You, or someone on your staff, are cordially invited to a briefing on the Executive Order process this Thursday February 8, 2001 at 2:30 p.m. in room 472 of the Old Executive Office Building. At the briefing, we will review the background and process for issuing executive orders. The Office of Legal Counsel from the Department of Justice, the White House Staff Secretary's Office, and the White House Clerk's Office will be at the briefing to discuss their responsibilities regarding executive orders and to answer questions. This briefing is offered for your information and, although it would be a refresher course for some of you, this office and the White House Staff Secretary's Office, thought it might be useful to you.

Please respond by E-mail or phone (395-3563), whether someone on your staff can attend.

Thank you very much, Mac Reed

Subject: scheduling for next week

I don't know how many meetings you are looking at but if you are able to get a good chunk of these scheduled tomorrow that would be ideal - these are important and we want them have your times locked in.

As I understand it - if Al can't meet with them then Tim will - please coordinate with Heather on these meetings.

Plase be sure and get first and last name, social security numbers and dates of birth. If we are talking about quite a few I may enlist Ansley's assistances with the WAVES requests so please cc her on these emails.

Finally - Al doesn't "do lunch" so please don't schedule any of these meetings over meals.

Thanks guys and let me know if I need to do something to help.

Libby

Ken has asked me to touch base with you on the following: we're in the process of designing a newsletter we will email out periodically. plan on sending it to the following groups (for the most part) to keep them posted on our political world, get the message out, etc...

- state chairs
- governors
- finance chairs
- lt govs.
- state legislators
- R Congressmen and Senators and their chiefs of staff
- state parties
- political consultants we identify
- political reporters

can we do this and what do we have to be aware of? do you need anything from me? a sample of the letter when it's completed perhaps?

Judge:

Chief Judge Susan Crawford of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces called (she called me because she knows me from our service together in the Defense Department) to draw to our attention that a vacancy will occur on that court on September 30, 2001, when the 15-year term of Judge Gene Sullivan expires. The Court handles appeals from the military justice system under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

I called Officer Cornell and Sgt. Rigsby about this. We faxed a copy of the master schedule to them and I followed up with a call re: confidentiality (like that was necessary). Anyway....

Cornell is on evenings this week and understands that he needs to redirect these people to the WW basement.

- state chairs
- governors
- finance chairs
- lt govs.
- state legislators
- R Congressmen and Senators and their chiefs of staff
- state parties
- political consultants we identify
- political reporters

can we do this and what do we have to be aware of? do you need anything from me? a sample of the letter when it's completed perhaps?

Here is the draft text of a response letter to be sent to Senators who submit candidates for judicial selection. Please let me know if you have changes.

Dear Senator [identify Senator(s)]:

On behalf of President Bush and Counsel to the President Alberto Gonzales, this will acknowledge that we are in receipt of your letter dated [date] forwarding recommendations for the judicial vacanc[ies] in the United States [identify court]. Please be assured that the individuals you have recommended will be evaluated carefully and that the President and the Counsel will give them every consideration in this process.

If we can be of any further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact us. In the meantime, please accept our thanks for your advice on this important matter.

Sincerely,

Bradford A. Berenson
Associate Counsel to the President back to the letter, a couple of ways to handle:

- 1) Z thinks the ltr ought to go to all Republicans (only)
- 2) do you want the letter personalized, i.e., dear Senator Hatch?
- 3) if not, we can pass out at the Republican Policy lunch at 12:30pm tomorrow.
- 4) if you do need letters to be personalized, we can drop them in the inside mail at the senate
- 5) regardless of how we handle, we would like to fax a copy to Lott, Nickles and Hatch before all Republicans see it.

Alison -

Libby Camp here - I am Executive Assistant to Counsel to the President Al Gonzales.

Z and I finally got to talk just now about a letter we need to send out as soon as possible on Tuesday to Senators - Z and our Counsel guys will determine exactly who gets this letter (all Republican Senators, any Reps?)

Once that decision is made I need to work with you on the list, printing and delivery of letters - they will be signed by Al.

Wanted to let you know this very time sensitive project is coming your way and send you my number in case you have any questions.

Thanks!

This is entirely appropriate OPA activity. The costs associated with this (stamps, paper) probably should be paid by RNC, which will be easy to accomplish once the RNC equipment is installed.

Where are we on OEOB Staff Assistants? We're getting to the point now where it would be extremely helpful to have some phone coverage and other help over here.

Also, I would recommend that once we have our full complement of support staff in OEOB, we do some office shuffling to make sure that each major pod of attorney offices has at least one person in the outside office. It's not very efficient, for example, having both paralegals officing in the same pod.

I wanted to make sure we are on the same page:

1) Ansley has the list of Republican Senators - if you need it for merging of letters and envelopes.

2) Ansley can help facilitate the Judge signing these letters - please make sure that she knows what deadlines are in place so she can plan her various projects accordingly.

3) If delivery is other than US mail we need to work that out with the legislative or delivery people.

Thanks!

Annually, Republicans join together in Oregon and hold "The Dorchester Conference." It is not a fundraiser, but it is politically oriented and for Republicans. This year, they have invited Gayle Norton as their keynote speaker. How does she pay for this event? Does she need official Government business out there? Or can the Gov't pay for her travel out there?

Moose-

I was wondering if you could clarify what exactly we as a speechwriting department get ourselves into (or what we need to be aware of) if we work on our home computers on Presidential speeches. Would it be better to use a government-issued laptop? Thanks for your advice!

HEADLINE: WHITE HOUSE BEGINS WORK ON FILLING JUDGESHIIPS; APPOINTMENTS COULD TRANSCEND TAX CUTS AS BUSH'S LEGACY

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:

As President George W. Bush tours the country to promote his tax cut and education proposals, White House officials are working behind the scenes to prepare for what could be a more defining legacy of his presidency: picking judges for the federal bench.

Alberto Gonzales, the White House counsel, says he and other top officials have begun to review judicial candidates and make recommendations to the president.

Attorney General John Ashcroft will have a substantial say in the nomination process. Gonzales said Ashcroft has a seat on the committee that will advise the president. The panel includes other Department of Justice officials and top White House advisers. Gonzales serves as the chairman.

The group has a daunting task ahead. At the beginning of February, the nation's district and circuit courts had 93 vacancies. And almost one third of those were deemed "judicial emergencies" because of long-standing vacancies and heavy caseloads.

"It's not unprecedented, but it is definitely on the high side," Elizabeth Dahl, deputy director of the Constitution Project, said of the vacancy rate. The Constitution Project is a bipartisan organization that works on judicial-reform issues. Then there's the prospect of vacancies on the Supreme Court. No justices have announced their retirements, but Bush will likely get the chance to name one or more in the next four years. Gonzales said he views federal judicial appointments as vital because the judges are appointed for life.

"This may be the most important thing that a president does," he said.

No matter what administrative policies Bush implements or legislative victories he wins, "those can always be undone by the next Congress," Gonzales said. "But a federal appointment lasts a lifetime."

It may also be one of the most politically treacherous tasks the president faces. Democrats signaled as much in their unsuccessful bid to defeat Ashcroft's nomination to be attorney general.

Many Democrats said they hoped the bitter fight against Ashcroft, who won confirmation by a 58-42 vote, would be a warning to the White House that Democrats would defeat arch-conservative judicial nominees.

During President Bill Clinton's administration, the Senate was mired in a nasty partisan standoff over Clinton's judicial appointments. Sen.

Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, complained bitterly that Republicans were blocking qualified candidates from the bench. Nominees were being left to "twist in the wind," he wrote in one editorial page article.

Republicans often argued that there was no real judicial emergency and that courts were working fine with fewer judges. Leahy said he now expects Republicans to change their tune.

"I suspect now they'll suddenly acknowledge the emergency and we'll go from there," he said.

Democrats, too, could find their old arguments thrown back at them if they tried to block or stall candidates they don't like.

Leahy said he has urged Democrats not to use the same kind of tactics that Republicans did because it was "irresponsible" and "it hurt the independence of the judiciary." But it's unclear how persuasive Leahy will be.

Dahl, of the Constitution Project, said, "There's no reason to think (the gridlock) won't continue . . . with some members trying to stop nominees or slow action or put them through extensive grilling." Because the Senate is evenly divided, Democrats will have the ability to put the brakes on candidates they don't like, she said.

And the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is not convinced that Democrats are ready to play nice. "I'm prepared for anything," Hatch said.

He said he is "very concerned" that the rancor and partisanship seen during the Ashcroft hearings will pepper the Senate's consideration of judicial candidates.

Gonzales declined to say whether he and Hatch had discussed how to move Bush's appointments through with minimal partisan bickering.

For Supreme Court nominees, "we'll certainly have to develop our strategy," he said. "Our Number 1 priority will be to get the best jurists on the court. . . . But we're not naive, and we understand that there are political forces that we'll have to deal with. It's something that we're thinking about."

Gonzales said it's unclear whether district and circuit court nominees will face a similarly high level of scrutiny.

"I can't control the politics of it," he said. "All I can control is to make sure that we've presented to the president the best qualified people . . . so that he can nominate them."

Gonzales said that generally, the new administration's procedures are very similar to those of past presidents. Gonzales would not say how much power Ashcroft will have. But previous attorneys general, such as Edwin Meese III in Ronald Reagan's administration, have had considerable influence in shaping the federal judiciary. Gonzales said the president has established two basic principles to guide the committee's recommendations: character and competence. The committee will examine whether a candidate has "the experience and intellect" and the "appropriate judicial philosophy" to be a judge. In terms of philosophy, he said, they will look for candidates who "appreciate the separation of powers and understand and believe in judicial restraint." ; ;

Senate Judicial Battles Loom

By Paul Kane and Mark Preston

As the White House's top lawyer met with key Senators last week to discuss federal judicial vacancies, Democrats signaled that they are not going to roll over when it comes to President Bush's nominations to the federal bench.

In the wake of Republican efforts to block some of ex-President Bill Clinton's judicial picks over the past eight years, Sen. Charles Schumer (N.Y.) and other top Democrats are vowing tough scrutiny of Bush's nominees.

With the President's nominees facing a 9-9 split on the Judiciary Committee and a 50-50 divide in the chamber, the process could sorely test the Senate's historic power-sharing agreement.

"They're going to have to figure out a way to deal with us," said Schumer, a prominent Judiciary member, who is one of seven Democrats on the committee who hails from a state without a GOP Senator.

With tradition dictating that the president defer to Senators from his party to submit names of nominees for the bench and for U.S. attorneys, unless there is no Senator from his party, those seven Democrats won't have a direct say in who the Bush administration nominates from their states. Recently, though, some Senators from the opposing party have been able to weigh in on potential judges from their states, a courtesy Democrats want to see extended.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) vowed to use his prerogative to pull deadlocked nominees out of Judiciary and bring them to the Senate floor, a new authority given to both parties Senate leaders under the power-sharing deal.

Lott predicted that Republicans will be able to move Bush's nominees through on the basis of their majority, which hangs on Vice President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote, something the Clinton administration couldn't do because of the GOP majority.

"When you have the White House and the Senate ... there is a big difference," Lott said, adding that he "won't allow [judges] to be blocked indefinitely."

Democrats could use the delaying tactic of placing a hold on some nominees, and, in some controversial cases, force the Republicans to file cloture and get 60 votes for the nominee. Democrats feel that, late in a session, Republicans would use holds to kill off a vote on Clinton nominees and would threaten a filibuster to prompt Lott to avoid calling up a nominee.

Lott, however, dismissed that tactic as an extreme measure. "The rule has been, we don't filibuster nominees," he said.

Cognizant of the need for some bipartisanship in moving his judges, Bush sent White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales to meet with key Republicans and Democrats last week to discuss Bush's approach to filling the almost 100 vacancies on the federal bench.

The most critical meeting may have been Thursday with Sen. Patrick Leahy (Vt.), the ranking Democrat on Judiciary.

"The best way to say how the meeting went is to see where we are six months from now," Leahy said. "If they work to make sure [Democrats] are consulted, then the agenda will move quickly. If it is treated in a very partisan way, then it won't move so smoothly."

Gonzales also met Wednesday with Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.). As the lone moderate Republican on Judiciary, Specter could play the decisive role in any nomination facing unified Democratic opposition.

Specter cautioned his colleagues to avoid the bitter judicial fights of the Clinton years, one of which involved a Specter nominee to the U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, who withdrew in the face of conservative opposition. "The essential point is that we get the business of the Senate done," he said.

Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) said Gonzales' meetings are a good start to the nomination process, as opposed to how Hatch believes Clinton's aides dealt with Republicans. "We didn't see much of their counsel up here when Clinton was there except for the ethics issues and things like that," he said.

Gonzales, who heads a team of Bush aides who are reviewing judicial candidates, recently told The New York Times that sending the nominations as quickly as possible to the Senate "is a very real priority for us." Still, Democrats remain concerned about the views those nominees will hold, particularly since one of the top people interviewing candidates is Attorney General John Ashcroft, whose nomination was bitterly opposed by most Judiciary Democrats.

While a Senator, Ashcroft led the fight against many Clinton nominees, including Missouri Supreme Court Justice Ronnie White, an African-American.

Democrats still hold a grudge over what they perceived to be unfair treatment of White and other minority and female nominees by Senate Republicans over the past eight years.

"I would hope the Judiciary Committee gives [Bush nominees] more consideration than some of our nominees received," Durbin said.

Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.), however, thinks Clinton made a big mistake by not getting nominees to the Senate quick enough. He noted that the first Bush administration also erred in this respect.

"If you don't get folks up here early, it gets hard," said Biden, who warned Democrats not to play partisan politics with conservative nominees who are adequately qualified.

Hatch was quick to point out that, over eight years, the Senate confirmed 377 judges nominated by Clinton, only five less than the 382 confirmed during Ronald Reagan's two terms.

Although Leahy will not "play the games," he said he will make sure Democrats are treated fairly, particularly in states such as New York and California, which both have two Democratic Senators and might not otherwise have any input into nominations.

"I am going to make sure the Senators of our party are consulted," said Leahy, adding that he "assumes that will happen."

In all, there are 18 states with two Democratic Senators.

Some senior Republicans aren't expecting any partisan fights too early, not until the first Supreme Court justice resigns and Bush has to replace him or her.

"I think they'll save all of their ammunition for Supreme Court nominees," Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) said of the Democrats.

But liberal activists claim that conservatives, including Ashcroft, "changed the rules" during the Clinton years by staunchly opposing lower-court nominees.

Ralph Neas, head of People for the American Way, said the same groups that opposed the Ashcroft nomination are beginning to plot their strategy for Bush's judicial nominations.

"It is a discussion that is evolving," he said. "The Supreme Court nominees focus everyone's attention around the country. But too often everyone forgets there will be hundreds of [Bush's] lower-court appointments."

Federal judicial wars start to heat up
By Thomas J. Bray, Detroit News (03/25/01)

The partisan din is increasing in Washington. But it,s nothing compared to the roar you are likely to hear when George W. Bush begins nominating candidates for federal judgeships. In the cultural wars of the late 20th and early 21st centuries, the courts are where the ideological rubber really hits the road.

The first major shot was fired last week, when the White House let it be known that it plans to dilute the traditional role of the American Bar Association in screening judicial candidates for suitability. In the view of the Bush White House-and many others-the ABA has become so politicized, taking overtly liberal positions on such issues as abortion, that it can,t be trusted as an objective arbiter.

The White House also let it be known that it would look for guidance to the frankly conservative Federal Society, a loose-knit organization that grew up in the 1980s in reaction to the perceived liberal bias of most law schools. ABA President Martha Barnett, pointedly referring to claims that Bush had stolen the election in Florida, wailed that at a time when "people wondered if the courts were political in their acts," changing the screening process would "be adding fuel to the fire."

But Bush,s popularity appears to be rising and questions about his legitimacy as president are rapidly diminishing. His success in getting conservative former Sen. John Ashcroft confirmed as attorney general sent a loud signal that he wouldn,t be intimidated by Teddy Kennedy,s name-calling. And while Supreme Court nominations will inevitably attract most of the attention, it is in the lower courts that much of the real action will take place.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, for example, which includes Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky, has four vacancies-all in seats now held by Michiganians-and four more are expected soon. Thus the 16-member court, which is now marginally Democratic, could shift radically in a Republican direction in the next year or so.

Because both Michigan senators, Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow, are Democrats, there is potential for a bitter fight. The left has been loudly claiming it,s payback time because of the refusal of the GOP-controlled Senate to confirm dozens of Democratic nominations in the last few years of the Clinton administration. But even more nominees were left dangling in the dying days of the elder George Bush,s administration.

Much will depend-and properly so-on the quality of the Bush appointments. A committee under the wing of Gov. John Engler has recommended three nominees to the White House, but it raised eyebrows by passing over several more experienced candidates. Others are pushing for their inclusion on grounds that it,s important for an appeals court judge to have a proven ability to take the heat for sometimes ruling in politically incorrect ways.

That needn,t mean always accommodating the demands of conservative activists. An intriguing case in point is Alberto Gonzalez, now Bush,s White House counsel. As a Texas Supreme Court justice, he voted to uphold a Texas law that would make it easier for minors seeking an abortion to bypass parental notification requirements, angering right-to-life groups.

But the bypass possibility was expressly required under Texas law. Texans who didn,t like the law should try to get it changed, not lobby for judges who will impose their own views-as many liberal judges have long made a practice of doing. In the long run, insisting on adhering to the rule of law poses a more serious threat to liberal interests, which have trouble attracting legislative majorities, than judges who can pass litmus tests on specific issues.

And, if the new president is willing to use his bully pulpit to explain the underlying issues to the American people, such nominees may be a lot more difficult to defeat, especially in a narrowly-divided Senate.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED ON JUDICIAL NOMINATION PROCESS

By Amy <Fagan> and Elizabeth A. Palmer, CQ Staff Writers

April 24, 2001 - The Senate Judiciary Committee met behind closed doors Tuesday in an attempt to clarify just when President Bush's judicial nominees will get hearing.

But with the bitter politics surrounding former President Bill Clinton's difficulties in winning judicial confirmations hanging over the meeting, Republicans and Democrats failed to agree on what the committee's policy was, or what it

Democrats contend Republicans want to make it easier for Bush to add conservatives to the federal courts when he starts trying to fill the nearly 100 judicial vacancies. Republicans contend the policy for deciding who gets a hearing will not change.

The debate centers around the panel's so-called "<blue> slip" policy. For decades, the panel has sent a small slip of paper to each senator from the state in which an individual has been nominated to be a federal judge, U.S. Marshal or U.S. attorney. Though the <blue> slips are mentioned nowhere in the committee rules, they are deeply rooted in the history of the Senate. Senators return the slips to the Judiciary Committee indicating support or disapproval of nominees.

The focus of negotiations is what happens if the state's senators are divided. Republicans control 19 state delegations in the Senate to 18 for the Democrats. Thirteen are evenly split.

Judiciary Chairman Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said there is no change -- the committee will follow the policy it has followed for years. That policy, Hatch said, is that negative <blue> slips will be given "great weight" but will not prevent the nomination from proceeding, unless the administration did not consult with both senators prior to submitting the nomination. In that case, the nomination would effectively be dead.

Democrats are worried however, that Republicans will not give the same "great weight" to negative <blue> slips from Democrats that they gave to negative <blue> slips from Republicans during the Clinton era, when dozens of nominees never received hearings.

Over the past six years, Hatch said he remembers holding only one nomination hearing over the objection of a senator who had sent in a negative <blue> slip.

Democrats believe that despite what Hatch says, the policy under Clinton required two positive <blue> slips. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., used the "<blue> slip" to block Clinton's nominees to the bench in his state even when they had the approval of Democrat John Edwards.

"I'm trying to make sure that we have the same rules for Bush that we had for Clinton," ranking Democrat Patrick J. Leahy, Vt., said after the meeting. "People don't get a hearing unless they have two positive <blue> slips. I've been here 25 years and I've never known it to be otherwise."

Leahy said that he voted for 99 percent of the conservative nominees put forward by Republican former presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush, but there was always consultation and agreement involved. "We've always taken the position that it doesn't go through unless we both agree," he said.

Leahy said he has 49 other Democratic senators who agree with him, indicating that they would block judicial nominees. He said he does not want the situation to deteriorate to the point where Vice President Dick Cheney has to come to the Senate constantly to break ties on judicial nominees.

Democrats vow to fight for right to veto judges

By Audrey Hudson and Dave Boyer
THE WASHINGTON TIMES

Senate Democrats yesterday threatened to block all of President Bush's judicial nominees unless they are given veto power over appointments in their home states.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said there is "absolute unanimity" among Democrats to hold the nominations hostage until their demands are met.

"We just won't allow the vote," Mr. Daschle told reporters. "We'll extend debate, and we can guarantee that they will not" proceed.

Senate Republican leaders are resisting the Democrats' demand, but Democrats have the votes to carry out their threat in the 50-50 Senate because Republicans need 60 votes to stop a filibuster.

Democrats agreed on the strategy last week at a retreat in western Pennsylvania, and Rep. Christopher Cox, California Republican, could be the first victim.

Mr. Cox is the first sitting member of Congress in line for a Bush administration appointment, a federal judgeship in his home state. Background checks are under way, and the official paperwork on Mr. Cox's nomination is moving. A House leadership aide said a meeting "key" to the nomination will be held today when Mr. Cox seeks the support of Sen. Dianne Feinstein, California Democrat.

But Mrs. Feinstein, in an interview with The Washington Times yesterday, sounded skeptical of Mr. Cox's candidacy.

"Chris Cox comes from probably the most conservative district in the state," Mrs. Feinstein said. "It isn't the mainstream in the state of California by a long shot."

Of his ideology, Mrs. Feinstein said, "There are many areas where he's taken a position in Congress that are of course different from what the law is. The real question I have is, why should I vote for you to be a federal judge? So I want to have that conversation."

Fellow California Democrat Sen. Barbara Boxer already has indicated she opposes Mr. Cox's nomination.

However, Mrs. Feinstein said she has an agreement with the administration to establish commissions equally divided across party lines to create a bank of qualified candidates.

"I think we ought to get that functioning and see how it works," Mrs. Feinstein said.

Although Democrats long accused Republicans of dragging their feet on President Clinton's judicial nominations, Republicans say it is rare for judicial nominees to be so aggressively blocked.

"This is relatively unprecedented and dramatically mean-spirited by any measure," Sen. Larry E. Craig, Idaho Republican, said of the Democrats' demands.

During the Clinton era, Republicans were discouraged from filibustering the Senate to oppose nominees, Mr. Craig said.

After winning control of the Senate in 1995, Republicans approved 240 of the first 241 Clinton-appointed judges to come up for a vote. In his eight years in the White House, President Clinton had 377 of his judicial appointees approved by the Senate, roughly comparable to the 382 judges President Reagan placed on the federal bench in his eight-year term. Democrats complained bitterly in 1999 when 13 Republican senators vowed to block all of Mr. Clinton's judicial nominees because of a dispute over so-called "recess appointments."

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, called that threat a "reckless and disproportionate response."

Democrats say they want the same nomination process Republicans enjoyed during the Clinton administration, but Republicans say it is the same process.

For the past eight years, the Judiciary Committee has followed the same procedures initiated by former committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., Delaware Democrat, a committee spokeswoman said.

If a senator rejected a nominee from his home state, it did not preclude a vote but was a "significant factor" to be weighed by the committee in its evaluation on the nominee, according to the June 6, 1989, letter from Mr. Biden to former President Bush.

If the administration fails to consult with the home state senators before submitting a nomination, however, "the nominee will not be considered," the letter said.

Democrats say Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and Judiciary Committee chairman, did not follow Mr. Biden's policy during the Clinton administration.

"I keep telling Orrin, 'Stop taking my name in vain, pal. This is not Biden policy,'" Mr. Biden said.

The Bush administration is not consulting with senators on his nominations, Mr. Biden said, but the first nomination has yet to be forwarded to Congress.

"We will insist that before the vote on confirmation that both senators, in the case of two Democrats, or one senator in the case of a single Democrat representing the state, have the ability to sign off on that nominee or it won't go anywhere," Mr. Daschle said.

Mr. Cox is the fourth-highest-ranking House member and was elected in 1988.

He served as senior counsel to President Reagan and his successful primary campaign against more than a half-dozen fellow Republicans was attributed to his yard signs: a replica of a thank-you note to Mr. Cox from Mr. Reagan.

House aides say if Mr. Cox's nomination is confirmed by the Senate, they are confident Republicans will retain his congressional seat.

SENATE DEMOCRATS VOW TO BLOCK GOP JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

By Amy Fagan, CQ Staff Writer

May 3, 2001 - A partisan battle over judicial nominations escalated Thursday, and Senate Democrats continued threatening to block confirmation of President Bush's choices for federal judgeships unless the dispute is settled.

The fight prompted Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee to walk out of a morning markup, further delaying a vote on four nominations to executive branch positions.

And Democrats said again they will block confirmation of Bush's judicial nominations unless committee Republicans change their stance on how the nominations are handled.

"There are ways, when you have 50 Senators or nine senators on the Judiciary Committee ... that we can certainly have our say," committee Democrat Charles E. Schumer, N.Y., said Thursday, as Democrats and Republicans held press conferences attacking each other's positions.

On Wednesday, Minority Leader Tom Daschle, S.D. said flatly that, "If a Senate Democrat has not signed off on a judicial nominee, there will not be a confirmation vote."

Bush is expected to release the names of his first judicial nominations next week.

The Associated Press reported Thursday that officials said the president plans to nominate Appeals Court Judge Roger Gregory to a permanent seat, resurrecting a nomination that GOP senators once strangled.

If nominated and approved, he would become the first black judge to be confirmed to a seat on the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The dispute in the Judiciary Committee centers around the panel's "blue-slip" policy, which refers to the sheets of paper that both senators from a state fill out to express support or opposition for a nominee for a federal judgeship in that state.

Democrats say opposition from either senator should effectively disqualify a nominee.

Committee Chairman Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, disagrees, saying opposition from one senator should receive "great weight" but should not necessarily keep a nomination from moving forward.

"What they're asking for is that any Democrat or Republican can kill a presidential nominee for any reason," Hatch said. "I'm not going to give them that."

Committee member Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., said Democrats "are trying to find a way to generically oppose Bush's nominees without having to discuss the specifics of each one. Because, on the merits, none of these candidates are going to be opposable."

Democrats counter that Hatch is making a procedural change that would unfairly smooth the way for confirmation of Bush's judicial nominees.

"It's a double standard and we would make an enormous mistake if we allow it to go forward," said committee member Russell D. Feingold, D-Wis.

Democrats say they are merely seeking a continuance of the judicial nominations procedure that they say was in place during the Clinton administration.

The dispute again delayed a committee vote on four Justice Department nominees, including the nomination of attorney Theodore Olson to be solicitor general. Olson represented the Bush campaign during the presidential recount battle last fall.

The executive branch nominations are not a focus of the partisan dispute but remain stalled as the fight continues.

"Democrats are playing games with our nation's top law enforcement officials," Hatch said.

He said Democrats are forgetting that while the Senate was under GOP control during Clinton's Administration, it confirmed 377 of Clinton's judicial nominees, just five short of the record number confirmed under former President Ronald Reagan.

And Hatch noted that when he headed the Judiciary Committee during Clinton's tenure, he did not allow a single senator to block a judicial nomination unless administration officials had failed to consult with the senator regarding the nominee's qualifications. He said he wants to continue that procedure while Bush is president.

Democrats complained they have not been consulted about the nominees that will be announced next week.

"They have notified us at the last minute," Schumer said. "They should stop, they should not put the judges forward next week and they should start the consultation process."

Schumer said the administration is subtly trying to shut Democrats out of the judicial nomination process in the interest of creating "the most ideological bench we have ever seen in America."

So any member who is nominated for the district or circuit court who, in fact, any Senator believes will be a person of their word and follow stare decisis, it does not matter to me what their ideology is, as long as they are in a position where they are in the general mainstream of American political life and they have not committed crimes of moral turpitude, and have not, in fact, acted in a way that would shed a negative light on the court." > Senator Biden Scrutinized Republican Senators For Holding Up Judicial Nominations From Their State If They Did Not Get To Name Some Of Them.

