Afghans fell to fourth place at 20,460 -- considerably fewer than the 38,995 who fled during the same 2001 period -- as their homeland stabilizes under a transition government after decades of war.

Key Quotes on Iraq's Declaration to the United Nations

Secretary of State Colin Powell, in press conference, 12/19/02

"There were a lot of open questions at the end of 1998... these have not been answered by evidence in the new declaration.... [O]ne cannot have confidence that there do not remain weapons of mass destruction."

UN Chief Weapons Inspector Hans Blix, in press conference, 12/19/02

"This will fool nobody. If Saddam persists in this obvious falsehood, it will become clear that he has rejected the pathway to peace laid down."

British Foreign Secretary Straw, 12/19/02

In Case You Missed It...

According to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Iraqis fleeing religious and political repression have replaced Afghans as the largest single group requesting asylum in industrialized countries.

Iraqis accounted for 36,282 applications filed in Western countries, followed by people from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (24,330).

Afghans fell to fourth place at 20,460 -- considerably fewer than the 38,995 who fled during the same 2001 period -- as their homeland stabilizes under a transition government after decades of war.

(From UN Report: Asylum Applications Lodged in Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand, and Japan: January - September 2002, released 12/03/02)

KEY POINTS

- The UN Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1441 requiring Iraq to disarm itself of its weapons of mass destruction and disclose all of its nuclear, chemical, biological and missile programs.
- The Iraqi declaration fails to meet these requirements. Our experts have found it to be anything but currently accurate, full or complete.
- The pattern of systematic holes and gaps in Iraq's declaration is not the result of accidents or editing oversights or technical mistakes. They are material omissions that constitute another material breach.
- On the basis of the evidence before us, our path for the coming weeks is clear:
  - We will continue to audit and examine the Iraqi declaration to understand the full extent of Iraq's failure to meet its disclosure obligations.
  - Inspectors must be allowed to conduct interviews with scientists and other witnesses outside of Iraq where they can speak freely.
  - Inspection efforts inside Iraq must be intensified.
- The burden remains on Iraq to cooperate fully and prove to the international community whether it does or does not have weapons of mass destruction. We are convinced they do until they prove to us otherwise.
- We will continue to consult with our friends, with our allies and with all members of the Security Council on how to compel compliance by Iraq with the will of the international community.

We need your contact info for the holidays.

If you are staying in the DC area just say so and let me whether or not you are planning on being in the office. There will certainly be a few red tags and we need to know who will be around to help out be it physically in the office or from your home.

If you are leaving the DC area please let me know what dates you will be gone and provide phone numbers where you can be reached.

I NEED THIS INFORMATION ASAP, PLEASE!

Thanks!

KEY POINTS

ú The UN Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1441 requiring Iraq to disarm itself of its weapons of mass destruction and disclose all of its nuclear, chemical, biological and missile programs.

ú The Iraqi declaration fails to meet these requirements. Our experts have found it to be anything but currently accurate, full or complete.

ú The pattern of systematic holes and gaps in Iraq's declaration is not the result of accidents or editing oversights or technical mistakes. They are material omissions that constitute another material breach.

ú On the basis of the evidence before us, our path for the coming weeks is clear:

- o We will continue to audit and examine the Iraqi declaration to understand the full extent of Iraq's failure to meet its disclosure obligations.
  - o Inspectors must be allowed to conduct interviews with scientists and other witnesses outside of Iraq where they can speak freely.
  - o Inspection efforts inside Iraq must be intensified.
- ú The burden remains on Iraq to cooperate fully and prove to the international community whether it does or does not have weapons of mass destruction. We are convinced they do until they prove to us otherwise.
- ú We will continue to consult with our friends, with our allies and with all members of the Security Council on how to compel compliance by Iraq with the will of the international community.

Key Quotes on Iraq,s Declaration to the United Nations

Secretary of State Colin Powell, in press conference, 12/19/02

&There were a lot of open questions at the end of 1998(these have not been answered by evidence in the new declaration(.[O]ne cannot have confidence that there do not remain weapons of mass destruction.8
UN Chief Weapons Inspector Hans Blix, in press conference, 12/19/02

British Foreign Secretary Straw, 12/19/02

In Case You Missed It(

According to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Iraqis fleeing religious and political repression have replaced Afghans as the largest single group requesting asylum in industrialized countries.

Iraqis accounted for 36,282 applications filed in Western countries, followed by people from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (24,330).

Afghans fell to fourth place at 20,460 -- considerably fewer than the 38,995 who fled during the same 2001 period -- as their homeland stabilizes under a transition government after decades of war.

(From UN Report: Asylum Applications Lodged in Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand, and Japan: January ) September 2002, released 12/03/02)

KEY POINTS

- ú The UN Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1441 requiring Iraq to disarm itself of its weapons of mass destruction and disclose all of its nuclear, chemical, biological and missile programs.
- ú The Iraqi declaration fails to meet these requirements. Our experts have found it to be anything but currently accurate, full or complete.
- ú The pattern of systematic holes and gaps in Iraq's declaration is not the result of accidents or editing oversights or technical mistakes. They are material omissions that constitute another material breach.

ú On the basis of the evidence before us, our path for the coming weeks is clear:

- o We will continue to audit and examine the Iraqi declaration to understand the full extent of Iraq's failure to meet its disclosure obligations.
  - o Inspectors must be allowed to conduct interviews with scientists and other witnesses outside of Iraq where they can speak freely.
  - o Inspection efforts inside Iraq must be intensified.
- ú The burden remains on Iraq to cooperate fully and prove to the international community whether it does or does not have weapons of mass destruction. We are convinced they do until they prove to us otherwise.
- ú We will continue to consult with our friends, with our allies and with all members of the Security Council on how to compel compliance by Iraq with the will of the international community.

Key Quotes on Iraq,s Declaration to the United Nations

Secretary of State Colin Powell, in press conference, 12/19/02

&There were a lot of open questions at the end of 1998(these have not been answered by evidence in the new declaration(.[O]ne cannot have confidence that there do not remain weapons of mass destruction.8
UN Chief Weapons Inspector Hans Blix, in press conference, 12/19/02

British Foreign Secretary Straw, 12/19/02

In Case You Missed It(

According to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Iraqis fleeing religious and political repression have replaced Afghans as the largest single group requesting asylum in industrialized countries.

Iraqis accounted for 36,282 applications filed in Western countries, followed by people from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (24,330).

Afghans fell to fourth place at 20,460 -- considerably fewer than the 38,995 who fled during the same 2001 period -- as their homeland stabilizes under a transition government after decades of war.

(From UN Report: Asylum Applications Lodged in Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand, and Japan: January ) September 2002, released 12/03/02)

KEY POINTS

ú The UN Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1441 requiring Iraq to disarm itself of its weapons of mass destruction and disclose all of its nuclear, chemical, biological and missile programs.

ú The Iraqi declaration fails to meet these requirements. Our experts have found it to be anything but currently accurate, full or complete.

ú The pattern of systematic holes and gaps in Iraq's declaration is not the result of accidents or editing oversights or technical mistakes. They are material omissions that constitute another material breach.

ú On the basis of the evidence before us, our path for the coming weeks is clear:

- o We will continue to audit and examine the Iraqi declaration to understand the full extent of Iraq's failure to meet its disclosure obligations.
  - o Inspectors must be allowed to conduct interviews with scientists and other witnesses outside of Iraq where they can speak freely.
  - o Inspection efforts inside Iraq must be intensified.
- ú The burden remains on Iraq to cooperate fully and prove to the international community whether it does or does not have weapons of mass destruction. We are convinced they do until they prove to us otherwise.
- ú We will continue to consult with our friends, with our allies and with all members of the Security Council on how to compel compliance by Iraq with the will of the international community.

Key Quotes on Iraq,s Declaration to the United Nations

Secretary of State Colin Powell, in press conference, 12/19/02

&There were a lot of open questions at the end of 1998(these have not been answered by evidence in the new declaration(. [O]ne cannot have confidence that there do not remain weapons of mass destruction.8

UN Chief Weapons Inspector Hans Blix, in press conference, 12/19/02

British Foreign Secretary Straw, 12/19/02

In Case You Missed It(

According to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Iraqis fleeing religious and political repression have replaced Afghans as the largest single group requesting asylum in industrialized countries.

Iraqis accounted for 36,282 applications filed in Western countries, followed by people from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (24,330).

Afghans fell to fourth place at 20,460 -- considerably fewer than the 38,995 who fled during the same 2001 period -- as their homeland stabilizes under a transition government after decades of war.

(From UN Report: Asylum Applications Lodged in Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand, and Japan: January ) September 2002, released 12/03/02)

One stat worth knowing for the long haul -- not as a talker but just to know. What percentage of a President's circuit nominees were ever confirmed?

Reagan: 81% (83 of 102)

George H.W. Bush: 78% (42 of 54)

Clinton: 61% (65 of 106)

For President George W. Bush, we are so far at 28%: 8 of 29.

I hope you are enjoying some time off, but if not, or when you get back, we'd greatly appreciate your clearing as many, or all, of the pending notices as you possibly can.

I am in this week, but will be away from January 6-10, so please contact Jeff Landou on my staff, or Nancy Smith, or John Laster on her staff, if you are making decisions that week, or need any other assistance. Thanks.

>>> GaryM Stern 12/12/02 3:06:51 PM >>>
You should have received the copies of the responses from the reps on both notices by now.

It has been our practice not to send you the actual responses by the reps, unless you specifically request them, but rather a letter (usually from Nancy Smith) stating that the reps have signed off on the notice. Would you now prefer that we always send you the response from the rep?

I would like to have a mtg tomorrow. I should be in the ofc and can host it.

Diana -- can you coordinate with all relevant participants. Late am probably works best.

Brett,
I believe that Treasury GC is the party most interested in meeting by tomorrow because of the CBS interest in running a story.
Unfortunately, I don't think this will be our last meeting in any event.
Nothing has been scheduled yet and I will pulse others to see what their views are re the need & availability for a Tuesday mtg.

> HEADLINE: GOP-RUN ASSEMBLY DELIVERS WHAT OHIO BUSINESSES WANT

> BYLINE: Tim Miller; COLUMBUS BUREAU

> A loud, popping sound in the Secretary of State's office on election night last November caused veteran Democratic Party activist Tom Meyer to laugh half-heartedly.

> ''They're opening another champagne bottle in a corporate boardroom,'' he quipped.

> Indeed, seven months after that election - in which the Republican Party took control of the Ohio House, kept control of the state Senate, and swept all statewide executive offices - business leaders are smiling.

> The recently completed first phase of the 121st Ohio General Assembly saw several major pro-business bills sail through. Other bills, considered even more pressing to the corporate community, were placed in the legislative pipeline for action later this year. One veteran Statehouse lobbyist noted that the departure of Democratic House Speaker Vern Riffe, who held that post a record 20 years, has dramatically altered the legislative landscape.

> ''When Vern was in power, business got what it needed,'' he said. ''Now, business is getting what it wants.''

> State Rep. Bob Corbin, R-Wash. Twp., who became the House majority whip thanks to the GOP takeover, only mildly disputed that assessment. He believes what's good for Ohio business is generally good for Ohioans.

>

> ''Business should feel good about a lot of things we've done, but so should all Ohioans,'' he said. ''Business is not setting the agenda, but business is involved in working on the agenda. Much of what we've done is to address some past actions that have caused concern in the business community and have hindered our economic development.''

>

> Corbin has become a shepherd for many of the changes, including revamping the Bureau of Workers' Compensation; giving employers protection against liability lawsuits by former employees; and trying to modify the prevailing wage law that requires paying union wages on most public construction projects.

> The Republicans also are moving to reduce environmental regulations on businesses; allow corporations to participate more directly in political campaigns; and reverse an Ohio Supreme Court decision in an effort to make it more difficult for employees to sue employers for job-related injuries.

>

> John Mahaney, the longtime executive director of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants, described the new General Assembly as ''business-friendly, but then no one would say Vern Riffe was anti-business. Vern simply had other interests he had to be concerned with that the new leadership does not.''

> Prominent among those ''interests'' was organized labor, whose members have been observing the proceedings with trepidation.

>

> ''There is great concern that in their quest to please the business community, the working men and women in Ohio are going to be left behind,'' said Kent Darr, spokesman for the Ohio AFL-CIO. ''There less of an appreciation that what's good for workers is also good for business.''

> But Mahaney describes much of the legislation that has been approved so far as ''a balancing. Every 20 years or so in Ohio, power shifts from one party to the other. It usually evens out.''

> Curt Steiner, the chief executive officer of the House, recalled the early 1980s when the Democrats took control of all levers of power in the Statehouse.

> ''You quickly saw enactment of several major pieces of legislation that labor had been seeking for many years,'' he said. ''And it was done without consultation with the Republicans. I think we've made a very strong effort to have an open process and involve all parties in our deliberations.''

>

> Steiner said the General Assembly also worked closely with the administration of Gov. George Voinovich, who's considered a moderate Republican with a good working relationship with some traditional Democratic groups, such as labor.

> However, Steiner and others predicted that after the Legislature returns from its summer recess, probably in November, there will be more legislation emanating from the increasing number of conservatives in the House.

> ''In the next phase I think you are going to see some initiatives that may or may not have the support of the administration,'' Steiner said.

>

> Enacting a new, two-year state budget consumed a great deal of time in the just-completed session, Mahaney noted. ''They had to focus on the budget, and I believe they did not want to appear too partisan in the beginning of the session,'' Mahaney said. ''When they come back, I think you could see some pitched battles.''

> While apprehensive about what that might mean to their favorite programs, some Democrats also see the possibility of political gains from the GOP agenda.

> ''If they overreach, if they are perceived as taking hard-earned gains away from the working people of Ohio, I can't help but believe that it will help revive the Democratic party,'' said state Sen. Dennis Kucinich, D-Cleveland.

Ruben wanted me to get your thoughts on a letter we received from NY Sen. Majority Leader Joseph Bruno. His letter is in support of NYC hosting the 2004 Republican National Convention. Is there any particular way you think we should handle this letter? Or would a general "Thank you for your letter" response be adequate? Thanks for your help.

As you may have seen, Judge Kollar-Ketelly denied the motion to dismiss in the FOIA case against OHS. The MTD argued that OHS is not an agency for purposes of FOIA. Presumably, the denial of the motion to dismiss just means that the court wants factual evidence re the activities of OHS before determining whether it is an agency. Once I get the opinion, I'll let you know if she said anything that indicates whether she is leaning in a particular direction.

Judge Gonzales received a letter today from Ralph Mecham, the Director of the Administrative Office of the US Courts. The letter indicates that the Committee on Judicial Resources of the Judicial Conference of the United States has taken favorable action consistent with President's proposal on judges. In December, the Committee (chaired by Judge Dennis Jacobs of the Second Circuit) approved the following language, which in turn will be considered and voted on in March by the full Judicial Conference: "The Judicial Conference strongly urges all judges to notify the President and the Administrative Office of the United States Courts as far in advance as possible of a change in status, and if possible, twelve months before the contemplated date of changes in status." They also adopted language that "regular reminders of the policy be transmitted to judges."

Mr. Mecham's letter states: "I am sure that the Judicial Conference will approve this strengthened policy."

This is good news, of course.

hi! In addition to the folders that I dropped off this morning, I think you have several other packs up there from me. Could you please sign all the trip summaries as soon as possible? There are a number of outstanding bills that are being held in limbo until a signed trip summary is received in FMD. Several of the bills are from Waco and I'd rather not keep those vendors waiting.

Thanks!!!

QUESTION: Senator, after the Lott episode, the Republican Party is reporting to be more amenable and open to civil rights measures. Do you have some suggestions for their agenda to prove their sincerity?
DASCHLE: Well, I would have two right off the top. I think it's important we pass hate crimes quickly. And I will give them the opportunity to vote on hate crimes in the not-too-distant future.
We also think that it's going to be all the more important that we look carefully at the judicial nominations. And we will fight those that we think are out of the mainstream and certainly not in keeping with the commitments that they are making.

Daschle News Conference 01/07/03
DASCHLE: Good afternoon, everyone.
I know that a lot of you have questions about my future, but I'm here today with the new members of my leadership--some of the new members--to talk about America's future.
In the next few weeks and months, America is going to make some decisions that will shape the nature of our country for years and possibly decades to come. Critical debates and votes on those questions will take place here in the Senate, and for that reason I feel privileged and I feel a strong sense of personal responsibility to remain the senator from South Dakota and a leader of the Democratic caucus.

On one of those first debates, we're going to be talking about how we will move the economy again. President Bush just gave a speech in which he outlined a plan that he says will do that. He says it will give the economy a shot in the arm.

I think it will give the economy a shot in the foot. It is a misguided plan reflective of this administration's misplaced priorities. Democrats will put forward an economic plan that is more equitable, more responsible and, above all, more effective. And this will be one of the first priorities of the new Congress.

Now, I'd like to introduce you to the new leaders who will help guide our caucus in the 108th Congress and outline in broad terms what our agenda will be in the next two years. Let me start with the new members of our leadership team.

We have created a new Leadership Executive Committee. It's four members will attend our weekly legislative meetings and provide legislative and strategic advice to the Democratic Caucus. They are Senators Patty Murray, Chuck Schumer, Tom Carper and Ben Nelson. Each is a leader in our caucus, and I'm looking forward to having them as part of the leadership team, and congratulate them this afternoon.

Senator Hillary Clinton will take over as the chair of our Steering and Coordination Committee; the committee that works to maintain relations with leaders and organizations off the Hill, keep us up to date on their work and keep them informed of ours. Bill Nelson, who served us so well as the vice chair of the DSCC in the last Congress, will now become one of our deputy whips.

Those are our leaders. Now, let me take a moment to talk about our priorities.

Through tragic and historic events, and despite some of them, the Senate, under Democratic control, produced a number of important legislative accomplishments: aviation security and counterterrorism legislation, the toughest corporate accountability law since the SEC was created in 1934, the most far-reaching campaign finance reform since Watergate, and the most significant overhaul of federal election policies--I should say education policies since 1965; a new farm bill to replace the failed Freedom to Farm Act.

DASCHLE: However, other important legislation fell victim to special-interest arm-twisting and Republican unwillingness to compromise on their proposals or even consider ours.

The proposals we introduce today recognize that the American people have real concerns about their security, and that the Republicans and the Bush administration have done little to address those concerns of consequence. They also recognize that security means more than national security and homeland security. It means economic security--retirement security, and the security of knowing that our children are getting a good education, and that if you get sick health care is available and affordable. It means giving people who work full-time the security of knowing that they can earn a decent wage, whether they can work on a farm, in a factory or a fast-food restaurant. It's the security of knowing that our air is safe to breathe, and our water safe to drink, that America is living up to its commitment of civil rights, and that we are keeping our promise to our veterans.

Our priorities touch on each of these issues. Today we are introducing bills to enhance protections for our critical homeland security infrastructure, by hiring and helping to train additional law enforcement agents and first responders, and by improving rail port and nuclear security; provide for a real prescription drug benefit under Medicare, and address the high cost of prescription drugs for all Americans; to ensure that more children have access to preschool, and show up at school ready to learn to improve education every step of the way from kindergarten to college to lifelong learning; to protect private pensions, and to crackdown on rogue corporations; and to increase health care coverage and quality.

I know I speak for all of my colleagues, especially our leadership team, in saying that we are anxious to get started, we are excited about our prospects and we look forward to working with our Republican colleagues to see that this job gets done.

Now it is my pleasure to call on our colleague Senator Hillary Clinton.

CLINTON: Well, I thank our leader, Senator Daschle, not only for what he has done, which he just briefly outlined, in terms of the accomplishments that have been brought about for not only the Congress but our country under his leadership, and I look forward to serving with and under him now as we move forward.

I'm very honored to have been asked to take on this responsibility. I look forward to working with the entire Democratic caucus and to be part of the new leadership.

There is a lot to be done in order to put our country back on the right track. The national security, homeland security, economic security issues are necessarily the ones that we have to address. And there are significant differences between the two parties that will be debated and outlined in the days and weeks ahead.

But I think the Democratic Party, particularly here in the Senate, will demonstrate clearly that we have a vision of our country that we believe is in the best interest of all of our citizens, and we will work to, not only persuade our friends on the other side of the aisle, and those on the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, but all the people that the Democratic Party has an idea of the future that will benefit them. And I thank Leader Daschle for this opportunity to serve.

MURRAY: I, too, want to join my colleagues in congratulating Senator Daschle for the tremendous leadership he has brought, not only to our caucus, but to thousands and thousands of people across this country who are very concerned about our economy, and our health care and their own personal situations as we face an uncertain future. His leadership has been so important for all of us, and I am delighted to be a part of his leadership team going into the 108th Congress to bring a voice to those issues, and to bring a fight to the floor of the Senate to help make lives better across this country.

In my home state of Washington, we still have one of the highest unemployment rates in the nation, increasingly large numbers of people without any health care coverage at all. We have a very difficult situation, because we're the highest export state in the country, and we need to figure out how we're going to protect our ports in terms of homeland security. My state, like many, is facing a severe budget crisis, over $2.5 billion that they're trying to figure out how they're going to deal with that.

So it is essential that we have strong leadership here in Washington, D.C. to address the issues of health care and education, the economy, and all of the tremendous issues that this caucus is going to move forward on in the coming session.

So I'm delighted to be a part of this committee, and to be a part of this leadership, and to make sure that we have a strong voice and a strong face for many people across this country in the coming two years.

BILL NELSON: In times of war and a faltering economy the people should have the confidence that they have the leadership.

BILL NELSON: With Tom and Harry, we have that leadership.

It was a privilege for Patty and me to work on the campaigns this last time, and that was under very difficult circumstances, but--difficult circumstances of losing Paul Wellstone. And yet the Senate still remains razor thin in the division between the two caucuses.

Now that they have asked me to assume this position of a deputy whip to bring a perspective of a moderate Democrat, a Southerner, I accept this with enormous gratitude, and especially the gratitude that we have the leadership in the persons of Tom Daschle and Harry Reid.

SCHUMER: Thank you. And I want to join everybody else in thanking both Tom Daschle and Harry Reid for this tremendous opportunity. And I look forward to working with my colleagues to shape our party's priority and message and strategy.

And I just want to say to Tom particularly that, you know, we know you had to go through a real tough decision, and the nation would have loved you as a presidential candidate, but we love you staying here with us, and we thank you for that.

We know we have a lot of work ahead of us. The cost of prescription drugs is too high, and we have a plan to lower them.

Homeland security: We're spending a lot of money to fight a war overseas to make ourselves more secure, but somehow this administration doesn't want to spend a nickel to make our homeland more secure. That's something we intend to push as a caucus, because we think our responsibility as Americans and as legislators dictates it.

The economy is weak and family budgets are stretched to the limit. We saw debate on the floor today. Our Republican colleagues would not let an amendment be debated for half an hour that would have added a million to the unemployment benefits. The president is in Chicago spending $650 billion, most of which goes to the highest-income people, and they say they can't afford a billion for unemployed.

That's our job and our fight, to make sure that that happens. And we want to make sure there is tax relief to stimulate the economy, but we want to make sure that it just doesn't go to the wealthiest people.

So the bottom line is, under Tom and Harry's leadership we have a whole lot of say. You're going to be hearing from us. We're invigorated. We're excited at the prospect of trying to make this country a better place. And I am honored by the prospect to be a small part of that.

BEN NELSON: Well, first of all, I'd like to thank our leader for showing some confidence in--showing really a lot of self-confidence in asking people with a lot of diverse ideas to serve on a committee. Very often leaders of lesser worth bring people on who share every view of theirs so that they don't have to work through diversity.

Diversity of opinion, I think, is strengthening the party, will strengthen the caucus. It will help us, I think, better serve the American people, which is clearly our goal.

I think bringing a couple of reforming governors to--recovering governors here...

(LAUGHTER)

... to this group will benefit us, but I think it'll also benefit the Leadership Council because we'll have an opportunity to raise the issues of what's happening at the state level from a firsthand experience.

Having some business experience I think perhaps will also contribute to the strengthening of the ideas and the reforms that will come from this group.

So I really appreciate the opportunity to begin to take homeland security and make it home town security, to be able to address the issues that are right there on the streets in our communities, so that we can strengthen all of our security: Social Security, pension security, health security. This is going to be a 108th Congress focused on security. I hope we focus on every aspect of security.

Thank you.

CARPER: Let me just begin by saying what a privilege it is to serve in a caucus led by Tom Daschle and by Harry Reid. I had the pleasure of serving with them years ago in the House of Representatives, and I loved them then, and I love them now.

I spoke last month with Tom Daschle as he was considering what path to take in his own future, and I said, "Well, I suppose if I were in your shoes I'd probably think of running for president. This is as good a time as a guy'll ever have." For selfish reasons I said, "I hope you stay right where you are."

And I'm just delighted that you've done that and look forward to working with you.

There's been a fair amount of speculation since the election as to which direction we're going to go as a party: Will we veer to the left, will we go to the right, will we attempt to find a place in the center? And I think, with the creation of this executive committee--and I thank the leader for the privilege of serving with Chuck and with Ben and Patty, three of my favorite people--and I think the answer is we're fully intending to do what Bill Clinton tried to do with our party. That is to make sure that we stay in the mainstream of political thought and actions within this country.

Ben and I, as old governors, we're really focused on what works. And what the message I'll be taking to our caucus is, we should be less concerned about liberal or conservative ideas. We should be focused on what works to raise student achievement, what works to reduce our reliance on foreign oil, what works to reduce global warming, what works to help ensure that people that are trying to get off of welfare get off of welfare and stay off of welfare.

CARPER: And that will be my approach and what I hope to bring to the table, and I'm just grateful to our leader for giving me a seat at that table. Thank you.

(UNKNOWN): Tom, I have one thing to say: It doesn't seem like 7:25 to me.
(LAUGHTER)

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, did you renege on a deal on unemployment benefits with Senator Frist? He was saying he had a deal with the Democrats and it all seemed to fall apart. Can you tell us whether it's going to get done today or not?

DASCHLE: It just got done, yes, while you were sitting up here we passed it.

I'm surprised he would say that. There was no deal. In fact I just learned, I believe this morning, that it was the intention of the Republicans to--well, I'll take that back, Senator Nickles did call me last night to say that he was going to offer a resolution that would extend the benefits for those who are currently covered. But immediately I told him that there were many in our caucus, and I was one of them, who felt strongly about the need to cover the other million people who are left out. And as you know, all we attempted to do today was to find the mechanism whereby we could do both.

Their argument was, "Well, the House won't accept this additional group of benefits." Well, I find it incredibly ironic, as Senator Schumer noted, that at the same time the president is advocating now a $600 billion tax cut, largely dedicated to those at the very top, they can't even pass benefits for people at the very bottom with no jobs.

I mean, that is outrageous. That is wrong. And I think that that, more than anything else, will be the topic of conversation until we get this job done right.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, why have you decided not to run for president?

DASCHLE: I'm not going to run for president because my passion is right here. And I must say I feel as good about this decision as any I've ever made.

This is my passion. I'm very honored and gratified to have the opportunity to be Democratic leader. And the fights, the important debates, the cause, the agenda, the things we believe in are going to be fought out every single day with the people behind me, and I'm proud to be one of them.

QUESTION: What changed your mind?

DASCHLE: I never changed my mind, I simply said all along that I was going to make up my mind prior to the session of Congress and prior to the end of January, I believe I said. And I've done that.

QUESTION: You did say as recently, I'm told, as yesterday, last night you were strongly leaning toward a run, so (inaudible) you were actually interviewing campaign staff last night.

What caused the change since last night, and are you now saying you are going to run for re-election?

DASCHLE: Yes, I am going to run for re-election.

(APPLAUSE)

And I believe that what we had to do was to make a decision, and up until that decision we had to be prepared to take whatever course based upon that decision would follow.

Obviously, if I had made the decision to run for president we wanted to be up and running and ready to go. But clearly, making the decision, as we are today, to stay as leader--and I'm honored that my colleagues are willing to have me as their leader--that, too, required action, which is what you see today.

QUESTION: When did you make the decision?

DASCHLE: I made the decision over the last 24 hours, the final decision. I've been coming to a point where I could make a decision now for several weeks, but my family and I made the decision in the last 24 hours.

QUESTION: What's your key concern with the Bush stimulus plan?

DASCHLE: My key concern is really two-fold. First, there is no stimulus in the Bush stimulus plan. And secondly, it is grossly unfair.

Under the dividend tax reduction that you have seen the president's proposed, those making $1 million will get a $24,000 tax deduction. They will pay $24,000 less. If you're in the $40,000 to $50,000 income bracket, you're going to get $76. That is a disparity that I can't imagine anyone could support, I can't imagine anyone could be proud of.

And yet that's the disparity. And it would be one thing, I suppose, if you could argue, "Well, that's good stimulus." As virtually every economist has noted there is no stimulus in that approach.

So there are two concerns, and I hope that, as we go through this debate, those concerns will be recognized.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, part of the president's package was to speed up the scheduled phase-in of some of the tax cuts that were included in the big 2001 tax bill. Will it be the position of the majority of Democrats to simply oppose that speed-up, or will you go farther and actually call for these scheduled tax cuts to be frozen and not take effect?

DASCHLE: Well, we will decide as we go through this debate just what specific actions. We're going to be discussing this matter in the caucus, we'll be talking with our House colleagues, and we'll be coming to some conclusions.

But clearly what the president laid out today is wrong. It's the wrong time, it's the wrong place, it's certainly affecting the wrong people.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, you'll be a super delegate; you get a vote at the convention in Boston. I was wondering if you would state your preference now.

And there are a lot of people who say that senators are not qualified to be president, you know, there's a, kind of, a trend for governors. You've got some colleagues, Kerry, Edwards, Lieberman, Graham--who am I leaving out?--Dodd; do you have a preference and would you like to state it now?

DASCHLE: We've got some fantastic candidates. We will be excited about our nominee, and until that time, may the best person win.

QUESTION: Does a senator disqualify himself? Is a governor more qualified to be president?

DASCHLE: Hardly. We've got some good candidates, as you know. And they will present their case and make their campaigns, and we'll make that judgment down the road.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE) concerns do you have about going against President Bush again in your state, only this time it's your name on the ballot?

DASCHLE: Well, he ought to be the one that has concerns. We won the debate--won the election in the last cycle, and we're going to win the next one.

QUESTION: Senator, is there anything specific about the nature of this (OFF-MIKE) that makes you think that this is the better place for you to (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Right now this is where my heart is, where my passions lie. As I think about where I want to be, what fights I want to fight, I want to fight the fights on the Senate floor. I want to fight for the people of my state. I want to continue to do what I have been doing. That is where my passion is, that's where I feel the most strongly and that's why I made the decision I did.

QUESTION: I have a non-presidential question. This executive committee you set up, how is this going to function any differently from the way it used to function in the last session?

DASCHLE: Well, I don't know that it's a question of how differently it'll function. What we want it to do is to function pretty much the same, but include the people that you have behind us. Each one of these extraordinary senators bring talent and experience and a perspective to leadership that I think is extraordinarily important.

As we make the decisions on strategy, as we make the decisions on the legislative priorities that we will have as a caucus, I will turn to the people behind me. And I am extraordinarily grateful to them for their willingness to serve.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Absolutely. We will have an energy bill, as well.

QUESTION: Will it look like what was agreed to last year (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Well, I can't be specific because I think it will include a lot more conversation and deliberation by members of the caucus, including the leadership. But we will certainly put great emphasis on moving energy legislation again this year.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, on the subject of the Senate being your passion, I have a couple of questions about your decision. Number one, did you not look forward to going on the--going through what a presidential campaign entails? And number two, did you think it would be too hard to win?

DASCHLE: Not at all. In fact, if anything, I relish the idea of a campaign. But I have one at home, and I'm looking forward to that. It really is a question. There may come a time in my future when a national campaign, a campaign for the presidency, is one that I will, again, entertain. I am certainly not discounting that at some point in the future.

But right now this is where my heart is, this is what moves me and excites me and this is what brings me to the conclusion that I belong here and I want to stay here for now.

QUESTION: Might there come a time in this campaign cycle?

DASCHLE: No, not in this campaign cycle, but at some point in the future.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, does it feel a little bit strange to be a prominent Democratic senator who's announcing that he's not running for president?

(LAUGHTER)

The way this story has a kind of a man bites dog...

(LAUGHTER)

DASCHLE: Well, all I can say is it feels very good.

QUESTION: And on a more serious note, what affects will all the announced or probably to be announced candidacies of your peers in the Democratic caucus have on the ongoing debate in the Senate? So many are jumping in or probably going to jump in, what affect will that have on the ongoing legislative debate?

DASCHLE: I actually think it helps us. As you cover them, as you report their speeches and their positions, I think it enhances and provides even greater opportunity for the Democratic message to be heard.

And so, I see no downside to having those messengers and those articulators of the Democratic agenda. You will hear them. They will be covered. And I think that's good for us, as well as for them.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, what progress, if any, have you made on committee funding ratio issue?

DASCHLE: Senator Frist and I had a good conversation a couple of days ago, and we haven't come to any final conclusion. But I think it's fair to say, we're making progress.

We still have budgetary decisions we have to make. I think it is clear that the ratio will be a one-vote majority for the Republicans in committee. But I will object to any significant departure from the budget accommodations that we have made in the past Congress for committee staff. I think it should be comparable to what it was before, and I'm confident that it will be.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE) saying though that you want a, sort of, Senate-wide or one-size-fits-all committee funding formula for every committee, or are you happy to have it worked out between committee chairmen and ranking members?

DASCHLE: Well, I think it's important for us to set some parameters, as we did before. But clearly, we want to give the committees ample opportunity to have flexibility to accommodate whatever special needs they may have. I'm confident we can do it in this Congress, as we did in the last one.

QUESTION: Senator, you've been frustrated during the fall, the difficulty you had getting the message out.

QUESTION: But a lot of you saw this morning and a little bit more this afternoon, a little bit more (inaudible) about the prospects for doing that now. What's changed?

DASCHLE: I'll just say I think we're really energized. You can feel it. It's in our caucus. You can feel it with the comments made by our colleagues. We are energized by policy. We are energized in a belief in what it is we stand for. We're energized in many of the developments that have occurred with the election of Senator Landrieu.

And so, as we start this new year, we're energized in the belief that we have very, very critical battles to fight and important positions to take on the Senate floor. And I think that, probably more than anything else, unites us, energizes us and gives us the optimism that you witness this afternoon.

QUESTION: Senator, after the Lott episode, the Republican Party is reporting to be more amenable and open to civil rights measures. Do you have some suggestions for their agenda to prove their sincerity?

DASCHLE: Well, I would have two right off the top. I think it's important we pass hate crimes quickly. And I will give them the opportunity to vote on hate crimes in the not-too-distant future.

We also think that it's going to be all the more important that we look carefully at the judicial nominations. And we will fight those that we think are out of the mainstream and certainly not in keeping with the commitments that they are making.

QUESTION: Have you forgotten one?

(UNKNOWN): D.C. statehood.

DASCHLE: Oh, D.C. statehood, of course.

QUESTION: (inaudible) representation, representation.

DASCHLE: Thank you for the prompt. D.C. representation was at the tip of my lips, and I just...

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Well, I would hope that one is not coming. I would hope that...

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Well, I think that as long as we work in a multilateral fashion, pressing Iraq to comply, pressing Iraq to cooperate in all the manner and respect to provided for in the U.N. resolution, that we ought to be very careful about committing American troops.

I would hope that we could send that message as clearly as possible and as strongly as possible to the president and to others.

Thank you all very much.

Daschle News Conference 01/07/03
DASCHLE: Good afternoon, everyone.
I know that a lot of you have questions about my future, but I'm here today with the new members of my leadership--some of the new members--to talk about America's future.
In the next few weeks and months, America is going to make some decisions that will shape the nature of our country for years and possibly decades to come. Critical debates and votes on those questions will take place here in the Senate, and for that reason I feel privileged and I feel a strong sense of personal responsibility to remain the senator from South Dakota and a leader of the Democratic caucus.
On one of those first debates, we're going to be talking about how we will move the economy again. President Bush just gave a speech in which he outlined a plan that he says will do that. He says it will give the economy a shot in the arm.
I think it will give the economy a shot in the foot. It is a misguided plan reflective of this administration's misplaced priorities.
Democrats will put forward an economic plan that is more equitable, more responsible and, above all, more effective. And this will be one of the first priorities of the new Congress.
Now, I'd like to introduce you to the new leaders who will help guide our caucus in the 108th Congress and outline in broad terms what our agenda will be in the next two years. Let me start with the new members of our leadership team.
We have created a new Leadership Executive Committee. It's four members will attend our weekly legislative meetings and provide legislative and strategic advice to the Democratic Caucus. They are Senators Patty Murray, Chuck Schumer, Tom Carper and Ben Nelson. Each is a leader in our caucus, and I'm looking forward to having them as part of the leadership team, and congratulate them this afternoon.

Senator Hillary Clinton will take over as the chair of our Steering and Coordination Committee; the committee that works to maintain relations with leaders and organizations off the Hill, keep us up to date on their work and keep them informed of ours. Bill Nelson, who served us so well as the vice chair of the DSCC in the last Congress, will now become one of our deputy whips.

Those are our leaders. Now, let me take a moment to talk about our priorities.

Through tragic and historic events, and despite some of them, the Senate, under Democratic control, produced a number of important legislative accomplishments: aviation security and counterterrorism legislation, the toughest corporate accountability law since the SEC was created in 1934, the most far-reaching campaign finance reform since Watergate, and the most significant overhaul of federal election policies--I should say education policies since 1965; a new farm bill to replace the failed Freedom to Farm Act.

DASCHLE: However, other important legislation fell victim to special-interest arm-twisting and Republican unwillingness to compromise on their proposals or even consider ours.

