidates and allow Reid to recommend the fourth. The Senate has confirmed Ensign's first three recommendations.

But Reid had nothing to do with his son making Ensign's short list, although Reid is honored that Ensign would nominate him, Reid spokeswoman Tessa Hafen said.

"This was entirely Senator Ensign's decision," Hafen said.

Hafen said Reid approved of all four of Ensign's recommendations.

Reid and Ensign are friends, although their political views on most issues contrast sharply. The two have sided with their respective parties in recent, bitterly partisan Senate battles over federal judicial nominees.

Ensign's move raised eyebrows in political circles in Nevada. But there haven't been open complaints about it by Republicans, said Nevada Republican Party director Joe Brezny. Still Republicans seized on the Ensign recommendation to take a jab at Reid for adamantly opposing several of Bush's GOP nominees.

Leif Reid "should be given the same consideration as Miguel Estrada," the embattled nominee whose nomination is stalled, Brezny said. "We need to be consistent in how we look at these candidates."

In a carefully worded statement, Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., who is considering whether to challenge Reid for his Senate seat, said, "Clearly, Sen. Ensign believes that (Leif Reid) is prepared to take a lifetime appointment to the federal bench. As all future nominees are considered, I hope that the highly skilled, well qualified nominees currently before the Senate may be approved in a timely manner, without the unprecedented filibusters that continue to stonewall the advice and consent process."

Leif Reid was not available for comment. Reid, 35, is a 1995 Stanford law school graduate and works as a lawyer in the Reno office of Lionel Sawyer & Collins. The firm is the largest in Nevada and also employs Sen. Reid's three other sons, Rory, Josh and Key. Leif Reid focuses on commercial, energy, utilities and administrative law.

It's not the first time a senator's son has been considered for a federal post. In 2001 the Senate confirmed former Sen. Strom Thurmond's son as U.S. attorney in South Carolina. Last year the Senate approved David Bunning, who was recommended by his father Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., to be a federal judge.

There's nothing improper about one lawmaker nominating the son of another lawmaker, said Georgetown University law professor David Cole, a federal courts expert.

"There's no nepotism bar or anything like that," Cole said. "You apply the same standards that you would to any other nominee."

Ensign puts Reid, s son on judge list
By Benjamin Grove

WASHINGTON -- In an intriguing political move, Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., included Leif Reid, the son of Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., on a short list of recommendations for President Bush to consider for a federal judge post.

A judge will be needed to fill the spot of U.S. District Judge David Hagen of Reno, who will assume senior status, and fewer duties, later this year.

As the senator of the president, s party, Ensign last week forwarded the names of four potential judicial nominees to the White House. Bush will nominate one to the Senate, which confirms federal nominees. Ensign has not released the names of the other three recommendations.

Reid and Ensign declined comment. The two senators had said that they had an agreement that Ensign would recommend three judicial candidates and allow Reid to recommend the fourth. The Senate has confirmed Ensign, s first three recommendations.

But Reid had nothing to do with his son making Ensign, s short list, although Reid is honored that Ensign would nominate him, Reid spokeswoman Tessa Hafen said.

&This was entirely Senator Ensign,s decision,8 Hafen said.

Hafen said Reid approved of all four of Ensign,s recommendations.

Reid and Ensign are friends, although their political views on most issues contrast sharply. The two have sided with their respective parties in recent, bitterly partisan Senate battles over federal judicial nominees.

Ensign,s move raised eyebrows in political circles in Nevada. But there haven,t been open complaints about it by Republicans, said Nevada Republican Party director Joe Brezny. Still Republicans seized on the Ensign recommendation to take a jab at Reid for adamantly opposing several of Bush,s GOP nominees.

Leif Reid &should be given the same consideration as Miguel Estrada,8 the embattled nominee whose nomination is stalled, Brezny said. &We need to be consistent in how we look at these candidates.8

In a carefully worded statement, Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., who is considering whether to challenge Reid for his Senate seat, said, &Clearly, Sen. Ensign believes that (Leif Reid) is prepared to take a lifetime appointment to the federal bench. As all future nominees are considered, I hope that the highly skilled, well qualified nominees currently before the Senate may be approved in a timely manner, without the unprecedented filibusters that continue to stonewall the advice and consent process.8

Leif Reid was not available for comment. Reid, 35, is a 1995 Stanford law school graduate and works as a lawyer in the Reno office of Lionel Sawyer & Collins. The firm is the largest in Nevada and also employs Sen. Reid,s three other sons, Rory, Josh and Key. Leif Reid focuses on commercial, energy, utilities and administrative law.

It,s not the first time a senator,s son has been considered for a federal post. In 2001 the Senate confirmed former Sen. Strom Thurmond,s son as U.S. attorney in South Carolina. Last year the Senate approved David Bunning, who was recommended by his father Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., to be a federal judge.

There,s nothing improper about one lawmaker nominating the son of another lawmaker, said Georgetown University law professor David Cole, a federal courts expert.

&There,s no nepotism bar or anything like that,8 Cole said. &You apply the same standards that you would to any other nominee.8

Ensign nominates son of Harry Reid as judge

By STEVE TETREAULT

STEPHENS WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON -- Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., has recommended that President Bush consider crossing party lines and bestow a federal judgeship on the son of a good friend, Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev.

In a move political and legal observers describe as highly unusual, Reno attorney Leif Reid was put forward to the White House this week as one of four possibilities to replace U.S. District Court Judge David Hagen, who is taking senior status later this year.

Ensign interviewed Leif Reid, a registered Democrat, and concluded he is "eminently qualified" for the federal bench, Ensign spokesman Jack Finn said.

Leif Reid, 35, is a Stanford Law School graduate who was admitted to the Nevada Bar seven years ago.

Ensign did not disclose the names of the other three persons forwarded for Bush's consideration. Ensign declined to be interviewed.

Harry Reid also had no comment. His spokeswoman, Tessa Hafen, said Reid played no role in engineering a recommendation for Leif Reid, one of his five children who are playing an increasingly visible role in Nevada law and politics.

“My understanding is that Ensign chose the four names, and Reid didn’t have a problem with any of them,” Hafen said.

Shortly after Ensign became a senator in 2001, he and Reid disclosed an arrangement where Ensign would recommend three judicial nominees and then Reid would be allowed to choose the fourth. Since then, U.S. District judges James Mahan and Larry Hicks, and 9th U.S. Circuit Court Judge Jay Bybee have been confirmed on Ensign’s recommendations.

That would appear to put the current vacancy in Reid’s court. But his chief of staff, Susan McCue, said, “That is absolutely not the case. When it came to Leif, that was entirely John Ensign.”

Other sources in the congressional delegation said the senators largely put the judge deal aside as they developed a working relationship.

It is not unheard of for senators to help their children achieve high appointments, experts said. Then- Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., in 2001 arranged the nomination of his 28--year old son Strom Jr. to be U.S. attorney in South Carolina. Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., promoted his son David for a federal judgeship.

Carl Tobias, a professor at the William S. Boyd School of Law in Las Vegas, said he could name several federal judges who were appointed in their mid-30s, including Michael Luttig of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

“It’s unusual that someone with that level of experience might be appointed, but not unprecedented,” Tobias said.

What makes this case stand out is that Ensign has recommended a Democrat, said Eric Herzik, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at University of Nevada Reno.

recommended, but it's very unusual to be recommended by a senator from the opposition party," Herzik said.

White House officials had no immediate comment Friday. From bashing Bush over the Yucca Mountain Project to engineering filibusters of his judicial nominees, Harry Reid, the Senate's No. 2 Democratic leader, has been a thorn for the president.

While it would seem unlikely Bush would embrace the son of one of his congressional adversaries, observers said nothing should be ruled out.

"It might depend on what Bush thinks he could get, and there are a lot of things he'd like to get from Reid," one analyst said."District court nominees are not considered as precious as appeals court nominees. They can be used politically and are sometimes."

Since September 1999, Leif Reid has been an associate at Lionel, Sawyer and Collins, which also employs his brothers, Key, Rory and Josh, as attorneys. He received a Stanford law degree in 1995 and was admitted to the Nevada Bar a year later. Leif Reid clerked for Procter Hug Jr., chief judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and was a prosecutor under U.S. Attorney Kathryn Landreth, who was a Harry Reid appointee.

Harry Reid inadvertently disclosed the news during a breakfast Thursday with Ensign and visiting Nevadans. Within hours, word spread through political and legal circles in the state.

Attorneys contacted Friday declined to speak on the record, but their initial reaction focused on Leif Reid's experience.

"He has no qualifications whatsoever to be a federal district judge, but he's a man of character," said one assistant U.S. attorney who worked with Leif Reid in Las Vegas. "He's a very nice guy."

The assistant U.S. attorney, who asked not to be identified, knows of only one case Leif Reid tried during his time with the Las Vegas office: “a simple bank robbery.” Reid lacks legal skills and should not have been hired as a federal prosecutor, his former colleague said.

“A lot of people felt his old man pulled a lot of strings for him,” the source said.

But Landreth and her first assistant, Howard Zlotnick, said Leif Reid won the job on “outstanding credentials.”

“Whenever a politically connected offspring gets something, it’s often seen as the good-old-boy network, which is sometimes true but also unfair to the success of the child,” UNR analyst Herzik said.

“He may very well be deserving.”

Review-Journal writer Carri Geer Thevenot and Adam Ashton of the Stephens Washington Bureau contributed to this story.

Skipped once, judge still in line for federal post

By Borys Krawczeniuk TRIBUNE STAFF WRITER

05/06/2003

President Bush's choice of state Attorney General Mike Fisher and another man for two federal appeals court judgeships last week ended Lackawanna County Court Judge Carmen Minora's hopes for one of the posts.

REV_00116926

Judge Minora lost out on an appointment to the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals on April 28 when Mr. Bush nominated Mr. Fisher, 58, and U.S. District Court Judge Jay C. Waldman, 58, who was counsel to former Gov. Dick Thornburgh, a Republican like Mr. Fisher.

But U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Philadelphia, said he's trying to get Judge Minora a spot on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

"There is consideration for him (Judge Minora) for the federal circuit in Washington," Mr. Specter said Monday.

Judge Minora, 50, of Scranton, said he's flattered by the consideration. He declined to comment further.

Unlike other circuit courts of appeals, the Federal Circuit Court, created in 1982, does not cover a geographical area. Rather, it handles specific types of appeals, including cases involving patents, U.S. Customs, federal contracts, international trade and certain administrative decisions made by the secretaries of agriculture and commerce.

The Third Circuit hears appeals of criminal, civil and bankruptcy cases that originate in U.S. District Courts in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands.

Because of political infighting between Republicans and Democrats, the confirmation of presidential nominees to federal judgeships has slowed to a crawl over the last decade. So Mr. Specter said he could not say when an announcement might be made.

There's also no current vacancy on the Federal Circuit Court. Mr. Specter, the third-ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he is trying to talk judges on the court into taking senior status.

Senior status is the judicial form of retirement. It means a judge no longer works full time but can be called on to hear cases when needed.

Unlike Pennsylvania judges, who may also take senior status, federal judges are not required to retire at a certain age.

They may take senior status at their full final salary beginning at age 65 if they have been federal judges for 15 years, according to the United States Courts Web site. The experience required decreases on a sliding scale to 10 years at age 70.

It appears only one judge on the Federal Circuit Court, Judge Pauline Newman, currently meets that criteria, although five others appear to be within three years of meeting it.

A spokeswoman for Judge Newman said she "is not contemplating senior status at this time."

Karen Redmond, a spokeswoman for the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, said it's possible a judge could simply quit a court for other reasons. Circuit Court judges earn $164,000 a year, far less than many lawyers can earn in private practice, she said.

Mr. Specter called Judge Minora "a very able man" and said he was "a good prospect" for the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Mr. Specter said.

Presidents formally nominate federal judges at all levels, but, traditionally, only nominations for the U.S. Supreme Court and federal Circuit Courts of Appeal originate in the White House. U.S. District Court nominees come from the United States senators in respective states.

Judge Minora was earlier a candidate for one of the two seats on the U.S. District Court in Pennsylvania's 33-county middle district, which includes Northeastern Pennsylvania. But others got those judgeships, primarily because the district already had three judges from Luzerne and Lackawanna counties.

After that, Mr. Specter started trying to get Judge Minora the Third Circuit post. He has significant influence in the appointment of judges because of his position on the Judiciary Committee.

Senior Circuit Court Judge Max Rosenn of Wilkes-Barre, who served on the Third Circuit Court and is still active at age 93, remains the only middle district resident to serve on a higher court, Senior District Court Judge William Nealon said.

Skipped once, judge still in line for federal post

By Borys Krawczeniuk TRIBUNE STAFF WRITER
05/06/2003

President Bush's choice of state Attorney General Mike Fisher and another man for two federal appeals court judgeships last week ended Lackawanna County Court Judge Carmen Minora's hopes for one of the posts.

Judge Minora lost out on an appointment to the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals on April 28 when Mr. Bush nominated Mr. Fisher, 58, and U.S. District Court Judge Jay C. Waldman, 58, who was counsel to former Gov.

Dick Thornburgh, a Republican like Mr. Fisher.

But U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Philadelphia, said he's trying to get Judge Minora a spot on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

"There is consideration for him (Judge Minora) for the federal circuit in Washington," Mr. Specter said Monday.

Judge Minora, 50, of Scranton, said he's flattered by the consideration. He declined to comment further.

Unlike other circuit courts of appeals, the Federal Circuit Court, created in 1982, does not cover a geographical area. Rather, it handles specific types of appeals, including cases involving patents, U.S. Customs, federal contracts, international trade and certain administrative decisions made by the secretaries of agriculture and commerce.

The Third Circuit hears appeals of criminal, civil and bankruptcy cases that originate in U.S. District Courts in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands.

Because of political infighting between Republicans and Democrats, the confirmation of presidential nominees to federal judgeships has slowed to a crawl over the last decade. So Mr. Specter said he could not say when an announcement might be made.

There's also no current vacancy on the Federal Circuit Court. Mr. Specter, the third-ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he is trying to talk judges on the court into taking senior status.

Senior status is the judicial form of retirement. It means a judge no longer works full time but can be called on to hear cases when needed.

Unlike Pennsylvania judges, who may also take senior status, federal judges are not required to retire at a certain age.

They may take senior status at their full final salary beginning at age 65 if they have been federal judges for 15 years, according to the United States Courts Web site. The experience required decreases on a sliding scale to 10 years at age 70.

It appears only one judge on the Federal Circuit Court, Judge Pauline Newman, currently meets that criteria, although five others appear to be within three years of meeting it.

A spokeswoman for Judge Newman said she "is not contemplating senior status at this time."

Karen Redmond, a spokeswoman for the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, said it's possible a judge could simply quit a court for other reasons. Circuit Court judges earn $164,000 a year, far less than many lawyers can earn in private practice, she said.

Mr. Specter called Judge Minora "a very able man" and said he was "a good prospect" for the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Mr. Specter said.

Presidents formally nominate federal judges at all levels, but, traditionally, only nominations for the U.S. Supreme Court and federal Circuit Courts of Appeal originate in the White House. U.S. District Court nominees come from the United States senators in respective states.

Judge Minora was earlier a candidate for one of the two seats on the U.S. District Court in Pennsylvania's 33-county middle district, which includes Northeastern Pennsylvania. But others got those judgeships, primarily because the district already had three judges from Luzerne and Lackawanna counties.

After that, Mr. Specter started trying to get Judge Minora the Third Circuit post. He has significant influence in the appointment of judges because of his position on the Judiciary Committee.

Senior Circuit Court Judge Max Rosenn of Wilkes-Barre, who served on the Third Circuit Court and is still active at age 93, remains the only middle district resident to serve on a higher court, Senior District Court Judge William Nealon said.

Dear xxx,

It was a great honor to serve my neighbors as State Representative from 1978-1984. I know the needs of the 5th Norfolk District and believe the best person to represent you is Republican candidate Matt Sisk.

There is a divide on Beacon Hill about how to solve the current fiscal crisis facing the Commonwealth. Governor Romney and his allies believe that state government must be reformed to eliminate waste and mismanagement.
This strategy would rid our government of the patronage positions that represent millions of taxpayer dollars in our budget each year.

Matt Sisk is a native of Braintree who has been an active member of his community. He currently serves on the Blue Hills Regional School Committee and is a member of the Braintree Town Meeting. Matt will be a key ally to Governor Romney and is committed to finding creative solutions to solve our budget crisis.

As a young man, I campaigned hard to serve the people I cared about.
There is another young man working hard to earn your vote. Please consider a vote

for Matt Sisk on May 13th.

Sincerely,

Andrew H. Card,
Jr.

Paid for by the Massachusetts Republican Party

Holmes Nomination Fact Sheet
May 1, 2003

Historical Facts About The Holmes Vote In The Senate Judiciary Committee Today ???

Q: When is the last time a district court nomination has been reported by the Judiciary Committee with anything but a favorable recommendation?

A: The Judiciary Committee???s vote today to report the J. Leon Holmes nomination (for a district court judgeship, Eastern District of Arkansas) without recommendation is the first time the committee has sent a district court nomination to the floor OTHER THAN WITH A FAVORABLE RECOMMENDATION since 1951.

And the ONLY precedent in recent decades when the committee skipped the vote on the merits of a judicial nomination altogether and went immediately to a motion to report without recommendation, as the committee did today, was with the nomination of Charles Winberry, District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina, in 1980.

The two cases in 1951 were Cornelius Harrington and Joseph Drucker, both district court nominees for the Northern District of Illinois. Both were reported with negative recommendations on 10/8/1951, and both subsequently were rejected by the Senate. The committee voted in closed session so the vote tally of the committee is not available for those votes. The Senate floor vote was a ???division vote,??? so there is no record of how each senator voted.

Previous district court nominations in recent decades in which motions to report without recommendation were defeated ???

Jeff Sessions, nominated to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Alabama; motion to report favorably defeated and motion to report without recommendation also defeated (9-9) on May 1986 (thereby defeated in committee)

Charles Winberry, Eastern District of North Carolina; motion to report without recommendation defeated in committee in March 1980 (6-9)

This procedure (reporting without a favorable recommendation) also has only been rarely tried even in the cases of Circuit and Supreme Court nominations. It was used in these cases, after motions to favorably report were defeated ???

Daniel Manion, 7th Circuit, reported without recommendation in 1986

Susan Liebeler, Federal Circuit, reported without recommendation in 1988

Clarence Thomas, Supreme Court, reported without recommendation in 1991

Robert Bork, Supreme Court, reported with a negative recommendation in 1987

And you probably know that "Smallpox Bob" Kadlec, from the Biodefense Directorate at HSC, is now TDY in Iraq interviewing former bioweapons scientists. --Ken

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His;Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret;

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad.; She will serve as policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb.; Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq.; We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff.; Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension;6-5773.; We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

As long as we're still on the subject, Ali Tulbah from Cabinet Affairs (detailed from DOD) is tentatively scheduled to depart next week for Baghdad where he'll be assigned to Larry Dirita's office.

And you probably know that "Smallpox Bob" Kadlec, from the Biodefense Directorate at HSC, is now TDY in Iraq interviewing former bioweapons scientists. --Ken

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad. She will serve as policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb. Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq. We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff. Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension 6-5773. We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

can someone from your office come to the meeting? i can't guarantee he will ask any questions.....however he did yesterday and no one could answer.
thanks!!! i know it's painful!

Can I offer the White House press corps to the reconstruction effort in Iraq? Any interesting in having Iraq host them for a while?

And you probably know that "Smallpox Bob" Kadlec, from the Biodefense Directorate at HSC, is now TDY in Iraq interviewing former bioweapons scientists. --Ken

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad. She will serve as policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb. Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq. We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff. Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension 6-5773. We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

Can I offer the White House press corps to the reconstruction effort in Iraq?; Any interesting in having Iraq host them for a while?

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret;

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad.; She will serve as;policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb.;Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq.; We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff.; Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension;6-5773.; We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and;other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

Subject: Hatch Gives More Details on His Bill, Says Frist Will Schedule Floor Vote Quickly - Congress Daily AM Today

Hatch Bill To Set Asbestos Compensation Fund At $108 Billion
Congress Daily AM
May 7, 2003

Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch said he is close to ending private sector negotiations aimed at crafting a system to compensate victims of asbestos, essentially forcing unions and businesses to compromise on a $108 billion trust fund.

The size of the fund was one of the biggest outstanding questions surrounding the negotiations, which the Judiciary Committee is overseeing.

Unions were seeking $120 billion, while defendant companies in asbestos litigation wanted a $90 billion fund.

Hatch said he informed both sides of his decision to establish a $108 billion fund, adding that he hopes to introduce legislation early next week.

"I've been counting on everyone to negotiate in good faith," he said.

"If not, I've got to come up with a bill and let the chips fall where they may," Hatch said he is trying to wrap up discussions by Friday.

Appearing to settle another contentious issue, Hatch said the program likely would not contain a "backstop" mechanism to guarantee funding for victims. Organized labor had pushed for a backstop of federal funds to ensure that the trust fund would not run dry. But a backstop is not needed with a fund of that size, Hatch said.

"It's more than enough -- managed properly," he said.

Hatch suggested that each side eventually would assent to the size of the trust fund. While the figure may be higher than businesses had favored, they "can build their business plans around it, and at least there will be certainty," Hatch said.

The legislation will establish a commission and a new court structure to avoid possible constitutional violations that would occur by using the trust fund in the regular judicial system, he added. The bill will specify that payments into the fund will be tax deductible to businesses, while payments to recipients will not be taxed.

Hatch said he expected to mark up the legislation in committee shortly after its introduction, and predicted that Majority Leader Frist would quickly schedule a floor vote. The $108 billion trust fund has "some" Democratic support, he said.

"This is a problem we can't ignore -- there will be lost union jobs and bankrupt companies -- it's a drag on the economy," he added. By

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad.; She will serve as;policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb.;Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq.; We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff.; Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension;6-5773.; We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and;other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

Brett,
Tim is doing a conference call tomorrow on Judges. Do you have an updated talking points memo?
Thanks,

Can I offer the White House press corps to the reconstruction effort in Iraq? Any interesting in having Iraq host them for a while?

And you probably know that "Smallpox Bob" Kadlec, from the Biodefense Directorate at HSC, is now TDY in Iraq interviewing former bioweapons scientists. --Ken

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad. She will serve as policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb. Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq. We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff. Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension 6-5773. We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

Can I offer the White House press corps to the reconstruction effort in Iraq?; Any interesting in having Iraq host them for a while?

Thanks, Josh and all the best to Kristen. We in DPC are contributing to the cause by offering up Reuben Jeffery to the Iraq reconstruction effort. His Washington D.C. portfolio will be handled by Terrell Halaska and his New York issues will be managed by Jay Lefkowitz in his absence. See you at 5:30. Margaret;

Subject: COS staff

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad.; She will serve as;policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb.;Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq.; We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff.; Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension;6-5773.; We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and;other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

My friend

I have a 4pm off campus, but Matt will be there for sure.

And, the Judge was great today: thanks a million. It was a homerun.

Dear xxx,

It was a great honor to serve my neighbors as State Representative from 1978-1984. I know the needs of the 5th Norfolk District and believe the best person to represent you is Republican candidate Matt Sisk.

There is a divide on Beacon Hill about how to solve the current fiscal crisis facing the Commonwealth. Governor Romney and his allies believe that state government must be reformed to eliminate waste and mismanagement. This strategy would rid our government of the patronage positions that represent millions of taxpayer dollars in our budget each year.

Matt Sisk is a native of Braintree who has been an active member of his community. He currently serves on the Blue Hills Regional School Committee and is a member of the Braintree Town Meeting. Matt will be a key ally to Governor Romney and is committed to finding creative solutions to solve our budget crisis.

As a young man, I campaigned hard to serve the people I cared about.

REV_00117130

There is another young man working hard to earn your vote. Please consider a vote
for Matt Sisk on May 13th.

Sincerely,

Andrew H. Card,
Jr.

Paid for by the Massachusetts Republican Party

Hypocrite!

"I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

--Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle,
Congressional Record, Oct. 5, 1999

"Hispanic or non-Hispanic, African American or non-African American, woman or man, it is wrong not to have a vote on the Senate floor."

--Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle,
Congressional Record, Oct. 28, 1999

That was then. Now, Tom Daschle is preventing the full Senate from voting on not one, but two, "well-qualified"* judicial nominees, Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

Mr. Daschle, you are a leader in the United States Senate.
Act like one!

Call Senator Daschle today!

202-224-2321

Tell him to live by his own words.

VOTE ON THE JUDGES!

Attached please find a letter being sent around Capitol Hill by Joan Claybrook's Public Citizen, a Naderite "consumer" group. You should know that this and other Nader groups are funded by the trial lawyers -- they serve ATLA's agenda, not consumers'.

Pasted in below the Public Citizen email message is a link to a Capital Research Center story titled "ATLA: How it Works with Ralph Nader Against Tort Reform." Joan Claybrook, one of the authors of this letter, was instrumental in developing ATLA's links to "consumer" groups -- and she admits in this story that just her own group, Public Citizen, takes $200,000 a year from trial lawyers. Below the link is a relevant passage from the article, describing how Public Citizen and other Naderite groups redefine consumer interests as "what's good for ATLA."

Also attached is a basic information packet on ISCRAA (S.887), the Kyl-Cornyn bill, which rebuts the charges made by Claybrook. And if you don't believe that there are serious ethical abuses resulting from the tobacco settlement -- abuses that cost consumers and taxpayers billions, but which "Public Citizen" has been totally silent about -- read pages 3-7 of Senator Cornyn's speech (also attached), which describes the unbelievable corruption that infected the tobacco settlement fee awards in state after state. Also attached is a rebuttal of a "constitutional" analysis of ISCRAA that a local law firm was recently paid to do. Finally, for good measure, Senator Kyl's speech introducing ISCRAA also is attached.

Finally, remember that S.887 is not an "anti-trial lawyer" bill. It only applies to a small subset of cases where there have been gross ethical abuses, and it allows fees as high as 500% of reasonable hourly rates -- as liberal as the most liberal state courts (it is effectively the Florida Supreme Court standard), and much more liberal than what federal courts allows in cases of this size. When Claybrook says that federal courts don't use lodestar, she is wrong -- in high value cases, the courts have made clear that even when they formally apply a "percentage" fee, they base the percentage on what constitutes a reasonable multiple of the lodestar. And federal courts never give more than 300% of that lodestar in $100 million cases.

CJF's Nader Connection

In the mid-1980s, ATLA began to build closer contacts with consumer activists. The Coalition for Consumer Justice, an umbrella organization started by Joan Claybrook, showed ATLA how to create relationships with its "natural allies," i.e., special interest activists who are not afraid to sue. Claybrook had worked closely with Ralph Nader since the mid-1960s and was president of Public Citizen, a consumer group founded by Nader in 1971. She describes the Coalition's objective as lobbying for increased regulation of insurance companies (old foes of ATLA) and resisting insurance company demands for tort reform. Said Claybrook, "The insurance industry's real goal is to limit our right to hold wrongdoers responsible for the permanent injuries they inflict."

But when the trial lawyers met the consumer movement they discovered something about their "natural allies." Roxanne Barton Conlin, an ATLA member who worked on the relationship building effort, expressed it well. "We quickly learned," she recalled in 1992, "how close to the margin of existence many of these groups were...If these groups were to continue...they needed money." A grantmaking organization that could provide regular transfusions of funds to ATLA's new friends was essential. Conlin credits Claybrook for having "helped begin the foundation." She continues to serve as one of seven consumer activist representatives on CJF's 26-member board of trustees.

Since its 1986 founding CJF has contributed $1.3 million to more than 100 consumer advocacy groups. (See Sidebar on page 5.) Grant applications stream to CJF, ensuring that ATLA supports groups that help keep trial lawyers abreast of new developments in "consumer advocacy."

Public Citizen says it does not accept funding from ATLA. But trial lawyer contributions to Nader-backed groups reinforce the ties between them. In a 1999 interview Claybrook admitted that Public Citizen receives about $200,000 per year in donations from individual trial lawyers. Chamber specifically endorsed arbitration as a less costly and contentious method to resolve disputes. ATLA and Public Citizen went ballistic. Public Citizen's Tyler Slocum cast doubt on arbitration's usefulness; he defended liability lawsuits as a way to force corporations to change their practices in ways "that benefited the consumer."

ATLA president Mary Alexander called the ads a "tragic misuse of our capitalist system."

Why the heated rhetoric? Perhaps because in 2001 the number of arbitration proceedings-200,000-exceeded the number of public jury trials. Arbitration clauses are increasingly used in many contract settlements, including employment, credit, insurance, and securities agreements. Under an arbitration clause, consumers agree to resolve a contract dispute in arbitration rather than through court litigation. An impartial individual or panel hears the issues and decides how to resolve the dispute. Arbitration is fast and cheap.

Killing arbitration is an ATLA priority. A July 2002 article in Trial describes arbitration as "the ultimate tort 'reform' tool" because it takes "away a person's right to trial."

Last year ATLA was disappointed when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to weaken arbitration, and it began looking for help from Congress. ATLA supported a number of bills that would make arbitration agreements unenforceable, and it found a vocal supporter for its position in Nader's Public Citizen. In May 2002, Public Citizen published a report attacking the practice of using mandatory arbitration in place of lawsuits. "This growing corporate maneuver is threatening the rule of law," said Public Citizen's Claybrook.

The Honorable Charles E. Grassley
Chairman
The Honorable Max Baucus
Ranking Member
Senate Finance Committee
SD-219
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman and Ranking Member:

With no hearings and no warning to the public, Senator Jon Kyl of Arizona is planning to offer an amendment to the tax bill that will be marked up Thursday in the Senate Finance Committee that, under the guise of a tax law, will write new substantive standards for awarding attorneys fees in large cases in federal and state courts. The amendment, which incorporates Kyl's bill (S. 887), will apply retroactively to all fees paid after June 1, 2002. Public Citizen urges the committee not to accept this radical amendment, both because the Tax Code and the Internal Revenue Service have no business supervising legal fees and because the substantive goals of the Kyl bill are misguided and in many respects unconstitutional.

Public Citizen takes a back seat to no one in its concern about excessive legal fees. We have worked tirelessly to assure that no client pays excessive fees and that all lawyers, on both sides of a case, are paid only fees that are reasonable. In class actions, our lawyers have been among the few willing to oppose unreasonable fees – often to the displeasure of class counsel. But if there is a problem in this area, this amendment is clearly the wrong way to go about solving it.

Although labeled a tax bill, the undeniable purpose of S. 887 is to impose on all large lawsuits what its sponsors believe to be the “right way” to calculate attorneys fees. The bill uses the gimmick of imposing a 200 percent penalty on what its sponsors call “excess” legal fees, which means that there is no choice but to follow federal law, even though most cases, including the tobacco cases at which the sponsors claim to be directing this amendment, are based on state and not federal law. That has not stopped the two sponsors (the other is Sen. John Cornyn of Texas), who claim to be supporters of principles of federalism and states' rights, from attempting to pass federal legislation telling the states what their laws must be on attorneys fees.

The bill would:

- Create a new system in both state and federal courts for “auditing” legal fees to determine whether they are excessive, even if no one objects, and then require the already-overworked and understaffed IRS to become the law enforcer for attorneys fees;
- Change the laws that Congress recently passed to prevent abuses in the securities class action field, by depriving the lead plaintiff of the right to negotiate a fee with class counsel, and by bringing in the federal government to “prevent” the very plaintiff that Congress has directed to lead the action from deciding what a reasonable fee is in a particular case. Most federal judges now reject the so-called “lodestar method” demanded by this bill in large damages cases, because that method can be very time-consuming and costly to implement, is often unfair and rewards inefficiency. Yet S. 887 would insist on it as the only way to calculate fees.
- Take away from federal and state judges their traditional function of supervising fees in class actions, without requiring the slightest showing that they are not, by and large, doing their job properly.
- Prevent state and local governments from compensating their chosen attorneys on whatever basis they decide is best, on the theory that somehow Congress knows best.
- Apply to “qui tam” actions under both state and federal law, with a potential adverse impact on the efficacy of this important litigation method for rooting out corrupt practices that victimize governments and the public.

And its provisions on “aggregation” of similar claims seem to apply to mass torts like asbestos where, if a lawyer or law firm, or even “related” firm, recovers for hundreds or thousands of plaintiffs a total of more than $100 million, no matter how many years it takes, once that threshold is reached, all future fees are subject to the new limits.

To top it all off, S. 887 applies not just to contracts entered into and cases filed and even settled before the bill becomes law, but it covers any fee paid after June 1, 2002 – 10 months before the bill was even introduced.

S. 887 is wrong as a matter of policy, and it unwisely entangles the IRS in matters that have nothing to do with tax collection and everything to do with the judiciary. The obvious goal of the bill is to create a congressional rule for attorneys’ fees in large cases. Sen. Kyl is attempting to slide this non-tax amendment into the tax bill pending before the Finance Committee, which is focusing on true tax issues.

We urge the committee to reject Sen. Kyl’s attempted misuse of the Internal Revenue Code and his effort to make Congress the final arbiter of attorneys’ fees. The only saving grace in all this mess is that at least its retroactive provisions (so much for property and contract rights) and its attempted application to state court and state law cases are almost certainly unconstitutional.

II. ACCESS TO JUSTICE

Won't ISCRAA's fee formula prevent poor plaintiffs in large cases from being able to get a lawyer? Won't lawyers refuse to take case under ISCRAA's fee formula?

Short answer: ISCRAA is more generous than existing formulas used by courts. ISCRAA is carefully designed to protect fiduciary interests while providing plaintiffs' lawyers with ample incentives to provide high-quality legal representation in large litigations. ISCRAA's fee formula is as generous as the limits set by the most liberal state courts that engage in meaningful review of attorneys fees, and is considerably more generous than the federal courts' practices in $100 million cases. Moreover, the multiplier criteria that ISCRAA employs universally are recognized as legitimate prerequisites for a contingency fee – even by trial lawyers' professional associations.

- Federal courts almost never award a multiplier greater than 300% in $100 million cases:

In 2001, the Third Circuit “set forth a chart of fee awards given in federal courts since 1985 in class actions in which the settlement fund exceeded $100 million and in which the percentage of recovery method was used.”<sup>8</sup> (Cendant Corp.) The court identified 17 such cases. In almost every case, the Third Circuit could calculate the multiplier that was used, and “the lodestar multiplier in those cases never exceeded 2.99.” And in the direct lodestar-multiplier cases that court identified, the multiplier ranged from 1.2 to 3.25.<sup>9</sup>

- Example (of excellent service provided despite applicability of lodestar formula):

In re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 74 F. Supp. 2d 393 (S.D.N.Y. 1999). This RICO and Commodities Exchange Act case resulted in a recovery for the clients of $116 million. The attorneys reviewed millions of pages of documents located throughout the world, many of which had to be translated from Japanese. The federal district court awarded a multiplier of 250%, for a total fee of $32 million.

III. RETROSPECTIVE EFFECT

Isn't ISCRAA an unfairly retrospective change in the law? If these fees were legal when they were agreed to, why should we change them now?

Short answer: ISCRAA only enforces a liberal interpretation of pre-existing standards.

ISCRAA does not change the substantive law governing attorneys fee awards. Rather, it simply enforces established, pre-existing fiduciary standards that already bind every attorney in every state. The MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, at Rule 1.5(a), contain a clear, direct command that “a lawyer's fee shall be reasonable.” Similarly, the MODEL CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY, at DR 2-106, directs that an attorney “shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee.” The Model Code further explains that an attorney’s fee is “clearly excessive when, after a review of the facts, a lawyer of ordinary prudence would be left with a definite and firm conviction that the fee is in excess of a reasonable fee.” Finally, as academic commentators point out, in addition to the model rules, “all state rules of professional conduct prohibit attorneys from charging excessive fees.”<sup>10</sup> (Emphasis added.)

Tobacco lawyers still get 2.5 billion dollars under ISCRAA. Additionally, ISCRAA does not apply to the first three-and-a-half years of fee payments under the tobacco settlement, it exempts the first two-and-a-half billion dollars that these lawyers received. No tobacco lawyer will go broke because of this bill. ISCRAA might simply be described as the one-yacht-per-lawyer rule.

IV. WHO OWNS THE FEE?

If a lawyer's fee award is unethical or excessive, wouldn't it go back to the defendant? Some of the tobacco lawyers argue that the money can't go back to the states. Wouldn't the lawyers money go back to the tobacco companies?

Short answer: Fee awards are the property of the client. The courts have made very clear that a fee award is the property of the client – and that any unethical fee must be restored to the client, regardless of how the fee award is structured. Any other rule would invite collusion between the defendants and the plaintiffs' lawyers. Courts repeatedly have recognized that defendants would be more than happy to agree to higher plaintiffs' lawyers fee awards in exchange for a lower recovery from the plaintiffs. A number of commentators have noted that this is exactly what happened in the tobacco settlement. In recognition of the legal principle that a fee award belongs to the client – and that an excessive fee must be restored to the client – ISCRAA specifically provides that excess tobacco settlement attorneys fees shall be restored to the states.

According to the courts and legal-ethics experts:

- “The allowance of attorney fees in a judgment gives the attorneys no interest and ownership in the judgment to the extent of the amount of the fee allowed, but the judgment in its entirety is the property of the client. The award for fees is for the client, not the attorney.”<sup>11</sup>
- “[A] defendant is interested only in disposing of the total claims asserted against it, and the allocation between the [plaintiff's] payment and the attorneys' fees is of little or no interest to the defense. Moreover, the divergence in class members' and class counsel's financial incentives creates the danger that the lawyers might urge a class settlement at a low figure or on a less-than-optimal basis in exchange for red-carpet treatment for fees.”<sup>12</sup>
- “To the tobacco companies, dollars are dollars, whether paid to states or paid to lawyers. So the real amount on the bargaining table was not the $246 billion that the states settled for, but a larger sum, including the amount to be paid to the attorneys. * * * * Stated simply, because dollars are fungible, the fees are coming out of the settlements.”<sup>13</sup>

V. FEDERALISM

Why should the federal government be regulating attorneys fees in large lawsuits brought in state court? Isn't this purely a state matter?

Short answer: $100 million lawsuits, by their sheer size alone, substantially affect interstate commerce, and are a proper subject of congress's power to regulate and protect commerce between states. It is well-established that "Congress' commerce authority includes the power to regulate * * * those [economic] activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 609 (2000). See also United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995). Both the executive and the legislative branches previously have identified $100 million as guideline for determining whether a matter has a significant impact on interstate commerce. See, e.g. Executive Order 12866; Congressional Review Act, 5 U.S.C. § 804(2); Unfunded Mandates Act, 2 U.S.C. § 1532(a). Because it is limited to litigations of this size, ISCRAA is consistent with congress's power and obligation to protect the flow of commerce between states.