"I see my colleagues nodding and smiling. I am sort of breaching the unspoken rule here not to talk about what is really happening. But that is what is really happening. I will not name certain Senators. But I have had Senators come up to me and say, Joe, here is the deal. We will let the following judges through in my State if you agree to get the President to say that I get to name three of them. Now folks, that is a change of a deal. That is changing precedent. That isn't how it works. The President nominates. We dispose one way or another of that nomination. And the historical practice has been--and while I was chairman we never once did that--that never once that I am aware of did we ever say, 'By the way, we are not letting Judge A through unless you give me Judges B and C.' Now, let me set the record totally straight here. There are States where precedents were set years ago. The Republican and Democratic Senator, when it was a split delegation, have made a deal up front in the open. In New York, Senator Javits and Senator Moynihan said:

> Look. In the State of New York, the way we are going to do this is that whomever is the Senator representing the party of the President--I believe they broke it down to 60--for every two people that Senator gets to name, the Senator in the party other than the President gets to name one. OK, fine. Jacob Javits did not go to Pat Moynihan and demand that he was going to do that. Moynihan made the offer, as I understand it, to Jacob Javits. That is not a bad way to proceed." (Sen. Joe Biden, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

WITH A NEW PRESIDENT, SENATE DEMOCRATS WANT TO CHANGE THE RULES ON JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

Democrats – Before:

Senator Biden Chastised Senators For Allegedly Holding Up Judicial Nominations From Their State If They Did Not Get To Name Some Of Them. “I see my colleagues nodding and smiling. I am sort of breaching the unspoken rule here not to talk about what is really happening. But that is what is really happening. I will not name certain Senators. But I have had Senators come up to me and say, Joe, here is the deal. We will let the following judges through in my State if you agree to get the President to say that I get to name three of them. Now folks, that is a change of a deal. That is changing precedent. That isn’t how it works. The President nominates. We dispose one way or another of that nomination. And the historical practice has been--and while I was chairman we never once did that--that never once that I am aware of did we ever say, ‘By the way, we are not letting Judge A through unless you give me Judges B and C.’” (Sen. Joe Biden, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

Senator Leahy Stated That Senators Should Show Deference To A President’s Judicial Nominees And Should Not Vote Against A Nominee Based On Ideological Differences. “We know that whoever is President is going to have the greatest influence of all of us on who is going to be a Federal judge. President Reagan made it very clear when he ran for President, for example, who he would appoint as Federal judges. A lot of these Federal judges are not the men and women I would have appointed from that circuit or that district. But I voted for all of them because they were honest people, people of integrity, people of confidence, and people I could look at and say, although I might have disagreed with their political background, I know that, as a litigant, if I came before his or her court, I could expect an honest treatment. President Bush had other ideas who should be there, as President Carter and President Ford did. These are all Presidents I have served with. President Clinton now has his ideas. Now, the interesting thing, President Ford was appointed, but these others, in every election, at some point during the campaign, it became an issue as to who will this Presidential candidate appoint to the Federal judiciary. And the American people examined their views and they elected President Carter, President Reagan, President Ford, and President Clinton. A President should be given a great deal of latitude on who he nominates to the Federal court. If we disagree with a nomination, then we can vote against it.” (Sen. Patrick Leahy, Congressional Record, June 16, 1997)

Senator Feingold Remarked That Senators Who Oppose Judicial Nominees For Being Conservative Or Liberal “Mistake Their Role In The Constitutional Scheme.” “If opponents of Judge Paez want to fill the court only with seemingly conservative judges, they mistake their role in the constitutional scheme in my opinion. Let's not kid ourselves. Partisan politics shouldn't play a part in the confirmation of judges, but they do." (Sen. Russ Feingold, Congressional Record, March 8, 2000)

Senator Kennedy Stated That Senators Are Supposed To Work With, Not Against, The President On Judicial Nominees. "Over 200 years ago, the Framers of the Constitution created a system of checks and balances to ensure that excessive power is not concentrated in any branch of government. The President was given the authority to nominate federal judges with the advise and consent the Senate. The clear intent was for the Senate to work with the President, not against him, in this process." (Sen. Ted Kennedy, Congressional Record, March 7, 2000)

Senator Mikulski Said She Evaluates Judicial Nominees On Competence, Temperament, And Integrity. "When I decide whether to support a judicial nominee, I look at whether the nominee is competent; whether the nominee possesses the appropriate judicial temperament; whether the nominee possesses the highest personal and professional integrity, and whether the nominee will protect our core constitutional values." (Sen. Barbara Mikulski, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

Senator Leahy Declared That Senators Should Never Get Caught Up In Partisan Moves Over Judicial Nominees Because Such Actions Will Jeopardize The Independence Of The Judiciary. "What I worry about, Mr. President, is that if we allow the Federal judiciary to be caught up in partisan moves, where one side tries to get advantage over the other, while one side or the other might win in the short term, all of us as Americans are damaged because our Federal judiciary is damaged. We should never allow anything to happen to cut back on that independence." (Sen. Patrick Leahy, Congressional Record, June 16, 1997)

Senator Leahy Argued That The Judicial Nomination Process Has Become Too Personal. "I deeply regret that confirmation as a Federal Judge is becoming more like a political campaign for these nominees. They are being required to gather letters of support and urge their friends, colleagues and clients to support their candidacy or risk being mischaracterized by those who do not know them." (Sen. Patrick Leahy, Congressional Record, February 11, 1998)

Senator Biden Pointed Out That Republicans Voted Unanimously For Almost All Of President Clinton's Judicial Nominees In His First Term. "I might point out that all the talk [during the 1996 presidential election] that started off--it all fizzled because it did not go anywhere--about how there is going to be an issue about activism on the courts, we pointed out that of all the judges that came up in Clinton's first term, almost all of them were voted unanimously out of this body by Democrats and Republicans, including the former majority leader [Sen. And then it kind of fizzled when I held a little press conference, and said, 'By the way. You voted for all of them.'" (Sen. Joe Biden, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

Senator Biden Had No Problem With The Fact That Republican Senator Bill Roth Made Every Judicial Nomination From Their State Without His Consultation, And He Voted For All Of Them. "If the Senator will yield, I was chairman or ranking member of that committee for 14 years. My distinguished colleague from Delaware is Senator Roth, who is my close friend. Every single Federal judge in the last 24 years who has been appointed in the district of Delaware or the third circuit has been appointed by Senator Roth. Not one single time was I made aware of anything other than after the fact, which is OK. I am not complaining about that." (Sen. Joe Biden, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

Senator Biden Declared That Senators Should Never Vote Against Nominees For District Or Circuit Court Based On Ideology And That Senators Should Only Vote Against Them For Crimes Of Moral Turpitude. “I respectfully suggest that it is a rare--it is a rare--district court nominee by a Republican President or a Democratic President who, if you first believe they are honest and have integrity, have any reason to vote against them. I voted for Judge Bork, for example, on the circuit court, because Judge Bork I believed to be an honest and decent man, a brilliant constitutional scholar with whom I disagreed, but who stood there and had to, as a circuit court judge, swear to uphold the law of the land, which also meant follow Supreme Court decisions. But I have had Senators come up to me and say, Joe, here is the deal. We will let the following judges through in my State if you agree to get the President to say that I get to name three of them. Now folks, that is a change of a deal. That is changing precedent. That isn't how it works. The President nominates. We dispose one way or another of that nomination. And the historical practice has been--and while I was chairman we never once did that--that never once that I am aware of did we ever say, 'By the way, we are not letting Judge A through unless you give me Judges B and C.' Now, let me set the record totally straight here. There are States where precedents were set years ago. The Republican and Democratic Senator, when it was a split delegation, have made a deal up front in the open. In New York, Senator Javits and Senator Moynihan said: Look. In the State of New York, the way we are going to do this is that whomever is the Senator representing the party of the President--I believe they broke it down to 60--for every two people that Senator gets to name, the Senator in the party other than the President gets to name one. OK, fine. Jacob Javits did not go to Pat Moynihan and demand that he was going to do that. Moynihan made the offer, as I understand it, to Jacob Javits. That is not a bad way to proceed.” (Sen. Joe Biden, Congressional Record, March 19, 1997)

DEMOCRATS EXTEND WELCOME TO BUSH JUDICIAL NOMINEES

By Amy Fagan, CQ Staff Writer

May 9, 2001 - Senate Democrats reacted with unexpected cordiality Wednesday to President Bush's first judicial nominees, saying only one of the president's 11 appointments faces potential opposition.

Minority Leader Tom Daschle, S.D., praised White House officials for working with Democrats in choosing the slate of nominees.

He indicated that 10 of the nominees can expect to receive approving "blue slips" from their home-state senators.

Senators use the slips of paper to register support or opposition to individual nominees.

"We are pleased that by and large there are no blue-slip problems," Daschle said.

The exception, he said, is the nomination of Terrence Boyle, a U.S. district judge for the Eastern District of North Carolina and a former aid to North Carolina Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

Boyle, nominated to serve on the the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, faces possible opposition from North Carolina's Democratic senator, John Edwards.

Daschle said Democrats still do not know enough about the other nominees to say for sure they will back them.

Seven of the nominees would serve in states where both senators are Republican.

Daschle's comments follow days of partisan bickering among members of the Senate Judiciary Committee over whether a disapproving blue slip from a single senator should effectively veto a judicial nominee.

Senate Democrats said again Wednesday they will block confirmation of any nominee opposed by a home-state senator.

"The nominees who were selected for their qualifications are likely to be confirmed," said Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee. "Those who were selected primarily for their ideology are not likely to be confirmed."

Bush needs to fill about 100 federal judgeships nationwide.

Democrats Vow to Block Votes

Under an agreement between Daschle and Majority Leader Trent Lott, Miss., on conducting business in the evenly divided Senate, Lott may move a nomination out of the Judiciary Committee and onto the Senate floor if the nomination receives a tie vote in committee.

But Judiciary Democrats say procedural rules give them the option of preventing the committee from voting on individual nominees.

And they said they will exercise that option to block votes on nominees who are opposed by a Democratic senator.

"It's a 9-9 Judiciary Committee," Sen. Charles E. Schumer, D-NY., said Wednesday. "That prerogative will be enforced."

He said that will force White House officials to meet with Democrats on prospective nominees "and act in a moderate way."

Boyle's nomination may put the Democrats' theory on procedural options to the test.

Edwards said Wednesday he is working with the White House to achieve "greater balance" on the 4th Circuit, which covers North Carolina and four other states. He clearly hopes to use Boyle's nomination as a bargaining chip.

Edwards has asked Bush to nominate James A. Wynn Jr., to fill another opening on the the circuit.

Boyle was appointed by former President George Bush in 1991 but never received a hearing from the Judiciary Committee, which was then controlled by Democrats.

Helms later blocked President Bill Clinton's nominees to the 4th Circuit, including Wynn, possibly in retaliation for the Democrats' treatment of Boyle. Helms said at the time that the circuit did not need additional judges.

The other nominees announced Wednesday are mostly conservative but reflect Bush's intention to minimize Democratic opposition.

Bush 'Held Out Olive Branch'

Bush withheld some planned nominees because of objections from Democrats. His 11 choices included three women, two African-Americans and one Hispanic.

One of his choices -- Roger L. Gregory -- was nominated by Clinton but never confirmed.

Gregory, a Virginia lawyer appointed by Clinton during a congressional recess to serve a one-year tenure on the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, would be the first black permanent member of the circuit.

Another black nominee announced Wednesday, Barrington Parker Jr., was appointed by Clinton to a U.S. District Court judgeship in 1994.

"It seems to me that President Bush held out the olive branch," Republican Sen. Jon Kyl of Arizona said of the nominations.

Kyl said he is troubled that all 50 Senate Democrats are ready to unite in opposing individual nominees based solely on opposition from one senator.

"I hope Democrats will walk back from the brink," he said. "There is always a tomorrow and you have to consider what will happen when there is another president."

The Judiciary Committee's dispute over judicial nominations began with Democratic concerns that Bush would stack the federal bench with conservative judges.

"Democrats in the Senate will not be railroaded into rubber stamping a group of judges over the course of the next year who may have a very hard ideological cast to them," Schumer said.

Committee chairman Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said a blue slip opposing a judicial nominee should receive great weight but should not automatically veto the nominee -- as long as Bush discussed the nominee's qualifications with both home-state senators in advance.

Hatch said that was the system he used in handling Clinton's judicial nominees.

And he noted that of the 377 Clinton-nominated judges confirmed by the Senate, almost 60 percent were from states represented by at least one Republican senator.

Veto Power in Dispute

Democrats say a disapproving blue slip from either home-state senator should effectively disqualify a nominee.

They say that more accurately defines the procedure that existed during the six years that Republicans controlled the Senate during the Clinton administration.

"We're saying, if it was fair there, it's fair the other way around," Leahy said Wednesday. "We will require the same process before a Republican president goes forward."

The dispute over blue slips has delayed a Judiciary Committee vote on four nominees to positions in the Justice Department, including the nomination of attorney Theodore Olson to be solicitor general.

Olson represented the Bush campaign in the presidential election recount case that went to the Supreme Court last fall.

He faces possible opposition from Judiciary Committee Democrats based on ideological concerns.

Hatch said the committee will vote Thursday on the four Justice Department nominees -- and possibly on two nominees to be assistant attorneys general -- whether Democrats cooperate or not.

Committee members will meet privately at 9 a.m. at the Democrats' request to discuss FBI background reports on the Justice Department nominees.

Schumer said Democrats will not hold up action on the nominees based on the dispute over blue slips.

May 9, 2001 Senate Judiciary Committee Transcript of Confirmation Hearing of Georgetown Law Professor Viet Dinh to be US Asst. Attorney General, Office of Policy Development, US Department of Justice

REV_00002460

SEN. DURBIN: Thank you.

Professor Dinh, I'm glad that we had a chance to get together, and I want a follow up on one aspect of our conversation concerning the important job which you are seeking relative to judicial appointments. And as I mentioned to you at our meeting -- and I'm sure it comes as no surprise -- this is an item of great interest.

As I said to you, many of us feel that the outcome of the presidential election in November at least raised some question as to whether the president has a mandate to make significant changes in the judiciary that would have an impact on values and decisions and precedents which have been in place for many decades.

You are a member of the Federalist society. We find it curious on our side of the aisle that President Bush has said that he no longer wants to rely on the American Bar Association to do a background check on perspective judges. This was a tradition that started in a radical era of American politics known as the Eisenhower presidency when President Eisenhower thought it was reasonable -- and I do, too, incidentally -- that the largest bar association in America at least comment on the worthiness of nominees for the federal bench.

Could you describe for us your involvement with the Federalist society and what you believe this group stands for?

MR. DINH: Senator, first of all, thank you very much for taking the time out of your very busy schedule to meet with me the other day. It was a very fruitful discussion. I very much appreciate the courtesy.

I am a member of the Federalist society, and I do not know, quite frankly, what it all stands for. As you asked me during our meeting whether I've read their statement of principles -- no, I have not. What I know -- what it stands for for me, why I joined the society -- when I first joined the faculty of Georgetown Law Center is that it is a forum for discussion of law and public policy from both sides. And a very number of a very prominent debates have -- and very fruitful debates -- have been carried out under the auspices of the Federalist society throughout the law schools and the bars of this nation. That's why I believe that it serves a very useful function, not only in the discussion of law and public policy in the public debate, but also in the pedagogical mission of our law schools, as a number of others organizations do.

I do hope that, given my rather voluminous paper trail of publications and public speeches, that my candidacy and what I think will be judged upon those statements and publications rather than -- not on any one particular membership.

SEN. DURBIN: I recall your answer and you've repeated it here for the sake of the committee. And I find it interesting that if you are looking for a forum for debate, the Federalist society is a comfortable forum, but apparently the ACLU is not, for a discussion. You've never joined an organization like the ACLU, have you?

MR. DINH: No, I have not, Senator, because I do not join organizations that -- with the exception of the American Bar Association through my group membership as a faculty member of the Georgetown Law faculty -- that take public positions and adopt policy statements. And to my knowledge, the Federalist society does not take public positions, adopt policy statements, file amicus briefs or the like. It is simply a forum for discussion, as I am also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, which is a forum for public discussion on foreign policy issues in which I am also interested.

SEN. DURBIN: So it is your belief that the Federalist society does not have a philosophy -- a stated philosophy when it comes to, for example, the future course of the Supreme Court?

MR. DINH: No, I do not think it does have a stated philosophy, to my knowledge. It may very well have. I just simply do not know. I know that the society has a very diverse membership of people who think very equivocally about these issues, and I know that I've gotten many, many -- into many, many disagreements with members of the Federalist society on these kinds of issues. So I do not think that a official policy would be possible even if desirable.

SEN. DURBIN: Where would you put the Federalist society on the political spectrum?

MR. DINH: You know, I simply do not know. I know that there are press reports that have attempted to put it in a political spectrum with respect to other organizations. I myself have -- in my personal and professional life, have been very hesitant to characterize anybody or any group according to labels, simply because I eschew such labels myself. So I -- it would not be appropriate for me to do so for others.

SEN. DURBIN: And you are not familiar -- or are you familiar, rather, with the term, "the court in exile -- the Constitution in exile?"

MR. DINH: No, sir, I am not.

SEN. DURBIN: Okay.

Well, let me say that what I've read -- and I'm not an expert nor am I member of the Federalist society -- they do have a very conservative philosophy. I don't think they are a debating society. I think they have an agenda. And it troubles some of us to believe that the American Bar Association, which has been characterized as liberal by the conservatives and conservative by the liberals over the course of its history, is being cast aside by the White House now when it comes to the judicial process. And instead we find that many people who are associated with the Federalist society are now seeking prominent positions in the administration of justice. I don't think it's a coincidence. I think it is a conscious decision to move us toward a path that, frankly, many of us think needs to be questioned, and at least publicized.

I sincerely hope that -- if you are indeed confirmed, that you do not become an agent of any political agenda. You have an extraordinary personal family history. It is just exceptional, and I think all of us are in awe of what you and your family has achieved in overcoming great odds. I think that you can make a great contribution to public service and I hope that you will. But I hope that it doesn't become an effort for a political clearinghouse for only those who happened to hew to that line to be considered as possible nominees to the federal bench. I think we do need diversity and moderation and the kind of excellence and integrity which both parties should seek to make part of their nomination process.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

SEN. HATCH: Well, let me -- I'm pleased that we've had you all here. I want everybody to know that I'm on the board of advisers of the Federalist society, and I'm darned proud of it. And I will tell you why: because these aren't just conservatives, these are top-notch lawyers all over this country, top-notch law students who are just sick and tired of the leftward leanings of our government, and frankly wanted to bring some into balance.

The Federalist society doesn't lobby, unlike a lot of the groups that we get from the left all the time. They don't take positions politically. They basically hold the best forums in America. And in every one of those conferences they've had both sides presented. And I know because I've been one of the lecturers from time to time.

So I get little tired of -- I'm not accusing the senior Senator from Illinois of this -- but I get a little tired of some in the media treating the Federalist society as some group of radicals that are out there. Frankly, one of the original advisers to the Federalist society was Justice Scalia, who, by anybody's measurement is a brilliant lawyer, law professor, and a brilliant member of the court, albeit you may disagree with his philosophy from time to time.

But to make a long story short, I do think we ought to get rid of character assassination of any organization. But I get little tired of some of these attitudes that anything on the left is just fine, no matter how irresponsible, and no matter how degrading, no matter how mean spirited they are. And yet you have a society made up of top-notch lawyers, many of them law review graduates at their respective schools, who are practicing law, trying cases all over this country, defending people, prosecuting people, but who believe that there is -- there are limits to government.

And they may individually express conservative viewpoints or moderate-to-conservative viewpoints or even libertarian viewpoints from time to time, but the fact of the matter is the society itself does not engage in lobbying nor the pursuits that some in the media have seemed to smear them with.

SEN. DURBIN: Will the senator -- the chairman yield?

SEN. HATCH: Sure.

SEN. DURBIN: First, I'd like to commend the chairman because I think he has been very forthright in his beliefs and in what the Federalist society is all about. That was the purpose of my question to professor Dinh, who is a member of the society.

SEN. HATCH: Well, I wasn't reading anything wrong in your question, I'm just saying -- I want to make it clear because I've seen these articles and, my gosh --

SEN. DURBIN: Well, if I could finish -- if I might finish --

SEN. HATCH: Sure. Go ahead.

SEN. DURBIN: Senator Hatch and I come to this business with different philosophies. That's part of the American political process. I'm not going to disparage those of conservative bent, and I hope that he will not disparage those of a liberal bent or progressive bent. We just happen to see things differently. But the point I'm trying to make here is the Federalist society is now going to be the filter for nominations to the Department of Justice as well as judicial nominations. If that's going to be a standard, then for goodness sakes, I hope that you'll come forward as you have this morning and clearly state what your goal is -- what is it that you are seeking to achieve. And if you do so and do it openly -- publicly -- that is your right.

SEN. HATCH: And I can tell you categorically that they are not going to be a filter. I know who the filters are, and they are in the White House and the Justice Department, as they were in the Clinton administration. Now, the Clinton administration wasn't tarred by accusations that People for the American Way vetted every judgeship nomination, even though we know they weighed in rather heavily. Now, individual members of all societies weigh in heavily on these judges, not just the Federalist society. And heaven knows, we've got people here who think that the American Bar Association should be the last word on everything. I happen to pay attention to their recommendations. I'm not going to ignore anybody's recommendations; I'm going to give some credibility to them and look at them, but they should -- they're not -- they should not have a formal authoritative role in this process. They aren't elected to anything; we're the vetters. I heard people -- some people saying in the media that they should have a right to vet because they are the most prestigious law -- bar association in the country. Well, they are the largest, but there are dozens of bar associations in this country, all of whom have an equal right to say, "We should be in this process." And we can't -- we can't allow that.

Now, I'm not going to allow the Federalist society to dictate to this committee. That isn't the purpose of it; that isn't what they do. It's a lot attorneys who basically have been leading law students, leading attorneys, leading professors, leading judges in this country who basically feel like there are limitations to government that ought to be abided by, and they haven't been in some ways. And I find nothing wrong with my colleague from Illinois asking these questions because he is, I think, one of the brightest people in the Senate, and, I think, very effective -- and we're friends. But I just kind of got upset, not at what you asked or your questions, but the fact that I've seen these articles trying to say that, you know, or some sort of cabal controlling the judgeship nominations and -- or even Justice Department nominations down there at the White House.

No, there is a different White House. President Clinton was not known for conservative politics. I think anybody who's fair would admit that. The judges he recommended, I don't think very many of them would have been recommended by -- or will be recommended -- or would have been recommended by President Bush.

There are differences in philosophy; we have to acknowledge that. But to demean intelligent members of the bar because they have a different point of view from the far left is, I think, uncalled for. And I think the media -- talk about trying to have mind control. I think we can use honest, strong ideas from a wide variety of organizations, from the left to the right. And I get a little tired of saying -- of hearing some of our colleagues say, "We don't want any right wingers on the court." Well, I'm sure there were Republicans that didn't want any left wingers on the court, but that's stupid.

The people they're sending up today -- I've looked every one of them -- are highly intelligent, people of great temperament, people of accomplishment in the law, many of them are judges who have already been confirmed by this committee. And yet people are saying, "We don't want any right wingers" like everybody that Clinton -- the Clinton administration sent up was a moderate. Give me a break. (Chuckles.) We put 377 Clinton judges here, five less than the all-time champion, Ronald Reagan. And he would've had eight more had it not been for Democrat holds in the Senate. In other words, he would've had three more than Reagan. And Reagan had a Republican Senate for much of his tenure and yet all we've heard is just bad mouthing around here of what went on.

And to my knowledge, the Federalist society does not take public positions, adopt policy statements, file amicus briefs or the like. It is simply a forum for discussion, as I am also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, which is a forum for public discussion on foreign policy issues in which I am also interested.

SEN. DURBIN: So it is your belief that the Federalist society does not have a philosophy -- a stated philosophy when it comes to, for example, the future course of the Supreme Court?

MR. DINH: No, I do not think it does have a stated philosophy, to my knowledge. It may very well have. I just simply do not know. I know that the society has a very diverse membership of people who think very equivocally about these issues, and I know that I've gotten many, many -- into many, many disagreements with members of the Federalist society on these kinds of issues. So I do not think that a official policy would be possible even if desirable.

SEN. DURBIN: Where would you put the Federalist society on the political spectrum?

MR. DINH: You know, I simply do not know. I know that there are press reports that have attempted to put it in a political spectrum with respect to other organizations. I myself have -- in my personal and professional life, have been very hesitant to characterize anybody or any group according to labels, simply because I eschew such labels myself. So I -- it would not be appropriate for me to do so for others.

SEN. DURBIN: And you are not familiar -- or are you familiar, rather, with the term, "the court in exile -- the Constitution in exile?"

MR. DINH: No, sir, I am not.

SEN. DURBIN: Okay.

Well, let me say that what I've read -- and I'm not an expert nor am I member of the Federalist society -- they do have a very conservative philosophy. I don't think they are a debating society. I think they have an agenda. And it troubles some of us to believe that the American Bar Association, which has been characterized as liberal by the conservatives and conservative by the liberals over the course of its history, is being cast aside by the White House now when it comes to the judicial process. And instead we find that many people who are associated with the Federalist society are now seeking prominent positions in the administration of justice. I don't think it's a coincidence. I think it is a conscious decision to move us toward a path that, frankly, many of us think needs to be questioned, and at least publicized.

I sincerely hope that -- if you are indeed confirmed, that you do not become an agent of any political agenda. You have an extraordinary personal family history. It is just exceptional, and I think all of us are in awe of what you and your family has achieved in overcoming great odds. I think that you can make a great contribution to public service and I hope that you will. But I hope that it doesn't become an effort for a political clearinghouse for only those who happened to hew to that line to be considered as possible nominees to the federal bench. I think we do need diversity and moderation and the kind of excellence and integrity which both parties should seek to make part of their nomination process.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

SEN. HATCH: Well, let me -- I'm pleased that we've had you all here. I want everybody to know that I'm on the board of advisers of the Federalist society, and I'm darned proud of it. And I will tell you why: because these aren't just conservatives, these are top-notch lawyers all over this country, top-notch law students who are just sick and tired of the leftward leanings of our government, and frankly wanted to bring some into balance.

The Federalist society doesn't lobby, unlike a lot of the groups that we get from the left all the time. They don't take positions politically. They basically hold the best forums in America. And in every one of those conferences they've had both sides presented. And I know because I've been one of the lecturers from time to time.

So I get little tired of -- I'm not accusing the senior Senator from Illinois of this -- but I get a little tired of some in the media treating the Federalist society as some group of radicals that are out there. Frankly, one of the original advisers to the Federalist society was Justice Scalia, who, by anybody's measurement is a brilliant lawyer, law professor, and a brilliant member of the court, albeit you may disagree with his philosophy from time to time.

But to make a long story short, I do think we ought to get rid of character assassination of any organization. But I get little tired of some of these attitudes that anything on the left is just fine, no matter how irresponsible, and no matter how degrading, no matter how mean spirited they are. And yet you have a society made up of top-notch lawyers, many of them law review graduates at their respective schools, who are practicing law, trying cases all over this country, defending people, prosecuting people, but who believe that there is -- there are limits to government.

And they may individually express conservative viewpoints or moderate-to-conservative viewpoints or even libertarian viewpoints from time to time, but the fact of the matter is the society itself does not engage in lobbying nor the pursuits that some in the media have seemed to smear them with.

SEN. DURBIN: Will the senator -- the chairman yield?

SEN. HATCH: Sure.

SEN. DURBIN: First, I'd like to commend the chairman because I think he has been very forthright in his beliefs and in what the Federalist society is all about. That was the purpose of my question to professor Dinh, who is a member of the society.

SEN. HATCH: Well, I wasn't reading anything wrong in your question, I'm just saying -- I want to make it clear because I've seen these articles and, my gosh --

SEN. DURBIN: Well, if I could finish -- if I might finish --

SEN. HATCH: Sure. Go ahead.

SEN. DURBIN: Senator Hatch and I come to this business with different philosophies. That's part of the American political process. I'm not going to disparage those of conservative bent, and I hope that he will not disparage those of a liberal bent or progressive bent. We just happen to see things differently. But the point I'm trying to make here is the Federalist society is now going to be the filter for nominations to the Department of Justice as well as judicial nominations. If that's going to be a standard, then for goodness sakes, I hope that you'll come forward as you have this morning and clearly state what your goal is -- what is it that you are seeking to achieve. And if you do so and do it openly -- publicly -- that is your right.

SEN. HATCH: And I can tell you categorically that they are not going to be a filter. I know who the filters are, and they are in the White House and the Justice Department, as they were in the Clinton administration. Now, the Clinton administration wasn't tarred by accusations that People for the American Way vetted every judgeship nomination, even though we know they weighed in rather heavily. Now, individual members of all societies weigh in heavily on these judges, not just the Federalist society. And heaven knows, we've got people here who think that the American Bar Association should be the last word on everything. I happen to pay attention to their recommendations. I'm not going to ignore anybody's recommendations; I'm going to give some credibility to them and look at them, but they should -- they're not -- they should not have a formal authoritative role in this process. They aren't elected to anything; we're the vetters. I heard people -- some people saying in the media that they should have a right to vet because they are the most prestigious law -- bar association in the country. Well, they are the largest, but there are dozens of bar associations in this country, all of whom have an equal right to say, "We should be in this process." And we can't -- we can't allow that.