The proposals we introduce today recognize that the American people have real concerns about their security, and that the Republicans and the Bush administration have done little to address those concerns of consequence. They also recognize that security means more than national security and homeland security. It means economic security--retirement security, and the security of knowing that our children are getting a good education, and that if you get sick health care is available and affordable. It means giving people who work full-time the security of knowing that they can earn a decent wage, whether they can work on a farm, in a factory or a fast-food restaurant. It's the security of knowing that our air is safe to breathe, and our water safe to drink, that America is living up to its commitment of civil rights, and that we are keeping our promise to our veterans.

Our priorities touch on each of these issues. Today we are introducing bills to enhance protections for our critical homeland security infrastructure, by hiring and helping to train additional law enforcement agents and first responders, and by improving rail port and nuclear security; provide for a real prescription drug benefit under Medicare, and address the high cost of prescription drugs for all Americans; to ensure that more children have access to preschool, and show up at school ready to learn to improve education every step of the way from kindergarten to college to lifelong learning; to protect private pensions, and to crackdown on rogue corporations; and to increase health care coverage and quality.

I know I speak for all of my colleagues, especially our leadership team, in saying that we are anxious to get started, we are excited about our prospects and we look forward to working with our Republican colleagues to see that this job gets done.

Now it is my pleasure to call on our colleague Senator Hillary Clinton.

CLINTON: Well, I thank our leader, Senator Daschle, not only for what he has done, which he just briefly outlined, in terms of the accomplishments that have been brought about for not only the Congress but our country under his leadership, and I look forward to serving with and under him now as we move forward.

I'm very honored to have been asked to take on this responsibility. I look forward to working with the entire Democratic caucus and to be part of the new leadership.

There is a lot to be done in order to put our country back on the right track. The national security, homeland security, economic security issues are necessarily the ones that we have to address. And there are significant differences between the two parties that will be debated and outlined in the days and weeks ahead.

But I think the Democratic Party, particularly here in the Senate, will demonstrate clearly that we have a vision of our country that we believe is in the best interest of all of our citizens, and we will work to, not only persuade our friends on the other side of the aisle, and those on the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, but all the people that the Democratic Party has an idea of the future that will benefit them. And I thank Leader Daschle for this opportunity to serve.

MURRAY: I, too, want to join my colleagues in congratulating Senator Daschle for the tremendous leadership he has brought, not only to our caucus, but to thousands and thousands of people across this country who are very concerned about our economy, and our health care and their own personal situations as we face an uncertain future. His leadership has been so important for all of us, and I am delighted to be a part of his leadership team going into the 108th Congress to bring a voice to those issues, and to bring a fight to the floor of the Senate to help make lives better across this country.

In my home state of Washington, we still have one of the highest unemployment rates in the nation, increasingly large numbers of people without any health care coverage at all. We have a very difficult situation, because we're the highest export state in the country, and we need to figure out how we're going to protect our ports in terms of homeland security. My state, like many, is facing a severe budget crisis, over $2.5 billion that they're trying to figure out how they're going to deal with that.

So it is essential that we have strong leadership here in Washington, D.C. to address the issues of health care and education, the economy, and all of the tremendous issues that this caucus is going to move forward on in the coming session.

So I'm delighted to be a part of this committee, and to be a part of this leadership, and to make sure that we have a strong voice and a strong face for many people across this country in the coming two years.

BILL NELSON: In times of war and a faltering economy the people should have the confidence that they have the leadership.

BILL NELSON: With Tom and Harry, we have that leadership.

It was a privilege for Patty and me to work on the campaigns this last time, and that was under very difficult circumstances, but--difficult circumstances of losing Paul Wellstone. And yet the Senate still remains razor thin in the division between the two caucuses.

Now that they have asked me to assume this position of a deputy whip to bring a perspective of a moderate Democrat, a Southerner, I accept this with enormous gratitude, and especially the gratitude that we have the leadership in the persons of Tom Daschle and Harry Reid.

SCHUMER: Thank you. And I want to join everybody else in thanking both Tom Daschle and Harry Reid for this tremendous opportunity. And I look forward to working with my colleagues to shape our party's priority and message and strategy.

And I just want to say to Tom particularly that, you know, we know you had to go through a real tough decision, and the nation would have loved you as a presidential candidate, but we love you staying here with us, and we thank you for that.

We know we have a lot of work ahead of us. The cost of prescription drugs is too high, and we have a plan to lower them.

Homeland security: We're spending a lot of money to fight a war overseas to make ourselves more secure, but somehow this administration doesn't want to spend a nickel to make our homeland more secure. That's something we intend to push as a caucus, because we think our responsibility as Americans and as legislators dictates it.

The economy is weak and family budgets are stretched to the limit. We saw debate on the floor today. Our Republican colleagues would not let an amendment be debated for half an hour that would have added a million to the unemployment benefits. The president is in Chicago spending $650 billion, most of which goes to the highest-income people, and they say they can't afford a billion for unemployed.

That's our job and our fight, to make sure that that happens. And we want to make sure there is tax relief to stimulate the economy, but we want to make sure that it just doesn't go to the wealthiest people.

So the bottom line is, under Tom and Harry's leadership we have a whole lot of say. You're going to be hearing from us. We're invigorated. We're excited at the prospect of trying to make this country a better place. And I am honored by the prospect to be a small part of that.

BEN NELSON: Well, first of all, I'd like to thank our leader for showing some confidence in--showing really a lot of self-confidence in asking people with a lot of diverse ideas to serve on a committee. Very often leaders of lesser worth bring people on who share every view of theirs so that they don't have to work through diversity. Diversity of opinion, I think, is strengthening the party, will strengthen the caucus. It will help us, I think, better serve the American people, which is clearly our goal. I think bringing a couple of reforming governors to--recovering governors here...

(LAUGHTER)

... to this group will benefit us, but I think it'll also benefit the Leadership Council because we'll have an opportunity to raise the issues of what's happening at the state level from a firsthand experience. Having some business experience I think perhaps will also contribute to the strengthening of the ideas and the reforms that will come from this group.

So I really appreciate the opportunity to begin to take homeland security and make it home town security, to be able to address the issues that are right there on the streets in our communities, so that we can strengthen all of our security: Social Security, pension security, health security. This is going to be a 108th Congress focused on security. I hope we focus on every aspect of security.

Thank you.

CARPER: Let me just begin by saying what a privilege it is to serve in a caucus led by Tom Daschle and by Harry Reid. I had the pleasure of serving with them years ago in the House of Representatives, and I loved them then, and I love them now.

I spoke last month with Tom Daschle as he was considering what path to take in his own future, and I said, ``Well, I suppose if I were in your shoes I'd probably think of running for president. This is as good a time as a guy'll ever have.'' For selfish reasons I said, ``I hope you stay right where you are.''

And I'm just delighted that you've done that and look forward to working with you.

There's been a fair amount of speculation since the election as to which direction we're going to go as a party: Will we veer to the left, will we go to the right, will we attempt to find a place in the center? And I think, with the creation of this executive committee--and I thank the leader for the privilege of serving with Chuck and with Ben and Patty, three of my favorite people--and I think the answer is we're fully intending to do what Bill Clinton tried to do with our party. That is to make sure that we stay in the mainstream of political thought and actions within this country.

Ben and I, as old governors, we're really focused on what works. And what the message I'll be taking to our caucus is, we should be less concerned about liberal or conservative ideas. We should be focused on what works to raise student achievement, what works to reduce our reliance on foreign oil, what works to reduce global warming, what works to help ensure that people that are trying to get off of welfare get off of welfare and stay off of welfare.

CARPER: And that will be my approach and what I hope to bring to the table, and I'm just grateful to our leader for giving me a seat at that table. Thank you.

(UNKNOWN): Tom, I have one thing to say: It doesn't seem like 7:25 to me.

(LAUGHTER)

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, did you renege on a deal on unemployment benefits with Senator Frist? He was saying he had a deal with the Democrats and it all seemed to fall apart. Can you tell us whether it's going to get done today or not?

DASCHLE: It just got done, yes, while you were sitting up here we passed it.

I'm surprised he would say that. There was no deal. In fact I just learned, I believe this morning, that it was the intention of the Republicans to--well, I'll take that back, Senator Nickles did call me last night to say that he was going to offer a resolution that would extend the benefits for those who are currently covered. But immediately I told him that there were many in our caucus, and I was one of them, who felt strongly about the need to cover the other million people who are left out. And as you know, all we attempted to do today was to find the mechanism whereby we could do both.

Their argument was, ``Well, the House won't accept this additional group of benefits.'' Well, I find it incredibly ironic, as Senator Schumer noted, that at the same time the president is advocating now a $600 billion tax cut, largely dedicated to those at the very top, they can't even pass benefits for people at the very bottom with no jobs.

I mean, that is outrageous. That is wrong. And I think that that, more than anything else, will be the topic of conversation until we get this job done right.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, why have you decided not to run for president?

DASCHLE: I'm not going to run for president because my passion is right here. And I must say I feel as good about this decision as any I've ever made.

This is my passion. I'm very honored and gratified to have the opportunity to be Democratic leader. And the fights, the important debates, the cause, the agenda, the things we believe in are going to be fought out every single day with the people behind me, and I'm proud to be one of them.

QUESTION: What changed your mind?

DASCHLE: I never changed my mind, I simply said all along that I was going to make up my mind prior to the session of Congress and prior to the end of January, I believe I said. And I've done that.

QUESTION: You did say as recently, I'm told, as yesterday, last night you were strongly leaning toward a run, so (inaudible) you were actually interviewing campaign staff last night.

What caused the change since last night, and are you now saying you are going to run for re-election?

DASCHLE: Yes, I am going to run for re-election.

(APPLAUSE)

And I believe that what we had to do was to make a decision, and up until that decision we had to be prepared to take whatever course based upon that decision would follow.

Obviously, if I had made the decision to run for president we wanted to be up and running and ready to go. But clearly, making the decision, as we are today, to stay as leader--and I'm honored that my colleagues are willing to have me as their leader--that, too, required action, which is what you see today.

QUESTION: When did you make the decision?

DASCHLE: I made the decision over the last 24 hours, the final decision. I've been coming to a point where I could make a decision now for several weeks, but my family and I made the decision in the last 24 hours.

QUESTION: What's your key concern with the Bush stimulus plan?

DASCHLE: My key concern is really two-fold. First, there is no stimulus in the Bush stimulus plan. And secondly, it is grossly unfair.

Under the dividend tax reduction that you have seen the president's proposed, those making $1 million will get a $24,000 tax deduction. They will pay $24,000 less. If you're in the $40,000 to $50,000 income bracket, you're going to get $76. That is a disparity that I can't imagine anyone could support, I can't imagine anyone could be proud of.

And yet that's the disparity. And it would be one thing, I suppose, if you could argue, ``Well, that's good stimulus.'' As virtually every economist has noted there is no stimulus in that approach.

So there are two concerns, and I hope that, as we go through this debate, those concerns will be recognized.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, part of the president's package was to speed up the scheduled phase-in of some of the tax cuts that were included in the big 2001 tax bill. Will it be the position of the majority of Democrats to simply oppose that speed-up, or will you go farther and actually call for these scheduled tax cuts to be frozen and not take effect?

DASCHLE: Well, we will decide as we go through this debate just what specific actions. We're going to be discussing this matter in the caucus, we'll be talking with our House colleagues, and we'll be coming to some conclusions.

But clearly what the president laid out today is wrong. It's the wrong time, it's the wrong place, it's certainly affecting the wrong people.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, you'll be a super delegate; you get a vote at the convention in Boston. I was wondering if you would state your preference now.

And there are a lot of people who say that senators are not qualified to be president, you know, there's a, kind of, a trend for governors. You've got some colleagues, Kerry, Edwards, Lieberman, Graham--who am I leaving out?--Dodd; do you have a preference and would you like to state it now?

DASCHLE: We've got some fantastic candidates. We will be excited about our nominee, and until that time, may the best person win.

QUESTION: Does a senator disqualify himself? Is a governor more qualified to be president?

DASCHLE: Hardly. We've got some good candidates, as you know. And they will present their case and make their campaigns, and we'll make that judgment down the road.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE) concerns do you have about going against President Bush again in your state, only this time it's your name on the ballot?

DASCHLE: Well, he ought to be the one that has concerns. We won the debate--won the election in the last cycle, and we're going to win the next one.

QUESTION: Senator, is there anything specific about the nature of this (OFF-MIKE) that makes you think that this is the better place for you to (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Right now this is where my heart is, where my passions lie. As I think about where I want to be, what fights I want to fight, I want to fight the fights on the Senate floor. I want to fight for the people of my state. I want to continue to do what I have been doing. That is where my passion is, that's where I feel the most strongly and that's why I made the decision I did.

QUESTION: I have a non-presidential question. This executive committee you set up, how is this going to function any differently from the way it used to function in the last session?

DASCHLE: Well, I don't know that it's a question of how differently it'll function. What we want it to do is to function pretty much the same, but include the people that you have behind us. Each one of these extraordinary senators bring talent and experience and a perspective to leadership that I think is extraordinarily important.

As we make the decisions on strategy, as we make the decisions on the legislative priorities that we will have as a caucus, I will turn to the people behind me. And I am extraordinarily grateful to them for their willingness to serve.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Absolutely. We will have an energy bill, as well.

QUESTION: Will it look like what was agreed to last year (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Well, I can't be specific because I think it will include a lot more conversation and deliberation by members of the caucus, including the leadership. But we will certainly put great emphasis on moving energy legislation again this year.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, on the subject of the Senate being your passion, I have a couple of questions about your decision. Number one, did you not look forward to going on the--going through what a presidential campaign entails? And number two, did you think it would be too hard to win?

DASCHLE: Not at all. In fact, if anything, I relish the idea of a campaign. But I have one at home, and I'm looking forward to that. It really is a question. There may come a time in my future when a national campaign, a campaign for the presidency, is one that I will, again, entertain. I am certainly not discounting that at some point in the future.

But right now this is where my heart is, this is what moves me and excites me and this is what brings me to the conclusion that I belong here and I want to stay here for now.

QUESTION: Might there come a time in this campaign cycle?

DASCHLE: No, not in this campaign cycle, but at some point in the future.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, does it feel a little bit strange to be a prominent Democratic senator who's announcing that he's not running for president?

(LAUGHTER)

The way this story has a kind of a man bites dog...

(LAUGHTER)

DASCHLE: Well, all I can say is it feels very good.

QUESTION: And on a more serious note, what affects will all the announced or probably to be announced candidacies of your peers in the Democratic caucus have on the ongoing debate in the Senate? So many are jumping in or probably going to jump in, what affect will that have on the ongoing legislative debate?

DASCHLE: I actually think it helps us. As you cover them, as you report their speeches and their positions, I think it enhances and provides even greater opportunity for the Democratic message to be heard.

And so, I see no downside to having those messengers and those articulators of the Democratic agenda. You will hear them. They will be covered. And I think that's good for us, as well as for them.

QUESTION: Senator Daschle, what progress, if any, have you made on committee funding ratio issue?

DASCHLE: Senator Frist and I had a good conversation a couple of days ago, and we haven't come to any final conclusion. But I think it's fair to say, we're making progress.

We still have budgetary decisions we have to make. I think it is clear that the ratio will be a one-vote majority for the Republicans in committee. But I will object to any significant departure from the budget accommodations that we have made in the past Congress for committee staff. I think it should be comparable to what it was before, and I'm confident that it will be.

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE) saying though that you want a, sort of, Senate-wide or one-size-fits-all committee funding formula for every committee, or are you happy to have it worked out between committee chairmen and ranking members?

DASCHLE: Well, I think it's important for us to set some parameters, as we did before. But clearly, we want to give the committees ample opportunity to have flexibility to accommodate whatever special needs they may have. I'm confident we can do it in this Congress, as we did in the last one.

QUESTION: Senator, you've been frustrated during the fall, the difficulty you had getting the message out.

QUESTION: But a lot of you saw this morning and a little bit more this afternoon, a little bit more (inaudible) about the prospects for doing that now. What's changed?

DASCHLE: I'll just say I think we're really energized. You can feel it. It's in our caucus. You can feel it with the comments made by our colleagues. We are energized by policy. We are energized in a belief in what it is we stand for. We're energized in many of the developments that have occurred with the election of Senator Landrieu.

And so, as we start this new year, we're energized in the belief that we have very, very critical battles to fight and important positions to take on the Senate floor. And I think that, probably more than anything else, unites us, energizes us and gives us the optimism that you witness this afternoon.

QUESTION: Senator, after the Lott episode, the Republican Party is reporting to be more amenable and open to civil rights measures. Do you have some suggestions for their agenda to prove their sincerity?

DASCHLE: Well, I would have two right off the top. I think it's important we pass hate crimes quickly. And I will give them the opportunity to vote on hate crimes in the not-too-distant future.

We also think that it's going to be all the more important that we look carefully at the judicial nominations. And we will fight those that we think are out of the mainstream and certainly not in keeping with the commitments that they are making.

QUESTION: Have you forgotten one?

(UNKNOWN): D.C. statehood.

DASCHLE: Oh, D.C. statehood, of course.

QUESTION: (inaudible) representation, representation.

DASCHLE: Thank you for the prompt. D.C. representation was at the tip of my lips, and I just...

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

QUESTION: (OFF-MIKE)

DASCHLE: Well, I think that as long as we work in a multilateral fashion, pressing Iraq to comply, pressing Iraq to cooperate in all the manner and respect to provided for in the U.N. resolution, that we ought to be very careful about committing American troops.

I would hope that we could send that message as clearly as possible and as strongly as possible to the president and to others.

Thank you all very much.

Adam,

I received an OA65 today requesting that we copy to CD all data from the computer of Barbara Chaffee so she can take it with her to TPO and then DHS. It states in the remarks that Brett Kavanaugh approved this action. Is that approval a green light for us to complete the request for her? Thanks. Bart (x50945)

Subject: Budget Questions

Tim --

I have a couple of questions on other issues:

1) The EOP's FY03 budget request included a significant increase for vehicle leases. Under the previous contract, each vehicle cost the EOP $94 per month to lease. Since the FY03 budget was put together and submitted long before the EOP vehicle contract was recompeted, the EOP requested enough funds to cover costs of up to $500 per vehicle per month. Now that we are more than a quarter into FY03, I assume the new contract is in place.

What is the per vehicle cost under the new contract? What vendor was selected for this years contract? Are 75% of the vehicles under the new contract alternative fuel vehicles as required under Executive Order?
What is the make and model of the sedans used to transport White House senior staff under the new contract?

2) Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations

and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilities) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? What were the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? Please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Thanks for your help on these questions.

Mike

Pyongyang, Mon Amour

By Radek Sikorski

In 1992, as deputy minister for defense in Poland's first democratically elected government, I received an invitation to North Korea's embassy in Warsaw to celebrate the birthday of the Great Leader. Thinking that it would be my last chance to attend a Stalinist event, I went. The North Koreans were delighted to land such a "big fish." And when I told the ambassador, truthfully, that they must not allow ideological slackness or they would end up like Poland, he positively glowed. So, vibes were good when I went to Pyongyang on an official visit, this time as my country's deputy foreign minister, almost ten years later. Rules are rules, though, and the North Korean diplomatic protocol informed us that cell phones could not be taken into the country (even though they don't work there) and would be confiscated irrespective of rank. I left mine in that oasis of liberty, Beijing.

Mob Scene

By John O'Sullivan

The optimists have been declaring themselves "relieved" that they are no longer allied to closet racists, and so are now able to argue for colorblindness with a clear conscience. But in fact, they are making an extremely damaging admission: that they have been colluding with racists. Thus Maggie Gallagher: "What is new is the determination of Christian and other conservatives not to let politics trump human dignity." Really? So until now these people have been letting politics trump human dignity, have they? Or take Noemie Emery: "It is a chance for the GOP to clean up its act and its household, haul tons of old rubbish out of the attic, and banish some shopworn old ghosts." Those tons of old rubbish--they would be what exactly? Bob Herbert in the New York Times had no difficulty in translating Emery's metaphor into a useful critique of the GOP. And those "shopworn old ghosts" turn out to be almost every Republican politician since Eisenhower.

Illegal but Paid?
By Joel Mowbray

Today, people who worked in the U.S. illegally can receive Social Security benefits for that period only if they become citizens or permanent legal residents. The new agreement would lift this requirement for Mexican illegals. Though not denying that this is the case, an SSA press officer cautions that "discussions are still in the preliminary stages." But according to an internal SSA memo obtained by NR, illegal aliens who never become legalized would be covered under the pact: "Mexican nationals working illegally in the U.S. can currently become entitled to benefits . . . [The deal] would include this population." Congressional and SSA officials who spoke with NR on condition of anonymity scoffed at earlier press accounts citing costs in the hundreds of millions of dollars, and predicted instead an immediate total annual cost in the billions.

USDA-Disapproved
By Rod Dreher

Jenny Drake was a Virginia state health inspector until five years ago, when she and her husband moved to rural Tennessee and started Peaceful Pastures, a small livestock farm. Their meat goes through a USDA processing facility, as government regulations require--all except the poultry. And because of those chickens, the Peaceful Pastures have been troubled. Therein lies a tale about government regulation, the decline in food quality, and the end of family farming in America. "The state says no bird in Tennessee can be sold without USDA inspection of the processing facilities," says Drake. "There are no USDA custom-kill processing plants in the entire Southeast." Drake looked into building a small processing facility on her farm: If all she had to do were to construct facilities strictly for meat processing, Drake figures she could have done so for $20,000; but as the law stands now, a building that met minimal federal guidelines would cost about $150,000.

Hootie vs. Hootie
By Jay Nordlinger

Who's Hootie? Ah, there's the killer. Why did the current chairman of the Augusta National Golf Club have to be William W. (Hootie) Johnson, known to one and all by that nickname? This is Christmas morning--and Kwanzaa and the Fourth of July and everything else--for Augusta-bashers. It seems to confirm everything they want to believe about this peculiar and proud club: Of course the chairman would be named Hootie (if not Rufus, or Jefferson). Funny thing is, Johnson, a banker, has always been known as a progressive. He was a mover in the desegregation of South Carolina's universities. He was a board member of the National Urban League, and a trustee of Benedict College (a "historically black" institution). He received the Outstanding Citizen Award from the national B'nai B'rith--the only South Carolinian besides Bernard Baruch to be so honored. No matter: In the national press now, he's just Hootie the Hoot, an "old coot," a cracker--some Bilbo or Boss Hogg.

Escape from Hell
By John J. Miller

Prisoners charged with additional crimes, such as not memorizing the president's New Year message, are confined in "punishment cells." The cells are so awful, reported Lee, that "it is a day of great fortune if a prisoner finds a rat creeping up from the bottom of the toilet hole. The prisoners catch it with their bare hands and devour it raw, as rats are the only source of meat in the prison." The testimonies of prison-camp survivors are full of such wretched tales; among the worst are those dealing with pregnant women. When Sun-ok Lee was in prison, she was ordered to a medical room to help with some record-keeping. Six pregnant women were there. "When a baby was born, the doctor shouted, 'Kill it quickly! How can a criminal in the prison expect to have a baby? Kill it!'" Other witnesses to infanticide report that prison guards sometimes make the mothers themselves do the killing.

Checking Kim
By Adam Garfinkle

The end of the Cold War dramatically changed the balance of risks and rewards in U.S. Korea policy, and should have led us to adjust our stance. But U.S. policymakers conducted business as usual. We should have managed the transition to South Korea's responsibility for its own security, while at the same time joining with other regional powers to limit North Korea's trouble-making potential. Had we started early enough, before North Korea had nukes, we would have had far more robust military options to enforce a muscular diplomacy than we do today. Better late than never, however; we still need to rethink the Korea problem down to its roots. When we do, we immediately see our other option: Announce our intention to withdraw all U.S. military forces from Korea. Lots of South Koreans would be delighted. More important, such an announcement would force China and the other parties to the problem to face reality.

Abortion Now
By Ramesh Ponnuru

Even at the peak, most Americans disappointed pro-abortion ideologues by persisting in seeing abortion as a tragedy rather than a routine medical procedure. Parents do not dream of one day telling people about "my son the abortionist." Few men brag about pressuring their girlfriends or wives into having abortions. Unease about abortion is so widespread that the politicians most committed to keeping it legal rarely use the word, preferring to talk about "choice." Abortion is the right that dare not speak its name. And the unease has only grown. Since 1995, the polls have been moving in the pro-life direction. Most Americans still think that abortion should be legal when a pregnancy results from rape or incest, or threatens the life or physical health of the mother. But a majority would ban most abortions. Only a quarter of the population now believes abortion should be legal in all cases.

Around the White House, he was known as "Farm Boy," for his months of toil on the record-setting agriculture bill President Bush signed last year.

Among national Republicans, he is known as one of the party's most promising weapons for reaching young African-Americans.

Now Dylan C. Glenn, after two years as a deputy at the National Economic Council, has gone home to Georgia to join the senior staff of incoming Republican Gov. Sonny Perdue. Glenn, 33, was one of two blacks appointed to Perdue's senior staff, bringing him in-state praise for diversity after his bruising, Bush-supported campaign against Gov. Roy Barnes (D).

Republicans in Washington hope Glenn will parlay his new job into a congressional or statewide race two years from now, extending Republican gains in a traditionally Democratic state.

"We know our outreach in the African-American community is only going to succeed when we have elected leaders from that community," said Charles Black, a Republican consultant. "We hope he makes it. It's critical." Glenn was raised by a principal and school counselor in Columbus, Ga., and came north to the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va. He was assistant research director of the 1988 presidential campaign of the president's father, and was a traveling press aide to the vice presidential nominee, Jack Kemp, in 1996.

Glenn challenged Rep. Sanford Bishop (D-Ga.) in 2000 and lost by 6 points, but received the highest vote ever for a Republican in the district. Now Glenn says of a future race, "I'm keeping the door open, without being focused on it." Supporters say he might make a strong House candidate in 2004, or a promising candidate for lieutenant governor or state treasurer in 2006.

During his two years at the White House, Glenn amazed his colleagues with his ability to focus on minority housing by day, then stay in touch with Hollywood celebrities on weekend. He would show up early at the White House after networking late into the night at places like Cafe Milano and the Daily Grill. A going-away dinner at Morton's drew a who's who of conservatives from Capitol Hill and throughout the administration. "He never stopped running," one White House official said. "We love Dylan."

Glenn will be Perdue's deputy chief of staff for external affairs, overseeing intergovernmental operations and public liaison activities. Happily for his political ambitions, the job will involve traveling throughout the state and staying in touch with interest groups and activists.

Glenn acknowledged that the GOP has a long way to go to make any measurable headway among black voters.

"The Republican National Committee has had an office of outreach since I was a little boy. We've just not been able to get it done," he said. "The one thing the party has in its favor is the fact that younger African-Americans, in particular, are looking for something more than the rhetoric that they've been getting from the Democratic Party."

Judgeship impasse could end
Sens. Dole, Edwards discuss cooperating to place North Carolinian on appeals court
JIM MORRILL
Staff Writer

North Carolina's two U.S. senators say they're working together to do what hasn't been done in 22 years -- put a North Carolinian on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Years of partisan wrangling have left the state without a representative on the Richmond-based court, one step below the U.S. Supreme Court.

In recent years Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic Sen. John Edwards blocked each other's candidates to the bench.

The 4th Circuit covers Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the Carolinas. Every state but North Carolina has at least two judges on the bench.

Now Edwards and Helms' successor, Republican Elizabeth Dole, are trying to avoid a similar impasse. Both they and their staffs have talked about the need to fill judicial vacancies.

"They both seem to share a desire to move forward on the judicial nomination process," Dole spokeswoman Mary Brown Brewer said Friday. Edwards' spokesman sounded a similar note. "There's great promise that they can both cooperate on a way that would help get North Carolinians on the bench," said Mike Briggs. "The senator is very optimistic." Their first test will come soon.

On Tuesday President Bush renominated Terrence Boyle of Edenton, chief judge of the District Court for Eastern North Carolina and a one-time aide to Helms. It was the fourth time the 57-year-old jurist has been tapped

In 1991 he was nominated by Bush's father. Democrats who then controlled the Senate refused to hold a hearing on the nomination. Helms went on to block all of President Clinton's N.C. nominees to the 4th Circuit. Edwards killed Boyle's 2001 nomination by the current President Bush.

As a result, no North Carolinian has taken a seat on the court since the late Sam Ervin III in 1980.

The 4th Circuit has three vacancies. Nationwide there are 25 openings among the 179 appeals court seats. With the Supreme Court deciding fewer cases each year, appeals courts increasingly have the final word on many cases.

Most of the 4th Circuit's 12 current judges are generally regarded as conservative. Briggs said if Bush nominates another North Carolinian who offers ideological balance, "that would be the appropriate time (for Edwards) to take another look at the Boyle nomination."

During her campaign, Dole urged a quick hearing for Boyle, saying the 4th Circuit faced a "judicial emergency." The week after she was elected in November, Dole discussed judicial nominations with Edwards during a visit to his office. Their staffs have since held discussions on the subject.

And Brewer says Dole is still weighing a proposal Edwards made in a letter, in which he asked her to consider a recommendation from the N.C. Bar Association.

Last year the bar proposed a bipartisan nominating commission, with three members chosen by each senator. For each court vacancy, the commission would nominate three candidates from among whom the president would be urged to choose.

"It seemed to me to be a proposal that had tremendous common sense to it," said Hank Van Hoy of Mocksville, the bar association's immediate past president. "It essentially removed politics from the issue. ... Then you end this logjam and you get rid of this tit-for-tat game that's being played now."

The 4th Circuit has three vacancies. Nationwide there are 25 openings among the 179 appeals court seats. With the Supreme Court deciding fewer cases each year, appeals courts increasingly have the final word on many cases.

Most of the 4th Circuit's 12 current judges are generally regarded as conservative. Briggs said if Bush nominates another North Carolinian who offers ideological balance, "that would be the appropriate time (for Edwards) to take another look at the Boyle nomination."

During her campaign, Dole urged a quick hearing for Boyle, saying the 4th Circuit faced a "judicial emergency." The week after she was elected in November, Dole discussed judicial nominations with Edwards during a visit to his office. Their staffs have since held discussions on the subject.

And Brewer says Dole is still weighing a proposal Edwards made in a letter, in which he asked her to consider a recommendation from the N.C. Bar Association.

Last year the bar proposed a bipartisan nominating commission, with three members chosen by each senator. For each court vacancy, the commission would nominate three candidates from among whom the president would be urged to choose.

"It seemed to me to be a proposal that had tremendous common sense to it," said Hank Van Hoy of Mocksville, the bar association's immediate past president. "It essentially removed politics from the issue. ... Then you end this logjam and you get rid of this tit-for-tat game that's being played now."

OK - I know you thought you'd heard all the requests...

Josh wonders if it is possible to download all of his Lotus emails onto a disk (or multiple disks or a CD) so that he can have them.; I don't know if this is possible, or what kind of time delay this will make for his

Ruben will drive to San Jose (prefers this airport over San Francisco because of early morning departure delays w/fog this time of year)

San Jose to John Wayne Airport (paid by New Majority) $109.00- credit card

John Wayne to LAX (UCLA official IGA event) back to DC paid by WH $490.00

There will also be a demonstration in Columbus for those not going to DC but who are interested in some kind of participation. SEE THE ITINERARY BELOW!

At this time there is a small amount of money available to assist with overnight accomodations. We aren't sure how this will be arranged yet. PA services must be arranged and provided by each individual themselves. Please let Sue Hetrick know if you are interested in taking the trip to DC or in a demonstration in Columbus.

Hi there. The rest of the alumni board has signed off on your talk and topic and think it will be a hit. If you have a moment to see what date works for you (2/19, 2/25 or 2/26), and have a quick look at the flyer, we'll send it to Yale for mailing to all the D.C. alums. If at all possible, we should get it up to them before COB Friday. Feel free to call if you have any questions, and thank you again for taking your time to participate in our alumni event.

If there is anyone on planet earth who never has to apologize to me for anything, it is you, my friend.

Yesterday was utterly wild.

I just want to make sure I am doing what you need me to do from the coalitions end, and I want to make sure I am in the loop on the targets and teleconferences.

Email conveys harshers attitudes; if I did, I am the one who should apologize. I intended neither. Great working with you.

Warmly

Bennett just clearly opened the door on the floor to a possible viewing of DoJ docs. He essentially said to Durbin, if I go press case w/Admin to let you view docs, will you give us UC for up or down vote? Wendy, you need to send clear message to Mitch that this isn't the track we want them headed down (unless it is... but I assume that's not the case, Brett?).

Until you have a more updated draft. So just send that when you have it and she'll do a once-over.

Also, the Hill is rabid for a one pager that parses the differences in the doc requests/productions in the cases the Dems listed. I told Wendy to go to Jamie/DoJ to see if OLP can produce given your necessary focus on the letter. They know they'll have the letter soon, but they want "talkers" -- you have to spoon-feed this folks.... Let me know if you have a problem with that. Thanks!

Suggest we ask Frist to circulate via leadership email lists( better to do it that way since he's cc'd on it. I can handle that if you email to me. Also, would you make sure you fax copies to 228-1475 (Wendy) and 456-6468 to my attn?

The President has a great team serving him and our Nation. I wish you all my very best.

Stuart

CITY OF CUYAHOGA FALLS v. BUCKEYE CMTY. HOPE FOUND., No. 01-1269
(U.S.S.C. March 25, 2003)

A city did not violate the Equal Protection Clause by submitting a facially-neutral referendum petition to voters, which called for repeal of a municipal housing ordinance authorizing construction of a low-income housing complex, absent a showing of racially discriminatory intent.

CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE, HABEAS CORPUS

WOODFORD v. GARCEAU, No. 01-1862 (U.S.S.C. March 25, 2003)
For purposes of application of amendments made to 28 U.S.C. ch. 153 by the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA), a case

As is tradition in this office, whenever an Associate Counsel leaves, everyone tries to ditch the bad parts of their portfolio on the incoming Counsel. We already have some trading going on, but we will entertain any other requests - subject to David Leitch's approval, of course.

Please let me know if you had any requests.

Thanks,
Patrick

This is not good,especially since she fudged on Mehlman's title.

I do not know if we will be able to go through with this event.

Let's cancel and reschedule and do this correctly. Anything Driscoll sends out, she needs to run by us for approval.

Counsel's office is also reviewing now.

I didn't get the job I interviewed for with McKinsey in Brussels, Belgium, but they are hiring 20-30 people. My read on them was that they prefer more recent MBAs that they can 'mold'. Websites are www.mckinsey.com, www.mckinsey.be (an EU spouse makes it easy to work anywhere in the EU). You can call the Belgian office at 011 32 2645 4194 and speak with Ingrid Dehaen. The interviews are in English, the cases are not really business cases, or even similar to their sample on the web, but I'm willing to discuss it with anybody. They are still a good launching pad for future CEOs since they have the reputation and the connections.

PROPERTY LAW & REAL ESTATE

BROWN v. LEGAL FOUND. OF WASHINGTON, No. 01-1325 (U.S.S.C. March 26, 2003)

A state law requiring client funds that could not otherwise generate net earnings for the client be deposited in an "interest on lawyers' trust account" is not a regulatory taking, but requiring that interest on those funds be transferred to a different owner for a legitimate public use could be a per se taking requiring payment of just compensation to the client in some cases.

Jeff Eisenach and Jim Miller of Howrey & Simon law firm have requested a meeting with Ken to discuss Garcia vs. Veneman. I believe it is a group of Hispanic farmers who are suing USDA due to discrimination. They believe it has political repercussions. Our reply brief is due next Friday, so the next week will be a tough one.
In order to make the most of it, I'm setting up another conference call for Monday at 11 am where everyone can share their thoughts with Andrew and Craig (and Sharon Swingle, who is going to be pitching in). My assistant, Chris Calvert, will be sending out a call-in number. We should be able to distribute at least a couple of the plaintiffs' three briefs by email tonight, and if everyone could at least look at them before the call, it would be most appreciated.

Karl Hascall, who is active in the Kent County GOP politics, owns a plane with his brother. It is a King Air B-100, 8 passenger plane. He has offered to fly Karl out and back to the Kent County Lincoln Day Dinner next Friday, April 4. Karl is a Special Guest of the event and will be making remarks. Is this acceptable and is there other information you need?

In light of the public interest in Grutter v. Bollinger and Gratz v. Bollinger, scheduled to be heard by the Court at 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. respectively on Tuesday, April 1, 2003, an audiotape of the U. S. Supreme Court oral arguments will be made available by the Court that day on an expedited basis shortly after the conclusion of both arguments at noon. Sources for the oral argument audiotape will be as follows:
An audiotape will be provided to the Network pool, which will in turn provide an offsite, simultaneous feed to member news organizations.

The audio will be made available in the House and Senate Radio and Television Galleries at the U. S. Capitol on Capitol Hill DA #9. Only press holding proper Congressional credentials will be allowed in the Galleries.

An on-site feed (mult-box) will be available on Maryland Avenue next to the Supreme Court. News organizations that are not part of the radio/TV pool systems may plug in at that location. Please note that on-site parking is not available.
Playback of the tapes will be provided as soon as possible following the conclusion of oral arguments, scheduled to end at noon. The audiotapes of both arguments will be played in their entirety one time only. Contact Rusty Lutz at ABC News at 202-222-7600 for more information.

Very good letter. No cc to Leahy, Levin, and Stabenow? I would consider cc'ing them, as the letter is sure to get out (we should want it to) and, when it does, they are sure to cry foul.

Brett -
I'd like to send out the email below from my PERSONAL account (i.e. the georgewbush account) to a number of folks at the White House who have expressed interest in Mark's Azalea Run (that charity event I run in honor of my friend who passed away). Recipients of this email would include friends like Brad Blakeman, Lezlee Westine, Brett Kavanaugh, etc...

your thoughts?

Dear Friends:

Thanks again to so many of you for your interest in Mark's Azalea Run: a 5K Race and One-mile Fun Run in honor of Mark Ferris, one of my best friends who died three years ago from a life-long battle against Juvenile Diabetes.

Last year, a number of you participated in the first annual Run and helped raise over $70,000: $35,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), and the rest for a scholarship fund in Mark's name at Landon School.