ISCRAA: The Kyl-Cornyn Bill to Enforce Fiduciary Attorney Fee Standards in Mass Tort Litigation

The Intermediate Sanctions Compensatory Revenue Adjustment Act (ISCRAA) allows attorneys fees of no more than 500% of reasonable hourly rates in lawsuits resulting in judgments greater than $100 million. ISCRAA uses an existing provision of the tax code to enforce basic, universally accepted fiduciary standards governing the award of attorneys fees. To avoid punitive tax rates, an attorney would be required to restore the excessive portion of any fee to the client. Because ISCRAA applies to current and future fees paid pursuant to the state Medicaid tobacco litigation settlement, ISCRAA will restore approximately $9 billion to the states.

ISCRAA's Benefits:

- Limiting speculative, fee-driven mass tort litigation. The current mass-tort litigation crisis is driven in large part by the enormous and unethical fees commanded by some plaintiffs' attorneys. Because their fees are so grossly disproportionate to their actual efforts, these lawyers can pursue even speculative lawsuits that lack a legitimate foundation – even only an occasional victory produces massive profits. By requiring that fees be proportional to attorneys' actual work, ISCRAA inevitably will limit this type of litigation.
- Enforcing Pre-existing Fiduciary Standards. Attorneys undisputedly are fiduciaries who occupy a position of trust in their dealings with their clients. One obligation flowing from this status – a requirement that is established in the attorney ethics rules of all 50 states – is that a lawyer must not charge an unreasonable or excessive fee. Courts traditionally read a reasonableness requirement into every attorneys fee contract. ISCRAA does not change this pre-existing obligation – it simply makes the duty enforceable in large lawsuits.
- Helping the States. Because it applies to the fees still being paid in the state tobacco settlement, ISCRAA will restore approximately $9 billion to the states. Tobacco companies will pay the same amount – but continuing excess fees will be restored to the clients (the states), not to lawyers who violated their fiduciary duties. Under ISCRAA, even our nation's smallest state, Wyoming, would recoup at least $15 million, and other small states, such as North Dakota, would receive approximately $20 million. Our nation's largest state, California, can expect to recoup at least $1 billion. Other large states would also see generous returns: Florida, $511 million; Illinois, $397 million; Michigan, $318 million; New York, $607 million; Ohio, $363 million; and Texas, $667 million.
- Guaranteeing Mass-Tort Plaintiffs Access to Counsel. ISCRAA's fee formula is as generous as the most liberal limits adopted by state courts, and considerably more generous than the limits that federal courts have applied in $100 million cases. ISCRAA protects fiduciary interests, while providing plaintiffs' lawyers with ample incentive to provide high-quality legal representation in large lawsuits.

What Plaintiffs' Lawyers and Anti-Tobacco Activists Are Saying About the Tobacco-Settlement Attorneys Fees:

[From Senator Cornyn's Senate speech introducing ISCRAA]

There is widespread agreement that the fees awarded in the tobacco settlement are excessive and unreasonable. Perhaps the most damning indictments come from those who took the plaintiffs' side in this litigation – including from plaintiffs lawyers themselves.

- For example, Michael Ciresi, a pioneer in the tobacco litigation who represented the state of Minnesota in its lawsuit, and who is no doubt familiar with what these lawsuits actually require, has said that the Texas, Florida, and Mississippi lawyers' fee awards "are far in excess of these lawyers' contribution to any of the state results."<sup>1</sup>
- Similarly, former Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler, another leader in the fight against tobacco, has said that the states' private lawyers "did a real service, but I think the fee is outrageous. All the legal fees are out control."<sup>2</sup>
- Washington, D.C. lawyer and tobacco-industry opponent John Coale has denounced the fee awards as "beyond human comprehension" and stated that "the work does not justify them."<sup>3</sup>
- Even the Association of American Trial Lawyers, the nation's premier representative of the plaintiffs bar, has condemned attorneys fees requested in the state tobacco settlement. The President of ATLA has noted:

"Common sense suggests that a one billion dollar fee is excessive and unreasonable and certainly should invite the scrutiny [of the courts]. [ATLA] generally refrains from expressing an institutional opinion regarding a particular fee in a particular case, but we have a strong negative reaction to reports that at least one attorney on behalf of the plaintiffs in the Florida case is seeking a fee in excess of one billion dollars."<sup>4</sup>

This letter, written in 1997, only concerned one of the Florida lawyers' request for attorneys fees. Ultimately, Florida's private counsel was awarded a total of $3.4 billion in fees. These statements demonstrate beyond all doubt that there is real abuse going on here, and that the victim of this abuse is the client, the plaintiff – and not the defendant.

- Perhaps the best gloss on the tobacco fee awards is that provided by Professor Lester Brickman, a professor of law at Cardozo Law School and noted authority on legal ethics and attorneys fees. Professor Brickman has stated:

“Under the rules of legal ethics, promulgated partly as a justification for the legal profession's self-governance, fees cannot be ‘clearly excessive.’ Indeed, that standard has now been superseded in most states by an even more rigorous standard: fees have to be ‘reasonable.’ Are these fees, which in many cases amount to effective hourly rates of return of tens of thousands – and even hundreds of thousands – of dollars an hour, reasonable? I think to ask the question is to answer it.”<sup>5</sup>

The attorneys fees awarded in the state tobacco settlement are simply indefensible. And the process by which the fees were awarded partly explains how they came to be so. Outside counsel fees were determined by a private arbitration panel established by the Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) that resolved 46 of the states' litigation. (Four other states had settled their suits earlier. Their lawyers, however, also were paid out of the accounts created by the MSA.) Amazingly, the settlement agreement explicitly immunized all fee awards from judicial review. Even more amazingly, one of the three arbitrators who made the awards had a clear conflict of interests: he was the father of a South Carolina lawyer whose law firm has received the largest fee awards of all, believed to amount to over $2 billion. Another one of the arbitrators had no background in fee arbitrations or any related matter, and simply ignored the law in order to make outrageous awards, using the salaries of sports stars and entertainers as a basis of measure. The third arbitrator, a retired federal judge appointed by President Carter, dissented from the key fee decisions.

ISCRAA: RESTITUTION TO THE STATES

Under the terms of the November 1998 Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) between the states and tobacco companies, $500 million in cigarette taxes is set aside every year to pay the plaintiffs' attorneys who chose to have their fees awarded in arbitration. Because extraordinarily high fees were awarded by the arbitrators – estimated to total $15 billion – the $500-million-a-year income stream (which is not adjusted for inflation) may have to be paid in perpetuity. In addition to this annuity, the MSA also sets aside an additional $1.25 billion in cigarette taxes to compensate those lawyers who choose to forego arbitration and negotiate their fees directly with the tobacco companies.

The present value of the $500-million-a-year fee stream – discounting all future payments for the time value of money – has been conservatively estimated at just over $8 billion. Current and future payments from the $1.25 billion fee fund are less certain, since the grants made from that fund and their disbursement schedule have been kept obscure from the public. Because ISCRAA's effective date is June 1, 2002, ISCRAA will probably recoup for the states an additional $1 billion above the present value of future $500 million-a-year payments. ISCRAA does not affect the first three-and-a-half years of fees paid under the MSA. Because these payments almost certainly are adequate to pay all reasonable fees incurred in the litigation, ISCRAA would restore to the states virtually all fees paid after its effective date. Thus the net present value of the sums that ISCRAA would provide to the states can conservatively be estimated at $9 billion.

By restoring these excess fee payments to the states' MSA escrow account and returning them to the states on a per capita basis, ISCRAA guarantees every state a very substantial recovery. Based on the estimates that I have described, even our nation's smallest state, Wyoming, would recoup at least $15 million in tobacco fee payments, and other small states, such as North Dakota, would receive approximately $20 million. On the other hand, our nation's largest state, California, can expect to recoup at least $1 billion. Other large states would also see generous returns: Florida, $511 million; Illinois, $397 million; Michigan, $318 million; New York, $607 million; Ohio, $363 million; and Texas, $667 million.

Here is how much each state can expect to recover:

RESPONSES TO LIKELY ARGUMENTS AGAINST ISCRAA

I. FREEDOM OF CONTRACT

I. Shouldn't lawyers have freedom of contract to set whatever fee they can persuade a client to agree to? Why are we singling out lawyers for regulation and not CEOs?

Short answer: Attorneys are fiduciaries whose fee contracts have always been subject to reasonableness requirements. Attorneys long have been acknowledged to be fiduciaries who occupy a position of trust in their dealings with their clients. One obligation that flows from this status, universally recognized in the ethics rules of all 50 States, is the attorney's obligation not to charge an unreasonable or excessive fee. Courts have made very clear that attorneys are not equivalent to ordinary businessmen, who can engage in hard bargaining with their customers. Such behavior cannot be reconciled with an attorney's role as an officer of the court. The courts also have made clear that the requirement that a fee be reasonable will be read into every attorney fee contract, and will supercede terms that are inconsistent with this obligation.

ISCRAA is very generous – even by CEO standards. ISCRAA's fee formula still permits lawyers fees that would make many CEOs envious. In the tobacco litigation, many of the plaintiffs' lawyers filed claims that they have worked tens of thousands of hours. ISCRAA would allow reasonable hourly rates – which run as high as $500 an hour in large cities – to be multiplied by up to 500%. This translates into attorneys fees of tens of millions of dollars. Not bad, considering that many of the tobacco settlement lawyers worked on their cases for just one or two years.

Legal Standards

- As one court has stated:

“We realize that business contracts may be enforced between those in equal bargaining capacities, even though they turn out to be unfair, inequitable or harsh. However, a fee agreement between lawyer and client is not an ordinary business contract. The profession has both an obligation of public service and duties to clients which transcend ordinary business relationships and prohibit the lawyer from taking advantage of the client.”<sup>6</sup>
- “[A]n attorney is only entitled to fees which are fair and just and which adequately compensate him for his services. This is true no matter what fee is specified in the contract, because an attorney, as a fiduciary, cannot bind his client to pay a greater compensation for his services than the attorney would have the right to demand if no contract had been made. Therefore, as a matter of public policy, reasonableness is an implied term in every contract for attorney's fees."<sup>7</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Missouri ex rel. Chase Resorts, Inc. v. Campbell, 913 S.W.2d 832 (Mo. App. 1996) (emphasis added). See also G. Hazard, ETHICS IN THE PRACTICE OF LAW 99 (1978) ("A contract for a [legal] fee is, under general principles of law, a contract between a fiduciary and his protected dependent * * * [and] it is unenforceable unless its terms are fair to the client").

lawyers. So the real amount on the bargaining table was not the $246 billion that the states settled for, but a larger sum, including the amount to be paid to the attorneys. . . . Stated simply, because dollars are fungible, the fees are coming out of the settlements.<sup>25</sup>

Even foreign commentators have noted that the state tobacco settlement's "arbitration is a mere figleaf. The money going to the lawyers was clearly part of the overall amount that the tobacco companies were willing to pay to settle the case. Whatever the lawyers get, the states do not."<sup>26</sup>

And this point has not been lost upon members of Congress. Representative Chris Cox (R-CA) has testified on the matter:

It is specious to argue that [billions of dollars] in fees are not being diverted out of funds available for public health and taxpayers. The tobacco industry is willing to pay a certain sum to get rid of these cases. That sum is the total cost of the payment to the plaintiffs and their lawyers. It is a matter of indifference to the industry how that sum is divided – 75% for the plaintiffs and 25% for their lawyers, or vice versa. That means that every penny paid to the plaintiffs' lawyers – whether it is technically 'in' the settlement or not – is money that the industry could have paid to the state or the private plaintiffs. Excessive attorneys' fees in this case will not be a victimless crime.<sup>27</sup>

I hope that these authorities and their reasoning are sufficient to permanently dispel the notion that an attorney fee agreement can be structured so as to evade the ethical obligation to charge only a reasonable fee. The defenders of the MSA fee payments are simply misleading the public and this distinguished body when they assert that a particular lawyer's award under the settlement does not come out of a particular state's recovery. That fee comes out of all of the state's recoveries. All excessive or unreasonable fees should be restored to all 50 of the states.

Senator Kyl has already presented estimates of the monetary recovery each state can expect if ISCRAA is enacted. I would simply point out here that, according to those estimates, Texas has been charged excessive and unreasonable attorney fees in the amount of $667 million, and therefore would recover those funds if this legislation is adopted.

ISCRAA's return of unethical tobacco-settlement fee awards to the states is manifestly proper in light of the fact that all fee awards are the property of the client, and the attorney is entitled only to a reasonable fee. No attorney is above these rules and obligations. They cannot be waived or ignored. And in light of our experience with the state tobacco settlement fee awards, and their effect on our public officials, these ethical duties must be carried out and enforced strictly and fully.

Our federal and state courts generally do a good job of protecting consumers and enforcing the rights of all Americans. But there are problems in our courts that require attention and significant reform. Class action abuse not only threatens the integrity and the perception of rationality in our nation's courts, it strongly hinders economic and job growth. Tort reform is badly needed to rescue many industries, especially our health care industry, from abuses of our legal system. The judicial confirmation process at the federal level has become bitter, severe and destructive, posing a threat to judicial independence and the quality and efficiency of our courts. And abusive attorney fee arrangements make a mockery of our civil justice system, all while enriching a small band of unscrupulous litigators at the expense of the real victims, their clients.

To enforce the longstanding fiduciary duty of all attorneys to charge only a reasonable fee, in a class of cases that poses heightened risks of abuse and special significance to the national economy, I urge that this Senate consider expediently, and approve quickly, this important measure, the Intermediate Sanctions Compensatory Revenue Adjustment Act of 2003.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

SENATOR CORNYN

INTRODUCTION OF LANDMARK LEGISLATION TO COMBAT GROSSLY ABUSIVE ATTORNEY FEE AGREEMENTS

Wednesday, April 10, 2003

Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague, Senator Kyl, to introduce today this landmark legislation to clean up our civil justice system. This legislation would enact a badly needed reform to the way in which attorneys are paid in some of the nation's largest cases. It is designed to address some of the worst abuses of our civil justice system that I have witnessed in my nearly thirty years in the legal profession as a lawyer in private practice, as a state trial and appellate judge, and as state attorney general.

This legislation, the Intermediate Sanctions Compensatory Revenue Adjustment Act of 2003 (ISCRAA), will combat the gross abuse of attorney contingent fee agreements, abuses which we have been witnessing at an increasing rate in recent years. The legislation will enforce attorneys' fiduciary duties to their clients in a small but important category of cases – those resulting in judgments greater than $100 million.

Contingent fee agreements can have an important role to play in our civil justice system. Sometimes, when people are injured but cannot afford to hire lawyers out of their own pockets, attorneys will accept the case with the expectation that, if their clients prevail, the attorney will be paid for his or her services out of the judgment or settlement that the attorney is able to secure for the client. Such agreements between attorneys and their clients are called contingent fee agreements, because the attorney's fee is contingent on the client obtaining a money judgment or settlement. Contingent fee agreements, properly understood and utilized, reward attorneys for their work in obtaining monetary recovery for their clients, and the risk that they take that, despite their hard work and best efforts, they are unable to obtain any recovery for the client at all.

Contingent fees can thus help ensure that plaintiffs with legitimate claims have the opportunity to obtain justice from our courts through the assistance of counsel. But contingent fees also present serious ethical problems for our legal system – particularly when the dollar amounts at stake are extraordinary, especially when compared to the relatively light or even negligible effort and risk actually undertaken by the attorneys.

Clients hire attorneys with the understanding and expectation that the attorney is ethically, legally, and morally obliged to represent their best interests, and that the attorney will use his or her legal skills in order to produce the best possible result – not for the attorney, but for the client.

Thus, as my colleague has noted, contingent fee agreements are no ordinary agreements between consumers and businesses. It is a bedrock principle and well-established tenet of our Anglo-American system of justice that attorneys are not ordinary businessmen who can engage in hard bargaining with their customers, as courts have made clear on countless occasions. Rather, attorneys are officers of the court who have a fiduciary duty to their clients. As fiduciaries, attorneys occupy a position of trust in their dealings with their clients.

One obligation that flows from this status as a fiduciary is the attorney's obligation not charge an unreasonable or excessive fee. This obligation is a fundamental part of an attorney's ethical duties, universally recognized in the ethics rules of all 50 States. Courts have made clear, time and time again, that every attorney fee contract automatically and necessarily includes the requirement that the fee be a reasonable one, a requirement that no provision of such agreements may abrogate.

ISCRAA affirms and reinforces the longstanding substantive law of attorneys' fiduciary duties, by providing a special mechanism to enforce those duties in a particularly high risk category of cases – a category that the courts themselves have singled out as posing special risks of unethical, windfall fees. Courts have noted that allowing standard contingency fee agreements in cases involving judgments of $100 million or more have a distinct tendency of grossly overcompensating attorneys for their actual services rendered.

ISCRAA prevents attorneys from evading their obligation to charge a reasonable fee in extraordinarily large recovery cases, by limiting awards to a generous multiple of reasonable hourly fees. State courts, federal courts, and even trial lawyers' themselves have all recognized that a reasonable fee must be proportional to the attorney's actual efforts. ISCRAA codifies and enforces this principle, while continuing to guarantee lawyers ample and generous compensation for their efforts – using fee multipliers that are as generous as the most liberal limits adopted by state courts, and which are considerably more generous than the limits set by federal courts in $100 million cases.

This legislation thus promises to clean up our civil justice system and to repudiate the grossest abuses of our legal system. Make no mistake: Although all attorneys are supposed to uphold a strict ethical code, under which they are strictly forbidden from charging their clients unreasonable or excessive attorney fees, the temptation to abuse contingent fee agreements is a strong one, and even more so when the dollar amounts are truly extraordinary – such as in the $100 million cases that would be covered by this legislation. And make no mistake: the victim of such attorney fee abuse, and the beneficiary of this legislation, is not the defendant who pays the judgment – after all, the defendant pays the same total amount whether the money goes to the attorney or to the client. Rather, the real victim of this abuse, and the real beneficiary of this legislation, is the injured client, whose money is being taken away from the lawyer through an abusive contingent fee arrangement.

As my colleague has also noted, ISCRAA is unquestionably an appropriate exercise of Congress's power to regulate and protect interstate commerce, especially considering the large size of the litigations to which it applies. $100 million is a standard threshold used by the federal government to determine whether an economic transaction significantly affects interstate commerce.

But the most important reason for federal intervention in this area I have not yet mentioned, and I would like to take a moment to discuss it here: the gross abuses that we have already witnessed in large litigation fee awards. Recent experience amply demonstrates that, if the federal government does not act to prevent unethical and grossly abusive fee awards in massive, nationwide lawsuits, no one will. Moreover, recent experience further demonstrates that unreasonable fee payments in such suits threaten not just the attorneys' fiduciary obligations; they also place at risk the integrity of our governmental institutions. The unwholesome incentives created by windfall, unethical fee awards in large-scale litigations have induced some public officials to abandon their civic obligations.

The textbook example of the types of abuses that make ISCRAA necessary is the attorneys fees awarded in the state lawsuits to recover tobacco-related Medicaid expenses. Individual law firms that represented the states in that litigation have been given hundreds of millions and sometimes even billions of dollars in fees. To date, approximately $15 billion in fees has been awarded to the tobacco settlement lawyers, to be paid out in $500-million-a-year increments. Attorneys representing just three of the states – Mississippi, Texas, and Florida – were awarded $8.2 billion in fees. In many cases, such fees were paid to attorneys who filed duplicate, copycat lawsuits at a time when settlement negotiations had already begun and the risk that the states would not recover any money was negligible. Yet these lawyers nevertheless received massive contingency fees, for suits that involved no real contingency. And for most of the tobacco settlement lawyers, the size of the fee awards bears no reasonable relation to the actual effort expended or risk involved.

There is widespread agreement that the fees awarded in the tobacco settlement are excessive and unreasonable. Perhaps the most damning indictments come from those who took the plaintiffs' side in this litigation – including from plaintiffs lawyers themselves. For example, Michael Ciresi, a pioneer in the tobacco litigation who represented the state of Minnesota in its lawsuit, and who is no doubt familiar with what these lawsuits actually require, has said that the Texas, Florida, and Mississippi lawyers' fee awards "are far in excess of these lawyers' contribution to any of the state results."<sup>1</sup> Similarly, former Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler, another leader in the fight against tobacco, has said that the states' private lawyers "did a real service, but I think the fee is outrageous. All the legal fees are out of control."<sup>2</sup> Washington, D.C. lawyer and tobacco-industry opponent John Coale has denounced the fee awards as "beyond human comprehension" and stated that "the work does not justify them."<sup>3</sup> Even the Association of American Trial Lawyers, the nation's premier representative of the plaintiffs bar, has condemned attorneys fees requested in the state tobacco settlement. The President of ATLA has noted:

Common sense suggests that a one billion dollar fee is excessive and unreasonable and certainly should invite the scrutiny [of the courts]. [ATLA] generally refrains from expressing an institutional opinion regarding a particular fee in a particular case, but we have a strong negative reaction to reports that at least one attorney on behalf of the plaintiffs in the Florida case is seeking a fee in excess of one billion dollars.<sup>4</sup>

This letter, written in 1997, only concerned one of the Florida lawyers' request for attorneys fees. Ultimately, Florida's private counsel was awarded a total of $3.4 billion in fees. These statements demonstrate beyond all doubt that there is real abuse going on here, and that the victim of this abuse is the client, the plaintiff – and not the defendant.

Perhaps the best gloss on the tobacco fee awards is that provided by Professor Lester Brickman, a professor of law at Cardozo Law School and noted authority on legal ethics and attorneys fees. Professor Brickman has stated:

Under the rules of legal ethics, promulgated partly as a justification for the legal profession's self-governance, fees cannot be 'clearly excessive.' Indeed, that standard has now been superseded in most states by an even more rigorous standard: fees have to be 'reasonable.' Are these fees, which in many cases amount to effective hourly rates of return of tens of thousands – and even hundreds of thousands – of dollars an hour, reasonable? I think to ask the question is to answer it.<sup>5</sup>

The attorneys fees awarded in the state tobacco settlement are simply indefensible. And the process by which the fees were awarded partly explains how they came to be so. Outside counsel fees were determined by a private arbitration panel established by the Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) that resolved 46 of the states' litigation. (Four other states had settled their suits earlier. Their lawyers, however, also were paid out of the accounts created by the MSA.) Amazingly, the settlement agreement explicitly immunized all fee awards from judicial review. Even more amazingly, one of the three arbitrators who made the awards had a clear conflict of interests: he was the father of a South Carolina lawyer whose law firm has received the largest fee awards of all, believed to amount to over $2 billion. Another one of the arbitrators had no background in fee arbitrations or any related matter, and simply ignored the law in order to make outrageous awards, using the salaries of sports stars and entertainers as a basis of measure. The third arbitrator, a retired federal judge appointed by President Carter, dissented from the key fee decisions.

As incredible as the MSA fee awards and the arbitration procedures may seem, even more dubious is the process by which many of the law firms that participated in this lucrative litigation were selected in the first place to represent the states.

In my home state of Texas, trial lawyers have accused the then-state attorney general of demanding $1 million in campaign contributions in exchange for their being hired to represent the state in the tobacco litigation. One prominent lawyer – a former president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association – has since said that the attorney general's solicitation was so blatant that "I knew th[at] instant . . . that I could not be involved in the matter." He even later wondered if the meeting had been a "sting operation." Another lawyer simply characterized his encounter with the attorney general as a bribery solicitation.

This former Texas attorney general was recently indicted on federal charges of attempting to fraudulently divert $260 million in tobacco-settlement legal fees to one of his personal friends. He had given a sworn affidavit that this lawyer had served as Texas's "primary adviser" in its tobacco lawsuit – despite the fact that the lawyer had attended no court hearings, depositions, or strategy meetings, wrote no memos or legal briefs about the case, and apparently never even spoke to any of the other attorneys. The attorney general even went so far as to forge and fraudulently backdate documents in order to win his friend a share of the tobacco settlement fee.

As for the five law firms that actually did represent Texas in the tobacco litigation, they filed relatively late lawsuits that were based on other lawyers' work – and yet, despite the minimal energy expended on those suits, were awarded $3.3 billion in attorneys fees. This award amounts to compensation that, even assuming that the attorneys worked all day every day during the entire period of the litigation, remains well in excess of $100,000 an hour. As one newspaper editorial has noted, for the amount of money that these lawyers were awarded, Texas could hire

10,000 additional teachers or policemen for ten years. Instead, four of these firms gave the attorney general $150,000 in campaign contributions in recent years.<sup>6</sup>

Texas's experience is not an isolated example. In other states as well, lawyers' participation in the tobacco litigation appears to have been the product of political favoritism – and to have resulted in unfathomable fees that bear no reasonable relation to the services provided. For example:

- New Jersey: the private in-state lawyers who represented this state in the tobacco litigation have admitted that they had no mass-tort litigation experience and played no role in the state settlement talks. They have also admitted that all the key work in the state's lawsuit was done by out-of-state firms – the in-state firms' principal work was drafting pro hac vice motions to have these outside lawyers admitted in New Jersey courts. Any work that the New Jersey lawyers did was submitted to the outside lawyers, who made all of the substantive arguments. Result: these in-state lawyers were awarded $350 million in the MSA fee arbitration. Connections: the New Jersey lawyers were an inside group of past presidents of the New Jersey trial lawyers' association. The State refused to even consider hiring a nonprofit firm to conduct the New Jersey lawsuit.<sup>7</sup>
- Pennsylvania: settlement talks had already begun, the states' tobacco litigation was being resolved, and all of the legal theories already had been developed long before the Pennsylvania state suit was filed. Result: Pennsylvania's private lawyers were awarded $50 million in the MSA arbitration – equivalent to 1000% of a reasonable hourly rate. As one expert has noted, "there's not $50 million of work in there." Connections: the two law firms that the state Attorney General selected to conduct the litigation were among his top campaign contributors. The firms were awarded no-bid contracts. As one Pennsylvania commentator has noted, "obviously, it was a political kind of thing."<sup>8</sup>
- Maryland: billionaire tort lawyer Peter Angelos demanded a one billion dollar fee for his work on that state's case, even though, according to the state Senate President, the state legislature had retroactively "changed centuries of precedent to ensure [Angelos] a win in the case." Angelos ultimately receive an accelerated $150 million payment for this no-risk lawsuit.<sup>9</sup>

- Louisiana: the private law firms that represented the state in the tobacco litigation were awarded $575 million. The MSA arbitration panel actually increased this award on the ground that the state government – the lawyers’ supposed client – was opposed to suing tobacco companies. The Louisiana fee award amounts to almost $7000 an hour, based on the lawyers’ estimate that they worked a total 85,000 hours. This estimate, however, is unverifiable, since the state’s private lawyers kept no billing records – as the attorney general explained, “I wasn’t that big on hourly or written reports.” The dissenting member of the arbitration panel simply noted that the Louisiana fee award “shocks the conscience.” The single biggest beneficiary of this largesse – receiving $115 million in attorneys fees – was a law firm based in Lake Charles, the hometown of the state’s attorney general. This firm and the next largest fee recipient had donated over $42,000 to the attorney general’s political campaigns. Together, all of the firms that represented Louisiana gave more than $100,000 to the attorney general in the years before they were selected to participate in the state’s tobacco team.<sup>10</sup>
- Ohio: the lawyers representing this state received fees estimated to exceed $50,000 per hour, despite the fact that, according to independent observers, “all of the legal issues were resolved long before these Ohio lawyers stepped up to the plate.” The state’s outside counsel had donated $26,000 in campaign contributions to the state attorney general prior to their appointment to the state’s tobacco team. After the attorney general chose one private lawyer to serve as the state’s “lead special counsel,” that lawyer hired one of the attorney general’s top aides for an undisclosed sum in order to – in the lawyer’s own words – “help me get acquainted with a technique called PowerPoint.” When told that “there were many people in Ohio capable of doing a PowerPoint presentation,” the state’s outside counsel responded that this particular attorney general’s aide “was the only one I knew of.”<sup>11</sup>
- Massachusetts: according to other tobacco plaintiffs’ lawyers, Massachusetts’s suit piggybacked on the work of other lawyers and was not pivotal to the outcome of the tobacco litigation. Result: $775 million was awarded to the Massachusetts lawyers in the MSA arbitration.<sup>12</sup>
- New York: when this state’s then-attorney general hired private counsel to represent the state in its tobacco lawsuit, tobacco companies already had paid $15 billion to Florida and Mississippi for identical claims and a national settlement agreement already was under discussion. As one local anti-tobacco leader has noted, “these were copycat lawsuits, there wasn't all that much work to do." The firms' primary job was to collect New York-specific data in order to calculate damages. Ultimately, the New York firms represented the state for just 13 months. And they received a fee award of $625 million. This amounts to at least $14,000 an hour, for a lawsuit that by all accounts involved no risk. The dissenting member of the arbitration panel has denounced the award as "an astronomical sum unrelated to [the attorneys'] efforts or achievements." The New York firms had contributed more than $250,000 to New York politicians and their campaign organizations in the years preceding their selection – and another $200,000 after the state settlement.<sup>13</sup>

- Wisconsin: the Wisconsin lawyers' tobacco litigation work has been described as chiefly consisting of media and public relations efforts on their own behalf. Their billing records included time spent selecting office space and buying furniture. One lawyer effectively billed $3000 to the state for reading an article in a Madison newspaper. The lawyers also billed the state for limousine rides around the state, trips on private jets, and stays at luxury hotels. Result: $75 million was awarded to the Wisconsin lawyers. Based on the law firms' records of the total number of hours they devoted to the case – including work by paralegals – this fee amounts to $3000 per hour.<sup>14</sup>
- Missouri: a state supreme court justice in Missouri resigned his post in order to join one of the private law firms expected to receive a portion of the MSA arbitrators' fee award. Ultimately, the firms representing the state spent just 5 months on the state's lawsuit. They received a fee award of $111 million. One state leader has described the award as "the biggest rip-off in the 180-year history of the state." The law firms receiving these fees had donated more than $500,000 to state politicians and parties in the years leading up to their selection as the state's outside counsel.<sup>15</sup>

These examples are too numerous to dismiss. In state after state, the temptations created by the massive, windfall fees awarded in the Medicaid tobacco settlement corrupted not only lawyers involved, but the government as well. The fee awards poisoned everything that they touched. No one who examines these events closely – who surveys the obscene fee awards, and the political cronyism that determined who benefited – can disagree that this must never be allowed to happen again.

As a final point, I would like to address a question that has been raised with regard to remedy. Some have argued that nothing can be done to correct the excesses of the tobacco settlement fee awards – even with regard to fees that are still being or have yet to be paid. On several occasions, state judges who were called upon to approve their state's tobacco settlement have also, on their own initiative, inquired into the apparent unreasonableness of the fees awarded. In each case, both the plaintiffs lawyers – and in some cases, even state officials – have challenged the state courts' authority to act. They have argued that these courts lack jurisdiction to review a national settlement, and that excessive fees cannot be restored to the state. One state's attorney general implicated in these events has argued that it is a "misconception" that the tobacco settlement "attorneys' fees are coming out of the public's pocket. That is not the case. They [sic] defendants have agreed to pay these fees."<sup>16</sup>

Because of the way that the MSA fee payments are structured, no lawyer's award comes out of any one particular, identifiable state's recovery. Instead, all of the lawyers are being paid from one of two separate accounts, each of which is funded by the tobacco companies.

It is a mistake, however, to contend that, because the MSA fee payments are made directly from defendants to plaintiffs' lawyers – without ever formally or actually passing through the plaintiffs' hands – they are immunized against ethical scrutiny or correction. It is well and long established in our law that fee awards originate as the property of the client regardless of how the fee agreements are structured. The courts have been very clear on this point. As they have stated:

- "The allowance of attorney fees in a judgment gives the attorneys no interest and ownership in the judgment to the extent of the amount of the fee allowed, but the judgment in its entirety is the property of the client. The award for fees is for the client, not the attorney."<sup>17</sup>
- "[A]ttorneys' fee provisions exist for the benefit of parties and not the attorneys . . . . Several jurisdictions have noted that the real party in interest with regard to fees is the client and not the attorney."<sup>18</sup>
- "A judgment for costs is a judgment in favor of the party, and not of his attorney, and the money represented by the costs is the property of the party."<sup>19</sup>
- "[T]he award of attorney fees [is] made not to the attorneys but to the litigant who was personally liable to the attorneys. This is also the view in other states when the courts award attorney fees."<sup>20</sup>
- "An award of attorney's fees belongs to the client and not the attorney."<sup>21</sup>

Super. 1945) (counsel fees "belong, and are awarded, to the petitioner, not counsel"); Venegas v. Mitchell, 495 U.S. 82, 87 (1990) ("Section 1988 makes the prevailing party eligible for a discretionary award of attorney's fees. * * * it is the party, rather than the lawyer, who is so eligible") (citations omitted).

Indeed, an award of attorney fees is generally taxable as income to the client. In a recent case, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit noted that a plaintiff's obligation to compensate the law firm that represented him "was satisfied by [the defendant]. The payment was therefore to [the client]. The discharge by a third person of an obligation to him is equivalent to receipt by the person taxed." The Ninth Circuit emphasized that the fact "[t]hat [the client] never laid hands on the money paid to the lawyers does not obliterate their constructive receipt." In other words, the fee award belongs to the client, regardless of how the award is made.

The rule that fee awards belong to the client is strongly supported by important policy considerations. It is necessary because any other rule would be an invitation to collusion and self-dealing between plaintiffs' lawyers and defendants. Again, the courts have been very clear on this point. As the Third Circuit has noted:

[A] defendant is interested only in disposing of the total claims asserted against it, and the allocation between the [plaintiff's] payment and the attorneys' fees is of little or no interest to the defense. Moreover, the divergence in class members' and class counsel's financial incentives creates the danger that the lawyers might urge a class settlement at a low figure or on a less-than-optimal basis in exchange for red-carpet treatment for fees.<sup>22</sup>

The Second Circuit has made the same point, noting:

Defendants, once the settlement amount has been agreed to, have little interest in how it is distributed and thus no incentive to oppose the [attorneys] fee. Indeed, the same dynamic creates incentives for collusion – the temptation for lawyers to agree to a less than optimal settlement in exchange for [generous fees].<sup>23</sup>

The Ninth Circuit has also addressed the question of "whether a class member has standing to appeal class counsel's attorney fee and cost award when that award is payable by the defendant independently, and not out of the class settlement." The court concluded that "[e]ven if class counsel's attorney fees are not to be paid from the class settlement . . . , the aggregate amount of the attorney fees and the class settlement payments may be viewed as "a constructive common fund." The court reasoned that "[i]f . . . class counsel agreed to accept excessive fees and costs to the detriment of class plaintiffs, then class counsel breached their fiduciary duty to the class. If that were the case, any excessive award could be considered property of the class plaintiffs, and any injury they suffered could be at least partially redressed by allocating to them a portion of that award."<sup>24</sup>

As several commentators have noted, the policy considerations underpinning the rule that fee awards belong to the client apply with full force to the state tobacco settlement. Indeed, that settlement could serve as a textbook example for why this rule exists. As Professor Brickman has noted:

To the tobacco companies, dollars are dollars, whether paid to states or paid to

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Kyl

FROM: Judiciary Staff

DATE: May 6, 2003

RE: Review of Sutherland, Asbill Law Firm's Constitutional Critique of ISCRAA

You have asked me to review a 29-page memorandum produced by the Atlanta-based law firm of Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan, which makes several arguments that your and Senator Cornyn's fiduciary attorney fee standards bill, ISCRAA (S. 887), is unconstitutional. None of these arguments has any merit.

ISCRAA operates entirely through the tax code, imposing high marginal excise taxes on the excessive portion of an attorneys fee in very large lawsuits. The Sutherland memo avoids addressing the question of Congress's power to tax until page 19, when it finally presents its main authority: Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 29 (1922), which struck down a federal excise tax on products made with child labor. Drexel Furniture applied a test that asks whether regulation (as opposed to revenue production) was Congress's "primary motive" or an "incidental motive" in imposing the tax. See Sutherland Memo at 20 (quoting Drexel Furniture, 259 U.S. at 38). The child-labor tax was invalid because Congress had "exhibit[ed] its intent" to regulate the use of child labor. Id.

The Sutherland memo fails to note that Drexel Furniture's regulatory-intent test is no longer good law. Citing two of Drexel Furniture's companion cases from that same term, the Supreme Court more recently has noted that "[i]t is true that the Court in * * * [the past] drew what it saw at the time as distinctions between regulatory and revenue-raising taxes. But the Court has subsequently abandoned such distinctions." Bob Jones University v. Simon, 416 U.S. 725, 741 n.12 (1974). The Court now cites "the oft-repeated principle that the judiciary should not infer a legislative attempt to exercise a forbidden power in the form of a seeming tax from the fact, alone, that the tax appears excessive or even so high as to threaten the existence of an occupation or business." City of Pittsburgh v. Alco Parking Corp., 417 U.S. 369, 376 (1974). See also Department of Revenue of Montana v. Kurth Ranch, 511 U.S. 767, 779 (1994) ("We have cautioned against invalidating a tax simply because its enforcement might be oppressive or because the legislature's motive was somehow suspect").

ISCRAA's status as a tax disposes of the Sutherland memo's two principal arguments, which are based on the Takings Clause<sup>1</sup> and retroactivity. First, as the Supreme Court made clear over a century ago, “neither is taxation for a public purpose, however great, the taking of private property for public use, in the sense of the Constitution.” Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U.S. 691, 703 (1880). Second, as you noted in your speech introducing ISCRAA, the Supreme Court has “repeatedly upheld [moderately] retroactive tax legislation against a due process challenge.” United States v. Carlton, 512 U.S. 26, 30-31 (1994). Carlton upheld a tax whose “actual retroactive effect * * * extended for a period only slightly greater than one year.” Id. at 33. ISCRAA only taxes income received since June 1, 2002 – well within Carlton’s limit.

Since ISCRAA is based entirely on Congress’s power to tax, it bears describing in greater detail the scope of Congress’s tax authority. The following cases are instructive:

- Sonzinsky v. United States, 300 U.S. 506 (1937), involved multiple, punitive federal taxes imposed on the sale of sawed-off shotguns, machineguns, and silencers. The party challenging the tax “insist[ed] that the present levy is not a true tax, but a penalty imposed for the purpose of suppressing traffic in a certain noxious type of firearms, the local regulation of which is reserved to the states because not granted to the national government.” Id. at 512. The litigant argued that:

[t]he cumulative effect on the distribution of a limited class of firearms, of relatively small value, by the successive imposition of different taxes, one on the business of the importer or manufacturer, another on that of the dealer, and a third on the transfer to a buyer, is * * * prohibitive in effect and * * * disclose[s] unmistakably the legislative purpose to regulate rather than to tax.

The Supreme Court did not reject this characterization of the tax’s effect. Instead, it simply held that:

“[A] tax is not any the less a tax because it has a regulatory effect; and it has long been established that an Act of Congress which on its face purports to be an exercise of the taxing power is not any the less so because the tax is burdensome or tends to restrict or suppress the thing taxed.

“Inquiry into the hidden motives which may move Congress to exercise a power constitutionally conferred upon it is beyond the competency of courts. They will not undertake, by collateral inquiry as to the measure of the regulatory effect of a tax, to ascribe to Congress an attempt, under the relied on the Due Process Clause in that case. The other four Justices in the majority all based their decision on the Takings Clause. See Eastern Enterprises, 524 U.S. at 529.

guise of taxation, to exercise another power denied by the Federal Constitution.