Now, I'm not going to allow the Federalist society to dictate to this committee. That isn't the purpose of it; that isn't what they do. It's a lot attorneys who basically have been leading law students, leading attorneys, leading professors, leading judges in this country who basically feel like there are limitations to government that ought to be abided by, and they haven't been in some ways. And I find nothing wrong with my colleague from Illinois asking these questions because he is, I think, one of the brightest people in the Senate, and, I think, very effective -- and we're friends. But I just kind of got upset, not at what you asked or your questions, but the fact that I've seen these articles trying to say that, you know, or some sort of cabal controlling the judgeship nominations and -- or even Justice Department nominations down there at the White House.

No, there is a different White House. President Clinton was not known for conservative politics. I think anybody who's fair would admit that. The judges he recommended, I don't think very many of them would have been recommended by -- or will be recommended -- or would have been recommended by President Bush.

There are differences in philosophy; we have to acknowledge that. But to demean intelligent members of the bar because they have a different point of view from the far left is, I think, uncalled for. And I think the media -- talk about trying to have mind control. I think we can use honest, strong ideas from a wide variety of organizations, from the left to the right. And I get a little tired of saying -- of hearing some of our colleagues say, "We don't want any right wingers on the court." Well, I'm sure there were Republicans that didn't want any left wingers on the court, but that's stupid.

The people they're sending up today -- I've looked every one of them -- are highly intelligent, people of great temperament, people of accomplishment in the law, many of them are judges who have already been confirmed by this committee. And yet people are saying, "We don't want any right wingers" like everybody that Clinton -- the Clinton administration sent up was a moderate. Give me a break. (Chuckles.) We put 377 Clinton judges here, five less than the all-time champion, Ronald Reagan. And he would've had eight more had it not been for Democrat holds in the Senate. In other words, he would've had three more than Reagan. And Reagan had a Republican Senate for much of his tenure and yet all we've heard is just bad mouthing around here of what went on.

HEADLINE: Bush de-escalates on judges . . .

BODY:
Judicial nominations have been a prime partisan and ideological battleground at least since 1987, when President Reagan's selection of Robert Bork for the Supreme Court fell victim to a barrage of fire from liberals. As the courts have played an increasingly large role in settling policy disputes, both Republicans and Democrats have come to see judicial appointments as just another form of political warfare.

George W. Bush wants to de-escalate the fighting, as he made clear with his first set of judicial nominations last week. Urging a "return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process," he asked Democrats to "rise above the bitterness of the past" and vote promptly on his choices.

He also gave them the chance to meet him halfway. The slate of 11 appellate court nominations suggests an effort not only to satisfy Republicans in Congress but to mollify Democrats who figured his ideal judge would fall well to the right of Roy Bean--even though Bush's record in Texas didn't support that suspicion.

The group includes three women, two African-Americans and one Hispanic. Two of the nominees are district judges appointed to the bench by Bill Clinton. Three potential candidates who had already provoked criticism from Democrats were not chosen.

And the true-blue conservatives chosen by Bush are not party hacks or ideological hit men. They are top-flight lawyers. John G. Roberts Jr. is a former deputy solicitor general who has argued dozens of cases before the Supreme Court.

University of Utah professor Michael McConnell, previously a mainstay of the University of Chicago law faculty, is the nation's leading scholar on church-state jurisprudence. Although he takes issue with the "wall of separation" doctrine extolled by civil libertarians, he wins praise even from liberal sparring partners like Harvard's Laurence Tribe.

The only choice certain to provoke a fight is Terrence Boyle, a district judge in North Carolina who has drawn opposition from the state's Democratic senator, John Edwards. But other Democrats largely refrained from criticism of the selections, at least for the moment.

That's no guarantee that Bush will get the speedy votes he requested. Speedy votes, after all, have only recently become a favorite cause of Senate Republicans, many of whom spent the last eight years blocking President Bill Clinton's judicial nominations. Democrats who bridled when their colleagues refused to confirm nominees for vacant seats on the bench are now in the unaccustomed position of insisting that the Senate carefully examine each selection.

Examine it should, but the Senate should also act promptly on the information it gathers. Barring serious misjudgments, presidents of either party should be given deference in their choices for the judiciary--including those choices whose political and judicial philosophies conflict with those of the opposition party.

The Senate should demand solid qualifications, good legal minds and a respect for the law and the Constitution. But it shouldn't demand nominees who will vote a certain way on a particular issue. The Senate has a constitutional charge to advise and consent on judicial appointments. It should do so on these without undue delay.

A NEW RACE CARD

[Will Democrats target a Hispanic judicial nominee?]

Writing on The New Republic's website, Peter Beinart, the magazine's editor, urges Democrats

< <http://www.tnr.com/punditry/beinart051401.html> > to "go after" Miguel Estrada, one of President Bush's nominees for the D.C. Circuit.

Beinart's point is that Democrats have invested so heavily in identity politics that they find it difficult to oppose "female and non-white conservatives"; nominating such people is now a Bush strategy. Hence Beinart's counsel. He writes, "Going after Estrada would send the one message that really matters: that when the White House chooses its Supreme Court picks, it must compromise ideologically, not demographically."

Does Beinart realize what he's saying here? That Estrada should draw especially intense opposition from Democrats because he's Hispanic? That would send a message, all right, but maybe not one that will help the Democrats.

Moderates are fed up with an increasingly right-wing Republican party, reports Anna Quindlen in her latest Newsweek column < <http://www.msnbc.com/news/572629.asp> >. Longtime followers of Quindlen's oeuvre will recognize this theme as a hardy perennial. But this time she has evidence: two real, live voters who have left the GOP. Two. Specifically, a New York lawyer and a department-store heiress. Somebody better call Karl Rove real quick.

Under Siege
Ugly SG fight previews looming war for the U.S. Supreme Court

Solicitor General Nominee Theodore Olson
By Tony Mauro
Legal Times

As they explained their votes against Theodore Olson's nomination as solicitor general last week, Senate Democrats repeatedly described the job he seeks as "unique," akin to that of a "10th justice" of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ranking Judiciary Committee Democrat Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who orchestrated the confrontational 9-9 tie on May 17, worried aloud that Olson is a "thoroughgoing partisan who will not be able to check his partisan instincts at the door to the office of the solicitor general."

Barring Republican defections or a Democratic filibuster, Olson will probably pass through that door fairly soon and don the traditional morning coat the solicitor general wears to argue before the Supreme Court. But the admonitions of the Democrats will echo forward, raising important questions that can only be answered over time.

Has the position of solicitor general been permanently tarnished by the charge of politics? Does Olson himself arrive at his job as damaged goods -- as a solicitor general who will have to work extra hard to gain the trust of the Supreme Court?

And if they were able to bruise and oppose the "tenth justice" as they did last week, what will happen when the senators evaluate a nominee to replace one of the other nine -- the real justices of the Supreme Court?

Republican partisans see in the Olson vote a sign of things to come when President George W. Bush sends a Supreme Court nominee to the Senate. The latest betting is that that no vacancy will materialize this summer, but when it does, warfare will commence almost immediately.

"We're in for a bumpy ride," says Thomas Jipping of the Free Congress Foundation's Judicial Selection Project. "The Olson vote tells me that the Democrats are not keeping their powder dry. They're shooting everything that moves. They're like a blindfolded child, whacking at a pinata." The White House can insulate a high court nominee from some of the whacks by naming someone who combines a first -- the first Hispanic, for example -- with less of a partisan past than Olson.

But the Olson episode may have poisoned the well for Democrats to the point that any Supreme Court nominee, as well as some lower court nominees, will have to run an Olson-like gauntlet to get confirmed.

Elliot Minberg of People for the American Way, echoing comments by Leahy, says the Olson vote represented a breakdown of the process the Judiciary Committee had established after Clarence Thomas' controversial confirmation nearly 10 years ago. By custom, committee staff from both parties would investigate together when sensitive allegations are made about nominees, Minberg notes. "The Democrats are likely to continue to stand up for their procedural rights, so we will see more fireworks," says Minberg.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, says Democrats are responsible for any breakdown of bipartisanship.

Under special procedures developed to handle committee tie votes in the current 50-50 Senate, Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., will pull the Olson nomination out of committee and onto the floor of the Senate, possibly as soon as this week. On May 18, Sen. Zell Miller, D-Ga., announced he would vote for Olson, possibly making it unnecessary for Vice President Dick Cheney to break a tie vote of the full Senate.

Office Politics

Olson brought to his nomination not only solid conservative legal credentials, but also a r?sum? loaded with partisan high points. It was his political background -- namely, his involvement with the magazine American Spectator and its anti-Clinton Arkansas Project -- and questions about his candor regarding that involvement that gave Democrats the ammunition to oppose Olson.

Olson may be more political than most if not all of his predecessors, but the rosy image of the solicitor general as above politics is not entirely accurate. The solicitor general has a duty, often hard to define, to be an honest broker with a broader duty to the development of the law than merely winning his cases. But he is also a point man for his president's legal policies.

Archibald Cox worked in the presidential campaign of John Kennedy before becoming solicitor general in 1961, and Thurgood Marshall arrived at the post in 1965 with a long record of civil rights activism. Robert Bork was closely questioned in 1973 about his past writings on civil rights and antitrust, and Charles Fried drew opposition in 1985 from civil rights groups concerned about his views on race. Drew Days III and Walter Dellinger in the Clinton administration also weathered some political sniping early on.

"It's really a pre-Reagan era notion that the solicitor should be nonpolitical," says Rebecca Salokar, author of a 1992 book, "The Solicitor General: The Politics of Law." The attention on the position triggered by the flap over Olson, she suggests, could bury that image once and for all.

"Somehow the idea has arisen that the solicitor general is a judge and has to have been born a judge," agrees Fried, now a Harvard Law School professor. "That really is not necessary."

Fried recalls that after his own confirmation, "I wasn't very popular with Justices Marshall and Blackmun, and Justice Brennan roughed me up a bit" with tough questions from the bench.

But soon, Fried says, any animosities or testing faded, and by the time he was seeking a judgeship in Massachusetts in 1995, "Justice Brennan was writing recommendations for me."

The tribal tradition in elite Washington of salving the wounds of confirmation will work especially well for Olson in part because some of the justices -- notably his good friend Justice Clarence Thomas and Chief Justice William Rehnquist -- have gone through their own nomination tribulations. "They've all been around so long, they know what is going on," says Fried, who believes the criticism of Olson's candor was a phony mask for more base political motives. "He is a professional, and life will go on."

Adds Charles Cooper of Cooper & Kirk and an Olson supporter: "The Court has seen this routine before. He'll come out of it fine."

What Legacy?

Some are not so optimistic. Minckberg of People for the American Way says Olson would arrive at the Court with "a bit of a cloud over his head." The criticism of Olson has focused on his credibility and candor -- two qualities that are essential for a solicitor general, Minckberg notes. "It can't help but be on the justices' minds as he makes his arguments," he adds.

Of course, candor was an issue in Olson's first run-in with Congress and the independent counsel in the early 1980s, and the episode did not keep him from building a highly successful Supreme Court practice at Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher.

Harvard Law School professor Laurence Tribe, Olson's adversary in Bush v. Gore last December, says that "a testing period of sorts is inevitable for any SG." Yet Tribe, who endorsed Olson's nomination in a letter that preceded the flap of the last few weeks, says Olson's performance on the job will matter more than anything that went before.

Adds Tribe: "That process of establishing credibility as solicitor general probably depends, in any contested or clouded case, on how the new SG actually performs in the early period of his or her tenure."

Nothing's changed, Hollings says
Senator sees no problems for S.C.' s federal nominees

By LEE BANDY Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Fritz Hollings predicted Thursday that federal judicial nominees will get "a better look-see" under a Democratic-controlled Senate, but he said he foresees no problems for South Carolina appointees. U.S. District Court Judge Dennis Shedd of Columbia, who has been nominated for a seat on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, should easily win confirmation, the senator said. Hollings said he also expects smooth sailing for J. Strom Thurmond Jr., the 28-year-old son of the senior senator, who is expected to be named U.S. attorney for South Carolina. "We'll go forward with Strom. He will be confirmed," Hollings said of the Aiken prosecutor. With control of the Senate floor and Judiciary Committee, Democrats could vote down nominations in committee, reject nominees on the floor, or simply never consider an appointment. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, outgoing chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said it will be tougher to confirm federal judges since Democrats are in control of the Senate agenda. Shedd was among the first 14 of President George W. Bush's nominees for federal appeals courts. Most were moderate conservatives or were noncontroversial. Federal magistrate Terry Wooten of Florence, recommended by Sen. Thurmond for a new federal district judgeship in the state, has completed the vetting process. His nomination could be forwarded to Capitol Hill any day. Hollings, meanwhile, promised to run the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee in the same bi-partisan fashion he and Arizona Sen. John McCain did under the Senate's power-sharing arrangement this year. "Really, nothing has changed," Hollings said. Democrats will gain control of the Senate for the first time since 1994 after Vermont Sen. James Jeffords abandoned the GOP and declared himself an independent. Hollings, 78, will become the chairman when Jeffords' switch is finalized. "Things really aren't all that dramatic," the South Carolina senator said. As committee chairman, Hollings said, he will oppose any Bush administration effort to change Federal Communications Commission regulations barring a single company from owning a television station and a newspaper in the same market.

There has been some talk of trying to drop or relax the rule. Hollings also said he will attempt to revive legislation creating a "safe harbor" of prime-time television programming that would be largely free of sex and violence. Opponents say it is improper for government to regulate what Americans see or hear on television or radio.

"I'm going to try to get the leadership to take it up," he said. The committee has jurisdiction over a wide range of issues, including telecommunications, consumer product safety, federal trade, surface transportation, airlines and space.

"We've got a full platter," Hollings said. University of South Carolina professor Brad Gomez called Hollings' elevation to the chairmanship "a major gain" for him.

"Commerce and industry are important to this state. As chairman, he'll have a disproportionate influence. The state can really benefit from this type of leadership," Gomez said.

Hollings expressed admiration for Jeffords. Much like the Vermont senator, "I often feel like a minority in my own party for thinking and voting differently than my Democratic colleagues. ... He expressed many of my own feelings and described many of my own experiences as an independent-minded Democrat in the U.S. Senate," Hollings said.

In a statement released by his office, Thurmond called Jeffords' defection "disheartening," but he said, "it will not stop the Senate from addressing issues important to the people."

REPUBLICANS TAKING HARD LINE ON REORGANIZING SENATE

By Matthew Tully, CQ Staff Writer

May 30, 2001 - Senate Republicans do not intend to go quietly into the minority. While acknowledging they will become the minority party in the Senate next week, GOP senators are preparing to play hard ball in negotiations over a new organizing resolution for the remainder of the 107th Congress.

"There are a good number of Republican senators who would like to see a whole host of issues addressed before they will agree to an organizing resolution," said Ron Bonjean, spokesman for current Republican Majority Leader Trent Lott, Miss.

The transfer of power is expected to occur at the close of business on Tuesday, when James M. Jeffords of Vermont abandons the GOP and becomes an independent who will caucus with Democrats.

The tough talk could foreshadow a prolonged paralysis.

Lott has appointed five senators to negotiate with current Democratic Minority Leader Tom Daschle, S.D., but the talks are not expected to heat up until lawmakers return to town next week.

The five Republicans -- Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, Phil Gramm of Texas, Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, Mitch McConnell of Kentucky and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania -- will report to Lott, who will share any agreements with his conference. Bonjean said Lott wants rank-and-file GOP senators to "have a full investment" in the talks.

Although Daschle and Lott will swap titles once Jeffords' switch is official, the Democratic leader will have no real power to move legislation, because any motion to proceed to consideration of a bill or nomination is subject to filibuster. That means Republicans could block any and all business on the floor -- thwarting Daschle's announced intention to call up such Democratic priorities as patients' rights legislation (S 283) and a minimum wage increase (S 277).

Both sides appear to agree that a new organizing resolution will give Democrats one-seat majorities on all committees. But a Republican leadership aide said Republicans will not sign onto a deal before they are comfortable with committee funding issues and, most importantly, a plan for handling judicial nominations. Republican senators have said they want a guarantee that President Bush's nominees are not rejected or bottled up in the Judiciary Committee, which Vermont Democrat Patrick J. Leahy will soon chair.

Democrats reject that demand.

Lott and Daschle crafted the current organizing resolution (S Res 8) in January after the 2000 elections left the chamber split 50-50 but under GOP control because of Vice President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote. Committees are now evenly divided, but chaired by Republicans.

Leaders of both parties can force deadlocked bills and nominations to the floor with a majority vote.

The currently resolution, by its own terms, is nullified when one party attains a majority "of the whole number of senators."

Bonjean pointed out that "this is a unique situation because we will be in a 50-49-1 makeup."

A senior Democratic leadership aide said the Senate has traditionally counted independents in the party whose caucus they join.

In the end, Republicans point out, any agreement will need the support of 60 senators because organizing resolutions can be filibustered.

Senate committee chairmen and ranking Democrats will also switch jobs next week, but without a new organizing resolution committee rosters will revert to those in place at the end of the 106th Congress -- minus those senators who retired or lost their re-election bids.

Republicans will enjoy a numerical majority on nine of the 16 standing committees, plus the Indian Affairs and Select Intelligence panels. Six standing committees will have evenly split rosters, and only the Veterans Affairs panel will have a Democratic majority.

A GOP leadership aide said the unusual scenario has emboldened Republican senators. "It's in the Democrats' best interests to work with the Republicans," he said.

Miller Angles For Judiciary

Georgian Could Help the GOP On Judgeships

By Paul Kane <mailto:PJK@rollcall.com>

In a move that could foil any potential Democratic attempts to block President Bush's judicial nominations, Sen. Zell Miller (D-Ga.) is jockeying for the extra seat that is likely to open on the Judiciary Committee in the wake of the chamber's power shift.

The maverick Senator, who has voted to approve every single Bush administration nominee so far, expressed interest last week in landing the additional seat on Judiciary, which is currently split 9-9, once Senate leaders hammer out a deal to reorganize committees.

"His choices would be either [Health, Education, Labor and Pensions] or Judiciary," said Joan Kirchner, Miller's spokeswoman. Republicans would be ecstatic if Miller were named to Judiciary. One GOP aide said Miller is the "most fair" Democrat when it comes to nominations, an accolade that some Democrats would be hesitant to pass along. Democratic aides have already speculated that leadership will want the 10th spot on Judiciary to go to a loyal Caucus member, who they can be assured will go along with senior Democrats on the panel. Home to some of the most liberal Democrats in the Senate, Judiciary has already seen the two most partisan nomination struggles of the young administration, Attorney General John Ashcroft and Solicitor General Ted Olson. With the Olson vote, all nine Judiciary Democrats opposed the nominee, including Sen. Russ Feingold (D-Wis.), who had previously supported every Bush nominee to federal agencies. But Minority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.), in his final days in the majority, used the special privilege of the previous 50-50 Senate and brought Olson's nomination to the Senate floor, where he was confirmed 51-47. Now with an extra seat on Judiciary, Democrats could be able to block nominees to the District and appellate courts that they view as extreme conservatives in committee, denying them even a floor vote. The expected 10-9 edge for the majority would also give Democrats some leverage over Bush's potential Supreme Court nominees. But Miller, one of just two Democrats to vote for Olson on the floor, would prove to be a key swing vote on a committee that has only one moderate, Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.), currently serving on it. The fate of Bush's judicial nominees has been about the only source of contention as Senate leaders edge closer to a deal that would give Democrats a one-seat edge on all committees. After initially demanding that new Majority Leader Thomas Daschle (D-S.D.) agree to a rule guaranteeing nominees get a floor vote, regardless of what happens in committee, Republicans now expect to simply get a public assurance from Daschle that he will be fair with Bush's nominees. With the nominee controversy expected to be ironed out, rank-and-file Democratic Senators began to openly jockey for the expected extra seats on key panels. And Sen. Robert Torricelli (D-N.J.) is complaining that new chairmen are hogging full committee assignments and subcommittee posts, leaving little, if nothing, for their junior colleagues. Democrats aren't alone in angling for new committee spots. With Sen. Jim Jeffords (I-Vt.) now getting his assignments from Democrats, his spot on Finance will open up. Currently 10-10, Finance is likely to grow to 11-10 in favor of Democrats, and Jeffords said last week he was told that he would get the 11th spot. Republicans, who always use seniority to determine committee slots, would turn to Sen. Mike DeWine (R-Ohio), who was next in line to get on the coveted Finance panel during committee assignments in January. But DeWine said last week he would prefer to stay on Appropriations, one of the four "super A" committees. (Senators can only serve on one of those panels.) With DeWine staying at Appropriations, Sen. Craig Thomas (R-Wyo.) would be next in line. "I'm interested in it, of course," he said last week. Kirchner, Miller's spokeswoman, said the Senator, who has publicly sparred with Democratic leaders over their treatment of nominees, would not be upset if he doesn't get Judiciary or HELP. "If it doesn't happen, it's no skin off his nose," she said. If not Miller, Democrats may feel pressured to find another Southern Democrat to sit on Judiciary, considering that Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.) is currently the most Southern Democrat serving on the committee. Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.), a trial lawyer whose presidential ambitions could be served by high-profile nomination battles, said he is talking to leadership about new committees assignments but "none that I'm talking about publicly." Asked specifically about Judiciary, Edwards said, "Anything's a possibility." One Democratic aide pointed to Sen. Bill Nelson (D-Fla.), also a lawyer, as another possibility for Judiciary, but Nelson's office declined to comment Friday. Daschle declined to comment on whom he was hoping to put on Judiciary or any other committees, but pledged to try to "break the cycle" of blocking nominees that Democrats say the GOP engaged in during the Clinton administration.

"I don't believe in payback. ... By and large, people deserve a vote," Daschle said.

But Daschle then endorsed the same "blue slip" policy that the Republicans had used during the Clinton years, requiring both home-state Senators to sign off on a judicial nominee before even a hearing is held. That's the same approach that Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) pushed when Democrats were in the minority, virtually assuring that even liberal Senators on Judiciary will be able to block home-state Bush nominees. Miller is the second maverick Democrat to express interest in Judiciary. Before the Memorial Day recess, Sen. Robert Torricelli (N.J.) began telling colleagues he was interested in moving back to Judiciary, which he had to give up this year when he switched to Finance.

Last week, however, Torricelli said, "I have not pursued it."

Instead, Torricelli is concerned that Democrats have too many senior Senators who are gobbling up chairmanships of committees and subcommittees. At Foreign Relations, new Chairman Biden expects to maintain his chairmanship of the subcommittee on European affairs, in addition to the youth violence panel at Judiciary.

If Biden were to give up his European affairs panel, Torricelli would be next in line to chair the subcommittee, the only one that the embattled first-term Senator would get to lead in the run-up to his re-election battle.

"People have been waiting a long time [to get back the majority]. I would expect some of the more senior colleagues to be generous and considerate," Torricelli said.

But Biden brushed aside any suggestion of giving up the subcommittee posts to be fair to junior Democrats. "Fairness isn't an issue. There isn't any issue," he said.

Other senior Democrats appear to be taking the same approach. Leahy said he expects to continue chairing the Judiciary subcommittee on antitrust, business rights and competition, as well as subcommittees on both Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry and Appropriations.

Aides to Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) say he expects to chair HELP and three other subcommittees, including one at the Health panel.

Soon after they took power in the 104th Congress, Republicans instituted a limit on the number of chairmanships (or ranking member posts) a Senator could have, requiring waivers of anyone that chaired a major committee to head up a subcommittee. The switch allowed many junior lawmakers, including some Senators in their first or second year, to take the gavel at subcommittees.

"It was a good way of spreading the wealth around," said Minority Whip Don Nickles (R-Okla.).

Democrats say there is no movement in their Caucus to institute such a rule. "There's just a certain understanding: You've got to wait your turn," said Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-Ark.), who considered herself lucky to be receiving a subcommittee gavel at Agriculture.

But Torricelli said that, even though the Caucus doesn't want a formal rule limiting chairmanships, junior Members want the Caucus elders to step aside when they can to help out.

"The sentiment exists," he said.

Republican Conference Chairman Rick Santorum (Pa.), one of the driving forces behind the GOP limits, said spreading around the subcommittee gavels "gives people a sense that they matter here," adding that senior Senators with four different chairmanships aren't effective.

"You can't do a good job. You basically have staff run those subcommittees," he said of lawmakers with multiple assignments.

Daschle said Friday that he expects to name all his new committee assignments later this week, assuming he can reach a new committee organization deal with Republicans today or Tuesday.

Lott is expected to present a Republican offer to Daschle today, a deal that will spell out Democratic majorities by adding a Democrat to the panels. A GOP source close to the negotiating team of five veteran Senators who met with Daschle last week said that the thorny issue of handling nominations would be dealt with by a non-binding resolution, either through a colloquy on the floor or a memorandum of understanding.

GOP Seeks Judicial Confirmations

by JESSE J. HOLLAND

Associated Press; June 15, 2001

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Republicans backed down on Thursday from some of their demands for how the newly Democrat-controlled Senate should handle President Bush's nominees for the Supreme Court and federal judgeships.

Earlier in the week, GOP negotiators demanded guaranteed Senate votes on all Supreme Court and federal appellate court nominees, and elimination of the secret veto process for some judicial nominations.

After Democrats refused, Republicans sought to allow the full Senate -- instead of negotiators -- to decide whether the Supreme Court nominees should be guaranteed a vote. They also want the Senate to decide whether to make the senatorial veto process public instead of private, as it has been in the past.

Democrats say they will treat Bush's nominees fairly. Republicans fear Democrats will block Bush's judicial nominations.

'We're not asking for there to be a commitment,' said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., one of the five GOP senators who have been negotiating with Majority Leader Thomas Daschle, D-S.D. 'We're asking for there to be a vote.'

Daschle, who is trying to reorganize the Senate to reflect the Democratic takeover, is opposed.

'I remain committed to trying to resolve the outstanding issues around the organization of the Senate through negotiations and discussions, rather than with potentially divisive votes,' Daschle said.

Democratic aides said the idea of making public the secret vetoes likely would come up a meeting Tuesday of Democratic senators.

The maneuvering is the result of Vermont Sen. Jim Jeffords' decision to leave the GOP and become an independent, altering the 50-50 split in the Senate. Republicans had control by virtue of Vice President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote.

The two sides agreed that Democrats will gain a one-seat majority on each Senate committee, and the size of committees will be expanded to accommodate the one-seat Democratic edge. All Republicans will keep their committee assignments, and committee funding and space agreements negotiated at the beginning of the year will stay in effect as well.

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the top Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said that while filibustering the reorganization had not been discussed, GOP senators told negotiators to "go to the wall" over the judges provision.

Daschle said that if Republicans and Democrats are unable to agree on a reorganization, "action in the committees on virtually anything is unlikely."

Bush's Judgeships Stall In The Senate

THE WASHINGTON TIMES; June 15, 2001

Senate Republican negotiators late yesterday declared an impasse in their talks with Democrats on President Bush's judicial nominees and said it was time to move forward with an up-or-down vote on the new Senate organization.

"We are only asking for fairness," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, Kentucky Republican.

The negotiators said the next move is up to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat, on whether to call a vote. Republicans want the resolution to reflect the three points on which both parties agree, and the two contentious matters voted on independently as amendments to the resolution.

Republicans said the full Senate should have the opportunity to make a determination and that they would not filibuster if the resolution is voted down.

"We're simply asking for there to be a vote. When we have fundamental differences, we vote," said Sen. Arlen Specter, Pennsylvania Republican. Both parties agree Democrats will have a one-seat majority on every committee, with the exception of the Ethics Committee, which by tradition is equally divided.

All committee members will retain their assignments, and committee funding and space agreements negotiated by the chairmen and ranking members will remain in effect.

Democrats do not agree with Republicans that "blue slips," or single-senator veto slips on judges from home-state senators, should be eliminated.

Democratic leaders turned up the pressure yesterday on judgeships, accusing the GOP of holding up White House nominations by not submitting to the Democrats' proposal to reorganize the Senate.

"They're making my life easier," said Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat and chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "For the life of me, I don't know why they keep waiting. I'm ready to start (confirmation hearings) within 10 days to two weeks of the time that we reorganize." Republicans say Mr. Leahy, one of the party's most liberal lawmakers, is a prime example of why they are pressing Mr. Daschle for assurances that Mr. Bush's nominees will be treated fairly. Mr. Leahy was one of the most outspoken critics of John Ashcroft's nomination for attorney general in a bruising confirmation hearing in January.

In two weeks of talks, Mr. Daschle has resisted Republican requests to promise floor votes on appeals court candidates and Supreme Court nominees if the Judiciary Committee rejects them. Mr. Daschle says he will hold up a deal to reorganize committees with Democratic majorities until both sides agree on the issue of nominations.

Democrats say Senate Republicans are only hurting their own administration by not accepting Democrats' more vague, nonbinding assurance to be fair to nominees.