Subject: Opposition Briefs

Although plaintiffs represented to Judge Hellerstein that they would endeavor to submit only one brief this time, we have received 3 briefs in opposition of our motion to dismiss: a Joint Brief; a Supplemental Brief submitted on behalf of the Colaio plaintiffs; and a Supplemental Brief submitted on behalf of the Schneider plaintiffs. Attached is the Joint Brief and the Supplemental Colaio Brief. Notwithstanding our agreement among counsel to e-mail the briefs, the Schneider brief was faxed to us (they claimed a technical problem with their e-mail). Accordingly, I am sending a hard copy of that brief to Craig and Shannen by overnight delivery. I will also fax a copy of the Schneider Supplemental brief to anyone else who requests it.

Our papers were served and filed tonight without incident. I am sending hard copies of our final brief to Craig and Shannen (and, of course, to anyone else who requests a copy).

Have a great weekend.

Andrew

Brett -
I'd like to send out the email below from my PERSONAL account (i.e. the georgewbush account) to a number of folks at the White House who have expressed interest in Mark's Azalea Run (that charity event I run in honor of my friend who passed away). Recipients of this email would include friends like Brad Blakeman, Lezlee Westine, Brett Kavanaugh, etc...

your thoughts?

Dear Friends:

Thanks again to so many of you for your interest in Mark's Azalea Run: a 5K Race and One-mile Fun Run in honor of Mark Ferris, one of my best friends who died three years ago from a life-long battle against Juvenile Diabetes.

Last year, a number of you participated in the first annual Run and helped raise over $70,000: $35,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), and the rest for a scholarship fund in Mark's name at Landon School.

The second annual Mark's Run will take place at Landon on Sunday, May 4. With your help, this year's event will draw 500 runners and raise $100,000. Please take a moment and go to www.landon.net/race to sign up today!

By signing up, you'll help two great causes: JDRF - which since 1970 has been the world's largest private contributor to Diabetes research - and Landon's Scholarship Fund, which will allow a needy student to attend one of the area's best high-schools. You'll also help to remember a deeply beloved brother, classmate, and friend.

Mark was an amazing kid - someone whose friendship taught those around him that life is best measured not in its number of years, but in the depth of its humor, caring and patience. His spirit lives on through your participation in this event, so please sign up today. Again, just go to www.landon.net/race and click on "Register for Race."

Thanks for signing up, and I look forward to seeing you at Landon for the Run on Sunday, May 4!

Interesting stuff from the Campaign Financing case:

National Public Radio

Saturday, March 29 2003

Copyright, National Public Radio

John Ydstie: With the war dominating the headlines, politicians don't like to talk about it, but they can't afford to stop raising campaign money, and they're doing it this year under the provisions of the new McCain-Feingold campaign finance law. The law is only in place tentatively because many questions are being raised in the courts about its constitutionality. Indeed, within minutes of President Bush signing the act into law, its opponents filed a legal challenge. It was expected that by now, the case would be pending in the Supreme Court. It's not. NPR's Nina Totenberg is here to tell us why.

Nina, the law has a process for resolving these legal issues. What is it?

Nina Totenberg: Well, it's an expedited process. It provides for a three-judge court composed of one appeals court judge and two district court judges to look at the law initially, and then it goes directly to the Supreme Court. Now this case was heard in early December--on, I think, the 3rd and 4th of December--and at that time, the chief judge of the three-judge panel, Judge Karen Henderson, who's a court of appeals judge, indicated, volunteered in fact, that she expected a decision out of her court by the end of January. That obviously hasn't happened. Now this is a very complicated case. Still, to have it almost April and unresolved is quite extraordinary.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. And why haven't we gotten a ruling?

Totenberg: Well, initially, there was a lot of thought that this is just a very hard case. There's a record that's more than 50,000 pages long, more than two dozen provisions, but as the months have dragged on, my sources tell me it's become clear that part of the problem is, indeed, the collegiality, or lack of collegiality, between Judge Henderson, the court of appeals judge, and the two district court judges. Judge Henderson, I'm told, began drafting an opinion on her own before the case was argued, in fact before all the briefs were filed. And very important in these cases is what the lower court, that court, says is the statement of facts. That's what the Supreme Court's going to base its decision on factually. Well, when the two district court judges got a look at her statement of facts, my sources say, they were appalled. And even though they are very different ideologically--one of them is relatively liberal, one of them relatively conservative--they began working together feverishly to try to make a statement of facts that they could agree on because they found Judge Henderson's unacceptable and much of what Judge Henderson wrote unacceptable.

Relations between the district court judges and Judge Henderson are said to be pretty frosty at this point. The decision, when it comes out, I'm told will be almost a thousand pages long, when and if it comes out. And so we're in a bit of a legal mess here with the Supreme Court waiting.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. I don't want you to reveal your sources, but I presume it's not the judges that are talking about this.

Totenberg: No, let me make this very clear: None of the judges on this panel talked to me, but when there is this kind of holdup, there starts to be a leak in the normally sealed sieve at these courts. And I've talked to a lot of people about this who are very knowledgeable and I'm confident that this is a story at this point worth getting on the air.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. And time is of the essence because people want to raise campaign money.

Totenberg: Political Washington is getting pretty desperate because they don't know the rules of the game. Over at the Supreme Court, I think it's fair to say there is apparently even some annoyance because the court's coming to the end of the term. They're going to have to schedule this late in the term. This is, as I said, an extremely complex case. There are at least suspicions that one or more justices might want to retire this summer. So this is getting ugly.

Ydstie: Thanks, Nina.

Totenberg: Thank you, John.

Frist Taps Rawls As Chief Of Staff.

Roll Call (3/31, Kane) reports, "Turning to a trusted former adviser, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist (R-Tenn.) has hired a new chief of staff, Lee Rawls, who had served as Frist's senior adviser in the late 1990s and now is the top aide to FBI Director Robert Mueller." Rawls will "begin his new job April 28 after the spring recess, replacing outgoing Chief of Staff Mitch Bainwol, according to Republican sources." Bainwol's departure "was long expected, as he had already opened his own consulting and media relations firm after serving as Frist's executive director at the NRSC."

Interesting stuff from the Campaign Financing case:

National Public Radio
Saturday, March 29 2003
Copyright, National Public Radio

John Ydstie: With the war dominating the headlines, politicians don't like to talk about it, but they can't afford to stop raising campaign money, and they're doing it this year under the provisions of the new McCain-Feingold campaign finance law. The law is only in place tentatively because many questions are being raised in the courts about its constitutionality. Indeed, within minutes of President Bush signing the act into law, its opponents filed a legal challenge. It was expected that by now, the case would be pending in the Supreme Court. It's not. NPR's Nina Totenberg is here to tell us why.

Nina, the law has a process for resolving these legal issues. What is it?

Nina Totenberg: Well, it's an expedited process. It provides for a three-judge court composed of one appeals court judge and two district court judges to look at the law initially, and then it goes directly to the Supreme Court. Now this case was heard in early December--on, I think, the 3rd and 4th of December--and at that time, the chief judge of the three-judge panel, Judge Karen Henderson, who's a court of appeals judge, indicated, volunteered in fact, that she expected a decision out of her court by the end of January. That obviously hasn't happened. Now this is a very complicated case. Still, to have it almost April and unresolved is quite extraordinary.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. And why haven't we gotten a ruling?

Totenberg: Well, initially, there was a lot of thought that this is just a very hard case. There's a record that's more than 50,000 pages long, more than two dozen provisions, but as the months have dragged on, my sources tell me it's become clear that part of the problem is, indeed, the collegiality, or lack of collegiality, between Judge Henderson, the court of appeals judge, and the two district court judges. Judge Henderson, I'm told, began drafting an opinion on her own before the case was argued, in fact before all the briefs were filed. And very important in these cases is what the lower court, that court, says is the statement of facts. That's what the Supreme Court's going to base its decision on factually. Well, when the two district court judges got a look at her statement of facts, my sources say, they were appalled. And even though they are very different ideologically--one of them is relatively liberal, one of them relatively conservative--they began working together feverishly to try to make a statement of facts that they could agree on because they found Judge Henderson's unacceptable and much of what Judge Henderson wrote unacceptable.

Relations between the district court judges and Judge Henderson are said to be pretty frosty at this point. The decision, when it comes out, I'm told will be almost a thousand pages long, when and if it comes out. And so we're in a bit of a legal mess here with the Supreme Court waiting.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. I don't want you to reveal your sources, but I presume it's not the judges that are talking about this.

Totenberg: No, let me make this very clear: None of the judges on this panel talked to me, but when there is this kind of holdup, there starts to be a leak in the normally sealed sieve at these courts. And I've talked to a lot of people about this who are very knowledgeable and I'm confident that this is a story at this point worth getting on the air.

Ydstie: Mm-hmm. And time is of the essence because people want to raise campaign money.

Totenberg: Political Washington is getting pretty desperate because they don't know the rules of the game. Over at the Supreme Court, I think it's fair to say there is apparently even some annoyance because the court's coming to the end of the term. They're going to have to schedule this late in the term. This is, as I said, an extremely complex case. There are at least suspicions that one or more justices might want to retire this summer. So this is getting ugly.

Ydstie: Thanks, Nina.

Totenberg: Thank you, John.

Ydstie: NPR's Nina Totenberg.

Should we change "approved" to "positive" on blue slip chart on the web site.

Someone here thought that "approved" suggested that we need their approval, which is not our position of course. Semantics but probably makes sense.

Remarks of David G. Leitch
Deputy Counsel to the President
April 3, 2002
University of Chicago Federalist Society

It's a pleasure to be with you this afternoon. Before coming out to Chicago, I had the opportunity to scan your web page and to review the impressive list of speakers the Federalist Society has brought to the University during this academic year. I must say it's a rather impressive list; I'm not sure who cancelled on you that you ended up with me, but they definitely owe you. But here I am, so let's see if I can provide you with some insights from the Nation's capital, and to leave ample time for your questions and discussion.

Before I turn to those thoughts, however, I did want to note that this law school has been particularly good to the White House Counsel's office under President Bush and his Counsel Alberto Gonzales. From the earliest days of this Administration, Noel Francisco – a 1996 graduate of this institution – has faithfully served as an Associate Counsel to the President with great skill and dedication. Kyle Sampson, also from the class of 1996, began his service to the Administration in Presidential Personnel, and oversaw much of the selection of lawyers in the early days of the Bush term before moving to Counsel's office. And we recently added to our ranks Ted Ulyot, class of 1994, as another Associate Counsel, fresh from a stint as General Counsel of AOL Time Warner – Europe. Many thanks to this institution for training up these three fine lawyers.

Our office is also grateful to the Federalist Society for its contributions to the legal culture over the past 20 years. In earlier years, a note of thanks to the Society would have been very natural; now that the Society has become something of a bogeyman for attacks from the left, however, one approaches such a courtesy with some trepidation. Given what has been written about the Federalist Society in the past two years, one unfamiliar with its true purpose and contribution would probably be reluctant to venture anywhere near a meeting of such a dangerous organization bent on subverting our Constitutional system.

Fortunately, my experience with this organization is not limited to what I read in recent press, but comes first-hand from attending some of its meetings in DC, personal interaction with its leadership, and working with members of the Society in our office and elsewhere. In light of that experience, I'm happy to say thank you for continuing to contribute to and conduct the important debates concerning our legal system. While the views of individual members of the Federalist Society are always open to debate, it's hard for me to argue with the Society's stated goals – which place a premium on individual liberty, traditional values, and the rule of law.

Perhaps it will seem obvious, but I have to tell you what a thrill and a privilege it is to serve in the White House on a daily basis. Each day brings a wide variety of activity, accomplishments, pride, and emotion. I remain as awed by it today as the first day I entered the White House as a tourist -- and particularly more awed and humbled by being one of the fortunate few who actually work in the White House's West Wing. Because I know that even among this distinguished crowd many of you will never have the privilege of experiencing a visit to the White House first hand, I thought it would be worth taking some of my time today to share with you in some detail what it's like to have the West Wing as your place of employment.

In the Counsel's office, our day begins very early. I usually pass through the three gates necessary to reach my parking spot by around 6:30 each morning. At the first gate, I shut off my engine and open my trunk so that a bomb-sniffing dog can do its work. That activity, while somewhat routine by now, always serves as a reminder of the times in which we live, and the significance of the building in which I go to work each day.

While I was not at the White House on September 11, it doesn't take much of an imagination to picture the fear and horror that gripped that building on a day when terrorists targeted some of our most visible landmarks and centers of power. I can tell you that those who were in the building on that day forever changed their perspective on life and death, good and evil, and the war on terror. While Churchill famously described the experience of being shot at without result as exhilarating, it also has a way of focusing one's mind and effort. Certainly our President has demonstrated such focus and resolve against those who would target our nation. Having a dog sniff my car for bombs each morning is simply a small reminder of all that's changed in the last two years.

By the time I pass through the third gate each morning to park my car just a few yards from the entrance to the West Wing, however, I am routinely filled not with fear or caution but with awe and inspiration. The West Wing celebrated its 100th anniversary last year, and it boggles the mind to think that I go to work to serve the President each day in the place where so many of the defining moments of our history occurred – including those that gave rise to a resignation and an impeachment of two Presidents in the last three decades. Long before it was a popular TV show, the West Wing was emblazoned on the American mind as the symbolic and actual nerve center of Executive Power under our Constitutional system.

After parking my car, I enter the small ground floor lobby of the West Wing, passing by the latest photos of the President in action at the White House. These “jumbos” are produced as a result of the nearly constant presence of a photographer with the President. As if it weren’t obvious enough that working in the White House is a matter of history, one has little opportunity to forget that fact when every meeting in the Oval Office begins with a photographer snapping pictures. The best and most historic of these pictures are hung around the West Wing on a fairly current basis. For example, the first picture inside the door this week and last is a picture of the President, the Vice President, Chief of Staff Andy Card, and CIA Director George Tenet discussing the plans to conduct the first bombing raids on Iraq two weeks ago.

After moving through the lobby, one passes the White House Situation Room on the right. I’ve only attended a few meetings in that room, but again, one need only think for a moment to imagine the historic events that have occurred in that piece of real estate. Most recently, on the morning of March 19th, the President sat in the Situation Room in the basement of the White House surrounded by his war council: the Vice President, Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, CIA Director, Chief of Staff and National Security Advisor.

During that morning's meeting the President received a status briefing through video teleconferencing from the Commander of Central Command, General Tommy Franks, and the other area commanders in the Gulf Region. Each area commander gave a short briefing and announced his troops fit and ready to go.

The President asked each whether they had everything necessary to win the war in Iraq. To a man, the answer was yes. After everyone had briefed, the President turned to the largest of the half dozen television monitors and said, "Tommy, I have been fully briefed by the Secretary of Defense. For the sake of the peace of the world, and for the sake of the peace and freedom of the Iraqi people, I hereby give the order to execute Operation Iraqi Freedom."

Pausing, the President said with emotion, "Tommy, may God bless the troops." General Franks replied, "Mr. President, May God Bless America." Franks then smartly saluted the Commander in Chief. The President returned the salute, stood and left the situation room. And so began the latest effort to enforce disarm Saddam Hussein and to enforce the terms of the cease fire embodied in UN Resolution 687 – which coincidentally was passed by the Security Council 12 years ago today. That's only the latest of the many historic events that have occurred in the highly secure situation room.

From the situation room, the next floor up is the nerve center of the White House -- the Oval Office, the Roosevelt Room, the Cabinet Room, the Press Room, the Chief of Staff's Office, and the National Security Advisor's Office. I proceed to my office on the second floor -- usually by taking the stairs, which these days seems to be my only form of exercise. On the second floor, where I work, office space is occupied by Assistants and Deputy Assistants to the President responsible for Economic Policy, Domestic Policy, Communications, Presidential Personnel, and Legislative Affairs.

The White House Counsel's office has a small suite of three rooms in the West Wing, where Judge Gonzales and I work along with three assistants. The remainder of our attorneys and staff work in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building next door to the White House. Although the position of White House Counsel is not nearly as old as the West Wing itself, the office in which Judge Gonzales sits has been occupied by some leading luminaries of the Washington bar -- Fred Fielding, Abner Mikva, Lloyd Cutler, and Chuck Ruff -- and perhaps most famously, John Dean, President Nixon's lawyer during the Watergate era.

My office -- a compact 12 x 15 piece of prime real estate -- is just next door to that of the White House Counsel himself. While its occupants have for better or worse not gained the notoriety of their immediate superiors, the office was formerly occupied by Vince Foster, President Clinton's old friend from Arkansas who tragically took his own life after a short stint as Deputy White House Counsel.

It was as he departed from the very office in which I now work that Mr. Foster was last seen alive, and it was in that office that his now-famous suicide note was found. It was in that note he penned the bitter sentiment that summed up his six months in the Clinton Administration: “In this town ruining people is considered a sport.” That chilling assessment – written ten years ago in my office – is a sobering reminder of the pressures and demands of the job; it’s certainly not all excitement and glamour. Knowing the very real costs that some have paid to hold this position, I pray each day as I enter the office for God’s grace, wisdom, and humility.

My commute usually finds me in my office just before 7 am. Invariably, I find Judge Gonzales already there looking through five morning newspapers. The White House in general – including our office – is keenly aware of each day’s news stories both because of the need to respond to charges and allegations and to know the upcoming issues of the day.

On many days, Judge Gonzales heads down to the Oval Office just after 7 am to discuss issues and decisions with the President. As press reports have indicated, Judge Gonzales is remarkably close to the President, and the President places high value on the wise counsel he receives from his long-time friend and counselor. These two men have a long history together. In Texas, Gonzales served as General Counsel to Governor Bush for three years. He then served as Texas’ 100th Secretary of State from December 2, 1997 to January 10, 1999. Among his many duties as Secretary of State, Gonzales was a senior advisor to then Governor Bush, chief elections officer, and the Governor's lead liaison on Mexico and border issues. After serving as Secretary of State, he was appointed to the Texas Supreme Court in 1999. Upon his election in 2000, President Bush quickly tapped to Judge Gonzales come to Washington and serve as Counsel to the President, and Gonzales readily agreed to this exciting challenge.

By no means a Washington insider at the time of his appointment, Judge Gonzales has certainly proven to be the right man for the job. I did not know Judge Gonzales well when he asked me to come to the White House to serve as his deputy. Based on four months of working closely with him on a daily basis, however, I can say that it has indeed been a high privilege of my legal career to date. He is a phenomenal lawyer, a dedicated public servant, a wise counselor, and an incredibly decent man. He has been a staunch but fair defender of the President's prerogatives, a steady hand on difficult legal issues arising after the events of September 11, 2001, a fierce enforcer of ethical standards in the White House and among presidential appointees, and a wise overseer of the judicial selection process. Under Judge Gonzales' direction, our office is guided by two unwavering principles – strict adherence to the rule of law, and constant attention within the bounds of the law to the question: “What best serves the President?”

Under the direction of White House Chief of Staff Andy Card, senior staff of the White House gathers every morning at 7:30 in the Roosevelt Room, located across the hall from the Oval Office. I am privileged to attend those meetings when Judge Gonzales is unable for one reason or another to attend. Each meeting begins with Brad Blakeman, the President's scheduler, announcing the President's public schedule for that day.

Ari Fleischer then ticks off the headlines from newspapers around the country. Often he solicits guidance on how he should respond to a particular story if asked at his daily press briefings. We frequently follow up with Ari following the meeting to discuss particular questions he might receive concerning the legal basis for actions the Administration is taking, or legal positions it might be taking in court.

David Hobbs, the Legislative Director, reports on pending legislation and raises other issues of interest involving the Congress. Following David, we go around the table, reporting as necessary. Dr. Rice, for example, might discuss the latest issue involving events in Iraq. Admiral Abbot, the Acting Homeland Security Advisor might explain the latest homeland threat assessment.

Immediately afterwards, Judge Gonzales and I gather in his office with our staff of 12 lawyers. As you might imagine, the President of the United States is often able to attract the cream of legal talent, and this President is no exception. A reporter for the Washington Post once described the current collection of talent in the Counsel's Office as the best law firm in the country.

One of our lawyers is the designated ethics expert; she handles questions about the appropriate acceptance of gifts, financial disclosures, and conflicts of interest; another lawyer is a national security law expert who reports jointly to Dr. Rice and Judge Gonzales on all National Security legal issues, and yet another lawyer reports jointly to Admiral Abbott and the Judge on all legal matters related to Homeland Security.

Another lawyer on our staff serves as Clearance Counsel. He works with the FBI, IRS and other agencies doing the background checks on all White House employees and presidential appointees. No one is employed within the Executive Office of the President or is appointed by the President unless our office clears them for suitability.

The remaining eight lawyers on our staff handle all of the many other legal issues that we have to deal with in the White House, ranging from judicial selection to judicial interpretation of Administration policies, from presidential pardons to protection of presidential power.

After our 8:15 meetings, we begin the real work of the day. As you can imagine, this is quite an interesting time to be serving in the White House, to say the least. Since I was named Deputy Counsel to the President in early December, I've been involved in matters as noteworthy as the University of Michigan affirmative action case – argued earlier this week – treatment and confinement of enemy combatants in the war on terror, the legal basis for the war on Iraq, and the continuing battle over confirmation of the President's judicial nominees.

It is on this last issue that I'd like to share with you a few more detailed thoughts – particularly in light of the fact that your Professor Cass Sunstein, who is kind enough to join us here today, has recently written a rather provocative article in The American Prospect entitled “The Right Wing Assault.” The title – reminiscent of the former First Lady’s charge that claims her husband had an affair with an intern were fabricated by a “vast right wing conspiracy” – hints at the premise of the article that there has been afoot for the last quarter century (but only from the right) “a disciplined, carefully orchestrated and quite self-conscious effort . . . [to] radically transform[ ] the federal judiciary.”

I would submit respectfully that, like most conspiracy theories, this is quite an overstatement. As one who has participated in the process by which this President selects judges, I can tell you with certainty that it’s anything but a carefully-orchestrated or self-conscious effort to transform the federal judiciary. Instead, the process for selecting nominees is one designed to put excellent men and women from diverse backgrounds on the federal bench. And the men and women this President has nominated are a remarkably distinguished group of professionals committed to the rule of law and to our system of justice – not right-wing hacks or ideologues.

Working closely with Senators from both parties, for each vacancy on the federal judiciary, the Administration gathers suggestions of accomplished candidates who might fit the bill for a district or circuit court nomination. After engaging in some due diligence about the personal and professional qualifications of those suggested to us, our office – together with the Department of Justice – generally interviews three nominees for each vacancy. From my perspective, these interviews are surprisingly generalized and abstract. We do not ask nominees their views on particular legal or political issues; we do not ask nominees how they would rule on particular cases that might come before them; we do not ask nominees their views on cases that have been decided by the Supreme Court or other federal courts; we do not ask nominees to share with us advice they have given their clients; we do not ask nominees to name cases with which they disagree.

Instead, in our interviews, we seek to gather information about the legal qualifications and personal attributes of the person before us. We ask candidates about their experience as litigators, law professors, prosecutors, and the like; we ask them to describe for us what they think is important in a judge, and to tell us what attributes they possess that they believe would make them a good judge; we ask them whether they would feel obligated to follow controlling precedent; and we ask them what kind of person they are. For each nominee, we also ask a traditional series of probing and personal questions, about their background and personal conduct – including questions about past drug use, arrests, payment of taxes, and the like.

Collectively, these questions give us a good idea of the kind of person we have before us, and of what kind of judge they would be. But the interviews are neither designed nor likely to lead to the type of information that would allow us to orchestrate Professor Sunstein's so-called Right Wing Assault.

Nor do the results of our process – the men and women the President has actually nominated – provide evidence of a Right Wing Assault on the judiciary. The President announced his first nominations on May 9, 2001, sending to the Senate a diverse group of 11 court of appeals nominees. The group included three women, two African American nominees, and an Hispanic. Two of the 11 were Democrats. And for the first time in history, a President nominated someone who had previously been nominated by a President of a different party but not confirmed. And Judge Roger Gregory today sits with life tenure as the first African American member of the Fourth Circuit.

But I'm not here today to defend every action taken by Republicans in the White House or the Senate with respect to the judicial nominees over the past quarter century. As both the President and Judge Gonzales have said, we fully recognize that some of President Clinton's nominees to the Circuit Courts received unfortunate treatment at the hands of the Senate. And, I'm quick to add, it's also true that some of the first President Bush's nominees were equally mistreated by the Senate in the early 1990s.

I've seen examples of each first hand. Indeed, among my fellow Rehnquist clerks and partners in practice were Allen Snyder – nominated by President Clinton to the DC Circuit yet never receiving a committee vote – and John Roberts – a preeminent appellate lawyer first nominated to the DC Circuit in 1992, and re-nominated in 2001 and again in 2003, who only this year received his first hearing and committee vote, and whose nomination still has not been brought up on the floor of the Senate.

And of course, anyone who follows these matters is well aware by now of the ongoing filibuster by some Senate Democrats against Miguel Estrada's nomination to the D.C. Circuit. It's really difficult to dispute, by any historical measure, that Estrada is well-qualified to serve on the Court. He is a distinguished appellate practitioner, having argued 15 cases in the US Supreme Court. He is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher. He served for 4 years in the Solicitor General's office, under both Republican and Democrat SG's. He has been a federal prosecutor, in the Southern District of New York, and clerked in both the Second Circuit and the Supreme Court. On the basis of all of this, the ABA's judicial review committee unanimously gave him its highest ranking – "well qualified."

Were a vote taken today on Estrada's nomination, he would receive at least 55 votes and would be confirmed. But those who oppose his nomination – arguing with little basis that they don't have enough information about him – have succeeded in blocking an up-or-down vote by using the Senate's procedural rules. Knowing they cannot win on the merits, they have opted to block the Senate's ability to fulfill its constitutional advice and consent responsibility.

As a graduate of Duke University and a college basketball fan, the actions of the Senate minority in this matter remind me – during this week of the Final Four – of a game I attended while a student at Duke. In February 1979, our arch-rival the University of North Carolina came to play at Cameron Indoor Stadium. Duke was ranked #1 in the country at the time, and Carolina had a team that was not up to its usual high standards.

After winning the opening tip, Carolina chose immediately to enter its fabled “four corners” offense – which was essentially a stall. Clearly, the UNC coaching staff had concluded that it could not win if it competed straight up with Duke on that day. Refusing even to take a shot, UNC simply passed the ball around from corner to corner on its offensive end of the court. Duke managed several steals during the 20 minutes of inaction, and the score at halftime was 7-0 Duke.

For long stretches during UNC’s first-half stall, the fans in the stands at Cameron shouted “we want basketball.” We recognized that Carolina’s actions – while well within the rules – were in effect a perversion of the game itself. And not long after this extreme example of the misuse of the rules to pervert the game, the NCAA introduced a shot clock, which prohibits teams that cannot compete from simply stalling the action.

The parallels to the Estrada confirmation are, I hope, obvious. Some Senate Democrats, like the UNC coaching staff, have determined that they cannot win the contest on the merits. Indeed, this much is certain – there is no doubt in anyone’s mind that Miguel Estrada would be confirmed if the Senate would hold an up-or-down vote on his nomination. Taking advantage of current rules that permit them to avoid the contest, these members of the Senate have, like the Carolina basketball team, chosen to do just that.

The question then, is whether there is a way out of this conundrum. Those that governed college basketball responded to stalling tactics by adopting rules that force the action.

And in the context of judicial confirmations, there is a ready rule-based solution that all should find fair and acceptable.

Last year, in fact, the President proposed a series of procedures that we believe would permit fair debate – and resolution – of judicial nominations. These procedures would apply no matter which party controls the White House or the Senate.

In brief, the President proposed that: (1) upon receiving notice of a federal court vacancy or intended retirement, Presidents should submit a nomination to the Senate within 180 days; (2) the Senate Judiciary Committee should hold a hearing within 90 days of receiving a nomination; and (3) the full Senate should hold an up-or-down floor vote within 180 days of receiving a judicial nomination. Adoption of these common sense rules would permit ample time for consideration of nominees and would ensure that both the President and the Senate fulfill their constitutional responsibilities to fill vacancies in our judiciary rather than engage in extended debates about whether or not to have a vote on a particular nominee.

Both the White House and the Senators will win some and lose some under these proposals, but there will be resolution and progress. In the President's view, both the process and the American people – not to mention the judiciary itself – would come out as winners if these fair procedures were adopted. The current system is obviously broken, and the President has proposed a fair and workable solution. And he is living up to his part of the proposed bargain by nominating candidates to the bench within 180 days of the vacancy or of learning of the vacancy. It would be a vast improvement for all concerned if the Senate would follow suit and agree to hold hearings and votes in timely fashion.

What's more, predicting the outcome of any competition – if that's what this is – is always a dicey proposition. After stalling for the first half of its game with Duke back in 1979, UNC emerged from the locker room and played straight up in the second half, without stalling. Scoring in the second half was 40-40, giving Duke a 7 point margin of victory based on the cushion it had built up in the first half. Perhaps Carolina returned to Chapel Hill that night wondering if it could have prevailed by simply playing basketball.

And just maybe Senators of both parties should wonder if, in the long run, they'd be better off regularizing the procedures and permitting hearings and up or down votes on all judicial nominees within a reasonable period of time. While we recognize that the Senate is of course fully empowered under Article I to “determine the Rules of its Proceedings,” I respectfully submit that the Senate itself, the judiciary, the executive, and the nation itself would be well served to adopt the President's proposal.

The Democrats, Big Plan

They don't want to stop a few Bush judges. They want to stop them all.

lthough much attention has been paid to the filibuster of appeals-court nominee Miguel Estrada * just Wednesday, Republicans made yet another unsuccessful attempt to break the Democratic blockade on his nomination * there is in fact a far larger story taking shape, one that has gone mostly unreported in the press. Using a variety of complicated parliamentary techniques that attract little public notice, Democrats are now blocking nearly every Bush nominee to the federal circuit courts of appeals. Their actions suggest that party strategists have abandoned an earlier plan to stop a few, carefully selected Bush nominees. Now, they want to stop them all.

Since the new Senate convened in January, the president has nominated 19 candidates for the courts of appeals. At this moment, twelve of those nominees are being held up by Democratic opposition. Most of the rest are new nominations that haven't yet had time to be blocked. Just two have been confirmed.

Estrada is, of course, caught in a filibuster. Fifth Circuit nominee Priscilla Owen, recently approved by the Judiciary Committee, is in pre-filibuster limbo. So is fellow Fifth Circuit nominee Charles Pickering, who has yet to come up for a new vote in the committee. Jeffrey Sutton and Deborah Cook, of the Sixth Circuit, and John Roberts, of the D.C. Circuit, are still awaiting floor votes after Democrats refused to allot time to debate their nominations. (In addition, Sutton has had a hold placed on his nomination by Democrat Tom Harkin, while Cook and Roberts are also under Democratic holds). Sixth Circuit nominees Richard Griffin, David McKeague, Susan Bieke Neilson, and Henry Saad have all been stopped by procedural tactics * the so-called "blue slip" * used by Michigan's two Democratic senators, Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow. Fourth Circuit Terrence Boyle has been blocked by North Carolina Democrat John Edwards. And the nomination of the Ninth Circuit's Carolyn Kuhl, who had a hearing on Tuesday, appears headed for a protracted fight over the opposition of California's Barbara Boxer.

Together, that makes twelve nominees paralyzed by Democratic opposition. Of the rest of the 19 Bush circuit-court nominees, five * Richard Wesley for the Second Circuit, Michael Chertoff for the Third Circuit, Edward Prado for the Fifth Circuit, Steven Colloton for the Eighth Circuit, and Consuelo Callahan for the Ninth Circuit * were nominated for the first time this year (most of them in March), meaning they have not had time to go through the process (or to develop serious Democratic opposition). Two nominees * Timothy Tymkovich of the Tenth Circuit and Jay Bybee of the Ninth * have been confirmed, Tymkovich nearly two years after his nomination.

In the cases that are currently blocked, some involve substantive issues * for example, a candidate who is thought to be insufficiently faithful to Roe v. Wade or "insensitive" to minority rights * while others are hung up on procedural objections. In one instance, Democrats are blocking three nominees (Sutton, Cook, and Roberts) because party leaders are angry at Judiciary Committee chairman Orrin Hatch for considering them all in one hearing instead of separate sessions. In another instance, Democrats are objecting to a nominee (Kuhl) because they say Republicans have given too little deference to blue-slip issues. In another (Estrada), Democrats say they haven't been given enough information to make a decision.

"This is an indication of what a determined minority can do in the Senate," says one Republican. "I wouldn't go so far as to say we're flummoxed, but we are dealing with a very obstructionist minority in the best way we can."

Responding to charges of obstruction, Democrats say that it was Republicans who practiced wholesale obstruction of judicial nominees when they controlled the Senate during the last six years of the Clinton administration. But by any measure, Democrats have blocked more Bush appeals-court nominees than were blocked by Republicans in even the worst of the Clinton years, when relations between the parties were poisoned by scandal and impeachment.

Of course, at that time, some in the GOP were advocating wholesale obstruction. But party leaders rejected the idea. "This is something Republicans could have done during the Clinton administration, but there were a lot of [Republicans] who wouldn't go that far, who for reasons of comity and the sake of the process refused to do it," says one party aide. But now, GOP leaders face those very obstructionist tactics from Democrats and are growing increasingly frustrated. Republicans control the Senate, albeit narrowly, and party leaders and activists believe they ought to be able to confirm the president's judicial nominations. But Senate rules give the minority party substantial power, and the only thing that would discourage them from using that power would be negative public opinion * that is, if there were a real political price to be paid for their actions. So far, however, most of the judicial battles have drawn little attention. Some of the reasons for that are obvious: there are lots of other things happening in the world. But many of the blocked judicial nominations involve arcane rules that would not make the front page even on a slow news day.

For example, Levin's and Stabenow's move to kill a bloc of four circuit court nominees * an astonishingly bold act * has received almost no attention (See "Much More Democratic Obstruction"). It seems unreasonable to suggest that Levin and Stabenow could be pressured to back away without public opposition, yet it is difficult for the public to oppose what it doesn't know. So the four judges remain blocked.

It is not clear whether the new Democratic across-the-board blockade will ultimately succeed (although it is certainly succeeding at the moment). And it is true that the White House has other things to worry about now. But if the president wants to place judges on the federal courts of appeals, he will eventually have to engage Democrats in political battle * the only thing that can break the current stalemate.

The Democrats' Big Plan

They don't want to stop a few Bush judges. They want to stop them all.

Although much attention has been paid to the filibuster of appeals-court nominee Miguel Estrada — just Wednesday, Republicans made yet another unsuccessful attempt to break the Democratic blockade on his nomination — there is in fact a far larger story taking shape, one that has gone mostly unreported in the press. Using a variety of complicated parliamentary techniques that attract little public notice, Democrats are now blocking nearly every Bush nominee to the federal circuit courts of appeals. Their actions suggest that party strategists have abandoned an earlier plan to stop a few, carefully selected Bush nominees. Now, they want to stop them all.

Since the new Senate convened in January, the president has nominated 19 candidates for the courts of appeals. At this moment, twelve of those nominees are being held up by Democratic opposition. Most of the rest are new nominations that haven't yet had time to be blocked. Just two have been confirmed.

Estrada is, of course, caught in a filibuster. Fifth Circuit nominee Priscilla Owen, recently approved by the Judiciary Committee, is in pre-filibuster limbo. So is fellow Fifth Circuit nominee Charles Pickering, who has yet to come up for a new vote in the committee. Jeffrey Sutton and Deborah Cook, of the Sixth Circuit, and John Roberts, of the D.C. Circuit, are still awaiting floor votes after Democrats refused to allot time to debate their nominations. (In addition, Sutton has had a hold placed on his nomination by Democrat Tom Harkin, while Cook and Roberts are also under Democratic holds). Sixth Circuit nominees Richard Griffin, David McKeague, Susan Bieke Neilson, and Henry Saad have all been stopped by procedural tactics — the so-called "blue slip" — used by Michigan's two Democratic senators, Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow. Fourth Circuit Terrence Boyle has been blocked by North Carolina Democrat John Edwards. And the nomination of the Ninth Circuit's Carolyn Kuhl, who had a hearing on Tuesday, appears headed for a protracted fight over the opposition of California's Barbara Boxer.

Together, that makes twelve nominees paralyzed by Democratic opposition. We have no objection to the new presidential e-mail system that I reviewed provided that:

1. Senior Staff approves.
2. The entire piece of the system that allowed users to fill out and submit hardship case forms is removed.
3. I assume Adam has reviewed for OA.

The White House is exempt from the Privacy Act.

(Bob -- one other note -- probably more for Desiree than you, but in any event -- I don't know the plans for the vice president. I understand that this "beta" system will only handle president@whitehouse.gov. Any system involving changes to vice.president@whitehouse.gov should be reviewed by David Addington.)

Subject: FW: PERS Approval

Hi Ben, Bob Blake from OA here. I was with Desiree Sayle as part of the PERS demonstration. As part of my check list, I need approval from you (email is sufficient) that from a GC stand point, we are approved to go forward with putting PERS on-line following senior staff approval.

Also, the question came up on if the White House is exempt from the Privacy Act. This is in regards to our gathering of the DOB for Birthday and Baby's Birth greetings.

Thanks.

Michael Kelly, R.I.P.

Those of us who believe that politics should stand on a foundation of sound morality lost a friend last Friday. Widely admired Washington Post syndicated columnist Michael Kelly, 46, died in Iraq while traveling with the Third Infantry Division when the vehicle he was riding in crashed into a canal. Mr. Kelly distinguished himself, first as a reporter in the first Persian Gulf War and later as editor of The New Republic and The Atlantic. His unrelenting criticism of Bill Clinton's moral failings eventually resulted in his firing from the liberal-leaning New Republic. Although he was not what one would call a "movement conservative," it was clear Mr. Kelly was on a political pilgrimage that was taking him in an increasingly conservative direction. Although as The Atlantic's editor-at-large he did not have to go to Iraq, Mr. Kelly believed deeply that Operation Iraqi Freedom was a just war and he wanted to report firsthand on the liberation of that beleaguered country. He was a true champion of values-based politics and a devoted family man who leaves behind a wife and two young sons. The weekend also brought the sad news of the death in Iraq of NBC's David Bloom, 39, another widely admired reporter, and someone by whom we have been interviewed right here at FRC headquarters. Mr.