“Here the annual tax of $200 is productive of some revenue. We are not free to speculate as to the motives which moved Congress to impose it, or as to the extent to which it may operate to restrict the activities taxed. As it is not attended by an offensive regulation, and since it operates as a tax, it is within the national taxing power.”

Id. at 513-514.

- United States v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22 (1953), overruled on other grounds, Marchetti v. United States, 390 U.S. 39 (1968), involved a heavy federal tax on gambling proceeds. The party challenging the tax argued that “Congress, under the pretense of exercising its power to tax has attempted to penalize illegal intrastate gambling through the regulatory features of the Act, and has thus infringed the police power which is reserved to the states.” Id. at 23 (citation omitted). The litigant argued that “because there is legislative history indicating a congressional motive to suppress wagering, this tax is not a proper exercise of such taxing power.” Id. at 27.

The Court responded:

The intent to curtail and hinder, as well as tax, was also manifest in the following cases, and in each of them the tax was upheld: Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L.Ed. 482 (tax on paper money issued by state banks); McCray v. United States, 195 U.S. 27, 59, (tax on colored oleomargarine); United States v. Doremus, 249 U.S. 86 and Nigro v. United States, 276 U.S. 332 (tax on narcotics); Sonzinsky v. United States, 300 U.S. 506 (tax on firearms); United States v. Sanchez, 340 U.S. 42 (tax on marihuana).” Id. at 27.

The Court continued: “a federal excise tax does not cease to be valid merely because it discourages or deters the activities taxed. Nor is the tax invalid because the revenue obtained is negligible.” Id. at 28 (emphasis added). And to give some indication of what would constitute a negligible tax, the Court noted that it had upheld, in the McCray case, a tax on adulterated butter that collected only $3,501. Id.

The Kahriger Court concluded that:

“It is axiomatic that the power of Congress to tax is extensive and sometimes falls with crushing effect on businesses deemed unessential or inimical to the public welfare * * * * As is well known, the constitutional restraints on taxing are few * * * * The remedy for excessive taxation is in the hands of Congress, not the courts.” Id. See also id. at 30 (noting precedent upholding federal that “obliterated from circulation all state bank notes”) (citing Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L.Ed. 482).

With regard to ISCRAA, it bears mention that: 1. ISCRAA on its face is a tax, and all of its provisions are adapted to the raising of revenue. The fee formula simply determines the amount subject to the tax; the declaratory judgment provisions help to enforce the tax. 2. ISCRAA will raise more than negligible revenue. Even the 200% tax is likely to be paid in some instances – e.g., when it applies to an excess-fee payment that is marginal and minor, and the attorney is loathe to return the amount to the client. The very fact that ISCRAA will draw a revenue score will confirm its constitutional status as a tax. 3. Even if the issue were relevant to ISCRAA’s constitutionality, the bill hardly impose a “crushing burden” on lawyers. Its high tax rates are marginal rates, applying only to the excessive portion of the fee. And 500% of reasonable hourly rates cannot reasonably be characterized as “confiscatory” or “crushing.”

The Sutherland memo’s remaining legal arguments all border on the frivolous. The memo argues that ISCRAA is a bill of attainder. Yet the memo concedes that the Constitution’s ban on bills of attainder only proscribes laws that “inflict punishment on identifiable individuals” – and that ISCRAA is made applicable on the basis of “judgements exceeding a certain size.” Sutherland Memo at 15. The Sutherland memo argues that ISCRAA violates the Ex Post Facto Clause. Since the 18th century, that clause has been construed to only apply to criminal penalties, not to civil legislation. See Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. (3 Dall.) 386 (1798).

The memo argues that ISCRAA violates federalism. Even if Congress’s regulatory intent were relevant to the validity of the ISCRAA tax, the memo makes no effort to explain why Congress can regulate the minimum wage of every worker in the United States, but cannot apply fiduciary fee standards in a category of lawsuits that manifestly affect interstate commerce. As you noted in your speech introducing ISCRAA, the bill’s fee formula is more liberal than the federal court’s standards in $100 million cases, and as liberal as the most plaintiff-friendly state courts. The Sutherland memo’s only authority for the proposition that ISCRAA would prevent states from securing legal counsel is the opinion of a former state attorney general who has recently been indicted for fraud related to the tobacco settlement attorneys fees. See Sutherland memo at 30 n.6.

Finally, the Sutherland memo argues that ISCRAA improperly reverses a judicial determination because the tobacco settlement attorneys fees were approved by a court. Sutherland memo at 21-25. Curiously, the one judgment that the memo cites as approving an attorneys fee award predates not only the first of the tobacco-settlement attorneys fee awards – this judgment predates the very existence of the Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) that created the fee-arbitration panels. See Sutherland memo at 23 n.4. The fact is that while courts approved the MSA itself, they did not approve the fee awards. Indeed, the MSA specifically precludes judicial review of the arbitration panels' fee awards.

Particular provisions of the tobacco settlement also raise questions about the nature of the states' approval of that agreement. As one commentator has pointed out, the states had little real choice whether to enter the MSA, and the MSA's provisions explicitly attempt to punish any state whose courts invalidate that agreement:

Several features of the MSA raise compelling constitutional concerns that are not reported in the press at all or otherwise are not generally known or understood. First, the MSA punishes states that refuse to join (or drop out of) the MSA. Although consumers in any state that refuses to join the MSA must nevertheless pay collusively raised tobacco prices, their state receives no "damage" payments. Moreover, if a state court invalidates the Qualifying Statute [endorsing the MSA] because it is illegal or unconstitutional, that state's "damages" payments can be reduced by up to sixty-five percent.

Margaret A. Little A Most Dangerous Indiscretion: the Legal, Economic, and Political Legacy of the Governments' Tobacco Litigation CONNECTICUT LAW REVIEW 1143, 1172 Summer, 2001.

Regardless of whether the MSA fees had been approved by a court, Congress can tax those fees. But even so, it is surprising that the tobacco lawyers today would argue that their future fee payments are protected by past judicial approval, when in creating the MSA they went to such extraordinary lengths to prevent meaningful judicial review of either their attorneys fees or the tobacco settlement itself.

fee cannot be recovered, even if agreed to by the client.” G. Hazard, Jr. & W. Hodes, THE LAW OF LAWYERING 1. 5:205 Fee Litigation and Arbitration 120 (1998 Supp.).

As one court has stated,

“[A]n attorney is only entitled to fees which are fair and just and which adequately compensate him for his services. This is true no matter what fee is specified in the contract, because an attorney, as a fiduciary, cannot bind his client to pay a greater compensation for his services than the attorney would have the right to demand if no contract had been made. Therefore, as a matter of public policy, reasonableness is an implied term in every contract for attorney’s fees.”<sup>28</sup>

Finally, when assessing whether a fee is reasonable, courts ask whether the fee is proportional to the services that were actually provided. “Fees must be reasonably proportional to the services rendered and the situation presented.”<sup>29</sup> (Arizona Supreme Court.) “If an attorney’s fee is grossly disproportionate to the services rendered and is charged to a client who lacks full information about all of the relevant circumstances, the fee is ‘clearly excessive’ * * * even though the client consented to such fee.”<sup>30</sup> (West Virginia Supreme Court.)

Because attorneys are fiduciaries, they simply do not have complete freedom of contract in negotiating their fees. An attorney’s dealings with his client always must reflect that the client comes to him in a position of trust – and therefore, the attorney’s fee always must be reasonable. ISCRAA will help ensure that this important obligation is respected.

ISCRAA’s Effective Date

Another subject that I would like to address today is ISCRAA’s effective date. ISCRAA applies to attorney fee payments received after June 1, 2002. This effective date is appropriate under the circumstances of the state tobacco settlement for several reasons: first, Congress routinely enacts major tax legislation with effective dates that look back much further than does ISCRAA. The Supreme Court has “repeatedly upheld [such moderately] retroactive tax legislation against a due process challenge.” United States v. Carlton, 512 U.S. 26, 30-31 (1994); see id. at 33 (upholding tax whose “actual retroactive effect * * * extended for a period only slightly greater than one year”).

Hazard, ETHICS IN THE PRACTICE OF LAW 99 (1978) (“A contract for a [legal] fee is, under general principles of law, a contract between a fiduciary and his protected dependent * * * [and] it is unenforceable unless its terms are fair to the client”); Trinkle v. Leeney, 650 N.E.2d 749, 754 (Ind.Ct.App.1995) (“Under no circumstances is a lawyer entitled to more than the reasonable value of his or her services. [Moreover,] [r]easonable fees are not necessarily determined by the terms of the attorney-client contract”).

Second, ISCRAA is not even truly retroactive. ISCRAA does not change the substantive law governing attorneys fee awards. Rather, it simply enforces established, pre-existing fiduciary standards that already bind every attorney in every state. The MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, at Rule 1.5(a), contain a clear, direct command that “a lawyer’s fee shall be reasonable.” Similarly, the MODEL CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY, at DR 2-106, directs that an attorney “shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee.” The Model Code further explains that an attorneys fee is “clearly excessive when, after a review of the facts, a lawyer of ordinary prudence would be left with a definite and firm conviction that the fee is in excess of a reasonable fee.” Finally, as academic commentators point out, in addition to the model rules, “all state rules of professional conduct prohibit attorneys from charging excessive fees.”<sup>31</sup> (Emphasis added.)

As I described earlier, to enforce fiduciary standards, ISCRAA codifies and applies a very generous version of the fee multiplier system, allowing attorneys fees as high as 500% of reasonable hourly rates. This is considerably more generous than what federal courts typically allow in large-judgment cases. No attorney can be heard to complain that he is subjected to a law that is more generous than his existing fiduciary obligations.

Further, none of the tobacco-settlement attorneys can reasonably maintain that they have a vested right to see their fiduciary duties to the states go unenforced. Nevertheless, in order to be fair to all parties, ISCRAA’s excise taxes are applied only to fees that were paid after June 1, 2002. By this date, all of the tobacco lawyers twice had received notice from George W. Bush that he intended to enact legislation to enforce their fiduciary obligations. In February 2000, then-candidate Bush promised that he would “extend[] the ‘excess benefits’ provision of the tax code to private lawyers who contract with states and municipalities,” with “the reasonableness of the fees * * * [to] be determined by the standard judicial ‘lodestar’ method.” And as early as February 2001, the current Administration announced that it anticipated providing “additional public health resources for the States from the President’s proposal to extend fiduciary responsibilities to the representatives of States in tobacco lawsuits.” See A BLUEPRINT FOR NEW BEGINNINGS: A RESPONSIBLE BUDGET FOR AMERICA’S PRIORITIES 80, Office of Management and Budget, February 28, 2001.

Under ISCRAA, all of the attorneys who participated in the state tobacco settlement still will be very liberally compensated. Because ISCRAA does not apply to the first three-and-a-half years of fee payments under the settlement, it exempts the first two-and-a-half billion dollars that these lawyers received. Every one of the tobacco lawyers will have more than enough money left to pay for the yachts, luxury cars, and vacation homes that were purchased with the tobacco proceeds. ISCRAA might simply be described as the one-yacht-per-lawyer rule.

State Recovery of Excess MSA Payments

But most importantly, because ISCRAA applies to the last year's worth of tobacco fee payments, and to all future payments, it will return a substantial amount of funds to the states – money that already should belong to the states under any reasonable interpretation of fiduciary standards. It is critical that these funds be restored in this time of widespread fiscal crisis. Today a large number of the states face massive budget deficits that threaten their ability to provide health care to the indigent, to fully fund public education, and to guarantee adequate and effective law enforcement. When such needs risk going unmet, fee abuses that cost the states billions of dollars simply can no longer be ignored. The states must receive their fair share of the tobacco settlement proceeds – funds that are badly needed to support basic public services.

Under the terms of the November 1998 Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) between the states and tobacco companies, $500 million in cigarette taxes is set aside every year to pay the attorneys who chose to have their fees awarded in arbitration. Because extraordinarily high fees were awarded by the arbitrators – estimated to total $15 billion – the $500-million-a-year income stream (which is not adjusted for inflation) may have to be paid in perpetuity. In addition to this annuity, the MSA also sets aside an additional $1.25 billion in cigarette taxes to compensate those lawyers who choose to forego arbitration and negotiate their fees directly with the tobacco companies.

The present value of the $500-million-a-year fee stream – discounting all future payments for the time value of money – has been conservatively estimated at just over $8 billion. Current and future payments from the $1.25 billion fee fund are less certain, since the grants made from that fund and their disbursement schedule have been kept obscure from the public. Because ISCRAA's effective date is June 1, 2002, ISCRAA will probably recoup for the states an additional $1 billion above the present value of future $500 million-a-year payments. ISCRAA does not affect the first three-and-a-half years of fees paid under the MSA. Because these payments almost certainly are adequate to pay all reasonable fees incurred in the litigation, ISCRAA would restore to the states virtually all fees paid after its effective date. Thus the net present value of the sums that ISCRAA would provide to the states can conservatively be estimated at $9 billion.

By restoring these excess fee payments to the states' MSA escrow account and returning them to the states on a per capita basis, ISCRAA guarantees every state a very substantial recovery. Based on the estimates that I have described, even our nation's smallest state, Wyoming, would recoup at least $15 million in tobacco fee payments, and other small states, such as North Dakota, would receive approximately $20 million. On the other hand, our nation's largest state, California, can expect to recoup at least $1 billion. Other large states would also see generous returns: Florida, $511 million; Illinois, $397 million; Michigan, $318 million; New York, $607 million; Ohio, $363 million; and Texas, $667 million.

Here is how much each state can expect to recover:

SENATOR KYL INTRODUCTION OF ISCRAA

Mr. KYL: I rise today to introduce the Intermediate Sanctions Compensatory Revenue Adjustment Act of 2003 (ISCRAA). This legislation will restore to the states billions of dollars in revenue due to them from a massive lawsuit recently conducted on their behalf – the tobacco-related Medicaid expenses litigation. ISCRAA amends an existing provision of the federal tax code in order to enforce basic, universally accepted fiduciary standards governing the award of attorneys fees. By applying these standards to the attorneys who represented the states in the tobacco settlement, ISCRAA reasonably can be expected to restore to the states income with a present value of approximately $9 billion. I have included at the end of my statement a chart detailing how much each state can expect to recover.

ISCRAA's tax formula is borrowed from the 1996 Tax Act's Intermediate Sanctions Tax (IST), which applies a two-step excise tax to any excessive or unreasonable compensation that the managers of a trust pay to themselves from the assets of the trust. The IST framework encourages the trustee to restore the excessive portion of any fee to the trust – when he does so, the IST's punitive taxes do not apply.

ISCRAA extends the IST to another type of trust relationship: that between a lawyer and his client. ISCRAA applies the IST tax formula to any unreasonable or excessive income that a lawyer collects from litigation resulting in a judgment or settlement in excess of $100 million. To avoid IST taxes, an attorney must restore the excessive portion of the fee to the client.

As my colleague Senator CORNYN will explain today, the ethical and legal abuses that resulted from the 1998 state tobacco settlement make the need for this legislation manifest. Senator CORNYN also will discuss the law of attorneys' fiduciary obligations, which establishes that a fee award is the property of the client – and that any unethical fee must be restored to the client, regardless of how the fee award is structured.

I will discuss today how ISCRAA will affect massive litigations generally. In order to gauge the reasonableness of a lawyer's fee award, ISCRAA adopts and codifies a liberal version of the lodestar-multiplier system. As I will later explain in greater detail, ISCRAA allows fee multipliers of up to 500% of reasonable hourly rates. This limit is as generous as the most liberal limits adopted by state courts, and considerably more generous than the limits that federal courts have applied in $100 million cases. ISCRAA's fee formula guarantees that attorneys' fiduciary obligations will be respected, while providing plaintiffs lawyers with ample incentive to provide high-quality legal representation in these types of cases.

Massive Litigations and the Prospect of Tax Farming

Federal supervision of fee awards resulting from $100 million litigations is appropriate for several reasons. First, because of their sheer size, these types of lawsuits inevitably operate as a tax on the consuming public. Few defendants actually can afford to pay such judgments with cash on hand. Instead, the affected industries simply will raise the prices that they charge to their customers.

This is exactly what has happened in the state Medicaid tobacco settlement – according to the leading proponents of that litigation. The first state attorney general to file suit against the tobacco companies has admitted that “what always happens in these cases is the industry passes the costs to the consumer.”<sup>1</sup> Other commentators agree that this has occurred in the tobacco litigation. As one law-review article notes, “the [tobacco] settlement * * * is a tax because it’s a set of payments made by tobacco companies that depend on how many packs they sell; in short, it looks like a tax and quacks like a tax.”<sup>2</sup>

Because of the way that these massive judgments typically are satisfied, it is particularly important to ensure that attorneys are paid in proportion to the services that they provided – rather than solely on the basis of the size of the recovery. Again, the state tobacco settlement highlights the nature of the problem. As two of the leading academic commentators have noted, it is “very troubl[ing]” that under that agreement, “a group of private citizens [are] getting paid a percentage of a tax increase they helped pass.”<sup>3</sup> The sheer size of the tobacco settlement – and the fact that attorneys fees were based on this size, rather than on the attorneys’ actual efforts – has given the fee awards an uncanny resemblance to the medieval practice of tax farming. In all but name, the government has licensed a group of private individuals to collect a tax from the consuming public.

I would emphasize at this point that ISCRAA is not an attack on the state tobacco lawsuits. The bill does not pass judgment on the merits or the appropriateness of this type of litigation. ISCRAA simply is designed to ensure that when such lawsuits are brought on the public’s behalf, the public receive its fair share of the proceeds. If a state chooses to seek compensatory revenue from industry for past harms, then the resulting tax on the public – minus the reasonable value of the legal services actually provided – must go to the state treasury.

$100 Million Lawsuits Are Different

There are several reasons why $100 million is an appropriate threshold for applying ISCRAA's fee formula. First, the courts themselves have indicated that fee agreements based primarily on the size of the recovery tend to become unreasonable when judgements reach this size. As one court has stated, "in much smaller cases, a fee award of 33% does not present the danger of providing the plaintiff's counsel with the windfall that would accompany a 'megafund' settlement of $100 million or upwards. But it is quite different when the figures hit the really big time."<sup>4</sup> Or as the Third Circuit notes, "courts have generally decreased the percentage awarded [for attorneys fees] as the amount recovered increases, and $100 million seems to be the informal marker of a 'very large' settlement."<sup>5</sup>

The logic of avoiding judgment-based awards in these very large cases is straightforward. As one court explains, "it is not 150 times more difficult to prepare, try, and settle a $150 million case than it is to try a $1 million case, but the application of a percentage comparable to that in a smaller case may yield an award 150 times greater."<sup>6</sup> Thus (according to another court) "there is considerable merit" to disallowing standard percentage awards as the "size of the [recovery] fund increases. In many instances the increase [in the recovery] is merely a factor of the size of the class and has no direct relationship to the efforts of counsel."<sup>7</sup>

It also bears mention that because of its $100 million threshold, ISCRAA applies to a fairly limited universe of cases. As courts have remarked, "there are few so-called 'megafund' cases with settlements over $100 million."<sup>8</sup> In 2001, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third

Circuit attempted to catalogue all common-fund cases in federal court that resulted in recoveries greater than $100 million. Though such litigations have been more frequent in recent years, the Third Circuit identified only 22 such cases since 1985. See in re Cendant Corp. PRIDES Litig., 243 F.3d 722, 737 (3d Cir. 2001).

ISCRAA is somewhat broader than the criteria that Cendant Corp. employed to collect cases. ISCRAA is not limited to common-fund cases – it also applies to judgments won on behalf of tax-exempt entities or even single individuals. ISCRAA also applies to cases brought in state court, and it aggregates identical claims that are brought against common defendants in separate actions, in order to prevent evasion of its limits through the subdivision of actions. Nevertheless, ISCRAA’s scope remains fairly narrow. An academic specialist who is familiar with developments in this field has reviewed the bill and concluded that because of its “relatively high threshold,” ISCRAA probably would apply only to about 15-20 litigations per year. I will include a copy of this professor’s letter to me in the congressional record.

Finally, a $100 million threshold also is appropriate because it limits ISCRAA’s reach to litigations that are a natural subject of congress’s authority to regulate interstate commerce. It is well-established that “Congress’ commerce authority includes the power to regulate * * * those [economic] activities that substantially affect interstate commerce.” United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 609 (2000). See also United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995). Both the executive and the legislative branches previously have identified $100 million as guideline for determining whether a matter has a significant impact on interstate commerce. See, e.g. Executive Order 12866; Congressional Review Act, 5 U.S.C. § 804(2); Unfunded Mandates Act, 2 U.S.C. § 1532(a). Because it is limited to litigations of this size, ISCRAA is consistent with congress’s power and obligation to protect the flow of commerce between states.

Guaranteeing Adequate Incentives to Plaintiffs’ Lawyers

Another point that I would like to emphasize today is that ISCRAA is not an anti-plaintiffs’ lawyer bill. It is not stingy toward trial attorneys. ISCRAA is carefully designed to protect fiduciary interests while providing plaintiffs’ lawyers with ample incentives to provide high-quality legal representation in large litigations. ISCRAA’s fee formula is as generous as the limits set by the most liberal state courts that engage in meaningful review of attorneys fees, and is considerably more generous than the federal courts’ practices in $100 million cases. Moreover, the multiplier criteria that ISCRAA employs universally are recognized as legitimate prerequisites for a contingency fee – even by trial lawyers’ professional associations.

Federal courts primarily rely on two systems for calculating attorneys fees in cases (such as class actions) in which they are required to set “reasonable fees:” the percentage method and the lodestar-multiplier method. The percentage method, as its name implies, calculates fees as a percentage of the total recovery. The lodestar system, by contrast, requires a court to first calculate a fee based on the number of hours that the lawyer worked multiplied by prevailing hourly rates (the “lodestar”). The court then multiplies this lodestar fee again in order to reward the attorney for the risk of nonpayment of fees that he assumed and for any exceptional services that he provided.

Litig., 886 F.Supp 445, 462 (E.D.Pa. 1995) (“The number of cases involving a common fund in the neighborhood of [$100 million] is relatively small”).

Over the last thirty years, courts have moved back and forth between these two systems.<sup>9</sup> Only a few courts make lodestar-multipliers the exclusive means of awarding attorneys fees. But as one academic commentator has noted, “lodestar, or hours-based methods, have been adopted in every [federal judicial] circuit.”<sup>10</sup>

And more importantly, in large-recovery cases, there has been very little difference between lodestar and percentage systems. This is because even when courts apply a percentage to calculate fees, and as judgements become very large, courts typically also calculate a reasonable lodestar in order to determine what constitutes a reasonable percentage. Thus, again, as the Third Circuit notes, “courts have generally decreased the percentage awarded as the amount recovered increases, and $100 million seems to be the informal marker of a ‘very large’ settlement.”<sup>11</sup>

Courts have been wary of awarding fees based on percentages alone. As one state supreme court explains:

“to begin the assessment by arbitrarily picking a percentage amount without any reliance on a cognizable structure invites decisions that are nonobjective and inconsistent. What constitutes a reasonable percentage may differ from one judge to another depending on each judge’s predilections, background, and geographical location in the state.”<sup>12</sup>

Thus “courts that employ the percentage approach appear to be motivated in part by a lodestar dynamic. Because courts are reluctant to give fee awards totally incommensurate with the efforts of the attorneys, percentage awards generally decrease as the amount of the recovery increases.”<sup>13</sup>

Integrated Resources, Inc.*, 209 F.3d 43, 49 (2d Cir. 2000) (noting that in addition to Second Circuit, “six other circuits have reaffirmed that district courts enjoy the discretion to use either the lodestar or the percentage method”) (citing cases).

One result of the cross-use of the lodestar and percentage systems is that even when courts use the percentage system, those awards overwhelmingly tend to reflect a reasonable lodestar multiplier. Therefore, even percentage-based cases tend to provide evidence of the range of multipliers that the courts consider to be reasonable.

In 2001, the Third Circuit “set forth a chart of fee awards given in federal courts since 1985 in class actions in which the settlement fund exceeded $100 million and in which the percentage of recovery method was used.”<sup>14</sup> (Cendant Corp.) The court identified 17 such cases. In almost every case, the Third Circuit could calculate the multiplier that was used, and “the lodestar multiplier in those cases never exceeded 2.99.” And in the direct lodestar-multiplier cases that court identified, the multiplier ranged from 1.2 to 3.25.<sup>15</sup>

Other courts, surveying smaller cases than the $100 million recoveries examined in Cendant Corp., have identified larger multipliers. One federal district court has “observe[d] that in virtually every case where the court notes a lodestar but awards fees based upon a percentage, the lodestar multiplier converted from this percentage is in the range of 1 to 4.”<sup>16</sup> Another federal district court has found that “the range of lodestar multipliers in large and complicated class actions runs from a low of 2.26 to a high of 4.5.”<sup>17</sup>

By contrast, some courts have declared that they would allow only lower multipliers. One federal court has stated that “only in the most exceptional circumstances would this court award a multiplier of 3 or greater. * * * this court believes that lodestars enhanced by multipliers less than 3 should adequately compensate even the most talented counsel.”<sup>18</sup> And the Seventh

Circuit has suggested that “it may be that a doubling of the lodestar would provide a sensible ceiling.”<sup>19</sup>

On the other hand, the Florida Supreme Court – which is generally regarded as one of the more plaintiff-friendly courts in the United States – has announced that:

“we set the maximum multiplier available in this common-fund category of cases at 5. * * * [A] multiplier which increases fees to five times the accepted hourly rate is sufficient to alleviate the contingency risk factor involved and attract high level counsel to common fund cases while producing a fee that remains within the bounds of reasonableness. We emphasize that 5 is a maximum multiplier.”<sup>20</sup>

ISCRAA adopts this more liberal standard. It allows fees as high as 500% of reasonable hourly rates. ISCRAA awards multipliers based on two criteria: it allows up to 300% to be added onto the amount of reasonable hourly fees if a case that involved a substantial risk of nonrecovery of fees, and allows an additional 100% add-on if the attorney provided exceptional services that improved the plaintiff’s recovery.

The criteria that ISCRAA employs universally are recognized as necessary prerequisites to the legitimacy of a contingency fee. “Courts in general have insisted that a contingent fee be truly contingent. The typically elevated fee reflecting the risk to the lawyer of receiving no fee will be permitted only if the representation indeed involves a significant degree of risk.” Charles W. Wolfram, MODERN LEGAL ETHICS § 9.4, at 532 (1986). The risk requirement has been recognized ever since contingency fees first were allowed in the United States. The American Bar Association even noted at that time that “a contract for a contingent fee, where sanctioned by law, should be reasonable under all the circumstances of the case, including the risk and uncertainty of the compensation.” ABA CANONS OF PROFESSIONAL ETHICS, Canon 13 (1908). Indeed, even the professional associations of plaintiffs’ attorneys have, at times, acknowledged that contingent fees should be based on an actual contingency. In a guide to its members, the Association of Trial Lawyers of America has “recommend[ed]” that attorneys “exercise sound judgment in using a percentage in the contingent fee contract that is commensurate with the risk, cost and effort required.” ATLA, KEYS TO THE COURTHOUSE: QUICK FACTS ON THE CONTINGENCY FEE SYSTEM 13 (1994).

The criteria that ISCRAA employs are universally accepted – and the limits that it sets should be universally acceptable. ISCRAA is not intended to alter the considered standards of any jurisdiction. Rather, it is intended to enforce those standards – and to correct the occasional extreme outlier. Because ISCRAA incorporates a fee formula that is substantially more liberal than the usual practices of the federal courts in $100 million cases, we can be confident that high-quality legal representation will remain available to plaintiffs in these large litigations. See, e.g. in re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 74 F. Supp. 2d 393 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (RICO and Commodities Exchange Act case resulting in $116 million recovery; attorneys reviewed millions of pages of documents located throughout the world, many requiring translation from Japanese; federal district court awards multiplier of 250% for total fee of $32 million).

Fiduciary Restraints on Attorney Fee Contracts

Another issue that I will address today is the argument – occasionally raised in opposition to proposals to limit attorneys fees – that such restrictions violate attorneys’ rights to freedom of contract.

The first principle to keep in mind when questions of attorneys fees are considered is that “a fiduciary relationship exists as a matter of law between attorney and client.”<sup>21</sup> (Illinois Supreme Court.) As one academic commentator has noted:

“[I]t is uncontroverted today that a lawyer is a fiduciary for, and therefore has a duty to deal fairly with, the client. * * * * Lawyers are fiduciaries because retention of an attorney to exercise ‘professional judgement’ on the client’s behalf necessarily involves reposing trust and confidence in the attorney. Exercising professional judgment requires that the lawyer advance the client’s interests as the client would define them if the client were well-informed.”<sup>22</sup>

The lawyer’s status as fiduciary places limits on his dealings with his client – including with regard to his fee. “An attorney’s freedom to contract with a client is subject to the constraints of ethical considerations.”<sup>23</sup> (New Jersey Supreme Court.) “In setting fees, lawyers are fiduciaries who owe their clients greater duties than are owed under the general law of contracts.”<sup>24</sup> (Massachusetts Appeals Court.) “As a result of lawyers’ special role in the legal system, contracts between lawyer and client receive special scrutiny. * * * * While freedom of contract is the guiding principle underlying contract law, contractual freedom is muted in the lawyer-client and lawyer-lawyer contexts.”<sup>25</sup> (Joseph M. Perillo, law professor.)

The unique status of attorney fee contracts has led courts to reject analogies between such agreements and other business or service contracts. Perhaps the fullest exposition is provided by the Arizona Supreme Court:

“We realize that business contracts may be enforced between those in equal bargaining capacities, even though they turn out to be unfair, inequitable or harsh. However, a fee agreement between lawyer and client is not an ordinary business contract. The profession has both an obligation of public service and duties to clients which transcend ordinary business relationships and prohibit the lawyer from taking advantage of the client. Thus, in fixing and collecting fees the profession must remember that it is a branch of the administration of justice and not a mere money getting trade.’ ABA CANONS OF PROFESSIONAL ETHICS, Canon 12.”<sup>26</sup>

The same principle has been identified by the Florida Supreme Court:

“There is but little analogy between the elements that control the determination of a lawyer's fee and those which determine the compensation of skilled craftsmen in other fields. Lawyers are officers of the court. The court is an instrument of society for the administration of justice. Justice should be administered economically, efficiently, and expeditiously. The attorney's fee is, therefore, a very important factor in the administration of justice, and if it is not determined with proper relation to that fact it results in a species of social malpractice that undermines the confidence of the public in the bench and bar. It does more than that. It brings the court into disrepute and destroys its power to perform adequately the function of its creation.”<sup>27</sup>

In order to protect the lawyer’s public role and to enforce his fiduciary obligations, the courts read a reasonableness requirement into every attorney fee contract. “[T]he requirement that a fee be reasonable in amount overrides the terms of the contract, so that an ‘unreasonable’

Wendy thinks the following calls would be useful:

Senator Feinstein
Senator Zell Miller
Senator Ben Nelson
Senator Breaux
Senator Pryor

also, call Ron Rubin (Rockville lawyer, not sure of spelling but he was head of Fed Bar Association in Maryland) and ask him if we can talk to him at 5:30 tomorrow.

Brett, The attached information has been compiled from two different sources -- both are hand written documents so the spelling of names may not be completely accurate -- I have not had time to check against the typed cards. The differences in the books are one set only list those individuals appointed - the other set lists nominations - in some parts of the book on nominations it is not clear whether the "was sent" means to the WH or to the Senate - I have used that date for the "nominated" column. I will try to confirm the information through the card index in the morning. I need to go through another book for the information between 1801 and the 1905 entries. Sheila

Brett,
David is only free from 10:30-1:30 today. What do you want to do about Ruben and Titus? David may be able to go at 4:30 and 5:00, but I can't be sure until Charlotte gets back (she is giving a tour right now).

GOP Shifts Tactics on Judges

Weighs lawsuit, rule change to break nominee stalemate

By Anne Q. Hoy

WASHINGTON BUREAU

May 8, 2003

Washington - Frustrated by Democratic filibusters of two of President George W. Bush's judicial nominees, Senate Republicans are considering a major shift in tactics that some Democrats contend would only inflame partisan tensions over the stalemate.

Republicans are contemplating going to the Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of using a supermajority threshold of 60 votes to block judicial nominees from a final vote that would carry with a simple majority.

The legal route is being studied by Republican Sens. Saxby Chambliss of Georgia and Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, though neither has yet decided whether to file a lawsuit.

Other Republicans have floated a plan to try to change a Senate rule that requires 60 votes to end a filibuster before a troubled nomination can get a final vote, something that requires only a simple majority to prevail.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist (R-Tenn.) said yesterday he still prefers "an up or down vote" and is not advocating either proposal.

Democrats are blocking two appeals court nominations from final votes: Washington attorney Miguel Estrada for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen for the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on the Fifth Circuit based in New Orleans. They are prepared to block others they find extreme.

Republicans contend that the two nominees are mainstream and that Republicans have the votes to confirm them. Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) says Democrats are pursuing obstructionist tactics.

Democrats counter that the two nominees are far too conservative. Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.), a Judiciary Committee member, said that of the 123 judicial nominees Bush has proposed, the Senate has confirmed 121.

"If there was ever a view, 'We want everything,' it's shown by these temper tantrums," Schumer said.

Schumer has called on Bush to set up bipartisan nominating commissions in each state to select nominees, a proposal White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales dismissed as a transfer of Bush's constitutional powers "to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens."

The Judiciary Committee is expected today to send to the full Senate another controversial nominee: Carolyn Kuhl for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. Kuhl, a Los Angeles Superior Court judge, played a key role in supporting tax-exempt status for Bob Jones University during the Reagan administration. The university has since lost the tax status because of discriminatory practices.

I need it for a precedent for a TV appearance by Mrs. Bush. Judge wanted to see what we had done previously on the waiver. Probably not essential but it would be nice. How difficult is it to retrieve something?

Do you have a more extensive bio than this for the Judge?

Prior to his service in the White House, Al Gonzales sat on the Supreme Court of Texas. From 1997 to 1999, he served as the 100th Secretary of State of Texas. In addition, Judge Gonzales served as General Counsel to Governor Bush for three years and was a partner with the law firm of Vinson & Elkins in Houston, Texas. He is a graduate of Rice University and Harvard Law School. Judge Gonzales attended the U.S. Air Force Academy and is a veteran of the U.S. Air Force.

This is fine, but if you have more, I'll use it.

Jennifer Newstead is the POC for OA issues in WH Counsel's Office (and the POC for coordinating on these answers). However, others in WHCO have responsibility for certain issues raised by these questions and I have cc'd them on this email.

Ed McNally handles HSC (there are many questions on HSC)

Brett Kavanaugh handles political travel issues (a series of questions in this area)

Ted Ulyot handles detail/assignee issues (a few questions I noticed in scanning the list)

-One comment: The ranking member questions repeatedly ask about EOP "agencies". Please do not respond using the term "agency". I suggest using "entity" or "office".

Attached for your review are the questions we received from the Congress... we have assigned the questions to the appropriate EOP staff and are in the process of issuing specific questions to specific staff members. Given the short suspense, we plan to forward the answers to you for review and approval as we receive the answers then coordinate the final consolidated package for approval. thanks

Below is the note I plan to send to all personnel that are assigned questions.

Yesterday, we received 169 Congressional Questions for the Record on the EOP FY 2004 Budget Request. The answers are due to Congress on May 23rd. So that we are able to obtain all required clearances in a timely manner, we ask that you provide draft responses to the questions assigned to you no later than COB Wednesday, May 14th.

The questions assigned to you are listed below. Please answer the questions completely, consisely and accurately. Be able to produce all supporting documentation since Congress will often ask follow up questions based on our responses. Several questions refer to last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. I will provide those references in a separate email shortly. It is important that you do not share the questions or answers with anyone or any organization outside of the EOP.

Send your responses directly to me with a copy to Jim Daniel. As always, contact me if you need any clarification.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

Question 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

Question 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

Question 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

Question 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

Question 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

Question 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

Question 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

Question 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

Question 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

Question 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

Question 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

Question 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

Question 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

Question 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

Question 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

Question 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to “match government’s growth with the growth of American family income.”

Question 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

The White House Office’s increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration’s account. Without the realignment, the White House Office’s increase would be around 6.6%. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn’t theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Travel

The White House Office’s request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

Question 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Political Travel (POC – Andy Kalnins)

Question 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season.

Question 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect?

Question 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip?

Question 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity?

Question 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is “political” or “official”?

Question 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time?

Question 120: Have events been classified as “official” even if only members of the President’s political party are invited to share the stage with the President?

Question 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events?

Question 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill.

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

Question 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

Question 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

Question 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

Question 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

Question 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

Question 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

Question 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

Question 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

Question 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

Question 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

Question 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

Question 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

Question 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

White House Access (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

Question 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

Question 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

Question 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

Question 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

Question 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX?

Question 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX?

Question 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX?

Question 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers?

Question 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX?

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

Question 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Travel Office (POC – Mayra Segovia)

Question 151: Please describe the current role the White House Travel Office plays in managing and arranging the financial aspects of White House Press Corps travel. Does the White House Travel Office operate as a “dollar-for-dollar” operation?

Question 152: How many EOP staff work in the White House Travel Office?

Question 153: How many contractor travel agents support the White House Travel Office?

Question 154: Please include the most recent independent financial statement audit of the White House Travel Office’s accounts for the record.

Question 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

Question 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

Question 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President’s travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

Bonuses

Question 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

Question 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilities) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Question 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

EOP Staffing Levels:

Question 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the “historically provided” White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

Question 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

Question 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

Question 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an “EOP average” rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OA Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 7: By OA office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 113 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OMB Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich/Brian Gillis)

Question 8: By OMB office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 114 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

Question 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

Question 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

Question 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

Question 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

Question 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

Question 14: How many detailees are on board today?

Question 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

Question 16: Please update the OHS organizational chart found on page 50 of last year's hearing record.

Question 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

Question 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Question 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

Question 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

Question 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

Question 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

Question 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

Question 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

Question 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

Question 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

Question 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

Question 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

Question 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

Question 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

Question 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

Question 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

Question 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

Question 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

Question 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

Question 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

Executive Residence (POC – Worthington White)

Question 39: Please provide a table, corresponding to the projects on page 81 of last year's hearing record, showing the original appropriation for each project, the amount obligated to date, and the project status. This involves projects funded in fiscal year 2002.

Question 40: Please provide a listing of the 95 FTE positions at the Executive Residence requested for funding in FY 2004, showing the position title and the annual salary level.

Question 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

Question 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

Question 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

Question 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

Question 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

Question 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

Question 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

Question 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

President's Travel (POC - Rothley Howard)

Question 51: Please update the information on pages 89 through 94 of last year's hearing record concerning travel by the President and the First Lady by continuing data from the final entry of last year's record to the present time.

Presidential Staff Travel (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 52: Please provide a listing of staff travel not in support of the President for fiscal year 2002 and thus far in fiscal year 2003. For each entry, please include the name of traveler, the destination and purpose of trip, the number of days in travel status, and the trip cost.