"Unfortunately, what that means is that action in the committees on virtually anything is unlikely," Mr. Daschle said yesterday. "We wouldn't be able to do nominations or legislation. We're going to ... probably be faced with a bottled-up array of , but we won't be able to do that." Asked if he is "jamming" the White House's agenda, Mr. Daschle replied, "That's not my choice. I think it would be inexcusable for us to disenfranchise elected members of the Senate who were serving on these committees just a week ago, and now to tell them they can't vote. That isn't my jamming them, that is simply a reality; that's what senators are here to do, is to make decisions." Referring to the new majority party's power to investigate the administration, Mr. Daschle added, "In the meantime, we'll be satisfied, I suppose, with the opportunities to hold oversight hearings and other kinds of hearings. ..."

For example, Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, Connecticut Democrat, has used his new chairmanship of the Governmental Affairs Committee to hold a hearing on the administration's refusal to set energy price caps in California. Mr. Lieberman, who lost his bid for the vice presidency last year and is considered a likely presidential candidate for 2004, also plans to hold hearings on Mr. Bush's environmental policies.

ORGANIZING NEGOTIATIONS BEGIN TO GROW TESTY IN SENATE

By Emily Pierce, CQ Staff Writer

June 14, 2001 - Senate Republicans ratcheted up the rhetoric surrounding negotiations over a new Senate organizing resolution by airing their grievances at a news conference Thursday.

GOP negotiators said they were upset that Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, S.D., would not agree to their demands on how Supreme Court nominations and other judicial posts would be considered under the Democratic majority.

Because they said an agreement could not be reached, the five negotiators -- Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., and Arlen Specter, R-Pa. -- asked for the entire Senate to vote on whether to force floor votes on Supreme Court nominees.

The five also requested a vote on whether to compel senators who privately object to lower court nominees to make their objections public. Senatorial tradition allows members to object to nominees through a "blue slip" process that is generally kept secret.

The votes would come as amendments to the organizing resolution, which the GOP negotiators said would include agreements they already have with Daschle, such as giving Democrats one-seat majorities on committees, preserving existing committee agreements on staff and space, and giving Daschle and Minority Leader Trent Lott, Miss., the ability to appoint committee members.

Daschle responded by saying he did not feel "divisive votes" were necessary. "I want to resolve this matter between us," he said. Daschle added that he did not believe the announcement would mar the "cordial" relationship he has so far enjoyed with the group of five Republicans.

Democratic aides left open the possibility that votes on the organizing resolution could be necessary, but said the GOP proposal would first have to be presented to the Democratic caucus during its regular Tuesday lunch next week.

Democrats predicted that Republicans would be unlikely to prevail even if the issues were put to votes.

"Their fundamental problem is, to my knowledge, there's nobody in [the Democratic] caucus who believes we ought to change the rules," said one aide. "There has never been in the history of the U.S. Senate a guarantee of a vote [on Supreme Court nominees]."

Democrats also laughed off GOP fears that Democrats will filibuster President Bush's judicial nominees, saying the most recent examples of controversial nominations coming to the floor came under their watch. Both Justice Clarence Thomas and rejected nominee Robert Bork, who were nominated under Republican presidents and Democratic Senate majorities, got floor votes despite failing in committee.

Democrats also balked at the blue slip request and complained that after 15 days of talks Republicans had first raised the issue on Wednesday.

A GOP leadership aide said the Republican negotiators decided to go public with their demands after Daschle rejected a proposed memorandum of understanding that Supreme Court nominees would receive floor votes, and insulted the group by responding with a proposal that did not mention the issue.

"We're deeply concerned that Sen. Daschle is unwilling to ensconce in the organizing resolution what has [historically] been Senate practice," McConnell said.

The announcement by the five negotiators came after a nearly hour long meeting with the Republican caucus in which they received approval to insist on floor votes.

Both Democrats and Republicans said they did not expect the negotiators to meet again until Tuesday afternoon at the earliest.

Senator Schumer

On Judicial Independence:

Now & Then

Schumer Now: Senators Should Scrutinize A Judicial Nominee's Ideology

Senator Schumer Calls On Senators To Scrutinize The Ideology Of Judicial Nominees. "It's high time we return to a more open and more rational consideration of ideology when we review nominees." (Jesse J. Holland, "Schumer: Grill Nominees On Ideology," The Associated Press, June 26, 2001)

- ✓ Bill Clinton's Former White House Counsel Disagrees. Lloyd Cutler: "[C]andidates should decline to reply when efforts are made to find out how they would (rule) on a particular case." (Jesse J. Holland, "Schumer: Grill Nominees On Ideology," The Associated Press, June 26, 2001)

Schumer Then: Politics Should Be Taken Out Of The Judiciary So It Can Be Independent As The Founding Fathers Envisioned

Senator Schumer Claimed That Judges Should Be Kept Outside Of Politics And Above Influence By Others. "On an issue related, as well, of debating a number of nominees to be Federal judges, I want to address an issue that affects the entire Federal judiciary: The ban on honoraria. Under current law, as we all know, Federal judges are not allowed to accept honoraria. That is how it should be. The framers of the Constitution designed article III to keep judges outside of politics and above influence. Read the Federalist Papers. One of the great debates was that Federal judges, in article III, achieve life appointment. There was one reason for it: So they would be unfettered, so they would be uninfluenced; they could make their own decisions, knowing that no sanction could be taken against them for decisions they made, and, just as importantly, so the public would know it." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, October 3, 2000) (emphasis added)

Senator Schumer Said That Although Senators May Disagree With The Supreme Court At Times, There Is Nothing That Senators Can Do About Their Opposition Without Risking The Court's Independence. "Because the judiciary has neither the power of the sword, as does the executive, nor the power of the purse, as does Congress, it is essential that the judiciary maintain its power – and it has, thank God – for these 211 years since the Constitution was written, through an untainted reputation for integrity and impartiality. The Federal judiciary has had it. It has frustrated us at times. It frustrated Franklin D. Roosevelt in the 1930s. It has frustrated some Members today on issues where we disagree with the majority. There is nothing we can do about it, thank God, because an independent judiciary is vital." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, October 3, 2000) (emphasis added)

Senator Schumer Called On The Senate To Allow An Up Or Down Vote On All Judicial

Nominees. "I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity – vote them up or down. But this delay makes a mockery of the Constitution, makes a mockery of the fact that we are here working, and makes a mockery of the lives of very sincere people who have put themselves forward to be judges and then they hang out there in limbo." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, March 7, 2000) (emphasis added)

In Endorsing Clinton Nominees Paez, Berzon, Dyk, And Fuentes, Senator Schumer Credited Them As Being "Extremely Qualified," But He Provided No Analysis Of Whether The Judges Were Centrist Ideologues, A Qualification He Now Makes His Priority. "Judge Paez, Judge Berzon, Judge Dyk, and Judge Fuentes are extremely qualified. I urge all of my colleagues, at long last, to vote for their confirmation." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, March 7, 2000)

Schumer Now: The Blue Slip Process Must Be Available To Home Senators

Senator Schumer Contends That Senate Democrats Will Make Sure That The Blue Slip Process Is Enforced. "Schumer said by electing an evenly divided Senate, 'The American people called for moderation and bipartisanship, not for a group of judges who are hard right to one corner. If any senator from any state should wish to exercise his "blue slip" prerogative, we will make sure that that prerogative will be enforced.'" (Douglas Turner, "Schumer Balks Over Bush Court Nominees," The Buffalo News, May 10, 2001)

Schumer Then: Senators Should Not Hold Up Judicial Nominees Using The Blue Slip Process

When Both Home State Senators Opposed Ronnie White's Nomination, Senator Schumer Disregarded The Blue Slip Process And Called For A Vote On The Nomination. "I respect each Senator's right to oppose nominations for judge. I respect the idea that we often defer to our colleagues in their home States. But I think there is a higher calling here [in the case of Ronnie White]. That is, because this was one of the few African American nominees to reach this floor, we ought to be extra careful to make sure the standard was not being used that we haven't used for some other nominees who have come before this body this year. . . . But I still think that we should have extra sensitivity, given the long history of division in this country and the need to try to bring some equality onto our bench in the sense that we have a diverse and representative judiciary." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, October 5, 1999) (emphasis added)

During The Clinton Administration, Senator Schumer Stated That When The Senate And The White House Are Controlled By Different Parties, The Senate Has No Right To Hold Up Judicial Nominees When Its Only Role Is To Vote On The Nominees That The President Chooses. "The basic issue of holding up judgeships is the issue before us, not the qualifications of judges, which we can always debate. The problem is it takes so long for us to debate those qualifications. It is an example of Government not fulfilling its constitutional mandate because the President nominates, and we are charged with voting on the nominees. The Constitution does not say if the Congress is controlled by a different party than the President there shall be no judges chosen. But that is sometimes how the majority has functioned." (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, March 7, 2000) (emphasis added)

Schumer Now: Senate Republicans Held Up Clinton's Nominees

Senator Schumer Criticized Senate Republicans For Holding Up Clinton Nominees During The Six Years That Republicans Were In Power. “The number of judges in the last six years who were held up because a home-state senator objected, you can’t count on your hands and your toes; there have been many. And all of a sudden, with the change of president, they’re asking us to change the rules. No good reason.” (Press Conference, May 3, 2001)

Schumer Then: Chairman Hatch Maintained A Zero Vacancy Rate In New York Courts

Senator Schumer Credits Senator Hatch For Zealously Processing Judicial Nominees In The Second Circuit So That No Vacancies Existed. “The reason I rise is not only as a member of the Judiciary Committee, not only as somebody who believes we ought to fill the vacancies in our courts--and I am appreciative that Senator Hatch has worked with me to fill those vacancies in New York. Neither the Second Circuit nor any of the New York district courts have vacancies, and we did manage to fill at least six judgeships this year. I thank the chairman for that.” (Senator Charles Schumer, Congressional Record, October 3, 2000) (emphasis added)

1 BUSH: A Bork In The Road?

In a "preview of upcoming battles over the make up of the Supreme Court," Senate Dems "served a warning" to Pres. Bush yesterday that they are "willing to reject judicial candidates based on ideology alone." At a Senate Judiciary Subcmte hearing, Dems said that if Bush nominates justices "outside what they consider the ideological mainstream, they could vote them down even if the nominees' credentials are otherwise impeccable" (Bendavid, Chicago Tribune, 6/27). Admin Oversight and the Courts Submte chair Chuck Schumer, "laying down the gauntlet," said that the "closeness of last year's presidential election was a mandate for 'moderation and bipartisanship.'" Schumer: "This era, perhaps more than any other before, calls out for collaboration between the president and the Senate in judicial appointments. ... It certainly justifies Senate opposition to judicial nominees whose views fall outside the mainstream and who have been selected in an attempt to further tilt the courts in an ideological direction" (Walsh, Washington Post, 6/27). Schumer "had a rocky debut" as chair of the subcmte, with GOPers "howling about his plan to debate judicial nominees' ideology." Holding his first hearing since Dems took control of the Senate, Schumer "opened the meeting with a cheery 'Good morning,' and things went downhill from there" (Sisk, New York Daily News, 6/27). GOPers called these "litmus tests" an "aggressive assault" on Bush's nominees to "block qualified candidates for political purposes." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL): "It is an unwise and dangerous thing for the Senate to change the way we evaluate judges and it undermines the confidence the American people have in the law." Senate Min. Leader Trent Lott said that nominees "historically are evaluated by their legal experience and temperament." Lott: "The Democrats seem to be reversing 200 years of precedent by imposing narrow litmus tests on all federal judicial nominees. ... By imposing what amounts to political litmus-testing requiring nominees to be card-carrying members of their party, the Democrats want to pre-ordain the outcome of every issue that will come before the courts and rewrite the Constitution as well." Sen. Jon Kyl (R-AZ) maintained that the hearings allowed Dems to "lay the groundwork for blanket opposition" of Bush's nominations "purely on political grounds" and will create a "confirmation collision." Kyl: "You can't change 200 years of history without laying the foundation for it, and this is what it's all about. ... They are very brazen about it" (Hudson, Washington Times, 6/27).

Journal: Gearing up to smear judicial nominees

Staff

Thursday, June 28, 2001

WE'VE KNOWN ALL along that the judicial confirmation process was going to be a battleground this year. No amount of pleas for bipartisanship, civility, decorum or adherence to tradition was going to get in the way of the Democrats' assault plans.

First, Senate Democrats, then in the minority, wanted to change the rules so that a single senator from a nominee's home state could block a presidential appointment.

Now, Senate Democrats, in the majority, want to rewrite the rules of confirmation hearings to allow grilling a nominee about his ideology. It is a dangerous precedent and would do great damage to America's belief in an impartial and independent judiciary.

Those who testified on both sides said it best:

Lloyd Cutler, who served in the Clinton administration, and C. Boyden Gray, who served in the administration of Bush's father, both spoke against using ideology as a measure of a judge.

"To make ideology an issue in the confirmation process is to suggest that the legal process is and should be a political one," Cutler said. "That is not only wrong as a matter of political science, it also serves to weaken public confidence in the courts."

Gray agreed. "The key criteria for a potential judge is not ideological, but philosophical and constitutional: Does the nominee have the integrity to recognize the limited role of a judge and leave the legislating to legislators?"

But that levelheadedness won't wash with Democrats, who were best represented by Laurence Tribe, the Harvard Law School professor last seen arguing before the Supreme Court for his client, Al Gore. It doesn't take a weatherman to know which way Tribe testified.

"With a Supreme Court that is already so dramatically tilted in a rightward direction, anything less than a concerted effort to set the balance straight would mean perpetuating the imbalance that gave us not only Bush v. Gore, but the myriad of decisions in the preceding half-dozen years in which the court thumbed its nose at Congress and thus the American people.'"

At least Tribe doesn't try to hide his resentment over losing his last big case.

And of course, he and Democrats believe Gore lost not because the high court weighed the law in ruling, not once but twice, that Florida's Supreme Court had erred badly; no, they believe, Gore lost the election because of the ideological bent of certain justices. (As they see it, judges aren't supposed to review individual cases and the law, but they are to have preconceived notions of the outcome of any and all questions; therefore, according to Democrats, it's bad when judges lean the wrong way; it's not bad if they lean the way Democrats want them to.)

Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) said the close election justified the Senate opposing nominees whose views fall outside the mainstream. He said this with a straight face; like so many other liberals, he actually believes that his ideology is in step with mainstream America.

Apparently he believes that when he whispers the names of U.S. Supreme Court Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas as the kind of nominees Bush might dare send up, mainstream America cringes with him.

In fact, we hope the president is able to find two judges as good as Scalia and Thomas and nominates them. We are confident that the Democrat-led Senate will give America a gory show, and we hope mainstream America pays close attention.

Politicizing the Courts

The opening volley in the battle over President Bush's judicial nominees has been fired in Washington. The skirmishing yesterday in the Senate Judiciary Committee did little to inspire confidence that the president's nominees will get a fair shake from the Democrats. Subcommittee Chairman Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) convened a hearing to explore the question, "Does Ideology Matter?" Or, in plain language, should senators question a judicial nominee's politics? One witness was Harvard Law Professor Laurence Tribe, a chief architect of the politicizing of the confirmation process dating from the Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas inquisitions. For more than 200 years, inquiring into a nominee's personal political views has been regarded as off limits. As attorney Tom Jipping of the Free Congress Foundation noted yesterday in The Washington Times, "Demanding to know how a judge will rule on issues is demanding that he violate his judicial oath before even taking it...." Yet Sen. Schumer said yesterday that the Senate is justified in opposing nominees "whose views fall outside the mainstream." In other words, the Democrats are proposing a political litmus test and conservatives need not apply. Of course, the Democrats sang an entirely different tune when Bill Clinton was putting pro-abortion liberals on the courts. Winning confirmation for qualified, fair judges who will apply the law and not legislate from the bench is going to be very difficult in this highly partisan Senate.

Honoring the Adams Family

David McCullough's blockbuster best-selling biography John Adams, an often neglected Founding Father, has sparked a movement to honor the Adams family in a monument here in Washington. The proposed monument would honor not only Adams and his remarkable accomplishments, but his brilliant wife, Abigail, and their son, John Quincy, who became the nation's sixth president. Thus the monument would memorialize the importance of family. Adams himself deserves more recognition. He was the driving force behind the Declaration of Independence (Jefferson called him "the colossus of independence"). Almost single-handedly he wrote the Massachusetts state constitution, which became the model for the federal Constitution. Adams negotiated the treaty with England that ended the Revolutionary War, then served as the new nation's first vice president and second president. But most of all, Adams was a man of deep faith and impeccable integrity, who despite his many public achievements remained at heart a simple farmer, devoted husband and loving father.

Schumer Is Right That 'Gotcha'
Mentality Has Dominated the Process

New York Sen. Charles Schumer (D) said something shocking recently. He uttered the truth. In Washington, the truth is often as plentiful as a spare kilowatt on a hot day in California. Schumer's comments weren't surprising for their substance, but, instead, because the politician said something that was definitely not politic.

The liberal lawmaker wrote in a New York Times op-ed piece that Senators "have driven the legitimate consideration and discussion of ideology underground," adding that the "not-so-dirty secret of the Senate is that we do consider ideology, but privately." Schumer's comments were an unmistakable warning to the White House that conservative judicial nominees will meet stiff resistance from some liberals in the Senate.

Leaving aside Schumer's use of the word "legitimate," it's amazing the reaction that Schumer's comment drew. It's probably the same reaction that the guy who said the emperor had no clothes received.

Schumer was immediately hammered from the right by conservatives who realized that they now had a weapon to use against him and all liberals who eventually oppose Bush's judicial selections. According to conservatives, opponents of Bush's judicial nominees will be basing their opposition on politics and ideology, not on some high-minded argument about judicial temperament or intellectual prowess.

Schumer, of course, is correct that recent opponents to judicial nominees have used a "gotcha" approach to discredit presidential judicial selections. Just ask Douglas Ginsburg, whose past use of marijuana disqualified him from the Supreme Court. The same "gotcha" mentality has permeated political campaigns, and it has happened in Cabinet selections, most recently to Linda Chavez, whose nomination for Labor secretary was torpedoed, but also to Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood, Bill Clinton's first two choices for attorney general.

Of course, ideology isn't always the decisive factor in the Senate's decisions. Overwhelming GOP support for now-Justices Stephen Breyer and Ruth Bader Ginsberg demonstrates that, as Schumer suggests, the ideology of the nominee isn't the only factor used by Senators in deciding how to vote.

In saying that Schumer is right that Senators often consider ideology I'm not taking a position about whether that's good or bad. I regard it merely as inevitable given the ideological rift that has developed in this country over the past 30 years, the growing participation of interest groups in all aspects of the political process and the heightened importance of what is at stake.

Schumer's statement was and ought to be controversial to the extent that he was violating an important rule of politics, that judges are expected to be above politics, relying on their intellect and skills of legal analysis, not their personal preferences and personal ideology.

In fact, no aspect of government is devoid of politics, and anyone who is being honest will admit it. Interest groups, including the political parties, don't merely care about the process of politics. They want the "correct" result. And the courts, instead of disciplining themselves to stay above politics, have jumped in with both feet.

The situation is so ridiculous now that we have judges drawing Congressional district lines - lines that invariably advantage one political party over another, and accept one philosophy of representation over a competing model.

President Bush's judicial nominees are likely to have the same success that Clinton's had. But when it comes to potential Supreme Court appointments, Bush's prospects will depend on which sitting justice leaves the court. The more conservative the justice, the easier time he will have.

But no matter whether Democrats take Schumer's tactic and admit the importance of politics, or couch their criticisms in legalese and "gotcha-isms," Bush faces a difficult task if he has to nominate someone to replace Justice Sandra Day O'Connor or Justice Anthony Kennedy, the two "swing votes" on the High Court.

Bush's narrow victory, the near equal partisan divisions of the House and Senate, and the media's focus on Bush's conservatism guarantee that Senate Democrats will be emboldened to fight any Bush nominee who is measurably right of center. But unlike Schumer, most of them won't readily admit the obvious - that they will look to destroy nominees who are "wrong" on the issues.

This has led Republicans (and political junkies) to speculate who Bush might select, and the answer invariably has something to do with the nominee's race, ethnicity or gender. The prevailing opinion is that Bush will nominate a Hispanic, preferably someone without a controversial abortion record. Why the selection? Politics, of course.

What Judges Do

By Benjamin Wittes
The Washington Post
Friday, July 6, 2001; Page A25

The unanimous decision last week by the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of U.S. v. Microsoft should give a moment's pause to anyone certain that ideology ought to be a central consideration when the Senate examines President Bush's judicial nominees. Seven judges of extremely diverse politics took on a politically divisive case that involved a complex record and had significant implications for the national economy. Defying almost all predictions, they put ideology aside and managed to craft a ruling that every member of the court could sign in its entirety. The D.C. Circuit did not look much like a partisan battleground last week. Rather, its judges looked, well, like judges -- neutrally applying complicated precedents to even more complicated facts and striving successfully to get the right answer.

The debate over ideology and the courts is a frustrating one because the hypocrisy on both sides runs so thick. These days, Republicans like to pretend that ideology has no legitimate role in the judicial confirmation process. But this claim doesn't pass the laugh test after the past few years, during which some of those same Republicans waged war against President Clinton's nominees for their alleged tendency toward "judicial activism." It actually didn't pass the laugh test before that either: It simply defies logic to insist that a senator must support a nominee whose approach to judging offends that senator's conscience.

On the other side, however, the new-found Democratic infatuation with subjecting nominees to ideological examination stinks of purity tests. Few are bothering to define what they mean by judicial ideology -- though it usually seems to have something to do with abortion -- or to specify in what universe of cases they think it matters.

The controversial nominees now before the Senate have been named to appeals courts, and the truth is that the average case before such courts -- even the average important, high-profile case -- is far more like Microsoft than like Roe v. Wade. Since the turn of the year, the D.C. Circuit has decided nearly 120 cases unanimously. In the same period, only 13 cases have produced dissents. Most of these dissents were on technical matters, with no ideological dimension at all. Only a few cases could plausibly be described as ideologically tinged, and in only one -- an affirmative action case last month -- did judicial philosophy play an obvious role.

Longer-term data compiled by the court's chief judge, Harry Edwards, likewise suggest only a minimal role for ideology on the D.C. Circuit. Edwards has reported that between 1995 and 1999, no more than 3 percent of cases produced dissents in any given year. Of those cases in which dissents were filed, only about half involved disputes between judges appointed by presidents of opposing parties. The court's handling of Microsoft, however striking in the current environment, is actually typical.

The point is not that ideology should be a forbidden subject, only that the ideological stakes in the appointment of lower court judges should not be overstated. At the Supreme Court level, a nominee's views on abortion and other divisive social issues may matter enormously. At the courts of appeals, however, these are largely symbols that have come to serve as badges identifying the types of judges we expect individuals to be.

The trouble is that the badges can be extremely misleading. With a few exceptions -- affirmative action most notably -- the labels "liberal" and "conservative" say very little about how a judge is likely to resolve a given case. The craft of judging is far more important to the day-to-day work of the lower federal courts than are the political issues that drive the debate over the judiciary's future.

The legitimate place of ideology in the discussion of judicial nominees is, therefore, limited -- limited to those nominees whose ideology is so strong that it might interfere with judicial decision-making. The more ideological the judge -- in any direction -- the less respectful of precedent and the less constrained by the facts of a given case he or she may be.

A senator who has reason to believe that a given nominee's pursuit of the right answer will be compromised by ideological precommitments should certainly vote against that nominee. But without some good reason to think a nominee's ideology will adversely impact his or her handling of a discernible body of cases, opposing that nominee on the basis of ideology is nothing more than punishment for his or her beliefs. That's a dangerous game.

Judicial Fight May Be in Store

Florida senators will soon get a look at selections of a GOP committee.

Sunday, July 8, 2001

By CORY REISS

Ledger Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON -- As early as this week, Florida's senators expect to get their first look at judicial candidates recommended by a commission that Republicans formed in April to fill vacancies on the federal bench.

The interviews of three potential nominees for a seat in Florida's middle district -- which includes Polk -- comes as the Senate embarks on a potentially difficult mission to fill 110 vacant federal district and appellate seats. That's an eighth of the total seats nationwide and up from 60 vacancies this time last year.

First-term Sen. Bill Nelson will get his first chance to mark the judiciary.

"He doesn't have any particular litmus test," said Dan McLaughlin, a spokesman for Nelson, who recently blocked a President Bush nomination for an Interior post because of his oil and gas ties. "Of course, he's quite concerned that the judicial nominee be in the mainstream."

McLaughlin said the senators could begin interviewing the candidates as early as this week.

Florida lawmakers say they hope to maintain the bipartisanship that prevailed in recent years, when Sen. Bob Graham, a Democrat, and former Florida Republican Sen. Connie Mack organized a similar panel during the Clinton presidency.

But there are signs that federal judicial nominees -- which in the last decade have increasingly become political footballs -- could become more contentious in the current atmosphere on Capitol Hill. Republicans and Democrats have spent several weeks arguing about the confirmation process while trying to reorganize the Senate under Democratic rule, and some Democrats have said they want to openly question nominees about controversial issues such as abortion.

These arguments could produce ground rules for how Supreme Court nominees are treated if any justices retire.

With Bush in the White House, Florida's top Republicans -- Reps. C.W. Bill Young and Clay Shaw and Gov. Jeb Bush -- formed a new commission that last month sent three names to the state's Democratic senators. Graham and Nelson were allowed to nominate some members of the commission.

Democrats contend that any senator can block a judicial nominee from his home state, which has caused considerable hand wringing by Republicans since Sen. John Jeffords became an independent and handed control of the Senate to Democrats. That makes it imperative for the commission to submit at least one Florida nominee who the senators will not block if President Bush were to nominate him.

The commission named two Jacksonville candidates, U.S. Magistrate Timothy Corrigan and attorney Dana Bradford, and former U.S. Attorney Kenneth Sukhia of Tallahassee.

Critics say an escalating ideological war on Capitol Hill has caused backlogs in federal dockets.

University of Florida law professor Joseph W. Little said the warfare has progressed since Democrats defeated Appeals Court nominee Robert Bork in 1987 and then pummeled Judge Clarence Thomas, who nevertheless was confirmed as a Supreme Court justice. Democrats complain that Republicans have employed a different strategy of blocking nominees before they get a hearing.

"Once you bring in this political component -- and Roe v. Wade seems to seep into every discussion -- then you've got the extreme sides on both sides that want to weigh in," Little said.

Under the previous system, Florida's senators sent nominees to former President Clinton that both agreed were fit. Still, three vacancies in the state's middle and southern districts have been declared judicial emergencies by the U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts because of the length of time they've been vacant and the number of cases they have accumulated.

There are 40 such emergencies nationwide.

So far, Bush has named 19 candidates for 33 appellate court seats. He's only nominated seven candidates for the 76 open District Court seats where cases are initially tried. A federal trade court seat also is open.

"For the great bulk of the citizenry that get involved with the legal process, they're going to get justice or not in the first court of jurisdiction," which in the federal system is District Court, Little said.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., fueled the debate recently by convening a subcommittee hearing to examine whether ideology should be a factor in the confirmation process. He sparred with Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., who argued personal beliefs shouldn't be a factor.

"We don't want to see this change in which we see judges ... put into the middle of political turmoil and then find they didn't answer the questions quite right," said Sessions, whom some liberal activist groups call a chief saboteur of dozens of Clinton's nominees.

A dispute between North Carolina's senators and the White House reheated these issues. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., has blocked the nomination of District Judge Terrence Boyle for one of five open seats on the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, saying he would reconsider if Democratic favorite James Wynn, a North Carolina appeals judge, or another Democrat got one, too.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has blocked all nominees for a 4th Circuit seat that has gone unfilled since it was created in 1990. Helms blocked Wynn in 1999 and also Roger Gregory, whom Bush has nominated as a nod to Democrats. Gregory, who was temporarily appointed by Clinton during a congressional recess, is scheduled for a confirmation hearing this week along with several other judicial nominees.

It's not clear what, if anything, Helms will do.

"I think both parties are guilty of playing political games with judges," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., a conservative member of the House Judiciary Committee.

Observer's expect Florida's nominations to escape the sort of bickering that has caused gridlock in North Carolina. More generally, Bush will have to compromise with Democrats in control of the Senate, Coble said.

"It's going to probably dictate that President Bush submit names that bear beliefs that are less conservative than they might have been," he said.

"Balance" In the Courts? What Will They Think of Next?

By Thomas L. Jipping

You need to know the underhanded and dishonest tactics being used to block President Bush's judicial nominees. The Bush administration and Senate Republicans should be the ones telling you but, despite their continuing silence, you still need to know.

Among the many excuses of Senate Democrats and their leftist allies to block judicial confirmations is the supposed need for "balance" on the federal courts. The Constitution calls for no such thing in giving the president the power to appoint judges and Democrats, of course, only discovered the need for balance upon President Bush's election. And this argument doesn't even fly on the numbers, since Bill Clinton just finished appointing 374 federal judges.

Looking specifically at the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, which covers nine western states, reveals just what is going on here. The Ninth Circuit is legendary or, should I say, notorious. This is the court that said landlords must rent to shacking-up couples despite their religious objections, that the Constitution contains rights to assisted suicide and to conduct government business in foreign languages, and that cities can discriminate against religious groups in opening their parks to community events. The U.S. Supreme Court reverses the Ninth Circuit three to four times as often as any other.