Bloom leaves a wife and three daughters. Please keep the Kelly and Bloom families in your prayers, along with the families of all those who have been injured, are missing or captured, and who have lost their lives in service to our nation.

Democrats Declare War on the Constitution

The Republican majority has been back in control of the Senate for three months now and just two appeals court judges have been confirmed. Count them - two! Seventeen more remain stalled, lost in the limbo of the Democrats' obstructionism. Some nominees, such as Miguel Estrada, have been waiting more than 700 days for an up-or-down confirmation vote. This situation is unprecedented. Never in our nation's history has the minority party in the Senate undertaken to block virtually all of a president's appeals court nominees. Under the Senate's archaic, undemocratic rules, a determined minority of 41 senators can stop action on anything, since it takes 60 votes to cut off debate. The Democrats have decided to obstruct, delay, block, and filibuster almost all of President Bush's nominees to the federal appeals court. This represents a total politicization of the Senate's constitutional duties and a partisan political effort to deny the president his power under the Constitution to appoint federal judges. The Democrats, egged on by radical leftist special-interest groups, are getting away with this outrage because the nation's attention is understandably focused on the war in Iraq and not on judicial confirmations. Make no mistake about it, however, this is a frontal assault on the Constitution. In their effort to deny the president the fruits of his election, the Democrats, in effect, have declared war on the Constitution.

Witherspoon Lecture

You are invited to come hear acclaimed author Quentin J. Schultze at a Witherspoon Lecture at FRC this Friday at 11 a.m. Speaking on "Technology and Moral Turmoil: Virtue, Democracy, and Faith in the Information Age," Schultze will explore the potential pitfalls of the new cyber-era and discuss the crucial importance of voluntary religious associations for cultivating personal and public virtue in the face of information overload, radical individualism, and uncivil public rhetoric through all of the media. Please R.S.V.P. to witherspoonlectures@frc.org or call (202) 393-2100. If you can't make it, listen live at www.frc.org.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

VIRGINIA v. BLACK, No. 01-1107 (U.S.S.C. April 07, 2003)
Consistent with the First Amendment, a state may ban cross-burning carried out with the intent to intimidate, but a Virginia statute provision treating any cross burning as prima facie evidence of an intent to intimidate renders that statute unconstitutional.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, INJURY AND TORT LAW, INSURANCE LAW, REMEDIES

STATE FARM MUT. AUTO. INS. CO. v. CAMPBELL, No. 01-1289 (U.S.S.C. April 07, 2003)

A punitive damages award of $145 million, where full compensatory damages are $1 million, is excessive and violates the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, after findings of an insurer's fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/011289.html>

CONTRACTS, DISPUTE RESOLUTION & ARBITRATION, HEALTH LAW, INJURY AND TORT LAW, REMEDIES

PACIFICARE HEALTH SYS., INC. v. BOOK, No. 02-215 (U.S.S.C. April 07, 2003)

Physicians' claims that managed-health-care organizations violated the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) can be compelled to arbitration. Questions as to remedial provisions in an arbitration agreement and availability of RICO treble damages are premature.

Some of the reaction to Pryor:

1. Article from Mobile Register: Refers to WH Contacts list and the support of "stalwart" Democrats (we have letters of support from Beasley and another trial lawyer firm):

The payoff is evident in the list of references that the White House routinely provides for federal court nominees. It includes such stalwart Democrats as Alabama Criminal Appeals Court Judge Sue Bell Cobb (an integral player on the children's legislation), former U.S. Attorney Doug Jones of Birmingham and Joe Reed, the chairman of the Alabama Democratic Conference, the state's pre-eminent black political caucus.

"I don't see him as any kind of crusader, but I do see him as a fair person and that's what we need on the bench," Reed said Wednesday, adding that he was prepared to testify on Pryor's behalf.

Another surprise supporter is Montgomery trial lawyer Jere Beasley, a former Democratic lieutenant governor who in the past has lampooned Pryor as "Little Joe Camel" for his stance on tobacco litigation.

While acknowledging disagreements on issues, "personally I have respect for the guy," Beasley said Wednesday.

President Bush nominates Bill Pryor for federal judgeship Alabama attorney general hailed by Republicans but could face tough battle for Senate approval

By SEAN REILLY

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON -- With promises of support from across Alabama's political spectrum and the possibility of fierce opposition inside Washington's Beltway, President Bush formally nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor for a seat on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

The move, announced Wednesday, had been expected since January, when U.S. Sen. Jeff Sessions acknowledged that the White House was considering Pryor for the post. Republicans were quick to pour on the accolades.

"He is one of the most exceptional lawyers I've ever met," Sessions, R-Mobile, said in a conference call with reporters shortly after the nomination was announced. "He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law; he does what he believes is the legally correct thing regardless of political pressure."

In a statement, Pryor said he was honored and looked forward to the Senate confirmation process. A spokeswoman said he would have no further comment.

For the 40-year-old Mobile native, the nomination represents the next rung in an impressively rapid political climb, which some speculate is ultimately aimed at a seat on the U.S. Supreme Court.

For the moment, though, what lies ahead is a possibly grueling, hard-nosed fight to win Senate approval for the appeals court seat.

"Many of Bush's appellate court nominees have troubling records on a handful of issues," said Nan Aron, president of the Alliance for Justice, a Washington, D.C.-based coalition of liberal advocacy groups. "With Pryor's record there is something to offend virtually every constituency in the country."

A hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee hasn't been scheduled yet, but Sessions predicted the entire process would take months. If Pryor does win confirmation, Republican Gov. Bob Riley would have to appoint a successor to fill out the balance of Pryor's term as attorney general, which ends in 2007.

Federal judicial nominations have become increasingly politicized over the last two decades, as Republicans and Democrats accuse each other of putting ideology ahead of merit. Although several experts said the odds favor Pryor's eventual confirmation, "his record will be gone over with a fine-toothed comb," said Sheldon Goldman, a University of Massachusetts-Amherst political scientist and an authority on the judicial selection process.

And there's plenty to go over. On the grounds that they need more information about his views, Democrats have been stalling the nomination of another appellate court nominee, Miguel Estrada, for more than a month now.

No such difficulties loom in evaluating Pryor, who has staked out intensely held and sometimes controversial positions covering a gamut of issues. Within hours of his nomination, potential opponents were urging the Senate to give that record a long hard look.

On the touchstone issue of abortion, for example, Pryor has made no secret of his unflinching opposition to the practice.

In a prepared statement, Aron cited his 1997 declaration that the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion was "the day seven members of our high court ripped the Constitution and ripped out the life of millions of unborn children."

Critics have accused him of going soft on corporations that are major sources of GOP campaign cash. In the late 1990s, even some Republicans questioned his refusal to sue major tobacco companies to recover the cost to taxpayers of treating smoking-related illness. Pryor maintained that the issue properly belonged in the Legislature. Once a national settlement was reached, however, he quickly agreed to Alabama's share, which totaled more than $3 billion.

Since then, he has angered disability rights advocates by taking a case to the U.S. Supreme Court that resulted in a decision barring state employees from suing for money damages under a federal disability discrimination law.

But Sessions insisted that Pryor would keep his personal views out of the courtroom.

In the day-to-day grind of state politics, the attorney general has sometimes shown a deft touch in crossing party lines.

When newly elected Gov. Don Siegelman, a Democrat, refused to endorse a constitutional amendment to repeal Alabama's ban on interracial marriage several years ago, Pryor promptly offered his backing for the measure.

More recently, his office has helped state Rep. Alvin Holmes, D-Montgomery, in drafting a bill to ban cross-burning. Pryor was also closely involved with a Democrat-led drive to pass a package of legislation to benefit disadvantaged and troubled children.

The payoff is evident in the list of references that the White House routinely provides for federal court nominees. It includes such stalwart Democrats as Alabama Criminal Appeals Court Judge Sue Bell Cobb (an integral player on the children's legislation), former U.S. Attorney Doug Jones of Birmingham and Joe Reed, the chairman of the Alabama Democratic Conference, the state's pre-eminent black political caucus.

"I don't see him as any kind of crusader, but I do see him as a fair person and that's what we need on the bench," Reed said Wednesday, adding that he was prepared to testify on Pryor's behalf.

Another surprise supporter is Montgomery trial lawyer Jere Beasley, a former Democratic lieutenant governor who in the past has lampooned Pryor as "Little Joe Camel" for his stance on tobacco litigation.

While acknowledging disagreements on issues, "personally I have respect for the guy," Beasley said Wednesday.

Michael Gerhardt, a law professor at the College of William & Mary in Virginia, said the array of home state support would be one factor in Pryor's favor. And because the 11th Circuit Court is already considered to lean Republican, Pryor would not be seen as someone who would tip the balance, Gerhardt said.

It also remains to be seen how strongly the Alliance for Justice and other advocacy groups choose to challenge Pryor's nomination. Those decisions, which will depend heavily upon political calculations, could come in the next few weeks.

Federal appellate court judges earn $164,000 annually and can serve for life if they want. Like other appellate courts, the 11th Circuit is one step below the U.S. Supreme Court; it hears appeals from Alabama, Florida and Georgia.

If confirmed, he would fill the seat vacant since 2000 when Emmett "Rip" Cox Jr., another Mobile Republican, took semi-retired status. Bush had originally nominated then-U.S. Magistrate Judge William Steele of Mobile for the seat in October 2001. After the Senate failed to act, however, Bush nominated Steele this January for a lower-ranking district judgeship, clearing the way to put Pryor on the appellate bench. Steele was recently confirmed.

Bob Riley's victory in last November's gubernatorial race meant that a fellow Republican would name Pryor's successor as attorney general. Otherwise, "I'm not sure Bill would have taken the position," Sessions said.

Bush nominates Pryor for federal appeals bench

MARY ORNDORFF

News Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON President Bush nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor on Wednesday for a federal appeals judgeship, a permanent post in Atlanta one step below the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the U.S. Senate confirms him for the seat a significant hurdle for several recent Bush judicial nominees Gov. Bob Riley would pick his successor in Montgomery.

For the 40-year-old Pryor, gaining a seat on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals would cap an early and rapid career climb through the legal and political ranks. He earned his law degree 16 years ago, was appointed attorney general 10 years later, and last year won re-election by the largest margin of any statewide officeholder.

"I am honored that President Bush has nominated me," Pryor said in a released statement. "I look forward to the confirmation process of the U.S. Senate."

As a protégé of Sen. Jeff Sessions, he'll have one key ally on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"Bill Pryor is one of the most exceptional lawyers I've ever met. He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law and he does what he believes is the legally correct thing, without regard to political pressure," said Sessions, who hired Pryor in 1995, when he was attorney general.

The White House, where Pryor has several like-minded lawyer friends, contacted Sessions and Sen. Richard Shelby late last year about its interest in finding Pryor a slot in the federal judiciary.

Pryor, a Mobile native, fits the pattern of Bush appointing judges with definite conservative bents, a desire to limit the reach of federal government and an aversion to court decisions that impede the power of legislators. He's been more aggressive than any other state attorney general in pressing cases before the U.S. Supreme Court, especially those allowing him to display his federalist beliefs.

"I think Bill Pryor is well-qualified. He's young, smart and conservative," Shelby said.

Not everyone is so complimentary. People for the American Way President Ralph Neas said Pryor's nomination was "an unfortunate continuation of this administration's efforts to pack the appeals courts with divisive far-right nominees."

A spokeswoman for the top Democrat on the judiciary committee, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said his office was still reviewing Pryor's record but expected to hear from groups opposed to his nomination.

Opponents have begun digging through the volumes of Pryor's published work. Unlike some nominees who have limited public records to reveal their political leanings, Pryor's could hardly be more clear. He's weighed in on most major social and legal issues of the day, giving Democrats and liberal-leaning organizations plenty of ammunition.

Opposed tobacco suits:

He opposed the multi-state lawsuit against the tobacco companies, and he advocated giving utility companies more freedom to upgrade their coal-fired power plants without being forced to add pollution control devices. He's a Catholic who opposes abortion and supports the death penalty, and he has helped write rules that provide fewer automatic appeals of death cases. He has supported the right to student-led prayer in public schools and defended gun ownership as a Second Amendment right. Democrats and Republicans agree he's likely to be challenged most forcefully on his record opposing abortion and the Supreme Court decision that makes it legal. Three years ago, for example, he told an anti-abortion rally that "our greatest right is the right to life."

"He is a vehement opponent of a woman's right to choose. He's gone beyond rhetorical opposition he's an anti-choice activist," said Elizabeth Cavendish, legal director of NARAL Pro-Choice America.

Sessions and others say Pryor's above-board opinions won't damage his confirmation chances because he's known to follow laws he doesn't like.

"Any objections they may have to any personal views Bill may have will be answered by a rock-solid record of applying the law as written, even if he didn't agree with it," Sessions said. "That's the chief quality of an appellate judge, in my view."

For example, Pryor angered some Republicans by supporting a limited partial birth abortion ban in the Alabama Legislature, which he said had a better chance of passing constitutional muster than a more restrictive proposal.

'Rule of law':

Pryor's friends say his dedication to the "rule of law" is paramount.

After his inauguration earlier this year, his campaign handed out hundreds of key-chain keepsakes with this quote from the state Constitution: "To the end that it may be a government of laws and not of men."

Americans United for Separation of Church and State, an organization battling Pryor over Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore's display of the Ten Commandments, is one of the groups that objects to his nomination.

"This is the kind of nominee that reveals the Bush administration's arrogance, quite frankly," said Jeremy Leaming, spokesman for the group. As proven by the Senate's rejection of Sessions as a judge several years ago, allegations of racial insensitivity can sink a nominee. So far, Pryor seems to have neutralized the issue with a letter of support from Joe Reed, chairman of the black wing of the Alabama Democratic Party. Pryor's defense of majority-minority voting districts backed by Democrats irritated Republicans at the time, but he went on to win the case. Pryor's confirmation hearing has not been scheduled. The American Bar Association will investigate his qualifications and report its findings to the committee, ranking him either qualified, well-qualified or not qualified. Pryor might have been nominated earlier, but there was a desire to wait for a Republican governor to be elected and appoint his replacement. "I'm sure that was a factor," Sessions said. The 11th Circuit court handles appeals from Alabama, Georgia and Florida. Pryor would replace Emmett Ripley Cox, an Alabama native.

Bush nominates Pryor to federal judgeship

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - President Bush on Wednesday nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor for a position on the federal appeals court in Atlanta.

Pryor, 40, was nominated for a judgeship on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which handles appeals from Alabama, Georgia and Florida and is one step below the U.S. Supreme Court.

Pryor said he was honored to receive the nomination.

"I look forward to the confirmation process," he said in a statement. "In the meantime, I will continue to strive, as attorney general, to represent the people of Alabama, with integrity, to the best of my ability by upholding the Constitution and laws of our nation and state."

U.S. Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., a former Alabama attorney general

whose own nomination for the federal bench was scuttled years ago by Senate Democrats, called Pryor "one of the most exceptional lawyers I've ever met."

"He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law," Sessions said Wednesday. "He does what he believes is the legally correct thing, regardless of political pressure."

Pryor, a Republican from Mobile, was appointed attorney general by Gov. Fob James and has twice won re-election, most recently last year.

The vacancy on the 11th Circuit was created when Emmett Ripley Cox, another Mobile Republican, announced in December 2000 he was stepping down from handling cases.

Pryor has a record as a conservative.

"Our greatest right is the right to life," Pryor said in a 2000 rally promoting restrictions on a woman's access to abortions in Alabama.

Pryor opposed the multistate lawsuit against tobacco companies, and he advocated giving utility companies more freedom to upgrade their coal-fired power plants without being forced to add pollution control devices.

Pryor also has defended Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy Moore's decision to prominently display the Ten Commandments in the state Judicial Building and helped write rules that provide fewer automatic appeals of death penalty cases.

Bush nominates Pryor to federal judgeship

By JEFFREY McMURRAY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor got a long-awaited appointment to the federal bench Wednesday, but it's unclear whether his experience in federal law will help or hinder the conservative in what could be a grueling Senate confirmation process.

Pryor's nomination to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which handles appellate cases for Alabama, Florida and Georgia, had been expected since January when Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., announced President Bush was eyeing him for the job.

Bush made the selection official Wednesday, and Pryor, 40, indicated in a brief statement he would accept.

"I look forward to the confirmation process of the U.S. Senate," said Pryor, a Republican who last November was elected to his second two-year term as the state's top judicial official. "In the meantime, I will continue to strive, as attorney general, to represent the people of Alabama with integrity, to the best of my ability, by upholding the Constitution and laws of our nation and state."

It could take months for Pryor's nomination to work its way through the confirmation process. The first step will likely be a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where Sessions occupies an influential post.

Sessions and Alabama's senior senator, Republican Richard Shelby, gave Pryor a ringing endorsement, but Sessions conceded Pryor's political activity and outspoken opposition to abortion rights could make him a target of liberals.

"The fact he has written and made speeches does mean the people out there trying to find a basis to object to nominees might find something," said Sessions, whose own nomination to the federal bench was scuttled by Democrats several years ago. "These people will comb through everything he's written and said."

If Pryor's nomination is challenged, it would likely be for entirely different reasons than the challenge against Bush's first pick for the job - William Steele.

Steele, a Mobile magistrate judge, never got a hearing on his 11th Circuit appointment after he encountered scrutiny for his handling of a racial bias case. Bush nominated Steele instead for a spot on Alabama's Southern District Court, and he encountered no opposition in his February confirmation hearing.

Sessions says Pryor is probably more suited for the appellate position, which is one step below the U.S. Supreme Court. The vacancy on the 11th Circuit was created when Emmett Ripley Cox, another Mobile Republican, announced in December 2000 he was stepping down from handling cases.

Yet some of the greatest strengths on Pryor's resume - his extensive writings on federal law and experience arguing cases before the Supreme Court - could ultimately work against him in the politically charged judicial process. Although it only takes a majority of the 100 senators to approve a nomination, it effectively requires 60 to end a filibuster and grant the nominee a floor vote.

Pryor's outspoken opposition to abortion, currently allowed under the Roe vs. Wade decision, could particularly make him a target of abortion rights supporters.

"Our greatest right is the right to life," Pryor said in a 2000 rally promoting restrictions on a woman's access to abortions in Alabama. Last year, he helped convince a federal judge not to halt implementation of a new Alabama law requiring physicians to talk with women about the risks of abortion at least 24 hours before performing the procedure.

Pryor also has argued against a lawsuit by two gay men and two lesbians who contend the state's restriction on sex acts between non-married adults violated their constitutional rights and prevented them from signing an apartment lease.

He has defended Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy Moore's decision to prominently display the Ten Commandments in the state Judicial Building and helped write rules that provide fewer automatic appeals of death penalty cases.

Pryor also opposed the multistate lawsuit against tobacco companies, and he advocated giving utility companies more freedom to upgrade their coal-fired power plants without being forced to add pollution control devices.

However, Sessions cited several examples from Pryor's career that should appeal to both sides of the political aisle, including Pryor's drive to erase the state's ban on interracial marriage and defense of majority-minority congressional districts.

"He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law," Sessions said. "He does what he believes is the legally correct thing, regardless of political pressure."

Pryor was first appointed as Alabama's attorney general in January 1997 when Sessions, his predecessor, was elected to the Senate. He graduated from Tulane Law School and was a law clerk for U.S. Circuit Court Judge John Minor Wisdom. He has experience in private practice in Birmingham and in 1995 was hired as Sessions' deputy attorney general in charge of special civil and constitutional litigation.

Bush nominates Pryor for federal appeals bench

If the U.S. Senate confirms him for the seat a significant hurdle for several recent Bush judicial nominees Gov. Bob Riley would pick his successor in Montgomery.

For example, Pryor angered some Republicans by supporting a limited partial birth abortion ban in the Alabama Legislature, which he said had a better chance of passing constitutional muster than a more restrictive proposal.

As proven by the Senate's rejection of Sessions as a judge several years ago, allegations of racial insensitivity can sink a nominee. So far, Pryor seems to have neutralized the issue with a letter of support from Joe Reed, chairman of the black wing of the Alabama Democratic Party. Pryor's defense of majority-minority voting districts backed by Democrats irritated Republicans at the time, but he went on to win the case. Pryor's confirmation hearing has not been scheduled. The American Bar Association will investigate his qualifications and report its findings to the committee, ranking him either qualified, well-qualified or not qualified.

Pryor might have been nominated earlier, but there was a desire to wait for a Republican governor to be elected and appoint his replacement. "I'm sure that was a factor," Sessions said.

The 11th Circuit court handles appeals from Alabama, Georgia and Florida. Pryor would replace Emmett Ripley Cox, an Alabama native.

Bush nominates Pryor to federal judgeship

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - President Bush on Wednesday nominated Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor for a position on the federal appeals court in Atlanta.

Pryor, 40, was nominated for a judgeship on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which handles appeals from Alabama, Georgia and Florida and is one step below the U.S. Supreme Court.

Pryor said he was honored to receive the nomination.

"I look forward to the confirmation process," he said in a statement. "In the meantime, I will continue to strive, as attorney general, to represent the people of Alabama, with integrity, to the best of my ability by upholding the Constitution and laws of our nation and state."

U.S. Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., a former Alabama attorney general whose own nomination for the federal bench was scuttled years ago by Senate Democrats, called Pryor "one of the most exceptional lawyers I've ever met."

"He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law," Sessions said Wednesday. "He does what he believes is the legally correct thing, regardless of political pressure."

Pryor, a Republican from Mobile, was appointed attorney general by Gov. Fob James and has twice won re-election, most recently last year.

The vacancy on the 11th Circuit was created when Emmett Ripley Cox, another Mobile Republican, announced in December 2000 he was stepping down from handling cases.

Pryor has a record as a conservative.

"Our greatest right is the right to life," Pryor said in a 2000 rally promoting restrictions on a woman's access to abortions in Alabama.

Pryor opposed the multistate lawsuit against tobacco companies, and he advocated giving utility companies more freedom to upgrade their coal-fired power plants without being forced to add pollution control devices.

Pryor also has defended Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy Moore's decision to prominently display the Ten Commandments in the state Judicial Building and helped write rules that provide fewer automatic appeals of death penalty cases.

Bush nominates Pryor to federal judgeship

By JEFFREY McMURRAY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor got a long-awaited appointment to the federal bench Wednesday, but it's unclear whether his experience in federal law will help or hinder the conservative in what could be a grueling Senate confirmation process.

Pryor's nomination to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which handles appellate cases for Alabama, Florida and Georgia, had been expected since January when Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., announced President Bush was eyeing him for the job.

Bush made the selection official Wednesday, and Pryor, 40, indicated in a brief statement he would accept.

"I look forward to the confirmation process of the U.S. Senate," said Pryor, a Republican who last November was elected to his second two-year term as the state's top judicial official. "In the meantime, I will continue to strive, as attorney general, to represent the people of Alabama with integrity, to the best of my ability, by upholding the Constitution and laws of our nation and state."

It could take months for Pryor's nomination to work its way through the confirmation process. The first step will likely be a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where Sessions occupies an influential post.

Sessions and Alabama's senior senator, Republican Richard Shelby, gave Pryor a ringing endorsement, but Sessions conceded Pryor's political activity and outspoken opposition to abortion rights could make him a target of liberals.

"The fact he has written and made speeches does mean the people out there trying to find a basis to object to nominees might find something," said Sessions, whose own nomination to the federal bench was scuttled by Democrats several years ago. "These people will comb through everything he's written and said."

If Pryor's nomination is challenged, it would likely be for entirely different reasons than the challenge against Bush's first pick for the job - William Steele.

Steele, a Mobile magistrate judge, never got a hearing on his 11th Circuit appointment after he encountered scrutiny for his handling of a racial bias case. Bush nominated Steele instead for a spot on Alabama's Southern District Court, and he encountered no opposition in his February confirmation hearing.

Sessions says Pryor is probably more suited for the appellate position, which is one step below the U.S. Supreme Court. The vacancy on the 11th Circuit was created when Emmett Ripley Cox, another Mobile Republican, announced in December 2000 he was stepping down from handling cases.

Yet some of the greatest strengths on Pryor's resume - his extensive writings on federal law and experience arguing cases before the Supreme Court - could ultimately work against him in the politically charged judicial process. Although it only takes a majority of the 100 senators to approve a nomination, it effectively requires 60 to end a filibuster and grant the nominee a floor vote.

Pryor's outspoken opposition to abortion, currently allowed under the Roe vs. Wade decision, could particularly make him a target of abortion rights supporters.

"Our greatest right is the right to life," Pryor said in a 2000 rally promoting restrictions on a woman's access to abortions in Alabama. Last year, he helped convince a federal judge not to halt implementation of a new Alabama law requiring physicians to talk with women about the risks of abortion at least 24 hours before performing the procedure.

Pryor also has argued against a lawsuit by two gay men and two lesbians who contend the state's restriction on sex acts between non-married adults violated their constitutional rights and prevented them from signing an apartment lease.

He has defended Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy Moore's decision to prominently display the Ten Commandments in the state Judicial Building and helped write rules that provide fewer automatic appeals of death penalty cases.

Pryor also opposed the multistate lawsuit against tobacco companies, and he advocated giving utility companies more freedom to upgrade their coal-fired power plants without being forced to add pollution control devices.

However, Sessions cited several examples from Pryor's career that should appeal to both sides of the political aisle, including Pryor's drive to erase the state's ban on interracial marriage and defense of majority-minority congressional districts.

"He has an incredible commitment to the rule of law," Sessions said. "He does what he believes is the legally correct thing, regardless of political pressure."

Pryor was first appointed as Alabama's attorney general in January 1997 when Sessions, his predecessor, was elected to the Senate. He graduated from Tulane Law School and was a law clerk for U.S. Circuit Court Judge John Minor Wisdom. He has experience in private practice in Birmingham and in 1995 was hired as Sessions' deputy attorney general in charge of special civil and constitutional litigation.

Why is Reid really opposed to Estrada?

In Sen. Harry Reid's recent column (Your Turn, March 12), he attempts to somehow justify the Democratic filibuster of the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the federal appellate court, asking: "Should a man who refuses to answer questions in a job interview be rewarded with the job?"

"Refuses to answer questions"? In February, in response to similar whining by Sens. Leahy, Boxer, Feingold and other Democrats, White House counsel Alberto Gonzales wrote a letter to all 100 senators. In it he invited any senator who wanted further information on Estrada's views to send him written questions. The White House promised that Estrada would "answer the questions forthrightly, appropriately and in a manner consistent with the practice and obligations of judicial nominees." No senator submitted questions to Estrada.

So why do Sen. Reid and his fellow Democrats really oppose Estrada's nomination? It certainly couldn't be his education or his work performance. Estrada was born in Honduras in 1961, came to the United States when he was 17, mastered English, graduated from Columbia University with honors, and then graduated from Harvard Law School. He then clerked at the U.S. Supreme Court, served as assistant U.S. attorney in New York, worked for the U.S. Department of Justice and then accepted a position at the prestigious law firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. When he was nominated to the appeals court by President Bush, the American Bar Association gave him its highest possible "unanimous - well qualified" rating. Estrada has the support of 55 senators including four Democrats. So what is Sen. Reid's real motivation?

Democrats have historically regarded minority groups as reliable blocs of votes. "Stroke their leaders and the rest will follow like lemmings" has been their policy. But George Bush has shaken the Democrats' world by appointing more Hispanics to high office in his administration than any other U.S. president. Qualified African-Americans have also been called and are serving the United States exceptionally well. Miguel Estrada would be a role model to any ethnic group, but Latinos are especially proud of his accomplishments.

Appointment of a conservative Hispanic appeals court judge, and potential Supreme Court nominee, would send a message to all Hispanics that hard work and education breed personal success. Sen. Reid and his fellow Democrats have not encouraged initiative among Latinos. They think government programs, paid for by taxpayers, solve problems. Estrada ... and Bush ... are major threats to continued Democrat dominance of Hispanics. And this threat is apparently so serious that Sen. Reid and his Democrats are, for the first time in U.S history, filibustering to prevent a Senate vote on a judicial nomination.

Sen. Reid should come clean with Nevadans and admit that his motivation in leading this extraordinary filibuster of an accomplished Hispanic nominee to the federal bench has nothing to do with policy ... and everything to do with partisanship.

Do we really think that Sen. Reid would lead a filibuster if Estrada were a liberal who supported every government program ever conceived? Do we really think he would support this nomination if, tomorrow, Estrada turned over every piece of paper dating back to his A, B, C's?

Sen. Reid, your leadership is taking a back seat to obstruction.

Attack on Judicial Nominee Leads Senate Panel to Delay Vote

By JENNIFER 8. LEE

ASHINGTON, April 10 — The Republican majority on the Senate Judiciary Committee delayed a vote today on an Arkansas lawyer's nomination to the federal bench, after Democrats attacked his writings on religion, abortion and the role of women.

The delay, requested by Senator Arlen Specter, Republican of Pennsylvania, was an unusual step for the committee's Republicans, who generally unite firmly behind President Bush's nominees.

This 52-year-old nominee, James Leon Holmes, former president of Arkansas Right to Life, seeks a seat on the Federal District Court in Little Rock, his hometown. Dr. Holmes, whose nomination was sent to the Senate in January, holds a Ph.D. in political science from Duke University and graduated first in his class at the University of Arkansas School of Law, where he is now an adjunct professor. An editorial in The Arkansas Democrat-Gazette called him a "superbly qualified nominee" and an "outstanding lawyer, working scholar and eminent spirit among us."

But Democratic senators said today that whatever Dr. Holmes's professional and scholarly credentials, some of his writings warranted concern, particularly with regard to equality for women.

One example the Democrats cited was a 1997 article that Dr. Holmes and his wife, Susan, wrote for a newspaper, Arkansas Catholic, about men, women and Roman Catholicism. The article said that "the wife is to subordinate herself to her husband" and that "the woman is to place herself under the authority of the man" in the same way that "the church is to place herself under the protection of Christ."

The same article went on to say, "It is not a coincidence that the feminist movement brought with it artificial contraception and abortion on demand, with recognition of homosexual liaisons soon to follow."

In 1980, Dr. Holmes, who would soon become a leader in the anti-abortion movement in Arkansas, minimized concerns about the effect on rape victims of a proposed constitutional amendment banning abortion. "Concern for rape victims is a red herring because conceptions from rape occur with approximately the same frequency as snowfall in Miami," he wrote in a letter to the editor of a newspaper then.

And in an article he wrote in 1982, Dr. Holmes, assessing societal problems and responses to them, compared the abortion rights movement to the Nazis. "The pro-abortionists counsel us to respond to these problems by abandoning what little morality our society still recognizes," he wrote. "This was attempted by one highly sophisticated, historically Christian nation in our century — Nazi Germany."

When he appeared before the committee at his confirmation hearing last month, Dr. Holmes testified that he would have no trouble separating his personal views from his professional duties as a federal judge. He also acknowledged that some of his language, especially when he first became involved in the anti-abortion movement, had been "unduly strident and inflammatory," and said the comment about rape victims "is particularly troublesome to me from the distance of 23 years later."

But as Senator Charles E. Schumer, Democrat of New York, read some of Dr. Holmes's statements today at a meeting where the Judiciary Committee was to have voted on the nomination, opposition seemed further energized.

The committee's Republican leadership had little to say about the delay in the vote on Dr. Holmes. "He's pending in committee," said Margarita Tapia, spokeswoman for the chairman, Senator Orrin G. Hatch of Utah.

An e-mail message from Dr. Holmes referred questions to the Justice Department, as is typical for nominees awaiting confirmation.

No one from the Justice Department would comment about Dr. Holmes's writings, but an official there made available letters sent to the committee in support of the nominee, some from advocates of abortion rights.

The letters, including, for example, one from Eileen Woods Harrison, an Arkansas lawyer who described herself as a "pro-choice" lifelong Democrat, praised Dr. Holmes's conduct and ethics.

Kristine G. Baker, a fellow partner of Dr. Holmes at a Little Rock law firm, said in a letter dated only this Tuesday: "He has always been supportive of me in my law practice, as well as supportive of the other women in our firm. Gender has never been an issue in any decision in the firm."

Confirmation Consternation

Justice Kennedy speaks out on judicial confirmation deadlock.

By DahliayLithwick

Posted Monday, April 14, 2003, at 8:07 AM PT

Attending a speech by a Supreme Court justice is generally just slightly less interesting than perusing the Federal Reporter. With the exception of Justice Antonin Scalia, who increasingly uses his public-speaking opportunities to erupt on some issue of church and state, most justices tend to speak in vague generalities about the workings of the court; to reassert that judges should do their speaking only in the form of judicial opinions (remind me again why they are giving speeches?); and to tell funny, charming anecdotes about justices who are dead and thus unable to defend themselves.

A speech by Justice Anthony Kennedy last week at the University of Virginia Law School almost proved this rule. He did funny British accents, he did Justice William Brennan. He dismissed last year's Supreme Court TV shows as "vacuous, insipid, and improbable." He offered a credible, if ultimately unpersuasive riff on how there are no "cliques or kabals" among the justices, and managed to charm and amuse without saying anything political, ideological, or controversial.

Which is why his off-the-cuff comments on the judicial confirmation shenanigans bear repeating: Kennedy was remarkably candid in asserting that there is a crisis in the lower courts*that shrinking numbers of judges are being asked to decide growing caseloads and that the slowdown in confirmations is devastating their ability to do their jobs. He was equally candid in opining that "both parties have been guilty of this" and that there is definitely some "payback going on here." And he made the best case I have heard thus far for limiting the Senate's "advise and consent" role to something that falls short of a veto based on ideological litmus tests. Calling it a danger to judicial independence for senators to insist on nominees with specific views, Kennedy made an eloquent case for a judge's highest authority still coming from "the ability to change his mind." Urging that judicial independence is a creature unlike any other, Kennedy stressed that becoming a judge necessarily alters one's fixed ideology, simply because, once you hear a case, "suddenly, there's a real person there."

One of the nicest things that can be said about getting a Supreme Court justice out of the black robes and blinking into the bright auditorium lights is that there's a real person there as well. The members of the high court should be a little more willing to weigh in on the crisis facing their colleagues on the bench; more public shaming from The Brethren might just make a difference in the Senate.

The Bush judiciary

HERE we go again. James Leon Holmes, the latest of President Bush's judicial nominees to come before the Senate Judiciary Committee, turns out to be another turn-back-the-clock moralist dressed up in lawyer's clothing.

His social views conflict with both the law of the land and common family values, and his rhetoric has been injudiciously inflammatory.

At this point, he seems a far better candidate for the pulpit than the bench.

Thursday, Republicans took the unusual step of delaying consideration of the Arkansas lawyer's nomination after Democrats brought to light some of his more forceful utterances.

About the evil effects of the feminist movement, he lamented in a 1997 article that it "brought with it artificial contraception and abortion on demand, with recognition of homosexual liaisons soon to follow."

About the proper place of women, he wrote in the same article that it should be the biblical one, in which a "wife is to subordinate herself to her husband" and "place herself under the authority of the man."

About the impact that a total ban on abortion would have on impregnated rape victims, he dismissed it as a trifle: "Concern for rape victims is a red herring because conceptions from rape occur with approximately the same frequency as snowfall in Miami."

And about Americans who support abortion rights (a group that includes a majority of the U.S. Supreme Court), he equated them with Nazis. What they advocate, he wrote in 1982, is "abandoning what little morality our society still recognizes. This was attempted by one highly sophisticated, historically Christian nation in our century -- Nazi Germany."

America needs judges of balance and probity, of wisdom and humility. It needs judges who respect instead of revile the results of constitutional processes. It needs judges who honor instead of condemn women's emergence into full citizenship and personal liberty. It needs judges who can tell the difference between Republicans for Choice and Hitler's Gestapo.

If only President Bush would nominate them.

HEADLINE: Outraged Hispanics Gather in Little Rock to Support Miguel Estrada

BODY:

Hundreds of Hispanics are expected to gather in four major cities over the next two weeks to call for an end to Senate Democrats' stonewalling of Miguel Estrada, a well-qualified Hispanic attorney who President Bush nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The rallies are part of an effort, led by local leaders and Enfoque a la Familia, Focus on the Family's ministry to the Hispanic community, to call attention to the unjust opposition Estrada has faced.

Estrada's confirmation has been held up in the Senate for many weeks because several liberal Democrats chose to filibuster his nomination, primarily because of Estrada's conservative judicial philosophy.

"Unfortunately, this grueling process reveals what liberals really want from Hispanics -- our votes, but not our leadership," said James Oviedo, Director of Enfoque a la Familia. "The Hispanic community has much to offer, and those who claim to care about minority rights should not reject a qualified candidate simply because they do not agree with Mr. Estrada's views."

Estrada immigrated to the U.S. as a teenager from Honduras, knowing little English. Despite these hurdles, he graduated from Columbia College in New York and Harvard Law School, where he edited the Harvard Law Review. He has argued 15 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and has won 10 of them.

Yuri Mantilla, Counsel for Hispanic Affairs at Enfoque a la Familia, added: "Miguel Estrada embodies the American dream that is available to all of us -- not just those who agree with the liberal Democrats' point of view unjust treatment sets a very disturbing precedent for conservatives, members of the Hispanic community and all who believe in the democratic process."

Given this background, I was expecting to see Prado, 55, put to the test at his Judiciary Committee hearing. His credentials are impressive: a graduate of the University of Texas and its law school, four years each as a prosecutor and a public defender, a short stint as a state judge, U.S. attorney for three years and, since 1984, a federal district judge -- the last two appointments coming from President Ronald Reagan.

Were it not for an old friend, I would have been as oblivious to the story of Judge Edward Prado of San Antonio as the rest of the Washington press corps.

Judge Tom Stagg of Shreveport, La., told me his pal was up for appointment to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit and suggested I go by and "see how they treat him" at his confirmation hearing.