Consulting Services (POC – Kathleen O'Halloran)

Question 53: Updating the information on page 115 of last year's hearing record, please provide actual and estimated amounts for consulting services for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Freedom Corps (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 54: Please provide EOP budgeted funding for the Freedom Corps for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

Question 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

Question 58: Please provide a listing of the staff in the USA Freedom Corps Office, showing the incumbent name and position. Please designate any detailees.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

Question 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

Question 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

Question 62: Are funds requested in the FY 2004 budget for this project?

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.

Question 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

Question 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

Question 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

Question 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

Question 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

Question 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

Question 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

Question 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staffyears and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

Historically Provided White House Office Positions (POC – Eric Lanman/Jon Laurich)

Question 74: Updating the information on page 235 of last year's hearing record, please provide a listing of historically provided White House Office positions.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

Question 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

Question 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

Unanticipated Needs (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Jennifer Newstead is the POC for OA issues in WH Counsel's Office (and the POC for coordinating on these answers). However, others in WHCO have responsibility for certain issues raised by these questions and I have cc'd them on this email.

Ed McNally handles HSC (there are many questions on HSC)

Brett Kavanaugh handles political travel issues (a series of questions in this area)

Ted Ulyot handles detail/assignee issues (a few questions I noticed in scanning the list)

-One comment: The ranking member questions repeatedly ask about EOP "agencies". Please do not respond using the term "agency". I suggest using "entity" or "office".

Attached for your review are the questions we received from the Congress( we have assigned the questions to the appropriate EOP staff and are in the process of issuing specific questions to specific staff members. Given the short suspense, we plan to forward the answers to you for review and approval as we receive the answers then coordinate the final consolidated package for approval. thanks

Subject: Congressional Questions for the Record

Below is the note I plan to send to all personnel that are assigned questions.

Yesterday, we received 169 Congressional Questions for the Record on the EOP FY 2004 Budget Request. The answers are due to Congress on May 23rd. So that we are able to obtain all required clearances in a timely manner, we ask that you provide draft responses to the questions assigned to you no later than COB Wednesday, May 14th.

The questions assigned to you are listed below. Please answer the questions completely, consisely and accurately. Be able to produce all supporting documentation since Congress will often ask follow up questions based on our responses. Several questions refer to last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. I will provide those references in a separate email shortly. It is important that you do not share the questions or answers with anyone or any organization outside of the EOP.

Send your responses directly to me with a copy to Jim Daniel. As always, contact me if you need any clarification.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

Question 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

Question 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

Question 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

Question 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

Question 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

Question 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

Question 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

Question 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

Question 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

Question 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

Question 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

Question 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

Question 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

Question 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

Question 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

Question 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to “match government’s growth with the growth of American family income.”

Question 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

The White House Office’s increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration’s account. Without the realignment, the White House Office’s increase would be around 6.6%. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn’t theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Travel

The White House Office’s request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

Question 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Political Travel (POC – Andy Kalnins)

Question 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season.

Question 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect?

Question 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip?

Question 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity?

Question 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is “political” or “official”?

Question 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time?

Question 120: Have events been classified as “official” even if only members of the President’s political party are invited to share the stage with the President?

Question 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events?

Question 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill.

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

Question 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

Question 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

Question 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

Question 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

Question 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

Question 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

Question 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

Question 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

Question 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

Question 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

Question 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

Question 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

Question 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

White House Access (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

Question 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

Question 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

Question 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

Question 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

Question 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX?

Question 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX?

Question 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX?

Question 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers?

Question 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX?

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

Question 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Travel Office (POC – Mayra Segovia)

Question 151: Please describe the current role the White House Travel Office plays in managing and arranging the financial aspects of White House Press Corps travel. Does the White House Travel Office operate as a “dollar-for-dollar” operation?

Question 152: How many EOP staff work in the White House Travel Office?

Question 153: How many contractor travel agents support the White House Travel Office?

Question 154: Please include the most recent independent financial statement audit of the White House Travel Office’s accounts for the record.

Question 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

Question 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

Question 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President’s travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

Bonuses

Question 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

Question 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilities) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Question 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

EOP Staffing Levels:

Question 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the “historically provided” White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

Question 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

Question 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

Question 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an “EOP average” rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OA Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 7: By OA office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 113 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OMB Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich/Brian Gillis)

Question 8: By OMB office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 114 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

Question 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

Question 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

Question 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

Question 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

Question 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

Question 14: How many detailees are on board today?

Question 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

Question 16: Please update the OHS organizational chart found on page 50 of last year's hearing record.

Question 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

Question 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Question 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

Question 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

Question 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

Question 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

Question 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

Question 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

Question 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

Question 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

Question 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

Question 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

Question 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

Question 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

Question 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

Question 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

Question 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

Question 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

Question 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

Question 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

Executive Residence (POC – Worthington White)

Question 39: Please provide a table, corresponding to the projects on page 81 of last year's hearing record, showing the original appropriation for each project, the amount obligated to date, and the project status. This involves projects funded in fiscal year 2002.

Question 40: Please provide a listing of the 95 FTE positions at the Executive Residence requested for funding in FY 2004, showing the position title and the annual salary level.

Question 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

Question 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

Question 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

Question 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

Question 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

Question 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

Question 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

Question 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

President's Travel (POC - Rothley Howard)

Question 51: Please update the information on pages 89 through 94 of last year's hearing record concerning travel by the President and the First Lady by continuing data from the final entry of last year's record to the present time.

Presidential Staff Travel (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 52: Please provide a listing of staff travel not in support of the President for fiscal year 2002 and thus far in fiscal year 2003. For each entry, please include the name of traveler, the destination and purpose of trip, the number of days in travel status, and the trip cost.

Consulting Services (POC – Kathleen O'Halloran)

Question 53: Updating the information on page 115 of last year's hearing record, please provide actual and estimated amounts for consulting services for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Freedom Corps (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 54: Please provide EOP budgeted funding for the Freedom Corps for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

Question 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

Question 58: Please provide a listing of the staff in the USA Freedom Corps Office, showing the incumbent name and position. Please designate any detailees.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

Question 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

Question 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

Question 62: Are funds requested in the FY 2004 budget for this project?

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.

Question 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

Question 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

Question 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

Question 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

Question 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

Question 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

Question 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

Question 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staffyears and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

Historically Provided White House Office Positions (POC – Eric Lanman/Jon Laurich)

Question 74: Updating the information on page 235 of last year's hearing record, please provide a listing of historically provided White House Office positions.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

Question 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

Question 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

Unanticipated Needs (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Jennifer Newstead is the POC for OA issues in WH Counsel's Office (and the POC for coordinating on these answers). However, others in WHCO have responsibility for certain issues raised by these questions and I have cc'd them on this email.

Ed McNally handles HSC (there are many questions on HSC)

Brett Kavanaugh handles political travel issues (a series of questions in this area)

Ted Ulyot handles detail/assignee issues (a few questions I noticed in scanning the list)

-One comment: The ranking member questions repeatedly ask about EOP "agencies". Please do not respond using the term "agency". I suggest using "entity" or "office".

Subject: FW: Congressional Questions for the Record

Attached for your review are the questions we received from the Congress( we have assigned the questions to the appropriate EOP staff and are in the process of issuing specific questions to specific staff members. Given the short suspense, we plan to forward the answers to you for review and approval as we receive the answers then coordinate the final consolidated package for approval. thanks

Subject: Congressional Questions for the Record

Below is the note I plan to send to all personnel that are assigned questions.

Yesterday, we received 169 Congressional Questions for the Record on the EOP FY 2004 Budget Request. The answers are due to Congress on May 23rd. So that we are able to obtain all required clearances in a timely manner, we ask that you provide draft responses to the questions assigned to you no later than COB Wednesday, May 14th.

The questions assigned to you are listed below. Please answer the questions completely, consisely and accurately. Be able to produce all supporting documentation since Congress will often ask follow up questions based on our responses. Several questions refer to last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. I will provide those references in a separate email shortly. It is important that you do not share the questions or answers with anyone or any organization outside of the EOP.

Send your responses directly to me with a copy to Jim Daniel. As always, contact me if you need any clarification.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

Question 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

Question 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

Question 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

Question 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

Question 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

Question 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

Question 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

Question 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

Question 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

Question 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

Question 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

Question 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

Question 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

Question 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

Question 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

Question 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to “match government’s growth with the growth of American family income.”

Question 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

The White House Office’s increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration’s account. Without the realignment, the White House Office’s increase would be around 6.6%. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn’t theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Travel

The White House Office’s request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

Question 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Political Travel (POC – Andy Kalnins)

Question 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season.

Question 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect?

Question 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip?

Question 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity?

Question 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is “political” or “official”?

Question 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time?

Question 120: Have events been classified as “official” even if only members of the President’s political party are invited to share the stage with the President?

Question 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events?

Question 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill.

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

Question 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

Question 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

Question 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

Question 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

Question 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

Question 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

Question 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

Question 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

Question 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

Question 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

Question 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

Question 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

Question 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

White House Access (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

Question 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

Question 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

Question 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

Question 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

Question 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX?

Question 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX?

Question 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX?

Question 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers?

Question 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX?

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

Question 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Travel Office (POC – Mayra Segovia)

Question 151: Please describe the current role the White House Travel Office plays in managing and arranging the financial aspects of White House Press Corps travel. Does the White House Travel Office operate as a “dollar-for-dollar” operation?

Question 152: How many EOP staff work in the White House Travel Office?

Question 153: How many contractor travel agents support the White House Travel Office?

Question 154: Please include the most recent independent financial statement audit of the White House Travel Office’s accounts for the record.

Question 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

Question 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

Question 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President’s travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

Bonuses

Question 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

Question 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilities) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Question 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

EOP Staffing Levels:

Question 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the “historically provided” White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

Question 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

Question 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

Question 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an “EOP average” rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OA Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 7: By OA office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 113 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OMB Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich/Brian Gillis)

Question 8: By OMB office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 114 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

Question 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

Question 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

Question 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

Question 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

Question 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

Question 14: How many detailees are on board today?

Question 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

Question 16: Please update the OHS organizational chart found on page 50 of last year's hearing record.

Question 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

Question 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Question 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

Question 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

Question 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

Question 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

Question 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

Question 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

Question 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

Question 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

Question 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

Question 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

Question 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

Question 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

Question 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

Question 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

Question 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

Question 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

Question 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

Question 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

Executive Residence (POC – Worthington White)

Question 39: Please provide a table, corresponding to the projects on page 81 of last year's hearing record, showing the original appropriation for each project, the amount obligated to date, and the project status. This involves projects funded in fiscal year 2002.

Question 40: Please provide a listing of the 95 FTE positions at the Executive Residence requested for funding in FY 2004, showing the position title and the annual salary level.

Question 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

Question 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

Question 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

Question 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

Question 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

Question 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

Question 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

Question 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

President's Travel (POC - Rothley Howard)

Question 51: Please update the information on pages 89 through 94 of last year's hearing record concerning travel by the President and the First Lady by continuing data from the final entry of last year's record to the present time.

Presidential Staff Travel (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 52: Please provide a listing of staff travel not in support of the President for fiscal year 2002 and thus far in fiscal year 2003. For each entry, please include the name of traveler, the destination and purpose of trip, the number of days in travel status, and the trip cost.

Consulting Services (POC – Kathleen O'Halloran)

Question 53: Updating the information on page 115 of last year's hearing record, please provide actual and estimated amounts for consulting services for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Freedom Corps (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 54: Please provide EOP budgeted funding for the Freedom Corps for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

Question 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

Question 58: Please provide a listing of the staff in the USA Freedom Corps Office, showing the incumbent name and position. Please designate any detailees.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

Question 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

Question 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

Question 62: Are funds requested in the FY 2004 budget for this project?

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.

Question 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

Question 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

Question 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

Question 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

Question 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

Question 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

Question 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

Question 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staffyears and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

Historically Provided White House Office Positions (POC – Eric Lanman/Jon Laurich)

Question 74: Updating the information on page 235 of last year's hearing record, please provide a listing of historically provided White House Office positions.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

Question 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

Question 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

Unanticipated Needs (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Brett - if you are just counting "confirmed" please note that some of these folks were JUST RECESS appointed and were never fully confirmed. Also - there are DC ct of apls which may not have been an Article III court in the earlier years because there are other references in these books regarding dc municipal courts and police court -- I need to figure out when DC Circuit came into existence. I also did NOT Court of Customs & Patent Appeals and Court of Claims which became the Federal Circuit in 1982.

Right, there was one "rejected." But a few of the spaces are blank.
Question
is whether those folks were confirmed or not.

Brett, The attached information has been compiled from two different sources -- both are hand written documents so the spelling of names may not be completely accurate -- I have not had time to check against the typed cards. The differences in the books are one set only list those individuals appointed - the other set lists nominations - in some parts of the book on nominations it is not clear whether the "was sent" means to the WH or to the Senate - I have used that date for the "nominated" column. I will try to confirm the information through the card index in the morning. I need to go through another book for the information between 1801 and the 1905 entries. Sheila

Does the Judge need 5 minutes prior to brief the President?; Or, do you feel comfortable without one?

Thanks.

Did you see this quote in USA Today article?

"From the very beginning, the president has emphasized the need for a well-functioning ... federal judiciary," says Viet Dinh, assistant U.S. attorney general in the Office of Legal Policy. "That emphasis has not wavered."

Yes, Karl said we should meet with the Senators prior to the meeting.
But, David Hobbs said there may be votes on the Hill and if Senator Miller cancels then we should not initiate a meeting with only GOP Senators.

At this point I would have the Senators listed in the Sequence of going straight to their seats but insert a note of a possible meeting prior to the event.

I am so swamped and have not gotten to it yet. I have what went out last year and the basic out line of what it will be. My plan is to get it into staffing tonight - definitely. Just not sure when.

Brett,
If the numbers change, let me (and Anne) know and we can adjust.
I'd like to hear him deliver this in person -- do I need to be on a list, or can I just show up tomorrow?

*****KEY POINTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S REMARKS ON NATO AND CENTRAL EUROPEAN COUNTRIES*****

*The heroic nations of Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia have survived tyranny, won their liberty and earned their place among free nations. We urge all current members of NATO to welcome these new members as quickly as possible.

*Nearly two years ago, President Bush called upon all NATO allies to renew their mission and meet the great challenges of the world beyond Europe. And following the terrorist attacks of September 11th, NATO invoked its commitment to the collective defense for the first time in its history.

*In the battle of Afghanistan, nations from central and eastern Europe supplied soldiers, special forces and peacekeepers to help defeat the Taliban and bring freedom to the Afghan people.

*In the battle of Iraq, central and eastern European countries have stood with America and our Coalition to end a grave threat to peace, and to rid Iraq of a brutal regime.

*NATO must develop new military capabilities to meet the emerging dangers of a new era. We must help the people of the Balkans to become full partners in the progress of Europe. We welcome the commitment of Albania, Croatia and Macedonia to the values and principles of NATO, and will help them as they move forward with reform.

*We have work ahead in bringing order and security to Iraq, so the Iraqi people can build the institutions of freedom and provide an example of democracy to other Arab nations.

*Just as NATO has stood for the freedom of all of Europe, we must stand with people everywhere who strive for greater freedom, tolerance, development and opportunity, including those in the Middle East and Africa.

From New York Times:

All 10 of the committee's Republicans voted in her favor today while all 9 Democrats voted no. But Senator Arlen Specter, a Pennsylvania Republican, said he had not yet decided if he would vote for her confirmation when her nomination comes to the floor because he was troubled by her record.

So how many people were too bored to attend the sixth cloture vote? Which is to say, what was the tally?

Right now the possible "long list" seems to be Senators TBD, Counsel Al Gonzales, Attorney General John Ashcroft, Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson, Solicitor General Ted Olson, American Bar Association President A.P. Carlton, President of Hispanic National Bar Association Duard Bradshaw, former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, former Counsel Boyden Gray, and former Clinton and Carter Counsel Lloyd Cutler.

Can I give you a call around 6 to mop up any remaining details re: the judicial speech? If you're busy that's fine. I have a conference call at 5, but I am hoping to be off by 6. If you will not be around, let me know.
Thanks! -J

Any chance that the White House will give some sort of positive comment about Senator Cornyn and his desire to call this hearing, either before or after the hearing? Any chance someone from the WH (perhaps you) will be there? Thanks for any info!

All - This is the final NYT will run tomorrow. They refused to use the first part of the letter I submitted, insisting that it was the responsibility of the news dept to consider that for a correction (no indication that they will issue one). I did at least get them to add one sentence about Judge Gonzalez, for what it's worth.... Best, Monica

To the Editor:

Given the debate over Priscilla R. Owen's nomination to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals (news article, May 2), the most important point is that Justice Owen's record as a person, a lawyer and a judge demonstrates that she is well within the mainstream of American law. Justice Owen has been in the majority in 11 of the 14 parental-notice abortion cases that the Texas Supreme Court has decided. She has voted to allow the minor to obtain an abortion without parental notice in two cases and voted to remand to the trial court in two others, demonstrating that she does not have a result-oriented approach in these matters. Moreover, she has not questioned Roe v. Wade in her writings. Instead, she testified that as a lower-court judge, she would adhere to her duty to follow Roe. Alberto R. Gonzales, the White House counsel and a former Texas Supreme Court justice, has said Justice Owen is ``an outstanding jurist'' and will perform ``superbly as a federal appeals court judge.'' Her record has been distorted by some Senate Democrats and single-issue interest groups. Priscilla Owen will be an outstanding judge once confirmed.

Hope you thought the hearing was helpful. Just wanted to confirm -- is the President planning to mention Senator Cornyn or the hearing tomorrow?

no doubt afterwards (eg on Friday by President); will also try before. I plan to come.

Any chance that the White House will give some sort of positive comment about Senator Cornyn and his desire to call this hearing, either before or after the hearing? Any chance someone from the WH (perhaps you) will be there? Thanks for any info!

When you say "mixed" I assume you mean part political/part official.; You can get per diem for the official portion of your trip.; If you need guidance in how to figure out how much of it was official, ask WH Counsel and they will determine the percentage.

If we did your TA(s) already for the Asian outreach meetings, it probably gives you per diem for the whole trip.; If we did a political TA for you, it will give you no per diem.

Hope this is helpful.; I am taking off at 6 tonight to attend an event so let's talk tomorrow if you need help.; Thanks.; Kathy

Query: Does the "interminable delays as a result of lack of judges" and "too high a vacancy rate" still a persuasive talker? I notice the Dems (e.g., Daschle on the NewHour the other night) are pounding away on "120+ confirmed and only 2 not moving" and "120+ to 2, I'll stand by that record." I guess it just doesn't seem persuasive to me, given the number of confirmations that we now have secured, to say that courts are suffering.

Q Two questions about the President's judicial nominations. To what degree do you think people in America, citizens, are following the to-and-fro over this issue between Republicans and Democrats at the Capitol?

MR. FLEISCHER: I think, like a lot of issues that come before Washington -- issues, obviously, like the war I think the entire country pays attention to. But there's a whole series of issues that slices of America pay attention to. And I think when it comes to judicial issues, there are, indeed, a lot of Americans, a fairly large slice, who have a care about our constitutional system and about the judiciary being filled, because many people depend on courts for justice, and when they go to court they want to know that they won't have interminable delays as a result of a lack of judges sitting in the chairs, and too high a vacancy rate, which is the present condition, particularly in the circuit court.

So I do think this is one of those issues that many people do pay attention to. It's a good government issue. Failure by the Senate to ratify judges, to engage in filibuster against judges who have been nominated for more than two years, is just a failure to engage in a good government process. Every judicial nominee, in the President's judgment, deserves an up or down vote.

Second, I propose that Presidents submit a nomination to the Senate within 180 days of receiving notice of a federal court vacancy or intended retirement. In other words, we have a responsibility as well to make sure the judiciary is sound and whole. This will speed up the sometimes time-consuming process of obtaining recommendations and evaluations from home-state senators and representatives and governors and bar leaders, while leaving ample time for Presidents to vet and choose nominees of the highest quality.

Subject: Ari's Briefing

Query: Does the "interminable delays as a result of lack of judges" and "too high a vacancy rate" still a persuasive talker? I notice the Dems (e.g., Daschle on the NewHour the other night) are pounding away on "120+ confirmed and only 2 not moving" and "120+ to 2, I'll stand by that record." I guess it just doesn't seem persuasive to me, given the number of confirmations that we now have secured, to say that courts are suffering.

Q Two questions about the President's judicial nominations. To what degree do you think people in America, citizens, are following the to-and-fro over this issue between Republicans and Democrats at the Capitol?

MR. FLEISCHER: I think, like a lot of issues that come before Washington -- issues, obviously, like the war I think the entire country pays attention to. But there's a whole series of issues that slices of America pay attention to. And I think when it comes to judicial issues, there are, indeed, a lot of Americans, a fairly large slice, who have a care about our constitutional system and about the judiciary being filled, because many people depend on courts for justice, and when they go to court they want to know that they won't have interminable delays as a result of a lack of judges sitting in the chairs, and too high a vacancy rate, which is the present condition, particularly in the circuit court.

So I do think this is one of those issues that many people do pay attention to. It's a good government issue. Failure by the Senate to ratify judges, to engage in filibuster against judges who have been nominated for more than two years, is just a failure to engage in a good government process. Every judicial nominee, in the President's judgment, deserves an up or down vote.

Brett,

Bruce Cohen wanted to speak with someone about the Honeywell Motorola case that Campbell handled. The issue was about the timing of his production of the report on contamination of the water table in this superfund case. One of the state assistant AGs complained about it. Are you familiar with this issue? Is this an issue we want to let Campbell discuss with him?

Subject: WH comment on the hearing, on Senator Cornyn

Any chance that the White House will give some sort of positive comment about Senator Cornyn and his desire to call this hearing, either before or after the hearing? Any chance someone from the WH (perhaps you) will be there? Thanks for any info!

Thanks for all the great help today. Little crazy with a speech, event planning, briefing paper, invite coordination, statement by the President, Executive order, online chat, web video, background press briefing, and the like -- all when Senate was still holding judicial votes during the day. Thanks again.

Do you have a bio?

Brett M. Kavanaugh

Since January 2001, Brett Kavanaugh has served as Associate Counsel to President Bush in the office of Judge Alberto Gonzales, Counsel to the President.

Mr. Kavanaugh graduated from Yale College in 1987 and from Yale Law School in 1990. He clerked for Judge Walter Stapleton on the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and for Judge Alex Kozinski on the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. He worked in 1992-93 as an attorney in the Office of Solicitor General at the Department of Justice. Mr. Kavanaugh clerked for Justice Anthony M. Kennedy on the Supreme Court of the United States in 1993-94. After his clerkship with Justice Kennedy, Mr. Kavanaugh worked for the Office of Independent Counsel Kenneth W. Starr from 1994 to 1997 and again in 1998. Mr. Kavanaugh was a partner in the Washington office of Kirkland & Ellis from 1997 to 1998 and from 1999 to January 2001.

REQUEST: White House Briefing for the Corporate Council on Africa and Liberty Education Forum

BACKGROUND: Corporate Council on Africa:

The Corporate Council on Africa (CCA), established in 1992, is at the forefront of strengthening and facilitating the commercial relationship between the United States and the African continent. CCA works closely with governments, multilateral groups and business to improve the African continent's trade and investment climate, and to raise the profile of Africa in the US business community.

CCA programs are designed to bring together potential business partners and raise Africa's investment profile in the US by developing critical contacts and business relationships and providing a forum for the exchange of information and ideas.

Liberty Education Forum

Liberty Education Forum (LEF) was originally established to provide a non-partisan education and research component to complement the work of the Log Cabin Republicans. But with a full-scale launching on July 21, 2001, the Liberty Education Forum is a brand new educational think tank - based in Washington, D.C. - that is dedicated to new ideas and new directions for the gay community, with a centrist approach. The mission of the Liberty Education Forum is to work toward achieving individual freedom and fairness for gay Americans by applying the principles of individual rights, individual responsibilities, free markets and limited government.

The Log Cabin Republicans are a part of the White House Judicial Coalition as well as the AIDS Coalition.

Subject: Feinstein quote on Kuhl

From AP and the LA Times, May 9, 2003:
Democrats said today that they have made no decision about a filibuster in the full Senate.
"We have two filibusters going. Maybe that's enough," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein
(D-Calif.).

Mosman selected for federal judgeship

05/09/03

The Oregonian

JIM BARNETT

WASHINGTON -- The White House on Thursday nominated U.S. Attorney Michael Mosman for a federal judgeship in Oregon, ending suspense but not questions over its choice to fill the 3-year-old vacancy.

Mosman, 46, has been considered the top candidate since January, when he was selected as one of three contenders by U.S. Sen. Gordon Smith, R-Ore. Next, Mosman must be confirmed by the Senate before taking the lifetime appointment.

"He has done an outstanding job, and he will be a credit to the federal bench," Smith said.

Law enforcement and crime victims' groups support the nomination, but Mosman has had to address questions about his views on gay rights and abortion that grew out of his service as a Supreme Court clerk in 1986.

Mosman met with political leaders and activists in recent weeks to allay concerns. On Wednesday, he wrote a letter assuring Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., that he would abide by the precedent of Roe v. Wade, the 1973 case that established the right to abortion.

"Indeed, in my view, it is wholly inappropriate and inconsistent with the judicial oath to uphold the Constitution for district judges to depart from precedents of higher courts," Mosman said in the letter, provided by Wyden's office. "Roe v. Wade is settled law."

Wyden has endorsed Mosman, and gay rights groups have pledged neutrality. But abortion rights advocates said they will continue to study Mosman's record after learning of a 1998 interview in which Mosman said he would "trim back" the Roe v. Wade decision.

"I'm not going to take his word on it," said Caroline Fitchett, executive director of Oregon Nalal. "I'm going to take his past actions. We're going to continue our legal research because we want to make sure he's not part of Bush's court-packing strategy."

Nalal's national office in Washington plans to release a report today showing that appellate judges appointed by Republican presidents are four times more likely to issue opinions against abortion rights than judges named by Democrats.

While many nominees of President Bush have strong anti-abortion records, "these same nominees argue that their anti-choice records are irrelevant because they will follow the 'settled law' of Roe v. Wade," the report concludes.

Josh Kardon, chief of staff to Wyden, said the senator would continue his support despite recent disclosures of Mosman's views on abortion rights, which are grounded in privacy rights under the due process clause of the Constitution.

"President Bush only appoints anti-abortion candidates to the federal bench, so there's no surprise here regarding Mr. Mosman's personal views," Kardon said. "The question for Senator Wyden is whether Mr. Mosman is a far-right activist like so many other Bush appointees. There is no record that suggests Mr. Mosman would seek to overturn decades of established law."

Public scrutiny heightened in March, when Basic Rights Oregon publicized "bench memos" Mosman wrote in 1986 as a clerk to Justice Lewis Powell, urging him to cast his tie-breaking vote to uphold Georgia's anti-sodomy law.

In the memos, Mosman warns Powell against expanding the reach of the due process clause, arguing that society's history and tradition "indicate that homosexual sodomy does not fit within the right of privacy."

REV_00117837

In recent interviews with advocacy groups, Wyden and the editorial board of The Oregonian, Mosman has said that his opinions were purely legal and did not reflect a personal prejudice.

"I'd like to do what I can in any appropriate setting to repudiate the idea that I have anti-gay views," Mosman told The Oregonian editorial board on April 28.

Gay rights groups consider the 1986 decision in Bowers v. Hardwick as a major setback for their cause. Mosman's role in the episode was chronicled in the book "Courting Justice: Gay Men and Lesbians v. the Supreme Court" by Joyce Murdoch and Deb Price.

Mosman discussed his views on abortion rights in a 1998 interview with Murdoch, who provided her verbatim notes to The Oregonian. Mosman told Murdoch he would vote to cut back the Roe v. Wade decision because the due-process basis of the decision was weak.

"I think Roe v. Wade is wrongly decided," Mosman said in the interview. "So I'd trim that back."

Fitchett said the 1998 statement alone would not prompt abortion rights groups to oppose Mosman. But if Naral finds other indications that Mosman would rule against abortion rights, its national office might try to block him, she said.

"We're looking at all of them, not just Mosman," she said. "We're fighting what we see as a national strategy."

Wyden's support is crucial to getting Mosman through the politicized confirmation process. While dozens of Bush nominees have cleared the Senate, Democrats have blocked some they believe would follow conservative ideals rather than constitutional precedents.

A native of Eugene, Mosman grew up in Lewiston, Idaho, and received his law degree from Brigham Young University. He joined the U.S. attorney's office in Portland in 1988 and was named as its leader in August 2001.

Mosman, who lives in West Linn, is a Republican and has voted regularly, according to state registration records. He would replace U.S. District Judge Robert E. Jones, who took senior status in 2000.

This morning, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist made the below statement on the Senate Floor proposing a rules change on the judicial nominations process. Also, attached is a link to the Matt Drudge story.

Mr. President:

With regret but determination, and along with my Senate colleague, I introduce today a resolution to amend the Senate Rules. This amendment will change the way the Senate concludes debate on Presidential nominees. No longer will it be necessary to overcome a 60 vote barrier before Senators can exercise their power to consent to a nomination.

Five months into the 108th Congress, we confront multiple filibusters of highly qualified and intellectually superior judicial nominees, filibusters that are unfair to the nominees, unfair to the President, and unfair to the majority of Senators who stand ready to confirm them. I fully respect and honor the views of any Senator who differs with my assessment on the quality of these nominations, and think if he or she finds those nominees unfit for any reason, they should vote to reject. Because they have chosen to filibuster, they deny the Senate and each Senator the right to vote at all.

The remedy, Mr. President, is filibuster reform. Over time, many Democrats as well as many Republicans have proposed changes to introduce greater fairness in the Senate rules, and it is to those proposals I have looked in crafting this resolution.

Mr. President, my proposal is similar to S. Res. 85, introduced in March by my distinguished Democratic colleague from Georgia, Senator Zell Miller. It also tracks a recommendation offered in 1995 by the distinguished Democratic Senators from Iowa and Connecticut, Tom Harkin and Joe Lieberman. Both the Harkin-Lieberman and Miller resolutions provide for declining cloture requirements of 60, 57, 54, and 51 on successive cloture motions. They represent a wholesale reform of the cloture rule, applying to every debatable proposition.

My resolution, by contrast, is more narrowly tailored to respond to the problem at hand. It applies to nominations alone, and leaves the rest of Rule XXII unamended. It addresses only a defect that needs repair.

There are other differences, however minor, from these other cloture reform efforts. Unlike those proposals, mine would not allow a cloture motion to be filed until a nomination has been pending before the Senate for at least 12 hours. This provision tracks language that the distinguished Democratic Leader inserted in S. Res. 8, the power sharing resolution he introduced in the last Congress. I share his purpose to ensure there exists an adequate foundation of debate before cloture can be sought.

My resolution also provides for a step below the constitutional majority of 51 votes on the fourth cloture attempt. Under my proposal, further cloture motions will require a majority of all Senators present and voting. This provision is included in response to colleagues who believe that supermajority voting requirements on nominations are unconstitutional. If 95 Senators are present, a 51 vote threshold is still a supermajority.

Cloture by a majority of Senators present and voting has deep historical roots among Senate Democrats. In past years, such a change was offered by eminent and distinguished Senators such as Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Paul Douglas of Illinois, and Wayne Morse of Oregon, and these Senators proposed to reach all Senate debate, not just nominations.

Under these new procedures, cloture cannot be precipitously invoked. Not only is there a 12 hour waiting period, the resolution tracks a provision from the Harkin-Lieberman and Miller initiatives that one cloture motion cannot be filed until disposition of a prior cloture vote. This is contrary to the present operation of Rule XXII, which permits multiple cloture motions to be advanced without waiting for the outcome of a cloture motion previously filed. Between the time a nomination is brought to the floor and the moment it can be confirmed by a simple majority vote, the elapsed time would be 13 session days.

Mr. President, I have stated that I regret having to introduce this resolution.

The right to debate is not unlimited but it is precious and important. My first vote as a Senator was to table the Harkin-Lieberman resolution in 1995, even though I was a freshman in a newly elected majority and the cloture amendment they proposed would have advantaged our party. By contrast, nine Democratic Senators now sitting voted in favor of the sweeping Harkin-Lieberman reform. Will they now support this narrow remedy?

I was presiding when the distinguished Democratic Senator from West Virginia, Robert C. Byrd took to the floor to contend that Harkin-Lieberman was unnecessary because it was primarily aimed at controlling filibusters on motions to proceed. No need to change the rules, said the Senator, because a Leader could avoid such filibusters by offering non-debatable motions in the Morning Hour. The Senator did not argue the absence of a problem, but rather the presence of an alternative solution, a safety valve, so further limiting of debate was not required.

I was persuaded by his logic. I opposed then, and would oppose now, a comprehensive change in rules governing Senate debate.

In the case of nominations, Mr. President, the safety valve of an alternative solution is not as readily at hand. Under existing cloture rules, the filibuster of a nomination is the last word and it is fatal.

Filibustering nominations is a relatively new phenomenon, even as to nominees for the Executive Branch, and it has emerged in this Congress as a particular problem relative to federal judges. Prior to this year, the record number of cloture votes on any nominee was three, and on a judicial nominee, the record was two. Already, we have had six cloture votes on the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, two cloture votes on the nomination of Priscilla Owen to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and threats from the minority of additional filibusters on other nominees. We have entered upon a new era, damaging to the Senate as an institution, where a majority will be denied its right to consent to a nomination because a minority will filibuster to hold that nomination hostage. The need to reform the filibuster on nominations is obvious and it is now urgent.

Many will contend that the Senate should not rubber stamp Presidential appointments. I fully concur. The Senate's responsibility under Article II to advise and consent is critical to maintaining the checks and balances of our constitutional system. For reasons sufficient unto itself, the Senate may reject any nominee. Brought forward to a vote, the Supreme Court nominations of Clement Haynsworth, G. Harrold Carswell, and Robert Bork all failed on the Senate floor, and not by filibuster. Scholars may argue whether these nominees should have been turned aside, but no one can dispute the Senate's right to reject them. The Senate's constitutional role must never be diminished.

In the case of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen, it is plain that the votes to confirm are present. But the votes to confirm cannot be taken, because these debates have been tainted by filibuster. Without filibuster reform, a disciplined minority can cast an ever lengthening shadow over the confirmation process. Through reform, we will respect the right of all Senators to act upon a nomination brought to the floor. In doing this, we will strengthen the Senate as an institution and enhance its constitutional purpose.

Mr. President, it is unfortunate we have come to this point. I would have far preferred that nominations be given a floor vote after full and free debate.

As the filibuster strategy emerged, I tried many times without success to secure agreements to vote at a time certain. Wanting to respect minority rights and, indeed, the rights of all Senators, I withheld filing for cloture until the Estrada nomination had been pending for 13 session days.

But just as I act with regret, I act with determination. For almost all our nation's history, filibustering nominations was unheard of and unknown. It was unknown when the cloture rule was adopted in 1917. It was unknown when the rule was extended to nominations in 1949. The renowned filibusters of the 1950's and 1960's never involved filibustering a judge.

Senator Richard Russell of Georgia led those filibusters, but even in the face of growing judicial activism, neither he nor his allies ever filibustered a judge. Obviously, some respected traditions have changed.

Senate rules are not immutable. Senate norms have altered over time,
and our rules have changed in response. The initial cloture rule of 1917 was a reaction to cumulative and growing consternation over years of uncontrolled filibusters. The 1949 expansion reflected frustration that the original rule was too narrow, and applied only to pending measures. In 1959 and 1975, the rule was amended because the hurdle for cloture was thought to be too high. In 1979, Senator Byrd successfully amended the rule to eliminate the abuse of the post-cloture filibuster.

Before the practice of filibustering nominations takes deeper root, and damages the Senate even more, it is time to amend our rules again. I act now as a first step to ensure we have a confirmation process that is fair to nominees, fair to the President, and fair to all Senators. If we achieve that, we will also be fair to the American people.

9/11 PAYOUT SUITS GET TOSSED OUT

By JOHN LEHMANN

May 9, 2003 -- A federal judge yesterday tossed out lawsuits by families of high-earning Sept. 11 victims who claimed the compensation fund's special master, Kenneth Feinberg, was "short-changing" them by capping payouts at $6 million.

Judge Alvin Hellerstein ruled that Feinberg's policies in setting awards were "reasonable and proper" and pointed out Congress had given him "considerable discretion."

The families of 10 people killed at the World Trade Center filed three separate lawsuits in Manhattan federal court.

They claimed Feinberg was acting in an "arbitrary and capricious" manner by failing to fairly compensate victims who were among America's highest 2 percent of income earners.

At a hearing, lawyers for the families claimed the special master backed away from his own confidential study that predicted payouts of as much as $24.5 million by imposing a de facto cap of about $6 million.

But Hellerstein said in his 43-page ruling that Congress invested the Department of Justice and the special master with discretion to decide how to account for "individual circumstances."

He said the fund had been set up to provide "some measure of recompense for the irreparable loss of the thousands who died and were injured."

It was not meant to replicate damages that may be awarded by courts in wrongful-death actions, he said.

The president shrewdly alluded to the fact that Democratic presidents have also had their problems getting nominees confirmed. "During the administration of former Presidents Bush and Clinton," Mr. Bush said, "many appeals court nominees never received votes. And today the situation is worse than ever, making the need for reform greater than ever."

I gather the President is doing a judges event tomorrow. It's probably too late for me to get on the list for this one, but in the future, if you think of it as similar things are planned, I'd love to be included, if only to stay in contact with the issues, the players, and the WH. (My partner, George Jones, a Dem, is going -- I suppose because he's the President of the D.C. Bar.) If there's some mechanism for notifying the Social Office of my interest, I'd be much obliged if you'd let them know.

Hope all is going well. I'll catch up with you soon.

Brad

Kate,

Thank you for your ongoing assistance with this. I attach below the inside text of the June 30th AIPAC invitation for final review and approval. Per our conversation yesterday, I have updated the title of the event. I would also love to be able to include some biographical information on Ken Mehlman - please advise if this is permissible.

If possible, I would love to hear back from you by the end of the day today. Again, thank you for your help.

Dear Kate,

I attach below the text of the invitation for AIPAC's Baltimore kick-off event with Ken Mehlman on June 30, 2003 for approval by your office. In addition to the attached, I will include the resume information you shared with me for Ken and for Congressman Hoyer, as well as an insert with the Host Committee (currently in formation). It is my hope to send the invitation to print on Monday, May 5th. Please advise if this is an unrealistic timeline based on your schedule.

I very much appreciate your assistance with this. Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Gay GOP Group Readies for 2004 Elections
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A gay Republicans group says it is trying to get beyond the flap over Sen. Rick Santorum's derogatory remarks about homosexual behavior, yet it is that very controversy that helped double the attendance at its annual convention.

Comments by the conservative Republican from Pennsylvania, the GOP takeover of the Senate last year and the upcoming presidential race were the main topics that lured more than 200 people to the Log Cabin Republicans' annual convention, which ends here Saturday night. That's more than twice the attendance of last year's meeting.