Those and many other activist decisions did not result from any "balance" on the Ninth Circuit. In fact, 18 of the 25 full-time judges on that court, or a whopping 72%, are Democrat appointees. Fourteen of them, or 56% of the total, are Clinton appointees. This is perhaps the most unbalanced appeals court in America and these crazy decisions prove it.

If Senate Democrats really wanted balance on the Ninth Circuit, they would confirm President Bush's Ninth Circuit nominees. Instead, left-wing California Senator Barbara Boxer succeeded in preventing the nomination of Congressman Chris Cox and is now threatening to block other nominees as well.

The obstruction campaign goes even further. A federal law actually requires what might be called balance. Hawaii's two Senators, Democrats Daniel Akaka and Daniel Inouye, introduced the Fairness in Judiciary Appointments Act of 1997, because there had not been a Hawaiian in full-time service on the Ninth Circuit since 1984. The law requires that each state in a judicial circuit be represented by at least one judge on that court. Senator Akaka stressed that this representation was necessary to "add to the credibility and legitimacy of the Federal appellate courts and the decisions they render."

Just for the record, courts are not and must not be treated as representative institutions. Representation creates first expectation and then entitlement of results by the groups supposedly being represented. That's the best way to destroy the rule of law.

But this law is on the books and it was Hawaii's Senators who put it there. Hawaii is today one of only two states-the other is North Carolina-not represented on their respective circuits and President Bush has nominated individuals from each of them.

President Bush has, for example, nominated Richard Clifton of Hawaii to fill one of the three vacancies on the Ninth Circuit. Mr. Clifton has practiced law in Hawaii for 25 years and has taught at the University of Hawaii School of Law. A specialist in business litigation, he is listed in The Best Lawyers in America as one of the 18 finest lawyers in that field in Hawaii.

Though there has not been a Hawaiian in full-time service on the Ninth Circuit in 17 years, and though their legislation requires there be one, Senators Akaka and Inouye now refuse to back Mr. Clifton's nomination. Senator Inouye says he opposes the nominee because he was not "in the loop" enough in the nominee's selection.

Forget all these fake excuses. If these Senators were concerned about balance on the Ninth Circuit, they would support Mr. Clifton's nomination. If they were concerned that Hawaii be represented on the Ninth Circuit, they would support Mr. Clifton's nomination. The truth is that these Senators want someone else appointed. They want President Bush instead to re-submit Bill Clinton's far more liberal nominee, someone the Senate chose not to confirm.

So we arrive again at the same bottom line. The Democrat Senate is trying to change the Constitution's rules and highjack the appointment of judges.
Don't be fooled by the gimmick du jour; that's just a cover up for a hostile takeover of the judicial selection process. It's up to Senate Republicans and the Bush administration, who say America needs judges who will simply follow the law, to expose these tactics and restore come constitutional balance before it's too late.

Examining Bush's nominees

Amid Democrats' rejoicing at Sen. James Jeffords's decision to leave the GOP, another event went largely unnoticed. Democratic senators offered little resistance to the hasty confirmation of ultra-conservative Theodore Olson for solicitor general. Olson was rushed through, even though an investigation into his truthfulness was ongoing.

It concerns me that the confirmation of the solicitor general, who serves as a ``10th justice'' on the Supreme Court, was handled in this manner. I hope this is not a portent of things to come on President Bush's judicial nominations. Indeed, the stakes could not be higher in how the Senate handles its advice-and-consent role on Bush's nominees for the federal courts.

Over the last two decades, the federal courts have lost sight of their vital role -- to protect the rights of the least powerful people in our nation. A majority on the U.S. Supreme Court routinely resists claims to secure justice through the Constitution's equal-protection clause. And the court has struck down other branches' efforts to afford such protections.

In recent years, many circuits of the U.S. Court of Appeals have undermined our nation's ability to enforce civil-rights laws, workplace protections, environmental standards, privacy rights and choice, and religious freedom.

Because most cases never reach the Supreme Court, nominations to the U.S. Court of Appeals are critically important. These courts already have strayed far from the mainstream and could fall more dangerously out of balance under Bush. Consider his first group of appeals-court nominees:

One nominee approves the government's funding of religious programs, a philosophy that threatens the separation of church and state.

Another is an avatar of states rights who opposes firm enforcement of civil-rights laws. He successfully argued the case that shields states from lawsuits by employees who have suffered discrimination due to a disability or age.

Another issued decisions striking down minority voting districts, decisions that were twice overruled by the Supreme Court. These nominees are not a surprise, coming from a president who cites Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas as his judicial heroes. Bush also has made his ideological bent even clearer by seeking to end the longstanding role of the American Bar Association in providing evaluations of judicial candidates. Instead, he and his advisors have sought advice from the Federalist Society, a radical group whose recent conference in Chicago was headlined ``Rolling Back the New Deal.''

The Bush administration's campaign to populate the courts with activist and dogmatic conservatives calls for a determined stand by senators who care about fairness, equality and civil rights.

Fortunately, Democratic senators who serve on the Judiciary Committee are committed to examining Bush's judicial nominees very closely and holding them to a high standard.

Three basic principles should guide senators on examining judicial nominees:

That nominees demonstrate that they have spent a part of their legal careers aiding the disadvantaged and that they understand the concerns of ordinary people who find themselves in court.

That nominees have a commitment to protect those who need the courts to secure their rights to free speech, equal opportunity, religious freedom and privacy.

While Democrats should reject the stalling tactics that Republicans used to block President Clinton's nominees, they should not permit themselves to be rushed through the confirmation process. Bush said that his nominees have ``sterling credentials.''

But the Senate must determine whether these nominees and others to come have the credential that matters most of all: a strong and unwavering devotion to justice that is impartial, responsive to people's needs and faithful to our constitutional values.

Howard M. Metzenbaum, a former U.S. senator from Ohio, is board chairman of the Consumer Federation of America.

NOMINATION SKIRMISH COMPLICATES PUSH TOWARD RECESS

By Matthew Tully, CQ Staff Writer

July 30, 2001 - Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle and Minority Leader Trent Lott each had something to say about Bush administration nominations on Monday. But like a dispute over the chicken and the egg, they had different takes on the issue.

Daschle, S.D., said the Senate will try to confirm some nominees if it is able to pass a series of bills first. "There's a lot of work to be done," he said. "And then, of course, if it is possible to look at nominations, we'd consider doing that, too. But we've got to take those things that are most pressing first."

On the other hand, Lott, Miss., said the chances of passing legislation would be greatly improved if the Senate first confirms some nominations. "It's going to be hard to get to some of these other things if we don't get to some of these nominations first," he said.

The issues are unlikely to be untangled during the final week before the monthlong August recess scheduled to begin Friday.

Republicans have stalled work on spending bills in recent weeks in an attempt to force votes on nominations. This week is especially critical because nominees not confirmed will have to wait until at least September.

Minority Whip Don Nickles, Okla., said he wants the Senate "to get a big batch done this week." Depending on which senator is asked, the size of that batch varies. Nickles mentioned an ambitious list of 68 nominees including many whose nominations might not be ready for floor votes this week. Republican Policy Committee Chairman Larry E. Craig, Idaho, said the list would more likely include up to 20 nominations.

Craig said it is equally important that Democrats announce a "date certain for confirming [other] nominees" after the recess. He said Republicans have heard from Democratic aides that some nominees will not be ready for votes until November or December.

"That's a strategy of foot-dragging and that's not what the majority leader wants to do," said Craig, asking for "realistic schedules" that detail when each committee will send nominations to the floor.

Making a List

Nickles, Craig and Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., are heading negotiations with Democrats over which nominations the Senate will vote on this week.

Among the 32 non-military nominations in line for floor votes are those of Rep. Asa Hutchinson, R-Ark., to be administrator of drug enforcement in the Department of Justice and outgoing Sergeant at Arms James W. Ziglar to be commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Kyl said Republicans place high priority on the nomination of John D. Negroponte to be representative to the United Nations, Eugene Scalia to be solicitor for the Department of Labor and John P. Walters to be director of national drug control policy. He said he does not know when the Senate will vote on those nominations.

A senior GOP leadership aide said Republicans are growing increasingly angry at Democratic treatment of Mary Sheila Gall, Bush's nominee to head the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Some Democrats predict the Commerce Committee will defeat Gall's nomination on Thursday.

Although critical of the new majority, Lott acknowledged that Republicans are holding up some Bush administration nominations because of unrelated disputes.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is holding up Treasury Department nominees over a dispute with the Customs Service over textile trade regulations.

"I think we can't be holding up nominations while complaining about the others," said Lott. "But, I mean, we're basically holding up four out of the 32."

While Lott criticized Democrats for confirming only three judges since they took control of the Senate on June 5, Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said his panel has acted on judicial nominations "faster than any committee" in memory. Lott said 26 federal judges are awaiting Judiciary Committee action; Leahy said some committee votes could come this week.

But everyone agrees the Senate will not confirm any judges before the break. Democrats point out that the Senate considered no judges during the five months that Republicans controlled the Senate this year.

Structural Changes

Fred Thompson, Tenn., has been complaining about the slow pace of action on presidential nominations for quite some time. But his complaints concern the process, and not how Daschle is handling nominations. As the Governmental Affairs Committee's top-ranking Republican, Thompson said he plans to introduce a bill as early as September to overhaul the nomination system.

Thompson's bill will be based on his belief that many posts should not require Senate confirmation, and that in some cases the president should have the discretion to waive time-consuming background checks. Moreover, he said, the Senate should process nominations much more quickly.

"Part of it is institutional and part of it's not," he said. "My concern is at the end of the day it's hurting the institution of the presidency. [Presidents] need key people in place sooner than a year."

Bush judicial nominees gave money to GOP candidates

By <A HREF="mailto:alexb@hillnews.com">Alexander Bolton</A>

A survey of campaign fundraising records shows that nearly half of President Bush???s nominees to the federal bench have given money to the GOP. Several have a history of extensive contributions that may hinder their confirmation in the Democratic Senate.

This has led to an escalating battle between Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), the panel???s

ranking member, over the question of making fundraising records available to

<A HREF="mailto:patr@hillnews.com">PATRICK G. RYAN </A>

Sens. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) and Orrin Hatch (R-Utah).

Bush???s selection for the 9th Circuit Court, Richard R. Clifton of Hawaii, has given nearly $20,000 to Republicans since 1992, the most of any of the nominees.

Deborah Cook, who is being considered for the 6th Circuit, has given more than $7,000 to Republican candidates and the Republican Party of Ohio since 1998.

D.C. Circuit nominee John G. Roberts, a partner with Hogan & Hartson, a law and lobbying firm, has given $6,000 to Republicans and $5,675 to his firm???s

political action committee over the last decade. In the last election cycle,

Hogan & Hartson gave $66,000, or 64 percent of its donations, to Republicans.

Although information on political contributions is part of the public record, the Judiciary Committee has never collected or disseminated the information.

Republicans fear that their Democratic colleagues would be prejudiced by knowledge of a nominee's past political activities.

There are people on both sides who would like to politicize the process,

Hatch told The Hill. The fact of the matter is, it does [prejudice], especially if the giving was to the opponent of a sitting member of the Judiciary Committee.

You never know how that is weighed or taken down, Hatch added.

Some experts say information on past political contributions may cast a negative light on some judicial nominees.

You want them to be fair. You want them to be unbiased, said Celia Wexler, a lobbyist with the government ethics watchdog Common Cause. Any circumstance that makes the public question that fairness is troubling.

Wexler added that judges have a First Amendment right to give money to politicians, but compared their situation to that of journalists.

They must realize their giving histories may cause some people to have some difficulty seeing that they're impartial, she said. Journalists are people who often don't give to political candidates because there is that concern. If journalists have these concerns then certainly judges should.

Some Republicans question the motives behind Leahy's proposal to rewrite the questionnaire that all nominees must answer. If Leahy got his way, nominees would have to answer questions about past political contributions and criminal history, something they are not currently required to do.

Why would a committee want it? asked Sen. Fred Thompson (R-Tenn.), the ranking member of the Senate Government Affairs Committee, referring to political giving records. What does that say about the committee?

I think it's innocuous from the standpoint of the nominee, but I don't think it looks very good from the standpoint of the people asking the questions, said Thompson.

Democrats say the information is relevant.

The idea is to get full information on a person who's going to get an appointment for life, said Sen. Bill Nelson (D-Fla.). Nelson said the fact that a nominee gave money to Republicans would not be a disqualification.

Leahy says he wants to revise the questionnaire to reflect the same level of detail as forms used by other committees, including the Government Affairs Committee.

???Republicans first came up with the idea, and they were right,??? said Leahy.

???I was convinced that it made sense.???

However, Thompson says his committee inherited its procedures for vetting nominees from lawmakers preceding him.

Thompson said he would seriously consider reviewing the vetting forms used by his committee with the objective of making them simpler and less intrusive.

???Government Affairs is going in a different direction,??? he said.

Sen. Paul Wellstone (D-Minn.) said a nominee???s political leanings were only one of several factors he takes into account when considering a nominee. Wellstone also said political donations are only relevant sometimes.

???It depends upon their resume,??? he said. ???If they???re qualified, no; if they???re not, then yes.???

Democrats are privately questioning the qualifications of one nominee even though she does not have a record of political contributions. Some wonder if the nomination of Sharon Prost, who currently serves as the minority chief counsel of the Senate Judiciary Committee, is a favor to her boss, Hatch.

Political giving has been an issue in past nomination fights.

???There have been a couple of instances where the Senate did turn down candidates they felt gave inordinately,??? said Abner Mikva, a former D.C. Circuit Court chief judge who later served as counsel in the Clinton White House.

In Clinton???s first term, the Republican-controlled Senate rejected a nominee from Florida who held fundraisers for Democrats.

Mikva said political contributions should not be an issue unless a nominee has given an inordinate amount, but conceded it???s hard to discern what is an acceptable limit.

???The problem is what you do with the information and what kind of line do you draw,??? he said.

1.Registering appointees to vote

A. Would it be ok for our office to send an e-mail from a political e-mail account to all of the political appointees work e-mail accounts (as some of these people are new arrivals into the area) detailing how they can register to vote in VA, MD, and DC? Would the same rules as you outlined previously (they can receive and respond to the e-mail, but can't forward from their work accounts)? Or would you advise that this e-mail come from the RNC?

B. In a related note could we or the RNC provide them with the actual documents to register to vote in a meeting or through their White House Liaison?

2. E-mailing political appointees (mostly schedule c's) on campaign schools

Would it be ok for our office to send information on upcoming campaign schools to selected political appointees on how they could participate if interested? Or should this e-mail come from the RNC instead?

Thanks for any guidance you can provide. I am hoping to move on the second item by Monday COB if possible.

Thanks,
Doug

Good morning! Larry Lindsey is working on a partnership project with HUD and some outside groups on community development. Because of the complexity of the effort, certain legal issues are undoubtedly going to arise. To that end, I'd like to stop by and chat with you at your earliest convenience to make sure we all understand the proper lay of the land.

Could you drop me a line with a convenient time for you?

Many thanks!

Some quick admin notes.

We are being instructed to no longer put boxes or any furniture items out in the hall for pick-up. Place all boxes near trash receptacles so the GSA staff can remove when the trash is removed. For excess or broken furniture, you can call me or Room 1. All toner being recycled should be placed in the outgoing mailbox.

We are encouraged to recycle cans and newspapers. The recycling bins are in the bathrooms. Admin is working on getting a better system up and running for recycling of regular paper.

If additional phone books are needed, the mailroom has extras.

If you are a member of the White House Athletic Center and are set up for payroll deduction, you may notice a Union due on your paycheck. DOD does not have a specific tag for the athletic center so union due is their code.

There are been some changes in personnel in Room 1. I have the updated list on job reassignments.

For those parking in the Ellipse, continue to exercise caution. 6 cars have been stolen.

Libby - Could you give me some direction on who to ask about this?
Microsoft would like to brief Larry and Marc on their new software. Can they do this?

Thanks much,

Marc: Good to see you on Saturday.

I've been asked to follow -up on a Microsoft question. Forgive me if you've been badgered about this from other directions, I haven't worked with them much since the energy project came up, but here it is:

Will it be possible for them to brief Larry and/or you (and anyone else you think should be there) on their new operating system "Windows XP"?

I think they have formally offered, but I don't know that they've gotten a reply. Let me know if you can, and I'll get the answer to them. Obviously, they would appreciate the opportunity to do it. -- TJ.M

Ken is doing 5 political briefings for the Schedule Cs at the agencies here at the White House throughout August. He wanted me to run by you each meeting. They will be in room 450 on the following dates:

Tuesday, 8/14 at 3 pm (DOC, DOE, DOI, NASA)
Wednesday, 8/15 at 3 pm (DED, DOD, USDA, FEMA)
Friday, 8/17 at 3 pm (HUD, DOT, Treasury)
Wednesday, 8/22 at 3 pm (HHS, DOL, DOS)
Friday, 8/24 at 3 pm

Please email me back that this is ok. They will be very similar to what he gives the cabinet Secretaries and what he wants to give the PAS's, but has not set up any yet. (see message below). thanks

So long as the people whom you would brief would be PAS officials, these briefings would be perfectly acceptable. See 5 CFR 734.502(c). For your benefit, please keep us apprised when you do these, so that we can ok each one individually. Thanks.

I have been meeting with several of the Cabinet secretaries to go over their travel schedules (only some of which is political) and also to give them political briefings (key issues, key states, key races). Several have asked me to come over and brief them, their Assistant Secretaries and DASs. Is this appropriate? I'd like to do it, as it provides them with useful information and we will no doubt send both them and their staffs on the road later this year and next year. Your guidance is much appreciated.

That is correct. This will be the policy until at least 2003 or 2004 (when and if the President begins a re-election campaign), at which time we will outline a different policy.

FYI, You, or someone on your staff, are cordially invited to a meeting this Friday, August 10, 2001, at 10:00 a.m. in room 248 of the Old Executive Office Building to review the agencies' comments on the Federalism executive order. If someone from your office would like to attend, please call me (395-3563) or e-mail me with the person's name and room number so that I can get a copy of the comments to the person. There are many comments so I would expect the meeting to run about 1 1/2 hours. Thank you very much, Mac

I told Maureen Blum (communications person for Institute for Justice) that I'd send her some stats about how quickly we've been nominating judges as compared to previous Administrations, the timing of confirmations in previous Administrations, etc.
What's the best document that sets that out (besides the current draft letter)?

The Court's order yesterday simply indicated who voted to grant the stay, who voted to deny the stay, and who was recused. No reasoning indicated at all.

The Supreme Court's order is non-substantive. It simply notes that a stay was denied, that Stevens, Ginsburg, and Breyer would have granted the stay, and that Scalia, Souter, and Thomas did not participate.

... As Confrontation Over Bush Judicial Nominees Looms
As he plots a legislative schedule for the fall, Senate Majority Leader Daschle also must prepare for looming confrontations with Republicans over confirming President Bush's judicial nominees. Republicans plan to force action on the issue, just as they have done with other Bush nominees to fill administrative posts. But the battle could become even more contentious now that the subject is lifetime judicial appointments that will affect court rulings on divisive social issues for years to come. "If the Democrats are going to behave irresponsibly, and do ideological litmus tests on all of the nominees," said a Senate GOP aide following the issue, "this is going to be a huge, major disagreement that could complicate everything for the rest of the year." In a gesture that has drawn praise from Republicans, Judiciary Chairman Leahy has scheduled a hearing for Aug. 27 on two Bush nominees: Sharon Prost, formerly chief counsel to ranking member Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, nominated for the Federal Circuit Court; and Terry Wooten, nominated for a federal district court judgeship. But the bipartisan comity could be short-lived. Republicans and some of their allies predict that Democrats will drag their heels on judicial nominations throughout the year. "They're looking for ways to obstruct nominees," said John Nowacki of the Free Congress Foundation, which tracks the issue. Nowacki pointed to a hearing held this summer by Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who chairs the Judiciary Administrative Oversight and the Courts Subcommittee, about the role of ideology in the confirmation process. "These seem to be structured to justify an obstructionist strategy," Nowacki said. Democrats deny charges of obstruction, but note that a slew of factors - many, they say, caused by Republicans - could slow down the process this year. One involves Bush's decision to stop relying on the American Bar Association to vet nominees - a process that Leahy re-established when he assumed his chairmanship. "That shifted the time to the Senate clock instead of the White House clock," said a Leahy spokesman. The spokesman said committee staff also lost valuable time when Minority Leader Lott objected to a routine motion to waive a rule requiring nomination materials to be returned to the White House over the recess. "Despite all of this ... we're on a pace that compares favorably with earlier years," he said. There currently are 20 circuit court nominees and 20 district court nominees awaiting confirmation. For now, Republicans are refusing to forecast their tactics, while expressing hope that nominations will move in a cooperative fashion. But GOP aides also brag that Republicans did not achieve results in moving other nominees until Sens. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., started holding up FY02 appropriations bills and blocking procedural motions on the Senate floor. Without much time to lose in the remainder of the session, such tactics could be the most effective way to force confirmation votes on the floor - provided they do not harm good will among Senate leaders in a way that causes the process to shut down completely. Such a delay would likely exacerbate the "judicial emergency" cited by Republicans, while making it harder for Congress to meet its budget deadlines and schedule a timely adjournment. - by Geoff Earle

Below is from Lionel Sosa and Frank Guerra. Is this doable (see bold):

On the media question (see bold), I am sure Mercy will plug in Telemundo and Univision, but for what it is worth, we should explore the possibility of having Mexico press cover the San Jose event. There is an interesting dynamic with Mexican press at the border--news reported in Mexico always trickles back across the border via word of mouth.

Thanks
lbr

Leonard,

It was an honor to be invited to the White House to participate in discussions regarding one of the most important political issues facing our president and our party ) that of the Hispanic vote. Clearly, Lionel, Cesar and I are eager to assist you and your office in any way necessary to advance the President,s agenda and the cause in general.

As recently discussed, we believe it is very important to document President Bush,s outreach efforts towards our community, beginning with this month,s pending visit to San Antonio. As such, we propose that the visit be captured on film, just as his Latino-focused activities were documented during the campaign. Doing so will allow you to begin building an archive for future communications needs.

Also, should your communications department need or want assistance in pitching the visit internationally, we are available to help coordinate interviews (one on ones if possible) with the National Univison and Telemundo reporters based in Texas, as well as with Mexico,s Televisa correspondent. We have solid relationships with all of these entities through Cesar,s contacts.

I will follow up with a phone call on both of these matters.

Finally, thanks for including me in your efforts. Know that I am always at the ready to do whatever it takes to further the cause, right along with Lionel and Cesar.

Brett: I'm helping Ken Mehlman with a presidential event on September 17th where we are inviting members from our Bush Leadership Team (from the campaign) to the White House for a briefing with the President, Karl, Ken, and some Cabinet members. The leadership teams are divided regionally, and this will be our first one. The RNC is helping with logistics, including invitations. I'm sending you a draft version of the invitation, which needs your approval from a language standpoint. As with everything that comes across your desk, we need to get this approved ASAP so RNC can drop the invitations and our folks can start planning to attend. I'll bring the invitation by this morning, but I wanted to give you the lowdown in case I don't see you. Let me know if you have any questions and thanks ahead of time for your help. Danner

<<Mehlman (photo) letter.doc>> hello kate, as referenced in the attached, rnc team 100 has fotos from an event that they want to post for availability on a secure access rnc team 100 website. toner's take is thats its ok at this end if the white house approves and expects its a combo white house political/counsel assessment. can you please advise me regarding how best to route this proposal for consideration by the white house?

many thanks and hope all is going well with you.

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)
- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy– the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

-President Clinton’s FY 2000 Budget, Analytical Perspectives, page 337

TIME

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.
225 to the Domenici substitute amendment No. 170.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors

the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other

Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

End Original ARMS Header #####

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)
- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy— the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

TIME

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors

the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other

Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)
- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

(Attached are the actual quotes from the above Democrats)

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy– the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors

the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other

Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)

- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy— the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

TIME

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors

the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other

Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)

- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy— the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

-President Clinton’s FY 2000 Budget, Analytical Perspectives, page 337

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

End Original ARMS Header #####

When you are asked about the new CBO numbers use the following talking points to respond.

Remember -- talk about the President's priorities like protecting Social Security and Medicare, boosting economic growth, getting our seniors a prescription drug benefit, reforming education, helping our men and women in uniform etc. Don't get drawn into an arcane budget process debate.

Do point out the Democrat record on this issue. Attached are the votes by Democrats against repeal of the tax cut, the votes by Democrats for even more tax relief than became law. Also attached are the talking points from the Mid Session review from a few days ago. Let me know if you need more.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.
- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.
- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.
- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.
- Democrats support the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)
- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.
- The President's budget funds key priorities:
  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The Record Says It Best

Those pesky votes & public statements prove all politics is vocal

- ☑ On July 10, the Senate held a vote on an amendment offered by Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings to repeal the immediate tax rebates. The amendment failed 94-3 – meaning senators like Daschle, Conrad, Kennedy, Byrd, Boxer and Feinstein voted against repealing the tax rebates. (Senate Vote #223 – See attached)
- ☑ On April 5, Democrat Senator Ernest Hollings offered an amendment to increase the amount of tax relief in 2001 to $85 billion – even larger than the amount that ultimately became law. The amendment passed 94-6 – meaning Senators like Daschle, Conrad, Clinton, Kennedy, Feinstein and Boxer voted for even more tax relief than is now the law of the land (Senate Vote is attached)

A Cross Section of Democrats Who Agree with President Bush on Tax Relief

- Democrat Senator Zell Miller says the tax cut actually “should have been larger and kicked in sooner.”
- Democrat Senator Max Baucus supports the tax cut, he has said he doesn’t think Congress should revisit it, and the Montana Democrat Party has even run ads on his behalf thanking Senator Baucus for supporting the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Tim Johnson ran a South Dakota radio ad letting families know about their refunds and praising the virtues of the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln praises the tax cut and expresses optimism that the economy will soon rebound.
- Democrat Rep. Mike Ross says his constituents deserved the tax cut. Ross says his constituents are telling him just how important the tax cut is as they prepare to send their kids back to school.
- Democrat Senator Dianne Feinstein on July 1 on CNN talked about the economic benefits of the tax cut, saying she hoped the stimulus portion of the tax cut would move forward to help people who are having trouble making ends meet.
- Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore told the Kansas City Star that he doesn’t think Congress should revisit the tax cut. Moore also said, “I want the President to stick with his promise to be fiscally responsible, and I’ll be backing him up if he does.”
- Democrat Senator John Breaux praises the tax cut.
- Democrat Senator Jean Carnahan says the tax cut will benefit the American people.
- Democrat Senator Max Cleland thinks the tax cut was important to help get our economy moving again.
- Democrat Senator Herb Kohl extolled the virtues of the tax cut for “thousands of Wisconsin families with children.”
- Democrat Senator Bob Toricelli says Congress had an obligation to return the money to taxpayers who had overpaid their government.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy— the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

“The tax bill awaiting President Bush’s signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we’ve been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points.”

-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

“I think one point I’d like to get across as well, I think it’s [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy.”

-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

“We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year.”

-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

“For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002.”

-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President’s tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors’ Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."

-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."

-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."

-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies.”

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

“When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn’t purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. ...[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money.”

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

“The ‘lockbox’ is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the ‘trust fund’ is merely paper the government has issued to itself.”

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

“The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they’re held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you’d have redeeming your own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn’t stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security’s tax revenues and its outlays. It’s replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it.”

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

“One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits.”

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

“They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government’s ability to pay benefits.”

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)
- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.
- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.
- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 -- $198 billion additional over 10 years.
- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy -- the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.
- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown -- $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates -- $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift -- $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending -- $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.
- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.
- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 -- 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

BUDGET RESOLUTION/Increase in the Tax-Cut Stimulus Package

SUBJECT:

House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011 . . . H.Con. Res. 83.
Hollings amendment No.

AMENDMENT AGREED TO, 94-6

SYNOPSIS:

H.Con. Res. 83, the House Concurrent Budget Resolution for fiscal years 2002-2011, will set total spending, revenues, debt reduction, and tax relief over the next 10 years.

The Domenici substitute amendment: would cut the debt held by the public (money that the Government owes to creditors other than itself) by $2.395 trillion over the next 10 years; would assume $29.3 billion in tax relief for fiscal year (FY) 2002 and $1.611 trillion over the next 10 years (which would be sufficient relief to reduce and restructure marginal income tax rates, double the child credit, reduce the marriage penalty, eliminate

the estate tax (death tax), expand the charitable deduction to non- itemizers, make permanent the research and experimentation tax credit, expand health insurance coverage, raise the adoption credit from $5,000 to $7,500

and make it permanent, expand educational opportunities, and provide energy and conservation tax incentives);

would increase appropriated programs by 4 percent over FY 2001 enacted levels; would fully fund Medicare;

would provide an additional $153.0 billion reserve fund for FYs 2002-2011 for Medicare reform and prescription drug benefits; would save all the Social Security trust fund surpluses over the next 10 years for debt reduction; would ensure a non-Social Security budget surplus for the fourth year in a row; would provide a $60 billion FY 2001 economic tax-cut stimulus package; would end the misuse of advance appropriations; and would leave an $845.7 billion, on-budget surplus ($453.1 billion excluding Medicare Part A funds), which could be used for tax relief, defense spending, agriculture relief, and other purposes.