Turns out it's like the Sherlock Holmes story of the dog that didn't bark. In the midst of the bitter partisan battle in which Democrats have repeatedly blocked a Senate confirmation vote on the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, Prado went through like gangbusters.

The story of why one Latino Republican has such an easy time while another creates such controversy is an instructive tale -- and one with hopeful implications.

Estrada has been denied an up-or-down vote on the Senate floor because Democrats call him "a stealth nominee," a man of high credentials but no judicial experience and one they say was unresponsive to their questions.

Their demand to look at memos he wrote while serving in the Justice Department has been rejected by the administration, and neither side has yielded.

Given this background, I was expecting to see Prado, 55, put to the test at his Judiciary Committee hearing. His credentials are impressive: a graduate of the University of Texas and its law school, four years each as a prosecutor and a public defender, a short stint as a state judge, U.S. attorney for three years and, since 1984, a federal district judge -- the last two appointments coming from President Ronald Reagan.

But Prado is also a character. His courtroom is wired with the latest audiovisual equipment, which Prado, a music lover and showman, loves to demonstrate. Three years ago, during a murder-for-hire trial, he came onto the bench while a recording of "Happy Together" by the Turtles filled the air, and then sang: "Imagine me as God. I do. I was appointed by the president. Appointed forever. My decisions cannot be questioned by you. I'm always right."

Many judges may feel that way; few say so, and even fewer put it to music.

More seriously, in answering the committee's questionnaire, Prado noted controversial cases in which he ruled against a woman's claim of job discrimination by the San Antonio fire department, a diabetes patient's claim that he was unfairly found to be medically ineligible for a police officer's job, and a claim that the Texas high school graduation test discriminated against Hispanics.

In another part of the questionnaire, he listed 68 criminal, immigration and civil cases in which he had been reversed or criticized by the court of appeals.

Plenty of fertile ground, one imagined, for liberal groups to challenge elevating a Reagan judge to a closely balanced and important bench just one level below the Supreme Court.

But in fact the Congressional Hispanic Caucus -- which has vigorously opposed the Estrada nomination -- wrote a letter endorsing Prado. Rep. Charlie Gonzalez, a Texas Democrat and co-signer of the letter, told me that he had known Prado for almost 40 years and "he has everything you want in a judge -- he's smart and articulate, he's not arbitrary, and he really understands people. Some of his rulings I would take issue with, but when the caucus interviewed him, he talked honestly about cases that have impacted minorities and he made it clear he knows how important the courts have been to us. It was so different from our hour's conversation with Estrada, who conveyed no sense of what we would think a Latino should appreciate about the historical role of courts in bringing us to where we are today and where we need to be tomorrow."

With the backing of the White House and the Hispanic caucus, Prado's confirmation hearing was perfunctory. Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the ranking Democrat and scourge of Estrada, read a statement complaining of past Republican treatment of President Bill Clinton's Latino nominees, then left without asking any questions. The two Republicans present -- Sens. John Cornyn of Texas and Jeff Sessions of Alabama -- said they had known Prado for years and simply congratulated him.

Prado was then unanimously confirmed by the Judiciary Committee.

When I asked Alberto Gonzales, the White House counsel, if there might be a lesson in Prado's easy approval, he replied, "It's hard to say. We view Judge Prado as no more qualified than Miguel Estrada or others they [the Democrats] have opposed."

But the lesson seems obvious. Conservatives can be confirmed for the courts when they are well known in their communities and a broad range of their constituents have reason to think them fair-minded. Even if they can't resist breaking into song.

UNDER THE DOME Edwards on trail in Iowa

By ROB CHRISTENSEN AND JOHN WAGNER, Staff Writers

Raleigh (NC) News & Observer

U.S. Sen. John Edwards said Thursday that if elected president he would not apply a "litmus test" on abortion to his nominees to the U.S. Supreme Court and other judicial posts.

The North Carolina Democrat made his comments during a breakfast in Waterloo, Iowa, that kicked off a day of campaigning in the nation's first presidential caucus state. He was responding to a question from an activist about recent comments on the subject by rival 2004 candidate, U.S. Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts.

Edwards said he believes strongly in reproductive choice, but he said, "I would not apply any single litmus to any candidates." Edwards said a candidate's views on abortion would be one of several factors considered.

Earlier this month, Kerry told a group of female Democrats that if elected president he would nominate to the high court only supporters of abortion rights under its Roe v. Wade decision.

During Edwards' six-city swing Thursday, he also stepped up criticism of President Bush as out of touch on the economy.

During a luncheon that drew more than 100 people to Davenport, Edwards praised the economic stewardship of President Clinton and said Bush had put the country "back in that deficit ditch."

"He's walking around in the Rose Garden promoting budget-busting tax cuts while people out here in the real world are hurting," Edwards said.

Also noteworthy about Thursday's time on the trail: Edwards, who supports the war against Iraq, said he thinks the U.S. should approach the threat of Syria through diplomacy.

"Syria does have a very bad history," including the harboring of terrorists, Edwards said. "But at the end of the day, this is something that should be dealt with diplomatically."

He called Iraq "a unique case."

Robert Novak - April 19, 2003

WASHINGTON -- Senate Republicans are tiring of the battle to confirm contested judicial nominees, indicating that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Democratic plan to prevent President Bush from shaping the federal judiciary is succeeding.

Weekly meetings of Republican senators produce increased grumbling. The complaining senators ask the White House and the Republican leadership why they should keep fighting to confirm as appellate judges Washington, D.C., lawyer Miguel Estrada and Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Not only liberal GOP senators but also some old guard committee chairmen claim this fight is neither important nor politically prudent.

Kennedy's unprecedented plan to block Bush's judicial selections always has been based on the theory that Republican senators soon would tire of the struggle.

I always feel grateful when I see an individual who has a lucrative career in the private sector but still decides to willingly forfeit the benefits of such a career to serve his community and his country. So it is particularly disheartening when such a person falls victim to the sometimes-nasty political process in Washington. Such is the case of Miguel Estrada, who has been nominated by President Bush for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Mr. Estrada embodies much of what is great about our country, having come to America as an immigrant from Honduras, speaking almost no English, graduating magna cum laude from Harvard Law, and ascending to the highest levels of the legal profession. Miguel Estrada was handed nothing and achieved what he did through hard work, perseverance, a commitment to education and a belief that America's opportunities were closed to no one willing to work for them.

Sadly, Mr. Estrada's accomplishments and desire to serve his country have not been enough to protect him from vociferous and partisan attacks with absolutely no foundation in fact. Senate Democrats have gone far beyond their bitter rhetoric and taken the highly unusual step of threatening a filibuster in order to derail Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Estrada himself is in no way a partisan advocate. He has served in the administrations of Presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton. The long list of Hispanic groups backing Miguel Estrada's nomination includes the League of United Latin American Citizens and the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, among others.

In Nevada alone, more than a dozen groups have stepped forward to support Mr. Estrada, including Fair Treatment for Immigrants, the Nevada Education Council and the Reno Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Some Senate Democrats, however, cannot tolerate a nominee of President Bush no matter his character and qualifications and are willing to try to scuttle his nomination for the sole purpose of denying the president something they see as a political victory. What they fail to understand is that Miguel Estrada's appointment to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia will be a victory for all of us because our judicial system will undoubtedly be strengthened by the judgment and wisdom that Mr. Estrada will provide.

Democrats complain loudly that Mr. Estrada has not provided enough information about his views on certain issues. However, it is clearly improper for Mr. Estrada or any other judicial nominee to take a stance during the nomination process on issues he or she might have to rule on as a judge.

By orchestrating a filibuster and denying Miguel Estrada an up-or-down vote in the Senate, Democrats are setting a dangerous precedent that could poison the nomination process for years to come and offset the balance of powers in the federal government that our nation's founders intended. Let us all hope that these shortsighted, mean-spirited and misguided attempts will fail, and that Miguel Estrada, a fine American and fine judicial candidate, will be allowed to serve our country. The swearing in of Judge Estrada will affirm that hard work and a desire to better the American judicial system must prevail over empty rhetoric and petty politics.

John Ensign is a U.S. senator from Nevada.

The Supreme Court's Recent Bombshell Punitive Damages Decision:
Its Important Holdings and Implications
By ANTHONY J. SEBOK
tsebok@findlaw.com

Monday, Apr. 21, 2003

On April 7, in the case of State Farm v. Campbell, the U.S. Supreme Court issued a decision that provoked a long sigh of relief from corporate America. It reversed a Utah punitive damage award of $ 145 million against State Farm Automobile Insurance Co.. The Supreme Court also ordered the Utah courts to recalculate the award in a way that did not offend the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause.

This decision is significant not only for what it says, but also for how it says it. The U.S. Supreme Court is saying to the state courts, in the words of one of my colleagues who follows the tort wars carefully, "you guys don't get it; now we're going to spell it out for you in black and white."

But what message, exactly, is the Supreme Court sending the state courts? That is what I will discuss in this column.

The Facts and Prior Proceedings in Campbell

The case arose when Curtis Campbell (now deceased) and his wife, Inez Preece Campbell, sued their insurer, State Farm. They alleged that State Farm, in handling a suit against Curtis Campbell in bad faith, intentionally inflicted emotional distress upon them.

Briefly, Curtis Campbell had been involved in a car accident that killed one person, whose family sued Campbell, and injured another man, who also sued Campbell. State Farm refused to settle the case for $50,000, Campbell's policy limit - even though the evidence suggests that it knew he was at fault for the accident and he would do poorly at trial.

And indeed, Curtis Campbell was found liable for the injuries he caused in the car accident, and the damages were assessed at $136,000. State Farm offered to pay $50,000 of the judgment, and suggested that the Campbells sell their home to make up the difference.

Eventually State Farm changed its mind and paid all of the $136,000, but it took a year and a half to offer to do so. In the interim, the Campbells say, they suffered emotional distress, as a result of State Farm's refusing to take the lawsuit against Curtis Campbell seriously, and refusing the $50,000 pre-trial settlement offer.

Based on these allegations, the Campbells sued and won a huge judgment against State Farm. They won $2.6 million in compensatory damages (which the trial judge reduced to $1 million) and $145 million in punitive damages.

The Utah Supreme Court upheld the awards. State Farm then sought U.S. Supreme Court review, and the Court took the case.

The Court's Decision: Due Process Requires Low Punitive/Compensatory Ratios

In a 6-3 decision, the Supreme Court held in State Farm's favor. Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote a stinging opinion on behalf of the majority - an opinion that was greeted with glee by the defense bar whose goal in many tort cases is to keep punitive damages to a minimum.

Among other points, Kennedy asserted that it should be "obvious" that a "single digit" ratio between a punitive award and a compensatory award "is more likely to comport with due process" than a ratio of 145 to 1 - the ratio between the punitive award and the reduced compensatory award in Campbell.

Indeed, Kennedy suggested, where the compensatory award is "substantial" (as it was in State Farm), perhaps the ration between compensatory awards and punitive awards should be no more than 1 to 1. In other words, according to Kennedy's reasoning, the Campbells should have gotten punitive damages of about $1 million, not $145 million.

Campbell Implies that A Company Must Be Bad To the Plaintiff, Not Just Bad Obviously, these pronouncements are significant. But I think another aspect of the decision is even more significant. Kennedy is sending a message to the state courts that the U.S. Supreme Court will no longer tolerate punitive damages being used to punish a company for just being just flat-out "bad." Instead, the company must have acted badly toward the particular plaintiff.

At oral argument, the Campbells' attorney, the very able Laurence Tribe, tried to argue that, indeed, the $145 million punitive damages award was based on State Farm's having acted reprehensibly toward Curtis Campbell in particular. But as Justice Kennedy points out in his opinion, that claim is simply implausible.

Quite to the contrary, "[f]rom their opening statements onward the Campbells framed this case as a chance to rebuke State Farm for its nationwide activities." Most notably, as I wrote in an earlier column on this case, Campbell told the jury about State Farm's corporate policies from around the country, even those that were basically unconnected to the legal dispute between him and State Farm.

An Effective Trial Strategy Backfires Before the U.S. Supreme Court Until they got to the U.S. Supreme Court, the Campbells had very deliberately built their case around the theme that corporate wrongdoing around the country cannot be deterred unless large punitive damages are awarded.

That is why introduced evidence that suggested that State Farm had acted badly towards its customers in California and North Carolina. That is why introduced evidence that State Farm was rarely sued by customers whom it wronged. That is why they introduced evidence about State Farm's wealth--to show that only a big award would get State Farm's attention. The Campbell's strategy at trial was very effective, and not at all unusual. It is a well-known trial strategy. It is also an approach endorsed by many academics and consumer activists.

Members of the law and economic movement have argued for a long time that large punitive damages--especially punitive damages that are very high relative to the compensatory damages awarded--are necessary to achieve the right level of deterrence to protect society from tortious conduct.

Members of the consumer movement, such as Ralph Nader and trial lawyers who are sympathetic to Nader's cause, take the same approach. They contend that punitive damages sometimes have to be very high in order to deter corporate wrongdoing.

A Strong Rejection of the "Send A Message" Punitive Damages Theory For many years, the U.S. Supreme Court has been silent about the idea that punitive damages should be used to promote general deterrence--that is, that they should serve as a substitute form of public regulation. The Court neither endorsed nor vetoed this "send a message" theory of punitive damages.

Accordingly, over the past eight years, since the Court decided BMW v. Gore, the idea that punitive damages should be used to "send a message" to corporate America has been used in closings in numerous jury trials around America. The trials have involved Big Tobacco, asbestos litigation, and countless other topics. State Farm should go a long way to slowing down that trend.

In theory, using punitive damages to "send a message" to a big company like State Farm, when it acts badly, is a nice idea. The problem is trying to put it into practice.

For one thing, as Justice Kennedy noted in his Campbell opinion, sometimes the conduct that injured the plaintiff is actually legal in other states. For another thing, as Kennedy also noted, sometimes the plaintiff tries to sweep in conduct by the defendant that occurred elsewhere regardless of the fact that the conduct did not injury the plaintiff, and has only a tenuous connection to the conduct that did injured the plaintiff. This approach is used merely to inflame the passions of the jury.

Those who defend the use of punitive damages to deal with defendants' conduct that goes beyond the case at hand have a response to these points. They say that a good trial judge should be able to ameliorate the problems identified above by, for example, making evidentiary judgments as to relevance that keep truly irrelevant material out.

They may be right - but, again, only in theory. Recent history suggests that, in practice, trial judges have not done a particularly good job at deciding what sort of evidence of national conduct by the defendant is relevant. Instead, they have allowed plaintiffs' cases to sweep too wide. What is the real import of the Court's in State Farm? The case certainly stands for the principle that punitive/compensatory ratios must be kept under control. But in my opinion, it also stands for another key principle: The "anything goes" attitude to introducing evidence of the defendant's bad behavior in assessing punitive damages will no longer be tolerated.

Estrada Nomination; Let's Fix Judicial Confirmation Process

If you thought the process by which the U.S. Senate confirmed federal judicial nominees was political before, just wait.

It now looks as though Bush appellate court nominee Miguel Estrada, whose life story reads like a commercial for the American dream, may not take a seat on the federal bench anytime soon.

After four failed attempts by Republican senators to break a Democratic filibuster over the nomination, the odds of eventually seating Mr. Estrada seem to grow longer by the day.

That is a real shame. But it would be a bigger shame for both parties to go ahead with what seem to be their plans to use the Estrada nomination to help win the support of Hispanic voters in the 2004 election.

Republicans have produced a TV commercial in Spanish that criticizes Democrats for thwarting the judicial aspirations of the Honduran-born lawyer.

Democrats are expected to respond in kind with ads of their own, portraying the nominee as too extremist and then using that to attack President Bush.

It is no wonder that many Americans now wince whenever the Senate turns its attention to the confirming of judges. Instead of wasting so much time, energy and money on further politicizing a process that already has too much politics in it, the parties should work together to fix the process.

One way to do that is to accept Mr. Bush's suggestion that the Senate rulebook be amended to mandate an up-or-down vote for all federal judicial nominees. The practical consequence would be to eliminate the filibuster, at least in regard to judicial nominees. It is radical surgery, to be sure. But it also may be warranted.

What we have now isn't acceptable. Imagine the absurdity of being nominated to serve on the federal bench and winding up with your name plastered on a bumper sticker.

Subject: CATHOLICISM ON TRIAL: RELIGIOUS TEST APPLIED TO JUDICIAL NOMINEE

CATHOLICISM ON TRIAL:

RELIGIOUS TEST APPLIED TO JUDICIAL NOMINEE

President George W. Bush has nominated J. Leon Holmes to serve as a federal judge for eastern Arkansas. But his nomination has run into trouble with some Democrats who believe Holmes is too religious.

Catholic League president William Donohue explains why the league is strongly supporting the Holmes nomination:

"Judge Leon Holmes graduated first in his law school class; he holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Duke University; he has had a distinguished legal career spanning more than two decades; he has been endorsed by the American Bar Association; he has won the plaudits of his hometown newspaper, the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette; he is held in high esteem by his colleagues; and he is known by his ideological foes as a man 'shot through with integrity.' But this convert to Catholicism has upset some Democrats.

"Holmes is a man of deep religious conviction. He is pro-life and is fully supportive of the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church. In the eyes of some, this is a red flag. They seize upon a flip comment he made 23 years ago (for which he has apologized) about abortion. What really irks his critics is that he will not apologize for his pro-life convictions. This notwithstanding the fact that Holmes has already said that only a constitutional amendment could overturn Roe v. Wade.

"Holmes has written on the fundamental equality of men and women. He and his wife have also written on the positive meaning of the mutual subjection of husbands and wives. Yet Senators Schumer, Feinstein and Durbin have unfairly tagged him a misogynist, misunderstanding what the pope, the U.S. bishops and Holmes have said regarding this matter.

"Holmes' critics are doing what the Constitution expressly prohibits-they are applying a religious test to his nomination. That they are doing it in a back-door manner makes it all the more contemptible."

'No Fly' List Is Challenged In A Lawsuit (NYTimes)

The New York Times, April 23, 2003

WASHINGTON, April 22 - Civil rights advocates demanded today that the federal government explain how hundreds of people - some of them vocal critics of the Bush administration - have ended up on a list used to stop people suspected of having terrorist links from boarding commercial air flights.

In a lawsuit filed in San Francisco, the American Civil Liberties Union said government officials had improperly withheld information about how people wind up on the "no fly" list, what steps are taken to ensure its accuracy and how people who are erroneously detained at airports can get their names off the list.

"Without even basic information about the no-fly list or other watch lists," the lawsuit said, "the public cannot evaluate the government's decision to use such lists."

Since the attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, the F.B.I. and federal transportation officials have generated secret lists of people suspected of having terrorist ties who should be stopped and questioned if they try to board an airplane.

Law enforcement officials say the policy is a necessary safeguard to prevent the type of security lapses that allowed two of the Sept. 11 hijackers to board a plane even though intelligence officials had reason to suspect they were terrorists.

But the so-called no-fly lists have generated criticism. Many people have been mistakenly stopped, while others assert they were on the list in part because of their strong liberal politics.

In a well-publicized incident last year, some two dozen members of a group called Peace Action of Wisconsin, including a priest, a nun and high school and college students, were detained in Milwaukee en route to a "teach-in" and missed their flight.

In San Francisco, meanwhile, Rebecca Gordon and Janet Adams, two self-described peace activists who help run a publication called War Times that has been critical of the administration's terrorism policies, were detained on their way to Boston. An American Trans Air employee told them their names appeared on a no-fly list, according to the A.C.L.U. lawsuit, which includes both women as plaintiffs.

Officials insisted they were not seeking to single out legitimate political critics. Ms. Adams's name may have been similar to that of another person on the no-fly list, they said.

Ms. Adams said in an interview that "it strains my credulity" to think that her longtime role as a political advocate did not play a part in the incident. "It's bad enough that the government is stopping people in these vast quantities," she said. "But then to learn that you can't even find out why they did it is just an additional injury."

In its lawsuit, the civil liberties union said it had documented 339 cases since the Sept. 11 attacks in which people at San Francisco International Airport were stopped and questioned because they were thought to be on the no-fly list. While the group's investigation has focused on San Francisco because of complaints there, it said the situation there offers a window into what is happening at airports around the country, based on anecdotal evidence the group has collected.

"There's every reason to believe this is happening at airports around the country," said Jayashri Srikantiah, staff lawyer for the A.C.L.U. of Northern California.

The civil liberties union brought the lawsuit under the Privacy Act and the Freedom of Information Act after federal officials turned down several months of requests for information on the passenger lists.

The F.B.I. told the group in a letter last December that it found "no records pertinent" to the no-fly issue. But A.C.L.U. officials said records from the San Francisco airport showed that the F.B.I. was contacted about many of the airport detentions.

Officials at the Transportation Security Administration, named as a defendant in the suit, did not return calls seeking comment. Officials at the F.B.I., also named as a defendant, said they could not comment because the lawsuit was pending.

But a law enforcement official, who would speak only if not named, acknowledged that there was confusion in the public about how the no-fly lists were created and executed. The official said the F.B.I. provided intelligence on people suspected of links to terrorism, which was relayed to the transportation security agency. Transportation officials then provide airlines and airports with lists of people to look for at airports.

The security agency "needs to do a better job of explaining what this list is," the official said.

The official insisted that politics had nothing to do with who makes the list, saying that "people that are expressing their constitutional rights of free expression would not come to the attention of the F.B.I."

Recess Time

With Senate Democrats taking obstructionism to new levels, the president should re-read Article II, Section 2, Paragraph 3.

by Hugh Hewitt

04/23/2003 12:00:00 AM

Hugh Hewitt, contributing writer

THE LEFT EDGE of the Senate Democratic caucus has taken control of the judicial-nomination process and has forced the entire Senate into what is, at best, an extra-constitutional swamp. With their filibuster of D.C. Circuit Court nominee Miguel Estrada, their threatened filibusters of Fifth Circuit nominees Priscilla Owen and Charles Pickering, and their obstruction of other nominees such as John Roberts, Carolyn Kuhl, and a half-dozen Sixth Circuit nominees, Senate Democrats have decided it is good policy to wreck a judicial nomination and confirmation process that has worked for more than two centuries.

The radical agenda of the Senate Democrats has escaped a great deal of attention, though it surely played a role in their historic defeats in November 2002 and will do so again in the more than half-dozen referendums on incumbent Democratic Senators looming in November 2004. The temptation to let the likes of Tom Daschle, Harry Reid, Patty Murray, Blanche Lincoln, and Chuck Schumer hang themselves on their extremist approach must be huge, but President Bush and his advisers would be better served by aggressively defending the Constitution at every step. There are many ways to do this, including a jam-down of new Senate rules with 51 votes. But a way-station to such a melt-down is found in the president's recess appointment power.

Article II, Section 2, Paragraph 3 provides: "The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session."

Thus the president can fill every judicial vacancy that presently exists, though these appointments will lapse in the fall of 2004. Nominees have traditionally been reluctant to fill such temporary posts as the Senate guarded its confirmation power jealously and was likely to turn a cold-shoulder to the recess appointees in much the way that the NFL veterans shunned the temporary players who took the field during their strike.

Bill Clinton broke the taboo against recess appointments to the bench, however, with his end-of-term appointment of Roger Gregory to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals--an appointment President Bush made permanent through his nomination and the Senate's consent as a gesture of conciliation. That gesture and many others have been rejected as inadequate by the Leahy-Daschle-Schumer-Kennedy caucus. Kindness didn't--and won't--work. Stronger measures are called for, not only to meet real needs for judges, but also to bring the controversy to the public's attention. The Democrats have crashed the process and shredded the traditions because of the pressure of abortion absolutists. Their record is a sorry one, and attention generated via the recess-appointment power will help shine light on their excess.

At this writing there are 24 vacancies on the U.S. Courts of Appeals. The president would be wise not to launch too many recess appointments at first, but it would be a strong opening move to announce that, say, two of the six blocked nominees to the Sixth Circuit will be appointed over the Memorial Day Senate break if there is no movement with those nominees, and that the two vacancies without nominees on the D.C. Circuit (there are a total of four, with Estrada and Roberts having been nominated in May of 2001) will receive nominees in May and will be appointed during the holiday recess unless at least Roberts (and perhaps both Roberts and Estrada) gets a floor vote before then.

The Sixth Circuit nominees are all named, and two would have to volunteer for this sort of hardball, but the two D.C. open slots would be best used to serve up a couple of rock-ribbed conservatives who might be willing to serve 15 to 18 months for the good of the cause. With the freedom from pressure to conform to Chuck Schumer's strange reading of the Constitution, these two judges could provide an impressive legacy of opinions over their year-and-a-half of service. Readers are invited to suggest nominees to me from among the caucus of "They Couldn't Get Confirmed by This Senate in a Hundred Years" club because of their intellectual firepower. Perhaps Judge Bork hankers for a D.C. Circuit encore?

If the Senate radicals remain entrenched in their desire to overturn the Constitution, either the Senate can discipline itself with new rules or the president can increase the number of recess judges and announce a commitment to keep all such nominees on the bench through the recess process for as long as his power to extend their service endures. As Bill Clinton demonstrated, even a lame-duck president can employ the power just prior to his replacement's arrival. President Bush could keep using the recess power through December of 2004 even if defeated, and through December of 2008 if reelected.

This approach would announce a fundamental change in the nomination process, though a constitutional one. It would answer the Democrats' irresponsible absolutism with a measured and transparent reply. Conservative activists would be satisfied, as would moderate defenders of the clear design of the Constitution.

The battles over judicial appointments at home are not nearly as dramatic as those battles fought abroad, but the ability to wage the latter ultimately depends upon a healthy respect for the Constitution's rules at home. Democrats have abandoned that respect in their zeal to meet the demands of the abortion-rights caucus. The president should answer their challenge.

Summary of Enrolled Bill S. 151 - Prosecutorial Remedies and Other Tools to end the Exploitation of Children Today (PROTECT) Act of 2003

S. 151 would: (1) enhance the operation of the AMBER (America's Missing: Broadcast Emergency Response) Alert communications network in order to facilitate the recovery of abducted children; (2) provide for stronger penalties against and new crimes related to kidnapping and other crimes against children; (3) provide tools for the investigation and prosecution of child pornography offenses; and (4) attempt to reduce the volume of downward departures from sentencing guidelines in all criminal cases. The most significant provisions in S. 151 are summarized below. Other important provisions of the enrolled bill are detailed in an attachment.

AMBER Alert Communications Network

National Coordination of Amber Alert Communications Network. The enrolled bill would require the Department of Justice to assign an officer to act as the national coordinator of the AMBER Alert communications network regarding abducted children. The Coordinator would be required to: (1) seek to eliminate gaps in the network, including gaps in areas of interstate travel; (2) work with States to encourage the development of additional elements (known as local AMBER plans) in the network; (3) work with States to ensure appropriate regional coordination of various elements of the network; and (4) act as the nationwide point of contact for the development of the network and regional coordination of alerts on abducted children through the network.

The Coordinator would be required to notify and consult with the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation concerning each child abduction for which an alert is issued through the network. Also, the Coordinator would be required to cooperate with the Secretary of Transportation and the Federal Communications Commission in carrying out these coordination activities.

Minimum Standards for Issuance and Dissemination of Alerts through AMBER Alert. The enrolled bill would require the Coordinator to establish, in cooperation with local broadcasters and State and local law enforcement agencies, minimum standards for the issuance and dissemination of alerts through the AMBER Alert communications network. The minimum standards established would be adoptable on a voluntary basis only. The minimum standards would provide that the dissemination of an alert through the AMBER Alert communications network be limited to the geographic areas most likely to facilitate the recovery of the abducted child concerned. The bill would provide that the Coordinator may not interfere with the current system of voluntary coordination between local broadcasters and State and local law enforcement agencies. The Coordinator would be required to cooperate with the Secretary of Transportation and the Federal Communications Commission in carrying out these activities.

Grant Program for Notification and Communications Systems. The enrolled bill would require the Secretary of Transportation to carry out a program to provide grants to States for the development or enhancement of notification or communications systems along highways for alerts and other information for the recovery of abducted children. Activities funded by grants could include the development or enhancement of electronic message boards and the placement of additional signage along highways. The Federal share of the cost of any activities funded by a grant under the program could not exceed 80 percent. The bill would authorize appropriations of $20 million for FY 2004 for the Department of Transportation to carry out this grant program. Your FY 2004 Budget proposed no specific funding for AMBER Alert activities within the Department of Transportation, but funds from the Department's Federal Highway Administration's Research and Development programs are eligible for such activities.

Grant Program for Support of AMBER Alert Communications Plans. The bill would require the Department of Justice to carry out a program to provide grants to States for the development or enhancement of programs and activities for the support of AMBER Alert communications plans. Activities funded by grants could include education and training programs and law enforcement programs. The Federal share of the cost of any activities funded by a grant could not exceed 50 percent. The bill would authorize appropriations of $5 million for FY 2004 for the Department of Justice to carry out this grant program and an additional $5 million for grants to States for the development and implementation of new technologies to improve AMBER Alert communications. Your Budget proposed $2.5 million in FY 2004 for AMBER Alert activities.

Increased Sanctions and New Offenses for Crimes Against Children

Two Strikes You're Out. The enrolled bill would establish a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment for certain twice-convicted child sex offenders. The bill would provide for a mandatory minimum sentence of life imprisonment for any person convicted of a "Federal sex offense" if they had previously been convicted of a similar offense under either Federal or State law. A Federal sex offense would include offenses committed against a person under the age of 17 years and involving the crimes of sexual abuse, aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse of a minor, abusive sexual contact, and the interstate transportation of minors for sexual purposes.

Post-Release Supervision of Sex Offenders. Under current law, the maximum period of post-release supervision is generally five years. The enrolled bill would extend the authorized term of supervised release to a maximum of life for any offenses involving kidnapping of a minor, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation and other abuse of children, transportation for illegal sexual activity and related crimes, or sex trafficking of children.

Presumption Against Pretrial Release. The enrolled bill would provide for a rebuttable presumption that a person charged with specified offenses involving minor victims, including child kidnapping or sex trafficking of children, would not be eligible for pre-trial release.

First Degree Murder in Cases Involving Children. The enrolled bill would add "child abuse" and "a pattern or practice of assault or torture against a child or children" that results in murder as predicates for first degree murder. Under current law, first degree murder can include murder committed in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate, certain crimes including kidnapping, aggravated sexual abuse, and sexual abuse. The bill would define "child" as a person who has not attained the age of 18 years and is: (1) under the perpetrator's care or control; or (2) at least six years younger than the perpetrator. The bill would define "child abuse" as intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly causing death or serious bodily injury to a child and "pattern or practice of assault or torture" as assault or torture engaged in on at least two occasions.

Attempt Liability For International Parental Kidnapping. The enrolled bill would amend current law, which prohibits removing a child from the United States with intent to obstruct the lawful exercise of parental rights. The enrolled bill would also make it a crime to attempt to remove a child from the United States with the intent to obstruct the lawful exercise of parental rights.

Penalties Against Sex Tourism. Current law requires the government to prove that a person who travels to foreign countries and engages in illicit sexual relations with a minor traveled with the intent to engage in the illegal activity. The enrolled bill would provide that the government would only have to prove that the defendant engaged in illicit sexual conduct with a minor while in a foreign country. The bill would also criminalize the actions of sex tour operators by prohibiting entities from arranging, inducing, procuring, or facilitating the travel of a person, for commercial advantage or financial gain, knowing that such person is traveling in interstate or foreign commerce for the purpose of engaging in illicit sexual conduct. Defendants convicted of these crimes would be subject to up to 30 years imprisonment.

Child Pornography and Obscenity

Prohibition of Virtual Child Pornography. The enrolled bill would amend the definitions, in the chapter in the Federal criminal code prohibiting sexual exploitation of children, of: (1) "child pornography" to include a visual depiction that is a digital, computer, or computer-generated image that is, or is indistinguishable from, that of a minor engaging in sexually explicit conduct; and (2) "sexually explicit conduct" to include, for purposes of such depictions, graphic or lascivious simulated sexual intercourse, bestiality, masturbation, sadistic or masochistic abuse, or exhibition of the genitals or pubic area of any person. For purposes of these definitions, the enrolled bill would define "graphic" to mean a depiction of sexually explicit conduct in which a viewer can observe any part of the genitals or pubic area of any depicted person or animal during any part of the time that the sexually explicit conduct is being depicted, and "indistinguishable" to mean a depiction that is virtually indistinguishable such that an ordinary person would conclude that it is of an actual minor engaged in explicit conduct. This latter definition would not apply to depictions that are drawings, cartoons, sculptures, or paintings depicting minors or adults.

The enrolled bill would also amend provisions governing what constitutes an affirmative defense to: (1) include that the alleged child pornography was not produced using any actual minors; and (2) prohibit a defendant from asserting an affirmative defense unless specified notice is provided to the court and the United States prior to commencement of the trial.

The enrolled bill would provide for severability by specifying that, if any of its provisions are held unconstitutional, the remainder of the bill would not be affected by such a holding.

Materials Constituting or Containing Child Pornography. The enrolled bill would amend the Federal criminal code provisions regarding child pornography to prohibit knowingly: (1) advertising, promoting, presenting, distributing, or soliciting through the mails or in interstate or foreign commerce any material in a manner that reflects the belief, or that is intended to cause another to believe, that it contains an obscene visual depiction of a minor, or a visual depiction of an actual minor, engaging in sexually explicit conduct; and (2) offering or providing to a minor any visual depiction that is, or appears to be, of a minor engaging in sexually explicit conduct for the purpose of inducing or persuading the minor to participate in any illegal activity.

Visual Representations of Sexual Abuse of Children. The enrolled bill would prohibit knowingly producing, distributing, receiving, or possessing an obscene visual representation of the sexual abuse of children. These provisions would cover a visual depiction of any kind (including a drawing, cartoon, sculpture, or painting) that: (1) depicts a minor engaging in sexually explicit conduct and is obscene; or (2) depicts an image that is, or appears to be, of a minor engaging in graphic bestiality, sadistic or masochistic abuse, or sexual intercourse, and lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

Extraterritorial Production of Child Pornography. The enrolled bill would make it a crime to employ, use, persuade, induce, entice, or coerce a minor to engage in, or have a minor assist any other person to engage in, sexually explicit conduct outside of the United States in order to produce any visual depiction of such conduct for transport to the United States by any means, including by computer or mail.

Recordkeeping Requirements. Under current law, whoever produces any book, magazine, periodical, film, videotape, or other matter which contains visual depictions of actual sexually explicit conduct for use in interstate or foreign commerce is required to create and maintain individually identifiable records pertaining to every performer portrayed in such visual depictions. The enrolled bill would specify that the record-keeping requirements also apply to production of computer-generated images, digital images, and pictures of such visual depictions. The enrolled bill would also increase penalties for violations of record-keeping requirements. Within one year after enactment of the enrolled bill, Justice would have to submit a report to the Congress detailing the number of times since January 1993 that the Department has inspected records of producers of materials that contain visual depictions of actual sexually explicit conduct. The report would also have to include the number of violations prosecuted as a result of inspections.

Sentencing Guidelines

Composition of the Sentencing Commission. The United States Sentencing Commission is an independent commission in the Judicial branch that establishes sentencing policies and practices for the Federal criminal justice system. The Commission consists of seven voting members and two non-voting members -- the Attorney General and the chair of the U.S. Parole Commission. The President appoints the voting members of the Commission, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Under current law, "at least three of the members" must be Federal judges. The enrolled bill would amend this provision such that "not more than 3 of the members" could be Federal judges. There are currently five voting members on the Commission, including three Federal judges and two vacancies.

Review of All Departures from Sentencing Guidelines. The enrolled bill would require a district court, when imposing a particular sentence, to provide reasons for the sentence imposed not only in open court, but with specificity in a written order, except to the extent the court relies upon statements received in camera in accordance with Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. If a sentence that is outside the applicable guideline range is appealed, the court of appeals would be required to determine whether the sentence departs from the guidelines for impermissible or unjustifiable reasons or to an unreasonable degree. In making this determination, the court of appeals would be required to review de novo the district court's application of the guidelines to the facts.

If a court of appeals determines that the district court imposed a sentence that is outside the applicable guideline range and the district court failed to provide a written statement of reasons for the sentence imposed, the departure is based on an impermissible factor, or the sentence was imposed for an offense for which there is no applicable sentencing guideline and is plainly unreasonable, the court of appeals would be required to state specific reasons for its conclusions. If the appeals court determines that the sentence is too high or too low, the court would be required to set aside the sentence and remand the case to the district court with appropriate instructions for further sentencing proceedings. However, the district court would not be permitted to impose a sentence outside the applicable guidelines range except on a ground that was: (1) included in the written statement of reasons for its decision prior to the appeal; and (2) was held by the court of appeals to be a permissible ground for departure.

Reporting Requirements. The enrolled bill would require the Chief Judge of each district court to ensure that, within 30 days following entry of judgment in every criminal case, the sentencing court submits to the Sentencing Commission a written report of the sentence. The Sentencing Commission would be required to make available, upon request, to the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the written reports and all underlying records accompanying the reports. The enrolled bill would require the Sentencing Commission to submit to the Congress at least annually an analysis of these documents, any recommendations for legislation that the Sentencing Commission concludes is warranted by the analysis, and an accounting of the districts the Commission believes have not submitted appropriate information and documents. In addition, the enrolled bill would require the Sentencing Commission to make available to the Department of Justice, upon request, files that the Commission may assemble or maintain in electronic form that include any information submitted by district courts, including the identity of a sentencing judge.

Report by the Department of Justice on Downward Departures. For each case in which a district court grants a downward departure, other than cases involving downward departure for substantial assistance to authorities, the enrolled bill would require the Department of Justice to submit a report within 15 days to the House and Senate Judiciary Committees setting forth: (1) the identity of the district court judge; (2) the district court's stated reasons; and (3) the position of parties with respect to the downward departure decision. Within five days of any decision by the Solicitor General regarding authorization of an appeal of the departure, the Attorney General would be required to submit a report to the House and Senate Judiciary Committees describing the basis for the decision.