Santorum has been a center of attention since an April 7 interview with The Associated Press in which he brought up a pending Supreme Court case over a Texas sodomy law and likened gay behavior to incest and polygamy. "It was a reminder to all that we had work to do," Patrick Guerriero, director of the group, said Saturday about the increased attendance.

On Friday, about 200 gay members of the GOP met for more than an hour with three White House officials at the Eisenhower Executive Office Building - Joseph O'Neill, the White House AIDS czar, Brett Kavanaugh, associate White House counsel, and Holly Kuzmich, associate director of the White House domestic policy council.

Ken Lisaius, a White House spokesman, downplayed the meeting, saying it was one of many policy meetings requested by groups looking for ways to further the president's initiatives. The group talked about AIDS, education and judicial nominees for the federal bench, he said.

Guerriero said the Bush administration has invited gay Republicans to discussions about AIDS, judicial nominations and other policy issues. Still, the Log Cabin Republicans believe the White House could have distanced itself further from the Santorum controversy.

"If we were completely satisfied that the Republican Party was as inclusive as we wished, we would cease to exist," Guerriero said. "It's obvious that the issue of inclusiveness in the Republican Party is going to be a major issue."

An estimated 1 million gay and lesbian Americans voted for President Bush in 2000, he said. The gay Republicans attending the annual convention, complete with get-out-the-vote workshops and congressional briefings, are convinced that gays and lesbians, if they don't vote for Bush, could be partly responsible for "losing the White House," he said.

Class-action lawsuits trample over state lines, laws

By STANTON D. ANDERSON

Texas is a fiercely independent state that doesn't like anyone telling it what to do. But did you know that a judge from New York (or any other state) can make a decision that effectively overrides the sovereign laws of Texas? One might call this "messing with Texas."

If a Texas resident is injured in a car accident in New York and sues for damages, the case involving parties from two different states can be heard by a federal court. But under the current system, if thousands of people from around the country are injured by a product and sue for damages in a class-action lawsuit, the case likely cannot be heard by a federal court. Does this make any sense? Why should you care?

You should care because this quirk in the civil justice system means that if you are part of a class of consumers injured by a product, your rights could be determined by a state court judge anywhere in the country. That judge does not have to take into consideration any other state's laws nor how any verdict or settlement will affect consumers in those other states. It is this current class-action system that offends basic federalism principles -- where a judge elected by the voters of one county in one state will dictate the laws of residents of other states.

Consider a recent national class-action lawsuit against State Farm involving class members, 4.7 million of them, from all 50 states. Because the Illinois trial judge decided to apply Illinois law to each class member, the case resulted in a $1.18 billion verdict against the insurer for using nonoriginal equipment manufacturers' parts or "generic parts" to fix accident-damaged vehicles. The decision means that State Farm can no longer use these parts anywhere in the country, even though they have been certified to be comparable to manufacturers' original parts and in some cases are even made by the same manufacturer. Consumer activists and most states encourage their use and Massachusetts and Hawaii require these parts be made available to consumers because they hold down the price of all replacement parts and, thus, auto insurance premiums. Several states, including North Carolina, Arkansas, Nevada and Colorado have filed briefs objecting to the decision. Texas should be equally appalled.

Allowing national class-action lawsuits to be heard in state courts has also encouraged rampant venue shopping by plaintiffs' lawyers in places such as Madison County, Ill., (the site of the State Farm case). That county now attracts large numbers of class actions wildly inconsistent with its relatively small population and minimal business activity, a condition replicated in other counties around the nation. The cozy relationships between plaintiffs' lawyers and judges in some of these state courts have led to the approval of class-action settlements that provide coupons or something else of little value to consumers and millions of dollars to the lawyers.

Take for example, a class-action lawsuit filed in California that accused more than 50 well-known computer manufacturers and distributors of misrepresenting the screen size of their computer monitors. Under the settlement agreement, it was the class members who came up short. The nationwide class of an estimated 40 million consumers received $13 rebates on new computers and monitors or $6 in cash. The lawyers received almost $6 million in legal fees.

The advocacy group Public Citizen objected to this settlement, writing, "the settlement can either be viewed as a cheap resolution of class members' valuable claims or else a convenient vehicle for churning essentially worthless claims into a gargantuan fee of $5.8 million for the plaintiffs' attorneys."

The Framers of our Constitution foresaw this potential affront to our federalism principles and inserted the concept of "diversity jurisdiction" in Article III of the Constitution. As a result, major disputes between citizens of different states may be heard in a neutral federal court before a judge nominated by the president of the United States and confirmed by the Senate. Unfortunately, a glitch in our current federal diversity jurisdiction statute prevents federal courts from hearing most large, interstate class actions. This occurs in spite of the fact that these cases are exactly the kind that the Framers had in mind, since class actions involve more citizens in more states, more money and more interstate commerce ramifications than any other type of civil litigation.

There is a solution to this problem. The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 will help curb many of the abuses in the current class-action system by allowing federal courts to more easily hear national class-action lawsuits involving plaintiffs and defendants from different states. The legislation also contains a "Class Action Plaintiffs' Bill of Rights" that:

???Ensures that judges review the fairness of proposed settlements that provide only coupons to the plaintiffs.

???Prevents higher settlement payments to plaintiffs recruited to file the lawsuit.

???Bans settlements that actually impose costs on class members.

???Requires that all settlement notices be written in "plain English."

Congress has been considering class-action reform legislation for several years. During that time, there have been 10 congressional hearings in the House and the Senate, including one before the Senate Judiciary Committee last July. It was that hearing that helped convince Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., that something had to be done. Feinstein and four other Democrats have joined to support the Senate bill. Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, is a co-sponsor of the legislation and voted to report the measure out of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Class-action lawsuits were designed to protect consumers, and federal courts were designed to hear cases involving plaintiffs and defendants from different states. It is time to fix the class-action lawsuit system. The U.S. Senate should pass the Class Action Fairness Act. It's one sure way to keep other states from messing with Texas.

Anderson is executive vice president and chief legal officer of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

FYI, another Register editorial on Pryor(it ran today), plus two Sunday Insight pieces that ran yesterday:
(written by me)

The truth about Pryor is, he's well qualified
05/12/03

ALMOST EACH week since President George W. Bush nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor for a seat on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, leftist groups have thrown a new and scurrilous kind of character assassination at Mr. Pryor.

<<...OLE_Obj...>> Differing opinions are one thing, but when opponents resort to cheap shots and rank inaccuracies, the facts demand to be laid bare.

The latest attack was led last week by Martin Luther King III, who ignored wide black support for Mr. Pryor within Alabama to make a ludicrous charge that the AG "cannot comprehend the continuing need for voting rights protections for African-Americans in the Deep South, and is unlikely to fairly evaluate and firmly enforce the provisions of the Voting Rights Act in cases that come before him."

That's hogwash. As was noted in yesterday's Register Insight section by former assistant U.S. Attorney Willie Huntley, a Mobile African-American, Mr. Pryor has actually defended black interests, under the Voting Rights Act, against attack from plaintiffs of Mr. Pryor's own Republican Party. Mr. Pryor has complained of just one section of the act that requires "pre-clearance" from Justice Department bureaucrats for voting changes as minor as moving polling places from one street corner to the next. Far from being extreme, Mr. Pryor's position is in line with the official stance taken by Georgia Attorney General Thurbert Baker, a black Democrat, in a case now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court. Mr. Baker wrote in his brief that the pre-clearance provision is "a grave intrusion into the authority of the states."

News reports also consistently mischaracterize Mr. Pryor as having "compared" or "equated" homosexual sex with bestiality and incest. He did neither.

What he has written is that extending the limited right to privacy now recognized in the Constitution to cover all private consensual acts in the home, as is effectively requested by plaintiffs seeking to overthrow a Texas anti-sodomy statute, could have the effect of providing a constitutional right for other sexual practices such as "prostitution .... bestiality ... and even incest."

Mr. Pryor's position is nothing more than the current law of the land, as explained in a still-standing 1986 Supreme Court precedent that specifically included "incest" as one of the acts that would be decriminalized if such a bogus constitutional right were invented by judicial fiat.

In fact, one of the liberal stalwarts of the current Supreme Court, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, made the same argument back in 1977, writing that "prostitution as a consensual act between adults is arguably within the zone of privacy protected by recent constitutional decisions."

Similarly, liberal activists have targeted Mr. Pryor for opposing the federal Violence Against Women Act. But all he did was argue against one small provision that puts the act of rape under the legal category of -- amazingly -- interstate commerce. Again, the Supreme Court upheld Mr. Pryor's position. And his record in protecting women from violence is so strong that Penelope House, a battered women's shelter, has honored him in its Hall of Fame.

Bill Pryor is a principled public servant with an impressive resum? and a brilliant legal mind. The false attacks ought to be ignored, and he should be confirmed to the federal bench.

How Pryor would interpret the Constitution is questionable Harmful 'states' rights' advocate

he case against Alabama Attorney General William Pryor's nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 11th Circuit is a simple one: Despite the denials of his friends and admirers, Pryor has consistently used the power of his office to try to change the law to suit his ideology.

In doing so, he has jeopardized the rights of Alabamians and all Americans. Giving him a lifetime seat on the federal appeals court would further jeopardize those rights.

Pryor's devotion to a "states' rights" philosophy has already contributed to a weakening of federal protections for those most in need. In reviewing his record in the office of the attorney general and his extensive speeches and writings, even a casual observer must conclude that, for William Pryor, his states' rights ideology conquers all.

Over the past half-dozen years, Pryor has urged the Supreme Court - often in cases where Alabama's interests were not at stake - to advance the states' rights interpretation of the Constitution. In the process, he has helped to weaken civil rights protections for millions of Americans. Alabama's argument before the court in Garrett vs. Alabama was that key remedies provided in the Americans With Disabilities Act do not apply to state employees, because the Constitution shields states from such suits. Although it was based on the once-discredited states' rights interpretation of the Constitution, Alabama won the case, effectively ending protections against age discrimination for millions of state employees across the country.

In another case, Pryor successfully argued that congressional efforts to end age discrimination - and provide a remedy for victims of such discrimination - were not appropriate with respect to state employees. Pushing this same states' rights philosophy, Pryor has filed a brief before the U.S. Supreme Court supporting the state of Nevada in a case that would leave state employees with no real recourse for violations of the Family and Medical Leave Act. The outcome of this case is pending. Although Pryor has praised the Supreme Court's rulings in favor of states' rights, he has been critical when his interpretation of the Constitution has been rebuked.

For instance, the court rejected as "cruel and unusual punishment" Alabama prison guards' practice of handcuffing a prisoner to a hitching post and denying him clothing, water and even bathroom breaks. Pryor had defended these barbarous actions, and complained that the high court was using "its own subjective views on appropriate methods of prison discipline."

Yet interpreting the Constitution and enforcing its protections is exactly what the Supreme Court is supposed to do.

As a veteran observer of judicial nomination hearings, I can recall more than one of President Bush's nominees grudgingly asserting to a panel of senators that he or she would follow the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling, because it was "the law of the land." But Bill Pryor has called the ruling "the worst abomination of constitutional law in our history." Indeed, at an April 1997 rally, he decried the decades-old precedent of Roe. He said, "I will never forget Jan. 22, 1973, the day seven members of our highest court ripped the Constitution."

In a survey of state attorneys general on the issue, Pryor said, "Abortion is murder and Roe vs. Wade is an abominable decision." He opposes abortion even in cases of rape or incest.

One of Pryor's most memorable efforts to move the law closer to his ideology is seen through Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore's crusade to defy a federal court order and display the Ten Commandments in his courtroom and on other state property. Moore parlayed his refusal to remove such a display - even after a court ordered him to do so - into a successful campaign for the state's top judgeship.

In Montgomery, he again displayed his Ten Commandments, this time on a granite monument in the rotunda of the Alabama Judicial Building. Pryor has backed Judge Moore, even though the judge's actions plainly violate the Constitution's requirement of the separation of church and state. Bill Pryor, like Roy Moore, fails to understand the purpose of the "Establishment clause" of the Constitution. It is not hostility to people of faith, but respect for the beliefs of every person that underpins the separation of church and state, which Pryor seems to hold in such low regard.

Out of respect for freedom of conscience, government officials are prevented from using their power to promote specific religious beliefs. Pryor flouts the spirit of the Establishment Clause. Speaking at a rally in support of Judge Moore in 1997, he said, "God has chosen, through his son Jesus Christ, this time and this place for all Christians to save our country and save our courts."

His efforts to push the law in the direction of his own ideology have also damaged the interests of the people of Alabama. In fact, Pryor's ideology may have cost the people of Alabama millions in the settlement from the suit by state attorneys general against tobacco companies.

According to Mississippi Attorney General Mike Moore, Pryor fought against his fellow state negotiators in talks with tobacco companies. "But tobacco lobbyists saw him as a friend. He was their friend," Mike Moore later told the Decatur Daily News. "He defended them at all costs."

In the end, Alabama did not receive as generous a settlement from the litigation as other states, even though it had lost just as much revenue in health costs for tobacco-related disease and death. Moore says that this is because Pryor "did a better job of defending the tobacco companies than their own defense attorneys."

Pryor also seems to believe it is acceptable to imprison gay men and lesbians for expressing their own human sexuality in the privacy of their homes. He filed a brief in the Supreme Court asking the Court to uphold the Texas "Homosexual Conduct Law," under which two gay men were arrested and jailed for engaging in private consensual sex.

In his brief, Pryor presaged the recent comments of Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, equating for the purposes of legal analysis the consensual acts between two people of the same gender with "prostitution, adultery, necrophilia, bestiality, possession of child pornography and even incest and pedophilia."

As the Tuscaloosa News editorialized, "It is a long step from sanctioning, or even tolerating, consensual private activity between two adults to permitting abusive crimes such as pedophilia. The law is perfectly capable of drawing such distinctions in theory and in practice."

It is disturbing that Pryor apparently cannot draw those distinctions. These are just some of the reasons why his confirmation would pose a threat to the rights of the Americans who seek justice every year in the 11th Circuit. The federal appeals court is almost always the last best chance for justice for the citizens of Alabama, Florida and Georgia, considering that the Supreme Court hears fewer than 90 cases each year. Pryor is far from being, as one supporter stated, "utterly fair and demonstrably nonpartisan." He has demonstrated that he uses his position to remake the law in order to suit his extreme ideological beliefs. For these reasons, he is, as the Atlanta Constitution wrote recently, "unfit to judge."

Civil rights guardian, outstanding nominee

Special to the Register

Willie Huntley is a former assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Alabama. An African-American, he now has a private law practice in Mobile. 8Pryor initiated T he Washington-headquartered, liberal witch-hunt against President Bush's federal judicial nominees has targeted its next victim, and it is one of our own: Bill Pryor, the attorney general of Alabama.

Among those leading the charge against Pryor is the mis-named group People For the American Way. This should be no surprise; PFAW has led vicious attacks against Attorney General John Ashcroft, Justice Clarence Thomas, Priscilla Owen, Miguel Estrada and numerous other Republican nominees. PFAW is a radical leftist group that has supported broad court protection for child pornography, burning the American flag, and publicly funded art portraying the Virgin Mary splattered with elephant dung. Most recently, PFAW helped coordinate protests against the war in Iraq - the war in which some Alabamians gave their lives for their country.

PFAW is funded by the pornography industry and Hollywood radicals, including Playboy magazine, the Screen Actors Guild, and the Center for Alternative Media & Culture. (And they call Bill Pryor an extremist.) PFAW asserts that Pryor's appointment would devastate civil rights. What its people don't say is that after about 100 years of inaction by other leaders, Bill Pryor led a coalition that included the NAACP to rid the Alabama Constitution of its racist ban on inter-racial marriage.

Pryor then defended the repeal against a court challenge by a so-called Confederate heritage organization.

Our attorney general also took the side of the NAACP in successfully defending majority-minority voting districts - all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court - against a challenge by white Alabama Republicans.

Bill Pryor further opposed a white Republican redistricting proposal that would have hurt African-American voters. He did not back down to criticism from his own party - not one inch.

He then played a key role in the successful prosecution of former Ku Klux Klansmen Bobby Frank Cherry and Thomas Blanton Jr. for the 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church in Birmingham. In fact, he will personally argue to uphold Blanton's murder conviction before the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals later this month.

Pryor started a mentoring program for at-risk kids, and regularly goes to Montgomery public schools to teach African-American kids to read.

Because Bill Pryor has a civil rights record that very few can equal, it is no wonder that African-American leaders who know and have worked with him - like Artur Davis, Joe Reed, Cleo Thomas and Alvin Holmes - support his nomination to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Ignoring Pryor's defense of voting rights for African-Americans, PFAW charges that he opposes the landmark Voting Rights Act. The truth is, he has dutifully enforced all of the Voting Rights Act every time a case has come up. Pryor has simply stated that a procedural part of the Voting Rights Act - Section 5 - has problems that Congress should fix. Section 5 requires federal officials in Washington to approve even minor changes in voting practices that have nothing to do with discrimination.

For example, last year, Pryor issued an opinion that required a white replacement candidate for a deceased white state legislator to get Washington approval under Section 5 to use stickers to put his name on the ballot over the name of the deceased candidate.

Thurbert Baker, the African-American Democratic attorney general of Georgia, has voiced similar concerns about Section 5 before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Undeterred, PFAW and its allies also charge that Pryor believes in "states' rights" - their code words for racism. The truth is that he believes in the Constitution. He has fought to protect the state's treasury from lawsuits that would have taken our tax dollars away from the state - away from salaries for teachers and medical care for poor people. It is the job of an attorney general to defend his client - the state. In fact, the key Supreme Court case on defending a state from lawsuits was won not by Pryor, but by Democratic Attorney General Bob Butterworth of Florida.

Democratic attorneys general like Eliot Spitzer of New York, Jim Doyle of Wisconsin and others have all made the same arguments to defend their state budgets. I guess they are all "right-wing extremists," too.

PFAW and its allies have also attacked Pryor for being extremist on abortion rights. As a dedicated Roman Catholic, Bill Pryor loves kids and is against abortion, no doubt about it.

But even though he disagrees with abortion, he instructed Alabama's district attorneys to apply Alabama's partial-birth abortion law in a moderate way that was consistent with U.S. Supreme Court precedent. Again, he was criticized by Republicans; pro-life activists accused him of gutting the statute. Again, he didn't back down.

Not surprisingly, PFAW and its allies have attacked Pryor for supporting the display of the Ten Commandments in courthouses. But Pryor simply took the position that if a representation of the Ten Commandments can be carved into the wall of the U.S. Supreme Court's courtroom, it can be placed in an Alabama courtroom.

PFAW also has attacked Pryor for the position he took in the Alexander vs. Sandoval case, in which a person who didn't speak English sued to force Alabama to spend its money on printing driver's license tests in foreign languages. As broke as our state is, there are better things to spend our money on - like teaching kids to read English so they can take the test and read road signs, and also paving the roads for them to drive on. Pryor fought this attempt to drain our state budget, and the U.S. Supreme Court agreed with him.

The truth and the record show that Bill Pryor has fought for the civil rights and voting rights of African-Americans in Alabama when PFAW was nowhere to be found. Now that President Bush has nominated Pryor to a federal judgeship, PFAW assumes that it can come here and attack him.

I, for one, suggest that PFAW pack up its pro-pornography, flag-burning, anti-religious, attack-dog tactics and go back to Hollywood and Washington. We who actually know Bill Pryor support him 100 percent.

FYI, another Register editorial on Pryor(it ran today), plus two Sunday Insight pieces that ran yesterday:

(written by me)

The truth about Pryor is, he's well qualified

05/12/03  ALMOST EACH week since President George W. Bush nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor for a seat on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, leftist groups have thrown a new and scurrilous kind of character assassination at Mr. Pryor.

<<...OLE_Obj...>> &nbs p; Differ ing opinions are one thing, but when opponents resort to cheap shots and rank inaccuracies, the facts demand to be laid bare.

The latest attack was led last week by Martin Luther King III, who ignored wide black support for Mr. Pryor within Alabama to make a ludicrous charge that the AG "cannot comprehend the continuing need for voting rights protections for African-Americans in the Deep South, and is unlikely to fairly evaluate and firmly enforce the provisions of the Voting Rights Act in cases that come before him."

Tha t's hogwash. As was noted in yesterday's Register Insight section by former assistant U.S. Attorney Willie Huntley, a Mobile African-American, Mr. Pryor has actually defended black interests, under the Voting Rights Act, against attack from plaintiffs of Mr. Pryor's own Republican Party.

Mr. Pryor has complained of just one section of the act that requires "pre-clearance" from Justice Department bureaucrats for voting changes as minor as moving polling places from one street corner to the next.

Far from being extreme, Mr. Pryor's position is in line with the official stance taken by Georgia Attorney General Thurbert Baker, a black Democrat, in a case now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court. Mr. Baker wrote in his brief that the pre-clearance provision is "a grave intrusion into the authority of the states."

Does anyone in this office have primary responsibility for questions of, "Can expense X be paid out of White House funds"? If so, I have a small question to pass on to you, relating to reimbursement of employee expenses.

HUME: Let's concede that point. Presumably, you don't think these two should be filibustered endlessly and then blocked by a filibuster?
BREAUX: I think eventually we should vote on it, and I think eventually we will.
HUME: You think eventually they'll both get an up or down vote?

I sent you a few suggestions, but the bigger question to me is whether we continue to respond to every stray comment by the leadership and if so whether the letters should continue to go out over the Judge's signature. On balance, I think we should continue current practice, but perhaps it's worth the three of us having a conversation with Hobbs & Bartlett to make sure.

Thanks for calling me back. Just to make sure I understand our phone conversation correctly--

It is permissible to give to the NSC documents that list public campaign commitments Governor Bush made in their policy areas and to ask for a status report of those particular commitments. Secondly, we may ask for a list of public governing commitments and the status of those as well.

Is this accurate? Thanks for your guidance on this.

Please make clear to everyone there that our intention from the get-go was to invite any and all comers from OLP for the precise purpose of expressing President's and WH appreciation of the hard work. The problem was that Cabinet
Affairs does DOJ invites and does not usually make calls until 2-3 days before event. Meanwhile, Public Liaison handles outside groups and has to give more advance notice. Pub Liaison had called Fed Soc late last week and told them to round up 25-50 people. Fed Soc then stupidly called people in your office
and some Senate staffers instead of calling people on the outside. Sorry for confusion, but please make sure people in OLP and FBI unit understand they always were to be invited by us.

Gay GOP Group Readies for 2004 Elections
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A gay Republicans group says it is trying to get beyond the flap over Sen. Rick Santorum's derogatory remarks about homosexual behavior, yet it is that very controversy that helped double the attendance at its annual convention. Comments by the conservative Republican from Pennsylvania, the GOP takeover of the Senate last year and the upcoming presidential race were the main topics that lured more than 200 people to the Log Cabin Republicans' annual convention, which ends here Saturday night. That's more than twice the attendance of last year's meeting. Santorum has been a center of attention since an April 7 interview with The Associated Press in which he brought up a pending Supreme Court case over a Texas sodomy law and likened gay behavior to incest and polygamy. "It was a reminder to all that we had work to do," Patrick Guerriero, director of the group, said Saturday about the increased attendance. On Friday, about 200 gay members of the GOP met for more than an hour with three White House officials at the Eisenhower Executive Office Building - Joseph O'Neill, the White House AIDS czar, Brett Kavanaugh, associate White House counsel, and Holly Kuzmich, associate director of the White

REV_00118120

House domestic policy council.

Ken Lisaius, a White House spokesman, downplayed the meeting, saying it was one of many policy meetings requested by groups looking for ways to further the president's initiatives. The group talked about AIDS, education and judicial nominees for the federal bench, he said.

Guerriero said the Bush administration has invited gay Republicans to discussions about AIDS, judicial nominations and other policy issues.

Still, the Log Cabin Republicans believe the White House could have distanced itself further from the Santorum controversy.

"If we were completely satisfied that the Republican Party was as inclusive as we wished, we would cease to exist," Guerriero said. "It's obvious that the issue of inclusiveness in the Republican Party is going to be a major issue."

An estimated 1 million gay and lesbian Americans voted for President Bush in 2000, he said. The gay Republicans attending the annual convention, complete with get-out-the-vote workshops and congressional briefings, are convinced that gays and lesbians, if they don't vote for Bush, could be partly responsible for "losing the White House," he said.

"I mean, there are -- you know, the Democratic Party and the Senate particularly can be broken down to three groups. There's the leadership, which is very liberal and will oppose the President. There are the candidates who, of course, will never support the President. And then there's a small group of potential swing voters. They are very small. And it only takes one or two of them to make the difference."

Filibuster Again! And Again!
by Terry Eastland, for the Editors
05/19/2003, Volume 008, Issue 35

SIX TIMES NOW Senate Democrats have blocked a vote on Miguel Estrada's nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. And twice Senate Democrats have blocked a vote on Priscilla Owen's nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Republicans are outraged by the filibusters. And they are outrageous. But permit us to invite the Democrats to stay their stupid course: Filibuster again! And again!

Okay, if you're Miguel or Priscilla or Carolyn Kuhl, a Ninth Circuit nominee who may be the next to be filibustered, it's no fun watching Republicans move to cut off debate and then seeing Democrats again muster more than the 40 votes needed (a supermajority of 60 being necessary under Senate rules to end debate) to keep you from being voted on. Which is to say from being confirmed, since you know just as the rest of the world does that there is a Senate majority that includes the few sensible Democrats still remaining in the upper chamber, like Zell Miller of Georgia, who would say yes if only the roll were called.

But if the Democrats are going to persist in what Sen. Russell Feingold has conceded is "an extreme step," then by all means the nominees should allow, and the Republican Senate should create, opportunities for them to be extreme. Majority Leader Bill Frist: Keep calling those cloture votes. And you Democrats: Keep voting no.

Is there any better way to publicize the message about "Democratic obstruction on judges" (a principal Republican talking point) than by repeated votes by Senate minorities made up exclusively of Democrats that prevent Senate majorities from approving the president's nominees? Keep in mind that we're not talking here about less visible means of obstruction. We're not talking about what the Democratic-run Judiciary Committee did in 2001-02 --when it failed to hold, or unreasonably delayed, hearings, or when it held a hearing but declined to vote on the nominee. No, here we're talking about quite public blocking actions--recorded votes. If the Democrats keep committing them, the Republicans should gleefully advertise them throughout the country.

Right now, the Republicans are trying to find ways to fix "the broken confirmation process" (another Republican talking point). Some Republicans have suggested that the president should sue filibustering Democrats on account of the Appointments Clause injury he is suffering by not having his nominees voted on; or that Estrada or Owen should complain because of some (unspecified) injury they have endured by not being voted on; or that some Republican senators should file a suit, since they are part of a majority that would confirm but for the bad Dems, and that therefore they are being denied their constitutional "right to consent," a right found somewhere in the spilt ink between the lines of the original text. Of course, any judge worth his clerk would throw out any such lawsuit on the understanding that the Senate should work out its own rules. Speaking of which, the Republicans do have lots of ways to change the rules so as to overcome or prevent filibusters of nominations, and there is a good proposal or two among them. But no changes in Senate rules can be made except by a two-thirds vote--an even bigger hill to climb.

The truth is that there is no way other than ordinary politics truly to "fix" the process. Not incidentally, the Senate Republican leadership could force the Democrats to conduct a real filibuster--marathon, stay-up-all-night sessions like those of yesteryear. That might fix the process real quick. A larger Republican majority--obtained through electoral politics--could also fix the process. Consider that a majority of 56 Republicans--five more than now--is all that would be needed (since four Democrats would join them) to force a vote on the Estrada nomination.

The chief utility, we suppose, of the loud search for ways to "fix" the process is to draw media attention to the Democrats' extremism. And of course the Republicans know that. (Maybe that's why they haven't forced a classic filibuster.) The wonder is that the Democrats seem clueless about the degree to which their blocking votes on nominees could hurt their chances for retaking the Senate in 2004.

Have they not seen, have they not heard, that in 2002 Republicans won the Senate in part because Bush made the Democrats' treatment of his nominees an issue? "And I'll tell you another big issue, . . ." he said on election eve in Missouri. "I have a responsibility to name good people to the bench. I've named a lot of really good people . . . but the bunch running the Senate [the Democrats] has done a lousy job on my nominees."

In 2004, 19 of the 34 seats at stake in the Senate are Democratic, and independent observers believe Democrats can be confident of retaining no more than 9 of the 19, while Republicans can count on holding at least 10 of their 15. Can Democrats really relish the prospect of President Bush's campaigning in states like Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida, Arkansas, Nevada, North Dakota, and South Dakota, and talking, as he did in Rose Garden remarks last week, about the "crisis in our Senate" and "therefore . . . in our judiciary" produced by Democratic filibusters designed "to prevent an up-or-down vote on an appeals court nominee"? The vote-blocking Democrats are not only hurting their own party's chances of recapturing the Senate but also handicapping their presidential nominee. What's that person going to say--"I favor filibusters of Bush's nominees, but not of my own"? Come to think of it, what are Joe Lieberman, Bob Graham, John Edwards, and John Kerry--vote-blockers all--going to say?

If the Democrats were smart, they would quit standing in the way of votes on nominees right now. They would see that what is sauce for the Republican goose could someday be sauce for their gander, and they shouldn't like that prospect one bit. More important, they would recognize that blocking votes on nominees who enjoy majority support, while not exactly unconstitutional, shows disrespect for the exclusive authority of the president to nominate judges.

Democrats once understood the nominating power. Maybe they can recall the example of FDR. But then again, maybe they can't. And maybe they really do think that their filibustering is good for the country. If so, no one--tongue in cheek or not--need admonish them to keep on filibustering. They'll do it anyway, borrowing trouble all the way through Election Day.

Here's the highlight: "That borking has become a Washington tradition by now-indeed, an addiction-is illustrated by the sharp but impressively mean-spirited editorial we reprint on today's page from the Washington Post. It's a textbook example of borking; students in political science classes should cut it out and save it, like a ripe specimen of that low art."

SECTION: ARKANSAS; Pg. 14

LENGTH: 613 words

HEADLINE: EDITORIALS : How to bork a nominee Leon Holmes gets the treatment

BODY:

BORK IS no longer a proper noun in Washington, as in Judge Robert Bork, but a verb. It means to launch a vicious, irrelevant, roundhouse campaign against a judicial nominee, throwing in everything, including a couple of kitchen sinks.

The term stems from the treatment of Judge Bork when he was nominated to the Supreme Court. Not satisfied with relevant criticisms, the judge's more partisan critics reached back to criticize everything he'd said or done from approximately the age of three, and quite a few things he hadn't.

That borking has become a Washington tradition by now-indeed, an addiction-is illustrated by the sharp but impressively mean-spirited editorial we reprint on today's page from the Washington Post. It's a textbook example of borking; students in political science classes should cut it out and save it, like a ripe specimen of that low art.

Notice that, unable to find anything contemporary to criticize about Little Rock's Leon Holmes-an outstanding scholar, advocate and thinker who has just been nominated to the federal bench-the Post has had to go back years and even decades to dig up any utterance it could use against him, including one that went back to 1980-yes, 1980-and for which he apologized as soon as it was brought to his attention.

The other citation-a quote from Scripture in an article co-written with his wife in April of 1997-is so wrenched out of context that you might never guess it was a philosophical rumination on the Book of Ephesians.

As any smear artist knows, there's no need to go into detail. Especially relevant detail. In this case the innocent reader would be left with no idea of what kind of nominee, or man, Leon Holmes really is. Which is the whole purpose of borking: to make the nominee look like the biggest, scariest menace that ever came down confirmation road. Instead, to quote an informal recommendation from a colleague, Leon

Holmes is the kind of guy he'd be willing to shoot dice with over the phone.

The charge that Mr. Holmes is in favor of the subjugation of women would amuse anyone who's ever met Susan Holmes, his wife and co-author, or any of the women in the law for whom he has been mentor, role model, supporter and encourager.

But we're glad to see that the Post has not lost its talent for irony. Alas, in this case it's unintended irony.

For the Post accuses the president of radicalizing judicial nominations by his choice of Leon Holmes for the bench, when it is the one being radical, going back or decades to find words from a much younger Leon Holmes that fail to show the proper reverence for the politically correct gods of today.

In the process, the Post has ignored the legal acumen and philosophical learning that the mature Leon Holmes has demonstrated day after day, year after year, in his career and life. Forget all that; the Post is determined to crucify this nominee even if it has to use old, rusty nails. It takes a couple of stray quotes and equates them with the man's whole career. A neat trick, if a low one.

A confession: In recent years we've found ourselves growing soft on the Post's editorial page; on its good days it started to look like one of those old-fashioned liberal organs not beyond the reach of reason. Clearly we were mistaken.

When the chance to do a little borking came up, the Post has leaped at it. As if it couldn't help itself. Even if it means using low means to attain a purely ideological end. Which may be the worst thing about borking; it's habit-forming. Once it becomes ingrained in a paper's character, there's no telling when it will seep out again.

FYI, the latest on the campaign finance litigation. The district court's ruling on the stay motions is expected tomorrow at the earliest, according to this article. I am awaiting an update from Paul.

Supreme Court Denies Request to Stay Campaign Finance Ruling

Tuesday, May 13, 2003

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court declined to intervene Tuesday to block part of a lower court's long-delayed ruling on the new campaign finance law, but the move is almost certainly not the high court's last word on the subject.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist turned down a request from the National Rifle Association, which had asked the high court to suspend what it calls unconstitutional restrictions on political advertisements by interest groups.

Rehnquist's action was not a ruling on the merits of the NRA's argument, or on the entire lower court pronouncement on the campaign finance law. The Supreme Court is expected to rule eventually on whether the entire law violates the constitutional principle of free speech. Because of unexplained delays in the lower court, that ruling is now unlikely to come before this fall.

Rehnquist did not give a reason for rejecting the NRA's emergency request for a stay, or suspension of a May 2 ruling by lower court judges.

Numerous groups with a stake in campaign fund raising have asked the lower court to put part or all of its ruling on hold, pending a full review by the Supreme Court. The lower court is not expected to rule on those requests until Wednesday at the earliest.

The NRA tried to jump ahead on Monday by asking the Supreme Court to get involved. Rehnquist said the NRA could renew the high court request if the lower court has not acted by May 20.

The NRA says the lower court isn't moving quickly enough, and it has ads it wants to air now.

The lower court ruled unconstitutional a provision of the law barring a range of interest groups, including those financed with corporate and union money, from airing political ads mentioning federal candidates in those candidates' districts the month before a primary and within two months of a general election.

It upheld fallback rules that bar the same groups from airing ads that promote, support, attack or oppose a candidate at any time. It's unclear how far interest groups can go when featuring candidates in ads because the law doesn't define what it means to promote, support, attack or oppose.

If the NRA wins a stay from either court, the 30-60 day ad restrictions would be in effect. The group opposes those too, but says it prefers them to the fallback rules because it's not a congressional election year.

Any idea what they mean by "touch base"? Call him to see if he needs anything from us re Campbell? He'll be very hostile but I'm happy to do it if it helps.

Sen. Kyl's position is that we should not wait for something that is really nothing anyway even in worst-case scenario. Dem Governor is calling Leahy today and former Dem Senator Deconcini is calling Leahy today. Kyl would like us just to touch base with Cohen and then it will be up to Hatch.

Roll Call - EDITORIAL

'Fresh Start?' Nah!

14 May 2003

It would be great if, as President Bush recommended last week, Republicans and Democrats made a "fresh start" on the issue of judicial nominations. Unfortunately, his call for new procedures for nominating and confirming federal judges came on what Republicans were calling "Obstruction Day," and his Rose Garden remarks clearly were designed to put pressure on Democrats who are filibustering two of his appellate court nominees. For these, and other reasons, the chance of a "fresh start" is zero.

The blame for the current impasse rests more heavily on Democrats than on Republicans. It's the Democrats who have escalated the judicial war by making it party policy to filibuster nominations they oppose. So far, they've used the tactic against two Bush selections, Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen, but they've indicated they may do so against two more, Carolyn Kuhl and Charles Pickering. Moreover, they defend their right to do so, indicating that what once was regarded as an extraordinary step now will be regular policy.

There's no question that Republicans also bear a share of the blame for politicizing the judicial nomination process. They blocked 60 Clinton nominees by denying them hearings in the Judiciary Committee or by placing "holds" on them to prevent a floor vote. In two cases, some Republicans tried to filibuster but lost cloture votes. Bush, if he were truly interested in making peace in the Senate, could have covered this history in more than one sentence of his Rose Garden statement.

Part of what Bush has proposed to do about what he called "a crisis in the Senate" and "a crisis in our judiciary" makes some sense: Judges planning to retire would give a year's notice, the president would nominate a successor within 180 days and the Senate would process the nomination within another 180 days. However, other procedural reforms being put forward - mainly by Republicans - make no sense in the present environment.

Some GOP Senators want to sue the Senate on the grounds that filibustering nominees is an unconstitutional imposition of a "super-majority" requirement. The courts will never accept the case.

Republicans wisely dropped the so-called "nuclear" option of changing Senate rules on the filibuster question not by the two-thirds vote called for in the rules, but by a majority vote on a ruling from the Parliamentarian. That would have led to total chaos, with Democrats blocking action on any legislation. Republicans now are pushing a third option - a rules change allowing the number of votes required to end a filibuster to fall from 60 to 51 on a fourth cloture vote.

The 60-vote requirement for cloture is not sacrosanct. It was adopted in 1949 to replace a two-thirds requirement. But in the present Senate atmosphere, no rules change will be passed. So, this crisis will continue. It's going to take a decisive election to break it - or a genuine agreement between the parties to make a "fresh start."

*Partner with countries to help empower parents and local communities to give them a greater voice in how their children are educated.
*Building on successful programs in Morocco and Egypt, partner with countries to provide incentives, such as vouchers, to families that send their girls to school.

**Promoting Freedom and Justice****

The United States proposes to work with partners in the region to:

*Establish a regional forum on judicial reform.
*Establish regional campaign schools to provide training in leadership and organizational skills for women seeking elective office across the region.
*Begin media training and media law projects that include participants initially from Algeria, Bahrain, Egypt, Lebanon, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, and Tunisia.
*Provide training for new parliamentarians and support for civil society organizations through groups like the National Democratic Institute and International Republican Institute in partnership with organizations in the region.

The Portland Oregonian

The Bush administration's nomination of Michael Mosman to a U.S. District Court seat shows that a measure of justice still remains in the increasingly contentious business of filling judicial vacancies. Not only did President Bush make the pick for the federal judgeship, but Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden announced his support for Mosman, too.

The backing in both quarters testifies to the legal talent and judicial temperament that people from Oregon to Washington, D.C., have seen in the current U.S. attorney for Oregon. But the bipartisan support also shows Mosman has allayed concerns about his positions regarding gays or privacy rights.

This probably won't stop questions still being raised, judicial politics being what they are. But anyone who had such questions -- and we initially did -- couldn't help but be assured by Mosman's answers about his work as a Supreme Court clerk for Justice Lewis Powell 17 years ago. All this should be an issue of the past -- and Powell's past, not his clerk's. As for the future, we have no doubt that now that justice has been done in Mosman's case, he'll soon be dispensing it from the bench.