The Hollings amendment would increase the amount of immediate tax relief that the Domenici amendment would make available, using FY2001 surplus funds, from $60 billion to $85 billion.

Those favoring the amendment contended:

Most economists agree that when an economy starts to slide, a recession can be averted if the government primes the economy quickly with cash. Our economy is in a slide right now; many economists are recommending a cash stimulus package of approximately 1 percent of GDP, or $100 billion. By lucky coincidence, we have nearly that amount ($85 billion) available right now in surplus funds from FY 2001 (we had $95 billion when we started consideration of this resolution, but we have committed about $10 billion for other purposes since that time). The resolution before us suggests $60 billion for a stimulus package; we think that amount is like half a haircut. The Hollings amendment would not contribute all the additional amount needed, but it would get us much closer. How we end up structuring the stimulus tax relief package can be decided later; the sponsor of this amendment favors

the same amount of relief being given to all tax filers, regardless even of whether they had any tax liability; other

Senators have other preferences. For now, what is important is that we commit to giving $85 billion in immediate tax relief. We are delighted to vote in favor of this amendment.

No arguments were expressed in opposition to the amendment.

Remember -- Keep talking about the President's priorities and the immediate steps he has taken to get the economy moving again. Be sure to compare the President's action on the economy to the inaction of his partisan opponents who have chosen to sit on the sidelines while the President tackles tough issues.

The President's partisan opponents have no economic growth agenda and today's news reports show that they are beginning to look out of touch on the issue that is most on the American people's minds right now -- the economy.

America's Priorities vs. Partisan Budget Games

The President is focused on America's priorities like the economy, education, Social Security, Medicare, defense, and health care. The President's partisan opponents are focused on Washington budget games. The President has acted to get this economy moving again. His partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines and do nothing to help our economy.

Presidential Leadership on America's Priorities

- Americans want leadership on the economy, and the President has taken immediate action to help get our economy moving again:
  - ☑ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ☑ Paying off historic levels of debt.
  - ☑ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.
- Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare, and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, medical research and environmental protection.
- New budget estimates show that the President's priorities can be funded while protecting Social Security and Medicare and paying off historic levels of debt. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund their irresponsible spending habits. The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible spending.
- The President wants to improve education, protect Social Security and Medicare, give patients important new protections, help our men and women in uniform, and do everything we can to help those most in need. Congress shouldn't hold these important priorities hostage to their partisan budget games.
- Democrat Budget Chairman Kent Conrad and Minority Leader Dick Gephardt say that tax increases may be necessary. The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.
- History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American people and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

The President's Partisan Opponents Choose the Sidelines Over Leadership

- The President has shown leadership on America's priorities while his partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines. Consider the economy: The President has taken immediate action to jump-start our economy while his partisan opponents have done nothing to help get the economy moving again. Follow the actions of the President's partisan opponents:
  - ✓ First they said the economy wasn't in trouble
  - ✓ Then they opposed the President's tax cuts to help put money in people's pockets when they need it most
  - ✓ Now they're supporting tax increases
- No action whatsoever to help get our economy going.
- On the economy and other priorities like Social Security and Medicare, congressional partisans have chosen political rhetoric over bipartisan results.

Remember -- Keep talking about the President's priorities and the immediate steps he has taken to get the economy moving again. Be sure to compare the President's action on the economy to the inaction of his partisan opponents who have chosen to sit on the sidelines while the President tackles tough issues.

The President's partisan opponents have no economic growth agenda and today's news reports show that they are beginning to look out of touch on the issue that is most on the American people's minds right now -- the economy.

America's Priorities vs. Partisan Budget Games

The President is focused on America's priorities like the economy, education, Social Security, Medicare, defense, and health care. The President's partisan opponents are focused on Washington budget games. The President has acted to get this economy moving again. His partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines and do nothing to help our economy.

Presidential Leadership on America's Priorities

- Americans want leadership on the economy, and the President has taken immediate action to help get our economy moving again:
  - ☑ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ☑ Paying off historic levels of debt.
  - ☑ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.
- Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare, and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, medical research and environmental protection.
- New budget estimates show that the President's priorities can be funded while protecting Social Security and Medicare and paying off historic levels of debt. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund their irresponsible spending habits. The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible spending.
- The President wants to improve education, protect Social Security and Medicare, give patients important new protections, help our men and women in uniform, and do everything we can to help those most in need. Congress shouldn't hold these important priorities hostage to their partisan budget games.
- Democrat Budget Chairman Kent Conrad and Minority Leader Dick Gephardt say that tax increases may be necessary. The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.
- History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American people and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

The President's Partisan Opponents Choose the Sidelines Over Leadership

- The President has shown leadership on America's priorities while his partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines. Consider the economy: The President has taken immediate action to jump-start our economy while his partisan opponents have done nothing to help get the economy moving again. Follow the actions of the President's partisan opponents:
  - ✓ First they said the economy wasn't in trouble
  - ✓ Then they opposed the President's tax cuts to help put money in people's pockets when they need it most
  - ✓ Now they're supporting tax increases
- No action whatsoever to help get our economy going.
- On the economy and other priorities like Social Security and Medicare, congressional partisans have chosen political rhetoric over bipartisan results.

Remember -- Keep talking about the President's priorities and the immediate steps he has taken to get the economy moving again. Be sure to compare the President's action on the economy to the inaction of his partisan opponents who have chosen to sit on the sidelines while the President tackles tough issues.

The President's partisan opponents have no economic growth agenda and today's news reports show that they are beginning to look out of touch on the issue that is most on the American people's minds right now -- the economy.

America's Priorities vs. Partisan Budget Games

The President is focused on America's priorities like the economy, education, Social Security, Medicare, defense, and health care. The President's partisan opponents are focused on Washington budget games. The President has acted to get this economy moving again. His partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines and do nothing to help our economy.

Presidential Leadership on America's Priorities

- Americans want leadership on the economy, and the President has taken immediate action to help get our economy moving again:
  - ☑ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ☑ Paying off historic levels of debt.
  - ☑ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.
- Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare, and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, medical research and environmental protection.
- New budget estimates show that the President's priorities can be funded while protecting Social Security and Medicare and paying off historic levels of debt. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund their irresponsible spending habits. The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible spending.
- The President wants to improve education, protect Social Security and Medicare, give patients important new protections, help our men and women in uniform, and do everything we can to help those most in need. Congress shouldn't hold these important priorities hostage to their partisan budget games.
- Democrat Budget Chairman Kent Conrad and Minority Leader Dick Gephardt say that tax increases may be necessary. The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.
- History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American people and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

The President's Partisan Opponents Choose the Sidelines Over Leadership

- The President has shown leadership on America's priorities while his partisan opponents have chosen to sit on the sidelines. Consider the economy: The President has taken immediate action to jump-start our economy while his partisan opponents have done nothing to help get the economy moving again. Follow the actions of the President's partisan opponents:
  - ✓ First they said the economy wasn't in trouble
  - ✓ Then they opposed the President's tax cuts to help put money in people's pockets when they need it most
  - ✓ Now they're supporting tax increases
- No action whatsoever to help get our economy going.
- On the economy and other priorities like Social Security and Medicare, congressional partisans have chosen political rhetoric over bipartisan results.

The New White House Web Site

Today's Presidential Action:

- ❖ The President and Mrs. Bush today unveiled the new White House web site, located at www.whitehouse.gov. The revamped site offers richer content, much improved design, a better navigation system, a superior search engine, Spanish content, a new Kids' site and enhanced access for the disabled.

Improvements on the New Site

- The design is completely new. While simple to navigate, it reflects the dignity and traditions of the White House.
- Increased multimedia content. Text is now enhanced by more audio and video of White House events and press briefings.
- Improved search engine. The new search engine is designed to be user friendly by selecting documents which are most relevant to individual searches. Every document on the White House web site is now programmed with unique information (called a 'meta-tag') to improve the relevance of search results.
- The President's speeches, statements, transcripts, nominations, proclamations and general news releases are posted rapidly to the site.
- Quick nominations link. Details on nominees for federal positions are among the most requested pieces of information.
- Highlighted Photo gallery. The White House photographers are among the best in the world. The new site features their work in daily photographs and photo essays which are updated frequently.
- Spanish content. Policies, radio addresses and other sections of the site have been translated to accommodate Spanish-speaking visitors.

Brand New Kids Section – www.whitehousekids.gov

- Geared for elementary school children ages five to twelve and created with the assistance of teachers and schoolchildren, whitehousekids.gov is a good way for kids to learn about the White House, President and Mrs. Bush and the Administration.
- The Internet is a literate medium and whitehousekids.gov provides a fun way for children to read and learn about the White House and the President through the site's features and biographies.
- Through the personification of the President's pets – Spotty, Barney and India – and Ofelia his longhorn cow, the site offers information on the President and White House. This site also encourages reading, dreaming and making good choices, such as pursuing an education.
- To encourage reading, each pet's biography includes a favorite children's book. The biographies of each pet also include an interesting story. Reading comprehension skills are tested through "brain challenge" questions.
- Barney's White House ABC's matches letters of the alphabet with the names of people, places and things in the White House and includes positive messages such as "Education-getting an education is a good choice you can make."
- Although the Kids' site has a unique web address (whitehousekids.gov), visitors can access the site by entering the main White House site (whitehouse.gov).

Access for the Disabled

- The White House web team worked with many individuals in the disabled community to ensure that the site is more accessible to all Americans.
- Through the use of special software, the web site has is programmed so a voice synthesizer can read aloud the contents, including online forms and photo captions.
- Video of Presidential events will now be captioned and efforts are underway to encode previous video with captioning as well.

Privacy Issues and the White House Web Site

- The President supports the protection of consumer privacy on the Internet and the principles of disclosure and fair information practices. As was the practice during the campaign, online privacy is a priority and was a constant guide in the development of the web site.
- No personal information about a visitor will be collected unless that visitor provides information to the White House.
- The White House does not identify the visitor personally. The White House does not track or record information about individuals and their visits.
- The White House Web Site does not use cookies.

The New White House Web Site

Today's Presidential Action:

- ❖ The President and Mrs. Bush today unveiled the new White House web site, located at www.whitehouse.gov. The revamped site offers richer content, much improved design, a better navigation system, a superior search engine, Spanish content, a new Kids' site and enhanced access for the disabled.

Improvements on the New Site

- The design is completely new. While simple to navigate, it reflects the dignity and traditions of the White House.
- Increased multimedia content. Text is now enhanced by more audio and video of White House events and press briefings.
- Improved search engine. The new search engine is designed to be user friendly by selecting documents which are most relevant to individual searches. Every document on the White House web site is now programmed with unique information (called a 'meta-tag') to improve the relevance of search results.
- The President's speeches, statements, transcripts, nominations, proclamations and general news releases are posted rapidly to the site.
- Quick nominations link. Details on nominees for federal positions are among the most requested pieces of information.
- Highlighted Photo gallery. The White House photographers are among the best in the world. The new site features their work in daily photographs and photo essays which are updated frequently.
- Spanish content. Policies, radio addresses and other sections of the site have been translated to accommodate Spanish-speaking visitors.

Brand New Kids Section – www.whitehousekids.gov

- Geared for elementary school children ages five to twelve and created with the assistance of teachers and schoolchildren, whitehousekids.gov is a good way for kids to learn about the White House, President and Mrs. Bush and the Administration.
- The Internet is a literate medium and whitehousekids.gov provides a fun way for children to read and learn about the White House and the President through the site's features and biographies.
- Through the personification of the President's pets – Spotty, Barney and India – and Ofelia his longhorn cow, the site offers information on the President and White House. This site also encourages reading, dreaming and making good choices, such as pursuing an education.
- To encourage reading, each pet's biography includes a favorite children's book. The biographies of each pet also include an interesting story. Reading comprehension skills are tested through "brain challenge" questions.
- Barney's White House ABC's matches letters of the alphabet with the names of people, places and things in the White House and includes positive messages such as "Education-getting an education is a good choice you can make."
- Although the Kids' site has a unique web address (whitehousekids.gov), visitors can access the site by entering the main White House site (whitehouse.gov).

Access for the Disabled

- The White House web team worked with many individuals in the disabled community to ensure that the site is more accessible to all Americans.
- Through the use of special software, the web site has is programmed so a voice synthesizer can read aloud the contents, including online forms and photo captions.
- Video of Presidential events will now be captioned and efforts are underway to encode previous video with captioning as well.

Privacy Issues and the White House Web Site

- The President supports the protection of consumer privacy on the Internet and the principles of disclosure and fair information practices. As was the practice during the campaign, online privacy is a priority and was a constant guide in the development of the web site.
- No personal information about a visitor will be collected unless that visitor provides information to the White House.
- The White House does not identify the visitor personally. The White House does not track or record information about individuals and their visits.
- The White House Web Site does not use cookies.

Office of the Chairman

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE US HOUSE AND SENATE
REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS
REPUBLICAN STATE CHAIRS AND NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS
FROM: GOVERNOR JAMES S. GILMORE III
RE: NEW POLLS SHOW AMERICANS SUPPORT PRESIDENT BUSH AND GOP IN BUDGET DEBATE

Congress returns to work next week, but partisan Democrats are already engaging in harsh, misleading demagoguery over budget surpluses and the safety of Social Security and Medicare.

Consider the contrast: President Bush takes action to restart our economy and follows through on his priorities; with no economic recovery plan of their own, partisan Democrats are throwing out lies and bitter rhetoric in an effort to scare people into thinking the President is endangering Social Security and Medicare. Americans know better.

In fact, in a national survey of registered voters conducted this week for the RNC, Americans said overwhelmingly that the slowdown in the economy and wasteful government spending were to blame for the reduction in the budget surplus. They strongly oppose rolling back the tax cut and support President Bush's position to restrain wasteful spending. More importantly, they know the Republican tax cut is needed to get the economy growing (see survey questions below – 803 sample size).

Poll conducted by Voter Consumer Research. 803 registered voters nationally August 28th – 30th. Margin of Error plus or minus 3.5%.

One item that has been in the news is the reduced budget surplus. Even though the Federal Government will end the year with the second largest surplus in history, news reports indicate that a variety of factors have reduced the projected surplus from $281 billion to $158 billion dollars. Which of the following do you view as most responsible?

Wasteful Government spending	43%
The slowdown in the economy	28%
The tax cut	17%
All of the above (VOL)	6%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

With the slowdown in the economy, less tax revenue is being collected than had been expected. Of the following two ways of dealing with this, which ONE do you think would be best?

To roll back the tax cuts that were passed earlier this year	16%
To slow down the rate at which federal government spending is increasing	76%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Some of both (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

President Bush's approach is right. Don't let partisan Democrats muddy the waters and mislead the American people.

Office of the Chairman

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE US HOUSE AND SENATE
REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS
FROM: GOVERNOR JAMES S. GILMORE III
BUDGET DEBATE

Congress returns to work next week, but partisan Democrats are already engaging in harsh, misleading demagoguery over budget surpluses and the safety of Social Security and Medicare.

Consider the contrast: President Bush takes action to restart our economy and follows through on his priorities; with no economic recovery plan of their own, partisan Democrats are throwing out lies and bitter rhetoric in an effort to scare people into thinking the President is endangering Social Security and Medicare. Americans know better.

In fact, in a national survey of registered voters conducted this week for the RNC, Americans said overwhelmingly that the slowdown in the economy and wasteful government spending were to blame for the reduction in the budget surplus. They strongly oppose rolling back the tax cut and support President Bush's position to restrain wasteful spending. More importantly, they know the Republican tax cut is needed to get the economy growing (see survey questions below – 803 sample size).

Poll conducted by Voter Consumer Research. 803 registered voters nationally August 28th – 30th. Margin of Error plus or minus 3.5%.

One item that has been in the news is the reduced budget surplus. Even though the Federal Government will end the year with the second largest surplus in history, news reports indicate that a variety of factors have reduced the projected surplus from $281 billion to $158 billion dollars. Which of the following do you view as most responsible?

Wasteful Government spending	43%
The slowdown in the economy	28%
The tax cut	17%
All of the above (VOL)	6%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

With the slowdown in the economy, less tax revenue is being collected than had been expected. Of the following two ways of dealing with this, which ONE do you think would be best?

To roll back the tax cuts that were passed earlier this year	16%
To slow down the rate at which federal government spending is increasing	76%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Some of both (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

President Bush's approach is right. Don't let partisan Democrats muddy the waters and mislead the American people.

Office of the Chairman

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE US HOUSE AND SENATE
REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS
FROM: GOVERNOR JAMES S. GILMORE III
BUDGET DEBATE

Congress returns to work next week, but partisan Democrats are already engaging in harsh, misleading demagoguery over budget surpluses and the safety of Social Security and Medicare.

Consider the contrast: President Bush takes action to restart our economy and follows through on his priorities; with no economic recovery plan of their own, partisan Democrats are throwing out lies and bitter rhetoric in an effort to scare people into thinking the President is endangering Social Security and Medicare. Americans know better.

In fact, in a national survey of registered voters conducted this week for the RNC, Americans said overwhelmingly that the slowdown in the economy and wasteful government spending were to blame for the reduction in the budget surplus. They strongly oppose rolling back the tax cut and support President Bush's position to restrain wasteful spending. More importantly, they know the Republican tax cut is needed to get the economy growing (see survey questions below – 803 sample size).

Poll conducted by Voter Consumer Research. 803 registered voters nationally August 28th – 30th. Margin of Error plus or minus 3.5%.

One item that has been in the news is the reduced budget surplus. Even though the Federal Government will end the year with the second largest surplus in history, news reports indicate that a variety of factors have reduced the projected surplus from $281 billion to $158 billion dollars. Which of the following do you view as most responsible?

Wasteful Government spending	43%
The slowdown in the economy	28%
The tax cut	17%
All of the above (VOL)	6%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

With the slowdown in the economy, less tax revenue is being collected than had been expected. Of the following two ways of dealing with this, which ONE do you think would be best?

To roll back the tax cuts that were passed earlier this year	16%
To slow down the rate at which federal government spending is increasing	76%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Some of both (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

President Bush's approach is right. Don't let partisan Democrats muddy the waters and mislead the American people.

Office of the Chairman

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE US HOUSE AND SENATE
REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS
FROM: GOVERNOR JAMES S. GILMORE III
BUDGET DEBATE

Congress returns to work next week, but partisan Democrats are already engaging in harsh, misleading demagoguery over budget surpluses and the safety of Social Security and Medicare.

Consider the contrast: President Bush takes action to restart our economy and follows through on his priorities; with no economic recovery plan of their own, partisan Democrats are throwing out lies and bitter rhetoric in an effort to scare people into thinking the President is endangering Social Security and Medicare. Americans know better.

In fact, in a national survey of registered voters conducted this week for the RNC, Americans said overwhelmingly that the slowdown in the economy and wasteful government spending were to blame for the reduction in the budget surplus. They strongly oppose rolling back the tax cut and support President Bush's position to restrain wasteful spending. More importantly, they know the Republican tax cut is needed to get the economy growing (see survey questions below – 803 sample size).

Poll conducted by Voter Consumer Research. 803 registered voters nationally August 28th – 30th. Margin of Error plus or minus 3.5%.

One item that has been in the news is the reduced budget surplus. Even though the Federal Government will end the year with the second largest surplus in history, news reports indicate that a variety of factors have reduced the projected surplus from $281 billion to $158 billion dollars. Which of the following do you view as most responsible?

Wasteful Government spending	43%
The slowdown in the economy	28%
The tax cut	17%
All of the above (VOL)	6%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

With the slowdown in the economy, less tax revenue is being collected than had been expected. Of the following two ways of dealing with this, which ONE do you think would be best?

To roll back the tax cuts that were passed earlier this year	16%
To slow down the rate at which federal government spending is increasing	76%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Some of both (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

President Bush's approach is right. Don't let partisan Democrats muddy the waters and mislead the American people.

Phil: I am waiting for comments from Counsel's Office on the draft letter, but in the meantime, as per your instructions, I have prepared a yellow folder that includes WHO signoff. As I prepared it, the yellow folder is from you to Hector, with a cover memorandum from you to Hector, recommending that he sign the attached memorandum on Presidential Travel Support. I will hand carry this over to you, but I am also attaching electronic copies of both documents in the event that Hector determines that the signature authority should be at a higher level, or if you wish to make any changes. I am out on Tuesday, but feel free to page me or contact me at home (703) 392-9209 if you need anything further on this.

Brett: If you wish to make any changes, let me know and I can make them, or the electronic copies are attached below.

MEMORANDUM FOR HECTOR F. IRASTORZA, JR.
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION

FROM: PHILLIP D. LARSEN
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATION

SUBJECT: PRESIDENTIAL TRAVEL SUPPORT

The White House Office (WHO) has identified a critical need for the Office of Administration's (OA) assistance in providing information technology and financial management services in direct support of presidential travel. In order to meet this critical need, the WHO has requested the OA to provide information technology support on all trips, regardless of the nature of the travel, and financial management support on all official trips and for the official legs/events on mixed trips.

To memorialize this request, I recommend that you sign the attached memorandum. The memorandum serves three important purposes. First, the memorandum establishes that the services will be provided on behalf of the WHO, in direct support of the President as contemplated by Executive Order 12028 (Dec. 1977), as amended. Second, the memorandum determines that OA staff will be considered to be official travelers, necessary for the comfort and security of the President, consistent with the staffs of the Secret Service, the White House Communications Agency, and the Travel Office. Third, the memorandum confirms the intent of the WHO to maintain exclusive control over any White House materials generated by OA providing the services.

MEMORANDUM FOR PHILLIP D. LARSEN
DIRECTOR, OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATION

FROM: HECTOR F. IRASTORZA, JR.
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR
MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION

SUBJECT: PRESIDENTIAL TRAVEL SUPPORT

In order to effect the maximum utilization of existing services in accordance with Executive Order 12028 (Dec. 4, 1977), as amended, the Office of Administration (OA) shall, upon request, assist the White House Office (WHO) in providing those administrative services which are primarily in direct support of the President.

WHO staff has identified a critical need for OA's assistance in providing information technology and financial management services in direct support of presidential travel. In order to meet this critical need, OA is requested to provide, on behalf of WHO, information technology support on all trips, regardless of the nature of the travel, and financial management support on all official trips and for the official legs/events on mixed trips. OA personnel providing this support shall be considered official travelers on all trips. This is consistent with the 1997 advice from the Department of Justice which determined that staff considered necessary to provide fully for the comfort and safety of the President and Vice President are always official travelers, regardless of the nature of the trip.

It is understood that WHO is and shall remain the exclusive owner of all White House materials, including any materials generated by OA in the normal course in providing this support. Such materials are available to OA personnel only for such time and for such purposes as are necessary to render the requested services. OA shall not exercise any proprietary interest in White House materials that is inconsistent with this exclusive ownership. Once the services in question have been rendered, White House materials shall be promptly delivered to the White House Office of Records Management for proper disposition. In the event that OA determines it is necessary to retain these materials for a longer period to comply with statutory or regulatory requirements, OA is authorized to retain a duplicate, convenience copy for this purpose, which shall be destroyed when no longer needed.

A short initial overview: As a general matter, White House officials are authorized to participate in political activity -- including speaking at fundraisers -- so long as the White House officials other than the President and Vice President who engage in such political activity do not themselves explicitly solicit funds. The general principle for purposes of payment of costs is that the additional costs incurred by the government as a result of the political activity must be reimbursed to the government (or paid by the political entity in the first instance), except that additional costs associated with security measures, official activity, and the official travelers accompanying the official in question are not reimbursed, but rather are borne by the government. Travel on AF1 to political events is permissible for the President and First Lady, and the air travel costs for the political travelers using government aircraft are reimbursed through a formula whereby the political entity pays the appropriate equivalent commercial rate, not the actual cost of use of the government aircraft. (Anita and Merrill handle the mechanics of this in coordination with Airlift Ops.) You may use your office equipment for purposes of coordinating and assisting the First Lady in these political activities. The law expressly authorizes White House officials who work outside normal 9:00 to 5:00 hours, which is to say virtually everyone involved in these kinds of matters, to participate in political activity other than fundraising while on duty, in the office, and using government equipment.

As to the whereabouts of the events themselves, we are very sensitive to the public focus that comes with any kind of political event that might occur on White House property, especially any event that seems designed for political donors qua donors even though it is not a fundraiser. Political fundraisers are illegal on government property, but also note that the Congress, public, and media tend to criticize (often severely) donor maintenance events held on government property even though they are not within the category of prohibited fundraisers.

Beyond all of this, there are the usual legal permutations and legal exceptions to the legal exceptions, so it is wise to run all potential issues related to political activity through me (which Mehlman's office also does) to ensure a central legal/appearance clearing house. That should serve on the front end to prevent issues from being overlooked and on the back end to assign appropriate responsibility to the lawyers in the event there is a controversy or issue.

Mrs. Bush is going to be doing some RNC-sponsored political events in September and October (election events). I just want to be sure I understand what we can and can't do from this office. For the most part, political is setting everything up -- and RNC is hiring a team to do the events -- the only thing we are doing is OKing the invitation and sending her Aide with her. Can we use an AF plane and bill them for it or do they need to find transportation for us? Anything else we should know?

Significant Agency FOIA Requests

LABOR

PRESIDENTIAL VISIT WITH BRITISH PRIME MINISTER BLAIR

Rob Evans, Reporter, The Guardian, The Observer, London, Britain, is seeking:

copies of any and all papers, briefing materials, documents, memos, telegrams, cables, agendas and minutes of meetings, memorandums of conversations, or e-mails which were prepared, or compiled, by the United States Department of Labor for this visit and meeting, either before or after the visit and meeting.

Mr. Evans believes [the Department] would have provided briefing material for the participants of the meeting, attended meetings in the run-up to the meeting and received reports after the meeting for senior members of the department.

On February 23 and 24, 2001, Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister, visited the United States of America and held meetings with President George W. Bush at Camp David. It is believed they discussed a range of issues including an agreement to deepen Transatlantic economic relations, and to seek solutions to trade disputes.

This request was forwarded to the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration and Management and the Office of the Executive Secretariat for processing.

Date request received: August 10, 2001.

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

Karen Dillon and Mike McGraw, Reporters, The Kansas City Star, Kansas City, Missouri, is seeking:

any reports, audits, memoranda, correspondence or other documents that contain information on: the overall seriousness of Hepatitis C as a workplace injury, the costs of the Hepatitis C epidemic to employers and the status of Hepatitis C as a compensable work-related illness for workers with a high likelihood of exposure, such as firefighters and prison guards.

This request also includes correspondence from Congress and the public.

This request is currently being processed by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. Date request received: August 20, 2001.

MARTIN COUNTY COAL COMPANY IMPOUNDMENT

Joseph A. Lazell, Deputy Chief, West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection, Office of Legal Services, Charleston, West Virginia, is seeking:

records for his inspection and copying related to the collapse of the Martin County Coal Company (M.C.C.C.) Impoundment and resulting spill in October 2000. Specifically, he asked for the Engineering Study and/or Geo-technical Engineering Report and any findings issued by MSHA in connection with the cause of the collapse. Additionally, he asked for the following records:

- all supporting documents to the Geo-technical Engineering Report including but not limited to sub-surface investigation, boring logs, mapping, cross-sections of the breakthrough.
- all correspondence between MSHA and Martin County Coal Company or their agents/consultants regarding the impoundment from 1980 to the present.
- all design or engineering plan submittals by Martin County Coal Company regarding the Impoundment from 1980 to present, including the Roof Control Plan for the underground mine underlying the Impoundment and the Plan for Slurry Impoundments submitted in connection with Martin County's June 1984 application for the Impoundment.
- all transcripts of hearings regarding the Martin County Coal Company spill of October 2000.

This request is currently being processed by the Mine Safety and Health Administration.
Date request received: August 24, 2001.

COMMERCE

Guardian Newspaper requested all information on meetings held between President George W. Bush and British Prime Minister Tony Blair at Camp David dealing with transatlantic economic relations and solutions to trade disputes. Also, requesting all information on meetings held between July 23 and July 25, 2001 between Grant Aldonas, DOC Under Secretary for International Trade, and Patricia Hewitt, British Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

TREASURY

The Office of Economic Policy received a FOIA request dated July 20, 2001 from the Los Angeles Times requesting documents concerning the National Energy Policy Development Group.