Sentencing Commission Review of Downward Departure. The enrolled bill would require the Sentencing Commission, within 180 days of enactment, to review the grounds of downward departure that are authorized by the sentencing guidelines, policy statements, and official commentary of the Commission, and to promulgate appropriate amendments to the sentencing guidelines, policy statements, and official commentary to ensure that incidents of downward departures are substantially reduced.

Other Provisions of S. 151

Attachment

Public Outreach

National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations of $20 million for each of FYs 2004 and 2005 to the NCMEC. Under current law, appropriations of $10 million are authorized for each of FYs 2000 through 2003. The enrolled bill would authorize officers and agents of the Secret Service, under the direction of the Department of Homeland Security, to provide forensic and investigative assistance in support of any investigation involving missing or exploited children, at the request of State or local law enforcement agencies or the NCMEC. The enrolled bill would amend the Missing Children's Assistance Act to provide that one of the uses of the annual Justice grant to the NCMEC would be to coordinate the operation of the Cyber Tipline to provide online users an effective means of reporting Internet-related child sexual exploitation, including distribution of child pornography, online enticement of children for sexual acts, and child prostitution. The enrolled bill would provide the NCMEC civil immunity arising out of any action in connection with activity it undertakes with, or at the direction of, a Federal law enforcement agency.

Service Provider Reporting and Disclosure of Stored Communications. The enrolled bill would amend: (1) the Federal criminal code to include, as an exception to the prohibition against the disclosure of the contents of a communication by an electronic communication service, disclosures to the Cyber Tip Line of the NCMEC; and (2) the Victims of Child Abuse Act of 1990 to authorize disclosure of child pornography by an electronic communication service provider and by the NCMEC to State or local officials for the purpose of enforcing State criminal law.

Sex Offender Apprehension Program. The enrolled bill would add, to the list of authorized objectives for the Justice Department's public safety and community policing grants, assistance to States in enforcing a requirement that a convicted sex offender register his or her address with a State or local law enforcement agency and be subject to criminal prosecution for failure to comply.

Missing Children Procedures in Public Buildings. Within 180 days of enactment, the specified authority for any building owned or leased for use by a Federal agency would have to establish procedures for locating any child under the age of 18 years that is missing in the building. These procedures would have to provide, at a minimum, for the following: (1) notifying security personnel that a child is missing; (2) obtaining a detailed description of the child, including name, age, eye and hair color, height, weight, clothing, and shoes; (3) issuing a Code Adam alert (i.e., a set of procedures used to alert employees and other users of a public building that a child is missing) and providing a description of the child, using a fast and effective means of communication; (4) establishing a central point of contact; (5) monitoring all points of egress from the building while a Code Adam alert is in effect; (6) conducting a thorough search of the building; (7) contacting local law enforcement; and (8) documenting the incident.

Child Advocacy Center Grants. The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations to the Justice Department of $15 million for each of FYs 2004 and 2005 for grants for Regional and Local Children's Advocacy Centers. These centers are intended to improve the resources available to children and families and to assist in the development and implementation of multidisciplinary child abuse investigation and prosecution programs. In addition, the enrolled bill would authorize appropriations of $5 million for each of FYs 2004 and 2005 for grants to national organizations to provide technical assistance and training to attorneys and others instrumental in the criminal prosecution of child abuse cases in State or Federal courts in order to improve the quality of these prosecutions. Your FY 2004 Budget does not include specific funding earmarked for grants to these organizations, but will provide support to organizations, which provide training to law enforcement officers and investigators working on missing and exploited children cases.

Reporting Missing Children. Under current law, law enforcement agencies are required to report missing children under the age of 18 to the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) of the Department of Justice. The enrolled bill would require law enforcement agencies to report missing children under the age of 21 to NCIC.

Transitional Housing Assistance Grants. The enrolled bill would establish in the Department of Justice a transitional housing assistance grant program to provide funds to State and local governments, Indian tribes, and other organizations to carry out programs to provide assistance to minors, adults, and their dependents: (1) who are homeless, or in need of transitional housing or other housing assistance, as a result of fleeing a situation of domestic violence; and (2) for whom emergency shelter services or other crisis intervention services are unavailable or insufficient. The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations of $30 million for each of FYs 2004 through 2008 for this grant program, of which not more than three percent may be used by Justice for salaries and administrative expenses.

Increased Sanctions for Crimes Against Children

Sexual Abuse Penalties. The enrolled bill would increase the maximum and minimum penalties for crimes related to sexual exploitation of children and sex trafficking of children.

Stronger Penalties Against Kidnapping. The enrolled bill would direct the United States Sentencing Commission to increase the base offense level for kidnapping from level 24 (51 to 63 months) to level 32 (121 to 151 months). The bill would also delete a provision in the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines that rewards kidnappers for releasing the victim within 24 hours by reducing the base offense level by one point. Also, under current law, if a defendant sexually exploits the kidnapping victim, then the defendant's base offense level is increased by three levels. The bill would increase the base offense level by six levels under these circumstances. Finally, the enrolled bill would provide for a mandatory minimum sentence of 20 years if the victim of a non-family kidnapping is under the age of 18.

Enhanced Penalties for Repeat Offenders. The enrolled bill would make persons previously convicted of obscenity or members of uniformed services previously convicted of sexual assault subject to enhanced recidivist penalties for child pornography, sexual abuse, and transportation for illegal sexual activity.

Increased Penalties for Use of Minors in Crimes of Violence. Any individual who is 18 years of age or older, who intentionally employs, hires, persuades, induces, entices, or coerces a person under 18 years of age to commit a crime of violence, or to assist in avoiding detection or apprehension for such an offense, would, for the first conviction, be subject to twice the maximum term of imprisonment and twice the maximum fine that would otherwise be authorized for the offense. For each subsequent conviction, an individual would be subject to three times the maximum term of imprisonment and three times the maximum fine that would otherwise be authorized for the offense. Under current law, a crime of violence is defined as: (1) an offense that has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or (2) any other offense that is a felony and that, by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.

Pilot Program for Criminal History Background Checks. The enrolled bill would establish pilot programs for conducting criminal history background checks and require the Justice Department to study the current state of fingerprinting technology and the capacity of Federal and state governments to perform these checks. The first pilot program would permit certain specified volunteer organizations designated in three States selected by the Attorney General to request State and Federal criminal background checks on their volunteers. The second pilot program would authorize three designated volunteer organizations to receive 100,000 Federal criminal background checks, equally allocated, to determine whether potential volunteers are fit to work with children. Each pilot program would last for 18 months. The enrolled bill would require the Attorney General to report to Congress on the implementation of the pilot programs at their conclusion.

Enhanced Investigations and Prosecutions

Interception of Communications. The enrolled bill would expand the list of crimes for which Federal law enforcement officials may obtain authorization to intercept wire, oral, or electronic communications in a criminal investigation to specified sex crimes against children, including sex trafficking, selling or buying of children, sexual exploitation, transportation for illegal sexual activity, and production of sexually explicit depictions of a minor for importation into the United States.

Elimination of Statute of Limitations for Child Abduction and Sex Crimes. Under current law, the statute of limitations applicable to most Federal crimes is five years, although prosecutions are not barred for offenses involving the sexual or physical abuse of a child under the age of 18 years before the child victim reaches the age of 25 years. The enrolled bill would provide that a prosecution may be instituted at any time during the life of the child victim for cases of sexual or physical abuse, or kidnapping.

Authorization of "John Doe/DNA" Indictments in Sexual Abuse Cases. Current law provides that a person cannot be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any non-capital offense unless an indictment is issued within five years of the date the offense was committed. The enrolled bill would provide that in any indictment for an offense involving sexual abuse for which the identity of the perpetrator is unknown, it is sufficient to describe the accused as an individual whose name is unknown, but who has a particular DNA profile. As a result, this provision would allow prosecution of a perpetrator identified through the DNA profile at a later date.

Child Pornography

Additional Trial Attorneys. The enrolled bill would require the Attorney General to appoint, within six months of enactment, 25 additional trial attorneys who would have as their primary focus the investigation and prosecution of Federal child pornography and obscenity laws. The bill would authorize appropriations of such sums as may be necessary to carry out this provision. The bill would also require the Attorney General to report biennially to the Senate and House Judiciary Committees on Federal enforcement actions, including an outcome-based measure of performance and an analysis of the technology being used by the child pornography industry.

Misleading Domain Names on the Internet. The enrolled bill would make it a crime to knowingly use a misleading domain name on the Internet with the intent to deceive: (1) any person into viewing obscene material; and (2) a minor into viewing "material that is harmful to minors" on the Internet. Violators of the former provision would be subject to a fine or imprisonment of up to two years, or both. Violators of the latter provision would be subject to a fine or imprisonment of up to four years, or both. The enrolled bill would define "material that is harmful to minors" as any communication consisting of nudity, sex, or excretion that, taken as a whole: (1) predominantly appeals to the prurient interest of minors; (2) is patently offensive to prevailing standards in the adult community as a whole with respect to what is suitable material for minors; and (3) lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value for minors. For purposes of this provision, the enrolled bill would define "sex" as acts of masturbation, sexual intercourse, or physical contact with a person's genitals, or the condition of human male or female genitals when in a state of sexual stimulation or arousal.

Admissibility of Evidence. The enrolled bill would make non-physical information (including name, address, and social security number) identifying minors depicted in child pornography, other than age or approximate age, inadmissible and subject to redaction from any otherwise admissible evidence in any prosecution of such an act.

Investigative Authority Relating to Child Pornography. The enrolled bill would modify provisions regarding administrative subpoenas relating to child pornography to expand the matter an electronic communication or remote computing service would be required to disclose to a governmental entity to include the means and source of payment for such service, including any credit card or bank account number.

Civil Remedies. The enrolled bill would authorize civil remedies, including injunctive relief and punitive damages, for child pornography offenses.

Communications Decency Act of 1996. The enrolled bill would amend the Communication Decency Act by making it unlawful to use a telecommunications device to knowingly transmit child pornography to adults or minors with the intent to harass. In addition, the enrolled bill would make it a crime to knowingly send or display child pornography to persons under 18 years of age using an interactive computer service.

Sentencing Guidelines Related to Crimes Against Children

Enforcement of Sentencing Guidelines for Child Abduction and Sex Offense.

The enrolled bill would provide that in sentencing a defendant convicted of an offense involving obscenity, sexual abuse, sex trafficking of children, sexual exploitation and other abuse of children, or transportation for illegal sexual activity and related crimes, a Federal court would be required to impose a sentence of the kind and within the range of the applicable sentencing guidelines issues by the U.S. Sentencing Commission, unless the court finds: (1) that there exist aggravating or mitigating circumstances of a kind, or to a degree, not adequately taken into consideration by the Sentencing Commission in formulating the guidelines that should result in a sentence greater or lower than that imposed; or (2) on a motion by the Government, that the defendant has provided substantial assistance in another investigation or prosecution that establishes a mitigating circumstance. The enrolled bill would provide that in determining whether a circumstance was adequately taken into consideration, a court would be required to consider only the sentencing guidelines, policy statements, and official commentary of the Sentencing Commission.

Downward Departures in Child Crimes and Sexual Offenses. The enrolled bill would amend the sentencing guidelines to allow courts, in cases involving child crimes and sexual offenses, to impose a sentence below the range established by applicable guidelines only if a court finds that there exists a mitigating circumstance of a kind, or to a degree, that: (1) has been identified as a permissible ground of downward departure in sentencing guidelines or policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission; (2) has not adequately been taken into consideration by the Sentencing Commission in formulating the guidelines; and (3) should result in a sentence different from that imposed. The enrolled bill would provide that grounds enumerated in the sentencing guidelines are the sole grounds identified as permissible for downward departure.

Under the enrolled bill, when sentencing a defendant convicted of an offense involving obscenity, sexual abuse, sex trafficking of children, sexual exploitation and other abuse of children, or transportation for illegal sexual activity and related crimes, age or an extraordinary physical impairment could be a reason to impose a sentence below an applicable guideline range only if and to the extent permitted by the sentencing guidelines. The enrolled bill would not allow a court to consider: (1) drug, alcohol, or gambling dependence or abuse; (2) family ties and responsibilities; or (3) community ties as relevant factors in determining whether a sentence should be imposed below the applicable guideline range.

Amendments to the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines. The enrolled bill would increase the base offense level for possession of materials depicting a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct if the offense involves material that portrays sadistic or masochistic conduct or other depictions of violence. Also, the enrolled bill would further increase the base offense level according to the number of images found in the defendant's possession.

For offenses involving trafficking in material involving the sexual exploitation of a minor, receiving, transporting, shipping, or advertising material involving the sexual exploitation of a minor, or possessing material involving sexual exploitation of a minor with intent to traffic, the enrolled bill would increase the base offense level according to the number of images found in the defendant's possession.

The Sentencing Commission to amend the sentencing guidelines to ensure that the guidelines adequately reflect the seriousness of offenses involving sexual abuse of a minor or ward, abusive sexual contact, and sexual exploitation of children. The enrolled bill would also require the Sentencing Commission to review and, as appropriate, amend the Federal sentencing guidelines to ensure that guideline penalties are adequate to deter and punish conduct that involves interstate travel with the intent to engage in a sexual act with a juvenile.

Sex Offender Registry

State Internet Sites on Registered Sex Offenders. Current law requires each State, or any agency authorized by the State, to release information necessary to protect the public concerning persons required to register as sex offenders. The enrolled bill would require States to maintain an Internet site containing such information, along with instructions on the process for correcting information that a person alleges to be erroneous. States would be required to implement such an Internet site within three years after the enactment of the enrolled bill, although the Justice Department could grant an additional two years to a State that is making a good faith effort to implement this provision of the enrolled bill. The enrolled bill would require the Criminal Division of the Justice Department to create a national Internet site that would link all of the State Internet sites.

Registration of Child Pornographers in the National Sex Offender Registry. Under current law, a person convicted of certain criminal offenses against a minor or certain sexually violent offenses is required to register a current address with the sex offender registry. The enrolled bill would include in this program persons convicted of crimes relating to the production and distribution of child pornography. The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations to the Justice Department of such sums as may be necessary to carry out this provision of the enrolled bill for each of FYs 2004 through 2007.

Grants to States for New Sex Offender Registry Requirements. The Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 authorized appropriations of $25 million for each of FYs 1999 and 2000 to establish a grant program, the Sex Offender Management Assistance Program, to provide funds to States to offset the costs associated with establishing and maintaining a sex offender registry. The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations to the Justice Department of such sums as may be necessary for each of FYs 2004 through 2007 to continue to carry out this grant program.

Miscellaneous Provisions

Secured Authentication Feature and Enhanced Identification Defense (SAFE ID) Act. Under current law, it is illegal to knowingly produce, transfer, or possess unauthorized, false, or stolen identification documents. The enrolled bill would also make it a crime to knowingly produce, transfer, or possess unauthorized authentication features. Such authentication features would include any hologram, watermark, symbol, code, or image used by an issuing authority on an identification document to verify that the document is authentic. The enrolled bill would also make it a crime to knowingly traffic in false authentication features for use in false identification documents, document-making implements, or means of identification. The enrolled bill would also provide that, in addition to a fine and imprisonment, violators of these provisions would be subject to the forfeiture and destruction of all illicit authentication features, identification documents, document-making implements, or means of identification.

Illicit Drug Anti-Proliferation Act. Under current law, unless specifically authorized, it is unlawful to knowingly open or maintain any place for the purpose of manufacturing, distributing, or using any controlled substance. It is also unlawful to manage or control any place as an owner, lessee, agent, employee, or mortgagee, and knowing and intentionally make the place available for the purpose of unlawfully manufacturing, storing, distributing, or using a controlled substance. The enrolled bill would clarify that this provision of the law: (1) applies to both permanent and temporary management or control of a place; and (2) also applies to occupants of a place. The enrolled bill would also provide that, in addition to being subject to criminal penalties, any person violating this provision would be subject to a civil penalty of not more than the greater of $250,000 or two times the gross receipts, either known or estimated, that were derived from each offense that is attributable to a defendant.

The enrolled bill would require the United States Sentencing Commission to: (1) review the Federal sentencing guidelines with respect to offenses involving gamma hydroxybutyric acid (GHB) (a controlled substance often used to facilitate sexual assault); and (2) consider amending the Federal sentencing guidelines to provide for increased penalties to reflect the seriousness of offenses involving GHB and the need to deter them.

The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations of $5.9 million to the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) of the Justice Department for hiring a special agent in each State to serve as a Demand Reduction Coordinator. The enrolled bill would authorize appropriations to DEA of such sums as may be necessary to educate youth, parents, and other interested adults about club drugs. Your FY 2004 Budget did not include funding for DEA to hire a special agent in each State to serve as a Demand Reduction Coordinator.

LEGISLATIVE ALERT!

(202) 527-5090

Dear Representative:

Millions of working Americans, including more than 1 million union members and retirees, have been poisoned by asbestos. Many more Americans are certain to become sick or die in years to come. While some asbestos victims have received compensation through the courts, many victims have faced years of delay. The labor movement has for many years supported a variety of efforts to improve asbestos compensation. But some asbestos manufacturers think the solution to this problem is to deny any relief at all to millions of people with asbestos-related disease. That approach is embodied in H.R. 1737, the "Asbestos Victims Compensation Act of 2003," sponsored by Representative Dooley (D-CA), Moran (D-VA) and others.

We are writing to express our strong opposition to H.R. 1737 and to urge you not to co-sponsor this legislation. The approach embodied in this bill not only is unfair to asbestos victims, it is an obstacle to current serious efforts by asbestos victims and their unions, defendant companies and insurers to craft a fair solution to the asbestos compensation crisis.

Asbestos is both a very effective insulator and a deadly poison. Millions of Americans were and are exposed to asbestos in their work in industries ranging from shipbuilding and construction to school maintenance and public service. There are a range of asbestos related diseases—from pleural plaques that may not be noticeable to their victim but do real damage to victims' lungs to fatal cancers and mesothelioma. Large numbers of asbestos victims have asbestosis, a lung disease that lessens the capacity of the lungs. Asbestosis in its milder forms can prevent its victims from being able to do things like play sports or climb stairs. In its most severe forms it is fatal. This bill would deny any compensation at all to the majority of asbestos victims who have real damage to their lungs but who do not have cancer or mesothelioma. That is why the AFL-CIO strongly opposes H.R. 1737 and urges members of Congress not to support it.

We have attached a copy of the principles on asbestos compensation adopted by the AFL-CIO Executive Council. The AFL-CIO has indicated to all those interested in the asbestos issue our interest in developing a consensus reform proposal consistent with these principles and in talking about such a proposal with any group that had an interest in talking to us. Such a consensus proposal would ensure more money went to the sickest asbestos victims and defendants had much greater certainty as to what compensation they would have to pay to asbestos victims in the future. It would do these things while ensuring that all asbestos victims received fair compensation for their particular condition. Discussions are currently underway between the labor movement and a number of major asbestos defendants and other interested parties aimed at crafting such a consensus proposal.

The AFL-CIO is absolutely opposed to any bill that denies millions of asbestos victims any compensation whatsoever. But such a bill is particularly harmful at a time when there are serious efforts underway at reaching a consensus solution to the problems with asbestos compensation. We are strongly urging members of Congress not to endorse any asbestos reform proposal at this time, and particularly not H.R. 1737. Thank you.

Sincerely,

William Samuel, Director

Principles on Asbestos Compensation

August 07, 2002

Chicago, IL

The story of asbestos is one of the most shameful in the annals of the American workplace. Long after manufacturers, their insurance companies and the federal government knew asbestos was a deadly poison, millions of workers were exposed to asbestos. As a result, hundreds of thousands of workers have or will develop serious disease, which in many cases is fatal.

For decades, the victims of asbestos poisoning have sought compensation for the terrible wrongs done to them and their families. With the help of their unions, many asbestos victims have received compensation through the legal system from asbestos manufacturers.

It has been clear since the Manville Industries bankruptcy that asbestos-related liability could exceed the assets of some asbestos manufacturers. In response, some in the labor movement, working together with lawyers for asbestos victims, have sought to enter into both class-action settlements and voluntary claims processing systems with asbestos manufacturers in order to lower the costs of getting compensation to victims.

While some asbestos manufacturers have been responsible participants in these efforts, other manufacturers have unfortunately sought to have laws passed that would limit their liability to their victims. The labor movement has successfully opposed laws designed to deny asbestos victims access to meaningful compensation that shut the doors of the courthouse to them.

However, the labor movement has long recognized that under current law and legal processes many asbestos victims are not being treated fairly or receiving fair and timely compensation. Some victims with early-stage asbestosis are settling their claims prematurely. Some victims who are dying from asbestos-related diseases are unable to get timely resolution of their cases.

At the same time, the burden of paying for the damage done by asbestos has driven many otherwise healthy firms into bankruptcy, with serious consequences for workers and communities dependent on those firms. The unpredictability of the current system has exacerbated these problems.

For all these reasons, the labor movement for years has been willing to engage in good-faith discussions with all interested parties to improve the asbestos compensation process while protecting the rights of asbestos victims. The AFL-CIO's participation in these discussions rests on certain principles the AFL-CIO believes must underlie any asbestos-related initiative:

- Anyone with physiological evidence of exposure to asbestos is a victim who deserves and should receive fair and timely compensation.
- While an administrative payments system may have benefits for some classes of asbestos victims, all those who suffer from such serious conditions as cancers, mesothelioma and advanced asbestosis must have unrestricted access to the courts. There should not be incentives for victims with early stages of asbestos-related diseases to give up their right to compensation should their conditions worsen.
- All those who have been exposed to asbestos should have access to affordable testing and monitoring. To the extent any asbestos-related initiative diminishes the incentive for the plaintiffs' bar to provide testing and monitoring, that initiative should also provide a replacement testing and monitoring system.
- The federal government played a significant role in the widespread use of asbestos, particularly in defense-related industries. The federal government should accept its share of the responsibility for the harm caused by the use of asbestos in the workplace.
- Any reform initiative should reduce the costs, delay and uncertainty involved in getting compensation to victims. No initiative should be a vehicle for asbestos defendants to relitigate issues that have effectively been resolved already in the courts.
- Any effort to address the problems in asbestos compensation should not be misused as a vehicle to enact corporate America's tort reform agenda.

Asbestos Accord Said to Be Near

By ALEX BERENSON

Companies, insurers, unions and Democratic and Republican senators are nearing an agreement in principle to end all asbestos lawsuits and instead pay people with asbestos-related diseases from a national privately financed trust, according to people from all sides who have participated in the talks.

The trust, which would be subject to approval by Congress and President Bush, would pay more than $100 billion to hundreds of thousands of asbestos victims over the next 30 years. It would stop the flood of asbestos lawsuits, 200,000 in the last two years alone, that have strained businesses and the court system.

It would be the second-largest lawsuit settlement ever, exceeded only by tobacco companies' agreement in 1998 to pay states $246 billion for their Medicaid spending on victims of cigarette smoking.

Many details of the trust remain to be worked out, including the exact size of payments to victims and who will pay if the trust unexpectedly runs short of money, and the negotiations could still stall.

Unlike the fund Congress created to compensate victims of the Sept. 11 attacks, an asbestos trust would not allow people to opt out and sue instead. All new and existing claims would be settled through the trust, which would largely or entirely be financed by businesses and insurers, people involved in the talks said. Victims would receive payments more quickly, while businesses would avoid the risk of huge verdicts. And both sides would pay much less to lawyers, who now receive more than half of all the money spent on asbestos litigation, studies say.

Efforts to reduce the rights of asbestos claimants to sue have repeatedly failed in the past. In addition, the law creating a trust would be complicated, and complexity is generally the enemy of legislation. So some experts on asbestos said a trust had little chance of becoming law.

But negotiators for all sides said they disagreed. Democrats and Republicans in Congress seem to agree that the number of asbestos lawsuits has become a crisis, and a trust is the only concept with significant bipartisan support.

In addition, Frederick M. Baron, an influential trial lawyer who has participated in the negotiations, said that the Association of Trial Lawyers of America would not oppose a trust if it offers payments similar to the net amounts, after lawyers' fees, that victims now receive in lawsuits.

Some lawyers will fiercely oppose a trust. But if their lobby stands aside, and unions, companies and insurers can reach a deal, the legislation could pass, Mr. Baron said.

While it might seem surprising that the trial lawyers' group is not fighting a trust, the group has been on the defensive since Republicans gained control of the Senate, and asbestos lawsuits have become particularly controversial.

"A national trust is the best solution," said David Austern, president of an asbestos trust fund that resolves claims against the Johns-Manville Corporation, once the leading maker of asbestos.

Mr. Austern who has watched efforts to resolve asbestos lawsuits since 1988, when he became counsel for the Manville trust, said he thought the trust had a better-than-even chance of becoming law. (Mr. Austern has consulted with Senate staff members, as well as a group of large companies, about the proposed trust. He said he had not been paid for the consulting.)

Creating a trust is a priority for many big businesses, especially manufacturers. Companies worry that they will have to pay hundreds of billions of dollars in claims unless Congress limits lawsuits against them from people who were exposed to asbestos but are not sick. Their concerns have grown in the last two years, after a spate of very large verdicts against companies that did not make asbestos but used it in their factories or products.

Already, lawsuits have forced into bankruptcy almost 70 companies, some of which were only peripherally connected to asbestos. Most American companies stopped using asbestos decades ago, but the number of lawsuits continues to rise. About 700,000 claims have been filed, including 200,000 in the last two years.

At the same time, the trust would ensure that tens of thousands of people who will die over the next 30 years from exposure to asbestos, as well as many others sickened by exposure, will be compensated.

Under the current system of lawsuits, some people who are sick or dying from asbestos exposure receive little money if their exposure happens to have come from companies that are already in bankruptcy. Others, including some who are not sick, get millions of dollars from sympathetic juries.

Most of the money in the trust would go to the sickest people, with the largest payments exceeding $1 million. People who have been exposed to asbestos but are not sick might get up to $1,000, although business groups would prefer much less. The level of payments to people who are not sick is crucial, because if it is set too high, millions of people may apply for payments, draining the trust of money it needs to compensate sick people, said Stephen Carroll, a senior economist at the Rand Institute for Civil Justice who has studied asbestos suits.

While more than half the money paid in the current system goes to plaintiff and defense lawyers, the trust under discussion would pay nearly all its money to victims if they are new claimants. But lawyers who represent people who have already filed claims would receive their standard fees of up to 40 percent of any settlement, meaning those claimants would cost the fund more.

People involved in the discussions say companies that made asbestos or used it in their products, as well as insurance companies, have together offered to pay $90 billion over the next 25 years to pay claims. Insurers and companies would each pay for half its cost. The government might also contribute a nominal amount, or help pay for medical monitoring of people who have been exposed to asbestos but are not sick.

Since the trust's principal would accumulate interest over time, the fund would pay out more than $100 billion in all. That figure is less than half as much as analysts forecast that companies and insurers would eventually spend to resolve asbestos claims under the current system. But because much of the money goes to lawyers under the current system, the companies say, victims would do as well. Trial lawyers say companies and insurers will have to contribute more than $100 billion so that victims do not lose out.

The efforts to build a trust have gained momentum since a meeting on April 1 that included senators and top representatives from the major interest groups. Staff members for Senator Orrin G. Hatch, Republican of Utah and chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and Senator Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, the committee's ranking Democrat, are meeting regularly to hammer out details. Mr. Hatch has said that he would like to introduce legislation next month, people involved in the talks say.

Proponents of a trust have focused on the Senate because it has killed asbestos bills in the past and they assume that if a bill passes the Senate with the endorsement of business, it will clear the House and be signed by the president. A White House spokeswoman said any legislation would be reviewed.

"Right now everyone's at the table," said Ed Pagano, an aide to Senator Leahy.

Barry B. Drenfeld, a lawyer who represents the Asbestos Study Group, an association of about a dozen large companies, including General Electric and General Motors, that strongly favors a trust, said: "We are close to an agreement. Now we're wrestling with the tough decisions to make it a reality."

Still, efforts to end asbestos litigation have foundered in the past, and this plan faces many hurdles. Although they have reached broad agreement on financing, businesses and insurers have not yet decided exactly how much each company would pay or how such assessments would be determined.

Nor has business agreed with labor on how much money the trust would pay to different types of victims, a factor that will determine the overall size of the trust.

The A.F.L.-C.I.O. believes that the $90 billion that companies and insurers have offered is inadequate, said Damon Silvers, the union's associate general counsel.

Another potential complication is that one of the biggest beneficiaries of any such settlement could be Halliburton, the oil services company, which faces asbestos suits that have depressed its stock price. Because Vice President Dick Cheney was chairman of the company, any settlement that benefits Halliburton may be criticized by Democrats.

"The trust creates a number of problems, " said Lester Brickman, a professor at Yeshiva University and an expert on asbestos who is not involved in the talks. "The complexity of it, the decisions about who contributes and how much."

But Mr. Silvers said the disagreement over the size of payments can be resolved. "We can see far clearer than we could a few weeks ago that there's a meeting point on the financial numbers," he said. "We think there's a win-win number."

Utah Sect Leader Criticizes Santorum

The Associated Press

Thursday, April 24, 2003; 8:19 AM

SALT LAKE CITY - The leader of one of Utah's largest polygamist sects has objected to Sen. Rick Santorum's comment lumping plural marriage with other practices the Pennsylvania Republican considers to be antifamily.

Santorum has been under fire for comparing homosexuality to bigamy, polygamy, incest and adultery.

Owen Allred, 89, head of the United Apostolic Brethren, based in the Salt Lake City suburb of Bluffdale, agreed with Santorum in part.

"He is absolutely right. The people of the United States are doing whatever they can to do away with the sacred rights of marriage," Allred told The Salt Lake Tribune.

But Allred said Santorum's inclusion of polygamy in his list tarnishes a religious tradition whose roots are traced to biblical figures such as Abraham, Jacob and Moses - defiling them as "immoral and dirty."

In an interview with The Associated Press published over the weekend, Santorum criticized homosexuality while discussing a pending Supreme Court case over a Texas sodomy law.

"If the Supreme Court says that you have the right to consensual (gay) sex within your home, then you have the right to bigamy, you have the right to polygamy, you have the right to incest, you have the right to adultery. You have the right to anything," Santorum said.

"Whether it's polygamy, whether it's adultery, where it's sodomy, all of those things, are antithetical to a healthy, stable, traditional family," he said.

Polygamy was abandoned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints more than a century ago and it excommunicates members who advocate it, but it is estimated that tens of thousands in Utah continue the practice. Membership estimates for Allred's church range from 4,000 to 6,000, and there also are a number of independent polygamists loosely affiliated with Allred's group.

Santorum is chairman of the GOP conference in the Senate, third in his party's leadership, behind Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee and Assistant Majority Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky. Gay rights groups and some Democrats have suggested he be removed from the conference post.

Speaking at a town hall meeting in Pennsylvania on Wednesday, Santorum defended his comments and said they were similar to what Justice Byron White wrote in the 1986 Supreme Court ruling that consenting adults have no constitutional right to private homosexual sex.

"To suggest that my comments, which are the law of the land and were the reason the Supreme Court decided the case in 1986, are somehow intolerant, I would just argue that it is not," Santorum said.

HEADLINE: Bush aims at federal tort reform

BYLINE: Scott S. Greenberger

BODY:

Hoping to reinforce his new "reform" message with an issue that was a winner in his campaign for governor six years ago, Republican presidential front-runner George W. Bush on Wednesday unveiled a plan to curb frivolous federal lawsuits.

Changing the way that Texas courts assign blame and award damages in lawsuits involving civil wrongs known as torts was one of Bush's four main themes in his 1994 gubernatorial contest against Ann Richards. In 1995, he helped guide seven tort reform bills through the Texas Legislature. Although the specifics of those measures differ from Wednesday's proposal, the overarching goal is the same: make it harder for plaintiffs to win high-dollar damages against companies, doctors and insurers.

To counter Arizona Sen. John McCain's surge, the Bush campaign this week began referring to their candidate as a "reformer with results." The tort reform issue fits neatly into that theme, since Bush indisputably followed through on his 1994 campaign promise. In doing so, he overcame the trial lawyers, a powerful Democratic constituency.

"Too often, our courts aren't serving people, they are serving the lawyers," Bush said. "Frivolous lawsuits are threatening jobs and delaying access to the courts for those who have legitimate claims."

But consumer advocates worry that the changes would make it easier for businesses to get away with selling products and services that hurt people. Ralph Nader accused Bush of "cozying up to corporate power-brokers and wrongdoers" for campaign cash.

Bush's plan includes stiffer penalties for lawsuits determined by judges to be frivolous, including a "three strikes, you're out" rule for lawyers who repeatedly file such claims. It also would require parties who reject a pretrial settlement offer, and who ultimately lose their case or receive substantially less at trial, to pay the other party's costs, including legal fees. The plan would make it easier for cases to be moved from state to federal courts, which are generally viewed as friendlier to defendants.

Bush also proposed a "Client's Bill of Rights" that would allow federal courts to hear challenges to attorneys' fees. A vociferous opponent of the $3.3 billion fee that Texas paid private lawyers in the state's tobacco lawsuit, Bush would force private attorneys to return any "excessive" fees to government. He also pledged to issue an executive order prohibiting federal agencies from paying contingency fees.

In unveiling his plan at a roundtable discussion with small-business owners at Newberry College in Newberry, S.C., Bush argued that Texas tort reforms have saved consumers and businesses nearly $3 billion since 1995. Fewer large insurance claims have translated into lower insurance rates for consumers, businesses and doctors, he says. Business groups say the changes have boosted the Texas economy by transforming the state from the "lawsuit capital of the world" into a place where the civil justice system is predictable and consistent.

Nelson Litterst of the National Federation of Independent Business applauded the Bush plan, saying that even the threat of lawsuits can put small companies out of business. But some question the benefits of tort reform in Texas, and worry about taking it to the federal level.

"The savings are going to doctors, manufacturers and big business, but consumers are seeing very small savings if they're seeing any at all," Dan Lambe of Texas Watch, a research group, said of the 1995 changes.

Lambe referred to a recent report by former Texas Insurance Commissioner J. Robert Hunter that suggests the state's tort reform efforts have had a minimal impact on insurance rates. The report, for the Consumer Federation of America, said premiums for coverages affected by tort reform increased 8.2 percent from 1995 through 1998.

Confirmation battles heating up

A new conservative interest group is raising money and warning Democratic senators, including Louisiana's, that their votes on President Bush's judicial nominees are being closely watched. The Committee for Justice, led by C. Boyden Gray, former general counsel to the first President Bush, said it is creating radio and television ads in English and Spanish to be launched in states where Democrats face re-election next year. The former president has been helping raise money, hosting a $5,000-per-person fund-raiser at his Houston home two weeks ago. Senate Democrats have been filibustering the nomination of Miguel Estrada, and their leaders suggested last week that Priscilla Owen, a nominee to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, might also be targeted. Sen. Mary Landrieu, D-La., is supporting the Estrada filibuster, while Louisiana's senior senator, John Breaux, is one of the few Democrats against it. Last week, neither would discuss their views on Owen or whether they would support another Democratic-led filibuster. Landrieu won re-election last year; Breaux has not said whether he will seek another six years when his term ends next year.

Sen. Mary Landrieu, D-La., is supporting the Estrada filibuster, while Louisiana's senior senator, John Breaux, is one of the few Democrats against it. Last week, neither would discuss their views on Owen or whether they would support another Democratic-led filibuster. Landrieu won re- election last year; Breaux has not said whether he will seek another six years when his term ends next year.

ROELL v. WITHROW, No. 02-69 (U.S.S.C. April 29, 2003)
Under the expanded power of magistrate judges authorized by the Federal Magistrate Act of 1979, consent to a magistrate judge's designation can be inferred from a party's conduct during litigation, such as through a general appearance before a magistrate after having been told of the right to appear before a district judge.

REQUEST: White House Briefing for the Corporate Council on Africa and Liberty Education Forum

BACKGROUND:

Corporate Council on Africa:

The Corporate Council on Africa (CCA), established in 1992, is at the forefront of strengthening and facilitating the commercial relationship between the United States and the African continent. CCA works closely with governments, multilateral groups and business to improve the African continent's trade and investment climate, and to raise the profile of Africa in the US business community.

CCA programs are designed to bring together potential business partners and raise Africa's investment profile in the US by developing critical contacts and business relationships and providing a forum for the exchange of information and ideas.

Liberty Education Forum

Liberty Education Forum (LEF) was originally established to provide a non-partisan education and research component to complement the work of the Log Cabin Republicans. But with a full-scale launching on July 21, 2001, the Liberty Education Forum is a brand new educational think tank - based in Washington, D.C. - that is dedicated to new ideas and new directions for the gay community, with a centrist approach. The mission of the Liberty Education Forum is to work toward achieving individual freedom and fairness for gay Americans by applying the principles of individual rights, individual responsibilities, free markets and limited government.

The Log Cabin Republicans are a part of the White House Judicial Coalition as well as the AIDS Coalition.

Brett - I hadn't realized that the final terrorism insurance bill, while providing a federal backstop actually included a tax on insurance premiums so that the gov't would get reimbursed essentially for amounts paid out as a backstop. What do you think of using some form of that to substitute for a federal backstop for asbestos? I don't mean have the Gov't kick in the backstop and then get reimbursed by the tax, but have the tax, and have it go straight into the fund. A tax like this contributing to the fund that is a % of premiums is actually one that has potential to increase - if premiums increase.

This idea was presented to me from someone in industry - but they had not vetted it or obtained consensus on it from industry. Just wanted your gut reaction. We want to find a way to avoid a federal backstop but give Labor some security regarding a potential shortfall.