Is there anyone we can get to write an op-ed for the P-I to counter this column by Joel Connelly.....

In the Northwest: Bush working to tilt federal bench toward the right

By JOEL CONNELLY
SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER COLUMNIST

A faded button carrying the two-word slogan "FREE WILLY" sits in my dusty collection of campaign memorabilia. It has nothing to do with the movie killer whale of the same name.

The "Willy" here mentioned is William Fletcher, a University of California law professor whose nomination to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals by President Clinton was kept in limbo for 2 1/2 years by Senate Republicans.

The example of Fletcher, and two long-delayed 9th Circuit nominees out of Seattle, came to mind last week as cable-TV news channels gave President Bush time to fulminate over Senate Democrats' decision to block two of his most controversial appellate court nominees.

Delays in confirming nominees Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada were a "disgrace," Bush intoned. He decried "obstructionist tactics" that "threaten judicial independence."

What is this man so angry about? After all, the Senate has confirmed more than 120 of his judicial nominees. The vacancy rate in the federal court system stands at just 5.7 percent, the lowest in 11 years.

By contrast, just a few years back, as many as 10 of the 28 judgeships on the 9th Circuit went vacant as the GOP-controlled Senate held up a Democratic president's nominations.

The court, with jurisdiction over nine Western states, had a backlog of more than 600 cases.

Could be that Bush is beholden to his political guru. White House political strategist Karl Rove was paid more than $250,000 in 1994 to oversee Owen's campaign for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court.

Or the president could be displaying stage anger.

Talking up conservative judges is a tried-and-true tactic to get blood and saliva flowing in the right wing of the Republican Party: These elephants never forget and still feel mightily wronged by the Supreme Court confirmation battles of Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas.

The real reason, though, could be a characteristic piece of (to use Rove's joke nickname) Bush "strategy." The more this president demands, the more insistent he is, the more he gets.

The ordinary citizen ought to tune in to this battle. Basic rights are at stake, from an injured consumer's ability to haul corporations into court, to a citizen's right to due process, to obtaining information from an intensely secretive administration in our capital.

On rare occasions when it is covered by our supine and superficial national media, the fight over judicial nominations is depicted as part of the Washington, D.C., "power game" and an example of "hardball."

So it was a half-dozen years back: GOP Sen. Slade Gorton wanted a voice in filling vacancies to the local federal bench. He played it rough with the Clinton administration, and eventually won a judicial screening committee, its members named equally by Gorton and Democratic Sen. Patty Murray.

The held-up Clinton appointees were anything but ideologues. Margaret McKeown and Ron Gould were partners in the state's largest law firm. Gould was a former president of the Washington State Bar Association. McKeown was an intellectual-property specialist who spent much of her time arguing cases for Nintendo and The Boeing Co.

Fletcher, too, was eventually confirmed to the 9th Circuit, after Republicans insisted that his mother first retire from her seat on the court.

The Bush administration, by contrast, seems out to recast the federal judiciary in an ideological mold with judges picked for their records in upholding state power and overruling corporate accountability. It is nominating younger judges -- the 73-year-old Slade Gorton can't get himself named to the 9th Circuit -- so the imprint will be lasting.

We've yet to see it here. Washington has an outstanding federal bench. Elsewhere, however, conservative judicial activism is very much in vogue.

One of Bush's earliest appointments to the federal bench in Washington, D.C., went to a one-time aide to Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr: The intense Starr subordinate once wanted to hit the White House with sweeping subpoenas to search for Hillary Clinton's old law-firm records.

With his side in power, the new judge ruled that Vice President Dick Cheney was under no obligation to disclose lists of lobbyists and executives who met at the White House with Cheney's energy task force.

The conservative media celebrate Miguel Estrada as a Honduran emigre who rose by his bootstraps. Perhaps so, but he has declined to answer senators' questions on his legal views.

The Bush administration refuses to provide documents on Estrada's legal work, which reportedly show views as far to the right as those of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia.

On a Republican-run Texas Supreme Court, Owen not infrequently dissented against fellow justices, including Alberto Gonzales, now Bush's White House counsel. She delivered a series of opinions advocating restriction of abortion.

It is once life begins, however, that Owen's rulings deserve closest scrutiny.

She took 16 months to write an opinion that reversed a $30 million damage award to the family of a quadriplegic teenager. The family had argued that negligent seat-belt construction caused his head to be severed from his spine.

In this case, Ford Motor Co. v. Miles, Owen based her decision to order a new trial on a finding of improper venue. The issue of where the case was brought was neither raised nor argued by either side on appeal.

The boy, Willie Searcy, died while awaiting his new trial.

In the legal world of Priscilla Owen, the right to life may begin at conception. It seems, however, to end at birth.

AGENCY FOIA REQUESTS

EPA

During the week of May 5-9, 2003, the Agency received 287 FOIA requests. Of the total, 50 were received in Headquarters. Year-to-date totals are 1,465 for Headquarters and 7,834 agency-wide. Significant FOIA requests received this week include:

- (1) R. Dobie Langenkamp of the National Energy-Environment Law & Policy Institute at the University of Tulsa College of Law has requested communications and records concerning contractual and related issues regarding the ARisk Assessment in Indian Country of Abandoned Hazardous Waste Industrial Sites@;
- (2) Margery Exton of Pesticide Regulatory Affairs has requested documents regarding the re-registration program underway on the following active ingredients used in wood preservative pesticides: creosote, chromated copper arsenicals (CCA), and pentachlorophenol (PCP);
- (3) Anita Huslin of *The Washington Post has requested EPA civil and criminal enforcement actions in Maryland from 1991 to present;
- (4) Pat Gallagher of the Sierra Club has requested information regarding requirements at concentrated animal feeding operations, including Asafe harbor@ agreements or other types of agreements relating to the enforcement of the Clean Air Act and/or Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act;
- (5) David Danelski of *The Press-Enterprise has requested minutes of meetings of the Inter-Agency Perchlorate Steering Committee, as well as various other perchlorate records.

DOL

Melissa Brennan, Policy Analyst, OMB Watch is seeking: a detailed description of any guidelines or screening processes used in selecting members for the National Advisory Committee on Ergonomics. She also is seeking any correspondence between the agency and the White House regarding the makeup of the National Advisory Committee on Ergonomics and any correspondence or records of communication between the agency and potential National Advisory Committee on Ergonomics members.

HHS

5/28/03

News Media FOIA Request - The Los Angeles Times requested copies of FOIA requests made by Johnson & Johnson, or any of its units, including Ortho Biotech, about Amgen Inc., Aranesp, also called darbepoetin alfa, and Epogen, also called epoetin, and a list of documents made available under the requests for the period January 2001 to April 2003.

DOC

Received on 05/05/03, from Eric Jorgensen, Earthjustice, requesting a copy of all documents relating to the preparation of the March 31, 2003, Initial Draft Addendum to the Endangered Species Act (ESA)-Section 7 Consultation Biological Opinion and Incidental Take Statement of October 2001 concerning groundfish fisheries and Steller sea lions off the coast of Alaska;

Received on 05/05/03, from David Hogan, Center for Biological Diversity, requesting records concerning ESA Section 7 regarding Army Corp of Engineers Nationwide;

Received on 05/07/03, from Michael Ravnitzky, American Lawyer Media, requesting records/e-mail records regarding USPTO "Concerns" over the filing of 10,000 Patent Applications by Celera Genomics;

Received on 5/9/03, from Silvio A. Krvaric of The Center for Individual Rights, requesting copies of (1) the review of the Minority Business Enterprise Program and/or Minority Business Development Agency, and the inventory of other Commerce programs prepared after the decision was rendered in the case of Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena, 515 U.S. 200 (1995); (2) any performance assessments, reviews of performance measurements, and evaluations of the Minority Business Development Agency; and (3) any "intergovernmental partnership" agreements with the Small Business Administration.

DOT

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has received the following FOIA requests:

Richard Quigley, Senior Deputy Director of the Helmet Law Defense League, has requested "all documents (and names of persons) authorizing the contents of the testimony of Paul Snodgrass to the Nevada Senate Transportation Committee on April 10, 2003, as it relates to the helmet law repeal bill under consideration [in Nevada] at that time." Mr. Quigley's letter also states that he would "like to address and correct many of the incorrect assertions contained on the NHTSA web site, particularly those that relate to the purported effectiveness of mandatory helmet use by motorcyclists." The agency's response is due by May 30, 2003.

JK Technologies has requested copies of "every FOIA request from Bryan Milazzo of NHTSA in the past four years, every FOIA response given to Bryan Milazzo in the past four years [and] all telephone records, electronic mail, [and] written documents to or from Mr. Bryan Milazzo from the Office of Vehicle Safety Compliance (OVSC) during the same time frame." The agency's response is due by June 2, 2003.

1984 in 2003?

By Ramesh Ponnuru

The civil libertarians rarely acknowledge the costs of legal laxity: Restrictions on intelligence gathering may well have impeded the investigation of Zacarias Moussaoui, the "twentieth hijacker," before 9/11. David Cole, one of the movement's favorite law professors, goes so far as to lament that U.S. law makes "mere membership in a terrorist group grounds for exclusion and deportation." Moreover, while civil libertarians may scant the value of Patriot, terrorists do not. Jeffrey Battle, an accused member of a terrorist cell in Portland, complained about Patriot in a recorded phone call that was recently released in court. People were less willing to provide financial support, he said, now that they were more likely to be punished for it.

The Castro News Network

By John J. Miller

"Everyone in Cuba likes [Castro]," Turner told the Washington Post in 2001. That's clearly the impression you would get from watching CNN. During the first five years of the Havana bureau's existence, ordinary Cubans interviewed by the network were six times more likely to express agreement with the regime than they were to disagree with it. That finding comes from a Media Research Center report examining all 212 prime-time news stories produced by the bureau through the first part of 2002. Other data were just as striking: For instance, Castro and his spokesmen were six times more likely than regime critics to provide soundbites for the network, and only seven of the 212 stories focused on dissidents. "CNN," the MRC report concluded, "has allowed itself to become just another component of Fidel Castro's propaganda machine."

A Blind Eye, Still Turned

By Eli Lehrer

For a nation that prides itself on being a human-rights leader, the sheer number of men raped behind bars--240,000 a year according to the activist group Stop Prison Rape--is a black mark. A common corrections-industry estimate is 12,000 rapes per year. Even if this is the actual number, it still represents more rapes than are reported annually against women in New York City, Los Angeles, Philadelphia,

Boston, San Diego, and Phoenix combined. For 18 months now, Congress has been considering the Prison Rape Reduction Act, a bipartisan bill that would take resolute though modest action to ascertain the dimensions of the nation's prison-rape problem and confront it. But despite support from leaders in both parties, and no organized opposition, the bill remains mired in committee.

Grin and Barrett
By Byron York

Remember Henry Cisneros? Of course; he was the once-rising Democratic star who became Clinton's first secretary of housing and urban development. Here's a tougher one: Remember Linda Medlar? She was Cisneros's mistress--the woman at the center of the scandal that brought him down. Now the bonus question. Remember David Barrett? He was the independent counsel sworn in on May 24, 1995, to investigate allegations that Cisneros lied to the FBI about payments he had made to Medlar. That investigation reached its peak on September 7, 1999, when Cisneros pled guilty to a misdemeanor and agreed to pay a $10,000 fine. But what few people realize is that, nearly four years after achieving the main objective of his investigation, Barrett is still in business today. His report will likely be finished by the end of the year, a testament either to the corruption of the Clinton administration or to the lunacy of the independent-counsel law. Or, perhaps, both.

Lemrick Nelson and Us
By Theodore Dalrymple

The entire story fills one with revulsion. Rosenbaum was murdered because he was a member of the same ethnic or social group as the driver of the car that killed the little boy, by someone who killed him because he, the murderer, belonged to the same ethnic group as the little boy; Nelson was acquitted because he belonged to the same ethnic group as members of the jury; members of the murdered man's ethnic group then pressed for a further trial, while the federal appeals court implicitly confirmed the principle that jurors think with their race and the colors of their skin, not with their minds. These attitudes are now so general that the results of struggles over the ethnic composition of juries are thought by lawyers to play a determining role in the outcome of trials, which is why such struggles are often so very bitter. In effect, this is the death of the citizen; it is the retribalization of society.

Solzhenitsyn's World
By Jay Nordlinger

It was the most notorious commencement speech of the 20th century--and probably the greatest. On June 8, 1978--25 years ago--Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn stood up at Harvard and delivered "A World Split Apart." It featured an unsparing analysis of the West, and its spiritual health. Consider just one of the most famous--or infamous--passages in the speech: "The human soul longs for things higher, warmer, and purer than those offered by today's mass living habits, exemplified by the revolting invasion of publicity, by TV stupor, and by intolerable music." I pause over that phrase "the human soul longs for things higher . . ." It reminds me that Allan Bloom's surprise bestseller, The Closing of the American Mind, was originally entitled "Souls Without Longing." As Charles Kesler was to remark in an essay, "Solzhenitsyn was arresting because he spoke of the truth as if it were true."

Homeland Politics

By John Fonte

The 2002 elections made it clear that the third pillar of U.S. conservatism, no longer a stepchild, had been restored to a position of equality with the other two. The American Enterprise Institute's polling guru, Karlyn Bowman, points out that Democratic strategist Stanley Greenberg has gathered perhaps the best statistics on that election--and the single most important reason the voters supported the GOP was the need for "the war on terrorism and a strong military." Greenberg's numbers reveal more support for liberal Democratic than conservative Republican positions on taxes and Social Security privatization; but security trumped economics. The Republicans had a 40 percent advantage (59 percent to 19 percent) over Democrats on the question of "which party does a better job" of keeping America strong. How American conservatism confronts the enemy at home and abroad will determine the nature of the new fusionism, just as the internal and external struggle against Communism formed the old fusionism that was ultimately triumphant in the Reagan coalition.

Rank Hypocrisy (Charges)

By Jonah Goldberg

Liberals use the charge of hypocrisy as a cudgel and a gag. When Green says, "There's a compelling case to be made [against Bennett] just on the hypocrisy alone," it sounds like there's a case to be made other than hypocrisy. But there's not. That's it. Hypocrisy is the perfect weapon for liberals--first, because it is uniquely effective against conservatives. "When Hugh Hefner moved out of the Playboy mansion the better to bring up his two young sons," NR's Ramesh Ponnuru observed, "nobody accused him of not living down to his principles." Liberals claim they are not denouncing ideals, merely the false prophets of those ideals. But since we all fall short of the ideal, the two things are identical. To date, none of Bennett's enemies have successfully argued that he wasn't pointing in the right direction--just that he has no right to point that way.

Please, Release Me!

By Ronald Radosh

Since the release of the Soviet-era Venona files began in 1995, the evidence has been clear: The Soviet Union used American Communists and their sympathizers to spy on the United States. During the New Deal, secret Communists attained high-level positions in the government and regularly passed on secrets to the Soviets. Unfortunately, McCarthy's only lasting accomplishment has been to tarnish anti-Communism's reputation. As historian Richard Gid Powers has written, he gave "the enemies of anti-Communism what they had been looking for . . . a contemporary name and face for their old stereotype of the anti-Communist fascist." McCarthy's scattershot charges and obvious bullying allowed many of those who were actually Communists or (like Alger Hiss) Soviet agents to claim that they were simply innocent victims of a witch-hunt. Eventually, it became a badge of honor to have been accused by "McCarthyites," even if the Red-baiters were right.

THE GLOBAL MESSENGER
Friday, May 16, 2003

*****KEY POINTS FROM AMB. BREMER'S PRESS CONFERENCE, 5/15/03*****

*Across most of Iraq, life is getting better:
-The regime of fear and oppression is gone;
-The Shi'a of Iraq can honor their religious traditions for the first time in decades;
-Town councils and local politicians are already starting to meet and openly and freely select their leaders;
-Water quality today is better in Basra than it has been for years, and more Iraqis today have access to electricity than ever before.

*A number of problems still remain, and we will continue to address them - in particular, the problem of law and order in Baghdad.

*Saddam released some 100,000 prisoners onto the streets last October. Many of these people were political prisoners, but some were violent criminals. It's time these people were put back in jail, and that's where we will put them.

*Police are now coming back to work, and we're starting to train them. In the old days, they received their orders from on high in Saddam's regime. In the new Iraq, they will answer to the Iraqi people.

*Those who used their power to repress the Iraqi people are being removed from office. We will soon take further steps to root out Ba'athists and Ba'athism from

REV_00118516

Iraq forever.

*We will ensure that representations of Saddam Hussein and other Ba'athist symbols are removed systematically from public display. And we will work with the Iraqis to set up a process of bringing Ba'athist officials to justice for their past crimes.

*The Coalition will work to provide the conditions for Iraqis to govern themselves in the future. We will work with responsible Iraqis to establish a government representative of all Iraqi people.

*****TODAY'S SCHEDULE*****

All Times Eastern Daylight. Subject to Change

11:00 am President Bush meets with the Prime Minister of Norway

12:15 pm White House Briefing

TBD State Department Briefing

*****KEY MIDDLE EAST INITIATIVES ON ECONOMIC GROWTH*****

In his speech on May 9, President Bush outlined proposals for several Middle East initiatives to reignite economic growth and expand opportunity in the Middle East, including:

*Build on our free trade agreements with Israel and Jordan to establish a U.S.-Middle East Free Trade Area within a decade.

*Work with our partners in the region to establish a Middle East finance facility to help small and medium-sized businesses gain access to capital and generate jobs.

*Reform commercial codes, improve the climate for trade and investment, and strengthen property rights through a new initiative for commercial law in cooperation with U.S. and Middle Eastern law schools and jurists, and business-to-business contacts.

*Promote transparency in public finances, help countries fight corruption, and support financial sector reforms based on international best practices.

Wanted you to be aware that Judicial Watch today filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Senate alleging unconstitutional failure to take action with respect to judicial nominees.

Here's the prayer for relief (as if he had a prayer with this):

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff Judicial Watch, Inc. respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment against Defendants:

(1) declaring that Senate Rules XXII and V are unconstitutional as applied to judicial nominees, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201;

(2) enjoining Defendants from continuing to prevent votes on the nominations of former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen; and

(3) granting any and all other relief the Court deems just and proper.

Press release and complaint are available at http://www.judicialwatch.org/051403\_PR.shtml

Ashcroft's U-Turn:
Suing Big Tobacco for a Quarter Trillion Bucks

Wednesday May 21, 2003
11:30 a.m. ?1:00 p.m.

1000 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

Featuring:

Senior Fellow in Constitutional Studies, Cato Institute

Kenneth N. Bass
Partner, Kirkland & Ellis

Ten months after the tobacco giants and the states settled their differences for a skimpy $246 billion, the federal government decided that it wanted a piece of the pie. So the Clinton Justice Department filed suit, alleging that industry executives conspired to lie about their product, manipulate nicotine content, and target kids with cigarette ads. Then the Republicans took over. Attorney General John Ashcroft, who opposed the suit as a senator, was reluctant to fund litigation that he deemed too weak for trial. But he's changed his mind. In an astonishing about-face, the Justice Department has now decided to seek an additional $289 billion in damages, with a trial planned for next year if the industry doesn't cave. Why the reversal? Is the multi-billion-dollar pot just too enticing for the cash-strapped feds? Or is there a real need for one more round in the government's anti-tobacco campaign? Please join us for a vigorous debate on health, public policy, and the rule of law.

Posted on May 15, 2003

Filibusters multiply as senators frustrate democracy

Senate Democrats should change the name of their party. Their goal is to frustrate and twist rather than to support the democratic process.

Democracy, as we all know, means putting issues up for a vote. The votes are counted, and the majority rules. That's the process that senators who call themselves Democrats are determined to interrupt.

It started with a filibuster on one of President Bush's judicial nominees. Democratic senators are now filibustering two nominees and threatening to do so to more. The tactic is an unprecedented partisan attack on the constitutional method for selecting judges.

This week, they threw another filibuster into the mix. They don't like a bill that would protect firearm manufacturers and dealers from frivolous lawsuits.

So they are determined to not allow the Senate to vote on the bill.

That's what a filibuster is. It's a tactic to keep debate open forever, so the body never has a chance to vote on the issue. It takes 51 votes to settle an issue in the Senate, but it takes 60 votes to end debate and call for the vote.

Senate Democrats know that Bush's nominees would be confirmed if the Senate voted on them, so they don't allow the vote. They also know that the firearm litigation bill would be approved by the full Senate, so they are filibustering to prevent a vote.

These are not principled stands. Democratic senators oppose Bush's nominees because they suspect them of being too conservative. They oppose the firearm litigation bill because the trial lawyers' lobby opposes it, and trial lawyers give huge sums of money to Democratic campaigns.

But the bill should pass. It would stop the crazy lawsuits in which cities and crime victims sue firearm manufacturers for the cost of gun-related crime.

It would not prevent someone from suing when a defective gun injures someone. It would not prevent legitimate lawsuits. It would simply prohibit cities and gun-control groups from blaming gun manufacturers for the crimes committed by individuals.

This minority rule in the Senate should end. The Senate should change its rules regarding filibusters and restore the ability of the entire body to vote on the issues before it.

This is fine, because the VP is listed as the "Honored Guest."

Please be careful, however, that the VP does not in any way mention fundraising at the event - if he does, then there is a verbal disclaimer that would he would have to state and/or would need to be posted at the event (because they are raising corporate money and money outside the Federal limits).

*****KEY POINTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S WEEKLLY RADIO ADDRESS, 5/17/03*****

*With the liberation of Iraq and Afghanistan, we have removed allies of al-Qaeda, cut off sources of terrorist funding, and made certain that no terrorist network will gain weapons of mass destruction from Saddam Hussein's regime. These two battles were important victories in the larger war on terror.

*The terrorist attacks in Saudi Arabia, which killed innocent civilians from more than half a dozen countries - including our own - provide a stark reminder that the war on terror continues. The enemies of freedom are not idle, and neither are we.

*From Pakistan to the Philippines to the Horn of Africa, we are hunting down al-Qaeda killers. Nearly one-half of al-Qaeda's senior operatives have been captured or killed. And we will remain on the hunt until they are all brought to justice.

*This Nation accepts the responsibilities of keeping the peace. And the best way to keep the peace is to make sure that our military remains second to none.

*The world has seen the tremendous capabilities of the United States military. With fine allies at their side, American soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines used advanced technology to gain historic victories in Iraq and Afghanistan.

TBD State Department Briefing

*****IN THE PRESIDENT'S WORDS: FIGHTING AIDS*****

The US Senate last week passed President Bush's five-year, $15 billion dollar initiative to help the most afflicted countries in Africa and the Caribbean wage and win the fight against HIV/AIDS. The President announced the plan in his State of the Union address, pressed for it this spring, and hailed its passage on Friday.

***

"We will continue to confront, HIV/AIDS in our own country. And to meet a severe and urgent crisis abroad, tonight I propose the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief - a work of mercy beyond all current international efforts to help the people of Africa."

State of the Union remarks, 1/29/03

***

"Today, on the continent of Africa alone nearly 30 million people are living with HIV/AIDS, including 3 million people under the age of 15 years old....We can turn our eyes away in resignation and despair, or we can take decisive, historic action to turn the tide against this disease and give the hope of life to millions who need our help now. The United States of America chooses the path of action and the path of hope."

Remarks on Global HIV/AIDS Initiative, 4/29/03

***

"I'm...so pleased that the Senate passed a bill to help ease the suffering on the African continent, as well as in some Caribbean nations. We've got a HIV/AIDS initiative that will help say to the world that the United States is a compassionate country, we care deeply about the suffering that takes place in the world."

Remarks to reporters, 5/16/03

*****KEY QUOTE*****

"With the discovery this week of mass graves in Iraq we have seen still more evidence of the brutality of that regime. The discovery was still another chilling reminder of why so many nations came together to remove Saddam Hussein from power."

Bush's Supreme Challenge

With a court retirement likely, Al Gonzales is a Bush favorite. But is that enough?

By JOHN F. DICKERSON AND VIVECA NOVAK

Even for a White House in which staff members pride themselves on being low-key, Alberto Gonzales is inconspicuous. The flashiest thing he has done recently is briefly regrow his mustache. And yet the modest, Harvard-educated lawyer has a riveting story. The son of migrant workers in Texas, he grew up in a house his dad built, sharing two bedrooms with seven siblings. With no running hot water, the family boiled their bathwater on the stove. No phone meant that Gonzales had to walk to the corner pay phone to call his friends. Even the town's name was Humble. Gonzales, 47, has all the traits of the people George W. Bush brought up from Austin — loyalty, discretion and self-effacement — but his personal history is what really captures the President. "It isn't that Waspy 'Isn't that lovely?' kind of thing," says a source close to Gonzales, "but something the President feels in his heart and soul. He gets emotional about it."

Bush has an almost mystical faith in his ability to take the measure of people by looking them in the eye. Within the next few months, he may be measuring some candidates for a long black robe. It is almost certain that by the end of June, when the Supreme Court adjourns for summer recess, at least one Justice will have announced his or her retirement. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, 79, and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, 73, have expressed a desire to leave. Rehnquist has serious back trouble, and O'Connor would like to return to Arizona with her husband. Both want a Republican President to name their replacement, and they know that retiring in 2004, an election year, would provoke a confirmation storm that could keep the court in limbo for months. Then there's the wild card, John Paul Stevens, 83, a liberal who is likely to stay but is the court's oldest member.

Among the many names floated for the post, no candidate has the President's trust like Gonzales. But the irony is that Bush may have a harder time selling his first choice to his allies than to his antagonists. Democrats, who are locked in a pitched battle with the White House over lower-court nominations, would find it tough to block the first Hispanic nominee to the high court, who has a short and unrevealing record on the bench. They might give him a hard time as payback for his treatment of them while he was White House counsel, but a rejection would play badly with Hispanic voters, whom the Democrats are eager to court.

For conservative Republicans, however, Gonzales is not even on the top10 list. They crave a Justice who is strict and outspoken on core conservative issues, namely abortion and affirmative action, and for them Gonzales is too much of a cipher, perhaps too moderate. "To Bush's core constituency," says Phyllis Schlafly, president of the conservative action group the Eagle Forum, "the appointment to the Supreme Court ranks as the No. 1 issue that they care about. Bush went through the campaign saying his favorite Justices were [Antonin] Scalia and [Clarence] Thomas. We are not going to put up with another [David] Souter." Bush the elder's first Supreme Court pick was Souter, and the fact that he has turned out to be a more liberal Justice than anyone expected deeply upsets conservatives.

The fuss may seem a little curious, given that Bush's nominations to the lower courts have been so solidly planted on the right. In fact, some skeptical conservatives believe that Bush has been true blue on the lower courts in order to pave the way for nominating the more moderate Gonzales. And perhaps to burnish his conservative credentials, Gonzales has helped select and then sell these judicial nominees. He has personally met nearly all the candidates for district and appellate seats and says they are never asked their opinions on any hot-button issues.

Overall, 124 of Bush's judicial nominations have been approved, and the judiciary has its lowest vacancy rate in 13 years. But those numbers belie the intensity of the struggle over the White House selections. Senate Democrats have in recent months filibustered two nominees for appellate-court seats: Priscilla Owen, who is fiercely antiabortion, and Miguel Estrada, who has given Senators too little information about how or what he thinks. Republicans are irate and are considering trying to bar filibusters of judicial nominations.

Despite the laurels Bush wins from his base for seeding the lower courts with judges it considers ideologically correct, the Supreme Court pick is seen in a different league. "It doesn't do any good to pick good lower-court guys and throw the Supreme Court" to a moderate, says conservative activist Grover Norquist. The Supreme Court is the Holy Grail for the right and not to be bargained or traded away. The firmness of conservatives on the high court casts some doubt on one option that White House strategists are considering: elevating Scalia to Chief Justice if Rehnquist leaves, thereby earning enough credit with the right to put Gonzales in the vacancy.

So what's the problem with unassuming Al? Pro-life advocates believe that if the right jurist replaces either O'Connor or Stevens, the court will finally have a chance to overturn Roe v. Wade, the 1973 ruling that established the right to have an abortion. Though Gonzales' views on the matter are not known, opponents cite his vote — and the concurring opinion he wrote — as a Texas Supreme Court judge allowing a girl to use a bypass provision of a state parental notification to get an abortion. "Pro-life conservatives will oppose him for that," says Terry Jeffrey, editor of Human Events, a conservative magazine.

Gonzales opponents also see the White House counsel as having a hidden hand in what they regard as the President's too soft position on the Michigan affirmative-action case. For that case, the White House filed a Supreme Court brief opposing the University of Michigan's admissions program but did not push to end affirmative action outright. And Gonzales did not help himself with a speech to a group of Evangelical leaders last year in which he did not strongly call for reversing Roe. The rock ribbed just find him squishy. "He is the counsel to a conservative President rather than a conservative counsel to the President," says Clint Bolick, vice president of the libertarian Institute for Justice.

The judge's defenders argue that he has had a strong hand in many issues that have pleased the Republican base: the order setting up military tribunals to try suspected terrorists, the fight with Congress over releasing information about Dick Cheney's energy task force and ending the American Bar Association's role in rating potential judicial nominees. More important, they point out, he's not a legal activist but a strict constructionist — one of the sacred judicial tenets of conservatives. "He was ruling on the existing statute, not legislating," a conservative Washington lawyer says of the Texas abortion ruling. "We've complained about legislating from the bench for years. We can't now start doing it ourselves." On affirmative action, top White House aides say Gonzales was not pushing his own views but finding the legal rationale for what the President believes, which is that race should be a factor in hiring but not the deciding one. It's a rule Bush believes he applied to Gonzales back in 1995 for the first of four jobs that Bush has given him. "Of course it mattered what his ethnicity is," said Bush when he appointed Gonzales to the Texas Supreme Court, "but first and foremost, what mattered is, I've got great confidence in Al. I know him well. He's a good friend."

Gonzales' resume isn't going to provide much fodder for conservatives — or liberals, for that matter — looking to deep-six Bush's close ally. He was a pro-business jurist in Texas for two years but no ideologue on social issues. He spent 13 years at Enron's law firm, Vinson & Elkins, doing deals in the go-go Houston of the 1980s but before the controversial Enron transactions took place. He was generally known as a stick-to-the-law kind of attorney in Bush's office. "Very seldom, if ever, did I hear his personal views on issues," said Terral Smith, who worked with Gonzales in Austin. "He was very careful in staff meetings to stay within the law."

Why should conservative dissent worry a President who is so wildly popular with members of his party? If the President isn't good enough for them, what are they going to do — sign on with Howard Dean? The answer is simple — and plenty scary for the White House. "We'll stay home," says Schlafly.

That is not an idle threat. Since arriving in Washington, political adviser Karl Rove has pointed out that 4 million Evangelicals who voted for Republicans in the G.O.P. congressional rout of 1994 stayed home in 2000, contributing to the closest election in modern history. Bush's displays of faith have brought many of those voters back into the fold, but they are still alert for an apostasy. Rove also wants to attract Hispanic voters. In the case of a Gonzales nomination, his two aims could clash.

Ultimately, what Gonzales has going for him is that Bush has looked him in the eye for years and liked what he has seen. He also seems to like what his support for Gonzales seems to say about himself: that the aristocratic President is an egalitarian guy capable of rewarding up-by-the-bootstraps achievement. All this may be important enough to Bush that he's willing to take some political heat for his loyal pal, whose life story he cited in his second inaugural address as Governor of Texas. "I think of my friend Al Gonzales, recently sworn in as a supreme-court justice," Bush said back in 1999. "His parents reared eight children in a two-bedroom house in Houston. They sacrificed so that their children would have a chance to succeed. Al Gonzales has realized their dream." They are words one can imagine hearing again this summer in the Rose Garden if Bush decides to make another dream come true.

Wade*, the 1973 ruling that established the right to have an abortion. Though Gonzales' views on the matter are not known, opponents cite his vote — and the concurring opinion he wrote — as a Texas Supreme Court judge allowing a girl to use a bypass provision of a state parental notification to get an abortion. "Pro-life conservatives will oppose him for that," says Terry Jeffrey, editor of Human Events, a conservative magazine.

Gonzales opponents also see the White House counsel as having a hidden hand in what they regard as the President's too soft position on the Michigan affirmative-action case. For that case, the White House filed a Supreme Court brief opposing the University of Michigan's admissions program but did not push to end affirmative action outright. And Gonzales did not help himself with a speech to a group of Evangelical leaders last year in which he did not strongly call for reversing Roe. The rock ribbed just find him squishy. "He is the counsel to a conservative President rather than a conservative counsel to the President," says Clint Bolick, vice president of the libertarian Institute for Justice.

The judge's defenders argue that he has had a strong hand in many issues that have pleased the Republican base: the order setting up military tribunals to try suspected terrorists, the fight with Congress over releasing information about Dick Cheney's energy task force and ending the American Bar Association's role in rating potential judicial nominees. More important, they point out, he's not a legal activist but a strict constructionist — one of the sacred judicial tenets of conservatives. "He was ruling on the existing statute, not legislating," a conservative Washington lawyer says of the Texas abortion ruling. "We've complained about legislating from the bench for years. We can't now start doing it ourselves." On affirmative action, top White House aides say Gonzales was not pushing his own views but finding the legal rationale for what the President believes, which is that race should be a factor in hiring but not the deciding one. It's a rule Bush believes he applied to Gonzales back in 1995 for the first of four jobs that Bush has given him. "Of course it mattered what his ethnicity is," said Bush when he appointed Gonzales to the Texas Supreme Court, "but first and foremost, what mattered is, I've got great confidence in Al. I know him well. He's a good friend."

Gonzales' resume isn't going to provide much fodder for conservatives — or liberals, for that matter — looking to deep-six Bush's close ally. He was a pro-business jurist in Texas for two years but no ideologue on social issues. He spent 13 years at Enron's law firm, Vinson & Elkins, doing deals in the go-go Houston of the 1980s but before the controversial Enron transactions took place. He was generally known as a stick-to-the-law kind of attorney in Bush's office. "Very seldom, if ever, did I hear his personal views on issues," said Terral Smith, who worked with Gonzales in Austin. "He was very careful in staff meetings to stay within the law."

Why should conservative dissent worry a President who is so wildly popular with members of his party? If the President isn't good enough for them, what are they going to do — sign on with Howard Dean? The answer is simple — and plenty scary for the White House. "We'll stay home," says Schlafly.

That is not an idle threat. Since arriving in Washington, political adviser Karl Rove has pointed out that 4 million Evangelicals who voted for Republicans in the G.O.P. congressional rout of 1994 stayed home in 2000, contributing to the closest election in modern history. Bush's displays of faith have brought many of those voters back into the fold, but they are still alert for an apostasy. Rove also wants to attract Hispanic voters. In the case of a Gonzales nomination, his two aims could clash.

Ultimately, what Gonzales has going for him is that Bush has looked him in the eye for years and liked what he has seen. He also seems to like what his support for Gonzales seems to say about himself: that the aristocratic President is an egalitarian guy capable of rewarding up-by-the-bootstraps achievement. All this may be important enough to Bush that he's willing to take some political heat for his loyal pal, whose life story he cited in his second inaugural address as Governor of Texas. "I think of my friend Al Gonzales, recently sworn in as a supreme-court justice," Bush said back in 1999. "His parents reared eight children in a two-bedroom house in Houston. They sacrificed so that their children would have a chance to succeed. Al Gonzales has realized their dream." They are words one can imagine hearing again this summer in the Rose Garden if Bush decides to make another dream come true.

Bush driver plans to be with president, on new bus, for next

ÿ

REV_00118700

campaign

dewleb

ÿÿ ENFIELD, N.H.(AP) _ The New Hampshire man who drove President Bush all around the state during his primary campaign in 2000 plans a new road trip with Bush, in a new bus, for his re-election campaign.

ÿÿ John LaBombard, 59, of Enfield, offered his 1995 bus to the Bush campaign as a mobile headquarters for the last campaign, with him at the wheel.

ÿÿ Next month, LaBombard is putting the bus on eBay, the Internet auction site.

ÿÿ ``It's time to get a new one,' ' said LaBombard. He's got his eye set on a 2002 bus in Tennessee, and more campaigning.

ÿÿ ``I plan on going six states or more with the president' ' in the 2004 campaign, he said.

ÿÿ LaBombard met the Bush family through an old friend, and now considers himself part of the Bush team.

ÿÿ ``I went down to a Christmas party (in Washington) last year,' ' he explained. ``(Presidential adviser) Karl Rove gives me a hug and a kiss every time he sees me. It's a tradition of the Bush people.' ' ÿÿ He said Rove told him Bush wants to go back on the road with him.

ÿÿ ``Mention New Hampshire to the president,' ' said LaBombard, ``and the first thing he thinks of is 'Big John'.' ' That's him.

ÿÿ Bush thought enough of LaBombard and the bus, that he included them in his inaugural parade.

ÿÿ LaBombard figures the bus has enough special perks to fetch between $1 million and $5 million.

ÿÿ He had it built originally so he and his wife could live in it in Alaska. An old friend who knew the Bush family suggested using it to help out on state campaigns, and eventually Bush hopped aboard after he announced his candidacy and made the bus his campaign headquarters, said LaBombard.

Bush driver plans to be with president, on new bus, for next

ÿ

dewleb

ÿÿ ENFIELD, N.H. (AP) _ The New Hampshire man who drove President Bush all around the state during his primary campaign in 2000 plans a new road trip with Bush, in a new bus, for his re-election campaign.

ÿÿ John LaBombard, 59, of Enfield, offered his 1995 bus to the Bush campaign as a mobile headquarters for the last campaign, with him at the wheel.

ÿÿ Next month, LaBombard is putting the bus on eBay, the Internet auction site.

ÿÿ ``It's time to get a new one,' ' said LaBombard. He's got his eye set on a 2002 bus in Tennessee, and more campaigning.

ÿÿ ``I plan on going six states or more with the president' ' in the 2004 campaign, he said.

ÿÿ LaBombard met the Bush family through an old friend, and now considers himself part of the Bush team.

ÿÿ ``I went down to a Christmas party (in Washington) last year,' ' he explained. `` (Presidential adviser) Karl Rove gives me a hug and a kiss every time he sees me. It's a tradition of the Bush people.' ' ÿÿ He said Rove told him Bush wants to go back on the road with him.

ÿÿ ``Mention New Hampshire to the president,' ' said LaBombard, ``and the first thing he thinks of is 'Big John'.' ' That's him.

ÿÿ Bush thought enough of LaBombard and the bus, that he included them in his inaugural parade.

ÿÿ LaBombard figures the bus has enough special perks to fetch between $1 million and $5 million.

ÿÿ He had it built originally so he and his wife could live in it in Alaska. An old friend who knew the Bush family suggested using it to help out on state campaigns, and eventually Bush hopped aboard after he announced his candidacy and made the bus his campaign headquarters, said LaBombard.

Early reports are that the 3-judge panel of the district court has stayed its decision in full, which means that the statute will operate as written pending appeal to the Supreme Court. No details are available yet, but apparently Judge Leon dissented in part. I will provide updates as I receive them.