HHS

Johns Hopkins University: The following have requested the July 19, 2001, determination letter from OHRP to officials at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and the Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center concerning OHRP's investigation of the death of a volunteer subject in an NHLBI-funded asthma study at Johns Hopkins University: Ms. Monika Konrad, of ABC News; Ms. Alice Dembner, of The Boston Globe; Ms. Susan Levine, of The Washington Post; and Ms. Stacey Schultz, of U.S. News & World Report.

Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine: Mr. Michael Stroh, of The Baltimore Sun, has requested a copy of all active Multiple Project Assurance (MPA) documents for the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

Los Alamos National Laboratory: Mr. Ken Silver, of Environmental Health Science and Strategy, has requested a copy of Los Alamos National Laboratory's Multiple Project Assurance (MPA) documents, including the most recent roster of IRB members; documentation of any complaints or enforcement actions in HHS's files against Los Alamos National Laboratory; and any information pertaining specifically to beryllium research.

Johns Hopkins University: Mr. Paul Goebel, Jr., of Chesapeake Research Review, Inc., has requested copies of the correspondence sent by Dr. Bart Chernow of Johns Hopkins to OHRP dated April 23, June 30, and October 23, 1998; OHRP's letter to Johns Hopkins dated March 3, 1998; OHRP's letter to Johns Hopkins dated September 21, 2000; and the response of Johns Hopkins to the September 21 letter, which was due on October 31, 2000.

Johns Hopkins University: Ms. Susan K. Levine, of The Washington Post, has requested copies of the correspondence sent by Dr. Bart Chernow of Johns Hopkins to OHRP dated April 23, June 30, and October 23, 1998; OHRP's letter to Johns Hopkins dated March 3, 1998; and OHRP's compliance determination letter to Johns Hopkins dated January 22, 2001.

does it need to say commercial fare plus tax plus one dollar? should your memo also reflect that hotels, rental cars, site costs, etc. are to be paid by political entity (preventing use of govt rates, tax exemptions) and a portion (if mixed trip) will be reimbursed to political entity based on formula? otherwise, I think that should do it. thanks.

MEMORANDUM FOR ANITA MCBRIDE
A. MERRILL HUGHES

FROM: BRETT M. KAVANAUGH

SUBJECT: POLITICAL TRAVEL CALCULATIONS

The costs of Air Force I for non-campaign political travel should be calculated based on the hard-time formula. You requested elaboration of how this formula applies.

First, in calculating the percentage of political activity time in a particular location, total activity time should be calculated based on the activity only in that location, not on the entire trip. (Total activity time should be calculated in this manner for reimbursement of other costs in connection with political activity as well.)

Second, the percentage of political activity should then be multiplied by the equivalent commercial coach airfare for the flight from the previous location to the location where the political activity occurs. The political entity should reimburse that amount to the government.

Finally, if the next leg of the trip from the location where the political activity occurs is back to Washington, then the political entity shall also reimburse an amount equivalent to the percentage of political activity multiplied by the equivalent commercial coach airfare for the trip from that location to Washington.

Finally, if the next leg of the trip from the location where the political activity occurs is back to Washington, then the political entity shall also reimburse an amount equivalent to the percentage of political activity multiplied by the equivalent commercial coach airfare for the trip from that location to Washington, plus tax and one dollar, for each political traveler.

Government rates should not be used to obtain hotels or transportation in locations where political activity occurs, except for official travelers.

You also requested elaboration on reimbursement for other costs on mixed trips. The same calculations should be used for political activity and total activity time in a particular location and then the percentage of political activity time should be multiplied by the food, lodging, transportation, and other relevant costs incurred in the location of the political activity.

As you know, reimbursement is not required for costs incurred by official travelers on a mixed trip or an all-political trip.

Brett:

The Interagency Task Force on the UN World Conference Against Racism is preparing to close the Office in the EEOB.

Russell Loiselle of Records Management suggested we contact WH Counsel if we had questions about what constitutes a Presidential Record. We have a pretty good idea after reading the relevant statute and guidance from the Records Management Office. We would, however, appreciate clarification on the following materials:

Handwritten notes of meetings/telephone calls
Lists of contacts (mailing lists for meetings, mailings, etc. )

Thank you.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY: THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

*Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies*

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

THE PRICE OF SECURITY: THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Institute for International Studies*

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,

*Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

per Joel's request. Let me know if you have further questions; it is important to make clear that the program as authorized by the Act is designed to be expeditious, but also reasonable and limited in that the Act expressly disallows double compensation for those who will receive or have received payments from insurance coverage, other government programs, etc.

Airlines Act -- Fund for Compensation to Victims

- The Act requires the Department of Justice to promulgate regulations within 90 days, which is a brief time for regulations of this sort. The Department has begun internal study and review of the Act's requirements. [If questioned about whether there will be a notice and comment period with respect to the proposed regulations, say that the lawyers are studying that and other issues.]
- The Administration's goal is to ensure a compensation program that is expeditious, fair, and reasonable.
  - The program will ensure compensation more rapidly than litigation and will not require the victims to prove wrongdoing by any particular defendant.
  - The program will ensure reasonable compensation so that those in need and without insurance coverage, for example, are fully compensated. As enacted by Congress, the program is not designed, however, either to supplement or to substitute for insurance coverage or other benefits that a victim, or the family of a deceased victim, may receive to compensate them for their losses.
    - The legislation specifically and expressly excludes punitive damages and amounts received from collateral sources (for example, from insurance and government programs such as FEMA) from the compensation the victim is to receive.
- The legislation requires that the Attorney General appoint a special master to administer the program. (No Senate confirmation is required for the special master.) No decision has yet been made as to the identity of the special master.

Subject: Victim Compensation and inequities

All,

I received a call today from Gail DelBalzo, House CJS Appropriations Staff, who has been grappling with the issue of the inequities in victim compensation which have arisen since the passage of the Airline Compensation Act. The issue is hitting the CJS Subcommittee because the Senate version of the CJS appropriations bill includes provisions in Section 629 of the bill (affecting State Department) that would direct the United States to pay compensation (apparently also including some punitive compensation) to certain classes of victims. Payments would come from the Treasury with the directive that the US attempt to recoup that compensation from seized Iranian assets. I understand our House Chairman, Frank Wolf, is getting hit with lots of requests from Members who have victims that are not included in either Section 629 or by the provision in the Airline Compensation bill. They are looking at a way to diffuse this issue in the upcoming conference on the CJS bill and have asked for a letter from the State Department (They would like participation from Justice as well) that would state something along the lines that both Departments "recognize the issue and are working on ways to address the issue of compensation for all victims."

In my opinion this is a much larger issue than the Department of Justice. Such a letter would likely have to come from the White House. It is my further understanding that folks in the White House are aware that there are issues involving broader victim compensation. The purpose of this e-mail is to make you all aware that we have a request for such a letter so as to alert any of you who may have had interaction with the White House on this issue. I am willing to tell Gail that she needs to work with the White House, but I would prefer not to have to do this is there is something being worked that I am unaware of. If anyone can shed some light on this, I'd appreciate hearing from them.

Santal

DOI

- National Homeland Defense Task Force. The Interior Department received a FOIA request from the Los Angeles Times for documents concerning a national homeland defense task force. Because of recent terrorist attacks in the U.S., the requester asked for expedited processing. Although the Department is coordinating the response, BLM (and other Bureaus) are responsible for searching for responsive documents and providing the records to the DOI for a release determination. The Department is now reviewing the new DOJ FOIA policy to determine its application on this request.
- National Monuments. The Wilderness Society filed a FOIA request for documents concerning the future of the national monuments established by the Clinton Administration. The group is interested in any analyses, compilations, summaries, charts, and other materials prepared by the BLM and DOI.

EDUCATION

- Campaign Research: On October 9, the Department of Education received a request from Benjamin Jones, Deputy Research Director, Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, for correspondence about Representative Lindsey Graham from January 1, 1995 – Present.

DOT

- Frontline (PBS). On October 3, 2001, NHTSA received a FOIA request from a producer at 10/20 Productions for PBS Frontline. The request was for, "All correspondence, internal memoranda and related documents pertaining to the publication of the findings of E.A. Harwin and H.K. Brewer on the issue of rollover, covering calendar years 1987 to 1990." NHTSA is working on the response to this request.
- Newsday. Copies of all reports, correspondence and any other documents submitted by airlines to the Office of Aviation Analysis in accordance with requirements established in DOT Order 2001-9-18 concerning airline industry conditions as a result of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.
- USA Today. All airlines' applications for federal financial assistance under the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act. Also, any correspondence between DOT and the airlines, their representatives or trade groups, related to implementation of the Act.
- Rob Evans, The Guardian (U.K.) Copies of all papers, briefing materials, documents, memos, telegrams, cables, agendas and minutes of meetings, memorandums of conversations, or e-mails that were prepared or compiled by FAA and DOT for the visit and meeting of Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister, and President Bush at Camp David.

- McClatchy Newspapers.

All correspondence from Rep. Gary Condit between Jan. 1, 1996 and May 1, 2001.

HHS

- RU-486 FOIA Request. On October 15, FDA released a CD-ROM with about 15,000 pages of documents related to RU-486. A year ago, Judicial Watch filed a sweeping Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for documents pertaining to RU-486. The request included the application and documentation submitted by the Population Council on RU-486. The Agency identified more than 250,000 pages of potentially responsive documents. The documents were not forthcoming within the 20 days allotted under FOIA, and on December 12, 2000, Judicial Watch sued FDA in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. The court granted a stay for production of the documents until October 15, 2001. There should be press interest in the document release, in part because the materials disclosed will provide information on the Agency's deliberations on the approval of the drug. FDA also identifies officially, for the first time, the name and location of the drug substance manufacturer in China. FDA expects controversy about the small number of pages being released and some redactions in the documents. The documents have been redacted to protect information that is exempt from disclosure under the FOIA.

LABOR

- Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. Benjamin Jones, Deputy Research Director, Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, is seeking: correspondence and other information requested by or provided to the following current Members of the House of Representatives between the dates listed below:

Lindsey Graham: Rep.: 1/1/95-Present

Mr. Jones is also seeking all direct correspondence between the listed members or their staff and the [Department], including letters, reports, requests and other relevant material. He is also seeking any secondary material such as phone logs, e-mails, notations of conversations.

This request was forwarded to all components of the Department, including the Divisions in the Solicitor's Office for processing. Date received: October 4, 2001.

- Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. Benjamin Jones, Deputy Research Director, Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, is seeking: correspondence and other information requested by or provided to the following current and former Members of the House of Representatives and United States Senate between the dates listed below:

John Sununu: Rep.: 1/1/97-Present

James Talent: Rep.: 1/1/93-12/31/00

Mr. Jones is seeking all direct correspondence between the listed members or their staff and the [Department], including letters, reports, requests and other relevant material. He is also seeking any secondary material such as phone logs, e-mails, and notations of conversations.

This request was forwarded to all components of the Department, including the Divisions in the Solicitor's Office for processing. Date received: October 11, 2001.

- United Mine Workers of America. Joseph A. Main, Administrator, Department of Occupational Health and Safety, United Mine Workers of America (UMWA), Fairfax, Virginia is seeking: a complete list of all MSHA District 11 personnel and a separate report identifying those that have or had inspection responsibilities at this site. Mr. Main also asked for a copy of any complaints filed since 1995 by any MSHA District 11 personnel to any Agency officials, to the Inspector General and within any other Agency regarding enforcement of the Mine Act. Additionally, he asked for a breakdown of the personnel with direct authority over Chief Accident Investigator Ray McKinney regarding the investigation into the Jim Walter Resources Inc. #5 Mine explosion in Tuscaloosa County, Brookwood, Alabama. This request is currently being processed by the Mine Safety and Health Administration. Date received: October 10, 2001.

JUSTICE

- The PEC National Security News Service has requested all records dated between August 28, 2001, and September 11, 2001, warning of terrorist attacks.
- The San Antonio Express News has requested all records pertaining to the September 11 terrorist attacks that have been generated by or sent to Attorney General John Ashcroft.
- The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette has requested detailed information pertaining to United Flight 93, including transcripts of telephone calls and seating assignments.

ONDCP

- Media Campaign. Richard Shain of RA Shain & Assoc., requests SPOT television spending by market for CY99, CY00.

DOE

- Request from Bob Jones of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee for copies of correspondence between the DOE and former Congressman James Talent (R-MO) and Senator Robert Smith (R-NH).
- Request from Winifred Walsh of the Santa Fe New Mexican for copies of any correspondence by former Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson regarding a possible waste facility for nuclear sealed sources near the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant at Carlsbad, New Mexico; copies of any correspondence by former Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson regarding a Waste Isolation Pilot Plant security contract granted in late 2000 or early 2001;

copies of all correspondence between David G. Huizenga and Charles D. Massey at Westinghouse regarding the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

Kristen - here is a revised amendment and white paper, it speaks only to the aircraft manufacturer's liability, which we understand doesn't solve the bigger problem.

We see a need for a broader legislative solution, and will see if we can be of assistance up on the hill in that.

Thanks again for your time, please call with any questions, etc.

Sec. _____ - Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act Amendments

Public Law 107-42 is amended—

(a) In Title IV, Sec. 402—

(1) following subsection (2) by inserting:

“(3) AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURER—The term “aircraft manufacturer” means any entity that manufactured the aircraft or any parts or components of the aircraft involved in the terrorist related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001. The term includes employees and agents of such entity.”; and

(2) by redesignating subsections (3) - (8) as subsections (4) – (9) respectively;

(b) In Title IV, by striking “Sec. 408 Limitation on Air Carrier Liability” and inserting “Sec. 408 Limitation on Air Carrier and Aircraft Manufacturer Liability”; and

(c) In Title IV, Sec. 408(a), following “air carrier” in both places where it appears, by inserting “or aircraft manufacturer.”

Aircraft Manufacturers' Liability Issues Airline Stabilization Act

Issue: The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act, H.R.2926, Public Law 107-42, did not address issues related to liability protection critical to aircraft manufacturers and aircraft parts and component manufacturers.

Discussion: The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act, H.R.2926, Public Law 107-42, (Airline Bill) gave limited liability protection (Sec. 408) to air carriers for the events of September 11, 2001. The air carriers' liability for September 11 is limited to the extent of the liability coverage maintained by the air carrier.

Other entities certain to be named in civil lawsuits for damages arising out of those events, specifically aircraft manufacturers and aircraft parts and component manufacturers, did not receive any limited liability protection. The magnitude of those claims leaves the manufacturers as the only "deep pockets" with no limited liability protection. Since those companies have unlimited financial exposure, they are faced with potential financial penalties ranging from reduced credit worthiness to potential bankruptcy. Given the magnitude of the events of September 11 and the liability protection given to the airlines, the manufacturers should receive the same liability protection.

Recommendation: Extend the provisions of the Airline Bill to treat aircraft manufacturers and aircraft parts and component manufacturers the same as the air carriers by granting the same limited liability protection for the events of September 11 to aircraft manufacturers and parts and component manufactures.

Anti-Terrorism Law

The law represents a measured, careful, responsible, and constitutional approach to the threat of terrorist activities conducted in the United States and directed against United States citizens. It will enhance the government's ability both (i) to detect and prevent terrorist acts; and (ii) for those terrorists who are brought to justice through a criminal process rather than a military process, to severely punish terrorists and those who support and harbor them.

- The law seeks to achieve four main goals:
  - First, the law would ensure that information that is important to both intelligence and criminal investigations can be easily shared so that vital information is available to all relevant federal agencies. The law will begin to break down the walls between law enforcement and intelligence agencies and thereby help both to prevent terrorist acts before they happen and to severely punish terrorists and those who harbor and support terrorists.
  - Second, the new law will update laws authorizing government surveillance. These laws were enacted decades ago by Congress in an era of rotary telephones. These laws must be updated to account for e-mail, Internet usage, cellular phones, and other forms of modern communication.
    - The government is currently fighting a modern war -- a war that threatens our people and our way of life -- with antique weapons. Terrorists are taking advantage by using the Internet, e-mail, and multiple cellular telephones to escape and evade detection by United States agents.
    - The law does not purport to change the legal standards that govern when and under what circumstances the government can seek such information. Rather, the law merely seeks to ensure that the same legal standards that govern wiretaps on telephones, for example, also apply to modern forms of communication such as e-mail.
    - Consistent with the Constitution, the law of search and surveillance should be technology neutral. The government's ability to detect and prevent crime should not depend on the technology used by the suspect. To do otherwise is a prescription for failure.
  - Third, the law will ensure that certain categories of federal search warrants and surveillance orders are valid throughout the United States so that federal prosecutors and federal agents need not pointlessly seek re-authorization in multiple districts throughout the country. Eliminating these kinds of administrative burdens, which serve no discernible purpose, will allow federal agents to respond rapidly in fast-moving intelligence and criminal investigations so that agents can track and follow potential terrorists.

- Fourth, the law will establish tough new penalties and sanctions on terrorists and those who harbor and support terrorists. In many instances, these changes would simply ensure that terrorism offenses are subject to the same kinds of penalties as other serious criminal offenses, such as drug trafficking.
- For example, the law will:
  - enhance the government's ability to seize assets of terrorists;
  - assist the government's ability to exclude and remove from the United States both terrorists and those who support and harbor terrorists;
  - extend the statute of limitations on terrorist crimes; and
  - ensure lengthy sentences for terrorist crimes, including on those who harbor and support terrorists.

MEMORANDUM TO        PARKING COORDINATORS
FROM:                    KIMBERLY DOUGLASS
SUBJECT:                WEEKEND PARKING POLICY

Effective immediately, only EOP passholders with valid parking permits will be allowed to park in the White House Complex parking areas on the weekends. Passholders should park only in the area for which they hold a valid parking permit. The only exception to this policy will be the Ellipse, where non-permitted passholders will be allowed weekend parking. Please be sure to inform all employees within your divisions of this change in policy.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at X6-2500. Thank you.

Apparently, there are 2 separate efforts to address liability reform issues.
One is retrospective, seeking to fill in the gaps left when we only protected the airlines from some liability in the airline package. The other, yours, is a prospective effort tied to the reinsurance bill. I'm not dealing with the liability part, but it does not appear that people here -- in leadership or in the committees -- were aware of the dual efforts. I think that if they are not currently coordinated, they need to get coordinated sooner rather than later or we are going to have some very confused Members.

Stuart please take a look at the letter below. Can we do a letter for this event from the President? As you can see the event is tonight. I will draft the letter if you think we can do it.

Thanks

David Thomas

Dear

On Monday, November 5, 2001 I will assemble four simultaneous meetings of student leaders from throughout Eastern Colorado to achieve the president, s challenge to America, s youth to raise one dollar each to rescue the children of war-torn Afghanistan. Please send at least one representative (preferably a designated student leader) to represent your school.

Last week, I convened a meeting of several high school student government presidents. The attendees unanimously resolved to organize a youth campaign to accept President Bush, s challenge on a large-scale basis. With the assistance of my office, the students intend to achieve the goal of raising one dollar per student in Colorado, s Fourth Congressional District and set an example for the rest of the state and nation. Monday, s meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. at the following locations:

Limon Windsor
Fireside Junction Meeting Room Windsor
Middle School
2295 9th Street
Gymnasium
900 Main Street

La Junta Fort Morgan
La Junta High School Morgan County REA
Commons Area 20169 US
Highway 34
1817 Smithland Avenue

Monday will be the official kick-off of the fund drive, and participation from every school and youth organization is essential. Any school, church youth group, scouting organization, sport team, etc., is invited to send a representative to provide input, receive fund drive materials and information, and provide a head count of students in establishing a fundraising goal for the district.

Many schools have already independently begun raising money for America,s Fund for Afghan Children. If this is the case at your school, we still need your full participation. We need some advice on what works best and good appeal strategies other schools might consider. More importantly, we need to include your student count and dollars raised into the calculation of district-wide goals and achievements. My goal is to facilitate a project that is truly student-run, and student-managed. Your guidance and cooperation is ,of course, needed at the building level in order for the students to succeed.

Funds raised may be sent independently to the White House or bundled through the Colorado $tudents GIFT campaign. Funds will be delivered to the president by a team of students from Colorado. Colorado,s presentation will indicate the total dollar amount raised from all Colorado students. Once again, accounting for each dollar raised for America,s Fund for Afghan Children is crucial.

I hope you will be excited about this opportunity to engage and motivate young people as I am. Please identify your school,s most suitable delegates to join us on November 5th. This is a unique opportunity for children of this generation to emulate those before them who met President Franklin Roosevelt,s challenge, collected dimes for Polio, and left America with the lasting legacy of the march of Dimes.

Please contact my district director, Marge Klein, at 970-493-9132 with any comments or questions you may have about the event.

Very truly yours,

Bob Schaffer Member of Congress from Colorado

CALLING ALL STUDENT LEADERS

Please join student leaders from throughout Eastern Colorado for an organizational meeting and kick-off rally for America,s Fund for Afghan Children. President Bush has asked America,s young people to help the children of Afghanistan in their hour of need. Colorado,s U.S. Congressman Bob Schaffer is helping student leaders to organize and lead a fundraising campaign -- in each and every school, scout troop, church youth group, sports team, and any other youth organization -- to collect a dollar per student for Afghanistan,s children.

Four organizational meetings will be held simultaneously throughout Colorado,s Fourth Congressional District.

Tim,
In building support for the Craig Amendment to the CJS Appropriations bill, I was told that the Administration (including the State Dept.) was opposed to it. Is this true?

The Craig Amendment states:

SEC. 623. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be available for cooperation with, or assistance or other support to, the International Criminal Court or the Preparatory Commission. This subsection shall not be construed to apply to any other entity outside the Rome treaty.

The Amendment was adopted by voice vote. Pres. Bush has repeatedly rejected this inherently flawed treaty, so I expected that he would support the Craig Amendment. From what I understand part of the opposition arises from the State Dept. wanting to be part of the Prep Coms. in order to make minor changes to the treaty. Such "participation" is a huge waste of tax dollars and time because, as one friend put it, that is like putting make-up on a pig and entering it in a beauty contest. No degree or amount of minor changes will ever make the ICC good enough to ratify.

On a similiar, yet slightly different angle on the ICC, I also understand that the Administration is working behind the scenes with the Foreign Relations Committee to weaken the American Servicemembers' Protection Act. The new bill (S. 1610), which is also mentioned in the alert below, protects every U.S. citizen from the ICC. Why wouldn't the President support this bill?

Below is our alert on the ICC that was sent out this morning. Thanks for your help and for digging into this matter for me.

Protecting Americans From the International Criminal Court Urge Congress to Pass the American Servicemembers' Protection Act and the Craig Amendment to the FY 2002 Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill

November 6, 2001

THE DANGERS OF THE ICC

The International Criminal Court, a U.N. treaty negotiated in 1998, is dangerous to American sovereignty and puts U.S. citizens at risk. The Court will indict, prosecute, and imprison persons accused of "war crimes", "crimes of aggression", "crimes against humanity," and "genocide." These broadly defined crimes will be interpreted by ICC judges, and the U.S. must ratify the treaty in order to have one American judge sitting on the Court.

Even if the U.S. never ratifies the ICC, the Court still claims jurisdiction over every U.S. citizen. The ICC will not be required to provide Americans basic legal protections guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. Despite theses flaws, President Clinton signed the ICC on December 31, 2000 but never submitted the treaty to the U.S. Senate for ratification. Over 30 countries have ratified the ICC, and it will enter into force when that number reaches 60.

AMERICAN SERVICEMEMBERS' PROTECTION ACT

On November 1, Sen. Jesse Helms introduced a stronger version of the American Servicemembers' Protection Act (S. 1610). Unlike previous versions of the American Servivemembers' Protection Act that only protected military personnel, every U.S. citizen would be protected from ICC's reach. The new bill prohibits any U.S. governmental entity from cooperating with the ICC in arrests, searches and seizures, or taking of evidence. Recognizing that the ICC is a violation of international law because it claims jurisdiction over non-ratifying countries, S. 1610 also instructs the Administration to withdraw Clinton's signature from the treaty. At this time, there is no equivalent House companion bill.

NO TAX-DOLLARS FOR THE ICC

On September 10, Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID) introduced an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State (CJS) Appropriations bill to prohibit federal tax-dollars from being used to cooperate, assist, or support the International Criminal Court or the Preparatory Commission. The amendment was adopted by voice vote, but now, it faces elimination in the conference committee as the House and Senate work out their differences. The ICC is a bad treaty, and seeking minor changes through any U.S. participation will never change that. It is time to stop wasting tax dollars on developing the flawed ICC.

ACTION ITEM

Ask your Senators to co-sponsor the American Servicemembers' Protection Act (S. 1610).

Ask the Members of the CJS Conference Committee to keep the Craig Amendment in the final version of the bill in order to prohibit the use of tax-dollars for the ICC.

Tim,
In building support for the Craig Amendment to the CJS Appropriations bill, I was told that the Administration (including the State Dept.) was opposed to it. Is this true?

The Craig Amendment states:

SEC. 623. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be available for cooperation with, or assistance or other support to, the International Criminal Court or the Preparatory Commission. This subsection shall not be construed to apply to any other entity outside the Rome treaty.

The Amendment was adopted by voice vote. Pres. Bush has repeatedly rejected this inherently flawed treaty, so I expected that he would support the Craig Amendment. From what I understand part of the opposition arises from the State Dept. wanting to be part of the Prep Coms. in order to make minor changes to the treaty. Such "participation" is a huge waste of tax dollars and time because, as one friend put it, that is like putting make-up on a pig and entering it in a beauty contest. Just in case you haven't already seen it:

Ex-President Clinton Resigns From Supreme Court Bar

By James Vicini

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Former President Bill Clinton, facing the possibility of being barred from practicing law before the U.S. Supreme Court (news - web sites) because of the Monica Lewinsky scandal, has resigned instead, his lawyer said on Friday.

``Former President Clinton (news - web sites) hereby respectfully requests to resign from the bar of this court,'' his lawyer, David Kendall, said in a two-page letter to the high court's clerk. Kendall did not elaborate on why Clinton decided to resign.

Clinton's resignation from the Supreme Court bar will have little practical impact. Clinton has not practiced before the Supreme Court and was not expected to argue any cases in the future.

On Oct. 1, the Supreme Court suspended Clinton from practicing before the court and gave him 40 days to show why he should not be disbarred.

On Jan. 19, the day before leaving office, Clinton admitted giving false, evasive statements about his relationship with Lewinsky, the former White House intern. As part of a deal with the independent counsel, Clinton accepted a five-year suspension of his license to practice law in Arkansas and a $25,000 fine.

The Arkansas suspension triggered the high court case entitled, ``In the matter of discipline of Bill Clinton.''

Kendall had said in October that Clinton would fight disbarment.

In the letter filed on Friday, Kendall said Clinton had been a member in ``good standing'' of the Arkansas bar for more than 25 years and had never had public or private professional discipline imposed by any bar.

He said Clinton cooperated fully with the Arkansas Supreme Court Committee on Professional Conduct, furnishing all requested information in a timely manner.

Kendall said Clinton's conduct did not relate to a criminal conviction or to the practice of law. It occurred as a private party in a civil proceeding, he said.

The suspension stemmed from Clinton's answers in response to questions about his relationship with Lewinsky during questioning by lawyers for Paula Jones, who had filed a sexual harassment suit against Clinton.

Kendall said Clinton agreed to the suspension and fine ``to avoid the burden of litigation for all parties, to achieve an expeditious and definite resolution and in acknowledgment that his actions merited censure.''

Kendall cited statistics showing that only four of the 570 auction, but did not impose suspension or disbarment, Kendall said.

Per our conversation on Fri here's the techie email that I said I'd send.... please let me know if this is not clear and you have additional questions.

We are getting close to finishing all of our testing of the BBs and are about ready to start the roll-out. Joe Hagin has said that the first wave should go to the 10 senior folks who have the commercial ones and to Legislative Affairs. Before we get to this point I want to be sure you understand the ARMS situation.
First some tech background..

I'll explain the services that are available on the BlackBerry 957 units purchased from Cingular. These are the units that we would be deploying to Presidential Agencies. There are two major services and one "hardware" service (PIN to PIN) installed on these units and the definition of each is as follows: .

1. The "Desktop" Service: This service is installed in order to pass EOP Lotus Notes e-mail to and from the BlackBerry. These emails get Records Managed because the emails pass through the senders desktop PC on there way to the Blackberry.
2. The "Interactive" Service: This service is provided by Cingular and allows for additional services above the Desktop Service. These services are provided by the Wireless Carrier (Cingular) and provide the ability to send messages to pagers, fax, and phone numbers. In addition to these services, e-mail is also available to be sent from the Blackberry to internet addresses via Cingular. It is also possible to send messages to the Blackberry using Cingular's Interactive Website.
3. PIN to PIN messaging: a message is composed on one BlackBerry to be sent to another BlackBerry directly via the Wireless Web. In this case, the message does not go through our Lotus Notes Mail Server and therefor is not Records Managed.