Brett - I hadn't realized that the final terrorism insurance bill, while providing a federal backstop actually included a tax on insurance premiums so that the gov't would get reimbursed essentially for amounts paid out as a backstop. What do you think of using some form of that to substitute for a federal backstop for asbestos? I don't mean have the Gov't kick in the backstop and then get reimbursed by the tax, but have the tax, and have it go straight into the fund. A tax like this contributing to the fund that is a % of premiums is actually one that has potential to increase - if premiums increase.

This idea was presented to me from someone in industry - but they had not vetted it or obtained consensus on it from industry. Just wanted your gut reaction. We want to find a way to avoid a federal backstop but give Labor some security regarding a potential shortfall.

Is there any way someone could make a better copy (that is all white) before FAXing. It came across really shaded and nearly impossible to read, which makes it hard usefully to pass around on Hill.

By ANNE GEARAN

The Associated Press

Wednesday, April 30, 2003: 3:28 PM

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration appealed to the Supreme Court on Wednesday to preserve the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance recited by school children.

The reference does not amount to unconstitutional government promotion of religion, the administration's top Supreme Court lawyer wrote in a court filing.

"Whatever else the (Constitution's) establishment clause may prohibit, this court's precedents make clear that it does not forbid the government from officially acknowledging the religious heritage, foundation and character of this nation," Solicitor General Theodore Olson wrote in a court filing.

"That is what the Pledge of Allegiance does. The pledge is therefore constitutional."

The Justice Department and a California school district asked the high court to reverse a federal appeals court ruling last year that banned the teacher-led pledge in public schools.

The Constitution says the government may not establish religion. In practice that has meant the government cannot endorse or promote religion in general, or favor one religion over another.

The Supreme Court has twice declared the pledge is constitutional, and numerous justices have assumed as much in other writings, Olson argued.

The administration asked the court to hear its appeal in the term that begins in the fall. The court could decide before summer whether to take the case.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was so far out of bounds that the Supreme Court could simply strike down the ruling without even hearing arguments on the case, Olson suggested.

In March, the sharply divided San Francisco appeals court voted not to reconsider its earlier ruling on the pledge. In the initial ruling last June, two judges on a three-judge panel ruled that the regular morning classroom salute to the American flag is unconstitutional because of the phrase "one nation, under God."

The ban is on hold while the school district appeals. The Bush administration joined the case and filed its own appeal. If allowed to take effect in the nine states covered by the 9th Circuit, the pledge ban would affect 9.6 million children in public schools.

Agree. That also makes my suggestion to mention life tenure somewhat problematic since many states do not have life tenured judges. On the other hand, that was the Framers primary way to ensure judicial independence for federal judges, along with no salary diminution.

Got them. Thanks. I do not think the attempt to incorporate State issues here works. Most states elect their judges -- the antithesis of independent judges it seems to me. What do you think?

Subject: Asbestso and Terrorism Insurance tax on industry

Brett - I hadn't realized that the final terrorism insurance bill, while providing a federal backstop actually included a tax on insurance premiums so that the gov't would get reimbursed essentially for amounts paid out as a backstop. What do you think of using some form of that to substitute for a federal backstop for asbestos? I don't mean have the Gov't kick in the backstop and then get reimbursed by the tax, but have the tax, and have it go straight into the fund. A tax like this contributing to the fund that is a % of premiums is actually one that has potential to increase - if premiums increase.

This idea was presented to me from someone in industry - but they had not vetted it or obtained consensus on it from industry. Just wanted your gut reaction. We want to find a way to avoid a federal backstop but give Labor some security regarding a potential shortfall.

FYI - from the PM Edition of Congress Daily...

Leahy Seeks Support For Alternative Class Action Measure
With business lobbyists scrambling to capture the support of a supermajority in the Senate for a pending class action reform bill tentatively slated for May floor action, Senate Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., today began petitioning support for an alternative measure he has drafted. "My legislation would take the necessary steps to correct problems in class action litigation and expand federal court jurisdiction for truly national or regional class action cases," Leahy wrote in a letter to senators. "For example, my bill solves the problem of worthless coupon settlements by eliminating any incentive for collusion between plaintiffs and defendants' counsel. The portion of the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel must be based on the value of the coupon settlements actually redeemed under my legislation," Leahy wrote. "Indeed, this provision is stronger than the one proposed in other class action legislation, which merely asks the judge to scrutinize coupon settlements." The pending legislation, which was reported out of the Judiciary Committee earlier this month with the support of all Republicans but only two of the panel's Democrats, is vigorously opposed by key Democratic constituents in the trial bar, and also by consumer advocates, civil rights groups and environmental lobbyists. Leahy said his alternative bill also would track with a detailed plan for expanding federal district court jurisdiction for significant multistate class actions, suggested last month by the U.S. Judicial Conference, the policy-making body for the federal judiciary. A source close to the Association of Trial Lawyers of America said ATLA had not seen the Leahy class action alternative, but had heard details of it. "I'm doubtful whether [ATLA] would endorse it, but, based on what we heard, we certainly think it makes more sense than the other version," the source added. "In fact, it is the only legislation proposed on class actions that will actually propose a solution to any possible problem that exists or with coupon class action settlements." -- by Pamela Barnett

I just can't help myself - - we "only" got two Democrats in the Judiciary Committee so we are "scrambling." On the otherhand Leahy, who now is motivated only by the fact that he lost his ass in Committee, and criticism for not giving ATLA puppets cover with some alternative to save face, is "petitioning."

Interesting wording.

Of course the Leahy staff's creative spin on the Judicial Conference is, well, simply Leahyesk.

Leahy Seeks Support For Alternative Class Action Measure

With business lobbyists scrambling to capture the support of a supermajority in the Senate for a pending class action reform bill tentatively slated for May floor action, Senate Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., today began petitioning support for an alternative measure he has drafted. "My legislation would take the necessary steps to correct problems in class action litigation and expand federal court jurisdiction for truly national or regional class action cases," Leahy wrote in a letter to senators. "For example, my bill solves the problem of worthless coupon settlements by eliminating any incentive for collusion between plaintiffs and defendants' counsel. The portion of the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel must be based on the value of the coupon settlements actually redeemed under my legislation," Leahy wrote. "Indeed, this provision is stronger than the one proposed in other class action legislation, which merely asks the judge to scrutinize coupon settlements."

On the "In Focus" part of web page, I think we should add "Judges" or "Judicial Appointments Process" or "Judicial Nomination and Confirmation Process" -- that gives easy place for people to find.

////////// JUDICIAL NOMINATION PROCESS NEEDS "A FRESH START"

////////// - Freshmen Senators seek a bipartisan solution; ask leadership to improve process for consideration of judicial nominations -

////////// WASHINGTON ) U.S. Sens. John Cornyn

(R-Texas) and Mark Pryor (D-Ark.), joined by all freshmen Senators, urged the Senate leadership Wednesday to seek a fresh start and create a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. Cornyn, a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, led the group of new Senators in petitioning for timely consideration of all judicial nominees.

;;;;;; "The Senate needs to find an end to the downward spiral of accusations, obstruction and delay," Cornyn said. "The President's nominees, and in fact our entire judicial system, deserve no less."

;;;;;; In the letter, the Senators wrote that, "when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the grounds of how a prior nominee -- typically, the nominees of a previous President -- was treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate."

;;;;;; The letter continued: "None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future."

;;;;;; Rather than continue the obstruction that has plagued nominees in the past, the ten Senators committed themselves to solutions for all nominees. "We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us."

;;;;;; The letter was sent to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee, and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle. It was signed by Sens. Cornyn, Pryor, Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.), Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga), Norm Coleman (R-Minn.), Elizabeth Dole (R-NC), Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), John Sununu (R-NH), and Jim Talent (R-Mo). Also copied on the letter were Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) and the panel's senior Democrat, Patrick Leahy (D-Vt).

;;;;;; Sen. Cornyn will hold a hearing of the Constitution subcommittee on May 6 to discuss reform of the broken judicial process. The hearing, titled Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent, will be held in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Room 226 at 2 p.m. The hearing will take place nearly two years after the President announced his first class of nominees to the federal courts of appeals, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Her nomination is currently being filibustered in the Senate.

;;;;;; Sen. Cornyn chairs the subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights & Property Rights, and is the only former judge on the committee. He also serves on the Armed Services, Environment and Public Works, and Budget Committees. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice, and Bexar County District Judge.;;;;;;

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration appealed to the Supreme Court on Wednesday to preserve the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance recited by school children.

The reference does not amount to unconstitutional government promotion of religion, the administration's top Supreme Court lawyer wrote in a court filing.

"Whatever else the (Constitution's) establishment clause may prohibit, this court's precedents make clear that it does not forbid the government from officially acknowledging the religious heritage, foundation and character of this nation," Solicitor General Theodore Olson wrote in a court filing.

"That is what the Pledge of Allegiance does. The pledge is therefore constitutional."

The Justice Department and a California school district asked the high court to reverse a federal appeals court ruling last year that banned the teacher-led pledge in public schools.

The Constitution says the government may not establish religion. In practice that has meant the government cannot endorse or promote religion in general, or favor one religion over another.

The Supreme Court has twice declared the pledge is constitutional, and numerous justices have assumed as much in other writings, Olson argued.

The administration asked the court to hear its appeal in the term that begins in the fall. The court could decide before summer whether to take the case.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was so far out of bounds that the Supreme Court could simply strike down the ruling without even hearing arguments on the case, Olson suggested.

In March, the sharply divided San Francisco appeals court voted not to reconsider its earlier ruling on the pledge. In the initial ruling last June, two judges on a three-judge panel ruled that the regular morning classroom salute to the American flag is unconstitutional because of the phrase "one nation, under God."

The ban is on hold while the school district appeals. The Bush administration joined the case and filed its own appeal. If allowed to take effect in the nine states covered by the 9th Circuit, the pledge ban would affect 9.6 million children in public schools.

Some tidbits: Some Senators during first Congress and particularly Crittendon nomination (albeit an odd circumstance) recognized their constitutional responsibility to act on nominations.

Some quotes from Crittendon nom proceedings:

-- "No one doubts the right of the Senate to take that time which is indispensable to decide upon the character and qualifications of the candidate, but beyond this they have no right to go."

-- "Appointments should be made with all convenient speed. Of the expediency, we have no discretion; that has been determined by the law creating the office and that must be obeyed. We have no right, no constitutional power, to resist its execution."

-- "The duty of the Senate is confined to an inquiry into the character and qualifications of the person, and to a decisive action upon the nomination, in a reasonable time. The time must be limited to what is necessary to make the inquiry, and to satisfy the Senate."

Brett:

1. Was the first half of the following sentence intended as a concession on the point of what the Constitutional power and duty of the Senate is: "Senate has the raw power to delay and obstruct, but it also has a constitutional responsibility to act."

2. Doesn't the argument that the act-within-a-reasonable-time standard is constitutionally mandated, because the Senate could otherwise depopulate and thereby destroy the third branch, fail to take account of the following checks: (a) voter intolerance (at some point, obviously not yet reached) for such shenanigans and (b) the President's ability to exercise the recess power to fill vacancies whenever the Senate goes out?

Yes, but then there's this (still reflected in Senate Standing Rule XXXI):

"On February 18, 1843, the Senate adopted the following resolution: 'That nominations made by the President to the Senate, and which are neither approved nor rejected during the session at which they are made, shall not be acted upon at any succeeding session without being again made by the President, and that such shall hereafter be the rule of the Senate.'" U.S. v. Smith, 286 U.S. 6 (1932)

Well, you sure sweet-talked me with that "Cf. Senate 'trial' of President Clinton."

It looks to me like you and I are just going to see the Constitutional duty of the Senate differently here, but we agree on the substance -- dammit, they ought to vote -- and you are doing the Lord's work (almost alone on the White House staff, as near as I can tell, but maybe I don't see all the work that Legislative Affairs and Communications are doing), so keep it up and let me know if I could actually do something useful instead of bugging you with e-mails on tangential issues.

The quotation below from Sen. Schumer, taken from an AP story from today, is exactly right. The emerging test for judicial confirmation is, if you get at least one D vote in committee, you get confirmed; if not, you get filibustered.

"If we don't get nine votes against them in the Judiciary Committee, it will be a difficult thing to hold it up on the floor of the Senate," said Schumer, who sits on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "That's our rule of thumb."

You certainly make the best argument you can -- but it doesn't persuade me. I put a lot of weight on this specific textual commitment of power to the Senate: "Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings . . . ." All your quotations of Senators on the Floor are handy (and we ought to make good, political, use of them), but I still don't think it is accurate that the Constitution imposes a duty on the Senate for an up-or-down vote and consent-or-rejection within a reasonable time.

Maybe We Should Rock The Boat After All

Washington Post's Dewar reports, "Faced with deepening political strife" over Bush's jud. nominees, sens. from both parties on 4/30 called for "overhaul of the nomination and confirmation process but offered conflicting solutions" -- "signaling that reform will not come easily." The first came from the Senate's "10 freshmen" -- nine GOPers and one Dem -- "who, in a letter to party leaders, urged an unspecified 'bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees and leave the bitterness of the past behind us.'"

Another came from Jud. Cmte member Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY), a "sharp critic of many of Bush's most conservative nominees." A letter to Bush from Schumer "proposed the creation of bipartisan nominating commissions in all states and judicial circuits to propose one candidate for each vacancy, who would then be nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate."

Writes Dewar: "While the freshmen made no specific proposals," Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX), "who joined with" Sen. Mark Pryor (D-AR) "to organize their effort, said he would like the Senate to shield judicial nominations from filibusters." While it is "unusual for freshmen to take such step in their first few months in office," the 10 "suggested in their letter that they are uniquely qualified as newcomers to suggest judicial process changes because they were not part of struggles that contributed to the current strife." Bush had "made a similar proposal" in '02 but "got nowhere, in part because" sens. are "reluctant to tamper with a power they may want to use someday."

Sen. Zell Miller (D-GA) "has proposed a process under which the 60-vote requirement would be reduced gradually to a simple majority," while Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA) "has proposed a series of deadlines for everything up to a final vote by the Senate, leaving open the option of a filibuster." Specter: "I think there is cause to preclude a filibuster, but I don't think you can get there in one bite" (5/1).

Owen Fight

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (R-TX) "and a gaggle" of TX female attys, including one Dem, held a presser on 4/30 "praising" the record of TX Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Hutchison: "I'm really stunned at how hard it has been to get this totally qualified woman confirmed ... She is one of the finest people I have ever known." Hutchison "said she is furious" of what she called Dems' "mistreatment" of Owen, and "vowed to use her leadership position" as GOP conf. vice chair "to push for a rule change that would disallow filibustering" jud. nominees.

The message "did not appear to sway" any female Dems, "many of whom" -- including Sens. Patty Murray (D-WA), Maria Cantwell (D-WA), Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI), on 4/30 "spoke out against Owen on the Senate floor" (Masterson, Houston Chronicle, 4/30). But Dems are also "working hard to prove that they do not oppose all of Bush's nominees by moving for a vote" on jud. nominee Edward Prado -- but the Senate "rebuffed" the effort on 4/29. Senate Min. Leader Tom Daschle (D-SD): "We may disagree on the Owen nomination, but there is no reason we should not pass those nominees for which there is no disagreement." Frist "filed for cloture" on Owen's nod on 4/29, "meaning the Senate will vote" on 5/1 "whether to end debate" (Duran, Roll Call, 5/1). FNC's Hume: "On Capitol Hill, it seems like there are harsh words almost every time when one of President Bush's judicial nominees are coming up for action" ("Special Report," 4/30).

FNC's Rosen: "Republicans may be more frustrated with their own Senate leader, Bill Frist, who some say is not making Democrats feel enough pain for their blockage of Bush nominees" ("Special Report," 4/30). Sen. Trent Lott (R-MS), on Dem filibustering: "Surely in the past when I was majority leader, we did, you know, scrutinize Clinton's nominees, some of them were delayed in committee, some delayed on the floor. But never once, never once, did we kill one by a filibuster. I don't think we can let this stand. And we have got to stop the filibuster of Estrada and Owen" ("Hannity & Colmes," FNC, 4/30).

Finally, A Few Soft Pitches

Bush is "expected to nominate" ex-TX Supreme Court Justice Xavier Rodriguez and State District Judge Frank Montalvo to fed'l judgeships on 5/1. He also will appoint to fill vacancies on the TX fed'l bench TX Appeals Court Justice Lee Yeakel, visiting District Judge Kathleen Cardone and US Magistrate Judge Marcia Crone. All are "noncontroversial candidates" recommended by Cornyn and Hutchison (Martin, San Antonio Express-News, 5/1).

Get Stabenow

Detroit News' Weeks writes, the 6th US Circuit Court of Appeals, with "four of five vacancies ... supposed to be filled" by MI judges, "has more vacancies than any other federal appeals court." Bush "long ago nominated the four. But, alas, they have been twisting in the wind because of the same kind of bitter partisan gamesmanship that sidelined" MIians nominated by ex-Pres. Bush and ex-Pres. Clinton. The MI Four "have not even received a hearing in the GOP-ruled" Senate Jud. Cmte because Sens. Carl Levin (D-MI) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) "essentially have blackballed them. The committee has this quaint tradition of not taking up a nominee if a senator from the nominee's home state, regardless of party, objects by withholding return of 'blue slips' on them." Advises Weeks: "Chuck the tradition. One senator should not be able to prevent a vote by 99 others." Weeks Writes: "I visit the subject today because" the MI Legal Foundation, "currently housed at the conservative" Mackinac Center for Public Policy, "began running radio ads ... attacking" Stabenow for "playing politics" with the nods, similar to earlier ads by Mackinac, attacking both Stabenow and Levin. MI Legal has raised $100K "for ads on the issue." Writes Weeks: "Why now single out just Stabenow? Because she is the next" MI sen. "up for re-election -- in three years" -- and GOPers "want to turn up the heat in areas where they think she is more vulnerable. They also figure she's more likely to cave than Levin -- and that he would go along with any compromise acceptable to her" (5/1). From the 60-second radio ad, produced by MPGH:

President Bush has nominated four respected judges from Michigan to fill vacancies on the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. Each judge has received high marks from the American Bar Association. But Senator Debbie Stabenow ... won't let her Senate colleagues hold a hearing on Michigan's judges. If Stabenow keeps playing politics, Michigan could lose its voice on the second-highest court in the land. That's right Michigan's positions ... could end up being filled by judges from Kentucky or Tennessee, and that would be a travesty of justice for Michigan.

Asbestos Litigation Talks Focus On Trust Fund Structure

ÿÿÿÿÿ The politically loaded question of how to balance corporate defendants' desire to cap their asbestos litigation exposure with victims' demand for guaranteed compensation even if a private trust fund runs dry has become a major focus of ongoing legislative negotiations being overseen by the Senate Judiciary Committee. In a meeting Wednesday among labor officials, corporate representatives, insurers and Senate aides from both parties, the discussion of risk -- who should bear it and to what degree -- was a key topic of conversation, sources said. Additional meetings were planned for today and for Friday.

ÿÿÿÿÿ Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who is part of the negotiations, today told CongressDaily that providing certainty for all sides would be a significant and "challenging" part of the debate. It is probably impossible to get a bill "in the absence" of an amicable resolution of those concerns, Dodd added. However, Dodd refused to say whether he would support making the federal government the guarantor for an asbestos compensation fund. "That's as much as you're going to squeeze out of me," Dodd joked. As for the overall negotiations, "They're on track," Dodd said. Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch, who is running the negotiations, said Tuesday he still plans to mark up legislation this month -- regardless of whether labor and management have resolved their differences. Sources said Hatch's aides have nearly finished drafting the markup vehicle.

ÿÿÿÿÿ Participants in Wednesday's meeting exchanged ideas about whether the bill's proposed trust fund would be open-ended. Although there were no conclusions reached, sources from various sectors agreed the meeting was extremely productive and warranted a timely follow up. "Doing this right is very complicated," said Damon Silvers, associate general counsel for the AFL-CIO, which is representing labor in the negotiations. While acknowledging Hatch's desire to adhere to a fixed timetable, "I think all sides know that we need to be united on the front end consensus process -- that way we don't need as much time on the back end of the process," Silvers said.

ÿÿÿÿÿ Labor officials have insisted they would not accept a closed-ended trust fund absent a structure for bearing the risk in the event the fund runs dry. "I think it is very, very important to the labor movement that asbestos victims not bear the risk of [there being] not enough money in this fund. -- We are going to find it very difficult to find a solution if we can't do that," Silvers added. Silvers and industry sources at the meeting said various means for ensuring that goal were discussed. But Silvers said it would "be difficult to do it without a federal guarantee behind the fund" -- and defendant companies and insurers are highly skeptical whether that is politically feasible. Silvers acknowledged that a federal guarantee "needs to be so far out on the edge that it is not a real imposition on the taxpayer. We understand that the federal government's need is for that role to very minimal -- on paper perhaps, but that is never drawn upon." -- by Pamela Barnett yes, read that one (though John Eastman is my favorite commentator who has written on this). I liked the Senate provision quoted in that article from Aug. 21, 1789: "Resolved, That when nominations shall be made in writing by the President of the United States to the Senate, a future day shall be assigned, unless the Senate unanimously direct otherwise, for taking them into consideration.... All questions shall be put by the President of the Senate, either in the presence or absence of the President of the United States; and the Senators shall signify their assent or dissent by answering, viva voce, ay or no."

We will get a list together. If possible, it would be nice also to invite folks in the FBI BI unit who worked hard to pull the BI reports together.

Brett/Nanette:

Per Brian's e-mail below, he hopes that you will both be able to speak to the regional appointees on May 20th at 1:30pm in EEOB 450. It would be a 30 min. session with Brett speaking for 15 min. on the Hatch Act, and Nanette for 15 min. on Ethics. Does this time work in your schedules??

Thank you!!

Subject: Regional Appointees Conference

David/Brett:

The Offices of Cabinet Affairs, Presidential Personnel, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, and the Council for Excellence in Government are together sponsoring a two-day conference entitled "Regional Appointees: Challenges and Opportunities," scheduled for May 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC.

This conference will be the first of its kind during this Administration and will include regional appointees from several Cabinet and sub-Cabinet agencies such as Education, Interior, Labor, EPA, HHS, FEMA, GSA, HUD and SBA. It will be held at the nearby Mayflower Hotel, with several sessions taking place in Room 450 EEOB.

Given your office's stake in such an event, we want to involve you in the conference's program workshops and plenary sessions. In working with the agencies, we have identified roughly 85 regional political appointees that we have invited to attend the conference. Other local agency personnel, including inter-governmental affairs staff, will also be invited.

The purpose of the conference is to better engage our regional appointees as representatives of the President around the country and to give them a chance to meet and hear from senior White House officials and agency leaders. Sessions will focus on a variety of vital issues including:

- ú Management Results / President's Management Team

- ú Building Support for the President's Agenda

- ú Freedom Corps / Faith-Based Initiatives

- ú Hatch Act / Ethics

- ú Policy Perspectives

- ú Homeland Security

- ú Working Together for Greater Regional Impact

- ú Legislative Update

- ú Foreign Policy Update

We have tentatively scheduled your presentation for Tuesday afternoon, May 20 in Room 450 EEOB (exact time is TBD).; We would hope you could discuss your insights on the Hatch Act and ethics in government.; We would also hope you could join us for a reception to be held later that evening.

We would greatly appreciate your participation, and I know that the Regional Appointees would appreciate hearing from you and will be happy to take your perspectives back with them to their respective regions. Please feel free to contact me should you have additional questions or you may have your assistant contact Christie Parell (6-2343); to confirm your availability.;

Many thanks in advance,

Brian Montgomery

Brett, let David know that unless Liz emails these to the web site, they don't go up. It is an automatic feature, but it is up to Liz (or whomever in the press office puts out the release). I'll check into it.

Z and I just discussed; this event. Z likes focusing on the jr senators only, provided Pryor will show up. I have placed a call to Pryor's COS to see what he thinks.

Z's concern with the bigger event; is that they (Leahy, Daschle et al) could decide to show and go to sticks to discuss the large numbers that have been confirmed. They could impact the solution message with numbers to show that a problem really doesn't exist. So, under this plan, we would just invite the ten that signed the letter which was the Judge's original thought, I recall. I assume that is ok with you, so let's see what Pryor's reaction is, ok?

These remarks did make it to the web site yesterday. They made it to the news index page. It is incumbent upon the PPO office to update the Nominations section of the web site. Unfortunately, they don't do it as often as we'd like. We've always asked that they update the info nightly. Instead it gets updated 2 - 3 times per week. If you guys can make them do it more quickly, have at it. I can't. Katja is the contact.

2. I would only consider the fet issue resolved when the IRS is fully aware that w.h. is no longer paying fet, but that our broker air partner is.; Brett & Adam may be up to speed and all agree on how it should work (i.e. the way it is now) but I don't believe anyone's contacted the;IRS.

Does someone need to contact the IRS?; If yes, who would be the appropriate person?

The court just called. The opinion will be available for the parties on CD-ROM at 3:30. It's being announced to the press at 3:45. I was informed that the court's opinion is 1,600 pages long. I am not kidding.

I will go to the courthouse now and pick it up. (Anyone in Fed Programs who wants to join me is welcome.) We in Fed Programs will get the opinion distributed electronically and in hard copy as fast as we absolutely can.

From an AP story:

Prado, 55, was confirmed by the Senate on Thursday to fill a vacancy on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, based in New Orleans. The vote was 97-0. Three Senators did not vote.

"I want to know who the three were who had more important things to do than vote for me," quipped Prado, a colorful jurist nominated for the position by President Bush in February.

Z and I just discussed; this event. Z likes focusing on the jr senators only, provided Pryor will show up. I have placed a call to Pryor's COS to see what he thinks.

Z's concern with the bigger event;is that they (Leahy, Daschle et al) could decide to show and go to sticks to discuss the large numbers that have been confirmed. They could impact the solution message with numbers to show that a problem really doesn't exist.

So, under this plan, we would just invite the ten that signed the letter which was the Judge's original thought, I recall. I assume that is ok with you, so let's see what Pryor's reaction is, ok?

There is a time for talking and a time for voting. The time is past for the U.S. Senate to talk about Miguel Estrada's nomination to the federal Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia circuit. It's time to vote.

Having emigrated from Honduras as a teenager unable to speak much English, Mr. Estrada went on to graduate magna cum laude from Columbia University and Harvard Law School, to clerk for a Supreme Court justice, to serve two administrations in the U.S. solicitor general's office, to win more than a dozen cases in the Supreme Court. In short, the 42-year-old lawyer is talented. Who knew that talent would extend to tying the Senate in knots for days on end.

Democrats by now are in full filibuster. Senate proceedings, as carried on C-Span, resemble the film Groundhog Day, where the main character has to relive the same day over and over again. Every day, it's the same thing. Democrats get up, march over to the podium, shuffle papers and recite their main complaint with Mr. Estrada – that he's conservative, unconventional and unapologetic. That when he had the chance to hand them the rope with which to hang him during his hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, he refused to hold up his end.

Democrats haven't liked Mr. Estrada from the beginning. Part of that is due to his ideology – which is decidedly not Democratic. But part of it also has to do with the fellow who nominated him. Democrats don't relish giving President Bush one more thing to brag about when he goes into Hispanic neighborhoods during his re-election campaign next year. They are even less interested in putting a conservative Republican in line to become the first Hispanic justice on the Supreme Court.

And so they have talked and talked, in hopes that Republicans will back down. They won't. Nor should they.

Republicans certainly stalled their share of appointments during the Clinton administration. But Democrats are being shortsighted in seeking retaliation. It is precisely these sorts of narrowly motivated temper tantrums – from both sides of the political aisle – that turn off voters and make cynics of the American people. When that happens, it doesn't matter which nominees get confirmed or rejected. Everybody loses.

Viet has asked that one of you reach out to Joan, and then advise whether he should talk to her. Can one of you please handle?

Heather C- Who is handling inquiries on judges in Monica's absense?

Can we have East Room as backup for the Judges event in case of rain. Is that possible? We used East Room on May 9, 2001, for original judges event and on October 30, 2002 for other major judges event. And we have about 250 folks coming, including about 10 Senators, ABA President, etc. Thanks.

I think we affirmatively decided not to contact the IRS. Let me loop back to Adam and Eric.

Note from Eric Terrell, Director, WH Travel Office:

2. I would only consider the fet issue resolved when the IRS is fully aware that w.h. is no longer paying fet, but that our broker air partner is. Brett & Adam may be up to speed and all agree on how it should work (i.e. the way it is now) but I don't believe anyone's contacted the IRS.

Does someone need to contact the IRS? If yes, who would be the appropriate person?

We would, but as I am sure you are aware, the state floor opens up to tours next week.; Having this event in the east room would mean cancelling tours (which is why you are ccing colleen, I assume).; The president has an afternoon commencement that day and therefore we cannot move this event to the afternoon.; The only 2 solutions I see are:

Move the event to another date (I know this is the anniversary)

Or

Move tours to the afternoon that day

Colleen - can you let us know if that is possible?

Thanks!; And sorry for all of this brett!

;;;;;; Can we have East Room as backup for the Judges event in case of rain.; Is that possible?; We used East Room on May 9, 2001, for original judges event and on October 30, 2002 for other major judges event.; And we have about 250 folks coming, including about 10 Senators, ABA President, etc.; Thanks.

Comments of Majority Leader Bill Frist after the failed vote to end the Owen filibuster:

"Today, I am sorry to say, our Democrat colleagues chose again the path of obstruction. During three days of debate on this nomination, Democrat Senators took up only 4 hours. Yet they voted today to prevent the majority from going to a vote.

The Constitution gives every Senator the right to offer his or her advice and consent on the President's judicial nominees. Our Democrat colleagues are denying the constitutional right of every Senator.

And they are being unfair to the President and his nominee. Senator Hatch has told us that Priscilla Owen is the best and brightest sitting judge nominated by President Bush. She graduated third in her class from law school, when few women went to law school. She ranked first in the Texas bar exam. The American Bar Association rated her unanimously well qualified.

The people of Texas, the largest state in the Fifth Circuit, elected her to the Texas Supreme Court by 83% of the vote. She is hardly the out of the mainstream judge opponents say she is.

Moreover, this is a highly placed public servant who teaches Sunday school, sings in the choir, and works to fund the training of seeing-eye dogs. I am convinced that she is the kind of public servant people want.

I call on our Democrats colleagues that when we vote next time on this nomination, as we certainly will, to end the obstruction, to be fair to this woman, to be fair to their colleagues and to the Constitution, and to be fair to the President of the United States."

I think for now, our position is that we are generally not sympathetic to the goal, which is getting more money for the States in the growth bill.

Obviously, we need to see what this does for growth bill, which is the key objective.

But for now, we should certainly lie very low.

HATCH APPLAUDS DECISION ON CAMPAIGN FINANCE LEGISLATION AS VICTORY FOR FREE SPEECH

Washington – Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah), Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, today issued the following statement:

“Today’s ruling is a victory for free speech and the democratic process. The Court’s ruling is what I and many constitutional scholars had predicted when Congress passed this well-intentioned, but seriously flawed legislation that trampled on the free speech rights of Americans in the election of their representatives.

“Given the fact that the Senate failed to vote to correct the flaws in the legislation many had identified, this decision is all we could have expected.

“I am also glad that the only silver lining in the legislation, a provision I authored, will provide for expedited judicial review by the Supreme Court so that harm to free speech by the legislation will be limited. As I said when the Senate passed the legislation nearly two years ago, “all of us, supporters and opponents alike, stand to gain by a prompt and definite determination of the constitutionality of many of the bill’s controversial provisions. Because the harm these provisions will cause is serious and irreparable, it is imperative that we afford the Supreme Court the opportunity to pass on the constitutionality of this legislation as soon as possible.”

“The authors of the legislation attempted to address a troubling and unfortunate public perception about our political system. However, the ruling today makes it clear that we also must respect the freedom of speech granted to every American by our Constitution. In my opinion, even if the bill had survived the constitutional challenge, McCain-Feingold will, as many experts predict, exacerbate the very problems that it seeks to solve.

“I have always been of the belief that Americans are able to discern the truth of political matters, and that more speech, not less, will allow them to make the most informed decision. Our constitutional protection of free speech allows the American people to give money in support of whatever cause they choose. Whether it’s a group of 10,000 or a single person, our right to free speech should be unfettered.”

perhaps some wishful thinking, but Robert Novak writes as follows:

"Democratic insiders, acknowledging little chance of recapturing the House in 2004, have all but given up hope of winning a Senate majority, unless there is such a transcendent development as an economic collapse. The early calculation in Democratic circles is for a net loss of four additional Senate seats, extending the present 51-49 Republican majority to 55-45. Democratic seats are in real jeopardy in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, South Dakota and Nevada. In contrast, Alaska is the only Republican Senate seat up next year that clearly tilts to the Democrats."

Pryor's point is precedent
EDITORIAL
Mobile (AL) Register
05/04/03

THE LATEST attacks against the judicial nomination of Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor are supremely unfair, for supremely simple reasons.

When dealing with issues before federal courts, a state attorney general has two obligations: First, be an advocate for the laws passed by his own state's legislature. Second, respect U.S. Supreme Court precedent. With regard to the controversy over a "friend of the court" brief that Mr. Pryor filed in defense of a Texas law against sodomy, the Alabama AG acted in accordance with both obligations.

First, Alabama has an anti-sodomy law much like that of Texas, so Alabama's law effectively would be voided if the Supreme Court invalidated the Texas statute. Second, Mr. Pryor's brief asks only that existing Supreme Court precedent be upheld. And until that precedent is overturned, he is duty-bound to abide by it.

The controlling precedent comes from a 1986 case known as Bowers vs. Hardwick. According to that decision, a Georgia anti-sodomy law was held to be allowable under the Constitution.

Justice Byron White wrote that if Georgia's law were thrown out, "It would be difficult, except by fiat, to limit the claimed right to homosexual conduct while leaving exposed to prosecution adultery, incest, and other sexual crimes even though they are committed in the home. We are unwilling to start down that road."

The only difference in Mr. Pryor's brief is that he listed some of the "other sexual crimes" to which Justice White referred: "prostitution, adultery, necrophilia, bestiality, possession of child pornography, and even incest and pedophilia (if the child should credibly claim to be 'willing')."

It may well be an unfair intrusion on privacy to outlaw consensual homosexual acts. But that which is unfair is not always unconstitutional. Bill Pryor's argument is an accurate assertion of where constitutional law stands at this very moment. It no more disqualifies him from confirmation as a federal judge than does a base hit (rather than a home run) disqualify Hank Aaron from the Hall of Fame.

BALANCE OF POWER

The Constitution and the Judiciary
Where's the check on Senate filibusters?

BY JOHN CORNYN

Tuesday, May 6, 2003 12:01 a.m.

This week, the Senate marks a dismal political anniversary: Two years of partisan obstruction of President Bush's judicial nominees, culminating in two unprecedented filibusters. More are threatened. Never before has the judicial confirmation process been so broken, and the constitutional principles of judicial independence and majority rule so undermined.

It's time for a fresh start.

In that spirit, the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution will hold a hearing today to consider proposals to restore both the confirmation process and our most cherished constitutional values.

The essence of our democratic system of government is beautiful in its simplicity: Majorities must be permitted to govern. As our nation's Founders explained in Federalist No. 22, "the fundamental maxim of republican government . . . requires that the sense of the majority should prevail." And as the Supreme Court has unanimously held, our Constitution is premised on the democratic doctrine of majority rule.

Today, a minority of obstructionist senators are forcing upon the confirmation process a supermajority requirement of 60 votes. They are using the filibuster not simply to ensure adequate debate, but actually to block many of our nation's numerous judicial vacancies from being filled.

The public's historic aversion to abusive filibusters is well grounded. These tactics not only violate democracy and majority rule, but arguably offend the Constitution as well. Indeed, prominent Democrats such as Lloyd Cutler and Sens. Tom Daschle, Joe Lieberman and Tom Harkin have condemned filibuster misuse as unconstitutional.

Moreover, abusive filibusters against judicial nominations uniquely threaten both presidential power and judicial independence--and are thus more dubious than filibusters of legislation, an area of pre-eminent congressional power.

Harry Edwards, a respected Carter-appointed appeals judge, wrote that the Constitution forbids the Senate from imposing a supermajority rule for confirmations. Otherwise, "the Senate, acting unilaterally, could thereby increase its own power at the expense of the President" and "essentially take over the appointment process from the President." He concluded: "the Framers never intended for Congress to have such unchecked authority to impose supermajority voting requirements that fundamentally change the nature of our democratic processes." (He expressed less concern with legislative filibusters.)

History confirms Judge Edwards's constitutional interpretation. A Senate majority has never been denied its constitutional right to confirm judicial nominees--until now. The obstruction is as unprecedented as it is harmful.

Some have cited, to justify the current filibusters, the example of Abe Fortas, whom President Lyndon Johnson nominated to be chief justice in 1968. But majority rule was not under attack in that case. Dogged by allegations of ethical improprieties and bipartisan opposition, Fortas was unable to obtain the votes of 51 senators to prematurely end debate. Three days later, Johnson withdrew the nomination altogether.

That is a far cry from the present situation. After extensive debate, Miguel Estrada, Priscilla Owen and countless others enjoy enthusiastic, bipartisan majority support, yet they face an uncertain future of indefinite debate. By brazenly insisting, as Nevada's Harry Reid--the Senate's second-ranking Democrat--has said, that "there is not a number [of hours] in the universe that would be sufficient" for debate on certain nominees, Democrat leaders admit they are using the filibuster not to ensure adequate debate, but to change the Constitution by imposing a supermajority requirement for judicial confirmations.

Whether unconstitutional or merely destructive to our political system, the current confirmation crisis cries out for reform. As all 10 freshman senators, myself included, stated last week in a letter to Senate leadership, "we are united in our concern that the judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed." Veteran senators from both parties express similar sentiments.

Accordingly, today's hearing will explore various reform proposals:

? Sen. Zell Miller suggests--as did Sens. Harkin, Lieberman and 17 other Democrats in 1995--that the 60-vote rule for ending debate be reduced incrementally with each succeeding vote, until the rule reaches 51 votes.