Judicial confirmation battles:
It's a big day for White House counsel Al Gonzales, what with Time touting him as the president's likely choice for an increasingly anticipated SCOTUS opening LINK; the Washington Post profiling him LINK; this hot-off-the-presses Texas Monthly piece LINK; and Judge Gonzales himself penning a Wall Street Journal op-ed on judicial confirmation stand offs generally (with some oppo research befitting the RNC). The New York Times ed board says nominees' positions on gay rights issues should be front and center in the confirmation process. LINK

Ken should not speak to Regional Appointees. On email, you should check with Admin office on usual practice. I think he can do an autoreply that gives the new address, but check with them.

1           (3) NO STAYS.—The court may not issue a stay
2       of payment into the Fund pending its final judg-
3       ment.

4           (4) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.—The judg-
5       ment and decree of the court shall be final, except 6       that the same shall be subject to review by the Su-
7       preme Court, as provided in section 1254 of title 28,
8       United States Code.

9   SEC. 303. EXCLUSIVE REVIEW.

10       (a) EXCLUSIVITY OF REVIEW.—An action of the As-11       bestos Court or the Asbestos Insurers Commission for 12       which review could have been obtained under section 301
13       or 302 shall not be subject to judicial review in any other 14       proceeding, including proceedings before the Asbestos
15       Court.

16       (b) CONSTITUTIONAL REVIEW.—

17           (1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other
18       provision of law, any interlocutory or final judgment,
19       decree, or order of a Federal court holding this Act,
20       or any provision or application thereof, unconstitu-
21       tional shall be reviewable as a matter of right by di-
22       rect appeal to the Supreme Court.

23           (2) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—Any such 24       appeal shall be filed not more than 30 days after 25       entry of such judgment, decree, or order.

1 SEC. 304. PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST REIN-
2 SURERS.

3 (a) IN GENERAL.—Any insurer participant may file
4 a claim in the United States District Court for the District
5 of Columbia against any reinsurer that is contractually ob-
6 ligated to reimburse such insurer participant for a portion
7 of costs incurred as a result of payment of asbestos related 8 claims.

9 (b) EXPEDITED PROCEDURES.—

10 (1) IN GENERAL.—A claim filed under sub-
11 section (a) shall be subject to expedited procedures, 12 as prescribed by the United States District Court for 13 the District of Columbia.

14 (2) EVIDENTIARY STANDARD.—The plaintiff
15 shall not recover in a claim under subsection (a) un-
16 less the plaintiff demonstrates the right to recover
17 by a preponderance of the evidence.

18 (3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall 19 be issued on a claim filed under subsection (a) not 20 later than 30 days after such filing.

21 (c) APPEALS.—

22 (1) IN GENERAL.—An appeal from a decision
23 under subsection (b) may be filed with the Court of 24 Appeals for the District of Columbia.

25 (2) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—The final judg-
26 ment of the district court shall be upheld unless the

1 court of appeals finds the judgment to be arbitrary
2 and capricious.

3 (3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall
4 be issued on an appeal filed under paragraph (1) not
5 later than 30 days after such filing.

6 TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS
7 PROVISIONS

8 SEC. 401. FALSE INFORMATION.

9 Any person who knowingly provides false information
10 in connection with an assessment of contributions, a claim
11 for compensation, or an audit under this Act shall be sub-12 ject to—

13 (1) criminal prosecution under section 1001 of 14 title 18, United States Code; and 15 (2) civil penalties under section 3729 of title

16 31, United States Code.

17 SEC. 402. EFFECT ON BANKRUPTCY LAWS.

18 (a) NO AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title
19 11, United States Code, is amended—

20 (1) in paragraph (17), by striking “or” at the 21 end;

22 (2) in paragraph (18), by striking the period at 23 the end and inserting “; or”; and 24 (3) by inserting after paragraph (18) the fol-

25 lowing:

1           “(19) of the enforcement of any payment obli-
2           gations under section 204 of the Fairness in Asbes-
3           tos Injury Resolution Act of 2003, against a debtor,
4           or the property of the estate of a debtor, that is a
5           participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of 6           that Act).”.

7           (b) ASSUMPTION OF EXECUTORY CONTRACTS.—Sec-
8           tion 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by 9           adding at the end the following:

10          “(q) If a debtor is a participant (as that term is de-
11          fined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Reso-12          lution Act of 2003), the trustee shall be deemed to have 13          assumed all executory contracts entered into by the partic-
14          ipant under section 204 of that Act. The trustee may not 15          reject any such executory contract.”.

16          (c) ALLOWED ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section
17          503 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding 18          at the end the following:

19          “(c)(1) Claims of the United States, the Attorney 20          General, or the Administrator (as that term is defined in 21          section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution
22          Act of 2003) based upon the asbestos payment obligations 23          of a debtor that is a Participant (as that term is defined 24          in section 3 of that Act), shall be paid as an allowed ad-

1 ministrative expense. The debtor shall not be entitled to 2 either notice or a hearing with respect to such claims.

3 “(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term “asbes-
4 tos payment obligation” means any payment obligation
5 under subtitle B of title II of the Fairness in Asbestos
6 Injury Resolution Act of 2003.”.

7 (d) NO DISCHARGE.—Section 523 of title 11, United 8 States Code, is amended by adding at the end the fol-
9 lowing:

10 “(f) A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1228, or 11 1328 of this title does not discharge any debtor that is 12 a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the 13 Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003) of 14 the payment obligations of the debtor under subtitle B of 15 title II of that Act.”.

16 (e) PAYMENT.—Section 524 of title 11, United States
17 Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

18 “(i) PARTICIPANT DEBTORS.—

19 “(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraphs (2) and (3)
20 shall apply to a debtor who—

21 “(A) is a participant that has made prior 22 asbestos expenditures (as such terms are de-
23 fined in the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolu-
24 tion Act of 2003); and

1 “(B) is subject to a case under this title
2 that is pending—

3 “(i) on the date of enactment of the 4 Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act
5 of 2003; or

6 “(ii) at any time during the 1 year pe-
7 riod preceding the date of enactment of 8 that Act.

9 “(2) TIER I DEBTORS.—A debtor that has been
10 assigned to tier I under section 202 of the Fairness
11 in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 shall 12 make payments in accordance with sections 202 and 13 203 of that Act.

14 “(3) TREATMENT OF PAYMENT OBLIGA-
15 TIONS.—All payment obligations of a debtor under 16 sections 202 and 203 of the Fairness in Asbestos In-17 jury Resolution Act of 2003 shall—

18 “(A) constitute costs and expenses of ad-
19 ministration of a case under section 503 of this 20 title;

21 “(B) notwithstanding any case pending
22 under this title, be payable in accordance with 23 section 202 of that Act;

24 “(C) not be stayed;

1 “(D) not be affected as to enforcement or 2 collection by any stay or injunction of any 3 court; and

4 “(E) not be impaired or discharged in any 5 current or future case under this title.”.

6 (f) TREATMENT OF TRUSTS.—Section 524 of title
7 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is 8 amended by adding at the end the following:

9 “(j) ASBESTOS TRUSTS.—

10 “(1) IN GENERAL.—A trust shall assign a por-
11 tion of the corpus of the trust to the Asbestos Injury
12 Claims Resolution Fund (referred to in this sub-13 section as the ‘Fund’) as is required under section
14 202 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution
15 Act of 2003 if—

16 “(A) the trust was formed prior to October
17 22, 1994; and

18 “(B) the trust qualifies as a “trust” under 19 section 201 of that Act.

20 “(2) TRANSFER OF TRUST ASSETS.—

21 “(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided
22 under subparagraphs (B) and (C), the assets in 23 any trust established to provide compensation 24 for asbestos claims (as defined in section 3 of 25 the FAIR Act of 2003) shall be transferred to

1 the Fund not later than 6 months after the
2 date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 2003.
3 Except as provided under subparagraph (B),
4 the Administrator of the Fund shall accept such 5 assets and utilize them for any purposes of the 6 Fund under section 223 of such Act, including 7 the payment of claims for compensation under 8 such Act to beneficiaries of the trust from 9 which the assets were transferred. After such 10 transfer, each trustee of such trust shall have 11 no liability to any beneficiary of such trust.

12 “(B) AUTHORITY TO REFUSE ASSETS.—
13 The Administrator of the Fund may refuse to 14 accept any asset that the Administrator deter-
15 mines may create liability for the Fund in ex-
16 cess of the value of the asset.

17 “(C) ALLOCATION OF TRUST ASSETS.—If
18 a trust under subparagraph (A) has bene-
19 ficiaries with claims that are not asbestos
20 claims, the assets transferred to the Fund
21 under subparagraph (A) shall not include assets
22 allocable to such beneficiaries. The trustees of 23 any such trust shall determine the amount of 24 such trust assets to be reserved for the con-
25 tinuing operation of the trust in processing and

1           paying claims that are not asbestos claims.
2           Such reserved amount shall not be greater than 3           3 percent of the total assets in the trust and 4           shall not be transferred to the Fund.

5                   “(D) SALE OF FUND ASSETS.—The invest-
6           ment requirements under section 222 of the 7           FAIR Act of 2003 shall not be construed to re-
8           quire the Administrator of the Fund to sell as-9           sets transferred to the Fund under subpara-
10          graph (A).

11                   “(E) LIQUIDATED CLAIMS.—A trust shall 12          not make any payment relating to asbestos
13          claims unless such claims were liquidated before 14          the date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 15          2003.

16                   “(3) INJUNCTION.—Any injunction issued as 17          part of the formation of a trust described in para-18          graph (1) shall remain in full force and effect until 19          the assignment required under paragraph (1) has 20          been made.”.

21           (g) NO AVOIDANCE OF TRANSFER.—Section 546 of 22   title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the 23   end the following:

24                   “(h) Notwithstanding the rights and powers of a
25   trustee under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, and 550

1 of this title, if a debtor is a participant (as that term is
2 defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury
3 Resolution Act of 2003), the trustee may not avoid a
4 transfer made by the debtor pursuant to its payment obli-
5 gations under sections 202 or 203 of that Act.”.

6 (h) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—Section 1129(a) of
7 title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the
8 end the following:

9 “(14) If the debtor is a participant (as that 10 term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in As-11 bestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the plan pro-12 vides for the continuation after its effective date of 13 payment of all payment obligations under title II of 14 that Act.”.

15 SEC. 403. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS AND EXISTING CLAIMS.

16 (a) EFFECT ON FEDERAL AND STATE LAW.—The 17 provisions of this Act shall supersede any and all State
18 and Federal laws insofar as they may relate to any asbes-
19 tos claim filed under this Act.

20 (b) EXCLUSIVE REMEDY.—The remedies provided
21 under this Act shall be the exclusive remedy for any asbes-
22 tos claim under any Federal or State law.

23 (c) BAR ON ASBESTOS CLAIMS.—

24 (1) IN GENERAL.—No asbestos claim may be 25 pursued in any State or Federal court, except for

1           “(3) COMPENSATION.—Each judge shall receive
2           a salary at the rate of pay, and in the same manner,
3           as judges of the district courts of the United States.

4           “(c) CHIEF JUDGE.—

5           “(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall des-
6           ignate 1 of the judges appointed under subsection
7           (b)(1), who is less than 70 years of age, to serve as 8           chief judge.

9           “(2) TERM.—The chief judge may continue to 10          serve as such until—

11                  “(A) he or she reaches the age of 70 years;

12                  “(B) another judge is designated as chief 13          judge by the President; or

14                  “(C) the expiration of his or her term
15          under subsection (b)(1).

16          “(3) CONTINUITY OF SERVICE.—Upon the des-
17          ignation by the President of another judge to serve
18          as chief judge, the former chief judge may continue
19          to serve as a judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims 20          for the balance of the term to which he or she was 21          appointed.

22          “(4) POWERS OF CHIEF JUDGE.—The chief 23          judge is authorized to—

1 enforcement of claims for which a final judgment is 2 entered before the date of enactment of this Act.

3 (2) PREEMPTION.—Any action asserting an as-
4 bestos claim in a court of any State, except actions
5 for which final judgment are entered before the date
6 of enactment of this Act, is preempted by this Act.

7 (3) DISMISSAL.—No judgment other than a
8 judgment of dismissal may be entered in any such 9 action, including an action pending on appeal, or on 10 petition or motion for discretionary review, on or 11 after the date of enactment of this Act. A court may 12 dismiss any such action on its motion. If the district
13 court denies the motion to dismiss, it shall stay fur-
14 ther proceedings until final disposition of any appeal
15 taken under this Act.

16 (4) REMOVAL.—

17 (A) IN GENERAL.—If an action under 18 paragraph (2) is not dismissed, or if an order
19 entered after the date of enactment of this Act 20 purporting to enter judgment or deny review is 21 not rescinded and replaced with an order of dis-
22 missal within 30 days after the filing of a mo-
23 tion by any party to the action advising the 24 court of the provisions of this Act, any party
25 may remove the case to the district court of the 1 United States for the district in which such ac-

2 tion is pending.

3 (B) TIME LIMITS.—For actions originally 4 filed after the date of enactment of this Act, the 5 notice of removal shall be filed within the time
6 limits specified in section 1441(b) of title 28,
7 United States Code.

8 (C) PROCEDURES.—The procedures for re-
9 moval and proceedings after removal shall be in 10 accordance with sections 1446 through 1450 of 11 title 28, United States Code, except as may be 12 necessary to accommodate removal of any ac-
13 tions pending (including on appeal) on the date
14 of enactment of this Act.

15 (D) JURISDICTION.—The jurisdiction of 16 the district court shall be limited to—

17 (i) determining whether removal was 18 proper; and

19 (ii) ruling on a motion to dismiss
20 based on this Act.

1           “(A) prescribe rules and procedures for
2           hearings and appeals of the Court of Asbestos
3           Claims and its magistrates;

4           “(B) appoint magistrates;

5           “(C) appoint or contract for the services of 6           such personnel as may be necessary and appro-
7           priate to carry out the responsibilities of the 8           Court of Asbestos Claims; and 9           “(D) make such expenditures as may be 10          necessary and appropriate in the administration

11          of the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos
12          Claims and the chief judge under this chapter
13          and the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution
14          Act of 2003.

15       “(d) TIME AND PLACES OF HOLDING COURT.—

16           “(1) IN GENERAL.—The principal office of the 17          Court of Asbestos Claims shall be in the District of 18          Columbia, but the Court of Asbestos Claims may 19          hold court at such times and in such places as the 20          chief judge may prescribe by rule.

21           “(2) LIMITATION.—The times and places of the 22          sessions of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be 23          prescribed with a view to securing reasonable oppor-
24          tunity to citizens to appear before the Court of As-25          bestos Claims.

1 “(e) OFFICIAL DUTY STATION; RESIDENCE.—

2 “(1) DUTY STATION.—The official duty station
3 of each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims is the 4 District of Columbia.

5 “(2) RESIDENCE.—After appointment and
6 while in active service, each judge of the Court of 7 Asbestos Claims shall reside within 50 miles of the 8 District of Columbia.

9 “§ 202. Magistrates

10 “(a) APPOINTMENT.—The chief judge shall appoint
11 such magistrates as necessary to facilitate the expeditious
12 processing of claims.

13 “(b) COMPENSATION.—The compensation of mag-
14 istrates shall be determined by the chief judge, but shall 15 not exceed the annual rate of basic pay of level V of the 16 Executive Schedule, as prescribed by section 5316 of title
17 5.

18 “(c) RETIREMENT.—For purposes of Federal laws
19 relating to retirement, including chapters 83 and 84 of 20 title 5, magistrates appointed under this section shall be 21 deemed to be appointed under section 631 of this title.

22 “(d) REGULATIONS.—Except as provided under sub-
23 section (c), chapter 43 shall not apply to magistrates ap-
24 pointed under this chapter, except the chief judge may

1 prescribe rules similar to the provisions of chapter 43 to 2 apply to magistrates.

3 “§ 203. Retirement of judges of the United States
4 Court of Asbestos Claims

5 “(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of Federal laws re-
6 lating to retirement, judges of the Court of Asbestos 7 Claims shall be treated in the same manner and to the 8 same extent as judges of the Court of Federal Claims.

9 “(b) REGULATIONS.—In carrying out this section—

10 “(1) the Director of the Administrative Office
11 of the United States Courts shall promulgate regula-12 tions to apply provisions similar to section 178 of 13 this title (including the establishment of a Court of 14 Asbestos Claims Judges Retirement Fund) to judges 15 of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

16 “(2) the Director of the Office of Personnel
17 Management shall promulgate regulations to apply
18 chapters 83 and 84 of title 5 to judges of the Court
19 of Asbestos Claims.”.

20 (b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—
21 The table of chapters for part I of title 28, United States
22 Code, is amended by striking the item relating to chapter
23 9, and inserting after the item relating to chapter 7 the 24 following:

“9. United States Court of Asbestos Claims.”.

1 Subtitle B—Asbestos Injury Claims
2 Resolution Procedures

3 SEC. 111. FILING OF CLAIMS.

4 (a) WHO MAY SUBMIT.—

5 (1) GENERAL RULE.—Any individual who has 6 suffered from an eligible disease or condition that is 7 believed to meet the requirements established under 8 subtitle C (or the spouse, parent, child, or other rel-
9 ative of such individual in a representative capacity,
10 or the executor of the estate of such individual) may 11 file a claim with the Asbestos Court for compensa-
12 tion with respect to such injury.

13 (2) RULES.—The Asbestos Court may issue
14 procedural rules to specify individuals who may file 15 an asbestos claim as a representative of another in-16 dividual.

17 (3) LIMITATION.—An asbestos claim may not 18 be filed by any person seeking contribution or in-19 demnity.

20 (b) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—To be valid, an as-21 bestos claim filed under subsection (a) shall be notarized
22 and include—

23 (1) the name, social security number, gender, 24 date of birth, and, if applicable, date of death of the 25 claimant;

1           (2) information relating to the identity of de-
2           pendents and beneficiaries of the claimant;

3           (3) a detailed description of the work history of 4           the claimant, including social security records or a
5           signed release permitting access to such records;

6           (4) a detailed description of the asbestos expo-
7           sure of the claimant, including information on the 8           identity of any product or manufacturer, site, or lo-
9           cation of exposure, plant name, and duration and in-10          tensity of exposure;

11          (5) a detailed description of the tobacco product
12          use history of the claimant, including frequency and 13          duration;

14          (6) an identification and description of the as-15          bestos-related diseases of the claimant, including a 16          written report by the claimant's physician with med-
17          ical diagnoses and test results necessary to make a 18          determination of medical eligibility that complies 19          with the applicable requirements of this subtitle and 20          subtitle C;

21          (7) a description of any prior or pending civil 22          action or other claim brought by the claimant for as-23          bestos-related injury, including an identification of 24          any recovery of compensation or damages through 25          settlement, judgment, or otherwise; and

1 (8) any other information that is required to be
2 included under procedural rules issued by the Court.

3 (c) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

4 (1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in para-
5 graphs (2) and (3), if an individual fails to file an 6 asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court under this 7 section within 2 years after the date on which the 8 individual first—

9 (A) received a medical diagnosis of an eli-
10 gible disease or condition as provided for under 11 this subtitle and subtitle C; or

12 (B) discovered facts that would have led a 13 reasonable person to obtain a medical diagnosis
14 with respect to an eligible disease or condition, 15 any claim relating to that injury, and any other as-
16 bestos claim related to that injury, shall be extin-
17 guished, and any recovery thereon shall be prohib-
18 ited.

19 (2) EFFECT ON PENDING CLAIMS.—If an asbes-
20 tos claimant has any claim for an asbestos-related
21 injury that is pending in a Federal or State court
22 or with a trust established under title 11, United 23 States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act, 24 such claimant shall file an asbestos claim under this 25 section within 2 years after such date of enactment

1 or be barred from receiving any compensation under 2 this title.

3 (3) EFFECT OF MULTIPLE INJURIES.—An as-4 bestos claimant who receives compensation under 5 this title for an eligible disease or condition, and who 6 subsequently develops another such injury, shall be 7 eligible for additional compensation under this title
8 (subject to appropriate setoffs for such prior recov-
9 ery of compensation under this title and from any 10 other collateral source) and the statute of limitations
11 under paragraph (1) shall not begin to run with re-
12 spect to such subsequent injury until such claimant 13 obtains a medical diagnosis of such other injury or 14 discovers facts that would have led a reasonable per-15 son to obtain such a diagnosis.

16 (4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Paragraph (2)
17 shall be interpreted as a statute of limitations and 18 be construed to the benefit of the Fund and of any 19 person who might otherwise have been made subject
20 to an asbestos claim to which such paragraph is ap-21 plied.

22 SEC. 112. GENERAL RULE CONCERNING NO-FAULT COM-
23 PENSATION.

24 An asbestos claimant shall not be required to dem-
25 onstrate that the asbestos-related injury for which the

1 claim is being made resulted from the negligence or other
2 fault of any other person.

3 SEC. 113. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS
4 CLAIM.

5 To be eligible for compensation under this subtitle for 6 an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

7 (1) file an asbestos claim in a timely manner in 8 accordance with section 111; and

9 (2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence
10 that—

11 (A) the claimant suffers from an eligible
12 disease or condition, as demonstrated by evi-
13 dence (submitted as part of the claim) that 14 meets the medical criteria requirements and di-15 agnostic criteria requirements established under 16 subtitle C; and

17 (B) the claimant meets the latency criteria
18 requirements and the exposure criteria require-
19 ments established under subtitle C.

20 SEC. 114. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS AND CLAIM
21 AWARDS.

22 (a) CLAIMS EXAMINERS.—

23 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Asbestos Court shall 24 appoint, or contract for the services of, qualified in-

1 individuals to assist magistrates by conducting eligi-
2 bility reviews of asbestos claims filed with the Court.

3 (2) CRITERIA.—The Asbestos Court shall estab-
4 lish criteria with respect to the qualifications of indi-
5 viduals who are eligible to serve as claims examiners 6 and, in developing such criteria, shall consult with 7 such experts as the Court determines appropriate.

8 (b) REFERRAL OF ASBESTOS CLAIM.—Not later than 9 20 days after the filing of an asbestos claim with the As-10 bestos Court, the Court shall refer such claim to a mag-
11 istrate.

12 (c) INITIAL REVIEW.—

13 (1) IN GENERAL.—Under the direction of a 14 magistrate, a claims examiner shall make an initial 15 review of an asbestos claim to determine whether all 16 required information has been submitted by the 17 claimant.

18 (2) NOTICE OF INCOMPLETE CLAIM.—If the 19 claims examiner determines that all required infor-
20 mation has not been submitted, the examiner—

21 (A) shall notify the claimant of such deter-
22 mination and require the submission of addi-
23 tional information necessary for a determina-
24 tion of eligibility;

108TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSION

S. _____

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

_____ introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on _____

A BILL

To create a fair and efficient system to resolve claims of victims for bodily injury caused by asbestos exposure, and for other purposes.

1       Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2       tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3       SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

4       (a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the 5       “Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003” or 6       the “FAIR Act of 2003”.

7       (b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of 8       this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.
Sec. 2. Purpose.
Sec. 3. Definitions.

1 (B) may compel the submission of any ad-
2 ditional information;

3 (C) may request that the claimant undergo 4 additional medical examinations and tests if in-5 formation from such examinations or tests is 6 necessary to enable the examiner to make a de-
7 termination of medical eligibility; and

8 (D) may require any releases necessary to 9 enable the examiner to obtain medical or other
10 information relevant to the determination of eli-
11 gibility.

12 (d) EXPEDITIOUS DETERMINATIONS.—The Asbestos
13 Court shall prescribe rules to expedite claims for asbestos
14 claimants with exigent circumstances.

15 (e) AUDIT AND PERSONNEL REVIEW PROCE-
16 DURES.—The Asbestos Court shall establish audit and 17 personnel review procedures for evaluating the accuracy
18 of eligibility recommendations of magistrates.

19 (f) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—

20 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after 21 the receipt by a magistrate of all required informa-
22 tion and requested medical advice with respect to an 23 asbestos claim, the magistrate shall transmit a rec-24 ommendation of the compensation to which the

1 claimant is entitled and findings of fact to a judge
2 of the Asbestos Court.

3 (2) ADMISSIBILITY OF FINDINGS OF FACT.—A
4 determination under paragraph (1) shall include rel-
5 evant findings of fact and shall be admissible as evi-
6 dence in any judicial review.

7 (g) DECISION OF JUDGE.—

8 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after 9 receipt of a recommendation of a magistrate, a judge
10 of the Asbestos Court shall make a final decision of 11 any compensation to which the claimant is entitled.

12 (2) WAIVER OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—The final
13 decision under paragraph (1) shall include an ac-
14 ceptance form by which the claimant may waive the 15 right to judicial review and expedite payment of 16 compensation from the Fund.

17 (h) AWARDING OF COMPENSATION.—

18 (1) IN GENERAL.—If a judge of the Asbestos
19 Court determines that an asbestos claimant is enti-
20 tled to compensation, the Court shall notify the Ad-
21 ministrator to award the claimant compensation
22 from the Fund in the amount of the judge's deci-
23 sion.

1           (2) CLAIM EXTINGUISHED.—The acceptance of
2           a payment under this Act shall extinguish all claims
3           related to such payment.

4 SEC. 115. MEDICAL EVIDENCE AUDITING PROCEDURES.

5           (a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall de-
6           velop methods for auditing the medical evidence submitted
7           as part of an asbestos claim, including methods to ensure 8           the independent reading of x-rays and results of pul-
9           monary function tests. The Court may develop additional 10          methods for auditing other types of evidence or informa-
11          tion received by the Court.

12          (b) REFUSAL TO CONSIDER CERTAIN EVIDENCE.—

13               (1) IN GENERAL.—If the Asbestos Court deter-14               mines that an audit conducted in accordance with 15               the methods developed under subsection (a) dem-
16               onstrates that the medical evidence submitted by a 17               specific physician or medical facility is not consistent 18               with prevailing medical practices or the applicable
19               requirements of this Act, the Court shall notify 20               claims examiners and the magistrates that any med-
21               ical evidence from such physician or facility shall be 22               unacceptable for purposes of establishing eligibility
23               for compensation under this Act.

24               (2) NOTIFICATION.—Upon a determination by 25               the Asbestos Court under paragraph (1), the Court

1 shall notify the physician or medical facility involved
2 of the results of the audit. Such physician or facility
3 shall have a right to appeal the determination of the 4 Court under procedures issued by the Court.

5 SEC. 116. CLAIMANT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

6 (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall es-
7 tablish an asbestos claimant assistance program to provide
8 assistance to claimants in preparing and submitting asbes-
9 tos claim applications and in responding to claimant in-10 quiries.

11 (b) LEGAL ASSISTANCE.—

12 (1) IN GENERAL.—As part of the program es-
13 tablished under subsection (a), the Asbestos Court
14 shall establish a legal assistance program to provide 15 assistance to asbestos claimants concerning legal 16 representation issues.

17 (2) LIST OF QUALIFIED ATTORNEYS.—As part 18 of the program, the Court shall maintain a roster of 19 qualified attorneys who have agreed to provide pro
20 bono services to asbestos claimants under rules es-
21 tablished by the Court. The claimants shall not be 22 required to use the attorneys listed on such roster.

2   SEC. 121. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS

3           CLAIM.

4           To be eligible for compensation under this title for 5 an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

6           (1) file an asbestos claim under this title in a 7 timely manner; and

8           (2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence
9 that—

10           (A) the claimant suffers from an eligible
11 disease or condition, as demonstrated by evi-
12 dence (submitted as part of the claim) that
13 meets the diagnostic criteria requirements de-
14 scribed in section 122 and the medical criteria 15 requirements described in section 124; and

16           (B) the claimant meets the latency criteria
17 requirements described in section 123 and the 18 exposure criteria requirements described in sec-
19 tion 125.

20   SEC. 122. DIAGNOSTIC CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

21           (a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive com-
22 pensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury,
23 the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall dem-
24 onstrate a medical diagnosis that meets the requirements
25 of this section.

1 (b) DIAGNOSIS.—A medical diagnosis meets the re-
2 quirements of this section if the diagnosis—

3 (1) is made by a physician who—

4 (A) treated, or is treating, the claimant;

5 (B) conducted an in-person medical exam-
6 ination of the claimant; and

7 (C) is licensed to practice medicine in the 8 State in which the examination occurred and in 9 which the diagnosis is rendered;

10 (2) includes a review by the physician of the 11 work history, asbestos exposure pattern, and smok-
12 ing history of the claimant, or other factors deter-
13 mined appropriate by the Asbestos Court;

14 (3) is independently verified with respect to the 15 duration, proximity, regularity, and intensity of the 16 asbestos exposure involved; and

17 (4) has excluded other more likely causes of the 18 injury of the claimant.

19 (c) RESULTS OF MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS AND 20 TESTS.—

21 (1) IN GENERAL.—In making the demonstra-
22 tion required under subsection (a), an asbestos 23 claimant shall submit—

24 (A) x-rays (including both films and B-25 reader reports);

1 (B) detailed results of pulmonary function
2 tests (including spirometric tracings);
3 (C) laboratory tests; and
4 (D) the results of medical examination or 5 reviews of other medical evidence.

6 (2) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—A submis-
7 sion under paragraph (1) shall comply with the re-
8 quirements of this Act and recognized medical 9 standards regarding equipment, testing methods,
10 and procedures to ensure that such medical evidence
11 is reliable.

12 (d) SUFFICIENCY OF MEDICAL EVIDENCE.—In mak-13 ing determinations under this section, a magistrate shall 14 not make a determination unless the medical evidence pro-
15 vided in support of the asbestos claim is credible and con-
16 sistent with this section, the medical criteria described in 17 section 124, and recognized medical standards.

18 (e) ATTORNEY RETENTION AGREEMENTS.—An at-19 torney retention agreement shall not be required as a pre-
20 requisite to a medical examination or medical screening
21 for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other
22 medical information under this section.

23 (f) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules
24 to implement the diagnostic criteria requirements to be 25 used in applying this section.

1 SEC. 123. LATENCY CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

2 (a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive com-
3 pensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury,
4 the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall dem-
5 onstrate that the claimant was exposed to asbestos—

6 (1) in a manner that meets the exposure re-
7 quirements of sections 124 and 125;

8 (2) within the United States or its territories or 9 possessions; and

10 (3) for at least 10 years before the initial diag-
11 nosis of any asbestos-related injury.

12 (b) CONSISTENCY WITH MEDICAL CRITERIA.—An as-13 bestos claimant shall be required to demonstrate that any 14 delay between asbestos exposure and the asbestos-related 15 injury is consistent with medical criteria concerning the 16 latency periods typically associated with the disease cat-
17 egory for which the claim is being made.

18 (c) VARIATIONS IN LATENCY PERIODS.—Latency pe-
19 riods under this section may vary based on the eligible
20 disease or condition involved.

21 (d) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe
22 rules, based on the medical literature or other appropriate
23 medical evidence concerning latency periods, for the pur-
24 pose of implementing the criteria used in applying this sec-
25 tion.

1 SEC. 124. MEDICAL CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

2 (a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following defi-
3 nitions shall apply:

4 (1) BILATERAL ASBESTOS-RELATED NONMALIGNANT DISEASE.—The term “bilateral asbestos-re-5 lated nonmalignant disease” means a diagnosis of 6 bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease
7 based on—

8 (A) an x-ray reading of  $\frac{1}{2}$  or higher on the 9 ILO scale; or

10 (B) an x-ray showing bilateral pleural
11 plaques or pleural thickening, bilateral intersti-
12 tial fibrosis, or bilateral interstitial markings.

13 (2) BILATERAL PLEURAL DISEASE OF B2.—The 14 term “bilateral pleural disease of B2” means a chest
15 wall pleural thickening or plaque with a maximum 16 width of at least 5 millimeters and a total length of 17 at least  $\frac{1}{4}$  of the projection of the lateral chest wall.

18 (3) FEV<sub>1</sub>.—The term “FEV<sub>1</sub>” means forced 19 expiratory volume (1 second), which is the maximal
20 volume of air expelled in 1 second during perform-
21 ance of the spirometric test for forced vital capacity.

22 (4) FVC.—The term “FVC” means forced vital
23 capacity, which is the maximal volume of air expired 24 with a maximally forced effort from a position of 25 maximal inspiration.
26

1           (5) ILO GRADE.—The term “ILO grade”
2       means the radiological ratings for the presence of 3       lung or pleural changes as determined from a chest
4       x-ray, all as established from time to time by the 5       International Labor Organization.

6           (6) PATHOLOGICAL EVIDENCE OF ASBES-
7       TOSIS.—The term “pathological evidence of asbes-
8       tosis” means proof of asbestosis based on the patho-
9       logical grading system for asbestosis described in the 10      Special Issue of the Archives of Pathology and Lab-
11      oratory Medicine, “Asbestos-associated Diseases”,
12      Vol. 106, No. 11, App. 3 (October 8, 1982).

13          (7) PULMONARY FUNCTION TESTING.—The 14      term “pulmonary function testing” means 15      spirometry testing that is in compliance with the 16      quality criteria established from time to time by the 17      American Thoracic Society and is performed on 18      equipment which is in compliance with the standards
19      of the American Thoracic Society for technical qual-
20      ity and calibration.

21          (8) SIGNIFICANT OCCUPATIONAL EXPOSURE.—
22      The term “significant occupational exposure” means
23      employment for a cumulative period of at least 5
24      years, in an industry and an occupation in which the 25      claimant—

1 (A) handled raw asbestos fibers on a reg-
2 ular basis;

3 (B) fabricated asbestos-containing prod-
4 ucts so that the claimant in the fabrication
5 process was exposed on a regular basis to raw
6 asbestos fibers;

7 (C) altered, repaired, or otherwise worked
8 with an asbestos-containing product such that 9 the claimant was exposed on a regular basis to 10 asbestos fibers; or

11 (D) was employed in an industry and occu-
12 pation such that the claimant worked on a reg-
13 ular basis in close proximity to workers engaged
14 in the activities described under subparagraph
15 (A), (B), or (C).

16 (9) TLC.—The term “TLC” means total lung 17 capacity, which is the volume of air in the lung after 18 maximal inspiration.

19 (b) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible for compensation
20 or medical monitoring reimbursement under this title, a 21 claimant shall establish that the claimant meets the med-
22 ical criteria for 1 of the following categories:

23 (1) For Level I: Asymptomatic Exposure, the 24 claimant shall provide—

1 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
2 ments of section 122 of a bilateral asbestos-re-
3 lated nonmalignant disease or an asbestos-re-
4 lated malignancy; and

5 (B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

6 (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
7 to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

8 (ii) 5 years cumulative occupational
9 exposure to asbestos.

10 (2) For Level II: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A, 11 the claimant shall provide—

12 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
13 ments of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-
14 rays for which a B-reader report is furnished
15 showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade
16  $\frac{1}{10}$  or greater, or showing bilateral pleural dis-
17 ease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evi-
18 dence of asbestosis; and

19 (B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

20 (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
21 to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

22 (ii) significant occupational exposure.

23 (3) For Level III: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B,
24 the claimant shall provide—

1 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
2 ments of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-
3 rays for which a B-reader report is furnished
4 showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade
5 1/6 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural dis-
6 ease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evi-
7 dence of asbestosis;

8 (B) pulmonary function testing that
9 shows—

10 (i) TLC less than 80 percent of pre-
11 dicted; or

12 (ii) FVC less than 80 percent of pre-
13 dicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio of not less
14 than 65 percent; and

15 (C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

16 (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
17 to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

18 (ii) significant occupational exposure.

19 (4) For Level IV: Severe Asbestosis, the claim-
20 ant shall provide—

21 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
22 ments of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-
23 rays for which a B-reader report is furnished
24 showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade

1            $\frac{2}{1}$  or greater, or by pathological evidence of as-2           bestosis;

3           (B) pulmonary function testing that
4           shows—

5                 (i) TLC less than 65 percent of pre-
6                 dicted; or

7                 (ii) FVC less than 65 percent of pre-
8                 dicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio greater
9                 than 65 percent; and

10           (C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

11                 (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
12                 to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

13                 (ii) significant occupational exposure.

14           (5) For Level V: Other Cancer, the claimant
15           shall provide—

16                 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
17                 ments of section 122 of a primary laryngeal,
18                 esophageal, pharyngeal, or stomach cancer;

19                 (B) evidence of an underlying bilateral as-20                 bestos-related nonmalignant disease; and

21                 (C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

22                 (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
23                 to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

24                 (ii) significant occupational exposure.

1           (6) For Level VI: Lung Cancer One, the claim-
2           ant shall provide—

3                   (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
4                   ments of section 122 of a primary lung cancer;
5                   and

6                   (B) meaningful and credible evidence of 6
7                   months of occupational exposure to asbestos be-
8                   fore December 31, 1982.

9           (7) For Level VII: Lung Cancer Two, the 10           claimant shall provide—

11                   (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
12                   ments of section 122 of a primary lung cancer;

13                   (B) evidence of an underlying bilateral as-
14                   bestos-related nonmalignant disease;

15                   (C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

16                           (i) 6 months of occupational exposure
17                           to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

18                           (ii) significant occupational exposure;

19                   and

20                   (D) supporting medical documentation and 21                   certification by or on behalf of the claimant es-22                   tablishing asbestos exposure as a contributing 23                   factor causing the relevant lung cancer.

24           (8) For Level VIII: Mesothelioma, the claimant
25           shall provide—

1 (A) a diagnosis that meets the require-
2 ments of section 122 of mesothelioma; and

3 (B) meaningful and credible evidence of
4 exposure to asbestos.

5 SEC. 125. EXPOSURE CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

6 (a) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible to receive com-
7 pensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury,
8 the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall contain 9 information to demonstrate that the claimant meets the 10 minimum exposure requirements under this subtitle.

11 (b) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

12 (1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant has 13 the burden of demonstrating meaningful and cred-
14 ible exposure to asbestos for purposes of this sub-
15 title.

16 (2) EVIDENCE.—The demonstration under 17 paragraph (1) may be established by—

18 (A) an affidavit submitted by the claimant,
19 a coworker of the claimant, or a family mem-
20 ber, in the case of a deceased claimant;

21 (B) employment records;

22 (C) invoices;

23 (D) construction or other similar records;

24 or

25 (E) other credible evidence.

1 (c) RULES.—

2 (1) EXPOSURE INFORMATION.—The Asbestos
3 Court shall issue rules prescribing specific exposure
4 information that shall be submitted to permit the 5 Court to process an asbestos claim and prescribing
6 a proof of claim form. Such rules may provide that 7 a claims examiner or magistrate, as applicable, may 8 require the submission of other or additional evi-
9 dence of exposure when determined to be appro-
10 priate and necessary.

11 (2) REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS.—The Asbes-
12 tos Court may prescribe rules identifying specific in-13 dustries, occupations within those industries, time
14 periods, and employment periods for which signifi-
15 cant occupational exposure (as defined under section 16 124) may be a rebuttable presumption for asbestos
17 claimants who provide meaningful and credible evi-
18 dence that the claimant worked in that industry and 19 occupation for the requisite period of time. The Ad-
20 ministrator may provide evidence to rebut this pre-21 sumption.