All EOP users of Blackberry's will have their composed and received e-mail routed to and from our Lotus Notes Servers as the default e-mail service used on the Blackberry's is the Desktop Service (# 1 above). This email will be Records Managed. In the case of sending messages to a pager, fax , phone number, or e-mail via the Cingulars "Interactive Service", or the PIN to PIN messaging (# 2 and 3 above) these communications are provided via Cingular and are not technologically capable of being Records Managed. Because they do not originate or communicate with our Lotus Notes Servers.

Presidential BlackBerry users: As explained above, we have an open "hole" in trying to Records Manage BlackBerry mail as users do have the ability to change the default service from "Desktop" to "Interactive". In this case, if a user changes the setting to "Interactive", all mail sent from the BlackBerry unit will bypass our Lotus Notes Mail Servers and thus not be Records Managed. It is important to note that many Companies and Government agencies want to have the ability to switch services during emergencies when the key Servers providers are overwhelmed and their Desktop Service (mail delivered through Lotus Notes) is not accessible.

EOP BlackBerry users: Features # 2 and 3 will be disabled. Thus avoiding any non Records Managed email.

Given this additional technical explanation, is it still your opinion we are ok to proceed with the fielding of these devices based on the rationale that we will Records Manage all email sent using the basic Desktop service and will not Records Manage email sent using the other Backberry and Cingular services?

Hi, Brett! I dropped off several blue sheets for signature last week.
Apparently, one of those is pretty urgent (I didn't know that at the time) and the troops are getting restless. Any chance I can pick those up today?

Thanks!

We will hold a meeting tomorrow, Friday, November 15, from 3pm - 4pm with the Coalition working for the passage of the Insurance Legislation currently pending before the House. The Coalition includes American Bankers, REALTORS, National Real Estate Investment Trusts, Financial Services Roundtable, Community Bankers, etc. Please let me know if you cant attend or if you need to be cleared into the complex (Treasury).

I will forward a location once I have it confirmed. Thanks.

With respect to recommendations for admission to graduate school (one white house employee recommending another white house employee), is it permissible for the recommender to use white house stationery/letterhead? And are there other rules that are relevant? Thanks. Mike

Yea. Where recommendation is based on Government service, its okay to give what amounts to an official recommendation (from a use of title and letterhead standpoint.) Whether the recommendation should be given at all is a separate question. (One's superior would be a good person to check with on whether sending a recommendation is appropriate.) I discourage use of WH letterhead where recommendations are being made for other Government employment, because it looks too much like an official WH position is being taken on the personnel matter If recommendation is not based on knowledge of Government performance, Government letterhead and title should not be used.

ok, to get more fact-specific:

i am applying to business school. each school provided recommendation forms and asked for specific recommenders - direct supervisor, current peer, etc.

i am getting a recommendation from 3 white house employees - karl rove, barry jackson and kasey pipes...neither barry nor kasey worked with me in a previous professional relationship...however, i worked for karl on the campaign (and work for him now).

each rec form has very specific recommender "contact information" section (where the recommender works, how he knows me and for how long, etc.), along with a series of questions on my professional abilities, leadership potential, etc. These questions are to be answered in the form of a letter on the recommender's letterhead - i guess my question is: is it ok for karl, barry and kasey to use WH letterhead? (my other recommenders are using their organizations' letterheads) i assume that getting recs from them in general is fine...thanks.

Senate Judiciary will hold a hearing on Dec. 6th on post 9/11 actions by the Justice Department. High on the list of topics to be explored are military tribunals, monitoring of atty/client conversations, racial profiling, etc.

We would very much like the participation of WH Counsel in the preparation of the AG -- especially on military tribunals. We expect there to be significant prep time with the AG on Dec. 4 and 5. More will follow, but for scheduling purposes, we wanted to give you this heads up. Thanks, Pat

Sec. Card has agreed to do an interview with Terry Sullivan of the Baker Policy Institute at Rice University. It is on the role of the Chief of Staff. Mr. Sullivan would also like to look at Sec. Card's transistion papers. Can you tell me who I would direct this question to? Would this be possible, recommended etc?

Thanks.

Two suggestions on your judges web site, which is quite useful:

First, put "date last updated" in some prominent place. Second, I would have someone update it virtually every day, or a few times a week if possible. Thanks.

Senate Judiciary will hold a hearing on Dec. 6th on post 9/11 actions by the Justice Department. High on the list of topics to be explored are military tribunals, monitoring of atty/client conversations, racial profiling, etc.

We would very much like the participation of WH Counsel in the preparation of the AG -- especially on military tribunals. We expect there to be significant prep time with the AG on Dec. 4 and 5. More will follow, but for scheduling purposes, we wanted to give you this heads up. Thanks, Pat

I do not know what media inquiries or appearances may happen over the weekend with the AG or friends on the hill. In case something is needed quickly on the reg related to monitoring of attorney client contacts, we have taken the draft letter Viet did and broken it into talking points.

Obviously as the draft letter changes in the editorial process these will need to be updated, but they are something available on short order if needed.

Attorney-Client Communication Guidance

The Department of Justice has expanded a previous regulation regarding the monitoring of certain communications of inmates subject to a special administrative measure. In order to be subject to a special administrative measure the Attorney General has to have a certification from the head of a law enforcement or intelligence agency that reasonable suspicion exists to believe that a particular inmate may use communication with attorneys or their agents to further or facilitate acts of terrorism.

The special administrative measure regulations now allow the monitoring of attorney-client communication for those inmates subject to the special administrative measure. (This is in addition to other communications that were already covered by the regulation, such as mail.)

Attorney-client communication could be monitored prior to this change through court order.

Currently 13 inmates out of the 158,000 total federal inmates are subject to special administrative measure. At this time none of those 13 inmates are as a result of the 9/11 investigation.

There are important safeguards in place with this change.

- The attorney and his client will be notified if their communication will be monitored.
- The team monitoring the communications will have no connection to any ongoing prosecution that involves that client.
- No information that is protected by attorney-client privilege may be used for prosecution. There is not protection however, for communications related to the client's ongoing or contemplated illegal acts.

Office of Legislative Affairs

Office of the Assistant Attorney General

Washington, D.C. 20530

Draft 2 - 11/16/01

November 26, 2001

The Honorable Steve Horn
Chairman
Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations Committee on Government Reform
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This letter is in reference to the Government Reform Committee's joint subcommittee hearing held on Tuesday, November 13, 2001. I was surprised to learn that the format of the hearing constituted one panel of nine witnesses, combining representatives from the Executive branch with representatives from local government and law enforcement organizations. The Department of Justice was unaware of this format until the witnesses arrived to testify. In fact, when the Office of Legislative Affairs (OLA) was first contacted about the hearing, Committee staff advised that the hearing format would consist of two panels, first a panel of Executive branch witnesses followed by a panel of local law enforcement witnesses. The latter arrangement is consistent with well established protocol regarding the appearance of Executive branch witnesses at Congressional hearings, which had been the subject of conversations between OLA staff and Subcommittee staff in connection with your November 7, 2001 hearing.

The longstanding protocol provides that Executive branch witnesses appear on their own panel, ahead of other witnesses except those from the Legislative branch, and separate from witnesses from outside the Executive branch. This format allows for the clear presentation of Executive branch testimony and information, and reflects the comity appropriately practiced between two co-equal branches of government. Additionally, this format will allow Department witnesses, many of whom have operational and law enforcement responsibilities, to return to those duties more quickly.

Obviously, it is the expectation of this Administration that Congressional committees will continue following this decades-long tradition. While there will be extraordinary circumstances where committee and Executive branch representatives agree that other arrangements are preferable for particular reasons, we request that future hearings be carried out in accordance with this protocol. Deviations from the protocol, especially without consultation and agreement, disrupt the respectful and cooperative relationship that is necessary for the most effective conduct of public business by our two branches.

We appreciate your interest in the effectiveness of subcommittee hearings and look forward to working with you cooperatively on future hearings. We, of course, want to facilitate your oversight interests whenever possible; our concerns here pertain only to the procedures for subcommittee hearings, regardless of their subject matter. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you would like to confer further about the protocol.

Sincerely,

Daniel J. Bryant
Assistant Attorney General

Eugene Scalia: Superbly Qualified to be Solicitor of the Department of Labor

William T. Coleman, Jr.*

The Senate has only a few days before recessing to confirm Eugene Scalia as Solicitor of Labor. As someone who has spent over fifty years in the practice of law, as a private advocate, civil rights advocate and as an advisor to numerous presidents, it is my hope that the Senate acts quickly on Scalia's nomination. I also hope that the Senate takes a more reasonable and far-sighted approach toward this nomination than some Democrats have taken so far.

I have known Mr. Scalia since he was in high school and have followed his career as he became a first-rate law student at the University of Chicago, was elected Editor-in-Chief of its Law Review, and thereafter served as a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States. He then became an associate and later a partner at Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, one of this nation's outstanding law firms.

I attended Scalia's confirmation hearing and the committee vote afterward and listened as Chairman Kennedy and other Democrats on the committee acknowledged that Mr. Scalia is a brilliant lawyer, is of great personal integrity and has spent his legal career as an outstandingly successful labor lawyer in one of this nation's preeminent firms. But because his practice has concentrated on representing management, they said, Scalia was unqualified to serve as the Labor Department's top lawyer. They also objected to Scalia's criticism of the ergonomics regulation issued by the last Administration. That regulation was criticized by management and labor, albeit for different reasons, and was repealed by a bipartisan majority of Congress.

* Senior Partner and The Senior Counselor, O'Melveny & Myers LLP; Secretary of Transportation in the Ford Administration (1975-1977); former Chairman, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (1977-2000).

Senator Jeffords thoughtfully provided the tie-breaking vote on the committee to send Scalia's nomination to the Senate floor. But some Democrats have repeated the criticisms of Scalia that were raised during his confirmation hearing, and more than seven months after Scalia was nominated, no floor vote has been scheduled.

I have made common cause with Senator Kennedy and other Democrats on other matters affecting employment rights. But with all due respect, their position on the Scalia nomination is irresponsible and is inconsistent with one of the most important traditions of our government and legal culture.

The approach of the Democrats on the committee would mean that any lawyer who spent his career representing management in labor matters is disqualified from being Solicitor. The corollary would necessarily be that any lawyer who represented employees and unions could never be Secretary of Commerce. Indeed, since many of the statutes administered by the Labor Department confer rights on management as well as on employees, the committee Democrats' logic would disqualify union lawyers from serving as Labor Solicitor as well.

The truth, however, is that excellent lawyers – as Mr. Scalia certainly is – come at things from a variety of perspectives and often favorably surprise their critics when in public service.

A top-flight law firm like Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, where Scalia practiced for 10 years, gives its lawyers a depth of experience in complex legal matters. When those lawyers enter public service they carry with them their talent for analyzing complicated issues from all angles and sides, but not any prejudices associated with representing a particular part of the industrial or financial complex.

Consider the example of one of Mr. Scalia's former partners, Theodore Olson. In private practice Olson represented people who objected to affirmative action. Yet as Solicitor General of the United States, he authored a brief for the U.S. making a persuasive defense of the affirmative practices at issue in the Adarand case. Just last week the Court dismissed Adarand, leaving the affirmative action program in place.

Similarly, when Charles Evans Hughes was a private practitioner, some of his firm's most important clients were insurance companies. Yet as Governor of New York he enacted some of the most restrictive insurance laws in the country.

This tradition represented by Olson, Hughes, and others reflects the greatest calling for a member of the bar – to be what Louis Brandeis termed “counsel for the situation,” that is, to pursue the interests of one's current client to the best of one's ability. To maintain that Mr. Scalia could not effectively represent the Labor Department is to side with the Senators in the sixties who sought to deny federal judgeships to Thurgood Marshall and other civil rights lawyers on the ground that they would always rule for minority litigants.

There already is strong evidence that Mr. Scalia is capable of seeing matters from the perspective of employees and labor unions. His law review note as a student agreed with a dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Thurgood Marshall and argued that policemen who lie at trial should be subject to suit under the civil rights laws. Another article he wrote has been helpful to plaintiffs in sexual harassment cases and has been praised by Mrs. Justice Ruth Ginsburg. Mr. Scalia volunteered and taught a Labor and Employment Law course at the David A. Clarke School of Law at UDC. The Dean of that Law School, a predominantly minority institution with a progressive reputation, stated that Mr. Scalia proved to be “a dedicated legal scholar who looked past labels to make a more thoughtful judgment, took a balanced, non-ideological approach to his teaching” and was “accessible, warm and nurturing to its students.”

On the basis of qualifications such as these, President Bush nominated Eugene Scalia to be Solicitor of Labor. Reportedly, a majority of the Senate would confirm him if a vote is held. That vote should be allowed to go forward.

White House Correspondent
GOP vs. ABA
The old fight flares again.

December 11, 2001 10:25 a.m.

lthough it has been out of sight since President Bush took away the American Bar Association's formal role in assessing judicial nominees, the long-running feud between Republicans and the ABA hasn't gone away. And on Capitol Hill Monday, it came roaring back into view.

The issue was the nomination of David Bunning, son of Kentucky senator Jim Bunning, to a seat on the U.S. District Court in Kentucky. After the younger Bunning was nominated by the White House in August, the ABA began an investigation into his qualifications (after Bush took away its formal role in the judicial-selection process, the ABA continued doing candidate evaluations, only without the traditional early notification from the White House). Recently, Bunning became the first Bush-administration nominee to receive a "not qualified" rating from a majority of the ABA's committee on the federal judiciary.

Bunning, 35, has been an assistant United States Attorney for ten years and has prosecuted hundreds of cases. The ABA said his ten years of experience fell short of the 12 years of experience it feels is best for judicial candidates. ABA evaluators also said the nature and quality of Bunning's experience did not meet its standards.

Members of the ABA evaluating committee appeared before the Judiciary Committee Monday to explain their decision. In a harsh assessment of Bunning's qualifications, David Weiner, a member of the ABA committee, told the panel that Bunning's experience in civil cases was "very limited and very shallow." Weiner said Bunning's criminal-case experience was "not of the type that calls for particularly challenging lawyering," and that Bunning's writings "read very much like the work of a young associate."

In addition, Weiner was unimpressed with Bunning's decision to attend the University of Kentucky for both undergraduate and law-school training. Weiner cited what he called Bunning's "lack of academic achievement" and said his "middle-of-the-class law school record does not speak well for him." Finally, Weiner said Bunning showed "no intellectual spark or legal enthusiasm that carried the day with our committee."

On the other side, Republicans presented a panel of three federal judges from Kentucky who had presided over dozens of cases in which Bunning represented the United States. "I think he possesses a strong intellectual capacity and very good writing skills," said U.S. District Court chief judge Karl Forester. "His professional character is beyond reproach." "Can the candidate recognize legal issues? How is his analysis?" asked retired judge Henry Wilhoit, who heard more than 60 cases involving Bunning. "David Bunning has what it takes."

The committee also heard from an ABA investigator who did a second review of Bunning's work. In a few cases in which the ABA committee finds a candidate not qualified, officials call in another investigator to assess the assessment. In Bunning's case, they asked Judah Best, a former chairman of the ABA committee, to take another look at Bunning's qualifications. Best told the committee that he found Bunning to be qualified and discovered that several "distracting issues" * including resentment over Bunning's influential father and questions of whether Bunning was too young to take the bench * played a role in the ABA's original negative assessment. (Bunning was sponsored by Kentucky senator Mitch McConnell and by ranking Republican Orrin Hatch, while his father sat in the audience.)

Beyond Bunning's qualifications, the hearing re-opened public debate over the ABA's methods. Republicans are particularly unhappy with the ABA's practice of providing the committee with a one-sentence, qualified/not qualified evaluation of each nominee. In addition, the bar association does not allow senators to see the files from its investigation. Hatch wondered why the Senate, which regularly requests and receives files from FBI background investigations of judicial nominees, is not allowed a look at material from the ABA investigation.

"If the FBI can trust us here with the most sensitive information, then why can't the ABA?" Hatch asked. "Is the ABA information more sensitive than the critically sensitive FBI files?" The ABA's "one-line, cursory conclusion," Hatch said, "feeds the growing public perception that the ABA's evaluations are arbitrary and capricious or tainted by politics."

There was also significant Republican ire at the ABA's apparent disdain for lawyers, like Bunning, who do not possess degrees from top universities. "They're so damned elitist," says one GOP aide. "Mitch McConnell went to the University of Kentucky, and all the judges on that panel had gone there." Indeed, McConnell did not hide his unhappiness with David Weiner's critique of Bunning's record. "As another UK graduate who graduated in the middle of his class, I thought that stung a little bit," McConnell told the committee. "Mr. Weiner, I would not hold my breath on being invited to address the University of Kentucky's alumni law association."

Because of their discussions with Senate staff, the Arlington Superintendent would like to add the preferred regulatory option to the end of the letter that we have in clearance. The Army's Office of General Counsel modified the Superintendent's insert and said that this is as strong as they can currently make the option language without going back to the Army Secretary (they're not sure what he agreed to with the Senate side). Would you see if the following letter (as revised by Army GC) is OK with everyone? Thanks

The Honorable Christopher Smith
Chairman, Committee on Veterans Affairs
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Thank you for requesting my views on proposed H.R. 3423, regarding the extension of burial privileges in Arlington National Cemetery to certain current and former reserve component members of the Armed Forces and their dependents. For the reasons stated below, I believe the legislation expands eligibility for burial in Arlington National Cemetery beyond that which can be supported by current space constraints and will likely cause the denial of this privilege to other eligible persons.

Under current projections, the group of newly eligible reservists under the legislation would exceed 188,000, not to mention their dependents, whose number I do not know. Additionally, the legislation is applicable to interments effective on or after the date of enactment, leaving open the possibility that remains of previously ineligible reservists interred at other cemeteries will now be eligible for reinterment at Arlington National Cemetery. While the long-term effect of such an expansion is not now known, clearly the number of eligible veterans will be greatly expanded at a time when we are already projecting that the Cemetery will exhaust its current space by 2025.

I am aware that Senators Warner and Stevens have introduced legislation (Section 3135 of H.R. 3338) that narrowly tailors expansion of the eligibility criteria to authorize individual interment in Arlington for those retired members of the Armed Forces reserves, not otherwise eligible, who died in the September 11th terrorist attacks. The Army believes that the intent embodied in this legislation appropriately responds to the tragic events of September 11th and takes in account the space limitations at Arlington National Cemetery. In fact, to honor the intent of this proposed legislation, the Secretary of the Army has granted an exception to allow the burial of one such reservist, retired Naval Reserve Captain Charles F. Burlingame, III, in a separate grave in Arlington National Cemetery. The Army will also modify regulations to implement the intent of the legislation proposed by Senators Warner and Stevens.

I appreciate your continued interest in Arlington National Cemetery and its role in honoring our Nation,s veterans.

Sincerely,

John C.

Message

- Osama bin Laden is a coward who sends people to their deaths without their knowledge and laughs about it.
- Osama bin Laden murders innocents including women and children and Muslims.
- Osama bin Laden is disloyal to his followers and relies on others to fight for him.
- Osama bin Laden defames the religion he purports to follow.
- It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Osama bin Laden contentedly recalled the Sept. 11 suicide attacks against America on a videotape released Thursday by the Pentagon, saying the destruction exceeded his estimates and the events 'benefited Islam greatly.' 'I was the most optimistic of them all' in calculating the possible destruction, bin Laden said with eerie detachment. He said he had reckoned that burning jet fuel would 'melt the iron structure' of the World Trade Center twin towers..." (AP, 12/13/01)
- "United States intelligence officials said today that they believed that they now had credible evidence that three senior Qaeda leaders had been killed by the American bombing campaign in Afghanistan, causing serious disruptions to the terrorist network." (N YT, 12/13/01)
- "Habibullah picked his way through the rubble, frownlines rippling across his forehead. 'Look at this place,' he said, surveying the vast brick-strewn compound [of Mullah Muhammad Omar]. 'We have been living like dogs and and all the time Mullah Muhammad Omar was living like a king.'" (The Times [U.K.], 12/13/01)

In Case You Missed It

- As of December 12, the United Nations' World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – had distributed food to 648,000 residents of Kabul.

Facts of the Day

- The second of two USAID airlifts is expected to arrive in Turkmenistan on December 14. The airlift will carry 5,584 kitchen sets and 9,800 blankets for distribution in Afghanistan. The first airlift arrived on December 13 and carried 10,000 kitchen sets and 20,000 blankets.
- To date, the Department of Defense has airdropped 2,384,460 Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan. According to the DoD, the cost of the airdrop operations to date, including rations, transport, and fuel expenses, totals approximately $50.1 million.

President Bush Acts to Empower Communities in the Fight Against Illegal Drug Abuse

Today's Presidential Action:

- President Bush signed legislation that extends and expands the Drug-Free Communities Support Program, which supports community-based efforts nationwide to reduce the demand for illegal drugs. It's an important step forward in the President's agenda for reducing illegal drug use through effective education, prevention and treatment.
- President Bush also called on the Senate to move forward with the Armies of Compassion legislation to support charitable organizations in America, including many faith- and community-based institutions that are making remarkable progress in preventing and treating drug abuse.

About the Drug-Free Communities Support Program

- The President believes in a balanced approach to drug policy that emphasizes not only efforts to reduce the supply of drugs coming into our country from overseas, but also reducing the demand for drugs here at home.
- The Drug-Free Communities Support Program supports community anti-drug coalitions that harness local energy and resources to work together toward the common goal of reducing substance abuse. Coalitions include local partnerships between youth, parents, businesses, the media, schools, youth organizations, law enforcement, religious or fraternal organizations, civic groups, health care professionals, state, local or tribal governmental agencies, and other organizations.
- Activities include parent drug education programs, youth summits where young people learn to resist drugs, local drug use surveys in middle and high schools, drug intervention counseling services, tutoring and financial incentives for businesses that adopt drug-free workplace programs. Coalitions empower individuals and communities at the local level to join national drug prevention efforts.
- The President's Budget for FY02 provided more than $50 million for the Drug-Free Communities Support Program – an increase of $10.6 million over FY01. The legislation signed by the President today authorizes annual increases that will meet the Presidential commitment to increase the size of the program to nearly $100 million by FY07.
- The Drug-Free Communities Support Program was created in 1997. Since then, it has awarded 464 grants to coalitions in 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Of these grants, approximately 35% were awarded to coalitions in urban areas, 17% in suburban communities, 39% in small towns or rural areas, and the remainder to other types of communities. The maximum award is $100,000 per fiscal year, with each grantee having to match federal dollars with non-federal funds or in-kind support.
- The President's Budget strongly supports other key demand reduction initiatives, including:
  - ✓ Narrowing the treatment gap with a five-year commitment to increasing resources for treatment services by $1.6 billion, including targeted treatment programs for children and adolescents.
  - ✓ Increasing resources for the National Institute on Drug Abuse and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.
  - ✓ Securing $180 million for the National Youth Anti-Drug Media Campaign to ensure that vital anti-drug public service advertisements continue to reach parents and children.
  - ✓ Strongly supporting Drug Courts and other criminal justice diversion programs to help more Americans break the vicious cycle of addiction and incarceration.

Today's Presidential Action:

- President Bush signed legislation that extends and expands the Drug-Free Communities Support Program, which supports community-based efforts nationwide to reduce the demand for illegal drugs. It's an important step forward in the President's agenda for reducing illegal drug use through effective education, prevention and treatment.
- President Bush also called on the Senate to move forward with the Armies of Compassion legislation to support charitable organizations in America, including many faith- and community-based institutions that are making remarkable progress in preventing and treating drug abuse.

About the Drug-Free Communities Support Program

- The President believes in a balanced approach to drug policy that emphasizes not only efforts to reduce the supply of drugs coming into our country from overseas, but also reducing the demand for drugs here at home.
- The Drug-Free Communities Support Program supports community anti-drug coalitions that harness local energy and resources to work together toward the common goal of reducing substance abuse. Coalitions include local partnerships between youth, parents, businesses, the media, schools, youth organizations, law enforcement, religious or fraternal organizations, civic groups, health care professionals, state, local or tribal governmental agencies, and other organizations.
- Activities include parent drug education programs, youth summits where young people learn to resist drugs, local drug use surveys in middle and high schools, drug intervention counseling services, tutoring and financial incentives for businesses that adopt drug-free workplace programs. Coalitions empower individuals and communities at the local level to join national drug prevention efforts.
- The President's Budget for FY02 provided more than $50 million for the Drug-Free Communities Support Program – an increase of $10.6 million over FY01. The legislation signed by the President today authorizes annual increases that will meet the Presidential commitment to increase the size of the program to nearly $100 million by FY07.
- The Drug-Free Communities Support Program was created in 1997. Since then, it has awarded 464 grants to coalitions in 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Of these grants, approximately 35% were awarded to coalitions in urban areas, 17% in suburban communities, 39% in small towns or rural areas, and the remainder to other types of communities. The maximum award is $100,000 per fiscal year, with each grantee having to match federal dollars with non-federal funds or in-kind support.
- The President's Budget strongly supports other key demand reduction initiatives, including:
  - ✓ Narrowing the treatment gap with a five-year commitment to increasing resources for treatment services by $1.6 billion, including targeted treatment programs for children and adolescents.
  - ✓ Increasing resources for the National Institute on Drug Abuse and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.
  - ✓ Securing $180 million for the National Youth Anti-Drug Media Campaign to ensure that vital anti-drug public service advertisements continue to reach parents and children.
  - ✓ Strongly supporting Drug Courts and other criminal justice diversion programs to help more Americans break the vicious cycle of addiction and incarceration.

Message

- Osama bin Laden is a coward who sends people to their deaths without their knowledge and laughs about it.
- Osama bin Laden murders innocents including women and children and Muslims.
- Osama bin Laden is disloyal to his followers and relies on others to fight for him.
- Osama bin Laden defames the religion he purports to follow.
- It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Osama bin Laden contentedly recalled the Sept. 11 suicide attacks against America on a videotape released Thursday by the Pentagon, saying the destruction exceeded his estimates and the events 'benefited Islam greatly.' 'I was the most optimistic of them all' in calculating the possible destruction, bin Laden said with eerie detachment. He said he had reckoned that burning jet fuel would 'melt the iron structure' of the World Trade Center twin towers..." (AP, 12/13/01)
- "United States intelligence officials said today that they believed that they now had credible evidence that three senior Qaeda leaders had been killed by the American bombing campaign in Afghanistan, causing serious disruptions to the terrorist network." (N YT, 12/13/01)
- "Habibullah picked his way through the rubble, frownlines rippling across his forehead. 'Look at this place,' he said, surveying the vast brick-strewn compound [of Mullah Muhammad Omar]. 'We have been living like dogs and and all the time Mullah Muhammad Omar was living like a king.'" (The Times [U.K.], 12/13/01)

In Case You Missed It

- As of December 12, the United Nations' World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – had distributed food to 648,000 residents of Kabul.

Facts of the Day

- The second of two USAID airlifts is expected to arrive in Turkmenistan on December 14. The airlift will carry 5,584 kitchen sets and 9,800 blankets for distribution in Afghanistan. The first airlift arrived on December 13 and carried 10,000 kitchen sets and 20,000 blankets.
- To date, the Department of Defense has airdropped 2,384,460 Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan. According to the DoD, the cost of the airdrop operations to date, including rations, transport, and fuel expenses, totals approximately $50.1 million.

Message

- Osama bin Laden is a coward who sends people to their deaths without their knowledge and laughs about it.
- Osama bin Laden murders innocents including women and children and Muslims.
- Osama bin Laden is disloyal to his followers and relies on others to fight for him.
- Osama bin Laden defames the religion he purports to follow.
- It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Osama bin Laden contentedly recalled the Sept. 11 suicide attacks against America on a videotape released Thursday by the Pentagon, saying the destruction exceeded his estimates and the events 'benefited Islam greatly.' 'I was the most optimistic of them all' in calculating the possible destruction, bin Laden said with eerie detachment. He said he had reckoned that burning jet fuel would 'melt the iron structure' of the World Trade Center twin towers..." (AP, 12/13/01)
- "United States intelligence officials said today that they believed that they now had credible evidence that three senior Qaeda leaders had been killed by the American bombing campaign in Afghanistan, causing serious disruptions to the terrorist network." (N YT, 12/13/01)
- "Habibullah picked his way through the rubble, frownlines rippling across his forehead. 'Look at this place,' he said, surveying the vast brick-strewn compound [of Mullah Muhammad Omar]. 'We have been living like dogs and and all the time Mullah Muhammad Omar was living like a king.'" (The Times [U.K.], 12/13/01)

In Case You Missed It

- As of December 12, the United Nations' World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – had distributed food to 648,000 residents of Kabul.

Facts of the Day

- The second of two USAID airlifts is expected to arrive in Turkmenistan on December 14. The airlift will carry 5,584 kitchen sets and 9,800 blankets for distribution in Afghanistan. The first airlift arrived on December 13 and carried 10,000 kitchen sets and 20,000 blankets.
- To date, the Department of Defense has airdropped 2,384,460 Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan. According to the DoD, the cost of the airdrop operations to date, including rations, transport, and fuel expenses, totals approximately $50.1 million.