? President Bush and Sens. Arlen Specter and Patrick Leahy have urged the imposition of strict time deadlines for the Senate to hold hearings and vote on judicial nominees.

? Sen. Charles Schumer advocates an overhaul of the nomination process by eliminating the president's appointment power and instead giving President Bush and Sen. Daschle "equal roles in picking the judge-pickers."

These proposals will be debated. What's important is that these public officials acknowledge the crisis and urge reform.

* * *

The judicial confirmation process has reached the bottom of a decades-long downward spiral. Our current state of affairs is neither fair nor representative of the bipartisan majority of this body. For democracy to work, and for the constitutional principle of majority rule to prevail, this obstructionism must end, and we must bring matters to a vote. As Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge famously said of filibusters: "To vote without debating is perilous, but to debate and never vote is imbecile." Two years is too long. The Senate needs a fresh start.

Mr. Cornyn is a senator from Texas and chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution. He served previously on the Supreme Court of Texas, and as the state's attorney general.

In case you missed (I did):

FEDERAL JUDGES DESERVE A PAY RAISE

New York Times
May 9, 2003

In a rare show of bipartisan unity, Senator Orrin Hatch, a Republican who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and Senator Patrick Leahy, the committee's ranking Democrat, have introduced a measure to increase the salaries of federal judges. This is clearly the right step. Yet even with the backing of President Bush, the proposed 16.9 percent increase may prove a hard sell, given these economic hard times. The increase is warranted to make up for the erosion in judicial pay caused by inflation and Congress's repeated withholding of cost-of-living adjustments that are supposed to be routine. A report in January by the National Commission on the Public Service, a study group led by Paul Volcker, the former chairman of the Federal Reserve, said that the purchasing power of federal judicial salaries had dropped 24 percent since 1969. It said the decline was "arguably inconsistent with the Constitutional provision that judicial salaries may not be reduced by Congress." A year ago, the Supreme Court declined to accept a case raising that issue. But it should not take a lawsuit to persuade members of Congress to treat the judiciary fairly. The government cannot match the salaries offered by big-time law firms. But to recruit and retain quality judges * and for the sake of fairness * Congress needs to provide salaries that bear a reasonable relationship to other professional opportunities. As part of the package, judges should be required to forgo privately financed junkets that cast an ethical cloud on the courts, as Senator Leahy has previously proposed. These are matters that transcend the ongoing partisan battle over President Bush's hard-right judicial nominees.

Accordingly, in consonance with past practice, she should now be assigned a White House Office e-mail address.

David wanted to see if you could help him interview the paralegal candidates. Can you and one other Associate (maybe Jen?) interview the seven great candidates we have and narrow it down to 3 for David to interview? Both Liz's and Jon's resumes are in the stack of seven. If you don't feel like you need to interview them, I understand. David may interview them anyway as a courtesy. Let me know how you would like to proceed.

They want more substantive projects, but that doesn't mean that they don't have anything to do.

Subject: gentle reminder about paralegal

How are we doing on interviewing for the paralegal position? If you could interview people this week we'd be much appreciative. Things are getting crazy for Jon and Liz and we'd really like to have another person in there ASAP. Let us know when to set the interviews up for you.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW, AUTOS, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, GOVERNMENT LAW, PER CURIAM

CITY OF LOS ANGELES v. DAVID, No. 02-1212 (U.S.S.C. May 19, 2003)
A city's failure to provide a sufficiently prompt hearing to recover money paid for a parking violation did not amount to a due process violation, as a 30 day delay was no more than routine.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/021212.html>

CIVIL PROCEDURE, LABOR & EMPLOYMENT LAW

BREUER v. JIM'S CONCRETE OF BREVARD, INC., No. 02-337 (U.S.S.C. May 19, 2003)

A Fair Labor Standards Act provision stating that suit "may be maintained. . .in any Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction," 29 U.S.C. section 216(b), does not bar removal of a suit from state to federal court.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02337.html>

CIVIL RIGHTS, CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE, GOVERNMENT LAW, INDIAN LAW

INYO COUNTY v. PAIUTE-SHOSHONE INDIANS OF THE BISHOP CMTY., No. 02-281 (U.S.S.C. May 19, 2003)

An Indian tribe did not qualify as a "person" who may sue under 42 U.S.C. section 1983, under the circumstances, in an action asserting sovereign immunity from state court processes arising from a county investigation into alleged off-reservation crimes.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:

COMMERCIAL LAW, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, DRUGS & BIOTECH, GOVERNMENT BENEFITS, REMEDIES

PHARM. RESEARCH & MFRS. OF AM. v. WALSH, No. 01-188 (U.S.S.C. May 19, 2003)

A preliminary injunction preventing implementation of a state program reducing prescription drug prices for state residents was improper, where an association of non-resident drug manufacturers could not show probability of success on Commerce Clause claims.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:

CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE, HABEAS CORPUS

PRICE v. VINCENT, No. 02-524 (U.S.S.C. May 19, 2003)

Michigan Supreme Court's finding, that a judge's comments were not sufficiently final to terminate jeopardy, was not contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established U.S. Supreme Court precedent. Federal circuit court erred in reviewing Double Jeopardy issue de novo, and finding that habeas relief was warranted.

LENGTH: 715 words

HEADLINE: Counsel shows his party side

SOURCE: Staff

BYLINE: SHELBY HODGE

BODY:

WHITE House counsel Alberto Gonzales slipped out of his official demeanor Saturday night to let his hair down among longtime Houston compadres. Well, it wasn't as if the low-key Gonzales (Al to friends) was dancing on the tables. But he was relaxed and talkative among the 70 guests who gathered in his honor in the Memorial-area home of Karen and Roland Garcia.

That was until Gonzales' oft-discussed prospects for a Supreme Court nomination arose. "I'm not commenting on this at all. I have a great job, and I'm sticking with it," he said with poker-face intensity.

Roland Garcia, a partner with Locke Liddell & Sapp who had worked with Gonzales at Vinson & Elkins, countered, "We're all hopeful. It's unanimous here."

Republicans and Democrats alike saluted Gonzales over a feast of guacamole, fajitas and refried beans from Doneraki. Among them - Dorothy Caram, Art Contreras, Judge Eva Guzman, Judge David Medina, Lolita Guerrero, Lupe Fraga, Doniel Aviles and Lynne Liberato, president of the Texas Bar Association.

Guzman, a Court of Appeals justice originally appointed to the bench by then-Gov. Bush, was among those singing Gonzales' praises. "He's someone people can trust," she said, "both intellectually and philosophically speaking."

The White House counsel was in his home town for the Memorial Day weekend with his wife, Becky. Saturday afternoon, he gave the commencement address at South Texas College of Law.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW, CIVIL PROCEDURE, COMMERCIAL LAW, CONTRACTS, GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

NAT'L PARK HOSPITALITY ASS'N v. DEP'T OF THE INTERIOR, No. 02-196
(U.S.S.C. May 27, 2003)

A National Park Service regulation, purporting to render the Contract Disputes Act of 1978 inapplicable to contracts entered into by concessioners doing business in national parks, is a general policy statement. A challenge to that regulation is not yet ripe for judicial resolution, for lack of a "hardship" showing.

CIVIL RIGHTS, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE

CHAVEZ v. MARTINEZ, No. 01-1444 (U.S.S.C. May 27, 2003)
A 42 U.S.C. section 1983 plaintiff's Fifth Amendment rights were not violated through questioning by police, where he was never charged and no statements were used against him. Questioning of plaintiff while he was being treated for gunshot wounds after an altercation with police did not violate his Fourteenth Amendment rights.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, GOVERNMENT BENEFITS, GOVERNMENT LAW, LABOR & EMPLOYMENT LAW

NEVADA DEP'T OF HUMAN RES. v. HIBBS, No. 01-1368 (U.S.S.C. May 27, 2003)
Employees of the state of Nevada may recover money damages in the event of the state's failure to comply with the family-care provision of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, and such a claim is not barred by the Eleventh Amendment.

CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE, HABEAS CORPUS

BUNKLEY v. FLORIDA, No. 02-8636 (U.S.S.C. May 27, 2003)
In failing to determine whether the "common pocketknife" exception to Florida's definition of a weapon encompassed petitioner's pocketknife at the time his conviction became final, the Florida Supreme Court contradicted Fiore v. White, 531 U.S. 225 (2001).

ERISA, LABOR & EMPLOYMENT LAW

BLACK & DECKER DISABILITY PLAN v. NORD, No. 02-469 (U.S.S.C. May 27, 2003)
ERISA does not require plan administrators making disability determinations to accord special deference to the opinions of treating physicians, over other evidence relevant to the claimant's medical condition.

BANKING LAW, BANKRUPTCY LAW, COMMERCIAL LAW, CONTRACTS, DISPUTE RESOLUTION & ARBITRATION

CITIZENS BANK v. ALAFABCO, INC., No. 02-1295 (U.S.S.C. June 02, 2003)

A debt-restructuring agreement had a sufficient nexus with interstate commerce to make an arbitration provision in that agreement enforceable under the Federal Arbitration Act.

<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/021295.html>

BANKING LAW, CIVIL PROCEDURE, CONSUMER PROTECTION LAW

BENEFICIAL NAT'L BANK v. ANDERSON, No. 02-306 (U.S.S.C. June 02, 2003)

An action filed in state court, to recover damages from a national bank for allegedly charging excessive interest in violation of both the "common law usury doctrine" and an Alabama usury statute, arose only under federal law and could therefore be removed under 28 U.S.C. section 1441.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02306.html>

COMMERCIAL LAW, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, PUBLIC UTILITIES

ENTERGY LOUISIANA, INC. v. LOUISIANA PUB. SERV. COMM'N, No. 02-299 (U.S.S.C. June 02, 2003)

A Louisiana Public Service Commission order impermissibly "traps" costs that have been allocated in a FERC tariff, thus the order is subject to federal pre-emption.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02299.html>

COPYRIGHT, ENTERTAINMENT LAW, INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY, MEDIA LAW

DASTAR CORP. v. TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX FILM CORP. , No. 02-428 (U.S.S.C. June 02, 2003)

The phrase "origin of goods" refers to the producer of tangible goods that are offered for sale, and not to the author of any idea, concept, or communication embodied in those goods, thus Section 43 of the Lanham Act does not prevent the unaccredited copying of an uncopyrighted work.

Brett, here's the other email I mentioned in the email I just sent you.
The "yes" and "maybe" documents identified are can be subject to our privilege claim.

Brett, I have received a small set of transcripts that contain classified segments. With respect to the categories I identified in my March 14 email, I would categorize T349 as "yes," T82 and T347 as "maybe," and T44, T58, T70, T114 and T118 as "no." (We had previously seen S151 and S185, which were included in this batch to show us what classified information had been redacted.)

Have you had a chance to review any of the transcripts yet? As I said in my March 18 email, perhaps you could focus on the first segment, and on the basis of that review we can make some categorical decisions that would make the subsequent decisions easier.

Hello,

Official title submitted to Human Resources Management (HRM) for Judge Gonzales's 01/20/01 appointment is: Assistant to the President and White House Counsel". HRM holds and maintains his official employment and payroll records for all EOP employees.

If WH Management would like to change the title we can certainly process a personnel action to do this, but currently his title is based on titles provided at Presidential Transition in December 2000/January 2001.

Thanks,
Irene

Allison,

I found the same discrepancy and so I checked our files and checked Administration files and that is the title I sent you. I am copying this to Lori Raad to Irene Porada to see if they have any additional thoughts.

I'm so sorry to be a pain, but I don't think ARG's title is right. His commission reads, "and Counsel to the President," not WH Counsel. Is there a way to find out for sure?

Allison,

I am Lori Raad's assistant and I am following up with you about the Senior Staff Meeting Attendees' titles. I am listing the following corrections that I found in your list:

Karl Rove, Senior Advisor to the President
Ari Fleischer, Assistant to the President and White House Press Secretary
Al Gonzales, Assistant to the President and White House Counsel
Steve Hadley, Assistant to the President and Deputy National Security Advisor
Brian Montgomery, Deputy Assistant to the President and Cabinet Secretary
Steve Friedman, Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and Director, National Economic Council

In addition, your list appears to name Greg Mankiw as both Chairman, Council of Economic Advisors and Director, Office of Management and Budget. While we do not deal with this office, what I can find indicates that Greg Mankiw is only Chairman, Council of Economic Advisors.

I hope this helps. Please let me know if you need anything else.

Subject: bigger paycheck

You might want to forward this to your staff. :)

Note: The change in withholding is prospective, even though the rates were cut retroactive to January 1st of 2003. This means that, in addition to a bigger paycheck beginning on 6/20, you should also expect to see a slightly bigger-than-expected rebate next year when you file your taxes, accounting for the amount that has now been overwithheld for the first five months of this year.

Subject: Resignation of Top Management Team at Freddie Mac

As you may have heard, the top three officers at Freddie Mac (CEO, COO, CFO), the secondary mortgage market GSE, resigned earlier today. The resignations come on the heels of a long-running internal audit of Freddie Mac's earnings statements from 2000-2002, being led by PWC and Baker Botts, and an expected restatement of earnings for those years.

I spoke with the General Counsel of Freddie's primary regulator, OFHEO, earlier this morning to get an update and to ask if there were any issues of potential concern that we might want to know about, either with respect to safety and soundness or the confirmation environment for the President's OFHEO nominee, Mark Brickell. Bottom line, no safety and soundness concerns, but a sense that the profile for Brickell's hearing will be heightened.

OFHEO's early read is that the resignations are primarily driven by Glenn having turned over an altered and redacted journal or diary in response to a request from the auditors. Glenn's lack of complete candor and cooperation violated Freddie's code of conduct and he was let go for that reason. The other officers were apparently on the way out anyway and were let go as well to clean house completely. OFHEO does not, at this time, believe that there are any major safety and soundness concerns, and early indications are that the restatement will not result in a material downward calculation of earnings. The restatement is driven primarily by a flawed interpretation of FAS 133, and could, OFHEO believes, actually result in an increase in reported earnings for the covered period. The audit apparently revealed a number of management weaknesses, including poor controls and bad judgment calls, which diminished Glenn's chances of moving up to the CEO role, and Glenn apparently revised his journal to try and cover over some of those weaknesses.

OFHEO has already designated a special team to investigate all aspects of the issues surrounding the audit, and in a letter released today, has directed its inquiry and demands to the Freddie Mac BOARD, not just senior management, thereby ensuring the highest level of accountability. OFHEO has also asked to review and approve the severance packages for the fired executives. The Board, and Baker Botts are cooperating fully.

The General Counsel suspects that the news today will trigger parallel investigations by the SEC and possibly Treasury, as well as Hill oversight hearings. It may also raise the profile for Mark Brickell's hearings, and increase the level of scrutiny given to his financial arrangements and potential oversight conflicts. Finally, the actions may increase interest in efforts to reform the bifurcated oversight for the GSEs between OFHEO and the FHFB.

I've asked OFHEO to keep me abreast, and will let you all know if anything newsworthy develops.

AGRICULTURE, COMMERCIAL LAW, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, FOOD & BEVERAGES

HILLSIDE DAIRY INC. v. LYONS, No. 01-950 (U.S.S.C. June 09, 2003)
California's milk pricing and pooling regulations are not exempted from Commerce Clause scrutiny by the Federal Agriculture and Reform Act of 1996. Absence of an express statement identifying out-of-state residency or citizenship as a basis for disparate treatment is not a sufficient basis for rejecting Privileges and Immunities Clause claims.

CIVIL RIGHTS, LABOR & EMPLOYMENT LAW

DESERT PALACE, INC. v. COSTA, No. 02-679 (U.S.S.C. June 09, 2003)
Direct evidence of discrimination is not required for a plaintiff to obtain a mixed-motive jury instruction under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02679.html>

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, JUDGES AND THE JUDICIARY

NGUYEN v. US, No. 01-10873 (U.S.S.C. June 09, 2003)
A panel of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals consisting of two Article III judges and one Article IV territorial-court judge did not have authority to decide petitioners' appeals, as a judge of the District Court for the Northern Mariana Islands was not a "district judge" under 28 U.S.C. section 292(a).

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.findlaw.com/us/000/1-10873.html>

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, TAX LAW, TRAVEL & LEISURE

FITZGERALD v. RACING ASS'N OF CENT. IOWA, No. 02-695 (U.S.S.C. June 09, 2003)
Iowa's differential tax rate, distinguishing between adjusted revenues from slot machines at racetracks and revenues from riverboat slot machines, does not violate the Equal Protection Clause under a rational basis analysis.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02695.html>

DRUGS & BIOTECH, INJURY AND TORT LAW, MILITARY LAW

DOW CHEM. CO. v. STEPHENSON, No. 02-271 (U.S.S.C. June 09, 2003)
In appeals arising from Agent Orange exposure, judgment as to two respondents is vacated and remanded for further consideration in light of Syngenta Crop Prot., Inc. v. Henson, 537 U.S. 28 (2002), but judgment as to other respondents is affirmed by an equally divided Court.

In principle you may engage in political activity provided you do not solicit and the appropriations laws are followed. I believe that you should obtain Brett Kavanaugh's and Matt Schlapp's ok on these; perhaps also Susan Ralston

If I would like to accept an invitation to speak at a political fund-raiser I can have them cover the cost of my travel can I not? I know that they cannot advertise my speech using my title? Do I need you to sign off or who approves?

The Bay County Republican Party Chairman has extended an invitation to me to speak at their Lincoln Day Fund-raiser dinner.

Secondly, a black church has asked to speak on "Moral Leadership." If I accept I can have them cover the cost of my travel?

Please advise. Thanks.

Brett,

The nature of the event has changed. Rather than being a fundraiser for Haley, it is a Republican Governors Association fundraising event. Secretary Thompson is not listed as a "featured guest" in the event invite. Instead, he is just planning on flying up commercial paid for by RGA, as a participant of the event, but not a featured part of the event. He is likely to give a very brief introduction to Haley.

Our ethics folks have looked at it and are comfortable with his participation in the event.

Sorry, for the late change, but information had not been communicated to us well. Are you ok with the Secretary's participation, as conceptualized?

I propose that we also send a written memo to the GC's of the depts and agencies to underscore the importance of the issue and to complement oral briefings.; Draft is below.

As I try to close out of the WH, I wanted to run by the email I'd like to send to fellow WH staff - and make sure it works from an appropriateness and timing standpoint.

Dear Friends:

I will be moving to the President's re-election campaign and I wanted to drop you a quick note to thank for your friendship and the wonderful experience working with each of you has been.

As you know, there will be a lot of changes in the Political affairs Office. As of next Monday, I will no longer be checking this email address or my WH phone. For questions related to Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, please contact Darren Bearson at 6-5275 or Darren\_Bearson@who.eop.gov. He is the new Associate Director for that part of the country.

For the other states I've worked in (Montana, North Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, and who could forget South Dakota), please contact Matt Schlapp until he announces new Associate Directors. Thanks again!

Sara Taylor

My contact info at Bush-Cheney 2004 will be:

This correction appears in today's New York Times -- perhaps someone talked to Lewis at the DOJ party for Viet?; Interesting that the correction loops back to an error made nearly six months ago.;

A grouping of thumbnail sketches on Sunday with a front-page article about efforts by interest groups to influence the selection of the next Supreme Court justice included an erroneous reference to the background of a potential nominee, Judge Samuel A. Alito Jr. of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. (The error also occurred in a front-page article on Dec. 27.) Judge Alito is not a former clerk for Justice Antonin Scalia.

Can you all make sure I see and approve invites for all BC 04 events at which the President, Vice President, Mrs. Bush, Mrs. Cheney, or an Administration official is appearing? Thanks. Also, in particular, do you have invites for Michigan and Ohio events?

Brett,
Attached are Justice Qs and As following an April 8th hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee on S.J.Res 1. These Qs and As are addressed to Viet Dinh. Justice would like to have their Qs and As cleared by tomorrow so they could submit them for tomorrow's markup that is scheduled before the Senate Judiciary Committee's Constitution, Civil Rights and Property Rights Subcommittee. These Qs and As are 15 pages long. I have not circulated them yet for clearance. Could you let me know if you could review these by tomorrow afternoon or if you would need more than just a day to review them. Thank you.

Thanks for asking. Brett knows the rules on political activity. Brett -- the basic question at the bottom of this email chain as I understand it is can a Presidential appointee to an advisory committee -- in this case an advisory comm. on information technology -- participate in raising funds. I assume the answer is yes under the guidelines put forth by Stan (must do in personal capacity, not use his PITAC title/membership in any fundraising, etc.). Is there a memo we can give him governing this?

Richard,

Under Ethics and Hatch Act statutes and regulations, it is perfectly OK for government employees, including special government employees, to participate in political activities while off-duty. He should not use the SGE position as a basis of seeking donations, etc, but keep his activities wholly in the personal realm. He should certainly not do or say anything that states or implies any favorable actions by PITAC if donations are made, even though PITAC only recommends and does not directly regulate anything. He should remember that any such connections will be judged not only legally but also by the "Washington Post" test. Basically, if he keeps PITAC out of it he will be fine. I can look into and research any particular questions he may have.

Ben -- I do not believe that the WH has imposed any special restrictions on the political activities of Presidential appointees to advisory committees (beyond the legal/regulatory restrictions that currently exist for all employees, including SGEs). Can you confirm that?

Stan

The Bush campaign has asked me to verify that as a Presidential appointee to PITAC I am still allowed to raise money for the campaign. There is a large fundraiser on Tuesday, so the question is a bit urgent.

Labor Circulates Letter Opposing Hatch's Asbestos Bill

ÿÿÿÿ Hope for bipartisan support of a proposed asbestos compensation bill took a heavy hit today as the AFL-CIO circulated to senators a strongly worded letter of opposition to the measure. The legislation, sponsored by Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch, calls for the establishment of a $108 billion trust fund -- financed by insurers and defendant companies -- to pay for claims submitted to a special new court by persons suffering from certain asbestos diseases. In its strong plea to senators not to sign on to the Hatch bill, the AFL-CIO leveled a sharp attack against the legislation, charging that it "fails to provide fair, timely and certain compensation to victims -- while relieving manufacturers, employers and insurers of all liability." Bill Samuel, labor's legislative director, in the letter said the Hatch bill also set such restrictive eligibility standards that thousands of stricken victims could not qualify for compensation. Moreover, Samuel maintained the bill's trust fund would not provide sufficient money to cover anticipated claims.

ÿÿÿÿ Hatch earlier today called labor's letter "all tactics" aimed at softening support for his bill. But Hatch left the door open for further talks with labor and other affected parties to hash out a compromise acceptable to each side. "If we don't sit down and get this down," Hatch said, "it's going to be over -- a dead bill. They know it and I know it. So I think we're going to get something done." Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., also expressed hope that an accord could be reached. "We can get a bill," Leahy said. "But we're going to have to negotiate these serious points of contention. You can't just put a bill out there and say, 'take it or leave it.' It can't be a one-sided bill. We've got to get the two sides together and work out our differences." -- by David Hess

Hi Brett,

Matt has been asked by Speaker Hastert's office to speak tomorrow at a lunch. It is the speaker's Semi-Annual Congressional Club trip. There will be a little over 100 people in attendance-all donors from IL who have given $500 or more. Patrick Carlson, from Hastert's office, said the majority of these people have been long-time donors etc.

Matt asked that I run it by you before we agree to this. Again-this is for tomorrow, so time is a factor.

Thanks so much,
Tracy

We should create a form e-mail for this. And I should approve each individual trip where the campaign has secured a private plane and intends to provide transportation to a government official on that plane. Thanks.

CQ TODAY ) LEGAL AFFAIRS

June 11, 2003 ) 7:51 p.m.

By Jennifer A. Dlouhy, CQ Staff

Crime victims would be guaranteed rights in court proceedings under a constitutional amendment expected to be approved by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee on Thursday.

The victims' rights amendment (SýJýResýl ), set to be marked up by the Subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights and Property Rights, would require that crime victims * or their lawful representatives * receive advance notification of judicial proceedings and parole hearings.

It also would give victims or their representatives the right to be heard at public release, plea sentencing and other proceedings and would require judicial officials to take victims' safety into account when deciding the fate of defendants.

Supporters of the amendment, including Judiciary members and resolution sponsors Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Jon Kyl , R-Ariz., argue that the Constitution delineates * in great detail * the rights of the accused, while victims of crime are not represented.

A patchwork of similar laws and constitutional language in more than 30 states is not enough to protect victims, they say. A constitutional amendment is necessary to elevate the need for victims to be heard in criminal proceedings, supporters add.

But critics, including the ranking Democrat on the subcommittee, Russell D. Feingold of Wisconsin, would rather see Congress first try to enact victims' rights protections statutorily instead of through a constitutional amendment, which would be more difficult to change later on.

Unlike other pending constitutional amendments, which tend to be brief, the proposed victims' rights amendment includes five sections. That has bolstered the claims of critics, who say the measure reads more like a statute than a constitutional amendment.

Feinstein and Kyl have rewritten the measure since it was last considered on the Senate floor in 2000. Then, they faced opposition from some lawmakers who said * among other things * it was too unwieldy.

Ultimately, facing a potential filibuster and lacking the 60 votes necessary to limit debate on the measure, Feinstein and Kyl pulled the resolution off the floor. The proposal has never been considered in the House.

If cleared by Congress and ratified by at least 38 states, the proposal would be the 28th amendment to the Constitution and the first since 1992. The Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights and Property Rights markup is scheduled to follow a 9:30 a.m. Judiciary Committee markup Thursday in 226 Dirksen.

Mike,

Good to see you yesterday. I would like to get you together with Julie Goon and Karen Ignagi ASAP. A few options: 1)there is a dinner tomorrow night at the Decatur house hosted by AAHP 2)there is a AAHP wine tasting from 5-7 tomorrow at the Marriot Wardman Park 3)Friday morning, McCellan is speaking at the AAHP conference before the VP, we could meet after Mark speaks about 9:30 AM

at the Marriott Wardman Park

If we meet at the Wardman, you could also meet some of the plans that are in town.

If none of these work, let's try to set something up next week. SBS

BTW, I will be in your bldg. this afternoon. I may try to track you down.
Thx,

Mike,

Good to see you yesterday. I would like to get you together with Julie Goon and Karen Ignagi ASAP. A few options: 1)there is a dinner tomorrow night at the Decatur house hosted by AAHP 2)there is a AAHP wine tasting from 5-7 tomorrow at the Marriot Wardman Park 3)Friday morning, McCellan is speaking at the AAHP conference before the VP, we could meet after Mark speaks about 9:30 AM at the Marriott Wardman Park

If we meet at the Wardman, you could also meet some of the plans that are in town.

If none of these work, let's try to set something up next week. SBS

BTW, I will be in your bldg. this afternoon. I may try to track you down.
Thx,

This mention of you was in an article in yesterday's Hill.; I smell Horowitz behind it.

Although smaller and less prominent, the Hudson Institute has carved out a niche for itself, not only by placing its scholars in the administration but also by driving a few issues important to the administration and even in some cases helping write and pass bills over its objections.

Hudson,s ideas to reform tort law have made their way into bills that reached the floor of the Senate, and White House officials Brett Kavanaugh, Jay Lefkowitz and Phil Perry have all shown interest in the ideas.

Bush also drew on Hudson,s work on the persecution of evangelical Christians around the world and sexual slavery in Eastern Europe to devise a part of his foreign policy * both over the objections of the Clinton administration.

But over objections of some in the White House and Justice Department, Senate aides said, Hudson,s Horowitz played a crucial role in drafting legislation and assembling a bipartisan coalition that makes passage of a prison-rape bill likely.

Bashman on Brown:

California Supreme Court Justice Janice Rogers Brown

<<http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/courts/supreme/justices/brown.htm>> issues interesting decision in insurance coverage dispute: Writing on behalf of a total of four Justices on the seven member Supreme Court of California <<http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/courts/supreme/>>, Justice Brown's opinion issued today begins:

The insurance policy in this case defined "collapse" as "actually fallen down or fallen to pieces." However, sound public policy, the Court of Appeal concluded, requires coverage for imminent, as well as actual, collapse, lest dangerous conditions go uncorrected. By failing to apply the plain, unambiguous language of the policy, the Court of Appeal erred.

Later, Justice Brown's opinion explains:

Applying the same logic, with the same lack of restraint, courts could convert life insurance into health insurance. In rewriting the coverage provision to conform to their notions of sound public policy, the trial court and the Court of Appeal exceeded their authority, disregarding the clear language of the policy and the equally clear holdings of this court.

We have added a downtime suite for the President in New York. The cost is $500.00. When he has downtime, we always get a Precor elliptical trainer in the room for his work out. Can't that be paid by the WH instead of the campaign?

Hatch Insisting On Asbestos Litigation Markup Next Week

Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch today vowed to forge ahead with his legislation aimed at reforming the asbestos litigation system, saying a markup planned for next week will come off even if concerns over the controversial bill are not assuaged. "I'm looking forward to voting on it," Hatch said during a session of the Judiciary Committee today in which he reaffirmed his decision to hold the markup next week "in any event." Some key Democrats have withheld support for the bill, which creates a separate court system and a $108 billion trust fund -- financed by insurers and defendant companies in asbestos-exposure cases -- to compensate victims of asbestos-related illnesses. Meanwhile, Sen. Ben Nelson of Nebraska, the measure's Democratic cosponsor, said he was working on three possible solutions to one of the biggest Democratic complaints about the bill -- that it does not include a mechanism to ensure that the trust fund will not run dry. Hatch previously opposed the use of a federally funded "backstop," but Nelson indicated that using public funds was not completely off the table. Nelson said he was "vetting" the ideas among colleagues and may be ready "to go public with them by midweek." Asked if Hatch was supportive of the proposals, Nelson answered, "It is my approach never to surprise people." Hatch today said he would work with Senate colleagues to address their concerns ahead of the markup. "We're coming very close to be able to satisfy [concerns] or at least get the parties together," Hatch said. -- by Emily Heil

No problem. Although this makes it a little more difficult, we will assess the Press Secretary to the First Lady on a case-by-case basis based on the Press Secretary's role on the trip and the nature of the trip. On the trips described below, she should be treated as an official traveler.

The Federal Judiciary: Devout Catholics Need Not Apply

By John Nowacki

CNSNews.com Commentary

June 19, 2003

No religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.
(Article VI of the U.S. Constitution)

Ever wondered what a religious test would look like in 21st century America? It's not that difficult to imagine.

Suppose an attorney holding statewide political office is nominated for a federal appeals court judgeship. He'll have taken positions on various policy issues -- something unavoidable for someone in his position - but will have earned a reputation in his state as someone who fairly and objectively applies the law, whether he agrees with it or not.

Suppose that on the all-important issue of abortion, he had actually instructed his subordinates to follow Supreme Court precedent when enforcing his state's ban on partial-birth abortion, even though he is unabashedly pro-life. And let's say that he is unabashedly pro-life because he is a devout Roman Catholic.

Oh, yes. Let's also say that his critics in the Senate -- for whom abortion is an issue of paramount interest -- say that nothing disqualifies him from service on the bench more than his "deeply held personal views." As one of them would put it, his beliefs are so well known, so deeply held, that we simply can't believe he'll be objective -- even when he says he knows a judge's responsibility is to follow the law and binding precedent.

In other words, because he personally believes in Catholicism's teachings on abortion, he cannot be trusted.

As amazing as it is, that's precisely what is being insinuated about Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor, nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. And that is the point that Democrat after Democrat on the Judiciary Committee argued at his nomination hearing.

Charles Schumer announced that Pryor feels so deeply, so passionately about Roe v. Wade that we can't believe he'll be objective.

Dianne Feinstein told Pryor that while people can stop being advocates when they become judges, he does have very strong views after all.

Ted Kennedy acknowledged that while a number of nominees who take positions he opposes have been confirmed, many of Pryor's positions reflect deeply held views -- on the abortion issue in particular -- that make him just too extreme. One of those other nominees, outspoken and avowedly pro-life legal scholar Michael McConnell, was confirmed by unanimous consent in November.

Patrick Leahy reminded Pryor he'd been criticized because of his personal beliefs and after having heard him point to his record again and again, once more demanded to know how anyone could believe he'd really be fair and impartial.

The Senate does have a responsibility to examine whether a nominee will set his or her personal views aside as a judge. In Pryor's case, the answer is that he clearly will. Many of his colleagues in the state government -- Democrat and Republican, liberal and conservative, black and white - agree that he's a man who will follow the law without favoring any side. And his record as a popular and respected state Attorney General backs him up 100 percent, on abortion or any other issue raised in the context of his nomination.

As if that weren't enough, his sworn testimony before the committee was that he will strive to be a fair, objective judge who follows the law and binding precedent. Even while affirming his personal pro-life beliefs inspired by his Catholic faith, he reminded the committee that he has a moral obligation based on his faith to uphold his oath of office.

None of that, however, was enough for those Senators who think that anyone who sincerely believes as Pryor does is not fit for this particular office or public trust under the United States. Senator Russ Feingold even went out of his way to fault Mr. and Mrs. Pryor just for deciding to postpone a trip to Disney World with their six and four year-old daughters until after Gay Day, responding incredulously when Pryor said the family had made a personal value judgment.

Whether following Supreme Court precedent on abortion and First Amendment cases, protecting Alabama from huge monetary judgments, fulfilling his oath of office by defending state laws, or promoting racial equality, Pryor has demonstrated his commitment to follow the law and seek the fair administration of justice. That willingness to judge each case according to the law and facts is precisely what most Americans expect from those who serve on the federal bench.

He deserves fair consideration and an up-or-down vote in the Senate, and his personal pro-life views that come from his Catholic faith are no excuse to treat his nomination differently. Those Senators on the Judiciary Committee must remember that we are supposed to have left religious tests behind long ago, and that no American courthouse bears a sign stating that devout Catholics need not apply.

Another good Sentelle quote from Holy Land Foundation.

In rejecting HLF's argument that the designation as a terrorist group and blocking of assets violated RFRA, he writes:
"There is no free exercise right to fund terrorists." (Slip Op., at 16.)

Peter Keisler called to report another win. CADC (affirming a ruling by DDC) today rejected a challenge by the the Hamas-linked Holy Land Foundation ("HLF") to Treasury's designation of HLF as a terrorist group ("Specially Designated Global Terrorist," or "SDGT"). This designation came under the IEEPA, and resulted in the blocking of all of HLF's assets.

This was another Sentelle opinion (joined by Ginsburg and Henderson).

CADC's opinion states, in relevant part: "Treasury's decision to designate HLF as an SDGT was based on ample evidence in a massive administrative record."

The Bush Administration's Court Packing Plan

ÿ

As the Supreme Court ends its session, there are rumors that one or more Justices will retire.ÿ While the country waits for a decision, the Bush Administration is attempting to pack our lower courts with yet another right wing extremist, maybe the worst of them all: William J. Pryor.ÿ The Bush Administration and their nominees would like to ignore the fact that our Constitution entrusts the U.S. Senate with the fundamental responsibility

Miguel

Estrada. Priscilla Owens. Carolyn Kuhl. Charles Pickering.

CIVIL RIGHTS, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

LAWRENCE v. TEXAS , No. 02-102 (U.S.S.C. June 26, 2003)
Texas law criminalizing two people of the same sex from engaging in private, consensual sex is unconstitutional, and the Supreme Court's decision in Bowers v. Hardwick is overturned. Individual decisions regarding private, consensual intimate physical relationships are a form of "liberty" protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02-102.html>

CIVIL RIGHTS, ELECTIONS

GEORGIA v. ASHCROFT, No. 02-182 (U.S.S.C. June 26, 2003)
A section 2 vote dilution violation under the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. section 1973 is not an independent reason to deny section 5 preclearance. Any diminution of a minority group's effective exercise of the electoral franchise violates section 5 only if the State cannot show that the gains in the plan as a whole offset the loss in a particular district.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02-182.html>

COMMERCIAL LAW, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, CONSUMER PROTECTION LAW, PER CURIAM

NIKE, INC. v. KASKY, No. 02-575 (U.S.S.C. June 26, 2003)
The court's writ of certiorari is dismissed as being improvidently granted, and the case is sent back to California's state courts for further adjudication.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:
<http://laws.lp.findlaw.com/us/000/02-575.html>

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE, SENTENCING

WIGGINS v. SMITH, No. 02-311 (U.S.S.C. June 26, 2003)
An objective review of the performance by a criminal defendant's counsel in a capital case shows that the client's Sixth Amendment rights were violated by counsel's failure to conduct a reasonable investigation of the defendant's social history and mitigating factors.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE

STOGNER v. CALIFORNIA, No. 01-1757 (U.S.S.C. June 26, 2003)
California's law extending the statute of limitations for prosecuting sex-related child abuse, which had the effect of revising previously time-barred prosecutions under earlier statutes of limitations, violates the Constitution's Ex-Post Facto Clause, Art. I, section 10, cl. 1.

To read the full text of this opinion, go to:

Advice and Consent -- After the Fact

ÿ

Tuesday, July 1, 2003; Page A12

ÿ

Arguing for a diminution of presidential power in selecting Supreme Court nominees, David S. Broder committed a serious error of omission in his June 25 op-ed column.

ÿ

Selectively excerpting Article II of the Constitution, Mr. Broder wrote that it is "the president 'by and with the advice and consent of the Senate,' " who appoints justices of the Supreme Court. He used this fragment (interestingly, a phrase about appointments, not nominations) to argue for presidential consultation with the Senate "prior to the selection" of a Supreme Court nominee. This echoed the recent arguments of some Senate Democrats that the Senate should have control over not just the confirmation but also the selection of judicial nominees.

ÿ

The constitutional provision that discusses nominations, though, begins with the phrase "[the president] shall nominate." Only then does it say, "and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint." Mr. Broder's omission involves just a few words, but they are critical.

ÿ

The role of the president is to nominate. The role of the Senate is to advise him on the merits of that selection. The Constitution wisely allocates power in this manner, because the Founders understood that the important power of nominating judges should be handled by one person, not by a group.

ÿ

Few things would politicize our judiciary more than to hand over control of the process for selecting Supreme Court nominees to individual members of the Senate.