22 Subtitle D—Awards

23 SEC. 131. AMOUNT.

24 (a) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who meets
25 the requirements of section 113 shall be entitled to com-

1   pensation in an amount determined by reference to the 2   benefit table contained in subsection (b).

3       (b) BENEFIT TABLE.—

4           (1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant with 5   an eligible disease or condition established in accord-
6   ance with section 124, other than an injury de-
7   scribed in paragraph (2), shall be eligible for com-
8   pensation according to the following schedule:

Level	Scheduled Condi- tion or Disease	Scheduled Value
I	Asymptomatic Ex- posure	$0
II	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A	$0
III	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B	$40,000
IV	Severe Asbestosis	$400,000
V	Other Cancer	$200,000
VI	Lung Cancer I (smoker)	$50,000
VII	Lung Cancer II (non-smoker)	$400,000
VIII	Mesothelioma	$750,000

9           (2) MEDICAL MONITORING.—An asbestos claim-
10   ant with asymptomatic exposure or asbestosis/pleu-
11   ral disease A, based on the criteria under section 12   124(b)(1), shall only be eligible for medical moni-
13   toring reimbursement.

14   SEC. 132. MEDICAL MONITORING.

15       (a) RELATION TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—The 16   filing of an asbestos claim that seeks reimbursement for 17   medical monitoring shall not be considered as evidence

1 that the claimant has discovered facts that would other-
2 wise commence the period applicable for purposes of the 3 statute of limitations under section 111(c).

4 (b) COSTS.—Reimbursable medical monitoring costs
5 shall include the costs of a claimant not covered by health
6 insurance for x-ray tests and pulmonary function tests
7 every 3 years.

8 (c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator shall promul-
9 gate regulations that establish—

10 (1) the reasonable costs for medical monitoring 11 that is reimbursable; and

12 (2) the procedures applicable to asbestos claim-13 ants.

14 SEC. 133. PAYMENTS.

15 (a) STRUCTURED PAYMENTS.—

16 (1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who is 17 entitled to compensation shall receive such com-
18 pensation through structured payments from the 19 Fund, made over a period of not less than 3 years.

20 (2) ACCELERATED PAYMENTS.—The Adminis-
21 trator shall develop guidelines to provide for acceler-
22 ated payments to asbestos claimants who are meso-23 thelioma victims and who are alive on the date on 24 which the administrator receives notice of the eligi-
25 bility of the claimant. Such payments shall be cred-

1       ited against the first regular payment under the 2       structured payment plan for the claimant.

3           (3) EXPEDITED PAYMENTS.—The Adminis-
4       trator shall develop guidelines to provide for expe-
5       dited payments to asbestos claimants in cases of exi-
6       gent circumstances or extreme hardship caused by 7       asbestos-related injury.

8           (4) ANNUITY.—An asbestos claimant may elect
9       to receive any payments to which they are entitled
10      under this title in the form of an annuity.

11       (b) LIMITATION ON TRANSFERABILITY.—An asbestos 12      claim shall not be assignable or otherwise transferable
13      under this Act.

14       (c) CREDITORS.—An award of compensation under 15      this title shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and 16      from levy, execution, and attachment or other remedy for 17      recovery or collection of a debt, and such exemption may 18      not be waived.

19       (d) TREATMENT FOR INTERNAL REVENUE PUR-
20      POSES.—All compensation received under this subtitle
21      shall be deemed to be compensation for personal physical 22      injuries or physical sickness under section 104 of the In-23      ternal Revenue Code of 1986.

24       (e) MEDICARE AS SECONDARY PAYER.—No award of 25      compensation under this title shall be deemed a payment

Sec. 225. Additional contributing participants.

TITLE III—JUDICIAL REVIEW

Sec. 301. Judicial review of decisions of the Asbestos Court.

Sec. 302. Judicial review of final determinations of the Asbestos Insurers Commission.

Sec. 303. Exclusive review.

Sec. 304. Private right of action against reinsurers.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Sec. 401. False information.

Sec. 402. Effect on bankruptcy laws.

Sec. 403. Effect on other laws and existing claims.

1 SEC. 2. PURPOSE.

2       The purpose of this Act is to create a privately fund-
3 ed, publicly administered fund to provide the necessary re-
4 sources for an asbestos injury claims resolution program.

5 SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

6       In this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

7           (1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term “Adminis-
8 trator” means the Administrator of the Office of As-9 bestos Injury Claims Resolution appointed under 10 section 221(c).

11           (2) ASBESTOS.—The term “asbestos”
12 includes—

13                   (A) chrysotile;

14                   (B) amosite;

15                   (C) crocidolite;

16                   (D) tremolite;

17                   (E) winchite;

18                   (F) richterite;

19                   (G) anthophyllite;

1 for purposes of section 1862 of the Social Security Act
2 (42 U.S.C. 1395y).

3 SEC. 134. REDUCTION IN BENEFIT PAYMENTS FOR COLLAT-
4 ERAL SOURCES.

5 (a) IN GENERAL.—The amount of compensation oth-
6 erwise available to an asbestos claimant under this title
7 shall be reduced by the amount of collateral source com-
8 pensation that the claimant received, or is entitled to re-
9 ceive, for the asbestos-related injury that is the subject
10 of the compensation.

11 (b) EXCLUSIONS.—In no case shall statutory benefits
12 under workers' compensation laws and veterans benefits
13 programs be deemed as collateral source compensation for 14 purposes of this section.

15 Subtitle E—En Banc Review

16 SEC. 141. EN BANC REVIEW.

17 (a) IN GENERAL.—

18 (1) EN BANC PANELS.—The chief judge of the 19 Asbestos Court shall—

20 (A) establish en banc panels to carry out
21 this subtitle; and

22 (B) assign 3 judges of the Asbestos Court
23 to each en banc panel.

24 (2) FILING OF APPEAL.—Not later than 30
25 days after receiving notice of the decision of a judge

1 under section 114, a claimant may file an appeal for 2 review with an en banc panel of the Asbestos Court.

3 (b) DE NOVO REVIEW.—An Asbestos Court panel
4 shall provide a de novo review of the magistrate’s deter-
5 mination and the judge’s decision.

6 (c) REPRESENTATION OF THE ADMINISTRATOR.—
7 The Administrator may appoint counsel to represent the 8 interests of the Fund and the Administrator in all pro-
9 ceedings before a panel, including oral arguments and the 10 submission of briefs.

11 (d) FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.—
12 An Asbestos Court panel shall apply the Federal Rules 13 of Appellate Procedures to all proceedings before the 14 panel.

15 (e) DECISION OF PANEL.—An Asbestos Court panel
16 shall enter a final decision on an appeal on the earlier
17 date occurring—

18 (1) not later than 30 days after the date of the 19 conclusion of oral arguments; or 20 (2) not later than 60 days after an appeal is 21 filed under this section.

2     CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND
3     Subtitle A—Asbestos Defendants
4     Funding Allocation

5     SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

6         In this subtitle, the following definitions shall apply:

7             (1) AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term “affiliated 8         group” means—

9                 (A) with respect to any nonbankrupt de-
10             fendant participant that is an ultimate parent
11             or a person whose entire beneficial interest is 12             owned on the date of enactment of this Act, di-
13             rectly or indirectly, by an ultimate parent, that 14             set of nonbankrupt persons including the ulti-
15             mate parent and all of the nonbankrupt persons
16             whose entire beneficial interest shall be owned 17             on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by 18             that ultimate parent; or

19                 (B) with respect to any bankrupt defend-20             ant participant, the debtor and all of its direct
21             and indirect majority owned subsidiaries,
22             whether or not such subsidiaries are debtors.

23             (2) DEBTOR.—The term “debtor”—

24                 (A) means all entities that are subject to 25             a case pending under any chapter of title 11,

1 United States Code, on the date of enactment
2 of this Act; and

3 (B) shall not include an entity—

4 (i) subject to chapter 7 of title 11,
5 United States Code, if a final decree clos-
6 ing the estate shall have been entered be-7 fore the date of enactment of this Act; or

8 (ii) subject to chapter 11 of title 11,
9 United States Code, if a plan of reorga-
10 nization for such entity shall have been 11 confirmed by a final judgment.

12 (3) INDEMNIFIABLE COST.—The term
13 “indemnifiable cost” means a cost, expense, debt, 14 judgment, or settlement incurred with respect to an 15 asbestos claim that, at any time before December
16 31, 2002, was or could have been subject to indem-
17 nification, contribution, surety, or guaranty.

18 (4) INDEMNITEE.—The term “indemnitee”
19 means a person against whom any asbestos claim
20 has been asserted before December 31, 2002, who 21 has received from any other person, or on whose be-22 half a sum has been paid by such other person to 23 any third person, in settlement, judgment, defense,
24 or indemnity in connection with an alleged duty with 25 respect to the defense or indemnification of such

1 person concerning that asbestos claim, other than 2 under a policy of insurance or reinsurance.

3 (5) INDEMNITOR.—The term “indemnitor”
4 means a person who has paid under a written agree-
5 ment at any time before December 31, 2002, a sum
6 in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity to or 7 on behalf of any person defending against an asbes-
8 tos claim, in connection with an alleged duty with 9 respect to the defense or indemnification of such 10 person concerning that asbestos claim, except that 11 payments by an insurer or reinsurer under a con-
12 tract of insurance or reinsurance shall not make the 13 insurer or reinsurer an indemnitor for purposes of 14 this subtitle.

15 (6) PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—The 16 term “prior asbestos expenditures”—

17 (A) means the gross total amount paid by 18 or on behalf of a person at any time before De-
19 cember 31, 2002, in settlement, judgment, de-
20 fense, or indemnity costs related to all asbestos
21 claims against that person;

22 (B) includes payments made by insurance
23 carriers to or for the benefit of such person or 24 on such person’s behalf with respect to such as-

1           bestos claims, except as provided in section
2           204(g);

3           (C) shall not include any payment made by 4           a person in connection with any activities or 5           disputes related to insurance coverage matters
6           for asbestos-related liabilities; and

7           (D) shall not include any payment made by 8           or on behalf of persons who are common car-
9           riers by railroad for asbestos claims brought 10          under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51
11          et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Em-
12          ployers' Liability Act, including settlement,
13          judgment, defense, or indemnity costs associ-
14          ated with these claims.

15          (7) TRUST.—The term “trust” means all per-16          sons or affiliated groups that formed under section
17          524(g) of title 11, United States Code, or formed
18          under any plan under section 1129 of title 11,
19          United States Code, for the purpose of admin-
20          istering and paying asbestos claims.

21          (8) ULTIMATE PARENT.—The term “ultimate 22          parent” means a person—

23                 (A) that owns, on the date of enactment of 24                 this Act, the entire beneficial interest, directly 25                 or indirectly, of at least 1 other person; and

1 (B) whose entire beneficial interest is not
2 owned, on December 31, 2002, directly or indi-
3 rectly, by any other single person.

4 SEC. 202. AUTHORITY AND TIERS.

5 (a) ASSESSMENT.—

6 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
7 sess from defendant participants contributions to the 8 Fund in accordance with this section based on tiers
9 and subtiers assigned to defendant participants.

10 (2) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The 11 total contribution required of all defendant partici-
12 pants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to 13 $45,000,000,000.

14 (b) TIER I.—The Administrator shall assign to Tier
15 I all persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that in-16 clude a person that—

17 (1) is a debtor on the date of enactment of this 18 Act or at any time during the 1-year period pre-19 ceding that date; and

20 (2) have paid a prior asbestos expenditure, irre-
21 spective of whether a related case under title 11,
22 United States Code, is dismissed.

23 (c) TREATMENT OF TIER I BUSINESS ENTITIES IN 24 BANKRUPTCY.—

1 (1) DEFINED TERM.—In this subsection, the
2 term “bankrupt business entity” means a person
3 that is not a natural person that—

4 (A) filed under chapter 11, of title 11,
5 United States Code, before January 1, 2003;

6 (B) has not confirmed a plan of reorga-
7 nization as of the date of enactment of this Act;
8 and

9 (C) the Chief Executive Officer, Chief Fi-
10 nancial Officer, or Chief Legal Officer of that 11 business entity certifies in writing to the bank-
12 ruptcy court presiding over the business entity’s
13 case, that asbestos liability was neither the sole 14 nor precipitating cause for the filing under 15 chapter 11.

16 (2) PROCEEDING WITH REORGANIZATION
17 PLAN.—A bankrupt business entity may proceed
18 with the filing, solicitation, and confirmation of a 19 plan of reorganization that does not comply with the 20 requirements of this Act, including a trust and chan-
21 neling injunction under section 524(g) of title 11,
22 United States Code, notwithstanding any other pro-
23 visions of this Act, if—

1 (A) the bankruptcy court presiding over
2 the chapter 11 case of the bankrupt business
3 entity determines that—

4 (i) confirmation is necessary to permit
5 the reorganization of that entity and as-6 sure that all creditors and that entity are 7 treated fairly and equitably; and

8 (ii) confirmation is clearly favored by 9 the balance of the equities; and

10 (B) an order confirming the plan of reor-
11 ganization is entered by the bankruptcy court
12 within 9 months after the date of enactment of 13 this Act or such longer period of time approved
14 by the bankruptcy court for cause shown.

15 (3) APPLICABILITY.—If the bankruptcy court
16 does not make the required determination, or if an 17 order confirming the plan is not entered within 9
18 months of the effective date of this Act or such 19 longer period of time approved by the bankruptcy
20 court for cause shown, the provisions of the Act
21 shall apply to the bankrupt business entity notwith-
22 standing the certification. Any timely appeal under 23 title 11, United States Code, from a confirmation 24 order entered during the applicable time period shall 25 automatically extend the time during which this Act

1 is inapplicable to the bankrupt business entity, until 2 the appeal is fully and finally resolved.

3 (4) OFFSETS.—

4 (A) PAYMENTS BY INSURERS.—To the ex-
5 tent that a bankrupt business entity success-
6 fully confirms a plan of reorganization, includ-
7 ing a trust under section 524(g) of title 11,
8 United States Code, and channeling injunction
9 that involves payments by insurers who are oth-
10 erwise subject to this Act, an insurer who 11 makes payments to the trust under section
12 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, shall ob-
13 tain a dollar for dollar reduction in the amount 14 otherwise payable by that insurer under this 15 Act to the Fund.

16 (B) CONTRIBUTIONS TO FUND.—Any cash
17 payments by a bankrupt business entity, if any,
18 to a trust under section 524(g) of title 11,
19 United States Code, may be counted as a con-
20 tribution to the Fund.

21 (d) TIERS II THROUGH VI.—Except as provided in 22 sections 202(b), 204(b), and 204(g), persons or affiliated 23 groups shall be assigned to Tier II, III, IV, V, or VI ac-
24 cording to the prior asbestos expenditures paid by such 25 persons or affiliated groups as follows:

1 (H) actinolite;

2 (I) any of the minerals listed under sub-
3 paragraphs (A) through (H) that has been
4 chemically treated or altered, and any variety,
5 type, or component thereof; and

6 (J) asbestos-containing material, such as 7 asbestos-containing products, automotive or in-8 dustrial parts or components, equipment, im-
9 provements to real property, and any other ma-
10 terial that contains asbestos in any physical or 11 chemical form.

12 (3) ASBESTOS CLAIM.—

13 (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “asbestos 14 claim” means any personal injury claim for 15 damages or other relief presented in a civil ac-
16 tion or bankruptcy proceeding, arising out of,
17 based on, or related to the health effects of ex-
18 posure to asbestos, including loss of consortium,
19 wrongful death, and any derivative claim made 20 by, or on behalf of, any exposed person or any 21 representative, spouse, parent, child or other
22 relative of any exposed person.

23 (B) EXCLUSION.—The term does not in-
24 clude claims for benefits under a workers’ com-
25 pensation law or veterans’ benefits program, or

1 (1) Tier II: $75,000,000 or greater.

2 (2) Tier III: $50,000,000 or greater but less
3 than $75,000,000.

4 (3) Tier IV: $10,000,000 or greater but less
5 than $50,000,000.

6 (4) Tier V: $5,000,000 or greater but less than 7 $10,000,000.

8 (5) Tier VI: $1,000,000 or greater but less
9 than $5,000,000.

10 (e) ASSIGNMENTS AND COSTS.—

11 (1) PERMANENT ASSIGNMENT.—Subject to sec-
12 tion 204(d), after the Administrator has assigned a 13 person or affiliated group to a tier under this sec-
14 tion, such person or affiliated group shall remain in 15 that tier throughout the life of the Fund, regardless 16 of subsequent events, including—

17 (A) the filing of a petition under a chapter
18 of title 11, United States Code;

19 (B) a discharge from bankruptcy;

20 (C) the confirmation of a plan of reorga-
21 nization; or

22 (D) the sale or transfer of assets to any 23 other person or affiliated group.

24 (2) COSTS.—The payment of contributions to 25 the Fund by all persons or affiliated groups that in-

1       clude a person that is a debtor that is the subject
2       of a case under a chapter of title 11, United States
3       Code, after the date of enactment of this Act—

4               (A) shall constitute costs and expenses of 5       administration of the case under section 503 of 6       that title 11 and shall be payable in accordance 7       with the payment provisions under this subtitle
8       notwithstanding the pendency of the case under 9       that title 11;

10              (B) shall not be stayed or affected as to 11       enforcement or collection by any stay or injunc-
12       tion power of any court; and

13              (C) shall not be impaired or discharged in 14       any current or future case under title 11,
15       United States Code.

16       (f) SUPERSEDING PROVISIONS.—Any plan of reorga-17       nization with respect to any debtor assigned to Tier I and 18       any agreement, understanding, or undertaking by any 19       such debtor or any third party with respect to the treat-
20       ment of any asbestos claim filed before the date of enact-21       ment of this Act and subject to confirmation of a plan
22       under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, shall 23       be superseded in their entirety by this Act. Any such plan 24       of reorganization, agreement, understanding, or under-
25       taking by any debtor or any third party shall be of no

1 force or effect, and no person shall have any rights or 2 claims with respect to any of the foregoing.

3 SEC. 203. SUBTIER ASSESSMENTS.

4 (a) IN GENERAL.—

5 (1) ASSESSMENTS.—Except as provided under
6 subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204,
7 the Administrator shall assess contributions to per-
8 sons or affiliated groups within Tiers I through VII
9 in accordance with this section.

10 (2) 2002 REVENUES.—The audited consolidated
11 revenue for the year 2002 of each debtor (in this 12 section referred to as “2002 revenues”) shall include 13 the revenues for year 2002 of the debtor and all of 14 its affiliated groups. The pro forma revenues of a 15 person or affiliated group that are assigned to 16 Subtier 3 shall not be included in calculating the 17 2002 revenues of any debtor that is a direct or indi-
18 rect majority owner of such Subtier 3 person or af-
19 filiated group.

20 (3) GROSS REVENUES.—

21 (A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this 22 section, gross revenues shall be determined in 23 accordance with generally accepted accounting
24 principles, consistently applied, using the 25 amount reported as gross revenues in the an-

1           nual report filed with the Securities and Ex-
2           change Commission in accordance with section
3           13(a)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 4           1934 (15 U.S.C. 78m(a)(2)) for the year end-
5           ing December 31, 2002, or, if applicable, the 6           earlier fiscal year that ends during calendar
7           year 2002, if such fiscal year is principally em-
8           ployed by the defendant participant.

9           (B) INSURANCE PREMIUMS.—Any portion
10          of gross revenues of a defendant participant
11          that is derived from insurance premiums shall 12          not be used to calculate the contribution of that 13          defendant participant under this subtitle.

14          (C) PRIVATELY-HELD COMPANIES.—If the 15          defendant participant is not required to file an 16          earnings report with the Securities and Ex-
17          change Commission, gross revenues shall be the 18          amount that the defendant participant would 19          have reported as gross revenues in the event
20          that it had been required to file the report de-
21          scribed under subparagraph (A).

22       (b) TIER I SUBTIERS.—

23           (1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under
24          subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204,
25          the Administrator shall assign each person or affili-

1       ated group in Tier I to 1 of 4 Subtiers. Each person
2       or affiliated group shall make contributions to the 3       Fund as provided under this section.

4               (2) SUBTIER 1.—

5               (A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are
6       debtors or affiliated groups, which include a
7       debtor with prior asbestos expenditures of 8       $10,000,000 or greater, shall be assigned to
9       Subtier 1.

10              (B) ASSIGNMENT.—Each debtor assigned
11       to Subtier 1 shall make annual payments based 12       on a percentage of its 2002 revenues.

13              (C) PAYMENT.—Each debtor assigned to 14       Subtier 1 shall pay on an annual basis the fol-
15       lowing with respect to the year of the establish-16       ment of the Fund:

17                      (i) Years 1 through 5, 1.4533 percent
18       of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

19                      (ii) Years 6 through 8, 1.3080 percent
20       of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

21                      (iii) Years 9 through 11, 1.1772 per-
22       cent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

23                      (iv) Years 12 through 14, 1.0595 per-
24       cent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

1 (v) Years 15 through 17, 0.9535 per-
2 cent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

3 (vi) Years 18 through 20, 0.8582 per-
4 cent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

5 (vii) Years 21 through 23, 0.7723
6 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

7 (viii) Years 24 through 25, 0.6951
8 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

9 (3) SUBTIER 2.—

10 (A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are
11 debtors or affiliated groups which include a
12 debtor that have no material continuing busi-
13 ness operations but hold cash or other assets
14 that have been allocated or earmarked for as-15 bestos settlements shall be assigned to Subtier
16 2.

17 (B) ASSIGNMENT OF ASSETS.—Not later
18 than 30 days after the date of enactment of 19 this Act, each person or affiliated group as-20 signed to Subtier 2 shall assign all of its assets
21 to the Fund.

22 (4) SUBTIER 3.—

23 (A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are
24 debtors or affiliated groups that include a debt-
25 or, other than those included in Subtier 2,

1 which have no material continuing business op-
2 erations and no cash or other assets allocated
3 or earmarked for the settlement of any asbestos
4 claim, shall be assigned to Subtier 3.

5 (B) ASSIGNMENT OF UNENCUMBERED AS-
6 SETS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of 7 enactment of this Act, each person or affiliated 8 group assigned to Subtier 3 shall contribute an 9 amount equal to 50 percent of its total
10 unencumbered assets.

11 (C) CALCULATION OF UNENCUMBERED AS-
12 SETS.—Unencumbered assets shall be cal-
13 culated as the Subtier 3 person or affiliated 14 group's total assets, excluding insurance related 15 assets, less—

- 16 (i) all allowed administrative expenses;
17 (ii) allowed priority claims under sec-
18 tion 507 of title 11, United States Code;
19 and
20 (iii) allowed secured claims.

21 (c) TIER II SUBTIERS.—

22 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
23 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier II to 1
24 of 5 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated
25 group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each con-

1       tain as close to an equal number of total persons
2       and affiliated groups as possible, with—

3               (A) those persons or affiliated groups with
4               the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier
5               1;

6               (B) those persons or affiliated groups with 7               the next highest gross revenues assigned to
8               Subtier 2;

9               (C) those persons or affiliated groups with
10              the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

11              (D) those persons or affiliated groups with 12              the next lowest gross revenues assigned to
13              Subtier 4; and

14              (E) those persons or affiliated groups re-
15              maining assigned to Subtier 3.

16              (2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group
17              within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual 18              basis, the following:

19                      (A) Subtier 1: $25,000,000.

20                      (B) Subtier 2: $22,500,000.

21                      (C) Subtier 3: $20,000,000.

22                      (D) Subtier 4: $17,500,000.

23                      (E) Subtier 5: $15,000,000.

24              (d) TIER III SUBTIERS.—

1           (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
2           sign each person or affiliated group in Tier III to 1
3           of 5 subtiers, based on the person’s or affiliated
4           group’s gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each con-
5           tain as close to an equal number of total persons
6           and affiliated groups as possible, with—

7                   (A) those persons or affiliated groups with
8                   the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier
9                   1;

10                  (B) those persons or affiliated groups with 11                  the next highest gross revenues assigned to
12                  Subtier 2;

13                  (C) those persons or affiliated groups with
14                  the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

15                  (D) those persons or affiliated groups with 16                  the next lowest gross revenues assigned to 17                  Subtier 4; and

18                  (E) those persons or affiliated groups re-
19                  maining assigned to Subtier 3.

20           (2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group
21           within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual
22           basis, the following:

23                   (A) Subtier 1: $15,000,000.

24                   (B) Subtier 2: $12,500,000.

25                   (C) Subtier 3: $10,000,000.

1 (D) Subtier 4: $7,500,000.

2 (E) Subtier 5: $5,000,000.

3 (e) TIER IV SUBTIERS.—

4 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
5 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier IV to 1
6 of 4 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated
7 group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each con-
8 tain as close to an equal number of total persons
9 and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons
10 or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues
11 in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in 12 Subtier 4. Those persons or affiliated groups with 13 the highest gross revenues among those remaining
14 will be assigned to Subtier 2 and the rest in Subtier
15 3.

16 (2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group
17 within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual 18 basis, the following:

19 (A) Subtier 1: $3,500,000.

20 (B) Subtier 2: $2,250,000.

21 (C) Subtier 3: $1,500,000.

22 (D) Subtier 4: $500,000.

23 (f) TIER V SUBTIERS.—

24 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
25 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier V to 1

1 claims brought by any person as a subrogee by 2 virtue of the payment of benefits under a work-
3 ers' compensation law.

4 (4) ASBESTOS CLAIMANT.—The term “asbestos
5 claimant” means an individual who files an asbestos
6 claim under section 111.

7 (5) ASBESTOS COURT; COURT.—The terms “As-
8 bestos Court” or “Court” means the United States
9 Court of Asbestos Claims established under section
10 101.

11 (6) CIVIL ACTION.—The term “civil action”
12 means all suits of a civil nature in State or Federal 13 court, whether cognizable as cases at law or in eq-
14 uity or in admiralty, but does not include an action
15 relating to any workers' compensation law, or a pro-
16 ceeding for benefits under any veterans' benefits
17 program.

18 (7) COLLATERAL SOURCE.—The term “collat-19 eral source” means all collateral sources, including—

20 (A) disability insurance;

21 (B) health insurance;

22 (C) medicare;

23 (D) medicaid;

24 (E) death benefit programs;

25 (F) defendants;

1 of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated
2 group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each con-
3 tain as close to an equal number of total persons
4 and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons
5 or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues
6 in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in
7 Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

8 (2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group
9 within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual
10 basis, the following:

11 (A) Subtier 1: $1,000,000.

12 (B) Subtier 2: $500,000.

13 (C) Subtier 3: $200,000.

14 (g) TIER VI SUBTIERS.—

15 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall as-
16 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier VI to 1
17 of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated
18 group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each con-
19 tain as close to an equal number of total persons
20 and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons
21 or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues
22 in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in
23 Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

1           (2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group
2           within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual
3           basis, the following:

4                   (A) Subtier 1: $500,000.

5                   (B) Subtier 2: $250,000.

6                   (C) Subtier 3: $100,000.

7           (h) TIER VII.—

8                   (1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any assign-
9           ment to Tiers II, III, IV, V, and VI based on prior 10          asbestos expenditures under section 204(g), a person
11          shall be assigned to Tier VII if the person—

12                   (A) is a common carrier by railroad subject
13          to asbestos claims brought under the Federal 14          Employers' Liability Act (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.);
15          and

16                   (B) have paid not less than $5,000,000 in 17          settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity
18          costs relating to such claims.

19           (2) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT.—The contribution
20          requirement for persons assigned to Tier VII shall 21          be in addition to any applicable contribution require-
22          ment that such person may be assessed under Tiers
23          II through VI.

24           (3) SUBTIER 1.—The Administrator shall as-
25          sign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with

1 gross revenues of not less than $5,000,000,000 to
2 Subtier 1 and shall require each such person or af-
3 filiated group to make annual payments of 4 $10,000,000 into the Fund.

5 (4) SUBTIER 2.—The Administrator shall as-
6 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with 7 gross revenues of less than $5,000,000,000, but not
8 less than $3,000,000,000 to Subtier 2, and shall re-
9 quire each such person or affiliated group to make
10 annual payments of $5,000,000 into the Fund.

11 (5) SUBTIER 3.—The Administrator shall as-
12 sign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with 13 gross revenues of less than $3,000,000,000, but not
14 less than $500,000,000 to Subtier 3, and shall re-
15 quire each such person or affiliated group to make
16 annual payments of $500,000 into the Fund.

17 (6) JOINT VENTURE REVENUES AND LIABIL-
18 ITY.—

19 (A) REVENUES.—For purposes of this sub-20 section, the revenues of a joint venture shall be 21 included on a pro rata basis reflecting relative 22 joint ownership to calculate the revenues of the 23 parents of that joint venture. The joint venture
24 shall not be responsible for a contribution
25 amount under this subsection.

1 (B) LIABILITY.—For purposes of this sub-
2 section, the liability under the Act of April 22,
3 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known
4 as the Federal Employers’ Liability Act, shall 5 be attributed to the parent owners of the joint
6 venture on a pro rata basis, reflecting their rel-
7 ative share of ownership. The joint venture
8 shall not be responsible for a contribution
9 amount under this provision.

10 SEC. 204. ASSESSMENT ADMINISTRATION.

11 (a) REDUCTION ADJUSTMENTS.—The Administrator
12 shall assess contributions based on amounts provided
13 under this subtitle for each person or affiliated group
14 within Tiers II, III, IV, V, VI, and VII for the first 5
15 years of the operation of the Fund. Beginning in year 6,
16 and every 3 years thereafter, the Administrator shall re-
17 duce the contribution amount for each defendant partici-
18 pant in each of these tiers by 10 percent of the amount
19 assessed in the prior year.

20 (b) SMALL BUSINESS EXEMPTION.—A person or af-
21 filiated group that is a small business concern (as defined 22 under section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C.
23 632)), on December 31, 2002, is exempt from any con-
24 tribution requirement under this subsection.

1 (c) PROCEDURES.—The Administrator shall pre-
2 scribe procedures on how contributions assessed under 3 this subtitle are to be paid.

4 (d) EXCEPTIONS.—

5 (1) IN GENERAL.—Under expedited procedures
6 established by the Administrator, a defendant partic-
7 ipant may seek adjustment of the amount of its con-
8 tribution based on severe financial hardship or dem-
9 onstrated inequity. The Administrator may deter-
10 mine whether to grant an adjustment and the size
11 of any such adjustment, in accordance with this sub-12 section. Such determinations shall not prejudice the 13 integrity of the Fund and shall not be subject to ju-
14 dicial review.

15 (2) FINANCIAL HARDSHIP ADJUSTMENTS.—

16 (A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may apply
17 for an adjustment based on financial hardship
18 at any time during the life of the Fund and 19 may qualify for such adjustment by dem-
20 onstrating that the amount of its contribution
21 under the statutory allocation would constitute 22 a severe financial hardship.

23 (B) TERM.—A hardship adjustment under
24 this subsection shall have a term of 3 years.

1 (C) RENEWAL.—A defendant may renew
2 its hardship adjustment by demonstrating that
3 it remains justified.

4 (D) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may
5 not grant hardship adjustments under this sub-
6 section in any year that exceed, in the aggre-
7 gate, 3 percent of the total annual contributions
8 required of all defendant participants.

9 (3) INEQUITY ADJUSTMENTS.—

10 (A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may qual-
11 ify for an adjustment based on inequity by dem-
12 onstrating that the amount of its contribution
13 under the statutory allocation is exceptionally 14 inequitable when measured against the amount
15 of the likely cost to the defendant of its future
16 liability in the tort system in the absence of the 17 Fund.

18 (B) TERM.—Subject to the annual avail-
19 ability of funds in the Orphan Share Reserve
20 Account established under section 223(e), an 21 inequity adjustment granted by the Adminis-
22 trator under this subsection shall remain in ef-
23 fect for the life of the Fund.

1 (C) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may
2 grant inequity adjustments only to the extent
3 that—

4 (i) the financial condition of the Fund
5 is sufficient to accommodate such adjust-
6 ments;

7 (ii) the Orphan Share Reserve Ac-
8 count is sufficient to cover such adjust-
9 ments for that year; and

10 (iii) such adjustments do not exceed 2
11 percent of the total annual contributions
12 required of all defendant participants.

13 (4) ADVISORY PANELS.—

14 (A) APPOINTMENT.—The Administrator
15 shall appoint a Financial Hardship Adjustment
16 Panel and an Inequity Adjustment Panel to ad-
17 vise the Administrator in carrying out this sub-
18 section.

19 (B) MEMBERSHIP.—The membership of 20 the panels appointed under subparagraph (A)
21 may overlap.

22 (C) COORDINATION.—The panels ap-
23 pointed under subparagraph (A) shall coordi-
24 nate their deliberations and recommendations.

1 (e) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—The liability of each
2 defendant participant to contribute to the Fund shall be 3 limited to the payment obligations under this subtitle, and 4 no defendant participant shall have any liability for the 5 payment obligations of any other defendant participant.

6 (f) CONSOLIDATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

7 (1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining 8 the contribution levels of defendant participants, any 9 affiliated group including 1 or more defendant par-
10 ticipants may irrevocably elect, as part of the sub-
11 mission to be made under subsection (i), to report
12 on a consolidated basis all of the information nec-
13 essary to determine the contribution level under this 14 subtitle and contribute to the Fund on a consoli-
15 dated basis.

16 (2) ELECTION.—If an affiliated group elects
17 consolidation as provided in this subsection—

18 (A) for purposes of this Act other than 19 this subsection, the affiliated group shall be 20 treated as if it were a single participant, includ-
21 ing without limitation with respect to the as-22 sessment of a single annual contribution under 23 this subtitle for the entire affiliated group;

24 (B) the ultimate parent of the affiliated
25 group shall prepare and submit the submission

1 to be made under subsection (i), on behalf of 2 the entire affiliated group and shall be solely
3 liable, as between the Administrator and the af-
4 filiated group only, for the payment of the an-
5 nual contribution assessed against the affiliated 6 group, except that, if the ultimate parent does
7 not pay when due any contribution for the af-
8 filiated group, the Administrator shall have the 9 right to seek payment of all or any portion of 10 the entire amount due from any member of the 11 affiliated group;

12 (C) all members of the affiliated group
13 shall be identified in the submission under sub-
14 section (i) and shall certify compliance with this 15 subsection and the Administrator's regulations
16 implementing this subsection; and

17 (D) the obligations under this subtitle shall 18 not change even if, after the date of enactment
19 of this Act, the beneficial ownership interest be-20 tween any members of the affiliated group shall 21 change.

22 (g) DETERMINATION OF PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDI-
23 TURES.—

24 (1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining
25 a defendant participant's prior asbestos expenditure,

1 the Administrator shall prescribe such rules as may
2 be necessary or appropriate to assure that payments
3 by indemnitors before December 31, 2002, shall be 4 counted as part of the indemnitor's prior asbestos
5 expenditure, rather than the indemnitee's prior as-6 bestos expenditure, in accordance with this sub-
7 section.

8 (2) INDEMNIFIABLE COSTS.—If an indemnitor
9 has paid or reimbursed to an indemnitee any 10 indemnifiable cost or otherwise made a payment on 11 behalf of or for the benefit of an indemnitee to a 12 third party for an indemnifiable cost before Decem-
13 ber 31, 2002, the amount of such indemnifiable cost 14 shall be solely for the account of the indemnitor for 15 purposes under this Act.

16 (3) INSURANCE PAYMENTS.—When computing
17 the prior asbestos expenditure with respect to an as-18 bestos claim, any amount paid or reimbursed by in-19 surance shall be solely for the account of the 20 indemnitor, even if the indemnitor would have no di-21 rect right to the benefit of the insurance, if—

22 (A) such insurance has been paid or reim-
23 bursed to the indemnitor or the indemnitee, or 24 paid on behalf of or for the benefit of the

1 (G) insurers of defendants; and

2 (H) compensation trusts.

3 (8) ELIGIBLE DISEASE OR CONDITION.—The 4 term “eligible disease or condition” means, to the 5 extent that the illness meets the medical criteria re-
6 quirements established under subtitle C of title I, as-
7 bestosis/pleural disease, severe asbestosis disease,
8 mesothelioma, lung cancer I, lung cancer II, other
9 cancers, and qualifying non-malignant asbestos-re-
10 lated diseases.

11 (9) FUND.—The term “Fund” means the As-12 bestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund established
13 under section 223.

14 (10) LAW.—The term “law” includes all law,
15 judicial or administrative decisions, rules, regula-
16 tions, or any other principle or action having the ef-
17 fect of law.

18 (11) PARTICIPANT.—The term “participant”
19 means any person subject to the funding require-
20 ments of title II, including—

21 (A) any defendant participant subject to 22 an assessment for contribution under subtitle A 23 of that title; and

1 indemnatee, any indemnifiable cost related to 2 the asbestos claim; and

3 (B) the indemnitor has either, with respect
4 to such asbestos claim or any similar asbestos
5 claim, paid or reimbursed to its indemnitee any 6 indemnifiable cost or paid to any third party on 7 behalf of or for the benefit of the indemnitee
8 any indemnifiable cost.

9 (h) MINIMUM CONTRIBUTIONS.—Minimum aggre-
10 gate contributions of defendant participants to the Fund
11 in any calendar year shall be as follows:

12 (1) For each of the first 5 years of the Fund,
13 the aggregate contributions of defendant partici-
14 pants to the fund shall be at least $2,500,000,000.

15 (2) After the 5th year, the minimum aggregate 16 contribution shall be reduced by $250,000,000 every 17 3 years as follows:

18 (A) For years 6 through 8,
19 $2,250,000,000.

20 (B) For years 9 through 11,
21 $2,000,000,000.

22 (C) For years 12 through 14,
23 $1,750,000,000.

24 (D) For years 15 through 17,
25 $1,500,000,000.

1 (E) For years 18 through 20,
2 $1,250,000,000.

3 (F) For years 21 through 23,
4 $1,000,000,000.

5 (G) For years 24 through 26,
6 $750,000,000.

7 (i) PROCEDURES TO DETERMINE FUND CONTRIBU-
8 TION ASSESSMENTS.—

9 (1) NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 10 60 days after his or her initial appointment, the Ad-
11 ministrator shall—

12 (A) directly notify all reasonably identifi-
13 able defendant participants of the requirement
14 to submit information necessary to calculate the 15 amount of any required contribution to the 16 Fund; and

17 (B) publish in the Federal Register a no-
18 tice requiring any person who may be a defend-19 ant participant (as determined by criteria out-20 lined in the notice) to submit such information.

21 (2) RESPONSE REQUIRED.—

22 (A) IN GENERAL.—Any person who re-
23 ceives notice under paragraph (1)(A), and any 24 other person meeting the criteria specified in 25 the notice published under paragraph (1)(B),

1 shall respond by providing the Administrator
2 with all the information requested in the notice
3 at the earlier of—

4 (i) 30 days after the receipt of direct 5 notice; or

6 (ii) 30 days after the publication of 7 notice in the Federal Register.

8 (B) CERTIFICATION.—The response sub-
9 mitted under subparagraph (A) shall be signed 10 by a responsible corporate officer, general part-
